WILL HAYS AND FATTY ARBUCKLE

Will Hays, the high priest of the movies and to some the guardian angel of the American public, has by the due exercise of his priestly prerogatives granted a pardon to Fatty Arbuckle, the moral derelict who shocked the sensibilities of the American people by conduct that might have brought the blush even to Sodom. Furthermore, he seeks to whitewash Fatty with nice sounding words.

When the mayor of Los Angeles wires a protest and urged reconsideration of his actions, Mr. Hays replies, "I know it is right and I am content." In other words, the king can do no wrong. The pope possesses the divine quality of infallibility.

There has arisen all at once a great interest in, and sympathy for, the man who was acquitted by the courts of being responsible for the death of Virginia Rappe, but who was the big chief in the "pajama party" where the unfortunate girl came to her death. While such great interest and sympathy is being manifested for Fatty, what about the influence upon the boys and girls of the nation, what about the wishes of fathers and mothers who desire their children to enjoy wholesome influences? Will Hays and those who follow his lead reply, "Let the public be its own judge of what it shall have." In other words we are not guardians for the public.

This is exactly what was to be expected. Yet Will Hays has gone over the country saying in substance let us not have any censorship or regulation of the movies. Just leave it to us and we will look after the public welfare.

There may have been some people who believed these promises. But who can now put any trust in such groundless assurances? If the American people get clean pictures, the people must take the matter in hand. For the directors and owners of this great industry care little or nothing about morals.

Joseph M. Schenk, producer, who is to employ Arbuckle says: "He is as clean as any one in motion pictures today. He merely got into a jam; he was unfortunate." We understand that Joseph M. Schenk means to say, "he just got caught." This is a fearful charge to make, and it is by a man who is in the business. We think his generalization is too sweeping. Schenk either knows so many who are bad that he has concluded that all are of the same stripe or else moral standards do not enter into his estimates of the movie actors. Yet some people are looking to such producers of pictures to give us wholesome and clean amusement.

It was never quite so clear as just now that if we have any reform in the movies the best sentiment of this country must set itself to such a reform.

We have brought no indictment against the movies. We leave Bishop Candler to do that. Give heed to what the great bishop says:

"This is 'the milk in the coconut.' Mr. Hays will not dare to try to make the movies decent, and, if he should he would fail and lose his lucrative position for his effort.

"The movies cannot be reformed. The speed with which the business has run to the lowest depths shows the inevitable gravitation of its nature toward evil. The millions which have been made by it with amazing swiftness assure the continuance of the same indecency which has been so profitable. Those who own and control the business are out for money and they are getting it, so that they are able to pay enormous salaries to influential men to lend the influence of their names and social position to cover the craft by which their gains are got.

No consideration of art, education, or morality is involved in the business. It is coarse and corrupting commercialism through and through.

What sort of people have the movies made famous and used as the bright particular stars of the cinema firmament? There is the shameless Arbuckle with his $25,000 automobile, his drunken bouts, licentious parties, and crime breeding entertainments. There is Charley Chaplin, who has quit his wife and deserves to have been quit by her. Mary Pickford has two living husbands, and rejoices in the fact. Douglas Fairbanks has married with equal frequency and unscrupulousness.

"Is a business educative, or elevating which draws to it such persons and finds them its most profitable employees? Do they not reveal with the utmost clearness that the source of the vileness of the movies is the very source from which 'the movies' spring? Can a thing be cleansed which thrives on the corruption which it creates? Would it not be slain if it were cleansed, and slain by the cleansing process?"

"The simple truth is that the movie is the worst form of entertainment which the world has ever seen. The old stage plays were never in their worst state half as demoralizing. The theatre of former days did not reach the masses, and especially the children and youth with the most defiling exhibitions at a price within the reach of all.

"Who can say what part in the production of the 'wave of crime' has been borne by the movies?"

A suggestive answer to this last question occurred last week in the town of Kernersville, N. C., when a 13-year-old boy came out from a picture show where daring hold-ups were being shown on the screen, got a pistol and held up the chief of police on the streets of the village and marched him to the town hall, where the big policeman snatched his own pistol and turned the tables on the daring youngster who was putting in practice what he had seen at the movies.

AS TO A MEDICAL SCHOOL FOR NORTH CAROLINA

By President W. P. Few.

There has been of late a good deal of discussion concerning a medical school for North Carolina. My interest in such a school has brought an amount of publicity that I did not look for. I have been thinking about a medical school for several years and have for some time had plans in which I have sought to interest others. But before these plans had matured another movement for a medical school was started—this one by the University of North Carolina.

It then occurred to me that since we needed one medical school but not two, it might be well to see if we could assure success for one good medical school by uniting the two movements. I talked with President Chase and Governor Morrison about this possibility and they both thought well of it, and I have talked with two committees appointed to deal with this whole problem. I have said that I thought to build and found a first-class medical school would require a minimum of eight million dollars, and I have expressed my belief that the goal might be reached if a sound plan could be agreed upon. I still believe this and I am inclined to think that this sound plan will be found. To this end I will do everything in my power. But unless a plan can be found that will commend itself to the best public opinion of the state and to national authorities in medical education, then I will oppose the plan myself.

Needless to say whatever plan may be devised will do no violence to the doctrine of Separation of Church and State; and needless also to say I have not intentionally contributed to the atmosphere of floating millions that news stories have created about this proposition. I have mentioned no sums of money that are at my disposal and I have named no probable or possible contributors for whom I could speak.

I should think that it would be needless, too, for me to say that I do not have in mind to draw on the already inadequate resources of Trinity College in my efforts to help even so great a cause as this one. The resources of Trinity are overtaxed with the load we are now carrying.

But I do have this medical school greatly at heart, and I covet for the undertaking the full co-operation of the entire Trinity College constituency and for that matter of every patriotic citizen of the state.

UNMASK THE KU KLUX KLAN

It appears at this writing that the present session of the General Assembly of North Carolina will by legal enactment take the mask from the face of the Ku Klux Klansman and probably require him to make public his name. Manifestly this is right and proper for many reasons. Among these we offer the following: The mask belongs to the burglar, the highwayman and the leaders of mobs which are set to do violence to life and law and not to brave high minded men with noble aims and lofty purposes. When a man conceals his identity either by covering his face, by refusing to give his name or by writing an anonymous letter, it is positive proof to most people that he is up to some sort of dirty work.

A man who has no better gumption than to think that people will regard him as an angel of light when he assumes the garb of a criminal needs some law to protect him from his own folly. Then men, even strong men, should not subject themselves to the temptations that arise from mass movements under cover of darkness when the crowd feels strong enough to follow with impunity the bent of its own will and the dictates of its own passions. There is grave danger of such conditions breeding crime.

Furthermore, we need some action in North Carolina that will save us from the state of affairs that obtain at present in the state of Louisiana. Dire consequences will unquestionably follow the existence of an "invisible empire" in this land of open courts, open churches, open legislative halls, a free press and civil and religious liberty. People will not have their affairs regulated by a company of men who love darkness rather than light. The average American citizen needs not be told what is pure Americanism. He knows already and will stand, as he has in the past, for what he believes to be his heritage which is not an "invisible empire."

But it is said by the members of the klan that there is need for such an organization to fight the negroes, the Jews, and the Roman Catholics. Why so? The negro is on our farms growing corn and cotton or in the cities doing our rough work and generally behaving himself. If he steals a chicken he goes to the chain gang; if he kills somebody he goes to the electric chair. The only help we need to take care of the negro is sane assistance in treating him better than we do.

Then, there is the Jew. He is here, it is true. The Cones of Greensboro are Jews. They are making overalls for the working men of all the world. They have about their great mills an ideal community with schools, churches, community houses, nurses and doctors for the sick and at all times are dividing their wealth with the men and women who help them make it. The Erlangers at Lexington are Jews. They have added great wealth to the state and left nothing undone for the health and happiness of their workmen at the Erlanger mills. Whitkosky of Charlotte, who now sleeps in the silent city of the dead, was a Jew. But he was the father of building and loan in North Carolina, which has enabled many a poor man to provide his own home to shelter his wife and little children. Jesus Christ was a Jew. But even so, why should we have a hooded host of night prowlers to guard the Jews?

"The Roman Catholics must be taken in hand," they say. We, too, are against all that is bad in Roman Catholicism and do not hesitate to say so. But our opposition is all in the open. Did you know that the dirtiest things in Romanism have been fostered by its secret practices, the secret confessional, for instance. If Rome would tear off its masks, it would at once remove countless suspicions, be compelled to clean up and be able to keep clean. Secret methods have done much to damn Rome in the eyes of the world, yet we have here in the leading Protestant nation of the world a klan donning a mask to fight Romanism.

Think of old John Huss, whose influence after almost a thousand years rules in the heart of Bohemia, wearing a mask. Savanorola, John Wickliffe, John Knox, Martin Luther are all familiar names among the great reformers, but who ever heard of one of these heroes of Protestantism putting on a mask to fight the Catholics? The pity, the pity of it all, that we should have fallen upon such times as these, even in this nation founded by our fathers that we might enjoy civil and religious liberty and might be called "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

To carry a deadly weapon concealed about one's person and off his premises has been made a crime in the eyes of the law. Not that such a weapon will necessarily and invariably become an instrument of evil, but because it is liable to be used to kill or to inflict great bodily harm. For the same reason should the wearing of masks or the use of other means to conceal one's personal identity be prohibited by law. The mask is not necessarily an instrument of evil, but it is liable to be used for such purposes so as to do violence to private and public rights which it is the duty of the state to guard.

In our possession are letters which declare that many preachers are members of the clan. Anonymous letters are seldom trustworthy and we attach little importance to anything that such cowardly documents contain. Yet there may be an element of truth in what they say. We hope not. Especially, do we trust that Methodist preachers have not been so ensnared.

The Methodist itinerancy enjoys an enviable record for fearless and heroic achievement. The early circuit rider feared not the Indian's scalping knife, rode empty handed except as armed with Bible and hymn book amid the ruffians and cut-throats of the wilderness, preached righteousness to the dare-devils of pioneer wilds, and looked iniquity square in the eyes as he talked of repentance. And if some rowdy thought to disturb the worship of Almighty God, these strong men of a rude age taught them in a language that they could understand. From the first the Methodist preacher has been known as the relentless antagonist of the liquor traffic, and often battled single-handed. But he always fought in the open and never struck below the belt, no matter what methods his enemy might adopt.

Now we have the pitiable and contemptible spectacle of a so-called Methodist preacher clothed in a night shirt with a white rag over his face going out to regulate society. You ask him why the garb? He answers, "I am fixed up to fight bootleggers and fornicators." God save the Methodist church, or any other church for that matter, from a preacher who is too big a coward to fight in the open.

We have fought the bootleggers, fought them in the open court, and they went to the chain gang. The courts can be relied upon every time if the good people of the community will give their aid and support as it is their duty to do. Pray tell us, if a court with the judge chosen by the people and a jury selected by legal processes and holding its sessions in the white light of publicity cannot be relied upon, what can we expect from judge, jury, executioner, all picked up at random, and that holds their mock court under cover of night? Shall we trample underfoot a thousand years of English jurisprudence and adopt the methods of the mob? God forbid!

THE PROPOSED MEDICAL COLLEGE

Upon the front page of this week's Advocate we carry a statement from President W. P. Few in regard to the medical college which has been for several weeks an interesting news topic for the state press. What President Few says in regard to the proposition is official as far as he is concerned and is too clear to need any words of explanation from us.

It appears now that a big majority of the people of the state think well of the proposed plan for one great medical college for North Carolina. It remains of course for the heads of the several institutions of learning concerned with their respective boards of trustees to work out a plan of co-operation that will meet the approval of the best sentiment of the state and that will insure through the years a satisfactory control of said institution.

It appears to us that the entire question should be approached without passion or prejudice and with breadth of vision after a survey of all the facts and with a due regard to what is necessary for North Carolina to have a medical college equal to the best in the nation. If so, we need have no fears as to the final results.

WATCH-NIGHT SERVICE AT ASHBORO

Rev. W. H. Willis, the pastor, had an unusually interesting and profitable watch-night service in the Methodist church of Ashboro last Sunday night. The services began at seven o'clock with a sermon by the editor of the Advocate and continued with increasing interest till the bells rang in the New Year. Five hours is a long time to hold a meeting these days, but it was done last Sunday night at Ashboro.

From 8 to 9 o'clock was devoted to a church conference. The roll was called and reports were received from 12 departments of the church's activities. These reports were concise, informing and interesting. Of especial interest in the pastor's report was the statement that he had made 300 pastoral visits, found 68 Methodists not members of the local church and had eaten 30 meals among his parishioners.

From 9 to 10 o'clock there were nine speeches on nine different subjects by nine different speakers. It was an interesting hour. Coffee and cake were served at 10 o'clock, which was followed by the call of the colleges. Twenty-six members of this church are away at eight different colleges—a remarkable showing for a church of 450 members. One representative from each college spoke. These young people acquitted themselves admirably. In addition to the speeches, six young ladies of Greensboro College sang a college song. This was in many respects one of the most interesting hours of the entire evening.

At 11 o'clock Rev. W. H. Willis told "Why He Is a Methodist." It was an unusually clear and impressive statement of Methodist doctrine and polity. This sermon-address was followed by the closing exercises of testimony, song and prayer.

The architect is now making the plans for the new church and these plans and specifications are expected to be ready for the contractor by February and work to begin in the early spring. Brother Willis has captured Ashboro completely. Gifts both large and small come to the parsonage thick and fast, and the people are co-operating with him in a manner that is beautiful to behold. This is going to be a great year in the history of Ashboro Methodism.

THE ADVOCATE IN 1923

Progress is our watchword for the North Carolina Christian Advocate in 1923, as it has been through the year 1922. The past year has brought good success to the paper. The list of subscribers at present runs a bit beyond 25,000 and from every nook and corner of North Carolina come words of encouragement to the men who are working hard to give the Methodists of the two conferences a paper that they can appreciate. More gratifying, however, than kind words to the men who grind at the mill, is the fact that the management receives very few requests "to stop my paper." The people continue to take the Advocate and to pay for it.

We are expecting 1923 to be the best year in the history of the Advocate. Our goal is 30,000 subscribers. The pastors whose loyalty and devotion to the paper in the past and who are the men that led on to the present wide circulation of our Advocate can be counted upon to give the campaign a shove that will insure success. All together for 30,000 subscribers is to be our rallying cry this year.

A feature of interest for the coming year will be a column by M. T. Plyler, presiding elder of the Durham district, under the general caption of "Field, Forum and Fireside." Bugle calls, forensic encounters, and soft talk about the hearthstone at twilight will characterize this "stuff" from the pen of the rugged and militant elder of the Durham district. There will be, also, other added features during the year. Whatever else the Advocate may be the present management does not intend to send out a paper to put men to sleep. Neither is it going to pussyfoot. We are anxious for the spirit of early Methodism with its zeal for righteousness and its passions for souls to be the inspiration of the North Carolina Christian Advocate for the year 1923.

