How is this great work to be accomplished. It is not in our own strength but in the spirit of the Lord. "Of myself I can do nothing." The church will be prepared to wipe out her indebtedness and accomplish the work demanded of her only through the domination of the spirit of the Lord. There is something beyond organization and mere methods required in this business. When a man is dominated by such a spirit as that which alone can perform this work he loses consciousness of self and becomes swallowed up in the force that dominates him. When we and one mighty church are one in Christ we will have no trouble in bringing the world to his feet.

What is the progress made toward the payment of this debt? Beginning at zero without money or missionary in the face of persecution and opposition, after 1870 years the church has paid its debt a little more than one-third of the human race. While the work of payment is not progressing as I should like to see it, it is being paid at a rate more rapid than at any period of the past. India has had a Protestant gain of 100 per cent in the last ten years. And at the same rate in the middle of the next century the whole country will have been conquered for our Lord and Master. China is silently and imperceptibly yielding to the Divine force at work in a manner astounding to those who understand her. Her demand for education and her acceptance of Christian sentiments is working a revolution in the mighty empire. The Kingdom of God does not come by civil or military convulsions, but like the silent forces of the world. The Gospel influence is the Divine leaven that is to do the work, and do it in the same silent manner as the coming springtime changes the face of nature. Working in this way the leaven of Christianity is undermining the domination of the powers of darkness.

Let us ask the question: Why should we pay this debt? Put it for a moment on the lowest possible basis, and consider it there. We must pay this debt because our own salvation depends upon it. God has so coupled your salvation and mine with the salvation of the heathen that we cannot separate the two. This is the only argument that you can bring to some people on foreign missions. If you will bring the truth to their minds that all that God requires of us is to carry his salvation to the ends of the earth you will start some one to thinking. They they may begin to crawl out and do something. So far as my own salvation and the safety of my soul depends upon my fulfillment of this commission I must be up and doing. This is surely the lowest of motives, but it is the only one that can be brought home to some.

What is my part of the indebtedness? My indebtedness is measured by my opportunity, just so far as I can I must embrace every chance that comes within my power to send this gospel to the ends of the earth, and in so far as we do this and only so far will we stand justified at the judgment bar of God.

Forgive and Forget.

Why the world would be lonely,
If the flowers but remembered the chilling winds only,
And the fields gave no verdure for fear of the storm,
Or how could our spirits e'er hope for the skies;
If Heaven refused to forgive and forget?

Music is sweetest near or over rivers, where the echo thereof is best rebounded by the water. Praise for pensiveness, thanks for tears and blessing God over the floods of affliction make the most melodious music in the ear of heaven.—Thos. Fuller.

Our personality is not a closed circuit. It dips deep into God. It is rooted in him, as the tree is rooted in the soil. That which comes up from within is none the less from him than that which comes down from above.—Willard B. Thorp.

Prune thou thy words, the thoughts control,
That o'er thee swell and throng;
Thy will condense within thy soul,
And change to purpose strong.

Growth in Sympathy.

C. H. WETHERBE.

The best type of useful sympathy becomes a personal possession by growth; and the growth is attained by a series of sufferings. Young children cannot, in the very nature of things, have any considerable measure of responsive sympathy with others, because there has been no sufficient time and opportunities for the growth of this great grace.

Rev. J. H. Jowett, of England, says: "Before my sympathies are enlarged, it is needful that I pass through a certain experience? is it needful that I pass through a certain experience? Does it necessitate the drinking of a 'cup'? Surely we have the proof this in common life. The great sympathizers have been and are the great sufferers. It is the man who has known 'the passion' whose life abounds in 'compassion.' It is by no means an unsuggestive kinship that the words 'passion,' 'pathos' and 'pity' are of such close, relationship. Let us see the interpretation of this. The word 'sympathy' may find some little exposition in the word 'symphony.' In a symphony sound calls unto sound, and they mingle with each other in musical confluence, and in sympathy there is something of musical response in the realm of feeling. A sympathetic nature is one that answers readily to the call of another's need."

But natural sympathy is comparatively small and weak, and much that is commonly called sympathy is merely some amount of tender feeling, flashing out for a moment like shavings ablaze. A person who never lost a child by death is not capable of sympathizing with one who has suffered unspeakably from such a loss. It is growth by experience in the loss of a loved child, a husband or wife, a brother or a sister, that makes sympathy large, vigorous and tenderly practical. When two bereaved persons talk with each other on the subject of their sufferings there is a pathetic symphony going on between the two hearts. Tears respond to tears. The sad face of one is answered by the sad face of the other. And even one such experience in the life of a person imparts a growth which cannot otherwise be obtained.

And shall this growth be kept hidden from other people? Many tell us that one should not make his sorrows known to others, for each has enough of his own; but I say that, wisely conducted, a bereaved one may minister blessing to another afflicted heart by relating his own sad story. Therefore, sympathize with others.

Thoughts Caught on the Wing.

REV. D. H. TUTTLE.

The man who traveled in the stage coach a century ago had as much reason to say that men would never travel by any faster mode as the unbeliever has to say that the grave marks the outermost boundary of life.

Say, "Hallelujah," when in the rising tides of gratitude, you feel like it. Say it, or else you will soon cease to feel like it. God will not continue to put the spirit of praise into people that won praise. "Quench not the spirit."

Death is not a destiny, but only an experience in the path that leads to a destiny. On the other side of death we shall bear testimony, one to another, as to our experience in meeting and overcoming it. The grave then is but a gate through which tested, tried, and triumphant spirits sweep gloriously forward into shining realms of perfect life when no resisting current of satanic birth can impede the soul's eternal progress.

Most, if not all of us, are meaner than we think we are. David thought that he might have other than known faults. He said: Who can know his errors; cleanse thou me from secret faults.—Psa. 19:12. With Paul personal consciousness of sin was not a safe standard. He said: "I know nothing against myself, yet am I not hereby justified." With Paul known sin might not be all sin. He desired God to pass on his case, and said: "But he that judgeth me is the Lord. Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God." "Have praise of God." Let this be your aim. Submit to God's searching (Psa. 139:23,24) and you will come to God's praise. Be at all times meek and humble enough to say: "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us," always leaving it with God as to whether or not you have sinned against Him or any one.

A Good Woman.

In the last issue of your valuable paper, page 4, I note two letters, one each from Brothers Pate and Tripp, one writing of the Hookerton Circuit and the other of the Goldsboro Circuit. Knowing the good people composing each of these Circuits, I am not surprised that these brethren write such enthusiastic, cheering letters. But in connection with these two charges, I hope I may be pardoned for mentioning the names of two people. I do not at all agree with those who wait until death to say good things of those who deserve them. There is the handwriting of a good woman that runs through each of these Circuits, so surely, that it is due her in life to know, that her efforts are known and appreciated. I speak of Mrs. E. D. Sasser, of Pine Forest, on Goldsboro Circuit.

Twenty-six years ago Pine Forest was a neighborhood school-house, situated in a community where Primitive Baptists largely predominated and Sunday-schools were unknown. But this mother in Israel, true to her convictions, decided as for her and hers there should be Sunday-school.

About that time, Dr. Thos. M. Jordan, now of your city, who was then a mere boy, was engaged to teach school at Pine Forest. While the description he gave of the organization of that Sunday-school has its laughable side, nevertheless, it is in the main, facts. Quoting him from memory: "Mother Sasser," said he, "called the 'meetin'' to order, 'leected me Superintendent and teacher of the Bible Class, appointed herself leader of the choir, general manager of the school and Superintendent. Ours had the largest attendance of any country Sunday-school in that county, and a very distinguishing feature of the school was, that old and young, whole families, came." The Doctor was not a member of the church then. No doubt that experience was helpful to him, and surely it must be gratifying to Mrs. Sasser, to see him with every one of her own children, and a great many others of that Sunday-school connected with the church. Out of this beginning there has not only grown a nice church, but Mrs. Sasser has the consciousness of owning a preacher of her own, Rev. W. D. Sasser, who less than a year ago, returning to the scenes of his childhood to help in a revival, put in motion the project which has culminated in the erection of this beautiful church at Pine Forest.

In regard to, and connecting the Hookerton Circuit with the Goldsboro Circuit and placing the imprint of the hand of this good woman there, it will be remembered, that Dr. Jordan, the boy Superintendent out of that Pine Forest Sunday-school, located in Hookerton, and was not only largely instrumental in erecting the elegant school and Lodge Building there, but it may be said of him, and it is generally conceded in that community, that to him more than to anyone else is due the erection of the beautiful little church at Hookerton, which because it was his plan, his hand and his eye that directed its construction into that perfection of beauty and usefulness, that the contemporaries of each will never see one without thinking of the other, and until the tooth of time shall destroy it, that church will be a living monument to his memory.

May many, many years yet be allotted to Sister Sasser to enjoy the fruits of her wise sowing.

What can just one determined, conscientious Christian worker do!

Sincerely,

DULUS H. DIXON.

The Son of Man.

C. F. SHERRILL.

What monotony there would be in human life and character were all men to copy after one of their race. The painful sameness would surpass that of Chinese pictures. To imitate Christ does not destroy personality. It gives us the glory of divinity in unity. Each one is more his true self when he forms his life after the pattern of Jesus. The central sun is the same, though it gives light and fragrance to many different flowers. The Christ spirit is the same everywhere, though it manifests itself in many different individuals.

* * *

The world has many creeds, but only one Christ. There may be theories about the atonement and the inspiration of the Bible, but the church forever holds to the Person of Christ. The creeds and dogmas and churches and the Bible all point to Him, and in Him find their meaning and end.

* * *

The place that Confucius holds in Confucianism, that Moses holds in Judaism, and that Mohammed holds in Ismalism, cannot be compared to the place that Christ holds in Christianity. Judaism is more than Moses. Confucianism exists without Confucius, Christianity is the presence and power of the Christ. It cannot exist without Him, no more than the sunshine can exist without the sun.

* * *

Moses was a messenger. He pointed away from himself. Paul preached not himself. He pointed to the realm of truth. Christ was both messenger and message in one. He pointed to no domain of truth. He was Truth incarnate. "Learn of me." "I am the Light of the world."

* * *

Christianity cannot exist apart from a personal faith in a personal Christ. Were all faith in Christ to die out from the human heart, Christianity would cease as a power in the earth. He who does not confess Christ is no Christian. That is the Christian creed and doctrine and sacrament and church that gets light from and pays homage and allegiance to the Christ.

* * *

No mere man has yet been born in the human family who, being born in his own age and race, could be the model and standard of right for all men in all times and among all people. This distinction is given only to Christ. Moses and Paul and Shakespeare and Milton belonged to their age and people. Christ is not the son of a man, but the Son of Man. He belongs to the human family. For all men in all ages and climes and races He is pattern and authority and Savior.

* * *

There are two ways to view God's hatred of sin: from His greatness and from His grace; from law and love; from creation and the incarnation, from Sinai and Calvary. How awful a thing is sin seen either in the light of God's glory or grace. Christ reveals both God's greatness and grace.

* * *

The greatest and only true religion in the world is Christianity. The most distinctive note of Christianity is the worship of a Person. No creed can take the place of the Christ. No dogma or doctrine can usurp the Savior. His place in Christianity is like that of the central sun in the heavens. All creeds and dogmas and sacraments and even the Bible itself must receive their light from and do abeyance to the Christ. Christianity is the worship of a Person. Take Christ out, and Christianity is gone.

The foundation of pride is the wish to respect one's self, whatever others may think; the mainspring of vanity is the craving for administration of others, no matter at what cost to one's self-respect.—F. Marion Crawford, in "The Heart of Rome."

Elizabeth City District Conference.

The Elizabeth City District Conference will convene in the Methodist Church in Sunbury, N. C., on Wednesday, July 13th, at 10 a. m.

The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. H. M. Jackson, of Pantego, N. C.

The preachers will please prepare written reports on subjects indicated in the Discipline (paragraph 72). Let laymen be prepared to speak briefly, as to finances, Sunday-schools, and the spiritual condition of the church, as they may be called out.

The following will please act on committees of examination, viz.:

For license to preach—M. H. Tuttle, W. E. Hocutt and J. Y. Old.

For admission and for orders.—A. J. Parker, F. L. Church, and W. F. Craven.

Bishop Smith will preside over the Conference.

Let earnest prayer be made for the presence of the Holy Spirit, in great power.

J. E. UNDERWOOD.

Elizabeth City, June 17th.

Kitty Hawk.

Dear Editor:—This is my second year on this charge, and I suppose I might be permitted to use a little space in the Advocate.

Kitty Hawk charge is isolated from the rest of the State by the waters of the Albemarle and Currituck Sounds, depriving the people of many privileges and opportunities enjoyed by those who are favorably situated. But with all their disadvantages, they have made remarkable advancement in the last twenty years. There is not a section of North Carolina where the people deserve more credit or praise than the people within the bounds of this charge, which extends from Nags Head to Currituck inlet, a distance of forty-one miles.

They are naturally a kind-hearted people; ever ready to help those who may need their aid. And this natural tendency, seasoned and quickened by the grace of God, makes them a people among whom it is a pleasure to labor.

There are among them loyal, whole hearted Methodists, who are ever ready to stand by the church and hold up her hands in all her attempts to extend the kingdom of Christ, not only at home, but everywhere. They are always ready to back their pastor in the fight against evil wherever it may be found. But yet, there are heighths not attained, depths to which they have not descended, and breadths out of which they have not reached. May the Lord use their present pastor, and their succeeded pastors, to help them to attain unto that which is their privilege in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The time and money expended here in the past have not been a failure, and the time and money to be spent in the future will not be without fruits with the glory of God.

A few years ago this section was invaded by Lynch and his followers, and they did much damage to the church. However, I am glad to say, that their work is dying a natural death. The doctrine they taught were contrary to the Word of God; therefore they have failed from lack of Divine support.

Notwithstanding the loyalty and kind-heartedness of the people of Kitty Hawk, they have taken the liberty to invade the parsonage, not once only, but several times, and give the inmates a severe pounding; but I am glad to say that we have survived it all, and are still able for service, and I believe that as soon as we recover from the shock of the recent invasion, we could stand some more of it and come out unharmed unless it should be impaired digestion.

Lest my letter should be too long, I will close, with best wishes for the Advocate.

W. O. DAVIS, P. C.

Memorial to a Good Man.

(The substance of a speech delivered by M. O. Sherrill before Edenton Street M. E. Sunday-school, May 29, 1904, on presenting a nice gold-headed cane to Rev. J. R. Johnson, who was leaving for Canada.)

Mr. Superintendent, Pastor, Officers, Teachers and Scholars of Edenton Street Sunday-school, and friends:—I am too young and timid to make a speech before an audience like this. I presume I have been called on for the purpose of curing me of my bashfulness and youthful timidity. Last Sunday the class to which I have the honor to belong decided to have some expression of the love, esteem and respect for one who had for over four years been so faithful in teaching the class, and they decided to select some one to represent the class and selected me to make a few broken remarks. But mind you, when I consented to do this, it was to take place in our class room before the class, and not in here before the whole school. However, on yesterday, Brother Thonburg informed me over the 'phone that the program had been changed. One good thing, it is Children's Day, and the superintendent can give me only a few minutes, so it will be good for me, and especially good for the school that I will not be allowed time to say much. I came here five years ago last March. The class of boys to which I belong was then taught by that noble Christian man who is now represented here by that portrait on the wall, whose body lies at Durham, N. C., and whose soul we believe is with Abraham and others in paradise to-day. We considered Brother Norman a fine teacher. He was succeeded by Brother Johnson, and we state candidly, that we believe that Brother Johnson has done fully as well. He has been punctual, faithful, earnest and kind. He has constantly exhorted us to get on a higher plane of Chritsian living. He has frequently preached the Gospel in Raleigh and elsewhere on the holy Sabbath day, but he has been preaching seven days in the week by his life. Godly walk and conversation. I presume it is known that our brother, whom we all love, is to be taken from us; we are all sad at his departure, and like the friends of St. Paul, we are most sad of all because we are to see his genial face among us no more. However, when the disciples of our Saviour at last realized that he was to leave them, they were sad and sorrowful, but the Saviour told them not to be troubled, that He was going to prepare a place for them. "In his father's house were many mansions," not small cottages, but mansions, so in our case, if we all live right, and do our duty, we are heirs to the same mansions and may meet Brother Johnson there. Brother Johnson has made many friends in this city. He has been called to go back to his native land. Canada is a great country, as large, or larger in area, than this great country of ours. About three and a half million square miles; though not so many inhabitants as we have in this country, yet there is plenty of work for him to do, many souls to be saved. The land rescued from the French by the shedding of the blood of the brave General Wolfe and his men on the "heights of Abraham." Our loss is a gain to our Canadian brethren. We are fortunate in having Brother Eldridge as his successor.

Well, I suppose, Mr. Superintendent, that you and the school will think that my preliminary remarks sufficiently long, so we will now come to the matter in hand for which we are assembled. Brother Johnson, it is said, we are to "beware of the Greeks when they come bearing gifts," but this does not apply to the present case, for we are all your friends. In some cases it is considered a disgrace for a man "to be caned," not so in this case. I am authorized by your class, sir, to present to you this beautiful cane, or staff, as an expression of the love and affection that we all have for you. May it be a help to you in your earthly pilgrimage. Lean upon this staff, and we trust you never will have to use it as a weapon of defense, but only as support on your journey, and when you get to the last river where you have to lay down your staff, may the Lord whom you serve furnish you an unseen rod and staff for the journey through the dark valley and shadow of death. Take this as an expression of our love as a Sunday-school and church, and when it goes well with you in your northern home, remember your friends in this Southland.

You know, my brother, that when the "ark of the Lord" was at the house of "Obed Edom" three months that he had great prosperity. We do not claim so much for this cane; but when your eye rests on the cane, remember you have the prayers and sympathy of old Edenton Street Sunday-school.

Children's Day.

On the first Sunday in June, as we walked into Parker's Church, North Gates Circuit, we found ourselves almost in a flower garden. In the recess back of the pulpit there was a large and beautiful bank of flowers. The altar rail was artistically decorated, having evergreens from each end of the centre where the evergreens gave way for a large vessel of beautiful pond lilies. The occasion was that of "Children's Day."

Soon the seating capacity of this large church was taxed to its utmost. There were people there from far and near.

At the appointed hour the organ, presided over by Miss Marietta Parker, than whom there can be found nowhere among the young ladies a better church worker, pealed forth in melodious strains, "Gloria." The choir mingled its voices with the organ and it was grand.

The children did now begin to have the day for themselves. Sometimes one, sometimes two, and sometimes fifteen or twenty, bright, happy faces appeared before us. They recited and they sang as children laboring for their Lord and Master. They acquitted themselves well.

The object of the day was explained, and a collection taken amounting to $10.08. This was said to be the largest collection ever taken at that church on any similar occasion.

On the second Sunday, Kittrell's church, beautifully decorated, greeted our eyes. Palms, lilies, roses, etc., made within the altar and the pulpit platform, " a thing of beauty," which if it could have remained would have been "a joy forever." We were again to be entertained and edified by the children.

Long before the hour for beginning, standing room was at a premium. As I sat and beheld the vast audience, I thought, if only I could be as attractive every Sunday as the children are to-day, what an opportunity I would have.

At the organ sat Sister H. B. Cross, a small and by no means a strong woman, but one whose every particle of being is energy ready and willing to be expended for her Lord and her fellow-man.

The exercises began with, "Come Thou Almighty King," sung so sweetly by the well-trained choir and children, that one seemed almost to see the "King of Glory" coming in the distance, attended by His royal train.

The children as they took their places to recite and sing declared by their faces that they were never happier than when laboring for their Saviour. Their rendering of their services was of such a high order that it brought gladness into every heart.

When the collection was taken and counted, we had $7.00, which was the largest collection any one there remembered ever to have been taken at that church on any similar occasion.

We trust that these two churches may each year give the children one day in which to use their talents for their Lord.

Yours truly, W. H. BROWN.

Silence.

When smitten thou dost feel the rod,
Be still and leave thy cause with God;
And silence to thy soul shall teach,
Far more than comes from outward speech.

When secret arts and open foe
Conspire thy peace to overthrow,
In silence learn the hidden power,
Which saves thee in that bitter hour.

Doth not thy Father take thy part?
Doth He not know thy bleeding heart?
And when it seems that thou wilt fall,
Doth He not feel it? bear it all—

Make no reply, but let thy mind
In silent faith the triumphs find,
Which comes from injuries forgiven,
Trust in God, and hope of heaven.

CONVERTED IN A JAPANESE PRISON.

The Story of How Captain Choy Found Christ in a Dungeon—His Letter Shows Spiritual Progress.

About the year 1875 the Chinese government sent fifty of her picked boys to New England to take a fifteen-year course of study in her best schools. A Mr. Wing who, some years before had graduated from Yale, induced his government to enter upon the scheme. After seven years, however, the project was cut short; all the students being recalled, greatly to their disappointment.

One of that band was young Choy. Years later, when a dark war cloud threatened his country, he, with more than usual patriotism for a Celestial, engaged in the war with Japan, as captain of a torpedo boat. When he, together with a good portion of the Chinese fleet, became entrapped by the Japanese, he made a bold dash to pass their lines, and was captured. With others he was brought to Japan, and imprisoned for months, in Hiroshima. When asked by some of his captors what he would do, if he was set free, he replied: "I will fight you again." His patriotic spirit was much admired by the Japanese.

At this time Mr. Northrop, the New England philanthropist, who induced our government to return to Japan the Shimonoseki indemnity money she had unjustly been compelled to pay us, was visiting that country; and while in Hiroshima, he, in company with Rev. Henry Loomis, agent for the American Bible Society in Japan, was privileged to visit the Chinese captives.

There they met Captain Choy. If I am not mistaken he and Mr. Northrop had met before—in New England.

As the captain could read English, Mr. Loomis kindly presented him with an English Bible. During those months of enforced leisure he read and studied with avidity, his one book; with the result of a thorough transformation of life and character. As the war drew towards a close, it became known that the Chinese government had decided to decapitate Captain Choy, when he should be returned to them, on the exchange of prisoners. Suffice it to say, to the joy of his friends, when that time came, he was not to be found. Mr. Loomis kept in touch with him, and opened the way for him to go to Formosa; which had been ceded to Japan by China.

Captain Choy wrote from Formosa several months ago to Mr. Loomis, that he had formed a partnership with a Japanese lawyer and their purpose is not so much to make money as to aid the people in securing justice. Before taking this step he consulted with Rev. Mr. Barclay, who told him that he would be doing as much material good there as elsewhere, and be working for Christ all the same, if he kept a Chritsian spirit in his work. For the Christians, and the poor, they make no charge for their services.

He further wrote: "I know you have been asking all the time, 'What is your spiritual life and progress? What is your relation to the Lord of glory? I have been happy, without anxiety, because I know He careth for me. It is my experience that to be a Christian is to be happy. To be a Christian man and to be a truly happy man are synonymous terms with me. Knowing that Christ is ours, which means that everything else is ours; and yet fret and be anxious, to wear a wrinkled face, a knitted brow, a drooping head, a heavy heart, and make the cross of Christ a heavy burden seems to me to be highly profane. We should show others the light, the joy, the hope and the bright prospects of a Christian's life. * *

"Christianity is not a philosophy, not a fiction, not a superstition, but a living and practical faith. Therefore, I am always happy as possessing Him who supplies and satisfies every want.

"The former obstacle to my acceptance of Christ was the fear of being made unhappy under the fetters of religion. But my happiness now assumes that Christ is the source from which we get our inexhaustible supply.

"In obedience to your good advice, I read the Bible daily. Every morning the New Testament with notes, the Classical Chinese Bible, and the Romanized Formosa New Testament are laid open. I read a chapter of the Romanized aloud. When I cannot catch the sense, I run over the Classical Bible. When the meaning in any passage cannot be understood, I have recourse to the English Testament with notes. In this way I learn the Bible and Formosa dialect. I confess I love the Book dearly; the one you gave me in Hiroshima is my constant guide and companion, and the spare spaces in it are being filled with marks and notes. So that if you come to Formosa you will see it buoyed and beaconed with red and blue ink, with Chinese and English notes, and other private helps to the proper digestion of the Bread of Life.

"My estimate of the worth of a book is to find out what lifting power it posses—how far it is able to make men good, noble and happy, how high it can elevate us from the beasts and brutes and make us true men. In no other book, ancient or modern, heathen of Christian, are such standards set forth as in the Bible. It does not only refine our nature and carry us to a loftier sphere, but it makes us the sons and daughters of God, and heirs of a throne more glorious than earthly kings in the height of their ambition ever dreamed of.

"Another standard of the worth of a book is its power of inducing thought. A book is not necessarily valuable because it contains certain facts, but it is valuable and precious because its perusal will stimulate thoughts in us by a sort of induction.

"It will be valuable in proportion to its rousing power and setting our own mind in active motion. Some books, though interesting on first reading, will appear distasteful in a second perusal; but the Bible is inexhaustible in depth; and even after repeated readings, new thoughts will still rise and present themselves. The closer we examine the more there is in it. It is really a world, a world of thoughts, a world of joy, a world of blessed promises. 'Heaven and earth will pass away, but my words shall not pass away.'

" 'The heavens and the earth will meet destruction sure,
But Jesus' holy words will e'er endure.
List not to wily tongues thy faith to move,
The Gospel tightly grasp and firmness prove.'

"I beg pardon and forgiveness for my delays in correspondence, but be assured you are always uppermost in my thoughts. By this letter I send my best love to Mrs. Loomis, Miss Loomis, and little Roger. God bless you all.

"Your own son, Choy."

In Case of Accident.

A young mother who reads the Advocate says she has been greatly troubled of late by accidents and as she has moved to the country and was never so far from a doctor before, this is particularly hard on her. She wishes me to write at once and tell her of a few simple remedies and helps for Children's Accidents. It does certainly reduce the doctor's bills to have a medicine chest, for when a young inexperienced mother gets frightened she sends at once for a physician when perhaps a simple home remedy would have answered.

For burns or scalds use linseed oil and lime water mixed together with a feather until it looks like cream, then apply it to burns. It is excellent. For an open wound always use old soft linen rags in preference to cotton as it chafes the injured part less.

Arnica is applied to bruises when the skin is not broken; if broken, vaseline is the best remedy.

For sore eyes or inflamed weak eyes bathe them in boracic acid; put a teaspoonful into a pint of warm water and bathe every half hour. Keep a medicine chest and put such in it. Always keep borax in your washstand and let the children put a pinch in the face and hands in water they bathe in, as it wards off contagion and disinfects, and the doctors say that school children should all use it to keep safe and healthy when playing in the streets with other boys. A Fine Answer.

From the Alaskan mines comes a story which is worth repeating. A young Swede, whose opportunities had been so limited that he was nothing but a stable boy before he went to the mines, was fortunate enough to secure a good claim, and to dig a considerable amount of gold out of it. His partner, also a Swede, asked him one day:

"What are you going to do with your money?"

"I mean to do more for the world," was the quiet answer, "than the world ever did for me."

He meant it, too, for this ex-hostler has since given something like $50,000 to endow a college and a hospital in the far West.

The more one considers the answer and the deed the nobler they appear.

So many men ask, bitterly, "What has the world ever done for me?" and thus justify the spending of their all upon themselves.

So many workers say, impatiently, "Why should I do better work than the world pays me for?" and thus toil grudgingly on.

So many souls quarrel with life because it does not give them all they desire, and thus become self-pitying, self-indulgent failures.

How different the spirit of this Swedish stable boy, whose generous soul accepted the hardness and indifference of the world, asked nothing from it, but desired all the more to benefit it, and make it a better place for others than it had been for him.—Wellspring.

Take It as It Comes

Does it rain to-day? Is it dark and gloomy? That is all right; there must be some stormy days. To-morrow the clouds will have a silvery lining or disappear entirely. Does the sun shine? Enjoy the sunshine. To-morrow may be bright also. Are you well? Enjoy your health, and use it to the best advantage. Are you ill? Then it is a day in which to be patient and endure cheerfully. Are you free from trouble? Then it is a thanksgiving day. Are you carrying heavy burdens for yourself or others? Then it is a day for the rolling off your burdens at the foot of the cross.—Louise Heywood.

Work is to be begun on our new publishing house at Nashville, corner Broad and McLemore Streets, July 1st.

Those who expect to attend the St. Louis Exposition would do well to read the column in the St. Louis Christian Advocate giving the address of boarding-houses and hotels.

The Governor of Texas has appointed the publisher of the Texas Advocate, Mr. L. Blaylock, as Police Commissioner of Dallas. Things have put on a new front, it is said, since his ascendency to this throne.

Our Boys and Girls

Smithfield, N. C., May 30, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As my other letter was in print, I will write again. Our every-day school is out; but we have a very good Sunday-school.

I will answer Eula Ellen's question: Moses disobeyed God was why he did not enter the Promise Land.

I will ask a question: How old was Moses when he died?

Your little friend,
ROBERT P. WHITLEY.

Beasely, N. C., May 30, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl seven years old. I live in the country, and go to Sunday-school. I like to go very much. My teacher's name is Miss Frankie Britt, and I love her dearly.

I will close by asking a question: Who was the oldest man?

Your little friend,
MAUD WESTBROOK.

Hidonville, N. C., June 1, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl nine years old. I love to read the Advocate. I go to Sunday-school sometime, and also to every-day school. It is vacation now. My teacher is my mamma. I like to study very well. We little children can learn well up here in the "Land of the Sky." I know the cousins would like to be here in the summer time. I may write more if I see this in print. I wrote this myself.

Your unknown friend,
LEONA CARPENTER.

Ocracoke, N. C., May 25, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl eleven years of age. My papa takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the little girls letters very much. My papa and mother are both living, and I have only one sister. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday, and my teacher's name is Mrs. Bettie Grant, and our superintendent is F. W. Howard, and our pastor is Rev. R. B. Grant.

I will close with best wishes to the Advocate.

Your unknown friend,
ROSA TOLSON.

East Durham, N. C., May 30, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little boy eight years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. My teacher is Mr. J. W. Cameron. He is a good teacher. Our superintendent is Mr. Y. E. Smith.

I will answer Bessie Mildred Crawford's question: Jesus was about thirty years old when he began to preach.

Now I will ask a question: How old was Moses when he died?

I am, your little friend,
WALTER HAYGOOD McCALL.

Pikeville, N. C.

—Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl ten years old. I will write to your paper for the first time. My papa takes your paper, and I enjoy reading it very much.

I go to Sunday-school; my teacher is Mrs. Garris, and our pastor is Rev. Mr. Trip. I like him very much. My father and mother are both living. I have four brothers and three sisters. I wish to see this in print.

LOVIS HAM.

Louisburg, N. C., May 29, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl nine years old. My mother is dead, and my papa is living. I have one brother, and no sister. I live with my grandma. I have two grandmas. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. We read the Bible in it. This is the first time I have written to you. I will close by asking what two chapters in the Bible are alike.

Your friend,
HELEN CARLISLE PLEASANTS.

Old Hundred, N. C., May 6, 1904.

Dear Cousins:—May I enter into your happy band once again? I have written twice before.

Our school was out last Friday, and I was so sorry. We are going to have Childrens' Day the third Sunday in May. I wish some of the cousins could be with us.

My birthday will be the 18th of May, and I will be eleven years old.

I will close by asking a question: Who was the strongest man?

Your little friend,
LOLIA J. THROWER.

Maxton, N. C., May 26, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl ten years of age. I have just finished reading the Advocate. I go to Sunday-school. Our superintendent is Mr. Jos. E. Avent, and our pastor is Rev. N. II. D. Wilson.

I will answer Nannie Pruden's question: Samson's strength was in his hair.

Now I will ask one: What is the middle chapter and least chapter in the Bible?

If this escapes the waste-basket, I will come again.

Your little friend,
JULIA LEE PACE.

Smithfield, N. C., May 30, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl twelve years old. I love to read the little boys' and girls' letters. My papa is living but my mother is dead. I have a step-mother. I love her dearly. I have two brothers and one sister older than myself. I also have two brothers dead.

I will answer Oscar Gainey's question: Moses was buried in a valley in the land of Moab.

I will ask a question: Which of the ten commandments has a promise?

Your little friend,
MABEL ELLEN STRICKLAND.

Beasley, N. C., May 30, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl eleven years old. My papa takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the girls' and boys' letters very much. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Papa is our superintendent. My teacher is Miss Frankie Britt and I like her very much. Our pastor is Rev. R. A. Bruton, and I think he is a very good man.

I will answer Mary Taylor's question: Samson was the strongest man.

Now I will ask a question: Who was the mighty hunter before the Lord?

Your unknown friend,
EULA WESTBROOK.

Raleigh, N. C., May 31, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl eight years of age. Papa takes the Advocate, and I like to read the little boys' and girls' letters very much. My school is out now. I studied the fourth reader, spelling, arithmetic and drawing. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. My teacher is Mrs. Fannie Thompson.

I will answer Mary Taylor's question: Samson was the strongest man.

I will ask a question: How many times did Elijah pray before his prayer was answered?

Enclosed you will find five cents for the orphans.

Your little friend,
WILLIE ZOA KELLEY.

Raleigh, N. C., May 31, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little boy six years old. My school has closed now. My teacher was Mrs. E. T. Saunders, and I liked her very much. I go to Sunday-school every time I can. Our superintendent is Mr. Tinker Jackson and my teacher is my father. Our pastor is Rev. G. R. Rood; we like him very much.

I will answer Mabel Stephen's question: Moses was the meekest man.

I will ask a question: What was Jacob's mother's name?

Find enclosed five cents for the little orphans.

Your unknown friend,
CECIL KELLEY.

Wilmington, N. C., May 29, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little boy ten years old. I have a mother, father, two sisters and a brother. My sister's names are Lina and Annie, and my brother's name is Edward. I go to Sunday-school. My teacher is Mrs. Shaw and our pastor is Rev. N. M. Watson.

My every-day school teachers are Miss Mary Bernard and Miss Lathrop.

I will close by answering Mary Taylor's question: Samson was the strongest man. I am,

Your unknown friend,
WELFORD PRATT.

P. S.—I hope to have my letter in print.

Wilson, N. C., May 13, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little boy nine years old. My papa takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the little folks' letters very much. I go to Sunday-school and also to the graded school. Miss Mary Deans is my Sunday-school teacher and Miss Z. Winstead is my graded school teacher. I have two sisters; one is six and the other is two years old.

Now I will ask a question: Which is the shortest verse in the Bible?

Dr. Ivey, you must come down and see our new church. [You may be sure, Moses, that such is my intention.—Ed.]

I enclose five cents for the Orphanage.

Your little friend,
MOSES ROUNTREE.

Scotland Neck, N. C., May 31, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl eleven years old and I enjoy reading the little folks' letters very much. My father and mother are both living. Mrs. Hendren.

How many kinds of a "pi" can printers make?

We hope our readers are too familiar with the excellent letters of our "Aunt Lizzie" to have been misled by the "Mrs. Henderson" which appeared last week.

Miss. Mary Pescud.

As the time draws near for our loved missionary to return to her field of labor in Brazil, her friends are anxious to give expression to the tender, genuine esteem in which she is held, not only by friends in her own church, but by all Christian workers.

The reception given in her honor by Miss Reece was a delightful function in all its appointments. No donbt the guest of honor will often revert to it with pleasure, after she reaches her far away home, and is "diligent in business" among those to whom she is sent as an "ambassador for Christ."

Bugle Echoes.

The communications from Mrs. Swindell and Mrs. Hendren last week contained timely admonition about the prompt payment of each quarter's dues. Indeed, it has been one of the leading themes of our column ever since it was set apart for the use of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

We are all familiar with the fact that reports for the second and third quarters rarely contain their proportionate part of finances—instead, they are meager, disappointing, while the demands of our work, the duties and labors of our missionaries, remain as imperative during these quarters as any other time—no surcease from daily toil, no raven to bring "bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening." And yet we leave our homes when the heated season comes—go abroad for rest and pleasure, and forget our duty—our vows of loyalty—to those to whom we pledged our support! Let us decide now to "change our ways," dear sisters.

There is no censure for those who can have these pleasant outings—it would be well if all could avail themselves of such opportunities; but when we are planning our summer trips, let us leave in the hands of our Treasurers, every cent of dues, Conference expense fund and pledge which is due for the month or quarter we will be absent.

May this second quarter find us awake to our responsibilities; and as we are making expenditures for our own comfort and pleasure, may these inspired words recur to us again and again: "Ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said. It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Adieu.

From today until August, the management of our column will be under the supervision of Miss Daisy Waitt, Raleigh, N. C. I bespeak for her the co-operation of our missionary sisters, and urgently request the officers of our auxiliaries, and the Lady Managers of our Jewel Bands, to send to her items of news from the different departments of the work.

She is the President of the Young Woman's Society of Edenton Street Church, and is efficient and faithful, as well as greatly interested in our missionary cause. With your assistance, dear friends, she will keep the interests of our work properly presented.

In a few days I will leave Raleigh for a season of visiting and pleasure in the Western part of the State; and as the Annual Meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Western North Carolina Conference convenes in Monroe, June 23rd, it will be my pleasure to meet with those elect women for the first time in four years.

"God be with you till we meet again."

For Auxiliary Third Vice President.

Dear Mrs. Burton:—You are always glad to hear good news, I'm sure. Here is some for not only you, but all who are interested in our Home Mission work.

The day after our Annual Meeting adjourned, Mrs. Scott was with our Auxiliary, and told us why we should combine the Local Aid and Missionary Societies. The result is sufficient compliment to our beloved Secretary, and I will offer none other.

Our new President, Mrs. Edgerton, is very faithful, and we will try to help her in every possible way. She is much loved by each member, and we are confident the work will grow under her skilfull direction.

The refreshing influence of the annual gathering is still with us. Our ladies are more enthused than ever before.

We study the Monthly Bulletins, with excellent results. Last meeting our President began the use of the blackboard in this connection. We thank you for your faithful weekly reports in the Advocate. They keep us in touch with the work, and I believe I can say for each member of our Auxiliary, that we are trying to really learn something of our Society. Our greatest trouble is ignorance of what we have done, are doing, and expect to do—don't you think so?

Now, there is one subject about which I wish to speak to you: The Third Vice-Presidents are not doing their full duty; from some of the Auxiliaries there never comes a report. One or two of our largest have sent me no names at all—and I have held this office over one year. You know this will never do—my Department must grow or I will have to give it up.

I send a copy of my report for the past quarter. Only nine Auxiliaries, as you see, have written to me.

Please help me to devise some plan by which a new impetus can be given to this important branch of our work.

Yours with love,
MARGARET WADDELL SPIERS.

Appreciation.

I feel sure that Mrs. Spiers' letter and report will be both appreciated and valued. Every Auxiliary rejoices in her enthusiastic industry and consecrated energy. Let us all help her in her beautiful work; she is not only a worthy leader, but a gifted and wise one as well, who realizes that the future of Missions, which we know means the life of our beloved church itself, depends on the rising generation. I gladly devote our column this week to the Baby Roll and the Brigades.

ONLY ONE PRESCRIPTION.

Dr. M. S. Fiedler writes: "I know Tetterine to be a radical cure for tetter, salt rheum, eczema and all kindred diseases of the skin and scalp. I never prescribe anything else in all skin troubles." The explanation of Dr. Fiedler's policy is, that he never fails to cure such diseases when he uses Tetterine.

LITERARY DISSIPATION AND MENTAL WORRY.

There is nothing more common than mental worry. In the modern exposure of things above and things beneath to the searching rays of science, mental worry has not escaped. The medical world is now engaged in considering the evil from a physical standpoint as a pathological manifestation. The exciting causes are held to be both physical and psychical.

A German physician, Dr. Lagner, says that the evil is caused by abnormal analysis of self, fear, lack of will-power, and the reading of exciting literature.

The first cause is developed within the domain of the religious emotions; the second, in the domain of the physico-psychichal, and the third, in the purely mental and emotional domain. In other words, the third cause may be expressed in the words, "literary dissipation."

Dissipation is really a squandering of resources. We find it in the case of one who squanders spiritual strength in the emotionalism of negative religious exercise. We find it in the case of one who squanders his physical and mental energies and his vigor of will in the excessive use of intoxicants and opiates. We find it as easily in the case of one who dwarfs memory, and reason, and abnormally develops and excites the imagination through either excessive or montonously uniform reading. The latter kinds, of dissipation is exceedingly common and is undoubtedly responsible for many elusive ailments for whose removal drugs are taken, but whose diagnosis is altogether psychical. In other words, our bad feelings do not come originally from the body, but from the soul, and literary dissipation is the exciting cause.

Here, as individuals upon whom rests the responsibility of providing the right kind of pabulum for the mind, we stand face to face with a very sacred duty—that of providing for the mind that diet which not only forestalls mental and moral lesion, but produces mental and moral healthfulness.

Here, as parents, teachers, and guardians we see clearly the necessity of a jealous watchfulness of the mental diet of our children. That many adults during darkened days filled with unexplainable heartaches, hover near the border land of insanity very often excites our wonder. The whys and wherefores may be not seldom found in early mental diet. An excitation of youthful imagination and emotion by means of theatrical performances, and excessive reading of those books and papers which appeal to the emotional and prurient cannot but furnish the drapery to enswathe in years to come the soul's darkened chambers which should be filled with sunshine. We frequently visit a public library, and what we see there saddens our hearts. We see hardly anything else than an inordinate thirst for fiction—and that of a kind which cannot be healthful to the soul.

Our mental diet should be sound and varied. Biography, travels, history, should become attractive to us, even if an effort of the will should be necessary.

There is another thought which we should consider in connection with this subject, and it is that if "literary dissipation" carries in its wake so much that is evil, the absence of literary exercise in those natures which are adapted to such exercise will be just as injurious in its effects.

Rev. Hilary Humble, the Methodist minister of Littleton, came up from Trinity commencement last week and spent several days visiting his parents here. He filled the pulpit at the Methodist church Sunday morning and night, and preached two most excellent sermons. Mr. Humble is a Burlington man, and it is with great pride that we see him doing so well in his high calling.—Burlington News.

THE GLADNESS OF "CHARITY AND CHILDREN."

Charity and Children always takes a large view of things—large enough to take in a good many things which do not particularly affect the interests of a Baptist Orphanage.

We have just clipped from Charity and Children the following:

"The Dukes have been great givers to Methodist institutions in North Carolina, but their liberality has dwarfed the spirit of giving amongst the rank and file of the Methodist Church. That is one danger in having rich men in a denomination. The others all learn to lean on them. The Dukes have been benefactors to the whole State, but we are sincerely glad that they are not Baptist men."

So Charity and Children is sincerely glad that the Dukes are not Baptist men. We concede to Charity and Children the right to choose its own denominational associates. We must commend too its peculiar ebullient frankness in expressing its choice. If, however, Charity and Children in writing the above designed to impress upon the public mind a belief in its sincerity, then we much condemn Charity and Children's judgment. For surely, Charity and Children did not for a moment think that in making its statement it could fail to conjure up in every reader's mind an old fable which tells about a wolf, and a bunch of grapes which (according to the wolf) were "sour." But we have no quarrel with Charity and Children for its "I-thank-thee." It is glad that the Dukes are not Baptist men, and so are we, and there is harmony between us on this point.

But Charity and Children says that the liberality of the Dukes has dwarfed the spirit of giving amongst the rank and file of the Methodist Church. Surely it meant to say "extravagance," for whoever heard of a case in which liberality so highly commended in Holy Writ ever dwarfed anything good and true.

As the statement made is general, we take it that the spirit of giving in general is meant.

How did Charity and Children get such an idea as this? We Methodists in North Carolina are not given to boasting, but we have been feeling unusually good over the fact that the figures show that in the last ten years the spirit of giving in the rank and file of our membership has undergone a remarkable development. The average salary paid our preachers is increasing year by year, being over $600, larger than that of any other denomination of the State. The church and parsonage building fever is on our people. In the last year the Methodist people of North Carolina have spent for new churches and parsonages, $151,635.55. Last year we gave $50,413.12 for Foreign and Domestic Missions.

The total gifts of the Methodists of North Carolina, not including the gifts of the Dukes, was $559,927.63. The amount increases every year. We (the rank and file) have established an orphanage, whose central building, one of the most beautiful in the State, has been erected at a cost of over $30,000. In the matter of education our people have always shown their readiness to give. Within the last year they have given $59,000 to Greensboro College alone—actual subscriptions from the people.

No, Brother Charity and Children, the facts and figures are against you. They will not allow you to bring against the Methodists of North Carolina your charge that anything in the heavens above, the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth has dwarfed the spirit of giving among our people.

We have drawbacks and deficiencies, as have other Christian bodies, and we have always found it to be true that a Christian denomination is always the most successful in treating its own ailments—not those of another.

The new splendid buildings of Oxford Seminary will be completed by July 15th, so writes President Hobgood. We wish this excellent institution great success.

DEATH OF DR. JONATHAN SANDFORD.

There has just come to us the sad news of the death of Dr. Jonathan Sandford. He was stricken with paralysis on last Sunday while in the pulpit, just after the announcement of his text.

Since last Conference, Dr. Sanford had been almost incapacitated for work. In the early part of the year he was crippled in an accident which kept him in his room several months. During this time his health was feeble. Several weeks ago he was able to enter upon active duties. But the call of the Great Captain was almost ready. On last Sunday it came, and the brave and faithful soldier of the Cross, fully panoplied, and on the field, answered, "Here."

We presume that, if Dr. Sanford had been allowed to choose the place of his death, that choice would coincided with the reality. He went to heaven from the pulpit as have gone so many faithful preachers.

Many preachers of the Conference and thousands of the laity will look upon the death of Dr. Sandford as a personal bereavement. He had a personality which was attractive to all who knew him intimately. He was a genial tender-hearted companion and a true sympathetic friend. As a preacher, he possessed superior ability. He managed to get into the hearts of his hearers, often with a pathos that was melting.

He was one of the "Old Guard" of the Conference, and he has left his mark on many a field of battle. His trophies of victory are many. It is a large rich life that he leaves behind as he enters the life eternal.

May God be tender to the stricken wife and other loved ones.

Fuller data as to his life will be given to our readers in the memoir which we will publish later.

THE PERPLEXITY OF THE BRETHREN.

There reach our ears certain echoes that indicate that quite a number of our clerical brethren in the Conference are bothered about the new order of worship. They wish to be obedient to rules, regulations, and customs of the church, yet they stagger at certain things in the New Order. They feel that they cannot or should not hold their congregations to the recitation of the Apostles Creed or the singing of the Gloria Patri. In some of these congregations, the preacher himself often has to "hist the hime."

It does not fall within our province here to discuss the New Order of Worship, but we do wish to assure the brethren that if they take the New Order of Worship and study it well, especially the parts indicated as optional, that they can still use the old form, with the exception of standing up in the second hymn, and still be true to the New Order and loyal to the rules and regulations of the church. If the use of the Apostles Creed and the singing of the Gloria Patri had been considered as necessary parts of the New Order, the Commission would not have dared to say that these parts may be left out.

Notice.

To the Pastors of Fayetteville District:

Please mail me a list of your delegates to the District Conference together with a list of local preachers. Let all who expect to come by private conveyance notify me in time to provide for their stock.

Will all connectional brethren who expect to come please notify me so that homes can be provided for them.

Methodist Mention

State.

The Edenton Street Sunday-school will have its annual excursion on next Friday. Jackson Springs is the objective point.

Dr. J. T. Gibbs and family will spend the summer at Pelham, which is in Durham District, of which Dr. Gibbs is Presiding Elder.

Misses Ollie, Irma, and Bertha Lawrence, of Harnett County, and strong friends of the Advocate, made this office a pleasant visit on last Friday.

We are glad to learn from Rev. H. B. Anderson that his wife, who has been quite sick with continued fever for several weeks, is very much better.

Rev. G. B. Starling, Cary Circuit, in a recent visit to the office, showed in face and tone that affairs on his work are in a healthy progressive state.

We have the sad news that the health of Rev. M. D. Hix is in a precarious condition. He is now at Jackson. We trust that his recovery may be complete.

Rev. Alvin Betts, of Raleigh, was seventy-six years of age last Saturday, June 18th. His brother, Rev. A. D. Betts, of Littleton, ran in from the Nashville Reunion just in time to spend that day with him.

Rev. Walter Holcombe, who went abroad a few months ago, and spent most of his time in Palestine, has returned. He is at present in Tennessee holding meetings. His address for the summer will be Montreat, N. C.

We are glad to know that Rev. J. A. Lee, who at last Conference, took a superannuated relation, is almost restored to health, and hopes to resume work at next Conference. He has ever been a true and faithful worker.

We regret to learn of the death of Mr. B. L. Jones, of Norfolk. He died on last Saturday. He was one of our "model laymen." He was the son of Rev. John Jones, a deceased member of the North Carolina Conference.

Mr. L. G. Roper, of Roper, N. C., was an appreciated visitor at this office on last Friday. He was in Raleigh for several days attending the Masonic gathering. He gives a good report of Rev. W. F. Craven and his work.

We should have mentioned last week the death of Mrs. C. W. Edwards, wife of Prof. Edwards of Trinity College. She died May 30th, the fourth anniversary of her marriage. Prof. Edwards and the other bereaved ones have the deepest sympathies of the Advocate.

Trinity Park High School's last session was one of unusual prosperity. There is no school in the South with better facilities for giving to a boy and girl that education which takes in the best development of mind and heart. All the success of this school is deserved. See ad in this issue.

The annual celebration of St. John's Day by the Masons of North Carolina will be held at the Oxford Orphan Asylum Saturday, the 25th instant. The order of exercises will include special communication of the Grand Lodge of Masons before noon, and interesting and profitable exercises in the grove during the afternoon.

Mrs. D. N. Caviness went to Baltimore last Thursday, taking their little son to the hospital for treatment. For a long time the little fellow has been a great sufferer from what they supposed to be rheumatism, but an X-Ray photograph showed only a slight blur on the bone, and the physicians placed a plaster of paris cast on the diseased hip and Mrs. Caviness will return with him to-morrow. We are glad there is no serious trouble, and hope this treatment will bring him around all right.—Burlington News.

It was Dr. E. A. Alderman, of Tulane University, and not Dr. Collins Denny, who was elected President of the University of Virginia.

The Arkadelphia Methodist College has received $10,000 from Capt. C. C. Henderson, and the name of the college is to be changed to Henderson College.

Dr. H. M. Hamill, who made the annual literary address before Emory College, returns from Georgia pleased with the reception accorded him. His subject was "The Old South."

We have received the following item of news from Rev. Thos. H. Leitch: "We have just closed a meeting here with Rev. S. T. Moyle. Some forty converted and several united with the church. This was truly a revival in the church; then the town was moved. Brother Moyle is doing faithful work and being blessed in his labors."

Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Hamill will conduct in Edenton Street Church, Raleigh, a Sunday-school Institute, to begin Monday noon, June 27th, and to close on the evening of the following day. We are looking for a rare treat. Both Prof. and Mrs. Hamill are specialists in their line, and they never fail to entertain and instruct. A large number of attendants from a distance is expected.

Rev. A. J. Parker, P. C. Roanoke Island, thus writes: "When I came here I found less than thirty subscribers to the Advocate. I have now about eighty. I think that perhaps I will reach the one hundred mark before the year closes, even if I have to take a few Baptists and Disciples to make up the number. Brother Parker's efforts and triumps are like his body—on a big scale.

Children's Day exercises at the Methodist church were very appropriately rendered last Sunday. All the children having recitations and songs acted well their part, being trained under the efficient supervision of Mrs. J. P. Brown. The pastor addressed the children and congregation, giving timely thought and instruction to the children. A good collection was taken to furnish poor people with literature who are unable to buy it.—Ashpole Cor. Lumberton Argus.

We learn from the Weldon News that they had a great day at Smiths, near Weldon, on the second Sunday in this month. Dr. D. B. Zollicoffer, the original "Sunday-school speaker," was the orator of the day. Rev. P. N. Stainback and Rev. H. A. Humble, the pastor, made appropriate adresses in the afternoon. It was Children's Day. Rev. P. N. Stainback, though, carried off the honors of the day by uniting in marriage at the conclusion of the day's session, Mr. J. D. Johnson and Miss Carrie Dickens. In all, it was a fine day.

Rev. John Franklin Heitman, many years professor at Trinity College, of which he was acting president two years, died suddenly of heart failure at his home at Trinity on June 15th. He was the son of Rev. Henry Heitman, of Davidson County, and was born near Lexington in 1840. He was captain of the famous Company H of the 48th N. C. Regiment in the Civil War. He was wounded at Fredericksburg. He was several times mentioned for efficiency and gallantry. Brother Heitman was a worthy man, having courage of his convictions, and a desire to advance the cause of his Master.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of Edenton Street Church, Raleigh, held a most interesting service on last Sunday night. Mrs. B. F. Dixon presided, and made an interesting report of the Edenton Street Auxiliary. Mrs. R. O. Burton read a well prepared paper on the history of the W. F. M. Society from the beginning. Miss Mary Pescud then made a feeling talk on Brazil and what the church is doing there. Miss Pescud will sail for Brazil July 5th. She has fully regained her health, and will return to her chosen field with renewed enthusiasm and deepened consecration. Rev. R. F. Bumpas preached in the morning a most appropriate sermon on the subject of womans work. As a result, there was quite an addition to the membership of the Edenton Street Auxiliary.

Publisher's Column

DO YOU WANT?

1. A Lawton's Simplex Printer which will enable you to take several hundred impressions at a time of any letter or circular you wish to send out. Then write to this office and secure a bargain.

2. A Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, largest size, and that has never been used. Then write to this office and secure a bargain.

3. A practically new piano-player that sells on the market for $250.00. It is one of the finest Pianolas made. Without knowing a note of music, you can attach it to any piano and play the most beautiful and difficult pieces of the masters with all the original expression. Then write to this office and secure a wonderful bargain.

THE AWARD.

According to our offer, Wilmington District is entitled to the prize of Ten Dollars. Fayetteville is entitled to the prize of $5.00. We lack only 27 of having the number we have aimed at—1,350. We take it that this number will be reached before the close of the month. Now that through the active loyalty of the brethren whom we most sincerely thank, we have up-to-date, since Conference, secured 1,323 new subscribers, let us see to it that by next Conference at Henderson we will have made the number 2,000. This can be done, and, we believe, will be done. A strong paper must have a large circulation. Remember that every new subscriber added to our list represents so much strength added to the paper.

OFFER.

To the District reporting the largest number of new subscribers between May 4 and June 22, 1904, the Advocate will give $10.00 to be applied as the District Conference thinks best.

To the District reporting the next highest, $5.

Reports will be published weekly in the Advocate as before.

NORTH CAROLINA EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE
DEVOTIONAL CHARITABLE LITERARY EVANGELICAL
EDITED BY REV. H. B. ANDERSON.

The Bible Class Corporation.

In the months past we have described several of the large Bible classes that have a separate organization and a corporate life of their own. Much interest is felt in this subject, as it touches vitally the question, how to keep hold of the young as they emerge from the discipline of childhood.

Our readers will be glad to read, therefore, the careful and conservative discussion of this theme in our news pages by the Rev. Edward Gilman Mason, of Arkon, Ohio. Our contributor, in this article, shows convincely the value of such organization and he clearly indicates how a class can be organized so as to acquire an intrinsic and permanent life that shall not depend on the ordinary vicissitudes of the teaching force. It may be said, however, that most, if not all, of the notably successful classes of this type do very largely depend on some natural leader. There must be the man behind or at the machine.

The Denominational Weekly.

One reason why the denominational weekly does not flourish as of yore is because it does not push itself upon its natural constituteney with the shrewdness and vigor of its secular competitors. It is too apt to adopt a policy of modesty and reticence, does not "blow its own trumpet," fails to pull wires of influence, forgets to advertise. As a consequence not a few worthy journals are quietly dying of dignity.

This is unfortunate to the church as well as to the journals. For we hold fast to the conviction that the weekly denominational paper is of the greatest value as a factor in the religious life of the times. The type is no more "obsolete" than the cause it represents. It is absurd to say that "people" have outgrown such journals. So long as Chrtisian organizations continue papers devoted to their interests have a legitimate cause for being.

The service which the denominational paper renders the individual church, and consequently the claim it has on church members for support, is well put in a recent editorial in Our Pilot, the parish paper of the First Universalist Church of Troy, N. Y. The passage reads:

"Every one present this morning has received a copy of the Univeralist Leader. You take the daily paper, perhaps two; you take one or more general magazines; you probably take a scientific or philosophical periodical, but do you take a religious paper? The Universalist Leader is a liberal, comprehensive and a profoundly religious publication. If you subscribe by the year it will cost you a fraction less than four cents a week. It is $2 a year, and you receive it weekly. Think it over, and send your subscription to the pastor or to the Universalist Pub. House, 30 West St., Boston.

"I make this appeal, not for the benefit of the Leader; that is secondary. I make it for the benefit of our local church; for the inestimable service it can render us and our cause in this city."

This clear and sensible statement, no doubt, had a tonic effect on the circulation of the Leader in that particular congregation. And as the editorial said, the church even more than the periodical, will be the gainer. We venture to assert that a pastor cannot have a more valuable adjunct to his ministry than a good subscription roll of readers to the organ of his denomination. The fruits of such loyalty to and interest in the general work of the denomination will come to the surface in countless practical ways.

If the statistics could be collected on this subject it would doubtless appear that the real burden of work done by the laity of any denomination is borne chiefly by those who take and read the denominational papers and thus keep in touch with the larger interests of their communion.

A Notre Dame Lady's Appeal.

To all knowing sufferers of rheumatism whether muscular or of the joints, sciatica, lumbagos, backache, pains in the kidneys or neuralgia pains, to write to her for a home treatment which has repeatedly cured all of these tortures. She feels it her duty to send it to all sufferers FREE. You cure yourself at home as thousands will testify—no change of climate being necessary. This simple discovery banishes uric acid from the blood, loosens the stiffened joints, purifies the blood, and brightens the eyes, giving elasticity and tone to the whole system. If the above interests you, for proof address Mrs. M Summers, Box 283, Notre Dame Ind.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR SUCCESSFUL LIFE INSURANCE MEN IN NORTH AND SOUTH CAROLINA.

Any life insurance solicitor who is successful and reliable, or any capable reliable man who is willing to work up to it, can secure from the Southern Loan and Trust Company of Greensboro, N. C., a working contract possessing all the advantages of a general agent's contract. With this contract can be secured small or large territory as desired, and such facilities as may be necessary for financing the general agency. No man need apply who is not a worker, and who cannot give satisfactory references.

The Southern Loan and Trust Company has spared no pains or expense to give its patrons the best that there is in life insurance. It is a legal reserve company with a cash capital and surplus of over $225,000. The company has operated in only a few counties in North Carolina, but in the territory in which it has operated, has written more business than any other company. For further information address A. W. McAlister, Manager, Greensboro, N. C.

Sunday School

Lesson for June 26, 1904.

Review.

Golden Text: Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name (Phil. 2:9).

In the older classes of the Sunday-school the present review may well be made to cover the entire life of Christ. In the younger classes, it will probably be found more advantageous to confine the review to the lessons of the quarter, emphasizing some salient truth in each lesson, as is done here.

1. Jesus Visits Tyre and Sidon.—This lesson fell upon Easter Sunday, and furnished an excellent illustration of the newness of life which Christ brings. As He drove the demoniac spirit out of the daughter of the Syro-Phœnician woman, so He will drive away the evil spirit of sin from all who yield themselves to Him.

2. Peter Confesses the Christ.—The divinity of Jesus was the supreme truth taught in this lesson. As Peter openly confessed Jesus to be the Christ, so ought we to recognize in Jesus the world's Redeemer, sent to save us from our sins.

3. Jesus Transfigured.—The Transfiguration was the divine witness to the truth of the claim of Jesus to be Son of God. It furnishes a striking proof of His absolute divinity.

4. Mission of the Seventy.—This was essentially a missionary lesson. The seventy disciples who were sent forth by Jesus were the forerunners of that army of noble men and women who have since preached the Gospel in all lands.

5. Prayer and Promise.—This lesson brought to us the exceedingly helpful teaching of our Lord concerning prayer. Let us hear His voice still saying to us, "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

6. Watchfulness.—The exhortation to watchfulness is a message for all times and places. We should be continually on our guard,and the teaching of our Lord in this lesson is needful for us all.

7. The Prodigal Son.—This stands as a prince among the parables of Jesus. It is a divinely inspired picture of the eternal love of our Heavenly Father for all His erring children.

8. Jesus Teaches Humility.—A single verse gives the keynote for this lesson, and in it Jesus sums up the whole purpose of His mission upon earth, when He says, "For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many."

9. The Passover.—This lesson is the story of the first Lord's Supper, which grew out of the Jewish Passover, and which forever puts us in remembrance of Christ, our Passover.

10. Christ's Trial Before Pilate.—Christ was brought before Pilate as a prisoner, but in the light of history, they have changed places, for it was really Pilate who was on trial before the bar of the divine judgment, and he stands forever condemned by his miserable failure to administer true justice.

11. Christ Crucified.—The death of Christ is the tragedy of the ages. It was for our sins that Christ was crucified, and we must never fail to recognize that truth.

12. Jesus Risen.—The Resurrection of Christ is the culminating truth of Christianity. It is the only sure ground of our confidence in the immortality of the human soul.

A COSTLY MISTAKE.

Blunders are sometimes very expensive. Occasionally life itself is the price of a mistake, but you'll never be wrong if you take Dr. King's New Life Pills for Dyspepsia, Dizziness, Headache, Liver or Bowel troubles. They are gentle, yet thorough. Twenty-five cents at all drug stores.

I CURE CANCER.

Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No knife. No plaster. No caustics. No sloughing oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure inte nal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else is the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

A Good Day in Raleigh.

The third Sunday in June found us in Raleigh. We had a few words at the opening of the Sunday-school at Epworth. My, what a change! It was delightful to see them. At the close of the session, we said our first word to the Edenton Street Sunday-school. They have ever been faithful to us. They helped to buy the site. They have been supporting an orphan all the time. Individual members and classes have been clothing our children. Now, Bro. W. J. Young's class will support another orphan. In addition to what they were doing, we asked them to give us a hundred dollars to plaster the dining room, and they are going to do it, right away. A talk to a large congregation at Edenton Street at 11 a. m., and one at Epworth at 8.15 p. m. filled up a most delightful day. Bumpas and Culbreth are masters at the helm.

Wanted One or Two Good Sewing Machines.

Friends gave us two sewing machines soon after the opening of our institution. The machine man says that they are worn out. That it will not pay to repair them. Will not our friends send a couple of good ones? Those were of the cheap sort. If they will send us $25.00 we can get a $55.00 machine. We greatly need them. Help, friends.

Three or four croquet sets and a swing or two would liven up things mightily here, for those children who have to stay here, because they have no homes to go to.

The school at the Orphanage will close June 30th, and be resumed September 1st, next.

The Situation.

At this writing, Saturday, June 18th, the doors and windows in the chapel are in place—hung. And they are putting the chairs together, and they will soon be in place.

They have fitted all the doors except two, on the first and second stories, and they are hanging them and putting the transoms in as fast as they can. They are expected to be finished by the 21st inst., the day of the annual meeting of the trustees. The third story has the plastering complete on all the rooms, and they are putting it on the halls now. The door frames are all made for the third story. They are now flooring it. The windows for the second and third stories are fitted and glazed—waiting for the weights to be put in.

Blanks.

Hoping to be in our new building by September 1st, at the beginning of next session, we will send out blanks to all who apply. By sending a stamp, you will save the Orphanage something. Wish everybody who writes to us, and expects an answer would send stamped addressed envelope. That's polite.

Thanks to Our Friends.

We thank our friends heartily for paying the expenses on the boxes sent or dead-heading them. It has saved us quite a sum.

How Easy.

In view of the situation here, how easy to finish up and be done with. If the pastors will take the promised collections right away, and the working Sunday-school will send in the full amounts due by the first of July, and our numerous and liberal friends send us a good check, and our brethren collect the subscriptions taken in their charges this year, the work will be done, before September. Friends, wont you help?

Mr. Andrews, president of the Electric Company of Raleigh, gave our crowd a free ride all around the street railway line. They greatly enjoyed it. Many, many thanks. They all voted it heartily at the supper table that night.

FIGHT WILL BE BITTER.

Those who will persist in closing their ears against the continual recommendation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, will have a long and bitter fight with their troubles, if not ended earlier by fatal termination. Read what T. R. Beall, of Beall, Miss., has to say: "Last fall my wife had every symptom of consumption. She took Dr. King's New Discovery after everything else had failed. Improvement came at once, and four bottles entirely cured her." Guaranteed by all druggists. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

A. & M. COLLEGE.

Young men desiring preparation for industrial careers in life should write to President Winston, at West Raleigh, N. C., for a catalogue of the A. & M. College. Entrance examinations will be held in each courthouse in North Carolina on Thursday, July 14, 1904. The Summer School for Teachers will begin July 4 and close July 29. The State Farmers' Convention will begin August 1 and close August 3.

NOTICE TO TEACHERS EXPECTING TO ATTEND THE SUMMER SCHOOL AT RALEIGH.

Special rate of one fare plus 25 cents for round trip over the leading railroads. Tickets on sale July 4, 5, 11, 12, 13, 18, 19, 25, and August 1st, good returning until August 6th.

Teachers are urged to come on July 4th. There will be a great patriotic demonstration with addresses by a number of leading citizens, and a grand pyrotechnic display, catalogued at $2,000, on the afternoon and night of that date, to all of which the teachers are cordially invited free of cost.

Be sure to see your railroad agent a few days before leaving and ask for the special ticket. If he has had no instructions, have him write his general agent about it.

COX—CAMPBELLE.—In Sanford, N. C., on Thursday, May 26, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. W. A. Campbelle, Mr. E. B. Cox, of South Carolina, and Miss Bulah C. Campbelle, Rev. E. Pope, of Jonesboro, officiating.

Obituaries

Obituaries containing not more than one hundred and fifty words are inserted free of charge. Those sending obituaries containing over one hundred and fifty words are requested to send with the obituary one cent for every word in excess. Unless this rule is observed the obituary must be cut down to the proper limit.

BENNETT.—Franklin M. Bennett was born July 24, 1859, and died May 18, 1904.

At Riverdale, now on Carteret Circuit, he joined the M. E. Church, South, when about twenty-five years of age, and held his membership at Lees Chapel, Jones Circuit, when he died. He was industrious, a kind husband and father, and a good neighbor. He left a wife and four children. God's blessings on the sorrowing ones. D. C. GEDDIE.

WHEDBEE.—On the 25th of May, Sister Joshua S. Whedbee, her little four-year-old son and her mother-in-law, left home to visit a relative. While crossing the mill-dam at Williams' mill, the horse became frightened and backed into the pond, drowning himself and Sister Whedbee and child. The mother-in-law sank, but on coming up lodged on a snag, and, after an hour's time, was rescued.

Our unfortunate sister was, before marriage eighteen years ago, Miss Ada Nowell, of Chowan County. She found Christ early and connected herself with Ballard's Bridge Baptist Church.

She was a Christian, and therefore labored wherever opportunity presented itself. She was always on the Lord's side.

She was a patient, kind and loving mother, a clever neighbor, and a helpmeet indeed unto her husband. No tongue can picture the loss sustained by the husband and children.

Scores of friends were present to witness the services, which consisted of a solo, "The Haven of Rest," sung by Mrs. L. W. Parker, and a sermon by the writer, after which their bodies were laid side by side to await the resurrection morn.

To God and His keeping we commit the bereaved family.

W. H. BROWN.

CROWDER.—Little John Shaw, the two-year-old son of R. B. and Eliza Crowder, died of pneumonia May 3, 1904.

Little Shaw was an interesting little child, seemingly possessed of individuality peculiar to himself, which made him very attractive, a pleasure to the home, and a favorite with all during his short stay, but the good Lord had a better place for him.

The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord.

It was the privilege of the writer to dedicate him to God by baptism at three months of age. The bereft have our sympathy. W. A. F.

Buie's Creek, N. C., May, 1904.

THOMSON.—Margaret Cramer, born March 27, 1851, at Red Rock, New York State, married in Poughkeepsie in 1837 to the late John C. Thomson, died in Fayetteville, N. C., May 3, 1904.

The above is a brief chronicle of a strong, beautiful character.

Mrs. Thomson had seen the passing of two generations in Fayetteville, having lived her more than sixty years. What a multitude of hearts she comforted during that time!

She had joined the Methodist Church at fifteen, and so, for seventy-four years was its faithful witness and a living epistle of Jesus Christ.

Her cardinal characteristics were spirituality, strength, and charity.

She could go into the presence of the strongest men and women and be ranked as a peer; into any social circle and lend it dignity, grace, and joy; into a group of children and become one of them.

Much of sorrow had entered her sweet, pure life, yet, in the presence of the sorrows of others, her own seemed to be forgotten. Weeping with those that wept, rejoicing with those that were glad, she was a blessed comfort to all who knew her. Even the poorest and humblest felt the soothing effect of her goodness. She won the love of all, and, so far as this writer knows, had not an enemy. She died rich in precious friendships, priceless love, noble deeds, high ideals, and simple faith in God.

She was devoted to the church, and to the last week of her life was a faithful attendant upon its services. And the church loved her; she had been affectionately called the "grandmother of Hay Street Church." One last beautiful token of love of the Ladies' Aid Society, was the gift of a rocking-chair on her eighty-ninth birth-day. With radiant face, she received the congratulations of countless friends, and said it was the happiest birth-day of her life.

Though she is gone from us bodily, her influence can never pass away; such lives as hers do not die. The belief in immortality is mightily strengthened by having known such an one.

For the grief-stricken ones there are two thoughts of great consolation: she has entered into the place prepared for her, and for which she lived and strove; and, if they emulate her life in faith and godliness, they shall surely meet her in those realms of glory.

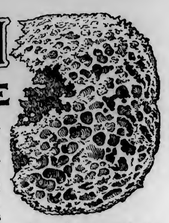
THE SKIN LIKE A SPONGE



Some of the most stubborn diseases enter into the system through the pores of the skin. Like a sponge, it absorbs poisons of various kinds, which are taken up by the little blood-vessels beneath the surface of the body, and emptied into the great current of the blood. The juices of poison oak and other noxious wild plants percolate through the skin like water through a sponge, are taken into the circulation, breaking out afresh each season, and lingering on for years unless antidoted and driven out of the system.

Dye Poisoning among the employes of dye houses, and from wearing colored under-clothing and hosiery, is of frequent occurrence and dangerous to health, causing boils and sores and other eruptions.

Workers in lead, brass and other metals are often poisoned by the chemicals and acids used in polishing, and the dust and filings settling upon the skin, and which find their way through the pores into the blood, followed by inflammation, swelling and the most obstinate sores.

Blood Poison, the vilest of all human diseases, is often contracted through shaking the hand or handling the clothing or other articles used by one infected with this dangerous poison. The deadly virus finding its way through the pores of the skin, contaminates the blood and produces fearful ulcers, eruptions and blotches.

POISON OAK AND ITS EFFECTS.

Over fifteen years ago I was poisoned with Poison Oak. I tried remedy after remedy without getting relief. Sores broke out over my body and on my tongue, affecting the lining of my mouth. Finally, about a year ago my doctor told me to try S. S. S., which I did. After taking three bottles all the sores disappeared, and I have not been bothered since, and I feel much indebted to your valuable medicine for so prompt and complete a cure. I am certain that S. S. S. will do all that is claimed for it in blood diseases.

CON. O'BRYAN.
Danville, Ky.

SSS

The diseases that enter the system by absorption or through the pores are as deep-seated and dangerous as any brought on by internal causes, and cannot be reached by washes, salves, soaps or other external remedies. The blood must be purified and a healthy circulation established before getting permanently rid of the disease. S. S. S. acts upon the blood, ridding it of the original poison and restoring it to a healthy, normal condition.

S. S. S. is guaranteed entirely vegetable, an unrivaled blood purifier and the best of all tonics. With all impurities removed from the blood, the sores and eruptions disappear from the skin. Write us should you desire medical advice or any information about your case; this will cost you nothing.

BANES.—On the 23rd of May, 1904, Edward Clemmie Banes died at a hospital in Norfolk, Va. The length of his days on earth was only twenty-four years.

The outlook for a happy and useful life was bright. But disease, in whose grasp he lay for weeks, suffering at the last most severely, blighted his hopes on earth.

He patiently endured his troubles, and about a week before his death, said to the writer: "I am not afraid of death, and I am willing to die." Almost his last breath was consumed in praying to God for friends and loved ones and for Parker's Church, of which he was a consistent member.

The funeral was held at the above church on Tuesday afternoon, conducted by the pastor.

Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved wife and child, and we, like him, pray that they may meet him in heaven.

W. H. BROWN.

ENNETT.—Mrs. Emma Hunter Ennett was born April 6, 1875, and died at the home of her childhood, in Huntersville, N. C., May 11, 1904.

At the age of fifteen years she was converted and joined the Presbyterian Church. Her surrender to her Lord at that early age was thorough and complete. There was no reconsideration or later readjustment. All had been placed permanently on the altar of her Lord. Ever afterward He was first in her plans. In young womanhood she graduated at the Normal and Industrial College of Greensboro, N. C.

The refined social surroundings of her childhood, the godly influences of her home and church associations, the refined Christian culture of a clear, strong intellect, all united to equip her well for the responsibility of living.

October 17, 1904, she was united in marriage to Mr. George N. Ennett, of New Bern, N. C. To the marriage altar she brought a well-rounded, strong Christian character and was truly a help to her husband, and with him she joined the M. E. Church, South, in New Bern, and was a valuable, useful member until disease laid its ruthless hand upon her and said, "stop." As her health began to fail, her anxious husband took her to the sanatarium near the scenes of her old home, howing for restoration of her health. But not so. All that husband and friends could do was in vain. She continued to grow weaker. When she knew her days were numbered, there was no fear. She had always been brave and strong in every emergency, and now when she saw the shadows gathering, there was no shrinking. She "knew the power of His resurrection," and her faith bridged all chasms. Her mind lingered around the 14th chapter of John, and shadows were kept from her path as the light from the mansions in the Father's house shone along the way.

Yes, she lived a true, noble life, and passed away in sublime victory. God bless and comfort the bereaved husband, the dear parents and stricken loved ones.

F. A. BISHOP.

CARTER.—Mrs. S. S. Carter was born December 1, 1842, and departed this life and went to join the heavenly hosts May 8, 1904. Her father was taken away from her when she was but a child, and she lived in the home of her grandfather, who was the Rev. Bridges Arendell, until her mother married Col. Wm. N. Dennis, and having these Christian influences around her, she grew up a true type of geniality and uprightness.

In the early beginning of the Civil War she married S. S. Carter, of Chatham County, who belonged to the 26th Regiment N. C. Troops. In early life she became a member of the M. E. Church, South, to which she remained a true and faithful member until God called her to rest from her labors. She was thirteen years younger than myself, and living in the home of my father, and her mother being my sister, I had the opportunity to study her life. About six or seven years ago she became afflicted with indigestion, and was a great sufferer for the last four summers. She would visit her aged mother in Morehead City, and I being an inmate of my sister's home, I could witness with what great patience she would endure her affliction. I often talked to her of purity of heart, and the blessed privilege we had of being kept day by day by the power of God unto salvation, and we could see glory beaming in her countenance. She was a saint of God, and to her bereaved old mother, who now is four score years old and upwards, I would say—your loss is her eternal gain; let the grace of God comfort you in knowing that she has dropped the anchor and furled the sail and is now safe within the vale; and to her grieved husband and dear ones, let me say, that while you are in affliction's valley and treading the road of care and bereavement, that Jesus will help you to carry your cross when heavy to bear, and that you can use the language of David and say: "She cannot come to me, but I can go to her." Let these truths comfort you in your distress. It does cheer my heart when I can join with the poet and say:

Sarah, thou was mild and lovely.
Gentle as the summer breeze,
Pleasant as the air of evening
When it floats among the trees.

Peaceful be thy silent slumbers,
Peaceful in the grave so low;
Thou no more will join our number,
Thou no more our songs shall know.

Dearest Sarah thou has left us,
Here our loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that has bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
Then in heaven we'll joy to greet thee
Where no farewell tear is shed.

THOS. ARENDELL.
Morehead City, N. C., May 21, 1904.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, it has pleased our kind heavenly Father in His wisdom to take from us our beloved friend and Sunday-school scholar, Miss Bertha Brooks, we, as a Sunday-school of Concord Methodist Church, desire to express our appreciation of her life of faithful service in this school as pupil, and our admiration of the beautiful example of Christian patient endurance as shown forth in her daily life amongst us; therefore be it

Resolved 1. That the Sunday-school has lost one of its best scholars, the church one of her most faithful members and the community at large one of its best Christian characters.

2. That we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

3. That we extend to the bereaved family our love and sympathy and pray God to be their comfort in sorrow and salvation in the life to come.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, one to the Raleigh Christian Advocate, one to the county paper, and that these resolutions be read before the Sunday-school.

IT DOESN'T TAKE LONG, IF YOU DON'T WAIT TOO LONG.

Last year I was suffering from indigestion, and would have the feeling of a heavy load on my stomach all the time. I had a bad case of indigestion and got so I could hardly sleep at all, I was so nervous. My natural weight was 142 pounds, and I got down to 118, and was so weak I could hardly get around.

I used Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy and three bottles cured me. I have regained the flesh I lost, sleep well, and am cured of indigestion.

It is a good medicine, and taken in time does not take long to cure.

Fourteen Reasons Why You Should Buy the Stock.

Here are the three reasons: (1) The Southern Mining, Milling and Development Company's property is owned outright, free and clear of all debt. (2) The property is in Clear Creek County, Colorado, which is the heart of the gold-mining district of the United States. (3) The venture is no prospect: we are actually tunneling and mining high-grade ore.

We will cheerfully send you the other eleven reasons or give you any other statistics or facts that you may wish to know. Capitalization, $1,000,000. Shares, $1.00; price, 25 cents per share—all cash or 10 per cent cash and 10 per cent monthly. One hundred and thirty-three people have bought over 100,000 shares and the financing of this company is now practically assured. Do not delay. It costs nothing to write. Rare opportunity.

The World As We See It.

How many of our readers can name the members of President Roosevelt's Cabinet? We feel assured that in response to this question very few hands will be held up. For the purpose of helping to disperse the general ignorance on this subject, we state that the following appointments were made by the President on last Friday: Attorney-General, William H. Moody, of Massachusetts; Secretary of the Navy, Paul Morton, of Illinois; Secretary of Commerce and Labor, Victor H. Metcalf, of California.

Russia is busy talking about "the Yellow Peril" which menaces the civilized Christian world, but Russia has at her own doors a peril of which she may well take heed. Japanese success has encouraged Finland to believe that now is the time of the latter's redemption. The assassination of Bobrikaff is very significant. It was caused by Bobrikaff's attempt at the russification of Finland. The assassination could not have occurred one year ago. Russion disasters in the East have brought about the conditions which have made the assissination possible. Russian Poland is seething with excitement and outbreaks in that country may occur at any time.

For a long time our people have been mystified over the law that, in a capital ease, gives the defendant twenty-three peremptory challenges and the State only four. The mystified mind has seen light only in the darkness of its own ignorance of matters legal; for if there is a mute subservience to anything, it is the mental subservience to the mysteries of the law. But if the Code Commission carry out the recommendation adopted at the late North Carolina Bar Association, the legal labyrinth will be minus a bewildering cave. The recommendation is to the effect that the defendant and the State have an equal number of challenges—eight each. And the Association paid its devoirs to the preachers by recommending that they be the only class to be exempted from jury. Of course the preachers appreciate this remarkable manifestation of good judgment on the part of the lawyers.

The statement of the Newton Enterprise that President Roosevelt has sent G. A. Snyder, President of Catawba College, a check for $50 for the institution, has served as a red flag for the bull in at least one case. We do not now remember what newspaper it was, but the editor accused President Roosevelt of trying to make capital out of the alleged fact that the Populist element, which at one time had dominated Catawba County, had become Republican. This shows that here in North Carolina we lack considerably of being "out of the woods" in our political ramblings. Is it possible that the President of the United States cannot make a donation to a college of his own denomination without having his motives impugned? It seems so, and the thought saddens us.

The National Republican Convention held last week in Chicago did not excite the usual interest in the public mind for the reason that the public mind had figured out months ago just what the Convention would do. It was known that Mr. Roosevelt would be renominated for the Presidency and would likely keep up the popular interest as a burnt cork performer. It was known that Mr. Fairchild would meet the fate that "Uncle Joe" Cannon has been trying to escape—the nomination for Vice-President. It is easy to understand, therefore, why "Uncle Joe" was so lively on the last day, waving his flag on the platform and exciting the boys to all sorts of boisterous antics. It was foreseen also that the platform would contain a little more room for the colored brother. The proposition that those Southern States which have disfranchised the negro shall suffer in their Congressional representation, always came to grief in Congress, but it now occupies a snug place in (or on) the platform. It is there evidently to catch votes as past experience show, that it would receive but scant favor even in a Republican Congress. Mr. Cortelyou was made Chairman of the National Committee. Even his political enemies concede that, if the campaign be not conducted on a high plane, it will not be the fault of Mr. Cortelyou.

In speaking of the Iroquois Theatre disaster, which occurred last December, we stressed the thought that death often cheats itself in so overdoing its work as to force a degree of future precaution as to prevent similar and, perhaps, more appalling disasters. The Iroquois Theatre fire has quenched the flames of thousands of fires by bringing the public face to face with the necessity of overhauling the public buildings of the country with a view to making them comparatively safe in case of fires. These thoughts are sufficient to throw at least a few streaks of light into the darkness of the recent steamboat disaster in New York harbor in which over one thousand people, mostly women and children, lost their lives. We will soon know why it was that the hose and life-preservers, and even deck railings, of the General Slocumb were rotten while the public believed them safe. Then there will be such a close scrutiny of all public carriers by water and such a strict holding to an account of companies, officials, working forces, and equipments, as to make life very much safer in the future. All welfare is built on sacrifice. In the distant fatality of all things terrible, a blessing may be seen. We would not quote this doctrine to those unfortunate bereaved ones in New York City, but to those who stand at a distance and listen for the voice of God, we can find in the doctrine a substratum of comfort.

The State Convention which met last week in Greensboro was strictly North Carolinian. Our people believe in big crowds, intense partisanship, and in a loyalty demonstrative to the point of boisterousness. This belief was put into practice on last Thursday and Friday. The point of interest was in nominating a man for Governor. The nomination was early. No one expected a nomination on less than the twelfth ballot. It came on the fifth, and Mr. Glenn was the man. Every body appears to be satisfied. They have a justification for their satisfaction. Mr. Glenn is an able lawyer, an eloquent speaker, and above all a consistent Christian gentleman. The only fear we have heard expressed concerning him is that he has an unwise doctrine on the subject of the education of the negro. He believes that all appropriations for the education of the colored people should be in proportion to the taxes they pay. We do not believe that Mr. Glenn, as Governor, will attempt to carry out this policy. He knows too well that the State is against it.

The platform contains a strong endorsement of the Watts Act. From a political standpoint, this endorsement was consistent and necessary. The people of the State are politically, socially, and morally committed to temperance, and in this fact we read a joyful prophecy. The danger is that this very sense of security will lull the people into a repose, which the enemy will utilize in electing to the Legislature men who will annul all previously enacted temperance legislation. Talk about a lynx eye, and a careful conscientious vote. Both will be needed in the coming campaign.

The delegation to St. Louis was not instructed for any particular candidate. An instructed delegation to a National Convention is something almost unknown in North Carolina politics. Besides there is a lingering suspicion that there is going to be at St. Louis a bonleversement in which Judge Parker will not rise to the top or settle at the front.

On June 23, the Russian ships emerged through the channel and engaged the Japanese ships. The news comes from Tokio that in the engagement a Russian war vessel was sunk and three other Russian ships sunk. There is neither denial nor confirmation of this rumor. It is probable that both sides sustained great damage. The news of this engagement is interesting in that it disposes of the question as to an open or a closed channel. The channel is undoubtedly open, and Admiral Togo may expect at any time a dash through this channel into the open sea. The attempt will be hazardous, but it may succeed.

A Quarterly Meeting in the Mountains.

REV. F. L. TOWNSEND.

Our road lay along one of the most beautifully picturesque streams of water in Western North Carolina. We, the pastor of the circuit and myself, were on our way to a summer quarterly meeting which was to be held at a small church located at the foot of one of our largest mountains, and hard by the rushing waters of the aforesaid stream, fully fifteen miles from the railroad.

One road ascending this stream led in and out with bends of the river, leaning now close to the mountains, skirting this valley, and now to the river, mid waving corn-fields and hanging orchards, winding back and forth, crossing and recrossing the river, dodging here and there the rocky ledges till we arrived at the church nestling snugly at the edge of a clump of trees, and near to the hour for divine worship.

The people came to this meeting from up the river, from up the sides of the mountains, from around their circling coves, they came on foot, on horseback, in wagons; this country is far too rocky and steep for the use of buggies. Many of them brought large, well filled baskets of provisions, which were opened at the noon hour and spread on the green grass in the shade of the trees like a real pic-nic. One man brought a load of oats on a frame without wheels, sliding along the ground. These oats were to be fed to the horses of the official members who came, some as far as eighteen or twenty miles. Perched on top of this load of oats was another large basket—this brother's contribution to the dinner.

A quarterly meeting to this people meant much, as it occurred not oftener than once in half a dozen years. The regular appointments of the pastor were monthly, and if you deduct those missed on account of deep snow in winter and high waters at other seasons, you will scarcely have more than eight appointments filled during the year. So that the coming of the pastor meant a great deal to the community, and a quarterly meeting and a great occasion. A Presiding Elder was looked upon much as a Bishop, and his hearers listened with expectant ears, because forsooth an elder ought to have an important message to deliver.

But I began this letter to tell about a home in this far away community that is so nearly hedged in by the mountains. The occupants of this home were two ladies—old maids—will they please forgive me? We were invited to dine with them on a certain day. Their home is one mile from the church on the waters of a little creek emptying itself shortly into the river. On our arrival at their home we were told that, as there were no men folks there, we would have to stable and feed our own horses, and the stables being pointed out to us, we proceeded thither. I noticed the stable provided for my horse was as void of litter as a parlor floor. Indeed, the very floor was swept, if not garnished. I thought at first that it had been used by the children as a play-house, and that the children had done the sweeping. Then it occurred to me: These people are old maids and have no children, unless they borrow from their good neighbors. Just at this point of my cogitations, my traveling companion called to me to come see the stable prepared for his horse. And lo! it was swept also. I began to suggest as to the sweeping, but the pastor remarked: "No, when I visited these people once before this, they apologized for not having swept the stables!"

But if they swept the stables, their neatness did not end there. Their humble little home was as clean as could be, from prophet's chamber to dining-room. Not a suggestion of stain upon those carpetless floors, and the table-ware and food at the dinner were in keeping with the rest.

After dinner my friend repaired to the preacher's room for an hour's rest. The coverlets on the beds were white as the driven snow. The walls of the room, instead of exposing the rough timbers, were hung with white curtains as clean as any fuller could make them. What a place for rest, quiet and contemplation! Leaving him safely lodged in this delightful place, your correspondent strolled down the banks of the little creek to hear the roar of its surging waters, to behold the grandeur of the surrounding mountains and to meditate. The waters of this stream come leaping in cascades down the neighboring mountains, plunging over rocks, whirling around a curve here, forming a pool there, falling over a precipice, churning, dashing, foaming, breaking away from every obstruction and hastening on "to join the brimming river."

I could not resist the impulse, being exhausted from the heat and work of day so I sat down on a great stone, took off my shoes, rolled up my pantaloons just as I had done years ago when a school boy, waded into this crystal stream, bathed and bathed my weary feet into those refreshing waters, until I felt the stimulating effect from foot to head.

How it stirs me this June day to call up an experience like this, remembering how those sparkling waters, fresh and cool from the mountain springs, played hide and seek with my feet as I stood on those clean rocks! Such a memory will stick to one for a lifetime!

Such a home as that, kept by those good sisters, is a veritable Bethany, and the hospitality dispensed by them is as genuinely Christian as that exercised by Mary and Martha in the days of our Lord. Such homes, and those who make them, have contributed largely toward the spread of Christianity. Sometimes I think that when we come to the day of final accounts, we will find that in the redemption of the world as much credit will be gin to the Marys and Marthas and Lydias who have served in silence as to the Peters and Pauls who have proclaimed from pulpit and platform.

Preachers.

REV. J. H. M. GILES.

The man who is called of God, and employed in the Christian ministry, should cultivate his mind in the most liberal manner, for he can neither learn nor know too much truth. If one is called of God to be His messenger, and without such a call one great scholar has said that he had better be a galley slave, he should be able to bring all of his knowledge to the assistance and success of his ministerial work, but no human learning, no mode of ordination, whether it be Popish, Episcopal, Protestant, or Presbyterian, will ever supply the Divine anointing, without which he will never see conversions, and the church built up under his ministry. Why is it that some preachers never have revivals where they are assigned to labor? Others always have revivals wherever they go. The piety of the church will always faint and languish when it is not animated by the zeal of a spirit-baptized pastor; the church must be blind; and the faith of the church will always be wavering when the preacher can neither encourage nor defend it. Right here is our trouble today, our denominational fences are decayed and fallen down—hence every straggler can come into our Methodist Farm, organize our children into a Sunday-school, teach them Calvinism, and if the P. C. says anything, our people, some of them at least, will join in the cry: "You are narrow, or you are against Sunday-schools." Our denominational fences should be replaced. Our next General Conference should make a law along this line, so I think. Our liberality towards other churches is somewhat like American freedom—gone to seed—a license for all to do as they please: To mend our rules, keep them, or break them to suit their own whims. This, as I see it, is anarchy, straight and simple. Such things are militating against our preachers' success today in our beloved Zion. Some true men have been removed from charges of our Conference because of the above condition of affairs.

A Visit to Carteret.

W. H. RHODES.

After spending several very pleasant days at the Teachers' Assembly, the writer on his return to Kinston stopped over at Newport to see his friend, Rev. J. H. M. Giles, whom he found in poor plight to fill his Sunday appointments, being afflicted with boils.

The visitor was prevailed on to accompany the preacher to his appointments—Bethel, Harlowe and Oak Grove. The citizens in these localities are a thrifty and intelligent people, owning their farms and living upon them—the most hopeful condition of affairs to insure the permancy of our institutions.

It was a pleasure to meet again Dr. C. N. Mason, a friend of our college days, who, though a college graduate and prominent physician, finds it agreeable and lucrative to cast his lot among so prosperous and progressive a people.

Messrs. D. E. Langsdale and Jas. Bell gave us entertainment, and full well they knew how, and gave us that true Christian hospitality which never fails to awaken a responsive chord.

On Sunday evening we returned to Newport and again had the pleasure of renewing our acquaintance with those good people who gave such royal entertainment to the district a short while ago.

Brother Giles reports that he is serving his fourth year on the Carteret Circuit. This speaks well for both pastor and people. It was a real pleasure to visit the home of Brother Giles, and for the sake of his wife, his bright and intelligent children, as well as himself, we wish that his home for the next four years may be among as good, cultured and prosperous people as the four that will soon expire.

Prophecy.

REV. JOHNSON SORRELL.

The thoughts which only make the Jewish people worthy to be studied are their thoughts of the coming kingdom and coming King.

To these each of the prophetic books has its characteristic pointing. We here only mention the great land-marks of prophecy which point with increasing definiteness to the Christ:

1. They declare in the beginning of Revelation His coming as a man: "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head and thou shall bruise his heel." (Gen. 3:15.)

2. In the time of Abraham the nation through which He was to come: "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed, because thou hast obeyed My voice." (Gen. 22:15.)

3. In the time of Jacob the tribe: "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come, and unto Him shall the gathering of the people be." (Gen. 49:10.)

4. In the time of David the family: "And as since the time that I commanded judges to be over my people and have caused thee to rest from all thine enemies. Also the Lord telleth thee that He will make thee an house." (2 Sam 7:11.)

5. In the time of Micah the town: "And thou Bethelehem, Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall He come forth unto me that is to be Ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from old, from everlasting." (Mic. 5:2.)

6. In the time Daniel the date: "Know therefore and understand that the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks, and three score and two weeks; the street shall be built again, and the wall in even in troublous times." (Dan 9:25.)

7. To Mary the person: "And the angel said unto her, fear not for thou hast found favor with God." (Luke 1:30.)

8. By the angel the day: "For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." (Luke 2:11.)

9. And by the star, the house: "When they had heard the king they departed; and lo, the star which they saw in the east went and stood over where the young child was." (Matt. 2:9.)

So we see that the Messiamic idea of an everlasting kingdom under the reign of a spiritual and supreme king is the fundamental idea in the Old Testament.

Way is the Granbery College?

BY REV. H. C. TUCKER, RIO DE JANIERO, BRAZIL.

A general answer to this inquiry has been given in the statement that the necessity for such an institution of learning was recognized and emphasized during the first years of Methodist mission work and Episcopal visits to this country. But a more satisfactory and explicit answer may be found in the appalling and increasing facts upon which the necessity is based.

Brazil has but a small number of schools, very limited educational facilities, and only about one-fifth of her seventeen or eighteen millions of inhabitants can read. During the greater part of the history of the Empire, Romish priestly ideas and influence dominated the entire school system; Jesuitical control did in a large measure all that was done in the line of education, and sought to keep the people in ignorance that they might the more readily obey the vioce and superstitious inventions of the church. One result has been that the masses have grown up unlettered and miserably priest-ridden. There can be no doubt that the Christian school is a much needed agency in the evangelization and elevation of these untaught multitudes.

The missionaries need to furnish to their young converts from among these uneducated masses, facilities for their intellectual development, moral and spiritual culture and preparation for the higher, nobler and more responsible positions of life. Readers of history and biography, know full well that often the men of greatest worth in church and state who have accomplished most for the honor and glory of God, and done most for the good of humanity, have sprung from the humbler classes of society. If we would see our young Brazilian converts bearing the responsibilities of the church, extending and sustaining the work of evangelization to the remotest parts of this vast Republic, occupying positions of trust, responsibility and honor in commerce, industries, professions, and civil government of the people, we must educate them after our own way, under truly Gospel and Christian influences. We cannot trust to government or private secular schools to do this work, because their number is too few, and their methods are unchristian and diametrically opposed to our purposes. As things are at present, we cannot afford to entrust our Christian boys to these institutions to obtain their education and preparation for life's work. To do so would be to defeat our desired ends. Positivism, skepticism, and all manner of immorality are prevalent among the professors and student body of most of the Government schools. We need this college not only for the boys of the church, but to be a distinctive and positive agency for the evangelizing of the wealthier and more enlightened classes who desire the intellectual and moral training we propose to give. Many boys are in this way brought under Christian influences, taught the Bible, and frequently converted to Christ, whom we probably would not have reached otherwise. The missionaries and Christians teachers, through the school, are brought into contact with families who have never been otherwise drawn to the church nor to hear the Gospel.

Through the influences of modern civilization, commerce, travel, diplomacy, and Protestant missions, the Brazilian nation is being greatly awakened, is seeking to throw off the old yoke and endeavoring to secure for herself the religious liberty characteristic of the most enlightened nations of the present day. Her entire educational and school system is being radically changed and she desires to model her course after the best institutions of Europe and America. This is a slow and very difficult process. The change furnishes a most magnificent opportunity for a Christian college, such as the Granberry proposes to be, and is a most powerful reason why the young and growing Methodist Church in this country should now have such an institution to serve as a model to Brazilian educators and authorities who are desiring better things than the country has yet enjoyed in this line. The nation has reached a crisis in her political, intellectual and religious life, and needs all the help possible to solve the problem of her salvation and destiny. The conditions furnish a most eloquent answer to the inquiry: "Why have a Chritsian college in Brazil?"

If the Methodist Church would fulfill her God-given mission and become a permanent factor in the life and character of the nation, she needs such institutions as her Granbery College.

WHAT MAY BE THE RESULTS FROM THE GRANBERY COLLEGE?

In answering this inquiry, we can only state what we reasonably hope the college and its work may do for the Brazilian nation and the cause of Christ. This we have already indicated in trying to give some of the reasons why this school should be founded and maintained by the church. Those who have been sent out to this country as missionaries, have come desiring to give to the people the gospel in all its fulness and blessing, wishing to see the same glorious, spiritual results in the lives of the people as are manifest in Protestant Europe and America.

If the necessary provisions are made and the proper men in charge are furnished with the contemplated facilities for carrying out the purposes of the college, one result will be an adequate number of well-prepared native preachers and teachers. The missionaries can do little more than introduce the gospel into the country; the great work of thoroughly evangelizing the entire nation must be done by the native ministry. The gospel is becoming widely disseminated in Brazil, and taking deep hold upon many hearts; the leaders, who are to gather together and shepherd the little flocks over the land, must come from this school of the prophets. If the church fails in preparing and training the men whom God would call to this noble work, the progress of the gospel would be greatly retarded; but if we do our duty in this respect now, there will be rapid and permanent development in the direction of a vigorous, aggressive, self-propagating and self-sustaining church.

"Nothing succeeds like success. No more satisfactory proof of what the college may do can be given, than to cite instances of what she has already accomplished. About one-half of the native preachers in the Brazil Mission Conference to-day have been taught in Granbery College. One occupies the important post of a wide field radiating from a growing railroad town in the center of the State of Rio Grande do Sul; another feeds the Methodist flock and is constantly adding to the fold in Sao Paulo, which is the most advanced and rapidly developing center of enlightment, education, industry and commerce in the Republic; two hold the forts in important centers of the west; one in these points, it is said, is becoming the Chicago of Brazil. It was at Ribeirao Preto that Bento Braga stood like a hero and laid down his life in the epidemic of yellow fever for the love of God and his brethren. He was first a Granbery boy, who showed at Randolph-Macon that he had been well taught. One travels a large and prosperous circuit; others who are doing good work might be mentioned, but let these suffice to justify our expectations. If the Granbery College, working in a rented building, with very limited provision, and a small number of over-worked teachers, has been instrumental in turning out these noble workers, what may we not reasonably hope of the results when the new building shall have been completed, fully equipped and furnished with a competent number of well qualified instructors?

But the Granbery has not only turned out a few young men for the ministry; her boys are to be found on the farm in charge of large and prosperous agricultural interests, where their homes are homes and preaching places for the Methodist itinerants; one is a successful pharmacist and a devoted steward in one of our most prosperous city churches; others are honoring the college and blessing humanity in various professions and occupations. They are building Christian homes that are centres of life and light. All this is awakening attention, starting inquiry and begetting confidence among the people. A church and a religion that can do such great things for the boys of the land demands the consideration and faith of all classes.

Already the college and its work have made a profound impression upon the educators of the land, and those who are seeking to institute a system of education adequate to the needs of the people. If fully equipped and wisely directed this institution is destined to exert a large influence in moulding the new educational system of Brazil.

The results thus far achieved inspire confidence, awaken large hopes and abundantly warrant the prophecy that this institution is entering upon a glorious career in shaping the future history and accomplishing the salvation of the Brazilian nation.

The call of God for the money and the men to finish, furnish, and direct this college must be heard and obeyed.

Meeting at Manteo.

The protracted meeting at the Methodist church in Manteo, N. C., began May 29, 1904, and closed June 8th. Rev. F. L. Church, of the Perquimans circuit did the preaching. His expositions of the Scriptures are especially strong. He took up the history of God's dealings with the Jews and the surrounding heathen nations, and showed what became of them because they sinned with a high hand and regarded not God. The law breaker must suffer whether it be an individual or nation. His denunciation of sin was fearful. He preaches a clear cut gospel without any varnish. On Sunday morning we had a baptismal service for infants. The meeting closed on Wednesday night with the communion service, which was the largest seen in Manteo for years. Possibly ever. Quite a number were converted and reclaimed. Sixteen joined the church. There are a few noticeable facts about this class. Two were heads of families, a large number are young men, and no two were from the same family. Thirteen of these sixteen families take the church paper, the Raleigh Christian Advocate, and the remaining three subscribed next morning—their first opportunity. Verily the church paper is a preacher of righteousness.

Come down Mr. Editor and take a breath of "Fresh Salt Air." It will do you good.

Letter from Alaska.

I will send you a few lines with regard to mission work in Alaska. The mission work is carried on chiefly by the Methodist, Presbyterian and Catholic churches. A number of schools were founded for the benefit of the Indians. They have very bright Christian experiences. One very old lady said she was a very old lady; she could come to church only by the aid of her staff. So says she, I have learned to lean on Jesus just as I lean on this staff; another says the sun rises and melts the snow on the mountains. So Jesus came into my heart, melted it so now I can love God and man. J. K. HARTWICK.

The Smitten Rock.

A blow direct from God's own hand
Oft cleaves the rock in twain,
As rocks are rent, by lightning stroke
Amid the wind and rain.

But in their clefts the wind, oft-times,
The seed of sweet flowers blows;
Bright shines the sun, soft falls the dew,
The rock in beauty glows.

So in the rifts within the heart,
Are planted seeds of grace,
Which take deep root, and blooming fair,
The healed wounds efface. —Anon.

The Field

Furnishing the New G. F. C.

I have agreed with the Trustees of Greensboro College to give some time this summer to the securing of furniture for the dormitories of the new building. My plan, in brief, is this: To secure those who will take a room, or rooms, which will be named in honor of the donor. A tablet placed upon the door will bear the name of the donor and other important facts.

Thirty-five dollars furnishes a room with two iron bedsteads, mattresses, table, chairs, chiffonier, etc. The estimate is for the heavy furniture of a room occupied by two young ladies. This money is due in August. In special cases, ninety days additional will be allowed.

This plan gives an opportunity to do a valuable deed, and also to perpetuate the name of dear ones. This work has just begun and, with the other work for the opening of the college, must be pressed to a finish. The following have taken a room:

Mrs. W. A. Rich, Graham, N. C., in memory of her sister, Miss Clara McCoy.

Mrs. Endora A. Headen, Pittsboro, N. C., in memory of her father, Dr. James E. Williamson.

W. T. Jones, Carthage, N. C.

Carthage Circuit, Rev. R. H. Broom, P. C.

Franklinton Circuit, Rev. J. H. Shore, P. C.

Z. W. Lyon, Oxford, N. C., for his daughter, Hettie.

W. T. Lyon, Oxford, N. C., in memory of his mother, Mary A. Lyon.

Others are waiting to take rooms. Any inquiries made of me at Chapel Hill, N. C., will be cheerfully answered.

Let every friend of G. F. C. give careful regard to this statement. M. T. PLYLER.

A Few Thoughts.

Dear Advocate:—I thought to express my sentiments by writing a letter to the Advocate, which I enjoy reading so much. My home is situated in a remote part of the county, not being convenient for me to attend divine worship, as I would like to do. I am interested in the Orphange, and would be glad to visit them. This scribe remembers the Superintendent, Rev. J. W. Jenkins, when he rode the Leasburg Circuit: heard him preach once a month at Lea's Chapel. This scribe was then a school girl, and took notice of his discourse on the Bible and other books. I am a great reader, and devote much time to study, and I also keep a list of the itinerant preachers and the number of years they served from Rev. Lemon Shell down to the present Rev. K. D. Holmes. I also remember some of Dr. Ivey's discourses which were interesting; his accounts of his travel and scenery which were beautiful.

If this letter escapes the wast-basket, I will write again some future day.

Sincerely,

ESTELLE M. BRADSHER.

Greensboro Female College.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Greensboro Female College held in Greensboro, N. C., on June 23, 1904, a report was rendered by the Secretary showing the financial status of the institution and the progress made in securing its bonded indebtedness, all of which were encouraging and gratifying, and the outlook for the enterprise is promising. After a full discussion of the Board, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved 1. That it is the sense of this Board that the movement to rebuild Greensboro Female College be pushed with renewed vigor; that the Building Committee be authorized and directed to place orders for material at once, and the work of construction begin as soon as the remaining $10,000 of the $30,000 to be raised is subscribed in order to insure the opening of the college at the fall term, 1904.

2. That the Board endorse the resolutions adopted at the recent meeting of the Alumnae Association of Greensboro Female College, and that we hereby pledge to the Alumnae our heartiest sympathy and co-operation in the laudable efforts to rebuild and re-establish this time-honored institution of learning; and that we earnestly appeal not only to the Alumnae, but also to all the friends of Greensboro Female College at once to make liberal contributions for the rebuilding of the college to insure the reopening at the fall session.

Pamlico Circuit.

Since our arrival here last December, the kind people of Stonewall have been sending us good things; but not satisfied with this, they gave us a general pounding, consisting of lard, flour, meal, etc.

Well, we feel greatly indebted to them. May the good Lord continue His blessings upon them.

Again, Bro. Chas. Flowers, of Barnes Chapel, has brought me in debt to him—he alone pounded me with sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, and thirty pounds of meat.

Again, we expect by August 1st to have a cistern at the parsonage with plenty of good water.

Excuse me for advertising this circuit, because some preachers may want it. Don't worry, brother, I'm on this "nest" for four years.

An Explanation.

The matter that found its way in the Epworth League columns week before last was not intended for it. It was all reprint and no credit was given. This explanation is due because the first article is somewhat puzzling, and the other article was of no special interest.

My wife had been quite sick and I failed to get matter to the Advocate office in time for last week's issue, and through an oversight of those at the office, these articles appeared.

H. B. ANDERSON.

[Those articles were sent with other Epworth League matter in the same envelope, and we presumed, of course, that they were intended for publication. There was no order to the contrary. —Editor.]

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

And the Church's Relation Thereto as Stated by the Ministers' Conference of Henderson.

There is no greater enemy to humanity, nor greater hindrance to the progress of the Gospel than the traffic in and use of ardent spirits. The solution of this evil is one of the most difficult problems that confront the church and the State. It is not a theory that confronts us, but a condition, and one that should be wisely handled. The duty of the church in relation to the individual is plain. She should teach, and insist on total abstinence from the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. While the abuse of any good thing is the objection, more than the use of it, so general is the abuse attending the use of ardent spirits, that the only safe course for the individual is to abstain from its use, except believe that total abtinence from strong drink, as a beverage is taught by the Scriptures, which is our only guide in the matter, and for this reason, we believe it to be our duty to insist that men everywhere abstain from its use. All that has been gained in legislation, restraining the traffic in spirituous liquors, is the result of the moral suasion and education that has been imparted by the church, and Christian workers, and teachers in the temperance cause. Our laws are made by the sentiment of the people, and no law, if placed upon the statute books, can be enforced without a moral sentiment behind it. So far are we from believing that temperance can be secured by law, that we are convinced that we cannot get temperance legislation without temperance sentiment behind it.

But when we get the sentiment, the law will be enacted, and so long as the sentiment behind the law is healthy and aggressive, the law will be enforced. Therefore, it is our duty to keep the temperance sentiment alive and active. This can only be done by constant work. We should keep up the agitation, and teach the evils of intemperance from the pulpit, in our Sunday-schools, and use our influence as far as possible to have temperance taught in our secular schools.

We owe it to the State, as citizens, to do our part to aid all legislation that has for its object the destruction of the traffic in liquor. The open saloon, and the license system, is the worst regulation of the evil if regulation it may be called, The open saloon is the drunkard factory, and the long tolerated evil of the saloon, has let a large number of drinkers of liquor who are hard to control, and whose determination to have liquor makes the enforcement of prohibitory legislation very difficult. For this reason, it is necessary to tolerate the dispensary in some communities. But when this is done, it should be under the strictest laws that can be enforced, and with the view to ultimately restrict the sale at the dispensary to medicinal or necessary purposes. Because of the determination to violate prohibitory laws, by druggists, and others, we believe the best solution of the question is to restrict the sales to dispensaries, and whenever it can be done, restrict the dispensaries to medicinal or necessary uses of liquor. We should guard with care the covetus sentiment that will be apt to grow up in communities where there are dispensaries, to make these dispensaries large revenue products, and thereby decrease the burdens of the taxpayer. It is a great gain when we have taken the profit out of the traffic to the individual, but if the sales at the dispensary become sources of profit to the tax-payer, and he becomes wedded to the dispensary system for indirect profit, then the tax-payers will become as much debanched by the evil as the whiskey-seller under the license system, and public morals will be corrupted, and our government will be run by blood money.

It behooves us to keep all these facts before us in dealing with this monstrous evil, and be on the alert to avoid every pit-fall that Satan may place in our way. We need to meet these issues with calm-logical solutions of the questions that may arise, and to avoid any fanatical action that may make us the allies of our foes. For those who are laboring to keep the whiskey curse fastened on our country are sometimes wiser in their genertion than the children of the light, and will make allies of us that they may betray us to the enemy.—Henderson Gold Leaf.

Who and Where are Our Missionaries?

"Go Forward" now gives their names every month. May God go with Bro. W. B. Lee and Miss Mary Pesend when they start back to Brazil. Those who do not read "Go Forward" cannot know where our missionaries are. A. D. BETTS.

The Family

If I Can Live.

If I can live
To make some pale face brighter, and to give
A second lustre to some tear-dimmed eye,
Or e'en impart
One throb of comfort to an aching heart,
Or cheer some wayworn soul in passing by!

If I can lend
A strong hand to the fallen, or defend
The right against a single envious strain,
My life, though bare,
Perhaps, of much that semeth dear and fair
To us on earth, will not have been in vain.

The purest joy,
Most near to heaven, far from earth's alloy,
Is bidding clouds way to sun and shine,
And 'twill be well
If on that day of days the angels tell
Of me: "She did her best for one of thine."

Do Not Watch the Thermometer.

"I never watch the thermometer, and I never suffer from heat or cold as much as my neighbors appear to, who are constantly consulting it."

This remark reached my ears from the opposite side of an electric-car on which I happened to be riding, one cold winter day. The person to whom it was addressed was bundled in fur to her chin, while her companion wore a neat walking-suit, open at the throat, and evidently made to admit of a brisk walk without in any way inconveniencing its wearer.

When the car stopped to let them off, I noticed that the woman who never consulted the thermometer started up the street in a bright, alert manner, in keeping with her optismistic time of conversation; while her companion snuggled down into her furs, and semed to be making frantic efforts to keep pace with her friend's lively step.

The conversation awakened a train of thought which kept me busy during the remainder of my ride. Is there not a grain of truth in the assertion of the woman who had no use for a thermometer? Do we not often give our hands an extra rub and button our coat a bit tighter when a glance at that erratic little ball of quicksilver assures us that it is ten degrees colder than we had thought it was? And have we not felt the perspiration start to our forehead some warm summer day, as we have seen that same little exclamation mark climbing up among the eighties, when we had imagined the signal-station to have been seventy or thereabout?

One aphorism usually suggests another. "You are not looking well to-day," Mrs. Brown remarks to Mrs. Jones.

"No, I have a slight headache," Mrs. Jones replies, immediately feeling a sympathetic twinge in her left temple, in response to her friend's remark.

"How well you are looking!—ten per cent better than when I last say you!" Smith affirmed to his neighbor across the way, whom he had not met for several days.

Now Neighbor Blake had started out with a pain in his back, and a dissatisfaction with himself and the world in general. But Smith's assertion said to that pain, "Go!" and it went. Smith's cheery smile flashed its radiance into Neighbor Blake's receptive countenance, and he answered cheerily: "Yes, I'm feelin' pretty tol'r'ble well for an old man. Had the rheumatiz when I started out, but it's 'bout gone now;" and Neighbor Blake passed on, wondering what there was about Neighbor Smith that made him chirk a fellow up so.

How many times we have been brought to the verge of nervous prostration, or some equally depressing malady, simply from hearing the symptoms discussed by people whose ailments form the chief topic of their conversation, when our own nerves were unstrung and ready to respond with an answering twinge to whatever was brought to bear upon them.

I once heard of a woman who, during a cholera epidemic, suffered all the symptoms of that dire malady, even to taking to her bed, simply from a nervous dread of the disease. She was alone in a house a mile from any neighbor. She had been told that extreme cleanliness was necessary as a preventive against contagion, and forthwith she had taken up, cleaned, and put down again five carpets, on a hot summer day, unaided; and then, with every limb and nerve aching, she had gone to bed convinced that after all her painstaking she had not averted the dread calamity. Her aching head and limbs assured her that the grim monster had swooped down upon her, alone and unprepared.

When her husband returned, an hour later, and found her in a high fever, he speedily summoned a physician, who told the frightened woman that she had simply overdone, and was suffering from the effects of her indiscretion.

Thus imagination often makes cowards of would-be heroes. Knowledge, like the thermometer, only shows us our weakness, and thereby throws an obstacle in the way, which prevents us from reaching the goal for which we are striving. Any attempt to gauge our equipment for an undertaking by consulting the sign-board of another's experience, is a stumbling-block in our way. We are at our best when we go straight ahead, and keep our feelings and our inclinations subservient to the end in view.—Helen M. Richardson, in Zion's Herald.

A More Hopeful View.

The religious world is disturbed by the affirmation that the basis of faith is being undermined; that the Bible is no longer a book of authority; that the thinking world demands something more rational; that gifted, cultured and self-respecting men are avoiding the ministry; that man is left to reason out his own origin and destiny; that Christianity has been tried and found wanting; that educated men find ways of escape, but the masses will never find these ways open to them; that we may wisely substitute "spiritual classics for the Bible." We are told much of what people do not believe. We hear of the great iconoclasts; but we do not hear so much of the constructionists. We hear of Dr. Briggs, Dr. McConnell, Sir Oliver Lodge, and Canon Henson, we do not hear of the modest and conservative men who are examples of vital Christianity. The atmosphere grows murky, and the thoughts confused, while the heart sickens, as we read of one great teacher (?) who speaks of the "inhuman Christ!" Ordinary people smile when they hear one of the great lights say that the Bible is full of absurdities and eruditics, and almost in the same breath he tells us that the masses are for the most part untroubled by what are known as critical questions. We wonder how the Book can ever remain "the manual of fundamental morality, the best corrective of ecclesiastical corruption and the most effectual check upon the materialistic tendencies of modern life," when some find it but "a pack of lies too gross for toleration!" Are we to sit forever patiently and quietly while unbelief proudly flaunts its tattered rags of doubt in our faces? One broken car wheel will make more noise and cause more jar and bring about more disaster than ten thousand unbroken wheels upon a good track.—Selected.

We Are Best Where We Are.

Sometimes we look at the circumstances by which we are surrounded and think how impossible it is for us ever to be, in the midst of such daily experience, what we ought to be. We grumble over our lot instead of cheerfully accepting it at God's hands, believing that He knows what is best for us. We think regretfully that if the people we are called upon to meet from day to day were different, if they had the same earnest aims and hopes as ourselves, if the worries from our work were less frequent and irritating, if we had not this sickly or inherited weakness, we should be different from what we are. But it is not so. The Psalmist was accurately right when he said: "Thy judgments are true and righteous." The judgment of God never errs. It cannot fail. He does not plant the orchid on the Alpine height or the edelweiss in the tropics. He knows the nature of each plant in His universe, and places it under the conditions best suited for its development. So likewise the personal requirements of each one of us is known unto Him; we can, therefore, be certain that He has placed us just where our personal character can fully unfold itself.

Instead of bemoaning our difficulties, we ought to be thankful for them, for it is out of these trials is forged what we call character. We know men in whose faces we can read it, we know how it has been won. Whenever we see a face marked by an expression of strength and self-reliance, we conclude that it represents a history in which there has been something to fight against, something to overcome. The influences which have left their impress upon it have not been of the arm-chair and slipper kind. We know that many a victory has been gained in the midst of rough experiences, for we can read the scars of battle in the lines upon the face. Yes; hardship, trial, difficulty, make character; or, to change the figure, they are the stepping-stones upon which the soul rises.—C. A. Keightley.

The Secrets of Happiness.

Dr. Van Dyke, in his sermon before the General Assembly at Los Angeles, said: "If we come to Christ for happiness, he tells us four great secrets in regard to it:

"It is inward and not outward; and so it does not depend on what we have, but on what we are.

"It is not to be found by direct seeking, but by setting our faces towards the things from which it flows; and so we must climb the mount if we would see the vision; we must tune the instrument if we would hear the music.

"It is not solitary, but social; and so we can never have it without sharing it.

"It is the result of God's will for us, and not of our wills for ourselves; and so we can find it only by giving ourselves up in submission and obedience to the control of God."

"For this is peace—to lose the lonely note
Of self in love's celestial-ordered strain;
And this is joy—to find oneself again
In Him whose harmonies forever float
Through all the spheres of song, below, above—
For God is music, even as God is love."

In the millinery show-room of one of the large department stores in Philadelphia a customer inquired of a saleswoman what they charged to clean feathers.

"Ten cents a piece," was the answer.

"O, I could never pay that price!" gasped the lady.

"How many have you? If you have a sufficient number we might make a reduction in the price."

"Why, I couldn't count them, for I have two beds full."

Needless to say, she was in the wrong department.

A Philadelphia mother recently went calling, accompanied by her five-year-old boy. Being a pretty child, of the Fauntleroy type, more than one of the women she visited said complimentary things about him, all of which he took with due modesty. Before the afternoon ended, however, he revealed his ideas of maternal pride. One of the women said, jokingly, but with a serious face:

"My little man, I think I'll just keep you here with me. I have no little boy of my own. Do you think your mother will sell you to me?"

"No, mam," he replied, promptly.

"You don't?" she asked, in affected surprise. "Why, don't you think I have money enough to buy you?"

"It isn't that," he answered, politely, "but there are five of us, you see, and she would not care to break the set."

Our Boys and Girls

Ashworth, N. C., June 3, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—We are twin sisters, thirteen years of age. Our papa takes the Advocate. We enjoy reading the little girls' and boys' letters. Our school has closed. Our teacher's name is Miss Janie Howard. We will close with the best wishes to the Orphanage.

Your friends,
LELIA D. and IVY L. POWELL.

Aurora, N. C.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl. I am eight years old. I have one buddy. I go to school. My teacher's name is Miss Sallie Lowder. My papa takes the Advocate. We have been to New Bern. My sister has just gone to Morchead.

Now I must close. In inclose ten cents for the orphans.

Your friend,
REBECCA G. BONNER.

Aurora, N. C., June 17, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl 10 years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. I like to read the boys and girls letters. I have one brother and three sisters. My teacher is my mother, and our preacher is Mr. J. M. Lowder. I like him very well. We have two eats and three pigs.

Who was the man that had to sleep on an iron bed?

I inclose 10 cents for the orphans.

Your unknown friend,
MARY E. BONNER.

Conway, N. C., June 17, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl nine years of age. My sister takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the little peoples' letters very much. Mr. W. C. Merritt preaches at our school-house every second Sunday evening. He lives next to our house. We like him fine. This is his last year with us, and we are very sorry. If my letter don't find the way to the waste-basket, I will try to write again.

Your unknown friend,
IDA LOU FUTRELL.

Timberlake, N. C., June 3, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little boy twelve years old. My grandpa takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the girls' and boys' letters. My school has closed now. My teacher was Mr. H. E. Pearce. We all like him very much. Our pastor is Rev. M. D. Giles. We like him.

I will ask a question: Who crucified Christ?

I will close with love and best wishes.

Your little friend,
T. E. NOELL.

High Falls, N. C., June 12, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As I have never written a letter to the Advocate, I thought I would write a short one for the first time. I go to Sunday-school almost every Sunday. I like to go fine. We have a large class of boys and girls. Our pastor is R. H. Broom. He preached a most powerful sermon on the fifth Sunday in May. We have prayer-meeting every Sunday night. I like to go. I will close with best wishes for the Advocate.

Your unknown friend,
EMMA RIDDLE.

Supply, N. C., May 30, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I enjoy reading the little folks' letters so well, I thought I would write one. I am a little girl ten years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Mr. Guilford Sellers is my Superintendent, and Mrs. Mary Sellers is my teacher. I like to go to Sunday-school. Rev. N. H. Guyton is our preacher. I will answer Cassie Bright's question: It was the money that Judas had betrayed Jesus for.—Matthew 27:3.

Now, I will ask a question: What was the first command of God?

I send ten cents to the orphans.

Your little friend,
ETHEL PIGOTT.

Williamston, N. C., June 5, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—We are two little girls and belong to the Junior League. Our League promised to pay $20 on our District Parsonage debt, so we had a basket party and ice cream supper, an dpaid the full amount.

We are going to have a picnic some time soon.

We will answer Ransom Middleton's question: Elijah was carried to heaven in a chariot of fire.

We will close with best wishes for the Advocate.

Your little friends,
DELIA LANIER, President.
MARY B. ELLISON, Vice-Pres.

Rocky Mount, N. C., June 18, 1904.

Dear Advocate—Will you accept a new member to join your band of correspondents?

I have read the letters from the little boys and girls, and I feel that I would know them better if you will let me write sometimes.

I am in school now. My teacher is Miss Bessie Chandler. You may know we like her if we go this late in June when the weather is so warm. I have recited fifty perfect lessons. If my letter escapes the waste-basket I'll write again. I hope I can send you a dollar for the orphans by Christmas.

Your little friend,
MAUD JOYNER.

Goldston, N. C., June 6. 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl seven years old. This is my second letter to the Advocate. My first one did not appear. Mr. Editor, why didn't you publish it? I looked and looked for it. I hope you wont let this one get lost. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. I did not go last Sunday, as my papa and sister were sick. My papa is Superintendent. Mrs. Carrie Pugh is my teacher. My grandma Moffitt died about three weeks ago. I miss her so much. My little sister is nine months old. I think she is so sweet.

Your little friend,
LUCY RIVES.

[Your letter must have been lost on the way.—Editor.]

Cary, N. C., June 11, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little boy eleven years old. I live in the country. My papa takes the Advocate. He is a farmer. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. My teacher's name is Miss Lucy E. Revis. Our pastor is Mr. G. B. Starling. We all like him very well. I will answer Myrtle Ewing's question: The ten commandments are found in the tenth chapter of Exodus. Now I will ask one. How many books in the Bible?

If this does not reach the waste basket I will write again.

MILTON R. PLEASANTS.

Jonesboro, N. C., June 15, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl nine years old. My papa takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the little girls' and boys' letters very much. I go to Sunday-school almost every Sunday. My sister is my teacher.

Our pastor is Rev. E. Pope. We all like him very much. Our Superintendent is Mr. S. Worthy.

For fear of the waste-basket, I will ask a question and close.

Which disciple does tradition say was crucified with his head downward?

Find inclosed five cents for the orphans.

Your little friend,
VALLIE W. HILL.

Steed, N. C., June 11, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I have never written the Advocate before, and will write a line now.

I am ten years old. I love to read the letters of the girls and boys in the Advocate. I have a father and two brothers. My mother died two years ago. We all go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Our Superintendent is Dr. F. E. Asbury. Miss Lula Steed is my Sunday-school teacher.

Rev. G. A. Oglesby is our pastor, and we all love him very much. I was very much disappointed that last week's Advocate did not have any letters from the little boys and girls.

I will close,

Your friend,
INA K. STEED.

Burlington, N. C., June 13, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little boy nine years old. I go to Front Street M. E. Sunday-school. Bro. L. T. Barber is our Superintendent, and Bro. B. O. Guthrie is my teacher, and I like them both. I also go to the graded school. Miss Ella Robertson is my teacher, and I love her dearly. I got a certificate that promotes me to the fifth grade.

I will answer Lee J. Craven's question: "It is taken from Zachariah, 8:5."

Now, I will ask one: "Why do we always begin the names of the Deity with a capital letter?

I will close. Find 25 cents from brothers Rupert, Branson and myself.

Your friend,
VERNE STRUDWICK CAVINESS

High Falls, N. C., June 12, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As I have written once before, and my letter escaped the waste-basket, I thought I would write again. We take the Advocate, and like to read it very much, and like to read the little folks' letters very much. We have a good Sunday-school at High Falls, and I like to go. I see a good many letters in the Advocate. The children like to go to Sunday-school. It is a good place fo rchildren to go, and old folks, too. Fathers and mothers, send your children to Sunday-school. Our Superintendent is B. L. Osborn. We like him fine. My teacher is my brother, T. L. Riddle. Our pastor is R. H. Broom. We like to hear him fine. High Falls is a little village on Deep River. It is a very lovely place.

I will answer Mattie Stancy's question: The commandments are found in the first part of the Bible, in the 20th chapter of Exodus. I will close by asking one: What chapter are the Beantitudes found in?

I hope this will escape the waste-basket. With best wishes to the Advocate.

Your unknown friend,
MAUD ALICE RIDDLE.

Mrs. M. L. Hargrove.

As most of the readers of this column already know Mrs. M. L. Hargrove, Recording Secretary of the Woman's Board and Bible teacher at the Scarrett Bible and Training School, expects to visit some of the societies of the North Carolina Conference during July. For the benefit of some who may have failed to see the first notice of her addresses we again publish her appointments.

Rockingham, Sunday, July 10th.
Fayetteville, Monday, July 11th.
Wilmington, Tuesday, July 12th.
New Bern, Thursday, July 13th.
Raleigh, Friday, July 14th.
Durham, Saturday, July 15th.

Mrs. Hargrove has just returned from Palestine, where she attended the International Sunday-school Convention. Her trip has given her new material, and her magnetic presentation of her subject cannot fail to attract large audiences. Not only will her addresses be of interest to the members of the various auxiliaries, but to the congregations at large, as well as to the general public.

Those towns are fortunate who will have the opportunity of hearing Mrs. Hargrove. Indeed, those living within short distances of her appointments will find themselves repaid for a special trip on the day, when she is nearest them. Her visits will no doubt prove a source of inspiration, and give new impetus to all of the auxiliaries.

The Quarterly Report.

The report of the Treasurer for the first quarter should in itself be a call for increased activity on the part of some at least of our Auxiliaries. The report is as follows:

The total receipts are $1,055.18, which is $158.41 less than the corresponding quarter of last year. We have just $260.29 of our $2,000 Pledge. Our Conference Expense Fund is overdrawn $1.37. The long distance traveled by most of our officers to our recent delightful Annual Meeting is the cause of our depleted treasury in that Fund. We always have to pay for good things, also a number of Auxiliaries have not reported at all, and a few too late, the majority very late. Oh! that our Treasurers would remember that the quarter closes on the first of the month and not after the fifteenth.

MRS. B. B. ADAMS, Treasurer.

Mizpah.

The regular monthly meeting of the Young Woman's F. M. S., Raleigh, on the third Sunday in June, was an unusually interesting one. As it was the last meeting of the Society at which our own missionary, Miss Mary T. Pesead, would be present before sailing for Brazil, it partook somewhat of the nature of a farewell.

After the routine business had been transacted a special program took the place of the regular United Study. The program closed with the Society's Farewell by Mrs. C. V. Allbright, and a response by "Miss Mary." It was a joyful farewell, if such a thing be possible with those we love and the pain of the parting was all taken away. "Miss Mary" goes to her work with such a glad heart and so completely restored in body, that her friends can only rejoice with her that she is able to continue her work in the Master's cause. At our next meeting she will be beyond the equator, but we will always feel that she is one of us. Our special prayer at that meeting will be for a safe ending to her voyage, and God's blessing on her new work.

A Public Meeting.

The Auxiliary of the W. F. M. S. of Edenton Street Church holds its anual public meeting on Sunday evening, June 19th. The service was well attended and it is hoped that reports of other public meetings will be sent in.

After special music by the choir, Scripture reading by the pastor and prayer, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. B. F. Dixon, president of the Society, who made a short talk on Woman's Work and What it had Accomplished. Mrs. R. O. Burton followed with a History of the W. F. M. S. since its Organization Twenty-six Years Ago. Mrs. Dixon then announced Miss Mary Pescud,who needed no introduction, as the speaker for the evening. While Miss Pescud's address was directed to the workers at home, and contained an earnest plea for consecration here, she interspersed her remarks with incidents from her Brazilian work showing the pressing need for those who have the light to be in active service.

After a collection taken by some of the members of the Missionary Societies, during which the Society's mite boxes were also collected, the meeting closed with, "Work for the Night is Coming," followed by the benediction by the patsor.

Please send all communications for this Department to MRS. R. O. BURTON, Raleigh, N. C.

Officers of W. H. M. S. of the N. C. Conference.

President—Mrs. J. E. Underwood, Elizabeth City.
First Vice-President—Mrs. V. Royster, Raleigh.
Second Vice-President—Mrs. K. P. Black, Littleton.
Third Vice-President—Mrs. J. A. Spiers, Selma.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. C. P. Jerome, West Durham.
Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. S. H. Scott, New Bern.
Treasurer—Mrs. E. L. Prince, Wilmington.
Superintendent of Supplies—Mrs. Ivan Proctor, Raleigh.
Superintendent of Literature and Press Work—Mrs. R. O. Burton.

Report for First Quarter.

Adult members, 832; Juvenile members, 127; meetings held during quarter, 62; average attendance, 243; number added to Baby Roll, 44; subscriptions to Our Home, 201; taking Mission Reading Course, 114; adult mite boxes in use, 21; baby mite boxes in use, 182; pledged to tithing, 18; boxes of supplies sent out—value $76.20—7; papers and leaflets distributed,$592; visits made to sick and strangers, 562; garments distributed, 206; needy assisted, 86; amount sent Conference Treasurer, $279.27; amount expended for local work, $636.92.

MRS. S. H. SCOTT.

Read Carefully.

I hope all members will carefully study this report sent by our faithful Corresponding Secretary, comparing the figures with those compiled for the quarter before this, and resolving to do their full share towards improvement in every department. Especially do I urge the eleven Auxiliaries that failed to report to be ready next time. Sisters, the co-operation and help and sympathy of you all are needed—do not withhold them, please. I am sure all rejoice in the increase in numbers and in interest. Three new Auxiliaries were organized during the quarter.

Leading Auxiliaries.

Sunbury reported best average attendance, the number of members being twenty, attendance fifteen. Hertford, largest number of subscribers to our Our Homes, viz: Nine of the twelve members. Wilmington distributed largest number of leaflets and papers, 228. New Bern made largest number of visits, 112. Also distributed most garments, 95. Weldon expended largest amount locally, $155.00. Windsor sent the best report as a whole, while Henderson, Winfall, Elizabeth City and others did well. Fremont sent report most punctually. Lake Landing also was very punctual, the Corresponding and Recording Secretaries enjoying much their twelve mile ride, to compare their reports with the Treasurer's. The consecrated energy of these faithful officers must prove an inspiration to others, and I earnestly trust it may be imitated. In writing of a recent meeting, the Corresponding Secretary closes with this beautiful truth: "There is always pleasure where God is. Let Him ever reign in our midst."

La Grange Auxiliary.

We gladly welcome this new Band recently organized by our industrious Conference Corresponding Secretary, and I take pleasure in presenting its officers:

Mrs. J. E. Witherspoon, President.
Miss Ida Sutton, First Vice-President.
Mrs. J. W. Wynne, Second Vice-President.
Mrs. Mary Wooten, Third Vice-President.
Miss Rosa Creech, Recording Secretary.
Mrs. R. G. Creech, Treasurer.
Miss Nina Todd, Corresponding Secretary.

May the work of every member be blessed.

A Comparison.

In time I expect to give a summary of our 18th Annual Report, but to-day can only mention two items, viz.: The amount raised for connectional work, $59,414.99, and that for local, $122,164.32. You see the latter sum is more than twice as large as the former, notwithstanding the fact that the Local Aid Societies and Epworth Leagues both look after local needs. We especially rejoice in our home privileges and are glad to show our readers why we have cause to do so, believing that many will desire to join us who have not before understood.

Sympathy.

Our entire Society desires to extend tenderest sympathy to our beloved sister, Mrs. W. H. Shaw, in her sore bereavement. May the merciful Father whom she has served so faithfully abide continually with her, giving comfort and strength.

REVOLUTION IMMINENT.

A sure sign of approaching revolt and serious trouble in your system is nervousness, sleeplessness, or stomach upsets. Electric Bitters will quickly dismember the troublesome causes. It never fails to tone the stomach, regulate the Kidneys and Bowels, stimulate the Liver, and clarify the blood. Run down system benefit particularly and all the usual attending aches vanish under its searching and thorough effectiveness. Electric Bitters is only 50 cents, and that is returned if it don't give perfect satisfaction. Guaranteed by all druggists.

THE DISTRICT CONFERENCE: REMINISCENTIAL AND HORTATORY.

The District Conference came to this scribe in the days of his early boyhood. It was a new thing to him. Great preparations were made. The little brick church on the hill was all a-bustle. The Chronic Sleeper would actually awake from his doze in his favorite place in the amen corner when the approaching Conference was mentioned. There were unusual and prophetic developments in the culinary department of the parsonage. The boys bent to their task in the garden or at the wood-pile with a confirmed resignation as visions of "company things" on the table floated before their minds.

Ah! what an occasion it was! What crowds came from far and near! What sermons were preached! We can still hear the stentorian tones of J. W. North as he preached as few men could preach. We can still hear the swish of W. M. Robey's rapier as it cut to shreds the argument of the other side in debate. The echoes of that Conference lingered for days around that little mountain town, and around us they linger still, though life's summit has been reached and our eyes look to the westering sun.

The next District Conference remembered by us was reached with some difficulty. The scribe and his brother, two callow ambitious youths, had a desire to attend the "Deestrict" over fifty miles distant. We were not on a line of railroad. The preacher's horse and buggy were gone. They went with the preacher himself the day before. There was no livery stable. But we were determined to go, and we went, starting out in the freshness of the morning, sitting in a buggy borrowed, and driving a horse secured from "Uncle Johnny Thompson." The harness itself was borrow from a third party. "Uncle Johnny's" horse dashed our hopes in the beginning by kicking off the dash-board of the buggy. We drove the whole distance without a dash-board. Were we not going to a District Conference? We reached it, enjoyed it, and became reconciled to our departure only with the thought that we would make "Uncle Johnny's" horse pay for his vicious joy manifested at the beginning of the journey. We started at 9 o'clock a. m., and reached home before sundown. The horse appeared to be in better condition than his drivers.

Then there was the Conference attended by this "scribe" as a preacher-in-charge. He was in a "calf pasture" at the time—now a large green meadow whose grazing privileges are coveted by not a few. Bishop Duncan was presiding. In breathless awe we watched that kindly soul decapitating the brethren with all the ease and sangfroid with which the vagrant boys snip off wheat-heads in June. The cold chills made divers trips over our body, as we thought of the time when the Bishop should call our name. Waiting was a weariness to the flesh. It made us sick. But the time came and we were surprised to find after the Bishop got through with us that our head was still nicely attached to the cervical vertebrae. We have loved Bishop Duncan ever since. We named a boy after him. It was a great District Conference, even if the mercury was at 98 and the atmosphere palpitated with suggestions of the days of Torquemada.

As editor of the Advocate, we have had a large experience with the District Conference. The Conference which we will be least likely to forget was held at Bethlehem of blessed memory. The Conference itself was not so sharply differentiated from other Conferences. But the getting there—that is what makes memory so wakeful. Sitting breakfastless in the rocking, lurching caboose of a frieght train, on a hot July day, from 9 o'clock a. m. to 4 o'clock p. m.; failing to find the man who was to carry us from the train to a point on the river, fourteen miles distant; discovering a good Samaritan who carried us to the river and housed us for the night; walking four miles the next morning on a sandy road which had no sign of a path on either side; lugging a heavy valise which burst open and wouldn't stay shut, while the perspiration started from every pore in our body; finding no sign of life and hearing no sound of wheels until we reached the church—these are some of the experiences which form the black and white of our checkerboard on that memorable journey. But we really enjoyed that Conference—the same from which John Hall, who laughed at us, started home on Friday, reaching there the following Monday afternoon. "There is retribution in history."

We have never felt disposed to depreciate the importance of the District Conference as a part of our church machinery. It may be used as a means for accomplishing a great deal of good. It can be made a thing as worthless as a last year's bird nest. The real District Conference has a legitimate place in our economy.

Some people call that a good District Conference which is well attended. Such success is determined by three factors: The Presiding Elder, the time, and the place.

Whether the Conference have few or many in attendance is determined by a personality and that is in the Presiding Elder. If he magnifies the Conference on each charge from the time when the delegates are elected until within a few days of the Conference, and relaxeth not in the work of urging the delegates to attend, he may feel sure that he will have a multitude. But if he lets the matter of attendance take care of itself, there will be a dull time. The well-attended Conferences have Presiding Elders who are well supplied with postal cards.

Of course, regard must be had to the time of holding the Conference, for reasons that must be evident to every one.

We fear that the place of holding the Conference does not receive the attention which the matter deserves. There are some places which as far as people, natural surroundings and other elements are concerned are as good as any in the world, but they are not good places for a District Conference. They are simply more or less inaccessible. People will not go to a Conference when they have to spend several days getting there and several days getting back.

But the factors, Presiding Elder, time, and places, may all be favorable, and yet the Conference may be a comparative failure. A Conference may be top-heavy, over-programmed. It may not have enough programme. It may be talked to death. It may not have talk enough. Too much time may be given to one interest; too little time to another. No Conference can be called successful which does not enlist the attention and activities of the laymen who form such a vital part of the Conference. No Conference can be called successful which fails to be surrounded by a spiritual atmosphere. Preaching should be earnest and evangelical. That Conference which is attended by the conversion of souls either during the sessions or afterward at revivals which are at least the indirect outcome of the Conference is the successful Conference.

