Water was of paramount importance to the early settlers of this country. Broad River and its many water courses offered a strong attraction to these men and women. Sandy Run Creek especially, with its swift-flowing current, was ideal both for water and for an essential business--the grist mill. Old deeds frequently refer to "the mill and mill seat."

The Sandy Run settlement may have begun as early as the 1750's. Some people came here from Virginia to escape the heavy tobacco tax, and they were not eager to have the crown find them. Their homesteads had often been occupied for years before the owners applied for a grant of land.

Because so many people lived on or near Sandy Run Creek, it was logical for them to establish a place of worship. The Anabaptist Church or Society of Sandy Run was organized in 1772. In the beginning members met in homes; however, according to tradition, a Meeting House was built near the present Seaboard Railroad trestle, just up the hill from the creek. Until some time in the 1930's a cemetery was in this vicinity with a number of marked graves.

In 1804 the Anabaptist Church bought 25 acres of land for $37.50 from Charles Breedlove, part of a 100-acre tract which Breedlove had purchased from William Green in 1803. The deed has the statement "including the meeting house and spring." The deed from Green to Breedlove defines the land as being on Chestnut Log Creek and crossing the Meeting House Branch. This church deed was recorded first in Rutherford County in 1807 and again in Cleveland County in 1883. You will find copies of the pertinent deeds in the back of this booklet.

Because there were so few churches, the Anabaptist Church on Sandy Run drew members from a wide area. Deeds for church members show these people living as far east as Kings Mountain, south down into present South Carolina, west as far as the North Pacolet and Green Rivers and north to the upper portions of Knob Creek of First Broad River.

A list of deeds showing where some of the people lived has also been compiled. An asterisk beside the name on the following church membership roll indicates that that person is named on the deed list. This deed list, separated by creeks and rivers, follows the church rolls.

A composite list of Sandy Run Church membership rolls dated 1782, 1804, 1814 and 1846 attempts to provide some information about these early members. Each roll offers comments such as "dis" or "dead." These comments are shown first under the information heading on the list and then any other available information.

The Civil War

Many area men served during the Civil War. Some of the men can be identified as living in the Mooresboro area; however, some of those listed will only carry a familiar family name.

One of the local companies, The Sandy Run Yellow Jackets, was mustered into service as Co. B, 34th Regiment, NC Volunteers. Its captain was the Reverend John Edwards, a former deacon of Sandy Run Church. Tradition has it that when the company left home for the war they spend their first night away camping on the grounds of Sandy Run Church. Several Mooresboro men were in this company. Here is a list of some who served listed by regiment:

Other Mooresboro men are probably scattered among other companies.

Mooresboro as a place name came into being when Lemuel Moore gave the name to the post office established on 26 October 1819.

The Moores were among the first settlers on Sandy Run and Chestnug Log Creeks. So many deeds are in existence for the Moores that it is difficult to say where they lived first. In 1802 Arthur Clarke sold Lemuel Moore 97 acres of land located on the west side of Sandy Run Creek adjoining the property of George Moore, Lemuel Moore's father.

This property seems to be where Lemuel Moore built his home and store and it is located between old and new Highway 74 on top of a little hill. It would be due west of "Miss Mag" Logan's old house and near the Southern Railway trestle and Sandy Run Creek. This two-room "mansion house" was sold to John W. Logan in the 1830's and he became the second post master on 12 October 1838.

The log house where the store and post office were located was torn down during the 1920's.

Some time after the Civil War the Mooresboro post office was at the Bostic home on the dirt road between Mooresboro and Boiling Springs. The Bostic house stood about half-way up the hill from Sandy Run Creek on the right side of the road. Miss Connie Green of Boiling Springs tells a tale her father told her about this post office: Ransom Webb was the stage coach driver and mail carrier between Charlotte and Rutherfordton. As he neared the post office, he blew on a trumpet to let the neighborhood people know that he was coming in. Then boys would take turns going for the mail for several families in their own area. One winter it was so cold that Mr. Webb's toes froze off. Thereafter he wore especially made round boots.

On 31 August 1886 the Charleston, SC, earthquake shook Mooresboro. Many people did not know what was happening, and some even thought it was "the end of time." The preachers all around had their yards full of people who felt a need to be near a Man of God. One man with a wry sense of humor was said to have remarked, "Ann, go step your foot off the bottom step and see if the earth is still there."

Mooresboro at one time had two other now defunct churches. One was a Presbyter across from the Willard W. Greene house and the other was a Methodist church located about where the Sam Greene garage was. The Methodist Church had a small cemetery which was moved to the present Sandy Run Cemetery in the 1930's.