MRS. EDGAR LEE HART

At the hour of midnight, December 28, Mrs. Addie McKinne Hart, wife of Edgar Lee Hart, after being ill ten days of influenza-pneumonia died at her home in Wilmington, N. C. Funeral services were held the next day in Grace church, of which she was a member, and on Saturday morning another service was held in First church, Rocky Mount, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery of that city. The services were conducted by Rev. W. A. Stanbury, assisted by Revs. J. M. Daniels, A. L. Ormond, H. M. North and F. S. Love.

Mrs. Hart was a choice spirit of earth, and her life was one of the finest products of our Christianity.

Her church and her city had come to look to her as a leader in all good works and through the coming years they will talk of her countless ministries of love. The ends of the earth felt the touch of her life of love as she wrought in the Woman's Missionary Society. "Her husband calls her blessed." To that splendid man, citizen and churchman by whose side she has walked through the years we extend heartfelt sympathy.

"The Journal of Social Forces" is a bi-monthly periodical from The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, N. C. Howard W. Odum is managing editor and with him are associated E. C. Branson, Dudley D. Carroll, Jesse F. Steiner, L. R. Wilson and Harold D. Meyer. The January number has reached our table and is first class in every particular. It is attractive in appearance and the list of contributors is a long and impressive one and among them are writers who are recognized authorities on social subjects. To indicate how this Journal proposes to deal with up-to-date social questions, we mention one item that is just now of popular interest, that is, the Ku Klux Klan. The Journal proposes to show that the organization is un-American, un-democratic and un-Christian in every true sense. The price is 50 cents a copy or $2.50 a year.

The devil always looks more at home at a prize-fight than he does at a church service.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Rev. L. D. Hayman and his two children are just recovering from an attack of influenza. Brother Hayman is now able to fill his appointments.

Prof. Bertholf, of the N. C. College, has recently organized an orchestra at Spring Garden Street church, and thus the Sunday school music as well as that of the church has been greatly improved.

In Albemarle, N. C., on December 27, 1922, Mr. Jerry Parker of Stanly county and Miss Minnie E. Shaver of Richfield, N. C., were united in matrimony by Rev. E. J. Poe.

The Rougemont circuit goes up $300 this year for the pastor. The parsonage is being finished and preparations made for painting and papering. Rev. J. F. Starnes is much pleased with the outlook.

In the report from the Weldon district of new pastors coming to that district this year the name of Rev. J. C. Humble, pastor of Battleboro and Whitakers, was inadvertently omitted. We are glad to make the correction.

"Mr. and Mrs. William Francis Utley announce their golden wedding anniversary, December the nineteenth, 907 Glenwood avenue, Raleigh, North Carolina. William Francis Utley. Martha Elizabeth Gibbons. 1872-1922." We trust it is not too late to offer congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Utley.

Mr. Landreth, the lay leader of Spring Garden Street church, this city, has joined the pastor, Rev. G. T. Bond, in visiting the homes represented in the membership of that church. In one week recently the pastor and lay leader made 75 calls, and the results are pleasing to both of them.

Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Armbrust, of the Spencer Memorial M. E. church, North Charlotte, are deeply grieved because of the loss of their infant daughter. Mrs. Armbrust is improving after ten days of intense suffering at the St. Peters Hospital, Charlotte.

Rev. H. B. Porter of Warrenton and his entire family have been ill with the "flu." Mrs. Porter was taken ill the day they reached Warrenton, Mr. Porter the next day and the children the day following. The entire family is better now. The people of Warrenton have been exceedingly thoughtful of their new pastor and his family through it all.

Rev. B. T. Hurley is on the job at Brooksdale, having come from Jacksonville and Richlands, Wilmington district, to the Durham district. He received a warm welcome from the good people of Brooksdale. They have advanced his salary $150 and bestowed many favors upon his family. The parsonage has been newly painted and papered and the year starts auspiciously for preacher and people.

Rev. J. W. Williams will soon have all the material in place for the new church at Helena. The plan is to have the church ready for use in May. The congregation is using the graded school building for the present. The Mt. Tirzah circuit is filled with great expectation for the year's work. The pastor's salary has been advanced $200, and plans are being worked out that ought to make this one of the leading circuits in the Durham district.

The board of stewards of that great church, Grace, Wilmington, is one hundred per cent for the Advocate. Every member of the board was a subscriber last year. Brother Stanbury, the pastor, added four new members to his official family, and promptly sent us a check for $8 to pay their subscriptions to the Advocate. Every steward in Southern Methodism ought to be a subscriber to his church paper, and it would be a blessing to the to the church if every pastor would devise some means to get every one in his charge to take it.

Listen to Rev. W. M. Wall: "While I sent in the largest list from my charge last year that went in from this district, yet I want to retain those readers to the paper, and this year send in a goodly number of new ones again. And while I am not unmindful of the importance of trying to 'preach the word' and get the unsaved converted, yet we must get our people to read our discipline and our church literature, and get them organized and lined up for greater activity on their part, if we hold our own and make the advances that we should. After this is done we are hoping for results to follow that when known will let the folks know that Mayodan is on the map."

Rev. W. A. Barber, pastor of Glenwood church, and his wife were recipients of a beautiful chest of silver from their congregation at the occasion of their Christmas entertainment.

Mr. Leviticus A. Bilbro and Mrs. Annie E. Utley, both of Wilmington, N. C., were married at the home of Prof. C. W. Hollowbush, in East Wilmington, December 6, 1922, Rev. E. C. Sell of Goldston officiating.

Married, on Sunday, December 17, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Monteith, in Cashier's township, Jackson county, N. C., Miss Edith Monteith to Mr. Warren Fisher of Lake Toxaway, Transylvania county, N. C., Rev. G. A. B. Holderby, pastor of Rosman charge, officiating in the presence of a large company of friends.

Rev. J. J. Gray of Spindale gets the palm. Here is how he won it: "Some time ago a man killed a pine rooter and put it in a washpot to render out the lard. He rendered out three quarts of turpentine and an axle grease box full of 'rawsome.' Query: How long will it take a pine rooter to evolve to the point where he will have grease in him instead of turpentine and rosin?"

Rev. Z. E. Randall writes: "Rev. J. C. Cornett and family of the Hanes-Clemmons charge visited in East Radford, Virginia, during the Christmas holidays and on December 31st occupied the pulpit at Grove Avenue Methodist church. He preached a delightful sermon from the text, "He saith to the sick of the palsy, arise, take up thy bed and walk." Send Brother Cornett over again, but instruct him to preach twice instead of once the next Sunday he spends here."

February, March and April are to be Advocate months. Special effort will be made during those months to increase the circulation of the paper to 30,000 per week, and to secure renewals for the 25,000 now on the subscription list. We are sending out the mailing list to all the pastors, and with it a statement of plans for the special effort. We trust that all the friends of the church organ will rally to its help, and make this the best year in the history of the Advocate.

Rev. J. M. Price gives us some interesting items: "Oak Forest gave us a real good pounding last night, for which we are very thankful. We are praying for and expecting the conversion of all the Sunday school children this year. Brother Gentry is acceptably filling Brother Fry's place as preacher in charge. Brother Ware, D. D., is very popular in Morganton. Dr. Paris is an ideal presiding elder. The junior preacher on the Morganton circuit is earnestly trying to fulfill Christ's ideal of true greatness as recorded in Matthew 20:26-27."

Rev. J. T. Stover writes: "The Centenary treasurer of the Methodist church at Rutherford College says that seven subscribers out of 41 have paid their pledges in full, and their names together with all others who do likewise by January 1, 1923, will appear on the Honor Roll the first week in the new year. Then there are twelve others who have never made the first payment. Wonder if any of them would be offended to see their names in print? Some of these say they fully intend to honor their pledge before the time is up—only they have been in bad luck—but what of those who coolly repudiate their solemn pledge? See answer in Ecclesiastes 5:4."

Report comes from Stanstonsburg that a touch of the prevalent "flu" has recently visited the parsonage home. But the good people of Stanstonsburg continue their visits of generous giving—truck loads of wood ready to burn, chickens, fat Christmas turkey, three large fruit cakes, as many good old juicy hams, and plenty of country sausage. To start the new year off right our Lebanon congregation brought us a most generous pounding. With a good garden, plenty of sweet potatoes and a cow Mr. H. C. L. has no show. A friend volunteered a nice horse, and feeds him. Another recently gave a monetary gift of $20 and another $10. Surely all these material extra provisions are a challenge to anyone to do his best.

FALL MEETING OF THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS

During three days, December 8-10, in New Orleans, the College of Bishops was in session. On the first two days the meetings were almost continuous. A closing session was held the afternoon of the last day.

Ten of the active bishops were present: Bishops Candler, Denny, Murrah, Mouzon, Moore, McMurry, Cannon, Beauchamp, Dickey and Dobbs.

Messages written or verbal from several of the absent bishops were presented. During our sessions the tragic death of Bishop Waterhouse shocked and saddened our small company, especially the few bishops remaining of those elected at Asheville. Plato affirms that philosophy is meditation on death. The events of life are full of calls to philosophy, as Plato understood the term.

In addition to most gracious hospitality in the homes of our people, there were two luncheons largely attended by our preachers and laymen. All the preachers were courteously attentive. The meetings were held in our Rayne Memorial church, of which Rev. Dr. W. L. Duren is pastor.

Each of the bishops gave an account of the state of the work in the conferences with which he is associated. The church is progressing, not so rapidly as could be hoped, but still progressing. Reports of revivals were encouraging. Nearly all the conferences showed increases in membership. All over the church our people are providing better facilities in church buildings and Sunday school rooms.

Consideration was given to the interests of the Centenary and a message to the church touching that important matter has been issued. An address in the interest of the Board of Lay Activities was directed to be prepared and issued to the church. Our prosperous publishing interests were considered, and means to increase the usefulness of the house were discussed.

The committee appointed by the last General Conference to edit the Discipline was thanked for the efficient work it had done, and the publishing agents were assured of the appreciation of the several members of the College for the beautiful copy of that book sent to each bishop.

The need of hospitals throughout the church was considered, and the following resolution was adopted: Resolved, that it is the judgment of the bishops after hearing the statement of Bishop Candler, the president of the Hospital Board, that the time has come when it will be well for that board to elect a secretary, as provided by the General Conference, to give his entire time, under the direction of the board, to promoting the work committed to it.

The committee on the course of study was asked to prepare a list of books for post-graduate reading, and to submit the list to each member of the College prior to the May meeting.

A meeting, the exact name of which has not yet been furnished, is to be held in Moscow, Russia, in the interest of the religious work in that country. It was thought wise that our church should be represented in that meeting, and Bishop Beauchamp, with Rev. John Vancura associated with him, were appointed to attend that meeting and to represent our church.

It was suggested that Bishop Hay and Boaz be requested to consider the propriety of returning to this country so as to assist in the collection of the Centenary pledges.

Bishop Candler was appointed to prepare the memoir of Bishop Kilgo, and Bishop Mouzon that of Bishop Waterhouse, both memoirs to be ready for the May meeting.

A large part of the time of the meeting was given up to a discussion of administration. The bishops have always striven to carry out our law as the church has enacted it, but it is not always easy to determine what the church intended in cases that vary from the matter actually present before the church when the law was enacted, and at times the enactment itself is not clear. In addition other questions of administration arise, and it has proven to be helpful to discuss all these questions. It is interesting to an observer and a participant to notice that after discussion, in nearly every instance there is unanimity of opinion, though now and then the College is about evenly divided.

Perhaps never before was the discussion of administration more interesting or more profitable.

The religious exercises at each session are full of solemnity and profit, and this was especially the case at New Orleans.

Collins Denny, Secretary.

Some men would rather crawl to heaven than to follow Jesus Christ and walk there in his light.

FARM, FORUM AND FIRESIDE

A FIRST WORD

It is desired that this page of the Advocate may be slightly out of the conventional rounds so as to give some further variety to the contents of the weekly issues. Though this contributor has no special gifts for doing the work contemplated, he will be, at least, able to furnish "copy" away from the atmosphere and daily rounds of the shop. To be in the midst of men and women who live and labor, suffer defeat and win victories, as they sorrow and rejoice, love and hate, in home and field and marketplace, may be of advantage in giving a touch of life. At any rate, the viewpoint is other than that of the office.

The writer believes most sincerely that religion is the deepest and most pervasive element in life and that, in the Christian view of the world, we are evermore having to do with religion. Though the variety is multiform in the external order of this varied and changing world, the unity remains in the One who is revealed to us in the Christ, Jesus of Nazareth. He taught religion without the shibboleths of religion; he urged the purity and perpetuity of the family; he made a little child the type of the kingdom; and he declared the field to be the world. Would that one could write of the affairs of human life with the simplicity and freedom with which he lived and spoke, but such is impossible with all our human limitations in the present complex world. The only assurance one can give is to cherish an earnest desire to render some little service as one passes this way.

That the child of the home, the man of the fields, the church in the grove may have a major place on this page will be in keeping with the purpose of the whole. But why make a promise? The honor is in the doing. Seeing is believing. We shall see.

AROUND THE WINTER FIRE

A furnace in the basement with an opening in the floor or a radiator near the wall may be included in the caption to his article, but the main idea is more especially that of the open fireplace. Hot air and steam may add to the comfort of the inmates of the house during the long winter months only at the sacrifice of certain advantages to be gained about the hearthstone. The hearthstone bulks large in the history of the English people. This has done much to make every Englishman's home his castle. Genuine family life as the English people have known it through the generations is well-nigh impossible without the open fireplace.

A family in a big house, heated from cellar to garret, with a room for every member of the household, scatters off and wanders out to the "movie" or the theatre or the office only to return to their scattered habitations. Bonds of affection do not strengthen and souls do not knit under such conditions. On the other hand, a big family gathered around an open fire has to sit close and get acquainted. It is a give and take game. The children feel the reflection of the same fire in their faces, and the benign presence of father and mother makes real a sense of unity that grows up with the years. The dull grey skies of the eveningtime making more vivid the sense of darkness and cold during the nighttime adds to the sense of warmth and good cheer found around the paternal hearthstone. All these contribute to the feeling of unity and mutual concern. The memories of these evenings are the most lasting and the most potential. Often the joys of these winter evenings prove a source of strength and comfort and sweet consolation across a stretch of threescore years. They are like a song hid in the heart.

Furthermore, think of the free and unrestrained intercourse indulged in the family group. All the escapades of youth and the hairbreadth escapes of the more daring, to say nothing of the more serious matters of the older heads, are passed in review. Scraps are justified to the full satisfaction of those engaged. Troubles of playground and schoolroom are dealt with in the freest way. Work often engages the time of the busy mother and the hard-worked father. At times, papers and books have a place and the evening passes with a review of the world of thought and action.