DO YOU WANT?

1. A Lawton's Simplex Printer which will enable you to take several hundred impressions at a time of any letter or circular you wish to send out. Then write to this office and secure a bargain.

2. A Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, largest size, and that has never been used. Then write to this office and secure a bargain.

3. A practically new piano-player that sells on the market for $250.00. It is one of the finest Pianolas made. Without knowing a note of music, you can attach it to any piano and play the most beautiful and difficult pieces of the masters with all the original expressions. Then write to this office and secure a wonderful bargain.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ORPHANAGE TRUSTEES.

The Trustees of the Methodist Orphanage met in the central building on Tuesday, June 21st. The following were present: Hon. R. N. Page, President; Mr. J. G. Brown, Secretary and Treasurer; Messrs. J. S. Wynne, B. B. Adams, R. T. Gray, W. E. Springer, J. A. Long, W. B. Boyd, and T. N. Ivey.

The report of the Superintendent was highly creditable to his management, and, of course, very satisfactory to the Trustees. Rev. J. W .Jenkins was re-elected Superintendent; Mrs. J. W. Jenkins, matron, and Miss Lucy M. Reeks, teacher.

The Central Building simply amazed those trustees who had not seen it before. They had no idea that we had such a building. Large, imposing, with a tower that looms up so as to be seen at a distance of ten miles in all directions, with a capacity for over two hundred orphans, it is a fine piece of architecture of which our Methodism many well feel proud.

As we inspected this building and thought of the two hundred orphans who are waiting for admission, and contemplated the possibility of those orphans being homeless for another year because of the unfinished condition of the building, and pondered the fact that a little hustling on the part of our preachers and laymen would bring in before September the comparatively small sum necessary for the completion of the building, we felt that it would be nothing short of a blunder, if not a crime, if this hustling should not be done—and that at once. Just think of it! Keeping a grand building closed to the exclusion of two hundred orphans for a another year when such a small amount is necessary for the completion of the building. Let every friend of the Orphanage do his best in the next two months. We have one of the biggest things in Methodism out there on Orphanage hill. Let every one who can go to see it. We hope to present to our readers at an early day a picture of the Central Building.

AFTERMATH, NO. 1.

This was the elegant and most enjoyable table spread for the Trustees just after the meeting. It was under the supervision of the matron, who in that one repast demonstrated her proficiency in the management of her household. About 10 o'clock p. m., the Trustees left, feeling that their experience since 5 o'clock that afternoon represented a perfect combination of business and pleasure.

AFTERMATH, NO. 2.

This was the graphophone entertainment given to the orphans on Thursday night following by Prof. Junius Turner, and under the supervision of Col. F. A. Olds, who has all the orphans in love with him. The entertainment was delightful to all, including this writer. An idea of Prof. Turner's proficiency as a graphophone artist may be gained from the unique introduction given by Col. Olds, who said that the Indians in far off Dakota lisp Turner's name with joy, and that when Kamschatkan mothers give their hungry children the choice of whale fat or Turner, they always cry out for "Turner."

SPRINGS IN THE DESERT.

June, July, and August, are very hard months on a religious newspaper in the South. They seem specially hard in North Carolina. It is the custom to borrow money to tide the paper over these months.

The "Old Raleigh" does not like to borrow money and she will not do so if our brethren will only give her a lift. They can do much for her now with very little trouble. She is passing through the desert and is hunting for springs. So we trust that every preacher who attends a District Conference will have some money for the Advocate. The editor expects to attend every Conference at some time during the sessions and he will confidently expect to receive many lifts for the Old Raleigh.

In the meantime, let every subscriber whose renewal is due send us if possible a remittance.

Methodist Mention

State.

We are glad to learn that Rev. L. S. Etheridge has about recovered from his recent sickness.

The Raleigh and New Bern District Conferences this week. The former at Cary, the latter at Beaufort.

Mr. J. M. Turner, one of our most intelligent Methodists in Wake County, was in the office on last Saturday. He speaks highly of the labors of Rev. G. W. Fisher.

Dr. L. L. Nash is President of the Preachers' Conference of Henderson, N. C. He prepared for the Conference the very able paper which is published on the fourth page of the Advocate.

Dr. Boswell, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, is of the opinion that before the New Order of Worship be mandatory, it will have to be approved by the General Conference.

Rev. W. H. Willis had in the last issue of the North Carolina Christian Advocate an article in which he favors the re-districting of the W. N. C. Conference. He thinks that there should be only ten districts.

Dr. W. H. Moore held Quarterly Conference at Macedonia on last Saturday and preached at the same place on the following day. On Sunday night he preached at Central Church, Raleigh. He is holding up well under the summer heat.

Not only does the Lumberton Baptist Sunday-school leads all others in the State in contributions to the Baptist Orphanage, but the Methodist school now leads all other schools of its denomination in contributions to the Methodist Orphanage.—Lumberton Argus.

Dr. H. M. Hamill and wife of Nashville, Tenn., conducted a Sunday-school Institute in Edenton Street Church on last Monday and Tuesday. The exercises were very interesting and instructive, and will receive fuller notice in next week's Advocate.

Dr. and Mrs. Jno. R. Brooks spent last Saturday and Sunday in Raleigh, and on Monday left for Louisburg, where they expect to be during the summer. We regret that the health of Mrs. Brooks gets no better. Many prayers are going up for these two faithful Christian workers.

The following brethren were appreciated visitors to this office during last week: Messrs. G. W. Ward, of Echo; M. J. Best, of Fremont; B. B. Adams, of Four Oaks, and W. E. Springer. The two latter were attending the meeting of the Directors of the Methodist Orphanage.

The following ne wsubscribers have come in since last issue: Rev. L. H. Joyner, 1; Rev. L. M. Chaffin, 1; Rev. J. T. Draper, 2; Rev. W. A. Jenkins, 1; Rev. Z. Paris, 1; Rev. L. E. Sawyer, 1; Rev. J. H. Hall, 1; Rev. W. J. Crowson, 1; Mr. B. C. Glover, 1; direct, 1. Total number received since Conference, 1,334.

Bible class of Edenton Street Sunday-school has been organized into a class society and has adopted the name, "Normal Class," in memory of Rev. W. C. Norman, who was its teacher during his last pastorate of the church. There has recently been a considerable addition to the membership of the class and improvement in the attendance.

Dr. J. H. Weaver said in his remarks at the Methodist Church last Sunday night that the Trustees lacked only $1,500 of having enough money in sight to build the large addition to Davenport College. It is gratifying to learn that the committee appointed to raise the funds has been so successful. This of course assures the addition to be made. We believe there are 100 individuals in Caldwell County who love the College enough to give $15 each.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

The meeting at the Methodist Church closed on Sunday evening. Rev. E. C. Glenn, who assisted Rev. L. E. Thompson, is a fine preacher and revivalist. He did most excellent work here. As a result of the meeting, sixty have been added to the church. This makes seventy odd added this year. A purse of about $80.00 was made up for Mr. Glenn, who has gone to Belhaven to assist Rev. Mr. Jackson in a meeting. He is a consecrated man and earnest in his work.—Washington Progress.

Dr. J. F. Miller, the universally esteemed and everywhere popular superintendent of the State Hospital, near this city, gave an old-fashioned barbecue on the beautiful and picturesque lawn at State Hospital grounds yesterday. The occasion was a family reunion of his children and grand-children, all of whom were present, with the exception of Dr. Robert Miller, of Rocky Mount, who was unavoidably detained at the last moment. It was indeed a delightful occasion, one that will long be remembered, and was greatly enjoyed by all present, of whom there were nearly twenty. We are sure that it gave the good doctor inexpressible joy to again have his children and grand-children all assembled together in family reunion, and we join his many friends in wishing him many similar returns.—Goldsboro Cor. News and Observer.

Dr. R. H. Whitaker, who is writing such delightful articles, has this to say regarding Rev. C. O. DuRant: "Rev. C. O. DuRant was preaching a revival sermon, using for his text, 'In hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments; and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried and said, Father Abraham have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame.' About the time the preacher was making the sermon extremely awful, talking of the thirsty tongue that cried for just one drop of water to cool it, a brother who limped in walking, across from his seat, took a bucket of water that sat on a table in front of the pulpit, and with dipper in hand, went up and down the aisle watering the congregation, until he emptied the bucket and then started out to get another bucket full, when I stopped him. The congregation saw the humor in it and could not help smiling. It looked as if the brother thought he'd better water that crowd, lest they might be where there was no water very soon. I don't know what other idea could have possessed him."

Connectional

Southern Methodism is to have an institutional church in Kansas City.

Bishop Galloway will said from Vancouver July 20th for Japan. Mrs. Galloway will accompany him.

The choir of the First Methodist Church in Memphis went out on a strike last Sunday because of adverse criticism in the Epworth Messenger, the editor of which thinks that the singers should stand while rendering the "Gloria."

The Marion News of last week reported Rev. J. D. Carpenter, of the North Catawba Circuit, W. N. C. Conference, still in a very serious condition. He has been suffering with a carbuncle, and has been quite sick for several weeks.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

Dr. T. S. Wade, editor, and John A. Grose, publisher of the Methodist Episcopal Advocate, are forming a stock company for the purpose of enlarging the plant, and publishing the paper on a safer and more permanent plan, along with such other periodicals as may seem to them proper and profitable.—Exchange.

Wednesday, Commencement Day at Vanderbilt University, witnessed the graduation of eighty-six young men and women from the Academic, Engineering, Law, Biblical, and Pharmaceutical Departments. The theological class was small, consisting of only five graduates, three of whom were absent. The usual diplomas and prizes were awarded.

General Notes

New York Methodism gives $10,000 annually to deaconess work.

The General Conference created a new society known as the Church Temperance Society.

The Methodists of New England have put a man in the field to raise $250,000 as a relief fund for aged ministers.

Baptists, Methodists and Quakers are classified by the Chinese as follows: "Big Wash, Little Wash and No-Wash Christians.

The warrant under which John Bunyan was committed to Bedford jail recently sold at auction in London for over $1,500.

Dr. J. H. Vincent, recently retired from active service as bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church has been elected preacher at Harvard for next year.

The farthest north of all the Anglican mission dioceses is that of Mackenzie River, British America, 500,000 square miles in extent, to which the care of the diocese of Athabasca, 250,000 square miles more, is about to be added.

The Southern Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions recognizes the favor and blessing of God as having been manifest during its year's work. The whole number of additions in its fields has been 1,558, of which the largest number, 870, were in the African Mission.

The resignation of the Rev. Herbert Franklin Fisk, D. D., LL. D., as principal of the Northwestern University Academy, terminates a long and distinguished career in the field of education. For thirty-one consecutive years Dr. Fisk has been at the head of the institution with which he has just severed his connection.

The editor of the Living Church, published at Milwaukee, advises members of the Protestant Episcopal Church who are absent from their own churches on Sunday to attend no services whatever rather than those of other religious bodies. He says: "It is wholly impossible to overlook the grave reasons why one should not take part in the services of any of those bodies."

At the World's Sunday-school Convention at Jerusalem there were enrolled 1,536 attendants, of whom 764 came from the United States and Canada, 248 from Great Britain, and 377 from Jerusalem. The number from Jerusalem interested in Bible study is somewhat surprising, but it is in accordance with the spirit of modern times to find so large a per cent of the body from English-speaking people.

We regret to see that Fannie Crosby, the author of many of our modern, familiar hymns, such as, "Savior More Than Life to Me," "Blessed Assurance, Jesus is Mine," etc., is really in need. It seems that she has received but small compensation for her hymns, the publishers getting the lion's share; and now, in her 84th year, she is lacking many of the comforts, if not necessaries, of life. We are glad to see that collections are being taken up in some of the Methodist churches North for her relief.

WANTED.

We would be glad to receive at least fifty copies of the Advocate of June 1, 1904, and fifty copies of June 22, 1904.

Notice.

All visitors to the Warrenton District Conference will please notify me so that I may provide homes for them. J. T. STANFORD.
Rich Square, N. C.

Atlanta's "open church" movement for people who do not go to church has built up in one year a Sunday-school with three hundred and forty scholars, nine officers, and eighteen teachers.

The Right Settlement of the Question of the Age.

There is no question of half the importance as the extension of the Master's kingdom. The Christ life is the only life worth living, and any effort as compared with the extention of the Master's kingdom is folly. A Christian life can be maintained only by seeking to project itself into a lifeless world. The question is no longer whether we shall give a few paltry dollars to the cause of missions (we now give only cents), but we must show cause why we should not go in person to carry the glad tidings to those who sit in darkness and shadow of death.

We are too ready to cry impossible; to say this or that is unreasonable; to claim that we are doing all that could be reasonably expected of us. Is this true? As against one denomination all other branches of the Christian church require 5,000 members to support a missionary, while for every ninety-two members of the Moravian Church they support a missionary in the foreign field. They have five missionaries for every pastor in the home church, while we have seventy-seven pastors for every missionary. Have the Moravians more wealth or greater liberality? We spend hundreds of dollars on what is of less importance to cents for that of greater importance.

Do you and I need Christ? Then the world needs Him. If we cannot live without Him no other one can live without Him. It was He that healed our wounds, comforted our hearts, broke off the shackles of our sin, and has given us the assurance of hope beyond this life. He only can do these things for others.

And what is a most awful fact, is that the Christians alone, among whom are we, have the knowledge of the only living and true God and of the only Savior from sin. And coordinate with this is that other fact that we are commissioned by High Heaven, yea, by the King of kings, to whom the nations are but a "drop in the bucket," and as the "small dust of the balances," to send this knowledge to those who have it not. How startling!

In the light of these things we are, as a church, to this day, playing at missions. The members of our Sunday-schools alone, by paying five cents a month, would more than pay the church's assessment for foreign and domestic missions. It is high time we were waking out of sleep.

Whatever your obligation is it too much, in view of the fact in the case and of the importance of the matter, to ask that the Leagues give the small sum of twenty-seven cents in three hundred and sixty-five days or less than seven one-hundredths of one cent a day? Ponder and act quickly. Men are dying.

Because we mistook the Texas cabinet and committee meeting that convened in Waco at the same time that the General Missionary meeting the General Epworth League Board, the College of Bishops, and other general Boards met, for a "State affair." Brother Thomasson is fearful that we will mistake their State League, that is to meet at Laporte, August 9-11, for an "international affair." No Brother Thomasson, as compared to numbers there is danger of our mistaking your "big session" for a cabinet and committee meeting unless you do as Dr. Steel advised us to do in Toronto: make up in noise what we lacked in numbers, the Yankees outnumbering us at Toronto as they did at Appomatox.

The General Epworth League Board at its recent session in Waco changed the constitution of the local chapter creating a fourth department to be known as the Department of Missions. A fourth Vice-President is to superintend this department in the same manner as the other Vice-Presidents manage their departments. I think this a wise arrangement. The supreme business of the church is the extension of the kingdom of God, as the League is of the church, so there is no greater or more important work of the League. Let every chapter, at earliest convenience, make provision for a fourth Vice-President to be known as Missionary Vice-President. Let the President of the Conference League also appoint a fourth Vice-President.

The supreme test of a Christian life is holy grief in view of God's offended majesty, sorrow on account of the sins of men because they are an offence to God. In its last analysis Christianity is neither of humanitarian, nor philanthronic concerns. "Whatsoever ye do do all to the glory of God." Christianity is philanthropic, but philanthropy is not Christianity.

The General Secretary of the League Board reported at its annual setting large prosperity in the work of the League, that every interest of the organization has gone forward. How much credit for such a report can the North Carolina Conference Leagues claim. If you are doing anything in your Chapter, brother Secretary, drop me a postal card notice.

Seven months from Conference, and Brother Crowder of the Centenary (New Bern) Chapter, enjoys the distinction of being the only Secretary who has sent us a line for these columns. Now Brother Secretary, before you lay this paper down and forget it, as you have heretofore, get a card and address it to me at Goldsboro, N. C., telling what you are doing in your chapter.

Love and Love.

Doing both nobly, because lowlily. Live and work strongly, because patiently. That it be well done, unrepented of and not to loss.—Selected.

To become like Christ is the only thing in life worth the effort, the thing before which all else is folly, and every other achievement vain.

ONLY ONE PRESCRIPTION.

Dr. M. S. Fielder writes: "I know Tetterine to be a radical cure for tetter, salt rheum, eczema and all kindred diseases of the skin and scalp. I never prescribe anything else in all skin troubles." The explanation of Dr. Fielder's policy is, that he never fails to cure such diseases when he uses Tetterine.

I CURE CANCER.

Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No knife. No plaster. No caustics. No sloughing oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure internal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment;" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else in the line matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

STATE.

The Baptist Midsummer Meeting at Jackson Springs is being largely attended.

The Coleman cotton mills at Concord, a mill run by a negro by that name who died recently, was sold at auction under forceclosure of mortgage for $10,000. It was bid in by the Dukes.

The Fourth of July will be celebrated in Raleigh as never before in the State. There will be orations, fire works, etc. The J. O. U. A. M. are at the head of the patriotic demonstration.

Assistant Labor Commissioner W. E. Faison has tendered his resignation. Mr. Faison was recently elected head of the Junior Order United American Mechanics. His promotion, however, had nothing to do with his resignation as Assistant Commissioner, so he says.

Mr. Z. P. Smith, who has been with the Seaboard Air Line as Traveling Passenger Agent, has tendered his resignation. Mr. Smith was elected editor of the official paper of the J. O. U. A. M. at their recent session in St. Louis. The paper will be moved from Pemsylvania to Raleigh.

GENERAL NEWS.

Fire destroyed about $50,000 worth of property at the St. Louis Exposition.

The officers of the General Slocum have been indicted for manslaughter by the coroner's jury in New York.

Secretary Taft and the Panama Commission has concluded arrangements for a currency system for Panama.

The boll weevil killing ant has been put to work in this country. The ant was imported from South America, and is said to be death on the weevil.

FIGHT WILL BE BITTER.

Those who will persist in closing their ears against the continual recommendation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, will have a long and bitter fight with their troubles, if not ended earlier by fatal termination. Read what T. R. Beall, of Beall, Miss., has to say: "Last fall my wife had every symptom of consumption. She took Dr. King's New Discovery after everything else had failed. Improvement came at once, and four bottles entirely cured her." Guaranteed by all druggists. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

The Summer School for Teachers, Raleigh, N. C., opens July 4th. This will be one of the great educational events in the State for a decade.

Round-trip tickets one fare, on sale July 4, 5, 11, 12, 18, 19, 25, August 1, good until August 6. Notify your railroad agent a few days before ready to start that he may have your special ticket ready, and bring your friends to the Summer School.

Prominent Prohibitionists claim that General Miles will be their candidate for President. Mr. Sam Jones was asked to run for the Vice-Presidency along with General Miles, but says he "does not ride behind anything that wears hair, and is mighty particular who rides behinds him."

The population of the 3,141 islands in the Philippine archipelago is placed at 7,635,426, of which number 647,740 are classed as uncivilized.

"AND THE CAT CAME BACK."

That is the story of tetter cured by other medicines; not so when Tetterine does the work. B. H. Tatner, McDonald Mills, Ga., writes, "Tetterine is the only remedy I ever sold that would cure tetter so it would not return. Sold 6 dozen boxes in a year and guaranteed every box. I have never had to return the money for a single box. I sold a box to a man who had had tetter for 52 years; 2 boxes cured him sound and well." 50 cents a box at druggists or from J. T. Shuptrine, Mfr., Savannah, Ga.

A Great Treat.

Col. F. A. Olds and Professor Turner came out on Thursday night last and gave us a splendid graphophone entertainment. We all enjoyed it hugely. Come again gentlemen.

Furnishing Rooms.

It will cost one hundred dollars to furnish a dormitory and sixty dollars a school room. We must have three-fourth enameled iron bedsteads with wire wove springs, good mattress, pillows, two pairs sheets, pair of good woolen blankets, one comfort, one white spread for seven beds.

This will be nice for the large Sunday-schools as well as for individuals. The names will be put on them.

Windows once more. We will soon have to close our window proposition. Let all who want them send in right away. It is nice for small Sunday-schools. Two and four dollars each.

Wilmington.

The Superintendent spent the third Sunday in the metropolis of North Carolina. A goodly congregation for summer time, gave audience to the Orphanage story at Grace Church at 11 a .m. A small one at Bladen Street at night. It was childrens' night at the Baptist Church, near by. He talked for the first time to the Sunday-school at Bladen Street at the 3.30 session, and at Grace at the 4.30. The former promised to take the matter of organization in hand soon. He asked the latter to furnish one of our dormatories, and they promised to consider the matter. Hope they will do so. It will cost $100. Webster is filling out his fourth year most efficiently and acceptably at Bladen Street.

Watson has made a fine impression at Grace. It was delightful to be domiciled at Grace parsonage.

Things that we Need.

We greatly need another cow. We do not make enough butter for our numerous family. The children like milk. But we cannot give them as much as they want. It is too expensive to buy it. Who will send us a cow?

We need guano. Our land is very poor. We sowed some oats and put no fertilizer on them and they did not get high enough to cut. So we had to graze them. Who will send us some fertilizer?

We need a big, striking clock—a calendar preferred. Tell the time of day, strike the hours and point to the day of the month. Wouldn't our boys and girls dance to the music?

Some blooded chickens would improve our poultry yard. Send along almost anything except puppies and English sparrows.

Meeting of the Board of Trustees

The Trustees met in the parlor of our Administration building in annual session on Tuesday, 21st inst. Several of them were absent. We greatly missed Bro. J. N. Cole, Mr. Luther Bynum, Hon. L. L. Smith, Hon. Fred A. Woodard, and his honor, Judge W. R. Allen. But Hon. Robt. N. Page, president; Mr. Jos. G. Brown,, secretary and treasurer; Rev. T. N. Ivey, D. D., Mr. J. S. Wynne, R. T. Gray, Esq., Mr. Walter B. Boyd, Mayor W. E. Springer, Mr. B. B. Adams and Hon. J. A. Long, constituted a quorum quite sufficient to transact the business of the baby institution, and they did it well. It was a most harmonious meeting. They were delighted with our "sky-scraper," and did not seem to think that the orphan children would be ruined by sleeping so far above the ground. Chickens that roost high scratch well. Dr. Ivey will write up the meeting.

Passing Events.

Work is still going on here. Who will help to keep it going on? Send cheek to J. W. Jenkins, Superintendent.

Had cucumbers for dinner today.

What preacher will take his Orphanage collection within the next thirty days.

Had cymblings for dinner today.

What Sunday-school will take a collection within the next three weeks?

Had roasting ears for dinner today.

What Superintendent of Sunday-school will organize his school the Sunday after he reads this? But he may not take the Old Raleigh.

Had a big mess of big headed onions yesterday.

What pastor will see to it that his Sunday-school is organized, or all his schools?

Our black berries are getting ripe. Black tongues are the fashion here now.

Receipts up to June 25.

SNEAD.—Mrs. Lucy Ellen Snead died suddenly at her home on the 4th of September, 1903. Aged about 50 years. She was a valued member of Sneads Grove Church. Her house was the preachers' home. She was always thoughtful and kind. If there were any sick in the community she seemed to be on of the first to know it. If any who needed a special visit from the pastor she knew them, and would always inform her pastor. She was always interested in her church and pastor, and will be sadly missed in her church and community. She left a host of friends to mourn their loss, bu tour loss is her gain. To the son and daughter who survive her, we would say: Follow in her footsteps, follow her as she followed Christ. May a kind Providence guide you to the haven of eternal rest.

CHAS. O. DURANT, P. C.

POWELL.—Miss Anna Lee Powell, born September 4, 1883, died at Wilmington, N. C., May 26, 1904, after a long struggle with typhoid fever.

Her life seems short, but it was one that was unusually full of devotion, faithfulness, and helpfulness. She joined the Methodist Church at the age of thirteen, henceforth her Christianity was not a mere profession but a Christ-like life of devotion to duty. "Faithful unto death" might truthfully be written on her tombstone, for it was her devoted watching and constant service at the bedside of a little sufferer with typhoid fever that so weakened her own body that she could not longer resist the ravages of disease. She often talked of little Evelyn, and was almost glad, it seemed, to go and sleep by her side in beautiful Oakdale cemetery. The flowers bloom around their graves, the birds sing in trees, but Evelyn and Anna clothed in celestial bodies are together living with the risen Christ.

HENDERSON.—Hezekiah Henderson was born October 10, 1844, and died March 16, 1904. He was married to Miss Sallie J. Durham, December 23, 1873. There were seven children born to them, three of whom preceded him to the spirit world. A faithful wife and four children survive him. Brother Henderson was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Brown's Chapel, when quite a young man. He was a faithful and true Christian. For many years an official in the church. Meeting well and faithfully the duties of whatever office he was called to fill.

As a citizen and neighbor he had the esteem and confidence of all who knew him. The cry of the poor touched him, and his hand was always open to them.

He was a friend of education. He gave his children the best our church schools could give them. His donations to our educational institutions was liberal for his means.

His death was sudden but he was ready. We laid his remains to rest in the yard of the church he loved so well. We shall miss him here, but when we get "over yonder," we shall see him again.

May God comfort the bereaved ones. JAS. H. FRIZELLE. P. C.

DuRANT.—Winnie A. DuRant was born in Brunswick County, November 13, 1822, and died Friday morning April 29, 1904, at half past 4 o'clock. She was married to Thomas A. DuRant, November 6, 1844. To this union were born five children, all of whom are devout men and women, and one is now a member of the North Carolian Conference, Rev. C. O. DuRant. She joined the M. E. Church, South, when she was of the age of eleven. Though she began the Christian life so young, yet she never fell from her steadfastness; but amid all the storms of life she leaned upon the "everlasting arms." She was always loyal to her church, and she worshipped at the altars of the M. E. Church for nearly seventy years. Her character was spotless, and is worthy of imitation. She was a model woman. She is one of God's children who has played her part well in the world, and her work is finished, and God has taken his tired child in his own loving arms, and she has fallen on sleep, and is at rest.

Sister DuRant was a good mother. She loved her children; she so loved them that she always set them a good example in her daily walk in life. And the children so loved their mother that they accepted the example she gave them, and adopted as their model life. And today her children are all loved and honored for their piety. The deceased was not only loved by her children, but by all who knew her, and in her death the community has lost one of its best women, the church one of its most loyal members, and the children their best friend—a true Christian mother.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep.
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes."

W. R. ROYALL.

WILSON.—Mary O., wife of Jas. R. Wilson, and daughter of R. S. Vaughan, was born in Warren County, North Carolina, about fifty-five years ago, and died in Durham, N. C., May 27, 1904. She and her husband grew up together in the same neighborhood, attended the same schools, married early in life, and were truly devoted each to the other. Of this union were born nine children, all of whom, with their father, still live. The wife and mother was of such as Solomon wrote: "She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

Sister Wilson was for many years a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, and a faithful Christian. As a mother she trained her children well, and as she became conscious that she must soon leave them she expressed desire to be buried near where they lived, gave them parting

Chronic Sores Eating Ulcers

A Constant Drain Upon the System.

Nothing is a source of so much trouble as an old sore or ulcer, particularly when located upon the lower extremities where the circulation is weak and sluggish. A gangrenous eating ulcer upon the leg is a frightful sight, and as the poison burrows deeper and deeper into the tissues beneath and the sore continues to spread, one can almost see the flesh melting away and feel the strength going out with the sickening discharges. Great running sores and deep offensive ulcers often develop from a simple boil, swollen gland, bruise or pimple, and are a threatening danger always, because while all such sores are not cancerous, a great many are, and this should make you suspicious of all chronic, slow-healing ulcers and sores, particularly if cancer runs in your family. Face sores are common and cause the greatest annoyance because they are so persistent and unsightly and detract so much from one's personal appearance. Middle aged and old people and those whose blood is contaminated and tainted with the germs and poison of malaria or some previous sickness, are the chief sufferers from chronic sores and ulcers. While the blood remains in an unhealthy polluted condition, and the sore will continue to grow and spread in spite of washes and salves, for the sore is the outward sign of some constitutional disorder, a bad condition of the blood and system, which local remedies cannot cure. A blood purifier and tonic is what you need—something to cleanse the blood, quicken the circulation and invigorate the constitution, and S. S. S. is just such a remedy. It counteracts and removes from the blood all the impurities and poisons, and gradually builds up the entire system; and when the blood has been purified the healing process begins and the ulcer or sore is soon entirely gone. S. S. S. contains no mineral or poisonous drugs of any description, but is guaranteed purely vegetable, a blood purifier and tonic combined and a safe and permanent cure for chronic sores and ulcers. If you have a slow-healing sore of any kind, external or internal, write us about it, and our physicians will advise you without charge. Book on "The Blood and its Diseases" free.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 28, 1903.

Some years ago while at work, I fell over a truck and severely injured both of my shins. My blood became poisoned as a result, and the doctor told me I would have running sores for life, and that if they closed up the result would be fatal. Under this discouraging report I left off their treatment and resorted to the use of S. S. S. Its effects were prompt and gratifying. It took only a short while for the medicine to cure up the sores, and I am not dead as the doctor intimated I would be, neither have the sores ever broken out again, and some 12 years have elapsed since what I have described occurred.

Christian counsel, and with steady faith in her own future state expressed the hope that each one would so live as to come to her heavenly home.

About three years ago Brother and Sister Wilson, with their children, removed from their old Warren County home to the city of Durham, and here in Maplewood cemtery was laid to rest the body of that good woman. She had been in declining health for some time, and her death was not a surprise to the now grief-stricken family. She died well, and they know that she lived well, and they have cause to be comforted.

This writer in his boyhood was a neighbor and a schoolmate of the deceased and her husband, and was always their friend; and now after the lapse of years and years, during which he saw them only at long intervals of time, it has come to pass that he was resident in the same city, held the funeral service and buried her. He gladly bears testimony to her worth, unaffected by circumstances. J. T. GIBBS.

Resolutions of Respect.

As members of the Sunday-school Missionary Society of Cedar Grove, we desire to express our love for the memory of our departed brother, Matthew Atwater, and to record our estimate of his virtues; therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of Brother Atwater the community loses a citizen of inestimable worth; our church and missionary society loses a loyal consistent and valuable member.

2. That we deeply sympathise with the bereaved family, and commend them to God, who doeth all things well.

3. That, though conscious of our loss, we bow to the sovereign will of God.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of our society, and sent to the Raleigh Christian Advocate for publication.

Resolutions of respect adopted by Zion W. F. Missionary Society, on the death of Mrs. Sophia J. Taylor.

Resolved 1. That in the death of Mrs. Taylor, we have lost a faithful member of our Society. We the members of the Society do sadly mourn our great loss, realizing that one of our most consecrated and faithful members has been taken from among us.

2. That this, our tribute of love to our sister gone home to heaven, be recorded in the transactions of our Society, and finally, that we mourn her because of our loss, knowing and believing that in the bosom of her God, safe from the sadness and toils of this world, she lives and is glorified for her work for her Father's kingdom here below. We rejoice in her pure life, that she fought the good fight, that she kept the faith, that she chose the better part which cannot be taken from her. We thank God for the faith that Job of old had, that makes us know that her immortal spirit has returned to the God she loved.

MRS. G. H. CANNON,
MRS. E. G. GOODMAN,
MRS. O. A. DuRANT.

Whereas, God, in His all-wise providence, has called one of our members from labor to rest; therefore be it

Resolved by Cedar Grove Sunday-school Missionary Society, That in the death of Miss Callie Neville, the Society has lost a faithful member, the Sunday-school a true pupil, the church one of its brightest young ladies. She was converted while quite young, and gave her hand to the church.

In her sickness she suffered much but was submissive, and left a bright testimony. We feel assured she has gone to that better land where there is no suffering.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy, and pray them look to Him who makes no mistakes. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Society record, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and one to the Advocate for publication.

Lincoln Steffens.

The general public does not realize the attitude the real journalist holds towards his work. A story in illustration is told by Lincoln Steffens, of McClure's Magazine. Recently while gathering material for one of his articles on the misgovernment of cities he chanced to be in the smoking compartment of a train on his way to the particular city then under consideration, with two strangers. These men began to talk of inside political matters in that city and in the course of their conversation revealed many important political secrets. Mr. Steffens overheard all and said nothing. The next morning he introduced himself to one of the men, told him of his purpose and asked him if he had any further information to impart. The politician was completely confounded and rushed to tell his friend of their exposure. Two very anxious politicians awaited the publication of Mr. Steffens' article and no doubt heaved great sighs of relief when they discovered that he had used none of the information thus given him. Confidences are not news.

A THING WORTH KNOWING.

No need of cutting off a woman's breast or a man's cheek or nose in a vain attempt to cure cancer. No need of applying burning plasters to the flesh and torturing those already weak from suffering. Soothing, balmy, aromatic oils give safe, speedy and certain cure. The most horrible forms of cancer of the face, breast, womb, mouth, stomach; large tumors, ugly ulcers, fistula, catarrh, terrible skin diseases, etc., are all successfully treated by the application of various forms of simple oils. Send for a book, mailed free, giving particulars and prices of Oils. Address Dr. D. M. Bye Co., Box 462, Dallas, Texas.

Littleton Female College, an advertisement of which appears elsewhere in this paper, has just closed its 22d Annual Session which has been in every way the most prosperous in the history of the institution. With a Faculty of twenty-two officers and teachers and a well equipped and furnished building, this school is prepared to offer excellent advantages to young ladies seeking a collegiate education. The institution has very recently installed, at a cost of several thousand dollars, a new system of plumbing and water works, including bath and toilet rooms, with hot and cold water on every floor, furnished from a 12,000 gallon tank on a steel tower 75 feet high, with ample pipe entirely around the building, and two-inch hose on every floor within, for use in case of fire. The health record of Littleton College has been a remarkable one. The physical condition of the pupil is looked after with great care; there is seldom a case of serious sickness in the building, and during its entire career of 22 years the school has had only one death among its pupils. There is probably no other school in the South with so large a patronage that has such a record.

VALUABLE PRIZE.

The greatest and most valuable scholarship ever won in the State goes to a Horner boy. J. H. Winston, who was the unanimous choice of the committee on the Cecil Rhodes Scholarship, was prepared at Horner School.

Rev. Len G. Broughton was attacked by the Chief of Police of Albany, Ga., in a barber shop in that city. Mr. Broughton had made some criticisms of the city government and of the Chief of Police in particular.

IT DOESN'T TAKE LONG, IF YOU DON'T WAIT TOO LONG.

A year ago my little girl, three years old, was troubled with enlarged glands of the neck, so enlarged that she could not bend her neck at all, but would have to turn her whole body when necessary. They finally had to be lanced, when they discharged freely. Her whole health was run down, she had indigestion so bad that nothing agreed with her. This produced chronic dysentery, which caused her virtually to lose all her flesh. She was a pitiful looking object and nothing seemed to do her any good. But some one advised me to use Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy, and it cured her.

One bottle lasts a small child some time, and it only took two bottles. She is now the picture of health, and well. F. M. BARBEE.

EPWORTH CHURCH, - RALEIGH, N. C.

REV. J. MARVIN CULBRETH, PASTOR.

HISTORY OF THE DEPARTURE.

REV. J. M. CULBRETH.

The cut on this page represents the result of three years of toil and struggle by a small congregation in the outskirts of Raleigh. Four years ago this little band numbered some fifty-five members. Their cause was considered by many a forlorn hope. The location of the church was represented by some to be the explanation of its weakness. Acting on this suggestion, the only available corner lot in the northern end of the city proper was secured, and in a year's time the purchase price, $600.00, was raised. Not exceeding $150.00 of this amount was contributed by outsiders. A better lot being placed on the market just at this time, the first one was sold at an advantage of $75.00, and the second one secured. Here the enterprise halted. It began to be apparent that a change of location was not the solution to our difficulty. A number of the church membership lost interest in the church, because they saw that situation of the building was going to be changed. During the summer of 1903 a plan was submitted to the Board of Trustees, which proposed to sell the lot recently purchased in the city and invest the proceeds of the sale in improvements upon the old church building. Without an objection, the plan was adopted. In the latter part of October work was begun, with a fund of $735.00 on hand. The building, as shown in the cut, with interior improvements, has cost a little more than $2,000.00. Of the part of this amount not on hand at the beginning, the Epworth congregation had, up to June 26th, subscribed and paid considerably more than $400.00. The membership of Edenton Street Church had helped to the extent of $261.00.

THE CUNINGGIM MEMORIAL SERVICE.

During the month of March, a handsome art glass memorial window was placed in the south end of the auditorium in memory of "Uncle Jess." Cuninggim. A veil was drawn over the window with a view to making the taking away of the veil the occasion of a great rally in behalf of the church. After some difficulties had been overcome, Bishop W. W. Duncan graciously promised to preach a memorial sermon in the church on the 21st of June. On the eve of the date mentioned, he was imperatively summoned to Nashville, Tenn., on official business, and was compelled to disappoint us. The special service was postponed till Sunday morning, June 26th, and Dr. T. N. Ivey was secured to preach the sermon. That morning will long be remembered by those who crowded the new building on that occasion. The altar and pulpit of the auditorium were beautified with palms and other potted plants. The music was inspiring. And Dr. Ivey was at his best. He closed with a reference to "Uncle Jesse," whose life of loyalty and sacrifice had suggested the lofty thoughts of the truly eloquent discourse.

Immediately after the sermon a collection was taken, and $340.00 in cash and gold bond subscriptions was raised without difficulty. At the same hour at Edenton Street Church an offering was made which brought the total contribution of that congregation to within the neighborhood of $300.00. It remains to provide for only $125.00, and the entire cost of the improvements made will have been paid.

PRESENT CONDITION OF THE CHURCH.

During the latter part of April a revival started at Epworth which lasted twenty days. There were nearly forty conversions and renewals together and thirty-five accessions. The membership now numbers 110.

The Sunday-school has made a net gain in membership since January 1st of eighty-five, and has a total enrolment of one hundred and forty-two, with an average attendance of nearly one hundred. The Sunday-school library consists of more than two hundred and thirty select volumes, which have recently been catalogued and placed in a new case. The primary department numbers thirty-five scholars enrolled, and is furnished with other necessary equipment.

The only Junior Epworth League in the Raleigh District is at Epworth Church. A Senior Chapter also has been active a long time, and is accomplishing most excellent results.

With all the burden of rebuilding and reorganization resting upon its shoulders, Epworth has contributed $27.50 to the Orphanage this year and $4.00 to the Sunday-school Board for needy Sunday-schools. The prospects for a full financial report at Conference are good.

In all the work, the burden of our song is: "The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad."

STREAKS IN THE EAST.

As an evidence of the fact that the church paper is considered a necessary part of a church official's equipment, the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church made the following suggestion in their pastoral address to the General Conference at Los Angeles:

"The Quarterly Conference shall not be at liberty to elect or approve for membership therein any steward, class leader, trustee, Sunday-school superintendent, or Epworth League president who is a subscriber to some one of our weekly church papers."

It is safe to say that while no such recommendation has come officially from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the principle on which the recommendation was based at Los Angeles is just as strong and vital among us.

That question in the Discipline relating to the circulation of the church paper, and asked at each Quarterly Conference was the result of the memorial which came from the Raleigh Christian Advocate through the Annual Conference. There were only a few editors at Dallas who seemed to give it any attention. They knew not the "day of their merciful visitation." But the question became a part of the Discipline and there is not a church paper in the Connection which has not been benefitted by it.

The church paper is at last coming into its own. When it shall be considered a vital agency of the church, its day of grief will have passed.

Contributions

On Uniformity of Worship.

REV. E. A. WRIGHT.

Not long since, I saw published in at least two of the religious papers of the South, viz: "The Alabama" and "The Raleigh Christian Advocates," the Order of Worship, adopted by the joint committee appointed by the General Conferences of the Northern and Southern branches of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and approved by some of the Bishops of the two churches, to be used, hereafter, in all public worship of these two great churches, throughout their entire borders. This form of worship is given to the churches, if I am rightly informed, as a substitute for that which was adopted years ago—perhaps one hundred years ago, as a much desired improvement of the present form of worship, as laid down in the Discipline, on page 95, chapter 6, "The means of grace," setcion 1 of "Public Worship," which reads as follows: Question 1. What directions are given for uniformity of worship?

217 answer 1: The morning service shall be conducted in the following order:

(1) Singing—the congregation standing.
(2) Prayer—the congregation kneeling.
(3) Reading a lesson out of the Old Testament, and another out of the New.
(4) Singing—the congregation sitting.
(5) Preaching.
(6) Singing—the congregation standing.
(7) Prayer—the congregation kneeling.
(8) Benediction.

218 Answer 2.

The afternoon and evening service shall be the same as the morning, except that one of the lessons, or both, may be omitted, at the discretion of the minister.

Now, the above uniformity of worship, simple and plain, was adopted by our fathers in the church away back in the dim past, and has been observed for years on years, by the people known as Methodists, in all their churches—in crowded cities and out in the rural districts, and has become familiar to all our people, old and young, male and female, and, not only this, but has, also, been delighted in by our Zion all along through these multiplied years—has proved a "means of grace" to the saints of God, and, under its Divine unction, so carried out by Holy Ghost preachers, many a soul has been converted, brought out of nature's darkness into the light and liberty of new born sons of light, and I, for one, see no necessity in making a change. Besides the "new Uniformity of Worship" is far more ornate and sublime perhaps than the old, yet we have been often told by holy men of God that the more we cultivate them, the more we unify the spirituality of the worshippers. Under the "New Uniformity," the congregation is required to repeat, after the pastor, the Apostle's Creed, sing with the choir, the "Te Deum," and read, at the morning service, a Psalm, alternately, with pastor; that is to say, the pastor reads one verse, and the congregation unitedly the next verse, and thus on through a whole, or a part of a Psalm. All these things, I suspect, will have a tendency to kill out the spirituality of the worship. And, in addition to all this, the "New Uniformity" throws our church too near back to the Ritualism of the Church of England, or the Protestant Episcopal Church of America. The further we can steer our bark from the "Mother Church," from which we separated, under the Reformation of the Wesley's and the Whitefield's the better it will be for our beloved Methodism. Let's try to keep the form of worship as pure and simple as possible. The time has not come, and I trust never will, when we, as Methodists, must imitate the Protestant Episcopal Church in form of worship. The "old Uniformity" of worship, if carried out rigorously by our pastors, is good enough for me. Under the unctious preaching of our old-time preachers—and their prayers, indited by the Holy Ghost, and the soul-inspiring songs of God's redeemed ones, in the good old times of the past, as carried on under the old and present form of worship, many a soul has been woed from sin to the path of righteousness, and many a saint has been made to raise a shout of victory in the camp of Israel.

One thing required by the "New Order," I like very much, and that is, it requires all members when they have entered the church, and taken their seats, to kneel, and send up a silent prayer to the Throne, and also requires all to kneel during public prayers, "facing the preacher." This is requiring the members to come back to the customs of our fathers and mothers, to a time within the memory of your scribe—during his short sojourn in this "vale of tears"—not extending further back than fifty years, into the dim vista of the past. In those days, all the people kneeled, but time is now they kneel no more, (except a few "faithful ones")—the people, as we know, just merely bend forward and recline their heads upon the back of the benches in front. They are either too stiff-kneed to bend the joints thereof, or else their pride is so great as to forbid their getting down upon their knees. These things should not be so—they should show forth their reverence for God, by humbly kneeling before His Holy presence when in the sanctuary they meet to send up their worship to His Holiness. This formal way of just bending the neck in prayer, can be corrected by the preacher in a very short time, if he will only take the pains to politely request the people to kneel, when called to prayer. This is my custom out in the country, when I preach, and generally the people comply with my request, and devoutly kneel. Let's try to make the "Old Uniformity" more uniform all over our land, and all will work well; and let's stand by the old form of worship and enforce it, at all times, and thus keep as far away from the Protestant Episcopal Church and the Northern Methodist Church, as possible, bearing in mind that an ornate, etheeal, grand and beautiful form or worship, mixed with too much ritualism, will kill out spirituality. Let us "stand and see, and enquire for the good old paths, and walk therein." Like good old time religion, the "Old Order," as "a means of grace," is good enough for me.

Birmingham, Ala., June 25, 1904.

A Plea for the Pulpit.

JULIAN L. RUMLEY.

This is a moving age. The terms "strenuous life," "bring things to pass," are being emphasized in all walks and in all departments of life as never before. The life and work of the preacher are being touched at all points by this spirit of the age and he is called on to display in his make-up a combination of elements equal to those possessed by many in other walks of life. But, just as a railroad train is required to have brakes to check it in its rapid speed in cases of emergency, even so, this "strenuous" spirit may need to put on brakes lest it carry us too fast if not too far.

The preacher of the gospel is called on to be exercised by this "strenuous" spirit in all departments of his work; but, it may be well to enquire upon what should he put the most emphasis?

While the labors of the preacher are multiform and he is called on to be a man of affairs, he at the same time is not to forget the first duty he owes is to his pulpit; there he is to be a prince of power and his other labors should not cause him to desist from his rule of preparing himself for his ministrations to the people.

In this rapid age is there not danger of the preacher forgetting that the most important aim of his life is to unfold the Scriptures in their power and beauty to the people, so that he may win them to a better life? Is not the spirit that is dominating this materialistic age invading the sacred precincts of the pulpit making the preaching of the Word secondary to other things?

The time and thought of the preacher in many places are largely taken up in the building of new churches or in the improvement of those already built, and in securing funds for the many benevolent enterprises of the church; then, he is also to show a wonderful tact in the organization of various societies for church work, the efforts of many of these being directed towards success along financial lines. Surely, all work of this kind is important; but, is it fair that he be rated according to his ability to do these things alone, while his ability to honestly, fearlessly and forcefully expound the Word of God is seldom given equal prominence along with these other things?

If the preaching of the Word be not the most important part of the preacher's work, why not establish departments in connection with our theological schools to train the student in the most practical plans of erecting church buildings and in the use of clever schemes of ecclesiastical financiering? Why allow him to give his best thought in obtaining a knowledge of the Scriptures so that he may adapt its teachings to the needs of the people and then go forth to his work to discover later on that he is to be judged as to his fitness for his calling more by his ability to do other things than by his ability to do that which he thought to be the most important part of his life's work?

It seems that the world's present standard of judging men in the social, political and financial walks of life, is the ability to set up a claim in these several spheres of life, and to maintain that claim at all hazards. Men go forth into the world flaunting their claim before the eyes of people and without challenge it is accepted. The rightful foundation of that claim is not looked into since the "strenuous" spirit of the age does not allow the time to enquire carefully into such. The spirit of the "hustler" is the thing of the day; modesty and conservatism are put down at a discount, while intelligence, piety and conscientious impulses in man are worth little, if anything, at all, in the eyes of the world. The slogan is, "by any means and by all means bring things to pass, for on account of your ability to do this the superficial judgment of the world will admit your claim, and pass upon your worth accordingly!" Is there not danger of this false standard of the world being set up in the church, and of its affecting the preacher in his plans and the thoughts for the future? The Apostle John delivers the following exhortation, which may be well heeded in our day: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world."

Rowland Charge.

Our new church at Rowland is complete outside, including paint. We think it is a right pretty church. Hope to worship in it this year. We are paaying as we go. The house will cost about two thousand dollars.

At Centenary we have built a vestibule this year, and the house is now being painted. Good for that class.

Our Children's Day exercises at each of our schools were good. The aggregate collection was $18.00.

Rev. Jesse R. Graddy, al ocal Elder, died at his home, June 5, 1904. He was a good man.

The delegates from this circuit—Bros. J. R. Burns, H. M. John, W. F. Adams, and J. W. Crawford—are urged to attend the District Conference at Gibson July 20 and 24, 1904.

In His service,

J. W. BRADLEY, P. C.

June 17, 1904.

"Thou loving God, send unto me
Thy Holy Spirit, watch to keep
Upon the threshold of my heart,
That naught impure within may creep;
And grant unto my tired mind
The peace of holiness, that strife
And worldliness and sin may find
No door unguarded all my life. Amen."

Some Thoughts on Education.

J. C. HORNER.

North Carolina is making rapid progress in education and wealth. In many sections every child will receive a liberal education. Those who are less fortunate will find themselves in a missionary plight when they find themselves at the bottom of our civilization.

It is also true that those who receive the highest education willb e at the top of the ladder. Many of our successful and wealthy citizens are making terrible blunders in the education of their children. The law of nature is action and reaction. As communities change from temperance to license and from license back to temperance, so extremes in other matters change back and forth. The wealthy citizen of to-day laid his treasures by toil and self-denial. It was a hard life, but the grinding developed him into a man. With love for his children, he brings them up in ease and self-indulgence. He sends them to the finely equipped school, where all the modern improvements are found and every facility for learning is pretended. The old adage, there is no royal road to learning, is forgotten. Each boy is allowed to select his own course of study, and without experience he selects the one that requires the least labor. Everything must be done that will enable him to learn with least labor to himself. Is it a wonder that such a boy, when he enters college or the struggle of life, is undeveloped and soft? Yes, the boys from the most wealthy families do not generally take the front in the busy world. It is true that blood will tell, and in spite of the difficulties of a misguided education, many get down to work and dig their way to success. Thus the man of toil succeeds, and raises children of ease and extravagance who are failures.

Our successful men as a rule come from those families where the children secure an education under difficulties. The boy that overcomes obstacles and forges his way by personal effort is an overmatch for the soft fellow reared in luxury, or the fellow who in false pride spends his father's hard-earned dollars in trying to live like the boy of wealth. Extravagance is found everywhere. If the demand was only for better teachers and for better and more nutritious food, no objection could be raised. But the demands is for more luxury, more ease, more latitude, and less work. If a boy has some poorly developed faculty, and consequently has difficulty in learning certain branches, the trouble must be met not by grinding but by shirking, and the difficult studies must be discontinued. The school, that says no, generally loses the boy. As the twig is bent, so grows the tree. Every careful planter prunes and corrects a one-sided tree. But when it comes to his boy, the indulgent parent lets his boy follow his bent and leave off what he has difficulty with, and does not see that his child is growing up lop-sided in his mental development. Our schools must yield and supply what is demanded. Examine the catalogues of our most largely patronized institutions, and you will find the few taking the curriculum which made scholars in the past, and the many taking the new courses and the so-called special course, provided for the fellows who want only to go to college and nothing more. They remind me of the farm negro who said that he had been to college—he blacked shoes there. Yes, today, multitudes are going to college, but not many are becoming scholars. They are learning ease and extravagance. They are attending banquets, they are smoking and drinking.

Your boy must have money to keep pace with the other fellows. You don't want your boy to be stingy. He must join the fraternity that has the best social class in it. In theory this sounds well. But your boy is learning to gratify every want and wants more. The mortal has never lived who gratified every want and did not want more. Read Rasselas if you have forgotten that story and its sequel. Again the law of nature must assert itself and reaction follow. Your boy spends the money you accumulated and his children in turn must toil and labor and rise to the top in their old age. And so the mill grinds on. Only a few well-balanced families escape such vicissitudes.

Our legislators demand of our State institutions numbers in proportion to the dollars appropriated, and by the law of political economy the demands creates the supply—the institutions are filled with pupils whether prepared or unprepared to enter; and overloaded with material that cannot be digested, the whole body suffers. When the demand comes for better scholarship our institutions will supply it. But the question of the hour is, how are we going to create this demand. The masses are now being educated, indeed they are about to skip high schools and colleges and go to the university. To be a leader in your community, you must then secure a better scholarship than the masses. You must put aside ease and extravagance and grind and grub, if you attain learning. It is harder to-day to do this than ever before in our history, because it is hard to find a place where one can grind and grub, free from the allurements of ease and extravagance. Then, too, endowed institutions and gifts of the wealthy are making paupers of the masses. Education is now in reach of all at a small cost. Free tuition and cheap board is offered to nearly everyone, rich and poor. The dollars of the boys are spent in learning extravagance. When tuition costs the boy nothing, the opportunities offered by it have no value to him.

The amount of improvement a boy gets is directly in proportion to the amount of mental work he does. Every facility provided to relieve him from work does its part in lessening his improvement. Every dollar spent in extravagance is more than wasted. It develops new wants, it furnishes diversion, it preverts the tastes. This evil of extravagance is a difficult one to overcome. I once heard a talented and very devout preacher say that he sent three-fourths of his salary to his son at college, and supported his family on the other fourth. That college son turned out a failure and the other son never went to college, but has been more successful than his brother. Both went to school to me and the college boy was far more talented.

What is the lesson to be learned? Give your son a chance for an education, but restrain his extravagance. Let him know that it costs you something, and that he must not waste his opportunities; that he must meet and overcome difficulties, not shirk them; that he should seek scholarship and not simply to go to college; that the difficult curriculum develops the mind, and the course which requires little work gives but little improvement; that his weak facilities should not lie idle and waste away. Urge your son to study and apply himself with zeal. If he fails to do this, support the teacher in his efforts to require it. With boys the most popular courses of study and as for the most popular schools are those that require little study, and make poor scholars. Systematic study, systematic exercise and a nutritious diet are as essential for your son as a well-balanced ration is for your cow. You experiment and consult scientific authorities for the development of your cow; why not use the same care in selecting the best curriculum for the development of your son's mind? The average parent leaves the choice to his darling boy who is without experience, foresight, or wisdom, or conscientious concern.

Statement of Rev. A. B. Crumpler Corrected.

The following statement published by Rev. A. B. Crumpler in his Preface to the Discipline of the Holiness Church, does very great injustice to the Methodist Church.

He says: "In October, 1899, I was tried under the charge of immorality, for preaching the glorious doctrines of Methodism, when asked not to do so by a Methodist preacher."

This statement charges the Methodist Church with doing the singular thing of regarding the preaching of her doctrines as an immorality, and of endeavoring to punish one of her members for preaching them. No church would stultify itself by such a procedure. The statement of Mr. Crumpler is wholly incorrect as to the cause of his trial.

The facts show that he was not asked not to preach the doctrines of Methodism, and that he was tried for a wilful violation of the discipline of his church, after repeated and legal efforts were made to induce him not to violate it.

The facts are these: Mr. Crumpler proposed to hold a series of services in the bounds of the pastoral charge of Rev. G. W. Starling, who was then on Cokesberry Circuit. Mr. Starling did not think it wise, or proper, to hold the meetings at the time and place indicated, and wrote Mr. Crumpler a letter courteously requesting him not to hold the meetings, and referred him to paragraph 301 of our Discipline, which forbids any preacher or layman holding a meeting in the bounds of a charge, when requested by the pastor of the charge not to do so.

Mr. Crumpler held the services, in the face of this request of Mr. Starling, and despite of the efforts of his own pastor, and three of his brethren who waited on him according to the order of our Discipline, and endeavored to persuade him to conform to the law of his church.

It was for this offense against the Discipline that he was tried, and for that alone.

The Discipline provides (par. 295), that in the case of "improper tempers, words, or actions, private reproof shall be given by preacher or leader, and if there be no acknowledgment of the fault or promise of amendment, the preacher must take with him two or three faithful friends who shall labor with him, and if he will not hear them or give sign of amendment, he must be dealt with as in case of immorality."

These steps were taken with Mr. Crumpler. He paid no proper heed to them, and he was tried for immorality according to the law of the church.

The specifications was the violation of the Discipline (par. 301). Mr. Crumpler had solemnly vowed at the altar of the Methodist Church to "be subject to the Discipline of the church," and this vow he deliberately and wilfully violated, in opposition to the efforts of his pastor and brethren to induce him to keep his vow.

This constituted the immorality of his actions, and for this, and for this alone, he was tried.

There is not a word in Mr. Starling's letter to him about what doctrines he should preach, nor is there any mention of the doctrines preached, in the "bill of charges and specifications."

I wrote him a private, personal letter, calling his attention to the inaccuracy of his statement, and the serious wrong done the Church by it, with a request that he correct it. I did this because I thought it fair to him to give him a chance to put himself right, and save himself from the embarrassment of a public correction of it by myself. I cannot afford to let my church rest under such a charge, knowing it to be incorrect.

He published my private letter in his paper, the "Holiness Advocate," gave some facts relating to the trial, and concludes by saying: "The statement in the Holiness Discipline does accord with the facts," thus reiterating the statement that he had made. I have no recourse left me but to thus publicly vindicate our church from the misrepresentation involved in Mr. Crumpler's statement.

I regret that he allowed himself to print so erroneous a charge against the Methodist Church, and I regret much more that he continues to hold to his statement when his attention has been called to it, and when there is nothing in all the case that justifies it.

"Peace Upon Earth."

The peace of God which passeth thought,
The peace of Christ, which changeth not.

Peace flowing on without decrease,
From Him, who is our joy and peace,
Who by His reconciling blood,
Hath made the sinner's peace with God.

Peace through the night, and through the day;
Peace through the windings of our way;
In pain and toil, and weariness;
To deep and everlasting peace.

Oh! King of Peace, this peace bestow,
Upon thy creature here below;
Oh! God of Peace, Thy peace impart;
To mine, and every trombled heart.

The Field

Roper.

Dear Advocate:—The first Sunday in June was a red-letter day with our people in Roper. We had Children's Day services. It was an occasion of deep interest to young and old. Our loyal layman, L. G. Roper, Treasurer of the Sunday-school Board of our Conference, is also superintendent of two Sunday-schools, each of which is worthy of special mention. He is indeed a Sunday-school worker, a great lover of children. Supported by his wife, a most cheerful and efficient helper and a valuable leader among the young people, every one felt that a very profitable and enjoyable hour awaited us. The house was filled to overflowing. The select songs and other exercises were beautiful and impressive. It was well done! The contribution was $9.50.

The pastor and his family are now housed in a neat and comfortably furnished parsonage. Every room from front to rear is bright and attractive. This is the work mainly of the ladies of our Woman's Home Mission Society. It is their judgment, energy, and good taste to which we are indebted. They were aided in a liberal and substantial way by our Junior League, Senior League and individuals. The Trustees had made some valuable improvements on the building.

This is a goodly heritage. Embracing the third Sunday in July, we expect to hold a revival meeting. Brother Glenn is to be with us. We are looking for a time of refreshing. Pray for us.

W. F. CRAVEN.

Kennekeet Camp-Meeting.

Seeing in the Advocate that a camp-meeting was to be at held Kennekeet from June 21 to 28, I determined to take a ride on the water team.

I left Beaufort June 21st, and arrived at Ocracoke before night the same day. All the country between Beaufort and Ocracoke is on the up-grade. Oysters, clams and fish abound, and the fishermen now sell everything at their door the day the catch is made. The steam launches from Morehead City call daily with the cash. It looks like another country.

At Ocracoke I was met by the pastor, Rev. R. R. Grant, who took me at once to the parsonage to show me his new baby. She is a fine girl three months old just like the sort that Hyde County produces. Sister Grant, who was a Miss Carter from Hyde County, was well and happy. She makes an ideal Methodist preacher's wife. Religion, with her, is first of all. Her people have been devout, praying Methodists for more than a hundred years and will always remain so.

Presiding Elder Underwood was in charge of the camp-meeting. He knows how to run a meeting, and is quite a revivalist. Sometimes we hear it said: 'He's a lovely pastor and good preacher, but he is not a revivalist." This ought not to be said of any Methodist preacher, and would not if we all would make soul-saving the first concern. Underwood seems to be in love with his preachers and they in love with him.

Rev. Andrew Price, in charge of Kennekeet Circuit, is a local preacher who can preach.

Kennekeet is his old home. He is one of them and has enough horse sense to run the whole inland."

Other denominations seeking members on Price's work soon realize that they have struck a regular Hatteras gale and retreat.

On Tuesday afternoon, shortly after my arrival, the Manteo mail boat came in and brought Revs. Parker, Church, and Towe, and then the battle began. Parker is a strong preacher. Church is like a hundred horse saw mill, with a new saw just filed, and Towe is as gentle and sweet as my first girl was forty years ago. For two or three days it looked defeat, but on Friday night, we had a large company at the altar for prayers and thirty-three professed and gave their names for membership.

I left Saturday morning, but feel sure that Saturday and Sunday were days of many conversions.

This letter is getting too long but I don't want to close without saying something. A few of the good sisters engaged in shouting on Friday night. There was a day when the propriety of shouting was not questioned among Methodist preachers, but now we hear of no little objection, especially from our so-called leaders. They say that "they want things done decently and in order." So does the devil. "Opposed to demonstrations." So is the devil. But "some people who shout are—not good." Yes, and some who preach are not good. Shall we therefore stop preaching?

A country mother works hard to educate her boy to preach and after he gets back from the cemetary, as Sam Jones calls it, her heart is pained to hear him ridicule his ancestors for shouting forjoy. Brother, I would not do that; I'd be decent if I had back-slidden.

Young preachers of to-day shout at the base-ball, but condemn shouting at a Methodist meeting. Let us preach and practice the whole Bible.

Shouting is as much enjoined as praying.

St. John said that he heard an hundred and forty-four thousand shouting the praises of God in heaven.

If we all get to heaven we will need the people of the banks to teach us how to shout. "Shout for joy all ye who are upright in heart."

Hope Mills.

Dear Brethren:—"Best of all is, God is with us." I report an increase this year to date of one hundred—eighty-two on profession, eighteen by certificate. Have held three revivals. I mean revivals—I mean revivals, not simply meetings. Have three more to hold and expect great results at all of them. Hope Mills charge is on the move. I have had great help from Bros. Jones and Mercer and young Bro. Pattishall, an exhorter, and many laymen. The church has held up our hands. This charge contains many of the savory salt kind.

I expect to go to District Conference at Jonesboro with all collections secured. We will soon erect a nice new parsonage of six rooms and two new churches. To God be all the glory. Pray for us.

Sincerely for Christ,

E. R. WELCH.

An Appeal.

Bro. Z. T. Harrison, a good man and a faithful minister of Christ, died leaving a wife and six small children. They have no home. A lot has been given them in a desirable community where there is a good school. We can build them a home with about five hundred dollars. This will practically insure the education of these children of the dead minister. I ask a hundred brethren who are well and strong, and are reasonably prosperous, and are spared to their families, to send me five dollars each to build a home for this mother and her children.

Use What You Have.

"What is in thine hand, Abel?"

"Nothing but one ewe lamb, O God, taken from the flock. I purpose offering it to thee, a willing sacrifice."

And so he did. And the sweet smell of the burning has been filling the air ever since, and constantly going up to God as a perpetual sacrifice of praise.

"What is it thou hast in thine hand, Moses?"

"Nothing but a staff, O God, with which I tend my flock."

"Take it and use it for Me."

And he did; and with it he wrought more wondrous things than Egypt and her proud king had seen before.

"Mary, what is it that thou hast in thine hand?"

"Nothing but a pot of sweet-smelling ointment, O God, wherewith I would anoint thine only One called Jesus."

And so she did; and not only did the perfume fill all the house in which they were, but the Bible reading world has been fragrant with the memory of this blessed act of love, which has ever since been spoken of "for a memorial of her."

"Poor woman, what is it that thou hast in thine hand?"

"Only two mites, Lord. It is very little; but then it is all I have, and I would put it into thy treasury."

And so she did; and the story of her generous giving ever since wrought like a charm, prompting others to give to the Lord.

"What is it that thou hast in thine hand, Dorcas?"

"Only a needle, Lord."

"Take it and use it for me."

And so she did; and not only were the suffering poor of Joppa warmly clad, but, inspired by her loving life, "Dorcas Societies" even now continue their benign mission to the poor throughout the earth.—Christian Budget.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl eleven years old. My papa takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the little folks letters. This is my first letter to the Advocate, and I wish to surprise papa and mama, if it escapes the waste-basket. From

Your little friend,
FLORENCE HUDNELL.

Elm City, N. C., June 22, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I will be one to raise one dollar for the orphans by Christmas, as suggested by Lillian Burrus. I am going to place my bank on mama's mantle and cut the head lines from Uncle Jenkins column to paste on it as a gentle hint to others. Who will join the Christmas band?

Yours,
MARIE BAILEY.

Conway, N. C., June 18, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a boy seventeen years old. My papa takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the little boys' and girls' letters. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. My Sunday-school teacher is Mr. J. W. Lassiter, and our pastor is Rev. W. C. Merritt, and we like him very much, and this is his last year with us, and we hate to see him leave. I will close by answering Lucy Cunninggim Herring's question: Daniel was put in the lions den.

Neuse, N. C., June 20, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I will write you a few lines. I am a little girl thirteen years of age. Father takes the paper, and I certainly do enjoy reading the girls' and boys' columns. This is my first letter to the Advocate. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. I will answer Lee J. Craven's question: There is something said about boys and girls in Zachariah, the eighth chapter and fifth verse. Now I will ask one: Who was Ezekiel?

Now, I will close with best wishes to the Advocate.

Yours truly,
SUSIE RICHARDSON.

Neuse, N. C., June 19, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As I never have written, I thought I would try to write. My papa takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the little girls' and boys' letters very much. My father and mother are both living. I have one sister and five brothers. Our pastor is Rev. J. W. Rood. We all like him very much. This is his first year.

I will answer Alice McFarland's question: Esther is the book which does not mention God's name, if I am not mistaken. I will ask one: When a man does "that which is right in his own eyes" what is he sure to do?

As this is my first letter, I will close, hoping to see my letter in print. I am

Dear Advocate:—We are two little sisters, aged eight and ten years. We go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Our superintendent is Mr. C. Cameron. He is a good man, and all the children love him. Our secretary is Mr. Bruce Cameron, and our teachers are Miss Mary Patterson and Miss Rachel Cameran. We like them both.

Our father and mother are both living. They belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Rev. G. A. Ogdeshy is our pastor. We love him very much.

We will answer Kate Watkins' quethion: Jesus was buried by his disciples.

Whose rod budded and bloomed, and what kind of fruit did it bear?

We hope that this will escape the waste-basket. Love to the orphans and Dr. Ivey.

Your friends,
MABEL and OSSIE EDWARDS.

Rowland, N. C., June 20, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—Here I come for the first time to let you hear from me, and if I escape the waste-basket, I may come again. I am twelve years old. I help my mamma milk the cows. I have a pet calf; also the sweetest little sister in the world. She is four years old to-day. I have a little pony to drive, so I can take her and my brother to Sunday-school. My teacher is Miss Minnie Townsend, and our superintendent is Uncle William Thompson. Our pastor is Rev. J. W. Bradley, and we all like him very much.

We are building our new church at Rowland, and we will be glad when it is finished.

I will answer Lucy Herring's question: It was Daniel who was cast in the lion's den.

Now, I will close by asking one: Where and what is the shortest verse in the Bible?

With best wishes to the orphans, I am,

Your little friend,
HAYWOOD GRAHAM.

Neuse, N. C., June 19, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl fourteen years of age. We do not take the Advocate, but I read our nearest neighbor's paper, Mr. Albert Richardson.

I am a little Baptist girl. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. Our pastor is Dr. W. R. Cullom. We like him very much. This makes his sixth year with us. My Sunday-school teacher is Miss Nellie Hunter. We all love her; she is a good teacher.

I go to every-day school also. We have a school here at home. Our last teacher was Miss Lillie Smith, from Maxton. She was a good teacher.

I will answer Etha Lupton's question: King Darius had Daniel put in the lion's den.

I will ask some questions: What was the name of the son that God gave Adam in the place of Abel whom Cain slew?

How many fathers and sons—one after another—came between Adam and Noah?

I will close, with best wishes for the orphans.

Your little unknown friend,
MARY ESTELLE EDWARDS.

Important.

The Corresponding Secretaries of the various Auxiliaries, and the Lady Managers of the Bright Jewel Bands and of the Golden Links, are urged to let us hear from their organizations. This interchange of ideas will be helpful to all of us. Especially are we anxious to publish reports from new organizations, yet would not hear less from those already established. Will not the officers in charge send in these reports?

A Timely Suggestion.

I see in the Advocate that Mrs. Hargrove will be in Raleigh July 14. I hope many of the ladies on this District will take advantage of the opportunity and hear her while she is here. I am sorry to announce that some of the Auxiliaries and also Bright Jewel Bands did not send in reports this quarter. I hope it will not occur again.

Yours truly,
MRS. R. H. WHITAKER,
District Secretary.

Mrs. Whitaker's suggestion in regard to Mrs. Hargrove is a good one. It is hoped that all the Districts which she visits will come out in force to hear her. She will speak at Rockingham, July 10th; Fayetteville, July 11th; Wilmington, July 12th; New Bern, July 13th; Raleigh, July 14th; Durham, July 15th.

Additional Notes from the Board.

We print from Mrs. Swindell's recent circular letter the following notes in addition to those already published in this column:

The Juvenile Leaflets were abolished by the Board—since their cost would supply 20,000 copies of the Little Worker gratuitously.

Any one wishing back numbers of the Little Worker for free distribution, can have them by sending postage for the same.

The Missionary Map of the World will be loaned to any Society which will pay postage or express charges on it. Apply to Mrs. S. C. Trueheart, Nashville, Tenn., for the map.

The Life and Letters of Miss Laura Haygood can be bought for $1.50.

Total increase in membership this year is 3,000. A form of installation for Auxiliary officers is to be prepared.

Present specials may be continued as long as desired without exacting correspondence from those in charge of them.

The General Secretary of the Woman's Board reported: The force now employed in the foreign field is as follows: Missionaries, 64; foreign and native assistant teachers, 133; boarding schools, 23; day schools, 52; pupils and women under instruction about 5,000. There are six kindergartens, 2 hospitals, 3 Bible schools, 121 Bible women; 308 scholarships.

The Woman's Mission Advocate, including the salary of its editor and all the expenses of the office is self-supporting. It has a circulation of 15,000 with 12,912 paying subscribers. The organ of the Young People and Juveniles, the Little Worker, is not yet paying for itself, but has a circulation of 9,000.

Our Missionaries Set Sail.

On July 5th Rev. W. B. Lee, Miss Mary Pescud, with several other returning missionaries and one new missionary, Miss Parker, from New Orleans, set sail from New York for Brazil on the steamship Byron.

Brother Lee to Juiz de Fora, where he will continue the work at Granberry, of which he so graphically told us while here.

Miss Pescud goes to Piracicaba, where she will no doubt do much to continue the Christian influence which is a part of that school.

Piracicaba.

Perhaps the most satisfactory mission of our Board is the oldest. The Christian influence which has gone from this school cannot be estimated. Numbers who have been trained within the walls of the institution and felt the life of a Christian home, where the worship of the Virgin Mary has no place have gone out better equipped for God's service among their fellows. Twenty-sixth Annual Report.

Miss Stradley, the principal, writes of Piracicaba: "The spiritual condition of the school is excellent. Not only is a great force at work building character, but several have had the courage to step out boldly on the Lord's side. One of the greatest recommendations to the evangelical work here is the girls who have gone out from us and are letting their light shine in the different places where they are engaged in teaching. We are sure that thousands of hearts daily intercede at a throne of mercy in our behalf, and we believe our Father will respond to those petitions."

A VERY CLOSE CALL.

"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters, and after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists. Price 50 cents.

My Experience in a Chinese Mission.

EARLY IMPRESSIONS.

In childhood I was taught by my parents and other missionary workers the duty of sending the gospel to the heathen. As I grew older and could myself read of the teeming millions groping in darkness, with so few to tell them of our Savior, I became more interested. But never did I really see the great need of sending, and long to help send, the Bread of Life, as I have since teaching for two years in the Chinese Mission of Jacksonville, Fla.

DIFFICULTIES.

When given a youth eighteen years old, who had been in America only four months, and did not know a letter in our language, I realized my inability. I started with the alphabet, not putting any trust in self, but remembering that sweet promise, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." As the days went by and he could understand English a little, I began, as all the teachers do, to tell him of our Jesus, who for us gave His life on the cross—and not only for us of America, but for all the human race. The inquiring look on his face, his desire to know more of the Jesus who is no respecter of persons, his questions in broken English—"Does Jesus love Chinamen? Does Jesus love me?"—made my heart melt, for I did not know the Chinese language sufficiently, nor he the English, to fully comprehend each other. We went on trying our best to teach God's Word and our language, praying continually that the Holy Spirit might interpret, and knowing that Christ Himself promised that His Word should not return unto Him void.

INTELLIGENT AND APPRECIATIVE.

The Chinese are very apt, the younger ones much interested in their studies, and I know of no people more appreciative. On Sunday afternoon Sunday-school was held at the Mission rooms; several of the men would lead in prayer, and nearly all could join us in the Lord's Prayer, while the hymns in Chinese and English delighted them. The youth I taught could recite the Lord's Prayer, the Apostles' Creed, and twenty verses of Scripture, and, also, write well, in eighteen months. His rapid progress was a real pleasure, but I rejoiced most when he told me he "believed in Jesus the Son of God and loved Him." Letters from him since contain these words: "I thank you for telling me about Jesus in Heaven. I love Him and will try the best I know to serve Him; I not worship other Gods and will try to read His Book. Pray for me and my cousin."

MISSIONARY SPIRIT.

The boys show the real missionary spirit in their efforts to get others to come to the Mission. One young man returned home with the determination to teach his people about the Savior he had learned to love in America. Another is in school studying to become a preacher, the Mission helping to pay his expenses.

LIBERALITY.

The Chinese were very liberal, several never putting less than fifty cents into the Sunday-school collection, and sometimes I saw dollar bills go in. Shang Hong asked "What American send money to China for?" Upon being told, he handed two dollars, saying: "Use this to send gospel of your Jesus to my people; our gods no see, no hear, no love us."

IDOL WORSHIPPERS.

Some of the older men in Jacksonville brought their idols with them; these we worked with faithfully and prayerfully, but could not get them to come to our Mission.

AMERICAN EXAMPLE.

These poor Chinese are led into much sin by people of our so-called Christian nation. They call us "Jesus people," and look on us all as His followers. They see our men and boys go into bar-rooms and gambling places, and engaged in all sorts of wickedness, and often follow, ignorant of God's law.

In many cities these lonely people are neglected by us, God's children; they are at our very doors, yet we fail to point them to the true God.

OUR OPPORTUNITY.

They are timid among strangers, but when they find we are their friends, they become trustful and appreciative. We should use these opportunities that God has given us. There is no call for separation from loved ones, but just a willingness to work for our precious Savior at home.

BEAUFORT AND THE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Beaufort is one of the choice towns of Eastern North Carolina. It has been a town ever since the beginning of century before last. It got its name from His Excellency the Most Noble Henry, Duke of Beaufort. For a long decade Beaufort has lived on the hope of some day actualizing the glorious possibilities wrapped up in her natural advantages. Her citizens cannot understand why, with her inlet and strategic position, she has not become a great seaport. It is the same old story. Towns further inland got the start. The people of Beaufort are still feeding on her century-old hope. The projected line of railway touching the Pamlico River at Adams' Creek and the Inland Waterway which Congressman Small is working for, give Beaufort reason to believe that at some early day she may come into her own.

The population of Beaufort is about 2,500. It embraces a fine type of citizenship. The commercial pulse as not marked by any lusty strength. cial pulse is not marked by any lusty strength. There is so far but little manufacturing done. A large oyster canning establishment is in operation. Beaufort inspires in the public mind the dolce far niente idea rather than the classic or the commercial. The visitor carries away with him the picture of a quiet old town with wide white streets shaded by trees which are continually whipped into music by the wind which comes from away over yonder where the "white-caps" tumble and toss. The houses lining the waterfront have broad two- story porches where the luxurious hammocks and rocking chairs invite the tired one to yield himself to the embrace of the breeze and watch the lazy sails that whiten the sound in front and listen to the hoarse boom of the surf as it washes the feet of those great white sand dunes to the east and south.

And those Beaufort homes are preverbial for their comfort and warmth of hospitality. I speak from experience. For two days I was a guest in the elegant home of that enterprising Methodist merchant, D. S. Sanders, who has been blessed with a most interesting family and a business record which any man might envy. For the many kindnesses received at the hands of that family, embracing the son-in-law, Mr. W. A. Smith, whose invalid wife exhibits a most beautiful type of cour age and resignation, we become a great debtor.

The Methodism of Beaufort is historic. It runs away back into last century. Many faithful ministers have labored here. The names of at least four of them are chiselled in marble in the old cemetery behind the church. In the vestibule of the nice and spacious church, we noticed a marble tablet erected to the memory of fourteen Sunday-school teachers and scholars who, in 1864, fell victims to yellow fever. Some of them died so young! and since they died in the ranks of the Sunday-school, let us believe that they have put on the white garments of eternal health in the city above.

That old cemetery is an interesting spot. The old live oaks seem to brood over the sleeping dust, and the dappled shadows seem to hint of many a tale which has been swallowed up in the shadow of death. Here were laid to rest men and women who died before the firing of the minute men was heard at Lexington. Here are buried people of almost every nationality.

Rev. H. M. Eure is pastor of the Methodist Church at Beaufort. Already he has gained a great hold on his people and many expressions commendatory of him came to our ears. It seems to us that one of the greatest needs of our Methodism in Beaufort is a strong amply equipped school. The Episcopal Church, from a practical standpoint at least, has been almost pre-empted. Yet the Methodist Church in Beaufort numerically and financially largely predominates.

THE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

In writing of the District Conference, I can give only some general points. The Secretary by all means should furnish our readers with a full report of the sessions. I will write nothing that to any degree can be accepted as a substitute.

The Conference was fortunate in having Bishop Smith to preside. Not that Dr. Swindell, who is noted as a popular and efficient presiding officer, was in any way inadequate, but because it is good that our people have an opportunity to come in contact occasionally with a Bishop—especially such a Bishop as A. Coke Smith. He won all hearts from the first. By his numerous short talks and his sermons he highly edified all who were present. Common-sense and spirituality are marked characteristics of Bishop Smith. His missionary sermon on Friday was marked by true spiritual and intellectual eloquence. The New Bern District Conference of 1904 will always stand out in our mind as the one in which the question of the church organ was duly magnified. Bishop Smith certainly got at the facts concerning the circulation of the "Old Raleigh" in the bounds of the New Bern District. His exhortations will bear fruit. We must say that what Bishop Smith discovered in connection with the circulation of the paper was in nowise discreditable to the District. The Presiding Elder and the preachers are active in extending the circulation of the paper, and are among the best friends the paper has.

Very few of the preachers have yet held their meetings. The preachers made reports, which, in the main, were encouraging. The spirit of liberality is undoubtedly increasing among the people of New Bern District. By every token the preachers of the District will make good reports at Conference. The District is fortunate in having as its Missionary Secretary, Rev. R. H. Willis. He is alert, aggressive, progressive. The maps showing the condition of the District were excellent.

On Thursday night Rev. J. W. Potter preached a most earnest, thoughtful sermon on "Christian Service." He came to us from Georgia, and we were glad to hear him.

The attendance of preachers and delegates was average. Several of the preachers were providentially detained at home. They were greatly missed.

On Friday, after dining most pleasantly with Bro. J. V. Williams and family, and bidding adieu to my friendly host, I left Beaufort. The proceedings of the whole Conference will be given to the Advocate, we take it, by the Secretary, Rev. E. H. Davis.

BEAUTIFYING THE PARSONAGE.

A number of ambitious wives of preachers have notified us that they have entered the contest for the prize for the most artistic parsonage front. We trust that we may have many more contestants. Suppose you fail to win any of the three prizes, you will have given the parsonage a beauty to serve as an inspiration to you and your children and the neighborhood. You will also have a picture of the parsonage which will be beautifully electrotyped and placed in convenient and enduring form.

We repeat: It is not necessary to have the best parsonage building in order to win the prize. The little cottage without a porch has as good chance for winning the prize as the handsome brick structure. Artistic taste with the minimum simplicity is what we want.

It is not too late now to prepare. Much can be done between now and October 1, when we will call for the photographs. Be sure to let us know by the 15th of July if you have concluded to enter the contest. Speak of it to the lady members of the charge. They will help you in many ways. Write for literature. The Twentieth Century Home, published by the Cosmopolitan Company, Irvington-on-the-Hudson, New York, will give you many valuable ideas. We want to have many contestants for the prize.

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF TRAINING WORK IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Dr. H. M. Hamill is an expert in Sunday-school work. He has given his whole life to the work. He has a national reputation, and his services are in constant demand.

Dr. James Atkins, Sunday-school Editor, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, proved himself a master workman, when in advance of all other evangelical denominations he inaugurated for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the Bible Teachers' Study Circle. He showed himself no less a master workman in securing Dr. H. M. Hamill to take charge of this work which has proved such a success.

On June 27 and 28, Dr. Hamill and wife held a Teachers' Institute in Edenton Street Church, Raleigh. The attendance was not large, but there was present quite a number of representative Sunday-school teachers.

Dr. Hamill is intensely practical, very much in earnest, and delightfully forcible. Those who hear him never get tired, and what he says is easily remembered. A constant play of humor takes away the rough edge of the purely didactic.

Mrs. Hamill has an exceedingly pleasant manner, and her talks showed not only a complete sympathy with, but an expert knowledge of, Sunday-school matters. She helped to make the Institute very interesting and helpful.

Rev. L. S. Massey, Rev. J. H. Shore, and Rev. G. T. Adams, were among those who attended the Institute.

NEARING THE GOAL.

Every friend of Greensboro Female College has great reason for expecting an early glad day for this cherished institution which has been passing lately through such dark shadows.

The enterprise of re-establishing this institution has had an experience which reads almost like romance. In this experience there have been feats of finance, strength of faith, and manifestations of a superb loyalty on the part of students and the great Methodist public. It is clear that behind the noble institution is a loving public sentiment which is sufficient to guarantee her perpetuity.

The College has no debt as before, requiring yearly a payment of interest equivalent to the interest on nearly $3,000.

It has standing walls worth about $15,000.

It has real estate worth nearly $75,000.

Of the $30,000 necessary to have in hand for the completion of the building, all has been subscribed terest on nearly $50,000.

Enough has been learned to justify us in believing that an endowment fund will be raised.

The institution will be opened in the late fall.

There is nothing that we can now see to prevent Greensboro Female College from having a more glorious career than ever before.

Let every Methodist in the State rally to the help of Greensboro Female College.

The editor intended taking in last week both the New Bern and the Raleigh District Conference. He went to Beaufort first, and found, to his regret, that the distance between Beaufort and Cary was so great that he could not reach the latter and have time enough to do good or get good. We again express our hope that the Presiding Elders will in time arrange the Conferences so as not to make them conflict. There is no District Conference this week. The Raleigh District Conference at Cary was a great success, and the proceedings will be published next week.

We congratulate the Biblical Recorder on having completed its 70th year. This week's issue is a souvenir number. The cover page contains the portraits of all past editors. Although the Recorder is a septuagenarian it has the fire of youth and its face is ever to the sunrise. May it continue to flourish and be able to celebrate a great many other birthdays.

Methodist Mention

State.

The preachers of the Fayetteville District will please note the changes made in the Quarterly Meeting appointments.

Rev. R. F. Bumpas preached in West Market Street Church, Greensboro, on last Sunday morning. He filled the pulpit for Dr. Turrentine, who preached in Raleigh on the same day.

Rev. J. A. Hornaday writes that work on the new church will begin September 1st. He and his people are luxuriating for the first time in their freedom from the bar-rooms in Greenville.

Rev. M. T. Plyler has made a fine start in inducing friends to furnish rooms in Greensboro Female College. He has no doubt of his ultimate success. It is a cause which deserves to succeed.

We learn that Rev. A. W. Price is doing fine work on the Kennekeet Circuit. He has almost his entire Conference collections in hand. He was reared in that section, and the confidence reposed in him by his life-long acquaintances is a great compliment to him.

Rev. J. D. Carpenter, of the North Carolina Conference, died after a long and painful illness of carbuncle on the back of his neck. Brother Carpenter was about sixty-eight years old, and had been preaching about forty years, riding a circuit at the time of his death.

Dr. H. F. Chreitzberg, pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, Winston, N. C., has been granted a patent on a portable railway window screen, something which has been sorely needed for years, and in its present shape promises to come into almost universal use by the traveling public.

The Methodist Church has resounded with the noise of the hammer and other implements, wielded by the artisans, and now improvements are noted in the pulpit and chancel; but the most marked and attractive revolution is the organ loft —in the rear and elevated almost as much as the gallery—with its brass rods.—Murfreesboro Cor. Roanoke and Chowan Times.

Rev. W. W. Rose, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at this place, and Rev. J. G. Johnson, pastor of the church at Garysburg, exchanged pulpits Sunday. Mr. Johnson preached two strong sermons, morning and evening, and made a good impression upon those who heard him. Large congregations attended each service. Rev. Mr. Rose reports a cordial reception at Garysburg and a large and attentive congregation.—Weldon News.

Dr. S. B. Turrentine, pastor of West Market Street Church, Greensboro, N. C., preached in Edenton Street Church on last Sunday morning, and in Central at night. His sermons were marked by great breadth and vigor of thought, and he succeeded in impressing most favorably all who heard him. At the close of each sermon he presented the status of Greensboro Female College. This enterprise is in a healthy condition, and there is no doubt that the college will be ready for occupancy in a few months. Dr. Turrentine will represent the cause at various places in the North Carolina Conference.

What Advocate men A. J. Parker and A. W. Price are! The former writes as follows: "I have just returned from the campmeeting at Kennekeet. While there I suggested to Rev. A. W. Price, the pastor, that it would be a good time to make a little canvas for the Advocate, and offered to help him. We were so pressed with other duties until Sunday that we could not make it, but Sunday we devoted a few hours to the work, with the result as enclosed. The work which Brother Price and I did at the camp-meeting could easily be repeated by the pastors at almost any of their protracted meetings." The result as inclosed was a check and 35 new subscribers.

One of the graduates at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn., on last Wednesday, was Rev. J. T. Erwin, of Greenville. In one year Mr. Erwin completed the work required in the senior year for the A. B. degree, and also the work for the A. M. degree. In addition to the two degrees, he received the honor of the fellowship in mathematics at Vanderbilt for next year. Mr. Erwin is a member of the Western North Carolina Conference.—Charlotte Observer.

Religiously, our town is making great strides. A plan is on foot for the erection of a new Methodist Church. The building is to be of brick, latest design, and modern conveniences. The new building will occupy the same site as that of the old one, and cost from $3,000 to $5,000. We understand that the greater part of the money has already been subscribed, and that the ground will be broken for this elegant structure in the early fall. —Hamlet Cor. Richmond Headlight.

Pine Forest's new church, Goldsboro Circuit, was dedicated last Sunday. Rev. W. D. Sasser, of Kenansville, preached in the morning and Rev. Dr. F. D. Swindell, of Goldsboro, in the afternoon. The new church is a beautiful building and will stand as a monument to the untiring efforts of those good people and will shed its influence over and cast its arms of love and protection around them and their children long after many of us have gone to our reward.—News and Observer.

Connectional.

Rev. L. L. Johnson is building a good church at Afton. It is to be a veneered brick, and will cost, exclusive of the lot, $5,000.

Dr. Lovett, editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, is writing for his paper some interesting letters from the Exposition.

Another superannuate home has been donated to the North Alabama Conference. Dr. S. C. Tatum, of Center, gives the home.

The eldest son of Bishop A. Coke Smith has determined to enter the ministry. He has been teaching in Randolph-Macon Academy.

The corner-stone of the Eleventh Avenue Church, Birmingham, was laid with impressive ceremonies Sunday afternoon, June 19th.

The $15,000 subscribed by the good friends of Mansfield College who live there is about available, and Rev. H. W. Rickey has been appointed by the Board of Trustees as agent to go out and get $30,000 more for the present needs of the college.

Cablegrams to papers of the Methodist Episcopal Church mention Bishop Hoss as among those who participated in an enthusiastic reception given Bishop Burt upon his arrival in Rome on une 18th.

Dr. J. W. Lee, the pastor of St. John's Church, St. Louis, will soon publish a book that he has been working on for the past five years, entitled "The Religion of Experience, Considered from a Scientific Standpoint."

Rev. E. H. Rawlings, of Main Street Church, Danville, Va., is planning with some of his liberal people to raise a special sum for our work at some point in Japan. The Main Street people are abundantly able to do large things for the church.

Rev. Robert E. Tyler, of the North Alabama Conference, has been appointed pastor of our American congregation in Durango, Mex., in place of Rev. F. H. Gardner, who comes home on account of failing health.

The Board of Trustees of the Parker Memorial Church in New Orleans have completed their plans for their new church. The building is to cost about $20,000, and will stand on the corner of Nashville Avenue and Perrier Street. It will be constructed of gray stone.

Rumors that the presidency of the University of Tennessee, and perhaps that of Tulane University at New Orleans, would be tendered Dr. J. H. Kirkland, Chancellor of Vanderbilt University, have caused much uneasiness among his friends about Nashville.

General Notes

An elegant building for the use of the Y. M. C. A. will be erected this summer at the University of North Carolina.

The Board of Trustees of Furman University, S. C., have ruled foot-ball out of the college course and have sanctioned base-ball under certain restrictions.

Hon. Mr. Fairbanks, Republican nominee for Vice-President, is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University.

Mr. James R. Joy, editorial assistant to Dr. Neely in the department of Sunday-school periodicals, has been chosen assistant editor of the (New York) Christian Advocate.

The Sutan of Turkey has signed an "irade" providing that restitution shall be made to the Armenians who have suffered such indignities and barbarities at the hands of the Turks.

"Congregational Day" at the St. Louis Exposition will be observed October 21st. Among the speakers will be Dr. Lyman Abbott, Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, Justice Brewer, and Gen. O. O. Howard.

Governor Terrell, of Georgia, in his message to the Legislature, reaffirmed his utterance in his former message favoring the exemption from taxation of the endowments of the denominational colleges of the State.

The Young Men's Christian Association of England has lately celebrated its "diamond" anniversary, with the founder, Sir George Williams, in the chair. Sir George Williams delivered an address, and was given an enthusiastic welcome.

The Louisiana Exposition has stirred up again the controversy as to who really discovered the great Northwest. According to Miss Laut, in Leslie's Monthly Magazine, it was Pierre Esprit Radisson, and she is the best authority on the subject.

According to statistics which appeared recently in "The British Weekly," the number of "twicers," that is of persons who attend church somewhere in London twice on Sunday, is 38 per cent of the whole number of worshippers in Inner London is estimated at 832,051.

At the Congregational Union meeting in London Mr. Silvester Horn declared against the deadly respectability of so many churches. Another speaker pointed out, that many people of the respectable class conceive of the church as a religious club to which only certain elect people are to be welcomed.

Out West there is a religious sect called the "Holly Rollers." Their propensity to roll over the floor in their meetings is responsible for the name. From what we can learn of their doings, the famous "Lynchites" of Virginia and North Carolina are tame in comparison. Gross immorality is one of the manifestations of these over-holy families.

DO YOU WANT?

1. A Lawton's Simplex Printer which will enable you to take several hundred impressions at a time of any letter or circular you wish to send out. Then write to this office and secure a bargain.

2. A Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, largest size, and that has never been used. Then write to this office and secure a bargain.

3. A practically new piano-player that sells on the market for $250.00. It is one of the finest Pianolas made. DEVOTIONAL CHARITABLE LITERARY EVANGELICAL
EDITED BY REV. H. B. ANDERSON.

The Christ of Personal Experience.

We must find that the Christ is the vital principle of everything that makes life worth living. In every duty, in every impulse to the good, in every approving voice of conscience, in everything that tends upward in any department of our nature, we must realize that we are face to face with the kingdom of God. Its life and its law is the Christ. Because He is formed within us our very conscience of self must come, as did His, to be habitually interfused with a sense of the Divine presence. In some sense and in some appreciable measure, we must be able to echo His own words, "I and the Father are one."

Such an experience will bring a great calm to souls tossed by the unrest of the age, at the same time that it furnishes incentive and direction to absorbing religious zeal. It will set things in proportion. Act and motive, creed and conduct, self and society will fall into place. It will give perspective to the theoretical problems that centre about the person of Christ. We shall gaze at them without timidity; we shall put no false emphasis upon tradition, or upon our own reasonings, for we shall occupy the standpoint of Realization. We shall conquer sin, too, and win the world to Christ because the Presence goes with us.—Prof. Geo. A. Coe, in "The Religion of a Mature Mind."

Missionary Nuggets.

The native Church of Fiji contributed $25,000 to Foreign Missions in 1902. Sixty-eight years ago a missionary was not allowed to remain, and many were killed by the natives.

* * *

A noble sentiment is attributed to Jacob A. Riis. He said he once "growled" against Foreign Missions, but he has learned that "for every dollar you give away to convert the heathen abroad, God gives you ten dollars' worth of purpose to deal with your heathen at home."

* * *

Dr. George F. Pentecost, after extensive travels in the East, declares that China is the most important mission field. His reasons are that the Chinaman is the strongest Oriental man, and that the Chinese question is the most significant political problem now before the world. Christianity can solve it—nothing else can.

* * *

I have long since ceased to pray, "Lord Jesus, have compassion upon a lost world." I remember the day and the hour when I seemed to hear the Lord rebuking me for making such a prayer. He seemed to say to me: "I have had compassion on a lost world, and now it is time for you to have compassion."—A. J. Gordon.

* * *

John G. Paton, the apostle of the New Hebrides, reports: "The converts at the mission stations in Malekula have built a Christian village, in which they live. All are clothed. They begin and close every day with praise and prayer, and are very happy with each other, giving a daily object-lesson to the heathen of the joy and peace of Christianity."

When Stanley passed through the African territory from east to west and came out by the Congo to the Atlantic Ocean, he said that the natives of the Congo basin were more like demons than like human beings. To-day there is a church of two thousand members at Banza Manteka, and every member of the church is pledged to total abstinence from intoxicants.

Aseptic Christians.

The story is told of Dr. Malthie Babcock that on one occasion, being invited by some friends to smoke with them, he declined, explaining that he was often called to visit the sick and dying, and that any odor of tobacco about his clothing would unfit him for that delicate work. At another time, when a wealthy attendant at his church offered him the use of his box at the theater whenever he chose to occupy it, he declined it on the ground that he must keep himself "spiritually aseptic." It would be well if not only ministers, but Christians generally, had the high and true ideal of life and conduct which Dr Babcock displayed. It is a very serious thing to be a member of a church, to be called by the holy name of Christ. It behooves men and women, who are looked up to as examples by other men and women, to be "spiritually aseptic." What care the surgeon takes that no poison shall come to his patient from his touch or from his instruments! Should not every one of us, who sensibly and insensibly are touching and influencing other men and women every day we live, be equally careful to be aseptic? Surely to keep one's self "unspotted from the world" is no small part of a genuinely religious life. "Come ye out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing," is thoroughly scientific in its stringent demand for aseptic conditions in Christian life. For our own sakes, for others' sakes, for Christ's sake, the small self-denials involved in being "spiritually aseptic" ought to be gladly and spontaneously and scrupulously accented.—Guardian.

SAVED FROM TERRIBLE DEATH.

The family of Mrs. M. L. Bobbitt of Bargerton, Tenn., saw her dying and were powerless to save her. The most skillful physicians and every remedy used, failed, while consumption was slowly but surely taking her life. In this terrible hour Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption turned despair into joy. The first bottle brought immediate relief and its continued use completely cured her. It's the most certain cure in the world for all throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed Bottles 50c. and $1.00. Trial Bottles Free at all druggists.

A. L. Cox, son of Gen. W. R. Cox, was the only member of the graduating class at the University this year, who took both the A. B. and the A. M. degree. His thorough preparation at the Horner Military School, Oxford, N. C., enabled him to do this.

Lesson for July 10, 1904.

Jeroboam's Idolatry.

(1 Kings 12:25-33.)

Golden Text: Keep yourselves from idols. (1 John 15:21.)

Jeroboam has hitherto appeared in a favorable light. We are now to see how, under the stress of new circumstances, his moral character weakened, and he fell into grievous sin.

A Needless Fear.—That which lay at the bottom of Jeroboam's sin was a latent fear that the northern kingdom, of which he was the founder and king, should return to its former allegiance to the house of David.

This fear on Jeroboam's part was needless, for even though the people of the northern tribes had continued to go to worship at Jerusalem, he had the divine assurance of the permanency of his rule, provided only that he should walk in God's ways, keeping the divine statutes and commandments, and doing right in the sight of the Almighty.

The best way to have provided against the danger which Jeroboam needlessly imagined, would have been to rule so faithfully and well that the people would not dream of desiring a change.

Bad Excuses.—Men have ever found excuses, wherewith they have sought to palliate their commission of great sins. Indeed the more heinous the offense, the more plausible has been the pretext for doing wrong. In other words, the greater the sin, the greater the hypocrisy which seeks to conceal the real motive, and which presents as the ostensible reason for a certain course of action that which is a falsehood and a lie.

So with Jeroboam. The real reason for his leading the people into idolatry was the fear that their hearts would become alienated from him. The reason which he offered to the people was, "It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem," or, as it is rendered in the margin of the Revised Version, "Ye have gone up long enough."

Jeroboam probably excused the course which he was pursuing on the grounds of necessity, of expediency, of policy and of other considerations such as these. But not one of these pleas was sufficient to justify his departure from the prescribed worship of the true God. They were bad excuses, every one of them.

A Fatal Sin.—Every course of sin, if persisted in, is fatal to life and character. The sin of Jeroboam was deliberate and persistent, and it produced its baleful effect upon his life and character.

His sin was manifold. Not only did he make the two calves of gold and set them up, the one in Bethel and the other in Dan, but he made "houses of high places," which were an abomination to God. In addition to this, he set aside the divinely established order of priests, the Levites, and "made priests of the lowest of the people."

In these and in other ways, Jeroboam became a traitor to his God, and his name is stigmatized in the pages of Holy Scripture as the man who made Israel to sin.

Twentieth Century Idolatry.—It is easy to condemn Jeroboam for his sinful idolatry. But there is a practical question for every student of this lesson. It is this: "Am I making an idol of anything?" We need not set up calves of gold in order to commit idolatry. If there is anything which we allow to usurp the supreme place in our hearts and lives which belongs to God, then we are as guilty as was Jeroboam of old. Like him, too, we may be making others to sin, by our indulgence in forbidden pleasures, or by our devotion to unworthy objects. Let us pray that we may be given divine strength to follow the injunction of our Golden Text, and, to keep ourselves from idols of every kind.

CURES BLOOD POISON, CANCER, ULCERS, ECZEMA, CARBUNCLES, ETC.—MEDICINE FREE.

If you have offensive pimples or eruptions, ulcers on any part of the body, aching bones or joints, falling hair, mucous patches, swollen glands, skin itches and burns, sore lips or gums, eating, festering sores, sharp, knawing pains, then you suffer from serious blood poison or the beginnings of deadly cancer. You may be permanently cured by taking Botanic Blood Balm (B. B. B.) made especially to cure the worst blood and skin diseases. It kills the poison in the blood, thereby giving a healthy blood supply to the affected parts, heals every sore or ulcer, even deadly cancer, stops all aches and pains and reduces all swellings. Botanic Blood Balm cures all malignant blood troubles, such as eczema, scabs and scales, pimples, running sores, carbuncles, scrofula, etc. Especially advised for all obstinate cases that have reached the second or third stage. Druggists, $1. To prove it cures, sample of Blood Balm sent free and prepaid by writing Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble and free medical advice sent in sealed letter.

RATES TO ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR.

DOMESTIC TROUBLES.

It is exceptional to find a family where there are no domestic ruptures occasionally, but these can be lessened by having Dr. King's New Life Pills around. Much trouble they save by their great work in Stomach and Liver troubles. They not only relieve you, but cure. 25c. at all druggists.

I CURE CANCER.

Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No knife. No plaster. No caustics. No slaughting oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure internal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment;" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else is the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

Things are Brightening.

The brethren are taking collections for the Orphanage. If all would do it right away, it would change the outlook of our financial condition so much. Beloved, won't you do it?

We are meeting our pay roll. But large bills are due, and the money is not on hand to meet them.

Help now, will be help indeed.

The carpenters are in the third story, and the masons are in the basement.

Our melons, cucumbers, squash and butter beans are promising. So also our tomatoes and collards.

Ebenezer—Brooklyn.

We had the pleasure of meeting again our old parishioners at Ebenezer, Cary Circuit, and of speaking a word to that livest of country Sunday-schools and most spiritual of churches, Sunday, 19th. They can have a revival when they please. They are always in the spirit. We boys—Charlie, Nash and Paul were with me—had a great time. Especially at Capt. Nick Allens, and more especially at Sister Allen's bountiful table—and with the Captain's blackberries and plums. My! what a time!

We occupied the evening hour at the home church, Brooklyn. We are glad that our homefolks love us. They gave us the best collection that they have ever given us. Brooklyn, under our live pastor is coming.

Starling, G. B., is still in the saddle on Cary Circuit.

The Raleigh District Conference.

A short drive along a beautiful macadamized road on Thursday, June 30th, brought me to Cary, where the Raleigh District Conference was to be held. It had already opened. Dr. W. H. Moore, P. E., was in the chair, and held the reins. Things moved steadily. Moore never hurries, but he always gets there. Our J. M. Culbreth held the quill. Of course things were written right. The reports on Sunday-schools were fine. On Epworth Leagues, not so fine. Why is this? Shamberger came to time in the pulpit on Samuel. Culbreth, Puckett and Massey came to time on the platform. I don't know when I have enjoyed four consecutive deliverances more. I got a chance to make a statement. I never saw a better, first day at a District Conference. If all the days of the Conference are to be like that, it will be a great success. It was hard to tear myself away to attend the New Bern District Conference. But duty before pleasure. One day in the home of Buck Adams, with his noble wife and bright, cultured girls and little Henry, with President M. S. Davis as a chum was a rare pleasure. How I did want to linger among these, dearest of friends, for a few days!

OF INTERNATIONAL FAME.

On a busy corner in the still busier city of Chicago where thousands of people—Chicago people, with an eye and thought for naught but their own affairs, pass and repass every day, stands a building, not an imposing, but a substantial, roomy edifice, the name of which is perhaps more widely known in all quarters of the globe than that of any other structure in the great city.

It is the Vitae-Ore Building, the building from which the remedy which gives it is name is offered to the public, the remedy—the natural mineral Ore—which has astounded the people of the continent by its cures and brought happiness, comfort, peace and contentment to thousands of homes which had been torn and ravished by the scourges of sickness and disease. It was built by, with and for Vitae-Ore. Each brick and stone represents a satisfied customer; each tile in the floors and stairway a patient cured, who satisfied, paid his money for the treatment. From a humble beginning in a room in a cottage occupied by Mr. Theo. Noel, its discoverer, the Vitae-Ore enterprise has grown to such proportions as to occupy a building 50x 175 feet, three floors high, a total floor space of 18,750 feet, used solely, entirely and exclusively in placing this remedy before the public, not counting the buildings owned and occupied by the Theo. Noel Co., proprietors of the discovery, in Toronto, Ont., and London, Eng., for the carrying on of the Vitae-Ore enterprise in Canada and Great Britain.

All this is a standing monument to the wonderful merit of this still more wonderful remedy, which is today offered to the readers of this paper in the magnificent, full-page announcement which readers will find upon the back cover of this issue, a monument that testifies in a stronger language than anything that could be said with ink and white paper. The Theo. Noel Company offers a package on thirty days' trial, so that all who suffer, all who need it, may test it without risk or possibility of loss. It cures, the patient is satisfied and pays for it, and the Vitae-Ore enterprise grows and grows and spreads its leaves like a green bay tree.

Oak Ridge Institute, whose advertisement appears elsewhere, is one of the institutions in North Carolina that have come to stay and has made good its claim to popular support. It enters upon its 53rd year August 30th, and has been twenty-nine years under the management of its owners and principals, Messrs. Holt. It combines very thorough work with reasonable rates. It had 285 young men and boys last year, representing seven States. It is situated near Greensboro, over 1,000 feet above sea-level, in view of the mountains, and in one of the most healthful and beautiful parts of the South. It is splendidly equipped.

KING.—Mrs. Margaret J. King, wife of H. H. King, of Wilmington, N. C., was born March 9, 1838, and died June 3, 1904.

The call came suddenly, but she was ready to go. A faithful wife, a devoted mother, a consecrated Christian woman, has joined the great company of the redeemed. She leaves a husband, H. H. King, two daughters, Mrs. L. C. Sutton and Miss Florrie King, three sons, T. B., J. B., and J. C. King, and a brother, W. T. Jones, of Carthage, N. C., to mourn their loss.

N. M. WATSON.

HALES.—Miss Dorah E. Hales died at the home of her mother, in Grimesland, N. C., June 6, 1904, in the thirty-second year of her age. For more than five years she had been almost an invalid, being confined to her bed nearly all of the time.

She joined the Methodist Church in early life, and so far as I know, lived a consistent Chritsian life until death. And although her suffering was intense, yet her patience and submission was beautiful, her faith steadfast, her hopes bright, and her prospects so clear that the light went out without a cloud to dim the horizon of the spiritual sky, for she said to me only a few days before her death, that she had great hope and confidence in God, and that she was simply waiting and trusting.

May the Comforter abide with the grief-stricken mother, brothers, and sisters.

B. E. STANFIELD, P. C.

HAY.—Miss Fannie Hay was born in New Bern, N. C., February 15, 1820, and died April 17, 1904.

Her father was a sturdy Scotchman, and became one of the founders of the Presbyterian Church in New Bern. Her mother was a devout and thorough Methodist. The children adhered to the faith of their mother. Miss Fannie joined the Methodist Church in her girlhood and her long and useful life was passed within its pales. She was devoted to all its interests and was efficient in energy, good word and work.

She was a charter member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and its first president. She loved the Society, and of late, since she has been unable to attend its meetings, it has been the custom to hold the first meeting of the week of prayer in her home, a priviledge which she greatly enjoyed, while the members felt it a blessing to meet with her.

She was prevented in recent years by bodily infirmities from attending the services of the house of God, yet her heart and prayers were there, and the hands of the minister were held up by her earnest petitions at a throne of grace.

A pastoral visit to her home was a delight. She read the Advocate week by week and kept intelligently abreast with the enterprises and activities of her church. She was a lover of good books. The Bible was her constant companion. Her sweet spirit, cheerful smile and hearty amen to the petitions offered were inspiring.

Her death, like her life, was beautiful. Heaven seemed to touch earth and it was good to be there.

My first thought on hearing of her death was: "I have another friend in heaven."

She was the true friend of the itinerant Methodist minister. Her place none can fill.

Oh the happy company of the redeemed she has already greeted on the other shore! We must not grieve over that which was her eternal gain. She rests from life's toils and her works follow her.

IN USE FOR 20 YEARS
ELIXIR BABEK
The Quick and Sure Cure for MALARIA, CHILLS, FEVER AND LA GRIPPE.
It is a powerful tonic and appetizer. Will cure that Tired Feeling, Pains in Back, Limbs and Head. Is a purely vegetable compound, and contains NO QUININE OR ARSENIC. Prepared by Kloczewski & Co., Washington, D. C.
Price 50cts.

THE SSS BEST TONIC

It increases the appetite, tones up the stomach, invigorates and strengthens the system, and furnishes purer and better blood for the upbuilding of the run-down constitution. You will find no tonic to act so promptly and beneficially where the health has given way, the strength over-taxed by hard work and close confinement. Those living in the low, marshy sections of the country, exposed to miasmatic poisons and breathing the impure air arising from stagnant pools and swamps, till their systems are filled with malaria and their health undermined, will find S. S. S. a most excellent tonic, and its timely use has many times prevented the serious complications that so often result from malaria.

Good blood, good appetite and good digestion are the foundation stones of good health. S. S. S. supplies all these, containing as it does ingredients for the purification of the blood and also well-known tonic properties, making it the ideal remedy in cases where the blood has deteriorated, the stomach disordered and appetite has failed.

S. S. S. being a purely vegetable compound, leaves no bad after-effects, like the strong potash and mineral remedies, which are bad on the stomach and nerves. A course of S. S. S. now will fortify the system, and the impurities that have accumulated through the long winter months are more readily and promptly thrown off, and the warm weather finds you in good physical condition, instead of weak, run-down, tired and debilitated, with no appetite or energy, as is apt to be the case where the system is neglected and nature left to take care of herself. If you need a tonic and appetizer, you will find S. S. S. the best. Medical advice without charge to all who write us about their case.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Canton, Ohio, Aug. 6, 1903.

Gentlemen: S. S. S. is a good medicine. I keep it in the house all the while. It is an excellent tonic to give strength to the system and tone to all the organs. It gives appetite and energy and makes one feel better in every way. I have found it also an excellent blood purifier. For months I was troubled with an itching skin eruption on the face, and I tried specialists and many remedies to get a cure, but S. S. S. is the only medicine that seemed to relieve. I am now comparatively free of this eruption. I think a great deal of your medicine, believing it to be the best blood purifier and tonic known to the world to-day.

MRS. FRANK HORNER.
1360 E. Seventh st.

Altoona, Pa., June 20, 1903.

I have always been averse to giving a testimonial, and only do so now because of a desire to have others benefited by the use of your most excellent medicine. Before using S. S. S. this spring I very much felt the need of a tonic; was troubled with Dyspepsia and Constipation, and my blood was in bad condition. The use of your specific has driven away all indications of Dyspepsia, regulated my bowels, enriched my blood, and caused me to gain 20 pounds in weight, so that I feel in better physical condition than I have in years. In my judgment there is no better tonic and blood purifier on the market than your preparation, and I unhesitatingly recommend it as such.

IS DR. D. M. BYE A FRAUD?—WHAT MRS. WILLIAMS SAYS ABOUT HIM.

Dallas, Texas, Dec. 31, 1904.

Dr. D. M. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind.

Dear Sir:—This testimonial is sent hoping it may be of use to some and to my friends or their neighbors in the different States in which I have lived. So many die after long and excruciating suffering and so few recover, that I had little hope when I was told without doubt I had a Cancer. Friends wished me to try Dr. D. M. Bye, who said he could cure cancer and without pain. I thought this a bare-faced fraud. However, should I prove him such, I could report him to the postal authorities and do the world some good, if not myself. After writing to several whose testimonials I had read, I had to admit there was something in it. I had had the Cancer two and half years, and the best specialist in this section said my time was short in which a cure was possible. You referred me to the Dallas, Texas, office and I got a month's treatment. Before my month was up, my Cancer was gone, not only to my joy, but to that of all who knew me. Besides, as one expressed it, "Now we will know what to do."

The medicine also made me feel better, although I had doctored much before. Dr. D. M. Bye's discovery is grand. He must be one of the happiest men in the world, enjoying the happiness and blessing he has brought to many and will bring to thousands more. I will do all I can to spread the good tidings.

But I must add this warning: Before using this medicine, I got medicine from Kansas City, purporting to be the same and it and the directions were very very unsatisfactory. Dr. D. M. Bye, Indianapolis, Ind., and the Dr. D. M. Bye Company, Dallas, Texas, are the only places to trust.

ANNA M. WILLIAMS.

It Is a Number One Doctor and Handy to Have in the House.

Fort Mill, S. C., June 17, 1902.

My wife was a terrible sufferer from indigestion. She couldn't eat anything without its souring on her stomach, and was forced to live on the lightest kind of diet, sweet milk and crackers, and even that disagreed with her. This brought on many different ailments. She was so weak she couldn't sit up in bed without help. She suffered from constipation all the time, so that she would have to take something daily for it. She was very nervous and could only sleep at night when something was given to make her sleep. It was a general break-down after the birth of her third child. Nothing we gave her afforded any permanent relief. As fast as one trouble was relieved another would take its place. I then put her on Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy. She felt a little better on the second bottle and on the third the improvement was marked. My wife commenced to build up and to get stronger. She can now eat anything she wants and it agrees with her. It cured her of chills. She took about eight bottles. Her general health is now good. I believe my wife would have died had I not put her on Mrs. Person's Remedy. We now use it in our family for everything. No matter what the trouble is we go on the Remedy. It is a No. 1 doctor and handy to have in the house.

ROANOKE COLLEGE.

Roanoke College closed its 51st year of useful work on June 15th with a successful commencement and the inauguration of President Morehead under favorable auspices. Students were enrolled last session from 12 States, Japan and Korea. A handsome new administration building has been provided. The College has a curriculum with elective studies, well adapted to suit the wants of all students. The instruction is thorough and the standard high. The Faculty is composed of men of liberal scholarship, five having had 17 years of post-graduate work in American and foreign universities, and two others being authors of College text-books. The library contains 23,000 volumes. Few institutions offer so much at so little expense. The Roanoke Valley is famous for its beautiful mountain scenery and healthful climate. The moral, social and religious advantages of Salem are unsurpassed. The Catalogue of 62 pages shows that Roanoke is abreast of the times in its facilities and methods. ...New Buildings...

Four buildings 40 x 85, two stories high, standing 35 feet apart, connected on their fronts with covered verandas, lighted by gas or electricity, heated by best hot air furnaces, and furnished with complete system of water-works take the place of the one building destroyed by fire on January 18.

The second floors are appropriated to dormitories constructed for two occupants only and sufficient in number to accommodate one hundred and six boarding students. There is a bath-room in each building.

The first floors are used for school work exclusively; the first floor of Music Building contains two Society Halls and fourteen Music Rooms; that of Chapel Building contains a Library, two School Parlors and a Chapel; that of Recitation Building contains seven Class Rooms, a Laboratory, a Studio; that of Administration Building contains apartments for President's family, his Office, a Private Parlor, a Dining Room with pantries, etc.

The plan of these buildings is unique and ideal.

...New Equipment...

The equipment will be largely new. Orders to be shipped August 1 have been placed for bed-room suits, desks, scientific apparatus, pianos, etc.

You Are to Be the Judge!

WHAT IRON DOES:

Among the properties which go to make mineral springs famous for their medicinal quantities is IRON, hardly a spring of any consequence or renown being without some proportion of this mineral substance. There are certain springs which contain sufficient iron to impart the iron taste to the waters, which are then known as ferruginous or chalybeate waters, and Vitæ Ore in solution, ready for drinking by the patient, is representative of the best class of these waters, having the added advantage of being stronger than any water known.

Iron is of especial value in blood disorders, and because of this fact the large proportion of Iron in Vitæ-Ore, as shown by its analysis, does much toward making possible the wonderful curative power possessed by this remedy. As the blood is the vehicle which ordinarily carries medicaments to the different portions of the body, the only means in repairing the ravages of disease in these parts is in supplying that fluid with the elements necessary for the proper restoration of the abnormal or diseased tissues.

The countless millions of little red corpuscles which are contained in this fluid have a powerful affinity for iron. Without iron they cannot live and their death means the death of the entire body. The iron in Vitæ Ore causes it to be immediately absorbed by the blood, owing to the property of the fluid above mentioned, and it is on account of this that results from the use of this remedy are so easily and quickly established. Iron is also an ideal astringent, possessing the power of allaying irregular or catarrhal action upon any mucous membrane with which it is brought into contact. The wide range of usefulness of iron, and through iron, Vitæ-Ore, may easily be considered when it is known that membrane which is liable to excessive action, exist in the mouth, tongue, throat, lungs, stomach, bowels, kidneys, bladder, head, and nose, causing much trouble and a long train of ills which may be primarily traced to such excessive action or catarrh. The astringent properties of Vitæ-Ore gained by the iron which is part of its composition, make it the most powerful remedy known for checking such catarrh, as thousands of cures in these cases have thoroughly established.

Last, but by no means least, in the many merits possessed by iron and Vitæ-Ore in relation to the curing of human ills is the ALTERATIVE action, a prominent quality of iron, and which, owing to the peculiar origin and formation of V-O, is exerted by that remedy in a more marked degree than has ever been accomplished by artificial compounds of iron used for a like purpose. The term "alterative" is difficult to explain, but a remedy is said to possess "alterative action" when it can check or alter certain morbid processes that work in the system. Embraced in the group of diseases in which alteratives are of benefit are Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Nervous Disorders, etc., numbering up into several score.

The patient afflicted with any of the diseases named herein and those kindred to them, in following the Vitæ Ore treatment, is securing a more direct medication to the parts affected than could be obtained from drinking the waters of any of the world's noted mineral springs, since one quart of the solution prepared from Vitæ-Ore is from four hundred to twelve hundred times stronger than the same quantity of the valuable waters of the globe, and it is not necessary to drink gallons of water to obtain the much desired medicinal power. And remember IRON is but one of the many constituents of a medicinal value found in Vitæ Ore and all are in a free state, capable of easily being digested and assimilated with the blood.

It is a Mineral Spring Condensed and Concentrated.

NOT NEW, BUT TRUE

DANIEL WEBSTER once said about a certain political proposition: "There are lots of new things about it and lots of true things, but the trouble is that the NEW things are not TRUE and the TRUE things are not NEW.

Thirty Days' Trial—the Proprietors Take All the Risk—You Have Nothing to Lose! You Are to be the Judge.

You have seen it before—all of you have. It has appeared in this paper a dozen times a year for a number of years. You have all seen it, even though you may not have answered it. It is not new, BUT IT IS ALL TRUE. You have but to write, to send for it, to direct that it be sent to you—and it is sent to you. NO QUESTIONS, NO QUIBBLING, NO MONEY. If you want to pay for it, all right. If you don't you DON'T HAVE TO. Enough are SATISFIED, enough want to pay, ENOUGH DO PAY to make it pay the advertiser, to make its fame grow from year to year like a green-bay tree, and it is because IT IS ALL TRUE. The claims for Vitæ Ore are not new, but THEY ARE ALL TRUE. Your fellow readers who have sent for a package and tested it have PROVEN this. ITS HISTORY IS AN OPEN BOOK that all may read, and all will find it ALL TRUE.

If you are sick and ailing, no matter what the trouble may be, if you need help, if you want help, HERE IS THE HELP FOR YOU. How can you, in justice to yourself and your family, your friends and those around you, refuse to accept? How can you refuse to be helped to the help you want? Remember, WE TAKE ALL THE RISK! You are to be the judge. IT IS ALL TRUE!

Sent on Thirty Days Trial

READ THIS SPECIAL OFFER:

WE WILL SEND to every worthy sick and ailing person, who writes us, mentioning the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE a full-sized $1.00 package of VITÆ-ORE, by mail, POSTPAID, sufficient for one month's treatment, to be paid for within one month's time after receipt, if the receiver can truthfully say that its use has done him or her more good than all the drugs and doses of quacks or good doctors or patent medicines he or she has ever used. Read this over again, carefully, and understand that we ask our pay only when it has done you good, and not before. WE TAKE ALL THE RISK, YOU HAVE NOTHING TO LOSE. If it does not benefit you, you pay us nothing. We give you thirty days' time to try the medicine, thirty days to see results before you need pay us one cent, and you need not pay us the one cent unless you do see the results. YOU ARE TO BE THE JUDGE! We know that when this month's treatment of VITÆ-ORE has either cured you or put you on the road to a cure, you will be more than willing to pay. We know Vitæ-Ore and are willing to take the risk.

Not a Penny Unless Benefited

What Vitæ-Ore Is. Vitæ Ore is a natural, hard, adamantine, rock-like substance—mineral—Ore—mined from the ground like gold and silver in the neighborhood of a once powerful, but now extinct, mineral spring. It requires twenty years for oxidization by exposure to the air, when it slacks, down like lime, and is then of medicinal value. It contains free iron, free sulphur, and free magnesium, three properties which are most essential for the retention of health in the human system, and one package—one ounce—of the ORE, when mixed with a quart of water, will equal in medicinal strength and curative value 800 gallons of the most powerful mineral water drank fresh from the springs. It is a geological discovery, in which there is nothing added or taken from. It is the marvel of the century for curing such diseases as Rheumatism.	Bladder Ailments.

Bright's Disease,	Stomach and
Blood Poisoning.	Female Disorders.
Heart Trouble.	LaGrippe.
Dropsy.	Malarial Fever.
Catarrh, and	Nervous Prostration,
Throat Affections.	and
Liver, Kidney, and	General Debility.

as thousands testify, and as no one, answering this, writing for a package, will deny after using. VITÆ-ORE has cured more chronic, obstinate, pronounced incurable cases than any other known medicine, and will reach such cases with a more rapid and powerful curative action than any medicine, combination of medicines, or doctors' prescriptions which it is possible to procure.

Vitæ-Ore will do the same for you as it has for hundreds of readers of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE if you will give it a trial. Send for a $1.00 package at our risk. You have nothing to lose but the stamp to answer this announcement. We want no one's money whom Vitæ-Ore can not benefit. You are to be the judge! Can anything be more fair? What sensible person, no matter how prejudiced he or she may be, who desires a cure, and is willing to pay for it, would hesitate to try Vitæ-Ore on this liberal offer? One package is usually sufficient to cure ordinary cases; not two or three for chronic obstinate cases. We mean just what we say in this announcement, and will do just as we agree. Write to-day for a package at our risk and expense giving age and ailments, and mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE so we may know that you are entitled to this liberal offer.

"JUST THINK OF IT"

WAS USING FOUR DIFFERENT ADVERTISED SPECIFIC REMEDIES.

No Help Until Vitæ-Ore Was Called in.

I received a trial package of Vitæ-Ore some three months ago, having answered and accepted the thirty-day trial offer which appeared in my paper, and it is from this day that I date my return to health. I have used it continuously since that time with the following results:

I now feel stronger than I have at any time for five years. I can eat a variety of foods without inconvenience or suffering. I can walk five times as far and faster without losing my breath than I could before I commenced its use. The head noises have ceased; the back ache is gone; the nervous Constipation of the bowels is entirely cured; I am not troubled with constipation any more; although formerly I had to take a dose of salts every morning; in fact it is simply marvelous what Vitæ-Ore has done for me. I was taking a root medicine for my kidneys, nervine for my nerves, nerve and liver pills for my liver, and heart cure for my heart (just think of it) and still I could not lay on my left side without a pain in my heart. I used to bloat and the pain in my back made me miserable, but thank God for inducing me to read through the Vitæ Ore advertisement. I have now discarded every other medicine but V-O and am letting God's natural mineral cure me and am nearer a perfectly healthy woman than I have been for six years past.

LOVINA PETERSON,
Shatington, Cal.

How can you refuse to give it a trial after reading such ringing testimony? If you need the treatment it is a sin and shame if you do not.

CURED OF CATARRH OF STOMACH AND BOWELS

SUFFERED FOR MANY YEARS—THE TRIAL TREATMENT POINTED THE WAY AND A COMPLETE CURE FOLLOWED.

Read What This Worthy Blacksmith Says of Vitæ-Ore:

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh of the Bowels for a number of years. After using many different kinds of medicine, in fact, everything that was recommended to me, I almost lost all hope of ever getting any better until the Theo. Noel Company of Chicago sent me a trial package of Vitæ-Ore. After using a few days' use my hopes of a complete cure were again revived, the change being so prompt and immediate. I purchased and used about five packages of Vitæ Ore and through this medicine am now again able to wield the sledge hammer and shoe horses and do my blacksmith work as in years when I was younger. My stomach and bowels are better than they have been for thirty years past and it is all due to Vitæ-Ore. I can conscientiously and truly recommend Vitæ-Ore to all persons suffering from Catarrh of the stomach and Bowels, and would consider myself, indeed, selfish did I not write and tell what it has done for me, so that others may be cured as I have been.

The World As We See It.

There is still going the rounds an item to the effect that Bishop Asbury held the first Methodist Conference in the State of Kentucky in 1790. It is evident that some of the brethren limp badly in travelling the road of Methodist History.

The heat of summer always brings an increase of crime, and no one knows this better than the police of our large cities. The newspapers are turning out a daily grist of crime that sickens the heart. It is well to remember these days that a cool mind, and cool body, make a happy combination.

These are vacation days when weary men and women flee to the seashore or mountains to escape the "heavens of brass." As the conflict of life grows fiercer and demands on brain and muscle increase, vacations are becoming more and more a necessity. We hope that no one will forget the obligations which bind them at home, and that all will return refreshed in mind, body and soul.

Occasionally there is a contention, especially in the columns of the secular press, that the secular newspaper can very easily take the place of the religious paper. In support of this contention, attention is called to the fact that a large amount of religious matter is contained in the columns of the secular press. Now we are very friendly to the secular press, and regard it as one of the great vital institutions of civilization. But we must express our emphatic belief that the secular newspaper can no more be an adequate medium for the dissemination of religious news than a religious paper can be for the dissemination of political views. The religious news in a secular newspaper does not generally reach the public in correct form. For example, there are just five mistakes in the following six lines taken from the New York Tribune: "Bishop Henry Frazier McDowell delivered his first sermon since he was ordained a Bishop at Grace Methodist Episcopal Church in East 104th Street, yesterday. Bishop McDowell had once been the pastor there, and a large congregation welcomed him." There is a call both for the religious and the secular press. The religious press was never more flourishing than it is today. The demand is growing with the century.

One of the most lovable traits of an American is his sympathy for the "under dog." In our own war for Independence, Kosciuszko, the Polish patriot, grateful for our sympathy for his oppressed country, gave his services to the sorely oppressed colonies. In 1851, the eloquent Kossuth fired American hearts by a recital of the wrongs of unhappy Hungary. Later we have listened to and sympathized with Ireland in her woe. A cry came from Cuba, and she is free. Now Japan claims our sympathy and gets it in full measure. May America always hearken to the cry of the down-trodden, nationally or individually.

Thousands of Christian men and women in North Carolina are rejoicing that Charlotte and New Bern, in the elections last week, so overwhelmingly routed the saloons, and after January 1st, 1905, these cities will be swept clear of these foes to civilization. In Charlotte the dispensary was an issue, but it received only fifty-six votes, the majority against saloons being 485 out of a total vote of less than 1,600. In New Bern the majority was 392. These elections were hotly contested and were characterized by the most effective works by the good women who worked early and late in the cause nearest their hearts. The temperance movement has only begun, and as the Charlotte Observer puts it: "The thing is in the air."

"Cost." This is the title of a book of fiction by David Graham Phillips, just published. It tells the story of a boy and girl raised together as neighbors in a quiet country community. Both go to college and return to their homes to live. She, thinking that the man has not changed and is the same as in childhood days, marries him despite warning by friends, and pays the cost in disappointed hopes and ruined life. Every business man very carefully estimates the cost before risking his capital. Many large enterprises these days prosper with a profit of a single penny on articles of large sale. Many persons, however, do not count the cost where actual money is not at stake. We see young and old women and men prodigally sacrificing good names for the merest baubles that soon perish, but the cost leaves them moral bankrupts. A good name is the most valuable asset that a human being possesses. It will endure long after the struggle and triumph of mart and forum is over. To sacrifice a good name for money, fame and petty material success, is paying such an awful cost that shall be disclosed only by the great ledger at the last reckoning.

The Democratic National Convention which last week nominated Judge Alton B. Parker for President and Senator Henry G. Davis for Vice-President, was marked by peculiar interest. For months there had been in the public mind two questions which could not be satisfactorily answered until the meeting of the Convention. These questions touched (1) the ability of Mr. Bryan to control over one-third of the delegates and defeat the nomination of Judge Parker; (2) the real attitude of the party to the financial question. Mr. Bryan showed that he was unable to carry out his purpose. Mr. Parker received on the first ballot many more than enough votes to nominate him. Yet after the passing away of all the smoke of battle it can be clearly seen by the unprejudiced eye that Mr. Bryan, in spite of the numerous autopsies held, emerged from the smoke as one of the biggest men in American politics and the idol of the American people. Unless we are mistaken, he is to play in coming years a conspicuous part in the great politieal drama. The real attitude of the party to the financial question was proclaimed in a most sensational way. The Convention on Friday adopted a platform in which there was no pronouncement on the financial question. On Saturday night a telegram was received from Judge Parker, stating in effect that he could not accept the nomination unless a gold plank should be inserted in the platform. The confusion resulting from this telegram was very great. The problem was solved, however, by the Convention in sending word to Judge Parker, that, although the financial question could not be an issue in the campaign, yet the nominee's views on the financial question could not debar him from accepting the nomination on the platform that had already been adopted. Judge Parker's telegram proved his firmness, but rather discounted his former wisdom. The question will surely arise in many a mind, "Why did not Judge Parker let his views be known before?" His position will weaken him in the West, but strengthen him in the East. It maks no difference in the South, as the South will vote for any nominee irrespective of his financial doctrine. Judge Parker will undoubtedly have in a very large measure the confidence of the people. He is a manly, robust candidate, and will make a great run. The nominee for Vice-President is eighty-two years old, and has had a creditable political record. It is evident that in the coming campaign the party will rely much on the "sinews of war."

It would take a rash and ignorant man to deny in these days the wonderful power of song. We have heard of audiences being melted to tears and aroused to decisive action through the power of song, but who ever heard before of the place of the next annual meeting being selected on account of a song? Yet this is what was done on last Thursday in Nashville, Tenn., when in the midst of the business looking to the selection of a place for the next meeting of the United Confederate Veterans, Miss Mary E. Ewell sang "My Old Kentucky Home," and the audience went wild and shouted "Louisville! Louisville!" Of course Louisville was chosen without any seconding speeches. General Stephen D. Lee, of Mississippi, was chosen Commander-in-Chief of the United Confederate Veterans.

A cablegram to the Secretaries of the Board of Missions announces the death at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Park, Soochow, China, of Mrs. M. I. Lambuth, mother of Dr. W. R. Lambuth, and the most venerable member of our mission force in Japan.

Abounding Goodness.

MRS. E. M. ANDERSON.

I see it in the starry sky,
And in the moonlight gleaming by,
I see it e'er in deep or high,
God is good.

I see it in the flowing river,
And where the shining sunbeams quiver,
I see it ever, ever, ever,
God is good.

I hear it in the gentle breeze,
And in the whispering of the trees,
'Mid grass as soft as beds of ease,
God is good.

'Tis borne aloft upon the air,
'Tis shown where all is bright and fair,
Where clouds like snowy fleeces are,
God is good.

I hear it in the pattering rain,
That taps upon the window pane,
And leaps and flashes out again,
God is good.

I hear it in the ocean's roar,
I see it in the glittering ore,
In boundless nature's wondrous store,
God is good.

I hear it in the song birds' lay,
That carol forth at dawn of day,
And in the laugh of children's play,
God is good.

In child or bird, in tree or flower,
In summer sun, or sparkling shower,
I hear and feel it every hour,
God is good.

In tree or shrub, or grass so green,
In fleecy cloud, or starry sheen,
His goodness everywhere is seen,
God is good.

The Woman's Home Mission Society and Church Extension.

MRS. J. E. UNDERWOOD.

The question has been asked: "Could Paul have planted the Church at Philippi without the aid of Lydia?" Be that as it may, there are many places in Southern Methodism where the Church could not have been established without the aid of the Woman's Home Mission Society. This organization owes its existence to the needs of the Church. A few years after the organization of the department of Church Extension Bishop Hargrove while in charge of the Conferences in the West reported to the Board that he had been compelled to abandon several important stations because there was not a house to be found fit to accommodate a preacher and his family. He then asked the question: "Why could not the good women of the Church be induced to go into the work of building parsonages"?

Miss Helm, who was already interested in the Church Extension movement, took hold of the idea and through her zeal and her prayers, and the co-operation of the Bishops and the Board of Church Extension, in a few years the women were organized into the "Woman's Department of Church Extension." A home for every preacher has been the watchword of this society through all the years of its existence. And while the society has changed its name and enlarged its sphere of activity, the building of parsonages is still emphasized. As an evidence of this fact our reports show that during the past year more parsonages have been aided and a larger amount has been granted them than in any one year in the history of the society.

Since the organization of the society $141,610.36 has been contributed to 1,527 parsonages, and nearly $80,000 has been distributed through the Supply Department. When we are told that more than half the parsonages throughout all Southern Methodism have been built or aided by this society we realize that it has indeed been an important factor in the Extension of the Church.

Under the blessings of God and the leadership of consecrated womanhood the society has magnified its opportunities until now we find it the means of extending the Church in other ways. The department of City Missions is now aiding very materially in the establishment of the Church. Deaconesses and City Missionaries who are under the control of the Board are developing work in many neglected sections of our cities, Sunday-schools and other features of church work have been organized, and plans are being developed for building churches. Does not this mean "Church Extension?"

It certainly means the extension of the work and influences of the Church by the agencies which it has established.

I cannot close this article without reminding the Board of Church Extension in our Conference of the unity of purpose and design that has always existed between these two institutions of our Church. Brethren we have a right to expect your co-operation. We would also be glad to have the support and sympathy of all North Carolina Methodism. This interest of the Church deserves more than it has received at our hands. There is still a wide field for our activity. There are more than a thousand charges in Southern Methodism that are without parsonages. There are more than a thousand pastors who are living on salaries of less than three hundred dollars per year. These are the ones who are paying rent for homes for their families out of their meagre salaries.

Church Extension.

BISHOP W. A. CANDLER.

The work of Church Extension is a form of mission work, and that, too, a most important form. It houses and preserves the fruits of the missionaries' toil, which otherwise would suffer much loss. The housing partakes of the importance of the harvest which it shelters. In the month of April, 1739, Mr. Wesley began field preaching, and in the month of May of the same year he bought the first Methodist house of worship. That was the beginning of Church Extension with the "people called Methodists," and in one form or another it has been going on ever since. May it never cease until every congregation of Methodists in the world has a proper place of worship and every place in the earth has a Methodist congregation! Then the tabernacle of God will descend out of heaven, and we shall need no more the earthly temples wherein we now worship the Builder of the temple not made with hands. Until then we shall need to push the work of church building in all lands.

The Very Foundation

BISHOP C. B. GALLOWAY.

The cause of Church Extension has had to be content with the crumbs that fall from the table. In cases where pastors take omnibus collections, it has been discriminated against in the final distribution. And yet it is vital to our cause at home and abroad. It is possible not extravagant to say that upon these material structures spiritual religion largely depends. There is no question as to their vital relation to our denominational interests. The family life of the church cannot be developed in a school-house or union church. Men will fight for their homes and firesides, but you never heard of a man dying for his boarding-house. You have my cordial sympathy in your good work.

Justifies the Wisdom of Its Organization.

BISHOP W. W. DUNCAN.

The record of the Church Extension of our church justifies the wisdom of its organization, and vindicates its right to a generous support from all our people. Many houses of worship and home for preachers' families have been made possible, which otherwise would not have blessed the church.

Church Extension.

BISHOP GRANBERY.

The purpose and result of our Church Extension System. 1. Pioneer work; in new territory, thinly populated sections, and cities of rapid growth. It is true that each Annual Conference raises funds for domestic missions; but these are absorbed in the support of the ministry. The cost of building houses of worship is an extra which must be met promptly, and is in many cases too great for the resources of the communities. Church Extension helps at the pinch. This is extending the kingdom of heaven in our own land. Valuable aid has gone also to a few points in foreign fields; and much more should be done, and will be done. 2. Neat and commodious churches are built instead of comfortless and unsightly houses. 3. Our people are not discouraged and embarrassed by unmanageable debts. Donations of the Boards enable them to meet the necessary expense of building without going into debt, or loans at moderate interest provide an opportunity to pay off the debt within a few years.

Our Showing.

DR. P. H. WHISNER, CORRESPONDING SECRETARY

I rely much on the facts to influence the people to work for Church Extension.

We now own 14,872 churches. Five thousand two hundred and sixty of these have been aided by Church Extension. The total value of these churches is $25,203,303. Church Extension has supplied to these churches $1,515,139 in the 21 years of its history. How many of our present churches would not now exist but for Church Extension no man can tell. How many of them would be very inferior to what they are but for Church Extension no man can tell. How many of them would be more embarrassed with debt than they are no man can tell.

We have now 17,897 societies. This shows that we have 3,025 societies without houses of worship. These cannot properly prosper till they are housed. This shows the present need, and as this need is met there will be other societies forming—and so the need will continue.

Louisville, Ky., February 4, 1904.

The Building of Chapels

DR. G. B. WINTON.

The building of chapels is an integral and very fruitful element in Foreign Mission work. The ground conquered must be fortified or it cannot be held. A house gives a promise of permanency which impresses both friends and enemies. It checks the disintegrating forces which are always so active in congregations of poor and ignorant people. Moreover it is a form of benevolence which less than almost any other tends to pauperize the native church. They see in it proof of the benevolent intentions of the missionary and his people. "He loveth our nation and hath built us a synagogue." Such were the credentials of the Roman Captain stationed in Galilee. The spirit that points skyward in heathen lands tells alike of God's love and the love of Christian men who amid sacrifices have gathered the money to build these monuments of love.

The Work of Missions.

BISHOP A. COKE SMITH.

The work of Missions is one form of Church Extension, for it seeks to push the gospel into "the regions beyond." The Church Extension Society proposes to entrench the army of invasion and make the occupation of the countries entered permanent. Nor is its work at home less important. Here it looks after the weak points in the line and strengthens them. Or, to change the figure, it is the expression of fellowship in the church family where the strong help the weak and the older lend to the younger till they are able to help themselves.

Reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man.—Bacon.

Church Extension.

BISHOP E. E. HOSS.

I have always regarded the work of Church Extension as a right arm of power in our Methodism. But I must confess that I never knew until recently the full measure of its usefulness. In the Western fields particularly it has helped us to hold many places which otherwise we should have been compelled to abandon. If our people could only be waked up to see how great is the work which it is actually accomplishing, they would surely rally to its support. The time ought speedily to come when the full amount of assessments for this cause will be reported in every Conference. The deficits are a reproach to us. Let us wipe them out, and go ahead with fresh energy.