In June 1838 Sandy Run Church appointed Edmund Jones, David Beam and Josiah Durham a committee to grant the privilege of a school to be kept near the Meeting House. We don't know just where this school building was located. Probably the next school was located near new Hwy 74 just above the fish camp on Academy Street (the Mooresboro-Lattimore road). This school made use of two large springs in that vicinity. School records go back to the 1850's so we know that education was an important thing to the community from very early days.

The next school was located across the road from the church. The building is still used as a house. Professor Chambers lived in the Hill Green house, next door to the church, and he taught the main school while his wife taught first grade in her home.

In 1905 a new three-room school with folding partitions, 14 windows on weights, coat rooms and vestibules, patent desks and slate blackboards was opened on a two-acre site. This building is Sam Greene's old garage.

The last school in Mooresboro was opened about 1925. This brick school provided education to a large cross section of the community. Here, too, the school entertainment was brought to its peak. Each school had always had its "end of school" programs, but the new school had a large auditorium where plays and other more elaborate productions could be staged. "Play Practice" became a favorite activity for the students during the '30's. And, in 1934, basketball on an indoor court became a reality with the opening of the "Tin Can." Sadly, this school is now closed and Mooresboro no longer has an educational center.

The town of Mooresboro was incorporated in 1885 with B. H. Bridges as the first mayor. Prior to that time the community was already growing into a little town. Several industries were already thriving. Berry Green had a water-powered cotton gin in operation and shortly thereafter another gin was opened in the middle of town. H. C. Burrus operated a tobacco factory from about 1885 to about 1895. He drove a covered wagon and peddled as far as Americus, Ga.

Both the Southern and Seaboard railways came to Mooresboro in 1886. Elias Green sold forest pine trees to the construction crews at three cents each. Little boys dared each other to go near a train. One boy lost a considerable amount of skin hanging on to a tree about the Dr. Champion house because he could "feel that thing just a-pullin me under."

When the school was moved in 1905, Perry Heavner opened a canvas glove factory in the old school across from the church. After a while he moved the factory to Hickory where his descendants still are making canvas work gloves.

Mooresboro had two industries organized in 1909--The Mooresboro Creamery Corporation and the Mooresboro Oil Mill. J. B. Blanton was the first president of both corporations. The Mooresboro Creamery was the first in North Carolina, and for many years farm income was increased by sales of cream to be made into Mooresboro Creamery Butter. A. L. Smart was first secretary-treasurer of the Oil Mill; and, after the mill was sold in 1929, John K. Smart operated the plant as manager until his death in 1957.

The Mooresboro Masonic Lodge received its charter on 14 January 1885. The first officials were B. H. Bridges, Master; D. A. F. Hamrick, First Warden; and H. C. Burrus, Second Warden. Five years later the Masonic Temple was built. The cornerstone is dated 22 November 1890, AL 5890. A bell was at the top of the steps to be used to announce meetings. This bell and the old church bell were rung on many joyful occasions. A favorite time for bell ringing was New Year's Eve. During the 1920's and 30's the Masons often had oyster suppers, and most of the townspeople turned out for these get-togethers.

Dr. J. J. Purcell came to Mooresboro in 1881 and began to serve the community as a medical doctor. Three other early physicians were Drs. C. O. Champion, S. S. Royster and E. W. Gibbs. Drs. Royster and Champion owned drug stores. The third drug store in Mooresboro was owned by Jessie Jones.

The first barber in town was a black named Tom Young who had a shop on old Hwy 74 just behind where Von Lovelace had a store. Two churches have been a source of inspiration to the black community. They are Mundy's Chapel of the United Methodist Church and Young's Chapel which is AME Zion. Young's Chapel has a rather large cemetery on its grounds. From early times the black community has taken pride in educating its young people, and many fine teachers and principals have come from this community.

"Little" John McBrayer operated a livery stable on Academy Street near the old Southern Depot. This stable was probably a forerunner of several automobile garages. In the 1920's Sam and Tabe Greene operated the old red garage in the forks of Hwy 20 and the church road. Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison spent part of an afternoon at this garage having their car repaired. They were in the area looking for certain minerals, and they seemed to enjoy sitting on the "Loafers' Bench" and chatting with some of the townspeople.

"Miss Ellen" Martin's hat shop and a variety of other stores made Mooresboro a convenient trading center until well into the 1930's. Now, with the new incorporation, perhaps the town will again grow into a shopping center.