One of the richest legacies that have come down to us from the days of the colonies has been the record made by the men and women of culture and literary tastes who added culture and renown to the isolated life lived by the men who settled this land and subdued this wilderness. Many of them were men of Sir Roger instincts, with shelves upon which were the octavo volumes of mellow sheep, who held fellowship with the great thinkers and became leaders in the building of this nation. The women were blessed with instincts and culture fit to grace any occasion. The wide open fireplaces of the builders of America around which gathered our heroic sires were akin to the hearthstones that have played a part, century after century, in making the people that speak the tongue of Shakespeare and Milton.

Thought and meditation have much to do with making a people great. Who will tell us how much the gray ashes gathering on the charred wood in the vanishing hours of the night have to do with making this people? Can any one forecast the future of a people who fed on headlines of the daily paper and the story of the popular magazine in a stifling atmosphere oblivious of what and where the children are? Happy the family compelled to gather and sit around the winter fire.

THE DULL LEADEN SKIES

Our ordinary humanity shuns the undesirable. We have a loud welcome for the attractive and pleasurable. Could the flowers bloom always and the birds be in the sky evermore, the crowd would count this a favorable world in which to live. December would be as pleasant as May and sunshine would be everywhere. But this cannot be. The leaden skies are inevitable. The dark dreary days drop upon us and the snows close us in for the winter of our discontent.

The wise farmer finds in these the days of preparation for the golden harvests of the brown autumn; the far-seeing preacher knows that leaden skies are the harbingers of later victory; and the devoted Christian converts these into steppingstones to the skies that are ever bright. Out of the frosts and cold of winter and the dews and warmth of the springtime comes the response of old mother earth to the efforts of the man who tills the soil. The man of God who lives with the poets, philosophers, scientists, theologians, and his Lord, when the days are cold and harsh and dead, will know the power of a resurrection day and will never say the resurrection is past or the gospel has lost its power. He will find that God lives and the Christ has power to save. His own developing self will feel the stirrings of the eternal day and the Christ with whom he walks and talks and holds fellowship will make glorious the dullest of dark days.

A sore tragedy of life is the failure to make the most of the less desirable experiences incident to our daily rounds. Most of life is the purest commonplace, filled with drudge-work. Then to make the task all the more trying, the stars go out and the raw east wind chills to the bone. Stout hearts are needed to make brave and heroic under such conditions. Certainly, a message of despair is not called for; a thrilling message of hope is the need. How blessed is the gospel for such! Jesus never uttered a word of despair; words of triumphant life fell from his lips. His words often blistered and burned in fierce denunciation of those who did not ring true, such as the Scribes and Pharisees, but never a word of hopelessness did he speak. How different the message of some so-called Christian ministers!

The next three months in North Carolina will be filled with clouds and rain and mud and slush, interspersed with sunshine and open skies, but these will not be fruitless for the wise and provident. The Sunday school will keep going the best possible and the church will meet its obligations to a faithful and devoted pastor. Of course, those who are so short-sighted or sluggish as not to have fires in their stoves, either at home or at church, will be apt to freeze. Want of proper heat closes more churches in North Carolina every winter than all other causes combined. This stops the Sunday schools and allows the preacher to hold forth to a bunch of cold, shivering saints.

THE PASSING OF THE COUNTRY DOCTOR

Twenty-five years ago, everyone who read anything was reading "A Doctor of the Old School" by Ian MacLaren. This old Doctor of Drumtochty, Weelum MacLure, who gave himself so entirely to the plain Scotch people of the glen, touched the heart of the world. Through flood and storm, doing the best he could for man and woman and child of the glen, he went for more than forty years without a holiday. The blizzards and fast falling winter nights of the High Lands did not deter Dr. MacLure. He took risks of life for which men in other fields get the Victoria Cross. Fierce, black, sullen winter floods did not stop him when he wanted to reach some poor Scot in the last fight. "The verra look o' him wes victory."

This story of the "Doctor of the Old School" and his faithful old horse, Jess, caused many who read to wipe away the unbidden tear, and brought fresh courage to many country doctors whose charity puts most of us to shame. Who does not remember, in actual life, some of these unselfish men who often responded to calls made by men who never thought of the doctor only when they or theirs were sick?

But another day is fast dawning. The old country doctor is passing. The places that once knew him will soon know him no more. Will any one pretend to hold that this is not a distinct loss? Some of these men were not graduates of the best schools—some of them were—and they did not keep in touch with all the latest in the world of medicine, it will be freely admitted; but, notwithstanding, they filled a large place and rendered an unselfish service. They were usually the most influential citizens of the community. No other person of all the countryside, not even the minister, came so close to the family and knew so well the ills of all as did he. From birth, through all the stages of life every member of the household passed under his scrutinizing gaze. His touch was well known and his medicine well remembered. Though the family came to know his every dose, few would fail to give him the call for the very look of him was victory. Sometimes, he went under the shining stars feeling the throb and thrill of the glorious heavens above his head, but oftener the old country doctor went through the dark night beset with snow and sleet and wind, for somehow our frail humanity breaks down at the most inopportune time. The more unpromising the situation, the more urgent become the demands for help when pain and anguish grip the frame. Then the call for the doctor becomes mandatory even though remuneration for previous services has been forgotten.

The long source of training and the cost of securing this in the medical schools of the present conspire to render the class of which we write a memory. The men who spend much time and money in preparation feel that they must seek the centers rather than find a field where the remuneration must necessarily be less. Only those who go much into the country places or have given some attention to the statistics know how acute this situation is becoming. We need more doctors, doctors who have had placed within their reach training at much less cost than that possible in this day.

THE SCHOOL OF RELIGION AT TRINITY

No one undertaking of the present is of more vital concern to the Methodist people of the North Carolina conferences than pushing to a finish the Kilgo building that is to house the School of Religion at Trinity College. This involves the gathering of a corps of instructors and the organizing of movements that will ultimately reach every nook and corner of the two conferences. So far as the efforts of religious training on the part of Methodists are concerned, this school should be so vital and far-reaching as to make the boundaries of North Carolina and the limits of Trinity campus one and the same. Such an ideal calls for a speedy effort at realization.

The one consideration just now is to meet the condition for securing the $50,000 by raising the additional $50,000 needed. Perhaps those charged with this enterprise are on a still-hunt for the funds and they may have something to offer before a great while. It is most important for a great constituency like that of North Carolina Methodism to see that something is doing before the new year is well advanced. The call is urgent.

"To use books rightly is to go to them for help; to appeal to them when our knowledge and power fail; to be led by them into wider sight and purer conception than our own, and to receive from them the united sentence of the judges and councils of all time, against our solitary, unstable opinions."—Ruskin.

CHRISTMAS MEDITATIONS OF "THE OLD MAN"

CHARLES H. IRELAND

The old man! I wonder whom they meant. Surely, not me! Me—the old man! Why, it was only yesterday that I was a barefooted boy, tramping over the Virginia hills. I can hear the laughter of my playmates as they shouted gleefully at some brilliant play by some one over "shinney" or "corner ball" on the village commons. I still feel the smart of the sunburn on the back of my neck and the gouge of the dry clay as it entered the calouses on my bare feet; I visualize the rock on which I so frequently stumped my sore toe; I still hear the buzz of the dauber wasp as he hums above his lowly home; and in my imagination I feel the slanting rays of the summer sun as it penetrates the deep shade of the locust trees, as I lay flat on my back and looked into the blue heaven above and dreamed dreams of the years to come.

The blackhaw's berries, which glistened in the sun on the leafless branches, the blood-tipped sumacs and gum leaves, tinged with a color no artist could ever paint, all tell of winter's approach, together with the deep green of the old field pine thickets, and the carpet of needles that lie thick over all the earth, with the rabbit path leading to the gnaw on the fence, where the cotton-tail passed and in frolicsome defiance let it be known that he had passed that way. Why! I see now the open door of the set rabbit trap and feel the throb of my heart in my bosom as with eager eyes I peeped amidst the branches to see if the door was down—thus indicating that the trap was sprung. The sudden intake of breath as I discovered the door down and the trigger high in the air! No gambler ever approached the ticker to read his figures of fortune or failure with greater anxiety than I did as I approached that trap and slowly raised the door to see if it were hare, skunk, mink or failure. With what ecstasy I gazed into the eyes of the cotton-tail! When I drew him forth to carry to my home, as the evidence of my trapping skill, how proudly I stepped. It mattered not about the bare feet and the hoary frost on the clay bank—I'd scored; my triumph was complete. Oh! how utterly indifferent I tried to appear as I walked the village street and was accosted by some early riser—"Catch him last night?" I would hastily reply, "Yep," as if it were nothing to me. Surely they could not mean me when they say, "the old man says so!"

Me the old man! Why, it was only a while ago that I rode on horseback to the country church holding the umbrella over "her" until my arm ached and still I swore I was enjoying it. I can see the road over the hills and the great sweep of birch and dogwood that encircled that winding road. Why, even now I hear the ripple of the water in the bed of the stream as our horses stopped to drink and I can still smell the dense odor of the fox grape as it was wafted from its bed along the stream, tickling the appetite and preparing one for the bountiful rations that would be served on the church grounds at noon. Those stalwart young men and blithesome young women, whom I knew and prized in my early life, they have not grown old. They seemed so efficient and pulsating with energy and life until a century could hardly exhaust their surplus of spirit.

Then the next week (Tuesday) the tri-county contest at baseball came off. The rattle of the wheels of the surrey as it sped on to the ball grounds I can now hear and see the tension of the contest. There were no mits or gloves in those days. I can see the muscles of the catcher as he stooped to swoop with bare hands the swift ball. I hear the umpire as he said, "Three strikes—Run." I see the catcher gathering all of his strength to pass the runner with swift ball. I feel the hot breath of the runner almost in my face, for I was first baseman, but like a bullet the ball was in my hand, tearing the skin from my palm, but the runner was out and I hear the hearty hurrahs of my comrades as they yelled, "That's the way we do it!" Then comes the last ball and the whirling choruses as round and round they swept. I can see it right now—why, it seems only the incidents of a day!

And then came the call of the city to leave the native village—the anxious eyes, which followed me with tears, which I could not understand then, but do now—the meager salary—the difficulty of making both ends meet and the repeated efforts to get my feet upon the rung of the ladder of permanency in order to climb—why, that was only yesterday! Surely they don't mean me when they say "the old man!"

Me an old man! Why, it was only last week that I came to this town! It was only a village then. The men and women, whom I met and loved, do not seem old to me. The lanes along which we drove—for there were no automobiles then—the picnics! the chorus clubs! the glee clubs! How strong, vigorous and capable I felt myself and believed others to be! How worthy some of them have proven themselves to be! I could not think of them as old. They are my friends and companions of young manhood. Then to whom do they refer when they say "the old man?"

The old man—yes, I recall those early days. It's a fact—'twas fifty years ago. As I call for those who shared with me in those bygone deeds the answer is nearly always, "Dead—passed away many years ago."

'Twas only a short while ago, in a visit I made, that I passed over the creek outside of the village in which I played. It seemed a misnomer to call it a creek. It was hardly a rivulet. The brick church, that to my childish eyes was as the magnificence of a cathedral, had shrunken until it seemed a very meager house; the court house in which great lawyers had discussed weighty problems seemed dingy and without dignity; the companions, who played "shinney" in these same streets, were old, at which my young eyes had gazed in such wondering expectations, seemed to have drawn in and grown narrower; and the business houses, where I had known every proprietor and clerk, were now occupied by strangers.

This town to which I had come in young manhood has so changed as to be now a city. The old has been torn down and the magnificent has taken its place. The old court house—the pride of all who looked upon it!—has been abandoned and moved to a magnificent granite building, occupying two squares, while at the place where this old courthouse stood a seventeen-story skyscraper is now being erected; the cobblestones of the main streets have given away to bitulithic roadways, while a glance into the store windows makes one think of a great metropolitan city.

I call the names of those men who ran the businesses of the city when I came. Only the echo of my voice responds. The tall sons of Anak, upon whose shoulders rested the burden of the city's progress, have silently crept away to the white city on the hill, where a marble slab or a granite shaft carries the name of those whom I knew in active life.

Yes, that has taken time, but who counts time in a busy life? And I've been busy, too—gratefully so. And so, weeks have slipped into months and months into years and one wist not that they were going. But to call me the old man! Why, men are constantly saying, "You've not changed a whit in these twenty years that I've known you." Life is as interesting now as in any hour in the past. I am as active and as vigorous as when I was twenty-five and not nearly so old now as I felt myself to be at that time.

"The old man!" No—that doesn't fit me, nor ever will, I trust, for we are just as old as the companionships of life; and day by day I walk amidst the garden of roses with the Youth of Galilee who "walks with me and talks with me and tells me I am His own, and the joys we share as we tarry there" no mortal can ever feel and grow old. His Youth is renewed in me day by day.

No! No! They did not refer to me when they said "The old man."

The ashes on the hearth are piled in gray heaps, the log on the fire has burned in two, and from the red heat of the coals there troops forth the faces and forms of many loved ones of long, long ago. They are all clad in garments of perennial youth. What a joy it is to have had so many of them as my friends! But hark! the clock in the tower booms out midnight and I am reminded that this is Christmas Eve. Who would count the hours of this night as weariness? Soon the shout of eager voices will reverberate through all the house, "Christmas gift, grandfather!" Throw open the blinds, pull back the curtains, welcome the new day. Joy! joy to the whole world! hope is born anew. We take up life's task with renewed faith in a life in which we shall never, never grow old.

SPECIAL OBJECTIVES OF THE DURHAM DISTRICT FOR 1923

At the meeting of preachers and laymen in Durham on December 15, 1922, the following special objectives were set down. Of course, many other enterprises will be undertaken here and there, but this is for the entire district and is adopted as a policy for all the charges. Let the preachers clip and carry in their notebooks.

1. A revival in each church, running not less than ten days.
  2. The use of envelopes and monthly payment of salary. Systematic efforts for conference collections, Centenary and Education. One-half of the collections to be paid by Easter.
  3. Substantial improvement to be made on at least one piece of church property during the year.
  4. At least one delegate from each Sunday school to attend a training school, the school to pay the expenses. Three standard training schools are to be held in the district.
  5. Each pastor to attend the summer school at Trinity in June and to read four books during the year, dealing with some phase of his church work. Each official to read one book, as suggested by his pastor.
  6. Fullest co-operation of preachers and laymen in making the board of lay activities to function.
- An early district conference was requested. This will meet at West Durham, March 29-30. We ought to have a big financial report for the district by that time.
- M. T. Plyler.

FIELD NEWS

WALT HOLCOMB AT MEMORIAL

During November Rev. Walt Holcomb was with us in a meeting at Memorial, Durham. It was a gracious revival—a meeting of real power. Our people liked Brother Holcomb. They liked his preaching, they liked his methods, they were greatly pleased with the results of the meeting.

There were around one hundred additions to the church, with scores of reclamations and reconsecrations.

No more faithful workers than Walt Holcomb and his singer, George Pickard, have been our way, and Memorial church will not soon forget their services.
M. Bradshaw.