Love and Law.

C. F. SHERRILL.

The altar does not consecrate the gift. The spirit of the giver does. Love is greater than Law.

When Jesus died on the Cross, He had no people in which to embody His religion. He has since gotten to Himself a vast sacramental host. This He has done by teaching men to become like Himself. Wherever one imbibes the Spirit of Christ and becomes like His Lord, one is added to that ever-growing number that constitute His people.

* * *

The pride of race is a hard thing to give up. The racial characteristic is well nigh unconquerable. How beautiful is it, though, that in Christ, is neither Jew nor Greek, barbarian nor Scythian, bond nor free. In Him it is a household of saints. The family of God.

* * *

The Mosaic institution fills the Old Testament. For a thousand years it was uppermost in the mind of the Jew. Very little reference does Christ make to it. Never once does He mention circumcision. The Beatitudes are in another clime from that of ritualism. If the Jews had been inventing Jesus, why this silence? Why is there no mention of these things most sacred to them? As Nicodemus said, Christ was a "Teacher come from God." The blossom of Judaism dropped when the fruit of Christianity appeared. The shadow gave way to the substance. The type was fulfilled by the anti-type.

* * *

The smallest in the kingdom of God is greater than John the Baptist. John was strong in condemnation; he was weak in sympathy. His denunciation was as the lightning flash; he failed in pity and patience for the erring. The austere man of the wilderness was wanting in the gentler virtues. His zeal overshadowed his love. John was not a full man. He lacked the gentler yet greater Christian graces. The humblest who know the Christ may be greater than he. In this sense the least in the kingdom of God may excel John. The true measure of life is the love of Christ. It is in the reach of hovels and palaces, nor does God withhold it from the great or small.

* * *

The keynote of John the Baptist's ministry was reformation. Regeneration was that of Christ. One came with judgment. The other with mercy. One came for condemnation. The other for salvation. Law was uppermost with John. Love with Christ.

Raleigh District Conference.

Cary, N. C., June 30.—Promptly at 9 o'clock this morning the Raleigh District Conference convened in its thirty-eighth annual session. Dr. W. H. Moore, the Presiding Elder, conducted the opening devotional exercises and presided over the meeting.

At roll-call ten of the eighteen ministers in the District responded to their names; but only eighteen out of the seventy-two lay representatives were present. The heavy rains of recent days will, it is thought, bring about an almost full attendance of delegates, as the land will be too wet to plow for several days and the country members will be able to leave their farms.

Rev. J. Marvin Culbreth was re-elected secretary of the Conference. The standing committees necessary to complete the organization of the Conference were duly appointed.

Reports were heard from the several charges on the Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues, and educational interests of the church. The Sunday-school reports made showed an enrollment of 3,390. It was stated that competent teachers are very much in demand, that many of the Sunday-schools had been organized into missionary societies and that all of the schools, with two or three exceptions, used Methodist literature exclusively.

Only five league charters were reported, four from Raleigh and one from Smithfield. A very great and substantial interest in educational affairs was reported.

The sermons by Rev. F. M. Shamberger, of Oxford station, and by Rev. J. D. Pegram, of Granville Circuit, were very warmly received. The addresses on the Epworth League work, by Rev. J. M. Culbreth, and on Sunday-school matters, by Rev. W. H. Puckett, evoked considerable interest.

Cary, N. C., July 2.—The afternoon session of the second day was opened with prayer by Rev. N. S. Seabolt.

The Presiding Elder called the Conference to order and the business of hearing reports on missions was taken up and finished.

On motion of Mr. W. S. Stephens, the matter of determining where the next Conference should be held was taken up. Smithfield and Oxford were put in nomination. On Oxford's withdrawing, Smithfield was unanimously chosen by a rising vote.

Addresses on missions were listened to from Revs. N. E. Coletrain and F. A. Bishop, after which the Conference balloted for delegates to the annual Conference with the following result.

Delegates: Messrs. J. R. How, M. P. Davis, H. B. Jordan and Millard Mial; alternates, Messrs. B. B. Adams and J. H. Bullock.

An adjournment was taken till 8.15, when Rev. J. H. Shore preached to a full house.

The second day's session of the Raleigh District Conference began most auspiciously. With bright sunshine and a steady, cool breeze from the west, the muddy streets soon became conveniently passable at any point.

A large number of the members of the Conference assembled at the church at 9 o'clock for the opening service of prayer and song. Rev. G. T. Simmons, of the Youngsville Circuit, offered the prayer, and immediately thereafter Dr. Moore called the body to order. The roll-call showed that every pastor in the District was present, except three; and two of these are reported to be detained at their homes on account of sickness in their families. Selma Circuit and Wakefield Circuit are the only charges not represented by one or more lay delegates. There are present today thirty-four lay representatives.

After the calling of the roll, Dr. Moore called for reports from the preachers in regard to the missionary activity of the several charges. These reports answered the following questions: 1. What interest is taken in the cause? 2. What has been done to create an interest among our people? 3. Have the missionary collections been taken? 4. What steps have been taken to insure full collections this year? These questions brought out the information that there are eight Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies in the District and four Woman's Home Missionary Societies. The latter societies represent a total membership of 140, which has, during the last year and a quarter contributed $595.36 to the missionary enterprises of the Home Board. Three Young Woman's Missionary Societies are organized, six juvenile societies, and two Sunday-schools are organized into societies to promote the missionary spirit. Four charges reported their missionary collections already paid in full; eight have paid in part; leaving six that have not yet taken a collection.

The third and last day's session of the Conference was opened with prayer by Rev. W. H. Puckett, of the Oxford Circuit.

The body being called to order by the Presiding Elder, the committee on recommendations to the annual Conference for admission reported. Revs. R. F. Bumpas, F. A. Bishop, J. D. Pegram, reported that Mr. A. Jones had passed the required examination, and favored his recommendation. By a unanimous vote the Conference adopted the committee's report.

The committee on quarterly conference records made such an excellent report that Dr. Moore commended their work in open conference.

A resolution was offered by Rev. G. T. Simmons that the Conference ought to meet at such a time that the members and delegates could get home before Sunday, was adopted; also a resolution of thanks by the same to the people of Cary for their entertainment of the Conference.

A third resolution was offered by Rev. Simmons, to the effect that the preachers ought to put themselves on record as opposing Sunday trains and other forms of desecrating the Sabbath, were adopted with only one vote in the negative.

Rev. W. E. Coletrane introduced a strong resolution pledging the support of the Conference to the interests of Greensboro Female College, which was adopted.

The following local preachers passed the examination of character: Americus Jones, Johnson Sorrell, B. F. Dixon, I. A. White, W. S. Hester and Dr. R. H. Whitaker.

Rev. Livingston Johnson, Secretary of the Baptist Board of Missions, was introduced to the Conference.

The spiritual condition of the church, as described in the reports of the several pastors, was especially good.

After the reading and the adoption of the minutes, the Conference adjourned sine die.

Dr. Kilgo, having been unexpectedly called away to South Carolina with a sick friend, did not attend the Conference.

At 11 o'clock Dr. W. H. Moore preached a very able and beautiful sermon on Christian Education.

It is very significant that every pastor expressed himself as confident that all the collections would be paid in full this year.

Greensboro Female College was represented by Rev. Dr. S. B. Turrentine, of West Market Street Church, Greensboro. Dr. Turrentine spoke only twenty minutes, but his message was full of encouragement to the friends of the glorious old institution so sorely afflicted yet so full of strength. The speaker stated that since the College was burned $60,000 had been raised in gold bond subscriptions to rebuild the institution; that Greensboro Female College would not antagonize the proposed Woman's Annex at Trinity, as its province would be separate and distinct, viz.: to furnish popular, as opposed to higher, education for our young women. He said that it was utterly impracticable to talk of selling the property at Greensboro and building elsewhere; for all the subscriptions secured had been given on condition that the college should be rebuilt at Greensboro. If the Methodist Church fails to rebuild, and at Greensboro, it will lose $100,000. In closing, Dr. Turrentine declared that if the present crisis can be tided over in ten days, a handsome endowment fund will be forthcoming on easy terms. His speech made a good impression on the Conference.

At 11.30 Rev. R. F. Bumpas preached to a full house on the subject of Missions, fully sustaining the record made by his predecessors in the pulpit at the services yesterday.

The next time we are tempted to be discouraged, let us simply say, "I will not yield. You are an old story. You have decided me before. And even if you seem real now, I know you are not. Behind the clouds God is still shining. I shall yet see Him, and I shall see Him sooner if I reject you. I will rejoice in hope and fear nothing."

A Protest.

My Dear Brother:—I am so much pained at your allusion to Walt Whitman in such an unkind manner in this week's issue that I must beg leave to enter a foundly protest. I am leaning to admire him as one of America's greatest productions.

John Burroughs says of him: "Call his work poetry or prose, or what you will, that it is an inspired utterance of some sort any competent person ought to be able to see. And what else do we demand of any work than that it be inspired? How all questions of form and art and all other questions sink into insignificance beside that. . . . . It is the best lesson in nationalism and universal charity that this century has seen."

Whitman's preface to "Leaves of Grass," is classed among the world's greatest essays.

Burroughs again says of him: "I look upon Whitman as the one mountain thus far in our literary landscape."

Joel Chandler Harris says of his work: "It is the inevitable, unaccountable, irresistible forward movement of man in the making of this Republic." It is true, he says, that "those who are merely literary will find little substance in the great drama of Democracy outlined in his writing." "But," he says, "those who know nature at first hand will find therein the thrill and glow of poetry and the essence of melody.'

Excuse me for this interruption. The name of Whitman ought not to be placed by the side of the false prophet.

Very truly, O. H. ALLEN.

Some Observations.

As I have gone through the Washington District, I have learned some things not very gratifying to a true, loyal Methodist. Some of them, however, are not peculiar to this district.

One of my observations is, that as a church, we are not more than holding our own; we are simply staying. Really in some localities signs seem to indicate that we will not do that much longer. Our people largely do not have their children baptized, and quite a large percentage of those joining the church insist on being immersed to be satisfied, and sometimes entirely of Methodist parentage, too. Of what is this disbelief in our doctrines the result: I answer—of the cowardice which has kept our preachers from preaching doctrinal sermons on the subjects and mode of baptism. Other preachers have boldly disputed our teachings and gone unchallenged so long that our own people are discrediting them. It is, therefore, time that we throw away such sickly sentiment; be like other preachers, have some backbone, and preach what we believe for the instruction of our people, let others think what they may. Unless we do this and get a catechism of Methodist doctrine in our Sunday-schools, we needn't be surprised at land-slides of our people from us. If we must continue to regard the sensitiveness of good neighbor A or B, who let their preachers lambast us and our doctrines without a protest from them, and go on in silent submission, when shall this leaving us cease? I verily believe other folks begin to think we are afraid to preach our doctrines or don't believe them ourselves, so long have we been generally silent on them. I favor a change, and am advising my preachers to preach more doctrinal sermons, being always careful to abuse no other. Hasn't a Methodist preacher as much right in his pulpit as others in theirs? So, if anyone pouts about what he says to inform his people, just let that one pout it out.

Another one of my observations is, that in several, mostly Methodist communities, the principals and teachers of high schools and academies are mostly other than Methodists. They are principally Missionary Baptists. It doesn't take a prophet to correctly forecast the result of this state of affairs, for on the surface appears the fact that these Baptist principals and teachers will incidently drop Baptist teachings in the minds of our Methodist children. Then a Baptist preacher will be invited to hold a series of services in the school building, resulting in the organization of a Baptist church out of Methodist folks. What do our Methodist folks mean anyway? And what are our Methodist preachers doing that they don't demand a recognition of Methodist rights by others?

In Weldon, Bethel, Belhaven, Swan Quarter, Ocracoke and other places where the Methodists are in the ascendency this demand should be made and pressed at once. But some one will say, "let's have peace." Away with such an idea, when peace continues to mean our loss. Have our rights peaceably, if we can. Get them by war, if we can't.

On inquiry, however, I learned that it was so in one community, because no Methodist teacher would teach for the price they could pay. Can't we have our schools give us some lower-priced teachers? Wouldn't it be better to look a little more to the preservation of our Methodism in this respect and arrange to increase our supply of teachers for these demands?

Honor, to Whom Honor is Due.

In the Advocate of June 22, Bro. D. H. Dixon published an article in which he goes way back to find an inspiration which led to building the new Methodist Church at Hookerton.

Like Brother Dixon, I greatly appreciate the valuable help given by Dr. Jordan, who not only contributed liberally in means, but being secretary and treasurer of the building committee, gave a large portion of his valuable time and services in supervising the work and having it done properly and according to contract.

Dr. Jordan is a special friend of mine and one for whom I have the highest regard, and I do not desire to detract one iota of credit from him or anyone else.

But to the good ladies of Hookerton and vicinity (God bless them) are we indebted for the beautiful little church now located in that quiet little town.

Feeling the need of a suitable building in which to worship, they suggested that a new church be built. The question was diseussed by the male members, and indefinitely postponed. But the ladies said: "We must have a new church, and if you men will raise what money you can, we will raise the balance." A subscription list was then started, and the ladies organized a Church Aid Society, and went to work with that zeal and energy that know no failure. Meeting day after day, and night after night, they worked faithfully, and when the building was completed and paid for, it was found that they had raised two-fifths of the money required.

Some of those good ladies have since moved away to other sections, and some have "crossed over the river." But when all have gone to receive their reward, that little church will still be a living monument to their memory.

Respectfully, J. J. EDWARDS.

Ayden, N. C., July 5, 1904.

Fayetteville District Conference.

The Fayetteville District Conference will meet in Jonesboro, N. C., July 20-24. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. E. R. Welch.

On Tuesday night, the 19th, we hope every member of the Conference can be present at this service.

Delegates and visitors can reach Jonesboro from any direction in the afternoon over the Southern, Atlantic Coast Line and Seaboard Air Line. The preachers will please see that their Quarterly Conference records are on hand for examination.

The Family

The Little White Hearse.

Somebody's baby was buried to-day—
The empty white hearse from a grave rumbled back,
And the morning somehow seemed less smiling and gray,
As I paused on the walk while it crossed on its way,
And a shadow seemed drawn o'er the sun's golden track.

Somebody's baby was laid out to rest,
White as a snow-drop, and fair to behold,
And the soft little hands were crossed over the breast,
And those hands and the lips and the eyelids were pressed
With kisses as hot as the eyelids were cold.

Somebody saw it go out of her sight,
Under the coffin lid—out through the door;
Somebody finds only darkness and blight
All through the glory of summer sunlight;
Somebody's baby will waken no more.

Somebody's sorrow is making me weep—
I know not her name, but I echo her cry,
For the dearly bought baby she longed so to keep,
The baby that rode to its long-lasting sleep
In the little white hearse that went rumbling by.

I know not her name, but her sorrow I know;
While I paused on the crossing I lived it once more,
And back to my heart surged that river of woe
That but in the breast of a mother can flow,
For the little white hearse has been, too, at my door.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

The Old Quilting Bee.

Softly down the winding years
From some sweet other time
And echo comes as musical
And mellow as the rhyme
The poet makes while dreaming
In his mood of old women at
The old-time quilting bee.

They talk of knitting needles, of spnning wheels and such,
Of how the old-time method gave the cloth a finer touch;
Of husbands, too, they gossip (old angels without wings!)
Of crops and cows, of whooping cough, and several things—
But never once of politics, except perhaps to say
The youngster in the cradle was the big man of the day.

Softly down the winding years
From some sweet other time
An echo comes as musical
And mellow as the rhyme
The poet makes while dreaming
In his mood of ecstasy—
The voices of old women at
The old-time quilting bee.

They never spoke of fashions then, the low neck and train;
The styles were very simple, and everything was plain.
The pictures were the grass-knit lawn, the waving wood-skirt field;
The music, of bright-throated birds, and of the orchard's yield—
They never spoke of politics, except perhaps to say
The youngster in the cradle would be President some day.

—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Why in the Morning?

Dr. Joseph Parker once gave his reasons for his choice of the morning hour as the time for communing with God, in these words: "The morning is the time fixed for meeting the Lord. This very word 'morning' is as a cluster of rich grapes. Let me crush them, and drink the sacred wine. In the morning! Then God means me to be at my best in strength and hope. I have not to climb in my weakness. In the night I have buried yesterday's fatigue, and in the morning I take a new lease of energy. Sweet morning! There is hope in its music. Blessed is the day whose morning is sanctified! Successful is the day whose first victory was won in prayer! Holy is the day whose dawn finds thee on the top of the mount! Health is established in the morning. Wealth is won in the morning. The light is brightest in the morning. 'Wake, psaltery and harp; I myself will awake early.'"

Hungry for Love.

The world is hungry for love. It is not hungry for great poets, great soldiers, great inventors, but is longing for great lovers. A great lover is simply a soul set free enough from selfishness to live in other lives, and free enough from reserve and cowardice to tell others how he loves them.

For it is not enough to love and not tell it. As Miss Woolson has written:

"They love us, and we know it; this suffices
For reason's share.
Why should they pause to give that love expression
With gentle care?
Why should they pause? But still our hearts are aching
With all the gnawing pain
Of hungry love that longs to hear the music,
And longs and longs in vain."

Love is the true home of the soul. Sometimes we speak of heaven as the "home of the soul," but, as Scott sung:

"Love is heaven and heaven is love."

One of the most beautiful stories we have ever read is told of Wendell Phillips, the great orator. He was passionately devoted to his invalid wife, and one day, after he had lectured, his friends urged him not to return to Boston that night. "The last train has left," they said, "and you will be obliged to take a carriage. It means twelve miles of cold riding through the sleet." "Ah, yes," he replied, "but at the end of them I shall find Annie Phillips."

No journey is too long with love at the end of it, no task is too hard with love for its reward. Love is the great incentive to labor, the mighty provocative to ambition. Live for some one else, love and be loved, and the development of the best that is in you will come as a matter of course. Henry Van Dyke has put the thought into verse:

"Self is the only prison that can ever bind the soul,
Love is the only angel who can bid the gates unroll;
And, when he comes to call thee, arise and follow fast.
His way may lead through darkness, but it leads to light at last."

The most successful men, not only as God counts success, but even according to men's poor measure of success, are those that care for others. They live in others' successes as well as their own. They add the happiness of others to their own joy. The world lies at the feet of the man who loves enough.

That is, all the world worth having. Not the world of greed and gold, not the world of war and murder, not the world of pride and envy. God is the chief lover, the one pattern of love. Every one that loveth is born of God, and whatever his Father has is his.—The Christian Work.

Ministers' Boys.

Are you the son of a minister, or are some of your boy friends ministers' sons?

It is a common saying that ministers' sons turn out badly. Well, don't you believe it. There is a noted French scientist who has studied into this subject, and he has a long list of names to prove that the sons of ministers make up the largest number of the world's great men. Here, for instance, are some of the names: Agassiz, Hallam, Jonathan Edwards, Whateley, Parkham, Bancroft, the Wesley's Beechers and Surgeons, Cowper, Coleridge, Tennyson, Lowell, Holmes, Emerson, Charles Kingsley, Matthew Arnold, Dean Stanley, Macauley, Thackeray, Sir Christopher Wren, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Swift Sterne, Hazlitt, Presidents Cleveland and Aruthur, Peter Stuyvesant, Adoniram Judson, Timothy Dwight, Henry Clay, Fritz Greene Halleck, Morse the inventor, Justices Field and Brewer, United States Senator Dolliver, and many others in the Senate.—American Boy.

The Devil May Have Brought It.

I will tell an olden story; though 't is olden, it is true
(It is very, very olden; 't is so olden it is new),
About an olden woman in an olden, mean abode
In a gloomy, olden forest on a lonely, olden road.

'T is night—she sits in darkness, she is hungry, she is weak,
And a tear of supplication courses down her withered cheek,
While she trustfully prays unto the Lord to send her bread;
"Please, Lord," she cries, "just drop it down the chimney of my shed.'

A pair of noisy hoodlums riding down that dreary way,
Rein in their steeds beside the hut and hear the woman pray.
They gallop to the nearest down and buy some loaves of bread,
Then gallop back again and halt beside the humble shed.

The woman still is praying for the Lord to send her bread,
Still crying, "Lord, just drop it down the chimney of my shed."
When suddenly her prayerful cries are changed to cries of fear,
While vulgar oaths and ribald songs grate harshly on her ear.

The rowdies climb upon the roof, approach the chimney-top;
Aloft they hold the provender then gently let it drop;
Down, down into the fire-place the erumb of comfort crashes,
The thankful creature plucks it from the embers and the ashes.

"Say, tell us, grannie," cries a voice, "now tell us on the dead,
Do you believe it was for sure, the Lord who sent the bread?"
"Ah, yes!" the grateful crone replies; "O, thank the Lord I got it!
Aye, it was the Lord who sent it, but the devil he has brought it."

* * * * * * *

There was once a able preacher by the name, I think, of Brown,
Who held revival-meetings and converted all the town,
But one who knew his record let Cat Thomas from the bag,
And Brown was shown beyond a doubt to be a scalawag.

And yet there's much improvement; men who once were in the gutter
Are sober, keep their children well supplied with bread and butter.
The town received a benefit—no matter how it got it—
The Lord was plaesed to send it, though the devil may have brought it.

* * * * * *

My friend, while passing downward through this vale of joy and woe,
Why need those threatful troubles make you worry as you go?
The foes you view with fearfulness and evils that you dread
Are turned and often twisted till they're blessings on your head.

The enemy who vexes you, aye even plans your fall,
May help to forge a chain of circumstances, after all,
By which you gain advantages; you scarcely may have sought it,
But the Lord has sent a blessing, though the devil may have brought it.

—T. C. McConnell.

Bishop Morris.

I regard the Board of Church Extension as second in importance only to the Missionary Society, if, indeed, second to that; and I regard the Loan Fund as the best strike that has yet been made for the cause.

Bishop Scott.

My estimate of this Church Extension movement is very high. I place it side by side with the Missionary movement. It is a missionary movement. You can't conceive of the great objects being accomplished at which the Missionary movement aims, without a movement like this.

Bishop Simpson.

What means all this? The Missionary idea I can comprehend, but the Church has taken into its bosom this other great idea of Church Extension. God seems to be saying to the Church: Intrench yourselves, build forts, garrison them well; a struggle is coming. We must have our places of defence and concentration.

Bishop Warren.

The Board of Church Extension is the Big Brother to thousands of younger brothers all over our country. It is Joseph in Egypt preparing homes for the rest of the family. With all due reverence it may be called an Elder Brother preparing a mansion for those who would otherwise have none.

Church Extension.

M. E. Church South, organized May, 1882, and chartered February 20, 1884.

The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them.

How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts!

My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.

The visible and enduring evidence of our victorious Methodism.

The Loan Fund.

I can think of nothing that impresses me more favorably or as favorably as putting money into this Loan Fund, to go on repeating itself, and reproducing its blessings from age to age. It doesn't stop simply with the first blessing, it helps build one church and comes back again with the glad tidings of what it has done, and goes again and builds, or help to build, another church, and coming back again says, "Here am I, send me," and goes again and again.

Why Build Churches.

1. Because in every community a church building is indispensable. The preaching of the Gospel, church organization, social meetings, Sunday-schools, the salvation of the people require it.

2. Because hundreds of communities have no church and cannot build without aid.

3. Because the highest promptings of patriotism demand the multiplication of Methodist Episcopal churches which everywhere symbolize civil and religious liberty.

Bishop Morrison.

The Loan Fund never wearies in well-doing. Ever giving, yet never exhausted; toiling ever, yet never tired; a sort of everlasting benediction; an immortal Good Samaritan, with wine, oil and bandages for the bleeding and helpless churches of the land. Going to the west, it fortifies a point; returning to the east, it repairs a breach in the wall. It leaves joy and gladness in its pathway. It is a sort of financial angel flying through mid-heaven, preaching the everlasting Gospel. Every dollar that goes into its treasury becomes imperishable. It gives for all time, it lives for God. If you would make your money immortal, cast it in here. It will come back to you with exceeding increase in eternity.

Who Should Help.

1. Every Methodist who recognizes the connectionalism and progress of his denomination secured by general Church Extension.

2. Every member of an individual church should contribute something to build other churches than his own.

These are my resources—eternal life, the help of man when he is at his best, and the powers of nature on my side.—Edward Everett Hale.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE

SAVED FROM TERRIBLE DEATH.

The family of Mrs. M. L. Bobbitt of Bargerton, Tenn., saw her dying and were powerless to save her. The most skillful physicians and every remedy used, failed, while consumption was slowly but surely taking her life. In this terrible hour Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption turned despair into joy. The first bottle brought immediate relief and its continued use completely cured her. It's the most certain cure in the world for all throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed Bottles 50c. and $1.00. Trial Bottles Free at all druggists.

Oh! the Good of It! Oh! the Economy of It!

We have been using Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy in our family for the past eighteen months and find it to be a good medicine. Our little boy, five years old, was afflicted with a stomach trouble all his life. He took medicine from four of the best physicians in our community. We couldn't give him meats or vegetables for two months at the time, and all the medicine he took seemed to help him only for a little while. Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy was recommended to us and we thought we would give it a trial. He took sixteen bottles and now he seems to be in splendid health and eats anything he wants. We also gave the Remedy to our teething baby and found that it did her more good than anything we could get. When she would have high fever, sick stomach, when red spots would come on the tongue and her mouth get sore, I would give her a teaspoonful of the Remedy in a teaspoonful of sweetened water every hour until she was relieved and then gave her the Remedy three or four times a day.

We haven't had to call in a doctor to one of our children on account of sickness since we commenced using Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy.

WHAT IS HE STANDING THERE FOR?

Let a man stand in one spot, weekly, for some time and the fact of his stationary position will attract attention. Somebody will ask, after awhile, what is he there for?

Now, the same will apply to four specimens in foot-wear, illustrated by the cuts, appearing weekly, in this paper, i. e., "Dixie Girl," "Dixie Boy," "Roxie Ward," and "Americus" Shoes.

Ask your dealer to show them to you the next time you visit the store. If he can't do it write us, and we will tell you where they are on sale.

A New Worker in Brazil.

Among those whom we mentioned last week as having sailed recently for Brazil was Miss Ada Parker, of New Orleans. We copy the following in regard to her from the daily papers of her city. Miss Parker is a New Orleans girl; she was born and raised here, and after gaining a primary education in private and public schools, she became a pupil at the Home Institute, where she became imbued with many of the high ideals taught by Miss Sophie Wright, the noble principal of the Academy. Miss Parker, always of a religious turn of mind, joined the Epworth League, and worked in the local field of the Felicity Street Methodist Church, of which Dr. Drake is pastor. Miss Parker was sent to the Scarritt Bible and Training School, Kansas City, by the Louisiana W. F. M. S. of the M. E. Church, South, after finishing at the Home Institute; and on the 10th of last May she graduated and returned home, but left to attend the Conference of the Mission Board held in Jacksonville, Fla., on May 18. At Jacksonville Miss Parker received the appointment to the Brazilian field; and feeling herself called to the work, accepted and came home to make preparation for the trip.

The young lady's brother, Rev. Geo. D. Parker, who was formerly pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, but resigned to enter the mission field, is now stationed at Rio Janiero. Although she will be in the same country, she will be thrown in contact with her brother only at intervals.

Miss Parker did not seem disposed to talk freely on her call, and the work that she has taken up, saying that she did not care for too much publicity. She said, however, in reply to the reporter's questions, that although she hated to leave her family and friends, she felt that the Lord wanted her for His work, and when He summoned her she would go. * * * Miss Parker is a bright, cheerful young woman, of charming manners and developed mind, and her attainments natural and acquired as well fit her for the labor that is before her.

Scotch Woman's Mission Money.

"If I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and if I give my body to be burned but have not love, it profiteth me nothing." (I. Cor. xiii. 3.)

Some one tells the story of a Scotch woman who lived on oatmeal that she might give to missions. A friend gave her a six pence to buy a chop. She said: "I have been without chops nine years; I can do without the chop." The friend, some time after, being at dinner where a number of wealthy people were present, told the story of that chop. Many were deeply impressed, and one lady among them spoke up and said: "I never went without a chop for Christ yet. I will give a thousand pounds for missions." Another and another spoke, until, around that dinner table, the old Scotch woman's six pence worth of mutton chop had grown into twelve thousand dollars to send the gospel to the heathen. He who fed the thousands of people with the few loaves and fishes long ago had blessed that chop, and made it large enough to feed the multitude again. O if there be love with it a chop foregone for Christ's sake is worth more than a million dollars given without love.—Selected.

Bible Women.

A view of the course of study arranged for the Bible women in Shanghai gives us an insight to the kind of work these women are prepared to do in the far east.

First Year.—The Sans-Ts-Kyung; the Four Gospels; the "Two Friend," in colloqy; catechism on "The True Doctrine," by C. F. Reid; "Gospel Stories;" "Talks About the True Doctrine," by Miss Safford.

Second Year.—New Testament (Acts, the Epistles, Revelation); "Pilgrims Progress," in colloquy; "Manual for Workers;" "Helps to Bible Study," Miss Haygood; "Ladder of Learning," vol. 1., Mr. Yen: physiology.

Third Year.—Old Testament (Genesis, Exodus, Psalms), in colloquy; "Ladder of Learning," vol. 2: Science Trainer; the "Gate of Learning."

Fourth Year.—Deuteronomy, Isaiah, Daniel, in the colloquy; "Ladder of Learning," vol. 3; geography: Old Testament History; "Evidences of Christianity," Dr. Martin.

While this is the prescribed course the order in which the studies of any one year shall be taken is left to the discretion of the lady in charge of the Bible School.

REMARKS

The members of every Auxiliary will read these figures with much interest, and with me will thank Mrs. Prince for sending. Two Auxiliaries did not give any report of Baby Mite Boxes, and two failed to send any of the Florine McEachern Brigade. I earnestly hope the Third Vice-Presidents will not allow this to occur again. These departments should be reported directly to Mrs. J. A. Spiers, Selma, by the officers in charge. Please cheer her eager, faithful spirit hereafter by sending full, regular and punctual reports.

The New Dormitory Sue Bennett School.

This building is progressing rapidly, and when completed will contain twenty-four bed-rooms and three halls, giving accommodation for fifty boys.

The money in hand will barely suffice for the erection of building, leaving nothing for furniture. Thirty dollars will furnish a room very plainly, and auxiliaries and individuals may have the pleasure of contributing this amount and naming a room for some loved one.

Are Any Willing to Help the Mountain Boys?

I feel that the hearts of many parents with boys in Heaven and on earth, too, perhaps, will answer this question with a glad affirmative, and I trust ways will be found to carry the thought into execution. It may necessitate careful planning and self-denial, but let us remember the weary years of self-sacrifice practiced by many of these Mountain Mothers, and with them realize the sweetness of it. "In the early dawn of the Christian era King David uttered these splendid words: 'Neither will I offer unto the Lord sacrifices of that which doth cost me nothing.' Surely we who live in the noontide of gospel privilege should heartily echo this sentiment."

A VERY CLOSE CALL.

"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters, and after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists. Price 50 cents.

Editorial

AN IMPORTANT FORM OF MISSIONARY EFFORT.

It is very strange that some of the most sacred and vital enterprises of the Church should receive such scant favor at the hands of men and women who believe in the Living God and His Church.

For instance, the propagation of Bible truth in all lands is not only commanded by Christ, and inheres necessarily in the very nature of religion, but is the one condition of natural growth and ultimate triumph. This propagation is not to be limited to certain places at certain times. That is, we are not to Christianize our home land before we Christianize the land which is called "foreign." Distance from the propagating centre does not alter in the least the obligation. The Himalayan valley calls as insistently for our ministrations as does our own quiet country neighborhood. The love of God knows no metes and bounds, and when this love "is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given to us," we have within us that which cannot but close its eyes to all shades and limitations of obligation to project itself outward. In a certain sense, it is unfortunate that we have such words as "home," "domestic," and "foreign," in our missionary nomenclature. There are no "foreigners" in God's sight. All are his children in a general sense; too few in a special sense.

The enterprise, known as Church Extension, was inaugurated years ago by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The enterprise has succeeded beyond the most sanguine expectations. It has built thousands of churches in the "waste places. It has aided thousands of struggling churches, which, by themselves, were too weak to build better structures.

Yet we fear that Church Extension furnishes a dry theme for many of our people. They do not regard it with that enthusiasm which it demands.

And here comes in one of the mysteries. Church Extension represents simply an important form of missionary activity.

It is one of the unchangeable laws of our spiritual nature that we must worship God not only as individuals, but as units of a social system. We must worship socially. In order to do this we must have a special public worshipping place. The sanctuary is necessary to the church of God. The sanctuary must represent our soul's best feelings, and our souls highest loyalty. No true child of God is willing to worship in a sanctuary which in a material way does not correspond with our ideas of what God's abiding place should be. No true child of God can be willing to dwell in "an house of cedar," while the ark of the covenant of the Lord dwelleth under curtains."

The sanctuary is an integral vital part of God's great scheme for evangelizing the world. Our obligation to build comfortable churches inheres in our obligation to carry out the command of Christ, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature," which command was based upon the eternal law of Divine Love.

So we feel that we are in the highest and best sense utilizing our space this week in emphasizing the subject of Church Extension. It lies very near to the heart of Christ. We trust that the various articles will be carefully and prayerfully read, and that such reading may cause all our people to take a deeper and more practical interest in Church Extension.

The sure cure for discouragement is faith. Discouragement is simply the turning of one's eyes away from God in upon self. Such a turning is sure to bring misery and dissatisfaction. But to lift one's eyes and fix them upon God is to see how weak and impotent and transitory are all our fears and limitations, and how infinite and eternal are our hopes and confidences.

"SHORT-CUTTERS."

Long years ago a famous teacher told his pupil that "there is no royal road to geometry." In these latter days, however, that dictum has lost its force—seemingly. Advertisements in magazines and papers iterate and reiterate the fact that we can "learn it at home by mail." No profession is too learned and no trade too difficult to be taught at home whenever Uncle Sam's postman rings, or rural mail deliverer jogs his way. No doubt many persons are helped in this way in certain particular lines, but we are harassed by doubts when we are informed that a finished nurse, newspaper man, chemist, musician, lawyer, railroad man and others are turned out after a few months' study of books at home. An advertising cut shows us a lonesome country home, and we can almost hear the hoot of the owl and the melancholy croak of bull-frogs as evening shadows gather. But inside the house is disclosed an uncommonly small room, poorly furnished. At a small table is seated a young man in rough looking clothes with one leg resting gracefully on the table, in his hands a book, on the table a brightly burning lamp while the other rooms are shrouded in gloom—'tis midnight's holy hour. Six months later our student is shown in an immense railway power-house, as superintendent, while men hurry hither and thither at his command! We admire the pluck of the solitary toiler in his room, but intense disappointment awaits him. Better a good man in a lowly place than a fifth-rate man at anything.

There are no short cuts to anything worth while; never have been and never will be. The men who do things are terribly hard workers and not "short-cutters." Book knowledge is good, but it must be mixed with practice, experience and hard unremitting toil and drudgery at the beginning. The world needs trained men, and to them the rewards are given—none other need apply. We sympathize with the "at home" student; his pluck will work wonders, but let him not be deceived by plausible arguments or promise of sudden distinction, for the hill to success is a long, steep one, and no elevators are running.

MR. SPASMODIC.

We once had a friend who took it into his head to construct a steam engine which could travel over any dirt road. He was a machinist. He dreamed of wheels. He had wheels in his head. This last statement is not written with any purpose to disparage the much be-wheeled brother.

With deep interest we watched the process. Our friend himself made every part of the engine. It was intricate and massive. Our friend's eyes at our every visit would light up with enthusiasm as he told us of the ease with which that engine would fly up hill and down, with all the light gracefulness of a bird.

The auspicious day came. The engine started off and ran one hundred yards. It then stopped. After an hour's tinkering on certain parts, it ran perhaps fifty yards, and did not run again until next day, when it run across a field. It stopped then and could not be induced to run again for several days, when it ran again and could not be stopped until it ran into a ditch. The last time we saw it, it was in that ditch. Our esteem for that engine maker as a friend remained virile, but our admiration for him as an engine maker dropped a considerable number of points.

During our pastoral and our editorial experience we have thought much of that old engine. We have seen it in human form hundreds of times. Every time we see a spasmodic Christian, we see that old engine. Brother Spasmodic starts out under a full head of steam. He runs till the summer season or election times, and then stops. At the next revival he starts again and runs over into the meadow of worldiness where he stops. We see him starting again only to run into the ditch of open sin. And thus it goes.

If we would travel the road of duty with all the beautiful constancy of the water which glides onward to the sea, or the flowers which bloom on earth, or the stars which bloom in the sky, we must have within us that power which came down on Pentecost and which enables us to say, "I can do all things through Christ which strengthenth me.

WALT WHITMAN AGAIN.

We call attention to Judge Allen's article on the fourth page. It is well written in a very friendly spirit, and deserves a careful reading.

We must enter, however, several disclaimers:

(1) We were not alluding to Walt Whitman in an unkind manner, simply because we were not referring to Walt Whitman at all, but to Walt Whiteman's so-called poetry. We have never been able to consider it anything else than the most nonsensical prose. Of course, we will have to except that "poetry" which is written in metrical form. "My Captain" is really creditable. We had read the estimates of Walt Whitman as published by Judge Allen, and this only deepened the mystery. We would be willing to accept Walt Whitman's "poetry" as poetry if by so doing we could leave out some pages which contain some of the most realistic obscenity that can be found on any printed page.

(2) We were not classing Walt Whitman with Dowie. We could not be so unkind as to do this.

We were simply expressing our views on Walt Whitman's "poetry." We are no judge, however, of poetry, and our editorial experience with various "poems" that have been received at this office has not, we fear, improved our critical taste.

ROCKINGHAM DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Rockingham District Conference will convene in the Methodist Church in Gibson at 9.30 a. m., Thursday, July 21st. All members of the Conference are requested to arrive on the evening of the 20th. The pastors will please make written reports. JOHN N. COLE.

Rockingham, N. C., July 8, 1904.

An Appeal.

Bro. Z. T. Harrison, a good man and a faithful minister of Christ, died leaving a wife and six small children. They have no home. A lot has been given them in a desirable commu[nity] where there is a good school. We can build them a home with about five hundred dollars. This will practically insure the education of these children of the dead minister. I ask a hundred brethren who are well and strong, and are reasonably prosperous, and are spared to their families, to send me five dollars each to build a home for this mother and children.

JOHN N. COLE.

Methodist Mention

State.

We congratulate New Bern and Charlotte on their glorious victory over the saloon last week.

Mr. L. S. Grant, one of our Methodist brethren at New Bern, made us a pleasant visit on Monday.

Elizabeth City District Conference at Sunbury this week. We are glad that it is the only one this week.

Rev. A. J. Parker is in the midst of a successful meeting at Manteo. His people have granted him a month's vacation.

Since our last report we have received forty-five new subscribers, which brings the total received since Conference up to 1,379.

Rev. T. Hinohara, the Japanese student at Trinity College, is attending the District Conferences in Western North Carolina.

Mr. Bryan Tyson, one of our Advocate friends at Pittsboro, N. C., has in the last Christian Herald, a well written article on "War and Arbitration."

Dr. E. A. Yates, whose health for some time has not been so good, has gone to Beaufort for the summer. We trust that he may return with improved health.

Rev. "Reb" Leak, who has done in the last few years a great amount of evangelistic work, has been filling the appointments of Roberdel Circuit since the death of Rev. Z. T. Harrison.

We are requested by Rev. J. B. Hurley, P. E. of Fayetteville District, to announce that Rev. T. A. Sikes, of Charlotte N. C., has been appointed P. E., of Siler City Circuit, made vacant by the death of Dr. Jonathan Sanford.

Rev. J. A. Hornaday, pastor of Greenville Station, issues for the benefit of his congregation a most helpful sheet called "The Methodist Quarterly." The Greenville Methodists should appreciate practically this stroke of enterprise. The subscription price is 25 cents a year.

Rev. G. W. Starling was in the office for a few minutes on last Saturday afternoon. He has not yet begun to hold his meetings, but he is looking forward to fine spiritual harvests. He was on the train that was wrecked on Saturday morning, when eleven persons were badly injured. Brother Starling had a narrow escape, for which he and all of us are thankful.

Dr. B. F. Dixon has been invited to address the G. A. R. in Boston Aug. 1. In a speech nominating him for a second term as State Auditor, Senator Overman used the following words, which are true, every one of them: "He is a patriot, a statesman a soldier, true in war, true in peace, true in the dark days of reconstruction, always true to every trust, a Christian gentleman. Everybody is for him; nobody is against him." Of course his renomination was by acclamation.

The third Quarterly Conference for Milton Circuit was held at Providence on last Saturday and Sunday. Dr. Gibbs, the Presiding Elder, being present and presiding. The Doctor preached two very fine discourses, especially the one on Sunday which was very superior, showing deep thought and careful preparation. Also at Cuningham Chapel on some day at 3 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Mellichambe preached, although he was suffering from wounds and bruises from a recent runaway horse.—Roxboro Courier.

We take the following from "The Methodist Quarterly": "The second Quarterly Conference for Greenville Station for the current year was held May 29th. Rev. J. D. Bundy, our justly popular Presiding Elder, was present and presided in the Quarterly Conference with becoming ease and dignity. He preached two excellent sermons to our people. The question of building a new church came up, and the Conference appointed the following building committee: T. J. Jarvis, J. E. Harris, C. F. Munford, L. H. Pender, and J. A. Hornaday. Work on the new church will begin not later than September."

Lesson for July 17, 1904.

Asa's Good Reign.

(2 Chronicles 14:1-12.)

Golden Text: Help us, O Lord our God for we rest on thee. (2 Chron. 14:11.)

Rehoboam reigned seventeen years over Judah. He was succeeded by his son Abijah, who reigned three years. Asa was the son of Abijah and came to the throne of Judah while Jeroboam was still the sovereign over the northern kingdom of Israel.

A Good King.—Asa is remembered as a good king, in contrast with Abijah and Rehoboam, who both led their people into idolatry. Asa did what was good and right in the eyes of the Lord we are told. He was bent upon breaking up the idolatous practices of his people, and in pursuance of this object he took away the altars of the strange gods, removed the high places, broke down the groves.

The character of Asa was not indeed without flaw, for we read that in his later years he made a foolish alliance with Ben-hadad, the king of Syria, and when rebuked by the prophet Hanani, he shut up the prophet in prison. Yet on the whole we must regard Asa as worthy of praise for the general tenor of his life, though we must ever regret the shadow that falls upon his closing years, due to his unfortunate and uncalled for alliance with the heathen Syrian king Ben-hadad.

A Powerful Enemy.—Our lesson records the greatest military event in the reign of King Asa, who appears in the narrative not only as a pious sovereign, but as a wise and prudent general.

The foe that threatened Judah was an immense army from Egypt, led by Zerah the Ethiopian. The purpose of the coming of this host is not stated, but it may have been to secure spoil, or perhaps to check the growing power of Judah, whose army, as organized by Asa, bid fair to rival the Egyptian dominion.

A Great Victory.—The battle between the hosts of Egypt and of Judah was fought at Mareshah, a city on the borders of the hill country, twenty-five miles southwest of Jerusalem.

Before he led his troops to attack the enemy, Asa offered a short but sublime prayer, breathing the spirit of absolute trust in the Lord.

The confidence of the pious king was not misplaced. His prayer was heard and answered, and though the foe greatly outnumbered the men of Judah, the Ethiopians fled before Asa, and thus furnished "the sole occasion in sacred history in which an Israelite army defeated one of the great world powers in open battle."

I CURE CANCER.

Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No fe. No plaster. No caustics. No sloughing oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure internal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else is the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

A great demonstration in honor of ex-President Cleveland was the feature of the Democratic National Convention's opening session in St. Louis. Mr. Bryan also received a great ovation.

The Socialist Labor Party's National Convention in New York nominated Charles H. Corregan, of New York, for President, and William W. Cox, for Vice-President.

The Populist National Convention, at Springfield, Ill. nominated Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, for President, and Thomas H. Tribbles, of Nebraska, for Vice-President.

The Department of Agriculture has referred to the Department of Justice the matter of the right of the Government to conduct experiments in Texas with a Guatemala ant in destroying the cotton boll weevil.

President Roosevelt is at work at Oyster Bay on his speech of acceptance, which is expected to be an important campaign document. A number of prominent Republicans are there in consultation with the President over the political situation.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of urine difficulties. If it did there would be few children that would do it. There is a constitutional cause for this. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 238, Notre Dame, Ind., will send her home treatment to any mother. She asks no money. Write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child. The chances are it can't help it

MORPHINE
OPIUM, WHISKEY AND ALL DRUG HABITS
CURED WITHOUT PAIN AT YOUR HOME.

If you are addicted to these habits you think you will quit it. You won't; you can't unaided, but you can be cured and restored to your former health and vigor without pain or the loss of an hour from business at a moderate cost. The medicine builds up your health, restores the nervous system to its normal condition; you feel like a different person from the beginning of treatment. LEAVING OFF THE OPIATES AFTER THE FIRST DOSE. You will soon be convinced and fully satisfied in your own mind that you will be cured.

Mr. T. M. Brown, of DeQueen, Ark., says: "Over seven years ago I was cured of the opium habit by your medicine, and have continued in the very best of health since."

Dr. W. M. Tunstall, of Lovingston, Va., says: "I am glad to say that I firmly believe that I am entirely and permanently cured of the Drink Habit, as I have never even so much as wanted a drink in any form since I took your eradicator, now eighteen months ago. It was the best dollars I ever invested."

Mrs. Virginia Townsend, of Shreveport, La., writes: "No more opium. I have taken no other remedy than yours, and I make no mistake when I say my health is better now than it ever was in my life, and I owe it to you and your remedy. It has been twelve years since I was cured by your treatment."

For full particulars, address DR B. M. WOOLEY, 303 Lowndes building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you his book on these diseases FREE.

That Cow.

The cow is coming. We are looking for her every day. The name of the giver will be announced in our next. Come and help us drink butter milk. She gives that kind. Now the flour to make the wheat bread. Where are the flour mill men?

The Support of an Orphan.

It was stated by one of our Trustees that there was misunderstanding in regard to the amount it takes to support an orphan. We have stated distinctly that it was $60.00 to support an orphan. That salaries of the officers were not included. It will take $100 to meet all the expenses. In the small institutions, more.

Receipts up to July 9.

Matthews (windows), $4.00; Lillington, $2.25; Dr. Harry Utley on subs., $2.50; Raleigh, Edenton St., on subs., $16.00.

Donations in kind as well as receipts, will be reported weekly hereafter.

Beaufort—Morehead City.

Beaufort is a dear old town. Three of the most eventful years of our ministry were spent here. It was delightful to worship Sunday with that devout congregation again, and hear a most uplifting sermon by Bishop Smith. It was joyful to meet with old and tried friends. It was an honor to occupy the room at Brother Sanders' that Editor Ivey had just vacated. It was sweet to lodge awhile with these friends of former years and talk over old times.

The Bishop gave us another of his best at Morehead City Sunday night. There were good congregations in both churches, and we were glad to see that both Beaufort and Morehead are growing, and prospering.

It was delightful to get a sniff of old ocean. The District Conference was a success.

Subscriptions.

Subscriptions are coming in nicely. Will not our brethren in the ministry collect the subscriptions due us. They promised to do so. If you will not, brother, will you not turn the list over to some live girl? Some of the brethren are taking the collections. Will not all? Brethren, you can save us from going in debt if you will. You promised to do so. Stand by your promise brother, if you expect your people to keep theirs. Don't wait for a better time. Now is the best time. These better times have never done much for us. Soon your other collections will be on hand. You will have no chance then. You may be at Conference on Thanksgiving day. There will not be much of a collection in your charge, if you do not take it up.

Attention, Friends.

We expect to open the next session of the Methodist Orphanage on the first day of September, next.

All ladies who wish a situation here, will please send in their applications. Send photo and age. They must belong to the Methodist Church, South. Send recommendations and references also. We will need one. It may be two. Election early in August.

Persons wishing to put orphans in the Institution, will send to me for blanks. The children must be over six years of age and under fourteen. Sound in body, mind and soul.

Let every pastor who wishes to send a child here, see if his church or Sunday-school or Circuit will not support the child. That will insure entrance, if it is a proper subject.

All the friends who expect to furnish rooms, will please inform me at an early day. One hundred dollars will furnish a dormitory, and sixty dollars will furnish a school room. There will be seven beds in a dormitory. Any person or small Sunday-school that wishes to furnish a bed can do so by sending us fifteen dollars. The larger Sunday-schools can very easily furnish a room. Only one hundred dollars.

Our cooking stove will have to be enlarged. What firm or hardware man will send us a good range? Who will look after our large dining room? The Juvenile Mission Society of Smithfield is furnishing our office at a cost of $40.00. That is nice, indeed.

Cool Summer Silks from Far-Off Japan

They're more popular this summer than ever because, in addition to being very slightly, they are thin and consequently cool.
All made on hand looms and very durable. In the natural color they launder better than any silk we know of.
NATURAL JAPANESE SILKS—
23 inches wide, 20c yard.
27 inches wide, 30c, 50c, 75c and 85c yard;
36 inches wide, 50c, 59c, 69c and 75c yard.
CORDED WASH SILKS, 25c and 37 1-2c yard.
CHECKED and STRIPED KAIKI SILK, 29c yard.
COLORED JAPANESE SILKS—
22 inches wide.....39c
27 inches wide.....50c
BLACK JAPANESE SILKS—
23 inches wide, 35c and 50c yard;
27 inches wide, 50c, 59c, 65c and 75c yard;
36 inches wide, 75c and $1.00 yard.
We'll be glad to furnish you samples of these or any other dress goods. Express or freight charges prepaid on all orders of $5.00 and over mailed to the house from the Virginias or Carolinas.

Unless this rule is observed the obituary must be cut down to the proper limit.

DIXON.—Charles H. Dixon, son of J. H. and M. A. Dixon, was born in Snow Hill, Greene County N. C., April 3, 1860, and died at his home in Craven County, N. C., March 12, 1904.

He was married to Miss C. V. Smith, February 4, 1890, and to them were born six children. They are left to mourn the loss of a dear husband and a kind and affectionate father. Brother Dixon was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, when about sixteen years of age, under the ministry of Rev. W. R. Wine. He loved the church, and filled the office of class leader and Sunday-school superintendent. At his death he was the Bible teacher at Epworth Church, and his class loved him, for he was a faithful teacher. It was a very affecting sight on the following Sabbath when the class met to select another teacher; it was there seen and felt how much they loved him. Scarcely any one could speak, for the most of them were melted into tears. He was buried at Epworth Church, surrounded with a large congregation of sorrowing friends and relations, among them being an aged mother, his only sister and four brothers.

May the God whom he served deal tenderly with all his loved ones and bring them to a happy reunion in the beautiful home of the good.

P. GREENING.

RICE.—The death angel entered the home of Eddie and Janie Rice, August 21, 1903, and took from us our only darling, Roscoe Marvin. He was two years, six months and twelve days old. He suffered only five days. His suffering was great, but he bore it with patience. He was an obedient and affectionate child, and loved by all who knew him. He was too pure for this sinful world, and Jesus called him home to make heaven more sweet. As our hearts were torn and bleeding as we laid the precious one to rest, we could only say:

O mother earth we bring to thee
a priceless boon to-day,
And softly on thy quiet breast our blighted bud we lay.
Room in the softest, greenest spot,
Room mid the summer flowers,
Dust only to thy care we give,
He blooms in brighter bowers.

Lone are the paths, and sad the bowers,
Whence thy meek smile is gone
But oh a brighter home than ours
In heaven is thine own.

Now in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well.

HIS MAMMA.

DIXON.—On the night of May 13, 1904, the brittle thread was snapped and the soul of J. W. Dixon returned unto the God who gave it. He was born April 22, 1823, age eighty-one years and twenty-one days.

Brother Dixon professed faith in Christ in early manhood, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Leasburg, N. C., and remained a faithful member until his death.

He was a quiet, unoffensive man, attended stritely to his own business, a prominent and successful farmer, an honest and accommodating neighbor, a kind and thoughtful husband, and an affectionate father.

Brother Dixon's health had been failing for several years, but was confined to his bed only two weeks. During his sickness he was submissive and uncomplaining, and was resigned to his Father's will.

We shall never again hear his words of counsel and cheer. We shall miss him, but our loss is his eternal gain. As a ripe sheaf, he has been gathered into heaven's eternal garner, to await the coming of his loved ones left behind. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

In the presence of many friends and loved ones his mortal remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground, there to await the resurrection morn.

Brother Dixon was twice married. His second wife and six children survive him.

May God's richest blessings and sweetest comforts be given to the bereaved family.

RUFUS BRADLEY.

BRYAN.—Mary Elizabeth Bryan, relict of the late Wm. C. Bryan, departed this life at the home of her son, Rev. John W. Bryan, the 26th day of May, 1904, aged seventy-nine years, one month and twenty days.

Mrs. Bryan was a devoted member of the M. E. Church, South, at Goldsboro, for sixty years, having been among the first members at that place, and during all these years, amid sunshine and shadows, she illustrated in every relation the beauty and power of a heart and life consecrated to the service of God. For several years previous to her last illness she was an invalid, and a constant sufferer, but for the week preceding her death she was free from pain, for which she praised God and so great was her joy that the state of her feelings was at times ecstatic. It was the writer's privilege to visit Mrs. Bryan frequently during her

SUMMER RHEUMATISM

The idea that Rheumatism is strictly a winter disease, that comes from exposure or cold, is wrong; a spell of indigestion, torpidity of the liver, inactive state of the kidneys, or sudden cooling of the body when over-heated, being frequent causes of an attack. Rheumatism is due to an over-acid condition of the blood and bad circulation. As it flows through the body the blood deposits an acrid corrosive sediment in the joints and muscles, and the circulation grows sluggish because of the constant accumulation of acid impurities, and when the system is in such condition Rheumatism is liable to come out at any time, winter or summer. It is hastened and provoked by exposure to cold, damp air, sudden cooling of the body when overheated, a bad spell of indigestion, or anything that is calculated to further derange and depress the system; but these are only exciting and not the real cause of Rheumatism. It is in the blood, and when this vital fluid becomes overcharged with the acid impurities and is running riot in the veins, an attack is sure to come, whether in summer time or the cold, bleak days of winter. You are a slave to pain as long as the blood is tainted with acid. Liniments and plasters are helpful and useful, but it takes something more than rubbing and blistering to drive away this demon of pain.

NO USE FOR CRUTCHES.

I had an attack of Sciatic Rheumatism in its worst form. The pain was so intense I became completely prostrated. Having heard S. S. S. recommended for Rheumatism, I decided to give it a trial, and after I had taken a few bottles I was able to hobble around on crutches, and very soon had no use for them at all. S. S. S. having cured me sound and well. All the distressing pains have left me, my appetite has returned, and I am happy to be again restored to perfect health.

SSS

S. S. S. goes to the seat of the trouble, enters the circulation, neutralizes and filters out of the blood the acid poisons. It enriches and strengthens the weak, diseased blood; the general health improves under its tonic effect, and when rich, pure blood begins to circulate through the stiff joints and sore, tender muscles, pains and aches vanish, and the longed-for relief comes to the nervous, pain-tortured sufferers. S. S. S. contains no minerals, but is guaranteed purely vegetable. Write us if in need of medical advice, which is given without charge. Our book on Rheumatism, telling of the different forms and varieties of this pain-racking disease, is mailed free.

last illness, and in a long professional life I cannot remember evidences of a stronger faith, a more complete resignation nor a more joyous anticipation of the blessedness that lies beyond the boundary of human vision. Much of her time was spent in thanksgiving to her friends for their loving ministrations and to her God for His goodness. The living testimony also of her sixty years of faithful, Chritsian life leaves no doubt as to where we may find her—where the weary find rest when life's pilgrimage is ended.

LEGGETT.—Frances Herman, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Leggett died at their home in Edenton, N. C., May 27, 1904, at the age of ten months and twelve days.

This was an unusually bright and attractive child of its age, and had grown already to occupy a central place in the home and in the hearts of its parents. About it their plans and purposes revolved, and in its life their fondest love and hopes were centered.

But it was of a naturally delicate constitution, and neither parental care nor skilled medical treatment could prevent its early return to God who is its home.

The sympathy of the community goes out to these young parents in their affliction. We pray that God will sustain them. We cannot understand God's dealings with us, but we know that He loves us, and "sometime we shall understand." Meanwhile we abide in His love.

This little one was a grandchild of the late Rev. Peter L. Herman, who was for many years an honored member of the North Carolina Conference. Brother Leggett having married Miss Jesse Herman.

How rich in heavenly possessions do we become as one after another of our hearts' treasures is taken to swell the store of our treasure in heaven!

May God comfort the hearts of these bereaved young parents, and keep them in the faith that inspired John Henry Newman when he sang:

"So long thy power hath blessed me, sure it still
Will lead me on
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone,
And with the morn those angel faces smile
Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile."

The Family Bible.

How painfully pleasing the fond recollection,
Of youthful connections and innocent joy;
When blessed with parental advice and affection,
Surrounded with mercies with peace from on high
I still view the chair of my father and mother,
The seats of their off-spring as ranged on each hand,
And the richest of books which excelled every other—
The family Bible that lay on the stand;
The old family Bible, the dear blessed Bible
The family Bible that lay on the stand.

That Bible the volumes of God's inspiration,
At noon and at evening would yield us delight,
And the prayer of our sire was a sweet invocation
For mercy by day, and for safety by night;
Our hymns of thanksgiving in harmony swelling,
And warm from the heart of a family band,
Half raised us from earth to that rapturous dwelling
Described in the Bible that lay on the stand;
The richest of books which excelled every other,
The family Bible that lay on the stand.

Ye scenes of tranquility long have we parted,
My hopes almost gone and my parents no more;
In sorrow and sadness I live broken-hearted,
And wander unknown on a far distant shore,
Yet how can I doubt a dear Saviour's protection,
Forgetful of gifts from this bountiful hand!
Oh! let me with patience receive this correction,
And think of the Bible that lay on the stand—
The richest of books which excelled every other—
The family Bible that lay on the stand!

Prayer and Praise.

AMOS BATSON.

Prayer is the source of all power. In all of our undertakings and in all of our troubles in life if we would only go to God in prayer we would be wonderfully blest. God is ever ready to hear the prayers of His people. And a great many times God sees fit to try our faith, and instead of being fractious and quick-tempered, we should have a praying heart, and in the deepest of afflictions do as old Job did—be reconciled to God and pray earnestly to Him to deliver us. God sends his afflictions upon us to draw us to Him. And what the trouble with our church to-day is the lay members do not pray for the advancement of Christ's kingdom on earth as they ought. If we would sing praise to God more; if we would pray more earnestly, God would open the dors of mercy and pour us out a greater blessing. My observation of prayer has ever been that it is the fundamental principle through which a greater knowledge of Christ is found. Constant prayer makes us stronger in the faith. We should not only have a formality of words, but our whole heart should be lifted in supplications to God. We do not need an opportunity to pray; we can pray in the field or in the woods; matters not where. God has commanded us to pray without ceasing. Let us always pray and not faint. Let us run and not be weary. Christ found it necessary to spend whole nights in prayer to the Father; and surely if we do likewise God will reward us abundantly. If we were to pray as we ought, we could pray for the conversion of some soul, and that soul would be saved. God has told us in His written Word if we would ask we would receive. Jacob of old wrestled with God until the break of day. How many of us even spend an hour a day to God in prayer, or even to read His Word? I don't suppose a great many of us do this. Let us wake up to a sense of our duty. The church has lost its power in revival meetings in a great sense because its members do not prepare themselves for the ingathering of souls.

Let us, as a church, pray more, study more, search the Scriptures more, and God will reward us abundantly. Ask and it shall be given you, seek and you shall find, etc.

Church Improvements and Preachers Salaries.

BY X. IN WARRENTON RECORD.

The improvements in the last ten or fifteen years, in church buildings, equipments, etc., in our town and county, of all denominations, have been marvelous, and now our houses of worship compare favorably in beauty with any town of like size in the State, all due to the liberality of all communions and of non-communicants. Possibly the contrast in the old unsightly, delapidated, and in some cases, badly located church houses, which were an eye-sore a few years back to the handsome well-located ones we now have, is not marked by our people as it is by those who lived here before this change. Quite frequently we hear allusions to this by some visitor who once lived here and to our praise, as but few persons ever left us who were not attached to the good old town and felt a pride in every thing pertaining to our growth and prosperity.

We now hear steps are being taken to put handsome pipe organs in the Methodist and Baptist churches in the near future. This will be done, for while we may be slow to undertake improvements on a large scale, be it said to our credit, we never fail when ready and see the necessity. This is all right, for it is proof-positive that when interest is manifested in church improvements, that there is a corresponding interest in the work of the church, missions, Christian education and benevolence.

There is, however, a matter which we may possibly have overlooked and that is the salaries paid our preachers. The preacher is to the church what the steam is to the engine—which may be well built, a thing of beauty and admiration, but of little value minus the propelling power. For years we have been honored and blessed by the very best all-round preachers, efficient pastors, men of thought, influence and power, interested and active in the support of everything pertaining to our spiritual, moral, social and financial good, even ready to lead in work and contributions in every good cause. It is no secret that the cost of living has been over 25 per cent higher for the last year or two, yet so far as I can learn, the salaries of our preachers of all communions in town and county have not been increased; in fact, in some instances I learn it is less than it was years ago. This is a mistake.

We appreciate and love our preachers, and are proud of them; they are men thoroughly equipped and can easily command larger salaries than they are now receiving, and it becomes us to see to it that their salaries are commensurate with advance in living expenses and not have them so embarrassed financially as to force them to accept other work to supplement their salaries, thus impairing their active efficient usefulness in their special high calling. "The laborer is worthy of his hire," and yet, as a rule, the preacher who is in the lead in every fight for moral reform, and foremost in liberality in contributions to benevolence and charity, as well as secular things, is the poorest paid of any of the professions, especially in small towns and country charges.

As stated, we have unintentionally overlooked this important matter, and it is only necessary to call attention, in a modest way, to have the same corrected.

Dr. Whisner on Church Extension.

My Dear Brother:—The following items I write you for publication in your excellent paper, the Raleigh Christian Advocate, in regard to the work of Church Extension. First let me state the need of the work of Church Extension in the whole M. E. Church, South. There are now, according to the report of 1903, as many as 3,471 organized congregations in our Church without a house of worship. These are in the mission fields as well as in the home Church.

In Brazil, we have fifty-six congregations and sixteen churches.

In China, we have sixty congregations and twenty-three churches.

In Japan, we have fifteen congregations and ten churches.

In the Mexican border, we have seventy-two congregations and twenty-three churches.

In the Northwest Mexican, we have thirty-six congregations and seventeen churches.

In Central Mexico, we have sixty-four congregations and twenty-five churches.

The General Board of Church Extension was applied to last spring for donations amounting to over $136,000 and loans amounting to over $110,000. These applications represented enterprises amounting to over a million dollars Notwithstanding the very gratifying fact that the collections for this cause last year amounted to over $14,000 more than any preceding year, the Board was able to grant only about $46,000 in donations and $62,000 in loans, and was compelled to leave a large number of the applicants unprovided for, and many of those for whom grants were made were granted far less than they asked. In the second place, let me state for the benefit especially of our people in the North Carolina Conference for which your paper is the organ, the following facts: In your Conference you have thirty congregations that have no house of worship, and of the 674 churches, you now own 205, or nearly one-third have received aid from the Church Extension organization in the twenty-two years of its history. Your people have contributed to the Church Extension cause $51,905.64, and have received in donations $33,073 and in loans $7,750. Those figures show the amount your people have gotten back for their own benefit of the contributions they have made for the cause.

The assessment for Church Extension on the North Carolina Conference last year was $5.0 and they paid $3,897. I am writing these items in the hope that with your aid, Mr. Editor, every pastor in your Conference this year may be able to report the payment of the assessment for Church Extension in full. The interests of your own Conference demand it, and the interests of the Church at large demand it and the interests of our Foreign Mission fields especially demand it.

Wishing your pastors and people the largest possible success in this and in every department of their work, and praying that every needed blessing may be theirs always, I am,

Yours truly, P. H. WHISNER.
Corresponding Secretary.

Louisville, Ky., July 8, 1904.

Bishop Morrison on Church Extension.

The "mission" aim is to "go over and possess the land." The "Church Extension" aim is to hold it.

Men are impressed by multitudes. There are seasons of special susceptibility when numbers yield and volunteer for a better life. But without organization the impulse passes and they go back, "one to his farm, and another to his merchandise."

Evangelistic agencies are moving agencies. The motto is, "Onward!"

I have seen a painting of Cæsar at the head of his column when he had just crossed the Rubicon. Mounted, sword drawn and pointing forward, enthusiasm in the eye, determination in the attitude; while the fire of his spirit seemed to clothe his steed, inspire his men, and give a glow to everything about him; and even the tiger-skin flung over his saddle seemed fiercely alive—this is evangelism.

THE WORLD FOR CHRIST!

But Church Extension follows to establish the conquest. It builds the house and makes each conquered province permanent and a centre of moral and spiritual power. It transforms the volunteer into the veteran and makes the place, where religious life would otherwise be momentary, to become the "dwelling place of the most high."

God dwells where we build for Him. Where we rear the temple there His glory descends and His voice is heard saying: "I have chosen and sanctified this house. And here shall mine honor dwell."

New Orleans, La., March 1, 1904.

The Incarnate Christ

C. F. SHERRILL.

Were Christ no more than our example, and did He send no grace to the heart to enable us to follow Him, we could as easily found a kingdom like that of the Ceasar's or write an "immortal dream" like that of Pilgrim's Progress, as we could be like Christ. But Jesus comes into fellowship and partnership with every believing soul. He is a "quickening Spirit."

* * *

The mother stands behind the daughter and says, with prophetic faith: "She will soon be like me." Christ stands behind the Christian and says: "He will soon be like Me."

* * *

Nineteen centuries of the Christian faith have come and gone; and it is safe to say that Christ is better known and studied now than in any other age. He is seen through the light of these Christian centuries that He Himself has created. When the human tongue shall have spoken the final word, we can say of His matchless character what the Queen of Sheba said of Solomon: "The half has not been told."

* * *

The wisdom of God is seen in His varied gifts to the church. If all minds had been of the mould of Paul, we would not now have the biographies of Jesus. If all the writers had been as John, we would have lost Paul's doctrinal interpretation of the Man Christ Jesus. If all had looked at Christ as did Matthew, Mark, and Luke, much that is of inestimable value in the Epistles and Revelation would not be ours. God has given us many men to see the Master. The result is, we have the history, doctrine, vision and spiritual discernment of the Christ. God needs every measure of mind and every condition of character for His kingdom. No place is humble when God assigns it to us. Foundation is as important as finial.

* * *

When God would find men to write of the coming and life of His Son, He did not go to the Athens of Plato and Pericles or to the Rome of Cicero and Augustus. He took men with the shepherd's crook and fishing tackle. His inspiration was worth more for the work in hand than the learning of all the schools. God-inspired men they were who wrote of the Christ. These sixty-six different books, by about forty different authors, covering a period of fifteen hundred years, are made one Book by One Name. They have come together as miraculously as the animals came to the ark.

General Review of the Field.

Our collections show an increase over any former year of our history:

Collected on assessments	$310,934.37
Increase over 1902-1903	9,448.20
Receipts from all sources for the work under the direction of this Board	589,056.29
Increase over collection from similar sources for 1902-1903	22,875.66

Eight annual Conferences have paid assessments in full for the Foreign Missions while about seventy-five districts and two thousand seven hundred and fifty charges have paid the amounts assessed for missions, both Foreign and Domestic. The number of Conferences reported as paying in full is not so large as last year, but there is a marked advance in the number of districts and pastoral charges that have made this commendable record. In this connection special mention should be made of the South Georgia which paid more than $4,000 in excess of its assessment for Foreign Missions. The importance of increased payments on our regular assessments cannot be too strongly urged. From that source our chief support must come. More than one-half our pastoral charges now pay in full for missions. The number should be increased until the weakest mission as well as the strongest church in our connection meets at least its minimum of obligation to an unsaved world.

CHINA.

Nothing brings out more clearly the changes referred to than the presentation of diplomas to the medical class in our Soochow University by his Excellency, En shou, Governor of the Kiangsu Province. This was in official costume and accompanied by his staff and a large retinue of attendants, and followed an address by Bishop Galloway. Such an act in the early days of our China missions would have cost the Governor his place, and possibly his head, and might have been followed by a riot and destruction of mission property. To-day in every walled city and prefectural town we have had the recognition of the highest officials unsolicited and the friendship and confidence of the literati. A late foreign mail brings the news from Dr. D. L. Anderson of the occupation of the main building of the Soochow University, which, in its structure and equipment, is thoroughly modern and well adapted to its purpose. This building, made possible by the $50,000 subscription at the New Orleans Conference, stands in the centre of a campus of over eight acres, is substantial, commodious, and free from debt. So generous has the Church been in this matter that we have been able in addition to erect five flats on property owned by the Boards of Missions in Shanghai, which, by an outlay of $20,000, should yield a net return of 8 per cent, to be devoted to the further endowment and equipment of our educational work. The adoption of such a policy in connection with each of our leading educational institutions on our six foreign fields would guarantee the permanence of our work and enable us to train a native agency, without which the complete evangelization of these fields is impossible.

The progress of the work is full of encouragement in every department. The membership has gone well over the thousand line, being 1,309 at the last report, 274 of these being received during the year. If we add the 823 probationers, the total will be well over 2,000.

There should be neither hesitation nor delay in furnishing all that is required for a field which is so wide open and where conditions are so favorable now, but which are in danger of crystallization. New and changed conditions may seriously retard evangelistic effort. The influence of Japan is day by day becoming more powerful. China has invited her Judiciary to codify her laws, her military to organize her army, her educators to man and equip her schools, and her statesmen and reformers to hold an advisory relation in matters pertaining to economic interest and national policy at home and abroad. The yellow peril is not so much a military menace to the outside world as it is a recrystallization of ideas around commercial centers or those which are rationalistic and blighting in their influence upon thought and life. If the polytheism of the Budhist and the agnosticism of the Confucionist, as full of error and of emptiness as they are, should so supersede by the rationalistic and utilitarion philosophy of modern Japan, the consequence would be an attitude upon the part of China's millions which might get back the work of religious instruction and enlightenment for centuries. The atheism of force and the devitalizing power of a commercial spirit are much more to be feared than battle ships or legions of soldiers.

JAPAN.

The entire Orient is in a state of unrest. Not a little of this can be attributed to the aggression of Western nations and the influx of commercial tides which are pushing into every bay and harbor and even penetrating the rivers into the remote interior, but the larger part is undoubtedly due to the fermentation of the wine of a new civilization, with its school of philosophy, of ethics, and of religion. Mr. Kate, President of the Imperial University, expresses the situation in the following words: "Our old system of thought is completely undermined." So sweeping has been the revolution that, with the student class, the ethical system of Confucius has practically been laid aside, and Shintoism has been reduced from a national religion to a mere cult. Budhism is largely despised. Some one has styled the Japanese a nation in quest of a religion. One of our missionaries, Thomas H. Haden, quotes Marquis Ito as saying: "We got our civilization from the West, and we must get the foundation from the West also." This is the more significant since it was the Marquis himself who declared a few years ago that religion was not necessary to a national life, and he was largely given the credit of eliminating religious instruction from the school and of reducing ethics to a few bare outlines which no electric current, however powerful, could galvanize it to religious life or moral significance.

Every close student of Japan is agreed that a decided reaction has set in, accompanied by a revival of interest in Christianity. This is largely manifested by increased atendance upon religious services and upon our mission schools. With creditable enthusiasm and earnestness the various churches in Japan determined last year to hold evangelistic services in a building provided for the purpose immediately across the street from the main entrance of the great Exposition at Osaka. Out of the four million people who attended the Exposition, one-sixteenth of the entire number, or two hundred and fifty thousand, heard the Gospel preached and carried away with them religious literature specially prepared for the occasion, while sixteen thousand of the number gave their names and addresses as being desirous of further inquiry and correspondence.

In the light of these and other recent events, we must agree with Dr. Haden that Christianity is "creating the ideals of Japan," and it is a matter of supreme importance that adequate provision should be made for reaching the brain and heart of an empire which is largely shaping the political and commercial policy of Korea and Siam and effecting to a considerable degree the sentiment which is now dominating the great body Confucian scholars and officials in the Chinese Empire.

The war has not effected the progress of our work thus far. With nearly double the attendance upon the schools as compared with three years ago, we record the baptism of one hundred and ninety-three adults, bringing the membership up to a round thousand. This, with a determination to press evangelistic effort at home and among the thousands of Japanese who are going to Korea as colonists, indicates the opening of a new era.

KOREA.

Korea is passing through the old process which makes her the grist ground between the upper and nether millstones, and with the opening of hostilities, between Japan and Russia, with the storm centre near the mouth of the Yalu River, it is not a matter of surprise that there should have been some uneasiness during the year.

On the other hand, it is a cause for profound gratitude, that Rev. J. R. Moose reports for the mission a gain of thirty-seven members and ninety-five probationers, making a total of 511 communicants, to which can be added 472 who are on the probation. There can be no doubt as to the thoroughness of the awakening in the Monson church, which has been passing through a revival when sins are publicly confessed and restitution made. Inc one case, a letter was received by the missionary inclosing $7.00, with the statement that the money had been stolen from him three years before while acting as colporteur. Another confessed to having wronged the government to the amount of $2.00, and said it must be returned even if it should cost his poor body to be cast into prison. With such searching of heart must come a sound conversion and a quickening of life which makes the future of the church bright with hope.

Seeds of sin must be judged by their sheaves of sorrow.

The human race is not quite the same as the heavenly race.

The Field

Roanoke Circuit.

Dear Advocate:—We had a fine day last Sunday. The day was perfect, and long before the hour for services to begin, people were at Old Ebenezer Church where they expected Children's Day. The services began at 11 a. m. The singing was good and recitations fine; and at 11.45 a. m., Dr. D. B. Zollicoffer was called to the rostrum for an address. He gave us a good address, and one that was thoroughly enjoyed by all, and which will do great good. After one and a half hours, we reassembled for the evening service. We had one hour of recitations, which were all good, and for the orator of the evening, Rev. P. H. Stainback, of Weldon, was called to the rostrum and gave us about fifteen minutes of wit and humor, mostly at the Doctor's expense, after which he gave us a good address that will tell in many lives, we believe.

We have had three very successful Children's Days on the Roanoke Circuit this year;first one at Tabor, the fifth Sunday in May, with a good service and very large congregation, and a good address in the morning by Rev. P. H. Stainback and in the evening by Dr. Zollicoffer, and a very successful service at Smith's the second Sunday in June, as has been announced before.

The Lord is with us on this work.

Greensboro Female College.

Editor Raleigh Christian Advocate, Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Sir:—For information of those friends who are deeply interested in the welfare and success, prosperity and perpetuity of the Methodist College for Women in Greensboro, otherwise known as Greensboro Female College, I am pleased to report that the outlook is promising and the work is moving forward. We have a force of workmen engaged in getting out the material and putting up the walls. In a short time we hope to show you the results of our active labor.

My purpose in writing you at this time is to submit a proposition which comes from a gentleman very much interested in the institution, and who makes the following offer:

In order to create an endowment fund for Greensboro Female College at the least possible present cost, and in the surest and safest kind of way, I propose that one hundred or more friends of the college shall buy $1,000 or larger policies of insurance in the New York Life Insurance Company, kind of policy to be left to the option of the insured, whether old line, ten, fifteen or twenty year endowment. These policies can be bought on the basis of ordinary life, limited five, ten fifteen or twenty years, as the party may prefer. Parties so desiring can purchase paid-up policies payable at death for one lump sum, policies payable to trustees of the college or any other direction they may prefer. Parties desiring to take more than $1000 can do so. In the event of the men being found willing to do this, then the following proposition is made—the agent whose business it is to direct this will give all of the first premium up to $1000 to the college as memorial to his father, the Rev. Bennett F. Blake, one of the founders of the institution. He also agrees, in the event the full $100,000 is not placed to contribute any amount prorated, or if over $100,000, to give the proportionate part thereof.

This is done simply to try to endow this institution, and it is hoped that many of those friends who would like to see an endowment fund, but who haven't the money for the endowment can do it by carrying this, and the rates can be procured from Henry D. Blake, State Agent, New York Life Insurance Company, Greensboro, N. C.

It is needless for me to say that this is one of the best and safest companies in the United States, and I hope to find our people ready to enter into this arrangement.

I will agree to take $1,000 of this; where are the other ninety-nine men?

Yours very truly,

C. H. IRELAND.

Pittsboro Circuit Sunday-School and Epworth League Conference.

The Pittsboro Circuit Sunday-school and Epworth League Conference held at Moncure July 9 and 10, was a fine success in every sense. The papers read were thoughtful and of a high order. The sermons were preached by Rev. J. Marvin Culbreth, of Epworth Church, Raleigh, N. C. Brother Culbreth brought us under obligation to him for these timely and chaste discourses, and our people were more than pleased with him. Brother Culbreth will be heard from in the near future.

The following statistics show the condition of Sunday-school and Epworth League work on the Pittsboro Circuit:

Total church members, 652; total Sunday-school enrolment, 447; average atendance since January 1, 71 per cent.

The grade of work being done is as follows:

Number studying senior quarterlies, 140; number studying intermediate quarterlies, 116; number studying lesson papers, 123; number studying catechisms, 82; number of parents attending Sunday-school, 82; number of Sunday-school visitors taken, 42; number of books in libaries, 520; total number of schools, 7; number coming all the year. 6; number organized into Missionary Societies. 6; all schools well supplied with our own literature and song books; Epworth Leagues, 2; Junior Epworth Leagues, 1; total number of Epworth League members, 118.

The above healthy condition of the work is largely due to work done through these circuit conferences.

The next Conference is to be held at Brown's Chapel.

These Conferences mean work to the pastor and officers of the Conference, but if our Sunday-schools and Epworth League work on our circuit is to mean anything, they demand our time and thought, and the marked improvement in attendance and the character of the work done have amply justified the outlay of time and thought given to it on this charge.

Furnishing the New G. F. C. Report 2.

The work of furnishing rooms in the new building goes steadily on. The plan, as previously stated, is to have rooms taken, which will be named in honor of the donor. A tablet placed upon the door will bear the name of the donor and other important facts.

Thirty-five dollars furnish a room with two iron bedsteads, mattresses, table, chairs, chiffonier, etc. The estimate is for the heavy furniture of a room occupied by two young ladies. This money is due the last of August. In special cases, ninety days additional will be allowed.

The following rooms have been taken:

Previously reported, seven rooms.

B. B. Adams, Four Oaks, N. C., in memory of his father, William Gatson Adams.

Young ladies' Guild of Cary in honor of Mrs. J. C. Angier.

Local Alumnae of Greenville, N. C.

Local Alumnae of Washington, N. C.

The Norman room, by E. B. Norman, M. W. Norman, and C. J. Norman, of Plymouth, N. C.

Local Alumnae of Plymouth.

Miss Elizabeth Carver, Raleigh N. C.

Mrs. C. W. Cobb, Greensboro, N. C.

The Alumnae of Person County.

Mrs. Mattie Cross Brown and Miss Lillian Lee Cross, in memory of their mother, Mrs. Hattie N. Cross, Sunbury, N. C.

What an opportunity to do a good work and also to perpetuate the names of dear ones! What a privilege for old students to lend a hand to aid their dear old Alma Mater!

Any enquiries made of me at Chapel Hill, N. C., will be cheerfully answered.

Carthage Circuit.

Rev. J. B. Hurley, our faithful Presiding Elder, has recently met his third round with us, having encountered, respectively, snow, rain, and heat. He preached well to large congregations.

Our Sunday-schools have observed Children's Day. Enthusiastic interest was shown, and the collections exceeded those for the past year. Otherwise, the schools are manifesting increased life and activity.

During my rounds on Christian Education, Missions, Sunday-schools, and the General Rules, the congregations were unusual for size and attention; peace prevails throughout our borders, and we are expecting soon to experience gracious revivals.

It was my pleasure to unite in marriage, June 22, Mr. W. P. Benner and Miss Bettie F. Seawell; June 26, Mr. T. J. Crutchfield and Miss Effie A. Muse; June 28, Dr. D. F. Watson and Miss Alice Belle Tarkin, all of Moore County. With the last of these ceremonies I was assisted by Rev. J. K. Roberts, of the Presbyterian Church.

July 15th, 1904.

Campmeeting at Kennekeet.

The camp-meeting at Kennekeet, N. C., began June 19, 1904, and closed June 29th.

Our Presiding Elder, Rev. J. E. Underwood, was in charge of the meeting. Brother Underwood is a great power in revival work. I have never seen a man work more faithfully than did Brother Underwood.

The following preachers were also with us: Rev. F. L. Church, A. J. Parker, Wm. Towe, and J. V. Williams. Brother Church had very important appointments to fill, so he left us on Friday before the meeting closed Sunday night, and Brother Williams also left on Saturday. The other brethren remained till the end and saw the final result. The preaching was all very good, and I am sure that much good was accomplished. Brothers Parker and Church brought their families with them, and both of their wives assisted in the meeting and did very good work. They are both very good workers.

We cannot tell just how many conversions there were, but quite a goodly number. Thirty-five joined the church on profession of faith, and others will join. The church was greatly revived, and will never be able to estimate the good that was done. On the last day of the meeting, Brother Underwood took a collection for the Conference collections and raised $64, and on Sunday Brother Parker and myself did some work for the Advocate, and soon obtained thirty-five new subscribers, and others have subscribed since. There were about 1,500 people in attendance on Sunday, and considering the large number, we had very good order.

On Sunday evening we had a communion service, which was the largest seen in Avon for many years;also a baptismal service for infants, and fourteen infants and adults were baptized.

We are now holding a meeting at Clarks and the Lord is with us. We are expecting and praying for great results.

Fraternally, A. W. PRICE.

There Is Blessing In Our Brotherhood.

In a letter received a few days since from Sister Harrison, the widow of Rev. Z. T. Harrison, who recently died, occurs this sentence: "I would be glad to get my brotherhood money as soon as possible, for I will have to move soon, and will need it, as I will have to buy nearly everything to furnish my house, and have six little children that are dependent on me." Delinquent brethren of the brotherhood, please send in your assessments that speedy relief may be sent. This is the same case for which Bro. John N. Cole asked special aid in last week's Advocate. I pray that both his call and our Brotherhood's may be heeded, as both are needed to provide a home for the fatherless and the widow.

The Family

WISE WORDS OF SPIRITUAL COUNSELLORS.

Bottled Expressly for Family Use.

A great many products are put up "bottled expressly for family use"—only to mention ketchup, pickles, milk, and cream. But there are other things that are also bottled for use in the family, that are not material; but they are kept in store and drawn out upon occasion. Every housekeeper has a supply. What are they? Well, let us variously designate them as temper, impatience, irritability, unreasonableness—these are kept most carefully bottled up for family use and it is not infrequently that the stopper is drawn. Bottled up as they are, they often begin to ferment and press for a wider range during business hours and when strangers are by. But the stopper at such times is only pressed down the tighter. It would hurt the business to show irritability and give way to temper. A man would lose his client or his patient or his customer or his place if he should give way to it. So down it stays till he comes—where? Why, to his dear, peaceful, quiet home, the place he loves, and whose dear inmates he loves. But then they know by his looks that the day's business has been trying, and soon the bottled-up temper which would have injured the business begins to show how it has been kept expressly for family use. Strange—isn't it?

"We have welcome words for the stranger
And smiles for the sometimes guest:
But we vex our own with the bitter tone,
Though we love our own the best.
O lips with the word impatient,
O brow with the look of scorn,
'Twere a bitter fate were the night too late
To undo the work of the morn!"

And how does it all come about? Why are the testiness and the impatient reply all saved up for the home and the ones we really and devotedly love and care for there? Why, it is all there—the cowardliness and meanness of spirit that lead to this outburst. We dare to do it because we knew we can do it and still be tolerated. Men in business and strangers in society would not tolerate it; so we keep it in. But in the family we let it out. In many a character this quality of ill temper stands out as the one glaring defect. Its ferment will permeate a household like an evil leaven; its shadow will brood over an otherwise happy circle like a storm-cloud.

For the man who habitually gives way to temper and testiness there is only one course open, and that it to go apart by oneself and think it out—think what wrong you have done and how you have injured others. Bitter words are like knives: they have cruel wounds—wounds that often pierce the most loving hearts.

"Boys flying kites haul in their white-winged birds;;
You can't do that way when you're flying words.
Thoughts that we think may sometimes fall back dead,
But God himself can't kill them when they're said."

Let the man who is afflicted with this malady sit apart with the Master and tell it to Him, and get the touch of His healing robe, which will make even crooked tempers straight. There is no other way. And no other way is needed, because this is a sufficient way. Let him pray with David, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me."

The waspish temper is bad enough when men only are concerned; but when its stinging virus is seen to destroy the peace of the home, making every member suffer, the evil goes deep. Do not give way to it, Christian! Keep the bad spirit down! See to it that you are not the one meant when some shall ask—"What are these wounds in thy hands?" and he shall answer—"These are the wounds wherewith I was wounded in the house of my friends."—Exchange.

What Must We Do?

The "limited" thunders on through the blackness of the night. Faster and faster it goes, until the wheels seem fairly to fly over the rails. Within the coaches hundreds of human beings sleep peacefully. With his hand on the throttle, and his every faculty strained to a terrible tension, the engineer watches the quivering monster that plunges ahead with fearful pace. Without warning, there is a terrific crash. Then come the shrieks of the wounded, the groans of the dying. A hundred men and women are hurled to their death. An investigation follows the disaster. The papers report that the tracks had spread!

A little blaze starts on the stage of a crowded theatre. With the rapidity of lightning it leaps to the inflammable material around. Someone calls for the asbestos curtain, but it falls only half way, and then shrivels and burns like paper. Eight hundred imprisoned human beings are suffocated by smoke and poisonous gases, or trampled to death in the mad fight for life. Almost every home in a great city is transformed into a house of mourning. Children are deprived of parents, and husbands go mad at the loss of wives and sons and daughters. Why was no provision made against such a disaster? There was provision made, but the fire-proof curtain was a fraud!

An excursion steamer is crowded with happy women and merry children. Some one smells smoke. A life-preserver is on fire. Surely it can easily be extinguished. But the sparks drop among a pile of greased rags and inflammable rubbish. They spread; passengers become alarmed; they grow panic-stricken as the fire sweeps the crowded decks. By hundreds people perish in the flames, leap into the water only to drown, for the life-preservers are rotten! A thousand lives are lost! Five hundred homes are utterly desolated! Was there no one whose duty it was to know that the excursion boat was free from dangerous rubbish, and provided with adequate fire-extinguishers and life-preservers? Yes. There was a steamer inspector, but he did his work after the terrible accident. He didn't think it necessary to comply with the letter of the law—nothing would happen.

We must enact more stringent laws to protect human life? Yes. We can enact laws directing that every rod of railway be subjected to careful inspection as often as may be necessary, to insure that no train freighted with human lives shall dash onto a defective track. We can enact, and have enacted, that every theatre and other public building be provided with fire-proof curtains and smoke flues. We may insist men be appointed to inspect vessels, which are entrusted with the lives of our dear ones. But a law, however plainly printed upon a statute book, affords small comfort to crushed hearts. No. There are things that cannot be done by legislation. I may be in authority over my servant, and my word should be to him a law. But whether he carries out my instructions or not will depend on the kind of a man he is. If he be trustworthy, he will obey. If he be faithless, my command will not insure the performance of his duty.

In spite of ourselves we are thrown back on the old truth that has stood since man was created a free moral agent. It is a question of character, of the principles that govern a man's life. Before wholesale slaughter of human beings will cease we must have men who will not leave a bit of uninsulated wire because it is hidden and will not be discovered; men whose word will be a sufficient guarantee when they pronounce a curtain fire-proof; men who will diligently inspect 999 vessels that need no inspection, rather than run the risk of missing one that might be at fault.

At it then, teachers, preachers, mothers! Teach it; preach it; instill it into the lives of the boys and girls, the coming men and women. The method may seem painfully slow but it is the only one that can save our people. When we have learned not only to say it, but to live it in the work of every day, then, and then only, shall we be safe. Here is its law:

"All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."—Epworth Herald.

"Clap the Lid On," Orders Burdette.

Rev. Robert J. Burdette is trapping for unwary Methodist Bishops who may attend services in the Temple Baptist Church.

While the great Dr. G. Campbell Morgan was preaching at the Temple Baptist Church. Dr. McIntyre went one afternoon to hear him; but he found the church so crowded that he could not get in the front door. He craftily circled around and entered the place by a flank movement, going in a back door. He fumbled around in darkness back of the pulpit. Back of the rostrum, was a curtain he could see dimly, and it occurred to him as a great scheme to go across behind the scenes and peep through the curtain at the speaker.

In the dimness, suddenly he stepped out gracefully into space and fell in a sprawling heap at the bottom of the baptistry, crawling out with barked shins and a new understanding of Baptist architecture.

He was rather sore, as he confessed to Mr. Burdette, afterward.

"But," he said, triumphantly, "It was dry. There was no water in your old baptistry, and I am a Methodist yet."

Burdette is not the man to be caught napping twice. The Methodists are now holding their pentecostal meetings in his church.

Yesterday afternoon, Burdette hunted up the sexton and laid these instructions heavily upon him:

"I want you to fill that baptistry to the brim."

"Yess'r," said the sexton, eagerly.

"Wait," said "Bob" sternly, "And if a Methodist Bishop falls in ——"

"Yes'r," gasped the excited sexton.

"Clap the lid on!"—Los Angeles Times.

Morning Prayer.

The morning is the gate of the day, and should be well guarded with prayer. It is one of the threads on which the day's actions are strung, and should be well knotted with devotion. If we felt more the majesty of life, we should be more careful of its mornings. He who rushes from his bed to his business, and waiteth not to worship, is foolish, as though he had not put on his clothes or cleansed his face, and as unwise as though he dashed into battle without arms or armor. Be it ours to bathe in the softly flowing river of communion with God before the heat of the wilderness and the burden of the day begin to oppress us.—Spurgeon.

"Seated one day at the organ, I was weary and ill at ease,
And my fingers wandered idly over the noisy keys.
I know not what I was playing, or what I was dreaming then,
But I struck one chord of music like the sound of a great Amen!
It flooded the crimson twilight, like the close of an angel's psalm,
And it lay on my fevered spirit with the touch of infinite calm.
It quieted pain and sorrow, like love overcoming strife,
It seemed a harmonious echo from our discordant life.
It linked all perplexed meanings into one perfect peace,
And trembled away into silence as if it were loth to cease,
I have sought, but I seek it vainly, that one lost chord divine,
Which came from the soul or the organ, and entered into mine.
It may be that death's bright angel may sing that song again,
Or it may be that only in heaven I shall hear that grand Amen!"

The sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close-knit strands of an unbroken thread,
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells:
The book of life the shining record tells.
Thy love shall chant its own beatitudes
After its own life working. A child's kiss
Set on thy sighing lips shall make thee glad,
A sick man helped by thee shall make thee strong.
Thou shalt be served thyself by every sense
Of service which thou renderest.

Dear Advocate:—We send five cents each to the Orphanage. We have three little orphan cousins. They live with grandpa Hayle. We love to read the little children's letters and all the stories in the Advocate.

Your friends,
JNO. and MARY HAYLE.

Gibson, N. C., June 26, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little boy ten years old. I go to Sunday-school. Our pastor is Rev. G. B. Perry. My teacher is Mrs. D. C. Lytch. Now I will ask a question: What verse in the Bible has "thereof" in it nine times.

Your little friend,
LESTER FLETCHER.

Lumberdale, N. C., June 29, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I thought I would write to you for my first time. I am a little boy 10 years old. Papa takes the Advocate, and I like to read the children's letters. I will answer Lelia J. Thrower's question: Sampson was the strongest man. And now I will ask one: How did the ten spies cross the river Jordan?

I will close for this time.

Your unknown friend,
MARSHALL THOMPSON.

West Raleigh, June 25, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl nine years old. My papa takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading it very much. Our every-day school has closed now. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday that I can. I will close by asking a question: How old was Jesus when He was crucified?

I hope to see this in print.

Your friend,
ETHEL AVENT.

Atlantic, N. C., June 27, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a girl 12 years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. My teacher is Miss Myrtle Morris. My papa takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the girls' and boys' letters. My papa is the pastor—T. W. Mansfield. Mr. James Morris is the Superintendent. I have one sister and two brothers.

Your friend,
ANNIE L. MANSFIELD.

Fayetteville, N. C., June 24, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl seven years old. We live in a city, and we go to Sunday-school when we can. Our Superintendent is Mr. Gorham. My teacher is Mrs. Gorham. Our every-day school is out, and we had a real nice commencement. I will answer Maud Westbrook's question: Methuselah was the oldest man. Now I will ask a question: How long did the flood last? I will close in fear of the waste basket. I am

Your unknown friend,
MYRA COTTON.

Red Springs, N. C.

Dear Advocate:—I never like to write to the Advocate unless I have some money to send the orphans. I have twenty-five cents to send you, which I earned myself. But I don't think I will tell you how I earned it.

I have a little dog which is crippled, and he goes to church on three legs. He looks so funny running along on three legs, and kicking the fourth. This is the only pet I have. I have such a good time in vacation. I have lots of little friends, and we play together all day. Our yard is big and shady, and so I always have some one to play with. I miss one of my little friends who has gone to Washington City. I study hard in winter because mama says so; and I have to practice an hour a day. I go to the Southern Presbyterian College, and I hope some day to graduate there.

I must stop because I don't want my letter to be too long.

My love to the Advocate and to the orphans.

Your friend,
ALLIE PEARSALL.

Vanceboro, N. C., June 28, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl eleven years old. Mama takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the letters from the little boys and girls.

Our pastor is Rev. B. E. Stanfield. I like him very much. I go to Sunday-school nearly every Sunday. I like to go. Our Superintendent is Mr. Henry Powell.

I will answer Cecil Kelley's question: Rebekah was Jacob's mother.

Now I will ask one: How old was Jesus when he began preaching?

I will close with best wishes to the Advocate. I am

Your friend,

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl nine years old. My mother and father are both dead, and I live with my aunt and uncle, and I love them very good. My uncle takes the Advocate, and I like to read the little boys and girls' letters very much. I go to Sunday-school nearly every Sunday. My Superintendent is Mr. G. M. Jackson, and my teacher is Mrs. Fannie Thompson, and our pastor is Rev. Rood. We all like him very much. I have six brothers.

Love to the orphans.

Your little friend,
BERTIE KING.

Scotland Neck, N. C., June 28, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As my other letter was in print, I will write again. My school has stopped, and I was so sorry. But we children have a nice time. I have just finished reading the Advocate, and I like it fine. We all like our preacher fine. He is good to us; and I like his wife also.

I have a sweet little brother and a little sister.

Mrs. Hassell is one of brother's Sunday-school teachers. I will answer Cecil Kelly's question: Jacob's mother's name was Rebecca.

Now I ask one: How many years did Jesus live upon the earth before He was crucified?

Good by.

Your little friend,
MOLLIE HARRISON.

P. S.—I hope to have my letter in print.

Whitakers, N. C., June 21, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I'm a little girl four years old, but I enjoy hearing mama read the letters from the children in the Advocate.

Inclosed you will find fifteen cents for the Orphanage, that I earned myself. Daddy gave it to me for learning a piece to recite on Childrens' Day. Now perhaps some other little girl can earn some money in this way.

We were glad to see Monroe Piland's letter last week, as his father used to preach for us.

I will be one to try to raise a dollar by Christmas for the orphans.

I will answer Lucy C. Herring's question. Daniel was put in the lions' den.

With best wishes for the Advocate and love for the orphans, I am,

Your little friend,
LOTA LEIGH DRAUGHON.

Mrs. Hargrove's Message.

Mrs. Hargrove has come and gone, and what a blessing her visit has been to us all. While she was received with open arms wherever she went, our chief regret is that every woman in the Southern Methodist Church could not have heard her. We need just such talks, just such soul stirring.

Mrs. Hargrove opened her address by saying that since she represented our own Board, and Scarritt Bible Training School she came to us not as to strangers but as to her own, for we all had a common interest in Woman's Work for Woman. Even in the same cause, however, our minds needed stirring and she would emphasize the magnitude of our work, which she believed especially ordered of God.

Not only, said Mrs. Hargrove, is woman's work for woman ordained of God, but also the work of the W. F. M. Society. Its existence is not a mere accident. God brought together the holy women, one of whom has recently died in the foreign field, to whom we owe its inception. In answering the question why she thought woman permitted to carry on so great work, Mrs. Hargrove said that she thought it a recognition of woman's service through the ages, and of her personal consecration. A consecration, by the way, which should be "purse-and-all consecration."

In recounting the benefits of woman's work it is hard to say whether the society has done more good at home or in foreign lands. Of the good at home we know. In foreign lands, however, the benefits stand out in proportion to the great need, for there is woman's condition most degraded. The keynote of her life is fear. She fears everything, her husband, her son, her god. As accounts are frequent from China, Japan, India, Mexico and Brazil, Mrs. Hargrove wished to emphasize the needs of women in the Mohammedan lands, which in her recent trip to Palestine she had the opportunity of seeing. A land where God is worshipped as god, but where the Koran has supplanted the Bible. Her reports from these countries were heart-rending. It has only been ten years since in this land woman was thought to possess a soul. Only since mission schools have shown that woman was capable of learning, has even a place of worship been allowed her. In this Land of Promise where woman's work began the sons of Ishmael have overcome the sons of Isaac.

By relating vivid instances of the degration of women, which she had seen, Mrs. Hargrove showed how woman is the common carrier in the East, no better than the donkey. Every grain of wheat ground in Palestine is ground by women. On the great turn-pike road built by the Turkish government from Mt. Carmel to Jerusalem the rock and gravel has all been carried by women, and one may see them laboring on it even now. Such degradation of body and mind means degradation of soul and woman's hope there is small.

From this country of our Lord's teaching where our blessed religion saw its birth a great cry comes to us from the darkness—a cry to which we who have the light of its power must hearken for the possession of privilege—entails obligation.

In the social world a man who takes in everything and gives out nothing is called a "sponge." Can we afford to be religious sponges? Yet that is the attitude of many of us toward our religion. We absorb all that we can, but what do we give? He who raised our brother from the dead has need of our alabaster box.

Mrs. Hargrove then spoke of the report of the Board for last year, and of what a source of thankfulness it was to her that we had done better than any previous year. Yet the $132,000 raised has been raised by 80,000 members of the societies while in the church there are 900,000 making more than 800,000 unemployed.

Hoping that many present would come under the first class, Mrs. Hargrave gave them some advice as to the needs of the work. First, a deeper sense of obligation to Christ; second, more enthusiasm; third, more prayer and more definite prayer; fourth, more work and less counting of the steps taken for the Lord; fifth, more self-denial. Self-denial is a woman's forte; and just here came the suggestion that perhaps a woman's self-denial might come in the way of dues—not so many flounces and furbelows.

In closing, Mrs. Hargrave quoted some lines, which she had copied from the walls of the girls' school at Beirut, Syria, words which we may all apply:

"Be strong—
We are not here to play, to dream, to drift,
We have hard work to do and loads to lift,
Shun not the struggle, 'tis God's gift."

WONDERFUL NERVE.
Is displayed by many a man enduring pains of accidental Cuts, Wounds, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Sore feet or stiff joints. But there's no need for it. Bucklen's Arnica Salve will kill the pain and cure the trouble. It's the best Salve on earth for Piles, too. 25c. at all druggists.

Why Should Every Church Have an Auxiliary?

The greatest reason for the need of an auxiliary in every church is that it should have the benefit gained from connectional privileges and information given in a systematic way, while our Society should have more auxiliaries and more members. Our church is organic in its basic principles, and it is a tenet of our faith that the strong should help the weak. The Home Mission Society is one of its organizations and has a place in the polity.

Pride.

We who are interested in the church are anxious that our Conference should stand shoulder to shoulder with other Conferences in every branch of Christian work; we have some pardonable pride in this matter and are willing to "spend and be spent" to reach this end. We do not antagonize any other organization, but only claim our place in the family and work with the other members for the welfare of the house hold.

Growth and Recognition.

Our Woman's work has grown to be a factor in the advancement of the Master's Kingdom, and we rejoice in the success with which He has crowned our efforts. Naturally we wish, and are cordially given, in its proper place, by our brethren of the ministry, due recognition of all work done through both the Woman's Foreign and Home Mission Societies.

Every Local Aid Society Should Become Connectional.

In our Conference Journal both the Foreign and Home Societies have a place, while the work of the Local Aid comes under no separate head, but is counted in the general fund. It would be much better to pay the amount required to become connectional, and report all that is done at home as "local work."

The very best help a preacher can have is an active, live Home Mission Society. The broadening influences of the general work enlarges the hearts and consciences of the women and prepares them for better efforts in every field. Surely there are none of us who do so well we might not do better?

To the Brethern.

While some are strong and are looking for grand developments in the near future, many of God's little ones" are not so fortunate. While you are planning and working at "Jerusalem" will you not with us "enter the gates of Samaria"? Will you not join us in building parsonages where there are none? In caring for the needy who, though not in our very midst, are no less in need? In establishing Doors of Hope, Rescue Homes and Missions in our cities, where so many are sinking beneath the vortex of sin and shame? In conducting schools, where both the heart and hand are trained to usefulness, and from which the Gospel is carried to the heathen at our doors?

"Stir up the Gift."

I feel that there must be some who are willing and ready, and I pray you to "stir up the gift that is within them" and at an early day organize a Home Mission Auxiliary in every church. Let us no longer feel that we alone are out of the family circle.

I know our readers will enjoy these extracts from Mrs. Wilkins' letter to Rev. J. A. Hornaday; he kindly sent me the issue of his excellent paper, "The Methodist Quarterly" (which I trust many of you take) containing it, and will value this expression of appreciation, for he with us rejoices in the strong and valuable pen of our sister.

A VERY CLOSE CALL.
"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters, and after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists. Price 50 cents.

Editorial

Say not, "It matters not what men may think,
But 'tis the deed avails." As flower to seed,
Is deed to thought; and as the seed foretells
Hemlock or rose, thought tells the coming deed.
—Thomas Curtis Clark.

The ability of the Bible to exhibit and reveal the Christ is the sure test of its infallibility. All questions of history and science in connection with the Bible need not give one any concern as long as the plan of salvation through a living Savior stands out clear, intelligible and practicable.

We are not unaccustomed to hearing that Mammon has an alarmingly large number of votaries, but the bold stroke of President Hadley rather startles us when he says that there are two religions: one of Mammon and the other of God. Yet Christ in His teachings was constantly placing God and Mammon in juxtaposition. President Hadley is only repeating one of Christ's statements.

Some very recent occurrences have led us to believe that the habit which many Southern educational men have of making blunt, unpleasant and often untrue statements with reference to to things at home is waxing instead of waning. Of course the statements are not intended ultimately for the home audience, but for that audience across the line which only has to take snuff in order to make its eager patrons sneeze.

If a congregation desires to use the New Order of Worship, the optional parts and all, that desire should be granted without criticism. We see no danger of excessive ritualism in such a course. But why should such stress be laid by some on the Gloria which is optional, and nothing be said about the general failure to observe that general positive and unconditional rule which calls on every member to reverently kneel on entering church? Will some one enlighten us?

Methodism is remaining true to her functions as a leader. She is not afraid to blaze out paths, and she shows her catholicity by not objecting to another's travelling in that path. While Methodism is not strictly the pioneer in the deaconess work, yet from a practical standpoint she is. We are glad that her example is being followed by the Congregationalists. On Sunday, June 25, a Deaconess Home was dedicated in Illinois by the Congregationalists. A Methodist deaconess was secured to start the enterprise.

Godlessness is the most inconsistent thing in the world. President Richard M. Venable is reported to have based his refusal to allow religious services in the parks of Baltimore on the fact that he is an agnostic and does not believe in the Christian religion. How he can favor the vaudeville shows in the parks and frown on religious services which, from his standpoint, are negative and inane, we can not see. There is a way of believing in such a strange way as to create a malicious prejudice against the object of faith. President Venable must have found this way.

"Work," a monthly paper published by Dr. Sam Steel, of Lumberton, Mississippi, is one of the snappiest, brightest visitors that come to this office. What a wonderful writer Dr. Steel is! And we may add, what a pity that the last issue contained some writing which was of such a personal bilious nature that we feel sure that the brilliant and warm-hearted writer will wish to recall it before another moon. Time manages to bring all needed vindications—and that too without the aid of the weapons of warfare which are carnal! Dr. Steel had simply lost sight of this fact for the time being.

ELIZABETH CITY DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

Sunbury has the advantage of a liquid euphonious name, and the name fits the place. It is a "sweet Auburn" kind of village. The houses are not many, but they have an inviting look as they nestle in the shadow of great oaks. One can sit on the piazza and look on the inviting reaches of corn and cotton fields.

One of the most pleasant homes in Sunbury is that of our friend and brother, Mr. J. F. Cross. The house fronts a sheet of water from which the graceful cypress rises. The mill is only a few yards away, and it is very evident to one who has the privilege of being a guest in this home that there is no use of going to the mountains or seashore as long as he has the opportunity of resting here and enjoying the kindness of Brother Cross and his household, presided over by his accomplished daughter. This was our home during the Conference.

The District Conference (Elizabeth City) met on Wednesday, July 13, at 2.30 p. m. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. H. M. Jackson. He evidently struck the right chord in his congregation, for the echoes were still heard when we reached Sunbury about nightfall on Wednesday. The church is still called Philadelphia. It is a handsome country church, with carpeted aisles and papered walls. It is one of the oldest churches in this section. When we think of such churches and such people we do not wonder that the Virginia Conference made such strenuous efforts to retain this favored Chowan section.

We found about all the preachers present on Thursday morning. The delegation was by no means full. A little after 9 o'clock we took our place in a congregation listening to a good sermon by Rev. W. P. Constable. Just think of it! preaching right after breakfast. But the wonder ceases when it is remembered that John E. Underwood was in command. He believes in "redeeming the time." He believes in work and in making others work.

With one exception we had never seen before such crowds of people at a District Conference. They came from far and near, walking, in road carts, buggies, and phaetons. We found horses hitched a quarter of a mile from the church because there was no nearer hitching place on account of the multitude of horses that had preempted the ground.

We sometimes wonder why it is that our District Conferences are not oftener held in the country where they can do so much good. The people come out, and hundreds of them are benefited. The idea of reaching the people should be paramount when any meeting of the church is being considered.

The hospitality of the people in this section was manifested in the liberal preparation made for supplying the wants of the inner man. Not one half of the people could get into the church so great was the crowd, yet every one was amply fed, and many baskets of fragments were taken up. Bro. F. L. Church in his sermon on Thursday night rather discountenanced the plan of having such dinners on the ground. We take issue with him, and freely forgive him, for we suspect that he had partaken too largely that day of the dinner, and was suffering from indigestion.

On Thursday afternoon special attention was given to an enterprise which means much to Methodism in the Elizabeth City District—the Albemarle High School in Elizabeth City. A company is being formed for the erection of a large building. The capitalization is $15,000. The shares are sold at $12.50. Many of them have been taken, and quite a number were subscribed for Thursday afternoon. It is probable that a special agent will be sent out during August to canvass for this enterprise. It is evident that Elizabeth City District is alive on the subjects of education and temperance.

We had the pleasure of hearing the following brethren preach: Rev. R. L. Davis, W. P. Constable, Dr. J. C. Kilgo, and Rev. F. L. Church. We noticed that all the sermons which we heard were of the evangelical type and were preached with earnestness and spiritual power. We are glad to see that the fact is being recognized that a District Conference is no place for the "getting off" of a "big sermon." The opportunities for doing good at a District Conference are too many for a selfish exploitation of the occasion.

The following were visitors at the Conference: Dr. J. C. Kilgo, Rev. J. M. Rhodes, Rev. R. L. Davis, President M. S. Davis, Rev. M. T. Plyler, Prof. J. F. Hornaday, and this writer

The preachers while not reporting many revivals this year are looking forward to fine spiritual results. Rev. W. E. Hocutt has just closed a very successful meeting in which there 58 accessions to the Methodist and quite a number to the Baptist Church.

The report on the collections was very encouraging. Quite a number of the charges reported collections in full.

Rev. J. E. Underwood, the Presiding Elder, is managing his District in a way to reflect great credit on his head and heart. He has the loyal love of all his preachers.

Rev. T. J. Dailey is P. C. of North Gates Circuit. He has a fine people to serve, and in his experience with them he is sustaining his name as a strong preacher and faithful pastor.

SEND HIM.

The editor remembers with tenderest feelings the mark of appreciation shown him by his congregation at Wilson in giving him a trip to the Chicago Exposition in 1903. He thoroughly enjoyed that trip, made possible only through the practical kindness of his people. He feels that he made the trip pay in more ways than one. Ever since he has been editor he has urged the various congregations throughout the Conference to show their appreciation of the pastor by not only granting him the needed vacation, but by giving him the wherewithal to utilize that vacation without being harassed by fears of financial shortage. We are glad that some of our preachers have seen the great West because the pure winds of their congregations have been touched into remembrance through our exhortations.

Bishop Hendrix thinks that every preacher should visit, if possible, the St. Louis Exposition. He places an exceedingly high value on such an experience. And he is right. The preacher who wisely takes in such an occasion as the St. Louis Fair re-enforces wonderfully his mental and moral forces, and his congregation will get the benefit of the re-enforcement.

So we wonder how many charges in the North Carolina Conference will enable their pastor to visit the St. Louis Exposition. He will appreciate it. Try it.

THAT CONTEST.

It is not too late to enter the contest for the prize of $25.00 to be awarded to the "mistress of the manse" sending by October 15, 1904, a photograph of the most artistic florally decorated parsonage front. An electrotype picture of every parsonage whose photgraph is sent in will be published. Even if you do not enter the contest have a photograph of the parsonage taken and send it to us. Let us know at once if you decide to enter the contest.

"The coming revival" is an expression often used these days in evangelical circles. It requires but comparatively little faith for the Christian world to believe in the near and certain approach of the foreseen blessing. It should bring with it the practiced doctrine that a more practical salvation is not so much the preparation for the larger life beyond, as that freedom from sin which ushers us into the larger, Spirit-filled life here. We cannot but feel that eschatology receives more than its shar eof attention when it is applied to the human part in the grand work of soul-winning.

Methodist Mention

State.

Note the changes made in the Quarterly Conferences of the New Bern District.

The camp-meeting at the famous Rock Spring camp ground, in Lincoln County, will open on Friday, August 12th.

Rev. M. T. Plyler is succeeding finely in his work of securing equipment for the new rooms in Greensboro Female College.

Dr. Edwin Mims delivered a very interesting and instructive lecture on Sidney Lanier before the Raleigh Summer School on last Monday night.

Rev. J. F. Triplett, formerly of the W. N. C. Conference, has been compelled to resign his work at Arcadia for the rest of the year, and goes to Colorado to recruit. He is one of our best men and best preachers, to be fully trusted for any post.

Rev. G. R. Rood, of Millbrook Circuit, is visiting relatives North. The editor filled his appointment at Mount Pleasant on last Sunday. He preached to a large congregation, and spent a short time very pleasantly in the home of Bro. H. W. House.

The indication at present is that there will be a large class for admission on trial in the Western North Carolina Conference this year. There are already fourteen candidates from the five districts which have had their conferences. This should be the occasion of special thanksgiving. Many of these are young men of exceptional promise. There will be a place for all who are qualified.—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

Our Children's Day at Union Chapel the first Sunday was a success in every respect. The exercises were very good; the crowd very good and attentive. We then protracted the meeting until Thursday. Had several conversions and five united with the church and the old members were much revived. Our pastor, Rev. L. M. Chaffin, did some faithful preaching. He hews to the line all the time; his chips will hit us very often, but they do us good. We had a good many visitors from a distance too numerous to mention.—Newman Cor. Warrenton Record.

Connectional

Dr. John Matthews celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday in the home of his son in St. Louis.

Dr. Andrew Sledd, son-in-law of Bishop W. A. Candler, has been chosen President of the Florida State University.

Rev. Thomas B. Reynolds, of the South Carolina Conference, died at his home at Williamston on Thursday, July 8.

The Baltimore-Richmond Christian Advocate is making a strong effort for 5,000 new subscribers before September 1st.

Dr. Tigert's son, John J., Jr., passed the Cecil Rhodes scholarship examination recently, which entitles him to spend four years in Oxford University, in England.

Four members of the Baltimore Conference (M. E. Church) have received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity, so says the Baltimore Methodist.

The work being done in Virginia by Rev. T. H. Haden in behalf of Japan as a missionary field is of the highest order. His statements are strong and clear, and his grasp on the situation in Japan is very statesmanlike.

Among the attractive features at Emory Grove (Northern Methodist Camp, about twenty miles from Baltimore), this season will be the Sunday-school Convention, beginning August 4th, and continuing four days. Among the prominent speakers secured for this occasion is Dr. Gross Alexander.

The alumni of Randolph-Macon College are undertaking to raise $35,000 to endow a chair of Modern Languages. Prof. D. B. Easter, an alumnus of the college, and a Ph. D. of Johns Hopkins, has been elected to this new chair, and will take charge September, 1905.

Rev. W. P. Turner, one of our most efficient workers as missionary in Japan, returns on furlough for a year. He, with his good wife and children, arrived the 26th instant. They will remain a few months in California before they go to their home in Georgia.

Rev. J. F. Thompson, who is engaged in writing the history of the Indian Mission Conference, has his manuscript nearly ready for the printer. It will be one among the most interesting books that has been published in a great while. It should be circulated throughout our Church.

We are glad to see fro mthe New Orleans Advocate that Bishop Keener's health is very much improved. He has arranged to go to his summer home, at Ocean Springs. Dr. Boswell says that he spent a half hour with the Bishop one morning recently, and that he—the Bishop—was as "genial and pleasant as a May morning." We shall not look upon his like again.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

Our Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home at Water Valley was burned to the ground on the morning of July 11th. The fire occurred about 7 o'clock. Over one hundred children were in the home, but all were up and at breakfast when the fire was discovered, and were marched out of the burning building without trouble. The loss is reported as amounting to $18,000, with $7,500 insurance.—New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Rev. Abe Mulkey, the well-known Texas evangelist, and Rev. W. H. Vaughan, who for several years has had charge of the Methodist Orphanage at Waco, have agreed to put up a twenty-five thousand dollar dormitory at Southwestern University. The university has been the recipient of several very liberal gifts this year, and now bids fair to enter upon a period of greatly increased usefulness and blessing to the Methodism of our State.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

To Reach Wilmington District Conference.

Let the brethren of the district and visitors and all concerned, take notice. The Conference meets Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. To prevent delegates from having to spend a night on the way, the steamer Compton will leave Wilmington on Wednesday afternoon, July 27th, at 5 o'clock. On Thursday and Friday boats leave Wilmington on regular schedule, 9.15 a. m.

I hope all will endeavor to reach Wilmington in time to go on the Compton, as it makes a special trip to carry delegates, and we expect to return on it. The regular fare between Wilmington and Southport is fifty cents each way. A sufficient number of attendants upon Conference will reduce this small amount. We hope for reduced rates on railroads, but delegates may have to buy straight tickets to Wilmington and get reduction returning. Enquire of your local agent.

I hope for a large attendance. Let no preacher or lay delegates be absent unless unavoidably hindered.

Sincerely, R. B. JOHN.

Warrenton District Conference Notice.

Connection with the Atlanta Special northbound over S. A. L. at Boykins, Va. Train leaves Boykins 11 a. m. for Rich Square. Connection made with north-bound morning train, reaching Kelford 10.20 over A. C. L.; leaving Kelford 1.30 p. m. over S. A. L. for Rich Square.

We are trying to arrange for special connections. Delegates who live west of the Roanoke will see their respective pastors before buying their tickets. Reduced rates over S. A. L. and A. C. L. J. T. STANFORD.

General Notes

Bishop Cranston recently dedicated three churches in one day.

The General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church will meet in Boston in October.

The City Temple congregation, London, is to build a memorial church in honor of its great pastor, Joseph Parker.

Texas is to have a great Presbyterian University. Presbyterians of the Southwest have given the site and a liberal endowment.

The mission budget of the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, is now $1,800,000, and the cry "two millions for missions" has become imperative.

Mr. D. K. Pearson, the public-spirited citizen and philanthropist, has given $50,000 to Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., to assist the children of Cuba to secure a higher education.

General Ballington Booth, the head of the Volunteers of America, with Mrs. Booth, sailed for England July 8th, on the Celtic. This is the first vacation General Booth has had in seventeen years. He will be abroad about seven weeks.

Pope Pius has sent his formal thanks to the Mikado of Japan for showing so much tolerance to the Catholic religion. The Catholic Bishop of Tokio reports that there are 90,000 Catholics now in Japan and that the upper classes are better disposed than ever toward Christianity.

There are within three million of as many persons enrolled in the Sunday-schools of this country as in the public schools, there being thirteen million in the former and sixteen million in the later. The total Sunday-school membership throughout the world is twenty-five million.

President Hyde is authority for the statement that of the graduates from Bowdoin College, who have been out of school more than ten years, 493 are earning an average salary of $3,365. The physicians average $4,687; the lawyers, $4,577; the educators, $2,258, and the ministers of the Gospel, $1,559.

The General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church will meet in Boston in October. This body is composed of two houses, the House of Bishops and the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies. The bishops are all members of the first House by virtue of their office, and the Deputies are elected by the dioceses.

The corner-stone of the Winston Avenue Christian Church was laid Wednesday morning by the Masonic Fraternity. About all the manufacturing enterprises of the town had suspended operations and a large number of people were present. The Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference is in session here now and this added to the interest of the occasion.

The new connectional buildings in London, to be erected by the Wesleyan Methodists near Westminster Abbey, are to cost $600,000 above the price of land. There will be a great hall for public gatherings and Sunday services, and rooms for conferences, synods, committees, etc. The large hall will seat 2,500 persons, while the small hall will accommodate 500, and a lecture hall and library will seat about 500. In the basement will be a tea room with 1,000 seats.

The tenth annual National Bible Conference, under the direction of Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, will conduct the summer program at Winona Lake, Ind., August 20-31. Among the teachers will be Rev. Dr. Odell, Birmingham, England; Rev. John Robertson, Glasgow, Scotland; Rev. Dr. Johnston Ross, Cambridge, England; Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, Princeton; Rev. Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus, Chicago; Rev. Charles Gordon (Ralph Connor), Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell, Philadelphia; Rev. Dr. R. A. Torrey, and John Willis Baer.

NORTH CAROLINA
EPWORTH LEAGUE
DEVOTIONAL CHARITABLE CONFERENCE LITERARY EVANGELICAL
FOR CHRIST AND HIS CHURCH

EDITED BY REV. H. B. ANDERSON.

How to Collect for the League Missionary.

Let the fourth vice-president, or some member of her committee, procure a small blank book and rule every right hand page into twelve spaces from top to bottom. Then enter the name of every member of the chapter on the left hand pages; secure from each the first month, the payment of five cents. And each succeeding month, let each member be called upon for two cents. Some may prefer to pay the full amount down. If so, credit the months as indicated—five cents the first month and two cents every month thereafter for eleven months.

The League may prefer to vote to pay the twenty-seven cents per member from the monthly dues. Then let the fourth vice-president call upon the Treasurer for the amount as the League may determine, as in all cases of expenditure.

Remove the Disgrace.

A few days ago it was reported in Virginia that the Virginia Building at St. Louis Fair, was standing unfinished: a disgrace to the State. Immediately those who were jealous of the honor of that commonwealth interested themselves in the completion of the building.

As Methodists of North Carolina we rest under the stigma of a half completed task. Our Epworth League interest drags. Let all who are jealous for the honor of Methodism in the bounds of the North Carolina Conference arise and build.

There is no Conference in the connection so neglectful, and, may I say, disloyal to the mandates of the church, as ours. Our sister Conference, the Western North Carolina Conference, reports seventy-six chapters, while we have only fifty-two. "Let us go up and possess the land for we are able."

What the Preachers Decide to do: Soon an Accomplished Fact

Whatever the preachers say ought to be done is soon an accomplished fact. This has been demonstrated in two instances recently. They resolved that the Advocate ought to have an increase of circulation, and soon the editor's heart was gladdened by one thousand four hundred new subscribers. These same men have said we must have full collections for missions, and more than a month ago there was such an increase in the collections as to warrant the prediction that there will be full collections in every district.

There is one other interest of the church within the bounds of our Conference which calls for the attention and interest of these men of God. Let the preachers become awakened to the importance and place of the Epworth League, and in less than six months our chapters will number one hundred and fifty with a membership of at least 10,000.

Repeatedly we hear the statement that the Methodist Church loses more members that she has a right to expect to fill up her ranks than all other churches combined. I do not vouch for this statement; but, if true, I warrant that it would not be true if our preachers would organize Leagues in their congregations. A successful League would attach our young people to the church as nothing else would—and, I might say, could.

The League is an assured success in the bounds of our Conference whenever our preachers decide it must be so. Our young people are only awaiting intelligent leadership. When will we of the North Carolina Conference organize the hosts of our young people and turn their wasted energies into channels of usefulness for God and the church?

Be Careful Whom You Put in Office.

Shut your door and window blinds and except a flood of sun light, expect to set an engine in motion without fire, rather than put at the head of one of your League departments individuals who do not think anything can be done.

The reason the League does not succeed in your work, brother, is because you do not think there is any room for it, or because you do not think anything can be done. Give your young people a chance. You are supposed to be their leader. They have a right to expect intelligent leadership. Fill yourself with the League idea. Select your leaders and fill them full of League enthusiasm, and success is sure. It may not be a "howling" success; but it will be success.

The pastor of City Roads Church (Elizabeth City), whose name is becoming synonymous with success, has notified us that his chapter, numbering forty-three members, has contributed the amount asked of each League for the support of a League missionary.

Let the good work go rapidly on. Who will be the next to respond to the call. Remember it is only twenty-seven cents, and may be paid in small monthly payments of only two cents.

* * *

Let the League Secretary put me in correspondence, at once, with the fourth vice-president of his chapter. If this officer has not been chosen let that item be a part of your work at the next business meeting.

* * *

Two cents a week per member and our church would pay at least one and one-half million dollars annually for missions.

Only five cents the first month, and two cents thereafter for eleven months, and our Epworth Leagues of North Carolina Conference will send out a missionary.

Sunday School

Lesson for July 24, 1904.

Johoshaphat's Reform

2 Chronicles 19:1-11.

Golden Text: Deal courageously, and the Lord shall be with the good. 2 Chron. 19:11.

Jehoshaphat was the son of good King Asa. He reigned for twenty-five years, and proved himself a worthy successor to his noble father. The events described in the lesson assigned for our study occurred after Jehoshaphat had been reigning about twenty years.

A Poor Alliance.—The greatest mistake which Jehoshaphat made was his alliance with Ahab, king of Israel. Ahab wished to take Ramoth-Gilead from the Syrians, and induced Jehoshaphat to join forces with him. A lying spirit in the mouths of four hundred prophets encouraged Ahab to proceed with this expedition, and when Micaiah, a true prophet of Jehovah, raised his voice in protest, his words were disregarded, and the prophet himself was sent to prison for his fidelity to the truth.

The fight at Ramoth-Gilead ended in a miserable defeat for the allied forces of Israel and of Judah. Ahab was killed and Jehoshaphat narrowly escaped with his life.

It was on his return from the rout at Ramoth-Gilead that the king of Judah was met by the prophet Jehu, who uttered the well-merited words of rebuke with which the lesson opens.

An Ancient Revival.—Jehoshaphat showed his excellent spirit in the way in which he received the prophet's rebuke. He returned to Jerusalem and forthwith began an effort for the moral and spiritual uplift of his people, which may well be described as an ancient revival. On a pervious occasion he had sent commissioners throughout the land, but now he goes in person that he may teach the people the way of the Lord, and bring them back to the worship of Jehovah, the God of their fathers.

A Judicial Reform.—Jehoshaphat's reform was a sweeping one. It extended to all departments of the life of the people. One effort which is especially mentioned was the provision made for a reform of the judicial system of the land. This was done by the appointment of judges "throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city," and also by the creation of a supreme tribunal at Jerusalem.

A Worthy Charge.—The address of Jehoshaphat to the judges whom he appointed to sit at Jerusalem was one that was worthy of an enlightened sovereign. It was such a charge as might well be given to all judges at all times and in all places. Its closing admonition has been chosen for the Golden Text of our lesson, and it suggests a watchword which we might all well adopt—"Deal courageously, and the Lord shall be with the good."

SAVED FROM TERRIBLE DEATH.

The family of Mrs. M. L. Bobbitt of Bargerton, Tenn., saw her dying and were powerless to save her. The most skillful physicians and every remedy used, failed, while consumption was slowly but surely taking her life. In this terrible hour Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption turned despair into joy. The first bottle brought immediate relief and its continued use completely cured her. It's the most certain cure in the world for all throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed Bottles 50c. and $1.00. Trial Bottles Free at all druggists.

I CURE CANCER.
Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No knife. No plaster. No caustics. No slaughing oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure internal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment;" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else is the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

BLAKESLEE GASOLINE ENGINES
ARE BEST FOR Cotton Ginning
"I can only speak of the engine bought of you last Fall in the highest terms * * * We find her to move with the regularity of a clock; a thing that we think very essential in making a good sample of cotton. As for safety, we think it far surpasses steam, and perhaps not more dangerous than water. It seems very simple and easy to learn * * * and believe it to be only a question of time when they will take the place of steam engines."

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE
MACON, GA.
Begins 67th Annual Session Sept. 14, 1904
Still the oldest and the best. Original charter, 1836. First diploma, 1840. According to present information, 1,494 living alumnæ in Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, North Carolina and other Southern States and throughout the Union.
Total enrollment last year, 381. Modern methods of instruction. Every teacher an able and accomplished specialist. One of the highest and best curricula in the South thoroughly taught, not used merely as an advertisement.
Largest as well as best music school in Georgia, if not in the South. Hesselberg Director.
Enrollment of music pupils alone larger than the entire enrollment of any female college in the State. The class of Miss Connor (who IS unsurpassed in violin, as instructor or performer) was without predecessor in success and brilliancy in this section of the country.
Two new vocal teachers, Miss Wheeler (Cincinnati Conservatory) and Miss Combs (Conservatories of Florence and Geneva), next school year.
Miss Eva Massey, so accomplished and distinguished in piano, after being abroad a year, is with us again.
Miss Mabel V. Rivers, graduate and leader in her class, Boston School of Expression, lately in charge of Elocution and Physical Culture Department, Martha Washington College, succeeds the accomplished Miss Brown in same method.
Location elevated and very healthful. Rooms large and airy, but are comfortable in the coldest weather. Sanitary plumbing the best. Passenger and freight elevators.
Particular care of every boarding student. Last school year not a case of typhoid fever, or of other sickness, in our large boarding student body from local cause.
Young ladies required to dress neatly, modestly, and inexpensively. They are not required to purchase uniforms as they do not need, or that do not suit them, but are allowed to use taste as well as economy.
Discipline liberal, but carefully and faithfully enforced. College pastorate. Other religious advantages most excellent. Rates lower than any college or school of or near the same class in this section. Neither what we teach nor its equivalent can be properly taught for less money.
Catalogues free, and additional information on application.

About to Break Out.

We believe that liberality is about to break out all over our rich men just like the measles. A real good case of it. And our Orphanage will soon be put in the front rank of orphanages in North Carolina. The good Lord hasten it.

Receipts up to July 15.

Parkers S. S., $5.00; Morehead S. S., $15.00; Johnson S. S., $17.00; Smithfield S. S., $5.00; Gibson S. S., $2.50; St. Johns S. S., $2.50; Louisburg, $26.65; Morehead on subs., $15.75; Leasburg Circuit, $22.54; Hillsboro Circuit, $9.74; a friend, $1.00.

Louisburg.

Louisburg is one of the fine old county towns of North Carolina. Where will you find a better? For long years it was called a finished town. But some years ago it got a move on it, and since that time it has been pushing to the front.

Louisburg Female College, under the able management of President M. S. Davis, and his accomplished daughter, is doing much for the town. It is always a pleasure and a privilege to rest in that home. To spend the night there with my classmate in Conference, Dr. John R. Brooks, and his noble wife, now a patient sufferer, was more than an ordinary privilege. My friend of long years, W. H. Pleasants, whose doors are always open to the preachers, gave me shelter for a night. No better preacher's home than that. Massy showed me great kidness. He is in great favor there.

That Cow-Little Warren McCullers.

We made it known some time ago that we needed another cow. Little Edgar Warren, son of Brother and Sister E. B. McCullers, of Clayton, saw it, and was moved to give us the cow. One that his father gave him. The only one that he has. The beauty of it was that it was his own motion. Brother McCullers came to see that the cow got here all right, and brought the dear little boy with him. He wrote me in his own hand a unique letter which we send to the childrens' page of the Advocate. Look it up children. [It will appear next week.—Ed.] It is pleasant to know that it pleased his father and mother almost as much as it did us—and we were wonderfully pleased. This is the most valuable gift that has been given us by any little boy or big one as to that. We all give Warren most hearty thanks. See Warren's letter.

The Forward Movement

In view of the opening of our Main building on the first day of next September, there must be a forward movement all along the line. The pastors must wake up. They are expected to lead. The Superintendent of our Sunday-schools must wake up. They are expected to lead in the Sunday-schools. Our men and women of means must wake up. The rank and file must wake up. Larger liberality by all classes must be shown. Plans must be formed. Churches and Sunday-schools must be organized to support the children and pay the salaries of the officers and teachers. Great things must be done between now and the opening, September 1st. The rooms are to be furnished. Dormitories with seven beds in them will cost $100. A bed alone, $15. School rooms will cost $60. Teacher's room $50. Matron's room, $50. Matron's parlor, $50. Large parlor, $150. Offices, $40 a piece. One already taken by the children of Smithfield—$22 of it already in hand. Study, $100. The library is taken all round by Mrs. F. A. Woodard, and will be named for her father, Rev. J. H. Robbins—the whole at a cost of $1,000. The girls industrial room, $150—one Singer sewing machine already given through Mr. Vaughan of the Singer Company of Raleigh. The book room $150, laundry $100, dining room $250.

Several Sunday-schools can furnish a room besides the amount that they pay to support an orphan. Then the smaller schools can furnish one or two beds.

A number of individuals can furnish a room each, and a large number can send us fifteen dollars to buy a bed and outfit.

Let every preacher that asks for the admission of an orphan ask his charge to provide for its support.

KERR.—Annie B. Kerr, daughter of Jas. A. Kerr, died May 16, 1904. She was born in New Hanover County in the year 1872. A consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, for about fifteen years. A good woman is gone, the happy home circle is broken, there is a vacant chair, and a familiar voice is silenced, but her name has been transcribed from the church militant to the church triumphant. Her last days were full of severe, but patient and submissive suffering. She was laid to rest at Acorn Branch Church, which she loved so well. May the Lord be with the sorrowing ones, and may they prepare to meet her in the happy beyond.

Y. E. WRIGHT.
Her Pastor.

PICKARD.—Mrs. Selma Pickard was born March 8, 1881, and died June 14, 1903.

She was a bright, cheerful, lovable wife and companion.

She had just started well in her life's work when God called her. She leaves a husband, father and mother, also brothers and sister, to mourn their loss.

As I held the young heartbroken husband by the hand, he said: "I am determined to meet Selma in the courts of Heaven and be with her forever." While she was not a member of the church those that knew her said she was a good woman.

Those that knew her best loved her most, and are satisfied that she is at rest.

May God's rich blessings rest upon the bereaved ones, and may they have strength to scale the heights and enter the glory land.

B. C. THOMPSON.

LATHAM.—Capt. Geo. B. Latham was born April 23, 1873, and died April 8, 1904. Captain Latham was thrown from the hand-car on the morning of the 8th and was so seriously injured that he died that evening. In his death both church and Sunday-school at Riverdale suffer irreparable loss. Truly a good and useful man has gone from us. He leaves a brother, sisters, mother, father, wife and one child to mourn over his early departure. This old earth is poorer by his going, but heaven is richer. As a husband and father he was a model of love and tenderness. He loved the M. E. Church, South, and was a devoted member at Riverdale. The community feels very much bereaved. Let me beg all who feel near to Captain Latham to live the life of the righteous so we may all meet to part no more.

J. H. M. GILES.
Newport, N. C.

DAWSON.—Willie Carson Dawson, was born June 19, 1888, and died January 29, 1904, leaving a father, mother and one sister to mourn their loss. It was my privilege to be his pastor for four years, and during that time I learned to love Willie, finding him always ready to do what he could for those around him. He was a faithful Sunday-school pupil, always in place, was glad to know he was appreciated in his class, won different prizes, always knew the lessons, and his example is worthy of emulation. He was thoughtful and kind, and told his father just before he died that he was going to heaven and wanted him to meet him. The day of his funeral, his Sunday-school teacher and a large class of boys gathered and marched to the church and occupied their place in Sunday-school; but the band was broken, one had dropped out.

Willie was a good boy, everybody loved him.

May a gracious Father comfort the hearts of the bereaved, and enable them to say, "we will go to him."

B. C. THOMPSON.

DIXON.—Mrs. Laura Alice Dixon departed this life June 11th after seven months illness. She was born and reared in Nash County, N. C., where she lived at the time of her death. She professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church at Sandy Cross at the age of fifteen. She was a good Christian and strict to her church duties, always willing to work for the Master's cause. She was married to R. C. Dixon, January 9, 1878, and was the mother of eight children—two girls and six boys.

Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, J. H. Buffaloe, assisted by J. D. Bundy, P. C., after which she was buried in the old family burying ground in the presence of a large number of weeping friends.

Sister Dixon was truly a good woman. As a companion, mother and neighbor, she will be greatly missed.

Her church will greatly miss her. Her home was always open to her pastor.

We have no doubt but she is among the blessed of our Father. May we all meet her beyond this veil of tears.

Sister Dixon bore her illness as a true soldier, without murmur or complaint.

Her mind and heart seemed to be set upon things above, even before her illness.

She doubtless had treasures in heaven. It was a sad farewell to her family, but God had spoken and called His child home. And when He said: "Come up higher," she left earth with a peaceful smile upon her face.

J. H. BUFFALO.

HENDRICKS.—Sister Adelaide Victoria Hendricks, wife of Thos. W. Hendricks, who died less than a year ago, was born October 15, 1840, and died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. A. R. Ferguson, at North Rocky Mount, May 20, 1904.

It was not my privilege to know Sister Hendricks very long. She came to Rocky Mount about three weeks before her death, and was taken sick on the day of her arrival. I visited her several times during her sickness, and was impressed with the sincerity of her professions. She realized from the first that death was near, but death had no terrors. She prayed that she might be spared to raise an orphaned grandchild, but that prayer was always supplemented with, "Not my will, but thine be done."

Sister Hendricks gave her heart to God early in life and joined the M. E. Church, South, of which, to take the testimony of those who knew her, she lived, always a most consistent member. She was loyal to her church and to her God, and was never happier than when doing something to advance the Master's cause. In fact, it is said of her, "She spent her life in helping others."

Her greatest work was done among the young people, especially in the Sunday-school where she was an untiring worker as long as her strength permitted. The children bear testimony to her faithfulness. Surely she has heard the "Inasmuch" from the Savior's lips.

She was the mother of eleven children, five of whom survive. They will miss her, but may the comforting grace of God be with them.

The interment was at Rocky Mount. Rev. W. S. Rone officiating in the absence of her pastor.

ROBT. C. HUNT, P. C.

GORHAM.—Bro. Richard H. Gorham was born in Beaufort County, N. C., May 19, 1826. He died at his son's at South Rocky Mount, June 3, 1904.

Brother Gorham was a great sufferer, but he bore it all patiently. It was the writer's privilege to visit him quite frequently, but he never heard a word of complaint fall from the lips of the sufferer.

It was late in life when he gave his heart to God. It was at Battleboro in 1878, at what is there known as the "big revival," conducted by Rev. Jno. N. Andrews. At that meeting eighty persons joined the Methodist Church at one time, among the number being Brother Gorham, his wife and six of his children. While it was late when he took up the cross for his Master, yet he did not find it burdensome. He bore it cheerfully until his Lord said, "Enough, lay thy burden down, come up higher." Then the old saint as calmly lay aside the garments of toil as if he were retiring for the night, and went to sleep. He awoke to find himself clothed in garments made white in the blood of the Lamb.

It was an inspiration to visit Brother Gorham. His mind dwelt on spiritual things. He seemed anxious that all should know his Lord, and a visitor rarely ever went away without having been asked about his relation to God.

He loved his Bible, and a well worn Testament was always in reach of his chair. He loved his church and was a faithful attendant so long as able.