BROAD RIVER CIRCUIT

We have been well received by the members of this charge for the second year. We enjoy serving them, for they are a fine and loyal people.

A number of the members of Tanner's Grove church came to the parsonage Thanksgiving Day, bringing with them a bountiful donation, which was heartily appreciated.

The evening of December 23rd an enjoyable Christmas service was held at Providence church. The music was good and the children and young people took their parts well. A generous treat was distributed and many presents received by teachers and scholars. The writer and his family were showered with nice gifts, which were greatly appreciated.

On Christmas night a Christmas service was held at Wesley's chapel. The program consisted of a sermon by the pastor, a nice treat for the children and special music which was well rendered by the choir.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Wesley's before conference put new doors to the church, painted it on the inside and carpeted the pulpit. Since conference they have put three handsome chairs in the pulpit and also provided a new table. They will paint the church on the outside in the spring.

The people of Kistler's chapel have started the new conference year well, with large congregations and with great enthusiasm in the Sunday school work.

At all four of the churches a fine spirit of co-operation has been and is being shown. We love the people on this charge, and are expecting a good year of service with them.

Elmer Simpson.

NEW PASTOR IN A NEW FIELD

I am a new preacher at a new station, the remarkable place called Stumpy Point. I wish through the medium of our paper to publicly acknowledge and thank my people for their hospitality, friendliness and generosity, but above all for their love and Christian fellowship, which is so rich in our community and church.

A special boat made a trip to Englehard to bring the preacher and his family to their new home. Then the people of the whole place literally received us with open arms and open homes as we touched land.

Owing to the sickness of our two little boys and the extreme weather conditions, we spent the first few days and nights with Brother Calvin Payne, with a host of solicitous friends constantly inviting us to their homes and administering to us with a beautiful spirit.

When we finally entered the parsonage we found a completely furnished house with all our grocery needs anticipated and supplied over several weeks by the congregation.

Out of the depth of our humble and sincere hearts we thank God for His goodness in providing such an ideal location and matchless people for us to serve. May God give us power and grace for His full honor and service is our prayer.
Adrian E. Brown.

THEN, AND NOW

Thirty-nine years ago I went to Ashepole mission as pastor of that charge. I was a local preacher, living in Laurinburg at the time, and was appointed to this mission charge by Dr. J. A. Cunningham, on the very earnest request of Dr. J. W. North, who was one of the best friends I have ever had. When I went to the charge, I carried with me my wife, three children, and a horse and buggy. The year before I went to the charge it was served by Rev. I. W. Avent, who received from all sources less than three hundred dollars for his services as pastor. I rented a little house from Mr. S. R. Townsend at Red Banks, moved the little family with our belongings into it, and with all the energy and enthusiasm at my command I threw myself into the work I loved so well. The great Head of the church blessed my efforts with good results, and at the fourth quarterly conference of that year I was recommended for admission on trial into the traveling connection. The annual conference was held that year in old Front Street Methodist church in the city of Wilmington, and was presided over by Bishop Parker. Sixteen young men applied for admission at that conference, but several of them failed to pass the examination and were not received. I recall very vividly the delight of my soul that I was one of the fortunate ones. I was returned to the Ashepole mission, and served it a full quadrennium, leaving it Maxton circuit.

As a member of this great and honorable body I recall I took special notice of events as they transpired. I was specially impressed with the fact that members of the body seemed to dread the hour of superannuation. As a young man, full of energy, I could not quite understand why it was that such men seemed to be utterly unable to meet the inevitable with composure. For more than a quarter of a century I thought very little about superannuation so far as it concerned me personally. But when I did think of it I made myself believe that when the time came for me to drop out of active service I would do it philosophically. But as the years passed this dreaded hour became more and more an unpleasant reality to me. At last, on account of rheumatic trouble, I became unable to attend to the visiting that I deemed an important part of a pastor, and three years ago I suggested to my presiding elder that my name be referred for the superannuate relation. But I was at that time serving Maxton station, the very best charge in the conference, and that dear congregation unanimously asked for my return to that charge as pastor. This was done, and I served it a full quadrennium to the very best of my ability. Last conference I felt like my condition was better than it had been for three or four years, and I told my presiding elder if a light charge could be given to me I would do my best serving it, otherwise just to refer my name for the superannuate relation. It transpired that such a charge could not be secured, and my name was referred. I am now a superannuate, and I know better than I could ever have known without trying it what it means. After spending a lifetime in the pastorate it is not an easy matter to adjust one's self to such a change.

The first of January wife and I will move into our little home in Maxton, not all paid for, but ours for the present, and there among the dear friends where we began and ended our active ministry, we will do our best to be happy, and in some measure useful.

If any of my brethren should desire my aid in special meetings I shall be glad to serve them to the best of my ability.

With every good wish for the Advocate and every one connected with it, I am,
Sincerely,

J. A. Hornaday.

FLAT ROCK AND FLETCHER

We have been silent but still on the Flat Rock-Fletcher charge since conference. Things have been happening up here. First of all, we were received for the second year very cordially. The pounding came on time, and full measure, "pressed down, shaken together, heaped up and running over." Then our board of stewards substantially increased the salary. We are preaching to fine audiences and having conversions at almost every service. Our Christmas exercises were splendid. Sunday schools doing fine; in fact, we are second to no one.

M. W. Dargan.

LETTER FROM A SON OF CAROLINA

Please add my name to your list of subscribers to the old North Carolina Christian Advocate for 1923. I did my first pastoral work in your great conference, transferring to the Virginia conference, and doubtless will spend the remainder of my days in it. I shall never forget my native state and the conference that first received me. I entered the conference green and inexperienced and without much training. The work was hard and at times discouraging beyond expression. At times I felt like giving up and doubtless would, but it was my happy privilege to be associated with men like R. G. Tuttle and R. M. Taylor, who took me in their arms and helped me over the hard places. Especially do I remember that godly man, Rev. R. G. Tuttle, who was always ready to help me in every trial. When I needed advice he was there to give it. When the task was greatest he helped me perform it. When the burdens were heavy he was by my side to help carry it. So while I am still inexperienced and the work has not ceased to be heavy, I shall always be glad that I was associated with such godly men as the above mentioned in the beginning of my ministry. Yes, the work is hard, but I am happy to say that the way grows brighter as we journey; the Lord is blessing our ministry, and our greatest desire is that we may be faithful to the end. We hope at last to be able to say I have fought a good fight, kept the faith and finished my course. Your paper and the conference which it serves have my best wishes for a prosperous and happy new year.

If you have space you may publish this short letter in your paper. As I have been out of touch with your conference for about seven years, some may be curious to know where I am and how I am doing. You may say to all that there are six of us in the family and all are happy and well.

Yours fraternally,

Z. V. Johnston.

GREAT REVIVAL CAMPAIGN COMES TO CLOSE

Last night's service at First Street Methodist church brought to a close a five weeks' revival campaign, which was doubtless the greatest and most successful revival ever held in Albemarle. During this campaign about three hundred people professed faith in Jesus Christ. More than sixty people have given their names for membership in First Street church. A class of thirty-four have already been taken in. Some twelve or fifteen have joined Tabernacle in West Albemarle. Four or five names were sent to Central Methodist church, and quite a number have joined other churches. One of the unusual things about this revival was that practically all professions made were by grown men and women. During one service near the close of the first two weeks of the meeting under a proposition as to how many people had been converted or reclaimed during the two weeks, one hundred and ninety-three persons came forward, and not a little child among them. The first four weeks of this campaign was conducted by Rev.

Ed G. Caldwell, of Dillon, S. C., who was ably assisted by Mr. D. H. Buie, of Blackshear, Ga., who led the song service with Miss Gentry as pianist.

Brother Caldwell is a splendid speaker and has wonderful ability in the evangelistic line and I heartily commend him to any preacher who has a hard proposition on his hands, especially in cotton mill centers and small towns where it is hard to get people to go to church. Ed Caldwell certainly can get them out. Mr. D. H. Buie, who has had but little experience in this line of work, proved himself to be the greatest song leader and personal worker it has ever been my pleasure to come in contact. Many who listened to him considered him to be the greatest evangelistic singer they had ever heard. Brother Buie is an accomplished soloist as well as choir leader. Miss Gentry is a young lady who has given herself to Christian work as pianist, and although this was her first campaign proved herself to be a pianist of splendid ability.

This campaign began in First Street church five weeks ago and at the end of the second week was moved to West End Tabernacle, where it was continued for two weeks, at the end of which time Brother Caldwell left for his home. The meeting was then moved back to First Street church, where it was continued under the leadership of the pastor, Bro. J. A. Sharp, with Bro. Buie conducting the song service. During this last week's campaign sixty or more persons were converted.

J. A. Sharp.

Jack and Mary had just been to the grownups' church for the first time. A day or two afterward they were found in the nursery whispering audibly to each other.

"What are you children doing?" their nurse asked.

"We're playing church," replied Jack.

"But you shouldn't whisper in church," admonished the nurse.

"O, we're the church," said Mary.—

WAXHAW CHARGE

Just a few evenings before Christmas this preacher and family were taken by surprise when the drayman for the Niven-Price Co. drove into the back yard with a two horse wagon and proceeded to unload a very large pouncing which these Waxhaw people had sent to the parsonage. To mention all these articles would be too tedious, but just remember that these splendid people don't do things by halves.

Not one of us raised an objection to such an act of kindness, but we make our bow in humble thanksgiving and assure them that we appreciate this remembrance more than those words can express. May we be a pastor to them indeed and in truth.

E. N. Crowder, P. C.

RANLO HAS BIG PLANS

Please allow me to give a little account of my work through your printed lines.

On November 2 we found ourselves warming by a nice fire in the house furnished for the pastor of Ranlo charge. We were surprised that night when we opened the door to a large number of people who took complete charge of the parsonage for a while. I do not remember that we have ever been the recipients of such a pouncing as this people gave us. After a good speech or two and some good singing the dear people returned home, leaving us with a well filled pantry, many beautiful fowls, wood and coal.

At our first service we were greeted by a fine congregation of people and the interest and attendance have been fine at each service since.

We find one of the best aid societies we ever worked with. They certainly do look after the needs of the preacher's home. They not only "meet" once each month, but they "do" things.

As the conference minutes show we have no church or parsonage building, but we are happy to say that the minutes will not be blank on this question next year.

Our P. E. was with us last night and held our first quarterly conference, at which time the trustees of our present church building site were invested with the authority to sell the lot and secure two lots, one in the Smyrs Mill village and one in the Rex-Ranlo village, for the purpose of erecting two church buildings. These buildings will each cost from four to eight thousand dollars.

The pastor receives a check at the end of each month for his month's salary. It has been my privilege to work with people who were agreeable, but never before have I found a people more ready and willing to do things than this people, especially the official board.

We pray that God will help us to be a real servant in His name to this people.

We need not say so, for everybody knows that we have the best P. E. in the W. N. C. conference.

It is our aim to see the Advocate go into every home represented by the membership of the Ranlo Methodist church.

Sincerely,
R. L. Forbis.

AT ROSEBORO AGAIN

At conference I was assigned to the Roseboro work for my second year, and at the reading of the appointments I realized that the field was truly white unto harvest; but having been on the work last year and feeling, at least with some degree of confidence, that our number of friends had grown, and I would like to add, that if in the deliberations of our conference cabinet the good bishop had deemed it wise to make the appointment other than Roseboro it would have been a very sad hour for me.

Roseboro is a beautiful little town of eight hundred or a thousand population, located in Sampson county on the A. C. L. railroad, and surrounded by some of the very splendid agricultural lands of eastern North Carolina. Too, you will find the town and the other communities we serve populated by a home building, liberty loving and a God fearing population.

During last year we had some very encouraging revivals, which resulted in the addition on church roll fifty-four on profession of faith and twenty-five by certificate; and may I ask all who read this article to breathe an earnest prayer in our behalf to Him, the great Architect, that He may continue the building which is going on in our midst.

We all feel the very deep loss we have sustained in the removal of Rev. J. D. Bundy, who had served our district so effectively, loyally and efficiently the past four years; for we know there are the best presiding elders, and that he was one of them. However, we are proud of the bishop's choice of his successor.

J. Andrew Tharpe.

A FEW WORDS FROM SAINT PAUL'S CIRCUIT

We have been warmly received on the Saint Paul's charge. We left Aurora the day before Thanksgiving and reached Saint Paul's Thanksgiving Day about eleven o'clock. We found a committee at the parsonage waiting to receive us. They greeted us with warm words of welcome, a good warm house, and a nice Thanksgiving dinner. We were indeed thankful. After the committee left and we began to survey the landscape o'er, we found that a large supply of provisions had been left in the pantry. The pouncing did not end with that. Thanksgiving night a group of members got together and pounded us again. The next day several members from the other churches came by with their Fords loaded down with good things for the preacher. In fact the pouncing has not ceased yet. We are indeed grateful to these good people for the many kindnesses which they have shown us and we trust that our stay with them may prove a blessing to them.

At Saint Paul's we have one of the nicest church buildings to be found in any town of this size. While our church here is not strong, still our membership is made up of men and women who put the Lord and His church first. Under the efficient leadership of Brother G. W. Starling, who labored with them for four years and who did a most splendid work, our membership erected a church building at a cost beyond four thousand dollars. We have been without heat in the auditorium and have not been able on cold days to have our preaching services in the auditorium. Last week an order was given for a heating plant and this week plumbers are at work trying to have the auditorium heated for Christmas.

The other churches on the charge are housed in good buildings and have equipment with which to do splendid work. We are looking forward to a profitable and pleasant year over here. Pray for us th at the Master may use us for the unbuilding of His kingdom and the ingathering of souls.

Ivey T. Poole, Pastor.

"IN THE LAND OF THE SKY"

The people of the Laurel Springs circuit gave their preacher a welcome. There has never been or can be any people any better than the people in "The Land of the Sky." I have made my rounds and held one revival with very good success. Friends, pray for us in our year's work. We want to make this the best that the charge has ever known. The people are standing by their preacher this year.

H. A. Chester, P. C.

LADIES' AID, CLARKSBURG

The Ladies' Aid Society is progressing rapidly under the able leadership of our much beloved president, Mrs. Lacy Gaither. Mrs. Gaither has only been president about three months, and during this time the society has done more than it had since the organization. We are very glad indeed to have such a president as this.

We have collected the previous quarter $41.41, and we are planning to beautify our church on the inside soon.

We have already had cement steps made to the church which cost $9.00.

Mrs. Gaither has not been able to be out for several weeks, but we are hoping for her a speedy recovery and that she will soon be able to fill her place, for in her absence we miss her encouraging words and pleasant smiles.

Wishing the Advocate and its many readers a merry Christmas and a happy new year,

Mrs. Hattie Stroud, Sec.

LOWELL CHARGE

As there hasn't been anything said from Lowell charge this conference year through the Advocate, if you will give me a little space for a few words I will try not to take up your valuable space every week bragging over a few things.

As one and all who are familiar with the appointments of our last conference at Monroe, I was re-sent to Lowell, which was satisfactory with me. This is the beginning of our third year here. I do not feel that any preacher and his family have been looked after anywhere any more than we have been here. The good people have been showing their appreciation of our return ever since conference, and we feel at home among them.

On Thanksgiving eve the Lowell people came to the parsonage with what most of us would call a pouncing. One little boy even wanted to bring the hammer along to "tend to the preacher." I believe if you could have seen the pantry and tables after they had gone and looked on what they left, you would have said, "Yes, this is a pouncing." Then on Thursday before Christmas some of the people of South Point came to see us and gave the second application, and before we could get everything to its place and only two days later, on Saturday before Christmas, some of the Bethesda people came and gave the third dose. So I said surely this must be Christmas. I do not recall one just like it. This is not all. Almost every day as I am going among my flock there is something good to eat put in my car, and I like a mother bird will bring it to the nest or parsonage.

Pray for us, brethren, that we may keep going and coming.

By the help of the Lord we expect to serve this people in the best way we can. May this conference year mean much to us all.

A MEDITATION

James B. Turner.

A few days ago I read a beautiful story. An old man was trudging along the road. His form was bent with the passing years. Soon he would enjoy the rest he had so long anticipated. Hope turned into fruition, the twilight changed to dawn, the golden setting of the sun of his life. All this is true, and I shall tell you why I say so.

On his way home that twilight hour he came to a stream. He crossed safely, and noticing the rising water, paused and for the moment was lost in thought. Then he turned, retraced his steps a few yards, and began building a bridge to span the tide. "You are wasting your strength," said a passerby. "Your journey will end with the ending day. Why do you build this bridge at the evening time?" "The builder lifted his gray head: 'Good friend, in the path I have come,' he said, "There followeth after me today A youth whose feet must pass this to me, To that fair-haired youth may a pit-fall be; He too must cross in the twilight dim— Good friend, I am building this bridge for him.'" This chasm that has been as naught way.

After all is said and done each of us will find that he has been a bridge builder. We are leaving behind some kind of a structure over which men and women will walk, or try to walk, as the case may be. Isolation and material and spiritual sterility would be the portion of the different sections of earth had it not been for the builder of bridges. Cyrus W. Field was a bridge builder when he laid the cable joining the continent with our new world. Before him was another bridge builder. Bancroft opens his immense History of the United States with the sentence: "The enterprise of Columbus—the most memorable maritime enterprise in the history of the world—formed between Europe and America the communication which will never cease." This is to say he built a bridge and built it well.

But I am thinking of another Builder of bridges. I refer to Him at the outset by spelling builder with a capital "Be." But He is different in ways more fundamental than this. More than fourteen hundred years before Columbus sailed the waters, making his name immortal, Jesus began to construct a bridge from earth to heaven. How pitifully small appear these other bridge builders when compared with Jesus! Their efforts are but a segment of His completed arc. Their inspiration is but a dim reflection of His perfect love. On this bridge are countless millions, moving every day, for the giant Death exacts his toll of every clime and class. But yet there is room on its firm bottom for others. And the bridge holds! God has undergirded it with His strong arms, and Jesus died that it might have the Father's constant care.

Think of the bridge builders who have wrought under the spell of the Master Builder! Paul was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision. He built a bridge. Across it walked the Gentle world into God's courts. Luther stood before kings and emperors undismayed. John Knox condemned Queen Mary to her face. They built bridges, these giant minds. William Carey was the pioneer missionary of our modern day. He joined England to India, and both to God. Livingston was found by Stanley in the heart of Africa on his knees cold in death, but David Livingston built a bridge. Adoniram Judson left Boston for Burma in 1812, the first missionary to go out from America. He built far better than he knew. The Baptists of America waked from their sleep when Judson flung his challenge at their feet. Only a few weeks ago the good ship Empress left for the Orient with approximately one hundred soldiers of the cross aboard. Bridge builders these, following in the wake of Judson, Yates, Bryan, Bostick, Herring, and countless others, whom the Master has signally honored.

Yes, we cannot get away from it, we are all bridge builders. Many of us will ever walk the quiet and sequestered paths, but whatever our station or creed or place, we leave behind a bridge across which others will walk. It seems to me that the old man had the right idea. He turned from his way to build a bridge, because he knew another was coming on soon.

"HARVEST DAY," FIRST CHURCH, SALISBURY

The Woman's Society of First Church observed "Harvest Day" on Sunday, December 4th, at the hour for evening service. The program used was the "Listen In" sent out by our department of literature, but it was handled in a different manner, and we found it so effective I have thought perhaps an account of our service might prove interesting to some other auxiliaries.

In addition to the usual publicity given through the daily paper and the church bulletin, we had attractive posters in both vestibules of the church, and were rewarded by having a full house.

Mrs. D. A. Beaver, president of our auxiliary, presided. In a brief introductory speech, Mrs. Beaver spoke of her pleasure in having with us for the service a number of distinguished guests, some of whom were officers of the Council, others were workers from the home and foreign field. Then, with very appropriate remarks, she presented in turn the twelve other ladies seated with her in the chancel, beginning with Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, who was impersonated by Mrs. A. S. Jones. Each one made a short talk on her particular phase of the missionary work.

Very attractive in their gaudy foreign costumes were Mrs. Wo Fa Ling of China (Miss Annie Bostain), and Mrs. Kim Soong Yong of Korea (Mrs. Clyde Ennis). Mrs. A. R. Lazenby appeared as Miss Mabel Howell, and so forceful and appealing was her presentation of the work in Japan, one might well have believed that Miss Howell stood before us in person. One of the most happy impersonations was that given by Mrs. Ernest Beaver of "Maria Driver," a colored "mammy" from the Bethlehem House at Nashville, Tenn., who told of the work being done for her people there, and sang "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

Others taking part were Mrs. I. A. Kidd as Miss Estelle Haskin; Miss Wall as Miss Jessie Haines of Washt Industrial School; Miss Monroe as Miss Ula Leveridge of Holding Institute, Laredo, Texas; Asala Akula, a member of the African missionary society at Congo, Belge, (Mrs. Frank Hudson); Mrs. T. R. Garner as Mrs. E. B. Chappelle, editor of The Voice; Miss Virginia Jenkins, as Miss Clela Kennedy of the Institutional church of Kansas City, told an interesting story of "The Honeymoon Couple." Naturally it fell to me to represent our Council treasurer, Mrs. F. H. E. Röss, and talk about the money.

We are very fortunate in having a choir leader who likes to do nice things for all the organizations of the church, and Mr. J. F. Griffith had prepared two special musical numbers—a duet, "We Are Ambassadors," by Mr. Ridenoutte and himself, and an anthem, "Send Out Thy Light," by the choir.

The offering received was quite gratifying.

To our great delight, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Ross of Korea, arrived in Salisbury just the evening before, and Mrs. Ross appeared, making a little talk of greeting and promising a full account of her work later on. Mrs. Ross went to Korea from First church five years ago as Miss Grace McCubbins, a missionary under the Woman's Board, and is now at home on her first furlough. Mrs. P. N. Peacock.

ITEMS FROM BOONE AUXILIARY

A year ago our auxiliary looked forward upon a rather discouraging prospect; a congregation for two years now with no church for worship, available money all spent and little prospect of a desirable change.

Nevertheless with Mrs. Brinkman, our pastor's wife, in the lead, and as faithful a band of women as can be found to follow, we took heart and faced the future with a purpose. Well attended meetings were held regularly, promptly and prayerfully, increasing interest was manifested in the mission study class, and the cause of the Master was made our ambition. When others said "The benevolent claims cannot be met," we refused to accept the verdict, put ourselves in the lead, and saw every dollar paid. We are placing a memorial window in our new church, planning to buy a piano, and carrying on other local work.

But best of all is the personal development which has come to us through our effort. The high tide of all the year was reached along devotional lines when, in apostolic manner, we assembled recently at the parsonage for a day of prayer, each one bringing lunch. It was a great day! Five of our leaders, one after another, presented subjects upon which they had spent time and thought and prayer, while all in turn took active part.

Our auxiliary has met all the conditions for the "Honor Roll" and for the first time we take our place in this class. Again we face the new year and take heart, knowing that He in whom we have believed is able to keep that which has been committed to Him against that day.

FOR THE NEW YEAR

Because on roads where young feet should dance lightly,
I went a darkened and quiet way,
With none to life for me a torch of laughter—
When sad young faces turn to me hereafter,
I will be gay.

Because I groped my way through tangling shadows,
Searching the gloom with scared, unlessoned eyes,
And those I asked for light were all unheeding—
If any turn to me for light and leading,
I will be wise.

Because a friend I loved forsook her loving Upon a time when other griefs were new,
Then I who know how bitter its forsaking,
Oh, all the more if other faiths are breaking,
I will be true.

Because I reached for hands once to uphold me,
And found no helper, though the road was long,
When lands stretch out to me forlorn and clinging,
Because of what that weary year was bringing,

I will be strong.

Because the old year brought gifts of sorrow,
Teaching me wisdom with the griefs it bore,
The coming year shall give all light and gladness—
If I, once sad, have learned to help all sadness,
I ask no more.
—Margaret Widdener, in Good House-keeping.

SOUTH CALLED TO ANTI-LYNCHING WAR

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 7, (Special).—A movement to enlist the 250,000 organized women of the Southern Methodist church in a determined and systematic campaign for the suppression of lynching was launched here this week. A large group of representative women from thirteen states, all of them officials of the Woman's Missionary Council or Conference Social Service superintendents, met at the call of the Race Relations Commission of the Council, spent three days in conference, and at the conclusion issued a vigorous address to the public relative to the lynching evil, calling upon the authorities of the several states and counties for its complete suppression and upon the citizens, the pulpit and the press for their united support to this end. The defeat of the Dyer Anti-Lynching bill was used to give point to their utterance.

They further pledged themselves, individually and in an official capacity as representing the social service leadership of the organized Methodist women, to a persistent campaign for adequate state laws and for law enforcement. Details of the plan are already being worked out.

The statement follows, together with the names of the women signers: "Whereas, the defeat of the Dyer Anti-Lynching bill, which provided for the federal control of lynching, has thrown the whole responsibility back upon each state for removing this hideous crime; therefore,

"Be it resolved, that we, the Commission on Race Relations of the Woman's Missionary Council, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the conference social service superintendents and other officers in conference in Atlanta, Ga., December 4-6, 1922, do now demand of the authorities of the several states that they make good their claim proving their competency to abolish mob violence and lynching.

"That we assume our responsibility as citizens for the protection of human life and hereby call upon all the people of all the states, upon the pulpit and upon the press to join in an insistent and persistent agitation against this barbarous practice.

"That we formulate plans for an organized movement in behalf of adequate state laws and law enforcement.

MISS VIRGINIA JENKINS

Through the kindness of Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, head of the Elementary Sunday school work in Southern Methodist, this cut of Miss Virginia Jenkins, our Elementary superintendent, and the splendid write-up of her are presented. Both recently appeared in "The Elementary Newsletter," of which Miss Kennedy is editor.

"Miss Virginia Jenkins is a native of North Carolina, and received her education in that state, from Salisbury High School and North Carolina College for Women. She spent one summer at Columbia University, New York. Her day school service has been that of teacher, supervising principal, and instructor in Grammar Grade Methods at Summer Schools for Teachers. She holds the highest rated teaching and supervising certificates given in North Carolina. She is familiar with the work of the entire Sunday school, but has specialized in the Junior field, having served as teacher and for a number of years as department superintendent. On August 1st Miss Jenkins was appointed Elementary superintendent for the Western North Carolina conference, and with her as its director we are sure we can count on the elementary work in that conference going forward in a most acceptable way."

THE SALT OF THE EARTH

Just a line to thank those who got up and put across those splendid Christmas programs throughout our bounds. There were ever so many other things to be busy about, but those busiest people had time to gather a bunch of the children together and practice till a good program could be exhibited. Such people are the salt of the earth.

BRIGHT AND ALBRIGHT

Mr. C. L. Bright and Rev. W. T. Albright are the superintendent and pastor, respectively, of Mount Pleasant Sunday school on the charge bearing the same name. I went to see them some time ago and after a Saturday night and Sunday morning engagement with them and theirs came away considerably enlightened. Physical handicaps, such as low water supply, have no effect on Albright's Sunday school lights. They continue on high voltage. And Bright is taking off his dimmers so that the things in the way can either be dodged or run over.

As a result of our recent conferences the Mount Pleasant Sunday school, located in a Lutheran school settlement, the home of Mount Pleasant Collegiate Institute and Mount Amoena Seminary, decided to work towards the fulfillment of our "Program of Work." Sunday school rooms will be built, graded lessons begun and a Workers' Council regularly held. One of the first things the Council will do will be to correctly grade the school. My sojourn with the Mount Pleasant people was made happier because of the kindnesses of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. James, in whose hospitable home I stayed, and Mr. C. H. Thayer, whose fine temperament and faithful automobile transferred me through the rain to and from Mount Pleasant, a distance of ten miles from Concord.

LOOK FOR THEM

During the near future it is hoped that the readers of the Sunday school page or the Advocate may be permitted to come face to face with the Sunday School Board of the Western North Carolina conference. It will be remembered that we are starting a new quadrennium of Sunday school work and therefore we have a new regime to work under. To be sure our board's personnel has not entirely changed, but it is a new board so far as officialdom goes. Just as the board was presented to you four years ago will it be presented to you again, one member at a time. It is hoped that a cut of each member can be obtained, together with some outstanding facts pertaining to his life, a sort of "Who's Who" paragraph. Your humble servant is mighty proud of our Sunday School Board. It is made up of successes.

BIGGEST AND BEST

Our Charlotte superintendents and pastors propose to make the next Charlotte standard training school for Sunday school leaders, to be held at Trinity church, Charlotte, during the week beginning February 4, the biggest and best of any yet held in Charlotte. To do this something great will have to be done for Charlotte has set a fine pace already. The school there last year turned out 125 credit students and the enrollment went over three hundred. At a meeting of the superintendents and pastors of our schools in Charlotte, held recently at Tryon Street, the following officers were selected to head up the organization: President board of managers, E. R. Bucher; vice president, O. J. Rock; secretary, L. E. Anderson; treasurer, J. B. Ivey. The following courses will be offered: Beginner Lesson Materials, Primary Lesson Materials, Junior Lesson Materials, Intermediate-Senior Agencies, Young People's Agencies, Sunday School Management and Jesus The Master Teacher. The faculty is rapidly being signed up.

INFANT BAPTISM

Suppose your Cradle Roll superintendent should take it upon herself to find out how many of her members had been baptised? Why, every Methodist would say, "That's good work." I am so glad our good old church believes in infant baptism, thus making our Cradle Roll work all the more consistent. It has always been a satisfaction to me, personally, to know that when an infant my parents thought enough of my spiritual welfare to go to the trouble to take me to the church and there before the assembled congregation dedicate me to the Lord. Let all concerned see that every child have this heritage.