He leaves three sons and four daughters, all Christians, to mourn their loss. These sons and daughters will make no mistake in following him. He followed Christ.

We buried him by the side of his wife at Battleboro Church, where he gave his heart to God. When the trump sounds he will stand forth, with the other sons of God, with a perfect body.

God comfort his loved ones and help them so to live that the whole family may be reunited around the great white throne.

ROBT. E. HUNT, P. C.

CONSUMED BY A FIRE THAT WATER WILL NOT QUENCH

Eczema drives its victim almost to the verge of distraction by its intolerable itching, stinging and burning. It seems to set the skin on fire, and the tormented sufferer rubs and scratches till the flesh is raw and the skin is torn and bleeds. Nothing applied externally does much good, for the disease is internal; the blood is aflame with acid poisons, that are forcing their way through the glands and pores of the skin, causing it to redden and swell and break out in splotches, pustules and pimples, from which a clear, yellow, watery matter exudes, hardens and dries, and then peels off in scales or fine particles like bran. Eczema kindles a fire that water will not quench, and that lotions, salves, powders and soap cannot smother. As warm weather comes on and the system is reacting and the blood making extra efforts to throw off the accumulated poisons, Eczema attacks with redoubled violence, and the sufferer is almost distracted by the fearful itching and burning. It is the most uncomfortable and aggravating of all skin eruptions and a terror in warm weather.

ECZEMA KEPT SPREADING.

Six years ago my wife had a breaking-out below her knees. At first red bumps appeared, but soon white, husky scabs came, and when these would shed off the place became red again, and would itch and burn so that she found it impossible to sleep. At times a yellow water ran from the bumps, and it kept getting worse and worse. Our family physician pronounced it Eczema, and prescribed ointments and powders; but it kept spreading, breaking out on her body and arms, and almost closed up her ears. The druggist at Garner told me to try S. S. S., which she did, and after taking several bottles was cured, and is well to-day and has been for years.

W. A. HOOUTT.
Garner, N. C.

Local remedies give temporary ease, but as Eczema is not due to outside causes, but to a disordered condition of the system and an over-acid and impure blood, the treatment must be constitutional, or internal. Purify the blood and the skin disease will disappear. No better blood remedy can be found than S. S. S. It builds up the sour and acid blood, rids it of all impurities and poison, stimulates the sluggish organs, and invigorates and tones up the entire system; and as all skin eruptions like Eczema are only symptoms or signs of bad blood, they naturally disappear when that vital fluid is again restored to health.

SSS

S. S. S. is guaranteed strictly vegetable. It is not only a blood purifier, but a splendid tonic and appetizer, making it an ideal spring medicine. Treat Eczema through the blood, or you will never get permanently rid of it. Write for our book on the Skin and its Diseases, which is mailed free Medical advice furnished without cost to you.

In Memoriam.

Again we are reminded that at most "man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble." That "the days of our years are three score years and ten."

The subject of this memoir, Jesse Rhodes Gaddy, was born on Christmas day, 1825. He lived 78 years 5 months and 10 days, and departed this life at 2.30 o'clock on Sunday, June 5, 1904.

His life was a model one from childhood, and a grand success from the highest standpoint. He gave his young heart and life to God when but eight years of age, and connected himself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, remaining a loyal lover of her teachings and an heroic worker in her courts to a ripe old age; for "the righteous shall come to a full age like as a shock of corn cometh in his season." Brother Gaddy was licensed to preach by the Methodist Church about 35 years ago. All his ministerial work was local. His preaching was earnest and on fire with God's love that burned in his own heart. He was a power for good in revival work. Many souls have been born of God under his preaching. Everybody who knew him had faith in him and loved him. It is said that he married more couples and funeralized more people than any other one man in Robeson County. Too many good things cannot be said of him. He was an affectionate father, a loving companion, an obliging neighbor, a loyal citizen, and best of all a happy Christian. His very soul shouted for joy, when around the mercy seat, he could see the poor sinner's heart melted by God's infinite love.

At the age of 24 he married Miss Sarah C. Moore. God gave them 13 children—two sons and eleven daughters. His wife and three daughters preceded him to the other shore; leaving nine children to mourn their loss. The sons and one daughter are married. Seven daughters at home, both fatherless and motherless. We sympathize deeply with them and commend them to Him who doeth all things well.

Brother Gaddy was buried with Masonic honors in the family cemetery at 5 p. m. Monday, June 6, 1904, amid a throng of friends and kindred. May we build a monument to his memory by perpetuating his teachings in our every life.

... New Buildings ...

Four buildings 40 x 85, two stories high, standing 85 feet apart, connected on their fronts with covered verandas, lighted by gas or electricity, heated by best hot air furnaces, and furnished with complete system of water-works take the place of the one building destroyed by fire on January 18.

The second floors are appropriated to dormitories constructed for two occupants only and sufficient in number to accommodate one hundred and six boarding students. There is a bath-room in each building.

The first floors are used for school work exclusively: the first floor of Music Building contains two Society Halls and fourteen Music Rooms; that of Chapel Building contains a Library, two School Parlors and a Chapel; that of Recitation Building contains seven Class Rooms, a Laboratory, a Studio; that of Administration Building contains apartments for President's family, his Office, a Private Parlor, a Dining Room with pantries, etc.

The plan of these buildings is unique and ideal.

... New Equipment ...

The equipment will be largely new. Orders to be shipped August 1 have been placed for bed-room suits, desks, scientific apparatus, pianos, etc.

The Care that Prevented a Horror.

A train was running away down a steep grade on Saluda Mountain in North Carolina. The speed increased with every foot traveled. The air-brakes would not work. Trainmen were helpless, passengers in a state of hopeless fear.

Just at the moment when the worst was expected the train ran up a short incline and stopped. Yesterday morning in the New York papers, in place of the lists of dead and injured that might have been, there was the story of how a safety-switch had worked and had saved many lives.

This was a story of preparation. The railroad company in North Carolina knew of certain dread possibilities on its route. It provided against them and has reaped in the happy conclusion of a terribly threatening incident the reward for its forethought.

When the Slocum took fire in the East River the first fact revealed about the boat was lack of preparation against the horror then impending. Yet the possibility of what was happening had been demonstrated many times—with what should have been everlasting force in the case of the Seawanhaka.—New York World, July 9, 1904.

ARE YOU ALWAYS TIRED?

Dear Mrs. Person: A good while back my health commenced failing and I got in a low condition. I was always tired; with poor appetite, so tired always that I did not feel equal to any exertion at all. I had enlarged glands on the neck which were very sore and when I would take cold they would enlarge and cause me much suffering. I often had spells of inflammatory rheumatism which affected the whole body and rendered me helpless. I tried medical treatment, which would give temporary relief, but it did not cure me. I tried various patent preparations, but they did me no good. At last a friend persuaded me to use Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy.

I bought a half-dozen bottles, and after taking it I felt so much better, that I did not feel like taking any more. The next year in the spring I knew I needed more and again took a half-dozen. I took it in that way until it has made a complete cure of me and my health is fine. The enlarged glands are entirely cured, rheumatism entirely cured, and I am now in stout, robust health, and advise everybody who needs a tonic or is "run down" to use Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy.

A Message for To-Day.

IT IS the part of wisdom to pause sometimes and seek to discover the controlling motives of our lives. There is no sin in ambition; but there is danger of moral and spiritual degeneration in the domination of an evil ambition.

To subjugate the best impulses; to stifle conscience; to ignore opportunities for doing good; to disregard the clear call of duty; to fix the heart upon things earthy; to destroy the springs of sympathy for burdened, sorrowing, disheartened humanity; to defy the commands of God, and the example of Jesus Christ, in order to obtain some empty bauble, some evidence of popular favor, some temporary place of power, some influence due solely to the possession of money, some advantage in social life, some release from the higher obligations of human brotherhood, is to dishonor God; to degrade manhood; to disparage worthy effort; to discourage noble-hearted men and women; and to put the stamp of dismal failure upon one's own life. Be ambitious; but let your ambition unfold itself in harmony with God's purposes, and run in the channel of every day's opportunities for the betterment of the convictions that beset the sons of men. Be ambitions: but let it be known that "there is a loftier ambition than merely to stand high in the world; it is to stoop down and lift mankind a little higher," for this was one of the holy purposes that held sway in the heart of the Saviour of men."

Yesterday and Tomorrow.

MRS. E. M. ANDERSON.

The day was done and its cares were o'er,
And in the eventide
Grandfather sat with his head bowed low,
At the cheerful fireside.

And on a low stool at his feet,
A curly-headed boy
Watched the flames, and his eager face
Lit up with childish joy.

Grandfather's face wore a peaceful smile,
Calm and serene he seemed,
As the flickering fire light danced on the wall,
While he sat by the fire and dreamed.

"Of what are you thinking, grandpa?" said I
"In the firelight what have you seen?"
"Of the days that are past and gone," he replied,
"Of the happy days that have been."

And a tear-drop stood in his mild, soft eye,
And he turned his head away,
Then in gentle voice he said again,
"I was thinking of yesterday."

"And of what are you thinking?" I asked of the boy,
Whose young life had known no sorrow;
Said he, with rosy face upturned,
"I was thinking of to-morrow."

"When the sunlight shines on hills again,
And gladdens all with its light,
What happy times I'll have," said he,
And his bright eye flashed with light.

With a strange new thought I walked away,
And asked myself, "Is it true
That the aged e'er muse on the days that are gone,
While the youthful think of the new?"

The future e'er tempts the young and the gay,
And life before them is bright,
And there's joy for the old in looking back,
If the life they have spent be aright.

An Ideal Steward.

W. J. WOODLEY.

He should consider it his first obligation to attend to the affairs of his own church; should make an earnest effort to attend all regular and called meetings of the body to which he belonged; he should be prompt and always on time; inconvenience no one by being just a little late; punctuality should be his pass-word; he should be ready and willing to perform any duty that is laid upon him by his pastor or brethren feeling that it would prove a blessing instead of a task; he should be a man of solid piety, who both know and love the Methodist doctrine and discipline; he should be a man of good natural and acquired abilities, fully qualified to transact the business of his church or conference; he should be in love and charity with his neighbors, and more especially love and pray for his pastor; he should be ready and willing to enter into and help every good work of his church along so far as is possible, giving some of his time as well as his money. An Ideal Steward will be found in the Wednesday evening prayer-meeting; he will be at the Sunday-school on Sunday morning taking an active part; you will see him at the eleven o'clock service on Sunday; he is always on hand at the Sunday evening services; if the weather is not favorable, the Ideal Steward knows and does his duty. Whenever the Ideal Steward can attend to his temporal, financial or personal business he can attend to his church duties, it matters not what the conditions may be.

An Ideal Steward must be a Christian; an Ideal Steward must have family worship in his home; an Ideal Steward will live such a life that it will be above reproach, dealing justly with all men in all things; an Ideal Steward will live in this world to make it better and in the world to come because he lived right here among men. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Parsonage.

H. M. NORTH.

It is not of the city parsonages that I speak today, but of those in the smaller towns and country places. These houses are as distinctive in their make-up and as peculiar in their history as the families of the ministers who occupy them from year to year. Some very curious designs and architecture are seen in the constructions of many of these buildings. Every member of the congregation, having contributed a little money and much talk to the common fund, thinks he must be allowed to suggest his plan for the structure. Often a compromise is made and the preacher, who has done most of the collecting and talking, is chosen master architect. He may not have enough of building knowledge to frame a sermon so it will hang together until delivered, but somehow the work goes on. Members of the congregation are employed as carpenters because they are interested in the matter and will work cheaper. They are frequently farmers, merchants or even school boys who may be had at odd times. So they are all allowed to batter on the parsonage. No wonder the walls are not plumb and that the floor sags. The people are to be commended for their zeal in trying to provide even a plain house for their minister. The fault lies not in their good will, nor in a lack of money, but in allowing unskilled workmen to mar the building.

Making a rather free division, parsonages will fall under two heads—the cottage and the two-story dwelling. As to quality, they are passable, indifferent and bad. There is not enough available money to build a large house, so a small one is erected with the understanding that various rooms are to be added as it grows older. Thus they undergo a kind of process of development, taking anywhere from ten to twenty-five years to reach a state of completion. In fact, some have worn out before they were finished. But the one at which we are looking is completed, and stands forth in all the glory of its newness, the pride and talk of the community. It is easy enough to see that many minds were needed in the planning and many hands in the executing of the work. For it would be hard to see how any one man could erect a structure which would be at once so costly and so inconvenient. One of the stewards remarks as he surveys it: "That's a splendid house. It's better nor the one I live in." This may all be true, but why does he not live in a better? Living in a State whose forests are found the world over, he contents himself and forces his children to live in a dwelling but little better than a barn.

What is there about the average parsonage to make it attractive and home-like? Tumbled-down fences, shattered glasses, sunken hearths, decayed door-steps, abused furniture. These things do not inspire the preacher's children with very high aspirations. The house is unpainted, or with but a single coat. What parsonage has a well-kept flower-bed? There is usually scarcely a violet or chrysanthemum to break the monotony of the weedy yard. As we go inside we find the ceiling low-pitched, the fire place smokes and the door must be left open to make it draw. It is unpleasant to have the face scorched and the back chilled at once. The windows are high and small; the doors many and creaky and one opening by the fire-place. The chairs are few in number but represent several different sets. Some time since I heard one of our most consecrated ministers tell his congregation that the parsonage was almost destitute of chairs, and that when visitors came they must take their seats on inverted nail kegs. "If we are to have furniture for the parsonage," he said, "I must supply it myself and that out of an empty purse." This was in a town and among people who lived in comfortable homes. The dining room is built two steps below the main body of the house. Many times did I take a header down these while descending rapidly to the kitchen, and stumped my boyish toes on them while coming up.

Frequently where the house is ceiled, the planks are green when put on and shrink later on, leaving cracks through which the wind whistles mournfully. If plastered, it is often the hasty work of unskilled hands, and in a few months the walls are seamed from side to side, while here and there the grinning lathes are exposed to view.

This sketch would be incomplete without making mention of the parsonage bed-stead which is a proverbial piece of furniture. It has a high head-board, is stained the color of oak and all together it makes a fine appearance, so the aid society willingly gives three dollars for it. The rollers are soon broken and the sides come to pieces. Many times have I been awakened by feeling myself suddenly drop a foot or two toward the floor. I knew by experience that the disturbance was nothing less than the falling of about half the slats in the bed.

When the new preacher is expected soon, the ladies meet together to renovate and repair. It is sad, but very true, that many of our ministers' families abuse the parsonage and its furniture and leave it almost up to the sills in filth. "Overdrawn," you say? Not a word of it. I helped to clean up after one family and we had to scrape the dining room floor with a hoe to cleanse it. These things ought not to be. Why should it not be the care of each one to leave the house in better condition than he found it. But any way the parsonage is tidied up for the new-comers. The steps are nailed together, the window lights are stopped up, a piece of matting is placed in front of the hearth to hide the rotten boards, new brick are brought in to serve for andirons for all of the rooms except the parlor, and there you find a large brass one and a smaller one of iron. So the new preacher's wife comes and greets the people with a smile. But after the friends have gone and she makes a thorough investigation of the place, she realizes that everything is based on cheapness just as it was in the case of the house which she recently vacated.

The old style was to have the cemetery in the church yard, and the new plan is to have the parsonage on the same plot of ground. Some times these two plans conflict. I remember well that it was my duty to lock the stable doors after dark. Right behind me were four tomb-stones which preserved the memory of some ancient inhabitants of that region. How my feet would fly when the task was done! This was literally dwelling among the tombs. Why have the parsonage next to the church? A greater nuisance can hardly be perpetrated. Put it to a vote of the ministers who have to occupy them and see if they do not say to have them at some little distance away. I have seen eight or ten children come in just before the preaching hour to watch the pastor's wife finish her toilet.

These lines have not been written in a critical spirit. The point that I would impress is this: that when the people have sacrificed and secured enough funds to build a house, let them go about erecting it in a business-like way. Put no material in it, use no design for it that you would not gladly use for your own house. Few things will be of greater value to the preacher than a comfortable house to call his home for a few years. He is almost entirely dependent upon the people. By investing properly in a house of this kind they will receive rich returns from the pulpit.

Keeping Ahead.

Our Board of Missions is abreast of the times in its work. First to hold a great Missionary Convention after the order of the Ecumenical Conference, it was followed by the M. E. Church in the Conferences at Columbus and Philadelphia. A Conference is now planned for the North Carolina, Western North Carolina, Holston and South Carolina Conferences, to be held next spring at some convenient place. The officers of the Conference Boards meet with a committee of the General Board this week at Asheville, to make preliminary arrangements for this meeting. The President of our Conference Board, Rev. R. F. Bumpas, left on Monday to attend this meeting.

Wakefield.

To Our Methodist People:—I wish to say Wakefield is in a Baptist neighborhood. They are good people but they know nothing of our Methodism, only what they have heard. The new railroad is expected to be there in a little while. The Baptists have been preaching there about fifteen years, but have not built a church yet. They are divided among themselves and cannot get together. We have had preaching there only since Conference. They are looking to see what the Methodists are going to do. It is said by some, "We have been raised under the Baptist faith, but our people are so badly divided, if the Methodists will go forward and build we can be a Methodist." Now these good people expect us to do something. Will the good people who read this paper put in their mite and let these people see we are not a dead people to the interest in a new field. We ought to have a good nice church here, and if you will come to our rescue, it will be crowned with success. This may be the chance of our life.

Now, brethren and sisters, will you help us? Who will make the first start? Don't let this chance be lost to our church. You will not miss such a small amount and it will mean a great deal here at present. Please don't overlook this call.

About the Lord's Business.

The following story was told for the first time many years ago, but it is worthy of repetition, for it illustrates the single-hearted perseverance with which Dwight L. Moody worked for souls:

"I was in Chicago yesterday, and when I started to come home, a young man asked if he might share my seat. As soon as the train started, the conversation, started by him, ran something like this:

"'Pleasant day.'

"'Yes.'

"'Good crops this year?'

"'Yes, pretty good.'

"'We ought to be thankful to the Lord for sending good crops.'

"'Yes, I suppose we should.'

"'My friend, are a Christian?'

"'Well, I have a high regard for religion. I think churches are a good thing in a community.'

"'Are you a Christian?'

"'Well, I cannot say that I am, now that you ask the direct question.'

"'Do you think it wise for a thoughtful man to go on for years without giving thought to this subject?'

"'No, honestly, I do not think it wise.'

"'My friend, may I pray with you?'

"'Why, if we are ever where there is a good opportunity, I do not think I should object.'

"'There will never be a better opportunity than the present. Let us bow our heads here behind this car seat.'

"And with the train speeding through the suburbs of Chicago, this man prayed for my salvation. I never saw a man so much in earnest; I knew that he cared whether I was saved or lost. Just as he finished his prayer, the brakeman called out the name of a station, and my newly made friend was off. He had reached the door, when it occurred to me that I did not even know who he was. I rushed after him and asked his name, and he replied, 'D. L. Moody.' I am going back to Chicago to find him and have him show me the way of life."

An Exhortation to Young Preachers.

The late Horace L. Hastings on his death-bed wrote an exhortation to young preachers, of which the following is a short extract: "Make no apologies. If you have the Lord's message, declare it; if not, hold your peace. Have short prefaces and introductions. Say your best things first, and stop before you get prosy. Leave self out of the pulpit, and take Jesus in. Defend the Gospel, and let the Lord defend you and your character. If you are lied about, thank the devil for putting you on your guard, and take care that the story shall never come true. Do not grumble about your pay. If you want more money, go to work and earn it. Throw away your cravat. If you don't want to break down, make your shirt collar an inch larger, and give your blood a chance to flow back to your heart. Do not get excited too soon. Do not run away from your hearers. Engine drive-wheels whirl fast on icy tracks, but when they draw anything they go slower. It takes a cold hammer to bend hot iron. Heat the people, but keep your hammer wet and cool. Do not bawl and scream. Too much water stops mill wheels, and too much noise drowns sense. Powder is not shot. Thunder is harmless; lightning kills. If you have lightning, you can afford to thunder."

Resolutions on Sabbath Observance.

Whereas, the Sabbath day, as instituted by our Lord, is one of the world's greatest blessings; and,

Whereas, the day is extensively desecrated by both the world and many of the church; therefore be it

Resolved, that we, as preachers and laymen, will try to enforce Sabbath observance among our people and will ourselves set the example by refusing to ride on railroad cars and in every other way possible, and especially by discouraging the running of excursion trains on Sunday.

Free Scholarships for Young Preachers at Vanderbilt.

Free scholarships, covering the cost of board in Wesley Hall, are offered to college graduates desiring to pursue a Biblical and Theological course of study. These scholarships have been shared the past year by the graduates of over twenty different Southern colleges and universities. Tuition and room rent are free to all theological students. Loan funds are available for aiding all worthy and needy candidates for the ministry who are prepared to enter the University. The eighty-two young preachers enrolled the past year in the catalogue come from twenty-six different Annual Conferences. Two members of the graduating class are North Carolina boys: R. S. Satterfield and E. E. Williamson. Others from this State are C. S. Kirkpatrick, J. T. Erwin, and F. B. Nobbitt. The Correspondence School has enrolled four hundred and twenty-five the past year, of which number thirty-three are members of the two Conferences in this State. Counting both correspondence and resident students, it appears that more than five hundred young ministers of the church have been aided and guided in their studies the past year by the theological faculty of Vanderbilt University, which is composed of nine professors. Those desiring further information concerning the course of Biblical and theological study at Vanderbilt should write to Dr. W. F. Tillett, Nashville, Tenn.

Let us rest while we work. All the worry and fret which addle our brains have their origin in unfaith or forgetfulness of God. As a familiar story teaches, he managed the world before we came into it; he will be here to take care of it after we leave it. It is even possible that he can get along with it while we are in it.—Charles Gordon Ames.

"Pain's furnace-heat within me quivers,
God's breath upon the flame doth blow;
And all my heart in anguish shivers,
And trembles at the fiery glow,
And yet I whisper, 'As God will,'
And in his hottest fire hold still.

"He comes, and lays my heart, all heated,
On the hard anvil, minded so
Into His own fair shape to beat it
With his great hammer, blow on blow!
And yet I whisper, 'As God will,'
And at his heaviest blows hold still."

Soul Food

For flowers that bloom about our feet;
For tender grass so fresh and sweet;
For song of bird and hum of bee;
For all things fair we hear and see,
Father in heaven, we thank thee!
For blue of stream and blue of sky;
For pleasant shade of branches high;
For fragrant air and cooling breeze;
For beauty of the blooming trees,
Father in heaven, we thank thee!
—Emerson.

For one thing only, Lord, dear Lord, I plead,
Lead me aright,
Though strength should falter and though heart should bleed,
Through peace to light.

I do not ask, O Lord, that thou shouldst shed
Full radiance here,
Give but a ray of peace, that I may tread
Without a fear.

I do not ask my cross to understand,
My way to see;
Better in darkness just to feel thy hand
Without a fear.

Joy is like restless day; but peace divine
Like quiet night;
Lead me, O Lord, till perfect day shall shine
Through peace to light.
—A. A. Procter.

Most people measure their happiness in terms of physical pleasure and material possession. Could they win some invisible goal which they have set on the horizon, how happy they would be! Lacking this gift or that circumstance, they would be miserable. If happiness is to be so measured, I who cannot hear or see have every reason to sit in a corner with folded hands and weep. If I am happy in spite of my deprivations, if my happiness is so deep that it is a faith, so thoughtful that it becomes a philosophy of life; if, in short, I am an optimist, my testimony to the creed of optimism is worth hearing. Once I knew the depth where no hope was, and darkness lay on the face of all things. Then love came, and set my soul free. Once I knew only darkness and stillness. Now I know hope and joy. Once I fretted and beat myself against the wall that shut me in. Now I rejoice in the consciousness that I can think, act, and attain heaven. My life was without past or future; death, the pessimist would say, "a consummation devoutly to be wished." But a little word from the fingers of another fell into my hand that clutched at emptiness, and my heart leaped to the rapture of living. Night fled before the day of thought, and love and joy and hope came up in a passion of obedience to knowledge. Can anyone who has escaped such captivity, who has felt the thrill and glory of freedom, be a pessimist?—Helen Keller's Testimony.

The petition for the coming of the kingdom implies a faith as well as a desire. Our Lord's disciples do not know all that they want, but they know what they want. They long for the presence and the reign of their heavenly father. What that kingdom may be in all its details they do not profess to know; but what it is in essential aspects they devoutly realize. It may be quite true that a multitude of surprises await the immigrant who, from Scandinavia or Sicily, hastes to our shores; but he knows some things beyond controversy. He knows that he is journeying to a land where toil is not despised, where industry is rewarded and where man is the sovereign. Far beyond our keenest ken there may be some "far-off divine event to which the whole creation moves." We do not ask that it be revealed to us. But he who prays for God's kingdom to come here and now upon the earth, prays for something very real to his faith. He believes in the future and final and perfect reign of righteousness among men. He believes that there is a time most surely coming in which the last prodigal will have returned to his Father's house; in which the last spear will have been beaten into a pruning-hook and from the eye of the repentant Magdalene the last tear will have been wiped away. Without such a lively hope the richest of earth is poor, and we may for such a one breathe the sigh of Whittier:

"Alas for him who never sees
The stars shine through his cypress trees!"
—The Interior.

The Field

Work for G. F. College.

Dear Bro. Ivey:—Many of our women are very anxious to work for Greensboro Female College, but they say they do not know how. The following letters, which are self-explanatory, show how successful work may be done:

Halifax, N. C., May 16, 1904.

My Dear Miss Smith:—Ever since the awful calamity which befell our beloved alma mater some months ago, it has been my ardent desire to see a more beautiful building loom up on the same magnificent site. For weeks afterwards, I repeatedly reproached myself for my inactivity in the matter, and when the "G. F. C." issue of the Raleigh Chritsian Advocate came out, I devoured it from beginning to end, admiring very much the cut of the proposed new college. Having read it through, I immediately found paper and pencil and started out to make a tour of our little village, soliciting contributions towards the rebuilding fund with a result that amounted to $90.00. I expect to make it $100.00 and send it in the first of June.

Very respectfully,
MRS. JENNIE GRADY TRAVIS.

July 11, 1904.

My Dear Miss Smith:—I enclose check for $102.50, a contribution towards the rebuilding of Greensboro Female College, from friends and members of our congregation, whose names I herewith append.

Very respectfuly,
MRS. JENNIE GRADY TRAVIS.

Gentle reader, go thou and do likewise.

Cordially, NANNIE LEE SMITH.

Durham Circuit Sunday-School Convention.

The annual Sunday-school Convention for Durham Circuit was held at Mt. Bethel Church Saturday, July 16th, J. D. Fletcher, president, in the chair.

This occasion will long be remembered by the good people of Durham Circuit as one of the best days in the history of the Sunday-school work on this charge; it was truly a great day. After the devotional exercises conducted by the President, J. D. Fletcher, Mt. Bethel Sunday-school delighted the large congregation with a well-prepared program consisting of recitations and music by the children and young people.

After an intermission of an hour, during which the good ladies showed their interest in the occasion by the refreshing dinner which they served on the grounds, which was enjoyed by all, we were again called into the church and well entertained by an address from our pastor, Rev. J. B. Thompson, in which he set before us very clearly and forcibly the duties and responsibilities of the Sunday-school teacher.

This address was followed by a well-prepared, well-rendered program from Duke's Chapel Sunday-school. Everyone enjoyed thoroughly the recitations and songs. Then the Conference went into the election of its officers for the ensuing year: J. D. Fletcher, President; S. A. Thompson, Vice-President; W. D. Turrentine, Secretary.

The next Convention to be held at Duke's Chapel Saturday before the first Sunday in August.

The following Committee on Program were appointed: J. D. Fletcher, chairman; A. G. Cox, Jno. Cole, J. E. Garrard, J. W. Patterson, Rev. P. H. Massey, Augustus Neal, L. Y. Lockhart, Quadrus Hogan, and J. D. C. Turner.

The exercises closed with an essay from Massey's Chapel, which was full of thought and very impressive. The Convention, we hope, will do great good in inspiring more enthusiastic Sunday-school work.

Revival at Portsmouth, N. C.

BY J. V. WILLIAMS.

Am just back from Portsmouth, N. C., where I preached about a week for Brother Grant, and had a regular old-time, before-the-war, hallelujah revival. Glory!

I was spending my vacation at Beaufort, but Bishop A. Coke Smith came down and preached at our Distriet Conference, and I wanted to shout while the fire burned. I wonder sometime if we commit sin in restraining this shouting spirit. If we do, may the Lord help us, for a great number of people are guilty.

Brother Grant, the P. C. of Ocracoke and Portsmouth, was urging me to go to Portsmouth to help him, and while Bishop Smith was giving us some spiritual truths, the Macedonian cry came loud and strong, and I, like Paul, "reckoned" that the Lord had called me.

How many converts we had, I do not know. A few joined the church, with more to follow, and the church began to act like saved men and women. It was dead enough before the meeting, the Lord knows.

Some preacher will ask, "Will these shouting folks do anything?" "I've seen so many shouters that did nothing."

Did you not set them a bad example, brother? Some of our preachers act like they had been three months in cold-storage. They can't sweat in the summer time.

In New York they put Western eggs in cold-storage for months, and when they take them out for use, you find that while they are not rotten, they taste mighty flat—leave a bad taste in your mouth. That's the way it is with some cold-storage preachers—what they say is awful flat.

When I left, Miss Daisy Daily said I'd been giving them a lot of "fish and tater talk." That's a new one on me; but it simply means plain talk. What we would call in Hyde—"corn and collard talk."

Of course I've got a few jaw-eraekers, after forty years of hearing sky scraping, but that "hiferlutin" business don't tend to the glory of God.

We called for subscribers to the "Old Raleigh" and received quite a list. Brother Grant will send them in.

Am at Oeracoke this week. Hope for more shouting and more Advocate subscribers.

J. V. WILLIAMS.

Beaufort, N. C., July 18, 1904.

From Conway Circuit.

Dear Dr. Ivey:—For a long time I have thought I would be one to write a "few lines" to the Advocate occasionally. I think we ought to, and, therefore, I ought to. But I begin with the expectation of being brief.

We are getting on very well with our work on the charge. We have much to be thankful for, and very little to complain of. We are planning and praying for good results in our protracted meetings. Our finances are in fairly good shape. We hope to report all claims paid in full at Henderson. Our Presiding Elder, Brother Smith, has made his third visit to our work, and has demonstrated his fitness for the place more fully each succeeding time. I have yet to hear the first word to the contrary.

The charge has not given the pastor a formal "pounding" for nearly a year, but they are adepts at "pounding" informally. They give substantials all along through the year. Sometimes the pastor is ignorant of his buggy's contents until he gets home. That we are pleased with the work goes without saying, for we have made no effort to dispossess ourselves of this heritage for nearly four years.

POUNDED WITH A BUGGY.

For nearly ten months we have been riding in a nice, new, sixty-five dollar top buggy. All the writer had to do was to receive the money, select the buggy and use it as it semed to him best. We appreciate this gift more than any (classed with the materials) that we have ever received. All manner of thanks, to all people, to whom thanks are due!

We are trying to leave the charge in good condition for our successor, and he may come cheerfully, whoever he may be.

THE DIVORCE EVIL.

Resolutions Adopted by the Ministers' Conference of Henderson, N. C., June 13, 1904.

Resolutions adopted by the Ministers' Conference of Henderson, N. C., June 13, 1904:

Whereas, the divorce evil is rapidly growing in the country, and especially in our own beloved State, in which 1,400 divorces were granted last year; and,

Whereas, the problem is receiving the attention of the various Church Councils at this time and will probably be brought before the next General Assembly of the State; therefore be it

Resolved 1. That the ministers of Henderson would hereby put themselves on record as earnestly deploring and condemning the laxity with which the marriage tie is too often regarded, as indicated by the frequency of divorces.

2. That it is our earnest hope that all laws permitting divorces (with the privilege of remarriage) for other causes than that on Scriptural ground be repealed (Matthew 5: 32), and that our representatives in legislative assemblies be encouraged to work to that end.

3. That we do hereby agree that we will decline to perform the sacred rites of matrimony in cases where one or both parties have been previously divorced, exeepting only the innocent party to a divorce granted for the Scriptual cause indicated in the foregoing resolution No. 2.

Resolutions of Respect from Central M. E. Church, Raleigh, N. C.

As our beloved friend and brother, L. M. Johnson, will leave us in a few days to make his home in another State, we esteem it a great pleasure to draft some resolutions of respect in regard to his Christian life and character since he has been with us. We find in Brother Johnson the spirit of true Christianity, always ready to do something for his Master and to build up his church and to advance the cause of Christ amongst his people.

As an official member of his church, he is always present to fill his place amongst us, to advise and to be advised as to the very best interest of his church. As a worker in the Epworth League, he was always at his post of duty and took an active part in the League and tried to draw the young people into the League work.

As superintendent of the Sunday-school, he was present every Sunday morning and ready to grasp the hand of every teacher and scholar so far as he could, and did all in his power to build up the school of which he was superintendent. Now as a church and Epworth League and Sunday-school, we have learned to love Brother Johnson, and it is with the deepest regret that we have to give him up, but we assure him that our prayers will follow him in his new field of labor and we gladly recommend him to the people that he may worship with. All of which is respectfully submitted.

Difficult Questions in Christian Warfare.

ANSWERED BY REV. F. B. MEYER.

Can a prayer of faith fall short, or even altogether fail of the end for which God gave it, as in Rom. 10:1?

No. In the nature of the case it is impossible to fail, because faith is the gift of God, and God only gives faith for that which He is prepared eventually to grant. But it is quite likely that a thing which is grasped by faith in the moment of prayer, may not actually be made over to your possession, or fulfilled in fact until a long period has passed. Then one has to exercise the patience of hope, believing that the petition is granted, even though the boon is not in possession. 1 John 5: 15.)

* * *

What is the teaching of the Christian Church with regard to the state of the departed? In the Bible there seem to be two different ideas, the one that the spirit goes straight to Paradise or elsewhere; the other, that the dead sleep to the Last Day.

The teaching in the New Testament is consistent. It is a unity. As to the spirit, it is at once presentw ith the Lord (Phil. 1:23). As to the body, it appears to sleep until the time of Resurrection. When the Lord comes, the spirit which is already with Him shall take up its residence in the resurrection body, raised by the power of Christ from its sleep in the grave. Throughout His teaching, our Lord desires to take away the gloomy conception of death which had been so rife before His advent, and to lead men to dread death no more than they do falling asleep. As we know, the soul never ceases its intense life, even though slumber may deaden the sensibilities of the body. Dreams simply reveal the perpetual succession of thoughts which are engrossing the soul, even when it is unable to register its decisions on the dial plate of the body, and therefore the use of the word "sleep" does not infer that the soul has become unconscious.

* * *

Does our Heavenly Father attend to prayers about trifles?

Without doubt He does. There is nothing trifling with Him who numbers the hairs of our head, and notes the sparrows when they fall to the ground. Trifles, after all, play a very important part in our daily life. The mislaying of an umbrella, a golosh, or spectacles may have a very serious effect upon our health, and incapacitate us from performing necessary duty. Let us never forget that whilst God is a great King, He is also our Father. Happy is that life which makes God its confidant, and believes that the tiniest details are not beneath His sympathizing interest.

By what authority and at what time were the Books of the Bible collected together, and formed into one complete volume, whereas other writings of equally pious and saintly authors are not so regarded?

By their education and their acquaintance, at first hand, with the facts that were to be conveyed to the world, some were more suited than others for the delicate task of receiving and passing on the Divine Word. If you compare the books of undoubted and unchallenged canonicity with those of the Apocrypha and other writings, you would at once detect for yourself a special flavor, an elevation of tone, a fine sanity, a divine majesty and power, all of which are ingredients in the evident but mysterious quality known as Inspiration. It was their appreciation of this quality in the post-exilic days that led men like Ezra and Nehemiah to form the canon of the Old Testament; and it was their appreciation of the same quality towards the end of the second century that led the infant church to make lists of the Inspired volumes, which became more and more the recognized canon, or rule, of faith.—Ram's Horn.

(The replies to these questions were written by Mr. Meyer to the Sunday Magazine of London. We take pleasure in passing them on.)

The Apologizing Habit and Its Cure.

The apologizing habit !

Is any trait of our fellow-man or woman quite so distresing as a bad case of this particular malady?,

It is only less annoying than family skeletons brought out in public.

And the cure?

Well, the best one is a good dose of apologies from another chronic apologist.

Said a bright woman the other day:

"I kept on making apologies for real or imaginary causes until I chanced to be the guest of a woman who went so far beyond what I had attained in that line that it occurred to me I was in a fair way of making my friends as uncomfortable as she unconsciously did me.

"This woman was an ideal housekeeper and one of the best of cooks; but not a meal did I enjoy of her serving, because of uncalled-for apologies.

"'I forgot to salt my bread and it is so tasteless that it is not fit to eat; I am afraid you cannot make out a supper.'

"If I made haste to say that I had not noticed the omission and assured her that her cooking never called for exenses, she would accuse me of trying to flatter her and and would continue to apologize, until at the end of the meal, I felt as if I had swallowed a stone, instead of perfectly cooked food.

"Observation has taught me that guests, as a rule, do not see what in the eyes of the hostess seems to call for apology.

"I recently called upon a woman of culture and was greatly enjoying her vivid accounnt of her trip abroad, when she suddenly came to a pause and in a shocked tone exclaimed: 'The maid neglected to dust that piano! ,Why I could write my name upon it!'

"Then from seeing through her eyes the beautiful scenery mine had never rested upon, I was called back to the drudgery of life; when the truth was that my back was toward the piano and so I should, but for the apology, have remained in ignorance of the neglect of the maid. The call, which might otherwise have been wholly interesting, ended in complaints.

"The most enduring lesson came to me from one who, under the most trying circumstances, refrained from making any apologies. This sensible woman at that time I did not count as a friend, though I had long known of her as a gifted personality and had once had the pleasure of entertaining her in my home, when she was a delegate to a convention.

"Finding myself in her home city, I thought I would call upon her. When I halted before the house I saw such an obstruction of plaster and debris that I was about to turn back, but a workman near the door said: 'If you are looking for Mrs. A, I will call her.'

"Oh, don't!' exclaimed I, thinking 'not at home' would be the result, but the man evidently knew the woman he was working for. He bounded off: and an instant later the lady appeared at a door back of the parlors, which were being replastered, and with a warm welcome written on her face, exclaimed:

"'This isn't the sort of reception you gave me, but I am delighted to see you, anyhow.' And then, when I was drawn into a room overcrowded with furniture, what cared I for the lack of order, in view of such a welcome?

"I had expected to go back to the hotel to lunch, but I forgot to note the flight of time as I conversed with the woman who was superior to trying circumstances; and never shall I forget how, with a roguish smile, she reminded me that it was lunch time by putting this query:

"'My dear, do you like hasty-pudding and milk?'

"When I unthinkingly responded to the affirmative, she exclaimed: 'Then you must share my lunch with me, for otherwise I shall be alone. Now, don't make excuses, for you will be doing me a real kindness to stay.' I could not resist the invitation, which was evidently so heartfelt, and from that visit and simple meal dates a friendship which has extended over long years, cemented at a time when almost any housekeer would have excused herself from seeing anyone.

"In fact, so easily and unobtrusively does the habit grow that freedom from it under given circumstances may often be taken for an evidence of thoroughly good breeding."—Cleveland Leader.

Don'ts for Mothers.

Don't delude yourself with the idea that a six months baby cannot understand the difference between your "yes" and "no."

Dont try to divert when obedience is your right.

Don't allow your child to become a source of annoyance in a public vehicle.

Don't permit a fear to be implanted in your child. Deal summarily with those who would dare implant it.

Don't entertain all your friends with a detailed account of your children's marvelous sayings and doings.

Don't forget that the fire of curosity may be smothered but not easily extinguished, and that someone else will surely be called upon to explain if you do not.

Don't fail to make your children understand how important they are in the domestic economy of their home and how surely they can add to or mar its harmony.

Don't fret your children by perpetually worrying about them. They must have some common sense; teach them to make use of it.

Don't treat your son and your daughter at twenty as you would have treated them at twelve. Remember that they are now a man and a woman. —Gabrielle E. Jackson.

Doing What You Would Not.

Quite a young girl one day exclaimed, "I love to make myself do what I don't want to do." In that seeming paradox there is a world of wisdom. There are many duties that we have to perform that are so unpleasant; or we can do as that young girl did, loving to make ourselves go through with them, and so get some real good and enjoyment out of them. It would be vastly better if we all loved to make ourselves take up the tasks that we are inclined to shirk. Of that girl, now a young woman, people frequently say, "Isn't she a splendid young lady?" Her fine character is due largely to resolutely going at the things needing to be done from which she naturally shrank, and doing them with a song instead of a sigh.—Wellspring.

The Law a Pedagogue.

The Gospel wins its way wherever and whenever given a chance. Some years ago a heathen in Burma obtained a copy of the Psalms. It was left behind by a traveler who had stopped at his house. The man was converted, and for twenty years worshipped the God revealed in the Psalms. His custom was to use the fifty-first psalm as his daily prayer. A missionary appeared on the scene in due time and gave him a copy of the New Testament. He read the story of salvation through Jesus Christ. His heart opened to the Gospel; he attained great joy. He said: "For twenty years I walked by starlight; now I see the sun." What a blessed illustration! Is it not a true example of the Pauline idea that the law, or the Old Testament generally, is a schoolmaster to lead men to Christ?—Selected.

God the Father give us grace
To walk in the light of Jesus' face.
God the Son give us a part
In the hiding-place of Jesus' heart;
God the Spirit so hold us up
That we may drink of Jesus' cup.

Our Boys and Girls

Clayton, N. C., July 1, 1904.

Dear Uncle Jenkins:—I am very fond of buttermilk and think it a pity that the orphans cannot have all they want. I have a niece Jersey cow named Lillie. Papa gave here to me, and I have decided to give her to the Orphanage. Will send her to you through the country next week. Wish I had been with you to help eat that good vegetable dinner. Mother took me to visit the orphans once, but you were away. Hope you'll be at home next time we come.

Your little friend,
EDGAR WARREN McCULLERS.

Rocky Mount, N. C., July 9, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I will write for the second time. I like to read the little boys' and girls' letters. My mamma takes the Advocate. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. I like to go to Sunday-school very much. I haven't got much to say this time, but I thought I would put a little in the Advocate. I see many little boys and girls like to go to Sunday-school. I hope by the next time I can write more.

I will close, with best wishes for the orphans. I am,

Your little friend,
MAIED JOYNER.

La Grange, N. C., July 9, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl thirteen years old. My papa takes the Advocate and I like to read the little boys' and girls' letters. I have one sister and one brother. My brother's birthday will be to-morrow. He will be nine years old. I have two brothers and three sisters dead.

I have written once before and my letter was printed, so I will thank you, Mr. Editor, for printing it.

I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. Our superintendent is Mr. Will Parks.

I will close by asking a question: Where was Moses buried?

Your little friend,
SMITHEY RADFORD.

Rocky Mount, N. C., July 9, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—This is my first letter, and if it escapes the waste-basket, I'll write again.

I am a boy twelve years of age. I go to Sunday-school. Mr. C. Jones is my teacher, and Mr. C. Arrington is our superintendent. We like him fine. Mr. Hunt is our pastor. Our school has just closed. I have five sisters and one brother. I like to read the boys' and girls' page.

I will answer Eva Pearson's question: Solomon was the wisest man.

Best wishes to the orphans.

Your little friend,
PAUL JOYNER.

Pantego, N. C., July 4, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—Would you like to have a new member to join your band of little folks. I am a girl twelve years of age? I have been visiting my aunts at Pantego ever since the first of December. My home is in Thomasville, N. C. I have five brothers and three sisters. I am going home soon, and am very anxious to see my papa and mamma. I am taking music under my dear auntie. I have been to Sunday-school every Sunday except one in six months, and have not missed but one question. My teacher was our pastor's wife, and I love her dearly. I certainly do like to go to Sunday-school. My best friends are Alcez Aycock, Ruth Credle and Bessie Jackson. Our preacher is Mr. H. M. Jackson, and we like him all right. I have been a member of the M. E. Church a year. My aunt takes the N. C. Advocate; also the Raleigh Advocate, and I enjoy reading the letters and stories.

I will answer Ethel Pigott's question: God's first command was, "Thou shall have no other gods before me."

Now, I will ask one: In what book of the Bible is it written, "Watch ye?" What chapter and verse?

If the waste-basket doesn't catch me, I will write again.

Your friend,
ANNABEL LAMBETH.

R. F. D. No. 4,
Elizabeth City, N. C.,
June 29, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—Well, as I have never written your paper before, I thought I would do so. My Sunday-school teacher is Mrs. Bettie Jones, and our pastor is Rev. W. E. Hocutt. This is his last year, and we all will regret to see him leave.

My grandmother is in Elizabeth City. She is in her seventy-seventh year. I have five sisters and two brothers.

I will close with love and best wishes to the Orphanage.

LYDIA WILLIAMS.

Garysburg, N. C., July 3, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl seven years old. Have been to school two months, but did not learn to write well, so mamma will write for me. Papa takes the Advocate. I love to hear mamma read the children's letters. I don't go to Sunday-school; I live too far. I go nearly every preaching day. Our pastor's name is Rev. J. G. Johnson. We all like him ever so much. As this is my first attempt, I will close, hoping to see this in print.

Your little unknown friend,
RUTH D. ROOK.

P. S.—Enclosed find ten cents for the Orphanage.

Cary, N. C., July 8 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As my other letter was in print, I will write again. Papa is almost through laying by his crops. I will be glad when he gets through. When he gets done, I am going to visit some of my friends and relatives.

I have two sisters living and one dead. I have three brothers living and two dead. I did not take the 4th of July this year.

I will answer Ossie and Mable Edwards' question: It was Aaron's rod that budded and bloomed.

I will ask one: Where is the shortest chapter in the Bible?

Enclosed find five cents for the orphans.

Your friend,
MILTON R. PLEASANTS.

Raleigh, N. C., July 10, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As I have written once before and my letter escaped the waste basket, I will try to write again.

My papa takes the Advocate and I enjoy reading the letters from the girls and boys very much. My father and mother are both living. I have three sisters and five brothers and a sister and a brother dead. I am the youngest child; my age is fifteen. Our pastor is Rev. G. R. Rood. We all like him very much. This is his first year with us.

Our every day school is now closed. Our teacher was Mrs. E. T. Sanders. We all like her splendid. Our Sunday-school is so far off I hardly ever go.

I will answer Haywood Graham's question: "Jesus wept" is the shortest verse in the Bible. It is in the eleventh chapter and thirty-fifth verse of St. John.

Love to the orphans and Dr. Ivey. Enclosed find five cents for the orphans.

Yours truly,
LOU OLA HOUSE.

Winfall, N. C., July 11, 1904.

Dear Miss Waitt:—We promised Sister Dixon to write something for our column in the Advocate, and as our Bright Jewels have never spoken a word through the paper since their organization in March, I will have to talk a little for them. I must say we have at Winfall twenty-eight as "bright jewels" as Aunt Lizzie has under supervision. Our officers are all young and inexperienced, but do well in their places.

The funny part is that in our band we have some grown up men and women, fathers and grandfathers, but our little people won't let them do a bit of the work except pray for us sometimes, and pay us five cents at every meeting.

We have our mite boxes and hope this fall to have a grand mite box opening.

Sincerely,
MRS. F. L. CHURCH,
Lady Manager.

We are so glad to hear from these Bright Jewels at Winfall, and hope to have many more such encouraging letters from them. Perhaps they will write us of the "grand mite box opening" in the fall. The children are quiet right when they insist on doing their own work in a Bright Jewel meeting, for it is their society, but I am sure the "grown up" members are an inspiration to them to do their best work.

To the Readers of The Advocate.

Dear Friends:—Herewith I send a partial list of books that can be used to great advantage in the Laura Haygood Memorial. The part of the building that will be completed in time to be occupied this fall includes the room set apart to receive our books and to be known as the Mary Ann Browinski Library. It has occurred to me that some volumes that would be most valuable to us may lie unused upon your shelves, and that you would enjoy mailing such books direct to us; or that individuals or societies might like to purchase an occasional volume to place upon our shelves. If this meets with a ready response, the list will be supplemented by a further record of our wants. Address the books for the library to Martha E. Pyle, Soochow. China.

1. Miss Alcott's books, especially Little Men and Little Women.
2. Miss Mulock's, John Halifax, Gentleman.
3. Hawthorne's Twice-Told Tales. The Great Stone Face, Snow Image, etc.
4. Kate Douglas Wiggins' books. Timothy's Quest, Rebecca of Sunny Brook Farm, etc.
5. Charles Lamb's Stories.
6. Miss Wetherell's Wide, Wide World and Queechy.
7. Alice in Wonderland.
8. Hans Anderson's Fairy Tales.

Superintendent of Supplies—Mrs. Ivan Proctor, Raleigh.
Superintendent of Literature and Press Work—Mrs. R. O. Burton.

Eight Points of Excellence.

1. From March, 1903, to March, 1904, the growth in membership was 5,674; increase in cash collections, $7,615.43.

2. Increase in number of boxes of supplies sent, 246; increase in value of supplies, $4,918.97.

3. Collections for connectional work amounted to $59,414.98. By voucher for city mission work, $11,-110.23.

4. Collected for local work, $122,-164.32.

5. One hundred and fifty parsonages were helped to the amount of $13,122.96.

6. Increase in City Mission Boards, five.

7. The most successful year financially the Society has yet known.

8. "The best of all—God is with us."

We thank our painstaking Board Superintendent, Mrs. Ed. Cook, for these facts, which to some may seem dry statistics, but to us are bright promises of light and life, the thought of which warms the heart and enthuses the spirit.

Money Raised and Expended Since Organization of Society.

Since organization in 1887, for connectional work, $401,411.37, for local $610,337.98. Grand total, $1,-011,759.35.

Sisters, do you not rejoice in every dollar you have added to this sum? It is a beautiful illustration of the old Scotch proverb: "Many Mickles make a muck." Few have realized how our mites were accumulating, and these figures give glad rejoicing and new inspiration.

Call for New Members.

God's unmistakable approval of the work is shown in the continuation of His blessing and the steady increase of opportunities for enlargement. So great are the demands that at the recent Board meeting it was necessary to appropriate for connectional work $37,517.81, the largest amount ever required.

How are we to raise it? By an increase of membership. I think everyone who has read carefully in the June number of Our Homes our General Secretary's clarion call for new members must feel compelled to heed it, and will bestir herself to do her part. Let every member carry in new ones, and they, in turn, bring in others, thus forming an "endless chain" that will be welcomed everywhere.

Good News from Henderson.

With peculiar pleasure I give this interesting communication, for nothing is more delightful, or more auspicious, than reports of progress and enthusiasm from our young sisters. I hope others will follow Miss Daniel's fine example and send me news of their auxiliaries.

The Young Woman's Home Mission Society of Henderson held a public meeting in the Methodist Church on the 8th of July.

Among the interesting features of the program were an inspiring solo by Mrs. Watson, of Wilson, and a very touching recitation by Mrs. M. H. Allen. Dr. Nash made a stirring appeal to the women to help in the work. Mrs. H. C. Spiers gave us some beautiful thoughts on missions, which were very encouraging.

We have about completed our fund for the "Kate Davis" Memorial Room at Brevard School, and hope to take up soon some other special work. That our Society grow steadily stronger is our desire.

MATTIE DANIEL,
Corresponding Secretary.

Henderson Auxiliary is one of our youngest and deserves commendation and congratulation.

To Auxiliary Treasures.

How are our collections now? I beg all Treasurers to strive against the midsummer lethargy to which there is a natural proneness to yield. Do your utmost to bring up the collection of dues in full, not forgetting to insist, also, on payment of Conference expense fund (which should be paid in the first quarter, but, unfortunately, is often deferred). Remind delinquents of the extra Prayer Week contributions that must come in the Third Quarter, and contrast the ease of promptly paying each quarter's small assessments with the difficulty of collecting double dues. I hope those who are so fortunate as to get a month's rest and recreation will leave their work in good, helpful hands.

O that every Christian woman could feel and live these words of sainted Frances Ridley Havergal's consecration hymn:

"Take my silver and my gold,
Not a mite would I withold!"

SAVED FROM TERRIBLE DEATH.
The family of Mrs. M. L. Bobbitt of Bargerton, Tenn., saw her dying and were powerless to save her. The most skillful physicians and every remedy used, failed, while consumption was slowly but surely taking her life. In this terrible hour Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption turned despair into joy. The first bottle brought immediate relief and its continued use completely cured her. It's the most certain cure in the world for all throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed Bottles 50c. and $1.00. Trial Bottles Free at all druggists.

GIBSON AND JONESBORO.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

To visit two District Conferences in two days in the hot July time requires somewhat of an effort on the part even of one who is supposed to be hardened to traveling. But good company relieves many a harsh experience, as we found, when on board the Atlanta Special and en route for Gibson and ultimately for Jonesboro, we found as traveling companions such hale spirits as Rev. M. T. Plyler, Dr. J. C. Kilgo, Hon. W. J. Adams, N. H. D. Wilson, and J. M. Rhodes. The first two left us at Sanford to reach Jonesboro before night.

In spite of the fact that Hamlet has one of the best depots and eating houses in North Carolina, we had a dreary wait at that Shakesperian place. There was a slow drizzle of rain and the electric lights blinked tearfully in the murky night. Our little train for Gibson just would not open the doors until the arrival of the train from Wilmington, and that train from Wilmington just would not come until between nine and ten o'clock. It was a District Conference crowd that boarded the little Gibson train. This is to say that it was a crowd surcharged with good nature, fun, and almost frolic.

But if it had been otherwise, compensation would have been found in the welcome of the dripping, lantern swinging people who waited for us at Gibson.

GIBSON.

I had been here before. In the hospitable home of the lamented F. B. Gibson, I had tested the warm-heartedness of this Goshen section of Scotland County. In that home, I had found how well a sick man can be treated. So you may be sure, that the heart of President Rhodes and myself was smiling when we found ourselves once more in that same home. It is as spacious and comfortable as ever as it sleeps in the shadows of the oak trees. The kindness on the part of the occupants was just as marked. But some changes had taken place. The three eldest children had married and left the roof tree, but a sadder change had taken place. The stalwart gracious head of the household was missing. Before the snows of last winter had whitened the ground he had slipped away into the great Beyond to meet the Father whom he had served so faithfully on earth. There were few men like F. P. Gibson. He has left the heritage of a noble character to his faithful wife who is bearing her grief so nobly and to the children who are trying to follow in the father's footsteps.

The little town is somewhat larger than when I last saw it. There is about it an air of charming neatness and contented prosperity. There is no finer type of citizenship than that found at Gibson.

Rev. G. B. Perry has charge of the church at Gibson and St. John's. He is one of our best preachers and most faithful laborers, and his work is appreciated.

THE CONFERENCE.

There were numerous questions on Thursday morning as to the whereabouts of Elder Cole. The hour was fast approaching for the opening of the Conference, and the Elder had not come. I felt that all fears were groundless. I knew John N. Cole well enough to know that he would be in place on time. And sure enough he was in spite of a terrific storm between Rockingham and Hamlet.

At the opening of the Conference there were few preachers and delegates. But by ten o'clock many arrived and the church was almost full. N. H. D. Wilson, the veteran secretary, was not allowed to retire, and he remained at the scribe's desk.

I watched to see how the new President would conduct business. In two hours I found that he might be counted on for firmness, facility in dispatching business, practical views on all questions, and an urbanity which would rob every executive and parlimentary asperity of its sting. He had an exceptionally fine program, and as long as I staid, its items were caried out to the letter.

But what can I tell about a District Conference of which I saw so little? I cannot fail to mention the short,well-prepared addresses of Revs. Z. Paris, H. G. Stamey, and J. W. Bradley. We assume that our readers will learn more of them in the report of the Secretary. J. W. Bradley's address on the Conference ogan will be published in the Advocate. It was the first set address of the kind that I had ever heard in a District Conference.

THROUGH THE HAIL PELTED SECTION.

Through the kindness of Edward Gibson, Esq., a promising young lawyer of Laurinburg, who carried me in his buggy to Laurinburg to take the train on Thursday afternoon,I had the opportunity of seeing the ravages of the terrific hailstorm which passed through this section about three weeks ago. The loss by this storm is estimated to be about $100,000. Many growing cotton fields had been completely stripped, with not enough life left in the stalks to make them sprout. The cornfields were tattered and torn. The whole scene was pathetic. Yet much of the cotton is sprouting and blooming. Much of the corn will mature, and the people in that section will not sustain as great loss as was at first feared.

ON THE BACK TRACK

A belated train delivered two sleepy travelers in Sanford at about 1 o'clock on Friday morning. Those travelers were President Rhodes and myself. How quickly were our visions of a cheery room and comfortable bed dispelled! After a half hour's delay in finding some one in the hotel office, we at last ran up with an ebony porter who informed us that there was for us "no room in the inn," but that we would have to sleep in the annex a few hundred yards distant. Through the "wee small hours" the clarion voice of President Rhodes was heard calling on the vanishing porter for at least one chair, and then I sank to sleep to awake in the morning with the prospect of a day at Jonesboro.

Sanford and Jonesboro, two miles apart, are connected by a perfect little gem of a railroad rejoicing in the happy title, "The Atlantic and Western Railroad." The dapper little train puffs backward and forward constantly during the day, and no trolley car was ever more convenient for a traveling public.

THE CONFERENCE.

We struck the Conference a little before 9 o'clock on Friday morning. This scribe was at once assigned to the pleasant home of Mrs. M. A. Sloan, one of the Methodist force at Jonesboro. This scribe is appreciative of the kindness received at her hands. When I entered church, I soon perceived that I was in a Conference where an unusually large number of lay delegates was present. There were seventy-six in attendance according to the statement made by Rev. E. Pope. Only two preachers were absent. Presiding Elder Hurley was in the chair, and an excellent program was being carried out. I noticed that in the reports made by the preachers the number of Advocates taken in the charge was given. The Fayetteville District, like the Rockingham, believes in the "Old Raleigh," and I may modestly say that this is one reason why these two Districts are so prosperous.

I could perceive, too, that I was in a spiritual atmosphere. The preachers and delegates seemed to be in earnest, and the vital spiritual themes were uppermost. Rev. R. H. Broom, of course, was Secretary.

The President has a close grip on the preachers and people of his District, and he conducts the affairs of his office with the ease and dispatch of a veteran.

One of the important matters which the Conference had under consideration was the sale of the District school building to the town of Jonesboro, and to be used as a graded school building. The Conference ordered the sale, which was effected at a fair price. Rev. E. Pope will be Superintendent of the Graded School, and at the same time serve Jonesboro Circuit. If any man is able to perform this double duty, Rev. E. Pope is the man, who is not only a good preacher and teacher, but a mighty man physically.

We noticed that the duty of holding family worship is duly emphasized in the Fayetteville District. It was gratifying to learn that so many laymen have family altars.

We had the pleasure of spending several very pleasant hours in Sanford with Rev. S. T. Moyle and family. They are living in one of the very best parsonages in the Conference. There is an ample yard with a good place for a garden. A little more elbow grease in the part of Brother Moyle would make that garden a thing of beauty. Brother Moyle is enthusiastic over his work at Sanford and the other churches. He is using a financial plan which promises great things in the general "round up" at Conference. We await with deep interest the result.

Another Great Missionary Conference.

BY REV. ROBAH F. BUMPAS

The church is planning for larger things for Christ.

A committee consisting of representatives of the General Board of Missions, and the Boards of the North Carolina, Western North Carolina, South Carolina and Holston Conferences met in Asheville July 19th and arranged for a great Missionary Conference to be held in Asheville May 17-21, 1905.

It is desired that all sections and interests of the Conferences participating shall be represented.

The constituency of the Conference is to consist of all traveling and lay members of Annual Conference Boards, three delegates from each pastoral charge to be elected by the Quarterly Conference, each Sunday-school superintendent and one delegate from each school. Presidents of Epworth Leagues and one delegate from each League, the general officers of the W. F. M. and W. H. M. Societies, with the president and one delegate from each Auxiliary.

It is hoped to gather four or five thousand persons in the great May meeting, and to impart to our missionary work a great impetus.

The railroads have promised to give us a one-fare rate, and the hotels offer liberal terms.

The committee will arrange a tempting program, and there will be prominent speakers from both within and without our own church.

A Mountain Resort for Preachers and Their Families.

Lots have recently been surveyed and are now ready for distribtuion (free) to such preachers as will comply with the conditions. For full particulars, address with stamp,

F. L. TOWNSEND,
Mount Airy, N. C.

Bishop A. W. Wilson, who was considerably indisposed Sunday afternoon, became very ill last night before he finished the first half of his sermon at the Methodist Church, and was taken to the home of Hon. R. R. Noblin, whose guest he has been during the session of the District Conference. The Bishop suffered greatly during the night, but was well enough to start home via Danville this morning. The malady from which he is suffering is thought to be acute indigestion, and no serious results are expected therefrom.—Baltimore-Richmond Advocate.

The eminent German theologian and historian, Adolf Harnack, has been elected to honorary membership of the Massachusetts Historical Society. He will visit this country in the fall, and attend the meeting of European and American savants of our leading theological seminaries.

Methodist Mention

State.

Rev. R. R. Grant writes that he has just closed an excellent meeting at Portsmouth. Rev. J. V. Williams did the preaching.

Rev. E. H. Davis, pastor of Kinston station, with his family, has been visiting relatives in High Point for a few days.

Dr. R. C. Beaman did some effective work in the temperance campaign in Wilmington. He is in great demand all over the State.

Rev. F. A. Bishop and wife are visiting relatives and friends in the Eastern part of the State. They will be absent from Raleigh about two weeks.

Since our last report we have received thirty-eight new subscribers, bringing up the total since Conference to 1,417; making a District average of over 157.

We congratulate Greensboro on her great victory over the saloon last week. There was a majority of 423 for prohibition. The battle was warmly waged.

Miss M. S. Carter, the very efficient and faithful book-keeper and stenographer of the Raleigh Christian Advocate left yesterday to spend a month's vacation at her home in Canisteo, N. Y.

We are under many obligations to Miss Laura Connor, of Thurman, N. C., for four new subscribers. Our laymen and laywomen are showing in a very practical way their interest in the Advocate.

Nearly one thousand dollars was subscribed for Greensboro Female College at the Rockingham District Conference. All doubts may as well be settled. This institution is already a reality. See the advertisement in this week's Advocate.

Rev. F. M. Shamburger preached a thoroughly practical sermon Sunday morning at the Methodist church and the offertory by Miss Minnie Daniel, of Raleigh, was most excellently rendered, as she possesses a sweet voice.—Oxford Ledger.

The following young ladies, attending the Raleigh Summer School, cheered the Advocate office with their presence on last Saturday: Misses Eugenia Bradsher, Emma Parker, Tina Lindley, and Helen Smith. They are all strong friends of the Advocate.

Rev. R. F. Bumpas is in Western North Carolina. He attended the meeting in Asheville at which the great missionary meeting in Asheville next May was inaugurated. That occasion will be a great one. See the communication of Brother Bumpas in this issue.

Rev. Robert E. Hunt, of Rocky Mount, spent part of the week here visiting. He filled the pulpit at the Methodist church Sunday morning and night and preached good, practical sermons both times. Our people are glad to see him doing so well.—Burlington News.

We are glad to know that Prof. Plato Durham, who has been quite ill in the hospital at Asheville for some time, is a great deal better. He is so much improved that he has left the hospital. He was a very sick man for a while, and his friends were very anxious about him.

North Carolina has been highly favored in the series of addresses delivered by Mrs. M. L. Hargrove, of the Scarritt Bible and Training School. She visited a number of the principal towns and cities after being with the Conference Society of the Western North Carolina Conference in their annual meeting.

The different churches of Statesville are arranging for a union meeting. The Landmark last week had this item: "At a meeting of members of the different denominations, held in the First Methodist Church Sunday afternoon, those present decided to hold a union religious meeting in town this fall."—N. C. Christian Advocate.

Rev. R. D. Daniel, pastor of the Methodist Mission churches at the two cotton mills, is quite sick with typhoid fever at Dr. Nash's. His condition is not regarded as favorable at all, but he is having the best attention of physicians and trained nurse. His mother came Monday and is with him.—Henderson Gold Leaf.

Mr. Maxwell Gorman, one of the best newspaper correspondents in the State, has become city editor of the Raleigh Times. We congratulate the Times on securing his services. Mr. Edward L. Conn, the former city editor, who displayed great ability in his position, has taken a place with Johnson & Wynne, of Washington City.

There was a splendid all-day service at Oak Grove Church, in Northampton County, Sunday. Rev. P. N. Stainback preached a strong sermon at the morning service and Dr. D. B. Zollicoffer made a most excellent talk at the afternoon service. A large congregation was present and the day was most profitably spent.—Weldon News.

The Tabernacle Sunday-school, Snow Hill Circuit, under the management of Superintendent W. H. Derring, gave a delightful picnic on Saturday, July 16. After brief and appropriate services, the people repaired to the shady grove around the church, where the table was soon loaded with good things. It was a pleasant occasion, and everybody seemed to enjoy it.

J. M. Lamb, B. Cole, J. L. Godfrey, and R. F. Wrenn were elected delegates to the Annual Conference from the Fayetteville District. J. D. Barnes and C. W. Womble were elected alternates. B. P. Robinson, E. W. Smith, Judson Hackney, and L. P. Pattishall were licensed to preach. Rev. Mr. Mouzon, formerly of South Carolina, was recommended for readmission into the traveling connection.

There was a soul-stirring meeting at Shady Grove Methodist Church last week which resulted in nine additions to the church. Rev. F. M. Shamburger, the beloved and consecrated pastor of Oxford Methodist Church, assisted Rev. W. H. Puckett in the meeting and preached pure Gospel sermons which captured the hearts of the people of that section. The meeting was largely attended up to its close, which was Friday afternoon.—Oxford Ledger.

The following note comes from Rev. J. H. M. Giles: "We closed a fine meeting of several days at Oak Grove last Friday night. Many conversions in the church and several outside. Seven joined with us, taking the 'vows' and being baptized; at the altar we received them in the primitive way. Bro. G. B. Webster, of Bladen Street, Wilmington, was with us and did most of the preaching, and did it well. Many of our old people say it was one of the best times they have ever seen at Oak Grove. There was much shouting of the old-time style."

Connectional.

First Church, Tampa, has raised $4,000 for a Sunday-school annex. The necessary ground has been purchased.

Dr. Francis L. Patton, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, has been recently the leading preacher in revival services in Philadelphia.

Rev. W. W. McMurry, recently deceased, has been remembered by his son, Dr. W. F. McMurry, of St. Louis, who has issued a memorial volume of eighty pages devoted to the life and work of his father.

On June 30th, Mrs. Burke, wife of Rev. W. B. Burke, one of our missionaries from Georgia in China, died at Yokohama, Japan. Brother Burke and family—wife and four children—had started home for a long vacation after several years of absence.

There are thirty free scholarships offered to college graduates who desire to take Theological courses of study in the Biblical Department of the Vanderbilt University. They yielded enough to cover the cost of board in Wesley Hall. Tuition and room rent are free to all theological students, and a loan fund is available to help all worthy candidates for the ministry.

General Notes

Judge Parker's mother is a prohibitionist, and has been for fifty years a reader of a church paper. Mothers, take notice.

A recent shipment from the Bible Society house in London included nine tons of Bibles, printed in twenty-eight different languages.

King Edward lately received General Booth at Buckingham Palace, and manifested keen interest in the General's account of the work of the army, and expressed good wishes for its continued success.

It is expected that the attendance at the Baptist University for Women at Raleigh will reach this year 450. Already 112 have enrolled for the coming session against forty-one for the same time last year.

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, chairman of the Evangelistic Committee, says that the calls for evangelists are increasing more rapidly than the committee's ability to supply them. There have been twelve hundred calls sent in for special workers.

Rev. Dr. J. Wesley Johnston, of New York, has received the degree of Doctor of Literature from Syracuse University. Dr. Johnston is known as "Stylus," a correspondent of the New York Christian Advocate, and is a cousin of the Rev. Dr. Briggs, Book Steward.

The Protestant Episcopal Bishops of twelve Southern States in a recent meeting at Sewanee, Tenn., unanimously decided that the time had not yet come for the consecration of negro bishops for Southern dioceses, but pleaded for a fuller recognition of the negro's place in the church.

Rev. Thomas E. Converse, D. D., for nearly thirty years one of the editors of the Christian Observer, of Louisville, has sold his interest in the paper to his brother, Rev. F. Bartlett Converse, D. D., and will retire from the editorial staff. Dr. Francis R. Beattie will continue as associate editor.

Theodore Herzl, who stood physically as well as intellectually, like Saul, head and shoulders above the masses of his Jewish compatriots, has just passed away, and his death is noted with wide and sincere expressions of sorrow. He was the founder of Zionism, that remarkable movement for the return of the Jews to their ancestral land.

The Rev. Frederick D. Huntington, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese of Central New York, died at his summer home in Hadley, Mass., on July 11, in the very room where he first saw the light of day eighty-five years ago. Only a few hours after his death his son, Dr. George P. Huntington, a member of the faculty of Dartmouth College, also passed away at Hanover, N. H., where he had been ill some time with fever.

Carding and Spinning.

We acknowledge with thanks the receipt at this office of "Carding and Spinning," a book just out of press, published by G. F. Ivey & Co., Hickory, N. C.

The author, G. F. Ivey, is well-known in the cotton mill world, being also the author of "Loom Fixing and Weaving," one of the most widely read books on mill work in this and foreign countries.

"Carding and Spinning" has 220 pages, is excellently printed and bound, and will no doubt prove invaluable to those interested in the subject.

The contract for making the plates for the joint hymn book of the Northern and Southern Methodist Churches has been let to the Gilson Company, of Boston. The work of publication will be in the hands of Dr. W. F. Tillett, of Vanderbilt University, and Dr. Stewart, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

We regret to learn that Dr. A. D. Betts was very severely bitten by a dog on last Sunday.

NORTH CAROLINA EPWORTH LEAGUE
DEVOTIONAL CHARITABLE CONFERENCE LITERARY EVANGELICAL
EDITED BY REV. H. B. ANDERSON.

Chewing Gum and Missions.

Mr. John R. Mott is authority for the statement that thirty millions of dollars are spent annually in the United States for chewing gum. This is about three times the amount the churches spend for missions.

The Christian Guardian declares that the annual output of the factories in Canada is ninety tons—180,000 pounds of chewing gum. It is a vulgar practice our people have fallen into which is said seriously damages the salivary glands and impair the digestion.

It is safe to say that if our Leaguers would divert the money they spend for this gum to the missionary cause, we might easily support our League Missionary.

They Want to Control the Primaries.

The liquor men are bent on laying hands on the political machinery of the State. And they will do it unless the temperance element of the State awakes to its duty, privilege, and power. We have the strength, and have it for some time, to defeat them; but we have been silent until too late, and then we have complained at the condition of political affairs. We deserved no better than we have received.

Let members of the Epworth League join the forces of the Anti-Saloon League in their efforts for good government. Let all adult male members go into the primaries and demand their rights as citizens. Let them make their influence be felt. We are strong enough to elect municipal, county, and State officers. The liquor men are reckoning upon indifference on our part. They now realize that we outnumber them. If we loose the advantage gained, I believe, with Chairman Bailey, we will not regain it in two generations—if then. Let us cast the weight of our influence on the side of civic righteousness and win the day.

Not only have the adult male members of the Epworth League an influence that will count in the primaries and at the poles, but the power behind the throne is vested in our women and girls. They have played no small part in achieving the success already gained; but our final triumph is to be obtained only with their help. Even the boys and girls of our Junior Leagues, under the wise leadership of their superintendent or manager, may play an important part in this grand work. Let each Epworthian in his and her sphere play well their part and with an aroused public sentiment and an active temperance campaign, the next Governor and General Assembly will be temperance men who "may be trusted to make amendments that experience and conditions shall demonstrate to be wise and proper."

If the temperance people will do their duty, victory is within easy reach. Let us embrace our opportunity. Let every Epworthian fall in line at once and rise to the emergency.

I wish I might impress upon the Leagues of our Conference how very near the work of the second Department is to the Master, who, while on earth, went about doing good. In taking Him for our example, we shall be like Him in having such love for souls that we, too, may work while it is called to-day. Isaiah 58 brings the obligations for this work and the blessings resulting from it very forcibly before us. Is not this the past that I have chosen? to loose the bands of wickedness to undo the heavy burdens and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke? Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? When thou seest the naked that thou cover him. . . . . Then shall thy light break forth as the morning, and their health shall spring forth speedily; and thy righteousness shall go before thee: the glory of the Lord shall be thy reward. Then shalt thou call and the Lord shall answer; thou shalt cry, and He shall say, Here am I.

The Third Vice-President of St. John Chapter is encouraging the members to reading good literature by calling attention to good books and asking them what books they have read since the last literary meeting; and the Fourth Vice-President is active in collecting the money for the support of the League Missionary.

Consecration is not wrapping one's self up in a thin gauze of sanctimoniousness; it is going out into the world and exercising to the utmost every power for God's glory.

There are few topics more interesting to the agriculturist and fruit-grower than the question of plant breeding. Some recent experiments in crossing oranges and other citrus fruits made under Government auspices have proved very successful. Not only have fruits with new flavors been the result, but the trees themselves will be able to exist in more northern latitudes. The whole matter is fully described and illustrated by H. Gilson Gardner in the July "Cosmopolitan."

CANCER—HOW MRS. MARGARET E. COX, OF NEW MOON, ALA., SAVED HER LIFE.

Dr. D. M. Bye Co., Dallas, Texas.

Dear Doctors:—I will write you a few lines concerning my Cancer. It is well. I commenced your last treatment on the 8th day of December and on the 8th day of January it was healed up nicely. I will do all I can for you. I have sent your books to some of my friends who have Cancers. Mine has been a great surprise to a great many people and they want to know what cured it. I tell them the Oil Cure did the work for me.

With the best love to you and your kind treatment to me, I remain.

Your true friend,
MRS. MARGARET E. COX,
New Moon, Ala.

There is absolutely no need of the knife or burning plaster, no need of pain or disfigurement. The Combination Oil Cure for cancer is soothing and balmy, safe and sure. Write for free book to the Originator's Office, Dr. D. M. Bye Co., Box 462, Dallas, Texas.

DO YOU EVER HAVE RHEUMATISM? MUSCULAR, INFLAMMATORY OR SCIATIC?

Yanceyville, N. C., Aug. 28, 1902.

About twelve months ago I was afflicted with sciatic rheumatism, from which I suffered so much that I could not walk two hundred yards without suffering great pain. My body was drawn to one side from the effects of it. I used several remedies without their affording me any relief and was about to despair when a friend suggested that I try Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy, which I did, and after taking five bottles felt complete relief and have never suffered from it since. I think Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy is a great medicine, and can cheerfully recommend it.

I CURE CANCER.

Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No knife. No plaster. No caustics. No slonging oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure late and cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment," but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else is the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

"I can only speak of the engine bought of you last Fall in the highest terms * * * We find her to move with the regularity of a clock, a thing that we think very essential in making a good sample of cotton. WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE
MACON, GA.
Begins 67th Annual Session Sept. 14, 1904
Still the oldest and the best. Original charter, 1836. First diploma, 1840. According to present information, 1,491 living alumnæ in Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, North Carolina and other Southern States and throughout the Union.
Total enrollment last year, 381. Modern methods of instruction. Every teacher an able and accomplished specialist. One of the highest and best-enriched in the South thoroughly taught, not used merely as an advertisement.
Largest as well as best music school in Georgia, if not in the South. Hesselberg Director.
Enrollment of music pupils alone larger than the entire enrollment of any female college in the State. The class of Miss Connor (who is unsurpassed in violin, as instructor or performer) was without predecessor in success and brilliancy in this section of the country.
Two new vocal teachers, Miss Wheeler (Cincinnati Conservatory) and Miss Combs (Conservatories of Florence and Geneva), next school year.
Miss Eva Massey, so accomplished and distinguished in piano, after being abroad a year, is with us again.
Miss Mabel V. Rivers, graduate and leader in her class, Boston School of Expression, lately in charge of Elocution and Physical Culture Department, Martha Washington College, succeeds the accomplished Miss Brown in same method.
Location elevated and very healthful. Rooms large and airy, but are comfitable in the coldest weather. Sanitary plumbing the best. Passenger and freight elevators.
Particular care of every boarding student. Last school year not a case of typhoid fever, or of other sickness, in our large boarding student body from local cause.
Young ladies required to dress neatly, modestly, and inexpensively. They are not required to purchase uniforms they do not need, or that do not suit them, but are allowed to use taste as well as economy.
Discipline liberal, but carefully and faithfully enforced. College pastorate. Other religious advantages most excellent. Rates lower than any college or school of or near the same class in this section. Neither what we teach nor its equivalent can be properly taught for less money.
Catalogues free, and additional information on application.

Sunbury.

Sunbury is a village of some dozen good families—good, better, best. But which is the best? 'Twas said that each preacher and delegate thought that he had the best home. It is a number one community. A hot box on the S. A. L. Railway caused me to miss connection at Suffolk; so I got there too late to talk to the Conference. But they gave me right-of-way Sunday. Underwood is always kind to me.

The distinguished visitors, President Davis, Rhodes, Kilgo and Editor Ivey had gone, and Miss Nannie Lee Smith was just leaving. They had a great time. That district (the Elizabeth Circuit) has pushed its way to the front. The Conference will want to go to Sunbury again. My stay among the Crosses was delightful.

Still Begging.

The cow has come. Thanks to dear little Warren. Her name is Lillie Warren. But the striking clock-calendar has not. We will need it by the first of September when we get in our new building.

Our ground is mighty poor. The guano is not smelling around yet. What says the Raleigh company? That barrel of flour has not knocked at the door of our pantry. Where are our Methodist wheat mills?

Watermelons and cantaloupes are ripe. No wagon load has been emptied here.

Brother Wynne says we ought to have a new piano for our new chapel. Amen! We ought to have a large range for our new cook-room. What say our hardware men?

Our Plans.

The Executive Committee have ordered the main building to be finished. The next session will open September 1, 1904. We can then take in two hundred children. In order to do that, the house must be furnished, and the support of the orphans must be provided for. It will take $18,000 to feed, clothe, educate and care for them. We will take them in as fast as provision is made for them.

Brethren, there will have to be some stirring around if we are ready for it. Only six weeks. Let everybody that can furnish a room send in their name; also anyone that will support an orphan. Let every Sunday-school that will furnish a room send in their name. What say Grace, St. Pauls, Centenary, Wilson First Church, Elizabeth City and Trinity? Let all who can furnish a half room do the same. Say Burlington, Fayetteville, Rockingham, Laurinburg, Kinston, Rocky Mount, Greenville, Washington, City Roads, Weldon, Henderson, Oxford? Then let every individual who will furnish a bed and every Sunday-school that will do the same send in $15.00. Let every circuit make arrangement to support an orphan. Tar River Circuit heads the list. Let us hear from you, beloved.

Receipts up to July 21

W. F. Jones, on sub., $5.00; Sunburry, $17.60; Mrs. J. N. Cross and Sunday-school class, window, $2.00; First Church, Elizabeth City, on sub., $2.00; City Roads, Elizabeth City, on sub., $5.00; Grace, Wilmington, on sub., $3.00; Apex, on sub., $2.50; City Roads Sunday-school on support of an orphan, $5.00; Colerain Sunday-school, $3.09; Grifton Sunday-school, $5.56; Primary Class, Hay Street Sunday-school, Fayetteville, $3.70.

Education.

Education is the foundation of our noblest arts. The study of music is just as essential to an education as the English language.

Our great Colleges are our greatest educators and there you will find the Artistic Stieff Piano, because its perfect action and beautiful singing tone inspires the student to attain the higher Art in Music.

In the home it is an emblem of musical culture and refinement.

Sold direct, costs no more than medium grade or cheap pianos through retail dealers.

Cancer Cured for 10c.
I had a cancer on my face. My physician advised me to go to Philadelphia and have it cut out. But I tried a simple remedy which is not known to doctors. It cured me in three weeks and I am a well man to-day. I want the suffering public to know it. I will on receipt of one dollar send prescription and directions, and if not cured, I will refund money. Write to-day and be cured.

Obituaries

Obituaries containng not more than one hundred and fifty words are inserted free of charge. Those sending obituaries containing over one hundred and fifty words are requested to send with the obituary one cent for every word in excess. Unless this rule is observed the obituary must be cut down to the proper limit.

HARDY.—Mrs. Sarah E. Hardy, wife of J. E. Hardy, died May 21, 1904, aged about fifty-eight years.

The call came suddenly, but she was, no doubt, ready to go. Sister Hardy was converted and joined the M. E. Church at Ebenezer when about sixteen years old and lived a true Christian life in a quiet way, but she loved her Lord and delighted in His work, and spent a great deal of her time reading His Word and in meditation.

She leaves behind a grief-stricken husband, a brother and two sisters to mourn their loss.

A faithful wife, a kind neighbor and a consecrated Christian woman has joined the host of the redeemed. She was buried near her old home in Halifax County.

May the Lord bless the bereaved husband and relatives.

W. B. HUMBLE.

GILLAM.—Paul J. Gillam, second son of J. B. and Bettie M. Gillam, died in Asheville, May 11th, of lung disease, aged twenty-three years. He was sick but a few months, and life seemed long and bright before him, but his Father willed it otherwise.

Paul was a member of Cashie Baptist Church in Windsor for five years. He was an honorable young man, possessing a good, charitable heart. His loved ones deeply grieve for him, but they have the blessed assurance that he was ready and willing to die.

His many friends of the A. and M. College will be shocked to learn of the death of this noble young man.

His funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. C. M. McIntosh, and he sleeps where the gentle zephyrs will play around his lonely bed; where the sweet flowers will bloom; where the snows will cover his mound with a mantle of spotless purity, but his ransomed soul will live when all of earth's beauties have passed away. M.

LINDSAY.—Robert Strong, little son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Lindsay, fell asleep, at Snow Hill, N. C., on Sunday, May 29, 1904, aged one year, five months and two days. He was a bright little boy, fond of his parents, and they were devoted to him. It was hard to give him up, but God, wanting him in the kingdom above, came in the early light of the Sabbath and took him from his sufferings to the home beyond the skies. No rude hand can ever touch him. No affliction can ever reach him. He is safe and happy—everlastingly safe and inexpressibly happy—in the presence of Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."

"By thy hands the boon was given;
Thou hast taken but thine own:
Lord of earth and God of heaven,
Evermore, 'Thy will be done.'"

E. C. S.

KING.—After several weeks of suffering, Miss Martha Sarah King died early Monday morning, July 4th, 1904, at the home of her brother, Mr. W. H. King, in Gates County, N. C.

Sister King was about fifty-five years of age, and had been for the most of her life a member of the Methodist Church. Those who knew her testify to her sincerity as a Christian.

Her place in life seemed to be by the bed-side of the sick and suffering, administering to their comfort. She was patient, kind, and sympathetic. Her work was done willingly and lovingly; therefore, we believe, when that day shall come in which we shall all give an account of our lives here, the "King of Glory" will say to her, "In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me; come, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

She died claiming Jesus and eternal life as her own.

W. H. BROWN, P. C.

TUCKER.—William Wright Tucker was born the 11th of December, 1831, and died at his home in Pitt County, N. C., July 2, 1904, after a lingering sickness for more than six months.

Early in life he married Miss Philie Adams, who died many years ago. Only three of their six children are living.

About thirty-six years ago he married Miss Mary E. Adams, who, with one son, still survives. This is a brief summary of some of the dates and events in the life of Brother Tucker. He was honest and upright to his fellow-man. Never was the cry of the poor for help unheard by him. For more than twelve years he was a consistent and faithful member of the M. E. Church, South. So in many respects his life was exemplary. During his sickness he was patient and submissive.

The pains of death are past,
Labor and sorrow cease;
And life's long warfare closed at last,
His soul is found in peace.

B. E. STANFIELD.

THE KING OF BLOOD PURIFIERS SSS

No remedy ever yet discovered has met with such popular favor as S. S. S. The people everywhere indorse it, and there are few homes where S. S. S. for the blood is not known and used. It is superior in many ways to the ordinary blood medicines. In the first place S. S. S. is a guaranteed purely vegetable compound, made exclusively of medicinal roots selected for their wonderful purifying and tonic properties that act upon the blood, purging it of impurities and restoring it to a healthy, natural condition. At the same time, under its tonic effects the general system improves, the sluggish organs are toned up, and renewed strength and vigor and better health is the result. No bad after-effects follow the use of S. S. S., as so often happens with blood medicines containing strong minerals, which derange the stomach and digestion and in other ways damage the system. For diseases of the blood, such as Chronic Sores, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Boils and Pimples, Eczema, Tetter, Blood Poisons, and other troubles due to impure or bad condition of the blood, no remedy acts so promptly and thoroughly as S. S. S. It reaches deep-seated, long-standing cases, upon which the ordinary potash and sarsaparilla compounds have no effect. Even where there is an hereditary predisposition to disease, S. S. S will search out and remove from the blood the fixed poison and build up the health; it enriches and purifies weak, thin blood and stimulates the circulation. Pure blood is essential to health. You can exist without good blood, but can never be robust and strong; for every organ, tissue and nerve in the body looks to the blood for nourishment, and unless this vital fluid is kept in a pure, healthy state, the rest of the body suffers and the system soon breaks down. Nature has provided in S. S. S. a remedy for diseases of the blood which long experience and a thorough test have proven superior to all others, and the acknowledged "King of Blood Purifiers."

ALWAYS KEEPS S. S. S. ON HAND.

Monticello, Ark., May 21, 1903.

Gentlemen:—For about twelve years I have been using your S. S. S. as a household remedy. I have taken it as a tonic and appetizer, and believe there is none better. I have used it for my children at various times for little skin eruptions, boils and poisons caused by playing with weeds. S. S. S. is my standard, never mind what is the matter. If I use a bottle of S. S. S. it tones up the system, cleanses the blood and makes me well again. As an all-round family medicine I consider S. S. S. the best remedy of the kind that have I ever used, and generally keep it on hand as a family remedy. MRS. V. C. WHITTINGTON.

TANNER.—Sometime ago Evans M. Tanner and wife, Blanche Frayser, came from Richmond, Va., to visit the former's father, Martimer D. Tanner, and his sisters, in the town of Wake Forest, N. C. While there, on Sunday, June 26th, just as their little Florence Aurelia reached the age of six months, death came, riding on his swift steed, cholera infantum, and left them and their loved ones burdened with sorrow. None but those who have had similar experience can enter into the emotions of parents who lose their first and only child.

Weep not, dear ones, what seems death to you is only sleep to the little one's body and translation to her soul.

"Lone are the paths, and sad the bowers,
Whence thy meek smile is gone;
But O, a brighter home than ours,
In heaven is now thine own."

MAY.—Died at his home in Greene County, N. C., June 5, 1904, Mr. William May, aged sixty-four years, eleven months and five days. He had been in declining health for about two years, but seemed no worse during the day and evening before his death. Suddenly, at the midnight hour, the summons came. A wife and two daughters survive him. He was a good citizen and a faithful member of the Methodist Church.

The throng that attended his burial was evidence of the esteem in which he was held. He is gone. Sadly we shall miss him. May we meet him in the land of rest.

"Our brother the haven hath gained,
Outflying the tempest and wind;
His rest he hath sooner obtained,
And left his companion behind;
Still tossed on a sea of distress,
Hard toiling to make the blest shore,
Where all is assurance and peace
And sorrow and sin are no more."

E. C. S.

YORK.—John York, one of God's servants, died May 31, 1904, being seventy-one years, seven months and sixteen days old.

Brother York was born in Randolph County, this State, but he lived in what is now Scotland County since the war.

When but eighteen years of age he married Miss Mary Ann Searborough, and to this union God gave six sons and three daughters, seven of whom are living. The wife and mother died January 3, 1903.

Brother York professed religion in 1878, at Caledonia Church, and joined the M. E. Church, South, which church he loved. He was a loyal member, a good man, and we trust has joined the church triumphant. May his ashes rest in peace. May God bless and comfort the loved ones left behind and make us all to submit willingly to His divine will.

J. W. BRADLEY, P. C.
Rowland, N. C.

KITTRELL.—Geo. W. Kittrell was born in 1848 and died June 22, 1904.

At Kittrells, now on North Gates Circuit, he joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1863.

In December, 1872, he was united in marriage to Miss Pattie Willey, of Gates County, to which union were born two daughters and one son. The wife preceded the husband to the grave many years. The three children still survive.

In April, 1897, he was united in marriage to Mrs. Willie Costen, who also survives him.

Brother Kittrell's life, though not a long one, was a blessing to his community. In his church he labored as a private and as an official, and in both spheres he did his work well. He was a good husband, a kind father and a large-hearted neighbor. He will be greatly missed. His life is an enduring monument to his memory.

For many months he was sick, but during it all he never murmured or complained. He possessed his soul in patience. Life went out as quietly as the setting of the sun. His eyes closed here and opened in glory.

May God's richest blessings rest upon the bereaved ones.

W. H. BROWN.

HARRIS.—Dudley Watkins Harris was born in Warren County, North Carolina, September 24, 1826, and died in Durham, N. C., June 24, 1904, in the seventy-eighth year of his age. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in Warrenton, N. C., in early life, and for more than forty-five years lived a consistent Christian life.

Brother Harris was married three times. First to Miss Charity Draper in 1853. There were five children born of this union, two of whom still survive—Mrs. James Arnold and Miss Ella B. Harris, of Raleigh. He was married the second time to Mrs. Margaret Pegram in 1865. There were two children born of this union—Mrs. J. B. Knight, of Durham, N. C., and William H. Harris, of Norlina. He was married the third time to Miss Elizabeth Fish, in 1871, who, with four children born of this union still survive him.

Brother Harris was a good man, who lived without reproach, and died without an enemy, loved and honored by all who knew him.

A VERY CLOSE CALL.

"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters, and after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists. Price 50 cents.

NEW HEALING POWERS IN THE WATERS AT EUREKA SPRINGS, ARK.

It would seem that new properties have been discovered in the waters at Eureka Springs, Ark., peculiarly adapted to assisting in the curing of the drug and liquor habits. These new properties have led to the establishment of a large and splendidly appointed Sanitarium, where these diseases (if they may be called such) are treated. A large and commodious hotel has been fitted up comfortably and every attention is given to patients. The Sanitarium is in charge of a skilled corps of specialists and some remarkable cures are being made. The Sanitarium is in charge of Dr. C. A. Reed, and this gentleman invites correspondence on all troubles of this nature.

Excursion tickets are sold from all points on the Frisco System at very low rates.

The World As We See It.

The negro as an inventor is a new subject, and undoubtedly one which does not afford a very rich field of investigation. Yet according to our old friend, Hon. John W. Atwater, there is one invention to which the colored race may lay claim, and that is splitting a stick and running an oppossum's tail through it in order that this toothsome and noctural animal may be more easily carried. And this is an invention, too, which means something.

On July 28th, the Russian Minister of the Interior, Von Plehve, was killed by the explosion of a bomb which was thrown at him while he was passing in a carriage. An anarchist, of course, threw the bomb. Von Plevhe simply invited his own assassination. What Jeffreys was in law, Von Plehve was in the administration of his office. A more cruel and arbitrary tyrant never lived. He was the ablest man in the Russian Cabinet, and was nominally second to the Czar in influence. Really he ruled the Czar, who is a figure head. If he had been anything more, the Japanese would not now be decieminating the Russian troops in Manchuria.

The volunteer fleet of Russia in the Red Sea and the Vladivostock squadron have startled the world by capturing German mail and capturing and sinking British ships on the plea that the ships in question carried contraband of war. Last week there was considerable excitement in Berlin and London, but as the excitement has somewhat calmed down, it is assumed that Russia will make the amende honorable. The public is wondering what Russia means any way. She is fighting a losing battle in the East. In fact she is already whipped. What does she mean by arousing England, her avowed enemy, and Germany, her avowed friend? "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad. It is said that only one stronghold lies between the Japanese army and the capture of Port Arthur. There is a great deal of fighting going on. In nearly all the battles the Russians are worsted. The fall of Port Arthur is daily expected.

It is a motley panorama that unrolls before the American people every four years. What a variety of views! Take this for instance: The sage of Esopus taking his morning bath in the Hudson. In the distance a steamer. On the decks a battery of kodaks trained on the bathing sage. It makes us wish that Judge Parker would open his mouth and make a speech—anything that would give the sensational reporter a chance to write a dignified story of the Presidential candidate. Two weeks ago, they had the Judge with a lantern, hunting in the dark hours of the night for a horse that broke from his stall and was taking an innocent ramble in the back lot.

It is no wonder that the Christian Educator, hailing from Great Bend, Kansas, whose slogan is, "Remember the Sloeum," and whose doctrine is contained in, "Resolved that God is a myth," has succeeded in inducing only forty-four misguided people to join its "Cchurch of Humanity." The secret is contained in the condition of membership, "Believing God to be a fabulous being, I enclose one dollar for life membership in the Church of Humanity." That "one dollar" tells the tale. A man may shout that there is no God in order to calm his fears or cause applause, but when it comes to reaching down into his pocket for the almighty dollar he finds that his doctrine is not worth such a sacrifice. Infidelity is not willing to spend money for its faith.

It was a fierce battle that the Wilmingtonians fought last week. The advocates of the dispensary lost the day. This result was not unexpected by the temperance on-lookers outside the city of Wilmington. This city is the stronghold of the saloon in North Carolina. The last grand stand of the saloon power will be made in the city-by-the-sea. With about sixty saloons and a large negro population, Wilmington has a hard struggle before her. If prohibition, instead of the Dispensary had been the issue, the result might have been different. We do not doubt in the least that in North Carolina it is much easier to succeed in a campaign for prohibition than in a campaign for a Dispensary. In the meantime the tide is sweeping on. Those were glorious victories in Charlotte and New Bern.

The Seventeenth Annual Report of the bureau of Labor and Printing bears a name which makes one think of patent office and Congressional reports. But here is a place where a mistake is easy. Commissioner Varner has really gotten out a most readable book and one which every practical North Carolinian should highly value. Here are some of the facts brought out in Commissioner Varner's album of figures: Land has increased in value during the last two years in seventy-four counties. There is one county in which there is no negro labor. Ninety counties report labor very scarce. In eighty-nine counties the cost of living has increased, and in only sixty-four counties is there an increase of wages. The average cost of producing cotton in a majority of the counties is $29.83 per 500-pound bale. The average cost of wheat is 72 cents per bushel; tobacco $7.05 per 100 pounds. Ninety counties report an improvement in education. A large majority of the people of the State seem to favor compulsory education.

The Raleigh Times has a knack of saying some very apposite and forcible things. But we must earnestly insist that it went too far last week in trying to establish the dictum that Sunday cannot be made a day of rest from mental and physical labor, and all that is incumbent upon one is to take one day in the week. The Times must surely know that to bring about such a state of things would be to upturn one of the very foundation stones of our Christian civilization. The Times, on second thought, will surely modify his views. The American Sabbath is one of our most precious heritages and we look to the Press to aid largely in preserving the sanctity and permanency of this heritage.

We arise to ask, What has become of the ex-evangelist and later the wonderful stock-seller, W. P. Fife? On the strength of his reputation as a minister he sold not long ago thousands of dollars worth of stock in a Western mining company. The price paid was ten cents a share on the solemn assurance of Fife that in a few weeks, the same stock would be worth one dollar a share Everything connected with that stock has become as quiet as the grave. No one, as far as we know, has heard of the prophesied rise in value. Fife himself seems to have hidden himself. If not, what has become of him? We know why we have heard no outcry from the buyers. We trust that no one has thrown away his money. If there has been a "take in," the author should be made to suffer in some way. To defraud in the name of religion is one of the blackest sins on record.

As surely as moral uprightness draws the attention and respect of men and women, irrespectively of moral differences, just so surely will this same moral uprightness excite the hostility of some, and the possessor of this uprightness will be under the fire of those who cannot justify their fusillade, but who from the depths of their heart must give the only true reason, "He is a good man." Aristides was most bitterly hated because he had the fortune of being called "Aristides the Just." So all these flings at Mr. Folk, who a few days ago received the nomination for Governor of the State of Missouri, simply suggest the foregoing sentiment and illustrate the truth that the human heart to-day is just like the human heart that throbbed over a thousand years. If Mr. Folk has shown himself to be a man of moral grit and nerve, do not make him suffer for it, gentlemen of the press. If you must reproach Mr. Folk for his moral manhood, what will you do for the scoundrels whom he exposed?

A committe upon aggressive evangelism was appointed at the M. E. Conference in Los Angeles. It consists of three Bishops and one member from each General Conference District. It is made the duty of this evangelistic commission to urge upon the Annual Conferences the need of a mission on evangelistic work, consisting of ministers and lay men, which shall encourage persistent work in the various districts throughout the Conference.

The light of success needs to be trimmed with the shears of humility.

THE DRIFT OF THE CHURCH.

BY REV. W. A. BARTLETT, D. D., PASTOR FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, CHICAGO.

The power of the church is in its continued spirituality. We are more and more realizing the truth of the Saviour's words when He said, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." We might emphasize the word "things" to mean money, social life, and whatever else pertain to the conduct of religious work.

There has been a drift, perhaps unconsciously, into secularization. The church has been like a house in a flood. The surrounding element has poured in through doors and windows, destroying the beauty of the interior and threatening the lives of the inmates.

To be more specific, I mention a few particulars. There has been a demand for the concert feature in church worship. Theatre-goers and people devoted to entertainments who are also church members have demanded florid music and often really secular settings to religious words; and much of this, which has not only taken away the atmosphere of devotion which should be characteristic of worship, but has deprived people of the opportunity to take part in singing except to a limited extent. Martin Luther restored worship to the people, but many Protestant churches have almost wholly taken it away again.

In this matter of congregational singing, which should have an article by itself, the English are far and away ahead of us Americans and if we only knew it, one great means of attracting the common people is thus lost to many churches.

Again, there is another symptom of secularization in the church in the fact that more is made of the social side than of the religious in church life. In my judgment the social has been overdone. Prayer-meetings are small and undoubtedly often dull, but when a social function is on, all hands are at it with enthusiasm. Entertainments often of a worldly character are indulged in. Professional men and women are engaged to amuse. Indeed, it has become an important business with lecture and amusement bureaus to furnish entertainment for churches. This comes from the craving for the new, the spectacular and the flashy and some churches go as far as they dare in satisfying this craving on the part of the more thoughtless and less consecrated portion of the congregation.

Now, in my opinion, this whole matter of church amusements is based on a false presumption. I have made a careful observation both east and west. I have found that the churches which excel in sociables and amusements have proportionately small spiritual activity. Spiritual activity promotes sociability to be sure, but of a deeper and more satisfying kind. In my own church we have frequent suppers, but these are nearly all incidental to special work which brings us together in much larger numbers than for pure amusement. My own experience has been that the deeper the religious life of a church, the less call was there for entertainment. In one church I was seriously troubled because I could not get people to come out to sociables, but the church, galleries and all, would be filled morning and evening on Sunday. A young man opened my eyes when he said to me: "We would rather go to a good service than to a sociable." There are various reasons for this, but among them a certain incongruity, perhaps not fully analyzed in the mind, that the church entertainment and the church worship are not in harmony. Many would prefer to take their fun pure and not under the auspices of the church.

Another and primal cause of secularization in the church is in secular preaching. Many ministers do not realize how far away they are from the religious idea. The whole attitude of the church will largely depend on the pulpit ministrations.

Many sermons are simply homilies, discussions, or orations which are of a general nature. A sermon fails in its purpose unless the listener is made conscious to himself and of God. He must be made to realize his own spiritual need and the abundance of help at his disposal from God. All other pulpit efforts, however brilliant, scholarly, beautifully phrased and illustrated, are not sermons. I once received one of the most impressive lessons of my life in hearing a converted tramp preach to some of the "boys." He expounded a passage of Scripture crudely but in a commonsense way and then made the application to them and to me. I am sure I was moved and do not see how they could have been otherwise. I can date from that hour a change in my own methods. Last summer I heard a prominent preacher on an important occasion. He had carefully prepared himself. He was scholarly, used many illustrations which were interesting, but none helpful, and closed his "effort" with faec streaming with perspiration so great had been his activity. But no one came to speak to him save one or two of us on the platform, and going home I heard "the people" discussing it in a disappointed way. The man hadn't fed one empty, hungry heart there.

It has become a business with publishers to furnish clergymen with books of illustrations and homiletic helps—many of which simply kill a sermon because of their artificial sound. The Bible preached in an expository way with a few illustrations either from the Bible, which is a store-house in itself or from a man's own experience, is what the people want. We are many of us influenced so much by the talk of the streets, topics of the times, the desire for newspaper notoriety, that we fail to realize that the man, woman and young person before us is weary of all these things and wants a quiet hour for the soul with its God.

Each church has its dominating influence and voice. If it comes from those who want the church to be little more than a club—a club it will be, but a church it cannot be. But if the preacher comes before his people week by week with a powerful message—powerful because sweet, comforting, searching, personal, Scriptural—always on a high plane—that church will find its deepest satisfaction in that phase of church life, and much of the craving for other attractions will cease.

Those who want the church to be a club or a dress parade or another function, will doubtless seek another place where birds of their own feather are flocking. Let us hark back to church life of dignity, spirituality and power. The spiritually minded life will be far more contented amid meagre surroundings and will more cheerfully make its own environment radiant than the life which depends on social settlements and toast and tea and continued entertainments. As Jesus said to the woman of Samaria, "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of living water springing up into everlasting life."—Exchange.

What the Church School Has Done for the State

BY R. T. POOLE.

In the early part of the 17th century, before America was colonized and while it was being colonized, there was but one method of worshipping God permitted by the laws of England. You are doubtless familiar with the history of the Pilgrims and Puritans. You remember how, on account of religious persecutions, they were driven from the shores of their native country and came to America in quest of a land where they could have a voice in the making of their own laws and could worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences. The idea of self government and religious toleranec attracted large numbers of persecuted Christians from Europe to the wilderness that fringed the western coast of the Atlantic. From the time of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth Rock in 1620 up to the signing of the Declaration of Independence at Philadelphia in 1776, the idea of self-government and separation of church and state was ever uppermost in the minds of the American people.

During the first half of the 18th century the Methodist Church was organized in England under the leadership of the Wesleys and Whitfield, all of whom were educated at Oxford, England, an institution that existed under the combined form of church and State government. The zeal, courage and inspiration they received came not from this college, for the same law under which this institution existed suffered these men of God to be subjected to all manner of persecutions at the hands of cruel mobs.

I mention this fact to show you that the Methodist Church, in which we are especially interested, was directly connected with the movement that led to the separation of church and state and to American independence, the history of which we are all familiar.

In drafting the Constitution of the United Staes nothing was said about an established form of religion, omitted doubtless because it was conceded by those men, tried and true, whose ancestors for more than one hundred years had stood for freedom of conscience, to be unnecessary; but with an abundance of precaution the first amendment made to this instrument was that: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof," etc. Our State Constitution, Art. 9, Sec. 1, provides that: "Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

We find our fundamental law very properly separates the Church and the State; and at the same time it provides for a system of free public schools and a State University.

It is not my purpose to say one word against any of our State institutions. The University and Trinity College alike, both being my alma mater, have very tender places in my heart. I would not say aught that would reflect on either. My purpose is simply to tell you some of the things the church schools are doing for the State, and more especially the State of North Carolina.

Has the State a right to educate? That it has a legal right to do so we do not question. Has the Church a right to educate? I answer, yes. Has the Church proven herself competent to educate? I would refer you to the great majority of our American colleges and universities which dot our country from the lakes to the gulf and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. No one doubts where such instittuions as Harvard or Yale or Princeton or Johns Hopkins or Tufts or Wesleyan or Brown or Vanderbilt or Trinity, Connecticut, and Trinity, North Carolina, belongs. It must be evident to the most prejudiced observer that the great educational energy of this country is found in the church.

It is doubtless well for us that we have both Church and State schools. Each may act as a check or stimulant upon the other. Were it not for the influence of the church colleges upon our State institutions the tendency of the latter might be vastly different from what it is to-day. I fear that an institution that is compelled to look to the political party that happens to hold the reins of government for its support and existence might be a menace to our development were it not for the leavening influence of the church colleges.

There are no institutions in our country to-day so capable of developing independent thought as are those that are farthest removed from partisan politics. We are in great need of a class of broad-minded leaders who are superior to sectional prejudices and State traditions. The time was when the South produced national statesmen; that time has passed, but thank God I believe it is returning. The changed conditions and sectional divisions have changed a glorious record that makes the whole Southland yearn as it were to return to the land of Canaan.

The college a boy attends impresses the stamp of that institution upon his life and character and fixes for him a faith that will untimately become a plan of his life. Christian education stands for the very highest ideals of life. You will find a larger number of Christian boys in our church colleges than in our State institutions on the same principle that you find more followers of the meek and lowly Jesus in the Christian homes than in the non-Christian homes. The Christian home exerts an influence that the non-Christian home can never exert.

Bishop Duncan says: "If we regard the church college as a Christly service, then it is a church enterprise, the object of which is to save man, to elevate and purify society, and to strengthen government. . . . . Christ was not a sectarian, was not a partisan or sectionalist. So that the college that claims to rest on His teachings and to be governed by His spirit must dispense its benefits to all men without partiality."

What are the church colleges doing for the State? They are at present giving higher education to over one thousand boys and fifteen hundred girls in North Carolina. They are giving it willingly and voluntarily under the inspiration of the church and the Christian religion without one penny of cost to the tax-payers of the State. A large majority of the boys and girls in North Carolina who are receiving diplomas take them from church colleges. I venture the assertion that 90 per cent of the college men who are preaching the Gospel in our State to-day were educated at institutions owned and controlled by the church. In addition to these a large per cent of the teachers and hundreds of other citizens engaged in all the activities of life in this grand old Commonwealth were educated at institutions modelled and patterned after the life and character of the lowly Judean carpenter.

The report of the United States Commissioner of Education shows that in the South Atlantic States, which includes North Carolina, 60 per cent of the students are attending colleges and universities owned and controlled by the religious denominations; and in the Southern States the proportion is more than 70 per cent.

If there were no church colleges in the State over 50 per cent of the boys and girls who are now pursuing courses in higher education would be compelled to go to other States to continue their educational work because our State schools are already filled to overflowing and our rate of taxation is up to the Constitutional limit, and in many counties special taxes are levied to defray current expenses.

The sentiment that opposes the church colleges may have the satisfaction of knowing, not only that it is greatly in the minority, but that it is opposed to the largest part of the educational forces and influence of the State.

You often hear the charge that a man who is educated at a church college stands no show in politics and that he will not get on well in life. I hope no boy will ever enter one of our church colleges with so base a motive as to gain political preferment alone. To prove to you that they take a false position, I merely point you to our two United States Senators, F. M. Simmons and Lee S. Overman, both of whom are graduates of Trinity College. Besides these, I would refer you to our Lieutenant Governor, a number of our National Representatives, several Superior Court Judges and a great many others holdings positions of honor and trust at the hands of the people. Does this look like there is no chance in politics in North Carolina for a man who holds a diploma from a church college? Does this look like the church college is an enemy to the State?

This is not all the church schools have done for North Carolina. I would direct your attention to the great educational wave that has recently swept our State from the mountains to the sea; such an educational awakening the likeness of which is unknown in the annals of our history. I say all honor to the peerless Aycock, our great educational Governor. He has championed a great cause and has made a record that generations yet unborn will look upon with pride. He has wrought a great work for public education in the State and riehly deserves the plaudits of all of our people. I would not say one word that would deract one iota from his merited reputation. I merely wish to call your attention to the fact that there was a mighty force at work back of Governor Aycock, and it was this power that made Ayeock possible. I refer to the work and influence of the church colleges led by our own Dr. Kilgo and his worthy colleagues in other churches. Where the State has made one effort to arouse and develop an educational sentiment, the church has made fifty. The presidents and representatives of the church colleges, presiding elders, preachers of all denominations and many others interested in the cause have gone forth into every nook and corner of this grand old State preaching and speaking in the interest of education and in every way the whole church has wrought to this end and the fruits of their victory we now realize.

Soul Food

If we can evangelize America in this generation, America will evangelize the world before the end of the century.—W. P. Thirkield.

* * *

When we are living in conformity to God's plan, He is in the truest sense with us and naught can stand before us or against us. No trial can be too heavy for Him, no temptation too mighty, no discouragement too great, no night too dark. "If God be for us, who can be against us."

* * *

It is a wonderful change when a man comes to himself. Before he was beside himself. He did not think intelligently nor act sensibly. But suddenly his mind began to act rationally. It is so when a sinner turns from the error of his way. He has been beside himself, but light from heaven shines into his mind, and he begins to think intelligently and act wisely.

* * *

The following confession made by an African prodigal is what many of us would say if we would tell the truth: "I did not fall because God could not hold me; Satan did not overcome me because God could not save me; simply. I did not think I needed help, and so did not depend on Him to hold my hand and to save me."

* * *

Ye whose hearts are fresh and simple,
Who have faith in God and nature,
Believe ye that in all ages
Every human heart is human,
That in even savage bosoms
There are longings, yearnings, strivings,
For the good they comprehend not,
That the feeble hands and helpless
Groping blindly in the darkness,
Touch God's right hand in that darkness,
And are lifted up and strengthened.

We should strive to be progressive in the formation of character, as well as in the more ordinary pursuits of life, and each day grow stronger and better able to smile at the lesser evils that beset our paths; to look at them calmly and philosophically, and so extract all the good we can from them, and profit from the experience and the lessons they undoubtedly present to all who are willing to search for them, and to look upon the bright side of everything, instead of weakly succumbing and caviling at every ill.—Selected.

The night lies dark upon the earth, and we have light
So many have to grope their way, and we have sight;
One paths is theirs and ours—of sin and care—
But we are borne along, and they their burden bear,
Footsore, heart-weary, faint they on their way,
Mute in their sorrow, while we kneel and pray;
Glad are they of a stone on which to rest,
While we lie pillowed on the Father's breast.

"A wounded hand doth knock upon thy door;
A gentle, loving one, with bleeding brow,
Stands waiting for thy leave to enter now,
That to thy sin-sick soul he may restore
The bloom of virtue's health for evermore.
He once upon the cross his head did bow,
That thy poor, sinful soul he might endow
With all his heavenly grace. He waits to pour
His light divine into thy darkened eye,
He waits to cheer thy soul with music sweet.
Dost thou not hear his call? Lo, from the sky
Angelic ones look down to see thee meet
Thy Saviour and thy Friend. No longer try
To bar thy door, but rise, thy Lord to greet."

Regeneration is the entrance into his life; justification, the partaking of His cross; sanctification, the transformation into His character; death, the coming of the Lord; heaven, His unveiled face.—Maclaren.

There is a goal always ahead. Whether one has just finished the best work of his life, or has just gone down in utter failure, there is a goal still ahead worthy of more effort than he has yet made. To-day, to the trusting child of God, is always better than yesterday; to-morrow will be better than to-day.

Youth shows but half; trust God; see all, nor
The best is yet to be,
The last of life, for which the first was made;
Our times are in His hand
Who saith, "A whole I planned; be afraid."

Fighting against God is a losing battle. Familiar and often quoted is Napoleon's cynical remark: "God fights on the side of the strongest battalions." It is not so often remembered that that same Napoleon, at the head of the strongest battalions that he, or perhaps any man, ever commanded, turned from the bitter cold of Moscow with the despairing cry, "The Almighty is too strong for me." When kings and emperors go forth to war, they may well not only consider the strength of their battalions, but make calculation as to what side God is likely to take in the matter for which they are fighting.

"What is the great test of character? A crisis of suffering, a moment of important decision, a sudden call upon all the forces of the soul? Not at all. To know character thoroughly, it must be studied under the test of the common details of daily life. 'No man is a hero to his valet' is a cynical old saying. But, in spite of it, some men have been heroes to those who lived in the closest daily relations with them and, therefore, the truest of heroes. Sir Philip Sidney was as courteous to his servants as to his queen. To try a man's truthfulness, his nobility, his aims, a commonplace day, full of ordinary duties, is the most searching and thorough of tests, after all."

"Have you and I to-day
Stood silent as with Christ, apart from joy
Of life, to see by faith His face?
And grow, by brief companionship, more true,
More nerved to lead, to dare, to do
For Him at any cost? Have we to-day
Found time, in thought, our hand to lay
In His, and thus compare
His will with ours, and wear
The impress of His wish? Be sure
Such contact will endure
Throughout the day; will help us walk erect
Through storm and flood; detect
Within the hidden life, sin's dross, its stain;
Revive a thought of love for Him again;
Steady the steps which waver; help us see
The footpath meant for you and me."

A business man in a large city tells of his perplexity when a young man, His partner, who had been connected with the firm for many years, was taken ill and compelled to take a sea voyage. The entire responsibility of the business was suddenly thrown on the young man, whose experience was limited. He trembled when he thought of the disaster which might come to the business in the absence of his senior partner. When they separated the young man went to a vacant room in the building, locked the door and prayed fervently for divine guidance and help. This he did every morning, and when his partner returned it was found that the business had prospered more in his absence than in his presence. All this might have happened if no prayer had been offered, and it might not. The morning prayer, his confidence in the help of God all tended to encourage his heart, to strengthen him for the burden. And who shall say that his success was not a direct answer to prayer.—Young People's Paper.

The Field

From the Standpoint of a Layman.

Please allow me a small space in the columns of your valuable paper. I wish to express a few of my thoughts that pass through my mind, but first I wish to say a word or two endorsing Bro. J. V. Williams's letter in last issue of the Advocate. I indorse every word that he says in regard to the "Old Time Before the War Hallelujah" Revival held at Portsmouth, N. C., and I agree with him in what he says in regard to the old time shouting spirit, that some may think it is a sin.

It does seem to me that some people, yea, even "preachers who are called to preach the Gospel of Christ," think it is a sin and a disgrace to shout in church in this day and time. In this age a large quantity of our food as well as many other things is being adulterated. I believe that some people think and are trying to adulterate or substitute something else for religion. But brethren, it cannot be done, it will not mix, nothing but the pure article will fill its place.

I would that we had more preachers like Brother Williams, and more laymen that were in favor of this old-time shout, and we need more revivals and longer ones, and more fire in them, all over this land of ours. It seems that our Methodist preachers are in too big a hurry to rush through and close their protracted meetings.

It is now a thing of the past for a protracted meeting, especially at a country Methodist Church, to hold over five or six and more often from three to four days. It seems that the time for closing these meetings is set in the beginning of them. And whenever that time is up they are closed. Whether there is much interest or little. Whether it is a warm meeting or a cold one. Whether there is one penitent at the altar or a dozen.

The writer has witnessed in "ye olden time" not longer than twenty or twenty-five years ago, protracted meetings that lasted ten, fifteen, and twenty days, and not three and four converts, but twenty-five, thirty, and forty, would be the results of these meetings. And this was not witnessed in just one in a life time, but every year in the community. And I am sure that those people enjoyed religion much better in those days than our people in this age. When we did not have so many churches, and as fine ones, and not so many ministers, and when we had the old-time shout among the sisters and brethren, and when we had the amen corner and members of the church sit in them, and on entering the church these good old shouting brethren and sisters would kneel down and ask God's blessings on them, and the sermon, etc., and whenever any member violated the church laws they were arraigned before the church and tried, which is now a thing of the past, which we rarely ever see. It is now not what must a member do to remain in church, but what must he do to be turned out. Brethren, why are things thus? Is it because people are better Christians now than in olden times, and do not need so much preaching, and need not so much repentance, and so few sinners that they can be converted in three or four days. Nay, nay, vice versa.

The writer has attended protracted meetings in this community and in others, and it was the same thing in other sections ten or fifteen years or twenty years ago, that the protracted meetings (as they are called) were held and after about the third or fourth day, after getting the church revival up and getting them in good working trim, and get the old hard sinners convicted, and probably much concerned, and the time having arrived about that time, that the meeting was set to close. It is then closed, and many times with ten or fifteen earnest sinners at the altar to be left unconverted to drift back to the world as before, and the next year it is the same thing and the same work has to be done over with the same results.

I think this is detrimental to the church. Brethren, is it not time to bring about a change, and a change back to the old way, as there has been too much change. Whither are we drifting? Are we (as a brother remarked some time ago) drifting back into heathenism?—mighty fast it seems.

This is the way I see things.

A MEMBER.

Roper Station.

Our church in Roper has just been blessed with a great spiritual awakening. We held a meeting lasting from Sunday 17th, to Wednesday 27th. Rev. E. C. Glenn did the preaching, from the second day till the close. He presented a pure, plain gospel, and it was blessed with the power of God. About 50 professed conversion. Nearly as many more were reclaimed. Twenty-three have been baptized and thirty-eight added to the church. Almost the entire church membership pledged themselves to a more consecrated life. Such a revival has not been seen here for many years. The spirit of God filled the house. Parents and children side by side, grandfathers and grand-children bowed together and were made happy as the refreshing from the presence of the Lord was poured upon them.

The church had a mind to work. Strong men were moved to tears of penitence as they knelt at the altar, and prayed for pardon in the old-time way.

The Bible readings by Brother Glenn each morning service were especially edifying. His sermons were strong, clear and convicing.

We are gaining ground, and we give God the praise.

Siler City Circuit.

Dear Bro. Ivey:—On a recent visit to the beautiful home of Mr. H. C. Womble, near Fair Promise, I heard the first sermon preached, on the Siler City Circuit, by Rev. T. A. Sikes, who came to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Rev. Sandford, their much beloved pastor. He is a member of the Western North Carolina Conference, and had intended to ask for a transfer to our Conference this fall. So he left a field there and came here, and most fortunate are those good people in securing him.

I have heard sermons with more theology, eloquence and flowers; but the former are always too deep, and the eloquence too high for the average audience, while the flowers only please the eye and die and lose even their odor in the nasal organ. And so, as we walk the narrow path to heaven, neither by sight nor smell, we very much prefer sermons like Brothers Sike's and Oglesby's last Sunday here that came from the heart and reached the heart. So full are they of the Holy Spirit that they aid in convicting sinners and making church members stronger.

C. FRANK SILER.

The Fayetteville District Conference.

This Conference met in its thirty-ninth session in Jonesboro, N. C., on Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, July 21, 1904. Our young, progressive Presiding Elder, Rev. J. B. Hurley, presided throughout. All the pastors, excepting Rev. J. C. Humble, detained by family affliction, were present; so, also, four local preachers and thirty-five laymen.

Every pastor filled out a blank containing four tables, one each for Spiritual State, Missions, Finances and Church Property, and Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues. It was shown that there had been 218 conversions since the last Annual Conference, that there are 166 family altars, and that 749 copies of the Raleigh Christian Advocate are taken.

A fine spiritual influence pervaded the Conference, and both laymen and preachers participated freely in the discussions. Rev. J. C. Kilgo, D. D., Rev. J. W. Jenkins, Rev. M. T. Plyler, Rev. S. B. Turrentine, D. D., Rev. J. H. Rhodes, Rev. E. T. Poole, Prof. F. S. Alridge,, and Rev. T. N Ivey, D. D., were pleasant visitors.

Good sermons were preached by Revs. Welsh, Kilgo, Turrentine, Ivey, Smoot, and Frizelle. Carthage is the next place of meeting. One, Rev. H. C. Mouzon, was recommended for readmission.

The delegates to the Annual Conference are J. M. Lamb, B. Cole, J. T. Godfrey, and R. F. Wrenn. The Friday morning communion service, led by Rev. A. D. Betts, D. D., was a season of great refreshing.

The Fayetteville District High School property located here was ordered sold for graded school use.

Jonesboro delightfully entertained the Conference. Brother Hurley grows in influence and usefulness.

The Family

A Mother's Love.

Some day,
When others braid your thick brown hair
And drape your form in silk and lace,
When others call you "dear" and "fair,"
And hold your hands and kiss your face,
You'll not forget that far above
All others' is a mother's love.

Some day,
'Mong strangers in far distant lands,
In your new home beyond the sea,
When at your lips are holy hands,
And children playing at your knee,
Oh, then, as at your side they grow,
How I have loved you, you will know!

Some day,
Your daughter's voice, or smile, or eyes
My face will suddenly recall;
Then you will smile in sweet surprise,
And your soul unto mine will call
In the dear unforgotten prayer
Which we at evening used to share.

Some day,
A flower, a song, a word may be
A link between us strong and sweet;
Ah, then, dear child, remember me!
And let your heart to "mother" beat.
My love is with you everywhere—
You cannot get beyond my prayer.

Some day,
At longest it cannot be long,
I shall with glad impatience wait,
Amid the glory and the song.
For you before the Golden Gate,
After earth's parting and earth's pain
Never to part! Never again!

—American Messenger.

The Crisis.

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide
In the strife of truth with falsehood, for the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight,
Parts the goats upon the left hand and the sheep upon the right,
And the choice goes by forever 'twixt that darkness and that light.

Careless seems the great Avenger; history's pages but record
One death-grapple in the darkness 'twixt old systems and the Word;
Truth forever on the scaffold, Wrong forever on the throne,
Yet that scaffold sways the future, and, behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadows, keeping watch above His own.

Count me o'er earth's chosen heroes—they were souls that stood alone,
While the men they agonized for hurled the contumelous stone,
Stood serene, and down the future saw the golden beam incline
To the side of perfect justice, mastered by their faith divine,
By one man's plain truth to manhood and to God's supreme design.

By the light of burning heretics Christ's bleeding feet I track,
Toiling up new Calvaries ever with the cross that turns not back;
And the mounts of anguish number how each generation learned
One new word of that grand Credo which in prophet hearts hath burned.

Since the first man stood God-conquered with his face to heaven upturned.
For humanity sweeps onward; where today the martyr stands,
On the morrow crouches Judas with the silver in his hands;
Far in front the cross stands ready and the crackling fagots burn,
While the hooting mob of yesterday in silent awe return
To glean up the scattered ashes into history's golden urn.

—James Russell Lowell.

"Inasmuch. . . . . ."

It came in the mail today, the little blue, official card that is so familiar, even in the best regulated newspaper office, bearing the printed form as follows: "Sir: Pursuant to instructions from the Postmaster General, I beg leave to inform you that your paper addressed to ——— is not taken out, but remains dead in this office. ——— P. M. Reason:———. The reason to be filled in with a pen is sometimes: "Moved away," or "Refused," and occasionally the unmistakable "Don't want it any more," regardless of the state of the subscription account. On this card the reason was "Dead." The name filled in was that of an old lady, the address a county home in North Carolina. There was nothing startling in that, and yet, is not the common air about us heavy with tragedy?

There was once the same happy childhood that came to you and to me, except that in this case there was no mother to hold her close and "kiss the tears away." There came the school days; the orphan girl was ambitions and stood far toward "head" in her classes. In that day every dependent girl must sew or teach—or be dependent, so in due time came the little country schools and she boarded around until she had lived in many homes—she who never had one of her own. The methods of teaching changed; the woman in the school house by the road was busy making men and women out of the little ones on the high benches. She did not feel the change coming and change accordingly. The little saving melted away, for from her that hath not shall be taken. The eyes were too old now for the kind of sewing that would bring a living and the teacher went first into one home and then another, constantly moving on because the amount of work she was "good for" did not pay her board.

One day the spirit moved an old pupil in another State, to write her a long, chatty letter, recalling incidents of the days of the hard benches, telling of his business plans and prospects and giving her the detail of a trip abroad his boy had just taken. That letter went with her for years, even to the ward of the hospital when an operation was needful (this was performed free by the big-hearted surgeon), and it was read over and over in the days when there was nothing to do but look at the ceiling—and pray that she might not get well to go back. That letter was among the treasures she took to the county home—just a letter that a busy man, remembering the faded woman who had helped him over some hard places, took time to dictate. About it was a breath of rosemary.

Disagreeable? Yes, even as you or I may be when the right hand has lost its cunning and there is no one left of our very own, to give us care.

Not many months ago a message came: "I know you will be sorry to hear that Miss ——— was carried to the poor house today." Sorry! An occasional letter was sent. How miserably few they were, in the light of this blue card. Her last letter, of four closely written pages, in the cramped writing that was ladylike fifty years ago, dated May 23rd, is open on my desk. She never called the name of the place, and always dated from "Near ———." "We have several pretty roses growing here. How I wish I could send you some. A friend (blessings on her) sent me a nice scarlet fish geranium which is on the piazza and in the mornings the dear little mocking birds sing their sweet songs. The paper comes each week which you and I call your letter, and it is a letter to me. Pray daily for me that I may faint not nor grow weary in well doing and may we meet at Jesus' feet and cast our crowns."

This is not ancient history. The time is July, 1904; the community is Presbyterian and prosperous. What is the use in writing this when it is too late? No use, only there are other lonely hearts needing easement. Many there are who would love to change places with her and have their names checked off Life's long subscription list—Dead.— Presbyterian Standard.

Facts Concerning Yourself.

Each ear has four bones.
The body has about 500 muscles.
The human skull contains thirty bones.
The lower limbs contain thirty bones each.

Don't Worry—Try it This Week.

Let no day pass without personal, secret communication with God.

Begin each day by taking counsel from the word of God, if but one verse while you are dressing.

Put away all bitter feelings and broodings over slights or wrongs, no matter from whom received.

Have on your heart some person or cause for which you are pleading God's blessings each day.

Let no opportunity pass to say a kind word, or do some kind deed, or at least smile upon those you meet. Do this, not affectedly, but sincerely, as unto the Lord.

Guard well the door of your lips, that no unchaste word, jest, or story, no slander or cutting remarks, no irreverent or untruthful statement, shall pass out.

Remember each day that Christ will surely come, suddenly come; quickly come; and, it may be, this day will determine how his coming will find us, as it must find thousands.—Way of Faith.

Our Boys and Girls

Garysburg, N. C., July 12, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I will be one to raise one dollar for the orphans by Christmas as suggested by Lillian Burrus.

Who else will join the Christmas band?

Your unknown friend,
MOLLYE STEPHENSON.

Hillsboro, N. C., July 11, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little bit of a girl five years old. Papa takes the Advocate. I can't read the boys' and girls' letters, but mamma and sister read them to me. My sister is fourteen years old. I have a little pup for a pet. Good-bye.

Your little friend,
BLANCHE McDADE.

Conway, N. C., July 12, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a boy seventeen years old. My papa takes the Advocate and I enjoy reading it very much. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday, and my teacher is my Cousin Jessie Lassiter, and I like him very well. Our pastor is Rev. W. C. Merritt, and we like him fine, and this is his last year with us and we hate to see him leave very bad.

Now, I will answer Eva Pearson's question: Solomon was the wisest man.

I will now ask one: What were the names of the sons of Noah?

I will close for this time. Enclosed find ten cents for the Orphanage.

Winterville, N. C., July 22, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a small boy thirteen years old. I enclose ten cents for the orphans and will answer Julia E.Smith's question: Jesus was thirty years old when he began preaching.

Now I will ask one: How long was Noah building the ark, and what part of the Bible can it be found?

My sister takes the Advocate and I like to read the children's page.

Rev. B. E. Stanfield is our pastor.

Your unknown friend,
BRUTON BRYAN.

Winstcadville, N. C., July 12, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As my other letter escaped the waste-basket, I will try and write again. I will be one to raise one dollar for the orphans by Christmas. I am a little Methodist girl. I joined when six years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. Papa is superintendent. I have two brothers and one sister. My youngest brother is secretary.

I will answer Nellie Knight's question: Samson was the strongest man.

With love for orphans, I will close.
FLORENCE HUDNELL.

Maxton, N. C., July 11, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I will write you a letter for the first time. I am a little girl eleven years old. I go to the graded school, and I also go to Sunday-school. My teacher is Miss Flora Burns. I have four sisters and one brother. My sisters' names are Emma, Carrie, Lillie and Mary. I take my little sister to ride every evening. Our superintendent is Mr. J. E. Avent. Our pastor is Rev. N. H. D. Wilson, and we all like him. This is his last year here and I am sorry. My papa takes the Advocate and I enjoy reading the little boys' and girls' letters.

I will answer Lucy Herring's question: It was Daniel who was cast into the lion's den.

Now I will ask one: Where and what is the shortest verse in the Bible?

I am hoping to see this in print because it is my first one.

I must close, with best wishes to the Advocate.

Your little unknown friend,
MATTIE BELLE JONES.

Vandemere, N. C., July 11, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little 12-year-old girl. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday when it is good weather. My teacher is Miss Freddie Winstead, and our superintendent is Cousin Chas. A. Flowers. I like them very much. Our pastor is Rev. L. S. Etheridge, and I also like him very much.

I will answer Milton R. Pleasant's question: There are sixty-six books in the Bible.

I will close by asking a question: Who was made king after Saul's death?

Your friend,
MYRTLE MUSE.

Hertford, N. C., July 15, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl twelve years old. As I haven't written to the Advocate, I thought I would write a short letter. I have two sisters and three brothers younger than myself. My youngest brother is only seven weeks old. He is just as sweet as he can be.

My grandparents are all living. My mother and father are also living. My week-day school has been closed for sometime. My teacher's name is Miss Sertie Fleetwood. I liked her very much. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. My superintendent is Mr. W. A. Felton. He is a very good one. Cousin Sallie F. Winslow is my teacher, and I love her. My pastor is Rev. M. H. Tuttle, and I like him splendid.

How old was Methuselah when he died?

I will close with best wishes to the Advocate.

Wilmington District.

The second annual meeting of the W. F. M. Society of the Wilmington District was held in Zion Church, Brunswick County, June 23, 1904, with District Secretary, Mrs. Gibbons, in the chair and Mrs. E. L. Prince as Recording Secretary.

There were a goodly number present. Brother John, Presiding Elder of the District, and Brother Royal, pastor of Zion Church, greatly aided in making the meeting a success.

The various Auxiliaries were well represented, and the reports given by the delegates showed an increase in numbers, zeal and work. There were two session—morning and afternoon.

Papers were read by Mrs. John, Mrs. Blue and Mrs. E. L. Prince, of Wilmington.

Little Miss May Hall, Bright Jewel delegate from Grace Church, Wilmington, recited, very sweetly, "The Loaves and Fishes."

Mrs. Gibbons reviewed the work of the past year and urged the prompt payment, by all the Auxiliaries, of the pledge and special (Miss Lamb's scholarship at the Scarritt Bible and Training School) for this year.

She also read the "notes" from the annual meeting of the Women's Board held at Jacksonville, Fla.

We feel much encouraged by the meeting, and hope it will accomplish good and will cause more effective work throughout the District.

Mrs. Mary Hargrove's visit to Wilmington afforded us great pleasure. We had been looking forward to it with pleasure since last April when we were told of the treat in store for us at the annual meeting. She completely won the hearts of our people and we eagerly listened to the good things she told us in such a sweet and entertaining way.

We pray God to be with her at all times and to bless her in the fine work she is doing. We sincerely hope she will come again.

Cordially,
MRS. E. L. PRINCE.

A Growing Society.

The above report came in too late for last week's Advocate, but will no doubt be read with much interest this week. With the report of the annual meeting came an interesting letter from Mrs. Prince, which contains such an encouraging account of the Grace Church Auxiliary that I cannot refrain from giving a part of it. "We are doing well with our Auxiliary at Grace Church, having had twenty-two additions since April. We are enjoying the history of Foreign Missions by Mrs. F. A. Butler. We have a chapter read by one of the members at each meeting and find it a good way to learn more about this grand work we women are striving to accomplish."

Bright Jewels.

Among the reports read at the twenty-sixth annual session of the W. F. M. Society at Elizabeth City were the resolutions on Juvenile Work. It is hoped that all the Auxiliaries are familiar with these resolutions and are putting them in practice. Let us hear from the young people as well as those of larger growth.

Summer Ways.

It is sometimes the case that it is hard to keep up the interest of the Missionary Society during the summer, and yet I heard of an Auxiliary, the other day, whose July meeting was the best attended in several months. It is hoped that this bespeaks a continued interest in the fall, and more enthusiastic meetings. But while on the subject of summer shortcomings, just a word about summer dues: Let us keep this quarter up to its requirements. Payments have to be met all the year around.

LACE CURTAINS BY MAIL.

The 1905 catalogue of T. G. Nicholson & Co., of Chicago, shows a number of new and beautiful designs which are certain to prove attractive to any reader of the Raleigh Christian Advocate who is interested in curtains and lace bed apparel. The District Secretary.

The Great Father has been lavish in His gifts to women and the varied phases of the life and work in which she is called to minister make great demands upon them all. She must have strength, intelligence, patience, prudence, and with them the refining, purifying influences which Christianity alone can give. The ideal District Secretary must not only possess the characteristics named, but, also, the courage to meet and refute the criticisms and objections she may hear when traveling her District to organize new Auxiliaries and revive languishing ones.

HER OPPORTUNITIES

Her opportunities for faithful service and fine results are large in scope and number, not only in the regular routine work, but, also, in the impress of her Godly, consecrated character upon the minds of all with whom she comes in contact. Especially should she take advantage of every privilege of looking after the children and young people, for on the proper training of them depends the future prosperity of all church work, and this is particularly true of the Home Mission Society. Tact and sound judgment, softened and strengthened by the Christian graces, will enable her to know just how to prepare the soil in which she must carefully deposit the seed for a future wealth of golden fruitage; and she must be willing to "sow beside all waters."

PROMPTNESS AND THOROUGHNESS.

Another important way to make a salient and lasting impression on the people, is in promptness and thoroughness, joined with an enthusiasm for the accomplishment of the very best results. The work in the Auxiliaries, as a general thing, is but the reflex of the District Secretary. How necessary, then, that she be scrupulous in her correspondence and every little detail of duty as well as in the larger interests! None but the Blessed Spirit knows how she prays and plans, and plans and prays, for guidance and for the consecration of all her powers; that she may faithfully and worthily bear the responsibility of filling the most important office in the Society.

DISCOURAGEMENTS.

As we look upon the opportunities of the faithful District Secretary and the grand achievements which are possible to her, hope revives and we feel an exquisite thrill of pleasure; but when we turn to the real, living disadvantages with which she has to contend, there is a painful pause, a premonition of failure that sickens the heart.

Even when the work is promising, there is hard, earnest effort in every department; how fearful when she hears objections and criticisms, and there arise barriers which she feels are almost impossible to be scaled! How difficult to "possess her soul in patience"—to await a break in the barriers through which there may shine a ray of hope!

In some localities there remain doubts as to "the right of way" of the Home Mission work, many clinging to the Parsonage Aid Societies, and sincere in their belief. The District Secretary appreciates their loyalty to the old regime and finds it hard to come in direct opposition to their opinions, however strongly she may be convinced of the profound necessity for doing so.

There is the disadvantage, too—the obstacle—of pastors not in sympathy who never encourage, by word or deed, the organization of an Auxiliary. We have known the appeals of Secretaries to be met in these words: "We have a debt on our church which our women of the Aid Society are helping to pay." Again: "My sister, we already have just as many Societies as we can manage—have our hands full." How can the influence of a pastor be overcome? Very few can undertake such a task.

And sometimes when trips have been arranged, the heavenly Father places His hand upon her in affliction, and while she suffers there is a halt in the work.

May the District Secretaries of this Conference receive a pentecostal endowment of physical, mental and spiritual power, that they may be able to conserve their opportunities for the glory of God and the betterment of mankind!

MRS. B. F. DIXON.

I am glad to publish this admirable article from the pen of one of our finest District Secretaries, and kindly consented for it to grace our column.

BETTER THAN GOLD.

"It was troubled for several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H. "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicines I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run-down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. WARRENTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

How to spend more than a day in reaching Rich Square, to take in any appreciable part of the District Conference, and be in the Advocate office by 9 o'clock on the morning of the third day, was the problem I was trying to solve as I left Raleigh at 11 o'clock a. m. on last Wednesday. I concluded to leave the S. A. L. at the little city of Gumberry, run down on the short line to Jackson, and then trust to Providence in making the remaining fourteen miles which stretched between Jackson and the "Square." I soon found out that I was not entitled to any patent on this plan, for I found at Gumberry that three other preachers had approved the same plan—W. W. Rose, G. D. Langston, and Dr. L. L. Nash.

The first thing I saw after reaching Jackson was the expansive face of E. E. Rose, the hustling bishop of Northampton Circuit. If I imagined that face to be a perplexed interrogation point, asking, "What will I do with all these preachers to-night," the imagination either played me false or the hospitality of Rose achieved a great victory, for no journeying preachers ever met a warmer or more practical welcome. Brother Rose was exceedingly kind in making arrangements for getting Dr. Nash and myself off almost at once. And this was through the kindness of Bro. J. S. Grant, who is a true son of a true father, the lamented Rev. William Grant. Brother Grant allowed us the use of his excellent horse and buggy. The buggy was a H. M. T., and I never more fully appreciated the appropriateness of the name. Dr. Nash beguiled me with his flow of philosophy, science, and theology, all seasoned with that bon hommie for which he is noted. But do you know that I was not Christian Scientist enough to banish the very realistic impression that I had only the iron rod on the left side as a seat? But Dr. Nash is not to be blamed for weighing nearly three hundred pounds and thereby proving himself to be a mighty, space-crowding piece of flesh in a H. M. T. buggy.

But ah, what a treat Mother Nature gave us as we drove over those level Northampton roads! The sky smiled on earth and earth gave back an answering smile. There was a sea of blue above and a sea of green beneath. I thought of poor Sidney Lanier and wondered if he, by looking on the stretches of corn and cotton fields which seemed to be exulting in their exuberance of swelling life and shouting their greetings to us, could not have touched a stronger chord in his matchless poem, "Corn." Within the last few weeks I have seen different sections of the State, and I feel like saying that never before have I seen such a glowing prophecy of phenomenal crops. Our people should be grateful to God, but I am afraid that a good crop year is not always marked by overflowing revivals of religion.

Were you ever in the home of Mr. J. W. Weaver, of Rich Square? Did you ever experience the kindness of his Methodist wife? Then you can realize how comfortable I was for a few hours in that home.

I found Elder Smith enthusiastic over the prospects of an interesting, helpful District Conference. Like a sensible man, though, he did not base any hopes on a large attendance of delegates. There were six preachers absent, five of whom were kept away by sickness. The difficulty in reaching Rich Square forespoke many gaps in the lay delegation. But those who were present lacked nothing in earnestness.

At night, the beautiful church, which, by the way, was dedicated on the Sunday following by Bishop A. Coke Smith, was filled by attentive congregation. Rev. B. C. Thompson was the preacher. The sermon was marked by mental and spiritual strength. It bore the "hammer marks."

I spent a pleasant night in the parsonage, which is a new, roomy, attractive building. But that stalwart son of Wesley, standing six feet, four in his socks—Rev. J. T. Stanford, P. C. Rich Square Circuit—was only a boarder in that nice parsonage, occupied now by the family of Mr. Martin, whose wife showed us much kindness. Stanford ought to get married. He is too valuable a preacher to be simply "boarding." He has one of the best circuits in the Conference, and his people look upon his appointment to that circuit as a good fit.

THE CONFERENCE.

Conference opened promptly at 9.30 on Thursday morning. The Presiding Elder's report of the District was most satisfactory. There has been marked development along nearly every line. The spirit of church building seems to be specially strong. Rev. S. A. Cotton is building at Enfield a new church which will cost $3,000; Rev. B. C. Thompson is building a new one at Ahoskie; W. C. Merritt, one at Conway; Rev. H. A. Humble one at Littleton. Rev. T. H. Sutton has three new churches to dedicate this fall. The church at Hamilton cost $2,500.

Very few revivals have been held, but the preachers are preparing for a vigorous campaign. The collections are in good shape. Rev. G. F. Smith, as Presiding Elder, is proving himself a "master workman." He has the love and confidence of preachers and people. There is one fact in Brother Smith's administration which is strengthening himself and the whole District. He gives the charges as much of his time as possible, not stinting them in sermons preached. I think he told me that he had preached thirty odd sermons in fifty-five days.

THE DINNER

At noon the ample dinner was spread under the oaks on the green. This dinner bespoke great prosperity and warm hearts. Bro. F. L. Church was there. You remember I had something to say of his relationship to the open dinner at Sunbury. I saw him eating like a typical Methodist saint at Rich Square. I enjoyed the spectacle. He was over that spell of indigestion contracted at Sunbury.

Bishop Smith, who came on the noon train, occupied the chair during the afternoon session. The talk he made on opening the service will live a long while in the hearts of those who heard it.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS

It is known to our readers that Warrenton District bore off the prize of $25.00 for the largest number of new subscribers to the Advocate. Rev. W. C. Merritt sent in the largest number; Rev. B. C. Thompson came next. Of the 1,400 new subscribers received since Conference, Warrenton District sent in nearly three hundred. With such a record you may look for fine reports from those preachers at Conference. I presume that the disposition of the prize will be made known in the report to be furnished by the capable Secretary, J. M. Flythe.

RICH SQUARE.

This charming little place needs special mention. It has a population of only about three hundred. Yet there is as much thrift and culture in this town to the population as can be found anywhere in the State. They are preparing for a fine school to open in the fall. The people believe in nice church buildings, and in educating their boys and girls. Here is the home of the Roanoke-Chowan Times, and I am sorry that my limited stay prevented us from visiting the office. The Methodists at Rich Square are loyal and enterprising. They have a wise leader in their preacher.

I was compelled to leave on Thursday afternoon. Through the kindness of Brother Boone, I was saved the trouble of riding fourteen miles through the country to Jackson and then eight miles to Seaboard, there to take the train and after a sleepless night to reach Raleigh at daybreak on Friday morning. Through the kindness of Rev. J. T. Stanford, I was enabled to ride only eight miles through the country to Kelford, to take the train at 6.30 p. m., and at 12 o'clock on Thursday night to reach Raleigh.

WILMINGTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

It was our intention to visit this Conference, but circumstances over which we had no control, prevented us from carrying out our intention. We presume that the Secretary will furnish the Advocate with a detailed report of the proceedings. In the meantime, however, we will give some points, gathered from the Wilmington Messenger.

The Conference was largely attended by both preachers and delegates. The following eight charges have already paid the Foreign and Domission assessment in full: Grace Church, Bladen Street, Market Street, Magnolia Circuit, Clinton Circuit, Elizabeth Circuit, Whiteville Circuit and Bladen Circuit. The other nine charges of the District have paid in part, and the Wilmington District will undoubtedly be in the very front rank this year. Four years ago only two charges of the District paid the missionary assessment in full; this year every charge in the District will pay in full. To the Presiding Elder, Rev. R. B. John, and his efficient District Missionary Secretaary, Rev. A. S. Barnes, must be largely given the credit for the progress made.

Dr. Yates spoke for Trinity College, and especially emphasized the importance of the Woman's Annex that was intended to give to the women of the State the highest educational advantages within its borders. He assured the Conference that no conflict was to exist between the Woman's Annex and Greensboro Female College, or Littleton or Louisburg, but that the annex was to supplement the work done at these institutions.

Presiding Elder John called attention to the fact that a large number of poorer boys and girls within the bounds of the Wilmington District were unable to attend any of the schools now established because of financial inability and lack of preparation. The Conference was urged to take hold of this question and establish an Industrial School for Boys and Girls—a school where they would be able to learn something else besides books; a school where they would be able to learn how to do things, to run a truck farm, to run a dairy, to cook a good dinner, to keep a neat house, to make a good home. This proposition from the Presiding Elder struck a responsive chord, and after some animated discussion, the following committee was appointed to devise ways and means for such a school and report to the next District Conference: N. M. Watson, A. S. Barnes, W. L. Wright, J. F. Garrell, and T. N. Hubbard.

The report of the Committee on Sunday-school Work showed that great progress was being made. Hardly a church can be found that does not have a school of some sort.

Saturday morning the report on Epworth Leagues was presented, showing that in this department of the work very little was being done either in the District or in the State. The committee recommended the appointment of a District Conference and an organizer for the District, and Rev. E. McWhorter was elected to fill the place.

The following lay delegates were elected to represent the District at the next session of the Annual Conference which convenes at Henderson, November 30, 1904: Cicero H. Johnson, W. B. Cooper, R. H. Beery, and J. H. Drew. Alternates: H. F. Schulken and J. E. Durham.

Rev. W.K. Strother, A. M., an alumnus of Southwestern University, has been elected President of the Alexander Collegiate Institute, and under his management the prospects for this institution are very flattering.

Methodist Mention

State.

The Collegian (Louisburg Female College) is very attractive in its August dress and menu.

Rev. D. H. Tuttle is visiting relatives in Caldwell County. He preached at Marvin on last Sunday.

Rev. M. M. McFarland desires us to state that his post-office address is Mebane, N. C., and not Burlington, N. C.

Elise Circuit, Rev. J. W. Hoyle, P. C., is to have two new churches this fall—Pleasant Hill and Mount Carmel.

Rev. and Mrs. G. R. Rood, Millbrook Circuit, have returned from a very pleasant trip North. Mrs. Rood's health has been greatly benefited by the change.

The Edenton Street pulpit was filled on last Sunday morning by Dr. R. H. Whitaker, and in the evening by Dr. E. M. Battis, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Charlotte Observer speaks in high terms of praise of two sermons preached by Prof. J. F. Bivins in Trinity Methodist Church, Charlotte, N. C., on Sunday, July 24.

William H., son of Rev. John H. Hall, of Rockingham, having passed the required examinations, left last week for Annapolis Academy, which he enters as mid-shipman.

The Y. M. C. A. rooms, of Louisburg, N. C., open daily for the entertainment of its members. This Association is doing a great work in Louisburg and other parts of Franklin County.

We extend our sympathy to our worthy confrere, Editor Blair, of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, who has been and is still too ill to attend the District Conferences. We hope for him a speedy recovery.

Rev. A. J. Parker, Roanoke Island, has taken the agency for the Methodist School to be established in Elizabeth City. He has been out only a few days but has secured over $1,000 in cash and subscriptions.

Rev. W. L. Dawson has been appointed to take charge of the North Catawba Circuit, W. N. C. Conference, until Conference. This charge was made vacant by the death of Rev. J. D. Carpenter.

Fletcher Fink, son of J. C. Fink, of Concord, N. C., has received an appointment to the engineering corps of the Panama Canal. Mr. Fink is a graduate of Trinity College and is a most excellent young man.

Quite a large number of hands are at work on Greensboro Female College. The old hill is showing life, and after the opening of the institution in October, thousands of hearts will rejoice that the beloved ship has at last cleared the bar.

We have met the new preacher for Roberdel Circuit. He is a very pleasant man, and well equipped for the work, and we congratulate our friends upon their success in securing the services of so good a preacher as Rev. Mr. Kilgore. —Anglo-Saxon.

Mr. B. L. Culbreth, one of our worthy Methodist laymen of Dunn, N. C., and agent for the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Society, has been so successful in writing policies that the company has given him a trip (all expenses paid) to the St. Louis Exposition.

The pulpit of the First Methodist Church was filled yesterday morning by Rev. Mr. Pugh. He is a young man not yet having completed his course of theology in the Seminary, but preached an able sermon to a good-sized congregation, and was listened to with the closest attention. At the evening services Rev. J. E. Underwood preached. —Elizabeth City Economist.

The St. Louis Epworth League Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has inaugurated a Sunday-school movement in Japan. Rev. K. Milto will travel through the empire and organize Sunday-schools.

Rev. J. H. Shore, Franklinton Circuit, is assisting Rev. J. A. Dailey, Milton Circuit, in a meeting at New Hope. Brother Shore is in the midst of old parishioners, among whom his memory is green and his influence strong.

The Cotton Growers' Association, which meets in Raleigh this week, has brought a great many farmers together. Among them is that sturdy Cincinnatus of Chatham County, Hon. J. W. Atwater, who of course, paid the editor a most pleasant call.

We are glad to know that the health of Dr. E. A. Yates is improving. After a sojourn of a week or so at Beaufort he spent a few days in Wilmington, the guest of Mayor W. E. Springer, and then attended the Wilmington District Conference at Southport.

We have the following note from Rev. G. W. Starling, Buckhorn Circuit: "We have just closed a very good meeting at Holly Springs. Rev. J. M. Culbreth was with us four days and rendered very efficient service. One of the visible results of the meeting was twelve added to the church."

Mr. F. Osgood Smith, son of Bishop A. Coke Smith, will enter the Theological Department of Vanderbilt University in the fall. Mr. Smith is an A. B. graduate of Randolph-Macon, and for the past year has been instructor in the Randolph-Macon Academy at Front Royal.

Rev. E. C. Sell, Snow Hill, N. C., writes: "Our third Quarterly Conference was held at Tabernacle, July 23. Rev. F. D. Swindell, D. D., was on time. We were all glad to see him. He is no stranger here. He preached three pointed, pertinent, practical sermons for us—sermons in which the great theme of salvation was made prominent, edifying his audiences and impressing all with his absolute sincerity and profound faith in the Gospel. He is one of our best Presiding Elders."

Rev. Hugh Paylor, of the Virginia Conference, would like to see two resolutions enforced: The first is to require every retiring pastor to furnish his successor with an itemized list of the contributors to the benevolent collections, with the amount given by each; and the second is to require every pastor to report through the columns of the Conference organ the state of his work, and whatever other information in regard to it that the Conference should know, at least once a year.

Louise Cottage at Willoughby Beach, Ocean View, Va., is an enterprise of that indefatigable worker, Rev. J. M. Rhodes, President of Littleton Female College. The cottage is a part of the college, and is intended as a place of rest, recreation and Bible study, for those who desire it, for our former pupils and others closely identified with us in our field work, at a cost to them of $1.25 per day or $8.00 per week, including furnished room, board, bath suit and boating facilities with an experienced boatman. Those desiring to take a special short course in Bible study can do so under a competent instructor.

On last Saturday afternoon there passed away in the town of Louisburg an elect woman, the news of whose death will cause deep sorrow among a host of friends all over the State. Mrs. Pauline Hill Brooks, wife of Dr. Jno. R. Brooks, was a choice character in North Carolina womanhood. She was attractive in appearance, mentally, socially and spiritually cultured, and of great force and usefulness in Christian work. For some time she had been lingering among the shadows. She knew that she could not live long. She was resigned and patient, and her latter and last experience on these earthly illustrated finely the triumph of Christian grace. The funeral was held in Louisburg on last Sunday afternoon. The bereaved husband and other relatives have the deep sympathy of many friends and brethren.

It is claimed by the Pan-Presbyterian Council, that has just closed its session in Liverpool, that there are now in the world's Presbyterianism 5,137,328 communicants. The last Methodist Ecumenical Conference in 1901 claimed 7,659,285 Methodist communicants throughout the world.

The death on July 16 of Dr. Samuel Lauder, President of Williamston Female College, will bring sadness to many throughout the whole connection. He was one of the best educators in the whole South, and his impress on Williamston Female College, of which he was president for so many years, was deep and lasting. He was our first teacher. We learned to love him, and in his death we experience a personal bereavement. His influence will long live.

Just or Unjust Censure.

During the Master's sojourn on earth He loosed a poor woman who had been bound by "a spirit of infirmity for eighteen years." This was on the Sabbath day. The ruler of the synagogue arose, armed with his favorite texts and platitudes, and rebukes the innocent multitudes. He tells them it is a gross instance of Sabbath breaking for them to be healed on that sacred day, when they might just as well be healed on any other of the six days of the week. He had not the courage to address Jesus himself, nor the candor to address the poor healed woman; but preaches at them both by rebuking the innocent multitudes.

This conduct of the ruler of the synagogue reminds us of certain men who rush into print to decry church and court, thus bringing these institutions into contempt and weaken their hold upon the popular mind. The church and judiciary are separate and distinct from an ecclesiastic and judge, and the former should not be criticised for the conduct of the latter. If the latter are guilty of maladministration, they should be held up for censure and not the former. It is nothing short of base cowardice to hurl opprobrium at any cause because of the fault of one of its adherents. Let all blame rest where it ought to rest. The church should never be condemned for the acts of certain members, nor the courts for the conduct of a judge. "The powers that be are ordained of God," but at times unworthy persons represent the power. They should receive merited rebuke that dignity and integrity of power should be maintained. It is indeed refreshing at times to find men, as of late, who in the spirit of candor, and wise discrimination can rise above mere prejudice and discuss an issue upon its merits, placing blame where it should rest.

HOME TREATMENT FOR CANCER.

Dr. D. M. Bye's Balmy Oils, for cancer, are a positive and painless cure. Most cases are treated at home, without the service of a physician. Send for book telling what wonderful things are being done by simply anointing with oils. The combination is a secret; gives instant relief from pain, destroys the cancer microbes and restores the patient to health. Thousands of cancers, tumors, catarrh, ulcers, piles and malignant diseases cured in the last ten years. If not afflicted, cut this out and send it to some suffering one. Address, Dr. D. M. Lesson for August 7, 1904.

God Taking Care of Elijah.

(1 Kings 17:1-6.)

Golden Text: He careth for you. (1 Peter 5:7.)

A Character Study of the Prophet.—Elijah is one of those rugged figures who stand out in the history of God's chosen people as beacon lights amid the darkness of an almost universal moral degeneracy and spiritual declension.

He is introduced suddenly into the sacred narrative and no particulars areg iven concerning his parentage or early history. In his physical aspect he was long-haired and roughly robed (2 Kings 1:8). He carried a sheepskin girdle and mantle (1 Kings 18:46; 19:13), and was "in appearance as well as spirit a type of the true Hebrew seer."

The Occasion of His Flight.—Under the lead of Ahab and his infamous queen Jezebel, Israel was being fast steeped in idolatry of the grossest kind. Something was needed to stem the current of evil, and at this juncture, Elijah, the Tisbite (so called from Thisbe, in Naphtali, now Teitaba, which was probably his birthplace), appeared before Ahab and predicted a drought which should last for years. (In Luke 4:25 and James 5:17 we are told that it lasted for three years and six months.)

It was as the spokesman of God that Elijah predicted this drought, but Ahab apparently held Elijah himself responsible as the cause of this national affliction, and it was to avoid the murderous hate of the enraged monarch that Elijah, at the divine command betook himself into hiding.

By the Brook Cherith.—Elijah's first retreat was by the brook Cherith, which was apparently a torrent-bed from which, as the drought continued, the waters gradually dried up. While here Elijah was fed by the ravens, a statement which, though often questioned, there seems to be no good ground for denying. It is true that the same consonants in Hebrew which with certain vowel points mean ravens, may with other vowel points be translated merchants or Arabians. But it seems more reasonable to think of ravens as frequenting the torrent-bed of Cherith than merchants or Arabians, and God could just as surely use the ravens for the support of his faithful prophet as any other means whatsoever.

Elijah at Zarephath.—From the brook Cherith Elijah was divinely directed to Zarephath (known in later times as Sarpeta.) Josephus tells us this city lay between Tyre and Sidon.

The widow woman to whose home Elijah was sent, though probably a Phoenician by race, seems to have recognized in Elijah a prophet of Jehovah, and readily acquiesced in doing his bidding. The result of her obedience was the preservation of the lives of herself and her son as well as the prophet through the rest of the drought, and in the end this widow woman seems to have become a believer in the God of Israel. (See 1 Kings 17:24.)

Practical Lessons.—1. God's constant care for his faithful children is strongly emphasized in the story of Elijah's experience. This divine care is still exercised over all those that love the Lord in sincerity and truth.

2. Human co-operation is often used in fulfilling the divine purposes. The widow woman was an instrument in the hands of God for the preservation of the life of his faithful prophet Elijah, and because she became a responsive instrument, she afterwards received an untold blessing in her own home life.

CURES ECZEMA, ITCHING HUMORS, PIMPLES AND CARBUNCLES.—COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) is now recognized as a certain and sure cure for eczema, itching skin, humors, scabs, scales, watery blisters, pimples, aching bones or joints, boils, carbuncles, prickling pain in the skin, old, eating sores, ulcers, etc. Botanic Blood Balm taken internally, cures the worst and most deep-seated cases by enriching, purifying and vitalizing the blood supply to the skin. Botanic Blood Balm is the only cure, to stay cured, for these awful, annoying skin troubles. Heals every sore and gives the rich glow of health to the skin. Builds up the broken down body and makes the blood red and nourishing. Especially advised for chronic, old cases that doctors, patent medicines and hot springs fail to cure. Druggists, $1. To prove B. B. B. cures, sample sent free and prepaid by writing Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble, and free medical advice sent in sealed letter.

I CURE CANCER.

Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No knife. No plaster. No caustics. No sloughing oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure into nal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment;" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else is the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheapiy, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

How Things Now Stand.

After the reports of the Treasurer and Superintendent at the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees, and from the superintendent of our building, Mr. W. E. Springer, moved that the amount needed for the finishing of the building ($10,000) be borrowed. After a full and free discussion, the motion was changed to authorizing the borrowing of $4,000 to bring us up to the heating plant.

All of us disliked to go in debt; but the necessity was urgent. Should that great building remain closed through another winter while hundreds of little needy children were out in the cold? That was the question. An urgent appeal was made, both with tongue and pen, to save us from going in debt. But the friends did not respond. A set of noble, liberal men came to our relief. Hon. R. N. Page, the president of the Board of Trustees, and Messrs. W. E. Springer, B. B. Adams and J. A. Long, of the Board, and Mr. Henry A. Page, propose to furnish the money on condition that the building be completed right away and filled with orphans just as soon as they are provided for. We are to pay them out of the overplus after defraying current expenses.

Isn't that noble. These friends are not afraid to trust the Methodist Church. Will the Church betray that trust? Never! Let the Church wake up and pay it off at an early day. God bless these brethren!

Jonesboro-Gibson-Rockingham.

Rising at 3.15 a. m., on Thursday, July 21, I made for Jonesboro and dropped down at the parsonage about 7 a. m. The Presiding Elder was lodging there—two fat ones they—Pope and Hurley. My! Well Pope ought to be bulky if his wife feeds him all the time like she fed us for breakfast. It may be that the neighbors sent in for the occasion. I was ready for anything that should turn up. The Presiding Elder gave me a chance at the morning session. He loves our Orphanage. Will Bailey says—he of the Biblical Recorder—that I should says "Alphantage" if I wish it to take with the people. A shake hands with the brethren and good dinner at Brother Buchanans, and I was off with the president of Trinity College, the pastor of West Market Street M. E. Church, Greensboro, and the pastor of our church at the University, for Gibson. At Aberdeen the accomplished president of Greensboro Female College joined us. That was a goodly company to be in—Kilgo, Turrentine, Plyler, with Mrs. Robertson for our bright, particular star On the evening of Friday the Orphanage had a hearing. The President of our Board of Trustees, Hon. R. N. Page, led off in such a fine speech that the Conference, by a unanimous vote, requested him to repeat it at our Annual Conference. The orphan boy brought up the rear. A pleasant stay in the parsonage with Brother Perry and his interesting family, and then away to Rockingham. Three talks in that dear old town and two nights and ad ay in the elegant home of Bro. John Ledbetter was restful indeed. J. H. Hall is himself among that cultured people. Of course Dr. Ivey will write up the Conferences. He can do it right.

A New Departure.

The Rev. Jno. N. Cole, the new Presiding Elder of the Rockingham District, not only set apart an hour for the consideration of the Orphanage work, but put a layman up to talk for it. A better selection could not have been made. How I wished while he was talking that I could have him with me for a month to talk that way. By the way, let me whisper a secret in the ears of the other Presiding Elders: There is many a layman in your district that would gladly speak a word for this infant institution. It would put it in a new light. Try it next year. Brother Presiding Elders.

Marriages

WADE—WILLIS.—At the home of the bride's parents, near Morehead City, N. C., June 22, 1904, Mr. Thomas Duffy Wade to Miss Lucy K. Willis, Rev. R. H. Willis officiating.

THOMAS — TAYLOR.—At New Hope Methodist Church, near Milton, N. C., June 29, 1904, Mr. Archibald Thomas to Miss Martha Taylor, both of the vicinity, Rev. J. A. Dailey officiating.

Obituaries

Obituaries containng not more than one hundred and fifty words are inserted free of charge. Those sending obituaries containg over one hundred and fifty words are requested to send with the obituary one cent for every word in excess. Unless this rule is observed the obituary must be cut down to the proper limit.

MURRAY.—Mrs. Mary W. Murray (widow of S. M. Murray, who died January 26th), departed this life on June 18th, after a lingering illness of five or six months. She was a great sufferer, but was patient and submissive and has gone to her reward. She and her husband were members of Leah's M. E. Church, South, Youngsville Circuit.
PASTOR.

CHEATHAM.—Annie Elizabeth, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Cheatham, of Charlotte, N. C., died at the home of her grandfather, Mr. W. B. Fleming, at Ridgeway, N. C., June 15, 1904.

Little Annie was a sufferer all of her short life of about five months, and in the early morning of June 15th, her sufferings ended and she went to be with the angels in the home of the good. May God bless and comfort the young parents.
L. M. CHAFFIN.

ARNOLD.—After a sojourn of more than sixty-eight years among kind friends on earth, Anna Bell Arnold fell asleep June 15, 1904, and went to join loved ones who had gone home to glory. She had been in declining health for the past six years, but with great patience, she endured afflictions and the end was peace. Sister Arnold loved her church and will be greatly missed by all who knew her. For fifty years she had loved the Lord and been a faithful member of Cokesbury church, from which all that was mortal of her was laid to rest to await the resurrection morn. She is not dead, but sleepeth sleepth. Cheer up dear friends, we may all see her again. All the bereft ones have my profound sympathy in this sad hour.
G. W. STARLING.

DECKER.—Miss Margaret Aurelia Decker, after more than three years of suffering, obtained a happy release through the will of Providence on May 10th, 1904, and passed into the presence of the redeemed hosts on the other side. She was converted and joined Hay Street Church in 1901, and as long as she was able, was a faithful attendant. In health she had been industrious, upright, and consecrated to duty; in sickness she was patient and uncomplaining; in the hour of death she was unafraid.

The mother, to whom her life had been lovingly consecrated, with two sisters and a brother, still survive. To each of them she leaves the rich legacy of a life of sacrifice and service. Rest to the tired hands!
THOS. A. SMOOT.

GASKILL.—Lucretia Gaskill (nee Rollins) was born near Pollocksville, Jones County, in 1829, and died June 4, 1904, at Mr. Scotts Caroons, Pamlico County, N. C.

She joined the M. E. Church, South, in the summer of 1850, and lived a consistent member till death. She was married to Thomas Gaskill in 1852. This union was blessed with five daughters; three of them are living—Mrs. B. W. Barnes, Mrs. Scott Caroon and Mrs. E. D. Paris. Two of them are dead—Mrs. P. D. Hardy and Mrs Claton Rollins. Her husband died January 1, 1866. She wrought well for her children. She was a true wife, mother, neighbor and friend. For one and a half years this writer has been with Sister Gaskill much. She was true and loyal to God and the church. May the good Lord sustain the bereaved ones.
F. S. BECTON.

LAWRENCE.—Julian C. Lawrence was born January 4, 1890, and departed this life June 6, 1904. He professed religion one year ago and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Murfreesboro, N. C., and remained faithful until the end. Julian was one among the best and brightest boys. He was a pure flower in our midst whose fragrance all enjoyed. He did not have an enemy, but was loved by all who knew him. He was always at his place in Sunday-school and preaching service. The writer remembers very vividly how a few days before his death he was called on to lead in prayer, and how he responded by offering a most beautiful prayer. No brighter Christian boy ever lived than he. No one who knew him can doubt that he is in the land of eternal rest. May God comfort the bereaved.
P. D. WOODALL.

CHEATHAM.—Lurline Elizabeth, daughter of Claude C. and Cora Cheatham, Youngsville, N. C., died of cholera infantum on Wednesday, June 15, aged seven months and twenty-one days.

Another flower plucked by the Father's hand and transplanted in the sweet fields of Eden, where the frosty touch of death cannot blight. Another lamb transplanted from earth to folds above, where the cruel hand of disease cannot smite.

The flower becomes more beautiful, the lamb enters life eternal, and heaven comes nearer to earth, and its ties increase and strengthen. Doubtless were the veil drawn aside, Lurline could be seen beckoning parents and other loved ones to follow her. Be comforted, dear ones, with the thought that she is forever safe from the enemy's touch and that you can, some day, take her into everlasting association.
PASTOR.

PATRICK.—A shadow fell over the little town of Hookerton on the afternoon of June 14, 1904, when the death angel entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Patrick and claimed their darling boy, Wesley, for his own.

He was three years and ten months old. For some time he had not been well, but the immediate cause of his death was acute gastritis, which worked its course in the brief space off our days.

Wesley was an unusually attractive child; his beautiful blue eyes, his handsome features and winning manners made him all that heart could wish. The home has been so sad and lonely since he left. Dear ones have listened for the merry voice and looked for the sweet form of Wesley, but the tender earthly bud has been transplanted to adorn the paradise of God, to grow and blossom in the radiance of the Saviour's smile.

May the Saviour comfort the bereaved father, mother and sisters, and may his spirit lead us to meet him in heaven.
ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

BOILS

PYRAMIDS OF PAIN

Boils show the blood is in a riotous, feverish condition, or that it has grown too weak and sluggish to throw off the bodily impurities, which then concentrate at some spot, and a carbuncle or boil is the result. To one already enfeebled by disease, boils seem to come with more frequency, causing the intensest pain and greatest danger to the already weak and debilitated sufferer. All skin eruptions, from the sometimes fatal carbuncle to the spiteful little cat-boil, are caused by bad blood, and the only way to avoid or get permanently rid of them is to purify and build up the deteriorated, polluted blood, and counteract the humors and poisons; and nothing will do this so quickly and thoroughly as S. S. S., which is the acknowledged king of blood purifiers and greatest of all tonics. Where the blood has become impoverished and is poor and thin, no medicine acts so promptly in building up and restoring its richness, purity and strength. The time to cure a boil is before it develops, when it is in a state of incubation or formation in the blood; for boils are, after all, only the impurities and poisons bubbling up through the skin, and this will continue in spite of poulticing and lancing till the blood gets rid of its accumulated poison. The way to stop boils is to attack them in the blood, and this is what S. S. S. does. All danger of boils is past when the blood has been thoroughly purified and the system cleansed of all morbid, impure matter. If you are subject to boils, then the same causes that produced them last season will do so this, and the sooner you begin to put your blood and system in good order the better the chance of going through the spring and summer season without boils or other painful and irritating skin eruptions. S. S. S. is guaranteed purely vegetable, and can be taken with perfect safety by old and young, and without harm to the most delicate constitution. It is mild and pleasant in its action, and unequaled as a cure for boils and kindred eruptions. Write us if you would like medical advice or other information.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Allegheny, Pa., June 11, 1903.

From the age of twenty or thirty I was sorely afflicted with large, awful boils on my face and body. As soon as they would heal up in one place they would break out in another part of the body, and this continued for ten years. I tried everything I could hear of to get relief, but nothing did me any good. I had but little faith in S. S. S. doing me good when I began it, but after taking it for a short while the boils began to disappear. I continued on with the medicine, taking six bottles, and all the boils entirely disappeared. Five years have elapsed since that time, and I have never been bothered since, showing that the cure was permanent. I had some thirty or forty of the most painful boils one ever had, and to be entirely rid of them by your great purifier, S. S. S., puts me under a debt of gratitude to you.

FEARING.—Henry Martin Fearing, son of Isaiah and Subruit M. Fearing, was born in Elizabeth City, N. C., April 11, 1836, and died May 26, 1904. He was a pharmacist by vocation, and was so practicing in Washington, N. C., when called into the service of his country in 1861, entering Company A, 8th N. C. State Troops. He served in the medical department.

Brother Fearing was reared by Christian parents, and while young, gave his heart to God, joining with his parents the M. E. Church, South, of which he remained a faithful member for fifty years. He was one of nine children, all of which have passed beyond save his senior and junior brothers—Isaiah Fearing, now residing in Washington, D. C., and Zenas Fearing, Sr., of Elizabeth City. He was most happily married to Miss Sarah A. Grandy November 17, 1882. To this union, one child, Miss Sadie Fearing, was born, who, with her mother, awaits in Christian hope and joy an eternal reunion with a fond father.

Brother Fearing was deeply afflicted for three years, but through it all was wonderfullly patient, gentle, cheerful and submissive. Through life he was a man of winning nature and manners, imparting sunshine permeated with Christian gladness into all social and business circles. A good man has gone, leaving behind a most devoted wife, loving daughter and a hosts of friends who hope to know him forever in the heavenly mansion.
D. H. TUTTLE.

KITTRELL. — On Wednesday night at 9.15, June 22, the message flashed aeross the wires that my old friend, G.W. Kittrell, of Gates County, had passed into the beyond.

This news was not altogether unexpected, for when I saw him last, a few months ago, his faltering step and listless eye told me the shadows were lengthening and the sunset was near, but it brought sadness to my heart beeause he is not. Mr. Kittrell lived well, a devoted husband, a loving father, a kind neighbor, a faithful friend. He was twice married. His first wife, Miss Willey, of Gates County, passed to her reward about ten years ago. Of this union were three children, who survive him, and I, his friend, trust his noble qualities may be perpetuated in their lives from whence they have already begun to shine.

April, 1897, he was again married to Mrs. Willie H. Costen, who survives him. To him, "her price was above rubies." Her little fatherless girl was taken to his home and heart and tenderly cared for as his own.

My association with him in public office is fraught with pleasant memories, but he was at his best, in his own home, where he was the true type of the Southern gentleman, dispensing hospitality without ostentation. I always felt such a welcome in his home; he seemed so glad to have me come; and his many acts of kindness to me and mine proved to me he was my friend and possessed a great true heart which abounded with love. I shall never allow the fond memories of my departed friend to be crowded from my life, but they will linger with me like sweet roses. But best of all, my friend was a Christian, true to his God, faithful to his church, helpful to its ministry.

In sympathy for those he loved, and in appreciation of his true and faithful friendship, this tribute is penned.

When life's journey is over I shall expect a welcome from him on the other side.
S. I. HARRELL.

Durham, N. C., June 24, 1904.

Resolutions of Respect.

Resolutions of sympathy passed by Mangum Street Church regarding the death of Mrs. McCracken:

Again we are called on to mourn with those who mourn and weep with those who weep. On the evening of June 10th the wife of Bro. J. T. McCracken departed this life, and is now enjoying the realization of the Saviour's presence. She is satisfied, for she has awakened in his likeness. But our brother and his motherless for our brother and his motherless little ones mourn their loss, and we feel the anguish of their spirits. The blow that has fallen on them has also descended on us.

But amid all this gloom and sorrow hope bends over her last resting place a bow bright with promise, and we would remind the bereaved ones that thought she cannot come back to them, they can go to her.

While we mourn the death of such a consecrated Christian woman, we should thank God for her life, and endeavor so to live that we, too, may be ready when the summons comes to us.

Resolved, that a copy of this assurance of sympathy be sent to Brother McCracken and the city daily papers and the Raleigh Christian Advocate with a request for publication.

The following resolutions of respect passed by Murfreesboro Sunday-school:

Whereas, it has been the will of our heavenly Father to take from us one of our most faithful pupils, Julian Lawrenee; therefore be it

Resolved 1. That as a Sunday-school we submit humbly to this providence, feeling that He doeth all things well.

2. That it is with much regret that we give him up, realizing that his bright face will be seen no more in our midst, but hoping to meet him in the glorious beyond.

3. That we extend to the bereaved family our sympathy in this hour of great sorrow, trusting that a kind Father will comfort and sustain them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the stricken family, and also to the Raleigh Christian Advocate for publication.

TWENTY-ONE YEARS.

Twenty-one years ago a small red spot appeared under my father's eye. It gradually enlarged and soon became inflamed and very painful. During that time many so-called cancer doctors treated it by burning it off but it grew larger until the eye-ball was almost almost hidden. On Feb. 1st, 1898, I brought my father to the Kellam Cancer Hospital; the cancer was entirely cured in a short time and it is out.

Raleigh, N. C., April 8, 1900.

I am fully informed as to the ingredients composing Mrs. Joe Person's Remedy, and while my experience with it has been limited, having tried it in only a few cases of eczema, especially among children, it has given me satisfaction and does all she and her friends have claimed for it. It gives me pleasure to make this statement.

The August McClure's.

McClure's midsummer fiction number for August is simply a marvel of modern magazine making. In past years McClure's has made a great record with its fiction numbers, but the issue of this year surpasses all others. In both text and illustration it fixes the standard of excellence. The stories, without exception, are gems of their kind and serve admirably to illustrate how far the American short story has been perfected.

The number opens with a novelette of child life by Frances Hodgson, whose "Little Lord Fauntleroy" has been generally voted the most wonderful child story ever written. This is the story of a little girl, and to it Mrs. Brunett has brought all the charming fancy of her earlier efforts. It is most beautifully and sympathetically illustrated in colors by Jessie Wilcox Smith.

In the short stories of this number the McClure fiction writers appear to the best advantage with a collection of rattling stories, rattlingly told. "A Tempered Wind," by O. Henry, is concerned with the humorous experiences of two country fakers on Wall Street; how they protected the "shorn lambs" and went back to "an honest living." "The Coming of the Maestra" is the story of a thrilling adventure in the Philippines, by James Hopper. It is most vividly realistic, full of the rich life and color of the tropical Orient, with a thread of pretty romance running through it. Alice Brown writes a New England love story in her best vein. It tells of "A Winter's Courting," and strikes a responsive chord in every heart which "loves a lover." Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews shows her great story-telling faculty at its best in "A West Point Regulation," an exceedingly clever little love comedy, which involves a girl, a cadet and an officer in most amusing complications. Samuel Hopkins Adams tells the life tragedy of a crow, "King Coal," which rose to true heroism in giving its own life for another's. Colin McKay graphically describes "The Loss of the Leo," a thrilling story of storm and shipwreck and hazardous adventure. Henry Wallace Phillips tells one of his funniest "Red Saunders" stories, which narrates the doings of "Foxey Bill," the "Big Bend" pig, and how, in a fierce fight, "In the Absence of Rules," the pig met and conquered his hated enemy, a belligerent ram. The fourth instalment of George Madden Martin's popular serial, "The House of Fulfillment," which brings the reader deep into its absorbing plot, completes the splendid list of fiction.

The North Carolina Press Association held its annual session at Morehead City last week with a large attendance. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee was one of the oratorical attractions, but the efforts of several of the North Carolina quilldrivers were equal to his. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, H. B. Varner; Vice-Presidents, M. L. Shipman, R. M. Phillips and J. C. Caddell; Secretary and Treasurer, J. B. Sherrill; Historian, T. J. Lassiter; Orator, E. E. Hilliard; Poet, John Charles McNeill.

NEARLY FORFEITS HIS LIFE.

A runaway almost ending fatally, started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill. For four years it defied all doctors and all remedies. But Bucklen's Arnica Salve had no trouble to cure him. Equally good for Burns, Bruises, Skin Eruptions and Piles. Twenty-five cents at all druggists.

TOUR TO ST. LOUIS.

The Baracas have arranged with the Seaboard for special cars to the World's Fair on August 9th, and they will have quite a movement from North Carolina.

The National Baracas Convention meets in St. Louis August 11th and 12th, and arrangements are being made for this trip by Mr. R. N. Simms, Vice-President, and Mr. L. W. Alderman, Secretary, and Mr. W. A. Cooper. Cars will be attached to other trains and the lowest rates in effect at the time will be available for any who desire to join the party. Special rates will be arranged at hotels.

Those who desire to accompany this party should address either of the above gentlemen, or the undersigned, who will furnish complete information.

The World As We See It.

The report comes from Georgia that in that State the people who (should) attend the political speaking are conspicuous by their absence. We are sure that the complaint is legitimate in North Carolina. Some think that the church alone has a right to complain of the absence of the people. This is a great mistake. This is an age of sensationalism and all public assemblies are affected in their attendance except those which are decidedly sensational. The newspaper also is to be reckoned with as a factor in influencing attendance.

Why will people think, speak and write so much about what is called Higher Criticism? It is nothing but a miserable groping about in the bogs in the effort to find safe footing. For over half a century the higher critics have been floundering in theories without getting in sight of the periphery of the bog. In this time there have been presented 76 different theories on the origin and character of the Pentateuch; 113 different theories on the historical books of the Old Testament; 108 on the poetical books; 98 on the great prophets; 144 on the minor prophets—that is, a total of 599 on the origin, value, and inspiration of the books of the Old Testament. The "Higher Critics" have published 208 different theories on the value of the books of the New Testament.

Bishop Potter, of the Protestant Episcopal church, has created a sensation by dedicating a liquor saloon in New York City. He committed a gross sacrilege by having the doxology sung at the conclusion of the service. The only fault he found in the institution was the presence of Judge Parker's picture to the exclusion of that of President Roosevelt's. Bishop Potter's action has brought down on his head almost unlimited censure from all sections of the country. Ministers of his own church are particularly severe in the censure of the Bishop. The truth of the matter is, there is no reason why his action should excite surprise. It is known by all who have kept up with Bishop Potter's course that the time was when he was very pronounced in his antagonism to the saloon in any shape. As he grew in influence through his association with the worldly magnates of financial circles, his moral fibre grew visibly flabby and relaxed. A few years ago the saloon power began to look upon him as an ally. Now he has burned all bridges behind him and has actually thrown the mantle of his great church over the hideous form of moral and physical debauchery. It is a sad case, but one which should cause no surprise. There need be no fear that he has strengthened the power of the saloon. Among all his bibulous henchmen there is probably not one who in the hour and article of death would crave his prayers. Bishop Potter himself is the only loser in this sensational and sacrilegious performance.

That Governor Vardaman is persona non grata with Uncle Sam is clearly shown in the treatment recently received. It seems that they wished to name a little post-office somewhere in Mississippi after the Governor. "Vardaman"—that is the name with which they wished to christen the little postal foundling. But, no; the Postmaster-General said that Governor Vardaman had slandered in a political speech the mother of President Roosevelt, and that no post-office should bear the name of Vardaman. The Governor indignantly denies the allegation of the Postmaster-General and disclaims any responsibility for campaign reports set afloat by political enemies. But the denial and disclaimer will hardly do any good. Governor Vardaman is a "marked" man with the administration.

There is now running serially in Everybody's Magazine a terrific arraignment of the corporation known as The Amalagamated Copper, a gigantic octopus which has its strong antennae clasping every part of this great land. Thomas W. Lawson, whose fame as a financier is firmly secured, makes the expose. Whether he writes at the dictates of an awakened conscience, as some say, or only through a spirit of revenge, it is evident that there is much truth couched in his hot electrified sentences. For, unless this be true, why should the Amalgamated Copper make such strenuous attempts to destroy the only magazine which dared to admit the articles? In the Fourth Estate the monthly magazine is becoming more and more a vital element.

The Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis has entered upon its fourth month. The attendance up-to-date proves that in the fall months the atendance will be immense. People from the East are probably not yet impressed with the fact that this Exposition will be of such a nature that no one can say, "I have seen it before at Philadelphia, Atlanta, and Chicago." The truth is, there has never before been anything in the line of Expositions that can approach the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in magnitude and variety of display. The people will find this out before frost and then the procession will move Westward. If, however, the people of the East, through a chronic jealousy of the West, should continue conspicuous by their absence, the millions west of the Mississippi will more than make up for the absence of the East. Our advice to those who have sufficient time and money, especially those who have not visited a great Exposition, is, "Be sure to go to St. Louis." We write this, unindluenced by any motive save a desire for our readers to have an experience which will be both useful and enjoyable.

We respect that desire on the part of a minister of the Gospel to dress in such a way as to save him from being conspicuous—in other words, to dress as do other men. Yet it must be remembered that every minister of the Gospel must so act as to distinguish him from other men. What a satire on the life of a Christian minister in the story that was often told by the great temperance orator, John B. Gough: A minister put up at a Western tavern where it was the custom to charge clergy but half-rates for meals and rooms. In the morning, when the minister came to pay his bill, he protested against the hotel-keeper charging him full price. "What, you a minister?" said the landlord, "I would never have suspected it. You asked no blessing at your meals. I went with you to your room and took away the light, and you did not say your prayers. You ate like a heathen, drank like a heathen, and I guess you'd better pay like a heathen."

The dull monotony of these droning dog-days is relieved by two minor sensations in public circles. One is the giving of the "marble hand" by the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce to our Governor. The Governor appointed a committee to determine the best place for the annual encampment of the State Guard. The committee made its report, known only to the Governor, who selected Morehead City. The Wilmington Chamber of Commerce which evidently suspects that Wrightsville was recommended, has called for the report of the Committee to be made public. The Governor refuses to make the report public, and for the purpose of justifying his course, writes a long letter to which the Chamber of Commerce replies, and the reply closes with a repetition of the request that the report of the Committee be made public. We think that the Governor, no matter what the merits or demerits of the case may be, is at a serious disadvantage in withholding that information which is generally supposed to belong to the public. The public can hardly appreciate the prudential reasons by which the Governor is doubtless honestly swayed for adopting his present course.

The other sensation is the action of Judge Purnell in removing any supposed legal barrier to the State's leasing the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad pending the final adjudication of the case in the fall. The action of Judge Purnell, we take it, is not so much to relieve himself of any burden as to deprive the State of any possible excuse for not leasing the road—a consummation devoutly to be wished by a majority of the people of the State.

Holston will have six or seven of her finest young men in the Theological Department of Vanderbilt University next year.

The idea of having a great college for Methodist Women at Nashville, Tenn., is growing in strength.

A Dollar Paper.

BY DR. WM. ASHMORE.

"But we want a dollar paper." So say a great many people. And they are found in all denominations—Methodists and Presbyterians and Baptists and dwellers in Mesopotamia, and where not? We want a good religious dollar paper. There are plenty of secular papers for a dollar; why can't religious editors do as well as secular editors?

All right, dear member of the household of faith. Now, if you can only get somebody to carry on "a dollar paper," and meet all the bills of a dollar paper, and make up all the shortages of a dollar paper, or, in other words, if you can find some self-sacrificing Baptist willing, for the good of the cause, to make a two-dollar outlay for one-dollar return, just hunt him out and bring him on. We would all like to see him.

But do not some of the secular papers do that? Seemingly they do, but in reality they do not. Men of the world do not make bricks without straw; catch them do that! The price they charge for the big issues does not pay for the paper they are printed on. It is the advertisements that pay. First of all, they print every day a huge number of papers, a hundred thousand, or two hundred thousand, or even three hundred thousand at a time. Because there are so many readers, therefore people who have anything to sell, run to them to be advertised. In one morning they make ten to twenty or thirty thousand people know that they have some sort of an article to sell that "no family ought to be without." Out of that number they hope to get one hundred customers, so they are willing to pay roundly. And pay roundly they do, for if you note their head lines, you will see the papers charge ten cents a line for some things, and twelve and a half cents a line, and even twenty-five cents a line, for certain other things. Everything has to be paid for. If a man dies, a bare mention of his death will be put in "free;" but if a word of explanation goes in, then "down with the dust," or they don't touch it. Thus, "Died, John Smith, of Malden," that much is free; but if you add "much lamented," or "funeral on Thursday," then fork over half a dollar, or John Smith will not be "much lamented." No wonder they can make it go, and send out a dollar weekly made up of the type matter already set up and paid for already half a dozen times over. What these people get for deaths, marriages and births alone would support the family of a Baptist editor in style genteel.

Now take your "pen in hand" and work it out for yourself. Take up a big daily and count up the lines which pay ten cents and twelve cents and twelve and a half cents and twenty-five cents, and you will get some idea of the enormous profit that comes from their advertising. Now and then you will see half a page of one of these big Boston dailies all taken up with the advertisements of just one firm, which has paid a skilled scribe to arrange the material so as to strike the eye most effectively. For that half page, "one insertion," the publisher charges one thousand dollars. So people say who are in the business. Do you wonder that some of these papers have made a profit of a quarter of a million in one year?

Come back to our religious papers. They have no such rush of readers. You don't see boys crowding their offices to get the first issue, and then rushing like mad down the street screaming out, "Here's your Transcript;" "Here's your Herald;" "Here's your Globe;" "Russia bottled up in Port Arthur;" "Merger declared illegal;" "Big fire in Pancake Town;" "Prize fight in South Boston—Teddy O'Rourke knocked out Teddy O'Keefe in sixteen rounds." But if you are asking for a religious paper, you need not be in a hurry. They will not be all gone before you get there. People do not hunger for religious news as they do for secular. The editors of these papers are hard-worked men. I have studied them and their ways. They work like galley slaves. They have gone as far as possible to solve the old Pharaonic problem of how to make bricks without straw, and yet we demand that they furnish us and our families "a dollar paper"—a two-dollar paper for a one-dollar bill.

Let the household of faith learn to show piety at home and be just at the same time. Let us be willing to pay our two dollars—it is worth it. We want to know about the kingdom of God outside of our wn meeting house; we want to know what other churches are doing; we want to know what great things are stirring the denomination, and the whole Christian world, especially in these last days when the providences of God are developing on the double quick. If we have not paid up, let us pay at once; if we have not subscribed, let us do it now. "We want a two-dollar paper."

The prayers of David, the son of Jesse, are ended.—Baptist Exchange.

Our Duty to Our Conference Organ.

BY J. W. BRADLEY.

[Published by Request.]

The Raleigh Christian Advocate, published every week, edited by T. N. Ivey, is what we Methodist folks call our "Conference Organ."

We have no right to complain of the paper. It is all we could ask for as a paper, and compared with other papers of like character and opportunity, the "Old Raleigh" is simply a giant; which credit is due largely to our beautiful ornate editor—I mean to say the product of his pen is ornate and beautiful.

As the "organ," it is one institution of the church. No one questions that. And now you ask what is our duty to it? I answer: Support it—that is no less than what you promised to do at the door of the church. The question with us is not what is our duty to it, but as preachers and laymen, how can we best perform that duty?

Now how can a Methodist preacher in the North Carolina Conference best perform his duty to the "Old Raleigh?"

Here is the answer:

(1) By reading it. I fear there are some members of the North Carolina Conference who do not appreciate the paper enough even after it is sent to them gratis to read its columns.

(2) By speaking of the paper and telling what you read in it both in your ministerial and pastoral work.

(3) By writing for it—something short and spicy—and having the children, as well as some of the old influential members, to write a few pointed dots for publication—this will do good.

(4) By being an agent for the paper and working for it as you are obligated to do by special vows, and also by accepting a free subscription.

Is it a fact that even some preachers don't do enough work for the Advocate to pay their subscription? Well, it looks so when there are less than one thousand out of sixty-seven thousand Methodists in the North Carolina Conference who take the Advocate. What are her one hundred and eighty agents doing?

But here, all the duty and work does not fall upon the preachers. You parishioners are also obligated. It is your duty as a member of the church to support this institution by taking the paper, paying for the paper, reading it and passing it on to a neighbor. Take and read it, brother, so you need not ask your pastor so many simple questions. Keep up with the doings of God's church.

Lost Through Trifling.

C. H. WETHERBE.

Thousands of people have lost what were to them golden opportunities for securing most valuable benefits, through trifling with such advantages. They neglected the weightiest interests of their souls for the sake of some passing enjoyment which was a comparative trifle.

Senator Chauncey M. Depew made a speech not long ago in which he referred to the Panama Canal and the way in which Colombia lost not only the money which was to be paid for it by the United States, but also her most valuable province. He said: "The Colombian Congress, in their territorial isolation and subordination to their dictator and president, failed to comprehend the gravity of the situation. While this treaty, the most important document in their history, was pending in their Senate and House, they adjourned for a day to have read to them the sonnets which had been written by one of their poetic deputies."

What amazing folly that was! It may be supposed that those Congressmen would have had enough sense to know that it was most important for them to give strict attention to the measure which was then up for consideration. They must have known that their country would be affected by it in one way or another, and therefore that it was no time for taking any chances; and yet, strange as it seems, they were heedless about the great affair, but quite attentive to an unimportant literary entertainment. We say that such was a needless and very regretable loss, and it was; but that was nothing as compared with one's forever losing his life through trifling with great opportunities for eternally saving it. There are millions of people, now in this great world of unchangeable darkness, from which they never can escape, who gave their whole attention to worldly entertainments, while they had most urgent opportunities to accept a most wonderful salvation from the Lord of life. There is nothing so sad as that. It seems to me that one of the main elements of the suffering of a lost soul in the eternal world must be that of regretting that he trifled with the opportunities of becoming forever rescued from death, when he was upon earth, and all for the sake of temporary pleasures.

"Statement of Rev. A. B. Crumpler Corrected."

Dear Bro. Ivey:—In the issue of the Raleigh Christian Advocate of July 6 there appears an article under the above caption from the pen of Dr. F. D. Swindell, of Goldsboro, N. C. We would not have noticed the matter but for the fact that we believe Brother Swindell wishes to be correct himself, or he would not be trying to correct others. After quoting pars. 295 and 301, Brother Swindell says: "Mr. Crumpler had solemnly vowed at the altar of the Methodist church to be subject to the discipline of the church, and this vow he deliberately and wilfully violated." We wish to say to this statement of our good Brother Swindell, that the jury before whom I was tried, having been charged with immorality for what they considered a violation of par. 301, did not find me guilty of "deliberately and wilfully violating any vow" whatever! I will quote par. 301 as nearly as I can from memory: "If any traveling preacher, local preacher or layman shall hold public religious services in the bounds of any station, circuit or mission when requested by the preacher in charge not to do so, he shall be deemed guilty of improper conduct and dealt with as the discipline provides in such cases." (See par. 295 of Discipline.)

I held "public religious services under a tent two miles from a Methodist church after Rev. G. W. Starling had requested me not to do so." For this, I was charged with immorality because it was thought by Brother Starling that I had held "public religious services in the bounds of his circuit" against his wishes. But when we came to trial, Brother Starling could not prove to the jury that his Circuit had any "bounds" other than those surrounding the property deeded to the Methodist churches; and so, failing to prove the specification, he failed to prove the charge; and I was accordingly acquitted. But if the specification had been proven that would not have sustained the charge of immorality—not in the minds of an unprejudiced and intelligent jury. Now Brother Swindell says in this article under consideration that: "Mr. Crumpler had solemnly vowed at the altar of the Methodist Church to be subject to the Discipline of the Church, and his vow he deliberately and wilfully violated." But the jury who tried the case said: Mr. Crumpler did not violate any vow which he had taken at the altar of the Church. Now which is right—Brother Swindell or that jury? Of two contradictories both may be false; but one is bound to be false. As to the incorrect statement in the Discipline of the Holiness Church which our good brother wishes to correct, we have only this to say: that the people who are acquainted with the circumstances of the trial, are sufficiently intelligent to know all about the cause of that trial, and the motives behind it; and we are perfectly willing to leave these things with an intelligent public until we shall all stand before Him who is perfectly acquainted with the thoughts and intents of the human heart.

Thanking you very much for your kindness in allowing me space in your valuable columns to make this little correction, I am

Yours in the Master's work,

A. B. CRUMPLER.

The Report and Its Meaning.

I inclose you the report on temperance adopted at the Warrenton District Conference last week without a dissenting voice. Note, please, it makes no distinction between the dispensary and the saloon. Both are whiskey institutions, and agencies for the devil. Both retard and injure the work of the church. The only real difference is to be found in name and proprietorship. Therefore it calls on Methodists to have nothing to do with the dispensary. To say the least of it, it is inconsistent in a church member to have anything to do with the sale of alcohol as a beverage. Our church and its influence is being injured today by those Methodists who hold positions under the dispensary. I am glad that nearly all the Methodists who innocently accepted positions under the dispensary system have seen their error and have resigned their positions. A few more resignations are in order, in the Warrenton Distriet at least. I don't like the nomenclature "church barrooms" and "Christian saloon-keepers." And yet we have to stand these things as long as professed followers of Christ will establish and man a saloon. Christ will sanction no compromise with sin and the devil.

Yours truly,

R. L. DAVIS.

REPORT ON TEMPERANCE.

Your committee begs leave to report as follows:

All truth is founded on God's word, which is the sufficient rule and only rule both of our faith and practice. This word commits the Christian to total abstenance from alcohol as a beverage, and the Christian citizen to legal prohibition of the whiskey traffic.

Dram-drinking and the like is dangerous. And as it destroys manhood and Christian influence, and injures the "weaker brother" it has no place in the Christian life. Total abstenance, as a Christian duty is the one foundation upon which we must stand to fight for legal prohibition.

We know that alcohol destroys mind and body; separates families; breeds paupers; generates widows and orphans; destroys peace and happiness; and sends souls to hell. Then the church, whose duty it is to destroy the works of the devil, must oppose, as the devil's agency, every whiskey institution. Christian citizenship demands absolute antagonism to the liquor traffic. The Methodist Church teaches no less.

We rejoice at the signal victories for prohibition over the State, at Elizabeth City, Durham, Goldsboro, Charlotte, New Bern, Greensboro, and many smaller places; and feel proud of our Methodism for the part she has taken in these fights. We exhort others to follow such worthy examples, making no compromise with the diabolical evil.

With our present prohibition laws we need to guard well our legislative and judicial bodies. Let us use all honorable means and make an aggressive fight that our legislative halls may be filled with wise, conservative temperance men, and that only lawyers of sense, character and pronounced temperance convictions shall be judges and solicitors.

We condemn the devil's saying that preachers must keep out of politics. No State has yet disfranchised them; and until then God will hold them responsible for the right use of their citizenship.

We condemn the use of those patent medicines which contain a large percentage of alcohol.

As the dispensary is an institution diametrically opposed to the work of the church, your committee thinks it inconsistent for any Christian to hold an office in the dispensary, and advises all our members to refrain from holding such positions.

We recommend that preachers, teachers and our institutions of learning instruct the youth in the evils of alcohol and the right use of citizenship. using the school, press, and pulpit for this purpose.

E. L. Davis

Soul Food

O men with wounded souls,
O women with broken hearts,
That have suffered since ever the world was made,
And nobly borne your parts;

Suffered and borne as well
As the marytrs whom we name,
That went rejoicing home through flood,
Or singing through the flame;

Ye have had of Him reward
For your battles fought and won,
Who giveth His beloved rest
When the day of their work is done.

—Phoebe Carey.

Obedience is hard when we must walk apart from the crowd in order to obey. We have an instinctive dread of loneliness. It is part of our divine inheritance, which marks us as formed for the society of our own kind. But obedience which cannot on occasion leave the crowd is a poor and puny thing. When the crowd is thoughtless or wicked, it is not fit for the friend of God to fix his allegiance upon it. He must stand for truth and right and honor, even though he stands alone.

* * *

O Lord, who hast given us these treasures of earth's strength and opportunity in earthen vessels that we might learn the need of trust in thee, help us so to use and cherish them that they may be most effective for the work thou hast given us to do. Make us strong to labor, patient for endurance, girded and ready for all service. When for thy love or the service of thy children we are called to work beyond our strength, restore us, if it please thee, or accept our sacrifice for the sake of Christ who denied not his body for our need. —Amen.—Closet and Altar.

Ambition is not wrong. In three places Paul speaks of it. He says he is ambitious to preach the Gospel where Christ has not been named, and he seems to think that would be a worthy ambition for others. He speaks to the Corinthians of the ambition of pleasing Christ, and he bids the Thessalonians to be ambitious, to be quiet. These are three good things to be ambitious for. Whether ambition is wrong or right depends upon its object. We can test this issue upon Christ. Would he approve? Is our ambition one that we should admire if we saw it in him? The ambition to make his Gospel known is one that would meet these tests. He bade us make him known to the whole world. The ambition to please Christ is just ambition. To please God was the rule of Christ's own life. He came to create in us the same desire. It is good to think of this as an ambition—as really an ambition as the desire to be rich or influential or famous. Men seek these things. In the same way we may seek to please Christ, and have no higher ambition than that. To seek power for use is dangerous, but it is not wrong if, when acquired, it is used, not for self, but for the good of others. The beauty of Jesus' life was its lowliness, its avoidance of needless publicity, its ambition for quiet ministry of others. Has such a life become a positive ambition with us?—Robert E. Speer.

When you are content with any food, any raiment, any climate, any society, any solitude, any interruption—that is victory.

When you can bear with any discord, any annoyance, any irregularity, unpunctuality (of which you are not the cause)—that is victory.

When you are forgotten, or neglected, or purposely set at naught, and you smile inwardly, glorying in the insult or the oversight—that is victory.

When you never care to refer to yourself in conversation nor to record your good works, nor to seek after commendation, when you can truly "love to be unknown"—that is victory.

When your good is evil spoken of, when your wishes are crossed, your tastes offended, your advice disregarded, your opinions ridiculed, and you take it all in patient and loving silence—that is victory.—Daily Bible.

Religious profession should be a guarantee of character. But it is not always so. This is because the religion that is professed is but little more than a veneer. When the profession is based upon a real experience of spiritual quickening under the influence of the Holy Ghost, upon a sure knowledge of the forgiveness of one's sins through Jesus Christ, and upon acceptance into The family of God the Father, character of a high and worthy type will be the outcome. The Christian must be a vast improvement on the unbeliever. If he is not he has traduced his Lord. He must do and be more than the man who rejects Jesus Christ; "for if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? Do not even the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? Do not even the publicans so? Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." This is a high ideal of Christian aspiration, but it is the ideal of Jesus; and its attainment is within the reach of every one of his professed disciples.

A woman lay with closed eyes and quiet breath waiting to welcome an angel whose presence seemed to overshadow the white-curtained room. A man knelt beside the bed, the woman's hand pressed close in his against his cheek, while his lips moved as if in prayer.

In the room were Life, Death and Love.

"What have you given her?" questioned Death of Life.

"I brought her my best gifts," answered Life—"youth, health, beauty, joy and Love."

"Has Love brought her good gifts?" again asked Death.

Said Love with wistful eye, "I brought her brave, bright hours, sunshine and laughter, happiness, and glory in living, and then a heavy cross. The sunshine she shed all about her, even with the fading of Life's glory; the cross hidden deep in her soul cast out self and made a new radiance and beauty there."

"Let her come to me," said Death. "Life had much to give, but peace and rest are not for Life to bestow. Love would give all, but must reckon with the human heart. I will crown and glorify and bless her."

Life fled from the quiet room with a sigh and one whispered, tender word; but Love lingered, brave even in the full presence of Death.

"What of him?" said Love, pointing to the kneeling figure.

"He made the cross?" Death asked.

"Yes," said Love, weeping.

"We must teach him," said Death, "what he could not learn from Life."—L. M. S., in the Outlook.

Wilmington District Conference Notes.

As the Editor of the "Old Raleigh" did not honor the Wilmington District Conference with his presence and touch up the salt sea breezes with his facile pen, it falls to the lot of another to give to the readers of the Advocate some account of the sayings and doings at Southport from July 28th to 31st, inclusive.

A good beginning is half the battle, so the Conference was specially fortunate in having present, on Wednesday evening, to preach the introductory sermon Rev. S. B. Turrentine, D. D., of the Western North Carolina Conference, who journeyed hither to represent the fortunes of Greensboro Female College. His preaching was of a high order, and was much enjoyed by the large audience of preachers, laymen, visitors, and citizens.

Thursday morning, promptly at nine o'clock, the Conference was called to order by the Presiding Elder, and after the opening religious services, Bro. H. C. Moffitt, of Whiteville, was elected secretary, and Rev. W. B. Royal assistant.

The roll call showed an unusually large attendance of both preachers and laymen. In fact every preacher in charge within the District attended the Conference except Rev. G. B. Webster, of Bladen Street Church, who was kept at home by an attack of fever; and every charge in the District was represented by from one to four laymen; add to these our honored visitors—Dr. Yates, of Trinity College; Dr. Turrentine of Greensboro Female College, and Brother Jenkins, Superintendent of the Orphanage, and the total number present was nearly seventy—an attendance not often excelled in the history of District Conferences. As Drs. Turrentine and Jenkins had to hurry away to the Warrenton District Conference, they were given an early hearing, and the funds of G. F. C. were increased by something over eight hundred dollars, and the claims of the Orphanage were impressed afresh on the hearts and minds of preachers and laymen. A part of Thursday morning session was devoted to the hearing of short but well prepared addresses by Revs. W. E. Brown and J. T. Draper, on the benefits to be derived from the District Conference.

The Thursday afternoon session of the Conference was full of interest to the large number of delegates and visitors present. After the minutes of the morning session were read and corrected, and the Presiding Elder had appointed the various committees as provided for by the discipline, Rev. J. J. Porter addressed the Conference on the proper care of our churches and their influence on the life of the community. Bro. Porter gave several interesting reminiscences of how old dilapidated, unsightly buildings had been transformed into comfortable houses of worship, and pointed out the corresponding gain both to the material and spiritual uplifting of the community.

Dr. Yates also addressed the Conference on the same subject, speaking especially of the contrast between the old neglected, weather beaten, rickety church buildings of thirty years ago, that the prosperous farmers of today would not think fit "to house their goats in," and the many beautiful country church homes of today.

Rev. A. S. Barnes, of Clinton, was called out by the Presiding Elder to discuss the question whether or not, during a revival meeting at a country church it was preferable to hold two services in the day or one in the day and one at night. Several brethren clerical and lay, spoke to the same subject, the general concensus of opinion being that two services held in the day time would most likely accomplish far greater good.

At 8.15 o'clock Rev. Alpheus McCullen, of Fifth Street M. E. Church, preached a sermon of great sweep, power and beauty, his theme being the Philosophy of Missions. Brother McCullen was heard by a large, intelligent and appreciative audience.

Friday morning at 9 o'clock the Conference convened with Presiding Elder John in the chair and H. C. Moffitt at the secretary's table, and after the opening exercises conducted by Rev. V. A. Royall, of Jacksonville, the report of the committee on missions, was presented and showed that very fine progress was being made. The following eight charges have already paid the foreign and domestic mission assessment in full: Grace Church, Bladen Street, Market Street, Magnolia Circuit, Clinton Circuit, Elizabeth Circuit, Whiteville Circuit and Bladen Circuit. The other nine charges of the District have paid in part, making the total amount paid to date $1,752, and the Wilmington District will undoubtedly be in the very front rank this year. Four years ago only two charges of the District paid the missionary assessment in full; this year every charge in the District will pay in full. To the Presiding Elder Rev. R. B. John, and his efficient District missionary secretary, Rev. A. S. Barnes, must be largely given the credit for the progress made.

Rev. A. J. Groves spoke of the large area of missionary territory in the Wilmington District. It is nearly twice as large as any other District in the North Carolina Conference. Mr. Groves especially pointed out the importance of establishing good day schools in the by-ways and highways of the District.

Rev. W. A. Jenkins spoke of the open doors about us where missionary work needs to be done; contignous to every Circuit and station is some place where the Christ-filled man will find work to be done, and he ought to move out and do it.

Rev. J. M. Marlowe spoke of the large territory lying between Scott's Hill and Swansboro where there was a crying need for church homes that the Gospel might be preached. He spoke of a vast territory of country where there was no church of any sort, and where he was now attempting to build one, but was hindered because the people were unable or unwilling to pay for the lumber now on the ground; he said if the members of the Conference would give him an average of 50 cents each he would be able to pay for the lumber and build the church. A collection was taken and more than the amount asked for was realized.

At 11 o'clock Rev. E. A. Yates, D. D., of the Trinity College Faculty, preached a most interesting and helpful sermon from Hebrews 11:27.

Friday afternoon the educational work of the Church came in for a liberal share of consideration.

Dr. Yates spoke for Trinity College, and especially emphasized the importance of the Woman's annex that was intended to give to the women of the State the highest and best educational advantages within its borders. He assured the Conference that no conflict was to exist between the Woman's annex and Greensboro Female College or Littleton or Louisburg, but that the annex was to supplement the work done at these institutions. These institutions, he said, are doing a great work, all that the average woman needs, but the number of those who desire to pursue the higher studies is constantly increasing, and the Woman's Annex at Trinity College is intended to meet this demand.

The report of Littleton Female College was presented by Rev. Alpheus McCullen, who spoke of the valuable work this college was doing for the Methodist girls of the State. President Rhodes and his associates are giving the best possible advantages for the least amount of money.

Presiding Elder John called attention to the fact that a large number of boys and girls within the bounds of the Wilmington District were unable to attend any of the schools now established because of financial inability, and lack of preparation. The Conference was urged to take hold of this question and establish an Industrial School for boys and girls—a school where they would be able to learn something else besides books; a school where they would be able to learn how to do things, to run a truck farm, to run a dairy, to cook a good dinner, to keep a neat house, to make a good home. This proposition from the Presiding Elder struck a responsive chord, and after some animated discussion, the following committee was appointed to devise ways and means for such a school and report to the next District Conference: N. M. Watson, A. S. Barnes, W. I. Wright, J. F. Garrell, and F. W. Hargett. Two hundred acres of land, more or less, and five or six thousand dollars would open a door of hope and new life to hundreds of young men and women within the Wilmington District.

The report of the committee on Sunday-school Work showed that great progress was being made, hardly a church can be found that does not have a school of some sort. Bro. T. L. Hubbard addressed the Conference, and urged his brother laymen to go out and establish schools in the neglected places, and lead the children to Christ and drive back the kingdom of darkness.

On Friday night, by appointment of the Presiding Elder, Rev. N. M. Watson preached a special sermon on "How Methodism Provides for the Spiritual Training of Her Children." By way of introduction it was shown how, by training, human and divine, Moses was transformed from a helpless infant, sleeping in a basket amid the rushes of the Nile, into a great leader, warrior, poet, statesman and founder of the Hebrew race. The three important disciplinary provisions of the church for the training of the young, were shown to be "Infant Baptism," "Sunday-schools," and "Epworth Leagues." Consecrated to the Lord in baptism, taught the Holy Scriptures in Sunday-school, trained for active, efficient and intelligent service in the Epworth League, this and this alone will hold the Methodist Church in the forefront of the Lord's work in the Twentieth Century.

Saturday morning the report on Epworth Leagues was presented, showing that in this department of the work very little was being done either in the District or in the State. The committee recommended the appointment of a District campaigner and organizer, and Rev. E. McWhorter was elected to fill the place.

The following lay delegates were elected to represent the District at the next session of the Annual Conference which convenes at Henderson November 30, 1904: Cicero H. Johnson, W. B. Cooper, R. H. Beery and J. H. Drew. Alternates: H. F. Schulken, J. E. Durham.

The following resolutions were introduced and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, our beloved Presiding Elder is closing his fourth year of faithful and efficient work on the Wilmington District, and

Whereas, the District has made such marked progress in all departments of church work, and especially along the line of missions under his administration, therefore, be it

Resolved 1. That we, the preachers and laymen of the Wilmington District, assure him of our love and appreciation.

2. That we have with great pleasure recognized his executive ability in the management of the business affairs of our District.

3. That we are sincerely grateful to him for his Godly counsel and for the brotherly spirit which he has manifested towards us in all his official dealings with us.

4. That we take great pleasure in commending him to the brethren of any District or to the members of any church within our Conference.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon our District Record and that a copy be sent to the Raleigh Christian Advocate for publication.

(Signed)

ALBERT S. BARNES.
J. N. GIBBONS.

The consensus of opinion among preachers and laymen is that this District Conference has been unusually pleasant and profitable. There was no "cut and dried" program, but the Presiding Elder seemed to be fortunate in calling out just the right man to discuss just the right subject, at just the right time. The discussions were somewhat outside of the beaten track, and there was not a dull half hour from beginning to end. The breezes from the sea were salt and balmy, and the hospitality of Southport abundant. To the Pilots Association the Conference is indebted for a complimentary ride out to sea on Saturday afternoon; they carried us around the bell-buoy and back via Fort Caswell, where we had a look at some of the munitions of war. Old Neptune was specially kind and passed the entire company without calling for tribute.

The next session of the Conference goes to Warsaw.

The Family

The Brave at Home.

The maid who binds her warrior's sash
With smile that well her pain dissembles,
The while beneath her drooping lash
One starry teardrop hangs and trembles,
Though heaven alone records the tear,
And Fame shall never know her story,
And heart has shed a drop as dear
As e'er bedewed the field of glory!

The wife who girds her husband's sword
'Mid little ones who weep or wonder,
And bravely speaks the cheering word,
What though her heart be rent asunder,
Doomed nightly in her dreams to hear
The bolts of death around him rattle,
Has shed as sacred blood as e'er
Was poured upon the field of battle.

The mother who conceals her grief
While to her breast her son she presses,
Then breathes a few brave words and brief,
Kissing the patriot brow she blesses,
With no one but her secret God
To know the pain that weighs upon her,
Sheds holy blood as e'er the sod
Received on freedom's field of honor.
—Thomas Buchanan Read.

The river of dreams runs silently down
By a secret way that no one knows;
But the soul lives on while the dreamtide flows
Through the garden bright or the forests brown:
And I think sometimes that our whole life seems.
To be more than half made up of dreams.
For its changing sights and its passing shows
And its morning hopes and its midnight fears
Are left behind with the vanished years.
Onward, with ceaseless motion,
The life stream flows to the ocean,
And we follow the tide, awake or asleep,
Till we see the dawn on love's great deep.
Then the bar at the harbor mouth is crossed
And the river of dreams in the sea is lost.
—Henry Van Dyke.

The Prophet of Smooth Things.

Though the judgment against Israel's prophet, who said, "Peace, peace," when there was no peace, was sufficiently dreadful to deter men from a like course for all time, it is to be feared that that same prophet of smooth things has, even in our day, all too many imitators. "Even in our day," we say—perhaps we should say, especially in our day, for there are many indications that "the Gospel of the agreeable," as one has called it, is being preached today as industriously as it ever has been in the history of the world. And why not? some one may say. Yes, indeed, why not? Surely the Gospel of Jesus Christ is the gospel of the agreeable, the gospel of love and good-will, of peace and holiness and beauty and fulness of joy! These are agreeable things for any man to contemplate, and surely he who lives the Christ-life and delivers the Christ message, will dwell much upon them. Did not our Master, of whom we are all poor childish learners, ever have a word of cheer and hope—did not he preach the gospel of the agreeable? Yes, we may admit that he did, whenever it was possible. He longed to say, and did say, whenever he could, to every man and woman who crossed his path, "Son, daughter, be of good cheer." But that was not the message possible to many whom he met, and that was not the message that he gave. As we look back now upon his life-ministry, with all its helpfulness and blessing, we know that it is really true that he came not to bring peace, but a sword. Though he was kindly and kingly in his dealings with the people, there never had been, and there never can be, such a stern preacher of righteousness as was Jesus of Nazareth. And is not that the one part of his Gospel that we are in great danger of forgetting in these days of prosperity and ease.

Phillips Brooks is quoted as saying: "The great mass of people are stunted and starved with superficialness. They never get beneath the crust and skin of things with which they deal. They never touch the real reasons and meanings of living. It is better to be overwhelmed with the awful voice of God than to become satisfied with the piping of mechanical ceremonies or the lullabies of traditional creeds." Verily there is a danger that we play about the mere fringe of Christ's great Gospel.

It Never Misses.

Here is a very interesting method, clipped from the Church Progress, of learning, without being told, the page and line where a certain word appears:

Open a book at random, and select a word within the first ten lines and within the tenth word from the end of the line.

Mark the word.

Now double the number of the page and multiply the sum by five.

Then add twenty.

Then add the number of the line you have selected.

Then add five.

Then multiply the sum by ten.

Add the number of the word in the line.

From this subtract 250, and the remainder will indicate in the units columns the number of the word, in the tens columns the number of the line, and the remaining figures the number of the page.

Guess Again.

An old lawyer tells, in the Brooklyn Eagle, this story of one of his experiences years ago, in cross-examination. The witness seemd to be disposed to dodge his questions.

"Sir," said the lawyer, sternly, "you need not state your impressions. We want the facts. We are competent to form our own impressions. Now, sir, answer me categorically.

From that time on he could get little more than "Yes" and "No" out of the witness. Presently the lawyer said:

"You say you live next door to the defendant?"

"Yes."

"To the north of him?"

"No,"

"To the south?"

"No."

"Well, to the west, then?"

"No."

"Ah," said the lawyer, sarcastically, "we are likely at last to get down to the one real fact. You live to the east of him, do you?"

"No."

"How is that, sir?" the astonished attorney asked. "You say you live next door to him. Yet he lives neither to the north, south, east or west of you. What do you mean?"

"I thought perhaps you were competent to form the impression that we live in a flat," said the witness, calmly; "but I see I must inform you that he lives next door above me."

"That Reminds Me."

"I'll tell you the kind of listeners I don't like," said a young woman, vehemently. "They're the ones who hear you through without really interrupting, and whose faces show a smiling animation which you flatter yourself is a tribute to what you are saying—but it isn't any such thing. The minute you get to the end, almost before the last syllable is out, they begin: 'That reminds me of an experience I had one time'; and without word of comment on what you have been saying, they launch forth into an animated personal reminiscence, and sometimes the connection is even hard to see."

"Such people are pretty numerous," said another. "They can't seem to take a healthy, impersonal interest in anything. I saw a dear little girl graduate the other day bring out a photograph of herself which her mother had asked her to show to a friend. There was so much that might have been said to the sweet, shrinking original of the picture, but this woman's sole comment, made with dancing eyes, was: 'I must tell you what a funny thing happened when I had my graduating picture taken fifteen years ago.' And a rather tiresome reminiscence followed, while the new photograph lay utterly ignored in the woman's lap."

The criticism surely is not undeserved. Notice for yourself how many people seem to find pleasure only in such conversation as can be turned personally back upon themselves. And it isn't a lovable or endearing habit, is it?—Bertha Gerneaux Woods, in Zion's Herald.

The Windows of the Mind.

If the windows of your mind are thrown wide to the sunlight there is no place for the darkness.

If they are thrown wide to good cheer there is no room for sadness.

If they are opened to sweet thoughts there is no quarter for the bitter.

If they are bright with hope there is no lurking spot for despair; if they are bright with courage there is no harborage for fear.

If they are filled with tranquility and peace there is no room for discontent.

If they are filled with sweet temper there is no place for anger; if they are filled with tenderness and sympathy there is no shelter for "sweet revenge."

If they are filled with gratitude there is no place for benefits forgot.

If they are filled with the milk of human kindness there is no room or refuge for ill will.—Chicago Tribune.

A Doctor Dialogue.

The doctor looked serious. "You should be very careful for at least a month," he said.

"Is it as bad as all that?" asked the patient anxiously.

"If the result is to be satisfactory, as I would like to have it, you cannot follow the rules that I lay down too carefully."

"I will do just as you say," said the now thoroughly alarmed patient. "Am I eating too heavy?"

"Much too heartily. You should eat simpler food and not so much of it. If you follow my advice you'll cut your butcher's and grocer's bills just about in half."

"I'll do it, doctor."

"You ought to take more exercise, too," continued the physician. "How do you go to your office now?"

"On the street-cars."

"Stop it at once. You must walk to and from your office every day, rain or shine. Do you ever go to the theater?"

"Quite often."

"You mustn't do it while you are under my care. How about smoking?"

"I smoke, of course, but only in moderation."

"Don't smoke at all," instructed the physician. "Throw away all your cigars and don't buy another for thirty days at least, or I'll throw up the case."

"I'll do it, doctor, but—but—"

"Do you drink?"

"Occasionally, but I—"

"Stop it entirely."

"A little claret on the table now and then ought not to—"

"Not a drop at any time."

"All right, doctor, what next?"

"Nothing. Follow these instructions closely for thirty days, and by that time—"

"Yes?" said the patient eagerly.

"By that time," repeated the doctor, "you ought to have saved enough to pay me the balance due on that little bill you have owed me for a matter of about eighteen months. Good day."—Chicago Evening Post.

Our Boys and Girls

Stewart, N. C., July 29, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I will write for my second time. I am a little girl eleven years old. My papa takes the Advocate and I like to read the little boys' and girls' letters.

I have two sisters and three brothers.

My mother died when I was only two years old.

Now I will ask a question: How many books did Paul write?

I will close with love and best wishes to the Orphanage.

EVA HASTY.

Hobucken, N. C., July 11, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As it has been such a long time since I have written to the Advocate, I will write a short letter. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. I study the Bible. My teacher is Miss Sallie Alcock. I like her very much. I also go to every-day school. My sister takes the Advocate and I enjoy reading the little boys' and girls' letters.

I will answer Eva Pearson's question: Solomon was the wisest man.

Enclosed find five cents for the Orphanage.

MILLIE MAYO.

Beaumont, N. C., July 19, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl ten years of age. My papa takes the Advocate and I enjoy reading the little boys' and girls' letters very much. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. My Sunday-school teacher is my uncle, Joe Green. Our pastor is Rev. J. H. Frizelle, and we all like him very much. I have five brothers and two sisters.

I will answer Eva Pearson's question: Solomon was the wisest man.

I will ask one: How old was King Solomon when he died?

Your friend,

MINNIE C. GREEN.

Aberdeen, N. C., August 1, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl ten years old. My papa takes the Advocate and I enjoy reading the little boys' and girls' letters very much. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Mr. Henry Page is our superintendent and Mrs. Ellis is our teacher. Rev. G. A. Oglesby is our pastor.

I have one brother and two sisters living and two little brothers dead. I am very lonely now for my brother and twin sister have gone to grandpa's and I miss them so much. We have a lot of nice flowers in our yard and so many nice grapes too.

I will now ask a question: What king was it that reigned only seven days?

I will close with love and best wishes to the Orphanage.

Enclosed you will find five cents for the Orphanage.

Your little friend,

MAUD SHARPE.

Winterville, N. C., July 27, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I have been a silent reader for quite awhile, and I thought I would like to join the happy cousins. I keep house for my father and five brothers. My mother died in November, 1903.

Cousin Casie Bright, write again, as we are first cousins. I enjoyed your letter fine. We are about the same age I believe, are we not?

My birthday is the 16th of August. I will be fifteen. I will appreciate a letter party from the cousins very much.

They are building a Methodist church at Winterville. I will be so glad when they get it finished. Our pastor is Rev. Mr. Stanfield. We like him fine.

I will try and get $1 for the orphans by Thanksgiving, for I surely do sympathize with them.

I will close by asking a question: Who was Joseph's mother?

Mr. Editor, excuse me for not closing sooner, but I would like to see my letter in print as no one at home knows that I am writing. Good-by, with love to the orphans.

Your affectionate friend,

MAGGIE DICKINSON.

Beaumont, N. C., July 18, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl ten years old. My papa takes the Advocate and I enjoy reading the little boys' and girls' letters very much. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. My teacher's name is Mr. J. S. Green and our pastor is Rev. J. H. Frizelle, and we all like him very much.

My papa's store is about one mile from our house and I bring his dinner most every day and spend the evenings with my friend, Minnie Green.

How many years did Jesus spend preaching?

Your little friend,

NELLIE PARRISH.

East Durham, N. C., July 13, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I wrote to the Advocate sometimes ago and was very glad when it appeared on the children's page. We have a large Sunday-school, with nineteen teachers and about two hundred scholars.

I received a lovely gold pin last Christmas given by our superintendent, Mr. Y. E. Smith, for attending every Sunday in the year. This is our fourth year here. Last Thursday was my twelfth birthday, and I received a nice Bible from my father and mother. I am going to try to read it through by my next birthday.

I will answer Mable and Ossie Edwards' question: It was Aaron's rod that budded, bloomed and yielded almonds.

Now I will ask a question: How long did the flood prevail upon the earth?

With best wishes to the Advocate, I am,

Your friend,

NINA McCALL.

Little Boy Blue.

The little toy dog is covered with dust,
But sturdy and staunch he stands;
And the little toy soldier is red with rust,
And his musket moulds in his hands.
Time was when the little toy dog was new
And the soldier was passing fair,
And that was the time when our Little Boy Blue
Kissed them and put them there.

"Now, don't you go till I come," he said,
"And don't you make any noise!"
So toddling off to his trundle bed
He dreamt of his pretty toys.
And as he was dreaming an angel song
Awakened our Little Boy Blue—
Oh, the years are many, the years are long,
But the little toy friends are true.

Aye, faithful to Little Boy Blue they stand,
Each in the same old place,
Awaiting the touch of a little hand,
The smile of a little face.
And they wonder, as waiting these long years through,
In the dust of that little chair,
What has become of our Little Boy Blue,
Since he kissed them and put them there.

—Eugene Field.

Gone to His Little Boy Blue.

[Written upon hearing of the death of Eugene Field by N. A. Jennings.]

The Little Boy Blue who wandered afar
At sounds of the angel's song
Stands still by the beautiful gates ajar,
While 'round him the children throng.
There's a smile upon the little boy's face
As, waiting for papa, he stands
And welcomes him there with a baby grace,
And holds out his little hands.

Like the little toy dog, all covered with dust,
Who kept his vigil so true,
And the little toy soldier, all red with rust,
So has waited the Little Boy Blue.
He has wondered why papa has stayed away
From where all is pure and bright,
For he wanted him so to join in his play
In the beautiful Land of Light.

Ah, deep in the hearts of world-weary men
Is the tale of the Little Boy Blue,
And gentle tears come to their tired eyes when
They think of the toys so true.
As the little boy went at the angel's call
In his dreams at the end of day,
So the Master who loved the little ones all,
Has gone to his own far away.

Some Things we Wish to Know.

How can you grow a pillow-slip
In the midst of a feather-bed?
And how can a horse-fly over a ship,
Or an ink-stand on its head?
How can a wheel-barrow anything,
And when does a butter-fly?
Will the garden-rake itself next spring?
We pause for a reply.

Does the apple-sauce the canvas-back,
Or the currant-jell out loud?
Does the raspberry-jam the hasty snack
While the peach-preserves the crowd?
And what will the homeless oyster-stew
When the seas have all gone dry?
These things concern both me and you—
We pause for a reply.

"The Neglected Continent."

In the United States, and in England, when reference is made to the missionary work in South America, and especially in Brazil, one says: "The neglected continent;" because, compared with other nations, few missionaries are sent there. It is the locality least blessed with missionaries, in proportion to the population.

It is interesting to note, that the very ones who qualify us as "the neglected continent" are actually the ones who create this neglect, because it depends upon them to send us a large number of missionaries.

And I think that in no other country have missionary efforts been so successful as in ours. It would merit, therefore, double the missionaries which it has, since, truly there is no lack of work and thirsty souls.

These considerations were suggested to me by the reading of the article "Missionary Work" in a recent number of "Expositor Christo" (Brazilian Christian Advocate), in which were given condensed statistics of Methodist missions in various countries of the world. I already knew that other missions—Presbyterians, Baptists, etc.,—send many more missionaries to other nations than to Brazil; so that in these other evangelized countries the proportion of ministers to members is much greater than it is here; but I was still under the illusion that the Methodists were an exception to this; that is, I thought that in Brazil there were, proportionally to the members, more missionaries than in other countries.

But the published statistics have confirmed once more this truth, drawn from them—we are "the neglected continent."

Here are some data:

In China, there were in 1873, only four missionaries. Now there are 53, not including 15 itinerant preachers, and 92 local preachers and helpers (Chinese); all these for 934 members. Omitting the 107 natives, the proportion is one missionary for 18 professed believers in Christ. There are four hospitals, and two dispensaries, as means of propaganda. Here in Brazil, we have not even one simple "medical mission."

Korea.—The mission was established in 1890. There are now 15 missionaries for 424 members; or one missionary for each 28 members.

Japan.—The missionary work began in 1886; there are now 39 missionaries for 744 members; or one missionary for each 19 members.

Mexico.—The work began in 1883; there are now 55 missionaries for 5,814 members; or one missionary for each 105 converts. There are, however, in addition, 53 itinerant preachers, and 121 local preachers, helpers, and teachers (Mexican). And yet more, there are two missionary hospitals.

Cuba.—The work began in 1898; there are now 18 missionaries for 454 members; or one missionary for each 25 members.

Brazil.—The work began in 1874. There are now 40 missionaries for 3,343 members, or one missionary for each 83 members.

It is only in Mexico that there is a less proportion (1 to 105) of missionaries, but in compensation, besides having a population less than half of that of Brazil, there are 174 natives, local preachers, itinerants, helpers, and teachers, for the 5,814 members; and Brazil has only 28 natives (only 28!!), itinerant and local preachers, for 3,343 members, which gives the proportion of one to each 120!! What a burden of care and labor!

Poor, neglected continent! Ah if the foreign missionary societies had sent us missionaries in proportion to our necessities, or at least, in proportion to that which they send to other nations we would not be the neglected continent," but rather "the blessed continent."

These considerations of mine are not offered as censure, since we are very grateful for the benefits received, however they express our anxiety to see our country entirely evangelized and therefore prosperous and reformed.

The above article left with me some time since by Miss Mary Pescud is published with the hope that South America may indeed become "the blessed continent."

BETTER THAN GOLD.

"It was troubled for several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H. "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicines I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run-down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. Only 50 cents. Satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists.

Some Things We Do as Home Mission Workers.

"We nurse the sick.

"Help bury the dead.

"Care for the living in a substantial way.

"Seek employment for them.

"Visit them in health and sickness.

"Educate and entertain them.

"Build homes, i. e., parsonages, settlement, rescue, mission homes and orphanages.

"Provide needful furnishings for homes and supply clothing for their inmates.

"Print live facts and figures to awaken the indifferent.

"Teach sewing. Give music lessons, vocal and instrumental.

"Give carpentery, cooking and English lessons.

"Build churches for the Chinese and Japanese on our shores.

"Esthablish and manage kindergarten, day schools, night schools, and day nurseries."

WORK FOR ALL.

Have our readers realized the number of occupations? Or the diversity of gifts required? Let no one say she can do nothing—there is work for every form of talent and every variety of taste. The Home Mission Society is as broad in scope as the Church; indeed, it is that part of it which provides avenues for woman's work.

SOME THINGS WE HAVE

"Circulating libraries, gymnasiums, baths, Sunday-schools, classes for religious instruction.

"Two thousand one hundred and fourteen members of the Florine McEachern Mite Box Brigade, which was organized last year.

"Two thousand and twelve Baby Roll members added during fiscal year recently closed, making a total membership of 37,089.

"Property owned by Society valued at $81,500."

OUR NEEDS

And the continual cry is for more homes, more schools, more money, more members! What can we say to awaken the sleeping Christian, to arouse the indifferent, to arrest the thoughtless? Surely the next generation, trained by the Mite Box and Baby Roll members of this, will be fully alive to their duties and privileges! And this thought brings to mind the great responsibilities of us older members in keeping our children strong in the faith and true to the work. It is our golden opportunity, and I trust we will treasure it and strive to improve it as faithful, intelligent Christians should.

Life More Abundant.

Miss Annabel Weigle, one of our first Deaconesses, has been called to her reward. While we sorrow at our loss, we rejoice in her eternal glory. Her illness and death were sudden and many mourn her untimely going (as it seems to human judgment).

She was a graduate of the Chicago Training School, and in February entered Settlement work at the Neidringhaus Social Settlement in St. Louis, an institution of the M. E. Church.

Her pastor writes: "She was a great soul, and though with us but a short time, we came to love her for what she was."

Report of Our Thirteenth Annual Meeting Held at Selma.

This meeting proved the thirteenth to be a most auspicious number, and in no way more conclusively than in Mrs. Jerome's full and interesting report. Our Society here returns appreciative and grateful thanks for her conscientious and capable work, with the earnest hope that she may be spared long, and in health, to fill the important position of Conference Recording Secretary.

I would urge every member to read carefully the entire report, and I hope every President will call particular attention to the work of the committees. Sisters, let us be conversant with our work and love to tell others of it.

MYSTERIOUS CIRCUMSTANCE.

One was pale and sallow and the other fresh and rosy. Whence the difference? She who is blushing with health uses Dr. King's New Life Pills to maintain it. By gently arousing the lazy organs they compel good digestion and head off constipation. Try them. Only twenty-five cents at all druggists.

TOUR TO ST. LOUIS.

The Baracas have arranged with the Seaboard for special cars to the World's Fair on August 9th, and they will have quite a movement from North Carolina.

The National Baracas Convention meets in St. Louis August 11th and 12th, and arrangements are being made for this trip by Mr. R. N. Simms, Vice-President, and Mr. L. W. Alderman, Secretary, and Mr. W. A. Cooper. Cars will be attached to other trains and the lowest rates in effect at the time will be available for any who desire to join the party. Special rates will be arranged at hotels.

Those who desire to accompany this party should address either of the above gentlemen, or the undersigned, who will furnish complete information.

Editorial

FOR OUR AUGUST FRIENDS.

Who are our August Friends?

Those of our readers whose subscription to the Advocate is due.

Is this all?

No. Those of our readers whose subscription is due and who during the dog-days of August send in their renewal are our August Friends.

Why are we calling on our August Friends?

Simply because we need now every cent that we can get.

Our expenses are as heavy as ever. They must be met as promptly in cash as ever.

We do not wish to borrow money and pay interest—money that many of our August Friends are as able to pay now as at any other time of the year.

We are hoping to hear from our August Friends.

Will you be one?

THE "ODIUM PECUNIOSUM."

"Odium theologicum" is a term used to denote those strong feelings aroused in one when he defends his own theological doctrine or attacks that of another.

We have invented another term somewhat corresponding to the one just spoken of—"odium pecuniosum." We regret the necessity for using foreign words. We are unable to compress Anglo-Saxon language into an expression brief enough for a heading that will compass our meaning.

"Odium pecuniosum" is that feeling which is aroused in many when they are requested to spend money for the Lord's kingdom.

The "odium pecuniosum" is more common than the "odium theologicum." There are thousands of saints who will smile blandly when their doctrines are attacked, but who will become excited when the church, through her representatives, makes a demand on their pocket books.

The "odium pecuniosum" is indicated in the following expressions so familiar to preachers and church officers: "It is always money, money!" "Every time I go to church there is some kind of collection." "I am tired of this everlasting cry for money." And the "odium pecuniosum" sometimes becomes so rank and powerful that stewards fly like bats to their caves, while the preacher walks for weeks without the comfort of knowing that he has anything of a "metallic nature" in his pocket. It has forced many a preacher to apologize whenever he mentioned money in the pulpit. It has placed the kingdom of God on a basis of cringing, scrimping economy. It has reversed in principle the command of Jesus Christ, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God."

Why should a saint, through the "odium pecuniosum," disown, nay, spurn the idea that the King's business requires money? His church is a human institution. The days of miracles are over. The daily manna no longer falls to feed hungry mouths. The coin of the realm is necessary. What other business is so deep in its nature, so stupendous in its sweep, so noble in its purpose, so lasting in its results, and so mighty in its output as the business of the King. There is no business so grand and vital as that of serving the Lord and supporting His church. The scope of one's business is measured by the amount of money involved in conducting it. How dares any one to say through his little niggardly giving that the mighty circle of God's kingdom, sweeping beyond creation's outposts, should be made to fit the circumference of a paltry dollar. Yet this is done by every one who practically denies that the Church of God should use more dollars than any other organization on the face of the earth.

Again, why should a saint, through his "odium pecuniosum," deny that the demands of the King's business are at least as numerous and constant and exacting as the demands of the family, the farm, the store? You never think it strange that these interests come to you every day with a request for money. Then why do you frown and complain and even stay away from church, because, as you say, "They are always begging for money"?

Oh! dollar-squeezing saints, did you ever think how constantly your demands are met by the loving Father who has placed His business in your hands? Every second you call on Him for breath; daily you call on Him for food; throughout the days and nights of spring, summer, autumn and winter, your body, your spirit, your family, your secular business, call on God for sustenance. He meets every demand. Yet when He calls on you through His servants to bring all the tithes into His storehouse, you entreat those servants shamefully and fill the land with the echo of your cry, "It is always money, money!" Oh, shame on the "odium pecuniosum," and all who possess it!

THE CHURCH SCHOOL FOR THE PEOPLE OF THE CHURCH.

We trust that our readers gave special attention to the late article in the Advocate, written by our talented friend and brother, R. T. Poole, Esq., and entitled, "What the Church School Has Done for the State."

It seems strange that there should be any necessity for reminding the public that the church school is here by divine right, and that its claims are vindicated not only by its heavenly credentials, but by the fruit it bears.

Mr. Poole speaks wisely when he says: "Has the State a right to educate?" That it has a legal right to do so, we do not question. Has the church a right to educate? I answer, Yes. Has the church proven herself competent to educate. I would refer you to its great majority of our American colleges and universities which dot our country, from its lakes to the Gulf, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. No one doubts where such institutions as Harvard or Yale or Princeton or Johns Hopkins or Tufts or Wesleyan or Brown or Vanderbilt or Trinity, Connecticut, or Trinity, North Carolina belongs. It must be evident to the most prejudiced observer that the great educational energy of this country is found in the church.

We do not fear any comparison of the Methodist schools of North Carolina with those which are purely secular. Take the men and women who have come from our Methodist schools, and in all that goes to make up a normal, robust manhood, they stand preeminent.

Our schools, from the colleges down, will open in a few weeks. To the hundreds of parents who are looking for an institution to which they may send the boy and girl, we would say: You are the trustees of your childrens interests. You cannot evade your responsibility. You, not the boy or girl, are to choose the school. In choosing, obediently remember the command, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness," and we shall not fear that the church school will lack the patronage of the people of the church.

Prof. Olin Moore, a son of Rev. M. H. Moore, formerly of the North Carolina Conference, of Carrollton, has been elected to the chair of Modern Languages in Millsaps College, at Jackson, Miss. Last year Professor Moore took a course at Harvard University, and he is well equipped for his work.

DO WE BELIEVE IN "CHOOSE THE LESSER"?

We of this day and time can have but a faint conception of the moral stamina required of the early Christians. Their places of worship were the dark caves and dense woods. No credit was attached in those days to church members, but the faith of the followers of the lowly Nazarene was tested by cruel struggles with wild beasts, by stonings and by all the forms of cruelty that fiends could devise. We wonder what our world of today would say if those scenes could be re-enacted, remembering that the torture would have instantly ceased if the victims had but whispered a feeble denial of their Master. We fear that the answer would be denunciation instead of admiration. Those early heroes believed that of two evils, choose neither, but leave the result to God. The tendency today is, of two evils choose the lesser—and leave God out. The world is full of this. Everywhere we see men and women compromising themselves in their Christian life. The Scripture, "He that provideth not for his own household hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel," is quoted with great gusto by Sabbath breakers and others who have to solve for themselves the great moral questions being agitated. The Bible lays down certain fundamental and basic laws, declaring that certain things are good or bad, helpful or injurious. This was the guide when the world was young, and when a few human beings were earnestly seeking to save their souls, though the path was beset by danger and death. Those laws as laid down have never been abrogated, never will be as long as right is right and wrong is wrong. What would the early martyrs think and say if their dust, buried in the centuries' keep, could rise today and live again. What would they say of us who have reaped the reward of their sufferings, and, rejoicing in strength, have taken the law which was their delight and have twisted and altered it to conform to our supposedly more enlighted civilization and Christianity?

The Census Bureau has just issued a bulletin giving statistics of the negro population. The facts show that, while the negroes of the Southern States have increased 33.1 per cent during the last twenty years, the white population increased 56.5 per cent. For fifty years, therefore, the census proves that the white population has been steadily gaining on the negroes. In 1900 there were, according to the report, 9,204,531 negroes in the United States, which is a much larger number than is found in any other country except Africa. About 90 per cent of them are in the Southern States, and the lower Mississippi Valley is the section most thickly populated by them, the proportion being fifteen negroes to one white.

No department of our church work in the Virginia Conference has shown larger development in better methods than the Sunday-school work. Teachers' meetings, normal classes, graded work, and most attractive primary departments are becoming the rule among us. Professor Hamill is doing splendid service for our church.—Exchange.

Rev. H. W. Baker, our missionary in Havana, Cuba, passed through Jacksonville a few days since with a party of Cuban gentlemen en route to St. Louis. From there Brother Baker will join his family in Detroit, Mich., where they have been visiting for some time, and take a month's vacation. He reports that the pure Gospel of Christ is making a deep impression upon the thinking minds of Cuba.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Evangelist Walter Holcombe, of Statesville, N. C., has made a contract with Mr. Edward McKenzie, of Louisville, Ky., to sing for him for the next twelve months. Mr. McKenzie was with Rev. George R. Stuart and Rev. Sam. P. Jones last year. Messrs. Holcomb and McKenzie are conducting a camp-meeting in Tennessee.

Methodist Mention

State.

We are gratified to learn that the health of Rev. J. E. Bristowe is much better.

The election at Fremont last week resulted in a victory for the temperance forces.

At the Wilmington District Conference there were twenty-five preachers and about fifty delegates.

Rev. S. T. Moyle writes that his meeting at Osgood last week was very successful. Six joined the church.

Dr. P. L. Groome, whose health has been almost restored, is preparing to build a handsome residence in Greensboro.

Rev. M. T. Plyler is having the most gratifying success in his canvass for securing equipment for the Greensboro Female College dormitories.

Rev. H. B. Anderson and wife, of Goldsboro, passed through Raleigh on last Friday on their way to Panacea Springs where they expect to spend two weeks.

Rev. H. M. Blair, editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, is at Connelly's Springs, repairing his health which has not been so good for the last few months.

The announcement of the opening of Greensboro Female College October 1, 1904, comes to us in a beautiful folder containing a picture of the building when completed.

Last week Rev. G. B. Perry assisted Rev. W. T. Usry in a meeting at Snead's Grove which resulted in twenty-two professions and fifteen additions to church membership.

Rev. W. L. Dawson, who left the Methodist Conference two years ago to connect himself with the Holiness church, has returned to the Methodist church and has been appointed to the North Catawba Circuit.

A mass meeting of all the Christians of Thomasville was held at the Methodist church of Thomasville last Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, preparatory to a revival meeting which is to begin at that church at an early date.

Rev. F. F. Eure wishes to thank Mrs. W. S. Stevens, of Smithfield, for $1.00 sent him for the new church at Wakefield. The necessity for a church at this place is very pressing and we hope that Brother Eure may receive many such letters.

We learn from Rev. R. H. Willis that Miss Sallie Benson, of Nashville, N. C., has been elected teacher for the Intermediate Department of the Harry North School, and Miss Emma Davis, of Warren Plains, N. C., of the Music Department. Both are preacher's daughters. The fall term will open September 5th.

Mr. John W. Ward, of Rowland, is one of our elect Methodists. He made us a pleasant visit last week and announced that he wished to furnish one of the dormitories of Greensboro Female College in memory of his father, Mr. E. B. Ward, deceased. He also said that he intended for his daughter to occupy that room some day.

Rev. R. H. Broome, Carthage Circuit, writes: "I have protracted meetings at Ingram Branch and Highfalls. Many believers were quickened. Eight persons confessed Christ. Four converts joined the church. Rev. J. W. Hoyle, of the Elise Circuit, gave us three days of effective service. His preaching was spiritual and helpful."

Rev. H. W. Baker, a Methodist Episcopal missionary stationed at Havana, Cuba, and supported by the Men's Missionary Society Society of the Centenary Church, this city, arrived here to-day. He was accompanied by Rev. Francis Diaz, native Cuban, who was converted under Rev. Mr. Baker's ministry and is now pastor of a church at Havana.—Greensboro Telegram.

We acknowledge receipt of the report of the Thirteenth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the North Carolina Conference, held at Selma, N. C., April 27 to May 2, 1904. It is an interesting and valuable document.

Prof. Jerome Dowd of the University of Wisconsin has been in Charlotte for a brief stay, after having spent a large part of his vacation at Chicago University giving lectures and also taking special work in his line—sociology and economics.

The pulpit of Pleasant Grove M. E. Church was occupied last Sunday morning by Rev. Robert Lee Davis, of Windsor, a school-mate of Pastor E. E. Rose. He delivered a fine sermon, which was well received by a large and attentive audience.—Roanoke-Chowan Times.

Our friend and brother, Leon T. Vaughan, Esq., writes: "We have recently organized an Epworth League in our town (Nashville, N. C.), and I have been requested to tell them about the workings of the League." He can obtain literature from Dr. H. M. Du Bose, Epworth League Secretary, Nashville, Tenn.

According to the terms of a contract recently entered into by Rev. J. M. Rhodes, president of Littleton Female College, with Mr. W. P. Rose, a Raleigh architect, the latter is to do improvement work at the college aggregating $100,000—the work to be done at the rate of $10,000 annually for ten years.

Rev. Thomas F. Pierce, D. D., last surviving son of Dr. Lovick Pierce, of Georgia, only remaining brother of Bishop George F. Pierce, of our church, died recently at the home of his son, Rev. W. L. Pierce, at Gainesville, Ga. He was seventy-nine years of age and had been a Methodist preacher fifty-seven years. He was a member of the North Georgia Conference and was greatly loved and esteemed by his brethren.—Exchange.

Asheville, N. C., August 2.—John S. Huyler, the New York candy millionaire manufacturer, and for a number of years past closely identified with the Montreat Religious Association near Black Mountain, to-day purchased, at public sale, through his agent, J. A. Porter, the famous Asheville College property, situated in the heart of the city and containing a number of acres of ground and a large and handsome building, formerly used as the dormitory and recitation rooms of the Asheville College for Young Women. The price paid by Mr. Huyler was $30,000.—News and Observer.

We take the following from the Salem correspondent of the Oxford Ledger: "The revival which began at Salem the fourth Sunday closed last Sabbath the 31st. Rev. F. M. Shamburger helped the pastor, Rev. W. H. Puckett, and did the most of the preaching. He preached with great power and the people gave heed to his words of wisdom. Rev. Mr. Ormond, of Kittrell, reached us Thursday and was with us two days. We liked him also and hope he will come again. There were a large number of conversions and ten accessions to the church. The church was greatly revived and we trust lasting good was done. Our pastor and people are much pleased with the results as this was the best meeting we have had in a number of years."

Notice.

I shall ask Brother Walker to give me on August 20, a statement of his receipts for missions up to that date, and in a few days thereafter a copy of this statement will be sent out to the preachers of the Conference. Let all who have on hand money for this cause send it in immediately to J. B. Walker, Treasurer, Durham, N. C.

R. H. WILLIS,
Conference Secretary of Missions.

Morehead City, N. C., August 5, 1904.

There have been over two thousand additions to the church in St. Louis District this year.

General Notes

The Baptists of England raised $1,236,235 for their Twentieth Century Fund.

Bishop Vincent has chosen Indianopolis as his residence. He will spend the summer at Chautauqua.

The Congregational Church in the United States has among its clergy fifty-three licensed women preachers.

The International Bible Reading Association now has a membership of 820,000, speaking thirty different languages.

France has given the Papal representative at Rome his passports and discontinued diplomatic relations with the Vatican.

Mr. Davidson becomes connectional editor of the English Wesleyan Conference, in place of Dr. W. L. Watkinson, who becomes supernumerary.

The archbishop of Canterbury has now definitely accepted the invitation of the Episcopal church in the United States to be present at the General Convention in Boston in October.

The choir of one of the largest churches in the city of Memphis, Tenn., went on a strike a few days ago. This is nothing uncommon in North Carolina. We have seen it a dozen times.

The new city directory for Chicago has been given to the public. Based on the number of names it gives, Chicago has a population for 1904 of 2,241,000, an increase of 10,000 over last year.

The Y. M. C. A., of Treadwell Island, Alaska, has been organized a year, and two hundred miners have become members. The saloons and gambling places have lost their business, and the jail is practically empty.

Two sons of Methodist preachers have secured Rhodes scholarships at Oxford University, Sanley Hornbeck, son of Dr. M. D. Hornbeck, of Denver, who represents Colorado, and the son of Dr. A. O. Ebright, of Winfield, Kan., who goes from that State.

Alas! for greatness. Here is the way one English paper puts it up: "The delegate from the Methodist Episcopal Church South America, to the Sheffield Conference is Bishop Hoss, who will preach next Sunday morning and evening at St. James's Hall."

In Rev. Dr. Russell Conwell's Philadelphia "Temple" a string of megaphones is suspended before the pulpit platform, and in the choir gallery, and the sermon, hymns, and anthems are thus conveyed by telephone to many shut-in patients in the hospital.

The Christian Work remarks: "King Edward's action in receiving General Booth the other day, and expressing his sympathy with the work of the Salvation Army, was exceedingly gracious and fitting. It will commend the Salvation Army anew to British support."

Bishop Key after holding the District Conference at Little Rock, went down to stamps to dedicate a new church in the pastoral charge of Rev. A. M. Robertson.—Arkansas Methodist. Bad on the Bishop. Why did they not pay his expenses by sending him a check in advance? We turn the case over to Dr. Woods of the St. Louis.

The Methodist preachers of Philadelphia have recently made a canvass of their city in behalf of their Methodist church paper. Seventy-two pastors, in but a few days' systematic work, added one thousand seven hundred and fifty-four full-year Advocate subscribers to the list. This bears out what we have so often said—the circulation of the church paper depends largely upon the pastors.—Exchange. And it illustrates, too, the fact, that there is no reason why a city preacher should consider it beneath his dignity to canvass for his church paper.

Affliction a Discipline.

I am often impressed by the different ways in which different persons are affected by sorrows. Some seem to have no rallying power after a great affliction; the wound never heals. On the other hand, trials that consume some persons only kindle others into greater exertions. "The financial gale has carried away all your spars, and swept your decks," I once wrote to an eminent Christian merchant after his bankruptcy, "but you have got enough grace stowed away in your hold to make you rich to all eternity." That brave servant of Christ repaired damages, resumed business, rallied his friends, and "at evening time it was light." Smitten down, he was not destroyed.

The afflictions which are sent of God or permitted by him are never intended for his children's destruction, but for their discipline. The Shepherd casts his flock into deep waters to wash them, not to drown them. "You will kill that bush if you put that knife into it so deep," said a gentleman to his gardener. "No, sir; I do this every year to keep it from running all to leaves; pruning brings the fruit." We pastors often find God's faithful ones bleeding under the knife, but afterwards they yield the peaceable and precious fruits of righteousness and triumphant trust. It is that "afterward" that God has in His mind when He sends the trial. Affliction is the costly school in which great graces are often acquired, and from which grand characters are graduated.—Theodore Cuyler.

Talking and Doing.

Late one afternoon a trolley car, hurrying with its load of hungry, tired passengers, stopped. Directly on the track, holding the right of way, was a heavily loaded coal wagon; the horses strained and tugged, but the load didn't stir. The passengers began to talk. One said, "It is a shame to overload horses like that! The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals ought to take up the case. Horses have rights as well as men. The driver ought to be punished." But the load did not stir. It takes a deal of talk to draw a load of coal.

Another man said: "The corporations are to blame; they are too greedy; there should be more horses and lighter loads, even if the profits are smaller. If the State owned and distributed coal, the horses would have a better chance; the cure for corporate greed is State ownership." But this declaration of principles didn't stir the coal.

Another man spoke of his pity for the overloaded, overworked horses; but pity in the car isn't power on the pole.

One man, with a practical turn of mind, left the car, spoke to the horses, patted their necks, won their confidence, pushed sturdily at the wheels, encouraged the horses at the same time. A few pounds of push, a hundred-weight of good cheer, and the load started!

If the church sticks, if discouragements are in the way, if the road is blocked, don't blame conditions and circumstances, don't pity the overworked; get out, whisper a word of encouragement, put your shoulder to the wheel, do your share to make things move, to clear the track. "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." The voices of many in the car brought nothing to pass; the voice of one in the right place, coupled with a little effort, opened the way.

Anybody can criticise, find fault, blame; it takes sense to help. Sympathy in the car will never help the horses; get out, talk a little, and push a good deal. Put your shoulder to the wheel. Cease to be a load and become a force. Put your strength against the obstacles, your words where they will do work. Give a hearty welcome to the stranger next you in church. Be a radiator, not a refrigerator; raise the temperature, not lower it. Call on that new family next door, ask the members to your church home. Get the new children into the Bible school. Put your share of the substance into the treasury. Quit grumbling, begin pushing. Back up your words by your deeds.—The Parish Visitor.

NEARLY FORFEITS HIS LIFE.

A runaway almost ending fatally, started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill. For four years it defied all doctors and all remedies. But Bucklen's Arnica Salve had no trouble to cure him. Equally good for Burns, Bruises, Skin Eruptions and Piles. Twenty-five cents at all druggists.

Obadiah and Elijah.

(1 Kings 18:1-16.)

Golden Text: I thy servant fear the Lord from my youth. (1 Kings 18:12.)

A PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Obadiah was evidently a man of God as well as Elijah, as shown by many acts that he had done. It is fidelity that God cares more about than any other acquirement we may possess. Education, wealth, honor, and position may be good in their place, but the Almighty cares more for faithfulness than for any other quality. No matter what he sets us at, this grace supersedes all others. It is not the degree of ability that we possess, but the use of what we have that pleases him. "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth God, and worketh righteousness, is accepted of him." (Acts 10:34, 35.) If all his children were equally faithful he would love all alike. Ahab, the king, had doubtless noticed that he could depend upon Obadiah, and so had him in his employ. It is the case sometimes that wicked men notice this quality in Christians, and desire the benefit by employing them.

The famine had now continued in Samaria between three and four years, and it was quite difficult to find sustenance for man or beast, but God sent Elijah to Ahab, promising to send rain. Ahab had sent his servant through the land to seek for fountains of water and brooks, and also to find grass, and thus save the mules and horses, while he sought the same, going another way. Elijah met Obadiah on this errand, and said: "Tell your master that Elijah is here." Obadiah feared that before his master came the Spirit would convey Elijah elsewhere, and Ahab would think he had told a lie, for he knew the earnestness with which he had sought him. When Elijah had promised him that he would show himself to Ahab that day he was content to tell his master, and then the king went to meet him.

When Ahab saw him he said: "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" It is a common thing for wicked men to suppose that the man who preaches the truth, or whom God uses to accomplish his purposes, is the party to blame, when they might blame themselves for the catastrophes that have come. It was so in this case, and hence Elijah answered him: "I have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father's house, in that he have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and thou hast followed Baalim." (1 Kings 18:18.) It seems strange that it should be so, but thus it has ever been and I suppose will be to the end of time. No such calamity would fall on men or nations that would follow the Lord, but it is sent in mercy to bring them back to God. We shall not care in eternity what means he has used to bring us back, so that his purpose is accomplished.

The sequel shows that Elijah was in the right, though Ahab persisted that he was a bad man, a troubler in Israel, and did not seem to see that he himself was responsible for the famine. But he was not the first nor the last wicked man that has taken a similar view of things. Human nature desires to exculpate itself from blame, and so frequently endeavors to make others responsible when they are entirely innocent. But the day is soon coming that will vindicate everyone who has done right and bring everyone who has done wrong to confusion. I presume this is a part of the discipline every child of God is called to undergo in this life. He will put every man in his right place in the end, so that the children of God have only to bide their time and all will come out right. I presume this is one of the chastisements with which God disciplines his little ones. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the Father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards and not sons. (Heb. 12:6, 7, 8.) —George W. Coleman.

CURES ECZEMA, ITCHING HUMORS, PIMPLES AND CARBUNCLES.—COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) is now recognized as a certain and sure cure for eczema, itching skin, humors, scabs, scales, watery blisters, pimples, aching bones or joints, boils, carbuncles, prickling pain in the skin, old, eating sores, ulcers, etc. Botanic Blood Balm taken internally, cures the worst and most deep-seated cases by enriching, purifying and vitalizing the blood supply to the skin. Botanic Blood Balm is the only cure, to stay cured, for these awful, annoying skin troubles. Heals every sore and gives the rich glow of health to the skin. Builds up the broken down body and makes the blood red and nourishing. Especially advised for chronic, old cases that doctors, patent medicines and hot springs fail to cure. Druggists, $1. To prove B. B. B. cures, sample sent free and prepaid by writing Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga. Describe trouble, and free medical advice sent in sealed letter.

I CURE CANCER.
Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No Knife. No plaster. No caustics. No slaughtering oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure internal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment;" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else in the the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

CANCER CURED WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

Miss Alice Kidd of Caroline Co., Va., says she came to the Kellam Cancer Hospital of Richmond, Va., in June, 1900, for treatment of cancer in her right breast; after a few weeks there the cancer came out and breast healed nicely. When she came home and her health has been better ever since.

Individuality.

The individuality of the Stieff Piano is its chief charm.

There is no other piano just like the Stieff.

Others try to imitate, but somehow they fail to reach that "everything," that individuality, characteristc of the Stieff Piano.

The Stieff Piano enjoys another "individuality" foreign to any other artistic make.

It is sold direct to the user, not to the retail dealer to resell.

"This "individuality" keeps the retail dealer's big profit in your home, and you secure an ideal piano that will meet every demand of the greatest pianist or most exacting musician.

It costs no more than a medium grade, or more likely cheap piano, through the middleman.

To the Sunday-School.

I am asking seven or eight Sunday-schools on each district to send $15 to furnish a bed in our new building, and the name of the school to be put on it. I read out the names of these on the Fayetteville and Rockingham Districts at their last sessions. Siler City is the first to respond. They are as follows:

Raleigh District—Louisburg, Clayton, Franklinton, Smithfield, Selma, Cary, Kenly, Central, Raleigh.

Durham District—Carr Church, West Durham; Hillsboro, Roxboro, Chapel Hill, Concord, on Roxboro Circuit, and Mount Tirza.

Fayetteville District—Jonesboro, Sanford, Pittsboro, Carthage, Hope Mills, Dunn, Siler City, Goldston.

Rockingham District—Roberdell, Mt. Gilead, Troy, Biscoe, Aberdeen, Red Springs Lumberton, Gibson and St. Johns, Maxton and Caledonia.

Wilmington District—Fifth Street, Wilmington; Southport, Fair Bluff, Whiteville, Wallace, Magnolia, Bladen Street, Market Street, Clinton and Ingold.

New Bern District—Beaufort, Morehead City, LaGrange, Oriental, Dover, Snow Hill, Ormonds, Mount Olive, Faisons, Grifton.

Washington District—Fremont, Stantonburg, Elm City, Spring Hope, Nashville, Tarboro, Bethel, Robbinsville, Aurora and Fairfield.

Warrenton District—Warrenton, Macon, Littleton, Roanoke Rapids, Jackson, Rich Square, Murfreesboro, Windsor, Scotland Neck, Hobgood, Battleboro and Enfield.

Elizabeth City District—Hertford, Edenton, Sunbury, Parkers, Gatesville, Plymouth, Roper, Belhaven, Manteo, Wanchese.

That would furnish nine or ten dormitories.

The following can very easily give us $100 to furnish rooms:

Grace, St. Paul's, Goldsboro; Centenary, First Church, Elizabeth City, Trinity, Durham; Edenton Street and Wilson. Edenton Street has already given a hundred on plastering the dining-room.

The following can give us $60 to furnish school:

Kinston, Rocky Mount, Greenville, Washington, Fayetteville, Rockingham, City Roads, Burlington, Laurinburg.

The following can give us $50 to furnish other rooms: Weldon, Henderson and Oxford.

Mrs. Ivan Proctor and her "Lend a Hand Circle," takes the matron's parlor.

Various individuals can furnish rooms and a large number can give $15 to furnish beds. Send along the cash, beloved. The time is short. Factories, harwware and furniture stores can help. Let everybody help. Other Sunday-schools not mentioned can furnish a bed or other things.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of urine difficulties. If it did there would be few children that would do it. There is a constitutional cause for this. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 288, Notre Dame, Ind., will send her home treatment to any mother. She asks no money. Write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child. The chances are it can't help it

For BRILLIANT TEETH, HEALTHY GUMS, A CLEAN MOUTH,

BOYLAN.—Bro. D. L. Boylan was born in Pender County, N. C., then Hanover, the 27th of July, 1837, and died June 24, 1904.

Brother Boylan joined the M. E. Church, South, when young and has been a faithful member since. Seven children survive him—three girls and four boys—all of whom belong to the church. He was twice married; both of his wives preceded him to the better land.

Brother Boylan was a good citizen and a consecrated Christian; one who loved his church and was ever ready to perform whatever duty enjoined upon him.

May God's richest blessings rest upon the bereaved ones; and may each of us prepare to meet him in heaven; and on that happy golden shore may we shout his praise forever more.

By his dear friend,
AMOS BATSON.

MOFFIT.—Mrs. Martha J. Moffit (nee Dorsett) was born May 22, 1830, and departed this life May 7, 1904. Sister Moffit was converted while young and joined the Missionary Baptist Church in which she lived a consistent Christian life until more than twenty years ago, with her husband and children, she joined the M. E. Church, South. She was always loyal to her church and loved all of its interests. She was a kind and affectionate mother, sweet-spirited Christian, and good neighbor. Her community and church miss her much. She expressed herself as not afraid to die, but ready to go when the summons might come.

She leaves eight children, all married: M. M., W. B., S. C., E. G., and T. R. Moffitt, and Mrs. Gregson, of Sanford, N. C.; Mrs. J. R. Rives and Mrs. N. Cheek, of Goldston, N. C. Upon these and her host of friends who mourn their loss may heaven's richest blessings rest.

J. C. HUMBLE.

SUGG.—Died, near Mt. Hermon Church, Snow Hill Circuit, January 23, 1904, Mr. Roderick P. Sugg, aged sixty-three years, nine months and fourteen days.

About eighteen months before his death his wife was called away. This was a sore trial, and brought sadness to his heart. Again, about three weeks prior to his departure, he followed his sister, Mrs. Barrow, to the grave. Little did he think, while passing through this valley and shadow, that his days were so nearly numbered. He was a good man, a useful citizen, and a faithful member of the Methodist Church. He is gone from our midst, but we shall see him again. May we all meet him in the realm of bliss—the "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

"Dust, to thy narrow house beneath!
Soul, to thy place on high!
They that have seen thy look in death,
No more may fear to die."

E. C. S.

WHITE.—Mrs. Harriet E. White (nee Wilson) was born in Perquimans County, N. C., 1847, and died in Elizabeth City, N. C., May 4, 1904. She leaves eight children—five sons and three daughters—to mourn their loss, with relatives and friends. One son and the youngest daughter were with her when the end came. All arrived for the funeral and burial at Oak Grove Church. Here was her old home and church membership; here she labored so arduously for the Lord she loved so devotedly for the greater part of her life. Hers was an exemplary life. Being a widow for many years, she had the responsibility of raising the family. This duty she did nobly and well, as all can testify who know her children. Hers was an unselfish life; living for the good of others, and especially her children. They now "rise up and call her blessed. Constant in her devotion to her children and God; laboring for Him till the Master said: "It's enough, come up higher." She leaves a sweet fragrance behind her which makes the sphere in which she moved sweeter and better. But we mourn not as those who have no hope. We know where to find this Christian mother. May her children emulate her many virtues and meet the dear mother in the "sweet bye and bye." To the children: Thy mother rests "safe in the arms of Jesus."

F. L. CHURCH, P. C.

JONES.—The death of Mrs. Needham Jones, which occurred June 6, 1904, though not unexpected, was nevertheless a shock to all who knew her. She died at her home near Shotwell after a lingering illness of about twelve weeks. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kimborough Jones, of what was in former days called Crabtree. The old home is still standing about three miles from Raleigh, and here she was born August 7, 1855.

On June 6, 1876, she was happily married to Mr. Needham Jones. Several children were born to them, but only two survive her.

Converted early in life, she was a member of Millbrook Circuit since early childhood. She lived her religion and thus exemplified by her life the realities of Christianity. From all that I have ever heard of her, her life was one constant sweet prayer to God for her family and kindred, as well as humanity in general. She was to a great extent a shut-in, her health being for many years extremely delicate. Only the tenderest care by husband and daughter kept her here as long as she was. They watched over her as though she had been a rare exotic, as she was, until the time when God, having prepared a place for her in the fair clime to which she was better suited than this one of ours, transplanted her to be with Him forever.

Her frail and delicate form was committed to the earth in a most beautiful spot in Oakwood cemetery, Raleigh. Many were the friends and relatives who followed in the funeral train after the simple services at her home had been held by her pastor; while at the grave they were joined by a great number of friends and kindred from Raleigh and vicinity. Here the last sad rites of her church were said. Her former pastor, Rev. N. L. Seabolt, pronounced the benediction; and as the earth was gently returned to the grave the choir of Edenton Street M. E. Church, South, sang beautiful hymns full of comfort to the grief-stricken ones.

In heaven waiting for her were several children who had died in infancy. Here on earth waiting to join her she left a husband, kind and true, and two noble affectionate children, a son, Kimborough Jones, Jr., Professor at the Conservatory of Music, Durham, N. C., and a daughter, Miss Elizabeth P. Jones. There also survived her three sisters—Mrs. Thomas Davis, Mrs. William Davis and Mrs. Willis Whitaker, and a brother, Mr. Kimborough Jones, all of Raleigh. Those left behind do not mourn as those who have no hope, but await with confidence in God the meeting which is the reward of those who love and serve Him.

THE SKIN

LIKE A SPONGE

Some of the most stubborn diseases enter into the system through the pores of the skin. Like a sponge, it absorbs poisons of various kinds, which are taken up by the little blood-vessels beneath the surface of the body, and emptied into the great current of the blood. The juices of poison oak and other noxious wild plants percolate through the skin like water through a sponge, are taken into the circulation, breaking out afresh each season, and lingering on for years unless antidoted and driven out of the system.

Dye Poisoning among the employes of dye houses, and from wearing colored under-clothing and hosiery, is of frequent occurrence and dangerous to health, causing boils and sores and other eruptions.

Workers in lead, brass and other metals ars often poisoned by the chemicals and acids used in polishing, and the dust and filings settling upon the skin, and which find their way through the pores into the blood, followed by inflammation, swelling and the most obstinate sores.

Blood Poison, the vilest of all human diseases, is often contracted through shaking the hand or handling the clothing or other articles used by one infected with this dangerous poison. The deadly virus finding its way through the pores of the skin, contaminates the blood and produces fearful ulcers, eruptions and blotches.

POISON OAK AND ITS EFFECTS.

Over fifteen years ago I was poisoned with Poison Oak. I tried remedy after remedy without getting relief. Sores broke out over my body and on my tongue, affecting the lining of my mouth. Finally, about a year ago my doctor told me to try S. S. S., which I did. After taking three bottles all the sores disappeared, and I have not been bothered since, and I feel much indebted to your valuable medicine for so prompt and complete a cure. I am certain that S. S. S. will do all that is claimed for it in blood diseases.

Danville, Ky. CON. O'BRYAN.

SSS

The diseases that enter the system by absorption or through the pores are as deep-seated and dangerous as any brought on by internal causes, and cannot be reached by washes, salves, soaps or other external remedies. The blood must be purified and a healthy circulation established before getting permanently rid of the disease. S. S. S. acts upon the blood, ridding it of the original poison and restoring it to a healthy, normal condition.

S. S. S. is guaranteed entirely vegetable, an unrivaled blood purifier and the best of all tonics. With all impurities removed from the blood, the sores and eruptions disappear from the skin. Write us should you desire medical advice or any information about your case; this will cost you nothing.

A tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mrs. Margaret C. Thomson from W. F. M. Society, Hay Street Church, Fayetteville, N. C.

God, the Ruler of the universe, has seen fit to enter the ranks of the Missionary Society of Hay Street Church and transfer to fields "Elysian" our loved and honored sister, Mrs. Margaret C. Thomson, who for more than half a century has been an earnest worker for the advancement of Christ's kingdom. Words at best, are poor representatives of the feeling of affection with which we contemplate a being who touches our lives, and other lives in unnumbered forms of helpfulness. Our minds are filled with the memories of one who approached the ideal in all that constitutes true Christian woman-hood and was replete with untold sweetness and worth. Such was the character and life of the one who has gone from our midst. The unselfishness of her motives, the indefinable spirit of moral beauty which pervaded her every action, made her a power for good. In the splendid maturity of her sweet Christian spirit she found a place in every heart, and her influence will live on. While bowing to the will of a just God, we cannot but feel that a great void is made in the church work where our dear sister wrought so long and beautifully. But if this void exists in her public relation, our hearts ache in sympathy for those dear ones in the home-life who will miss her infinitely more. The loving thought of every member of the family centered around grandma. But the Heavenly Father does all things well—and we can only commend them to the care and guidance of the God whom she loved and trusted.

MORPHINE
OPIUM, WHISKEY AND ALL DRUG HABITS

CURED WITHOUT PAIN AT YOUR HOME.

If you are addicted to these habits you think you will quit it. You won't; you can't unaided, but you can be cured and restored to your former health and vigor without pain or the loss of an hour from business at a moderate cost. The medicine builds up your health, restores the nervous system to its normal condition; you feel like a different person from the beginning of treatment, LEAVING OFF THE OPIATES AFTER THE FIRST DOSE. You will soon be convinced and fully satisfied in your own mind that you will be cured.

Mr. T. M. Brown, of DeQueen, Ark., says: "Over seven years ago I was cured of the opium habit by your medicine, and have continued in the very best of health since."

Dr. W. M. Tunstall, of Lovingston, Va., says: "I am glad to say that I firmly believe that I am entirely and permanently cured of the Drink Habit, as I have never even so much as wanted a drink in any form since I took your eradicator, now eighteen months ago. It was the best dollars I ever invested."

Mrs. Virginia Townsend, of Shreveport, La., writes: "No more opium. I have taken no other remedy than yours, and I make no mistake when I say my health is better now than it ever was in my life, and I owe it to you and your remedy. It has been twelve years since I was cured by your treatment."

For full particulars, address DR. B. M. WOOLEY, 30 Lowndes Building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you his book on these diseases FREE.

Resolutions of Respect.

Abner Kenneth Murchison, who for two years a student of the Trinity Park School, and last year a member of the Freshmen class of Trinity College, died in Watts Hospital Sunday, June 19, 1904. He was an active member of the Main Street Sunday-school and Epworth League. He was a bright and cheerful young man, full of hope, which made him a helpful companion and friend. He was like all mortals, heir to the little ills of life, but was so full of hope and aspirations that there seemed to be nothing but sunshine in his life. Therefore be it Resolved 1. That Main Street Sunday-school has lost a valuable member and an earnest worker in the death of our young friend.

2. That we deeply mourn the untimely death of one whose prospects for the future seemed so bright and promising.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Raleigh Christian Advocate and the Greensboro Advocate for publication, and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased; also a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Main Street Sunday-school.

Committee.

Whereas, by a sudden accident which occurred on the A. & N. C. R. R., between New Bern, N. C., and Riverdale, our beloved brother G. B. Latham, the section master, being thrown from the hand-car and so seriously injured that he died on April 8, 1904,

Resolved 1. That the Sunday-school at Riverdale, of the M. E. Church, South, of which he was a member, do herein tender their sympathy and prayer for the stricken and bereaved.

2. That this Sunday-school loses a good member who was faithful to his duties.

3. That we will ever emulate his virtues, cherish his memory, and hope to meet him where parting never comes, where there is no more sorrow and the good-bye word is never spoken.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Raleigh Christian Advocate, New Bern Journal, and to the bereaved families, with one copy in the Sunday-school record of Riverdale.

WHAT IS YOUR EXCUSE?

If it is offered to you, OFFERED TO YOU FREELY, and you do not accept, what is your excuse? If you are offered happiness and refuse it, WHAT IS YOUR EXCUSE? If some one offers to SUPPLANT misery, suffering and distress with peace, comfort and enjoyment of life, and you refuse it, what is your excuse? WHAT IS YOUR EXCUSE if you refuse to accept the offer of a package of Vitæ-Ore on thirty days' trial—Y U TO BE THE JUDGE? The Theo. Noel Company of Chicago, who make the offer, take ABSOLUTELY all of the risk. YOU HAVE NOTHING TO LOSE. You are to be the judge. If you are not satisfied, if you do not want to pay for the package, if you think you should not pay for it, you are NOT ASKED to pay for it. What is your excuse?

You want HEALTH. Your family wants you to have it; Noel, the discoverer of VITÆ-ORE, wants you to have it; the Company wants you to have it; the editor of this paper, your friends and your associates, ALL want you to have it. VITÆ-ORE OFFERS IT TO YOU---offers it just as plainly as though it could be placed on a platter and brought to your table. The Theo. Noel Company is the waiter, ready, willing and anxious to serve it to you. You have but to ask, but to say the word, and you will be helped to your share—A GOOD SHARE. How can your refuse? What is your excuse? You are to be the judge. Read our special offer.

What Vitæ-Ore is!

Vitæ-Ore is a natural, hard, adamantine, rock-like substance—mineral—ORE—mined from the ground like gold and silver in the neighborhood of a once powerful but now extinct mineral spring. It requires twenty years for oxidization by exposure to the air, when it slacks down like lime and is then of medicinal value. It contains free iron, free sulphur and free magnesium, three properties which are essential for the retention of health in the human system, and one package—one ounce—of the ORE, when mixed with a quart of water, will equal in medicinal strength and curative value 800 gallons of the most powerful mineral water drank fresh from the springs. It is a geological discovery, in which there is nothing added or taken from. It is the marvel of the century for curing such diseases as

Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Blood Poisoning, Heart Trouble, Dropsy, Catarrh and Throat Affections, Liver, Kidney and Bladder Ailments, Stomach and Female Disorders, La Grippe, Malarial Fever, Nervous Prostrations, and General Debility,

as thousands testify, and as no one answering this, writing for a package, will deny after using. VITÆ-ORE has cured more chronic, obstinate, pronounced incurable cases than any other known medicine, and will reach such cases with a more rapid and powerful curative action than any medicine, combination of medicines, or doctor's prescription which it is possible to procure.

Medical Science Has Failed to improve upon, or even equal, the remedies found in a free state in HEALING MINERAL SPRINGS. Physicians, the oldest and best, the newest and learned, acknowledge this to be a fact. When they encounter a disease which is not amenable to the action of drugs, they pack the patient off to CARLSBAD, SARATOGA, BADEN, there to drink the waters which contain the essential properties for the restoration of health, and the patient returns, JERSH, HEALTHY IN MIND AND BODY. If the sufferer cannot afford the trip—and few but the wealthy can—they must continue to suffer as the waters deteriorate rapidly, and when transported fail to preserve the desired results.

A LETTER TO THE THEO. NOEL COMPANY, CHICAGO, will bring a healing mineral spring to your door, to your house, your chamber—will bring to you VITÆ-ORE, a mineral spring condensed and concentrated, a natural God-made remedy for the relief and cure of the ills with which man is afflicted. Why continue to suffer when this natural curing and healing Ore, nature's remedy, can be had for the asking, when the poor as well as the rich can have the benefit of healing springs.

Read this Special Offer.

WE WILL SEND to every subscriber or reader of "THE RALEIGH CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," or worthy person recommended by a subscriber or reader, a full-sized ONE-DOLLAR package of VITÆ-ORE, by mail, POSTPAID, sufficient for one month's treatment, to be paid for within one month's time after receipt, if the receiver can truthfully say that it has done him or her more good than all the drugs and dopes or quacks or good doctors or patent medicines he or she has ever used. READ this over again carefully, and understand we ask our pay only WHEN IT HAS DONE YOU GOOD AND NOT BEFORE. We take all the risk; you have nothing to lose. If it does not benefit you, you pay us nothing.

YOU ARE TO BE THE JUDGE!

VITÆ-ORE will do the same for you as it has for hundreds of readers of "THE RALEIGH CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," if you give it a trial. Send for A $1.00 PACKAGE AT OUR RISK. You have nothing to lose but the stamp to answer this announcement. WE WANT NO ONE'S MONEY WHOM VITÆ-ORE CANNOT BENEFIT. YOU ARE TO BE THE JUDGE! Can anything be more fair? What sensible person, no matter how prejudiced he or she may be, who desires a cure and is willing to pay for it, would hesitate to try VITÆ-ORE on this liberal offer? One package is usually sufficient to cure ordinary cases: two or three for chronic, obstinate cases. WE MEAN JUST WHAT WE SAY in this announcement, and will do just as we agree. Write to-day for a package at our risk and expense, giving your age and ailments, and mention "THE RALEIGH CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," so we may know you are entitled to this liberal offer.

Enjoying Food, Sleep and Exercise.

Rev. C. T. W. Davis, Minister at Kensington, Kas., Tells What a Trial Package of Vitae-Ore Did a Year Ago.

I think that Vitæ-Ore is the greatest discovery in the science of medicine. I received the $1 00 trial package and when I commenced using it I was suffering beyond description with Rheumatism and Neuralgia combined in my jaw, and whenever I opened my mouth to take some food I suffered terribly. I had been troubled with this affliction for several years. When I commenced taking Vitæ-Ore, I noticed almost the first day that there was an improvement, and my health has never been better for twenty years than it is now. I have been treated by a number of our best physicians, but was going from bad to worse. I was able to walk around a little, but after taking Vitæ-Ore four days I walked to a town six miles away, going home the same day in the rain, and I suffered no inconvenience from doing so. I paid for the trial package at once, as well as two additional. That was thirteen months ago, and although I am 66 years old, I am working as I did twenty years ago, and enjoying food, sleep and exercise.

NOEL SAYS:

If you are sick with any disease of the Circulation, the Stomach, Liver, Kidney, Bladder or Throat, VITÆ-ORE WILL CURE YOU.

NOEL is the discoverer of Vitæ-Ore, has been familiar with its wonderful properties for two generations, has watched its remarkable action in thousands upon thousands of cases, and HE OUGHT TO KNOW. NOEL says he does not want your money unless Vitæ-Ore benefits you. NOEL is old enough to know what he wants. NOEL says that the Theo. Noel Company has instructions to send a full-sized one-dollar package on thirty days' trial to every sick and ailing reader of "The Raleigh Christian Advocate" who requests it, the receiver to be THE JUDGE, and not to pay ONE CENT unless satisfied, and NOEL is the President and principal stockholder of Theo. Noel Company and what HE says goes. Here is his signature on it. THEO. NOEL

The World As We See It.

The best comment we have seen so far on the Bishop Potter incident is contained in the following statement made by Bishop Spellmeyer: "Evil is never to be encouraged, but abhorred, attacked, overcome, and exterminated. * * * The church has neither hymns nor prayer for such services. Young men should not have been given the opportunity of quoting the example of a bishop and saying in defense of their own perilous habits that a place blessed by his words cannot be dangerous ground for them."