A PLACE TO GROW

Our Cradle Roll work is all too small. It offers a fine place to do some constructive work. Those who have got at this great work will testify to the good done them, the small children and their homes. There is probably no finer field of endeavor. Those Sunday schools that do not have live and active Cradle Rolls should not rest till some good woman is put in charge of the work. Write to your conference Sunday school workers for particulars about the Cradle Roll work.

The Cradle Roll enrollment by districts is as follows: Greensboro 1124, Charlotte 912, Statesville 815, Winston-Salem 805, Shelby 706, Salisbury 611, Marion 460, Asheville 411, Mount Airy 338, Waynesville 131, North Wilkeshoro 112.

The largest Cradle Roll enrollments in local organizations are hereby noted: Morganton 150, Spencer Memorial 138, Spring Garden Street 137, Reidsville 120, West Market Street 108, Lexington 100. There are other enrollments of a smaller total bearing a higher percentage rating and some of these days they will be noted.

If your Sunday school is not getting the baby it is losing its first chance.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Your conference Sunday school workers wish every officer, teacher and pupil in the Sunday schools of the conference a happy new year. We believe everyone having to do with the Sunday school should be happy, and we have some rather firm notions as to how to be happy in the work of the Sunday school.

"A man is relieved and gay when he has put his heart into his work and done his best; what he has said or done otherwise shall give him no peace."

We believe that the happiest Sunday school worker or pupil is he who is putting the most into the Sunday school. Our wish, therefore, is that officers, teachers and pupils resolve now to do at least a little more for their school this year than last year. Let's begin now to make our school or our class bigger and better: help it reach more boys and girls, men and women, and to serve them more effectively.

Our wish for you as individuals and as Sunday schools is that the year 1923 may be one of genuine happiness and real achievement.

RALEIGH TRAINING SCHOOL

A standard training school for the Sunday school and church workers of Raleigh and a considerable portion of the Raleigh district will be held at Edenton Street church January 28-February 4. Already much of the preliminary plans have been perfected. Five courses will be offered, and the following will be instructors: M. W. Brabham, Nashville, Tenn.; Prof. H. E. Spence, Durham; Mrs. C. L. VanNoppen and Mrs. E. R. Michaux, Greensboro, and Miss Georgia Keene, conference elementary superintendent.

ROSEMARY SUNDAY SCHOOL

Rosemary Sunday school made a splendid record last year and has entered the new year with the determination to make it the best ever. The following paragraphs from the Roanoke Rapids Herald are interesting:

"Quite a number of improvements have been made in the past few months. Through the kindness of the Rosemary Manufacturing Company we have moved the primary department to the kindergarten building, with R. H. Gay as assistant superintendent, and a good corps of teachers. The enrollment has more than doubled in this department, there being 112 now on roll. This change allows more space for the older classes in the church and has proved very satisfactory for the classes.

"With T. M. Jenkins as superintendent, J. E. Buck, assistant for adult classes, R. H. Gay, assistant for children's department, J. C. Odell, secretary, Miss Sallie Medlin as pianist, and a regular group of teachers we feel that 1923 will be a good year for us. It is our ambition to have 300 on Sunday school roll by the end of the first quarter."

The financial report of Rosemary school for last year shows a total of $1,404.43 raised for all purposes, of which amount $129.08 went to our orphanage.

OUR WEST DURHAM SCHOOL

Our Sunday school at West Durham, superintended by Prof. John W. Carr, Jr., is alive and growing in strength and usefulness. It is on the job all the time. Interesting occasions in this school recently were the special Christmas program and the installation service. The installation service suggested in the November Sunday School Magazine was used.

A great percentage of our West Durham officers and teachers have taken or are taking special training for their work. West Durham school holds the distinction of having earned more certificates of credit on the standard training course at the Durham Standard Training School held at Trinity College last April than any other Sunday school, and Pastor Bradley and Superintendent Carr say their school is going to run the other schools a close race if it does not win the same distinction in the Durham school to be held the coming April.

IT IS THESE, AND MORE!

Rev. G. M. Daniel, of the Graham-Haw River charge, believes in the Sunday school, and he's throwing his enthusiasm and organizing ability into with telling effect. He believes also in having it organized in keeping with the standards of our denomination, and he has secured the official Program of Work and will take advantage of the many helpful suggestions contained in it. Then, he believes in keeping the Sunday school constantly before the people. See what he recently told his Graham congregation:

"Can you think of a time when there were no Sunday schools? Yet there was such a time. Before 1780, the day of Robert Raikes, there was no organized Sunday school. Long before the time of Christ the Jews recognized the need of religious instruction, and so had schools in connection with their synagogues. However, they were not Sunday schools, they were rather week day schools of religious teaching.

"Do we properly appreciate the Sunday school? It can mean much to us. What does it mean? It has been called 'the church's right arm,' 'the door of the church,' 'the Bible school.' It is these, and more. It is for all a means to a greater growth in every Christian virtue. Let us use it."

INTERMEDIATE-SENIOR

Last issue we gave the standard for Junior departments in Methodist Sunday schools of the one-room type. This week we give the standard for Intermediate and Senior departments in Methodist Sunday schools of the class-room type. Here it is:

1. Department organization, 10 per cent. Pupils twelve to seventeen years of age organized as an Intermediate-Senior department, with superintendent, and seated together for the worship service. In schools with thirty or more Intermediates, and thirty or more Seniors, separate departments should be organized for each group with proper officers and committees.

2. Class organization, 10 per cent. All classes organized with officers and committees and enrolled as Wesley classes with the General Sunday School Board, the certificate of registration displayed in class room. A regular teacher for each class.

3. Teachers' meeting, 10 per cent. Officers and teachers attending Workers' Council regularly, a department teachers' meeting held quarterly. This may be conducted as a section of the Workers' Council.

4. Literature, 10 per cent. The use of the graded lessons for Intermediates and Seniors, or special courses approved by our General Sunday School Board. The Haversack taken for boys and the Torchbearer taken for girls. Where Improved Uniform Lessons are used, 5 per cent only allowed on this point.

5. Class rooms, 10 per cent. Separate class rooms or screened space for all classes, clean and well lighted.

6. Records, 10 per cent. Department and class records accurately kept. Classes reporting on the follow-

A GOOD AND HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL

Now that the holidays are over, let's get down to work in dead earnest and make good our new resolutions. Put them in action. Renew them repeatedly. They are the prerequisites of vision and without visionary leaders our leagues and leaguers perish. We shall not pass again this way. His kindnesses are memorial. Let's show our gratitude, our appreciation and worth this great year. Our land and the whole world is in the throes of reconstruction. This is a time of reckoning, of inventory taking. Let's check up, see just how and where we stand; let's come out of the kinks this year. You say your league is asleep, dead? It isn't your league; it's you. Ring out the old, ring in the new; ring out the false, ring in the true. It is the set of the sail that counts. Let's let folks know that we are in the business this year.

This office is in receipt of two splendid league papers, one a special edition of the Columbus district, "The South Georgia Leaguer," following their very successful league conference held in East Highlands Methodist church, Columbus, Ga. This is of special interest to the league editor, for Rev. D. G. Mann, pastor of this church, and I were closely affiliated as chaplains at the front in France, and together for four months in Paris University after the Armistice. His league, organized this year, is the largest in the district. The other of these two papers mentioned is the "Holston Epworthian," published at Knoxville, Tenn. They report one hundred and eleven new leagues organized in the year just closed, and have set their goal for two hundred this year. It is known as the "Holston Hour Movement," and they declare it must succeed. Why cannot we do as much or more? Our possibilities are greater. We live in God's country in Eastern North Carolina, whether you know it or not.

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT AT STANTONSBURG

"The Light of the World" is the pageant our Stantonsburg League presented December 24th, Christmas eve night. This great theme, Jesus the Light of the World, centers in and radiates from the electrically lighted manger as illustrated by the pageant. The scene opens with the prophets lighting the way to the Light of the World. The brilliant electrically lighted star of the east leads the worshipful Magi and shepherds, earnest seekers after truth, typifying the quest of all the earth for a Saviour, to the manger, where the Madonna keeps watch. The Spirit of Christianity then arises, hitherto unseen, from beside the manger, lights her torch (flashlight veiled in paper) at the manger light, calls forth Education, the Church, and all who will consecrate their lives to whole-hearted Christian service. Seven ambassadors answer the summons, representing different phases of Christian service. These are all sent forth by the Spirit of Christianity on the mission of all Christian workers far and wide, winning the world to Christ. Then each of these comes back with attendants, kneel about the manger for the consecration of self, and the coronation of Jesus, moving in position, all with lighted torches, lighted from the manger course, with palms of victory waving on high, concluding with the song, "Light of Life."

There were about fifty characters taking parts. We are sure that the spiritual life and understanding of all, especially of those taking part, were deepened, and the entire audience, itself in the dark, saw Christmas as never before realizing our place, and every Christian's indispensable place, in the service of Christ today, realizing truly that He is the Light of the world.

EPWORTH LEAGUE BANQUET

The Epworth League of Edenton Street Methodist church gave a banquet last evening in honor of the college girls and boys who are at home on their vacation, together with their visitors and the honorary members of the league. Fifty guests were present. Miss Eunice Blair, president of the league, acted as toastmistress. After a resume of the work done by the league for the past year, she outlined the plans for the coming year. "The success of our league," says Miss Blair, "is due to the fact that every member of the cabinet is loyal and faithful, and also to the fact that every department is willing to cooperate with each other, and what better cabinet could a president want?" Edenton Street League is one of the strongest in the North Carolina conference and has done some splendid work for the church.

Each of the following told in detail the work of their department, what had been accomplished in the past, and what they hoped to do during the coming year: Miss Sadie Ball, superintendent of the first department (devotional); Miss Mabel Merritt, superintendent of the second department (social service); Miss Grace Wilder, superintendent of the third department (recreation); and Mr. J. W. Scroggs, superintendent of the fourth department (missionary).

Mr. John Bridgers, a senior at Trinity College, in behalf of the other college girls and boys in a short response, thanked the league for the honor shown them.

Mr. Joseph G. Brown gave the league encouragement in the work they were doing, saying that the Sunday schools and churches looked to the league for future leaders. The Epworth League is a training school, Mr. Brown said, for young men and women in the work of the church. The remainder of the evening was spent in singing.

For the Church, Sunday School or Home Chase Brothers Pianos

are equally serviceable, beautiful and desirable. Their rich singing sweetness of tone, coupled with the possibilities of tremendous volume or a corresponding soft diminuendo, render them versatile and adaptable to any need.

Chase Brothers Pianos have been famed for quality for more than half a century and are to be found in thousands of the South's most refined homes and in many of the leading Sunday Schools and Churches. Longfellow says:

"Show me the home where music dwells, and I shall show you a happy, peaceful and contented home."

You have but to see and hear a Chase Brothers Grand, Miniature Grand, Upright, Baby Upright, Reproducing Grand, or Player to fully understand why Chase Brothers instruments are universally recognized for design, finish and workmanship.

FORD RUNS 57 MILES ON GALLON OF GASOLINE

A new automatic vaporizer and Decarbonizer, which in actual test has increased the power and mileage of Fords from 25 to 50 per cent and at the same time removes every particle of carbon from the cylinders is the proud achievement of John A. Stransky, 3305 South Main Street, Pukwana, South Dakota. A remarkable feature of this simple and inexpensive device is that its action is governed entirely by the motor. It is slipped between the carburetor and intake manifold and can be installed by anyone in five minutes without drilling or tapping. With it attached, Ford cars have made from 40 to 57 miles on one gallon of gasoline. Mr. Stransky wants to place a few of these devices on cars in this territory and has a very liberal offer to make to anyone who is able to handle the business which is sure to be created wherever this marvelous little device is demonstrated. If you want to try one entirely at his risk send him your name and address today.—Adv.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE BUILDINGS NEEDED

1. BABY COTTAGE.
2. INDUSTRIAL BUILDING.
3. KITCHEN AND DINING HALL.
4. DORMITORY FOR SMALL BOYS.
5. DORMITORY FOR SMALL GIRLS.
6. SCHOOL BUILDING.

* * * *

Above I am giving a list of the buildings needed to make room for two hundred and fifty additional children. The board of trustees has authorized the executive committee to proceed with the erection of these buildings just as soon as funds become available. I am trusting that most of these buildings will be erected by friends as memorials. I shall be glad to correspond with any interested parties as I can give them the approximate cost of each of them. The most sensible and enduring monument that any one can erect to the memory of some departed loved one is to put a building at the Methodist Orphanage that will mean home to fatherless children of our state. Let me urge friends of means to make this suggestion a serious matter of prayer and be led accordingly.

What shall we do about it? We are face to face with a serious situation. Hundreds of orphan children knocked at our door last year in vain for admission, and hundreds will knock again this year. How much longer shall we say to these fatherless children of Methodist parents that we will spend millions of dollars annually for the development of our industries and turn a deaf ear to their appeals? Can we as a church live in luxuries and expect the blessings of God to rest upon us when we fail to make ample provision for the care and training of the hundreds of motherless children? Our North Carolina Methodism has done well for her fatherless children as compared with the other denominations, but to be perfectly frank we have not taken the matter seriously of providing adequate accommodations to relieve the tremendous pressure that is brought to bear upon us. To postpone our building program much longer will rob our North Carolina Methodism of much of her former glory and prestige. To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction is one of the surest ways of keeping the altar fires burning in our churches and upon our hearts. Pure and undefiled religion is kept pure and strong by giving unreservedly itself in loving ministry. If the church had no great task to call into play her latent powers and no sacrificial service to render a sinning, suffering world, she would become self centered and finally bankrupt of all that she holds near and dear to her heart. The church needs the orphanage through which it can express its best love more than the orphanage needs her gifts. Therefore, in the light of these truths, I appeal to the members of my beloved church to rise up as one man and make possible the several buildings which are so sorely needed at the Methodist Orphanage. The proposed building program has been submitted to the board of trustees and has met with their unqualified approval. All that we need now is the means with which to carry it to a successful completion. For several years the Orphanage has stood aside while other great enterprises of the church have been given the right of way. The Baptists of North Carolina in their seventy-five million dollar campaign pledged over six hundred thousand dollars for the Thomasville Baptist Orphanage; the Presbyterians of our state have raised more than a hundred thousand dollars and are planning to raise that much more this year for their orphanage at Barium Springs; the Western North Carolina conference had a great drive for their orphanage a few years ago. Shall we continue to step aside and take a back seat when other orphanages are going forward by leaps and bounds? We must be true to our obligations, but at the same time we must not neglect or overlook the needs of one of the most vital causes of our church—The Methodist Orphanage. Let me appeal to every fair-minded, red-blooded, spirit-filled Christian among us to put into our Methodist Orphanage sufficient funds with which to provide accommodations for two hundred and fifty more children who are looking to us for maintenance and the tender ministry of mother-love.