The American, the official organ of the National Council Junior Order United American Mechanics, has issued its second number. It is published by the Mutual Publishing Company, Raleigh, N. C. It is edited by Z. P. Smith, late T. P. A. of the S. A. L. R. R. Captain Smith is as much at home on the editorial trinod as in a business office. The two numbers already issued show that he is richly endowed with editorial qualifications.

The American is a sixteen-page paper, and presents a most pleasing appearance. It is filled with attractive matter, and must be pleasing to its subscribers, representing almost every State in the Union. We wish the new paper great success.

The death of Robert Emory Pattison, who for two terms, was Governor of Pennsylvania is a loss not only to the Democratic party which he served so faithfully against great odds, but to the whole nation. The ownership of such a man cannot be limited to a State or a section. He was born in a Methodist parsonage over fifty-three years ago. His election to the Governorship in a State where the Republican majority is immense pays a high compliment to his worth. Governor Pattison illustrated in his life the truth that a man may be eminent as a politician and a statesman and yet maintain a high order of Christian character and usefulness. He was a Methodist who enthusiastically believed in doing with his might whatever his hand found to do. We always like to pay honor to such a man.

An undenominational educational institution for women is something that North Carolina needs, if we may judge from the recent action of John S. Huyler, the candy manufacturer of New York. He recently bought the property of the Asheville Female College, and proposes to make of it a great undenominational college for women, provided the city of Asheville raise a certain sum —how much we have not heard. The offer is now being considered, and will be accepted, it is thought, within the next few days. The despatch says that should the offer be not accepted by the city of Asheville, the Southern Baptist Convention will take the matter in hand with a view to establishing a great college for Baptist women in Asheville.

"The farmer is the man that feeds us all." A meeting of farmers is always an interesting and significant occasion. The Farmers' State Alliance met last week in Hillsboro, and adopted some resolutions which indicate that this organization has not only a vigorous autonomy but a decided spinality which has maintained its force and healthfulness through all the recent political storms. We cannot agree with the Alliance that the State should continue to operate the A. & N. C. R. R., yet we admire the outspeaking spirit of the Alliance. There was condemnation for the plan of using the State convicts for any farm work save that looking to the making of supplies for the convicts themselves. The Alliance expressed its opposition to furnishing the ten thousand dollars annually to the Agricultural and Mechanical College.

When people in general agree on the point of an abundant harvest, it may be taken for granted that the prospects for a phenomenal harvest are very fine. Ordinary harvests, you know, are not sufficient to save poor human nature from indulging in its common weakness—that of uttering a complaint in the presence of plenty. So when complaints turn to roseate prophecies there must be "something doing," to use a common expression. And the prospects for an unusually large crop are fine. Never before have we seen such corn and cotton fields. It is estimated that the corn harvest will break the record with 2,564,847,000 bushels. The yield of wheat has been somewhat of a disappointment. The hay crop will be phenomenal. Of course, it is understood the cotton crop will be the biggest ever gathered in this country. It seems as if Providence this year is giving such crops to offset the general demoralization attendant upon our quadrennial political upheaval.

Judge Parker's speech of acceptance at Esopus on last Wednesday should prove interesting to the American people, irrespective of party. It was plain, practical, and to the point. There was no evidence of any disposition to juggle with words with a view to evasion. The Judge denounced militarism, said that the Filipinos should have an independent government, recommended the enforcement of anti-trust laws and a reform in tariff legislation, and touched directly on the troubles in Colorado. Very naturally the financial question was not discussed. In the beginning of the speech, however, the substance of his famous telegram to the St. Louis Convention was indirectly reiterated. Both sides in the Colorado trouble received condemnation. The speech has pleased all Democrats and, no doubt, commands the respect of Republicans.

"I take medecine every day" was the reply of one of our most talented candidates for State office, when a few days ago, in meeting him on the sidewalk, we ventured the statement that he always looks smiling, healthy, and happy. "Yes," he said, 'I take medecine every day of my life, and that medecine is contentment. I never worry." We knew that he was telling the truth. His face, so familiar in legislative halls and on the bench, showed it. No man with worry gnawing at his heart or with strained, tangled, rebelling nerves, could be such a favorite of Hygeia, as is our candidate. We recommend this gospel of contentment to our people standing as they are on the threshold of a political campaign, with the mercury lingering near the top of the tube. Above all, let us not forget what the inspired tentmaker meant when he said, "Godliness with contentment is great gain."

There has been no lack of sensational news within the last week from the scene of operations in the Russo-Japanese war area. On last Wednesday the Russian fleet with a view to effecting a junction with the Vladivostock fleet made a dash out of the harbor of Port Arthur. The Japanese fleet at once set out in pursuit. There was an engagement of several hours. The fire of the Japanese ships was turned only on the Russian battleships. The sequel was that five battleships, one cruiser, and several torpedo destroyers returned to the harbor of Port Arthur; two cruisers and one destroyer, all badly disabled, entered Kiaochow bay; and one destroyer, disabled entered Chefoo harbor. The attempt to join the Vladivostock fleet proved a total failure. Most of the Russian ships were so badly injured that repairs are almost impossible.

What may cause international complications happened on Wednesday night. Two Japanese torpedo destroyers entered Chefoo harbor and captured the Russian torpedo boat which had taken refuge there. The Russian flag was hauled down, and the Japanese flag hoisted. Then the Japanese destroyers with their capture sailed away. Russia claims that her boat had disarmed and was therefore entitled to the protection of China. It is claimed that the action of the Japanese torpedo boat was a gross violation of international law, and so it seems to be.

At 5 o'clock on last Sunday morning the Japanese fleet under Admiral Kamimura, engaged the Vladivostock squadron off the Korean coast. The battle lasted about five hours, leaving the Russian fleet badly defeated. The Russian ship Rurik was sunk. The Japanese rescued about 600 of the crew. The Rossia and Gromoboi caught fire several times and returned to Vladivostock badly damaged. Only one of the Japanese ships was hit. Two Japanese were killed and seven wounded.

The fall of Port Arthur is hourly expected. The Russians are doomed. General Kuropatkin is hemmed in on three sides at Liao Yang. The Japanese are forcing the issue at Port Arthur in order that the soldiers there may hasten northward and seal the doom of Kuropatkin's army.

A PLEA FOR INCREASE OF MINISTERIAL SALARIES.

BY W. T. SHAW.

[An address delivered at Rich Square before the Warrenton District Conference and published at the request of the Conference.]

I have a message for you which I believe contains much truth, and I wish to get down close to you and have a heart-to-heart talk with you laymen, and sisters, for a few minutes.

What I shall say will have no reference to our beloved Bishop, nor to our Presiding Elder, neither will it include the popular city pastor who, surrounded by a wealthy congregation, has his already sufficient salary augmented by donations, gifts, and perchance elaborate fees, until he has no anxiety as to what he shall eat or wherewith he shall be clothed. These, my brethren, get no more than they deserve, and no more than other men holding similar positions in life, but they are the favored few and give us no concern at this time.

It is in behalf of the country circuit rider, the small station preacher, comprising the great majority of Methodist ministers in North Carolina, the log-rollers of Methodism, the captains of the host, the spiritual leaders and guides of 14-15 of all Methodists, and I may add, recruit in like ratio the rolls of the church. Men who know no duty but the call of God, oftimes performing labors more arduous than we laymen have any knowledge of, men who, at the behest of the Church, standy ready to lay aside the work at one place, unfinished as it may appear to them, and where, like other men, they may have formed associations and friendships dear to themselves and families, to take up the work in a new and distant field, strangers to all, save the God whom they have sworn to serve; oftimes like the Son of Man with not a place to lay his head, accustomed to being moved hither and thither without consulting his will or his wishes, meeting in his experiences all the vicissitudes and bereavements of average mortals, and more than any other class, plantng a loved one here, and there, never to be gathered together again until the last great day. The very nature of the work they have voluntarily undertaken requires more sacrifices, more positive immolation of self than any other class of mortal men. These, my brethren, are the men for whom this appeal is intended and in whose interest I have been honored with the invitation to address you, and for whom I ask your prayerful consideration while in a plain, practical way I call your attention to what I conceive to be an absolute necessity, viz., a substantial increase of salaries paid them.

Preliminary to this discussion please allow me to place before you some facts and figures taken from the Journal of the North Carolina Conference, and covering a period of eleven years—1892 to 1903, inclusive. In 1892 the total membership of the North Carolina Conference was 57,691; in 1903 it was 67,541, a gain of 9,850, or about 20 per cent; in 1892 the total value of all church property, including Trinity College, was $1,072,152; in 1903 this has grown to a grand total of $2,835,471, a gain of $1,763,319, or more than 100 per cent. We find, however, from these same statistics that while the average salary paid to preachers in 1892 was $701, this has fallen to $667; in 1903 a decease of nearly 6 per cent.

These figures show a substantial gain to our church in membership and a magnificent gain in property, showing also that our preachers have been faithful to their trusts.

These years, too, cover a period of advancement in all material wealth; as a nation, God has blessed us with almost unbounded prosperity; as a State, North Carolina has more than kept pace with her sister States, outstripping many of them in the lines of progress. The average wage of all laborers, mechanics, artisans, have materially increased, the products of the farm bringing higher prices in all lines until cotton (our great commodity) has reasserted its old time supremacy and is again king. Our financial and saving institutions are groaning beneath a load of wealth, manufacturing and railroading is prospering, North Carolina enjoying the unique distinction of possessing the only railroad in the United States whose stock is not listed on the stock exchanges, not being for sale. An old citizen of my town, dying a few years ago, left among his effects hidden away one share of this stock of par value, $100, issued in 1871. His estate realized for this one share $1,100, this amount representing increase in value and accrued dividends. God is blessing this nation, and especially our State.

Those of us who are studying the International Sunday-school lesson from Sunday to Sunday are taught that God's pleasure with a people is reflected in material advancement and prosperity.

What an important part these Methodist preachers are enacting in this progress and advancement by their efforts to keep the people in touch with God, is a subject worthy of our serious thought and consideration; yet they seem to be the only class having no share in the general improvement. They do their work nobly and well; we do the praying. Brother laymen, this reflects on us.

Let no man presume that I am insinuating that the Methodist preacher is for hire, that he is out for the money in it; if this was true, resignations quick and fast would be in order, for most of them are qualified by ability to double their earnings in other professions, or any of the lines of trade, nor does this demand come from them; only one knew in advance that this speech would be made. I am speaking as a layman to laymen of what we both know to be a crying necessity. Why, my brethren, the very things to which I have have referred, that which has clothed the faces of the farmers with smiles and inspired them with renewed hope, the advancement in prices of everything to eat and to wear, is but a millstone about the neck of the preacher, making it more difficult each year for him to make both ends meet, while his purchasing power is cutting both ways—prices advancing, salary declining.

These men are not preaching for money, for of all men a Methodist preacher is the only man who does not know what his pay will be in advance of service rendered; the only thing on which he can calculate on going to a new charge is what his predecessor received, knowing, too that even this is subject to reduction by his Board of Stewards after his arrival.

No, my brethren, it is plain that the Methodist preacher is not beguiled by the stipend, but it requires just as much to give him the necessaries and ordinary comforts of life as other men; from the very nature of his calling it is impossible for him to devote any part of his time to other occupation for purpose of bringing in additional revenue to supplement his salary. He cannot do this without compromising himself and his church; besides, it is not God's plan. They which preach the Gospel shall live of the Gospel, is the divine command.

The cost of living has increased 33 1-3 per cent during these years of peace and plenty, notwithstanding the preacher is expected to live on less than was allowed him eleven years ago; yet he has his own ideas as to necessities and comforts and is just as much entitled to them as we. It is just as essential to the peace and happiness of the preacher that he be able to educate his children, and it grieves his heart just as much to see his wife compelled to do all the drudgery of domestic work as it would you and me.

It is plain, then, that the average salary of $667 is not sufficient to meet the requirements of their support, and should be increased, and without delay.

Now, how can this be done? There is only one way, and that the right way—by increasing individual assessments. The increase should be 25 per cent; it will require this much to meet the exigencies of the case; anything less will be to fall short of our plain duty. But says some well-meaning, though short-sighted brother—I am now paying all I can afford. Let me tell you, it is necessary that you contribute more than you think you can afford if you are to lay up treasures in heaven, according to the Scriptural idea. Something that cost you nothing is of no value to you, whatever help it may be to the object of your contribution. The central idea of religion is sacrifice. Our blessed Lord commands that we take up the cross and follow Him. Follow Him how? By devoting our time and our talents to the upbuilding of His kingdom in earth; by sacrificing our natural selfishness to the good of our fellowman. He who said it is more blessed to give than to receive knew the desperate selfishness of the human heart, and if this could be subdued, the man would walk in the straight and narrow way. The church member, with an income of $1,000,who contributes $10 to the support of his pastor—the greatest human agency for the spread of God's kingdom—takes risks of realizing, when perhaps too late, that the balance in the Book kept up yonder is against him.

It is the duty of your stewards to assess you; it is also your duty to be careful that the amount is sufficient to meet the purposes for which it is intended.

God loves the cheerful giver, but His maledictions are upon those who would rob Him. I know a young attorney who, while not a perfect man, responds liberally to the calls of his church and contributes $200 annually to the support of his pastor. Everything he touches prospers, and the world calls him successful. God does not love a close-fisted mortal, and he who deliberately shuts his heart and his purse to God's calls, retributive justice will cross his path some where in life and his end will not be in peace.

We need more education along this line, my brethren; we need to learn that liberality pays in both this life and the life to come.

Now for the 25 per cent increase; see how easily it can be done. The member who now pays $1.00 will pay $1.25; the member who pays $5.00 will pay $6.25; the member who pays 10.00 will pay $12.50; the man who pays $20.00 will pay $25.00; the member who now pays $50.00 will then contribute $62.50, etc. The increase in the order named will be only 25 per cent—$1.25, $2.50, $5.00, and $12.50, respectively, per annum—small amounts to be sure individually, but what will it mean to your pastors? The $500 man will then receive $625; the $600 man will receive $750; the $700 man will receive $875; the $800 man will receive $1,000; the $1,000 man $1,250—no more than he needs.

Think over these things, my brethren, and whatever you are in—the $1.00, $5.00, $10.00, $20.00, $25.00, or $50.00 class—make up your mind to add one-fourth more; do it this year and rejoice the heart of your preacher; he needs it. Coming across the country to this prosperous little town I noticed the beautiful well tilled fields, crops luxuriant, prospects brilliant; God is smiling upon you, take Him at His word, give more, have more; His promises are behind the proposition; try it.

If we would live strong, noble, beautiful, radiant and useful Christian lives, we must get seasons of secret prayer into our busy days. But we must take our Bible with us into the closet. While we talk to God we must also let God talk to us. God feeds us through His Word. Seasons of prayer without meditation on some Word of God cannot yield the full blessing that we need. —J. R. Miller.

The most original book in the world is the Bible. Shakespeare, the first literary genius of the world, leans on the Bible. His poetry presupposes it. People imagine that the place the Bible holds in the world it owes to miracles. It owes it simply to the fact that it came out of a profounder depth of thought than any other book. —Ralph Waldo Emerson.

The Sabbath Day.

BY JOHN WESLEY COLLINS.

The basis of the observance of a holy day and a day of rest is found in Gen. 2:3. God having finished His work of creation in six days, rested from them on the seventh, and set it apart for the more solemn worship of Himself by men, as an emblem or pledge of their eternal rest in the world to come. (Heb. 4:4-4.) Moses mentions the Sabbath in connection with the manna, and says that a double portion would fall on the day preceding the Sabbath as none would fall on that day. (Ex. 16:4-27.) For gathering sticks on that day God senteneed a man to be stoned to death. (Num. 15:32-36.) For neglecting to observe it the Jewish nation was almost destroyed. (Lev. 26:34, 35; Neh. 13:16-18; Jer. 17:27; Ezek. 20:12-16.) God prohibited the Jews from kindling fire on the Sabbath for the work of erecting the tabernaele, or dressing their manna, or to travel through their tents. (Ex. 35:23 and 15:29.) Injunctions to keep it and threatenings for the breach of it are everywhere found in the law and the prophets. To mark the perpetual and universal obligation of the observance of the Sabbath God proclaimed the law from Sinai: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." (Ex. 20:8.)

And in juxta-position with the fourth commandment of the decalogue, comes the sixth: "Thou shalt not kill," and the eighth, "Thou shalt not steal," etc. Did the redemptive work of our blessed Saviour, which he referred to when he said on the Cross, "It is finished," nullify these commandments? Would it not be a retrograde movement, at this advaneed age of civilization to conclude nugatory all the statutes, precepts and commandments contained in the Mosaic code, and set them aside as obsolete, when we are quite sure that they stand to-day as the basis of all our civil and criminal law because of their universally accepted purity and heavenly origin? A careful study of the ten commandments irresistibly forces me to the conviction that a wilful violation of any of them is a sin against God and His divine government, since they are composed of the very highest of Christian ethics, and approved by Jesus and His apostles.

Jesus upbraids the Pharisees for laying aside the commandment of God, and vainly attempting to worship Him by the observance of their traditions, as the washing of pots and cups, and many other such like things, and said "Ye reject the commandment of God that ye may keep your own traditions, for Moses said honor thy father and thy mother." (Mark. 7:8-10.) Moses also said "remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

"And beginning at Moses and all the prophets he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself." (Luke 24:27.) After his resurrection Jesus said to his disciples: "These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses and in the prophets and in the Psalms, concerning me." (Luke 24:44.) All the types and shadows of a coming Messiah, all the sacrifices and atonements for sin, all the forms and ceremonies of the Jewish service, are fulfilled in Christ, "but we know that the law is good, if a man use it lawfully." (1 Tim. 1:8.) "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God, sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walketh not after the flesh, but after the spirit." (Rom. 8:3, 4.)

The Sabbath, properly so-called, is a day of rest; if not the seventh, one of the seven. "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work." In honor of his own resurrection, Jesus, the Lord of the Sabbath, changed it from the seventh to the first day of the week, and to show the divine authority therefor, made repeated visits to his disciples on that day. (John 20:19; Mark 2:27, 28.) The primitive Christians met for their public worship, and made their collections for the poor, on the first day of the week and called it the Lord's day. (Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:1, 2; Rev. 1::10.) The first day was all along observed by Christians as their Sabbath for almost sixteen hundred years before any pretenders to that name opposed it, nor can many of its opposers be found whose practice is not a scandal to the Christian name.

I am not of those pharisaical extremists that would "stop the clock," inflict penance of any sort, or even deny themselves of the ordinary comforts of life on the Sabbath day; for in our Saviour's time they found fault with his hungry disciples for eating a few ears of corn as they walked through the field, and quarreled with Him for healing diseases on the Sabbath. (Mat. 12:1; Mark 3:4; Luke 13::10-17.) But as the commandment plainly discharges all manner of civil business, it were to be wished that multitude, of this generation, would consider how they will reconcile their vain pleasure-seeking, their journeyings, their clubbing and trading, and their general disregard for the Sabbath day, or how they will answer for these at the judgment seat of Christ.

Because this commandment has not been particularly mentioned in the New Testament, as a moral precept binding on all, therefore some have presumptnously inferred that there is no Sabbath under the Christian dispensation, but the truth is the Sabbath is considered as a type—all types are of full force till the thing signified by them takes place—and the thing signified by the Sabbath is that rest in glory which remains for the people of God (Heb. 4:10), therefore the moral obligation of the Sabbath must continue 'till time be swallowed up in eternity.

I will venture the assertion that there is not, among the many divine precepts of the Holy Scriptures, old and new, one that stands out more frequently in beautiful and prominent relief than that requiring the observance of the Sabbath as a holy day and a day of rest; nor is there any institution in the universe to-day that contributes anything to be compared with that of the Sabbath towards the uplifting of humanity to a higher state of progress in the divine life, or that would be more sadly missed by all the civil and religious enterprises of this Christian land.

Enjoying the Lord's Will.

C. B. WETHERBE.

It is one thing for the Christian to submit to the Lord's will, because he is obliged to do so, and quite another thing for the Christian to heartily enjoy free obedience to His will. In one instance there is a measure of slavery, while in the other instance there is a large degree of glad freedom. Many times we enjoy doing the Lord's will because we find that His will is in harmony with our own will. He is asking us to do just what we are desiring to do. On the other hand, we sometimes find that the Lord's will is that we shall do certain things which are directly contrary to our own will, and then we are inclined to feel unhappy over the matter. And yet, if we have tender and obedient hearts we will soon adjust our will to the Lord's will, so as to actually enjoy doing what we formerly did not want to do. Dr. Joseph Parker, of London, in one of his last sermons to his people, after he had been away for his health, said: "Do you know, during these twelve weeks of absence, I have often said, 'If the Lord will?' I was broken into it. 'If the Lord will, I shall get back to my pulpit;' and I was not allowed. Well, I could have kicked, but it is always hard to kick against the pricks, and I found it better to say, 'Let the will of the Lord be done. He means this in love; He means to make me stronger than I ever have been, if not in physical strength, yet in moral sensitiveness, in spiritual wisdom, in the capacity to teach and to heal and to lead.' And I have said, 'If the Lord will,' and this morning I had to throw myself squarely and heavily upon this 'if.'" It seems that Dr. Parker came to the point of enjoying to do the Lord's will in that crisis of his life. And has it not been so in our own experience? If we have been spiritually-minded, if we have been grown-up Christians instead of being mere babes, we have, in most instances, I venture to say, really enjoyed making our Lord joyful by freely doing His will. And this is the highest blessedness of the Christian life.

Soul Food

God hides some ideal in every human soul. At some time in our life we feel a trembling longing to do some good thing. Life finds its noblest spring of excellence in this hidden impulse to do our best.—Robert Collyer.

"O, I know the Hand that is guiding me
Through the shadow to the light;
And I know that all betiding me
Is meted out aright.
I know that the thorny path I tread
Is ruled with a golden line;
And I know that the darker life's tangled thread,
The brighter the rich design."
—The Land of Faith.

"Satisfy us in the morning." No broken days, no empty days, no dark, barren days. The morning satisfaction of the mercy of God will sweeten the whole day, each day, all the days. In the morning satisfy us, then we shall not hew us out broken cisterns, or seek the springs of worldly pleasure. The morning satisfaction will make us happy and strong and of good courage for all the hours that follow.

O Lord, our God, "satisfy with Thy mercy."—Evangelical.

The fire of love was burning, yet so low
That in the dark we scarce could see its rays,
And in the light of perfect placid days
Nothing but smoldering embers, dull and slow.
Vainly, for love's delight, we sought to throw
New pleasures on the pyre to make it blaze;
In life's calm and tranquil, prosperous ways
We missed the radiant heat of long ago.
Then in the night, a night of sad alarms,
Bitter with pain and black with fog of fears,
That drove us, trembling, to each other's arms—
Across the gulf of darkness and salt tears,
Into life's calm the wind of sorrow came,
And fanned the fire of love to clearest flame.
—Henry Van Dyke.

The faith country is most emphatically a place of music. Not to be given to song, in the heart at least, and not to love hymns, would argue a decided deficiency in spiritual development. A hymn is a wing by which the soul soars above earthly cares and toils, into a purer air and a clearer sunshine. And when the hymn is married to such melody as is its fitting mate we have two wings with which to speed our flight toward the heavens. Naught can better scatter the devils of melancholy and gloom, of doubt and fear: and naught is more likely to lead us into the bliss of full assurance if suitably used.

O pale-faced Theologian whose soft hands
And ink-stained fingers never gripped the oar
Or swung the hammer; weary with your books,
How can your slumbering senses comprehend
The breadth and virile purpose of the men
Who bore their joyous tale through quickened lands
To the great heart of Rome; the shipwrecked Paul,
Wandering Ulysses-like to far-off isles
And barbarous peoples; or those peasant kings,
Who ever 'mid voluptuous cities wore
No mediaeval halo, but the air
Of some free fisher battling with the wind
That blows across the Galilean hills?

In England not long ago a woman was lecturing against our religion, and after she had closed, one of the mill-hands said, "I would like to ask the lecturer this one question: Thirty years ago I was the curse of this town and everybody in it. I tried to do better and failed. The teetotaler got hold of me, and I signed the pledge and broke it. The police took me and sent me to prison, and the wardens tried to make me better and I began to drink as soon as I left my cell. When all had failed I took Christ as my Saviour, and He made a new man of me. I am a member of the church, a class leader and superintendent of the Sunday-school. If Christ is a myth and religion is untrue, how could I be so helped by them?"—Current Anecdotes.

The Field

Elizabeth City District Conference.

The tenth annual session of the Elizabeth City District Conference was held at Sunbury, N. C., July 13, 1904. Rev. J. E. Underwood, the Presiding Elder, occupied the chair.

Bishop Smith, who was expected to be present and preside, was called to Ocean Grove to attend a meeting of the Joint Commission. The absence of the Bishop occasioned regret. Those present would have supposed, however, from the orderly prosecution of the business, that the program had been regularly arranged before-hand. Our Presiding Elder is as much at ease in the chair as he is in the midst of the cares and active labors of his District where he is thoroughly "at himself." This is not this writer's fourth year on his charge and he can make this statement with impunity.

All of the pastors, several of the local preachers and about 50 per cent of the lay delegates were present. The reports of the pastors and of the various committees showed the affairs of the District to be in very good shape. Almost the total amount assessed the District for Foreign and Domestic Missions has been raised, and many of the charges have made considerable progress with the other collections.

The spiritual feature of the Conference was given special emphasis. There was preaching twice each day. The names of the preachers who occupied the pulpit need only to be mentioned to indicate the high order of the preaching: Rev. H. M. Jackson, Dr. Kilgo, Dr. Ivey, Rev. W. P. Constable, Rev. R. L. Davis, Rev. D. H. Tuttle, Rev. W. O. Davis, and Rev. F. L. Church.

Our educational interests were well represented—Trinity College, by the presence of Dr. Kilgo; Trinity Park School, by Prof. Hornaday; Greensboro Female College, by Miss Nannie Lee Smith and Rev. M. T. Plyler; Louisburg Female College, by President Davis, and Littleton Female College by Rev. J. M. Rhodes.

Rev. J. W. Jenkins, of the Orphanage, was delayed and reached the Conference only a short while before adjournment. The presence of each of these visitors was enjoyed by the Conference.

Mrs. Underwood, the President of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the North Carolina Conference, spoke in the interest of her work. The importance of the woman's work was urged by the editor of the Advocate also.

The Conference was most hospitably entertained. The hospitality of the people of Gates is according to the true North Carolina fashion.

The next Conference goes to Belhaven.

C. L. READ, Secretary.

Edenton, N. C., August 9, 1904.

Temperance in the Campaign.

It is manifest that Temperance will be an issue of extraordinary importance in the campaign now opening in North Carolina.

In response to appeals from the moral and religious forces, representing our churches and schools and the religious press, the last General Assembly passed an act giving us the excellent measures of rural prohibition and municipal local option.

In the campaign now upon us one party stands pledged to destroy this legislation; the other pledged to preserve it. There should be no question of the position of the genuine friends of Temperance in a situation like this. Honor and wisdom and loyalty to their cause point to but one course—unfaltering support of the Party that in response to our petitions has enacted this legislation.

Honor impels us. We must stand by the men who stand by us.

Wisdom impels us. We must make it worth while for politicians and political parties to support our causes. In the degree that the opposition would injure them in that degree and more must we aid them. This is the only way to obtain more legislation in the same direction; the only way to maintain our present strong position; the only way to maintain our standing as men who have determined purpose.

Loyalty to our cause binds us. There is an opposition. We know where it is. There is a friendly camp. We know where it is. Not to join the forces of that camp in a contest like this, in which the opposition has chosen its position of its own will, amounts to abandonment of our cause in the critical hour.

Let no one deceive himself. There is an opposition and it is right now forcing the fighting. Nothing would so please it as to be able to say that the Temperance people will not stand by a Party that aids their cause; nothing would so gratify them as to be able to declare that a Party lost here or there by reason of its well-doing in our behalf. Ours it is to show that a Party will gain every time it takes a reasonable step in behalf of Righteousness and Temperance.

Our leaders must arouse the friends of Temperance throughout the State. There is danger that some will permit the fact that this issue has been made a political issue to overshadow the fact that it is also an issue of Righteousness. As such, it is our issue. As such, we were content to have it. We did not make it a political issue. The Democratic Party did not make it an issue. The Republican Convention, in full knowledge of all the circumstances, deliberately chose to make it an issue. And it must accept the consequences without complaining. Ordinarily, Christian leaders are averse to taking sides politically. But when a political party deliberately takes sides against them, there is but one course—Resistance to the extent of our power. Well may we inquire, Who is this uncircumcised Philistine that he should defy the armies of the Living God?

We have an opportunity in this campaign not only to preserve a good law, but to press home a lesson that will be wholesome throughout all the future in North Carolina political life. To this magnificent opportunity I call our religious leaders, our ministers, teachers and editors. Let them array themselves for the conflict even as the opposition has arraged itself against us; and let us not fear to give battle in the name of Righteousness, Temperance and Judgment to come.

Sincerely, J. W. BAILEY,
State Chairman Anti-Saloon League.

August 10, 1904.

Ocracoke.

Dear Advocate:—If all those hill-country men who have on just enough to be presentable, and those "Mother Hubbard" women who are sitting in hallways trying to create a breeze with a fan, will take a trip down to the "city by the sea" and sound, we think they'll find things more to their liking. Ocracoke is fast becoming a popular resort, both winter and summer. Hunters from the North come in the winter and the hot North Carolinians come in the summer.

Poor transportation and the lack of good hotel accommodation are keeping Ocracoke from becoming one of the most desirable summer resorts on the North Carolina coast. Bathing here is fine, both in the surf and sound. Fishing is the best to be found anywhere. Ask Mr. Bridgeman, of Washington; Dr. Pett, of Old Sparta, and Mr. Lum Flemming, of Greenville, about the charm of pulling trout. Ask Mr. Allen Midyette, of Fairfield, about the sea mullets and flounders. And as to the ecstacy of winding in a sheep-head, I can set my own hand and seal. Come down all ye weary wanders of the hills and find out for yourself what comfort and fun means.

Brother Williams has already written the Advocate about our good meeting at Portsmouth. It was soul-stirring, and surely it was "good to be there." There are some good people at Portsmouth and I love to go among them, although they try to make me believe that I do not. I believe I am going to make the best report, both spiritual and financial, from Ocracoke and Portsmouth this fall that has been made to the Conference in a number of years. We have been behind here on missionary collections, but I expect to be able to tell the Conference a different tale next fall.

Bro. J. V. Williams was with us a few days in our meeting at Ocracoke. He is a good, practical Gospel preacher, and I love to hear him.

Five years ago this summer our church here was blown down. Its faithful membership, led by that grand old boy, Ben Black, went to work, and more than two years ago completed a church, except painting inside, which I trust will stand many years as a monument to their love and untiring efforts. Rev. F. A. Bishop, who was Presiding Elder of this (Washington) District during the construction of the church, gave valuable advice and help. When we began talking about whom he wanted to dedicate the church, the hearty response came—Brother Bishop. So the fifth Sunday in July was decided on as the day of dedication, and when it came Brother Bishop was on hand.

The dedication service came off at 11 o'clock, and the very large congregation present gave evidence of their appreciation of Brother Bishop's good sermon by giving him their best attention.

Rev. R. F. Taylor, of Battleboro, an old pastor of the congregation, was present, and assisted in the dedicatory service. He also preached at the evening service much to the delight of his old parishioners and all who were present.

Fraternally, R. R. GRANT.

Graham.

As I have written you nothing this year, a few items in reference to the work I represent may not be out of place.

This being my first year in the Conference, I can't compare it with any previous year. But I can truthfully say that I count myself fortunate in that my first work, in the Conference, as a pastor, is situated among so kind and hospitable a people. I suppose, however, it is natural for every pastor to feel that he has the best people to serve. At least he should feel so.

Since coming to the work in December we have added forty-six to our church membership, most of whom joined on profession of faith.

Our list of subscribers to the Advocate has been increased and we hope to add from time to time till the end of the year.

At present, the writer is spending a month's vacation with relatives and friends near Asheville, enjoying the fresh air and cold water, with other good things which are so abundant in these mountains.

We have recently had the privilege of attending the Franklin and Asheville District Conferences. The brethren of these Districts are very faithfully and earnestly pushing forward their work of their Master on their various charges. May the Lord bless them and "give them souls for their hire."

Success to the Advocate.

CHAS. M. LANCE.

Graham, N. C., August 8, 1904.

With the above statement, it is reasonable to suppose the general interest of the church is making fair progress.

At our District Conference in March we, with others, were able to report our missionary collections in full and the other Conference collections subscribed and part paid.

Among other things for which the pastor is thankful is the fact that we have had good revivals at each of the churches, resulting in about fifty conversions. Revs. D. N. Caviness and J. A. Daily rendered very efficient service in these meetings.

That Dog Bite.

A deep dog bite in the wrist, in "dog days," is a serious matter. I thank my friends for letters, love and prayers. The danger seems to be past. The wounds are healing nicely on the fourteenth day. A. D. BETTS.

The Family

A Song of Motherhood.

As my own mother used to comfort me—
Kissing the tears away—
Holding me close—aye, all too close for sobs,
I hold thee, little dear one, close to-day!

Calming my older pain, by stilling thine—
As mothers only know—
My heart-break lost in thine, as hers in mine—
Long ago, little dear one, long ago.

As thou in turn, a woman grown and wise—
Shall kiss, as I kiss now,
Finding the sunrise ever in thy child,
Even thou, little dear one, even thou!
—Martha Gilbert Dickinson, in Scribner's Magazine.

Summer in the Heart.

Though for all men summer blossoms in the sunenchanted lands,
Only unto me is given deathless summer from your hands—
From your hands that gathered flowers—summer in my heart to set,
Snow-plumed pinks, deep-petaled roses, frail sweet peas, and mignonette.

And though scent and color perish, and the mortal blossoms pass,
While the scythes yet sing of summer in the swaying seas of grass;
Yet the rarer blooms you give me from your heart's hid garden bowers,
In my heart have made eternal summer of unfading flowers.

—Pall Mall Gazette.

One String, or an Orchestra?

BY W. B. F.

First scene: The streets of a country village. A tramp musician is playing on a queer looking musical instrument. It has but one string, and upon this revolves a wheel turned by a crank. At the other end of the instrument there are a few keys. The musician turns the crank with one hand, and works the keys with the other, and there comes forth a wheezing, squeaking sound, intended to represent "Home, Sweet Home." The dog at the street corner gives a long and mournful wail at disapproval, and kind-hearted people pay the musician to move on.

Second scene: A great hall in the metropolis. Upon the platform are musical instruments representing the world of harmonies, from the high treble of the violin to the deep bass of the pipe organ, and with these are five hundred voices, perfectly trained. They are rendering "The Messiah." They sing the prophecy of his coming: "His name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, and the Prince of Peace." They win the great assembly with the magic of their music, so that they hear the angels singing the advent of the Christ. They follow him through his ministry to his cross. Tears are in all eyes while they sing: "He was despised and rejected." Then comes the triumph at the tomb, and then on the wings of song the multitude is caught up with the ascending Christ till it seems as though they see the gates of heaven unfold to receive him, and hear the angels sing their hallelujahs.

And that is the difference between one string and the world of harmonies.

One may say: "I am honest. I pay my debts. I don't cheat." All right; but are you always truthful? Don't be content with one virtue. Don't get off in a corner and saw away on one string. Another man says: "I am temperate. I never drink." That is right; but what are you doing to win this world for Christ? Don't saw forever on one string. Don't be content without all the virtues which Jesus enjoins. One man says: "I speak the truth right out. I am not a hypocrite." But he has not learned that the claims of kindness are as great as those of truth. A life that is a continual psalm of praise must be a life of more than one virtue. Therefore "Giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity." The soul of man is a harp of a thousand strings. Let God tune the harp and touch the strings, and your life will make melody that the angels will desire to hear.—The Epworth Herald.

The Value of a Vacation.

No man or woman can work every day, year in and year out, with no change, no variety in his life, without either getting into a rut which will paralyze his finest and best faculties, or breaking down altogether and committing suicide on years of precious life, says a writer in the July Success.

A great many people, especially in cities, fail, lose their health and become mere apologies of the men and women they might be if they knew how to take care of themselves—if they were wise enough to take a vacation when they need it. But they voluntarily cut themselves off, year after year, from the great source of power—nature. They do not drink from the fountain of vitality and eternal youth energy in which the earth is constantly renewing itself. Buried in schemes of ambition, of self-aggrandizement, in dreams of wealth and power and fame, they grind away, in an environment of bricks and mortar, in the stifling, changeless atmosphere of the city, until they become nervous, worn-out wrecks. They do not see the necessity of change; they do not believe in taking a vacation; they laugh at the idea of giving up their work and going away to idle in the country, as they put it, until it is too late.

Many of these ceaseless toilers living on their nerves, trying all sorts of patent medicines, massages treatments and other artificial remedies, in the hope of regaining health and strength. But they find these things very poor substitutes for the recreating, rejuvenating forces of the country.

How much money would you give a physician if he would guarantee you strong, steady, healthy faculties instead of nervous, exhausted ones; if he could give you firm, vigorous muscles instead of weak, flabby ones; if he could put new courage and hope into your life; if he could, by some magic, take away the fretful, nervous, irritable feeling which makes you so unhappy and restore you to your usual cool, calm; collected, cheerful demeanor? You would not stop at any price you could afford to pay. Yet you can do all this yourself, if you will only drop everything and fly to the country for the rest and change and complete emancipation from business cares.—Commercial Tribune.

Hungry Ants Build a Bridge.

Something new and interesting about ants was learned by a Mount Airy florist and told to a Philadelphia Record reporter. For a week or so he had been bothered by ants that got into boxes of seeds, which rested on a shelf. To get rid of the ants he put into execution an old plan, which was to place a meaty bone close by, which the ants soon covered, every one deserting the boxes of seeds. As soon as the bone would become thickly inhabited by the little creepers the florist tossed it into a tub of water. The ants having been washed off, the bone was put in use as a trap again.

Then the florist bethought himself that he would save trouble by placing the bone in the centre of a sheet of fly paper while trying to reach the food. But the florist was surprised to find that the ants, upon discovering the nature of the paper trap, formed a working force and built a path on the paper clear to the bone. The material for the walk was sand, secured from a little pile near by. For hours the ants worked, and when the path was completed, they made their way over its dry surface in couples, as in a march, to the bone.

Thoughts of a Housekeeper.

Now that the heated term is here, the housemother should save herself as much as possible; do a little planning, make your head save your feet. If at all possible, cook enough food for the mid-day meal to serve for tea, served in a different form of course. For instance, if boiled beef or roast was served for dinner, then make it serve as the "piece de resistance" for tea, sliced and garnished with sprigs of parsley; if potatoes remained mince and prepare a salad of them as follows: To six potatoes, take a half teaspoonful of ground mustard, salt and pepper to taste, add a gill of best vinegar, add two onions, sliced, mix well; this should be prepared an hour before serving; fresh lettuce leaves may be forked in lightly just before serving. With the addition of fruit, cake, fresh bread and butter, this should be satisfying enough for the wants of an ordinary mortal.

Don't, we beg, befrill and beruffle your children's clothes, as so many mothers do, and sacrifice yourselves on that Moloch, as you will be sure to do on ironing days. Clothes so made require much time and strength in laundrying at a time when strength is at its minimum. A plain hem is quite as tasteful as lace, embroidery, etc., on undergarments.

"There's too much worriment goes to a bonnet,
There's too much ironing goes to a shirt,
There is nothing that pays for the time spent on it,
There's nothing that's lasting but trouble and dirt."

Train your children to form correct tastes; teach them that quiet colors are preferable to gaudy, showy ones. Teach them to admire the beautiful in nature, whether in plant or insect life. Explain the forms of different leaves, petals, etc., classify them; trace the veining of the butterfly's wing which flashed by in the sunlight but late, and was dashed to the ground in the sudden summer storm; teach them that the Hand that formed both leaf and insect is divine.—Mrs. A. C. McPherson, Albany, Ohio.

Why Tumblers are So Called.

How many times a day do we use words without stopping to think what they mean! Every day at luncheon and at dinner we drink out of a tumbler. But I, for one, never thought why the large glass that holds our milk or water was so called, until once upon a time I happened to have luncheon at All Souls' College, Oxford, where the curiosity of all the strangers present were excited by a set of most attractive little round bowls of ancient silver, about the size of a large orange. These, we were told, were "tumblers;" and we were speedily shown how they came by their name.

When one of these little bowls was empty, it was placed upon the table, mouth downward. Instantly, so perfect was its balance, it flew back into its proper position, as if asking to be filled again. No matter how it was treated—trundled along the floor, balanced carefully on its side—up it rolled again, and settled itself, with a few gentle shakings and swayings, into its place.—Selected.

A Summer Tragedy.

I saw a tragedy to-day. It was enacted before my horrified eyes. Murder was committed, and the victim, perfectly unoffending, perfectly innocent, was suddenly and shamelessly dashed from his home into a gulf of death. Three assassins laughed with fiendish glee as they marked the success of their crime.

The victim was a robin redbreast. He was singing his heart out in ecstacy from the top of a maple tree, as the air-gun held in the hands of a small boy sent its missile straight to its destination. No more songs from that bonny bird. A mourning nestful looking for him in vain. And the boy and his companions will go home, eat their suppers, say their prayers, and kill more birds when they can. They are little monsters did they but know it!—Exchange.

Our Boys and Girls

Wanchese, N. C., Aug. 3, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl five years old. I have one sister living and one brother and sister dead. My grandpa takes the Advocate and I love to hear him read the little folks' letters.

I will now ask a question: Where was Jonah thrown overboard?

Enclosed find five cents for the orphans.

Your friend,
LAURA ATWOOD DAVIS.

Beasley, N. C., Aug. 5, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I will write for the second time. I have three brothers and three sisters. My youngest brother is three years old. I have one grandma and one grandpa living.

I will answer Myra Cotton's question:: The flood lasted one hundred and fifty days.

Now I will ask one: Who was fed by the ravens?

Goodby.
ANNIE MAUD WESTBROOK.

Bonnerton, N. C., Aug. 8, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—Will you admit a little girl fourteen years of age in your happy circle? We have a nice Sunday-school. Mr. B. B. Ross is our superintendent any my teacher. Rev. J. M. Lowder is our pastor. We all like him and wish he could preach for us every Sunday instead of only once a month.

I am looking forward to our protracted meeting which will begin the second Sunday. Our Sunday-school had a picnic last Friday about six miles from here. There were only a few there on account of rain, but I enjoyed it fine, if I did get a good drenching.

My only pet is my sweet little sister Katherine.

I will close by asking a question: How long was Noah building the ark?

Your little friend,
CLYDE TRIPP.

Conway, N. C., Aug. 2, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I will write to you for the first time. I am a little girl eleven years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. My teacher is Mrs. H. L. Lassiter, and Mr. J. O. Flythe is our superintendent. Rev. W. C. Merritt is our pastor, and I like him fine. Our protracted meeting starts next week. I will be glad to see that time come.

I will close by asking a question. How many brothers had Joseph?

With best wishes to you and the orphans.

EVA LASSITER.

Holly Springs, N. C., Aug. 10, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl ten years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Miss Hettie Johnson is my teacher, and I like her very much. I joined the church a few weeks ago. Mr. A. M. Johnson is our superintendent and Mr. G. W. Starling is our pastor. I like him very much. We have about ninety enrolled at our Sunday-school.

I will answer Myrtle Muse's question: David was made king after Saul's death.

Now I will ask one: What is the shortest verse in the Bible?

I will close by sending five cents to the Orphanage.

PAULINE HOLT.

Conway, N. C., Aug. 3, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—Well, as I have never written to your paper before, I thought I would do so. My papa takes the Advocate and I enjoy reading it. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday I can. My teacher is Mrs. H. L. Lassiter and our superintendent is Mr. J. A. Flythe. Our preacher is Rev. W. C. Merritt, and I like him as well as I can.

I will close, with best wishes to you and the orphans.

LUCY LASSITER.

N. B.—You must excuse me; I can't write well.

Beasley, N. C., Aug. 5, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As my other letter was in print, I will try to write again.

I will be one to raise one dollar for the orphans by Christmas.

My papa and mamma are both living.

I will answer Julia Smith's question: Jesus was thirty years old when he began to preach.

Now I will ask one: : What king was killed and the dogs came and licked up his blood?

Yours truly,
EULA REBECCA WESTBROOK.

BY ANOINTING WITH OIL CANCER OF THE HAND CURED IN ONE MONTH.

February 5, 1904.

Dr. D. M. Bye Co., Dallas, Texas.

Dear Sirs:—After using the medicine you sent me according to directions, on the morning of the 12th day I removed the Cancer from my hand and it is well. It is now about four months since it healed up.

Yours truly,
L. S. NEWMAN,
Pleasant Grove, Texas.

Mrs. Mary Isabella Lambuth.

The Lambuth family has been connected with the Southern Methodist missions in the East for a half century. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lambuth reached China in 1854. In that supremely difficult field they toiled until 1886, when they were transferred to Japan. After her husband's death Mrs. Lambuth came to America, broken in health and aged, supposing that she would spend the remainder of her days in her native land. But the call of China was strong; and, at the age of seventy, she returned to her loved employ, to lay it down only with life, completing her semi-centennial of service.

Mrs. Lambuth was the daughter of Mr. W. G. McClellan, of Cambridge, N. Y. She was born in 1832, went to Mississippi as a teacher in 1851, and was married to Rev. James W. Lambuth in 1853, having already dedicated herself to the cause of missions. At a missionary meeting in Canton, Miss., she placed in the collection a slip of paper on which was written, "I give $5 and myself to this noble cause." Truly it was a precious gift.

In China she opened day schools and boarding schools, which were taught by herself, instructed Bible women, translated hymns, catechisms, and books; later edited the periodical Woman's Work for Woman, and taught a school for English speaking children at Shanghai.

The fourteen years of work in Japan were filled with similar endeavor. A night school begun there in 1886 has now grown to Palmore Institute; and the work for girls, into Kobe Institute.

Absolute devotion to her Master, which found its divine direction in the foreign mission work, was the keynote of Mrs. Lambuth's life. Her intellectuality was unusual, and her capacity for work great. The orderly quality of her mind and habits of system enabled her to accomplish an almost incredible amount of work. To her, in great measure no doubt, her son, Dr. W. R. Lambuth, the distinguished missionary, is indebted for these qualities. Mrs. Lambuth's career of remarkable endeavor and achievement was ended at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Park, at Soochow, June 26, in the land to which she had given the strength of her youth, and the powers of her maturity. Of such as she it is most truly said, "Their works do follow them."—Epworth Era.

A Suggestion.

At the close of the second quarter last year the Woman's Board had to borrow $5,000 in order to meet its expenses. The reason for this financial condition is not difficult to find if we remember how easy it is to put off until the last minute what might easily be done earlier. How many put off paying up their dues until the end of the year, and yet each quarter has its own expenses, which must be met. Our workers at home and abroad must not be hampered in their usefulness by financial embarrassments.

Can we not by a little extra effort prevent a like deficit this year? August is the last month of the second quarter. Let each auxiliary see to it that its treasurer has a full report at the end of this month.

BETTER THAN GOLD.

"It was troubled for several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H. "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicines I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run-down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. Only 50 cents. Satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists.

Col. Hamilton C. Jones Says:

Mrs. Joe Person.

Madam:—Last year I was afflicted with some skin trouble affecting my feet, pronounced by my physicians to be crythema. I was confined to my room for some two months, and was lame for six months or more. After trying many remedies without effecting a cure, I resorted to your Remedy. After using three bottles I began to improve, and before I had finished the fifth or sixth bottle, I was practically free of the trouble. Once since then there recurred symptoms of its return, when I again resorted to your Remedy, and again the trouble disappeared. I believe I am indebted to you for relief from a very serious affliction.

Yours truly,
HAMILTON C. JONES.

The Relation of the Home Mission Work to the Foreign.

PART I —TWO SISTERS

When asked to discuss this subject, the thought came to me of two beautiful sisters—clad in garments white, countenances aglow with the light of the knowledge of God, feet "shod with the preparation of the Gospel"—starting, hand in hand, to the sin-darkened corners of the world. Gladly, swiftly do they go, shedding abroad that light whose first beams shone forth in the early morning from Bethlehem's manger, bringing that immortal life which has quickened the divine and spiritual nature of the human family, and is gradually changing a world of sin, ignorance and superstition to holiness, harmony and peace.

BRAZIL, MEXICO, CUBA.

We see the profile of one, as she turns her yearning gaze to the Land of the Southern Cross, and with outstretched arms would enfold the priest-ridden Brazilians, without a Bible; our nearest neighbors of the land of the ancient Toltecs; and those of the beautiful Pearl of the Antilles, our latest adopted daughter.

With passionate pleading she bids them arise and come out of the darkness of their superstition, their "isms" and Romish thraldom, and for their crosses and implements of the crucifixion receive an arisen and living Savior. They may worship the divine and all-powerful Son, not the memory of the human Virgin Mother. For their adoration of the saints, they may know the love of a personal Savior.

INDIA, CHINA, JAPAN, KOREA, AND THE ISLES OF THE SEA

She goes into the Zenanas of far-off India. And into the Oriental Walled Kingdom, and raises Chinese victims from their worship of beasts, birds, stocks and stones, with the horrible attendant practices, unbinds their feet, lifts them up into the light of a new life hidden in Christ.

She gives the Japanese hero-worshipers a divine Redeemer, and enters the Little Hermit Kingdom and plants the Christian white flag over the Korean homes.

With untiring energy and holy zest, her feet touch the soil of the Isles of the Sea, and as they enter the barbarians' huts the darkness melts away and Christian civilization begins.

THE OTHER SISTER.

"How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" While the divine commission is thus being carried to the uttermost parts of the earth, what of the lovely companion?

THE DEACONESS.

We see this face full front and read in its heaven-born purpose. Her lifework is to glorify her Lord by rendering her most noble service, that of rescuing and saving those about us. As she goes among the wondering and destitute, taking the bandages from their bruised souls and applying the soothing salve of the gospel, she smiles as she hears her Master's commendation, "Inasmuch as ye have done it to the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

THE MEANING OF THE PICTURE.

To those who persist in separating the Home and Foreign work, the above seems a true picture. But upon closer study I can no longer call them twin sisters. The features of the profile are the same as those of the front face. It is the same picture at different sittings.

MRS. B. B. ADAMS.

I congratulate our readers on the privilege of enjoying this week a portion of the fine article read by the writer herself at our Annual Meeting. We have for some years known and loved Mrs. Adams as our faithful Conference Treasurer of the W. F. M. S., and are delighted to have her gifts in the W. H. M. S. column. I hope to see more of her fine thoughts next week.

Editorial

WHERE MORAL FORCE IS NEEDED.

Two years ago the people of North Carolina seemed to be in a state of hopeless apathy with regard to the abolition of the saloon. Here and there could be found a municipality with moral life enough to protect itself by adopting regulative or prohibitive plans. In some cases in which municipal moral life was not strong enough for adequate protection, boards of County Commissioners and Aldermen developed sufficient moral strength to supply the deficiency.

The apathy, however, was more apparent than real. Thousands of anxious eyes were peering through the gloom searching for the dawning of the day. A State Anti-Saloon League had been formed and was struggling manfully against surprising obstacles. Our people seemed to be under a kind of obsession brought about by the overwhelming victory of the saloon in 1881. It seemed hard for the temperance people to rally from that defeat.

But an unseen force was at work. The political eye had seen profit in the passage of sweeping temperance legislation. The legislature of 1903, after rejecting the plans earnestly urged by the temperance forces working through the Anti-Saloon League passed the Watts bill, prohibiting the sale and manufacture of liquor in the rural sections and in the smallest towns and providing for elections in the larger municipalities.

This bill was drafted in a political council months before the legislature met. The motive had no blood relationship with any moral purpose. It was purely political. Yet it proved a God-send to the temperance life of the State. It did not go far enough. It has its defects. Yet it is a thousand bow-shots ahead of anything we had before. We will not be so unjust as to apply here the familiar story of the old woman who prayed for bread, and told the wicked men who threw the loaf down the chimney that if the devil brought it, God sent it. Suffice it to say that some good things come providentially even through politics.

We wish to say emphatically: There must be no backward step. Every movement must be forward. And here the moral force of the temperance spirit must manifest itself. That force must be strong enough to vote at the ballot box against any man who would tear down the scaffolding which has been built. If the edifice is weak it must be made stronger. If there are defective pieces, they must be taken out. If strengthening braces are needed they must be supplied. But it is the God-given duty of the Christian people of the State to vote only for those men whose eye is to the sunrise, who are the enemies of the saloon, and whose effort will be to strengthen what temperance legislation we have.

Moral force must exert itself in conserving the benefits of the temperance victories achieved in so many towns throughout the State. Of course, there can be no reasonable expectation of insuring perfect obedience to law. We have grown weary of the old cry, "Prohibition does not prohibit." Of course not. Law against crime does not prevent crime. But who would dare live in a land which has no law against crime? As long as sin is in the world men and women are going to sin—and that too in the way of making, selling, and drinking spirituous liquors. But this one thing is certain: a proper civic conscience can reduce the manifestations of this peculiar species of sin to a minimum. If not, we may as well throw the principles of our great Republic to the winds. Greensboro has done the proper thing in organizing a league for the enforcement of anti-saloon laws. Let all other towns follow suit.

The pulpit, the school, the press, the father and mother are still under the strong pressing obligation to instil temperance principles in mind and heart. Our people must be taught that drinking is not only a great individual and national peril, but a sin in the eyes of God. To begin the work of temperance in cradlehood, and to develop it at every stage along the road of life, making a Christ-touched conscience the highest and most powerful law is the most reasonable and successful plan of procedure. This plan embraces and generates moral force. May we have plenty of it in the crisis which now confronts us.

PROPHETS OF EVIL AND GOOD.

The world has but little use for a pessimist and its very sound grates on the ear. We may define a pessimist as one who is always looking for trouble, and he always finds it. There are many persons who are never so happy as when unhappy. It is distinctively a negative quality, and the pessimist pulls down but never builds up. He is on every side with a complaining, croaking, future-dreading spirit that tends to dishearten those who are going ahead bravely bearing whatever befalls them. In the home, in politics, in religion, in social life and everywhere is found this prophet of evil and a harbinger of woe, but we never find a useful positive factor among them. You never saw a great man in any line of work who was a pessimist. This great, busy, throbbing world has use only for men and women who look to the future with bright hopes and then bend every energy toward the realization of their expectations. It was pessimists who predicted disaster for the first steam-boat, locomotive, telegraph, telephone, and all the discoveries that have advanced civilization; and it was pessimism run mad that hurried our Savior to the cross. It is really a sin of which many Christians are guilty. The great Exemplar did not and could not use a pessimist. "He went about doing good," but those with gloomy forebodings are so saturated with the spirit of depression that the good that they would do they cannot.

An optimist is as far removed from a pessimist as zenith from nadir. His hearty grasp of the hand and smiling face is a powerful elixir that puts new hope into struggling humanity. No doubt every one can bring to mind some one of this kind whose very presence is a benediction and whose words are like oil on troubled waters. These are the men and women who do things, to whom the word "impossible" is obsolete, who believe that God still reigns, and that every thing is working toward a glorious end. In things spiritual, in things temporal, the optimist is the great power that moves the world. His influence is great while he lives, and lives long after the time "when the struggle of mart and forum is over, and kind Nature heals the scar which his descent into mother earth has made, when the carpet of the infant becomes the blanket of the dead."

THOSE NEW MEMBERS.

We well remember when we were a circuit rider with what joy we received at our meetings the newly converted into the church.

We also remember what a sense of responsibility was ours as we inducted them into ecclesiastical relationship with God.

We always took the time of a whole service for this solemn ceremony. We proceeded slowly and prayerfully. We explained the questions and vows. We read over the General Rules and explained them. We had the congregation to sing much and pray much.

But we never discharged our full duty to those babes in Christ until we had urged them to have in hand as soon as possible a Bible, their church paper, and a Discipline.

Brother, you can do much for the Raleigh Christian Advocate between now and Conference by urging the newly converted to take in their homes in addition to the Bible and the Discipline, the church paper. We feel sure that by so doing you can do more for the spiritual welfare of the new member.

Let those members be first Christians and then make them strong Methodists.

You cannot do this without supplying them with Methodist literature. Think on these things, brethren.

WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO WITH THE EPWORTH LEAGUE?

This is a very practical question for the North Carolina Conference to consider and settle. In proportion to numbers and resources, the North Carolina Conference is doing less for the League than any other Conference in Southern Methodism. We do not, of course, lose sight of the fact that we have in our midst some splendid chapters and most excellent League workers. But taking the whole Conference work into consideration, the Epworth League is a waif among us. Its wondering and weeping and shivering and begging are pathetic in the extreme.

Why do we treat so coldly and cruelly this child of the church? This question must come up again and again, and before the bar of our consciences we must answer.

We cannot say that the Epworth League is not more than worth its bread and salt. Read the statistics and get an idea for once of some of its triumphs. Read what it has done for missions, the Conference collections, how it has spiritually revolutionized cold churches, how it has put new life into the young people in hundreds of towns and cities—nay, in the very rural sections, and how it has proven the right arm of the pastor, and then say if you can, that the Epworth League is a worthless piece of machinery.

No; the League is going to succeed even in the North Carolina Conference. God is in it and behind it. It is now having the experience the Sunday-school had one hundred years ago. The obstacles in the way of the League were in the way of the Sunday-school. Our preachers and people may as well prepare to establish the League, for it is going to succeed.

And now a special matter. The Epworth League Board of the North Carolina Conference appointed Rev. H. B. Anderson, of Goldsboro, an enthusiastic League worker, to edit the League column in the Advocate. It seems to us that he has worked alone. Why do not some of the brethren help him? Why do you not send a report of your League occasionally, and add a word of encouragement or exhortation? Brother Anderson cannot, by himself, make the League column a success. And as long as he receives no help from the brethren, he cannot be held responsible for any failure. Brethren, extend your help. It can be rendered in many ways.

UNTIL JANUARY, 1905.

We have been so successful in securing new subscribers to the Advocate, and the other Southern Methodist papers are talking so much about their expectations of having a circulation of 10,000 subscribers, that we have about concluded that we must have the same circulation. We can have it. We should have it. We shall have it—if our preachers and laymen be in the same mind. We offer the Advocate from now until January 1, 1905, for fifty cents. Of course, if we were to consider this year alone, we could not afford to make such an offer. But we make it in order that we may induce those who take advantage of it to become regular subscribers at the regular price after January 1, 1905.

Preachers and laymen, work this offer to its fullest capacity.

The charge is often made, especially by Southern scholars, that the South has been dominated largely by the political spirit—and that to the detriment of the South. We take at this office quite a large number of secular papers, published for the most part in this State. Many of these papers are first-class representatives of journalism. But, can some one tell us why nine-tenths of the editorial matter in these papers is of a political character. Are not the industrial, social and literary interests which are developing so rapidly worthy of editorial consideration. An editorial on a moral subject is almost a rarity in our newspapers. Do not these facts prove that the political spirit is now dominating our people? We are training up our boys and girls to feel that politics is paramount. We are not throwing a complaint against, but only making a suggestion to, our valuable contemporaries.

Methodist Mention

State.

We regret to learn that the health of Mr. Washington Duke does not improve. Last week he was in a critical condition.

Rev. N. L. Seabolt, P. C. Brooklyn and Macedonia, reports that he has just closed a successful meeting at Macedonia.

Rev. H. M. Jackson writes that the Pantego and Belhaven charge is prospering. He hopes to dedicate the new church at Belhaven next Sunday.

Rev. G. F. Smith, P. E., Warrenton District, passed through Raleigh on last Monday morning on his way to Davidson County, to visit his aged father.

Rev. R. F. Bumpas attended the Waynesville District Conference, and, on Sunday morning, preached a sermon which has been highly commended.

Rev. G. B. Starling, P. C., Cary Circuit, has lately been visited by his father, of Wayne County. Both paid their respects to the Advocate a few days ago.

The Epworth League of Edenton Street Church is enjoying great prosperity. The meetings during this hot summer weather are enthusiastic, and largely attended.

The Methodist pastors in Raleigh are all in place and are doing fine work. The congregations, we are glad to know, are but little affected by the hot weather.

Rev. J. M. Terrell, of the North Carolina Conference, and at present, one of our missionaries to Brazil, is now in North Carolina on a visit. He is attended by his wife, and their ward, Donna Angelita da Silva, of Brazil.

Rev. A. J. Parker has been very successful in canvassing for the new Methodist school at Elizabeth City. In two weeks he raised over $2,500. He is at present filling some appointments for Rev. J. E. Underwood, P. E.

Rev. C. C. Brothers received some time ago a circular praising a certain brand of liquor. Whereupon the doughty and liquor hating preacher wrote to the firm a public letter which sparkles and spits fire. Better let Brothers alone.

Rev. J. A. Baldwin, of the W. N. C. Conference, spent several days in Raleigh last week. He is enthusiastic over the prospects of the Industrial School which he has organized and developed. His heart is in his work, and he is going to succeed.

Among the excursionists from Elizabeth City to Raleigh last week were the following who paid their respects to the Advocate: Mr. N. J. Walker, Coinjock, N. C.; Mr. R. H. Commander and wife, Elizabeth City, N. C., and John J. Gordon, Lily, N. C.

Rev. T. J. Eskridge, of Tazewell, is exceedingly popular with his people. Some of them say that his preaching ability is equal to the best.—Midland Methodist. Brother Eskridge is an old Shelby (N. C.) boy. His friends in North Carolina watch with deep interest his useful career.

The Weaver School for boys will be located on the Newland property east of Lenoir. Dr. C. C. Weaver, the efficient and progressive president of Davenport College has bought the property and a commodious school building will be erected thereon. Until this building is completed, the large dwelling house on the place will be used, and afterwards converted into a dormitory.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

Hon. W. C. Newland, of Lenoir, N. C., who has been lately nominated for Congress in the Eighth District, is every inch a man. We have known him from boyhood, and from our thorough knowledge of him, we have no hesitation in saying that he is worthy of any honor the people may give him. As a member of the Methodist Church at Lenoir, he has always taken a very active part in the furtherance of the interests of the church.

Our "August friends" have been remembering us in more ways than one. Last week we were the recipient of kindness at the hands of two elect laymen, W. H. Humphries, of Lumberton, and H. M. Johns, of Garner. The former sent us a crate of his nicest cantaloupes; the latter, a basket of his best peaches and apples. These brethren have our best thanks.

Mrs. W. S. Stevens, of Smithfield, N. C., whose good deeds are many, proves to be one of our "August friends" several times over. She has just sent in the price of three yearly subscriptions, and the Advocate will now go to three new subscribers, who will greatly enjoy such practical kindness on the part of Mrs. Stevens. Of course, the Advocate enjoys such friendliness and hereby returns its thanks to the loyal donor.

The following card, in which many will be interested, has been received at this office: Rev. and Mrs. Nereus Elbridge Coltrane request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Mabel to Mr. Robert Amsei Merritt on the evening of Wednesday, the twenty-fourth of August nineteen hundred and four at nine o'clock. Centenary Methodist Church, Smithfield, North Carolina. At home after September 6th, Smithfield, N. C.

Mr. J. D. Riggan, of Fuquay Springs, reports that the Sunday-school there is rapidly growing in numbers, usefulness, and interest. Brother Riggan took charge of that Sunday-school when it numbered twenty-odd. Now there are nearly one hundred members. It is one of the best regulated, most enthusiastic Sunday-schools of which we have any knowledge. The Methodists at Fuquay have a rich field to develop and the next Conference should make ample provision for meeting the demands down there.

Rev. J. H. Frizzelle, P. C. Pittsboro Circuit, thus reports: "We have held two of our protracted meetings. Congregations were good and attentive. Rev. W. B. Green preached twice for us. We had no other ministerial help. We received into the church five on profession of faith and two by certificate. The official board without the 'knowledge or consent' of the pastor, voted him a vacation and a purse to pay the expenses. They know how to do the nice thing here, Doctor. The longer I stay in the pastorate the more I sympathize with editors, college presidents, and Presiding Elders. You have my sympathy, brethren."

Dr. S. B. Turrentine has recently made an extended tour of attending district conferences and other places in both Conferences of the State in behalf of Greensboro Female College. During his visits in various parts of the State, he met with much encouragement and success. During the entire time of about four weeks, he secured nearly $5,500 in subscriptions and contributions on the rebuilding fund of the college. Several thousand dollars more will be needed to complete the building for this fall term. In addition to the above named contributions, Miss Nannie Lee Smith has had good success in securing funds on the rebuilding and Rev. M. T. Plyler, of Chapel Hill, has succeeded well in securing donations on furnishing the college. The work of rebuilding is now being carried forward by a large force of hands, under the supervision of Mr. S. W. Foulk, the architect of Greensboro West Market Street Church. Bishops A. Coke Smith and W. W. Duncan recently spoke in behalf of the college, at the district conferences over which they presided.—Greensboro Cor. Morning Post.

Connectional.

A Deaconess Conference will be held in St. Louis October 14, 15.

Dr. Lafferty, of the Baltimore-Richmond, calls Bishop Potter the "Modern Sanballat."

The last magazine number of the Epworth Era is a beauty. Oh, that our Book Committee would make possible such a number every week! Anything less will not satisfy the demands of the League and our great church.

Bishop Galloway sailed from Vancouver for Japan to hold our Conferences in the Orient, on July 28.

Dr. Waterhouse speaks of Emory and Henry as being in better condition in many ways than for the past twenty years.

Rev. J. B. Ley, editor of the Florida Christian Advocate, has gone to Battle Creek, Mich., for surgical and medical treatment.

Who is "Brother McGath of the North Carolina Conference"? A writer in the Southern Christian Advocate speaks of him as having done some good preaching lately in South Carolina.

The Methodist Quarterly Review for the third quarter is unusually attractive in its table of contents. This publication will not suffer by comparison with any Review, religious or secular.

The mission work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Korea now embraces the cities of Seoul, Songdo, and Wonsan. There are twenty-nine congregations, twenty chapels, and upward of five hundred members. In addition, our Woman's Board of Missions has three schools there and five missionaries.

OUR AUGUST FRIENDS AGAIN.

Do not forget that "a friend in need is a friend indeed," and by all means remember that "a friend in need in August is to a newspaper in North Carolina, especially to the Raleigh Christian Advocate, a friend indeed, over over again.

We have heard from some of our "August friends," but there are hundreds and hundreds from whom we have not heard.

Look at your label. If the date on the label is in the past, remember that from that date your renewal is due. Do not make the mistake of supposing as some do that it will not be due one year from date of that label.

Suppose you were running a newspaper whose paper bill must be met promptly every month, whose postage bill must be met every month, whose pressmen, typesetters, and other members of the force must be paid every wek. Suppose you could scrape the bottom of your treasury. Suppose your daily expenses were twenty-five dollars and over and you were getting in daily only a few dollars and that, too, when the renewal of over a thousand is due and that thousand can really pay as easily now as at any other time? What would you do? You would try to persuade your friends to send in the cash, and that right away.

This is what we are trying to do, and we have no apology to offer. You do not want any under the circumstances.

Look at your label and if the date is behind you, enroll yourself at once on a money order or bank check as one of our "August friends." Won't you?

The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions will send out this year fifty-five men and women.

FOR CHRIST AND THE CHURCH
DEVOTIONAL CHARITABLE CONFERENCE LITERARY EVANGELICAL

EDITED BY REV. H. B. ANDERSON.

The Era for Twenty-five Cents.

The publishers are offering the Epworth Era from now until January, 1905, for twenty-five cents.

Let us do our part to increase the subscription list and to make the Era the equal of any young people's paper published in America. Our young people will read—why not the Era?

Why Not an Epworth League?

The Epworth League is giving the church a more positive and devout religious life among our young people. It is stimulating interest in evangelistic achievements and is increasing the collections for the benevolences of the church.

It is making more intelligent workers for future Methodism. It is stopping the leak and increasing the membership of the church. It gives our young people pleasures in keeping with the spirit of our Methodism.

Why not spend much time in perfecting the organization of a Chapter?

Soul Winning.

Soul-winning is the most glorious service one can engage in. It is the most sublime act of mankind. A demonstration of the highest love. Far better that a parent should make his children Christians than to leave them a million dollars. Epworthian, if hope of reward can influence you, there is no brighter crown, no greater reward awaiting a Christian than that which comes to him through whose agency souls are saved. You enter into the work of the Master who came to seek and to save the lost. And nothing so glorifies your Lord as the winning of souls to His service. In all your work and labor of love make this the crowning effort of your life.

The Missionary Training School.

The Board of Missions has authorized the organization of a training school for Home and Foreign Missionaries, the ends of which are a practical study of church methods, devotional study of the Bible as a text-book and the seeking of those spiritual qualifications so needful for all Christian service. Foreign, Home and City Missions will be studied carefully.

Dr. Walter R. Lambuth, Nashville, Tenn., is to be President. The school opens, to all Christian workers, January 4, 1904. Cost to be only six dollars per term.

We hope the Fourth Vice-Presidents will avail themselves of the course and use the knowledge gained to intensify the interest of the League members in the evangelistic movement of the church.

Notes.

Rev. E. McWhorter was elected by the Wilmington District Conference as District Organizer. We look for results from this action of the conferences. Brother McWhorter is a live enthusiastic League worker who will no doubt bring things to pass.

* * *

We find the brethren are reading the League columns; but they are few who are acting upon the suggestions offered. Brethren, will you not act? Send us some news from your chapter, write an article, offer a suggestion, or tell us how you are progressing with your collections for the League Missionary. We feel as lonely as a sparrow on a house-top. Your silence is pensive. Break the awful stillness. Let us hear from you.

* * *

The summer will soon be ended and the out-of-towners will have returned from their vacation. Let all the Chapters prepare a rally day service and welcome the home-comers, sending special invitations to those who had become slack in attendance upon the Chapter meetings.

* * *

The shame of an eternal dishonor rests upon the man who views the Gospel not as a trust, but as a personal possession. But viewed as a trust for the blessing of our brethren, it is the eternal honor of the man who receives it and redounds to the glory of our God.

NEARLY FORFEITS HIS LIFE.

A runaway almost ending fatally, started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill. For four years it defied all doctors and all remedies. But Bucklen's Arnica Salve had no trouble to cure him. Equally good for Burns, Bruises, Skin Eruptions and Piles. Twenty-five cents at all druggists.

Lesson for August 21, 1904.

Elijah on Mount Carmel.

(1 Kings 18:30-46.)
Golden Text: If the Lord be God, follow Him. (1 Kings 18:21.)

LIGHT ON THE LESSON FROM MANY SOURCES.

Elijah's purpose now was to bring the people to the choice of the true God, and to accomplish the religious reformation for which the famine had been preparing their minds. Hence he demanded of the king to assemble the people on the top of Mount Carmel, that they might make their choice.

Mount Carmel was specially adapted to Elijah's purpose. It is a ridge twelve miles in length. At a point four miles from its southeastern extremity, called by the Arabs El Murakhah, "The Burning," or "The Sacrifice," doubtless from this sacrifice of Elijah, is a natural plateau 1,000 feet above the plain of Esdraelon. Here great numbers could assemble. The flame of the sacrifice would be visible for twenty miles around. Jezebel could see it from the capital at Jezreel. It was a pulpit from which the prophet could preach to all Israel. Here were summoned all Israel. The king and his suite were there, though Jezebel remained at her palace. The four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal came, "probably in all the bravery of their sacrificial vestments." (2 Kings 10:22.)

"On Carmel's crown now swarms a countless throng,
With one brave soul to stand for God 'gainst millions in the wrong."

—Geo. L. Taylor.

The Test of Fire.—"How long halt ye between two opinions?" was the prophet's stern question of the people. The verb means to totter, limp, go stumbling and hesitating. "If the Lord be God, follow Him: but if Baal, then follow him." And when the people, awestruck and conscious of their guilt, made no response, Elijah proposed that each side prepare a sacrifice and pray to their deity; the God who answered by fire sent down from heaven would be the true God. The test was dignified and appropriate. Sacrifice was common to all religions. Then, Jehovah claimed to be the God of nature, to have brought the famine, to have sent Elijah, to have wrought miracles for his people. He could do it now. On the other hand, it was fair to Baal, for (1) Baal claimed to be the sun-god, lord of the elements and forces of nature, and, therefore, if this were true, he of all idols could sent fire from heaven. (2) The attempt was to be made in the full light of the rising sun, when Baal was especially worshiped. (3) If Baal could work this miracle, then he was able to bring rain, and the famine continued from no want of power on his part.

The True Test of Religion.—Something like this must ever be the test of true religion. The God that answers by the fire of the Holy Spirit, that purifies the heart, that consumes sin, that brings light to the mind, that inspires the soul with life, that cheers and warms hearts—he, and he only, is the true God. Any religion that fails in these is not the true religion.

The Two Parties.—The question was between Jehovah, true religion, morality, truth, blessing, represented by one man alone—Elijah, and Baal, false religion, immorality and its brood of evils, represented by four hundred and fifty prophets of Baal, sustained by the whole power of the government, but "one with God is a majority."

An illustration from Prescott's "Conquest of Peru:" Pizarro, in his earlier attempts to conquer Peru, came to a time when all his followers were about to desert him. They were gathered on the shore to embark for home. Drawing his sword he traced a line with it from east to west upon the sand. Then turning towards the south, "Friends and comrades," he said, "on that side are toil, hunger, nakedness, the drenching storm, desertion, and death; on this side, ease and pleasure. But there lies Peru with all its riches and the glory of conquest; here Panama and its poverty. Choose each man as becomes a brave Castilian. For my part, I go south." So saying, he stepped across the line. One after another his comrades followed him. This was the crisis of Pizarro's fate. There are moments in the lives of men which, as they are seized or neglected, decide their future destiny.—Illustrated Quarterly.

I CURE CANCER.

Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No knife. No plaster. No caustics. No slaughtering oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure internal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment;" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else is the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

Up to date 833 free libraries have been established in the public schools. The good work goes on pretty steadily. Edgecombe County makes a new departure, having raised $800 by taxing dogs for the benefit of free libraries, and will have one in every school district, says Colonel Olds.

A Mr. Butler, representing the tobacco firm of Butler Bros., of Reidsville, N. C., was drowned along with his horse in Northeast River one hundred yards below the railroad bridge near Castle Haynes, Sunday night. It is thought he drove into the river by mistake, thinking it was a small creek.

Six miners were drowned in the Barringer gold mine, located near Gold Hill, N. C., Rowan County, on August 11. A large pond near the entrance of the mine suddenly broke, and the waters rushed upon the men in terrific force to a depth of about 100 feet. The workmen were powerless to save themselves.

The evil prophecy of "Prince George," the New Bern negro, that Wilmington would be destroyed by fire Monday, August 15, 1904, was not fulfilled. That city is still standing. On account of the prophecy of the negro it is estimated that about a thousand negroes have left that city. They have been leaving for the past month, but during the past week the exodus was by the wholesale.

What cotton mill man wants to give us a bale of sheeting to help furnish our new beds with sheets?

What woolen mill man wants to send us woolen blankets for the same?

Who wants to send us quilts, comforts, coverlets and pillows?

How Long? Oh, Lord, How Long?

The prophecy of Dr. Ivey that this prosperous year would not bring large increase in our benevolent collections, has come to pass in regard to the Orphanage. They have not been as good this year as last. Only one person has given $200, three $100, not five $50, not ten $25, and not twenty-five $10. I have not raised $200, in both cash and subscriptions, in any church. Yet the cause has greatly grown upon the people. How long will it be ere the people called Methodists will awake to the importance of the work? How long will it be ere they put their hands in their pockets to finish and furnish our building? Hundreds of little needy ones are waiting. How long, O Lord, how long?

Southport and Rich Square.

Southport, the seat of the Wilmington District Conference, is a little city by the sea, where she grows in spite of the sand. I like that. One day there was revealed the fact that they were going to have a good Conference. John is always level-headed. He is not a hustler, but he always gets there. Brother Williams cared for us kindly.

We had to fly across the State to reach Rich Square before the adjournment of the Warrenton District Conference. Bishop Smith was in the chair. We heard good news of the editor of the Advocate, whose departing skirts we did not see.

The Bishop won all hearts. He did our Episcopy proud. He is the most unbishopy Bishop I ever saw. Yet he is every inch a Bishop. He will be known as the Bishop of the people.

Our stay at Bro. John Baughn's with Dr. Nash and Brother Hotelling was a treat indeed.

Laurinburg.

The first Sunday, inst., was spent in Laurinburg with my life-long friend and Conference class-mate, Rev. R. A. Willis. The weather was against us. Old "Aquarius" was in the ascendency. The capital of Scotland, is a humming little town with a live population—a pleasant people are they. They love our Orphanage. The Sunday-school was among the first to take upon themselves the support of an orphan. But they ought to, for we have two here from that town, and they are Scotch-Irish—Macks.

It was so nice to stay at the parsonage with Brother and Sister Willis—Willis is so dignified—you feel like straightning up in his presence.

Sunshiny Rooms, Beds, Etc.

Mr. J. P. Leake, of Rockingham, gives us a hundred dollars to furnish a dormitory.

Mrs. Ivan Proctor and her Lend a Hand Society take the matron's parlor.

Little Girl's Society of Smithfield take one office.

Who will be the next?

What Sunday-school or man or woman will send us $15 to buy a bed?

What circuit preacher will divide out the amount that it will take to support an orphan among his Sunday-schools? Tar River Circuit was the first to do it—Rich Square is the second. Who will be next?

The orphans must be provided for before we take them. What man or woman wants to support one? Bro. Corbett, of Henderson, feels lonesome.

SHEETS.—The sympathy of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sheets goes out to them at this time in their sad bereavement. They have suffered a great loss in the death of their little daughter Mary, who, by her lovable ways and sweet disposition, had entwined herself around the hearts of her parents and all who knew her.

"On angels' arms her spirit lay
When it was loosened from the clay,
And upward to the heaven's they brought
The darling whom the Lord had sought."

A FRIEND.

HALL.—Died, at the home in New Bern, N. C., July 6, 1904, Nita Hall, aged twenty-three years. She was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Richardson.

Nita was a consistent member of the Beech Grove Sunday-school from her infancy, and in 1892, under the ministry of Rev. J. G. Johnson, joined the M. E. Church, South, being then only eleven years of age. She lived an active Christian life.

In April, 1902, she was happily married to Mr. Alex. Hall, of New Bern. She leaves a fond mother, a loving husband and a bright little daughter a year old, besides numerous friends about Beech Grove to join the innumerable host that has crossed over to be ever with the Lord.

As her life here was one of love, we feel assured she has entered the eternal home of love.

We would comfort the bereaved ones with the cheering hope of joining Nita where no sad goodby is ever heard.

A FRIEND.

STROWD.—Mrs. Martha Atwater Strowd, daughter of Rev. Wilson and Mrs. Nellie Atwater, was born in Orange County, N. C., April 28, 1823, and died July 12, 1904, aged eighty-one years, two months and fourteen days.

On the 11th day of August, 1842, she was happily married to Manly D. Strowd, with whom she lived for nearly sixty years, when, something over two years ago, he preceded her to the spirit land. To this union there were born eleven children, six of whom, Mrs. A. L. Booker, Mrs. Mary E. Lloyd, Miss C. Emeline Strowd, Rev. Thomas W. Strowd, Matthew M. Strowd, Esq., and Mrs. Martha E. Bishop, now live.

Early in life Sister Strowd joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which she remained an honored member until the day of her death.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them. R. W. BAILEY.

ROBINSON.—R. Bascom Robinson was born in Sampson County, N. C., February 21, 1860, and died June 3, 1904. He was converted and joined the Methodist church when fourteen years of age.

He was married to Miss Columbia DuRant November 12, 1884. To this union were born five sons, all of whom live with their mother in Wilmington.

Brother Robinson was a Christian with a meek and humble spirit. A few days before his death the thought of his unworthiness came before him and he confessed it. A friend by his bedside tried to cheer him up by saying: "Bascom, I have known you all your life and you have been good all the time and never did wrong." To this he said: "But Jesus knows." Notwithstanding his suffering was long and intense, he did not complain nor become impatient. A few days before the end came, he asked his wife to sing "Rock of Ages," and at the conclusion of the first verse, he said: "I must go where all is light," and calling the boys to him, he gave them his dying blessing. He was buried in Bellview cemetery, June 5.

A. B. HALTOM.

BROOKS.—Mrs. Pauline Hill Brooks was born near Louisburg, N. C., September 27, 1844. She was the fourth daughter of the late Major Daniel S., and Susan Irwin Hill. When about eleven years of age she professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which she continued a devout and consistent member until God called her to join the church triumphant.

On the 4th of February, 1879, she was married to Rev. Jno. R. Brooks, D. D., who is well and favorably known all over the State, and by many beyond her borders, as a leading minister of the Methodist church. For a little more than twenty-five years she was his true helpmeet. Having no children of her own, she was a faithful stepmother. Wherever her husband was sent as the servant of the church she labored with him. She always had a class in the Sunday-school, and loved the work. Her name has been prominently connected with the work of the Woman's Missionary Societies, Home and Foreign, in the State; and to her untiring efforts as Corresponding Secretary, the success of the Florence Crittenton Home Circle of Charlotte, was largely indebted. She has made a worthy record, and God has taken her unto Himself. The last months of her life were months of suffering, but she bore it with cheerfulness and Christian fortitude. The end came without a struggle on the 29th of July, 1904, in the home of her brother-in-law at Louisburg. She passed away as the child falls to sleep at eventide—and her rest is sweet.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer from the Methodist church on Sunday afternoon, July 31, 1904, and her body was laid to rest in the city cemetery. The floral offerings were many and beautiful—a mere token of the high esteem in which she was held by a large circle of friends. We mourn, but not as those who have no hope. She cannot return to us, but whither she has gone shortly we also may go.

May God comfort the sorrowing husband in his declining years and her many relatives and friends who wait to rejoin her on the other shore!

L. S. MASSEY.

Chronic Sores Eating Ulcers

A Constant Drain Upon the System.

Nothing is a source of so much trouble as an old sore or ulcer, particularly when located upon the lower extremities where the circulation is weak and sluggish. A gangrenous eating ulcer upon the leg is a frightful sight, and as the poison burrows deeper and deeper into the tissues beneath and the sore continues to spread, one can almost see the flesh melting away and feel the strength going out with the sickening discharges. Great running sores and deep offensive ulcers often develop from a simple boil, swollen gland, bruise or pimple, and are a threatening danger always, because while all such sores are not cancerous, a great many are, and this should make you suspicious of all chronic, slow-healing ulcers and sores, particularly if cancer runs in your family. Face sores are common and cause the greatest annoyance because they are so persistent and unsightly and detract so much from one's personal appearance. Middle aged and old people and those whose blood is contaminated and tainted with the germs and poison of malaria or some previous sickness, are the chief sufferers from chronic sores and ulcers. While the blood remains in an unhealthy polluted condition, and the sore will continue to grow and spread in spite of washes and salves, for the sore is the outward sign of some constitutional disorder, a bad condition of the blood and system, which local remedies cannot cure. A blood purifier and tonic is what you need—something to cleanse the blood, quicken the circulation and invigorate the constitution, and S. S. S. is just such a remedy. It counteracts and removes from the blood all the impurities and poisons, and gradually builds up the entire system; and when the blood has been purified the healing process begins and the ulcer or sore is soon entirely gone. S. S. S. contains no mineral or poisonous drugs of any description, but is guaranteed purely vegetable, a blood purifier and tonic combined and a safe and permanent cure for chronic sores and ulcers. If you have a slow-healing sore of any kind, external or internal, write us about it, and our physicians will advise you without charge. Book on "The Blood and its Diseases" free.

SSS

Wheeling, W. Va., May 28, 1903.

Some years ago while at work, I fell over a truck and severely injured both of my shins. My blood became poisoned as a result, and the doctor told me I would have running sores for life; and that if they closed up the result would be fatal. Under this discouraging report I left off their treatment and resorted to the use of S. S. S. Its effects were prompt and gratifying. It took only a short while for the medicine to cure up the sores, and I am not dead as the doctor intimated I would be, neither have the sores ever broken out again, and some 12 years have elapsed since what I have described occurred.

Resolutions of Respect.

Offered by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Centenary church, New Bern, N. C.:

Whereas, God, in His mysterious, yet all-wise providence, has removed from our midst our beloved sister and co-worker, Mrs. G. N. Ennett; and,

Whereas, we desire to give expression to our sorrow and to our estimate of her high Christian character and her true sterling worth; therefore be it

Resolved 1. That in the death of Mrs. Ennett our Society has lost one of its brightest jewels; one, in whose character nature harmonized, blending the love of God into faithfulness of duty, entire oblivion of self, and a heart filled with sunshine and love.

2. That while we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who is too wise to err and too good to be unkind, we will ever cherish the memory and the many virtues of our departed friend.

3. That we tender our sympathy to the bereaved ones and pray that God's grace may be sufficient in the hours of their deep affliction and that they may feel the ties binding them to heaven grow stronger each day.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this Society, a copy sent to the family of the deceased; also that a copy be sent to the New Bern Journal and one to the Raleigh Christian Advocate for publication.

LIZZIE R. HANCOCK,
VIRGINIA MOORE,
MRS. C. W. MUNGER,
Committee.

Whereas, our friend, Mrs. Annabelle Arnold, has been translated from earth to the fair land beyond the sky, who for many years has been a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church; therefore be it

Resolved 1. That while we bow with deep humility to the decree of an all-wise providence, we can but lament the death of one who, by her sweet disposition and kindness of heart, had endeared herself to all.

2. That in her death the church has lost a most valuable member and the community a most worthy Christian friend.

3. That her example should lead us to promote Christ's kingdom here on earth.

4. That we tender the bereaved family our deepest sympathy and pray they may be sustained by the knowledge that our heavenly Father doeth all things well.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased and a copy be furnished the Raleigh Christian Advocate for publication.

ESCAPED AN AWFUL FATE.

Mr. H. Haggins, of Melbourne, Fla., writes: "My doctor told me I had Consumption and nothing could be done for me. I was given up to die. The offer of a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, induced me to try it. Results were startling. I am now on the road to recovery and owe all to Dr. King's New Discovery. It surely saved my life." This great cure is guaranteed for all throat and lung diseases by all druggists. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

The Minister a Man.

They said that a minister was coming,
And Margaret—a girl of five,
Just a bundle of sunshine and prattle,
As busy as a bee in a hive—
Felt awed by a minister just as
Is a fellah by the Khedive.

By-and-by in a young man was ushered,
And there stood the sweet, little miss,
With innocent, wondering expression.
As much as to say, "Who is dis?"
And he opened his arms to the darling,
And she ran and gave him a kiss.

Then away off she scampered to grandma,
And she climbed right up on her knee,
"I dave him a hug and a tiss, dan'ma,
And I 'ike him, and he 'ikes me."
"Oh, my! Did you kiss the minister?"
Said the grandmother lovingly.

"O, dan'ma! that isn't the minister?"
And her rosy cheeks grew more red;
"I tought he was only a man, dan'ma,"
And the cherub dear hung her head.
"I oughtn't to have tissed him then, ought I?"
The blushing little darling said.

And a smile and a tear made acquaintance,
On the face of the minister then;
For the great desire of his longing heart,
Was to be just a man, I ken!
And, taking the wee thing up in his arms,
Said he, "Ministers are only men."

A Notre Dame Lady's Appeal.

To all knowing sufferers of rheumatism whether muscular or of the joints, sciatica, lumbago, backache, pains in the kidneys or neuralgia pains, to write to her for a home treatment which has repeatedly cured all of these tortures. She feels it her duty to send it to all sufferers FREE. You cure yourself at home as thousands will testify—no change of climate being necessary. This simple discovery banishes uric acid from the blood, loosens the stiffened joints, purifies the blood, and brightens the eyes, giving elasticity and tone to the whole system. If the above interests you, for proof address Mrs. M. Summers, Box 259, Notre Dame Ind.

Magazine Notes.

The Midsummer Fiction (August) number of "The Cosmopolitan" comes to us as the most diversified in its contents and the most beautifully illustrated of all the low-priced magazines of the month. It opens with an account of the genesis of Lake's submarine, the "Protector," whose destiny is of great interest to the world just at this movement. Other timely articles are "Railroads Above the Clouds," by Warren Harper, telling of the mountain railways of the world; "Wall Street's Wild Speculation: 1900—1904," by Henry Clews, a clear and instructive account of the methods of speculation pursued in Wall Street during the last four years and their inevitable outcome; M. J. Munn treats of the great outdoor industry of the United States. "Lumbering," fully illustrated. Mrs. George Cornwallis-West writes most entertainingly on the deterioration of modern manners. Very beautiful illustrations accompany an interesting article by Grace Isabel Colbron entitled "Dancing and Pantomine." The editor of the magazine—John Brisben Walker—contributes two papers, "What is Education?" and "A Dinner at Delmonico's." The fiction, however, is the chief feature of the number. The stories are all of them strong, all of them entertaining and all of them well illustrated. They are contributed by H. G. Wells, Cyrus Townsend Brady, Tom Masson, Howard Marble Hoke, Elizabeth H. Bowle and Edwin Milton Royle. The magazine prints the welcome announcement that the September issue will be devoted to the St. Louis Exposition—an illustrated record so complete as to be a valuable souvenir to those who visit the Exposition and a source of satisfaction to those who stay at home.

Col. Olds: Governor Aycock announced this afternoon that he had requested President James A. Bryan to call a meeting of the stockholders of the Atlantic and North Carolina Railway September 1st to consider the propositions to lease the road. This meeting will be of much interest to the public all over North Carolina. Almost ever since this year came in the road has cut a great figure and has been in the public eye almost all the while, all sorts of complications in the State and Federal courts having.——Up to date 893 free libraries have been established in the public schools. The good work goes on pretty steadily. Edgecombe County makes a new departure, having raised $800 by taxing dogs for the benefit of free libraries, and will have one in every school district. There are already 12 in operation. This county also has a professional and reference library for the teachers of each race, with 150 books in each.

A son and heir to the Czar of Russia was born Friday. The Czarina has had five other children, all girls, and Russia has long prayed for the birth of a boy. When a girl is born to the Emperor only thirty-one guns are fired from the Imperial Palace. When the thirty-second gun boomed Friday, and the people were aware that at last an heir to the throne was born, there were scenes of rejoicing everywhere, and before the salute was finished the whole city had blossomed out with flags and bunting, and the bells of the churches rang wildly.

Southern Tobacconist: To-day we have been shown by a North Carolina dealer samples of primings, which ranged from $4.50 per hundred to $8.50, and the tobacco men of Richmond, to whom they were shown, were unanimous in the opinion that the same types could have been bought last year for less than half of the prices quoted.

READING ROOM TRINITY COLLEGE

Raleigh Christian Advocate

FIFTIETH YEAR. ORGAN OF THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE. NUMBER 30.

RALEIGH, N. C., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 24, 1904.

THE RELIGIOUS PRESS AND THE PASTORATE.

BISHOP E. E. HOSS, D. D., LL. D.

He is surely a self-conceited pastor who supposes that he is capable without help of any sort, of doing all the work that needs to be done in the congregation or congregations which he is appointed to serve. Let him be as resourceful and as energetic as he may, he cannot, solitary and alone meet and discharge the manifold tasks that confront him from day to day. It is, therefore, the part of wisdom that he should re-enforce himself in every possible way, and thus multiply the value of his activities. Surely no one can be found to deny so primary a proposition.

Let us further affirm that a good religious newspaper, widely circulated, is the best assistant that any pastor can possibly secure. The reason for such a statement is not far to seek. Christianity is a religion of intelligence, and not of ignorance. It appeals always and everywhere to an enlightened understanding, and seeks to commend itself to every man's conscience in the sight of God. Repudiating the use of force, and rejecting the very thought of sacerdotal helps and my reason for such a statement is not far to seek. Christianity is thrown back upon the necessity of relying on intellectual and moral agencies. Being in its essence rational and not magical, it has no option except to convince the judgments and persuade the wills of those to whom it goes with its message of life.

In these days, moreover, the newspapers are the thought exchanges of the world, the clearing-house to which all those who have something to say that is worth hearing bring their utterances. I do not mean to decry the value of books. No one could be further from that folly than I am. But it is still true that for the great mass of the people books are not the chief vehicle for instruction. What is best in them—best in the sense of being most available for edification—is filtered down into the popular mind through the vehicle of the periodical press. They are read and digested by those who have the time and the inclination, and interpreted to the multitude in reviews, editorials and paragraphs. The old maxim was, "You may know a man by the company he keeps." The new one is, "You may know a man by the newspapers he reads." Whether he is aware of it or not, he is sure to get the color of his opinions from this source.

The question with the churches, is therefore, this: "Can we depend on the secular press for the dissemination of religious news and the discussion of religious topics, or must we establish organs of our own?" To this question, duly weighed, there can be but one answer. I gratefully record the fact that the leading journals of the country are generally friendly to Christianity, and are willing enough to publish whatever readable information may come to them concerning its work and progress. This is certainly a fact of no small importance. But it does not fully meet the needs of the situation. To begin with, the secular journals do not understand the language of Canaan, and when they undertake to speak in it, they are liable to make ludicrous blunders and mistakes. All the churches suffer at this point; the Methodists, as I am inclined to think, more than the rest. It remains to be added that a mere general friendliness of temper is not all that is called for. The demands of the hour are for open and active defense and advocacy of the kingdom. If these demands are not met, the cause is bound to suffer remediless loss.

The whole matter may be put to the test of practical experience. Who are the best Methodists? I mean where are we to look for the men and women that love the institutions and enterprises of Zion; that lead upright and godly lives; that freely give of their substance to support and sustain the ministry and the great Christian charities? The testimony of all the best pastors is that they are to be found among those who are the regular readers of the church paper. I say this is the testimony of all the best pastors; but I might make the assertion more comprehensive, and say of all pastors. With one voice they declare that their most loyal and liberal members, those upon whom they can depend in every emergency, are just those who, by reason of their weekly contact with the church press, are best informed as to the claims that are entitled to recognition at their hands.

In view of all that has been said, it is folly for any pastor to intimate that he has not time to push the circulation of these papers. The very scarcity of time is a reason why he should see to it that every family in his charge is supplied with them. There is no expenditure of effort that brings a larger return. I am personally acquainted with a few uncommonly successful circuit preachers who often subscribe for an Advocate to be sent to each one of their officials, and pay the bill out of their own pockets, when the end cannot be reached in any other way. Talking to one of these preachers once I said: "You cannot afford to stand the expense of such a policy." He quickly answered, "I cannot afford to do anything else; it is an investment that never fails to yield more than a hundred per cent." And no doubt he was right. Let us sow down the church as never before with our own church papers. The duty cannot be shirked or neglected without loss in manifold ways.

Mr. Dooley and the Sub-Way Tavern.

"But I must get back fr'm me lab'rtory to Bishop Potter's. Will me friend succeed? I hope he will. We can't get too many dacint men into our profissyon. They'se wan thing I wud call me neighbor's attention to. Th' unbenighted American wurrukin' man likes his dhrink, as who does not? But he wants to take it in peace. His varchues has been wrote about. But let him injye his few simple vices in his own way, says I. He goes to th' saloon an' ye go to th' club mostly f'r th' same season. Ye don't want to go home. He don't need anny wan to push him into a bar. He'll go there because that's a place where wan man's bether thin another an' nobody is ra-aly on but th' bartinder. There ought to be wan place where th' poor wurrrukin' man can escape bein' patted on th' back. He ain't so bad, ye'er grace, as ye think. Wurrukin' men don't dhrink to excess. Dhrunkenness is a vice iv' th' idle. Did ye iver see a la-ad sprintin' aeross a joist two hundhred feet in th' air? D'ye think he end do that if he was a free dhrinker? Th' on'y wurrukin' men who dhrink too much ar-re thruckmen, an' that's because they have so much time on their hands. Wile they ar-re waitin' f'r a load they get wan. Aven some iv thim ar-re sober. Ye can tell them be their hats.

"Somehow or another, Hinnissy, it don't seem jus' right that there shud be a union iv church an' saloon. These two gr-reat instittuions ar-re best kept apart. They kind iv offset each other like th' supreem coort and Congress. Dhrink is a nicissry evil, nicissry to th' clargy. If they iver admit its nicissry to th' consumers they might as well close up th' churches. Ye'll niver find Father Kelly openin' a saloon. He hates me business, but he likes me. He says dhrink is an evil, but I'm a nicissity. If I moved out a worse man might come in me place."

"Ye ra-aly do think dhrink is a nicissry evil?" said Mr. Hinnissy.

"Well," said Mr. Dooley, "if it's an evil to a man, it's not nicissry, an' if it's nicissry, it's an evil."

August.

Horse-mint is blooming now—a dull pink and yellow flower, with road dust on its leaves. Most delicate is its perfume and suggestive of autumn and its mellow fruitfulness. It loves to grow in old lanes and pastures among the haunts of men and herds. Also, on every hillside the golden-rod is heralding the fall o' the leaf. The swamps are shot with the brilliant yellow of poplar and deep red gum leaves. Here and there a troop of black-eyed-susans nod like flirts to the breeze.

But these few scouts do not argue that Queen Summer has laid down her sceptre. The bee still swings on her clover blossom; oxeyes yet sprinkle her grassy places with white; her maypops, or passion flowers, show combined the bloom and the fruit; and her migrant singers, who will brook no other rule than hers, are there.

August, therefore, is the month of transition. The pirate Saxons of autumn have begun stealthily to scatter themselves along the coast of summer, and will soon usurp her reign. Full of delicious hints of fall and harvest a August is, she yet culminates the heats of the year and continues to hold out to sweltering humanity the summer's invitation to cool woods and seashore, mountain and stream. These slumbrous, sultry noons, with a hot pavement under him and a sky of brass above, what dweller in the town would not dearly like to be—

"Where tides of grass break into foam of flowers, Or where the wind's feet shine along the sea?"

—J. C. McNeill, in Charlotte Observer.

The most successful camp-meeting ever held at Wesley Grove, a long established and popular Southern Methodist camp ground between Washington and Baltimore, closed its annual two weeks meeting last week. Notwithstanding the heavy and almost daily rainfall, the attendance was good and great interest manifested. Bishops Wilson and Candler, who were there the entire time, preached a number of excellent sermons.

Contributions

Education.

BY HENRY A. PAGE.

(An address delivered before the Rockingham District Conference, and published at the request of the Conference.)

We have heard much of this subject in North Carolina in recent years—education. Governor Aycock is widely known as the Educational Governor, and the four years of his encumbency is recognized now as the educational administration in North Carolina. In passing, it is interesting to note that a political expedient, pure and simple, was the originating cause of this agitation of the question. Somehow or other political support seems to inject life and interest in every matter touched by it. We failed to make much impression in the temperance question until we convinced the politicians that the people were at last aroused, and then they did just what they had been warning us for years would be fatal to the cause, injected the question into politics, and the Watts law resulted. But I want to say here that we cannot depend upon the continued favor of politicians for either of these causes. As a secondary result of the Constitutional Amendment we have a revival of interest in the matter of education. It was not framed for an educational measure, nor was its primary purpose to confine the suffrage to the intelligence of the State. It was a political expedient born of intolerable conditions, and that it has served to quicken interest in education is but a side issue and an accident. We not only have no guarantee that this extraordinary interest is to continue, but even now there are clouds and mutterings ahead. Let us build upon such foundation as has been laid, resist relaxation, continue the agitation, and seek to broaden the interest of all the people.

Have we a proper conception ofw hat education is and means? What is it? I mean no sort of offence when I say that nine-tenths of us, year, even a larger proportion, do not know what it is, nor why it should be encouraged, nor how it may be gained. What does the average man think about it? What is it to be an educated man? Are not our ideas vague and indefinite and meagre?

We hear a man say he had a common school education; had, mind you. Another had a high school education, and still another a college education. What impression is conveyed to the average mind? Is it not that the first had committed to memory the rules and precepts and processes of a few text books, and that the high school and college stand for the mastery of a few more rules and precepts of a few more text books? A process of copying or imitation or absorption, or at the best nothing more than grinding corn into meal.

Does it simplify the matter to say that education is training; nothing more, nothing less. We are more familiar with the meaning of that word perhaps. It has fewer possibilities of misapprehension, and is easier of illustration. All our lives long things, animate and inanimate, have been undergoing training in our sight, under our control and in our hands. We prune and graft and cultivate; we train for growth of root at one season, for plant growth at another. The climbing vine is given a twist around its support, and proving refractory, is tied in position. We are told that the horse was once but little larger than a dog. Five thousand years of training has made him the perfect animal we see. So with all the domestic animals—they have been tamed and developed and made useful by training. The process has been going on for centuries and will never be completed. Education is mental and moral training. It does not matter whether or not, as an abstract fact, I can correctly spell "shady" and "baker." The important matter is, have these words and others been used as mental exercise to broaden the grasp of my mind, so that from this historic milestone, I may reach further out and gain other vantage ground, from which to reach still further and grasp still deeper truth.

I swing a dumb-bell through space, and day after day increase the weight, as the muscle swells and hardens. I handle twenty pounds with ease to-day, simply because I was diligent in swinging ten pounds yesterday. We may accomplish nothing worth while, without gradual systematic progressive training. Mind training is not in any particular different from muscle training. It is simply exercise, wisely directed.

We speak with definiteness of an educated man. When is a man educated? When is the process of training complete? If the horse has been brought to his present state of beauty and strength by five thousand years of training, it is reasonable to hold that no further progress is possible? Some nurseryman has evolved a seedless white berry from the common blackberry plant. I doubt not he thinks he has completed the task, and that no further progress is possible. Success often imagines that it has attained the pinnacle, and that there can be no further progress. If time shall continue, and if need shall develop, I do not doubt that the horse may be trained into the strength of the elephant and attain the speed of an express train. For aught I know some hungry grandson of ours may grow white blackberry dumplings. When shall we say that a man is an educated man then? Where shall the process be called finished? When all the mysteries of life shall have been solved. When the universe of God shall have been explored. When every truth is laid bare and every lie destroyed. When the mind of man shall have unravelled all the mysteries of light and heat and power, and the heart of man shall become pure in the sight of God. When paradise shall be regained, and man, made in the image of God, shall, in his providence and through his mercy, regain his lost inheritance.

Before we may say we are educated, we must climb back step by step to the glorious heights of truth and knowledge upon which God placed our first parents and from which sin thrust them.

In material things we boast of the attainments of our time, and fancy we have very nearly reached the summit of human attainment. Have we? The bowels of the earth hold safely for future need millions of treasure, while we have merely scattered its surface. Tied to this sphere with a tether less than five miles long, countless worlds sweep grandly or in their divinely appointed orbits and we are even ignorant of their existence. I believe God intends that man shall scale all these heights, and explore the depths of the earth and the seas. From one victory over ignorance and sin he shall go on, ever onward and upward to other problems solved, and step by step attain to the excellence of the knowledge of truth. We, this generation, are one link in this chain of progress, the individual man is an atom. From our immediate ancestors we inherited the sum of all attainments of all generations which have gone before, and to our children we shall leave this, augmented by what we shall have been able to add to the sum of the wisdom of the world; and they, building upon this foundation, shall leave a richer heritage to their children. If this be true, if this is God's plan for the race, and we neglect the education of our children, the training of mind and heart, there can be no progress; the world will stand still. There are some men who have never in all their lives given the world a single lift onward. Having the glorious privilege of living and working, they have done neither. They were not trained to the work, and they lacked the willingness to wield a dull axe. The untrained man, who has industriously chopped away, making no chips fly, but by sheer force of persistence accomplishing some small portion of the tasks God intended for him, realizes, perhaps more clearly than others, the enormity of the crime of indifference to education.

I hesitate to speak of personal affairs, but certainly there is nothing I can say with more truth, and perhaps nothing that will have greater weight, than to tell you that all my life long I have been beating against the bars. A thousand tasks have I but poorly done because the load was heavier than I had been trained to carry; and beyond the bars, streamed the sunlight of responsibility fully met, of service well performed. I have lived with full knowledge of the possibilities of accomplishment which were just beyond my reach, and yet have known full well that they were beyond my reach. Upon the principle that a hungry man best knows the value of food, it may be that my assignment to speak to you about education is not so grotesquely ridiculous as I had thought.

The untrained mind is simply a store-house of raw material. We are very diligent and careful to develop the business possibilities which lie in our pathway. In the noisy rush of the river over rock and waterfall you very readily see the power to drive spindle and saw. The wide fields of bare but fertile lands speak of splendid harvests of grain and cotton, and you do not count the labor lost that dams the stream, and seeds and cultivates the soil. Immediate return is not in sight, but you labor and spend cheerfully, knowing that the profit comes by and by. We North Carolinians boast of the wealth of our natural resources in field and forest, in mine and water-fall. Are we forgetting the Roman matron's jewels? Shall we strive for gold and leave the undeveloped wealth of mind and soul untouched.

"Cursed be the land to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

If we do nothing more than train our children in truth and righteousness, we leave the world a rich legacy, and we need fear nothing. Note that your town, your State, your county, is as wise and as good as the average of the people are wise and good. Here again, as everywhere and all the time, you are your brother's keeper. True, it would be a great thing to arouse our people even to the partial interest of securing the training of their own. This would at least insure that the next generation would be less selfish than we are. It should be our business to foster and promote the educational idea, to cultivate the broad spirit of human kinship, to throw all the weight of our influence and spend and be spent in the interest of universal education. If I may appeal to no higher motive, I call upon self-interest again to move us out of the circle of what we call our own into the wider and broader field of human brotherhood. If your lack of interest in your neighbor's welfare allows you to note without concern that the boll weevil destroys his cotton and the scale infests his fruit trees, while your own are clean and thriving, let me remind you, and warn you, that these pests will soon cross the boundary-line to your own premises. We cannot shut ourselves out from our fellow-man, and the effort to do so—often made—has always failed, and will always fail.

If we would be free from malaria, we must drain and purify every bog, no matter where it may be located, Malaria, destructive pests, ignorance and vice, are alike in character, and should be fought in the same way. It should be a clean sweep. They should have no resting place, no undisturbed breeding ground.

Do you seek a safe investment for your hoard? Put it into the education of some boy or girl who without your interest must grow up untrained. You can rear no better monument. There is no marble or even precious stone so worthy of the polish you may impart as the mind and heart of a child. The care and expense of training men and women is the only investment open to us that is really safe. There can be no loss of principal, and it will pay interest compound forever.

Let us understand then that we are not measuring up to our responsibility if our interest ends with the education of those who are dependent upon us. Shall we be concerned even about our own town only, or our own State? Shall the line be drawn to exclude the most needy; a new color line in education? If we would measure up to the full stature of men we must stand for the universal training of the human mind. I say to the school of latter-day politicians, who have suddenly discovered that education is a bad thing for the ignorant, that the greater the need and the deeper the ignorance, the greater the claim upon us. Some one has said that the time to begin to educate a child is one hundred years before it is born. I would double the period and say two hundred or even five hundred years. The saying means nothing more than that education is the product of the accumulated labors of many generations; that it cannot be accomplish in a day or a year or a life time; but that the mysterious laws of inheritance must be brought into play to produce a scholar.

And yet these wise men say that forty years of poverty and lack of opportunity, forty years of repression and in some instances of oppression have sufficed to settle forever the impossibility of accomplishment of perhaps the grandest task God has laid upon the hands and hearts of the men and women of this Southland.

My friends, I know it is not an easy thing to do, to correctly place ourselves. We want to think that we live in the day of finished things and solved problems. We look backward all the while, and from our judgments of great questions in the light of history, ignoring the future with its ever widening knowledge. Let us think of ourselves as midway between the years of the past and the centuries that are to come (if it please God), as living in the busiest and most progressive of ages, with reference to the past, but looking into the future we are perhaps actors in the very first scene. Let these great problems of life pass from us to our successors, not solved indeed, but with the imprint of our effort upon them, and so having done our duty we may trust God and the future for the solution.

Groundlessness of the Present Rationalistic Claims.

REV. ROBERT MAKANZIE, D. D.
(California Christian Advocate.)

Paul says that he was set for the defence of the gospel. The word he uses for defence is our word apologetic. For sinister reasons apologetics is slightingly spoken of, yet it has scriptural warrant and apostolic example. It has come to pass that to say a word in defence of the gospel, or of the Bible, as we have it, is at once to meet the objections of two opposing parties. One party depreciates the effort on the ground that the Bible need not be defended; the other on the ground that the Bible should not be defended, that it should lie open to all manner of attacks. If it is what we claim for it, it cannot be injured. To defend it is to acknowledge that somewhere and in some conditions it is weak. To form a league against the Bible is laudable, scientific and in the interest of scholarship; to form a league for the Bible is reprehensible, narrow and mischievous.

This is a convenient assumption; but not readily granted in a world of fair play. The assumption is not without its parallels in other fields of contest. China has been assumed to be fair game and the prey of Western nations; to be exploited and divided for Western purposes. For China or any of its friends to defend its integrity is mischievous, hindering to the progress of the new civilization, and is the rise of a Yellow Peril; which assumption is likely to be roughly treated by the hard facts of the case. For the right of defence is a primary right of human nature in regard to any possession. It is gratuitous as it is futile to question our right to defend the most sacred of all our possessions as Christians.

When the right to defend the Bible is admitted we are then told with naive blandness that all the new thinking and reverent scholarship is against the evangelical view of the Bible. Just what these ornamental adjectives "new" and "reverent" mean in the terminology of the day has nowhere been defined. Thinking is as old as man and scholarship has been reverent since it first considered religious subjects. The forms of thought and the principles of scholarship have long been fixed. If these comfortable adjectives mean anything it is something like this: Two young men of equal parts, of similar training on similar subjects by the same professors, come out into the arena of religious expression, one speaking against the evangelical view of the Bible and the other for it; the one speaking against it is assumed, by that fact itself, to be the greater scholar, and the one speaking for it, by that fact itself, to be the lesser. Thus there is at last discovered a royal and a cheap road to new learning and reverent scholarship. But such grave questions as those involved in the evangelical and traditional view of the Bible are not settled by such naive assumptions.

Much is said at the present time on the supposed overthrow of all traditional beliefs by rationalistic higher criticism, and of the necessity under which every intelligent man now lies to adapt himself to a new condition of things as to the Bible, Christ and the way of salvation. Has this criticism, then, already and finally won the battle? If indeed the last word has been spoken, if the present verdict of such criticism is confirmed, we can hardly contemplate the religious prospect with a light heart. The Bible, as we hold it, has done so much in this world, in the way of the education and reformation of the individual, in the sanctity of the home, in the charity and philanthropy of society and in the freedom of government, that we may be reasonably prejudiced in its favor and regretful at the passing of such an influence from the motives of men. It has done all this because it has been received among us, not as the word of men, but, as it is in truth, the Word of God.

Certainly this Book runs across man's natural desires and imposes moral restraints not welcome. It imposes duties not easy to perform. It pronounces all men—even well-dressed, well-mannered and educated men—sinners before God. It presents one definite condition of salvation—repentance and faith, and one only Saviour—Jesus Christ. It lifts up an awful future for those who disobey its injunctions and refuse to repent and believe in Christ. It thus commands our intellect and our conscience, our hopes and our fears, on the ground that it is in the most peculiar and particular manner the Word of God who is our Creator, our Providence and the Disposer of our destiny.

If, however, it is but the word of men, that at once releases us from its restraints, its duties and its beliefs. If it is but the word of men, that reduces the book from the level of a religion to that of a philosophy, and we know at once what to expect. The world has had its philosophies before Christ and after. Masterly creations of the wisest of men in all the old world continents are in our libraries. But the masses of mankind with their needs have always proved a burden too heavy for any philosophy to bear. Nor were the philosophers themselves able "to keep from sinking to a moral pollution which placed the civilization of their time below its barbarism."

This is the main issue of the present hour. Higher Criticism seeks to show that the Bible is a religion—the Word and Will of God to man. Rationalistic Higher Criticism seeks to show that it is a philosophy—the word of men to men. There can be few concessions and no compromise between these two. It is one or the other for each of us.

The effort to reduce the Bible to a philosophy is an old story. The curious thing is that it should be presented to us to-day as something new, thinking and a more reverend scholarship. More than thirty years ago Dr. Christlieb of Bonn University compared it to the battle of Chalons, where the Romans obtained a triumph over the invading and devastating hordes of Attila and his Huns. "The bloody work of the sword was done, and the vast plain strewed with countless heaps of dead. But for three nights following"—so ran the tale—"the spirits of the slain might be discovered hovering over the scenes of their late encounters, and continuing their ruthless conflicts in the air." Whatever new body this rationalistic criticism may take on, the informing spirit of it is a ghost of a confident, but vanquished, past. With this difference, however, the original theory had a deliberate and confessed purpose to get the Bible and Christ and the evangelical church out of the way of men. It went straight to that purpose. It had the courage of its convictions. Men lived it out in a Christless, Godless life. It did not pretend to be religious. It knew it was opposed to the whole scheme of revealed religion and said so. In its present revival it poses as peculiarly religious and uniquely Christian, and bans the outer darkness of ignorance those who will not do it reverence. We are told by the frankest of these critics, that if the whole Bible were to be given up religion would not suffer. The result of such a loss is not left to a guess or to a prophecy. There is a world without the Bible—a world not only in far-off Africa or Polynesia, but here, all about us—without any regard to God's Word, or God's law, or God's offer of salvation through Jesus Christ; a world large enough surely in which to test this flippant prophecy to its utmost logical consequences. Are they living any better, are they doing any more for the good of men in the life that now is, than those who guide their faith and their conduct by the Bible? Is their life any way enriched by taking Jesus Christ out of it? Is the heart of man purer, nobler, by taking the Holy Spirit out of it? Is death made less terrible and the grave more hopeful by extinguishing these words of assurance in the gospel? These are questions to be answered, not by suave prophecies of the future, but by pertinent facts of the present.

What defence may now be made against this recrudescence of an old theory should follow not only the lines of scholarship, but also the lines of morals, of philanthropy and of Christian pity for the multitude. To play at this game of subjective criticism with Homer, or Shakespeare, or Goethe is to entertain and amuse the studious. To play at it with the Bible, with the birth, the death and the resurrection of Jesus Christ, is to rob men and women of that for which there is no known substitute in the stress of life and of death.—The Bible Student and Teacher.

Cary Circuit.

Dr. Ivey:—As this is our second year on Cary Circuit, and since we have not written you a line concerning it, I hope you can find space for a few words from us.

We began our work this year with bright prospects of success. We feel greatly encouraged today. There are some of the best people on this work we have ever met—intelligent, cordial and refined. We have six churches to serve. These are all near our "capital city." The parsonage is located in the town of Cary, just eight miles west of Raleigh. It is a delightful place to live. We have a great many zealous and loyal people living here. The moral atmosphere of the town is good. We have here a good school, known as Cary High School. I have watched this school with very great interest the past eighteen months, and I think it one of the best of its kind in North Carolina. Prof. E. L. Middleton, a graduate of Wake Forest College, is principal of the school. Prof. O. J. Jones, a graduate of Trinity College; Miss Alice F. Best, a graduate of Littleton Female College, and Miss Stella Pasmore, of the Peabody Normal College, will assist him, and with this corps of teachers we may look for good results.

We expect to be in the revival work for the next two or three months. We are praying for great things, and the Lord may use us in bringing souls to Him. Our people have been very kind to us—they have remembered us in a very substantial way. We thank them for this and pray the blessings of God upon them. Our people love the Advocate. GEO. B. STARLING.

The Field

Craven Circuit.

On Thursday, August 11th, our Sunday-school Conference convened in annual session at Asbury church. The heavens were propitious by holding back the clouds which had drenched the earth for nearly twenty successive days. The brethren and friends had prepared a dozen or more choice barbecued pigs, and the good ladies had added a host of fat fowls, luscious pies, dainty cakes, etc., ad infinitum. Our honored president, Bro. O. H. Wetherington, and the committee had arranged a good program and secured Rev. G. T. Adams, of New Bern, and Bro. G. V. Richardson, of Dover, as speakers.

A vast crowd assembled from many miles, and a more magnificent gathering of beautiful ladies and handsome men no section can show. Many fine horses and beautiful buggies and carriages were in evidence, adding splendor to the scene. The address of welcome was delivered by Sheriff W. B. Lane in his own winsome, inimitable style, which met a happy response from Hon. W. B. Pearce. After some reports were made, Brother Adams was called for by the president and came forward and gave a comprehensive and able address on the Sunday-school and her work, which pleased all present. After the mind had been feasted, the assembly adjourned to meet at the long table loaded with rich and rare viands, which all enjoyed to the extent of their capacity, leaving more than twelve baskets of fragments.

Good Bro. Brice Ipock, with many others, was concerned for a week about feeding the multitude. He is one of the class that talks little, but does many things, as the preachers and people here know full well. The good people here enjoy giving a feast and the visitors delight to come, so that all were unanimous for another Conference here next year.

In the afternoon reports were made of other schools on the circuit, which in the main were in good condition and prospering. The subject of temperance was discussed in a timely and practical address by Bro. G. V. Richardson, which was followed by strong speeches from Rev. G. T. Adams and Bro. Daniel Lane.

The Conference, with a unanimous vote, re-elected O. H. Wetherington president and Daniel Lane secretary.

The Craven Circuit expects to make a full financial report and progress on all lines.

W. H. TOWNSEND.

Milton Circuit.

Dear Advocate:—Having just closed the revival meetings on Milton charge, I wish to state some of their glorious results.

Personally, my own faith has been greatly strengthened because of these services, while I'm sure my people are spiritually stronger by far than at any time since my pastorate began among them.

At Purley, Bro. J. H. McCracken was with us and did the preaching largely, and did it well. He did us good, and the Gospel preached was much appreciated, being mixed with faith and the quickening of the Spirit, though few conversions.

Bro. J. H. Shore was with us at New Hope and did the preaching to the delight and edification of the people for many miles around. The crowds were enormous, coming from a distance to hear Brother Shore, he having been a former pastor. His sermons were strong and pointed, fraught with the powerful presence of the Holy Spirit. As a result, the church was genuinely revived with some fifteen souls saved.

In the meeting at Connelly we had no pulpit help after Monday, Brother Holmes being unable to reach us because of over-work. Here the presence of the Spirit was felt in great power. The Lord came in answer to many prayers and did His work through, and by, a live, active church. It was indeed good to be there at every service. One day especially it seemed as if both saint and sinner alike were praising the Lord as the mighty power of God was displayed in the conversion of four young men of influence in the community. It was uplifting to be present, the likeness of which is seldom realized in this life. I don't expect to experience anything greater this side of heaven. Twenty-one professed faith in Christ, the most of whom were grown up men and women.

Bro. F. B. McCall came to my rescue at Providence and preached some excellent sermons, attended with spiritual force and power. The church was greatly revived and much good accomplished.

The Lord be praised for what He has done in reviving us again. May we ever "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

J. A. DAILEY,
Pastor.

Pelham Circuit.

Dear Doctor:—Our work is in a growing condition and there are many reasons why we should be encouraged.

We held our Circuit Sunday-school Conference at Prospect Church on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July. The music was splendid, and the program rendered by the children reflects great credit both to children and those who trained them.

Dr. Gibbs, our beloved Presiding Elder, was with us and delivered a splendid address.

The good people of Prospect know how to feed hungry people, for they had plenty and to spare. A meeting like this means much for our Sunday-school work and our prayer is that all of our schools may be encouraged to press forward and do greater work each year.

I have held two meetings with good results. Brother Jerome helped in one and did some good preaching that edified and strengthened our church. Dr. Gibbs helped in another, and did more of the best preaching you ever heard. We feel that they have sown seed in these churches that will yield much fruit.

Dr. Gibbs and family are spending the summer here at Pelham, and our people are delighted to have them. We shall miss them when we have to give them up to return to the district parsonage.

J. H. McCRACKEN.

Trinity College Notes.

The forty-sixth year of Trinity College will begin Wednesday, September 7th. The correspondence in the office during the summer has been heavier than during any previous summer. The prospects for attendance during the coming year are exceedingly gratifying. Everything is being set in order for what promises to be the largest opening for the past several years.

Dr. J. J. Wolfe will have charge of the department of biology in place of Dr. J. I. Hamaker, who resigned during the spring term. Dr. Wolfe is a native of South Carolina, studied in Chicago University, and took his doctor's degree in June at Harvard University.

The Executive Committee have organized a Department of Law which will begin September 7th. Mr. Samuel F. Mordecai of Raleigh, has been selected Senior Professor of Law, and Mr. R. P. Reade, of Durham, has been elected Associate Professor. The Executive Committee has not yet filled the other two chairs in this department, but will do so in a short time. It is regarded by the friends of the college as the most notable and significant movement the college has inaugurated within recent years. This will be the only law school within the State that is located at a county-seat, and students will have special advantages in the study of courts, and acquaintance with the judges and leading lawyers of the State.

The work of the Woman's College is being carried forward as rapidly as possible. Messrs. Hook & Sawyer are preparing plans for the buildings, which will be models of beauty and convenience. The location of this college is one of the prettiest to be found about the city of Durham, and is in easy reach of the library and laboratories of Trinity College.

Youngsville Circuit.

Dear Advocate:—The first Sunday-school Conference for Youngsville Circuit was held at Leaks church on Friday, August 5th, and was quite a success. Though it rained early that morning, and the weather was threatening nearly all day, people came from far and near until the audience was estimated at six or seven hundred. The addresses by Bro. M. S. Davis, President of Louisburg Female College; Rev. L. S. Massey, pastor in charge of Louisburg Station, and Bro. J. H. Mitchell, one of Leak's stewards, were timely, and left their impress for good upon the Sunday-school workers present. The Leak's school entertained us for awhile with well-selected and rendered recitations. Prof. J. B. King's singing class, of New Hope Christian Church, did the singing, and did it well.

The preacher in charge was elected president, Miss Hattie Floyd, vice-president, and L. H. Allred secretary and treasurer. The session of 1905 will be held at Cooke's church.

The Children's Day services at Youngsville and Cooks were successful, and were occasions of great pleasure to both old and young.

Sincerely, GEO. T. SIMMONS.

Furnishing the New G. F. C.—Report Four.

The work is drawing to a close. A few more rooms are to be taken. Let me hear from you soon. By the time this reaches you the order will be made for the furniture. I am rejoiced to add that the special rates given us on the large order will enable us to put in each room, for thirty-five dollars, furniture that would cost you fifty dollars were you to furnish the room.

Some have already sent in their checks. Most of these rooms already taken are due September 1st. Please bear that in mind and remit to me at Chapel Hill. The college opens October 5th, and we expect to have all in order by that day.

Previously reported—forty-seven.

Greensboro Female College.

The Board of Directors of Greensboro Female College met in session in Greensboro, N. C., on August 18th and re-elected Mrs. Lucy H. Robertson president of the college, with very largely the same faculty that they had last year, and where changes have been made the faculty has been very materially strengthened.

It is the purpose of the directors to continue the high standard of the college in every department, but a special effort will be given to the two important branches of English and music, and to this end very distinguished specialists have been engaged in these two departments.

The directors instructed the president to open the instittuion on the 5th of October and to close on the 14th of June, 1905. Students will report for examination and classification on the third and fourth so as to be ready to take up the school work on the fifth.

The outlook is promising, and it is hoped that the friends of the institution will support the directors in their efforts to make this the most successful year in the history of the college.

C. H. IRELAND, Secretary.

Newbern District Sunday-School Conference.

The New Bern District Sunday-school Conference will meet at Newport, N. C., September 27, at 8 o'clock p. m., and continue through the 28th and 29th. Pastors and superintendents will please make due announcement and take prompt action to secure full representation. Let us try to have at least one delegate from each school. Superintendents are ex officio members of the Conference and let us see how near we can come to having all present. Please respond promptly and accurately to the secretary when he calls for reports. The program will be announced in due time.

Dare Circuit.

We people live here close to the juniper swamps of Dare County, and often can see a real wild live bear on our roads, but we have found out that they will not hurt us if we will not trouble them, and you cannot get to us people unless you come in a boat, but we are civilized, and have a fine preacher, Rev. Wm. Towe, to preach for us every third Sunday, and we don't fail to pay up our church dues every year. We have a fine Sunday-school with about 150 scholars, and they attend well.

Last Wednesday, the 27th, we had our children's day and picnic, and we had a glorious good time. We had our program in the forenoon, and after dinner Hon. J. Y. Joyner made us an able speech on education. There were a great many visitors here, and they all had a good time. We were sorry that we could not have our pastor with us, but we had his good wishes and prayers.

S. V. SAWYER,
Superintendent Sunday-school.

Oriental.

Dear Brother:—I will make an effort to write a few lines to the Advocate as I never see anything from our little town.

Our preacher, Bro. F. S. Becton, has closed a glorious revival. God blessed us in these meetings. There was great interest in this revival. There were five added to the church.

Our quarterly meeting was held on the 30th of July, and the first of August Brother Swindell was here. He preached Saturday at 11 o'clock and at night; also Sunday. There was a large audience of eager listeners Sunday.

Our friends, the Disciples, have commenced their revival and I pray they may win many souls to Christ.

Our Sunday-school is still on the upward march looking to the meek and loving Nazarene. Our superintendent, Bro. J. A. Johnson, and Bro. Alex. Bennett, are loved by all of the Sunday-school children and the older people too. We have three Sunday-schools here every Sunday. They are as follows: The M. E. Sunday-school, the Free Will Baptist and the Disciple Sunday-school.

May the richest blessings of heaven ever pour out upon us all. I remain,

Ever yours, HILARY BOWDEN.

The Action Commended.

BY REV. G. T. SIMMONS.

The action of the Warrenton District Conference has the right ring. Let all Christians, especially the people who call themselves Methodists, make the political parties understand that their candidates will not get their votes unless they pledge themselves against the liquor traffic. The next Legislature should do no less than ratify the present prohibition legislation, including the anti-jug law, and prohibit the sale of liquor in towns having less than 500 inhabitants, and no Christian should vote for a candidate who will not promise that much.

Youngsville, N. C., August 16, 1904.

It is now assured that there will be a Pan-Baptist Congress in London in 1905.

The Same Faults.

C. H. WETHERBE.

We need to be very watchful of ourselves lest we commit the same faults that we blame others for indulging in. It is a fact that even Christian people who believe that they have in themselves no tendency to do evil, and are severely upbraiding some of their brethren, who are recognized on all sides as being noble Christians, charging them with being unspiritual, trimmers and encouragers of wrong-doers, are themselves very faulty. Rev. B. Carradine, a holiness evangelist, says:

"We have listened to a great clamor and protest against the oppression of bishops, who were nothing but popes riding rough-shod over the people. Wherever this is the case we can but sincerely grieve for better and happier times. But the startling fact that we call attention to is that the same man, or set of men, who sail so against ecclesiastical authority and domination, by and by come into the same possession and position, the identical spirit and practice through some little withdrawal movement from the church. Now, then, let bishops and popes hide their diminished heads. They are simply nowhere by the side of this newly-fledged, self-called, self-created, self-anointed and ordained ecclesiastic magnate, functionary and dignitary of Persimmon Ridge School House, Cane Brake Hollow, and Black Jack Neighborhood."

This is a scathing indictment and exposure of a class of Christians who are all the while magnifying the faults of their brethren, and are even accusing them of sins of which they are not guilty, while they themselves are full of the spirit of tyranny, of offensive dictation, of evil surmising and self-righteousness. Some of this class assume the position of general leadership, and they insist that their followers shall obey their word without reservation. They will boldly claim to have divine authority for their procedure, and then if anyone revolts against them they will declare that God will curse them. What holy commands they issue! And how free they are from indulging in anger, or any unkindness of speech. But they are least in God's kingdom.

He Recognizes His Picture.

"Now children," said the teacher, "let us see what you remember about the animal kingdom, and the domestic animals that belong to it. You have named all the domestic animals save one. Who can tell me what that one is? It has bristly hair, like dirt, and is fond of getting into the mud.

Miss Fanny looked expectantly around the room.

"Can't you think, Tommy?" she asked, encouragingly.

"Yes'm," was the shame-faced reply. "It's me."—Tit-Bits.

Each Day Sufficient.

We sometimes ask ourselves if we should be willing to die or should we be willing to live in hopeless suffering or should we be willing to put the fire to our darling ambitions. It is easy to answer such questions. We determine the future by the present. If to-day we do to-day's duty, to-morrow we shall be able to do to-morrow's duty. If to-day we are willing to live for God, on some to-morrow we shall be willing to die for him. To-day we do not receive dying grace, for God does not call us to death. To-day He calls us to life and therefore He gives us living grace. To-morrow He will call us to death and to-morrow He will give us dying grace.—Selected.

An international congress on Sunday rest will be held in connection with the St. Louis Exposition October 11-14. On the evening of October 11, a mass-meeting will be held in Festival Hall. The leading address will be made by United States Senator Joseph B. Foraker of Ohio. Among those who are expected to be present are Dr. John Stoecker, court preacher to his majesty, William II., President Matteo Prochet of Rome and Monsieur Deluz of Geneva, Switzerland.

The Methodists of Owensboro are preparing to pay the balance on the "Methodist Building" at the Seven Hills Chautauqua grounds by the close of the Chautauqua meeting. They will give a reception to Bishop Candler, Sam Jones, George R. Stuart, and Professor and Mrs. H. M. Hamill, who are to be on the program.

He has kept and folded us from ten thousand ills when we did not know it; in the midst of our security we should have perished every hour, but that he sheltered us "from the terror by night and from the arrow that flieth by day"—from the powers of evil that walk in darkness, from snares of our own evil will. He has kept us even against ourselves, and even from our own undoing. Let us read the traces of his hand in all our ways, in all the events, the chances, the changes of this troubled State.—H. F. Manning.

Father, we thank thee that amid the joys of the flesh, amid the delights of our daily work, and all the sweet and silent blessedness of mortal friendship and love upon the earth, thou givest us the joy of knowing thee, the still calm delight of lying low in thy hand, and feeling the breath of thy Spirit upon us. Yea, Lord, we thank thee that thou holdest each one of us, year, all of thy children, and the universe itself, as a mother folds her baby to her bosom, and blessest us all with thine infinite loving kindness and thy tender mercy.—Selected.

If we are to be protected against the pestilence that walketh in darkness, we shall have to be possessed by a plenitude of spiritual life. How is that defensive life to be gained? "This is life . . . . . to know Jesus." To know the Master is to appreciate the Master's life. "I am come that ye might have life and that ye might have it more abundantly." It is in this abundant life that we find the secret of moral security. If life is to rise within us like a well, it must be because of our intimate fellowship with the Christ. He is "our Refuge and Strength." Our offensive and defensive forces are to be gathered in him. Familiarity with Jesus makes a man invincible against the world. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." "We are more than conquerors in Christ."—Jowett.

Said a mother to me one day: "When my children were young I thought the very best thing I could do for them was to give them myself. So I spared no pains to talk with them, to read to them, to teach them, to pray with them, to be a loving companion and friend to my children. I had no time to indulge myself in many things which I should have liked to do. I was so busy adorning their minds and cultivating their hearts' best affections that I could not adorn their bodies in fine clothes, though I kept them neat and comfortable at all times. I have my reward now. My sons are ministers of the Gospel; my grown-daughter is a Christian woman. I have plenty of time, now, to sit down and rest, plenty of time to keep my house in order, plenty of time to indulge myself, besides going about my Master's business wherever He has need for me. I have a thousand beautiful memories of their childhood to comfort me. Now that they have gone out into the world, I have the sweet consciousness of having done all I could to make them ready for whatever work God calls them to do."—Life and Faith.

Methodism in Canada has made progress during the last statistical year. The increase in membership is 3,436; while for 1903 it was 4,542. The total membership is now 299,873. In two of the twelve conferences, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, there was a total decrease of 310.

Dr. John O. Willson, of the South Carolina Conference, has been elected president of the Williamston Female College, which is to open its fall session in Greenwood, September 27th.

Our Boys and Girls

Mother's Boys.

Yes, I know there are stains on my carpet,
The traces of small muddy boots;
And I see your fair tapestry glowing
All spotless with blossoms and fruits!

I know that my walls are disfigured
With prints of small fingers and hands,
And that your own household whiteness
All fresh in its purity stands.

And I know that my parlor is littered
With many odd treasures and toys,
While your own is in daintiest order,
Unharmed by the presence of boys!

And I know that my room is invaded
Quite boldly all hours of the day,
While you sit in your own unmolested,
And dream the soft quiet away.

Yes, I know there are four little beds-sides
Where I must stand watchful each night
While you may go out in your carriage,
And flash in your dresses so bright!

Now I think I'm a neat little woman,
I like my house orderly, too.
And I am fond of all dainty belongings,
Yet I would not change places with you.

No! keep your home with its order
Its freedom from bother and noise!
And keep your own fanciful leisure.
But give me my four splendid boys! —Selected.

If You are Well Bred.

You will be kind.
You will not use slang.
You will try to make others happy.
You will not be shy or self-conscious.
You will never indulge in ill-natured gossip.
You will never forget the respect due to age.
You will not swagger or boast of your achievements.
You will think of others before you think of yourself.
You will be scrupulous in your regard for the rights of others.
You will not measure your civility by people's bank accounts.
You will not forget engagements, promises or obligations of any kind.
In conversation you will not be argumentative or contradictory.
You will never make fun of the peculiarities of others.
You will not bore people by constantly talking of yourself and your affairs.
You will never under any circumstances cause another pain, if you can help it.
You will not think that "good intentions" compensate for rude or gruff manners.
You will be as agreeable to your social inferiors as to your equals and superiors.
You will not sulk or feel neglected if others receive more attention than you do.
You will not have two sets of manners; one for "company" and one for home use.
You will never remind a cripple of his deformity, or probe the sore spots of a sensitive soul.
You will not gulp down your soup so audibly that you can be heard across the room, nor sop up the sauce in your plate with bits of bread.
You will let a refined manner and superior intelligence show that you have traveled, instead of constantly talking of the different countries you have visited.
You will not remark, while a guest, that you do not like the food which has been served to you.
You will not attract attention by either your loud talk or laughter, or show your egotism by trying to absorb conversation.—Success.

One Boy's Chance.

A gentleman stopped before a sign that told him messenger boys were to be had inside and then went in.

"Boys," said the gentleman, eyeing them scrutinizingly, "I suppose you know there is to be an exhibition of trained dogs to-night?"

The faces of the boys showed that they were perfectly aware of that fact.

"Well, I'm looking for a boy to take a blind man to see it. I'm not jesting; I'm in earnest," said Mr. Davis; and then looking at one of the boys who had said nothing, he asked: "Well, what do you think of it?"

"I think I could do it," was the reply.

"How do you propose to make him see it?"

"Through my eyes, sir. That's the only way he could see it."

"You're the boy I'm after," said Mr. Davis, and he arranged for him to meet the blind man.

The exhibition was in a large public hall and the blind man and his guide had a box to themselves, where they would disturb no one; but Mr. Davis, from his seat in the audience, knew that the boy was telling what went on, so that the blind man could understand. Indeed, no one applauded more heartily than the blind man himself.

The following day Mr. Davis again appeared among the messenger boys and, after a few words with the manager, said:

"Boys, there was offered every one of you, yesterday, a chance for lifting yourself up in the world, but only one of you grasped it. My friend, the blind man, has felt for some time that he might get much pleasure out of life if he could find some young eyes to do his seeing for him, with an owner who could report intelligently. My friend is delighted with the experiment. He says he is sure I hit upon the one boy in town who will suit him and has offered him a good position with a fine salary. Messenger boys are easy to get; but a boy who can make a blind man see it at a premium. You see, that boy, though he did not know it, was on the watch for a good opportunity, and when it came he knew how to manage it."—Youth's Companion.

Something Better for the Boys.

On the upper deck of the Grosser Kurfurst, one day I fell into conversation with a young fellow whose face had seemed familiar, although I could not remember where I had met him. He proved to be a former fellow student of one term at the University of Chicago. He was now pastor of a church in a section of Chicago, occupied entirely by what is known as the working class. That is an intensely interesting field and he was a very interesting man with his clear fearless eyes and his wide awake face. He was soon absorbed in relating his experiences, one of which was especially significant. His field of labor was full of saloons, and a very important part of his work was the Sabbath-school where the children were gathered, often from homes blighted by the curse of drink, to be instructed in a better way of living.

Mr. Gale went into a saloon one day to ask the proprietor, a German, to let his boy go to the Bible school. The saloon keeper recognized him as he came in and greeted him respectfully, as most of the residents of that section have come to do.

The pastor stated his errand. "What do you want to teach my boy there, Mr. Gale?" The pastor looked the proprietor in the face and answered sturdily, "We want to teach him in such a way that, when he grow up, he won't be a saloon keeper."

The German staggered a little at the bold statement and then he rallied and said earnestly, "That's right, Mr. Gale, I don't want my boy to grow up to be a saloon keeper."

There are noble sentiments in the hearts of most men waiting to be appealed to; and the world is full of opportunities for the man who will be both brave and kind.

Our Missionaries Arrive.

Recent letters from Brazil announce the safe arrival of the steamship Byron on which Brother Lee and family, Brother Lander and family, Miss Pesend, Miss Smith and Miss Parker were passengers. The letters report a delightful voyage, so favorable in spite of a few rough places, and the usual sea sickness, that Rio was reached ahead of the scheduled time. From Rio the missionaries went direct to conference, where they met Dr. Lambuth, and where some of the appointments were probably changed to meet local needs. Later steamers will bring us more detailed accounts of their work, on which we pray God's richest blessing.

The Value of Competition.

It has been said that competition is the life of trade. Is it not possible that competition may be of life-giving value in our missionary work? At least in the work of our local auxiliaries? Such indeed is the idea in our missionary exchange. We, therefore, urge each auxiliary to contribute something to our column. Your accounts of your society and what you are doing will not only help you, but will be an inspiration to societies not so strong or perhaps stronger. It is the part of the strong to help the weak, and yet the smaller auxiliaries may set the larger, poorly attended ones, examples of diligence and faithfulness, which are real spurs.

There are in our Conference nine Districts, and in each several auxiliaries, Golden Link Societies, and Bright Jewel Bands. Can we not have reports from all of these? Let us know your society by name and something of what you are doing.

We are all engaged in the same great work, Woman's Work for Woman, and we want to know each other better. If we are to have competition let us be rivals in good fellowship. Our work is so great that our spirit should be how we can accomplish most for it. If by following the lead of another society, or by taking the best points from two others, or by giving a dozen others the benefit of our successes or failures let us not hesitate to use all the means within our reach. And is there really anything more helpful than talking about our work? Let us all talk a little more through our column and become better acquainted through our work.

Of course there are some names high in missionary work, familiar to all of us, but let each one of us, each society, do its part.

Resolutions of Respect.

Near the close of the day, on the 20th of June, 1904, the soul of Miss Julia Hutchings winged its flight to mansions above, prepared for those who love and serve the Lord. The following resolutions of respect were passed by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Edenton Street M. E. Church, South, Raleigh, N. C.:

Whereas, it has been the will of our Heavenly Father to take one of the truest and most faithful members of Edenton Street Church and of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, therefore be it

Resolved 1. That the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society humbly submits to the will of Him who does all things well, fully realizing that a Christian lady whose life abounded with the love of God, has gone to her reward. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

2. That we mourn the loss of this loyal member, who faithfully filled the office of Corresponding Secretary, and showed deep interest in every branch of the work, always attending the meetings when physically able, giving help and cheer by her kind words and gentle manners.

3. That we extend to her beloved ones our love and sympathy in this time of trial, trusting that a glorious reunion awaits them all.

4. That copies of these resolutions be sent to her brothers and sisters, to the Raleigh Christian Advocate for publication, and to our Recording Secretary, to be preserved among the records of the Society.

The Relation of the Home Mission Work to the Foreign.

PART II.

OUR SAVIOUR'S LAST COMMAND.

Christ said: "Go teach all nations, beginning at Jerusalem, going into Judea, Samaria, and to the uttermost parts of the earth." It is conceded that "Jerusalem" means home, "Judea" the adjacent country, "Samaria and the uttermost parts of the earth," the land farthest from us, of the strangers and heathen.

Whoever refuses to believe in either the Home or Foreign Mission cause surely refuses to follow our Savior's last command. We are told to begin at home, but not to stay there, for the only method by which we can carry out the Divine plan of reaching those in the "uttermost parts" is to begin at home.

We have no right to accept a part of this command and air our theories and beliefs about the remainder, indeed, a clear conception of the subject of Missions proves that the different branches work, as it were, "wheel within wheel."

THE DEPENDENCE OF THE FOREIGN WORK UPON THE HOME

The seed sown in the cultivated ground of our own borders enables us to yield a richer harvest of laborers and means and prayers for the extension of the kingdom into fields yet untilled. Who knows but the little waif rescued from sin, snatched as a "brand from the burning," may prove a Carey or a Judson for India, a Young J. Allen or a Lambuth for China and Japan, a John G. Paton for the New Hebrides? There may be among us a Saul whom God will convert into a Paul.

There is in the poor, neglected children a force, which properly directed would redeem the world. In the waste places in the country, in the city slums, everywhere about us, are these potential transformers, and the Woman's Home Mission Society, through its rescue homes, schools, etc., has the blessed privilege of making hopeful, useful women of castaways and honorable citizens of possible demons.

GRAVE RESPONSIBILITIES

There is another feature of the subject which is a very serious one, and which can be handled only by the Home Mission workers. Our Foreign workers cannot reach all the heathen because they are daily coming to us. Our large cities are teeming with a foreign population which must be Americanized and Christianized, or our own sunny land will be corrupted and contaminated. This human wreckage has brought atheism, superstition, crime, idol-worship, all of which are in evidence in an appalling degree in Chinatown, San Francisco, the foreign quarters of New York City, Chicago, etc.

We have seen the flags of our capitol lowered, and a nation mourning her dead President, because the spirit of anarchy dared to cross the ocean and plant its foot upon American soil.

OUR DUTY.

Who can estimate the influence of all this in our own homes in years to come? And do we not owe a duty to the children of these foreigners? We may not do much for their parents, but by preventive work we may avert the calamities that threaten another generation.

In the face of these dire evils at home, and the appalling darkness abroad, is it not high time to accept God's command as a whole, and stop trying to decide which part we believe, or which is the more important? Let us cast aside ease, indifference, selfish gratification, and obedient to the law of sacrifice, transform our time, talents, money, thought and prayer into a mighty power that is to save the world. Shall we do this now, or wait and explain to God why we did not?

Editorial

"The time to succeed is when others,
Discouraged, show traces of tire;
The battle is fought in the home-stretch,
And won 'twixt the flag and the wire."

Professor Goldwin Smith essayed to write a History of the United States, which on account of the reputation of its author won considerable praise. Professor Smith, who was never in the South, made prominent this idea: The South but for its political connection with the intelligent North would have drifted long ago into barbarism. Now this is the way our doughty Bishop Hoss, in his fraternal address before the British Wesleyan Conference, disposes of Professor Smith and his History: "Though written in exasperatingly good English, it is as perfect a blend of crude ignorance and pharisaical malignity as the literature of our common tongue can show." When it comes to saying the needful thing, and at the right time, commend us to Bishop Hoss.

The fact that General Booth, of the Salvation Army, has been received by King Edward and Queen Alexander is not without its significance. It was not so much a mark of honor accorded to an earnest, progressive soldier of Jesus Christ as an appreciation of his work of going after the masses and down into the depths in order that recruits for Jesus Christ might be found. Christ says to the sinner, "Come!" To the Christian soldier, He says, "Go!" The spectacle of a Christian soldier waiting in the midst of his ecclesiastical paraphernalia for the recruit to come is farcical and sad. Street and highway preaching has the sanction of the Great Preacher. This is the kind of preaching which He did. Let us beware how we curl the lip at sight of a follower of Jesus Christ preaching to his out-of-church congregations.

It would not be difficult to prove that some of the mightiest spiritual movements the world has ever seen sprang from the centre of small congregations. Brethren, do not neglect your small congregations. Give them the very best. Your labors will be rewarded. Apropos of this, we cite you to the following from the St. Louis Advocate: "A noted clergyman of this city, who some years ago went to his reward, once said that the most successful or perhaps most gratifying meeting he ever held was attended by a man and his wife. A sudden and very heavy fall of snow prevented others from coming. The two auditors lived next door to the log school-house in which the service was held, and all three, the preacher and his audience, sat close before the roaring wood fire. The numbers were lacking, but religious fervor and religious enthusiasm abounded and this singular service proved the beginning of a great religious awakening in the neighborhood."

The passenger agents of the various Vanderbilt lines of railroad have decided to discontinue Sunday excursions. We do not understand that this action was taken because Sunday excursions do not pay, in the sense that the financial receipts of the day are not greater than the financial expenditures. Neither was this action taken because the passenger agents have any special reverence for the Sabbath day. These passenger agents know that, leaving moral law out of the question, the use of seven days out of the week is an infraction of a great natural law which in the long run must demoralize, to some extent, every business which violates this law. This law has a penalty which is inevitable and remorseless. It takes business men to see this. Because nature demands a Sabbath day, and because its observance is so intimately connected with man's spiritual interests, Jehovah said on Sinai: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Shall the business world shame the "children of light" in the observance of this day?

"AND HE WIST NOT."

The word "he" in the above heading stands for Samson, who yielded to the allurements of Delilah, and on going out to shake himself wist not that the Lord had departed from him. The sad sequel is known to every Bible reader.

We wonder if the word "he" in the heading may not stand for some who read these lines? If so, who is "he?"

It may be you who were once so strong to resist a besetting sin, who gloried in the strength to overcome through Jesus who loved you, but who now yield to that sin, and who, because conscience no longer reproves, imagine that the sin is not so sinful after all and that really you are not to be so much blamed on account of circumstances.

It may be you who once took such delight in Christian service; who felt happy in superintending a Sunday-school, or teaching a class or acting as steward, or doing something for your Lord and Master. You no longer have joy in such things. You run with the multitude. Your seat at prayer-meeting is vacant. You no longer bow at the altar to receive the elements commemorating the death of your Saviour. You refuse when you are called on to lead in prayer—you who used to be so ready to respond. You simply think that you are a little off "spiritually" and that all you need is a little "working up" at some indefinite revival meeting.

It may be you who used to feel such an uplift when you were preaching the "unsearchable riches" of Christ, who so gladly invited sinners to repentance, who with such zest endured summer's heat and winter's cold in feeding the flock of which the Holy Spirit had made you shepherd. You have lost your taste for evangelical themes. You no longer feel that uplift in the pulpit. You beg off from preaching. You complain that your preaching does not have the proper effect upon your audience. You are contented with almost any excuse for neglecting your flock. Pastoral visiting is foolishness from your standpoint. You have come to be a believer in short sermons even in the old country meeting-house. You have lost your interest in the institutions and enterprises of the church.

Dear reader, in this era when the world is rushing on so madly in its cycle of progress, when humanity is climbing so eagerly the altar stairs of selfish worldliness, when Satanic art is making life so alluring, here in this golden summer time when under God's great banner of love the bending harvests smile, let us all ask the question: "Is the Lord of Samson with me or has He departed from me?" Let us remember the sad tragic exhortation of one who had known the darkness of a soul away from the God: "Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God."

"But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear."

BE FRANK WITH THE EDITOR.

The relationship existing between the editor of a Conference organ and a constituency of thousands of subscribers and hundreds of preachers who are the accredited and official agents and guardians of the paper is so close, tender, and complicated, that it would be almost a miracle if the editor should succeed in keeping the fine brotherly edge of this relationship in every individual case.

Perhaps Bishop McTyeire was thinking of this when he said that the editor of a church paper loses more friends than he makes, or words to that effect.

It is to us a pleasing reflection that, if the statement was true in the time of Bishop McTyeire, it is not true now. The friends we have made in the nearly eight years of our incumbency outnumber by hundreds the number we have lost. In fact, it is difficult for us to realize that we have lost any friends.

Yet the editor of a Conference organ meets his constituency at so many points of contact, that the conclusion is almost inevitable that some brother or sister will get cross-wise and awry.

All that we ask our friends to do is to be frank and candid with us. Do not hide your grievance from the editor and talk about it to others, and then maintain that silent chilly reserve which is so mysterious and perplexing. The editor is only a man, but he is also a Christian, we hope. If as a man he has made a mistake, as a Christian he will be more than willing to rectify it. Perhaps he has not made a mistake. He may be only the victim of circumstances. Perhaps the aggrieved one has unwittingly made the mistake.

In any event, it is far better to talk to the editor plainly and frankly than to mope during the months over what may be an imaginary affront. A preacher once mailed us an engraved announcement of his approaching marriage. No notice appeared in the next week's paper. Here seemed to be almost criminal carelessness on the part of the editor. Here was a grievance sure enough. But the preacher was a reasonable Christian man. He simply wrote out the same announcement and mailed it to the editor, saying that perhaps the printed announcement failed to reach the office. Sure enough he was right. In a few days the mail brought the printed announcement. That preacher had a good chance to nurse a grievance. But he chose to assume that the editor was not responsible, and the possible grievance was found to be altogether imaginary. Such an instance is a common thing in an editor's life. Be frank with him. Write to him. Do not nurse a grievance.

BISHOP HOSS BEFORE THE BRITISH WESLEYAN CONFERENCE.

Those who have read the address of Bishop Hoss before the British Wesleyan Conference feel that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was most happily represented. A brave, positive, conscientious, and loyal spirit was evident in every line of the address. Those who do not understand the situation will doubtless conclude that the address was tinged with an unnecessary belligency. But the speaker, under the circumstances, spoke words of wisdom. Unfortunately, our brethren across the water do not know the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as it is. Derogatory literature has been read, and, while the fraternal feeling has not suffered, yet in certain points our Church has been at a disadvantage in the minds of our Wesleyan brethren.

Read the address and you can almost imagine that you see virtue going out of his words and salving the unripe and confused understanding of our Wesleyan brethren with reference to our church.

We will publish the address in next week's paper. Our readers will find it instructive and stimulating.

THE LAW DEPARTMENT OF TRINITY COLLEGE.

Trinity College is constantly enlarging the scope of its activity. The latest movement is the establishment of a law school, ably manned, and meeting all the requirements for a complete education in law.

Mr. S. F. Mordecai, of the Raleigh bar, has been elected Dean of the Law School. His acceptance has been tendered. Trinity College is exceedingly fortunate in securing Mr. Mordecai for this position. He is a well equipped lawyer, of the finest moral character and of the ripest legal learning. He has the highest ideals of the legal profession, and those who study under him are not only correctly taught, but are imbued with those lofty principles which should always actuate the lawyer. Mr. Mordecai has been for four years a member of the faculty of the Law School at Wake Forest College. Mr. R. L. Reade, of Durham, has been elected one of the faculty of the new school. He is very highly recommended and is well equipped for his position. The other members of the faculty will be selected before the opening of the fall term.

Methodist Mention

State.

Dr. Jno. R. Brooks is spending the summer at Fort Washington, Md.

Rev. W. R. Royall has been recuperating for a short while at Jackson Springs.

Rev. W. H. Call, of Washington, N. C., has been visiting relatives about his old home in Mocksville.

Rev. W. S. Rone, of Rocky Mount, has been absent some time at the bedside of a sick daughter in Texas. He and his have our sympathy.

Rev. R. F. Bumpas delivered his interesting lecture, "A Day at Versailles," before the Epworth League of Edenton Street Church on last Monday night.

Rev. J. O. Guthrie reports that they are now at work on a $2,000 new church at Princeton. He has just closed his meeting there and the results were gracious.

The Lumberton Argus publishes the sad news of the death of Rev. Leonard Webb, a worthy local preacher, who served his Master for over half a century and died at the age of eighty-eight.

Mr. J. R. Rives, one of our worthiest Methodist laymen and a strong friend of the Advocate, has been nominated by the Democratic Convention of Chatham County for a seat in the Lower House.

The following cheering item comes from Rev. R. H. Broome, Carthage Circuit: "The Lord was with us in reviving and converting power in a recent meeting at Center, and five were added on profession of faith."

Rev. J. T. Draper has recently closed a ten days' meeting at Evergreen Church, Whiteville Circuit, resulting in a great revival of the church and fourteen additions to the membership on profession.—Exchange.

Rev. G. R. Rood, Millbrook Circuit, reports an excellent meeting at Andrews Chapel. He says that the people are beginning to wake up on the question of infant baptism. He baptized ten infants on last Sunday.

Between now and Conference there will be hundreds of revivals meetings conducted by our preachers. Will those good men remember that we expect to receive from every one of them an account of his meetings.

The contract for heating the Littleton Female College buildings has been awarded to that well-known company, Evans, Almoral & Co., of New York. W. P. Rose, of Raleigh, has supervision of the extensive work now being done on the college buildings.

Rev. G. T. Simmons came down to Raleigh with the Sunday-school excursionists last week. He is enthusiastic over his work, and is pushing the kingdom into new fields. He has established a congregation at a saw-mill. Any preacher who can tackle a saw-mill will do.

Rev. T. J. Dailey, who has been visiting his brother, Mr. J. G. Dailey, of this place, preached at Prospect church last Sunday, and we hear his sermon very much complimented. A series of meetings is in progress there and the prospects are for a good meeting.—Milton Herald.

Mr. R. E. Pearce was this morning awarded the contract to do the plastering at Greensboro Female College. The work of rebuilding the college is progressing very satisfactorily and the carpenters will be ready for the plasterers to go to work to-morrow morning. The building will be under roof by September 1st. Mr. Pearce will use patent mortar, as he did on the Benbow Arcade, which contract he has just finished. The contract was also awarded this morning for heating the building, the successful bidder being Mr. B. MacKenzie. The building will be equipped for steam heat.—Greensboro Telegram.

Rev. W. E. Hocutt, South Mills, announces that he has within his charge a gentleman and lady who wish to adopt an orphan boy between the age of four and six years. They want a boy of honest parentage, and of sound body and mind. They are devout Christians and it will be an ideal home for a child.

The editor of the Advocate, attended by his daughter Ruth, left to-day for St. Louis where they will take in the Exposition. The readers of the Advocate will hear from the editor in the shape of letters telling about the Exposition. Rev. J. M. Culbreth will occupy the tripod durink the editor's absence.

"We have had good revivals at Cokesbury. Rev. G. B. Starling was with us four days and rendered very efficient service. As one visible result of these meetings, 14 were added to our church, and several will join other churches. We are in the midst of kind friends, and we feel much encouraged."—Rev. G. W. Starling.

Rev. J. W. Hoyle, Elise Circuit, writes: "On the 15th of August the death angel came to the home of Bro. Kendrick Hare and claimed his wife. She was laid to rest in the family burying ground on the 16th, while a host of friends were present. May God bless the bereaved family. Two of our meetings have been held. Many have sought the Lord in the old way on their knees around the altar."

We are glad to call the attention of our readers to the fact that Greensboro Female College will open on October 5th, and close June 14th. Mrs. Lucy H. Robertson has been elected president, and this means much for the prosperity of the institution. A full faculty of experienced teachers has been chosen, and all the advantages of a high class college for women may be obtained at G. F. C. The buildings will be ready by October 5th. The prospects are said to be unusually fine. All our people feel like praising God for His wonderful protection exercised over this beloved institution.

Connectional.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix and family have been up in Duluth taking a well-earned vacation.

There will be a formal opening of the Bessemer City Church, W. N. C. Conference, on August 24-29.

A settlement home has been opened in Mobile under the direction of the Woman's Home Mission Society.

Dr. S. S. Keener announces the gift of $1,000 from Mrs. McLeroy to the Endowment Fund for the widows and orphans of Louisiana ministers.

Dr. W. C. Lovett, editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, has been confined to his room for several weeks with an attack of fever, we are sorry to learn.

Mrs. T. L. Boswell, aged eighty-four, mother of Dr. John W. Boswell, editor of New Orleans Christian Advocate, died at her home in Macon, Tenn., July 30.

With all the District Conferences of the North Alabama Conference held, there have been twenty-one applicants licensed to preach, and seventeen were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission.

Our book agents at Nashville advertise that they will send the Nashville Christian Advocate from September 1, 1904, to January 1, 1906, for $2.00, the regular price for one year's subscription. There should be many responses to this proposition.

Rev. Charles Lynch, who was made assistant editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist at the late Conference, has resigned his position, and has returned to his work on Levelton Circuit, from which he was taken to serve as field editor of the new paper.

Dr. A. M. Chreitzberg, of Columbia, S. C., and father of Dr. H. F. Chreitzberg, pastor of Centenary M. E. Church, filled the pulpit of that place of worship last Sunday. The elder Dr. Chreitzbery is eighty-four years old, and for sixty-five years has been an active minister.

General Notes

The veteran missionary, Rev. John G. Paton, D. D., has reached his eightieth year.

The citizens of the United States have contributed about $100,000 for the relief of the sufferers in the Slocum disaster.

The unanimous renomination of Hon. John H. Small for Congress in the First District was a deserved recognition of an able and faithful official.

The minutes of the Southern Presbyterian Assembly show that 20,000 have been added to the church while nearly one-half as many are lost to the church.

Prof. H. B. Holmes, who for several years filled the chair of English in Elon College, died at the home of his father last week. He was an able and good man.

The Empress Dowager of China has presented 10,000 taels to the new medical college and hospital to be opened by the London Missionary Society in Peking.

It is likely that before winter the Southern's double track line will be in operation between Washington and Orange, Va., a distance of eighty-five miles.

That was an act of exceeding generosity in the National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio, when they provided a thousand free trips for officers and employes to the St. Louis World's Fair.

Mr. Chas. H. Gattis succeeds Mr. Z. P. Smith as Traveling Passenger Agent of the S. A. L. Railway in North Carolina. Mr. Gattis is well equipped for his new position and will do good work.

The Young Men's Christian Associations now number 1,813, with a total membership of 373,502, and property valued at $30,000,000. There are 32,821 men enrolled in educational classes, and 56,000 in Bible classes.

Randall Thomas Davidson, the Archbishop of Canterbury, who will attend the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Boston in the fall, is the eighty-fifth archbishop to bear that title. He has an income of $75,000 a year.

Rev. J. F. McCulloch, editor of Our Church Record, the Methodist Protestant Church paper, has accepted a call to become Professor of Mathematics at Adrian College for the coming collegiate year, and will leave for that city about the first of next month.

The Executive Committee of the Southern Presbyterian Board of Missions has appointed Rev. W. M. Walsh, of Charlotte, N. C., and Dr. J. A. McFaddin, of Duke, N. C., missionaries to China, and Mrs. Margaret Bell, sister of Rev. Dr. Bull, of Nashville, missionary to Korea.

OUR TWO OFFERS.

For New Subscribers.

From now until January 1, 1905, the Raleigh Christian Advocate will be sent to new subscribers for 50 cents.

For Renewals.

To all who renew their subscription in the next two weeks from this date we will send a beautiful souvenir in the shape of the Marked New Testament—a handy little volume clearly printed, durably bound and with significant and valuable verses, conveniently marked so as to attract the eye. This is one of the most valuable souvenirs we have yet sent out. Remember the offer is for the next two weeks. The renewal must be for a year.

Dr. DuBose reports the California State Epworth League Conference as a meeting of much enthusiasm and spiritual power.

NORTH CAROLINA EPWORTH LEAGUE
DEVOTIONAL. CHARITABLE. CONFERENCE LITERARY. EVANGELICAL.
EDITED BY REV. H. B. ANDERSON.

True Worth.

The apothecary has empty vials. They are all insignificant things, and of little value. In one he puts a deadly poison, in another a sweet perfume, in a third a healing medicine.

No one cares for the vials, but for the things they carry. In one is that which kills; in another that which cures, and in another a pleasing perfume.

So it is with you, Epworthian. It is not your personal beauty that really charms, nor the adornment of yourselves in the borrowed plumage of the ostrich and silk worm. Your real value and true charm is your quality of mind and soul. We often meet with those who have neither beauty of face nor charm of wealth, who are really homely of feature and plainly clad, who have beautiful, attractive manners, and are charming conversationalists, and who are highly cultured. While on the other hand we have met those who have beautiful, well-shaped features, and tastily dressed, who are exceedingly disagreeable and unpleasant as companions, puerile and uninteresting.

It is not what you do always that is acceptable, but the manner of doing it. Whatever you do then, let it appear that the party for whose sake you do it is conferring a favor on you to allow you to do it.

Two New Leagues.

Rev. R. E. Hunt, of Rocky Mount and Marvin, has organized, since Conference, at Marvin's Church, an Epworth League, with the following officers:

President.—R. L. Carraway.
First Vice-President.—R. P. Pullen.
Second Vice-President.—Miss Sue Bone.
Third Vice-President.—Miss Bettie Fletcher.
Secretary.—Miss Minnie Kerrey.
Treasurer.—R. H. Knight.
Era Agent.—Miss Emily Kerrey.

Rev. J. M. Benson, of Nashville Circuit, has organized a League at Nashville, but he has failed to send us the names of the officers.

Vocational Religion.

There is quite a difference between a man's vocation and avocation. The former refers to his everyday business, the latter to what may be regarded as a recreation or an occasional pursuit. It would be quite out of place for a business man, on his way to the office or the store in the morning, to say, "I am a little late to-day getting down to my avocation." His regular work is not an avocation but a vocation. With the majority of people it is probably true that religious service is simply an avocation. They do not work at it very much, and satisfy their consciences with an act of self-denial or personal endeavor for Christ once in a while. What is needed is more Christians who will have the same idea of religion as Jesus when he said: "Wist ye not that I must be about my father's business?" Nothing will so impress the world with the power of Christianity, as a great multitude of men and women who make a religious life their vocation, consecrating to the Saviour all their talents and opportunities.—Epworth Era.

Notes.

What districts contemplate holding a District Conference League?

* * *

We will be glad to publish a directory of District Leagues to be held between this and the time for the annual Conference.

* * *

Some of the brethren have reported matters of League interest to the Advocate for publication. Why not let these appear in the League columns? Send such items to my address at Goldsboro.

* * *

The Marvin League has been organized long enough to have passed the critical period and give assurance of success. It is now in a prosperous condition with plenty of work before it. The League at Nashville, though young, is "healthy" and hopeful. We wish the new leagues abundant success, and hope to hear from them often.

* * *

Several of the brethren have promised to see that their League Secretaries send us items of interest from their Chapters; and, also, to write us an occasional article for our columns. This, brethren, is to remind you of your promise. And, let me say, we would be glad to have any one interested in League work to send us a short article for these columns.

Sunday School

Lesson for August 28, 1904.

Elijah Discouraged.

Lesson IX. I. Kings xix. 1-8.

"Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah, saying, So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by to-morrow about this time." (Verse 2.) This vow of Jezebel was one of the most tremendous vows which mark the history of the Semitic race, both within and without the Jewish pale. By her outburst of blind, unreasonable fury, she gave Elijah opportunity to escape, though she must have felt sure that he was absolutely in her power. Says Moulton: "The exact note of time is a further proof that this was intended and understood as a sentence of banishment on pain of death."

Says Farrar in the Expositor's Bible: "In the furious impetuosity of the message we seen the determination of the sorceress-queen. In her way she was as much in deadly earnest as Elijah was. Whether Baal had been defeated or not, she was not defeated, and Elijah should not escape her vengeance. The oath shows the intensity of her age, like that of the forty Jews who bound themselves by the cherem that they would not eat or drink till they had slain Paul; and the fixity of her purpose as when Richard III. declared that he would not dine till the head of Buckingham had fallen on the block. We cannot but notice the insignificance to which she reduced her husband, and the contempt with which she treated the voice of her people. She presents the spectacle, so often reproduced in history and reflected in literature, of a strong, fierce woman—a Clytemnestra, a Brunhaulf, a Lady Macbeth, an Isabella of France, a Margaret of Anjou, a Joan of Naples, a Catherine de' Medici—completely dominating a feebler consort."

"It is enough; now, O Lord, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers." (Verse 4.) Elijah became a pessimist and wanted to die. His hopes had failed, and he felt that all he had expected was gone forever. His dream was over, and his sensitive conscience upbraided him for his want of success. Judging himself as he judges others, he decides that he is not worthy of prolonged life.

Cotton says that in moments of despondency even Shakespeare thought himself no poet, and Raphael doubted his right to be called a painter. Some great writer has said, with truth, that "there is probably no man with a soul above that of the brutes that perish, to whom a time has not come in his life, when, were you to tell him that he would not wake to see another day, he would receive the message with something like gladness." Elijah could have cried with this poet:

"Let the heavens burst, and drown with deluging rain
The feeble vassals of lust, and anger, and wine,
The little hearts that know not how to forgive;
Arise, O God, and strike, for we count thee just—
We are not worthy to live."

F. W. Robertson, troubled by various sorrows, wrote in a letter on a friend's death: "How often have I thought of the evening when he left Tours, when, in our boyish friendship, we set our little silver watches exactly together, and made a compact to look at the moon exactly at the same moment that night and think of each other. I do not remember a single hour in life since then which I would have arrested, and said: 'Let this stay.'"

Some writer gives an illustration of a man like Dante or Milton, when he stands alone, hated by princes, and priests, and people, who retorts scorn for scorn, and refuses to change his voice. Yet even Dante died of a broken heart, and in Milton's autobiographical wail of Samson Agonistes, amid all its trumpet blast of stern defiance, we read the sad notes:

"Nor am I in the list of them that hope;
Hopeless are all my evils, all remediless;
This one prayer yet remains, might I be heard,
No long petition, speedy death,
The close of all my miseries, and the balm."

"And as he lay and slept under a juniper tree, behold, then an angel touched him, and said unto him, Arise and eat." (Verse 5.) Young gives sleep as "tired nature's sweet restorer," and in Psalm cxxvii. 2, "He giveth his beloved sleep."

NEARLY FORFEITS HIS LIFE.

A runaway almost ending fatally, started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill. For four years it defied all doctors and all remedies. But Bucklen's Arnica Salve had no trouble to cure him. Equally good for Burns, Bruises, Skin Eruntions and Piles. Twenty-five cents at all druggists.

TYPEWRITER FREE!

THIS TYPEWRITER will be given FREE to boys and GIRLS, or anyone, for selling 20 pieces of our jewelry at 10c. each. Does surprisingly fine work. Same letter that you write on a $100 machine can be written on this one to the same advantage, only not with the same speed. A typewriter teaches you to write, spell and punctuate correctly, and is half an education. Parents should encourage their children to earn one FREE. Write to-day, and we will send jewelry postpaid. When sold, send us the $2.00, and the typewriter, exactly like cut, will positively be sent to you, charges prepaid. Address: THE MAIL ORDER BARGAIN HOUSE, 12-14 Main Street, SEABOARD, N. C.

I CURE CANCER.

Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No knife. No plaster. No caustics. No sloughing oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure internal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment;" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else is the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

School Room Furniture.

Twenty-five first-class school desks, including teacher's desk, is offered us for ninety dollars. A bargain! What Sunday-school will send us that amount of money to pay for them. Our teacher cannot do her work as it ought to be in an unfurnished room.

Send in the cash, beloved.

Providing for the Orphans.

More applications are in already than are provided for. We cannot fill the new building until the children are provided for. Will not our preachers wake up the church?

We have sowed our fall turnips. The children that remained are in good health and have done well. The next session will open September 1.

Notice.

We are sorry to say to the many lady friends who have applied for situations as teachers that so few children have been provided for that we cannot afford another one for the present. They will please let us know what disposition to make of their recommendations.

J. W. JENKINS,
Superintendent.

Receipts up to August 20.

Donations in Kind.—Sack of cabbage, Mr. T. W. Sharpe, Aberdeen; wagon load of watermelons, Wynn & Redford, Raleigh; cantaloupes, Mr. W. H. Humphrey, Lumberton; box of clothes, Mrs. E. J. Freeman, Burlington; one young Leghorn rooster, Mr. Mark Chamberlain.

The Status of the Sunday-School.

The following Sunday-schools have agreed to support two orphans: Biscoe, Lumberton, and Edenton Street.

The following, one: Wilson, Greenville, St. Paul's, Goldsboro; Burlington, Kinston, Weldon, Warrenton, Laurinburg, Morehead City, Rockingham, Goldsboro, Henderson, First Church and City Roads, Elizabeth City; Grace and Fifth Street, Wilmington; Washington, Rocky Mount, Roper City, Parker's, Fayetteville, Franklinton, Aberdeen, Smithfield, Rev. Taylor's class, Wanchese; Cathage, Gibson and Saint John's, Tar River Circuit, Rich Square, and Mr. R. J. Corbett, Littleton, Louisburg and Mr. George M. Lindsey. Grifton has sent us all the way in monthly collections for a year from $5.56 to $8.58; Pittsboro from $2.10 to $3.32 for two years.

The following send $2.50: Red Springs, Stantonsburg, Magnolia, Ormond's Chapel, Williamston; Cary $2.00 per month; Princeton $1.00 per month; Clinton $5.00 a year; Ebenezer, on Cary Circuit; Oaky Grove, on Millbrook; Four Oaks, on Clayton; St. Paul's, on Richmond; Whiteville, Edenton, Plymouth, Murfreesboro, take monthly collections.

Trinity, Durham; Centenary, New Bern, and Troy supported one one year. So, also, Mr. Sam Parker, of Wilson, one two years, and Mr. Sidney McMullen, one two years, and Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Best one for one for one year.

The following have sent a donation this year: Mt. Gilead, primary class; Hillsboro, Adelia, Roxboro, Seaboard, Alberta, Nash's Chapel, Marvin, Raleigh, Shallotte Oak, Trinity, Robeson Circuit; Trinity, Columbia Circuit; Black's Chapel, Elizabeth City, Stonewall, Concord, Roxboro Circuit; Concord, Jonesboro Circuit; Phillips' Chapel, Serepta, Barefoots, Johnson's Grove, Colerain, Philadelphia, Wesley's Chapel, Old Trap.

Siler City and Rich Square each gave a bed.

Who will join this band?

If there is any mistake in the above statement, let me know.

Will they do it.

It has been said that the preachers will not take the Orphanage to their hearts. Will they?

It has been said that the Methodist Church will not support the Orphanage. Will it?

It has been said that the church will not pay the debt on the main building. Will it?

It has been said that the church is not ready for the forward movement. Is it?

It has been said that rich Methodists will not put their money in the Orphanage like the Baptists and Presbyterians. Will they?

It has been said that the Methodists dying will not put the Orphanage in their wills. Will they?

I believe that the Methodists are as good and as liberal as other people. I have faith in God. I have faith in the Methodist Church. I have faith in the people. Humanity is on the upward grade. Let everybody push it forward.

Billy is Dead.

When he retired Tuesday night he was in usual health. During the night he was heard to cry. But none thought it a cry for help. Wednesday morning he did not greet the boys with his accustomed smile. The news soon spread that Billy was sniping. Search was made, but in vain. Late in the evening he was found dead. No mark of violence was on him. A little blood in his nostril, and a swollen body, seemed to indicate that the serpent's venomous fang had done the deed. If we had known that he was sick, the doctor would have been consulted and the best in the house would have been given him. It was sadly said, with tears in our eyes—Billy cried, but not one heeded. He died alone. No one was near. He had won all hearts. He had given the children so much pleasure. The lone wagon is a sad reminder.

PATRICK.—In memory of little Wesley, son of Mr. J. R. and Mrs. Maggie Patrick, who was born September 16, 1900, and died in Hookerton, June 14, 1904.

He was sick only a few days with gastritis, and all that loving hearts could do was of no avail—the sweet spirit winged its way back to the God who gave it.

Wesley was a very bright promising boy, and had made many friends during his short stay with us. His affection for his mother was beautiful, even in death he held up his little lips to be kissed. Farewell, dear little friend, we loved you and we miss you, but every one that leaves us to join the host above causes us to loosen our hold on earthly things and more firmly grasp the things that are eternal, and you have made heaven dearer and nearer to us.

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

BELL.—Mrs. Sarah D. Bell, wife of Benjamin J. Bell, was born in Carteret County July 5, 1838, and died in Beaufort, N. C., March 31, 1904. In her fourteenth year she was converted and joined the Methodist E. Church, South, and was a faithful and consecrated member to the end. She was happily married to Mr. Benjamin J. Bell in her twenty-seventh year, who is left behind to mourn his loss.

Sister Bell was a great sufferer for some years before the summons came, but the patience and fortitude she exhibited through it all was truly beautiful. In her death, Brother Bell loses a devoted and affectionate wife, the church one of its most consecrated members, and the community one of its truest and best women. The short acquaintance the writer had with her was a real benediction to him. She is gone from us, and we miss her, but our loss is her eternal gain. H. M. EURE.

POTTER.—Mrs. Elizabeth H. Potter was born January 10, 1810, and died March 17, 1904. She was reared in the faith of the Quakers, and remained a member of that denomination until the society to which she belonged went down; then she united with Ann Street M. E. Church, South, in Beaufort, N. C., where she remained a consistent member until the summons came, that took her home. In her eighteenth year she was happily married to Mr. Wm. J. Potter, who preceded her by several years, to that land that lies beyond this vail of tears. To this union were several children, five of whom survive her. One of these, Mrs. B. J. Bell, has since joined her mother, where separation is unknown. Frequently she expressed a desire to go home.

The funeral service was conducted in the church, by her pastor, and the remains were taken to the Quakers' grave-yard, seven miles from Beaufort, and laid to rest, to await the resurrection morn. H. M. EURE.

EDWARDS.—Haywood E. Edwards, son of D. N. and Nannie Edwards, was born January 17, 1878. His devotion to the home of his birth and a fondness for the family association were striking characteristics of his life. In young manhood he gave his heart to God and joined the Methodist Church at Rainbow. A cheerful disposition introduced him to passing friends.

June 3, 1903, he was happily married to Miss Lizzie Moore, whose devotion made home happy, causing the sunshine of life to linger there. He and wife moved to Hookerton last January, where he entered the mercantile business. A friend remarked to the writer: "Could he have lived he and his wife would have been a success in life."

More than a month ago he was smitten down with typhoid fever. Willing hands ministered unto him while medical skill was exhausted. On July 27, his spirit went home to God, and we laid him to rest at Rainbow Church. Behind are left a father, mother, two sisters and a devoted wife, upon whom we pray God's blessings and guidance until they shall meet Haywood beyond the skies. J. P. PATE.

Hookerton, N. C., Aug. 3, 1904.

BALL.—Gladys, the little sixteen months' old child of Bro. J. W. Ball and wife, died near Mt. Bethel Church on the 22nd of July, 1904, and was buried on the 23rd at Mt. Bethel.

She had not been well for some days, but the end came very unexpectedly, and was such a shock to her parents and loved ones.

She was a bright, sweet little child, tenderly loved by her parents and brothers and sisters, who miss her so much, but she has gone to be with the Savior. Let us all so live as to see her in that happy land where there is no parting. J. B. T.

STRAIN.—Thomas Strain, of Orange County, died at his home after a lingering illness of several months on, June 18, 1904, being nearly seventy years of age.

His health had not been good for years, but notwithstanding this his face was always full of sunshine.

Brother Strain was a great favorite in the section in which he lived.

He was a devoted member of the M. E. Church, South, and had been since soon after his return from the Confederate army. He was always at church when health would permit, and was ever interested in the welfare of Zion.

Brother Strain did not live in vain. He told the writer that all was well with his soul a short while before his death.

"How blest the righteous when he dies!
When sinks the weary soul to rest,
How mildly beam the closing eyes:
How gently heaves the expiring breast."

May God in His mercy richly bless the widow, and the child, and his nephew, and comfort all the sorrowing ones. J. B. T.

PLEASANTS.—Mr. George A. Pleasants was born in Granville County, February 5, 1848, died June 9, 1904. He was married to Miss Emma Cottrell, of Granville County, in 1874. Nine children were born to them, four sons and five daughters. Eight are living.

He professed religion and joined the Methodist Church at Salem, Granville County, N. C., about the time of his marriage, in which communion he lived faithfully till God called him to membership in Triumphant Church—Heaven. He was patient, truthful and uncomplaining. He very often spoke to his family, that he would soon pass over on the other shore, where no pain would enter there. He suffered for nearly twenty years with heart trouble, and seemed to be very well and gay, until the summons came, and he left his loved ones without saying good by or murmured a word.

His fortitude and resignation were comforting evidences of the faith that dwelt in him.

The writer had the pleasure of staying with him a couple of months last winter, and it was great joy to him to hear him talk of the great Book that points us all to the Lamb of God. To me and all with whom he mingled, he gave comforting assurance of peaceful communion with God.

The community is made richer and better by his life of faith. When the Messenger called for him he was waiting and ready to go. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. The writer extends his deepest and heartfelt sympathy for the bereaved family. We know earth has no sorrow that Heaven cannot heal. And help us, O God, that we and the family may live so as to meet the loved ones that are gone before.

WRITTEN BY A NEPHEW.

THE SSS BEST TONIC

It increases the appetite, tones up the stomach, invigorates and strengthens the system, and furnishes purer and better blood for the up-building of the run-down constitution. You will find no tonic to act so promptly and beneficially where the health has given way, the strength over-taxed by hard work and close confinement. Those living in the low, marshy sections of the country, exposed to miasmatic poisons and breathing the impure air arising from stagnant pools and swamps, till their systems are filled with malaria and their health undermined, will find S. S. S. a most excellent tonic, and its timely use has many times prevented the serious complications that so often result from malaria.

Good blood, good appetite and good digestion are the foundation stones of good health. S. S. S. supplies all these, containing as it does ingredients for the purification of the blood and also well-known tonic properties, making it the ideal remedy in cases where the blood has deteriorated, the stomach disordered and appetite has failed.

S. S. S. being a purely vegetable compound, leaves no bad after-effects, like the strong potash and mineral remedies, which are bad on the stomach and nerves. A course of S. S. S. now will fortify the system, and the impurities that have accumulated through the long winter months are more readily and promptly thrown off, and the warm weather finds you in good physical condition, instead of weak, run-down, tired and debilitated, with no appetite or energy, as is apt to be the case where the system is neglected and nature left to take care of herself. If you need a tonic and appetizer, you will find S. S. S. the best. Medical advice without charge to all who write us about their case. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Canton, Ohio, Aug. 6, 1903.

Gentlemen: S. S. S. is a good medicine. I keep it in the house all the while. It is an excellent tonic to give strength to the system and tone to all the organs. It gives appetite and energy and makes one feel better in every way. I have found it also an excellent blood purifier. For months I was troubled with an itching skin eruption on the face, and I tried specialists and many remedies to get a cure, but S. S. S. is the only medicine that seemed to relieve. I am now comparatively free of this eruption. I think a great deal of your medicine, believing it to be the best blood purifier and tonic known to the world to-day.

MRS. FRANK HORNER.
1380 E. Seventh st.

Altoona, Pa., June 20, 1903.

I have always been averse to giving a testimonial, and only do so now because of a desire to have others benefited by the use of your most excellent medicine. Before using S. S. S. this spring I very much felt the need of a tonic; was troubled with Dyspepsia and Constipation, and my blood was in bad condition. The use of your specific has driven away all indications of Dyspepsia, regulated my bowels, enriched my blood, and caused me to gain 20 pounds in weight, so that I feel in better physical condition than I have in years. In my judgment there is no better tonic and blood purifier on the market than your preparation, and I unhesitatingly recommend it as such. A. L. FISHER.

RELIABLE AGENTS WANTED.

In Memoriam.

The death of a good young man is a calamity to any community. It is especially so in a small town or village where such a life comes to the view of every resident. Your committee feels it to be so with our community in the case of our young brother, Hanson K. Kenedy, who passed away quietly and peacefully between midnight and morning, July 11, 1904, at the age of twenty-eight years, eight months and twenty days.

Our friend united with the Disciples Church when about thirteen years old. He lived with us as a citizen a few months, but from the time of his arrival until called away, his life was consistent with his profession. He was intelligent, careful, steady. His conduct was such as to win the approval of our best people, and he was regarded as quite a model young man.

Hanson Kelley Kenedy was a member and a regular attendant of the Bible class of Grifton Sunday-school M. E. Church, South. He was attentive to all the proceedings, and interested in the things that worked for good. We shall miss him. His example will be lost to our community, but his influence will live and be for good to others not so richly endowed in mind and morals. The life of such a man cannot be a failure. We bow in humble submission to God's will and pray that our Father's blessings may rest upon the stricken household, and that it may work for good to us all, especially to those, who like him, strive to show their love to Christ by living His commandments.

To the sorrowing family we extend our deepest sympathy.

The Secretary is requested to devote a page of our records to his memory, and to send a copy of this memoir to the family, and a copy each to Kinston Free Press, and Raleigh Christian Advocate, for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
J. L. KEENE, SR.,
E. J. BROOKS,
R. E. PITTMAN,
Committee.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father has called from labor to reward our beloved brother, William Dawson, who was a faithful and also the oldest member of Cokesbury Sunday-school; therefore be it

Resolved 1. That, while yielding with deep humility to the hand of an all-wise providence, we can but lament the death of one, who, by his kindness and loyalty, had impressed us as a true follower of Christ.

2. That with a feeling of regret we bid farewell to the familiar face, realizing that a seat is vacant which can never be filled; yet hoping that in the sweet bye and bye we may meet where partings are no more.

3. That we, as a committee, strive to emulate his example in his loyalty to the Sunday-school, and we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of great sorrow, trusting that a kind father will comfort and sustain them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Sunday-school, a copy be sent to the Raleigh Christian Advocate, and one to the bereaved family.

MRS. LIZZIE R. STRICKLAND,
A. C. BULLARD,
MRS. A. B. MAXWELL,
Committee.

Whereas, it pleased our Heavenly Father in his wisdom to remove from us our esteemed and beloved sister, Mrs. Fannie West, we, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of City Road Church,

Resolved 1. That, while we bow to God's will, we deeply mourn the loss of one beloved by all and respected for her beautiful Christian character. She was truly perfected through suffering, bearing her affliction with fortitude and patience.

2. That we tender the sorrowing husband and other relations our heartfelt sympathy in this time of sore bereavement.

3. That her example should stimulate us to greater zeal and self-sacrifice in promoting Christ's kingdom on the earth.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Society, one be sent to the family of the deceased and one be sent to the Raleigh Christian Advocate for publication.

The September McClure's.

McClure's Magazine for September is a vigorous expression of American life and interest, part fact, part fiction, all entertaining. Several serious articles give it commanding importance and character. Of these William Allen White writes of "Roosevelt and the Postal Frauds," and in a clear and concise manner he tells the engrossing story of this great crime against the Government and the manner of its exposure. But he does more. He reads the lesson of these events and keenly characterizes the men who made them. It is in all an article which every American citizen will want and ought to read. Ida M. Tarbell gets at the very heart of the trust question in her Standard Oil History in a masterly paper on "The Price of Oil." Here is what the consumer wants to know, how the trust affects prices. Miss Tarbell traces the variation of oil prices under the Standard's manipulations from the beginning and draws convincing conclusions from an overwhelming array of facts, evidently wrought out with infinite pains.

New and intimately interesting side-lights are thrown on the South during the Civil War in "Memories of the Beginning and End of the Southern Confederacy," by Louise Wigfall Wright, daughter of Louis T. Wigfall, of Texas, a Confederate leader and statesman. Through letters written by prominent Southerners the author gives a vivid picture of those exciting days, and contributes real unpublished chapters of history. John La Farge continues his "One Hundred Masterpieces of Painting," with the discussion of three famous painting symbolizing "Triumph."

A thrilling war experiences is narrated by Robert Alexander Wason in "Babe Randolph's Turning-point." He dramatically describes the noble heroism of a Virginia cavalryman, the making of a man under the stress of high duty and opportunity.

This strong number is concluded with a page poem of unusual beauty by Florence Wilkinson, entitled "To a Wood Path."

Home Waterworks.

The new system of under-ground, air pressure water tanks for farms and villages promises to revolutionize that class of homes, as much as did the wire fence telephones, as it gives to the farmers all the water privileges enjoyed by their city cousins. With a small outlay from $40 to $140, everyone in the country may have water under pressure, i. e., for the bath-room, closet, kitchen, sink, stock water, lawn sprinkling, and last, but not least, for fire protection. The principle involved in this new luxury is as old as the pen-stock of 1840, by which our grandfathers conveyed water from the spring on the hillside to the watering trough at the house through hollow logs. The wind mill or gasoline engine now takes the place of the hillside spring; iron pipes displace the wooden logs, and the faucet holds the water in reserve until it is needed.

Science has, however, added a new feature, viz., the air-tight, underground, iron tank, either new or second hand. Into this from the under side, the water is forced by the windmill until the air is compressed into one-half its normal volume. This furnishes a pressure of from 25 to 50 pounds per square inch, equal to the normal pressure of the Holy or elevated tank. Again, from the under side of this iron boiler, the water is taken in iron pipes under-ground, below frost, to the barn, kitchen, truck patch or through the fire hose to the top of the house. Any plumber, who can cut a thread, or wipe a joint, is capable of fitting up a practical plant of this kind. Indeed, if the plumbers are awake to their opportunities, they will find an unlimited amount of this kind of work, as every man who owns a wind-mill must soon see the advantage of this plan over that of the open trough or elevated tank.

The material and labor needed to carry the water a hundred feet from the wind-mill into the house, should not cost over $100. It consists of a one-inch galvanized pipe, a plain, ordinary "cut-off" and iron boiler of any size, the dimensions of which must depend upon the size of the pocket-book. A small one will act as perfectly as a large one will, the only advantage the latter has over the former is that—

When the winds blow (not)
The waters will flow (still)

At some later date I will explain how the hand force pump proposition will give a constant and even pressure of water from the cistern when forced through an air-tight chamber to different parts of the house or barn. So far as I know there is no patent to bar anyone from using this greatest of blessings—free water.—Clarence D. Skinner, Topeka, Kan., in Hoard's Dairyman.

DEAR MADAM: Please Read My Free Offer

Words of Wisdom to Sufferers from a Lady of Notre Dame, Indiana.

I send free of charge to every sufferer this great Woman Remedy, with full instructions, description of my past sufferings and how I permanently cured myself.

You Can Cure Yourself at Home Without the Aid of a Physician.

It costs nothing to try this remedy once, and if you desire to continue its use, it will cost you only twelve cents a week. It does not interfere with your work or occupation. I have nothing to sell. Tell other sufferers of it; that is all I ask. It cures everybody, young or old.

If you feel bearing down pains as from approaching danger, pain in the back and bowels, creeping feeling in the spine, a desire to cry, hot flashes and faintness, or if you are suffering from any so-called female complaint, then write to Mrs. M. Summers, Notre Dame, Ind., for her free treatment and full instructions. Like myself thousands have been cured by it. I send it in a plain envelope.

Mothers and Daughters will learn of a simple family remedy, which quickly and thoroughly cures female complaints of every nature. It saves worry and expense and the unpleasantness of having to reveal your condition to others. Vigor, health and happiness result from its use.

Wherever you live I can refer you to well-known ladies in your neighborhood, who know, and will testify that this family remedy cures all troubles peculiar to their sex, strengthens the whole system and makes healthy and strong women. Write to-day, as this offer may not be made again.

FIFTIETH YEAR. ORGAN OF THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE. NUMBER 31.

RALEIGH, N. C., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1904.

EN ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS.

T. N. IVEY.

St. Louis, Aug. 27.—Some people go to an exposition for pure recreation. It is sufficient that these are disappointed, especially if they go in the fall months, when the rush and crush of surging throngs make travelling a martyrdom and the stay at hotels and lodging houses a satire on comfort. So if there is one who is contemplating seeking recreation in the show now going on by the Great Father of Waters, let him rather pull off his coat and sit on his back porch, or take the car for Pullen Park, or board the train for Fuquay Springs.

Other people go to an exposition in order to keep abreast of the times by first getting the thrill that comes from the vital touch with the eager restless public, and then learning through the eyes what our immence country is doing in the domain of art, science and commerce. I have never seen a person who went with such a motive without seeing an individual with the light of a new enthusiasm in his eye and a propensity to din ad nauseum into his neighbor's ear the glories of the show.

There is a special reason why the number of the latter class of people with respect to the St. Louis Exposition should be vastly multiplied. "What new lessons can you learn at St. Louis? You have seen it all before at Chicago, Atlanta, Buffalo, Nashville, and other exposition." No you have not, and there is where the common mistake is made. Since the thousands upon thousands of electric lights flashed on the roofs, cornices and facades of the White City over ten years ago, the mighty hand of labor and genius has rolled this restless world into new and strange regions where progress stands to point the eye not simply to reconstructed and rearranged, but newly created, sights. The electrical world of ten years ago is to the electrical world of today what the moon is to the sun. Commerce has new plans and processes. Education has made a world of its own. National strength has new foundations, and international museums have been fitted with more ease room, and every case is fitted with things new and striking. No, it is not the phenomenal bigness of the St. Louis Exposition which forms the differentiating feature. It is the presentation of a new play on the program of progress and of a choice opportunity for the people of all lands to learn a lesson that every intelligent man and woman should learn.

So, when you ask me, "Why go?" I answer: For the same reason that I went to school, that I read a new and stimulating book, that I hear a learned lecturer, that I pay my poll tax, and exercise the right of a freeman at the ballot-box—all to learn something and burn a few tapers at the shrine of patriotism and progress.

For as much, then, most excellent readers, as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are seen at the St. Louis exposition, it seemed good to me also to write not a catalogue of the sights and glowing panegynes of the great show, but a simple educative series of articles that are designed to let the people who have to stay at home know what the great show is.

The gray fogs enswathing the hills of Albemarle County, Virginia, were just dissipating themselves in the clear blue above when this writer stepped out of that superb "fast-flyer," No. 40, the pride of the Southern Railway on the platform at Charlottesville. To the east rose an elevation higher than a hill and something lower than a mountain. I knew that on the wooded summit of that elevation was Monticello. But why do I speak of Monticello? What has Monticello to do with the St. Louis Exposition? Think for a moment, gentle and intelligent reader, and you will know. Monticello is indissolubly linked with the name of that strange gifted man who drafted the Declaration of Independence, and who by his strong unique personality and enthusiastic efforts made possible the trade by which Louisiana was sold to the United States for fifteen million dollars. That Louisiana Purchase is commemorated by the present exposition. How grandly Thomas Jefferson wrought when he defied popular sentiment in the infant years of the last century—a sentiment which fed upon narrow, contracted, inexpansive policy! The purchase of Louisiana in 1803 was—pardon the slang—a "ten strike" for American greatness.

Note the following facts. The land purchased covers 875,025 square miles, seven times the area of Scotland, England and Ireland combined, and greater in extent than Great Britain, Germany, Spain, Portugal and Italy combined. This vast region was in 1803, practically, one State. Now it is Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Montana the Indian Territory, and the greater part of Minnesota, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, and Oklahoma. All this for only fifteen millions of dollars. And thousands of American citizens who voted for and against Thomas Jefferson thought the price too high, and regaled the public with the contention that the purchased area was nothing but a stretch of waste barren land—in fact the American Desert. Oh, these false prophets! How grand and calumnar the "prophecy smashers" lean up against the background of eventful and often tragic history!

I considered it very appropriate for one en route to the St. Louis Exposition to make a trip to the top of that hill—well, we might as well call it a mountain, pause a few moments at the tomb of Jefferson, and look on some of his maternal handiwork—one of the most famous houses in the United States.

In the midst of a green lawn which slopes from the summit for a hundred yards in all directions, and shaded here and there by giant trees, stands Monticello which Jefferson built before the close of the 18th century. I am not going to try to describe it. I could not do so if I were to try. It is not large. It is rather squatty. It has a most peculiar roof with chimney-pots. It is built of brick and in places shows the signs of age. With the exception of the hall, I can tell nothing from my individual knowledge of the interior of the house as I was not allowed to enter the rooms. The property passed in 1828 into the hands of Commodore Levy, and it is now owned by a descendant of the commodore, Jefferson M. Levy. The present owner is a bachelor and does not occupy the house. It is occupied every summer, however, by a brother-in-law of the owner—a Mr. Mayhoff. This gentleman, clad in English style, stood on the steps of the front portico and with a politeness which robbed his opening words of their sting informed me that visitors were not allowed to go through the rooms, as the house was private property. In my ignorance I was unaware of the fact, and apologized so earnestly that Mr. Mayhoff invited me into the hall. On the walls hung pictures of great value. One was a veritable Sir Joshua Reynolds. There was costly bric-a-brac on the mantle towering above the large fireplace. In the cabinets was rare silver. In the gallery on one side I noticed a complete suit of bronze mail probably once worn by a feudal knight. Over the front door was the same old clock that Jefferson himself made. One face open on the portico, the other on the interior of the hall. On the roof of the portico is the same weather vane that Jefferson made. It works a dial on the overhead ceiling of the portico in such a way that one without going outdoors can see which way the wind is blowing. The quarters for the slaves are still in good condition and are connected with the basement of the house by means of a tunnel. I was impressed with a smaller tunnel opening on the hillside, and also connected with the house. I was told that Jefferson once escaped from the British through that tunnel. I question the reliability of that statement. The whole house and surroundings showed that Thomas Jefferson had ideas of his own, and some very peculiar ones. In the construction of the house he was evidently under the influence of French art which at the time was struggling out of the grasp of a very severe classism.

But that view of the surrounding country! It were worth a trip to Monticello to get that view.

Of course, the University of Virginia is the greatest monument to Thomas Jefferson, with perhaps the Declaration of Independence which he drafted. Our readers know all about this institution which was chartered in 1819 and opened in 1825. Jefferson was one of the first board of visitors. The time I spent in wandering over the campus and gazing upon the memorable building and thinking of the great men who emerged from those walls was well spent.

So having paid my respects to Thomas Jefferson who made the St. Louis Exposition possible, I will in my next speak of the Exposition.

It is easy to make a good beginning,—so easy, that perhaps this is the origin of the saying that "a good beginning makes a bad ending." While that saying has no truth in it, it is true that a good beginning never insures a good ending. There is an exhilaration about beginnings that rarely lasts through to the end. Long before the end comes the glamor of the fresh start, the clean page, is gone, and the real test is on. So it is that in a race, as in all the rest of life, it is the man who has staying power that wins.

Perhaps you are facing this test to-day. If so, be sure that the devil is trying to persuade you that it is not worth while to hold out. He breaks down more people just here than at any other time. But there is Another who, with His angels, is watching, and hoping, and offering you strength to win. Hold out in His strength, whatever the cost. To-morrow you will know why it was worth while.

The Methodist Episcopal Church will build a hospital in Indianapolis. Dr. Chas. N. Sims has been selected as field secretary.

The Statesboro Tragedies.

On the night of July 28th, about six miles from Statesboro, Mr. Henry R. Hodges and his whole family, consisting of his wife and three children, were foully murdered and their bodies cremated in their home. I visited the scene of the crime the next morning. The five bodies, charred beyond recognition, with every limb burned off and skulls crushed, had been dragged from the smouldering ruins and piled side by side under a nearby wash-shelter. I had never before witnessed a sight so revolting. The whole family gone! Not one left to tell the story! Words are wholly inadequate to describe the awful scene.

This quiet, peaceable, Christian gentleman and his contented family were thus murdered and burned by two negro wretches who lived near by, and who, from their own confessions, had received favors at the hands of their victims. The relatives, friends, neighbors, the whole community, stood in the presence of this terrible destruction of life and property with feelings better imagined than described.

Had the guilty parties become known at the time, no doubt their lives would have been at once required at the hands of the outraged citizens who had assembled by hundreds at the scene. Such a course would undoubtedly have been improper, wrong, yet the so recent and terrible provocation would have weighed as a partial excuse for meting out a hasty retribution.

This, however, did not occur. The two negroes, Paul Reid and Will Cato, were subsequently suspected, arrested, lodged in jail, pronounced guilty by the verdict of the coroner's jury, and the evidence of their guilt seemed conclusive. It was after the coroner's verdict that our leading citizens asked Judge Daley to call a special term of Superior Court to try them, that speedy justice might be meted out. The judge issued the call and the court convened. The two negroes had a fair trial, by a jury of twelve men. Able counsel represented the defense, appointed to this duty by the court. The evidence against Cato and Reid, in addition to the confessions made by them on the trial, left not the shadow of doubt as to their guilt. The jury said they were guilty and the judge sentenced them to be hanged on September 9th, twenty-three days from the date of the sentence. There was no reasonable donbt nor ground for doubt that this sentence would be carried into effect.

Up to this time, Bulloch County had done herself credit in thus permitting the law to proceed without molestation. But after the guilt of these men was established and pronounced by verdict, and there could be no longer any doubt, so intense became the feeling with some who had witnessed the trial, that better judgment gave way and passion overcame restraint, and the crowd of usually law-abiding citizens became for the time transformed into a mob, deaf to all appeals for the law to take its course, intent on wreaking punishment upon these lawless fiends. Infuriated by the refusal of the guard to surrender the prisoners the mob made a mad rush upon the military, disarmed the guards, captured the two negroes, brought them out and burned them to death.

We do not offer a criticism nor give an opinion as to who it was that failed in the duty to uphold the majesty of the law.

It has gone out to the world through the sensational daily press that the "best citizens" of the town and county participated, sympathized, aided, abetted, and even led in this work of wresting these negroes from the hand of the law and burning them at the stake, and the charge is made that the mob spirit was universal. It is this misstatement of the facts which we are now concerned with. The statement that the "best people" were all engaged in this act is incorrect and untrue and does hundreds of our people a gross injustice that must not pass unchallenged. That a few of our property owners and ordinarily law abiding citizens were in the mob is unfortunately true, but it is also true, on the contrary, that a great many—a large majority, I think—of the men composing the mob were not our "best citizens," but were irresponsible boys and young men, many from other counties, who, under the excitement, were drawn into the current and joined with the crowd without taking time for a deliberate thought.

That many of our best men urged the agitators to desist and to allow the law to proceed in its course, is a fact. This was true from the very day when the coroner's investigation was begun until the final hour when the mob was surging around the court house. A meeting of the citizens was held in the court house on the Saturday following the Thursday night when the crime was committed, and many of us made conciliatory speeches, urged that the law be permittcd to deal with the case, and pleaded for our county to be spared the humiliation of a lynching. In that meeting the entire bar of Statesboro went on record in no uncertain terms as being opposed to lawlessness, and I believe that every member of the bar has acted in good faith. Merchants spoke at the meeting, as did a number of other citizens, and two or three leading negroes were permitted to express their views of the situation, and every one pledged himself to do all in his power to bring the guilty parties to justice and at the same time uphold the majesty of the law.

For two hours on the day of the burning, while the mob was clamoring for the prisoners, many of us moved from one portion of the mob to another begging, urging, pleading with the men to desist from their course. Among these men who thus made a personal plea to the members of the mob in behalf of order and law were the judge of the court, the mayor of the town, various members of the bar and military, the judge of our city court, a number of our merchants, and other business men, and a large number of cool-headed, conservative farmers, and all urged and begged that the law be permitted to take its course. Rev. H. A. Hodges, a brother of the murdered man, was present and did all in his power to avert the lynching.

Bulloch County is known as one of the best counties in Georgia. Statesboro is noted for its good schools, its churches, its business enterprise, and the morality of its citizens. Along these lines I dare say no town of its size North or South surpasses it, and but few equal it. In face of this fact, it is hardly reasonable to suppose that even a majority—much less the whole, as is reported in the North—of the substantial citizens, the bone and fiber of the community, participated in or sympathized with the lynching of these negroes whom the law had already condemned.

Now, in conclusion, I will say that I have just been reading the inflammatory utterances of the Northern press concerning this deplorable act. They do not simply condemn the act. I would have no quarrel with them if they stopped there. Nor do they simply condemn those who participated in the act. I could sanction their censure of the lynchers, those who did the deed. But they do not stop here. They censure the entire people, good and bad, the whole community, and the whole South. They use this occurrence as a text to give us a lecture on the negro question. In my judgment such utterances as I have seen from the Northern press are unwise, and many of them untrue: They tend to injure rather than help conditions in the South.

We people of the South make our mistakes and sometimes, we confess, they are grievous, but our brethren at the North, before lecturing us, must wash their hands of the blood of those innocent negroes whom their own soldiers not so long ago wantonly shot down in cold blood for no offense save a desire to do honest work.

We are willing to be lectured, and if needs be, once in a while abused by people who themselves bear a clean record. But so long as lynchings and lawlessness, riotings, and strikes hold sway with such frequency at the North, we ask in fairness and justice that these vile epithets and unwarranted denunciations of an entire people for the shortcomings of a few be abandoned. I for one regret more than I can tell the recent lamentable occurrence in our county, but our people as a whole do not need nor do we deserve the wholesale abuse that is floating down from the North.

Let the wise help and counsel us, we need it; let the Christians pray for us, we need it; let the loving sympathize with us, we need it. But as for those who would stir up strife, make divisions, inflame passions and prejudices and incite to further violence, we beg, nay, we command that all such be silent.

Yours, for law and order,
WHITLEY LANGSTON,
Pastor M. E. Church, South, Statesboro, Ga.

The Scarritt Bible and Training School.

There is no department of work that does not involve a need of preparation, if the work is to be done wisely and efficiently. This has always been true, and is becoming more and more so, as this age of specialization advances. And what is true in the lower fields of labor is at least equally true in the higher. A housekeeper wants her servants to understand their business; a merchant advertises for an employee "with experience;" a mechanic serves a long apprenticeship before he is considered a master of his craft; a lawyer reads for years before undertaking a case; a physician without a diploma from an accredited school is ranked as a quack; a nurse must undergo a severe training in her art; a minister follows a long and arduous course of study. What wonder that as the Father and Guide of His people began to call His daughters into active usefulness in wider fields, He also prepared the means by which they should be trained for their new duties!

God planted this noble thought in the minds and hearts of His children, Miss Belle Bennett, Mrs. Bishop Wightman, and Dr. Nathan Scarritt, of Kansas City. These called others to their aid, and in course of time, the seed grew into the Scarritt Bible and Training School, being named for its most liberal benefactor. And now it is bearing fruit which brings blessings to far-scattered nations, as well as to those who are near,—fruit which partakes of the nature of those trees which John saw, on each side of the River of Life, which were for the "healing of the nations." And this is most emphatically the mission of the students at the Training School, whether they enter the Nurse-training Department, which seeks to send the message of eternal life and peace by the same hand that strives to bring health and comfort to the sick body; or become Bible-students, specializing in Christian work according to fitness, and according to the nature of the call, whether to home or foreign work. No pressure is brought to bear upon any student, but all possible aid is given each one in her preparation for what she believes to be her life-work.

A would-be student is required to fill out an application blank, giving her age, church affiliation, motive for entering the school, and certificates of health and personal character. Being accepted as a student, she finds herself in an atmosphere of home-like friendliness. In the reception-hall, just at the main entrance, hangs the motto, "Christ is the Head of this house; the Unseen Guest at every meal; the Silent Listener to every conversation." And in these words may be found the key-note of the life within those walls. The new student finds herself in a room with some one, probably never known before; but it is an open secret that the principal, Miss Gibson, prays over every name, when arranging the room-mates. Life there is rather strenuous, but hence is only a better training for the more strenuous life found in the active work outside. Each student cares for her own room, and does about an hour's house-work in addition, the work being changed every week. In the first year, the entire

Old Testament is studied, either by lectures, or in the library; in the second year the New Testament is taken up, being studied by aid of such books as the Expositor's, and Cambridge Bibles, various lives of Christ, and of St. Paul, the different commentators, and so forth. These same helps are used in the study of the Old Testament, so far as they apply. The class-room work upon the lesson takes the form not only of recitation, but of exposition by the teacher, and animated debate upon the part of the students,—and sometimes approaches closely to an experience meeting. Every class-room exercise, whether a Bible lesson, church history, methods of work, bookkeeping, or nurse-training, is opened by prayer. The morning is given to recitations. Thursday is "lecture-day," when some expert comes to lecture upon his or her specialty. The afternoons are given to study and exercise. In the evenings, all are studying again, except those who are due at the medical lectures given two or three times a week for the nurse students and junior year Bible students. For the Bible students take the theoretical nurse-training course, and the nurse students have a certain number of hours each week for Bible lessons. Friday afternoon is the time marked for house-to-house visiting. At the appointed hour, all gather in a certain class-room, where Miss Gibson presides at a table covered with papers and leaflets. Each chooses what she thinks she needs for her afternoon's work, and then, after an earnest prayer for the Divine presence and blessing, goes, armed with her Bible and papers, into the part of the city where lies her appointed work, returning in time for the evening meal, and after that, meeting once more with her sisters, to hear and tell the story of the afternoon's work, encouragements, and disappointments.

Then once more to study, and thence to well-earned rest and sleep, to prepare for the coming day, ushered in by the early morning meal, preluded by the morning prayer and praise which is offered to God as the first fruits of the new day to be spent in His service. At the sound of the great Chinese gong, a gift from Miss Laura Haygood, the whole household gathers in the dining-room. The students whose week it is to "serve tables" have laid the Bible before that one whose name comes, in the alphabetical order, for that day. She may be nurse, Bible student, or teacher, but in any case she reads a passage from the Holy Book, and leads the whole family in prayer. Then breakfast, the great dining-room glorified by the light of the morning sun. Then all scatter to their various duties, passing on to the routine of study and work, until the great gong again sounds the call to evening prayers, when all assemble in the chapel. At this hour, a Bible student always leads, still in alphabetical order, and a hymn is sung, in addition to the reading and prayer.

The Training School has its own missionary societies, both foreign and home, the presidents of each being usually candidates for work under their respective Boards. These meet once a month; and a students' prayer-meeting meets once a week. Every evening, directly after supper, there is a prayer-circle, optional, but largely attended, where special requests are brought up, the absent ones remembered, where the presence of the Comforter is sensibly experienced.

The building, a large and handsome one, is always open to visitors, who are guided over it by some student. The chapel, class-rooms, and some offices are to the left, on the first floor; the parlors, museum, library, dining-room, and some other offices toward the right, also on the first floor; the sleeping-rooms occupy the second floor, except where the chapel takes the space, it being two stories in height. The hospital department is on the third floor, with a number of private rooms, and a perfectly appointed operating-room. Of course a pharmacy and diet-kitchen are found on this floor. The fourth, or attic floor, is used for trunk-rooms; and the basement is reserved for the landry and furnaces. The kitchen is in the rear of the dining-room, separated from it by a serving-room.

Would that this institution, the outcome of a thought of God in the hearts of His children, were filled to its utmost capacity, and more than filled, with women seeking better preparation for God's work. Who may dare to offer unbeaten oil for the service of the sanctuary? Who does not long to offer the very best to the Giver of all good? God grant, that those who hear His call to work may also realize that it is a call to prepare to work, and may gladly answer, "Here am I, send me."

Untabulated Results of Mission Work.

BY REV. C. F. REID, D. D.,

Seventeen years a Missionary in China, six years in Korea, and the opener of the Southern Methodist Mission in that country. (Delivered at the Waco Missions Conference May 6th.)

It is a great satisfaction to all lovers of Jesus Christ and ought to encourage every one of his followers to larger efforts to know that the day of small things in missionary enterprise has past away and that we are a part of a vast army now pushing in every direction and advancing lines of the kingdom of God. The satisticians tell us that at the present time the Christian world is giving for its workfor its work in foreign fields an annual sum of $20,000,000. They tell us that the great army of about 80,000 native workers who have themselves been converted from heathenism are now officered and led by more than 15,000 trained foreign workers. They tell us that nearly 4,000,000 converts have been won and that to this vast multitude there is being added at least 100,000 annually. Do we appreciate what these figures mean? What impression would be made could you see a vast audience of 2,000 men and women like that assembled under this tabernacle bowing at one time at God's altar for Christian baptism won from heathenism? And yet this is what and especially if it were a multitude recently actually takes place every Sunday of the year in heathen lands. True they are not gathered under one roof, but are scattered over the entire heathen field, but in reference to God they are as if in one place, and we have a Pentecost reproduced every Sunday of the year. These figures stimulating as they are and full of encouragement and enthusiasm for all Christian workers, are really but a small part of the work being done.

"The kingdom of God cometh not with observation," and while here and there actual converts are being openly made, beneath the surface and out of the sight and appreciation of men and mightiest forces of Christianity are operating. A great spiritual force when once sent forth from the hand of God, though like leaven it often goes unobserved, yet worketh and continueth to work until it has reached the mighty issues for which God sent it forth. For example, we are told that after thirty years of diligent effort in China there were only three actual converts to Christianity. Men said that the effort to convert China was utter folly and refused to give to that purpose, and everywhere throughout the Church there was great discouragement concerning evangelistic work in that country. But this discouragement arose from a misapprehension of what was being done, and of the conditions existing throughout the empire. Men supposed that these chief difficulties of evangelistic work were to be found in the ancient religions of the country which had gradually become woven into the everyday life and customs of the people—the tradition of a great people that had been handed down through four millenniums and the natural conservatism of a people who looked back to the past for its standards of highest excellence, but these were not the chief difficulties the missionary had to encounter. They arose chiefly out of the previous and continued contact of China with western nations.

The chief point of their contact began with an infamous, illicit trade in opium by which 150,000,000 Chinese had become debauched and the country drained of its wealth to secure for India a revenue; a trade fathered first by the East India company and continues as a government monopoly of Christian England; a trade that had more than once to be supported by turning loose the dogs of war upon a defenseless people who by their impotence were compelled to make humiliating treaties by which huge indemnities were exacted and large cessions of territory demanded. Into these concessions are Hong Kong, Shanghai and many other places along the eastern coast of China there poured the riff-raff and moral debris from the Christian countries of the world which found congenial fields for breeding and which made festering places of vice and shame in sections of China controlled by English, American and French municipalities, but were an open disgrace and a blot upon the name of Christianity. Other departments of commerce were opened in a spirit of relentless aggression and absolute indifference and contempt for everything the Chinese held sacred.

These were the gravest diffienlties the missionary had to contend with. His first work was to prove the difference between himself and the other fellow that wore the same clothes, had the same general appearance and spoke the same language. How were the Chinese to tell the difference btween the missionary and the merchant and the sailor and the beach-comber and the opium-smuggler and the sandal-wood trader? The general appearance was the same, and evidences gathered from his conversation were not available to the Chinamen who spoke nothing but his own language. To prove these differences was not an easy matter. It could not be done with words, for words are just as cheap in China as they are in America. It could be done and done only by incarnating Jesus Christ in the lives of the missionaries, who by loving ministry and gentle service must prove the doctrine that he preached.

This process was a long and difficult one, and while men were unable to see any results in immediate conversions noble men and lovely women beyond the observation and appreciation of their fellow-countrymen were laying their lives in a foundation deep and broad upon which they believed that God in His own time would erect a mighty temple and fill it with His glory, and so it was that at the end of the second thirty years there were 10,000 converts, and at the end of the next eight years there were 100,000 converts, and at the end of the next thirty years there will be a million. For when the work was once begun Christ became incarnated not only in the lives of isolated missionaries, but in the lives of natives of the soil who had been won to Him through their efforts.

When one enters a heathen land one of the first impressions made is the small value set on human life, and so in China when missionaries first arrived in the country female infanticide was so common as to produce no remark and scarcely any effort was made to conceal it. But as soon as China began to feel the touch of Jesus Christ, human life began to assume a larger value. Shame began to be felt by those who were in the habit of destroying it in infancy, the practice was more and more disguised or carried on secretly until after a hundred years of Christian work in vast sections of territory it is scarcely to be met with. The baby tower of China is fast disappearing, and where existing, is falling more and more into disuse.

Domestic Missions in the Wilmington District.

One of the greatest problems confronting the Domestic Mission work here is, the "educational." In a number of replies to the inquiry sent out to the men on mission charges in this district as to the greatest difficulty in the way of the advancement of the work, the almost universal answer was ignorance.

The Wilmington District Conference at its last session—as has already been published—took up the matter of an industrial school for the district, and appointed a committee to investigate and report upon the advisability of such a measure at its next session.

This is a step in the right direction and ought by all means to be carried out. But as I see it now the quickest way, and in many cases, the only way, to get these ignorant people interested in education is to carry it to them.

This one, or even two, industrials schools in the large territory of the Wilmington District will fail to do. Why can we not in addition to the industrial school, induce some of our young men of talent, energy, faith and the spirit of self-sacrifice, to go into these rural sections and establish primary, and, if need be, preparatory schools. Our Baptist brethren have, and are doing this. Buie's Creek Academy is a notable example. From what I have heard of that section prior to the beginning of this school, and from what I have seen of other portions of Harnett County, that was about as forlorn a place for a school as most of the rural sections of the Wilmington District. Yet Mr. Campbell went there, and staid; and the outcome is that great school.

A little over two years ago two young men (Baptist), both graduates of Wake Forest College, went into one of the rural sections of Sampson County, far remote from any transportation facilities, and began a school. The prospect for success, to others beside themselves, was not at all flattering; but they had what Sam Jones calls stickability. They teach, preach, work and do whatever comes to hand, and already they are assured of success, with a bright future before them. These men had talent, energy, faith and perseverance; and added to these, they had the spirit of sacrifice, without which none can succeed, or rather without which none will go into these places.

Have we no such young men in the Methodist ranks? Is it possible that all of this kind belong to the Baptist or some other denomination? I cannot believe it. And yet we are behind in this matter, especially in this District.

There are within the bounds of the Wilmington District, the New River Mission, with a territory of about forty by sixty miles, a large portion of which is thickly settled, without school facilities of any kind, except the public school, and that amounts to very little. Then there is the Waccamaw Circuit, which has been a mission charge since 1877, another large scope of territory in about the same condition; and many other places I might mention where a young man of talent, energy, faith and perseverance might go and build up a good school and do a great work for the Master. There are other difficulties in connection with the Domestic Mission work, other problems to solve; but I believe this is the greatest, and when we have solved it, we will have made a forward move in this great work.

Some Facts of Interest to the Friends of Greensboro Female College.

CONTRIBUTED.

A recent visit to the College reveals the fact that the work on the building is progressing in a way to leave no doubt that the announcement of the Trustees that the school will re-open on October 5th, will be carried into effect. The impression is also made that no school for girls in the State will be better adapted and equipped for school purposes than will this elegant new building when completed.

The English Department of the College for the coming year will be in charge of Professor George S. Wills, whose wide experience as a teacher, coupled with his thorough preparation for his work, warrant the authorities of the College in feeling that they offer to the young women of the State unsurpassed advantages in the English department. State University, began his professional career ment. Professor Wills, who is a graduate of the as a teacher at Oak Ridge Institute, from which he returned to the University as one of the instructors in the English department. He afterwards spent two years at Harvard in the study of his specialty, and since that time he has taught for some years in Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md. Professor Wills will be an acquisition to the list of educators in our State, and Greensboro Female College is fortunate in having a man of his standing in his profession in the faculty of the institution.

The new Director of Music, Signor Carlo Mora, comes to the College, with the fall session, with the reputation of a musician of extraordinary ability as a pianist and as a highly successful teacher.

Professor Mora received his musical education in the Royal Conservatory of Music, in Milan, Italy. In addition to this, he has studied with some of the world's most noted musicians, among whom may be named Cavaliere, Matzucato, Luigi Arditi, and Sir Julian Benedict, of London.

Professor Mora is not only a pianist of rare artistic ability, but he is a master of the pipe organ, and a composer whose songs, instrumental pieces, and orchestral arrangements are admired throughout America.

The above facts should convince the friends and patrons of the College that the authorities of the institution are doing everything in their power to furnish their daughters the best of advantages in every department; and they should feel that in entrusting their daughters to Greensboro Female College they are placing them within the range of opportunities unexcelled anywhere in the State. Let the Methodists of the State rally to this grand old institution, and second by their patronage the honest and earnest efforts being made to place it in the fore front of the educational institutions for our girls in the State, and in the South.

Notes from Wilmington.

While we voted two to one for open saloons here in July, some of us are sober and hope to remain so. Our Methodist pastors were, of course, all on the right side. Watson hit the enemy form the pulpit and in the evening paper. Our morning papers made us pay advertising rates if we spoke. The Messenger was especially strong against us. The Evening Dispatch fought hard for us, and we shall ever be grateful.

Ex-Congressman John D. Bellamy fought us hard, and so did Marsden Bellamy, Herbert McClammy, and other attorneys. Ex-Mayor A. M. Waddell made three speeches against us.

So far as I know, every German, Irishman and Jew was solid against us.

Hon. Geo. Rountree stood manfully by us. So did the Sprunts, the big cotton exporters, but the large foreign vote and its influence made us absolutely helpless.

It is already talked that the whiskey people will try to elect Col. Waddell mayor next spring.

No city in the State has a better mayor than we, in the person of W. E. Springer. Our people want him a second term, regardless of how they voted—that is, a majority do, and hope he will make the race next spring.

We hear Ex-Congressman Bellamy mentioned for Governor four years hence. That is a good while off, however. We have a good town and lots of good people here. Some bad ones, of course, and some good people that see things not as we do. Our foreign friends have been taught one way, we another. Don't be too hard on our "City by the Sea."

We appreciate highly the help from Tyre, Broughton, Bailey, Beaman and others.

Yours very truly,

W. B. COOPER.

WithCheerful Heart.

In whatever way the fact may be accounted for, yet it is true that even some genuine Christians indulge in a gloomy view concerning their coming death. They often dread the very thought of their dying. They are in bondage to such a fear.

Several years ago an old Christian woman, who resided in the place where I now do, had a great horror of death, and yet all who knew her well regarded her as being a "most spiritual and strong-minded Christian." And when she came to the hour of her death she manifested a painful dread of her passage from the world. I think that this must be an extreme case. While it is natural to human beings to fear death, yet the true Christian, when he closely approaches the hour of his departure, has the best of reasons for having a cheerful heart, because he has the assurance that God is happily with him, even through the whole passage into the spirit world. Special promises are given to all believers in relation to the hour of their death. Dr. Maclaren, in a sermon says: "Dear friends, if we are living in Christ, the thought of the end, that here we are absent from home, ought to be infinitely sweet, of whatever superficial terrors this poor, shrinking flesh may still be conscious. I am sure that the nearer we get to our Savior, and the more we realize the joyous possession of salvation as already ours, and the more we are conscious of the expanding of that gift in our hearts, the more we shall be delivered from the fear of death which makes men all of their lifetime subject to bondage. So, I beseech you to aim at this, that, when you look forward, the furthest thing you see on the horizon of earth may be that great angel of death coming to save you unto the everlasting kingdom." That is the way to face the future world with a cheerful heart. And why should a Christian be afraid to finally depart for his eternal home in endless glory?

I often heard my Christian father say that he had always feared death, and yet, as the hour of his death drew near, all such fear left him and he was gladly eager to die and enter the heavenly world.

C. H. WETHERBE.

Centenary, New Bern.

According to promise, I send you a few lines giving you some insight into Centenary Church work under Rev. G. T. Adams.

The new life taken on by the church in its every department is gratifying. The congregations at both services, morning and night, have increased most wonderfully. Sunday-school more than doubled, mid-week prayer meetings large increase, and other meetings, such as the Epworth Leagues, are in a healthy condition.

The increased membership about 145. Communion service largest in many years.

First Sunday morning in every month is set apart for the reception of new members.

The pastor urges and practices individual work. He believes in having a continuous revival, and expects souls to be converted at regular services, and he preaches the plain, simple gospel, with ease and unction of the spirit, and finds the people hungry for it.

At the closing of Sunday morning service a few Sundays ago, having preached on "Regeneration," an invitation was given to those who felt an interest in their souls' salvation, and there was quite a good number crowded to the altar.

This is religion in earnest. Souls are being saved, the church revived. The church is asking great things of God and expecting great things from Him.

The new church building is progressing rapidly to completion, the roof is now ready for the slate which is now on its way from one of the New England States. When completed, New Bern will have a church building that she will not be ashamed of. This church was projected and started by Rev. R. F. Bunpas in the third year of his pastorate here.

Truly,

B. G. CREDLE.

A Visit to Philadelphia.

Detained here some days to consult a specialist for an affection of my left eye, which has given me much trouble, I have put in my time in the way that could give me the most pleasure. I was fortunate enough to find room and board at a place that employed colored servants. The colored cook was very much like the one we had at our house some time. I always feel at home when waited on by the kindly negro from the South.

When I was not busy with the doctor, and when it was not raining, I was occupied in first visiting a few parties with whom I had some business, then seeing the interesting places about the great city. I will only have time to mention a few which I saw very hurriedly. I suppose it would be proper to mention first the city hall, which is said to be the largest building in the world devoted exclusively to municipal purposes. It is located at the intersection of Broad and Market streets, both of these streets crossing each other at right angles in the interior. They run under arches, leaving a large court inside the walls. These arches are eighteen feet wide and thirty-six feet high. The tower is ninety feet square at the base, falling off at the upper stages until at the spring of the dome it becomes an octagon fifty feet in diameter. A statue of the founder of Pennsylvania, the great William Penn, thirty-seven feet high, crowns the structure and completes the extraordinary altitude of 547 feet, eleven and one-fourth inches, making it, it is said, the highest tower in the world. The structure, which is as near fire proof as human skill can make it, contains 634 rooms. The tower contains a great clock run by the pneumatic system. Some idea of its magnitude may be obtained from the following: Diameter of dial over the frame, twenty-six feet; inside the frame, twenty-two feet; height, from ground to centre of dial, 361 feet; length of minute hand, ten feet eight inches; length of hour marks thirty-eight inches; total weight of the clock, complete, fifty tons. Enough has been said of this clock for one to infer that it announces the time of day to hundreds of thousands of the fifteen hundreds of thousands of inhabitants of Philadelphia. The city of Philadelphia embraces the whole county in which it is located, and is about thirty miles long and about twenty miles wide.

Among notable places of interest that might be mentioned is Cramp's Ship-yard, Girard College, Baldwin's Locomotive Works, American Academy of Fine Arts, Academy of Natural Sciences, Industrial Art Museum, Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Independence Hall, Franklin's grave, Franklin Institute, Williams Penn's house, Philadelphia Bourse, Washington's monument, Fair Mount Park, which is the largest public park in America, containing fifty miles of drives and one hundred miles of walks. It contains also the Zoological gardens, said to be the largest and finest in America. Independence Square, where the Declaration of Independence was read to the public for the first time, July 8th, 1776.

I had visited Philadelphia a few times, but this was the first opportunity I had had to visit many of the places of interest, among them Fair Mount Park.

Directly after dinner on Sunday I started for John Wanamaker's Sunday-school. It was after the school had been opened that I reached there, and no more visitors were allowed to enter. I stood outside the rope, across the door, and saw the Hon. John Wanamaker go through with the closing exercises, and was very much interested, of course, in seeing a man who is pre-eminently the merchant prince of America, conducting a Sunday-school in a very large building, erected, as I understand, by himself, at his own expense, and conducted by himself, as superintendent, every Sunday evening when he is not compelled to be absent from some good cause. After the closing of the Sunday-school exercises, the great Bible class building was opened. To this, I was admitted to a seat, and had the pleasure of hearing an address to the great Bible class by its great founder. He is not as eloquent as Sam Jones, for instance, but his words are to the point, without any appearance of frivolity or levity. I think he occupied about thirty minutes in explaining the meaning of the Bible lesson of that day.

In the evening I inquired where I could find a Methodist church. I was told the location of one, the way to which led through a section of the city inhabited by Austrians, Hungarians, etc. They were very closely crowded all along the street outside the houses, and many of them were slightly dressed, but they looked happy, and did not need much dressing on this warm Sabbath evening. I found the church, and enjoyed a very nice discourse from a very good-looking young man. I do not remember his text, but the subject of his discourse was the importance of always being in a good humor. He handled it very nicely for a very short while. After he dismissed the congregation, I went up and introduced myself as one of his brethren from the far South, and gave him a vote of thanks for my part of the sermon that night, expressing the hope that the doctrine and practice of it would spread throughout the country. I informed him that I could have listened longer with pleasure. He stated that there was another Methodist church near by, where the services commenced later, and would not be concluded yet, and that I might enjoy the conclusion of the services at that place. It proved to be the Seaman's Bethel, a very large and a very handsome one, erected and endowed, as I learned, by a man—think his name was Fowler—who had made a large fortune by diving. As I entered the church, they were just arranging to commence the administration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. I joined them in this service and enjoyed it very much. After the passing of the bread and wine to each table, one or the other of the two ministers would have a few words to say to the people assembled, dismissing them. Immediately upon the closing of these remarks, a man who was a first-class singer, would commence to sing, and the whole congregation appeared to join him. This reminded me of the manner in which this was done at Old Rainbow church, on the Snow Hill Circuit, when I was a boy, and first commenced to go to church, and where my people had been members for many years, and where my father was a steward and a class leader, and where my uncle, Rev. W. H. Cunninggim, held also the two offices above-stated, and who was also a local preacher, and preached more in Greene County than anyone ever sent there by the Conference, or any man who ever lived, and who was also one of the best farmers in the county, and the father of a large family of children, one of whom was the late J. A. Cunninggim, so well known throughout most of the State as "Uncle Jesse." So I enjoyed this service more than any which I have attended for a long time, because of its reminder so vividly of "Auld Lang Syne." I was pretty well contented with my Sunday's work.

Among other places of note which I visited in Philadelphia, I would add the establishment of my old friends, J. B. Lippincott Co., with whom I used to deal pretty largely many years ago when I was in the book and stationery business. This house has been established one hundred and seventeen years. Of course there have been many changes in that time. I met only two of the men whom I knew in the business when I was a book dealer. One was J. B. Lippincott, Jr., and the other, Thos. B. Bacon, Esq. This is now one of the largest establishment of the kind in the country, and a very large capital is invested in it. To illustrate this, Mr. Bacon informed me that they invested three hundred thousand dollars in one of their publications before receiving a single dollar in return. They have a very large number of publications on their list, and many of them are of great value. They publish Lippincott's Monthly Magazine, a most excellent publication, richly illustrated in the highest style of the art. They richly deserve the large patronage they are receiving.

I visited the mammoth establishment of Hon. John Wanamaker. At a previous visit there, I met in the office a very pleasant gentleman, whose name was H. S. Jones. He seemed very much at home, and very quietly managing and directing a large number of employes in the establishment, which I visited serveral times during my stay in Philadelphia. At each visit there seemed to be many hundreds of people in various parts of the great department store trading. I am indebted to Mr. Jones for the following item in regard to Mr. Wanamaker's life, habits, etc.:

"John Wanamaker was born July 11, 1838, in the southern part of Philadelphia (at that time a rural district); attended public school and worked when out of school in his father's brickyard.

"At the age of fourteen he obtained employment in the wholesale book store of Troutman & Hayes. Sometime afterwards his family moved to Indiana, but returned to Philadelphia in 1856, when he secured employment as errand boy in the retail clothing store of Barclay Lippincott, at $1.50 per week. He subsequently procured a position at a higher salary with Joseph M. Bennett, proprietor of 'Tower Hall' clothing store, then the largest business of the kind in the city. 'John was certainly the most ambitious boy I ever saw,' said Mr. Bennett. 'I used to take him to lunch with me, and he would tell me how he was going to be a great merchant. He was always organizing something. He seemed to be a natural born organizer. This faculty is largely accountable for his great success in after life.'

"In 1858 he went to Minnesota for his health. On his return he became secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association. In April, 1861, he opened a small clothing store, in association with Mr. Nathan Brown, afterward his brother-in-law. The first year's sales amounted to less than $25,000.

"Ten years later this business had developed into what was admitted to be the largest retail clothing establishment in America.

"In October, 1874, Mr. Wanamaker adopted the 'one price,' 'return of money for unsatisfactory goods,' and 'full guarantee' system, which he conscientiously carried forward most successfully.

"Having decided to institute a great general store, Mr. Wanamaker, in 1875, purchased from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company its old freight depot, at Thirteenth and Market Streets; and in March of Centennial year, opened 'a new kind of store,' which now (with the exception of groceries and drugs) comprises almost every kind of merchandise that can be thought of. Since then additional properties on Chestnut street have been purchased, the store covering the entire block from Chestnut to Market streets, and from Thirteenth street to City Hall Square. A great improvement is now progressing, namely, the erection of a twelve-story steel building on the present site; the northwestern section (125 x 270 feet) of the old structure having been removed to make room for the new steel columns now being placed, and it is expected that the new store will be completed within four years."

Mr. Wanamaker's letter heads read: "John Wanamaker, City Hall Square, Philadelphia; New York, Broadway, 4th Avenue, 9th and 10th streets; Paris, 44 Rue des Petites Ecuries." I have for a long time been an admirer of John Wanamaker. I believe, taken all in all, he is one of the greatest and best men in the country.

My friend, Mr. Jones, gave me the name of the party in charge of the North American building, which is not far from the store of Mr. Wanamaker. I took the card over, but the gentleman was out, and Mr. A. L. Grass received me in his place. He gave me permission to visit the top of the building, which is a paved court at the top of the twenty-second story. Then he showed me each room filled with machinery of the most [illegible] "Philadelphia North American." This building was erected to accommodate this paper by the son of John Wanamaker. At that time this was the highest building in Philadelphia. Since then a building near by has been carried up three stories higher. It is claimed that the North American is the greatest American daily newspaper. At any rate, it can claim as its home the tallest house of any other. Mr. Grass was very courteous to me, and I wish to express my thanks for his courtesies. I predict for him a high place in Philadelphia journalism before he is very old, as now he is quite young.—

Our Boys and Girls

A Few Pages from My Life.

AS TRANSLATED BY ELLIS WILSON.

I was so very small when I was a puppy that I was given a name big enough to make the name and myself together a good average. "John Alexander." I was christened, and "John Alexander" I have remained ever since.

My mother had a very flighty disposition, cared nothing at all for her family, and objected to our receiving any attention from people. She wanted all of that herself. Her dislike for her five rollicking puppies became so great that the family we lived with thought it would be best, for our own safety, to give us away, so we went, one by one, into other homes.

There was a regular blizzard on the day I departed, but I was tucked snugly into a flannel-lined basket, with a hot-water bag, and reached my "home-to-be" in fine condition. Immediately upon emerging from my basket before a cheerful grate fire, I realized that I was a lucky dog indeed, and only hoped that my brothers and sisters would fare as well as I. There were no children about, but at that time I had no knowledge of the world, so did not know what jolly playmates boys and girls are, and, therefore, did not miss them.

After greeting my new owners affectionately, I found an empty spool and was having a fine time with it on the hearth rug, when a strange creature bounded into the room and up to me.

"O! Pussy, Pussy!" cried my new mistress.

"Hester! Hester!" exclaimed my master, but before either of them could stop her, the cat (I learned the next day what she was), had turned me over with her paws and was gently licking my face with her tongue in the most soothing manner. I snuggled close up to her fur, and it did feel good against my bare skin. I am a Mexican dog, you see, and have no hair of my own. Hester purred out, "O, you cunning little thing!" and I knew right away she would take good care of me.

Although Hster was very much grown up, she was always willing to have a romp with me, and when I was tired of playing, there was no cosier place for a nap than against her warm, furry side.

I did not romp and play all the time, for I soon learned that I had duties to perform. My bed was in the basement on one side of the furnace and I had to be up every morning bright and early to meet my master at the head of the stairs when he came down to fix the fire. He must have been very glad to have my company, for it was so dark until he lighted the gas that he must have been afraid. Anyway, he always looked very cheerful the minute he set eyes on me and said, "Top o' the morning to you, John Alexander," at which I would jump about and most trip him down stairs.

It was my intention to train myself for a fine watch-dog in return for the good care I got, but things do not always turn out as you plan.

Hester was a little lazy and I generally went over to her box, which was under the basement stairs, to say good morning to her before I went to meet my master. One morning I went as usual and was surprised to hear a funny little whimpering sound, and then suddenly Hester sprang on me in a terrible rage and gave me the first whipping I had ever received. As soon as I could get away from her, I made off as fast as I could, greatly dismayed at the change in her nature. Then I noticed my master sitting at the bottom of the stairs laughing like everything. He picked me up and tried to comfort me and then took me over to Hester's box. To my amazement, there with big Hester were five copies of her.

"Me-o-w! Spitzzz!" said Hester, spitefully, and I understood that my company was not welcome. My master laughed harder than ever, and said:

"Your nose is broken now, John Alexander. Hester is giving you to understand she has no use for you, now that she has five kittens to lavish her affections upon."

I made up my mind then and there that I would never go near Hester and her family, but notwithstanding that, life became very hard to bear from that day forward. I was supposed to spend my time in the basement, chiefly, for it was yet too cold to play out of doors, and that is where the trouble came. Twice a day, without fail, Hester would find me out, even if I had hidden in the darkest corner, and whip me unmercifully, and there was nothing for me to do but to stand it, for I could not bark for help, because I never could learn how to bark, cannot even do it now, and my squeals were not loud enough to be heard upstairs. For a few days my master and mistress could not understand why I was getting so scratched and bitten, but they watched and soon found out that Hester was whipping me twice a day.

"John Alexander is a very mild fellow now, but Hester wants him to understand that he's got to stay that way. She's going to kill any spirit that might be in him ready to crop out at any moment."

Well, I came to look like a veteran on the Russian side of the present war, and my owners decided that the only thing to do to save my life was to send me away. They could not send Hester away, because cats always come back, you know. So I was packed up, bag and baggage, and brought here to my present home, and I certainly am happy here.

There are lots of children here and the biggest yard, where we romp and play all day long,—that is, when I am not busy keeping intruders out of the yard. There, now! Please excuse me, I must chase those chickens off the lawn.

CANCER CURED WITHOUT DISFIGUREMENT.

January 14, 1904.

Dr. D. M. Bye Co., Dallas, Texas.

Gentlemen:—I wish to express my lasting gratitude to you for making a cure of the Cancer on my face. I began treatment on June 15, 1903, and by August 1, it was out and had filled nearly level with the sound flesh. It then shortly healed over and has never given me a moment's trouble since. I know that it is well and can heartily recommend the Dr. D. M. Bye Combination Oil Cure to any one suffering from Cancer as I did.

May God bless you in your work, is the sincere wish of your friend.

The Associate Secretary of the Board.

Prominent in the report of the Committee on Extension of Work made at the Twenty-sixth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions were the following suggestions:

1. That another Secretary be appointed to assist in the General Office in Nashville, Tenn., to travel in the interest of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions in our foreign fields, as circumstances may make advisable, and, with the Corresponding Secretary, visit as many annual meetings of the Conference Societies as possible, as well as district meetings and auxiliaries; strengthening the work as well as organizing and reviving.

2. That said Secretary have her headquarters in Nashville, have salary and expenses of travel allowed from the contingent fund.

3. That said Secretary assume the duties of the office September 1st, when Mrs. Hargrove's itinerary is over and her salary begin when Mrs. Hargrove's ends. The creation of this office was highly approved by all the members of the Board and cannot fail to make an era in the forward work.

For this important office Mrs. J. B. Cobb, of Macon, Ga., was chosen. Mrs. Cobb is a lady of culture and consecration to the mission work since its organization. That she is progressive, her work in her own Conference Society testifies. In her new office she will undoubtedly open to the Board greater possibilities of advancement in the home as well as in the foreign fields.

"We rejoice that this action was so prompt and unanimous, and that Mrs. Cobb has been led into conditions which harmonize so well with the necessities of this work."

A Good Book.

Among the books recently issued by the Methodist Publishing House is, The Life and Letters of Laura Askew Haygood. This book is one which should be in the hands of every auxiliary and a small contribution from each member would secure a copy. "What missionary have we had since our organization more beloved, more valuable than Miss Haygood? She truly laid down her life for Christ. With twenty-five engravings, with fine literary work, done by Dr. O. E. Brown and wife, who were well prepared to devote time and thought to one so much beloved, the book needs no indorsement to insure ready sale. After meeting the expense of publication. Dr. Brown and wife, who gave the literary work to our Board devote the rest of the fund from the sale to the Laura Haygood Memorial." Orders for the book to Smith and Lamar, Agents, Methodist Publish House, Nashville, Tenn., will receive prompt attention. Price, $1.50 cash.

Among the Indians.

In reading the reports from the foreign fields, made at the Twenty-sixth Annual Meeting we note the appeal for more work among the Indians of this country. After giving some of the needs and difficulties of the school at Anadarko in Oklahoma Territory, Rev. J. J. Methion adds: "I do not believe the church sees and appreciates its opportunity and obligation to the Indians. Of all people, we are most responsible for these. If the gospel through our ministry as a church and our work as a society cannot save the Indians at our doors and in our midst, it seems like a grim joke and a waste of means to offer it through the same channel to the Chinamen and Japanese across the water so far away. To meet here our obligations this work needs strengthening."

This suggests to us some figures we saw recently in regard to progress among the Indians:

The latest statistics give the Indian population of the United States exclusive of Alaska, as 260,250. Of these the number of Indians who are church members (communicants) is, according to partial reports, estimated at 31,000, about 12 per cent! Exclusive of the five civilized tribes 98,199 Indians wear citizens dress, and 32,846 in part, 46,044 can read, while the number who can use English for ordinary purposes is 57,975. There are enrolled at the various schools 28,610 Indian children. These figures are interesting as showing some progress, at least.

Auxiliary Corresponding Secretaries.

Let me remind you that we are now at the end of the second quarter. I trust full and encouraging reports will be in the hands of our Conference Corresponding Secretary before the 10th of September. She asked me to call attention to the importance of prompt and accurate ones, and I believe everyone of you will be glad both to help the work and cheer our faithful sister.

Auxiliary Treasurers.

Please redouble your efforts and strive to bring up the collections in full for this quarter. It must be confessed with mortification that sometimes there is difficulty in collecting dues in the summer months. While we rest and recreate, shall we forget our great cause? I hope those in arrears at home will pay in full at once, and those away will forward entire amounts to their respective Treasurers, and so enable them to send large and correct reports to our Conference Treasurer, thus rejoicing her heart and the hearts of all who love the work.

Auxiliary Third Vice President.

I am sure you desire your next reports to be the best we have yet had, and so stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance now. You know the great good that has been accomplished by the children's many mites, and I earnestly trust no little innocent will be overlooked in your efforts for the Baby Roll and the Florine McEachern Mite Box Brigade. "And a little child shall lead them."

Auxiliary Press Superintendents.

Have you and I done our best, dear sisters? I believe we have tried, and am glad there is still a little more time for us in this second quarter, and I beg everyone who has not already sent me a full report to please do so at once. It is important for me to know every Auxiliary that uses the Bulletin in the regular monthly meetings. I am keenly disappointed whenever I am compelled to leave out a name in my list for Mrs. Cook, our fine Board Superintendent of this Department. I also desire to be told of every article that has been published in any paper for the advancement of Home Missions. Let me gratefully thank those who have kindly helped me; they have been a tower of strength and a sweet dependence.

I cannot believe we would underrate the high dignity of our position, or fail to realize its great usefulness. Let us continually recall this favorite quotation. "Without information there can be no interest, without interest there can be no prayer, without prayer there can be no victory."

Future Ambassadors for Christ.

Mr. Shiramuza, a Japanese Christian of our Alameda School, expects to enter the Sue Bennett School very soon, his expenses to be paid by a generous Home Mission woman.

Mr. Murnaka, of our San Francisco School, has arranged to enter Central College at Fayette, Missouri. Both of these gentlemen were converted through the influence of our schools, and both expect to go back to Japan as missionaries. How dear it is that Home Mission workers may have a part in evangelizing the whole world! And is it not, also a happy and blessed thought?

A Correction.

In the minutes of the annual meeting there is a misplaced credit on Durham District. This amount of dues, credited Main Street, belongs to Carr Church, and should read

Carr Church—
Dues $11.55
Baby Roll 3.00
Brevard 11.57
Main Street—
Brevard $63.85

Main Street Auxilary was organized during first quarter of present fiscal year, and no dues had been reported.

MRS. S. I. HARRELL.

Mt. Tabor Auxiliary.

We welcome with glad congratulations this new Auxiliary, having valued letters from Miss Emma Rhew, of the interest in missions at Mt. Tabor. It is a great pleasure to tell that the faithful pastor was largely instrumental in its organization. May the Auxiliary prove a great blessing to his church and to the community.

Let me introduce the officers:
President, Mrs. J. W. Umstead.
Vice-President, Miss Annie Mangum.
Secretary, Mrs. Claud Umstead.
Treasurer, Miss Nannie Umstead.

In time there will, doubtless, be other officers added; meanwhile these will zealously and gladly look after every department.

Editorial

THE SOFT ANSWER.

A contributor to a popular magazine of recent issue remarked that the day of bitter controversies was past. Indeed, to one who is at all acquainted with the record of the battles of the saints, the quiet of the present time is like the calm that follows the shrieking tempest. And yet, once in a while someone says something that provokes a reply from someone else, and the result is not always the most pleasing. Defenders of what is held to be religious truth are perhaps always little self-righteous; which is to be explained, and, perhaps, to a degree excused, on the ground that one is inspired with a sort of righteous indignation against any who would dare to assail his position in religious matters. Let that be as it may, I think that every one will agree that, in the defence of any position, and particularly in a matter of religion, there is no place for the harsh word that carries with it the power to wound the weak conscience.

"A soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger." Now what makes a word grievous? The ill-concealed assumption of superiority, first of all. Whether the tones are gentle or not, the one who shows that he holds his questioner in low contempt utters the grievous word. The use of sarcasm also deprives human speech of the quality of softness. Sarcasm is a weapon that any man may handle; but the one that can employ it to a purpose is not often seen. Most men should let it alone, therefore. Then there is the attempt, too frequently made, to cast down and humiliate an antagonist by bringing against him "railing accusations." Of all the methods employed in controversy, this is the least dignified, the most destable.

Let the man who is called upon to reply to a question sincerely put ask himself what is to be his purpose in giving an answer. Is he going to try to correct an error in the questioner's mind and win him to his own point of view? or is he going to try to drive the questioner farther from him? If the first alternative be selected, there will be no grievous word in the reply; if the second, why, of course, the respondent will make his fancied superiority quite as formidable as possible, he will sharpen his blade of sarcasm on both edges, and he will vigorously assault the inquirer with various heated affirmations, the majority of which are most often false judgments which we are commanded most explicitly to abhor.

Now at first blush, perhaps every respondent would deny that he ever intended to drive his questioner from him. But let him frankly reread his reply and determine for himself whether it is full of that charity that "heareth all things," "endureth all things," "hopeth all things?"

THE STATESBORO AFFAIR.

The Statesboro lynching has given rise, as was natural to expect, to all kinds of criticism, good, bad and indifferent. It is not strange either that, in certain quarters, there has been exhibited a spirit of unfairness in the judgments pronounced. And it seems that this unfairness has been taken a good deal to heart by many Southern people. Certainly it is offensive to have a whole section blamed for what a few fellows of the baser sort accomplish in the way of devilry. But who is it that thus blames an entire community, the best citizens equally with the worst, when a tragedy like that at Statesboro is enacted? It is safe to venture the reply that the magazines and papers at the North that represent the best public opinion are not the ones that sweep the whole South with scathing criticism upon the slightest provocation. It is preposterous to believe that the "best citizens" in any particular section would include the "best citizens" of any other section in a wholesale denunciation of a crime. Here is a case in point to support this statement:

An editorial in the last number of the Outlook, August 27th, on the Statesboro affair, begins with these words: "Statesboro, Georgia, furnished last week examples of the best and the worst in public sentiment." Then follows a history of the events that led up to the lynching, in the beginning of which the highest praise is bestowed upon the element represented by Rev. H. A. Hodges and Judge Daly. In speaking of the mob that finally triumphed in the unspeakable cruelty, the Outlook declares: "We do not believe that the people who composed that mob were made up of the 'best people' of the community." And here is the closing paragraph:

"Horrible as the outcome was, the evil that the mob did can in no respect deprive those who did their duty in court and on guard from one particle of merit. And if other communities will learn from this incident that those who obey the law are honored in this land, the Rev. Mr. Hodges and Judge Daly will not have faced the mob in vain. The real victory may yet be won for law and order."

But what is to be said in answer to the abuse that is heaped upon the South without discrimination? Nothing at all. Consider the source, and let it go. A plain statement of the facts in the case will help those who care to form a correct judgment in the matter. An appeal, or a command, to others to cease from their unjust incriminations will serve no other purpose than to invite additional unpleasant remarks. It is on the same principle that a cruel uncouth boy delights all the more to torture a victim when the victim protests against the harsh treatment. I believe that we can make ill-informed and uncouth editors ashamed of their foolish utterances better by ignoring their opinions than by showing resentment toward them.

THE LAST JUDGMENT.

Preachers have long since ceased to alarm people by presenting to them terrible descriptions of the last judgment. This fact, instead of saddening us, ought to give us a brighter view of the future. When people refuse to be frightened by fanciful descriptions of possible future disaster, it is a good time to appeal to their interest in the things that fill up this big NOW in which we live.

"The world and life are too big a thing to be taken as a dream." Thus chanted Browning. We are just beginning to seize, with feeble grasp, the significence of the poet's song. We have too long looked upon life as a sort of troubled dream, out of which we expected to be aroused to the first great reality, which we call Judgment Day; but the movement of human life, the march of actual hard events, the uncertainty in regard to a future life at all, have awakened us to an appreciation of the present as in itself a reality.

It is remarkable that the only two representations of the final judgment given by Jesus Christ gather their significence entirely from the simplest affairs of the average life. In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, no cause is assigned for the painful plight of Dives, save that he failed to establish a vital, personal relationship with the beggar Lazarus. In the description of the second coming of Christ given by Matthew, the ground upon which many are rejected is declared to be that they did not give food to the hungry, water to the thirsty, clothes to the naked; they did not visit the sick and those that were in prison. Closely corresponding to the language of this calm but convincing condemnation is the plain and simple statement by St. James, that "pure and undefiled religion" consists, first of all, in visiting "the fatherless and the widows in their affliction."

If you, who read these lines, were called to stand before the Master to-day, what, think you, would be the questions put to you? How jealously you defended the faith? How faithfully you guarded personal purity and family honor? How eloquently you spoke of Jesus and his love? Nay, none of these things would be required of you. The test applied to Dives, and to the multitudes in the picture of the last day would be, without fail, applied to you.

Dives, when he was on earth, received his good things and Lazarus his evil things. It was because Dives never thought it was worth while to share his good things with Lazarus, that he was sent to hell. You, reader, have your good things to-day. Do you seek to share them with those who have no good things, or do you, with the pagan selfishness of Cain, excuse yourself by asking, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

There is a little house within reach of many who read this page, where an unfortunate family lives in poverty of rags, mean food, and filthy surroundings. There is a sick one there, lying upon a bed whose covering is yellow with soil and stain, in a room whose floor is foul with the accumulated dust and refuse of many days, with only an unskilled and decrepit companion for an attendant and a weak child for a support. Attracted by the unwholesome surroundings, a plague or flies torments the sufferer all day long, taking away the possibility of repose. Is it strange that in the night watches, a pest even more terrible, keeps sleep and rest at bay? Where are your good things? Why are you not offering them to these children of God? Clean linen you might bring for the bed, and a clean garment for the sufferer; you might superintend the cleansing of the room. You might brighten the dull, never-changing prospect with a handful of fresh flowers, whose fragrance would be such a relief from the foul ordor of the sick room. You might spend an hour some afternoon keeping the flies away from the sensitive flesh of the stricken one. You might prepare a delicacy that would be the beginning of new life for the frame emaciated by long deprivation of proper food. You say, "If such a case were within my reach, I would make the cause of the sufferer my own." I bid you, in God's name, to go out across the street, around the corner, into the next ward, almost anywhere, and you will find victims of man's sinfulness and your neglect. The case I have described is typical of scores like unto it.

Our Boards of Charities, our visiting committees, our Rescue Circles, are damning us because they are dulling our sense of personal responsibility for the suffering and misery of our brothers. Priests, as well as people, are most profoundly indifferent to such conditions as are indicated above. The preacher who thinks that his greatest service to his people consists of his work in the pulpit needs to hide these words of Christ's in his heart: "Happy are ye if ye know these things and do them." Let us not forget that upon our conduct toward the weak and the infirm, will be based the final word that the Master will speak to us on that last day. Shall it be, "Welcome, ye blessed of my Father," or "Depart, ye workers of iniquity?"

THE SIMPLE LIFE.

The powers that be in the social world have decreed that the simple life is good-form. The splendor and luxury of the wealthy class has increased by leaps and bounds, surpassing the wildest dreams of Lucullus, until the pendulum seemingly can swing no farther without disruption. The return to sanity will bring a sigh of relief to those who noted the frantic efforts of the inner circle to make it impossible for the "lower classes" to imitate them. Many worthy persons allow these things to trouble them, forgetting that the wild extravaganees and asinine performances belong only to a very small class who absolutely have no part in shaping the destiny of this country except involuntarily. Aping the rich has been the downfall and disgrace of thousands, and many happy homes have become infernos. Envious of wealth and angered beyond endurance by the flaunting of riches often obtained by their oppression, many laboring men have fomented strife between labor and capital. Let the simple life propaganda have full sway and encouragement, and many social and civic ills will lose much of their evil.

Methodist Mention

State.

Dr. R. H. Whitaker conducted a series of meetings at Pleasant Grove on his circuit last week.

Rev. R. C. Craven, of Tarboro, and Rev. J. H. Buffaloe, of Elm City, held a meeting at McKendree's church last week.

Rev. E. M. Hoyle, of the Durham City Mission, has just closed a successful meeting at Warren's Chapel. Several souls were added to the church.

Mr. James Southgate, who left home sometime ago on account of the bad state of his health, writes from the Catskill mountains that he is greatly improved.

Rev. Dr. Moore, of the Raleigh District, called at the office Saturday morning. The Doctor is looking well, and appears not to be tiring a bit as the Conference year draws to a close.

Old Tucker's Grove church, which used to be on the Brooklyn and Macedonia mission, and is now connected with Epworth church, is being overhauled from the roof to the foundations.

Miss Addria Chreitzberg, a daughter of Rev. H. F. Chreitzberg, of the Western North Carolina Conference, was married to Mr. Lawrence Le Gare Hardin in Winston-Salem last Thursday afternoon.

An interesting camp-meeting is reported to be in progress at Hicky Grove Methodist Church, W. N. C. Conference. The pastor, Rev. W. L. Nicholson, is being assisted by Rev. Walter Halcomb.

Rev. M. L. Hooper, a local preacher from Charlotte, was a visitor to the Advocate headquarters last Saturday. On Sunday evening he preached a good Gospel sermon to a splendid congregation at Epworth church.

Mr. Washintgon Duke, who was quite ill a week or so ago, and upon his recovery went to Chase City for his health, has returned home. He was benefited by his stay in Chase City and is now getting along very well.

On Wednesday evening, August 24th, in the Methodist church at Smithfield, Miss Mabel Coletrane, daughter of Rev. N. E. Coletrane, was married to Mr. R. A. Merritt, superintendent of the Turlington Graded School.

It is announced that returns in Person County indicate that Hon. J. A. Long will be the Senator from that district in the next Legislature. The Advocate extends warmest congratulations to the county and to the Senator-elect.

Immediately upon the dedication of the new Methodist church at Bessemer City, a series of meetings was begun. Last Sunday morning Dr. Kilgo preached the dedicatory sermon and at the evening service Rev. Plato T. Durham occupied the pulpit. The new building cost $10,000.

Rev. R. F. Taylor sends in two new subscriptions and adds some interesting information about his work. He says: "I closed a very successful meeting last night at Central Cross Church, on this circuit, with eighteen accessions and twenty-three professions. I was assisted by Rev. J. T. Stanford, of Rich Square. I have succeeded in doubling our membership there this year. To God be all the praise."

Rev. L. S. Etheridge writes from Pamlico Circuit: "We protracted our services from the 3rd Quarterly Conference. Dr. Swindell remained with us and preached instructive and edifying sermons. The meeting was a blessing to the church. No accessions. The people about this church (Broad Creek) are members of some church. We are engaged in a meeting at Stonewall. Brother Becton is with us. He is a man much liked by this people. We are praying for success."

A good report from Millbrook Circuit was brought in Monday morning by the pastor, Rev. G. R. Rood. The revival fires that have been burning at other places on the charge have broken out anew at Millbrook, and the pot is beginning to boil vigorously. Rev. N. L. Seabolt has rendered some assistance in the meeting. There have already been six accessions to the church, and the interest is steadily growing.

Rev. B. C. Allred sends the following report from the good old Warren Circuit: "We have had good meetings at Cokesbury, Shady Grove and Bethlehem. Between thirty and forty were converted and thirty-three were added to the church. Some others will join. Rev. W. W. Rose did the preaching at Cokesbury, Rev. C. W. Robinson at Shady Grove and Rev. J. M. Daniel, a local preacher of this circuit, at Bethlehem. All did faithful work and the Lord blessed their efforts. Four other meetings to hold. Pray for us.'

Connectional.

Bishop Wilson, acting on the advice of his physicians, has gone North for his health.

Rev. W. R. Peebles, Presiding Elder of the Fayetteville District, Tennessee Conference, died August 5th.

Rev. J. M. Shafner, pastor at Brewton, Ala., is endeavoring to establish an industrial school for girls near Brewton.

Dr. S. C. Rankin, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, went as a delegate to the Texas State Convention recently.

Bishop Candler was at Wesley Grove through nearly the entire encampment, and preached repeatedly with power and effect.

Mr. Sang Owaga, a Japanese ministerial student of Randolph-Macon College, lies ill in Dixie Hospital, Hampton, with typhoid fever.

Rev. Jno. W. Cline and wife, who went out from the Little Rock, Ark., Conference to China seven years ago, are enjoying a rest in their native land.

The Magazine number of the Epworth Era for August, is before us. The cover design is the same that is used every month. The front space on the inside of the cover contains an announcement of the Reading Course for 1904-5, with a most liberal offer to new subscribers in clubs of ten of one full set of the Reading Course in paper covers, all for $7.50. The editor also gives a bold challenge to Leaguers and pastors to do "half what they ought to do" for the Era, and he will give to the church a "great weekly of thirty-two to forty-eight embellished pages."

If the present number may be taken for an earnest of what we might expect, surely there is every reason why the Leaguers and pastors ought to hasten to accept Dr. DuBose's challenge. The first article is one of the "Unpublished Stories of the Kentucky Pioneers," by A. M. Barnes. It describes in vivid language an attack made by Indians on a party of pioneers on the Monongahela River. The Editor contributes an instructive and very readable article on "Two New States in the Old World," having reference to Tibet in Asia and the Congo Free State in Africa. Two other contributions of general interest are "Echoes from the Land of Syria," by Rev. P. L. Stanton, and "In the Woods of Tennessee," anonymous. The remaining pages of the Era are filled up with matter that is peculiarly adapted to the needs of the Leaguers.

If coming events cast their shadows before them, then the Southern Methodist Church is soon to have the very best League organ in the country.

Dr. Dean Richmond Babbitt, of Brooklyn, uses the occasion of the lynching at Statesboro, Ga., to say some alarming things about the growth of the mob spirit in America. "In the shameful cowardice of the Georgia militia, where American soldiers were disarmed by a mob," he sees a prophecy that "the next step will be to invite the judge from the bench," and install Judge Lynch permanently.

General Notes

Dr. Frances E. Clark has made four round-the-world trips in behalf of the Christian Endeavor movement.

Bishop Vincent will deliver four addresses to the students of the De Pawo University at the opening of the school year.

Rev. R. J. Bateman, pastor of Fayetteville Street Baptist Church, Raleigh, has resigned his pastorate there to take charge of the church in Mount Olive.

The nineteenth annual convention of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod convened in the Macedonia Evangelical Lutheran Church in Burlington Friday afternoon, August 26th. A large number of delegates was present.

Raleigh had as visiting preachers on Sunday two eminent Baptist divines. These were Rev. John E. White, well known throughout North Carolina, a native of this county, now pastor of the Second Baptist Church of Atlanta, who preached at the Tabernacle Baptist Church, and Rev. M. V. McDuffy, of Baltimore, who preached at the First Baptist Church. Both preachers were heard by large congregations, and their sermons were strong and forcible ones.—News and Observer.

A GRACEFUL TRIBUTE TO DEAN MORDECAI

(From the Pen of R. L. Gray in News and Observer.)

The dean of the new Trinity College Law School has been found in S. F. Mordecai, Esq., of Raleigh, a lawyer of long practice whose equal in scholarship, in legal technique and in familiarity with the basic principles of the Common Law and Equity can scarcely be found either within or without the State of North Carolina.

That the selection was a most happy one in every respect every lawyer in the State and every person, regardlesss of profession, who has come into social or business contact with Mr. Mordecai, will be ready to concede. In addition to preeminent ability as a lawyer, the new dean possesses in addition the judicial temperament to a marked degree. His carefully prepared cases have always gone down to the tap root of the quetsion at issue, and in discussion and argument he is as thoughtful and thorough as a sage and as clear in exposition as an epigramatist. For years he has been sought by his fellow members of the profession and by the judiciary as a thorough and careful adviser, and his standing as an upright and learned jurist has always been at the top of the list.

When, in addition, it may be truly said that personally Mr. Mordecai is a quaintly humorous philosopher, a warm and true friend and a man devoid of chicane or hypocrisy, who is possessed of a broad-hearted Catholic sympathy, it will be seen that Trinity is indeed to be congratulated on the selection made.

For four years Mr. Mordecai has been a professor in the School of Law at Wake Forest, devoting several days of the week only to the work. In this way he has come into an intimate knowledge of the practical problems of legal instruction which makes him even more valuable than he would otherwise be. He is one who appeals strongly to the ideas and ambitions of young men and who rapidly gains their affections. For the position he has been called on to fill he is uniquely fitted.

The above may seem to savor of fulsome praise to some who do not know "Sam" Mordecai; to those who do know him, it will seem to be but an inadequate appreciation.

It is understood that Trinity's new department is built on broad lines, is to be handsomely equipped and its plans contemplate one of the foremost law schools of the South. In that event, Mr. Mordecai is the man for its head.

NORTH CAROLINA EPWORTH LEAGUE
DEVOTIONAL CHARITABLE CONFERENCE LITERARY EVANGELICAL
EDITED BY REV. H. B. ANDERSON.

Day is Breaking.

In a recent issue of the Advocate we complained that though the League columns were being read the Leaguers were not acting upon the suggestions offered. In the same issue of the paper appeared an article from the pen of Dr. Ivey, for which I wish sincerely to thank him, and immediately followed communications from two Chapters. We look upon these as the roseate fingers of dawn that precede the breaking of the day.

It has been, and still is, our desire to make these columns a clearance house of League interest in the North Carolina Conference; a bond of union between the chapters.

When this end is attained then new Chapters will follow in rapid succession, general interest in League work will increase, and Chapter work will be intensified.

We have labored with the notion that he is the greatest success who does not the work of ten, but arouses ten to action.

Brother Secretary, you will find that the members of your Chapter will be interested in what you say of your own work, and then they will become interested in what others are doing. A friendly competition will be aroused at first which will sooner or later be followed by a lively interest in the work itself.

If you are at all sceptical as to the truth of the foregoing statements put them to the test. Send all items of League interest to the editor of these columns at Goldsboro, N. C.

What Others are Doing.

From time to time in our "notes" we have called attention to some special work the Chapters of other Conferences are doing.

The League idea is growing. Not only are the Leagues of other Conferences alive to their Chapter work, but as Conferences they are uniting on some special work. And this does not satisfy their ambition (?) they are over leaping Conference bounds in assembly work. Three or more Conferences center upon a suitable location and erect an assembly building in which they purpose annually to hold meetings upon the basis of the missionary meeting to be held in Asheville next year.

The time has perhaps not come for North Carolina Leagues to undertake an alliance with other Conferences in assembly work, but they should most gladly take the first step in that direction by a hearty co-operation in the support of a League missionary. A few stalks of cotton in the corner of the garden would produce the required amount. A few hours of work at odd times would secure it, or the Chapter might vote to contribute twenty-seven cents from their treasury for this purpose.

We have already cited the fact that several League Conferences had made taken some special work. Now the North Texas Conference at Gainsville the last week in July pledged $1,000 for the erection of a League Chapel for the Settlement Home at Dallas.

There are few Conferences in our Southern connection that are doing nothing as a Conference toward the furtherance of the cause of Christ. That is as it should be. It is an evidence of growth. Are we not strong enough not only to stand alone but also to help others?

Closing of the Postoffice on Sunday.

If you wish your local postoffice closed on the Sabbath it may be done by a petition of a majority of those receiving mail at your office. The Postmaster-General has authority, under existing law to close it.

Write out the following form, secure a majority of signatures of those who regularly receive mail at your office and send it to the Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C., or Edward Thomson, LL.D., Hall Congress, Exposition Grounds, St. Louis, Mo., and in thirty days your office will be closed on Sunday.

FORM OF PETITION.

We the undersigned, the majority of the persons now getting mail regularly at ....., county of ..... and State of ..... do most earnestly petition his Excellency, the Postmaster General of the United States, to suspend all Sunday work in connection with our post-office named above, in consideration of the rights of conscience and the right to one day's weekly rest of government employes and the public.

After this petition has been signed there must accompany the paper a statement from your postmaster as follows:

To Whom It May Concern:

By request I have examined the attached petition and find that it embraces the majority of those persons who now get mail regularly at this office.

Signed, ...
Postmaster at ....., State of....

Notes.

Five new Chapters have been organized since January, but the Era reports only three charters as having been issued to North Carolina Conference. Are the two other Chapters still without charters?

* * *

As you organize Chapters, brethren, kindly send me the names of your officers, and write the central office at Nashville, Tenn., for charter and literature. Also send a list of subscribers for the Era.

ESCAPED AN AWFUL FATE.

Mr. H. Haggins, of Melbourne, Fla., writes: "My doctor told me I had Consumption and nothing could be done for me. I was given up to die. The offer of a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, induced me to try it. Results were startling. I am now on the road to recovery and owe all to Dr. King's New Discovery. It surely saved my life." This great cure is guaranteed for all throat and lung diseases by all druggists. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

Sunday School

Lesson for September 4, 1904.

Elijah at Horeb.

(1 Kings 19:9-18. Memory verses 15-18.)

Golden Text: Fear thou not, for I am with thee. (Isa. 41:10.)

Time.—Forty days later than the events of the last lesson. Say 909 B. C. biblical, or 858 B. C. Assyrian.

Place.—A cave in Mount Horeb, the mountain where Moses gave the law, situated in the granitic region of the Sinaitic peninsula. The region is characterized by tremendous masses of rock, with wonderful color effects.

Persons.—Jehovah and Elijah, with mention of Hazael, Jehu, Elisha. See the notes which follow.

Alone in the wilderness, with his load of responsibility lightened, Elijah has been measurably restored to himself by rest and food and divine ministrations. But he is still in need of solitude and rest and communion with God. He visits a locality celebrated for its sacred associations, and especially for the wonderful manifestations of himself which Deity has there made.

What doest thou here, Elijah? (V. 9.) What could have been more startling than this sudden inquiry? It brings a fellow up standing to be asked that question, even when he is doing his best. But how many hours there are in most lives when an honest answer would bring a blush of shame to the cheek, or a throb of terror to the heart. What are you doing here? Grumbling, loafing, cheating, abusing your privileges, losing your opportunities, bringing your parents' gray hairs in sorrow down to the grave? What are you doing here? This is no place to be idle. You were sent into the world to accomplish something. Wherever you are in the world, there ought to be something doing. What are you doing? It makes a great deal of difference. Some people are tearing down, others are building up. Some people are planting thorns, others are planting flowers. Have you ever asked yourselves that question seriously, and honestly tried to find out what was the actual nature and result of your life activity? Who dares go and ask a jury of twelve honest men and women, "What, in your honest judgment, is the exact influence of my life on the course of human history?"

And he said, I have been very jealous for Jehovah. (V. 10.) It would be an unfeeling heart that was not touched by that answer. I have been very jealous for God. Jealously for ourselves is a sin, for another a glory. It was this very morning that a young girl told me that when her uncle praised her for singing, a young cousin of her own age went into the hall and cried. We may pity the poor, unhappy girl, but we cannot help condemning her. She was jealous for herself. But when Jim Brousson's eyes flashed, and he made Tom Blackmore "eat his words" for speaking disrespectfully of his sister, he was jealous for another. To be jealous for our friends, our church, our city, our country, our God, is noble. Elijah's heart rose hot within him at the slightest word of disparagement for Jehovah, the God of hosts, and I wish I had a hundred boys in my Sunday-school who felt that way.

And I, even I only, am left. What reformer has not had that feeling? It may be the result of vanity, and then it is contemptible. It may be the result of limited information, and then it is blamable. It may be the result of discouragement, and then it is inexcusable. No good man was ever "the only pebble on the beach." Nothing is more absolutely certain than that a man cannot be so good but he may find seven thousand men better than himself,—within cannon reach, if not within gunshot. To cherish the thought that you are the only person devoted to the highest interests of the community is to make yourself an egotist and a fool. A blackbird feeding amidst the tall grasses of a marsh imagines itself alone until somebody fires a gun, and then up goes a flock.

Jehovah passed by. (V. 11.) There are two great lessons here,—that God manifests Himself much in all things, but most in least things. Your spiritual education is not complete until the divine presence is discovered in tempests, earthquakes, conflagrations, and still small voices, but in the latter more than all. Train yourself to discover the Supreme Being in the wind sighing among the strings of an Aeolian harp, as easily as the raging of the storm through the naked timber of a forest. Learn that the inaudible whispers of conscience are still more certainly his voice than the rolling thunder.

Go, return on thy way. (V. 15.) What? Had he abandoned the path of his personal duty, his own individual way? Then there was nothing else left him but to return. Return, go back. How I have always hated to turn back over a road just traveled. It is a heaven-implanted antipathy. "Forward" is the watchword of life. It is as much the impulse of a man as of a river to rush onward. But rivers cannot take wrong routes. And if they could, God has not made them capable of repentance and return. The highest glory of humanity is the ability to go back and begin over.

And when thou comest, thou shalt anoint Hazael. (V. 15.) At the end of every journey there lies a duty. It may be to anoint kings or dethrone kings or be kings; it may be to make button-holes or wash clothes or add figures or tend doors or sweep crossings; it is always to do something. Your ways may lead through wildernesses or deserts, over plains or mountains,—the destination is the same, to a duty.

NEARLY FORFEITS HIS LIFE.

A runaway almost ending fatally, started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill. For four years it defied all doctors and all remedies. But Bucklen's Arnica Salve had no trouble to cure him. Equally good for Burns, Bruises, Skin Eruptions and Piles. Twenty-five cents at all druggists.

ROANOKE COLLEGE.

Roanoke College closed its 51st year of useful work on June 15th with a successful commencement and the inauguration of President Morehead under favorable auspices. Students were enrolled last session from twelve States, Japan and Korea. A handsome new administration building has been provided. The College has a curriculum with elective studies, well adapted to suit the wants of all students. The instruction is thorough and the standard high. The Faculty is composed of men of liberal scholarship, five having had 17 years of post-graduate work in American and foreign universities, and two others being authors of College text-books. The library contains 23,000 volumes. Few institutions offer so much at so little expense. The Roanoke Valley is famous for its beautiful mountain scenery and healthful climate. The moral, social and religious advantages of Salem are unsurpassed. The Catalogue of 62 pages shows that Roanoke is abreast of the times in its facilities and methods. For a copy of the Catalogue, with the June Collegian, address Roanoke College, Salem, Va.

I CURE CANCER.

Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No knife. No plaster. No caustics. No sloughing oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure into nal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment;" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else is the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

The Fall Campaign.

Let us have a great Orphanage campaign this fall. It looks as if times will be flush. Let the pastors and superintendents of Sunday-schools plan for it. Make your appointments; invite speakers. Call in the laymen. We have lawyers, doctors, business men, officers of State, college presidents and professors, and talking men generally, who would be glad to say a word for this great cause. Everywhere I go I would be glad to have some one talk either before or after me. It would break the monotony, give variety and spice things generally. Tell me when is the best time to come. Write me what you think of it.

Here and There.

Having failed to get an appointment abroad for the second Sunday, I went to hear our own beloved pastor, Rev. N. L. Seabolt. Promised to preach for him at night; but was rained out. Proposed to go to see my old friends at Zion and Jerusalem on the Ridgeway Circuit on the third Sunday. But Sunday a 'phone message from Bynum bringing the sad intelligence of the illness of my wife's mother, Mrs. Martha Atwater, turned me to that little town upon the Haw. Thanks to a kind Providence, she had rallied. Brother Bailey kindly gave me permission to preach to his people. Rob is always kind. That best of Sunday-school superintendents, Carney Bynum, gave me permission to talk to his Sunday-school at 5 p. m.

That circuit, the old Haw River, will be the third to join in supporting an orphan. Bynum and Hann's Chapel and Merrell's Chapel are already taking their collections. What circuit will be next?

Planning.

We take all the suggestions that we can get when we approve of them. It has been suggested that there were ten persons in our Conference that would give us one thousand dollars each on our main building. We approve of that, and will open our books for the subscribers. We will keep a roll. Who will head the list?

It has been suggested that one hundred persons will give us one hundred dollars each for the same purpose. We approve of that also. The books are already open for that. Who will head that list? Can't each of these numbers be reached by Christmas? I believe that the pastors of our churches could get that amount if they would try.

It has been suggested that we form an "Orphanage Association" for current expenses. I heartily approve of that. The Presbyterians have one. Let one thousand persons give their names, pledging themselves to give ten dollars annually for life, or as long as they are able, as a kind of endowment fund for current expenses. That will support more than one hundred needy orphans. Send in the money.

It has been suggested that provisions ought to be made for the orphan children from six years under. I approve of that also. Why not take Bailey's suggestion of a building to be known as the "Angel Baby Building"—memorial—and provide for these little ones in that. So many fathers and mothers have little ones in heaven that would be glad to memorialize them in that way. Have a picture room in it where they may hang up the babe's picture. It is already started. Who will come in next?

One more suggestion of which we approve, and we are done for the present. There are many afflicted orphans. What of them? Why, a hospital of course. Not an infirmary; but a place where they may be provided for permanently and have a chance for life. Who are taking care of these most helpless ones now? Let some big-hearted soul start it.

Oh, what a chance to invest money for God and humanity! Wish I was rich.

Who will make the next suggestion?

We are lonesome now that Billy tors, business men, officers of State, college presidents and professors, and talking men generally, who would be glad to say a word for this great cause. Everywhere I go I would be glad to have some one talk either before or after me. It would break the monotony, give variety and spice things generally. Tell me when is the best time to come. Write me what you think of it.

Brothers Simmons, of the Youngsville, and Rood of the Millbrook Circuits, have taken the orphan collection. Many thanks, brethren.

The children will return August 31st. School will open September 1st.

HOLTON—WINSTEAD.—August 10, 1904, at the home of Chas. Flowers, by Rev. L. S. Etheridge, Mr. Herbert Holton to Miss Freddie May Winstead.

MARSHALL — GIBBS.—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. A. S. Gibbs, Englehard, N. C., August 10, 1904, Mr. Thomas W. Marshall and Miss Katie Gibbs, Rev. B. H. Black officiating.

LEONARD — CLEMMONS.—By Rev. N. H. Guyton, at the home of the bride, Mr. W. H. Clemmons, Mr. Walter Leonard and Miss Maggie B. Clemmons, all of Brunswick County, N. C., on August 3, 1904.

Obituaries

Obituaries containg not more than one hundred and fifty words are inserted free of charge. Those sending obituaries containing over one hundred and fifty words are requested to send with the obituary one cent for every word in excess. Unless this rule is observed the obituary must be cut down to the proper limit.

SMITH.—On August 2, 1904, Mrs. Kittie A. Smith, wife of Mr. B. F. Smith, Sr., ceased from her suffering in this world and went to her eternal rest. She had been a patient sufferer for several years and a devout Christian in the M. E. Church, South, for nearly twenty years. Her faith was like the current of a deep river—strong, noiseless, steady and changeless. Just before her spirit left she seemed to have seen messengers ready to bear her away to the home of her Saviour. She lived well, and, therefore, she could die well. May we all meet her with the redeemed. W. D. SASSER.

HARRINGTON.—John T. Harrington sojourned with loved ones on earth for more than sixty years. It pleased the Lord to bring this pleasant association to a close at midnight, Aug. 18, 1904. He was one of a large and prominent family. Was a good citizen and loved by all. He gave his heart to the Lord in boyhood days under the preaching of the sainted Isaac W. Avent. He was a faithful member of Cokesbury church, from which his mortal remains were laid to rest in the midst of a large gathering of relatives and friends.

Brother Harrington had been a great sufferer for ten years, and for months past he anxiously awaited the call from on high. The end was peace.

All the bereft ones have our profound sympathy in this sad hour.
G. W. STARLING.

HARPER.—Mrs. Viola Harper, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Moore, was born in Green County, N. C., October 3, 1874, and died of typhoid fever August 3, 1904.

Sister Harper was married April 9, 1893, to Mr. L. S. Harper. To them were given four bright, beautiful girls. Those who knew the deceased intimately say she was a devoted wife, a fond mother, a kind neighbor, a true friend and a consistent exemplary Christian.

This elect lady was endowed with remarkable energy, fine judgment and great business capacity. Few women could manage so wisely and perform well so many difficult tasks. In all her duties she carried light and hope. To her, doubt and despondency were strangers. Her sphere was her home. Here she gave her love, life and labors, to which was linked a faith which united all to the mansions above.

Sister Harper bore her long illness with Christian fortitude, and closed her short useful life in peace.

May a gracious Father keep the bereaved husband and precious children unto eternal life.
W. H. TOWNSEND.

BEAMON.—After lingering several weeks with typhoid fever, Linwood O. Beamon, aged twenty-one years, departed this life at his home in Gates County, N. C., July 17, 1904. The light of a promising life went out just as the first rays of the morning sun brightened the earth. But it was a triumphant death. Happy several hours beforehand, speaking of a band of angels coming to meet him.

After praying for himself and others, he offered an earnest prayer for his pastor.

He joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. C. W. Robinson in 1897, and was a consistent member until his death.

About two years previous to his death he left home and became a clerk in a clothing establishment in Suffolk, Va., where he was highly prized by his employers for his business abilities and the large patronage he commanded.