To the Missionary Societies, Aid Societies, other organizations and individuals of our church:

I wish in behalf of these dear children at our Orphanage to express profound gratitude to you for the wonderful outfits of clothing you have sent them.

They are well clothed and happy. When friends visit us and express surprise and delight at seeing the children so well clothed, I lay the honor at your feet. It is the great mother-heart of our church that is doing this. We hope that no sorrow has come to any of you this Christmas tide, and that the new year holds in store many blessings for each one.

And may I add this? You are all very dear to me for this work of love that has been growing stronger year by year for twenty years.

Some of you good women I have never seen and perhaps I will never look into your faces on earth—but surely we will know each other in God's beautiful home that is prepared for His faithful ones.

"How sweet to know—as know we do, That love is watching over you, That every night and every day, God walks with you and lights the way."

Lovingly,

Mrs. M. A. Jenkins.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

The most of the things that the writer has pictured in print about the Children's Home have been pleasures and attractions. These are naturally the high lights of life to youth and childhood. But I imagine that if the whole picture of daily experience on The Home hill was run off on the screen, that the high light points would look small in the wide background of work, school and serious affairs; and that the boys and girls would agree that the pleasure features were very much a side line.

While the things that we do mostly are such stunts as getting up in the twilight of a winter morning making furnace fires, carrying cold milk pails to the barn while the stars are still out, collecting the clothes for the laundry, ironing the same and distributing them to the cottages, cooking breakfast for 170 folks by seven o'clock, dinner by twelve, supper by 5:30, washing numberless quantities of dishes over and over again, mending, darning and sweeping and making of beds—all speeded up to be ready for the next bell. Bells! bells! bells! They cut off our sleep, hurry us to school, consign us to work, send us to bed, and haunt our dreams.

Then there is the tiresome business of having to keep reasonably clean—hand washing, face washing, scrubbing of necks—and neatness is such drudgery to busy little boys and girls. A fellow, now, even has to put off his overalls and dress for school. And John M. gets around and gives shaggy heads a hair cut as often as he can manage it, and there is anything but pleasure in a hair cut when you have to keep so rigidly still during the process. There must be bales of hair cut on the place in a season. Certainly cutting so much hair is no particular delight to John M. But John M. is a long-suffering and easily imposed on and obliging somebody, which perhaps explains why he has never been mercifully provided with a barber's chair for convenience in hair cutting. There is some difference in the sitting attitude of boys whose height ranges from a short three feet of the little fellows, to the tall six feet something of the tallest. John doesn't crave a striped pole or cologne water or perfumed cold cream for his shop, but he said if he had thought of it in time he would have asked Santa Claus for an adjustable barber's chair.

But speaking of work, the children think that the work they do is not so tiresome as refraining from doing things they are not allowed to do. Children in ordinary homes may come and go, and be allowed more liberty than is practicable where so many are together. Regulations have to be observed in an institution that get to be very irksome to large boys and girls. The very discipline and training that makes Children's Home worth while and believed in by the children's friends, often is to the children a tiresome routine and monotony—not the kind of life program that budding fancy paints in its dreams.

However, the best forethought and the most careful precaution cannot maintain a routine that is unbreakable nor a monotony that is not subject to accidents. The best of children are often impulsive and forgetful and careless, and the unexpected frequently happens in big failures.

There was a fire up the Beuna Vista road near here recently. The fire engine came flying by sounding its wierd, siren shriek. Automobiles and trucks followed, whizzing by the road at the foot of the hill. The smoke of the fire and tongues of flame could be seen in the distance over the tree tops.

Seems like going to a fire is almost an inalienable right of anybody who can get there.

The exciting rush of machines up the road and the noise proved too much for a group of Home boys. They forgot everything but the open road and the exciting spectacle.

The cabins burned down, the fire department extinguished the flames, the shouting ceased, the crowd dispersed and the boys came trailing homeward, seriously wondering, I suppose, if fires are really worth breaking rules to go to see.

OUR LITTLE FOLKS

TRAVELER AND TRAMP

The traveler put an apple into his pocket and pulled his broad hat down over his brow. "Now I'm ready for my travels," he said. With his hands in his pockets he trudged down the path, through the gate and round the bend in the road, scuffing his feet in the dust as he went. He was not sure where he was going, but he said to himself that he should keep on until he found a strange new country.

The curving road went up and down, and after a long while the traveler began to feel hot and tired. "I think I'll go home, now," he said to himself, "and find the new country some other day."

Just at that point the road divided; one fork turned a little to the right, and the other curved a good deal to the left. The traveler followed the big curve, for it seemed to be leading back toward home. But he did not seem to get any nearer home; it was hot and dusty toiling through the sand.

At last he stopped short with a little grunt. "I think my home must be just round that bend in the road," he said.

So round the bend he went at a run. But, alas! though he ran on and on, he saw no sign of home. When he turned the next curve he was running so fast, and his eyes were so full of tears, that he ran right into a tramp. The meeting was a great surprise to both of them.

"Hello!" said the traveler. "Where did you come from?"

The tramp said nothing, but he stared hard and looked pleased. He was all in shabby gray and seemed very warm and dusty. Suddenly he sat down at the edge of the road and heaved a long sigh.

"I am tired too," said the traveler. The tramp sighed again, but did not reply.

"And I'm thirsty," the traveler added in a sad voice. He came and stood close beside the tramp, who looked sorrowful but was silent.

"And I'm lost! I'm lost!" the traveler said in a choked voice. Before he could help himself two large, hot tears ran down his cheeks and fell on the tramp's nose.

That disturbed the tramp; he rose with a worried look.

"I wish," the traveler said, "I just wish you could show me the way home."

The tramp put on a very business-like expression and began to move along briskly in the direction he had been going first. The traveler turned and followed.

Back and back they went. At last the road began to look familiar to the traveler. His heart grew lighter, and he put his hands into his pockets again and whistled a little tune. The tramp gave him a pleased look and quickened his pace. Between them they raised a big dust.

After a while they came back to the place where the road divided. The traveler halted; he did not know which way he ought to go. "O dear me!" he said.

But the tramp was not at all worried; he turned briskly down the other fork.

The traveler followed him. "Perhaps he knows the way," he thought hopefully.

At last they came to a very sharp bend. Round the bend was a little picket fence with a green gate. A lady in a blue dress came running down to the gate.

"Come right in and get cooled off," she said to the traveler with a smile. Then she looked at the tramp in a puzzled way.

"I met him on the road," the traveler said. "He is hot and hungry too. O mother, mother, may he stay?"

The lady in blue nodded. Then she ran into the house and came back with two bowls full of cold creamy milk and crisp crackers.

"Hurrah!" cried the traveler in delight.

"Bowwow!" said the happy tramp. —Nancy Byrd Turner, in Youth's Companion.

GETTING EVEN

"I'll get even with you, Tom Byers, you'll see! Cutting the string of my new kite and letting it fly away just to be mean!"

"I don't see how you can," said Bob, watching Tom slam the door of the tumble-down house where he lived. "He's bigger than you are, and his father is away most all the time, and his mother is dead."

"Let's go down behind the barn and talk about it," answered Ted, and the two boys ran to their favorite hiding place.

"I've thought of a brand-new way," said Bob. "Listen, and I'll whisper."

At first Ted would not agree to the whispered plan, but Bob kept on talking until he said he would.

It was nearly dark that night when they went down the road, carrying a heavy basket between them. They crept up to the window of Tom's house and saw him sitting at a table with only a few dishes and a little bread on it. They put the basket on the step, gave a loud rap, and hid where they could watch him come out. He took the basket in, and through the dirty window they could see him standing and looking at it as if he did not dare open it.

"He's teased so many of the boys he thinks some one has brought a snake or a rat to scare him," said Bob.

Just then Tom took off the paper tied over the basket and very slowly opened one of the three boxes he saw. Then he gave a big jump of surprise and pulled open the other boxes. One was filled with crisp cookies, another held big red apples, and the last had hickory nuts. Underneath the boxes was a sweater, faded but thick and warm, and under that a suit of clothes. Tom could scarcely believe his eyes. He drew his ragged sleeve across his eyes and then looked again. At the very bottom of the basket was a piece of paper with "Ted" written on it.

"Where did you get all the things?" asked Bob as they ran down the road.

"Aunt Julia sent me the cookies for a present, and the nuts and apples grew on my own trees, so I could give them away if I wanted to. Mother said the clothes were too little for Harry and too big for me, so I could give them to Tom. She didn't know how we were going to do it, though."

"Didn't he jump, though!" chuckled Bob. "I wonder how he feels now."

The next night they found out, for there was a knock at the door, and when Ted opened it Tom was standing there holding a fine big kite. As soon as he saw Ted he said: "I'm awful sorry I took your kite, and I made this one for you, and—and—I liked the things in the basket a lot."

Ted had "got even" in the "Jesus way," as he told his mother that night. —Sunday School Times.

The country parson was condoling with the bereft widow.

"Alas!" he continued, earnestly, "I can not tell you how pained I was to learn that your husband had gone to heaven. We were bosom friends, but we shall never meet again."—Lippincott's.

MOTHER, YOUR CHILD'S BOWELS NEED "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"

Even Cross, Feverish, Sick Children Love its Taste
and it Never Fails to Empty Little Bowels

If your child is listless, full of cold, has colic, or if the stomach is sour, breath bad, tongue coated, a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" will quickly start liver and bowel action. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works the constipation poison, sour bile and waste right out and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today may save a sick child tomorrow. It never cramps or overacts. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup

Easy Now to Double Winter Egg Yield

Proven Remedy Gives Remarkable Results—Turns "Boarder" Hens Into Profitable Layers—

Winter egg yields, double and treble those of former years, are now being made by many poultrymen through the use of a compound that science has finally perfected.

This wonderful medicine, which is called "Hick's Egg-Lay," contains rare and expensive ingredients mixed so as to quickly increase the egg yield. The medicine acts on the reproductive organs and causes double and triple the usual number of ova (the germ cell of egg) to be produced. Thus you get many more eggs and get them during the time they bring the highest prices.

Hick's Egg-Lay is prepared for convenience in tablet form. Simply dissolve one tablet in a quart of water. This is the surest, easiest and quickest way ever discovered to get more eggs.

A Trial Costs You Nothing

Mr. Hick is so confident that Hick's Egg-Lay Tablets will double and treble your egg yield that he is making a special guaranteed offer of one regular double strength $1.00 package of Egg-Lay Tablets and a full size $1.00 package of Hick's famous Lice-Go Tablets all for $1.00.

Lice-Go is added to the drinking water. The medicine taken into the system of the bird comes out through the oil glands of the skin and every louse or mite quickly leaves the body. Keeps the birds always free without the poultry raiser doing any thing. If you would rather have two $1.00 packages of Egg-Lay Tablets or two $1.00 packages of Lice-Go instead of one of each, say so on your order. Send $1.00 today (currency, money order, check, etc.) to C. W. Hick & Company, Dept. 916, 1018 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Illinois. If you prefer, send no money. Just your name and address and pay postman $1.00 and postage on delivery. If after thirty days trial, you are not absolutely satisfied, write Mr. Hick and your money will be refunded. This offer is absolutely guaranteed, so don't hesitate to make the test.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

Whereas, we, the Missionary Circle of the A. M. E. church of Atlanta, Ga., assembled December 11th, representing the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society, and,

Whereas, we have noted with great interest the broad and Christian position taken by the noble ladies comprising the Commission on Race Relations of the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session this December 4-6, and,

Whereas, we desire them and the public to know that we appreciate and are grateful for the interest manifested in the Negro race, therefore be it

Resolved, That we do here and now go on record as registering our gratitude for the hope they have inspired in us by declaring that the heinous crime of lynching should be blotted out and mob violence be abolished forever from the fair escutcheon of our state and that human life should be protected throughout the land.

RESOLUTION

The Central Georgia Colored Methodist Episcopal Annual Conference in session in Milledgeville, Ga., December 10, 1922, adopted the following resolution concerning the action of the Commission on Race Relations of the Woman's Missionary Council, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in its call upon the womanhood of the South to organize a persistent campaign for adequate state laws and law enforcement on the question of lynching and mob violence; and also their approval of the strong utterance of the Georgia State Baptist Convention against lynching and mob violence.

The resolution was as follows:

First, That we, the members of the Central Georgia Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church assembled in Milledgeville, December 6 to 10, 1922, herein express ourselves as being heartened because of the acts of the Race Relations Commission of white women and the Baptist State Convention in calling upon the state authorities and the pulpit and the press to marshal their forces against these widespread acts of lawlessness which are so fearfully disturbing the negroes of the South.

Second, That we pledge ourselves to aid in every way possible the program that has for its purpose such lofty course as abolishing mobs and lynching. We further pledge to encourage our people to look forward for the early coming of better days in things that pertain to justice in this our southland. Long since have we looked to the churches of our white people to offer the voice of protest, and coming as it has, we feel that no agency can be so potent as that of the church in these hours of trial.

IF SICK TODAY! TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

I discovered a vegetable compound that does the work of dangerous, sickening calomel and I want every reader of this paper to buy a bottle for a few cents and if it doesn't straighten you up better and quicker than salivating calomel just go back to the store and get your money back.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your thirty feet of bowels of the sour bile and constipation poison which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable.

I guarantee that one spoonful of this harmless liquid liver medicine will relieve the headache, biliousness, coated tongue, ague, malaria, sour stomach or any other distress caused by a torpid liver as quickly as a dose of vile, nauseating calomel, besides it will not make you sick or keep you from a day's work.

Calomel is poison—it's mercury—it attacks the bones, often causing rheumatism. Calomel is dangerous. It sickens—while my Dodson's Liver Tone is safe, pleasant and harmless. Eat anything afterwards, because it can not squalid. Give it to the children because if doesn't upset the stomach or shock the liver. Take a spoonful tonight and wake up feeling fine and ready for a full day's work.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

Insure in The Methodist Mutual—owned and controlled by the two North Carolina Conferences.

and seems a bad exchange for a run out of bounds.

But 65 little boys cannot be turned loose to go where they please. Responsibility and safety necessitate keeping bounds and regarding rules.

Besides keeping in bounds, there is another hard rule to keep—the prohibition against climbing tall trees. Trees just seem made to climb, and it is so delightful to get way up in the branches of one. Edward lost sight of the rule about climbing when a fascinating flying squirrel was seen out of reach in the branches of a tall popular tree, so while three or four boys shouted instructions from the ground he climbed higher and higher, trying to get a shot at the squirrel with a sling shot. Stepping on a dead branch, it broke and he fell to the ground, breaking his leg. One of his companions carried him home on his back. The Home nurse telephoned for the ambulance and Edward has been in the hospital ever since—several weeks. It was a bad fracture, and they keep a weight tied to his foot to prevent the broken leg from being permanently shorter than the other one.

Edward is a lively, cheerful spirit, and he says that he is having a good time at the hospital, for everyone is very kind to him. But an active boy flat on his back for weeks has a tough lot, especially at Christmas when everybody is so busy with plans and happy prospects. And we had bought Edward baseball shoes for a Christmas present! However, we hope his leg will be in good running order by baseball time, and we have added slippers and a sweater to his Christmas presents.