His life was short but full of labor and sunshine—one that will be greatly missed.

Our prayers and sympathies go out for the bereaved parents, brothers and sisters, and we pray God may speedily restore to health the four brothers and sisters now ill with fever. W. H. BROWN.

Memoir of Walter Clark.

Walter Clark, the son of Joseph B. Clark and wife Elizabeth, was born in Hyde County, near Lake Landing, February 13, 1840, and died July 31, 1903.

He entered Trinity College in 1853 and completed the course in 1859. While at Trinity he was converted and joined the church.

On April 3, 1866, he was married to Miss Augusta E. Simmons, who, with six sons, survives him.

Brother Clark was elected steward in 1873, in which capacity he served until the close of his life. It is worthy of note that his father before him, was a consecrated man and a liberal and active steward.

Brother Clark was for thirty years a member of the quarterly Conference, by virture of the fact that he was both steward and trustee. He was also secretary of the quarterly Conference and recording steward.

We, the members of the quarterly Conference, realize that in the death of Brother Clarke we have lost one of our most liberal and faithful members.

He was a public-spirited man and a leader in educational interests in his community. He was hopeful, cheerful, sympathetic in his disposition, always ready to speak a word of encouragement. Few men are more liberal to the church and willing to support needy causes than was Brother Clark. Such a benevolent spirit can but be missed.

The quarterly Conference of Pantego and Belhaven charge, in ordering and adopting this memoir, wish thus to express their highest esteem of Brother Clark as a Christian gentleman in his community, and to show their appreciation of his faithful service as a member of this body.

Respectfully submitted,
W. E. BROWN,

SUMMER RHEUMATISM

The idea that Rheumatism is strictly a winter disease, that comes from exposure or cold, is wrong; a spell of indigestion, torpidity of the liver, inactive state of the kidneys, or sudden cooling of the body when over-heated, being frequent causes of an attack. Rheumatism is due to an over-acid condition of the blood and bad circulation. As it flows through the body the blood deposits an acrid corrosive sediment in the joints and muscles, and the circulation grows sluggish because of the constant accumulation of acid impurities, and when the system is in such condition Rheumatism is liable to come out at any time, winter or summer. It is hastened and provoked by exposure to cold, damp air, sudden cooling of the body when over-heated, a bad spell of indigestion, or anything that is calculated to further derange and depress the system; but these are only exciting and not the real cause of Rheumatism. It is in the blood, and when this vital fluid becomes overcharged with the acid impurities and is running riot in the veins, an attack is sure to come, whether in summer time or the cold, bleak days of winter. You are a slave to pain as long as the blood is tainted with acid. Liniments and plasters are helpful and useful, but it takes something more than rubbing and blistering to drive away this demon of pain. S. S. S. goes to the seat of the trouble, enters the circulation, neutralizes and filters out of the blood the acid poisons. It enriches and strengthens the weak, diseased blood; the general health improves under its tonic effect, and when rich, pure blood begins to circulate through the stiff joints and sore, tender muscles, pains and aches vanish, and the longed-for relief comes to the nervous, pain-tortured sufferers. S. S. S. contains no minerals, but is guaranteed purely vegetable. Write us if in need of medical advice, which is given without charge. Our book on Rheumatism, telling of the different forms and varieties of this pain-racking disease, is mailed free.

NO USE FOR CRUTCHES.

I had an attack of Sciatic Rheumatism in its worst form. The pain was so intense I became completely prostrated. Having heard S. S. S. recommended for Rheumatism, I decided to give it a trial, and after I had taken a few bottles I was able to hobble around on crutches, and very soon had no use for them at all. S. S. S. having cured me sound and well. All the distressing pains have left me, my appetite has returned, and I am happy to be again restored to perfect health.

Resolutions of Respect.

Resolutions adopted by the quarterly Conference, July 30, 1904, at Pleasant Hill Church, Pittsboro Circuit:

We desire to express and admit to record in the journal of this Conference our admiration for the character and appreciation of the labors of Bro. Hezekiah Henderson, late a member of Brown's Chapel Church and its official board.

Brother Henderson was eminently a man of God consistent and faithful in his views. His conception of the duties of life, both as a citizen and a Christian, was high. He loved the community in which he lived and to it his life was a benefaction. He loved his church, and made liberal offerings to it of his time, his labor and his means, and at its altar he communed in the faith and simplicity of a child. He loved his home with an ardent devotion. In the welfare of his family, he manifested the deepest concern in life and left to them that noblest of legacies—the heritage of a good name, which is to be chosen rather than great riches.

We desire simply to express our love for the memory of our departed brother and to record our estimate of his virtues; therefore be it

Resolved 1. That in the death of Brother Henderson the community loses a citizen of sterling worth, his church loses a loyal, consistent member and his family a devoted husband and father.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be kept in the journal of this Conference, a copy be sent to the Raleigh Chritsian Advocate and the Chatham Record with request to publish, and a copy to the family of Brother Henderson.

WM. J. WOMBLE,
N. A. PERRY,
Committee.

Whereas, it has pleased our heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, to take from us our beloved brother, William Watts Burnhill; therefore be it

Resolved 1. That while in his death we, as the Methodist church and Sunday-school in Hamilton, have lost one of our most valued members, we bow submissively to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

2. That we are grateful for the influence of his young Christian manhood, his noble examnle and his faithful devotion to duty.

3. That we extend to the bereaved father, sister and brothers our deepest sympathy and pray God to be their Comforter in sorrow, and salvation to come.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, also to the Raleigh Chritsian Advocate and to the Enterprise for publication.

A PROGRESSIVE NORTH CAROLINA COMMERCIAL INSTITUTION PROVIDES A PLAN FOR CONTRIBUTING TO AND PROMOTING PUBLIC EDUCATION IN THE STATE.

The Life Department of the Southern Loan and Trust Company, of Greensboro, N. C., has for sometime past been maturing a plan which illustrates that Company's public-spirited enterprise and progressiveness—that is, to donate to the schools each year in certain communities where it transacts a life insurance business, a fund contingent upon the business done in that community, to be devoted to the improvement in the equipment of its schools. The plan has received the cordial endorsement of Hon. J. Y. Joyner, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the enthusiastic approval of the friends of education to whom it has been presented. The managers of the Southern Loan and Trust Company believe that education contributes much to the appreciation of the blessings of life insurance and that industrial and educational progress go hand in hand. They recognize that the two great facts in North Carolina's advancement to-day are education and industrial development. Their interpendence is evidenced by the fact that those communities which are the largest conservers and producers of wealth are enjoying in the largest measure the blessings of education. The Southern Loan and Trust Company proposes that its plan of contributing to and promoting public education in North Carolina shall serve as a standing illustration of the value to the cause of education in this State which will accrue from the fostering and building up of home industries and enterprises.

AT THE EXPOSITION.

T. N. IVEY.

One of the main points to be considered in going to the exposition is the route used. Both the Southern and the Seaboard are offering routes and inducements that are only characteristic of these great enterprising lines so ably managed. But my route this time was via the C. and O.

"Sic juvat transcendere montes" was the motto of the Knights of the Golden Horeshoe, as they made their way from the alluvial sections of Virginia in the direction of the frowning ramparts of the Alleghanies which seemed to beckon them onward. Spottswood and his cavaliers never fully made good their motto. But their descendants did. They crossed those mountains and overflowed the Mississippi plains, leaving their rude and enduring monuments in a thousand mountain caves and smiling valleys. The Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad followed in their track, leaving behind the parallel iron bands to mark the highway of commerce.

The C. and O. is a great road stretching from Norfolk, Va., to Cincinnati, Ohio. It carries the traveller across the Alleghanies, through the coal and mining sections of West Virginia, down the smiling Ohio valley to Cincinnati, wrapped in its smoke and throbbing with its material power. No finer mountain scenery than that seen from the train as it passes through the Piedmont and Rockbridge valleys. The section between Clifton Forge and Charleston is interesting on account of its associations connected with the French and Indian and the Revolutionary War. At Cincinnati we took the Big Four which carries the C. and O. cars. It takes one through the great corn sections of Indiana and Illinois. The statement was made a few weeks ago in the newspapers that corn would break its record this year. When I saw the immense fields of Indiana and Illinois, I was prepared to believe the statement. But every North Carolinian may have the assurance that he can find nowhere any finer corn fields than are found this year in North Carolina.

FIRST DAY WITHIN THE GROUNDS.

First let me try to give some idea of the bigness of the exposition. I say "some idea." An adequate idea cannot be given from the point of tongue or pen. It must be caught by the idea and that too from a considerable altitude. The best view of the exposition, that is a coup d'oeil view, was obtained I imagine by the two balloonists whom I saw start from within the grounds on Saturday afternoon in a race for Washington. One, poor fellow, had to "drap" only about twenty miles from St. Louis.

Imagine a plot of ground one mile long and nearly one mile wide. This covers over 1,200 acres, nearly all occupied with some kind of a building. There are nearly one thousand buildings, small and big. One of these buildings, the Palace of Agriculture, covers twenty-one acres and covers more exhibit space than the whole of the Pan-American Exposition contained. If some of our corpulent friends in North Carolina who are trying to "walk down" their flesh would only try the aisles of the Agricultural building they would find a walk sufficiently long. They would have to walk only nine miles. The ride on the Intra-Mural Railroad is abou ten miles long.

I was impressed with the strength and ornamentation of the buildings. Many of them seem to be built for permanent use. One cannot help noting the difference between them and the buildings of the World's Exposition at Chicago. I was talking with a veteran from California who had seen all the expositions in the last twenty-five years on both sides of the Atlantic. He said that the buildings were too well built. I saw at once that he had his eye on "filthy lucre" when he gave me his reason for making such a statement. He said that on this account the exposition managers would have to get their money back by faking the public. I doubt very much if the exposition managers ever had an idea that they would get their money back in a direct way. Primarily the exposition is educative. Secondarily it is to be used for the advancement of the section to which it belongs.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S JUBILEE PRESENTS.

These were the first things I saw. The reader must not wonder at this. I was with a woman—a little golden haired girl whom I had been sending to school for nearly ten years, but whose intellectual training had not made her less than a woman, else she had not earnestly insisted that we see first the glittering presents of Queen Victoria. Really it is a great sight. It will not be seen again by the public on this side of the water. The presents are contained in large numbers of handsome glass cases about six feet high and four feet wide. Of course these cases are securely locked. Now I am not going to try to describe these presents. A member of the press-gang naturally knows but little of jewels and gold and silver. Costly woods and stones, ivory, agate, gems of all kinds, gold and silver, make a display which fairly dazzle the eye. Ten million dollars will not represent the intrinsic value of the whole display. Of course the visitor from North Carolina must not fail to visit this exhibit in the administration building. As you pass Pike-ward from the administration building be sure to enter the anthropological building. It has a dry and uninteresting name, but you will be fully repaid by an inspection of the beautiful Mosaic work; also of the Egyptian relics.

TRANSPORTATION.

When I was a little boy, I would run half a mile to see go by a stage coach drawn by four horses. I thought that if I could ever develop into such a man as the driver who flourished so proudly his whip, I would consider myself fortunate. Since that time I had a passion for seeing things "moving." The greater the speed the greater my excitement. So I had my inning this time, and we next visited the great palace of locomotion and the transportation building. Here is the place where you can see what progress in vehicles of transportation this great country has made in the last decade.

At the Chicago Fair the bicycle had the post of honor with the railroad engine. Here the bicycle is in the background. The automobile is the center of interest. Ten years ago an automobile was a great rarity. The display of automobiles is enchanting.

The visitor can see enough to realize that it is only a question of a short time when electric locomotives will be whizzing over our lines of railroad. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is now using electric locomotives weighing 165 tons to haul its trains through the Montclair tunnel. Steam is rapidly giving way to electricity. This fact is clearly seen in the transportation building.

SUNDAY AT THE SHOW.

There is no Sunday at the show. The gates are closed, and this fact is the greatest lesson on Sabbath observance this country has learned in a long time. In another sense there is no Sunday on the outside of the grounds, and this fact is a reproach and shame to the city of St. Louis. The stores are wide open. All kinds of games go on. It is the great revelling day of sin. In the morning, I went down to St. John's church at the corner of Washington and King's Highway. It is the finest church in the city. I went to this church not because it is the finest, but because my new friend, Dr. W. Lee, is pastor. I was disappointed in finding that every seat in the auditorium and vestibules was crowded. I heard that all of the churches of the city are crowded every Sunday with exposition visitors. So in this fact much comfort may be gained by those whose hearts are saddened by the thought that the continental Sabbath seems to bet getting nearer to us. Thousands of visitors who come here bring God with them.

A Rule for Happiness.

Make a rule, and pray to God to help you to keep it, never, if possible, to lie down at night without being able to say: "I have made one human being at least a little wiser or a little happier or a little better this day." You will find it easier than you think, and pleasanter. Easier, because if you wish to do God's work God will surely find you work to do; and pleasanter, because in return for the little trouble it may cost you, or the little choking of foolish, vulgar pride it may cost you, you will have a peace of mind, a quiet of temper, a cheerfulness and hopefulness about yourself and all around you such as you never felt before; and, over and above that, if you look for a reward in the life to come, recollect this: What we have to hope for in the life to come is to enter into the joy of our Lord. And how did he fulfil that joy but by humbling himself, and taking the form of a slave, and coming, not to be ministered to, but to minister and to give his whole life, even unto the death upon the cross, a ransom for many! Be sure that unless you take up His cross you will never share His crown; be sure that unless you follow in His footsteps you will never reach the place where he is. If you wish to enter into the joy of your Lord, be sure that His joy is now, as it was in the Judea of old, over every sinner that repenteth, every mourner that is comforted, every hungry mouth that is fed, every poor soul, sick or in prison, who is visted.—Charles Kingsley.

A Picturesque Army.

REV. J. H. M'CULLAGH.

The American Sunday-school Union recently completed its eightieth year's work for the neglected children of our country, and is furnishing the press with some interesting facts. Being an undenominational work, helpful to the churches in every State, its success will give widespread satisfaction.

If we could take all the scholars and teachers who were enrolled in the schools organized by The American Sunday-school Union last year, and form them into a column, standing five abreast in ranks, allowing three feet to each rank, in good marching order; we would have a picturesque Sunday-school army arrayed in solid phalanx more than eleven miles long.

If we were strong enough to walk eleven miles along this vast host, we would be surprised to see so many bare-foot boys, and girls with calico dresses and subonnets. While plainly clad, most of them have intelligent faces. We would observe they had been supplied with good literature. More than 27,000 Bibles and Testaments might be counted in their hands, also about the same number of song and library books, and many thousand lesson papers.

To review this great Sunday-school army, 97,800 strong, which The American Sunday-school Union recruited, organized and equipped all in one year, would be an impressive sight. Many decisive battles of the world's history have been gained by a force not so large. To hear this army of children sing, would be inspiring and cheering.

If we should take those who were converted in the Sunday-schools organized by the Society, and stand them side by side, in single file, allowing two feet to each, this line of young converts would reach nearly four miles.

The American Sunday-school Union has been called the pioneer and recruiting agency for the churches. If we could take all the churches which grew out of Union Bible Schools last year, and stand them end to end, allowing 40 feet to each, we would have the imposing sight of a line of churches reaching one mile.

Many of them are neat and tasty, some very plain. Among these 133 new churches may be found many representatives of the various denominations.

Imposing as the foregoing columns are, other features of the Union's work are equally as impressive. If we should take all the schools which the Society strengthened during the year, and place them side by side, allowing 30 feet to each, we would have a solid line of Sunday-schools seventy-two miles long.

The multitudes who attended the 450 public addresses delivered each week by missionaries of the Society, and the young people in Union schools who resolved to seek a higher education, would also be an interesting sight.

The men who did this wonderful work, would form an interesting procession. The 259 faithful missionaries employed by the Society, some in their little wagons, some on horseback, others on foot, all enduring hardness, to evangelize the destitute.

During the year, missionaries of the Union visited thousands of homes, many of whom have rarely, if ever, been entered by a Christian minister. By words of admonition and circulating good literature the hearty co-operation of many parents in the good work was secured.

If we could take these 221500 homes visited by the missionaries, and place them side by side, allowing 20 feet to each home, we would have a line of homes 830 miles long, extending over hill and valley, further than from Philadelphia, Pa., to Louisville, Ky.

Note these salient points: 1. Vast as this labor was, it should not be regarded as something new or unusual, for the Society is doing substantially as much, year after year, as there are yet about 12,000,000 children and youth in our country who have not been enrolled in any Sunday-school; a number larger than all the standing armies of Europe combined, we can readily see how greatly this work should be enlarged.

2. Many communities where these schools were organized, will not be able to support churches for years to come. This is all the greater reason, why they should now have good Sunday-schools.

3. In perfect loyalty to the churches, the Society provides for the children who are not reached by any other agency. Nothing has been found which takes the place of Bible instruction, for establishing noble principles in the minds of the young and uplifting the true standard of morals.

The American Sunday-school Union desires to furnish full particulars regarding the method expense and results of its work.

"Many Masters."

The seemingly obscure passage in James in which this phrase occurs needs to be expounded in our day. Like most of the contents of this valuable Epistle, it is intensely practical. Why should so many of you wish to teach? says James. You seem to forget how responsible a calling that is. It gives everybody a chance to pass judgment on you. Now even in ordinary affairs a man who, in what he says, never exposes himself to criticism is a wise man. Few of us are there who never in anything slip. Especially few are they whose tongue does not sometimes betray them. "For the tongue"—then follows that half-humorous, wholly modern passage about the "unruly member."

The apostle does not again return to the thought with which he began, but we wish to do so, for a moment; for touching the risks and the responsibilities of public utterance there is much to be said. It is indeed difficult enough to avoid saying in our private conversations things that may do harm. The man who has uttered it feels himself committed to a foolish or wicked word. Those who have heard it are, often involuntarily, sharers, if not in the sin, at least in the harm done. The power of the uttered word is a sinister thing. It is akin to those mysterious laws of suggestion and association which sway our thoughts, often when we would not. Like the ever-widening ripples which a single pebble may cause upon the surface of placid water, the thoughts called up by a word—noble or ignoble, pure or degrading, good or evil—drift on and on. "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!"

Knowing this concerning the words spoken in private, will not any man hesitate before taking upon himself the still weightier responsibility of public speech? If in the ear of one or two a word is so potent for good or harm, and the speaker of it so bound by the possibilities of what he may do or undo, far graver are the interests involved when he addresses himself to a multitude.

First is the danger which James mentions of captious and hostile criticism. In a large number of our fellow-men whose attention may chance on any occasion to be directed to what we say, there are sure to be some who had rather misunderstand than understand, whose hostility to the speaker is disappointed if he does not leave somewhere a point open to attack. Publicity itself is a thing which is naturally resented by many people. The obscure especially are already enemies of the famous. And not a few of our race proceed always on the principle of the Irishman at Donnybrook: "If you see a head, hit it." Unintelligent, unsympathetic, unnecessary unfeeling criticism is the certain portion of every man whose words reach any large number of his fellows.

But that is not the worst. It is not undeserved criticism that cuts, but that which is merited. "Ay well, ay well," says the spitfire heroine in Tennyson's Idyll, "far worse than being fooled of others is to fool one's self." It is indeed, and the man who more or less continuously for certain months or years delivers his written or spoken opinions upon the public without occasionally making a fool of himself is an exceptional man.

Take so apparently simple a matter as telling the truth. A preacher, for example, or the editor of a religious paper, will allow that truthfulness is a first principle in his calling. He ought to be able to leave it and go on to perfection. But that very phrase raises a warning signal. He must not "depart from the truth." Yet he will often be sorely tempted. The preacher, having no fear of immediate contradiction, states the views of those whose position he challenges in a way more favorable to the argument he intends to make against them than is consistent with facts. Or he illustrates some point with a narrative which in many parts his auditors know to be apocryphal. The editor tries to be consistent with himself. Yet the deadly parallel between what he said this year and last, or this week and two months ago, will often be against him. In the hurry of the moment both editor and preacher make assertions that ought not to be ventured without investigation.

Then there is the matter of accuracy in the use of words. Words are edged tools—double-edged, many of them. The man who handles them recklessly will rue it. So too will his readers or his hearers. Strictly extemporaneous utterance is often a great evil. And extemporaneous writing is not at all more commendable than extemporaneous speaking. This should be remembered by all, preachers or people, who are prone to think that a discourse written and read is sure to be better studied than if spoken ex tempore. Many men are far more hasty and careless writing in their study than they would dare be speaking in the pulpit. In both speaking and writing the essential thing is that words be weighed. The morality of self-possession and of self-restraint is not more evident in any province of life than in the choice and use of words.

The speaker and the writer must be keenly alive to the effects of his utterance on other people. He assumes a great responsibility. To forget this or to disregard it is inexcusable. Let those only undertake this function who can come to it weighted with a sense of its grim significance. The evident suffrage of others is needed to animate for such an undertaking any thoughtful man. He who is bursting with words which nobody cares to hear has mistaken his calling. And where religious teaching is involved the call of men even is not enough. The men who write that unending stream of thought which the whirling presses of our periodicals are continually pouring into the public mind, and still more the men who Sunday by Sunday stand up to hold the attention of gathered congregations, ought to be serious men. The jangling voices and discordant thought of "many masters" are but too familiar to this generation. Better for many of them had they remained silent. Having set up to teach, they have received "the greater condemnation."—Nashville Christian Advocate.

A Good Meeting.

At Purvis church, on the Rowland Circuit, two weeks ago, the good Lord was pleased to bless us in granting a splendid meeting.

Brother Willis, a Baptist minister of South Carolina, did some very effective preaching. There were more than twenty-five conversions; seventeen accessions to our church, with perhaps others to join, and some to join the Baptist church. We give God the glory for it all, and pray for His saving power with us next week at Centenary in a like meeting.

We are not yet pledged out on Conference collections, but will show up all right at Henderson in November.

There is a lot of work to be done between now and then. We will meet you then, God willing.

Respectfully,

Five Days in New York.

BY J. V. WILLIAMS.

After an absence of about seven months, I am again in New York City, taking in all that I can of the good and cutting out all I can of the evil.

The first night in New York I attended the "Old Jerry McAuley Mission"—the best work of the kind in the world. It was here, about thirty years ago that Jerry McAuley started the work that has made a name to live while this old world stands. Jerry was a man with ideas. He did not know anything of books, hence he had to fall back on his own ideas rather than the ideas of others.

The idea on which he succeeded was, that every convert should testify to God's saving grace; that others hearing his testimony would gain hope and begin to pray. If a drunkard and thief like himself was converted, he was expected to tell it out—all of it—in his testimony that other drunkards and thieves might know that God could save such.

If a woman was converted from drunkenness, "and all the rest that goes with it," as they say, she was expected likewise to testify, so that other fallen sisters could see a ray of hope.

Jerry always confined them strictly to a personal testimony, and when a brother would leave this for an exhortation, Jerry would say, "Brother, when did you get your license to preach? Preaching is a good thing, but we want testimonies here, and nothing else. Now confine yourselves to a personal experience if you've got any."

Most any night there are thirty to forty—sometimes more—who are ready to testify to God's saving grace, so you see one minute each would be forty minutes taken up with this form of service: so if you were to allow exhortations, only a few could talk and the purpose of the meeting would be defeated.

Jerry used to lead off in the testimony meeting, saying: "I'm so glad that God can save a drunkard and a thief. I didn't know this when I was in the old life, but when I heard 'Awful Gardner' (my companion in drunkenness and stealing) tell how God saved him, I opened my eyes to the fact that there was power to save a poor drunkard.

"Look at me! In the old life I never had decent clothes; I'm clothed now. In the old life my mind was always clouded by whiskey; I'm in my right mind now. In the old life I never got a square meal; I get beef steak now. In the old life I slept out of doors on the ground, now I sleep in a warm house and a good soft bed. In the old life I associated with thieves and robbers; but now I keep company with bankers and preachers. Then they called me 'Jerry the bum;' now they call me 'Brother McAuley.' It pays? Well, I should say! I've got everything. Get salvation, boys; other things will follow. Trust God and He will trust you."

After a testimony of this kind from Jerry and many others, you would see the front benches crowded with dirty, ragged bums crying bitterly for salvation.

More than thirty years has passed since Jerry led in the "rescue work," but the old place is run just the same now as then.

Samuel H. Hadley succeeded Jerry about twenty years ago. He is a man saved from the gutters; a man of fine gifts in song and exhortation, and God has made him exceedingly popular in this line of work, and to-day he is sought for from every part of the country where big meetings are being held. He is a local preacher in old John Street Methodist Church and is loved by all the brethren.

He has recently written a book on the work at the Jerry McAuley Mission, entitled, "Down in Water Street," and it is having a fine sale, and no doubt will help many souls toward the kingdom.

I started out to write of six missions in New York, but will have to write of the others later, as this is long enough.

Bless God, "He came to seek and to save that which was lost."

A Deeper Realization.

C. H. WETHERBE.

To many people it may seem to be untrue that those persons who had led an honorable, moral life before their conversion to Christ, now have a deeper realization of sin in themselves than do those Christian whose former life was grossly immoral; but such a statement is evidently true to facts. And I think that the main reason for the fact that those who were formerly degraded in inquity have a smaller and weaker sense of sin than the other class do is because their moral nature became deeply blunted by sin, and hence they are not now so sensitive to the presence of evil in them as are those whose nature was always refined, delicate and conscientious. This is a philosophical view, and it is perfectly reasonable. The late C. H. Spurgeon, in a sermon to his people, said:

"A venerable servant of God, whom most of you know and respect, has made a remark which I fully endorse. He says that he has noticed that the deepest convictions of sin do not come, as a rule, to men of coarse life, but to those who have been of upright character. My own observation has taught me that, very often, drunkards and other persons who have lived openly evil lives, when they are converted, are brought on a sudden to Christ and made to rejoice in Him; while some of us who were kept from such sins as they have committed have had a far greater sense of horror and terror inflicted upon us than they have ever experienced. I have many times found that the deepest sense of sin has been felt where the actual sin has been the least. There are, no doubt, exceptions to this rule, but I believe it is the rule; and the explanation is that the ungodly man, by a long life of sin, has so seared his conscience that, even when the Spirit of God comes to him, he has not that delicate, acute sense of sin which another man has who, by God's grace, has never been permitted to blunt the edge of his conscience."

My own observation confirms that view. I have been amazed at some professed Christians, whose former life was grossly sinful, when I saw how indifferently they regard sin. I am sure that a really pure heart is keenly alive to its sinful acts.

Why Not?

I have been looking for some one to refer to Rev. Bundy's wise suggestions in his letter on the subject of education in the Advocate of some weeks ago. The readers of the Advocate will remember that Elder Bundy referred to Methodist schools that were being taught by Baptist principals. Now, I have no complaint to make against such teachers as teachers; rather I glory in their spunk. The blame lies entirely with the trustees of such schools, and to those let me admonish: Be wise as serpents and harmless as doves. I will suggest, if you want a Methodist teacher, advertise for one. By chance a periodical fell into my hands, not published by Methodist people either, and they were in need of teachers, and the kind wanted was asked for.

Whatsoever things ye desire when you pray, believe that ye receive them, and you shall have them. This is an educational era and the people who educate are the people who will in future be heard from. Awake, thou that sleepest! and be cautious whomsoever you employ. A Methodist lady was employed to teach a school (at least she turned out to be a Methodist after she was employed), and all the patrons were perfectly delighted; but when it was known that she was a Methodist, one among the most influential of her patrons, a Baptist, actualy took his horse and buggy and canvassed her patrons and would have broken up the school but for the fact that she was such a worthy and efficient teacher, and her patrons were not all Baptist, so they exercised their better judgment, and the good lady was allowed to teach out the session.

I love liberality; it is Christian; but liberality to a fault, I despise.

New Hope.

Dear Doctor:—Without dinner on the ground, but by the pure preaching of the Word and the prayers of the faithful of the church, the Lord gave us the best revival at New Hope Church since the days of Frances Asbury. On Monday, August 8th, I baptized thirty-seven adults and received into the church seventy-five members; also at that place I baptized thirty-one children. The meeting ran but eight days. I went from there to Oak Grove Church and received on profession of faith twenty-five new members—not one of these by certificate at either place. The church members put to work in earnest in each place. We had preaching morning at 10 o'clock, men's meeting in the grove at 7 a. m., and the ladies' prayer-meeting in the house at the same hour; preaching at 8 p. m. At least seven-tenths of the conversions were at night. In the two meetings there were more than one hundred and forty converted, or professed to be. Rev. A. J. Parker gave us three of his most excellent sermons at each place, which did great good. Besides that, I had no ministerial help. But how my faithful church folks helped! There was no dissipation of time nor wasted forces, nor squandering of energies. And whether we had crowds or not souls were saved by the scores. At one service at New Hope as we came in from the grove meeting some boys fell at the altar and before Rev. Parker could preach at all there was 22 converted. After the sermon ten were converted that night. Many of these are from the families that take the Advocate, others will take it soon (notwithstanding your notion of all-day dinners to the contrary). Now take that for it. If you hire folks to come to church by feeding their stomachs you will never reach their souls. That's been well proven all through this country for years. Now for a change back to Methodist usages—services morning and night, and no frolic nor dissipation of time and talents on the church ground. It is the very seed sowing of irreverence for the place of worship, having a high holiday and a big time for a week on the church ground at the expense of church people. That expense should be put into church enterprises. But enough for this time. The Lord be praised for the gracious victory given us.

Fraternally,

F. L. CHURCH.

Bascom's Chapel.

We held our meeting at Bascom's Chapel the week following the first Sunday in this month. Owing to the heavy rains and high waters, many were kept from the church, but the meeting resulted in much good in reviving the church and many being brought to a knowledge of their sins.

On the second Sunday we began our meeting at Tabernacle, closing the following Saturday evening. The church was greatly revived, a number were converted and seven added to the church. We have just closed a ten days' meeting at Smyrna. Brothers Troy and Lawrence, of the Christian church, were with me part of the time. We believe much good was done. We do not know how many were converted; twelve joined the church. Secured two subscribers to the Advocate and we hope several family altars will be erected.

During these meetings we have baptized thirty-five adults and infants.

On Sunday evening, the 21st, we laid to rest in Smyrna church-yard little Daniel Curtis Horner, son of Daniel and Vannie Horner. He was a bright little fellow and a member of Smyrna Sunday-school. God saw fit to take him, for such is fit for the kingdom of heaven. May the Lord's blessings be with the bereaved.

Church Extension Notice.

Let all who expect to make application to the Board of Church Extension for aid write to E. Pope, Jonesboro, N. C., for blanks.

All applications must be in the hands of the secretary the first day of Conference, or they will not be considered.

Application blanks issued prior to the meeting of our last General Conference are out of date and will not be recognized by the Board.

Duke Circuit.

Dear Bro. Ivey:—A word from Duke Circuit may not be amiss. We are in the midst of very gracious revivals, and have been for three weeks. Souls are being saved and God's people are being built up. Our meeting at Pleasant Plains began the second Sunday at 11 o'clock, with a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and continued at every service, day and night, till Saturday night at 10.30. Uncle Betts was with us in four services. At Duke, Bro. L. B. Pattishall was with me, and is here this week at Elevation. It seems there is no abatement; the revival seems to move from one place to another.

"The Lord of hosts is with us," to whom all praise is due.

Truly, W. A. FORBES.

Carthage Circuit.

Cool Spring is now one of the fine churches constituting this charge. This church, organized twenty years ago by Rev. W. B. Doub, of precious memory, grew out of an old field school-house appointment, capturing a swarm from dear old Fair Promise, at the present a part of the Siler City Circuit. From fewer than sixty members in the beginning, the enrollment has reached nearly three hundred, and this number includes twenty-four bright converts received at the close of a most gracious revival, Friday, August 26, 1904, making our present membership two hundred. Among these are several very aged persons whose faithful attendance upon the meeting was an inspiration.

This church was painted anew last year, and met all of the financial obligations otherwise. Of the twenty-five country churches it has been my good fortune to serve, not one has been more loyal than Cool Spring. God is leading us on, and to Him be all the glory.

Mt. Tirzah Circuit.

Dear Dr. Ivey:—I will write a few lines for your excellent paper relative to my work. We have just closed a series of meetings in the charge with good results. At Allensville we were aided by Bro. J. H. McCracken, who did all the preaching, and it was first-class from first to last. He lifted us up nearer to God and put new inspiration in all our hearts. We had several conversions, and the whole membership was greatly strengthened. Some joined other churches as a result of this meeting. Some, I think, will join our church in the near future. We then held our meeting at Mt. Zion, and we had with us J. H. M. Giles, of Newport, N. C., who did all the preaching, and he did it admirably, and in the strength and demonstration of the Holy Spirit. He simply captured our people. He is a Nimrod in the pulpit, for he can kill sinners with the Gospel shot-truth. The result of the meeting was nine accessions. We then held our meeting at Trinity—the result was thirteen accessions. I was aided by Bro. G. T. Brown, one of my local preachers, and one of the best of his class. I then protracted at Webb's Chapel, aided by Brother Brown. We had "an all round" meeting, and two joined. We then pitched our tent at Mt. Tirzah, and the Lord was was in our midst from the beginning to the end of the meeting. We had four accessions, and the church considerably revived. Bro. C. P. Jerome, from Durham, did all the preaching for us. He is an elegant expounder of the Gospel of Christ, and he seems to be guided and under the spell of the Spirit in moving men to feel and realize their obligations to God. We believe all our meetings have been a great uplift to our people. Our purpose is to bring up everything in full to Conference. The thought of having to leave this good people this fall is going to get close to us. We will write more later. We mean to bring up a full report for the Raleigh Chritsian Advocate. M. D. GILES.

Succession of Good Meetings.

Dear Dr. Ivey:—According to your request in your paper, I shall give you an account of the meetings that have been held on my charge thus far this year.

Our meeting at Parker's church began with our third quarterly meeting on the third Sunday in July. Brother Underwood preached for us Sunday and Monday. Bro. H. M. North, of City Road, Elizabeth City, came to us and remained during the week, doing all of the preaching for us after Monday.

Brother North is an earnest and persuasive preacher, and his labors among us drew us nearer to God and put into many of us new determinations. The good he did will live long after he has passed into eternity. The visible results, besides the above-stated, were nine conversions. Six of these were received into our church and two others will be later.

On the fourth Sunday in July we began a meeting at Kittrell's church. The revival had begun early in the year and one soul had been converted in the prayer-meeting the week before the protracted service.

On Monday afternoon, Bro. W. G. Parker, of Whaleyville, Va., came to our rescue. Tuesday the writer was attacked by fever and for several weeks was unable to leave his room. Brother Parker took the meeting into his own hands and ran it on until Saturday. They say that Parker is a fine preacher, and they were all delighted with him.

The meeting was said to have been one of the best this church has seen for many years. We are unable to say just how many were converted, but there were at least ten or twelve. As we have not had a preaching service since, on account of my sickness, we have been unable to receive into the church any of those who were converted.

The Lord has wonderfully blessed us this year. We have two more meetings to be held, both during the month. W. H. BROWN.

Mental Full-Dress.

A young girl, joining a group of waiting friends on their way to a dinner party, apologized for a moment's delay by explaining that she had stopped to re-read a letter for an amusing story. "You know how the dear old Colonel relishes a joke, and it is sure to fit in somewhere during dinner. I am not brilliant or original, but I can borrow from those who are," she finished, laughingly. We understood then why this comparatively plain young woman is a welcome guest. As a friend said of her: "Alice dresses her mind with as much care as she does her body when she goes into company." But the point is not merely in the accumulation of good stories; it is in the taste and tact which discern exactly where they will fit in. Stories succeed only when we make them our own and fit them to their new environment. But the habit of preparing the mind for company is one which will certainly add both to social charm and ease. The preparation for social gatherings should not all be made by the entertainer and the dress-maker. No form of entertainment takes the place of the fine art of conversation.—The Congregationalist.

The Wealth of Old Man Jones.

There is one thing that I can't understand," said my friend with a questioning mind.

"What is that, Hanson?" I asked.

"About old man Jones, down there at the foot of the hill. If there are any Christians in this country, he is one. He has prayed twice a day for forty years, and proved his faith by his works. He has worked hard, and has been ambitious to lay up something for his family, yet he is exceedingly poor, has always been poor—often his family lack the bare necessaries of life. That little cabin with the rocky patch of ground around it is all that he has to show for a life of drudgery. Yet the Bible says, 'All things work together for the good of those who love God,' and, 'To him that asketh it shall be given.' How do you explain it?"

"Let us go down and talk with him about it," I replied.

The old man warmly welcomed us into his simple cabin, and set chairs for us by the open fireplace, for it was a frosty November day.

"I'm glad to see you, Will." He always called me Will. "I have been waiting to tell you about a letter I got two weeks ago from Dave. Dave has professed religion and joined the church."

The old man's eyes grew bright, and his voice shook a little.

"I've been praying for that boy for many years, and I knew the Lord would save him."

The light on his face, furrowed by care and toil and age, was good to see.

"I'm perfectly happy now," he continued. "Mary married a good man, and they have a good home. Sam is preaching the Gospel, and now Dave has chosen the better part. The Lord is wondrous good to His servants, and I can say with David, 'The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.'" And he repeated the whole psalm.

"But haven't you often needed things that you did not get?" inquired my friend.

"Oh, yes, certainly; there have been many times in our lives when we did not have all the worldly goods we wanted, but some way we pulled through," replied the old man, cheerfully. "Perhaps it was the result of bad management; perhaps it was best so, but that matters little. The Lord has made us so rich in everything else we do not mind a little poverty."

As we climbed the hill my friend was silent. When we reached the summit we looked back at the little cabin at the foot.

"I understand now," said my friend.—Sunday-school Times.

The Marriage Vow.

And so the words are spoken and the indissoluble knot is tied. Amen. For better, for worse, for good days or evil, love each other, cling to each other, dear friends. Fulfill your course and accomplish your "life's toil." In sorrow, soothe each other; in illness, watch and tend. Cheer, fond wife, the husband's struggle; lighten his gloomy hours with your tender smiles and gladden his home with your love. Husband, father, whatsoever your lot, be your heart pure, your life honest. For the sake of those who bear your name, let no bad action sully it. As you look at those innocent faces, which ever tenderly greet you, be yours, too, innocent, and your conscience without reproach. As the young people kneel before the altar-railing, some such thoughts as these pass through a friend's mind who witnesses the ceremony of their marriage. Is not all we hear in that place meant to apply to ourselves and to be carried away for everyday cogitation?—W. M. Thackeray, in Florida Christian Advocate.

The Alexander Coppersmiths are busy to-day—little hinderers and obstructors of the work of others who have the mind of obedience. Give them room to blow megaphones and assault the air with pudding sticks and paper balls; but you—go on with your work. You will be yourself when the fanfaronade is over.

The Family

Twilight.

MRS. V. G. RAMSEY. (84 YRS. OLD.)

Sunset and the evening shadows;;
The clouds and the depening night;
I wearily sigh
As the hours creep by
And I watch the vanishing light.

But this twilight so drear and lonely
Has visions the day did not see;
Lights gleam from afar
Like the beams of a star,
And the past comes back to me.

The beautiful days of childhood
And youth with its sunshine and flowers;
The smiles and the tears
Of those far-off years
Are mine in these evening hours.

Fair faces look out of the shadows,
Sweet voices are heard in the gloom.
And I stretch out my hand
To the phantom band
In my solitary room.

I remember no more the shadows
Which the years have around me flung,
And again, I sup
The enchanted cup
Which I drank when I was young.

I am glad of the pleasant memories
That makes the evening bright;
But I watch and pray
For the dawn of the day
That will bring the perfect light.

The day that shall open the portal
Of the world where my loved ones abide
And give me there
In that realm so fair
A place with the glorified.

The Dangers of Discourtesy.

I think that it was Rev. Stopford A. Brooke who once uttered these wise and true words: "The power of being able to keep a household from fretting and complaining and from violent tempers, the power of being able to encourage, nourish and stimulate the freedom and growth of others, is gained from there having been built up in the minds of all in the house, as the first motive of life, the great Christian law—Christian because entirely human. Think of others more than of yourself, and of others' happiness more than of your own unhappiness. Of this law the best definition to remember is a word of St. Paul's: 'In honor preferring one another.' This is true courtesy. It is its very flower; it is the essence of Christ's teaching set to music in daily life. It will bring out all the good in others; it will bring out what is best in yourself; it will make your home like very heaven."

Of all the mischief-making elements that creep into many homes, discourtesy in one of the most common and most fatal in its results. When a wife begins to speak sharply and rudely to her husband, and when she finally descends to the low estate of "nagging" him, she is in a fair way to lose both his love and his respect; and when a husband begins to be less courteous to his wife he is in danger of losing both her respect and love.

The rock of discourtesy is the rock on which many a matrimonial bark has stranded. If the father and mother are discourteous to each other, it is not to be expected that the children of the home will be gentle and polite. There is no greater imitator than a child, and there is no one more alert. The child takes note of everything, and it is susceptible to the general atmosphere of the home.

If the father is fault-finding and generally irritable, the child is likely to be of the same disposition. If the children are not taught courtesy in the home, it is not to be expected that they will be courteous outside of the home.

There is a story told of an old German who was engaged in the back part of his place of business when one of his clerks came and told him that there was a lady waiting to see him in his office. He had thrown off his coat and the work he was doing had soiled his hands.

Hurrying to a basin he washed his hands, threw on his coat, straightened his tie and made himself as presentable as possible before going forward to meet the lady. Returning a few minutes later, he said, with an aggreived air, as he threw off his coat:

"I put on my coat und make myself clean for noding. Dot vas youst my vife."

Now there are a good many intelligent, entirely respectable and well-meaning men, who do not feel it to be incumbent upon them to observe the ordinary rules of courtesy towards women, when the woman in question is "youst my vife." And so there are wives who fall into the habit of negligence regarding their personal appearance and who are indifferent to many of the ordinary little courtesies of life, when there is no one around but "just my husband."

It is an evil day in any home when the husband feels that he can be less courteous to his wife than to other women, and it is an equally evil day when the wife feels that she can put aside many of the little courtesies.

No household can be kept from fretting and complaining, no household can be kept free from an atmosphere of unrest and general depression, if the great law of kindness does not obtain in that household. And kindness is the foundation of all real courtesy. Is it true that "life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindness and small obligations, given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort."

Nothing will secure greater comfort in the home than habitual smiles and kindness, combined with the courtesy that is not based on mere "good form," but that is the outgrowth of moral force, self-respect and kindly consideration for others. Could there be any better motive for self-control, patience, forbearance and kindness than a desire to make home happy?—J. L. H., in the Household.

A Thousand Boy Corn Grower.

In his article on the agricultural exhibit at the Fair in the August World's Work, M. G. Cunniff tells this significant story of corn-growing in Illinois: W. B. Otwell was president of the Farmers' Institute of Macoupin County. The thought struck him that if the farmer boys throughout his county could be induced to take an interest in the effort, Macoupin County would produce the finest corn in the world. He persuaded the institute to offer a prize for the best ten ears of corn grown by Macoupin County farmer boys. Each boy made application to him, and received a package of selected seed—Yellow Dent and Boone County White. Hundreds applied.

In the fall the boys sent in their corn. The prize—a bicycle—was awarded. Mr. Otwell went down to see the boy who won, expecting to find him the son of a prosperous farmer. The boy proved to be the fourteen-year-old son of a poor widow inhabiting a little prairie cabin. All summer the boy had "toted" water from the well to his corn patch in bucketfuls. His industry had been remarkable. He was invited to the next meeting of the Farmers' Institute. Mr. Otwell lifted him upon a table. This, said he, turning to the assembled farmers, as he pointed to the little barefoot youngster in his blue-jean overalls, "is the boy who won the prize." The cheers that greeted the boy were louder than those which later on greeted the Governor of the State when he came down to make a speech; for, when these contests had continued several years, the Governor became interested. Mr. Otwell had conceived the idea of extending the contest to the boys of the State, and showing at St. Louis the corn they produced. The Governor subscribed. So did other citizens. One offered a $1,000 Holstein cow for first prize. Other prizes were offered—wagons and plows and windmills. Seventeen thousand boys wrote for seed and information. Two farm wagons would not contain all the letters. The State went into wild enthusiasm—over corn.

And now return to the World's Fair Palace of Agriculture. In the Illinois section is a mountain of huge yellow ears of corn, row upon row, tier upon tier, of little symmetrical pyramids of ten ears each. Before each pyramid is the photograph of the Illinois farmer boy whose corn it is. The selected output of 8,000 Illinois boys is represented. Can you imagine what this means? Eight thousand boys aroused to a pitch of enthusiasm for scientific farming. Seed corn enough to plant the whole Illinois corn belt. If a bountiful crop sprang from the fertile soil last year, a more bountiful crop will leap forth this year.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Home Affection.

The family bond has its subtle and incommunicable sentiment, into which the stranger entereth not. One may disapprove of certain family peculiarities, and even censure certain individual relatives with considerable force of conviction, but one does not suffer the outsider to second these opinions and expressions. Instantly, when some one not of the clan, ventures on fault-finding or criticism, the dominant loyalty awakes, and flings itself into the breech. People stand up for their own, and we all expect it of them, and are amazed and resentful if they do not. Away back in the Shulamite's day, she summed up her tale of blessing and independence by declaring to the prophet, "I dwell with my own." The blood tie holds and it is a significant recognition of this world-wide feeling that among barbarous tribes, when an alien is accepted as a brother, the oath of adoption is emphasized by an actual exchange of drops of blood, drawn from the veins of the one and mingled in the tide of the other.

Home affection is not merely innate. It is cemented by a thousand sweet associations, surrounded by a halo of uncounted traditions, and built up day by day by the accretion of little things that in their result are great things. Little acts of self-denial, little words of love, little gifts, little surprises, little endeavors, how the little nameless things make up the sum of the large and beautiful whole, which makes home the magnet of the wanderer, and the very dearest place on earth.

"You passed all the big houses and all the splendor, and the people who were waiting to give you an ovation," said a gray old father to a son who in the world-battles had won distinction and renown, "and came hurrying back to the old place, my boy. We hardly expected you so soon."

"Ah," laughed the bronzed and manly fellow who had done his duty without wish for acclaim, "what did I care for a lot of shouting people whom I did not know. I could not wait an hour after I was free to come home to you and mother. I tell you," looking round on the old kitchen, the old porch, the old barns, "I tell you, father, it's good to be at home again!"—Margaret E. Sangster, in American Messenger.

Nothing worth Being Angry Over.

A writer says: A dear lady of my acquaintance confided to me an excellent piece of advice when I asked: "Now, tell me, how do you manage to keep so unruffled a temper?"

"Ah," she replied, "there are very few things in this world worth being angry about, so when I feel annoyance rising within me I ask myself quite judicially: 'Is this worth being angry over?' and in nine hundred and ninety cases out of a thousand my common sense answers: 'Oh, dear, no.'"

If you want your husband to love you to his life's end, if you want him to turn to you as his best friend, if you want to keep him your devoted lover, if you want to make him a thoroughly happy man, be amiable, even if it is rather an effort and does not come to you by nature.—Selected.

Our Boys and Girls

Lumberdale, N. C., Aug. 22, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I thought I would write to you for my second time. My pets are a calf, pig and a little kitten. My calf's name is Kate, my pig's name is Nellie and my kitten's name is Pink.

Now I will answer Eva Lassiter's question: Joseph had eleven brothers. With best wishes.

MARSHALL THOMPSON.

Shallotte, N. C., Aug. 20, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a little girl six years old. Papa takes the Advocate and I do enjoy hearing him read the little boys' and girls' letters.

I go to Sunday-school every Sunday that I can. Miss Mary Rourk is my teacher, and I do think so much of her.

I will answer Annie Westbrook's question: Elijah was fed by the ravens.

Your little friend,

LUCY SWAIN.

Pollocksville N. C., Aug. 21, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—As I have never written to your paper before, I thought I would do so. Papa takes the Advocate, and I love to read the boys' and girls' letters. I go to Sunday-school when I can. My teacher is Mrs. Clara Cox, and our pastor is Rev. D. C. Geddie, and we like him very well.

I have three brothers and two sisters. I will close with love and best wishes to the orphans.

Your friend,

NELLIE SCOTT.

Winterville, N. C., Aug. 26, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—I am a small boy fourteen years of age. My sister takes the Advocate and I enjoy reading the children's page.

We have no M. E. Church here, but have the lumber sawed for one. Rev. B. E. Stanfield is our pastor.

I will answer Annie Maud Westbrook's question: Elijah was fed by the ravens.

Now I will ask one: How long did Elijah stay in the wilderness?

It is late, and I will have to close.

Your unknown friend.

BRUTON BRYAN.

P. S.—I send ten cents for the orphans.

Merry Oaks, N. C., Aug 26, 1904.

Dear Advocate:—This is my first letter to the Advocate. I love to read our church paper, and especially the children's letters and the orphans' page.

I go to Sunday-school at Buckhorn. Our pastor is Mr. Starling, and we all love him dearly. My superintendent is Mr. Joe McIver, and my teacher is Cousin Ollie Lawrence. I go to every-day school also. My teacher is Mr. Clarence Judd. He is real nice and a good man. We love him dearly. We are going to move away and I hate to leave our Sunday-school. We have organized a Sunbeam Band. We are going to have a picnic sometime.

I will ask a quetsion: How many of the children that reads the Advocate that knows the Ten Commandments?

I will close, with much love to the Advocate.

Sinners, All.

Mrs. Adams was a very young mother, but she had no hesitation in laying down the law about her first baby. This, says the Chicago News, was her most thrilling announcement: "The baby is not to be rocked, not under any circumstances. I know, mamma. Of course you will say you rocked me; but I have attended ten lectures on the way to bring up a baby, and this child is not to be rocked. The lecturer said rocking a child joggles its brains. I'm sure you don't want your child to grow up an imbecile, do you, Harry?"

"Certainly not," said Harry firmly. He had an idea that it would be fun to rock the baby, but of course Marie must know.

Mrs. Adams had every rocking-chair removed from her room. When it was time for the baby's nap he was simply laid on the bed and left to himself. If he cried, he had his cry out uncomforted. At such times the baby's grandmother would retire from the scene in wrath.

"What's a baby for if not to take a little comfort with?" she asked the nurse; but the nurse, smiling, said nothing.

When the baby was four weeks old grandma carried him up into a vacant bed-room on the third floor. Her daughter was taking a nap. Her son-in-law was down in the libary. There was a glitter in her eyes and a red spot on each cheek. She drew a rocking-chair into the middle of the floor, adjusted the wondering baby, and rocked fiercely, triumphantly. After about ten minutes of this indulgence she was brought to an abrupt pause by a voice from the doorway.

"He seems to like it, doesn't he?" asked her son-in-law.

When she saw the covetous glint in his eyes, the erring grandmother took heart. Without a word she got up, laid the baby in the young father's arms, and motioned to the chair. "You try it," said she.

For the next two weeks their guilty secret drew the two very near together. As often as possible they slipped away and rocked the baby. They marveled at the young mother who had the courage to carry out her Spartan theories.

One day Mr. Adams came home early. There was a low, melodious hum from his wife's room, and he crept to the door. There she was in a low chair, rocking back and forth, her baby in her arms. It was a charming picture. She blushed guiltily, and then took on a look of bravado. "I—I couldn't help it," she faltered.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

A Dog With a Grudge.

Eureka is a small dog, very much devoted to her master. Occasionally her master takes an early train for New York, returning at night. On such occasions "Reke" sits on a box at the window and watches him out of sight; and when the whistle blows for the evening train, she takes her place again to watch for his return.

One evening he did not come; but, seeing another gentleman coming up from the station in the dusk, she mistook him for her master, and, whining for the door to be opened, she ran out, wagging her tail and manifesting her joy in every known way until she had nearly reached the stranger.

When she perceived her mistake, she turned with an expression of extreme disgust and ran back, head and tail lowered, and looking as sheepish as possible.

When he laughed at her, she withdrew to a corner and lay there for the rest of the evening.

Since then she never allows that gentleman to pass without barking at him; and once, when he came to the house on business, she made such a time that she had to be put out. Evidently she thought he had insulted her.—Selected.

A STRONGE ENDORSEMENT.

Dr. C. I. S. Cawthon, Andalusia, Ala., declares "Tetterine is superior to any remedy known to me for eczema and stubborn skin diseases." Many other physicians unite in this testimony. It has accomplished wonders in their practice. It is amazing that anyone would suffer with itching, burning skin diseases when relief might be had infallibly from the use of a 50 cent box of Tetterine.

To Auxiliary Societies.

Dear Sisters:—I feel impressed to call your attention to the resolutions on Juvenile work passed at our annual meeting at Elizabeth City. Those present on that occasion and all who have read our minutes should be furnished with them. But probably none of us realize as we should how irrevocably we are committed to the Pledge expressed therein. By the action of the Conference Society each one of us is under solemn obligation to foster and encourage the interests of our Juvenile work and to "co-operate in all plans for its advancement." Are we doing it? If so, what rapid advancement will be made before our annual gathering at Louisburg! But if we have allowed ourselves to become indifferent to our sacred obligations let us study our Pledge with renewed interest and ask God to help us to come up to the full measure of our individual duty. That you may have the resolutions before you without having to look them up, I give them below:

RESOLUTIONS ON JUVENILE WORK

As the importance of this work, and its far-reaching results, become more apparent, we desire to impress the necessity of stronger effort to awaken and foster a deeper interest in all that pertains to it; therefore

Resolved 1. That we as auxiliaries keep the work of the children before our members, impressing its importance, and co-operating in all plans for its advancement.

2. That as workers we pledge our influence and aid to keep our children engaged in this work.

3. That we recommend entertainments for the children of a nature in harmony with our work as a means of securing interest among both children and parents thereby raising money for our pledge.

4. That we heartily endorse the Little Worker, and try to insure its existence.

As the farmer carefully stores and vigilantly watches over the seed corn for future harvests so let us, my sisters, with loving care and untiring efforts, see that the dear children are early inspired with a love for foreign missions, and properly trained to carry on our work when we shall be called to our Eternal Home.

Lovingly,

L. M. HENDREN.

God's Work Must Be Done.

A poor field negro with a wooden leg hobbled up to the collection table to lay his offering upon it. He took from a pocket a handful of silver, and said: "That's for me, massa"; from another pocket another handful. "That's for my wife, massa;" and from still another pocket yet another handful:: "That's for my child, massa." The pastor remonstrated with him for giving so much. "O massa!" said he, "God's work must be done, and I will have a part in it."

Commenting on this incident Ida Q. Moulton says: "You and I want a part in it. Heaven's treasures will be given us throughout the eternal ages for a brief life of self-denial and self-sacrifice here, out of love for our dear Master. Take this motto to your strong, true, loving heart, fellow Christian: 'God's work must be done, and I will have a part in it.'"—Exchange.

To Corresponding Secretaries.

With the end of the quarter the reports from each auxiliary are being made for the District Secretaries. Will not the Corresponding Secretaries let these reports suggest to them a letter for our column in the Advocate, which all may enjoy? It will only require a few minutes in addition to your regular duties to give us an insight into your auxiliary life. Of course your District Secretary will make mention of your work in her report, but that is not enough. She has several auxiliaries to speak for, and hence is obliged to omit many things which you, as Corresponding Secretaries, may write about. Let us have these reports. You will help and cheer each other with them.

"TITHING."

Abraham's Example.

In considering the question of proportionate and systematic giving we find the scriptural tithing system a subject of interest.

In Gen. 14, Abraham, without question, explanation or requirement, hands a tenth of his spoil over to God's high priest Melchisedek. This was as early as 2,000 B. C.

THE EXPERIENCE OF JACOB.

The next record we have is in the story of Jacob at Bethel. As a result of the vision by which he was made to realize that he was alone with God, he cried out, "How dreadful is this place." He at once sets up a pillar and consecrates it; adding his vow of future service, and, without any allusion to the tenth, on the part of the angel, he says of his own free will, "Of all that Thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto Thee."

MOSES, OUR TEACHER

The next mention of the tithe is the law as given by God through Moses, recorded in Liviticus 27:30-33. "And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seeds of the land or of the fruit of the trees, is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord." He does not say it shall be, but it is! Twenty years after this God appointed the tithe for the Levites, as in Numbers 18:24-28—"But the tithes of the children of Israel I have given to the Levites to inherit," meaning that His portion should be assigned to the priests, adding: "For this is your reward for your services in the tabernacle of the congregation." He still further adds: "Ye shall offer up a peace offering of it to the Lord, even the tenth part of the tithe." So we see that the priests were also included in this system of tithing.

MALACHI S WARNINGS.

But we find that in succeeding years when God's chosen people wandered from Him and went into idolatry, the system of tithing fell into disuse.

God through the prophet Malachi calling His people to repentance, says: "Will a man rob God? Yet he have robbed me." "But ye say, wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation." And he adds the following command: "Bring ye all the thithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

EXCUSES WITHOUT FOUNDATION

There are some who excuse themselves from the duty of paying tithes by saying that this law was only given to the Jews; but we find Christ himself saying in the New Testament: "I came not to destroy the law but to fulfill it."

TRUE HAPPINESS.

Many of our members have realized the happiness that comes from obedience to God's word in regard to this method of giving. The number of tenth givers among our membership is 2,997, and we are sure that many of these do not stop with the tenth.

EFFECTS, GREAT AND FAR REACHING

The universal adoption of this method would mean the solution of all financial problems of the church, and the hastening of the millennial days.

ST. PAUL'S ADVICE

The words of St. Paul to the Apostolic Church touching the matter of giving are also worthy of our notice in this connection: "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." And in another chapter he tells us of the Macedonians who gave themselves to the Lord. When we reach this point we will not withhold from our Heavenly Father that which justly belongs to Him.

The Old and the New Testaments are full of evidence that the duty of giving, or Christian liberality, is just as binding as any other Christian duty.

WORDS FOR ALL TO REMEMBER

"He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly." "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." "Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'" These have become household words, and many other texts might be given to substantiate the duty of Christian liberality. And, doubtless, there is a "cloud of witnesses" ready to bear testimony to the satisfaction they have experienced from obedience to the "law of the tithe."

MRS. J. G. FEARING.

This fine paper was read at our Annual Meeting by Mrs. Fearing, and I am glad to give it a wide circulation, believing that it will be very helpful to this important Department of our work.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of urine difficulties. If it did there would be few children that would do it. There is a constitutional cause for this. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 23, Notre Dame, Ind., will send her home treatment to any mother. She asks no money. Write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child. The chances are it can't help it.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S HYMNAL NO. 2

Should be considered by every Epworth League and Sunday School in which a new songbook is needed. It is unquestionably the best book to use after the Young People's Hymnal (No. 1). . . . . .

Editorial

A conference of Democratic editors will be held in New York September 6th. Editor Josephus Daniels has been designated as chairman of the Committee or Editorial Conference, and is in New York to organize for the work of the Conference. The chairman has sent out 5,100 invitations to this event, and it is expected that there will be fully one thousand acceptances.

In sharp contrast to the vulgar accounts of the vulgar fight between Jeffries and Monroe that have lately filled the papers, is the account of the first Olympic Marathon race ever held in this country. The race covered a course of twenty-four miles and one thousand five hundred yards. The winner was Thomas J. Hicks, of Cambridge, Mass. The distance was run by Hicks in three hours, twenty-eight minutes and fifty-three seconds. It is a good sign that America is beginning to patronize such clean and healthful contests. It is gratifying to every lover of decency that the crowd at the recent pugilistic encounter was far below the expectations of the promoters.

The classes of law students that come up each year before the Supreme Court to be examined have steadily increased to such proportions as to make it burdensome for the judges of the court to conduct the examinations. The work entails the looking over of from 3,500 to 6,000 questions, and the grading of the papers requires a week of exhausting work by the members of the court right at the beginning of the fall term, when the docket is necessarily condensed. It is thought that a bill will be introduced during the next session of the Legislature to take this matter out of the hands of the court, and provide for a committee of examiners to be selected from the bar of the State.

A professor in the University of Virginia has recently made a very interesting and equally valuable discovery. Dr. Paul Barringer is the lucky man, and this is what he found. Some time ago, at the sale of the effects of the late Judge Victor Barringer, of Charlotte, Dr. Barringer purchased what he thought was a mass of molten metal, which the Judge had bought for a trifling sum in Egypt years ago and had kept for a curio. One of Dr. Barringer's children the other day dislodged a small piece from the mass, which, upon polishing, the Professor discovered to be a silver coin of ancient Rome. Over one hundred and fifty coins have already been extracted from the lump, some of them bearing the date 14 A. D., and others showing the stamp of the heads of the Emperor Nero and his wife Pappaea. The whole find is thought to be worth many thousands of dollars.

DRESSING ROOMS FOR CHURCHES.

Yes, that's just what is meant—rooms conveniently located where women may leave their hats, and rearrange their hair, when necessary, before they enter the auditorium. It is no use to urge that the hats be left at home. The women need some head covering on the street; and then, also, they ought to be indulged to the extent of allowing them to show their head dress on the public thoroughfare. But to encourage them to go uncovered in church, that's what needs to be done. There are two scientific reasons for this. First, it is utterly impossible for the congregation to get the best benefits from the sermon when half of them must have their view of the pulpit obstructed by one or a dozen large, feather-decorated hats. Second, the preacher is at a tremendous disadvantage when he has to look down upon a "sea of hats" instead of a "sea of upturned faces." Without a felt response from the people no speaker can have liberty on the platform. In a country church, where the custom still prevails that the women must occupy one side of the room and the men the other, the preacher was noticed to stand most on the side of the pulpit where the men faced him. When criticized for it, he replied that he did so because it helped him to look into the faces of the men, while to face the imposing array of millinery on the women's side had a most chilling, depressing effect upon him. Who can answer the preacher?

It is already a practice among women to remove their hats in a theatre, if they do not leave them at home altogether. Will the sacredness of the sanctuary be violated if the same practice is introduced there? Why should we be so willing to further the success of a play and the comfortable enjoyment of an audience in a theatre, and in the church refuse to make conditions equally favorable? In this matter again the sacred proverb is fulfilled that the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light.

A SENSIBLE WORD.

Much has been written in regard to the new order of worship, the most of the contributions to the subject being of doubtful value. It is refreshing, therefore to read the following from the pen of Dr. H. M. Du Bose, editor of the Epworth Era:

"The new order is best adapted to the needs of universal Methodism. Many of the most spiritual and active churches have along been asking for an enriched service. Others have been satisfied with the older form, endeared by hallowed associations of the sanctuary. The new order satisfies both. Almost invariably additions had been made by usage in the city churches, sometimes inappropriate, but giving evidence of this instinct of worship. The new order provides a sufficiently enriched service for those who desire it—dignified, simple, of pure teaching, allowing ample room for spontaneity sufficiently flexible to meet all emergencies. Those churches in which no need has been felt for a change may continue the older form with but slight and insignificant modifications. The only distinctive feature required by the new order is that the people stand during the singing of the second hymn. There can be no good reason for standing while the first hymn in being sung that is not valid for the second. If the collection is taken during the hymn, the pocket can be reached more easily while standing. Probably the reason for the sitting posture is that originally an offertory was "said or sung," not a hymn at all, and the posture remained as a survival after the hymn had taken the place of the offertory sentences. When an enriched order is demanded, let the optional parts be used; when there is no such demand, they may be omitted; but let us avoid crude attempts at service-making for ourselves, and respectfully conform with what the Church in her wisdom has provided.

THE OLD FOGY.

The old fogy is ordinarily a man or a woman, considerably past middle age. The hair is almost always frosted with the snows of winter. The step is stiff and measured. The eye is calm, though weak, from the strain of long service. This person's dress is not strictly fashionable, neither do his ways correspond to the ways of the younger generation. There is a pathetic loneliness in his life, all the companions of former days having already tottered down the hill; or lost the positions of influence which they once held.

To those who do not think that there ought to be any check upon the advancing car of progress, this character, if not a nuisance, is to be endured with ill grace. To those that believe that the present grows out of the past until it becomes itself the past, the old fogy is one of the bulwarks of society. Certainly he does not fall in with every new-fangled departure. He does not believe every spirit, and may be, of course, disposed to think that all the good existed in the days when he was young and influential. But think for a moment into what reckless extravagance the present generation might plunge, if it were not restrained by just such a presence. What if young America could always have its way without struggle, without opposition! The prospect is too terrible, even to allow the imagination to linger over it.

At the St. Louis Exposition there is a plant called the Locomotive Test. A powerful engine is run out upon a projecting platform, with its wheels resting upon a stationary set of wheels. The engine is attached to a firmly-fixed mass of rock and cement. The steam is turned on, and the monster begins to go through all the movements that cause it to run when it is on the track. By a system of brakes, the stationary set of wheels may be made to offer resistance, at the pleasure of the operator. Thus it is possible to determine the pulling capacity of the locomotive, and to observe its defects while in motion. And just so the "old fogy," as we have inappropriately named him, acts as a resisting force against the impetuous youth of the country. He retards the swift machine, and obliges the influences that are moving against him to win every step of the way, and to give up the defects that would mean disastrous failure, if carried on into the future.

All honor to the old fogy, the conservator of the true liberty of his people, the land-mark standing in the path of duty that is so often the way to glory! Let us reverence the cause for which he suffered in his prime; let us deal gently with his prejudices, and be grateful for his spirit of conservatism.

AN IMPORTANT ITEM NEGLECTED.

Just at this time when so many young men and women are going away from home for the first time to attend school, and many, perhaps, into strange communities to seek employment, a word of admonition to parents may not be out of place.

With all the pre-arrangement that parents make for sending their children into new surroundings, there is one consideration which is very vital and which is most grievously neglected. It is a matter of religious interest that is slighted. Not many a father would think of allowing his boy to leave home for college without notifying the college authorities of the fact, yet he rarely takes thought also to inform the pastor of his church at that place or some influential Christian layman. The result is that the boy has no encouragement to attend church. If he attends Sunday-school, he goes unannounced and must be treated as a stranger. It takes him a long time to get acquainted with the pastor and with the young people. Frequently, being timid, he allows these considerations to keep him from showing himself at all. He forms bad companionships. He begins to neglect church duties. He goes home, perhaps a moral wreck. Then his father wants to blame the college for it. Or you may note like results with the same treatment of young men that must seek employment away from home.

Save yourselves anxiety and your children embarrassment by writing a letter ahead to the pastor or to the superintendent of the Sunday-school, or to some influential lavman whom you may know, advising him that your son will arrive in his town on a certain day. The results of such a simple act of forethought will not be slow to make themselves felt.

PROFESSOR J. F. BIVINS DEAD.

Prof. J. F. Bivens, headmaster of Trinity Park High School, was killed the morning of September 5th by falling from a train on the Seaboard Air Line, about six miles from Durham. Five days before he had been united in marriage with Miss Fannie Carr; and they were returning from their bridal tour.

In the absence of the editor the foregoing note is made. Professor Bivens was one of the most useful and promising young men in the Methodist ranks; and his death is a heavy blow. And the circumstances of it touch every heart.

Methodist Mention

State.

Rev. A. J. Parker and wife have gone to the St. Louis Exposition.

Rev. N. M. Watson and wife are back at their post of duty in Wilmington after a sojourn at Jackson Springs.

The veterans have re-elected General Julian S. Carr Commander-in-Chief of the United Confederate Veterans of North Carolina.

Dr. B. F. Dixon is at his desk in the Auditor's office again, and is reported to be looking more fit for hard work than he has for some time.

Mr. W. E. Coletrane, son of Rev. N. E. Coletrane, left Smithfield last week to resume his duties as principal of Manteo High School, on Roanoke Island.

Mr. Joel V. Wilson, father of City Clerk Wilson, of Raleigh, died last Wednesday, August 31st. His funeral was held the following day from Edenton Street Church.

John S. Huyler, of New York, offers to pay half the cost of establishing a big undenominational college for young women in Asheville, N. C., and half the cost of maintenance, if the city will pay the other half.

The following from Rev. F. B. McCall is very encouraging: "We closed on August 26th a meeting of thirteen days in Carr church, during which over forty persons professed peace with God. Rev. J. A. Dailey, of Milton, N. C., was with us during the last five days of the meeting, and greatly endeared himself to us all by his strong sermons and genial spirit."

Rev. S. A. Stewart, of Monroe, who has for the past two years been Professor of History in Trinity Park High School, was interested enough with the Advocate to come into the office last Wednesday during a few hours stay in the city. Mr. Stewart will be in Durham until September 27th, when he will leave for New Haven, Conn., to enter the Yale Divinity School.

Rev. G. B. Starling reported at the office Saturday morning, with the information that he had just closed a great meeting at Ebenezer on his charge. He said he did the preaching when he was not kept from doing so by the shouts of the newly saved. There were nearly forty conversions. Twenty-seven joined Ebenezer church. At the same time that the twenty-seven adults were baptized, three infants were also consecrated to the Lord by the same sacrament. In explanation of the meeting, Mr. Starling said that it was due to the fine Sunday-school that is conducted at Ebenezer and to the fact that the congregation is "always in grace."

Connectional.

A movement is on foot to build a superannuate home at Guin, Ala., in the Jasper District.

Bishop Galloway is reported to have reached Yokohama, Japan, safe during the week ending August 19th.

The temperance people won in an election on local option at Mayfield, Ken., recently by a vote of 593 to 267.

Rev. J. N. Huggins, of Lexington, with his family, has gone to the Exposition and to visit relatives in Missouri.

The Missouri Board of the United Synod of the Lutheran Church in the South convened in St. Mark's Lutheran Church, Charlotte, August 31st.

Immediately upon his arrival in New York from England, Bishop Hoss hurried to New Mexico to the bedside of his son Sessler, who is afflicted.

Rev. W. G. Harlin is writing a serial in the New Orleans Christian Advocate entitled, "The Apostle to the Americans." The "Apostle" is Asbury.

Dr. S. S. Keener announces the gift of $1,000 from Mrs. McLeroy to the Endowment Fund for the widows and orphans of Louisiana Methodist preachers.

Goodnight College, of Texas, located on the Southern Pacific Railway, has been endowed with 650 acres of land and 500 buffaloes. The donor is Charles Goodnight, for whom the college is named.

It is said that many of the sufferers from the General Slocumb disaster in New York harbor have lost faith in God, and have ceased to take any interest whatever in St. Mark's Church. They blame the church for the tragedy.

The pygmies of Central Africa now on exhibition at the St. Louis Exposition were persuaded to come to this country by Rev. S. P. Verner, a Presbyterian missionary. He traveled 26,000 miles, 800 of the distance on foot, in his effort to secure the men.

Georgia Methodism is to be congratulated that she furnishes another missionary for our foreign field—a preacher's daughter, Miss Mamie Myers. Rev. H. P. Myers and wife are honored in the decision of this young woman. They have wrought well in their own home.

Wofford College Lyceum will present to the public next season a course which for variety and strength will be unexcelled, according to J. A. Gainewell, in the Southern Christian Advocate. The Lyceum is a permanent feature of Wofford, with a reserved fund of nearly $7,000.

Dr. J. P. Mahaffy, of Trinity College, Dublin, whose books on Greek history and literature have won fame for him, is about arriving in this country. He is going to Chicago to deliver a series of lectures on his favorite subject of Hellenism. He will also speak at the International Congress at St. Louis next month.

Granbery College (Texas) has changed it name to Granbery University Training School, has adopted the course of study prescribed in the Fitting School of Southwestern University, correlated with Southwestern in every respect, and the prospects for a most successful career under the new plans and management are most flattering.

The prospects for unprecedented crops in the Indian Territory are fine. There will be the largest yield of corn and cotton ever known. With our inexhaustible bed of coal, vast oil and gas fields, and numerous other resources, this country is a veritable El Dorado. We must hold this field for our Christ and Southern Methodism.

Rev. W. E. Mumford, who was for several years a member of the South Georgia Conference, and agent of the Conference Orphan Home, but who later located and founded the Industrial Home for orphan children at Macon, died on August 11, at his home in Macon, after a lingering illness. He had at the time of his death about one hundred and fifty children in his home. His place will be difficult to fill.

Mr. Sangi Ogawa, the Japanese ministerial student of Randolph-Macon College, whose extrme illness at Hampton, Va., was noticed last week, is dead. Mr. Ogawa was born in Kobe, Japan, on January 1, 1882. His father is a Buddhist, but young Ogawa was converted to the Christian faith when a child under the inuence of Mrs. Lambeth, our missionary in Kobe. He had been at Randolph-Macon since the summer of 1902.

President W. W. Daniel, of Columbia College, South Carolina, for women, contributes some heart-cheering information in regard to the college to the Southern Christian Advocate. A proposed new building for the college, having a site embracing forty-six acres, will be erected two stories high, and contain one hundred and fifty-three dormitories, ten class rooms, large dining-room, commodious chapel, parlors, offices, gymnasium, two literary society halls, an art studio, science hall, a number of music rooms, kitchen, pantry and laundry. While we are rejoicing over the rebuilding of G. F. C., we wish to congratulate Columbia.

General Notes

General Kuropatkin is said to be deeply religious. When at home he always attends religious service, and has a chapel in his own house.

Murad V., former Sultan of Turkey, is dead. Three months after he became Sultan, in May, 1876, he was dethroned and imrisoned in favor of the present Sultan, Abdul Hamid II. All these years he has been confined in prison.

The Methodist preachers of Philadelphia have recently made a canvass of their city in behalf of their Methodist church paper. Seventy-two pastors in but a few days' systematic work added 1,745 full-year Advocate subscribers to the list. "This bears out," says the Christian Guardian, "what we have often said—the circulation of the church paper depends largely upon the pastors," and we fully agree with it.—Western Christian Advocate.

Dr. Charles B. Spahr, of Kings Bridge, New York City, editor of two magazines of New York, and a well-known writer on economic topics either fell or jumped overboard from the steamer Prince Albert, at about 5 o'clock in the evening of August 30th. Mr. Spahr was making a tour of Europe for the benefit of his health. Mr. Spahr seemed to have been much improved by his trip, and his traveling companion said he never for a moment suspected that he would attempt to commit suicide.

A copy of the New Testament was recently found upon the dead body of a Japanese soldier before Port Arthur. The agents of the Bible Society have preserved this book as a precious relic, and as a token of the new Japan. This brings to mind that about 200,000 Bibles were distributed in Japan last year, about seven-eights of which were disposed of by sale. The tract societies and publishing houses put out about three-quarters of a million volumes of religious books, and a union hymnal has been issued by the Protestant churches. Another indication of religious progress in this country is that there are enrolled 43,000 members of Protestant churches and 50,000 Sunday-school scholars.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

In reviewing a book of sermons, Bishop Henry W. Warren recently said: "We are really surprised that in so many sermons there should be no one treating specifically of that grandest possibility of human nature—the new creation of a sinful soul into the image of God. It is a most glowing and fascinative theme for every kind of a man. That there should be a life so high that good blood, careful, early religious training, best culture, high civil authority, and the great respect accorded the ruler of the Jews could not secure it, but it must be born from above, born of the present working spirit in creating energy, makes it a theme of transcendent interest. It is much to save a life imparted so high that death cannot touch it. This is presumed to exist in nearly every sermon, but how could any one leave out the fact and the process in eight printed sermons?"

The New York Churchman has issued a very beautiful supplement to the regular number, entitled, "The St. Louis Exposition, Its Significance," by Charles Rollison Lamb. Mr. Lamb is very well known in the religious world generally, as the artist-architect associated with the firm of J. & R. Lamb, of New York, and also on account of his efforts towards developing a reverent and artistic feeling in church decoration. In the Churchman article, which Mr. Lamb has written as a member of the National Advisory Committee of the Department of Art on the St. Louis Exposition, he has given the history of the artistic side of the Exposition. The illustrations in the article are numerous and very beautiful. Altogether it is a valuable addition to the serious literature on the subject.

NORTH CAROLINA EPWORTH LEAGUE
DEVOTIONAL & CHARITABLE — CONFERENCE — LITERARY & EVANGELICAL
EDITED BY REV. H. B. ANDERSON.

League Critics.

There are few young people taking part in chapter work who might not be greatly helped by friendly criticism. Errors of pronunciation, voice, posture and emphasis are common and might be easily corrected in the young if their attention were called to them.

Every chapter should appoint a committee of three wise, competent critics who should note all errors, and at the close of the meeting, or at some more convenient time, hand privately to those taking part in the evening's exercises the result.

I say hand privately to those taking part because it would prevent embarrassment, and at the same time accomplish the desired end. Many a speaker to-day might be more effectual had some one called his attention to his faults when he first began to exercise in public. Who has not known a good composition to fall ineffectual because it was spoken too fast or too slow, in too high a key, or so low that many words were indistinct, or because there were glaring errors in pronunciation, or in some other way marred in the rendering.

The League Board.

Such is the importance of the Epworth League that those only who have an abiding interest in its workings should be elected members of the Board. So long as only three or four out of a membership of seventeen are present at any meeting of the Board we may not expect any general awakening. From year to year laymen have been nominated and elected as members of this Board who have not attended a session of the Conference save, perhaps, on Sunday for twelve years. And there are clerical members who have not met with the Board during that time. These may have an interest in the League, but their interest in the work of some other board or committee, of which they are members, is greater.

Why, in a Conference so large as ours, some men are on two and three boards and committees is, to us, inexplicable except under peculiar conditions.

In a matter involving so much as the Epworth League, more attention should be given to the nomination of the Board, and if possible men who have at heart the interest of this cause should be nominated. An enthusiastic League Board would insure a forward movement of the League in North Carolina Conference.

Seventeen men, scattered as they are through the Conference, thoroughly alive to this interest, would make themselves felt in a quickening of a League conscience throughout our borders.

True, it is yet three months to Conference, and some time before a new Board is to be elected, and it may seem that this article is premature, but it may serve to arouse from their apathy some whose interest in the matter should be keenest. So mote it be!

Notes.

One of the great objections to the modern novel is the long-drawn-out scandal. The novelist seems to think it an essential to the success of his book. Whether he be preacher or layman, he must paint vice as laughingly peeping from behind a gauze curtain; and our young people too often estimate a book by the shock it gives to their moral sensibility.

* * *

Some editors of League columns leaving home for a week or two would expect to find many communications awaiting their return because of the interest of their constituency in the League work.

* *

What shall we do with the word "only?" It is more frequently out of joint than any other word. A highly cultured gentleman is just as apt to say, "He only had one son," for "he had only one son," as anybody else.

* * *

If you would be helpful to prisoners, inmates of asylums, hospitals, helpless invalids, or any who are kept, for any cause, from attending church, write to Rev. J. Marvin Nichols, Gainesville, Texas, who has a plan on foot for their benefit.

* * *

When we read of whole Conferences being thoroughly organized, with not a district unorganized, and continuous Conferences uniting in assembly work, it is with sadness we contemplate our own unorganized condition and the apparent indifference to League work in general. But this state of things is not going to continue. The time will be when every district in the North Carolina Conference will be organized and holding district Leagues, and when as much interest will be had in a Conference League as is now manifested in an Annual Conference.

TRAGEDY AVERTED.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved," writes Mrs. W. Watkins, of Pleasant City, Ohio. "Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible cough set in besides. Lesson for September 11, 1904.

Elijah Taken Up to Heaven.

Golden Text: He was not; for God took him.—Genesis 5:24.

We come now to the closing scenes in the life of Elijah, the Tishbite, well named the "prophet of fire." The sacred historian does not give us a closely connected record of his life, but rather selects the most striking events in his career, and weaves them into the history of the people of Israel. So in regard to the close of Elijah's life, we are not told of what led up to his translation, but are presented with the dramatic scene of today's lesson quite apart from any connection with preceding events.

Elisha with Elijah.—Elijah's last hours upon this earth were spent in company with his disciple Elisha, upon whom he had thrown his prophetic mantle in accordance with the divine direction referred to in our last lesson. Elisha on his part had accepted the divine intimation thus given, and had become an ardent follower of the great prophet, to whom he looked up as to a spiritual father.

Elisha's persistence in remaining with Elijah is a striking feature of Elijah's last hours, and suggests in its outcome the reward that comes to those who abide faithful in any loving ministry upon God's servants.

Crossing the Jordan.—Peculiar interest always attaches to the last things in the life of any great man. So the crossing of the Jordan by an act of miraculous power, which reminds us strongly of Moses crossing the Red Sea, and of Joshua crossing the Jordan is well worthy of notice.

It is characteristic of Elijah's career that miracles seemed to be his constant credentials as a representative of the true God. While other prophets preached by their spoken words, Elijah was constantly presenting divine truth by some act of miraculous power.

A Parting Request.—It is a striking though often a much misunderstood request which Elisha makes of Elijah in response to the prophet's bidding, "Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee."

The gift of a double portion of Elijah's spirit did not mean, as it is often mistakenly interpreted that Elisha should be twice as great a prophet as Elijah. The request was based upon the Deuteronomic provision that a father may, if he so desire, give a double-portion to a first-born son, so that he may have twice as much as each of the other sons. So Elisha asks that he may receive "such a blessing as will show that he is esteemed as the dearest member of that band (the sons of the prophets) whom Elijah had most trusted."

Into Heaven by a Whirwind.—The manner of Elijah's departure from this earth was in fitting accord with his life. His had been a rugged, strenuous career, he had walked in close company with Jehovah through all the days of his prophetic activity. Hence it was appropriate that he should ascend to heaven in a blaze of glory, and with manifest tokens of God's presence with him in his passing away.

Lessons from a Great Life.—1. Elijah was a man of great faith. The mantle which he used with such wonderful results was but the outward symbol of an inward faith, which God honored by enabling him to triumph over the greatest obstacles.

2. Elijah was a man of great courage. He stood alone on Mt. Carmel, and to a certain extent he stood alone throughout his whole career, and this required the truest kind of courage.

3. Elijah was a man of prayer. He was ever in close communion with God, and herein lay the secret of his greatest power.

MORE RIOTS.

Disturbances of strikers are not nearly as grave as an individual disorder of the system. Overwork, loss of sleep, nervous tension will be followed by utter collapse, unless a reliable remedy is immediately employed. There's nothing so efficient to cure disorders of the Liver or Kidneys as Electric Bitters. It's a wonderful tonic, and effective nervine and the greatest all around medicine for run-down systems. It dispels Nervousness, Rheumatism and Neuralgia and expels Malaria germs. Only 50 cents, and sastisfaction guaranteed by all druggists.

I CURE CANCER.
Have you Cancer? Have you been given up as hopelessly incurable by everybody? I can still cure you. At least, I have cured others who were thought to have but a few days to live, and why not cure you? No knife. No plaster. No caustics. No sloughing oils. No injection of acids. No blood drawn. No pain. I can cure internal cancer just as readily as external. You can be cured by my "Home Treatment" at your own homes for less than one-fourth the cost of "Personal Treatment" but if you have been humbugged till you have lost faith in the honesty or ability of any one to handle this disease successfully, come to me, and I will cure you or no pay. And when I cure you you stayed cured. It does not reappear in a few months. I will put money in the bank to back up that assertion. You will be absolutely, wholly and perfectly cured. The chances are ten to one if anything else is the matter with you, you will be cured of that too. You can be cured a great deal quicker, and more cheaply, if you have never permitted your body to be operated on or experimented with by others before I take your case, still if you do not believe it, go ahead and try, but remember me when they have failed. Will you not write me a full description of your case and let me tell you what I can do for you. Address

The Durham Hosiery Mill is trying the experiment of working colored help. A mill has been fitted up with several machines, the old furniture factory being occupied, and negroes are doing the work. The experiment will began work Saturday. If successful this will be the only hosiery mill in the United States in which colored help will do all the work.

Mr. E. M. Armfield, of High Point, has given the University $5,000 as an endowment for the library of English philology. This gift, coming from one of the younger alumni, is very gratifying to the friends of the University. It supplies a pressing need in the English department, making it possible to form a collection of books which will be exceedingly useful for study and research and for the development of the department.

The Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad was leased to the Howland Improvement Company, of Asheville, for a term of ninety-one years and four months, by the stockholders of that road at a meeting held in New Bern last Thursday. The following was the stock vote for the resolution to lease: By J. A. Bryan, 147; Craven County stock, 185; Lenoir County, 56; Demsey Wood, 310; C. M. Bushee, 8; by H. R. Bryan, Jr., 37; by E. C. Duncan, 208; T. J. Jarvis, 8; total private stock, 908; State proxy, 350; total for lease, 1,258. Against lease: by J. A. Bryan, 2; Pamlico County, 26; by Demsey Wood, 15; by C. E. Foy, 51; L. G. Daniels, 3; total, 97. As chairman of the State Board of Internal Improvements, Governor Aycock was present, and with Mr. B. W. Ballard outvoted the third member of the board (Mr. B. C. Beckwith), thus throwing the State's 350 votes in favor of the lease. The rental is 3 per cent on the capital stock for the first ten years, 3 per cent for the second ten years, 3½ for the third ten years, 4 for the fourth ten years, 4½ for the fifth ten years, 5 for the sixth ten years, and 6 per cent for the balance of the term. The Howland Company assumes and pays the bonded indebtedness of the road as it falls due, and if the debt is refunded it shall be at the lowest possible rate of interest, and in no case shall Howland pay more than 6 per cent on these bonds. Howland agrees to spend within the next three years $250,000 in permanent improvements. He has deposited $100,000 in United States bonds with the State Treasurer to guarantee the faithful performance of the lease.

The Blooded Chickens are Coming.

Bro. D. H. Hooker, of Fremont, sends us a pair of white Wyandotts. Who will send us a white Leghorn pullet to pair with our cockerel, Leghorn.

Another Calmity.

When Billie died, the boys turned their eyes to Rub, the calf, for a pet. But when I returned home last Monday, the news met me that the calf was dead. Troubles come in pairs. Thanks that the cows, and the pigs, and Bob, and the chickens, and the children are well.

We greatly need some guano for our turnips and crimson clover and rye.

The Superannuated Preacher's Home

What of the Old Preachers' Home? Have you given it up? Not at all. We have had so much on our hands in putting up our Main building, that we could not divide our strength. These dear old men—the roll of honor, are still on our hearts. They are on the peoples hearts.

They anxiously enquire about the "Home." We have a few dollars on it.

If any one with large money is anxious about it, they may send us a check for a thousand or two thousand or five thousand as the case may be. We hope to put a ten thousand dollar building here in the near future. I think I may say we will let it when $7,500 are in hand. Send it along, Brother Brown's bank can hold it. It will keep.

Receipts up to April 1.

Plank Chapel, support for an orphan, $2.65; Kittrell, support for an orphan, $1.40; Ebenezer, support for of an orphan, $2.95; A. E. Fuller, $2.00; O. E. Fuller, $2.00; Salem, $12.70; Oxford, $26.51; Haw River Circuit on subs., $1.55; Haw River Circuit, on support of an orphan, $2.95; Miss Eva Mann, $2.00; Mrs. Susan C. Hunt, on subs., $2.00; Mrs. D. N. Hunt, on subs., 50 cents; Miss Sarah E. Hunt, on subs., $1.00; the Little People's Aid Society, Airlie, one bed, $15.00; the Little People's Aid Society, Airlie, general fund, $3.00.

Donations in kind:

A pair of white Wyandotte chickens from Bro. D. H. Hooker, Fremont, N. C.

The Opening.

Most of the children returned August 31, and the session opened on the first of April. It had been intended to have a public opening, and Miss Emma Page was invited to come and give us a Bible reading or lesson in the Catharine Page Chapel as the opening service. But she did not find it convenient to do so. We had no public service. The children and Miss Lucy Reeks, and Miss Mamie Jenkins, and the Matron, and the Superintendent met in the Chapel and held a short service. Singing, reading the Word, a prayer, and a short talk, constituted the exercises. The children are all in good health and looking remarkably well. Their friends seem to have taken good care of them. We hope that they brought no reproach on the Institution. They are a goodly sci.

That Collection.

I wonder if all the preachers will take a collection in every congregation for the Orphanage between now and Conference. I wonder if every Superintendent of Sunday-schools will get his school to do something once a month for the orphans.

Brother preachers don't put everything off for Thanksgiving. If you do, at least five hundred churches will not have an opportunity of giving anything to these little helpless ones. It will be a great loss to them. How easy to give everybody a chance. They want it.

A member of the Primitive Baptist Church, a very poor man, came to me and said: "I want to give something to that. Anybody will give to that cause."

Applications Coming In.

Quite a number of applications have come in. But provisions have been made for but very few. Not a single child has been provided for except by the intervention of the Superintendent for nearly two years. I wonder if the pastors and the superintendents of the Sunday-schools will ever take it in hand. They could provide for a hundred before Conference, if they would. Maybe they will. It would be a pity for that grand building to stand there empty, for years to come, for the want of a little attention to that matter. Then there are so many needy cases. They are just begging for admittance.

We will have to take the most needy, and the others will have to wait until provision is made. My Lord, send help!

WORKING OVERTIME.

Eight hour laws are ignored by those tireless, little workers—Dr. King's New Life Pills. Millions are always at work, night and day, curing Indigestion, Biliousness, Constipation, Sick Headache and all Stomach, Liver and Bowell troubles. Easy, pleasant, safe, sure. Only 25 cents at all druggists.

THE AUTO-PIANO

Is one of the wonders in automatic piano players. In appearance it is just like an ordinary piano. You can play with your fingers at will, or drop the pedals out of the lower case and you have a perfect piano player capable of playing any style of music, from ragtime to the classics, no matter how difficult. The entire mechanism is in the case of the piano. Any one can operate it, even a little child.

The player is as fine as any on the market, and you have the advantage of player and piano combined.

Come in and examine, hear and play it. We will be glad to show you the most wonderful combination piano and player of the age. Write for prices, etc.

PLATT.—After a protracted illness of nearly two years, Miss Hattie Platt died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Platt, June 7, 1904, in the twenty-second year of her age.

Of kind disposition, reared in a Christian home, and converted in childhood, she presented to her family and church a character unsullied by worldliness and an influence which counted only for good. She was ready to meet the summons which called her to a better land.

We extend our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved.

W. T. USRY.

THARRINGTON.—Mrs. Emily Tharrington was born in Franklin County, N. C., August 14, 1843, and died August 9, 1904.

At the age of twelve years she joined Ebenezer M. E. Church, in Franklin County, N. C., but afterwards moved her membership to Trinity church, four miles north of Louisburg. She was married to Allen P. Tharrington, December 21, 1865. In 1884 she, with her husband and seven small children, moved to Warren County and settled two miles from Arcola, and moved her membership to Bethlehem church. Her husband died in less than a year after they moved to Warren County, leaving her with a family of seven children to raise. She was a good woman, a faithful Christian, was loved by all who knew her, and was ready to answer the call to "come up higher." She leaves four daughters and two sons. They will miss her, but may the grace of God be with them.

G. W. D.

MERRITT.—Hon. J. S. Merritt was born in Person County, N. C., November 15, 1860, and died May 28, 1904.

He was a lawyer, and spent the last years of his life in Roxboro, N. C., in the successful practice of his profession.

Brother Merritt had many friends throughout his native county, a great multitude of whom were present at his funeral.

He was prominently identified with much of the material progress of this community, and was deemed a useful citizen. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was also a Mason.

He was buried according to the burial service of his church and the Order or A. D. and A. Masons.

Brother Merritt was the devoted husband of a brave, true wife, and the affectionate father of five bright, interesting children. In their desolate grief these bow in sorrow unspeakable till that time when they shall meet again.

When Brother Merritt realized that the time of his departure from this life was approaching, having come to a view-point not attained before, like many of us shall have to do, he frankly confessed that he had not followed his Lord as he should have done, and he deeply deplored the mistakes of his life. But God who is always plenteous in mercy gave place for repentance, and by deep and true repentance our beloved brother found an abundant pardon and died in the full assurance of faith.

So may he rest on the bossom of our Lord until we shall see him again.

God bless the bereaved and sorrow-stricken family.

WEST.—These lines are to record the triumphant death of a young Christian wife and mother. Sister Fannie West passed out from her earthly home on July 26, 1904. She was born at Thompson Ridge, Orange County, New York, on July 31, 1872. When fourteen years old she came to Elizabeth City, N. C., where she spent the remainder of her life. She gave her heart to God in girlhood and lived a consistent life in the Methodist church. She was more than a nominal Chritsian. The Master's service was her chief delight, and He himself was a constant guest in her home. The memory of her work in the Sunday-school, the choir and in the church will ever be an inspiration to those with whom she labored.

Although a young woman, she had set her house in order and was waiting in hope and patience for the change to come. Her mother, Mrs. Crawford, and her husband, were the faithful watchers by her bed. These and Evelyn, the little daughter, are left behind. There are also three sisters and one brother, all of whom have families. What a pleasure for them to remember her devoted life and triumphant fearless death. May the Holy Spirit fill the saddened home with His abiding presence.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, it has pleased almighty God to remove from our midst our beloved young friend, Miss Sue Davis; therefore be it resolved, by the members of the Woman's Home Mission Society of Henderson M. E. Church:

1. That while we bow in humble submission to God's will, yet we feel keenly the loss of our faithful friend and co-worker.

2. That the sweet influences of her Chritsian life shall be to us an inspiration to larger usefulness, greater devotion and sacrifice.

3. That we hereby express to the bereaved ones our heartfelt sympathy and prayers in this deep affliction.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and to the Advocate for publication, also recorded in the minutes of our Society.

MRS. H. C. SPIERS,
MISS MATTIE DANIEL,
MISS NORMA BRITT,
Committee.

At the monthly meeting of the New Bern Auxiliary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society August 5th, the announcement of the death of Mrs. Pauline Brooks brought sorrow to its members.

She, who had organized and served in this Society, won her way to the hearts of all, who were privileged at that time to be members of this Auxiliary. She inspired them to labor for the glorious cause of missions, and her influence still lives.

Whereas, it has been the will of an all-wise providence to call to her final resting place our beloved friend, Mrs. Pauline Brooks; therefore be it Resolved 1. That the church and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has lost one of its truest friends.

2. That in the death of our friend a sad vacancy has been caused in the ranks of our missionary workers, which, while bowing to the will of God, we greatly depore, and that in this, our loss, we desire to unite with the family in their sorrow, and wish to express to them our sympathy in

CONSUMED BY A FIRE THAT WATER WILL NOT QUENCH

Eczema drives its victim almost to the verge of distraction by its intolerable itching, stinging and burning. It seems to set the skin on fire, and the tormented sufferer rubs and scratches till the flesh is raw and the skin is torn and bleeds. Nothing applied externally does much good, for the disease is internal; the blood is aflame with acid poisons, that are forcing their way through the glands and pores of the skin, causing it to redden and swell and break out in splotches, pustules and pimples, from which a clear, yellow, watery matter exudes, hardens and dries, and then peels off in scales or fine particles like bran. Eczema kindles a fire that water will not quench, and that lotions, salves, powders and soap cannot smother. As warm weather comes on and the system is reacting and the blood making extra efforts to throw off the accumulated poisons, Eczema attacks with redoubled violence, and the sufferer is almost distracted by the fearful itching and burning. It is the most uncomfortable and aggravating of all skin eruptions and a terror in warm weather.

Local remedies give temporary ease, but as Eczema is not due to outside causes, but to a disordered condition of the system and an over-acid and impure blood, the treatment must be constitutional, or internal. Purify the blood and the skin disease will disappear. No better blood remedy can be found than S. S. S. It builds up the sour and acid blood, rids it of all impurities and poison, stimulates the sluggish organs, and invigorates and tones up the entire system; and as all skin eruptions like Eczema are only symptoms or signs of bad blood, they naturally disappear when that vital fluid is again restored to health.

SSS

S. S. S. is guaranteed strictly vegetable. It is not only a blood purifier, but a splendid tonic and appetizer, making it an ideal spring medicine. Treat Eczema through the blood, or you will never get permanently rid of it. Write for our book on the Skin and its Diseases, which is mailed free. Medical advice furnished without cost to you.

ECZEMA KEPT SPREADING.

Six years ago my wife had a breaking-out below her knees. At first red bumps appeared, but soon white, husky scabs came, and when these would shed off the place became red again, and would itch and burn so that she found it impossible to sleep. At times a yellow water ran from the bumps, and it kept getting worse and worse. Our family physician pronounced it Eczema, and prescribed ointments and powders; but it kept spreading, breaking out on her body and arms, and almost closed up her ears. The druggist at Garner told me to try S. S. S., which she did, and after taking several bottles was cured, and is well to-day and has been for years.

Resolutions adopted by Woman's Home Mission Society at Stantonsburg, N. C.:

Whereas, the all-wise God has called from labor to reward our beloved sister and First Vice-President, Mrs. J. T. Graves; therefore be it Resolved 1. That in her death our Society and church has lost one of its most consecrated members and the community a true friend.

2. That while we shall miss her sadly, yet we would be resigned to the will of our heavenly Father, knowing it is well with her, for she has only exchanged the sorrows and cares of life for the joys and triumphs of the redeemed and the presence of her dear Saviour whom she so faithfully served.

3. That we will try to follow her as she followed her Lord so that when the "Great Reaper," who gleans all fields, shall come to us, without warning, as He did to our sister, we, too, may be ready to meet our God.

4. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family, to whom her love was so strong and tender, and by whom she is so sorely missed. But we rejoice that they sorrow not as those without hope, knowing their loss is her eternal gain.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy be sent to the bereaved family, one to the Wilson Times and one to the Raleigh Christian Advocate.

Resolutions adopted by the church Conference of Oaky Grove Church:

In memory of our sister, E. Meto Jones, who has been taken from our midst by the angel of death, and translated by the power of God to the realms of glory, there to be in the company of Jesus, her Saviour, and all her friends who have preceded her to the better land, we offer the following resolutions:

Resolved 1. That we, as a church, desire to record our appreciation of her exalted Christian character and her sweet spirit. We all feel that we have been made better by association with her, and while we deplore our loss, we rejoice in the hope of meeting her over on the other side. We tender our heartfelt sympathies to her husband and children and all her friends.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her bereaved family, be spread upon the minutes of the church conference and also a copy be sent to the Raleigh Chritsian Advocate.

TWENTY-ONE YEARS.

Twenty-one years ago a small red spot appeared under my father's eye. It gradually enlarged and soon became inflamed and very painful. During that time many so-called cancer doctors treated it by burning it off, but it grew larger until the eye-ball was almost hidden. On February 1, 1898, I brought my father to the Kellam Hospital, Richmond, Va.; the cancer was entirely cured in a short time and it is out.

BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ON EARTH. — A TESTIMONIAL FROM A MINISTER.

Lenoir, N. C., June 5, 1901.

During the past ten years I have had occasion to use Mrs. Joe Person's Blood Purifier in my family several different times, and always with the very best effect. In my work as a pastor, I have, during the same time, had occasion to recommend the Remedy to various families, and have yet to learn of a single case of blood impurity where the Remedy has been used, that it did not cure the trouble for which it was taken.

AT THE EXPOSITION.

(Editorial Correspondence.)

I have been at the Exposition for nearly a week, and in this time a very peculiar dissatisfaction has developed within me. The more I have seen the more I have realized there is to see that cannot be seen by the visitor who expects to return home this side of December 1st. It takes a big show to develop this kind of feeling in one, and the feeling is sure to bring a kind of pleasing dissatisfaction. At the other fairs, each day of sight-seeing brought me nearer the goal. Now each day carries me farther from it. The St. Louis Exposition is simply too big for two classes of people—those who have only a few days to spend, and those who having more time are unable to select exhibits and concentrate attention. Unless you can do the latter, do not by any means comes unless you can spend three months. A few days aimless walk through the Exposition will simply give you a blurred vision whose memory will be only that which you have of a view through a kaleidoscope.

But I wish to emphasize the fact that a visit to only one of certain departments of the Exposition will repay the visitor. Take for instance

EDUCATION AND SOCIAL ECONOMY.

In the first place there is a building with a floor space of 290,000 square feet, and costing fully $400,000. It is a dream of architectural beauty, and is said to be the most beautiful building on the grounds. What an honor paid to education—that which up to a few years ago never received any attention at a State Fair or an Exposition! For the first time in the history of the world education has a home on Exposition grounds. This looks as if the world were moving on to the sunrise.

It would pay every school officer and teacher in North Carolina to visit the Exposition just to see the educational exhibit. He would learn more than he could learn at a half-dozen summer schools and institutes. He would carry back with him a broader vision of that field which is just beginning to be considered rich enough to claim the toil and devotion of so many teachers.

O course I am not going to try to catalogue the wonderful exhibits. The United States, England, Germany, Sweden, and France are represented. Several respectively of the New England, the Eastern, the Central and the Western States are represented. No South Atlantic State, I believe, is represented. The common school and the college and university are intelligently and practically illustrated in a hundred lucid ways. Germany, judging from its exhibit, leads the world in educational spirit, method, appliances and equipments. The fact will be driven home to the consciousness of every open-eyed visitor that the American public school of to-day is far different from that of even ten years ago. The school taught in miserable shanties by inexperienced teachers whose prime function seemingly was to "hear" lessons in the three "R's," call "books" and "turn out" for the day, has given place to the school taught in buildings as carefully constructed as private homes, and by teachers who regard their work as a profession. It is evident from the display in the Educational Building that hereafter the pupil in the public school is to be taught not only how to read and write and cipher, but to know things around him and to do things with brawn and hand.

The college and university exhibit should be unusually interesting and valuable, but it is not. It will be at the next great Exposition. Several of the higher institutions display the books written by members of the faculties. No bad idea, but one which is full of very valuable suggestion.

I wish to repeat that it would pay every man and woman who is interested in education to visit the Exposition for the sake of the educational exhibit alone. Nothing of the kind has ever been seen before, and probably never will be again.

Another building which greatly interested me was the AGRICULTURAL BUILDING.

My experience in farming has been limited to a few days' plowing years ago, and to desultory work which I have essayed to do in the garden. Yet I like everything pertaining to agriculture. What is seen in the Agricultural Building is surely sufficient to interest every man, woman, and child in the land.

The building is a mammoth. I have spent a large part of two days in it, and there is quite a number of aisles which I have not traversed. The exhibits are similar to those seen at former Expositions. New varieties of grains and other products constitute, however, a pleasing feature.

The cereal ornamentation was a wonder to me. Very few of our people realize what can be done with cereals in an artistic way. I saw wheat straw used on the sides and over the doors of booths so as to resemble gold decorations. I saw corn and wheat and sections of corn cobs made into the most seemingly elaborate pictures, which at a distance resembled oil paintings. I saw what to me was a new use of the ground pea. It was made into the most beautiful bead drapery which would adorn any hall of the most handsome residence. Why do not some of our Eastern North Carolina housekeepers in those sections where the festive goober flourisheth utilize the idea? Perhaps the edible property of the ornament would generate in the stray visitor an appetite which would master his aesthetic faculty. Who can tell?

Let no visitor to the Exposition fail to see the butter display in the Agricultural Building. The sculptor's genius has simply done as artistic work in butter as was ever done on marble and granite. This statement, of course, is made from the standpoint of a crude admirer who has never "sculped," and who cannot be accepted as an authority.

Let me give you a few things done in butter as yellow as gold and kept all the time below freezing point: busts of noted men; a milk-maid leading her cow to the pasture; a boat containing three men; a girl milking and sending the white fluid into the mouth of a cat greedily sitting near. Remember that all these objects were life-size. I have been through the Art Department and I saw there nothing more beautiful (to me) than the work done in butter in the Agricultural Department.

Right here, without waiting any longer, I wish to say something of North Carolina at the Exposition.

The first place at which I came upon North Carolina was in the Horticultural Hall. The display of apples was a failure as compared with the display of fruits from other States. When I remembered what I saw last fall at the State Fair, and then looked at the inferior display in Horticultural Hall, I could not but feel that a mistake had been made in making any display at all. Later in the day I ran on the North Carolina exhibit in the Agricultural Building. It was in the hands of a North Carolinian, Mr. Green, busy in his place preparing for the jurors who are to make the awards. The exhibit had a familiar appearance and looked somewhat sober and conservative, but the real thing was there, and I felt that North Carolina had nothing to be ashamed of. Further down the aisle the State held her own in the display of tobacco. I noticed the following large sign prominently displayed: "Pitt County grows more bright tobacco than any other county in the United States. Greenville, with its seven warehouses, sells annually 18,000,000 pounds of leaf tobacco." This was a great stroke of enterprise on the part of Pitt County, and suggests what North Carolina should have done in the way of making a general display at the Exposition. The blankets displayed by the Chatham Manufacturing Company, of Elkin, are beautiful, and excite the admiration of every beholder. There was also a commendable display of North Carolina cotton.

THE PEOPLE I SEE

The crowds attending the Exposition are daily growing larger. The most interesting occupation I have is that of watching the volume of humanity surge by. This is not an idle occupation, but a very useful one. The people are really one of the most entertaining and valuable exhibits of the Exposition. If you wait long enough you will see a representative of almost every nation on the globe. A crowd of Patagonians was viewing the sights a few days ago. The Filipinos, of whom I will write in another letter, excite an interest which is abnormal. In passing up one of the streets to-day, I saw quite a group of people, mostly young ladies, gathered around some object which I could not see. On pressing close, I saw that the excitement was not caused by a fainting person, but by a simple and foolish-looking young Filipino, who was evidently thinking that he had gotten into a strange land.

You will always find a large number of people on the Pike, of which I will write later, and you may form the idea that the majority of the people are attracted to the Exposition by the amusement feature, but in this you will be mistaken. While that immense throng is surging through the great amusement thoroughfare, you will find Festival Hall packed to hear an organ recital or people in the Aeronter section listening to a recital on a certain kind of wind-mill. You see people with earnest intent faces, with note-books, and with purpose written in their features.

You will find good humor everywhere. Even the young husband wheeling the baby through the throng wears a smile. An Exposition is a great place for learning lessons in good humor.

Some Wayside Thoughts.

G. F. SHERRILL.

Christ did not bring Christianity in the world as some new discovery or invention is made, which after it is once revealed is independent of the originator. The discovery of America and of the circulation of blood and the use of steam are all now independent of Columbus, Harvey, or Watts. Christianity is not independent of Christ. It is His presence in the hearts and lives of men. The law of gravitation no longer needs a Newton. Telegraphy will exist when Morse and Edison are no more. It is not so of Christianity. It is the Christ-life in men. What the earth's light and vegetation and life are to the sun, Christianity is to Christ.

* * *

God's greatest glory is a good man. Not the starry heavens by night nor the central sun by day nor all the sweep of His power seen in all the planetary distances can reflect so much of the glory of God as a soul redemed by Christ into the likeness of the Father. Man's greatest glory is the vision of God. Moses at the Bush; Paul this side Damascus; John on Patmos; saints in His unveiled Presence at the White Throne.

* * *

"Our Father". Sonship is the basis and inspiration of all true prayer; God's name reveals His nature. "Hallowed be thy name": That is our first and foremost prayer, the sanctity of God's name. "Thy kingdom come": That is the Father's divine purpose. "Thy will be done": The Divine Will overshadows all; our purposes must be God's if the heart prays aright. "Our daily bread": God's Name and Kingdom and Will must come before our needs. "Forgive us": We must be at peace with God to hallow His name, advance His kingdom, and do His will. "Lead us not into temptation": The Divine Providence overshadows His child. "Kingdom, Power, Glory": How great is God! He is able to do all we pray for. "Kingdom": Christ is king; we are His loyal and loving subjects. "Power": to overcome every temptation and to meet every duty. "Glory": Begun here in the soul in the formation of the Christ-life and continued in that state of endless progression towards the Infinite and Eternal God where Enoch and Elijah and Paul have gone.

Christ is the revelation of God. He is also the revelation of man. The Son of God is also the Son of man. "The highest arch-angel never saw so much of God before,"—nor so much of man. Christ reveals the Father's eternal love and purpose. He also reveals the possibilities of our manhood. Christ shows us what God would have every man think of Him as a Father. He also shows us what He would have every man think of Himself as His child.

Another mystery of Christ's life was its unselfishness. He pushed aside the proffered crown and chose the Roman cross. He who could have saved Himself, walked daily in the shadow of the cross. His last miracle was to heal the ear of Malchus' servant who was in and of the mob that came to arrest Him. His miracles were not selfish but social. The Throne He came from to represent to men, was not marble but mercy.

"Love took up the harp of His life,
And smote on all its chords with might,
Smote the chord of self which, trembling,
Passed in music out of sight."

* * *

At the top and bottom of society the worst crimes are seen. Two kinds of women drink, the "fallen" and the "smart set." Agar's prayer is good: "Give me neither poverty nor riches." The common people are the yeomanry of the land. They constitute the nation's moral strength. Lincoln said: God must love the common people—He made so many of them. It is said of the Supreme Teacher that the "common people heard Him gladly." Yet some of the saintliest have been from the ranks of the poorest and richest. Job and Abraham were immensely rich. Lazarus was poverty itself. God has closed to no soul the pearly gates to life's best. Character is in Christ and not in circumstances.

* * *

Religion is reciprocal. It is a spiritual reciprocity. It is both giving and receiving. Man surrenders to God by faith and love, and God gives His grace and holiness. When religion is at its highest and best, God and man give their best. This our God is always willing to do; and is limited only by the sin and selfishness of man. "God gave His only begotten Son." "Son, give me thy heart."

* * *

Man is both religious and rational. These are distinctive notes of his being. Take them away and we have not a man but an animal. Had he no mind, the Bible would be a useless gift. Had he no religious nature, the Bible would never have been given. Man in his rational and religious nature has a capacity for God, as the flower has a capacity for the sun. Some hearts dwell in the spring time of love. Others in the winter of doubt.

* * *

Religion is native to man, as seeds are native to the soils. He who has put seeds in the soil has put a sense of God in the soul of man. Each must be cultivated. The devil will sow tares in both fields. Weeds are false religion. Flowers and fruits, the true.

"Stop and Pray."

BISHOP E. R. HENDRIX, LL. D., KANSAS CITY, MO.

"Stop and Pray." Such is the soothing and suggestive invitation that is found on some church doors in our large cities. It is more than a welcome to the house of God at the stated and regular service. It is an acknowledgment and public confession that the church, like the Sabbath was intended for man and not man for the church. If the command is laid upon our very nature to "pray without ceasing," then we should have the privilege of our Father's house, and so of our house, every day of the week and any hour of the day. This is the true "open church" whose doors stand ajar every hour bidding the tempted and weary heart to "stop and pray." Happily an increasing number of souls, regardless of denominational views, can be found who gladly avail themselves of such helps.

Nor is this gracious invitation confined to those churches which require "the order of morning or evening prayer daily throughout they car." This noble form of service was intended particularly for the spiritual help of clergymen, with such daily selections from the Scriptures as should keep the minister in his devotional reading not more than twelve months distant from any and every part of the Bible. It is the privilege of any visitor, whether parishioner or not, to be present at the hour of daily prayer and join the minister in his daily devotions. In the great English cathedrals with their large endowments several clergymen usually attend together, with a skilled organist and a sweet-voiced choir. It woos the mere sight-seer to "stop and pray," whatever his creed. Lowell speaks for more than himself as he tells his experience in "the cathedral:"

"I entered, reverent of whatever shrine
Guards piety and solace for any kind
Or gives the soul a moment's truce of God."

But it is not of the daily service alone that the invitation speaks, but it is of the hourly privilege of God's house for private devotion. The authoress of "I love to steal a while away" first added "from children and from care," as the explanation of her solitary evening walks for devotion. Her crowded and noisy home was without a "closet" where she could enter in and shut the door. The soul craved the privilege of silence that she might hear the still voice of God. How grateful would have been the privilege of her Father's house "which shall be called of all nations a house of prayer" when her twilight walks brought suspicion and censure. Let the door of our Father's house be ever ajar for every troubled spirit to stop and pray.

It is needless to say that all this is something quite different from the confessional. The answer of Protestantism to the confessional is the family altar, with its sacred and helpful memories. Nothing can substitute it as a sweetener of home life, whether before or after "the child has loudened to the boy." God's first church was the "church in the house." This, too, was the apostolic church no less than the patriarchal church. Let every temple be destroyed and they shall be builded again from the home altars. It is the memory of such altars that illuminates our Lord's words, "Believe me, the hour cometh when neither in this mountain nor in Jerusalem shall men worship the Father." That hour has long since come.

The worship of God has many sacred places. There are many "mountains of God." Even Tyndal was found on his knees in the Alps, despite his "Prayer Test," and when surprise was expressed he said, "I always pray in the Alps." Men pray, too, in the desert and on the sea. Vastness lifts one's thoughts to God. But sustained worship such as the home altars prompts is something more than the religious sentiment which stands so closely related to the perception of the sublime, and may even be kindled by it, as it may be also stirred by a new sense of responsibility which comes to the parent, or to a chief executive of a State or of a nation.

It is still true that we do not make enough of the church even though we scarcely guard the home altar. Two or three hours of service in seven days do not justify our great investments in stone and stained glass. The "returns" would not justify such large expenditures to any other "house," which, erected at a cost of from one to several hundred thousand dollars, is kept open for business but at best some four or five hours a week. Let us give God our best architecture and most substantial structures, but let us make more use of them as ours as well as his. It is ours in their adaptation to our deepest human needs that shows them to be divine in their origin and aim. Like God's air and sunshine, let the soul bask in them and use them when and as they are needed.

How much the church is to the soul that makes the most and best use of it, be he Romanist or Protestant! It preoccupies and fills the mind and heart with its sacred opportunities, whether for public or private worship. In these days of commercialism and materialism how often the church door is locked and barred to some perplexed professional or business man whose foot has well-nigh slipped as they have seen the prosperity of the wicked whose eyes stand out with fatness and whose set their mouth against the heavens. As they think on these things in the cheerless business streets and seek to know the meaning of the problem of life, it is too painful for them unless they can, like the psalmist, go into the sanctuary of God. Like the perplexed mariner, they get their bearings again from the stars. The "summit view" is the only safe view, whether for mariner or merchant. The weary and heavy-laden with this fresh view of God cry out: "Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none on earth that I desire beside thee."

Old Trinity cannot be spared from lower Broadway as she looks down on Wall Street and bids men—men making haste to get rich and staking all on the hazard of an hour—bids them "stop and pray." Not only are her noonday Lenten services crowded during the busy week days but there is scarce an hour of any business day when some bended knee does not tell of a refreshed spirit who can go out with a firmer step, saying of the heedless ones in the mad race for wealth, "Surely thou didst set them in slippery places." So, too, in that wonderful square mile called "the city" of London, hard by its Royal exchange, are churches that could tell of souls saved from suicide by finding their open doors when despairing faces were turned toward the Thames.

"Are you a communicant here?" was asked of a business man with a peaceful countenance as he passed out of one of these churches whose doors are never closed. "No," was his response. "but my soul would be crushed within me if I did not have this cool place of retreat and succor in the fierce conflict of business life. I always come here to pray." The noble Scriptural mottoes on the great public buildings of the commercial capital of the world bid men learn more of God. Lombard Street has its St. Paul's as Wall Street has its Trinity. Does the tenement district need less the open door of our Father's house? "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy-laden and I will rest you," said Jesus as he saw the multitudes in the supreme hour of his self-revelation.

It is not "bread and games" that people need in God's house, however they may want them. The "institutional church" fails if it be not the true "open church" as well where troubled souls may be fed and set at peace. It is only the God who satisfies the soul's deepest needs who can claim its unwavering allegiance and not the God that simply brought his people out of Egypt and gave them bread in the wilderness. Probably among the mob that crucified our Christ were some who fed of the loaves and fishes and were filled, but none that sat at his feet to learn of him, keeping and pondering in their hearts the things that he said. These chose the good part that should never be taken from them. "Morning, noon and night will I call unto thee," said the devout king whose safety amid the cares of a city was the open door of the sanctuary, like the open door of a city of refuge to the pursued soul.

Two men of my acquaintance went up to the temple to pray. One was the secretary of a great church board. His desk was filled with correspondence relating to the business interests of the church. A thoughtful and eminently useful minister, he kepth imself from becoming secularized, even in the midst of church work, by the reminder which came to him daily as he went to lunch, as a friendly church door bade him "Stop and Pray." What mattered it that this easily swinging church door did not bear the name of his own church that he served day and night. It did not bid those of any one sect. It was the Lord's house, where he found rest unto his soul. His catholicity of spirit, so much admired by all Christians, was developed by his being able to comprehend with all saints what is the length and breadth and depth and height, and so to know the love of Christ.

The other man was a busy physician whose skill was known on many a battle-field of the Civil War, and who, after making a large contribution toward building a church, asked that he might have a duplicate key. Once every day, but at different because of his heavy practice, his horse might be seen standing sentinel at the church door while "the beloved physician" talked with God within. It was a Protestant church, too, but the able surgeon, who had been converted from the papal faith, had not forgotten one of the helping influences of his childhood. Would others claim the privilege of a dupliecate key? Would not a better way be that every church be known as "The Church of the Open Door?"

Missionary Collections.

My last missionary report was made on May 4. The collections on that date were on hundred per cent in advance of what they were the same date last year. From a report recently received from the Treasurer I find that there has been a corresponding advance since that date. On August 20, last year, the Treasurer had received $4,513 for Foreign and Domestic Missions. On the same date this year he had received $9,457. The collections in every District are considerably in advance of what they were last year. The Elizabeth City District is now in the lead, having paid $2,008. The New Bern District comes next with $1,517 paid. The amounts received from the other Districts are as follows: Durham, $1,459; Wilmington, $1,427; Raleigh, $1,098; Washington, $636; Warrenton, $549; Fayetteville, $458; Rockingham, $302.

I regard this as a very encouraging report. There is still much work to be done, however. Conference is less than three months off, and not half the assessment for missions has been paid. With the progress already made we can bring the Conference out in full this year, but there is yet much work to be done.

Conference Secretary of Missions.

A Church Property Decision.

The history of Protestantism in Scotland is long and complicated. The independence which has always characterized Scotch thinking has led to many divisions in matters religious and the establishment of numerous Church organizations. In 1843 the discussions and dissensions of something like three centuries culminated in the establishment of the Free Church of Scotland, a body which has enjoyed an unusual degree of prosperity up to the present time. It began as a secession movement, and, consequently, started without churches, manses or colleges, as all of these had been surrendered to the older body from which the Free Church seceded. But loyalty and self-denying liberality have supplied these things until the wealth of this denomination in Church property is estimated at sixty-five million dollars.

The United Presbyterian Church of Scotland, while older in its establishment, has had a similar history to that of the Free Church.

Four years ago plans for the union of the two bodies under the name United Free Church of Scotland were completed, and this long-desired union was effected. Nearly the entire ministry and membership of the Free Church favored this movement, and gave it their cordial support. The only opposition to union was manifested by some twenty-five ministers of North Scotland, pastors of small congregations, and most speaking the Gaelic language. These protested against the union with the United Presbyterians, and set up the claim that those who entered into the union had thereby seceded from the true Free Church and had forfeited all title to the property held by the said Church.

The great body of the Free Church paid little attention to this claim, and the recalcitrant Highlanders appealed the matter to the Scotch courts for settlement. The decisions of the courts went against them, and the leaders of the union movement thought that the matter was ended. But not so; the pugnacious Gaels appealed their contention to the highest court of the realm, the House of Lords. This august body had a rehearing of the case in May and June of this year. By a majority of two England's highest tribunal decided that if a church changes its creed it forfeits its title and its identity. This view of the subject sustains the contention of the Highland ministers that they are the true Free Church, and are, therefore, entitled to all Church property acquired by this organization since its beginning. This means that some twenty-five clergymen and the small congregations that they represent in North Scotland become the sole custodians of all the property recently possessed by the Free Church. This decision has precipitated what has been described as "one of the most serious religions and social crises in British history.—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

When grief shall come to thee
Seek not to flee,
For grief's steady pace
Shall win the race,
Nor drive her forth with mirth,
For at thy hearth
When mirth is tired and gone
Grief will sit on.
But make of her thy friend,
And in the end
Three lovelier than she
Will visit thee:
Calm Patience, Courage strong
And Hope—crelong. —Selected.

Soul Food

Painful memory can only be obliterated by the full flood of joy. When happiness is complete there is no room for sad recollections; when there are no brooding moments, the past is kept at bay; where there is no cause for remembrance, there is no opportunity for remorse.—Hugh Black.

* * *

It is no marvel if that day in which you suffer drowsiness to interfere with prayer be a day in which you shrink from duty. Moments of prayer intruded on by sloth cannot be made up. We may get experience, but we cannot get back the rich freshness and strength which were wrapped up in those moments.—Frederick W. Robertson.

* * *

The interpretation of life depends altogether upon the motive that inspires it. As men and women who purpose in our hearts to serve God we should place ourselves under the mystic spell of the highest motives, and then enter upon the execution of these motives with courage and joy, and in the strength of God.

Be strong!
We are not here to play, to dream, to drift.
We have hard work to do and loads to lift.
Shun not the struggle—face it; 'tis God's gift.

"Have you and I to-day
Stood silent as with Christ, apart from joy or fray
Of life, to see by faith his face,
And grow, by brief companionship, more true,
More nerved to lead, to dare, to do
For him at any cost? Have we to-day
Found time in thought, our hand to lay
In his and thus compare
His will with ours, and wear
The impress of his wish? Be sure
Such contact will endure
Throughout the day; will help us walk erect
Through storm and flood; detect,
Within the hidden life, sin's dross, its stain;
Revive a thought of love for him again;
Steady the steps which waver; help us see
The foothpath meant for you and me."

An exemplary Christian life is the greatest magnet in the world to draw sinners to God. It is better than floods of eloquence and cyclones of entertainment. Just be good deep down in your heart, and all the way through, and your power to attract people to the God who saves you will be boundless and unceasing. Men have sought out many inventions, but they have not improved on New Testament piety as a means of commending religion. An ungodly person respects a straightout righteous life more than anything else under the sun. He may affect to ignore it, or even to despise it, but in his secret soul he honors it more than can be told. By depth of integrity and uncompromising loyalty to God, compel your associates to believe in you, and you hold them as by silken cords. They cannot get away from you, nor forget you. The chances are that, if faithful, you can lead them to Christ. We say again, nothing draws humanity to God and truth like holy, happy living.—Religious Telescope.

In one of his helpful little volumes Rev. Dr. J. R. Miller tells of a young lady who purchased a book and read a few pages, but failed to become interested in it. But some months afterwards, he goes on to relate, she met the author and a tender friendship sprang up, ripening into love and betrothal. Then the book was dull no longer. Every sentence had a charm for her heart. Love was the interpreter. Seeing beauty in God's Word is much conditioned in the same way. The Bible has infinite value in itself; but to reveal its richest treasures it needs love as an interpreter. To those who do not know Christ personally it may seem uninteresting but to those who know and love him its every page becomes like a casket of jewels, glowing with beauty and light; yes, even better, like a letter of love, quickening the heart-throbs, and filling the soul with rapture and with fresh and holy resolve.

The Field

Burlington Circuit.

My Dear Bro. Ivey:—It gives me very great pleasure to report that we have had several gracious revivals on our work. Forty-four conversions and twenty-seven added to the church on profession of faith and fourteen by church certificate. My brethren in the ministry have been very kind indeed in helping me in my meetings. Brothers McCall, Caviness, Dailey, McCracken and Hoyle have done faithful and efficient service for us, and a service that was enjoyed and appreciated by us all. I have one more meeting to conduct.

I feel that all of our churches are being built up spiritually as well as numerically. All praise to Him who doeth all things well, for He hath heard and answered our prayers and greatly blessed our church and our people this year.

All over our work the people are being blessed in barn and in store. Beautiful crops are to be seen on every road throughout my work.

Financially speaking, we are in good shape. Our Foreign and Domestic Missions were paid in full at our District Conference. I have a large per cent of the other Conference collections in cash and in subscription, and feel sure we will be able to report all paid in full at the Annual Conference.

Our people are getting on very well indeed in regard to the pastor's salary. At our last Quarterly Conference at Prospect we were all delighted to see our dear Presiding Elder in such a good humor. In his closing remarks, among other pleasant things, he said: "Brethren, I feel good over the results of this meeting and the condition of affairs on your work." I have a good people to serve and a work that I have learned to love.

Everything is bright and flourishing at the parsonage. We have plenty of both Irish and sweet potatoes, green corn, apples, pears, tomatoes, chickens, etc.

We have a delightful community to live in. Our neighbors are very kind and sociable with us.

I close with love for all.

Very respectfully,

S. F. NICKS, P. C.

Rich Square Circuit.

Dear Bro. Ivey:—Some months have passed since I wrote you last. It is not because we have nothing to tell you, but that we are kept so busy doing things we have no time much left to put the things done into print.

We are very sorry that you had to leave us so early during the session of the District Conference. Many things happened which you failed to report in your columns. The later half of the Conference was even better than the first. Bishop Smith remained with us over Sunday and dedicated our Rich Square Church. We enjoyed so much having the Bishop with us. The impressions he made for the uplifting of humanity will remain in this section while many generations pass away. The Bishop is truly a fisher of men, and his success along this line has indeed been wonderful. As a fisher of fish, I can't say quite so much for him, for I have been with him on the bay near Norfolk since Conference and he caught only one fish.

Brother Smith, our Presiding Elder, made a very fine impression upon the Conference as a director of affairs. No one would ever suspect that he is a new Presiding Elder judging from the way he handles a Conference. He had a "very present help" in the person of his Cousin Coke (Bishop Smith). We were very much gratified to have the preachers of the District with us. Being on the Committee of Public Worship, we tried to give our people an opportunity to hear as many of the preachers as possible so that they might make a selection, as our time expires sometime in the future. If our editor was in the regular ranks, I think he would soon have a call from our people. Many fine sermons were preached by our brethren.

Our work in general is in very fine condition. We have a bright prospect for closing a very fine year's work. Our Sunday-schools, Missionary Societies, Epworth League and Bible classes are all doing a very fine work. Our missionary programs are well prepared and well rendered. Our Children's day exercises were splendid.

Our Woodland church has made quite a change in the inside appearance by getting new lights, putting down a new carpet and rearranging the pews. Our prospects were never brighter for full Conference collections.

We have held only one protracted service. We have three more to hold. We had a very fine meeting at Pinners. Bro. R. F. Taylor was with us and preached some very fine Gospel sermons. We had a large number of conversions, and eighteen accessions to the church on profession of faith and some by certificate. There is a bright future before this circuit, and only a few years of work will be necessary to place it in the front ranks of the North Carolina Conference.

My people are very kind indeed to their pastor. No one appreciates kindness more than a bachelor. After all the kind advice of the Bishop, the Presiding Elder and the editor, I find myself all alone in a well-furnished seven-room parsonage. We have only ten or twelve other bachelors in this small town. I believe bachelorism is a disease and that it is contagious, and that we are having an epidemic.

I hope to make another fine report on the progress of my work. We will hold our meeting at Lewiston next week. Bro. B. C. Thompson, of Ahoskie, will assist me. We are praying for a good meeting.

Two Bereaved Families.

Dear Dr. Ivey:—Two Methodist preachers' homes in Rocky Mount have been saddened this week. Bros. J. D. Bundy and W. S. Rone have been called upon to go through waters that have indeed been deep, and sorrows that have been almost enough to overwhelm them. But it is well with them, for they have to sustain them the comforting grace of God which they have so often offered to others.

On last Monday Brother Bundy came home and found his little four-year-old Annie dying from an attack of meningitis. He left her well on Friday, but two hours after he reached her side the little spirit took its flight, removing one more tie that binds the fond parents to earth and making a new tie to bind them to heaven.

Oh how lonely those parents are! They can no more hear the patter of those little feet in the halls. They can no more hear the little one calling to them. They can no more feel those little arms around their necks and hear her say, "Mamma, papa, I love you." Instead, her little feet are pattering on the golden streets of the New Jerusalem; her little voice is helping to swell the heavenly chorus as it is sung around the throne of God; her little arms are clasped around the Saviour's neck as she rests in His arms, and methinks I can hear her say, "Jesus, I love you because you gave me a home without my having to fight life's battles." Her body was taken to Laurinburg and buried by the side of the other children that God has taken from these, His servants.

On Thursday Brother Rone received a telegram from Texas bringing the sad intelligence of the death of his daughter, Miss May. This news was not unexpected, but, nevertheless, it was a shock to her parents and the entire community. Some months ago it became known that consumption had laid its hands upon her. Everything possible was done to stay its ravages. She was carried to Southwest Texas in order that she might have the advantage of that dry climate and the care of a specialist. Her friends and loved ones hoped in vain. God willed contrary to their desires and she died there far away from home.

Thus has heaven claimed another bright and lovable Christian just at a time when life promised most. She was cultured and intelligent, and her prospects were very bright. Miss May was not long in Rocky Mount, but in that short time she had won the hearts of all who had the honor of her acquaintance, for "to know her was to love her." Less than a year ago she she, herself almost a stranger here, with a warm hand-clasp and bright smile, welcomed this writer to a strange community. Since then he has deemed it an honor to think of her as a friend, though the acquaintance was limited. Thus she won the hearts of all. Her duty was to bring sunshine, and she brought it.

Miss May will be sadly missed by all. No human being can fill the vacancies in the hearts of fathers, mother, brothers and sisters. She was buried at Charlotte.

May God bless these stricken homes. May they be comforted by remembering that their loved ones are with the Lord, and may they be reminded that—

"Earth has no sorrow
That heaven cannot heal."

Bishop Potters "Tavern" Again

In company with Mr. N. B. Broughton, of Raleigh, yesterday, I went to see the "Subway Tavern," and give it a thorough inspection.

The only difference I can see between that saloon and others, is that the "Tavern" has a soda fountain in front to accommodate those who have not sunk low enough to drink at the bar. Why they call it a "Tavern," is more than I can make out, as the thing is a regular hell-hole like other saloons in the city.

They have the usual vulgar paintings hanging around to please the religious gentlemen (?) who patronize this door to hell.

They have the free lunch counter where the common drunkard can fill up on grub after drinking the large schooner of beer—about four times as large as the usual glass. We called at about 3 o'clock p. m., and the typical bar-room fellow was hanging around, drinking large schooners of beer and eating "free lunch."

One of the attendants told us that men were not allowed to get drunk there. We asked him how many drinks would one be allowed to take? He seemed confused, and said: "Well, about five drinks." One of our party remarked, "That would make me quite drunk." I suppose that he meant "five drinks" of whiskey. They would be allowed to drink beer all day and all night.

They say that they will only pay 5 per cent on the stock, balance of profits will go to extend the business—open other "Taverns."

Nothing new about this. Banks and large corporations generally pay only 5 per cent or 6 per cent, and leave balance of earnings to accumulate.

The whole thing is wicked and born of corrupt politicians.

Notice.

Mr. Editor:—Please allow me to say through the Advocate that I have just sent out blank reports to all the Sunday-school superintendents of the New Bern District, whose names and address I have, on which to make reports of their schools to the District Sunday-school Conference to be held at Newport on the 27th and 29th of September, 1904. If any fail to receive these blank reports they will please notify me at Kinston, N. C., and I will supply them. We wish to have a report from each school in the District.

Yours truly, Y. T. ORMOND,
Secretary.

Don't talk when you are in ill temper or suffering under a sense of wrong. You are sure to speak harshly. Think and pray over it all first, and even then deal sparingly in speech.

A Visit to Greensboro.

To the Editor:—Last week I had the pleasure of spending a few days in the city of Greensboro. I had heard quite a little of the activity and progress of this city, but was hardly prepared for the great thrift so apparent, and which was evidently not confined to one portion of the city but was general from the centre radiating out in all directions. Now this was all gratifying to a native North Carolinian who loves his whole State, but one thing that took my eye and held my rapt attention was the new building of Greensboro Female College. Not only was this a matter of pride to me as a North Carolinian (and by the way North Carolina can never pay its debt to that grand old institution), but as a member of the denomination known as the Methodist, I could not but have a pardonable pride and joy as I stood several times in front of that magnificent oak, hickory and elm grove, than which there is not a more beautiful to be found in the State, and as I watched the throng of busy workmen hurrying, driving, rushing, timber, brick, mortar, and slate into that building, I could but exclaim, "What hath God wrought with the fidelity and unanimity of a few people?" And I just wished our people as a whole could see and appreciate what a valuable plant we have here. If they could, I am sure that in another year there would have to be a new building erected, and yearly have to be repeated in order to accommodate the women who would crowd those dormitories in search of the help of a useful education that the directors are preparing to give our people the benefit of.

THE APPOINTMENT.

I have already spoken of the grounds; I cannot do them justice. A few hundred dollars spent on them would place them in a condition to defy competition as to future beauty, even as they now excel all that I have seen in any other place.

THE BUILDING.

Renewed, enlarged, improved, modernized, when completed it will excel in appointments any school or college building that I know of in the South. The improvement in the exterior is very marked, and changes the appearance entirely, while the interior makes it almost perfect. The president's office, which is situated immediately in front of the central dome, gives a complete supervision of the entire plant. The dining room is enlarged and with ventilating stacks running out through the roof it will always be comfortable, even on the warmest days, while in winter the large windows on either side make it one of the best lighted and ventilated large rooms I know of. The chapel is a beauty; the floors have been inclined so as to give the rear audience a chance to see and hear, while the regular stage arrangements enable the instructors to present the most difficult sitting with the best effect. The halls are lighted from sky-lights and end windows, making them a delightful place for indoor exercise in bad weather.

THE LIBRARY.

This is just over the president's office of the second offor, and adjoins the parlor, which is circular in form, and one of the handsomest rooms to be found anywhere, while the art room, which is just over the parlor, is a complete circle, and is lighted from above and will enable the college to do a work for which it has long been noted in even a better manner in the future than in the past. The plan has twenty-two porcelain-lined bath-tubs, with all modern improvements distributed on each floor to suit the students, while the whole building is to be heated by two large steam boilers in the rear, outside of the building. Every part of this is new, with ample margin for enlarging the plant whenever it is desired. I mention the boilers being outside of the building because the management is determined that as far as human provision can forsee they do not intend this building ever to burn, as there will be no fire inside the building at all. But in order to prevent any accident ever happening, they will install large steel fire escapes on every side of the building which, with the numerous exits in the ways of wide steps, will make it almost impossible for a severe accident to occur to anyone in this building by fire.

In conclusion, I wish to exhort our Methodist people throughout the State to stand by our college and patronize and pray for it, and in three years we can have five hundred girls there under the best surroundings of any school in the State, and at a cost as cheap as any first-class institution will furnish it.

Yours truly,

MILES O. SHERRILL.

"Can I Attend the St. Louis Exposition?"

For the benefit of those of limited means who may wish to attend the great Fair in this city, I would call attention to the advertisement of the Newstead Avenue Hotel, found in this issue of the Advocate. The railroads are offering low rates for a ten-days' trip, and this hotel is giving low rates for board and lodging. One can come from North Carolina for some $18 or $19, the round-trip, and the manager of this hotel will board and lodge one, giving two meals a day, for $8.75. And he offers the reduced rate of $6 a week to preachers. One could stay here nearly or quite a week on a ten-days' ticket. Reaching Union Station at any hour between 6 a. m. and 11 p. m., he could, without any expense besides one street car fare reach the hotel in about a half hour. Then he can take the car in front of the hotel and without change and for one fare, reach the Exposition grounds in about 35 minutes. And, by taking the car out here, he could always get a seat. I am staying at that hotel and find that they have clean rooms and bedding and give good fare for the price. The proprietor is a Methodist layman and the manager is a member of the North Texas Conference whose health will not permit his taking regular work. I write this on my own motion and for the benefit of any who may, at comparatively small cost, wish to come to the Fair. A party of ten or twelve could engage adjoining rooms by writing the Rev. I. T. Stafford, 4139 N. Newstead Avenue, St. Louis. Don't bring any trunk unless you are willing to pay $3 for carrying it to and from the hotel. Any one wishing to come should cut out the advertisement and follow the directions about reaching the hotel.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN R. BROOKS.

Heredity.

BY BISHOP O. P. FITZGERALD.

Every natural law works for the man who does the best he can where he is and as he is. "The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge. As I live, saith the Lord, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel. . . . . The soul that sinneth, it shall die." (Ezek. xviii. 2-4.) Every man will stand or fall according to his own choice, and the responsibility of each one is measured by his opportunity. That is a ray of Old Testament light that shone in a dark place.

We have a word from St. Paul (Romans viii. 28) which outweighs all the "ifs" and guesses of doubt and unbelief in this our day: "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God." In "all things" we may include heredity. This word illuminates the whole heavens to the eye of faith.

Conundrums.

What time is it when the clocks strikes thirteen? Time the clock was fixed.

On what did Noah live when he was in the ark? On water.

What key is the hardest to turn? Donkey.

If a pig wanted to build himself a house, how would he set about it? Tie a knot in his tail and call it a pig's tie (pig-sty).

What ship has two mates and no captain? Courtship.

Why are tears like potatoes? Because they spring from the eyes.

What is the keynote of good manners? B natural.

What is the difference between a child and an envelope? One you lick with a stick, and the other you stick with a lick.

Why is the letter O the most charitable letter in the alphabet? Because it is found oftener than any other in doing good.

In what month do men talk the least? In February, because it is the shortest month.

What was the longest day of Adam's life? When there was no Eve.

Why are fowls the most economical creatures that a farmer keeps? Because for every grain they eat they give a peck.—Peninsula Methodist.