The children have had several outings recently. The West End adult department of Sunday school took them to see The Merchant of Venice one afternoon. All who were privileged to go were delighted with the entertainment and the experience of seeing a good play.

On the 13th the Elks' Club, this city, provided tickets and transportation for the larger boys and girls to go to a minstrel play, home talent, which the young folks said they enjoyed very much.

Thanksgiving Day we had ice cream in addition to the many other good things. Every year the North Carolina Ice Cream Association furnishes ice cream to all the orphanages in the state. A huge present of frozen joy! There may be differences of taste in many things—but all children love ice cream.

BOARD OF LAY ACTIVITIES AND CENTENARY COLLECTIONS

Mr. G. L. Morelock, secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities, attended the meeting of the Centenary Field Secretaries at Nashville, Tenn., December 28th and 29th, and spoke of the readiness of the laymen to help in the collection of the Centenary pledges. The following resolutions were adopted:

We, your Committee on Lay Activities, beg leave to make the following report, to-wit:

In facing the strenuous period of the next four months when we, the Centenary field secretaries representing the great Centenary movement throughout the church are to make special appeal for the collection of pledges, can but recall the magnificent support that we received from the lay leaders and the great body of laymen throughout the church during the inspirational period, resulting in the magnificent sum raised by subscription of about thirty-six millions dollars. And remembering the fact that the men and women of our church under the leadership of district directors and local church directors were busy with their own affairs, laid aside everything to make possible this great achievement; therefore, achievement; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we rely without any reservation upon the united support of the lay members of our church in this emergency campaign to raise four million of dollars by May the 1st.

Second, That as we face this great emergency campaign we earnestly and respectfully request the united assistance of the organization of lay activities throughout our church.

Third, That we request that the Board of Lay Activities through their organization give us all possible assistance and deliver themselves in this emergency campaign which means so much to the church.

Fourth, That we request the district organization of Lay Activities to furnish to the pastors Minute Men from now until the end of the campaign.

Fifth, We congratulate the Board of Lay Activities in the rapid perfection of its organization throughout the church; that we already in our various church activities feel the effect of this organization.

Respectfully submitted, James Thomas, A. J. Cauthen, D. L. Blakemore.

KENNEKEET CHARGE

Please allow me a few lines of space in the Advocate to speak a few words in regard to our out-going and in-coming pastors on the Kennekeet charge.

Rev. A. W. Price, our beloved pastor, who preached for us last year, we all dreaded so bad to give up. It was a great blessing to have him in our homes. He is a powerful preacher, and is calculated to grace any city church in North Carolina. Roanoke Island is to be congratulated on having such a strong and powerful pastor as Rev. A. W. Price.

Our in-coming pastor, Rev. C. A. Johnson, formerly of the Western North Carolina conference, who was transferred to the North Carolina conference at the last session, held in Raleigh, and was appointed as pastor of the Kennekeet charge.

Rev. C. A. Johnson filled the regular appointment at Clark's Bethel church, Salvo, December 17, at the 11 o'clock hour. His text was taken from First Peter, the fourth chapter and the sixteenth verse, and reads thus: "Yet if any man suffer as a Christian let him not be ashamed." In my estimation he preached one amongst the best and greatest sermons that has ever been delivered at our church.

I want to thank Rev. R. H. Willis for securing him for us, also the bishop for appointing him to the Kennekeet charge. I am glad a shouting preacher has come amongst a shout-

IN MEMORIAM

CHRISTENBURY—Margaret Jane Christenbury was born November 17, 1865, and died May 24, 1922, at the age of 56 years, six months and seven days. She is the oldest daughter of S. B. and Jane T. Christenbury and was never married. She professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Hickory Grove when young, where she continued her membership till the end.

For more than two years she had been in bad health, had had two surgical operations which did her little or no good, her health continuing bad, and for the last few months her mind was affected by the disease and she was taken to Morganton, where she died.

She was a good woman, kind to everybody and very industrious. She leaves two sisters, Miss Mary Ann Christenbury and Mrs. P. F. Davis, and four brothers, A. B., W. B. and J. B. Christenbury of Mecklenburg county, and P. T. of Stony Point, Iredell county. The funeral services were conducted from Hickory Grove church and the remains interred in the cemetery there May 26 in the presence of a large and sympathizing congregation by the writer. May her dear ones all meet her in heaven. E. Myers.

STALLINGS—Peter Urias Stallings was born January 9, 1850, in Caldwell county, N. C., and died in Mecklenburg county, near Hickory Grove church, September 18, 1922, aged 72 years, eight months and nine days. Was married to Elvira Bush March 3, 1870. To them were born four sons and six daughters. Two sons and one daughter have gone on before him, and about ten months ago his wife passed on to her reward. He joined the M. E. Church, South, at Colliers in Caldwell county when a young man had since kept his membership up with him. He was a good man, honorable, energetic and industrious.

The funeral services were conducted by this scribe from Hickory Grove church and the remains interred in the cemetery there September 19 in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

May his dear ones all meet him in heaven. His pastor, E. Myers.

HASS—William Cornelius Hass, son of W. P. and L. A. Hass, was born February 18, 1903, and died October 24, 1922, age 19 years, seven months and six days. He was a young man of sterling character. He professed faith in Christ at the age of nine years, and joined the Methodist church and lived a life which always spoke of his genuine conversion. And to the very last moment of his life he spoke of his readiness to meet God. He leaves to mourn their loss a father, mother, sister and one brother, four grandparents and several uncles and aunts, and a host of friends. It was so sad that he had to go in the very bloom of youth. But Longfellow says:

"There is a reaper, whose name is Death,
And with his sickle keen
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath,
And the flowers that grow between."

I am sure he could say with Harbaugh:

"Living or dying, Lord,
I ask to be but thine;
My life is Thee, thy life in me,
Make heaven forever mine."
J. M. Barber, Pastor.

RICHARDSON — Mason Latham Richardson was born March 19, 1884, and departed this life December 8, 1922, being a little more than 38 years of age.

He was converted when a boy and connected himself with New Hope Methodist church, where he remained till he and others built a church in his community they call Heath's Memorial. It is there his membership was at his death.

This good man was loyal to his church vows, faithful to his family and loved his Lord.

He is survived by wife and four children, also three brothers and one sister, viz: Miss Emma Richardson of Waxhaw, B. J. Richardson of Ocoola,

S. C., Rev. S. E. Richardson, China Grove, N. C., and J. H. Richardson of Mineral Springs, N. C.
His pastor, E. N. Crowder.

AN APPRECIATION

When Henry Martin Jensen of Rutherford College, N. C., departed this life suddenly, and while apparently in the best of health, on November 21, 1922, it brought to his friends a grief wholly unexpected and unprepared-for. He did not seem as one whom death had marked for early sacrifice. Everything about his appearance and demeanor savored of youth and youthful enthusiasm. Neither old in years, nor yet in a point of view which sometimes makes men grow old before their time, he seemed good for the maximum of man's allotted span.

The writer having known him for years while he resided in Durham, and where we were co-laborers in the Master's kingdom, desires to give expression to this simple little appreciation. Mr. Jensen was largely endowed with the grace of willingness; the willingness to do his part, to shoulder his share of the burden, to shirk nothing which might be needed of him toward the accomplishment of the whole task. Whether in the choir where his service found greatest delight, or a member of the vestry where he duly appreciated the confidence shown in him by his brethren, or as treasurer for years where he exhibited executive ability and approved himself as the faithful and wise steward, he showed himself a workman that needed not to be ashamed.

No sketch of him could be written without mentioning his unflinching optimism. To him the way was always bright, his skies rarely beclouded. His presence was a benediction. As I knew him, he had no moods; surliness was a stranger; the chronic grouch his special antipathy. He had enthusiasm enough to make him buoyant, and faith enough to assure him that all would come right in the end. And his faith even now is justified, because,

"Thou hast but taken thy lamp and gone to bed;
I stay a little longer, as one stays
To cover up the embers that still burn."

S. S. Bost.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY

Whereas, our heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom November 30th called from our society one of the beloved members, Dorothy Robinson. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we feel deeply the loss of Dorothy, the first to be called from the Sarah Brown Missionary Society during the thirty years of its history.

Second, We extend to the bereaved family our deepest love and tenderest sympathy.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be sent for publication to the Christian Advocate, to the Christian Worker, and a copy be placed on the minutes of the society.

Josephine Reagan,
Ruth Burrus,
Lucille Carmichael,
Committee.

ROWELL—Roseboro was made very sad on the morning of the 15th when it was learned that Mrs. T. W. Rowell, who had been sick for but a very few days, had the day before become seriously ill, and had departed this life about ten o'clock that evening.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Underwood, Sr., a very prominent family of this section, and was married to Mr. T. W. Rowell, a local merchant, in 1915.

Mrs. Rowell was a splendid Christian character, a tender mother and a loving wife, and no one knew her but to appreciate the gentleness of her character.

She leaves her husband, five small children, her father and mother, and seven brothers and sisters with a host of friends to mourn her loss.

The funeral services were held in the Methodist church, of which she had been a member for a number of years and were conducted by her pastor, and her body was laid to rest in the Cedar Grove cemetery.

We would not fail to express our heartfelt sympathy for her husband and the three small children who will feel this great loss so keenly.

J. A. Tharpe, P. C.

Legibility of Inscription

Probably the most important factor in the erection of a memorial aside from beauty and durability, is whether the inscription can be read easily at a reasonable distance. Inscriptions on Winnsboro Blue Granite memorials are more plainly legible at greater distances because of the perfect uniformity of color and the brilliancy of its crystals.

No wonder this harmonious reflex gray granite, with slight bluish tinge, greater in density and durability than other monumental granites, and known as "The Silk of the Trade," is specified by discriminating buyers whose memorials must be built of lasting stone without blemish or flaw.

Ask your dealer to use only Winnsboro Blue Granite on your order. If he can't supply you, write us, and we will put you in touch with a dealer who can.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, on the 5th day of December, 1922, our beloved friend and co-worker, Brother Manless Eugene Allman, was called from his life of usefulness and activity here to the life more abundant. Therefore we, the members of the Free Wesley Bible class of Broad Street M. E. Church, South, Mooresville, N. C., realize our great loss because of his death and wish to pay a tribute to his memory.

First, As he was in his place Sunday morning ready for his work, so we would follow his faithfulness and service.

Second, As he showed to our class, of which he was president, a beautiful Christian character, we should also strive for more Christ-like lives.

Third, That we extend to his family our sympathy and prayers in their great sorrow, which is our sorrow likewise.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy be spread on the minutes of our class.

C. M. Rinehardt, Vice Pres.
Earler P. Edmiston, Sec.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On November 17, 1922, God in His infinite wisdom called to her eternal home the soul of Mrs. D. L. Maury, one of our faithful members of the Methodist Missionary Society. Her going has broken long and happy associations and made a sad vacancy in the Anderson auxiliary. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we bow in humble submission to the will of the Father who cannot make a mistake, and commend the bereaved and broken hearts to His loving care, who alone can bind up and heal them.

Second, That in her passing this missionary society has lost a faithful member; though she was not present with us much on account of her feeble health, that we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy and love in this dark hour of bereavement and point them to the God who knoweth best.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes, a copy sent to the family, to the North Carolina Advocate and Missionary News.

Mrs. B. W. Thach,
Mrs. W. F. B. Sawyer,
Mrs. Linwood Hunter.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, on the 11th day of September, 1922, God in His wisdom called to her heavenly home Mrs. Dora A. McCannless, Trinity N. C. Be it resolved:

First, That in her death our church and Sunday School have lost a most diligent worker, the Woman's Missionary Society a faithful charter member, and the community a strong influence for good.

Second, That we submit to His will, knowing that he doeth all things well.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, a copy to the bereaved family and a copy recorded in the minutes of our Missionary Society.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. Bruce Craven,
Mrs. J. C. Pepper,
Mrs. J. L. Phillips.

FEATHERSTON — Momford M. Featherston was born October 30, 1845, and died November 1, 1922, at the age of 77 years and two days. He was one of the most consecrated men I have known. A fine neighbor and a consistent Christian gentleman. He had been a member of Concord Methodist church for a long time and will be greatly missed. He was a preacher's genuine friend, ever solicitous concerning the needs of the preacher and his family, and attentive to the aged and the sick. Our church will ever cherish his memory for his exaltation of the Christ in his sunny life and in the lingering suffering of his triumphant death. He leaves three brothers and a host of friends to mourn his going, but we know where to find him and expect some day to see him as an angel with the redeemed in the city of God. B. C. Thompson, Pastor.

SONG LEADER AND SOLOIST

Mr. P. Allen, song leader and soloist of fifteen years experience, is now making engagements for assisting in revival meetings.

Just to get acquainted, he probably can come and train your Sabbath School, Epworth League and church audience for a week in the standard hymns and gospel songs.

Mr. Allen is now a member of Trinity M. E. Church, South, Charlotte, N. C. Pastors and evangelists may address him at 303 West Fourth St.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS

In those churches where the choir insists upon 40 or 45 minutes of the service, how would it do to reverse the order and have the sermon first and then follow with the music of the day? This might throw some light upon a problem that vexes Zion in certain quarters.

* * * *

Sarcasm aids little in winning adherents to a cause, no matter how worthy the cause may be. Those who agree with a sarcastic writer or speaker may enjoy his thrusts but such thrusts only irritate his opponents, and even those who were inclined to listen to his plea often become estranged thereby. The reader has doubtless noted that a sarcastic lawyer's ability to win his case before a jury is not commensurate with his reputation for brilliancy. Disagreeable epithets carry with them the same danger that sarcasm does. Epithet is a branding iron that burns and those scorched by its touch are inclined like cattle on the plains to run away from it.

Omnipotence, or all power, is a fundamental of Biblical theology. But there are some things that God cannot do. He cannot work logical or mathematical contradictions. He cannot put a barrel of water into a bucket unless the bucket be as big as a barrel. He cannot bring a man to the fourscore limit in a day less than eighty years. He can from the black ooze bring a snow white lily to bloom in beauty, and cause the golden grain of bountiful harvests to wave over plain and upland, but He can never love a lie or look with any degree of allowance upon sin, because all such are contrary to His very nature.

"What is wrong with the church?" has been for quite a while a question for public discussion. All sorts and conditions of men try to set the world right on this subject. We wonder how it would do to write awhile on another topic, namely, "What is right with the church?" This would stop placing undue emphasis upon defects both real and imaginary and put the emphasis upon the things that really count. In the impressive language of an ancient singer: "Walk about Zion, and go round about her; tell the towers thereof. Mark ye well her bulwarks, consider her palaces; that ye may tell it to the generation following."

"At sundry times and in divers manners" hath God appeared to the great leaders in human history. To Jacob He came at one time in a dream, at another as a man who wrestled with him till break of day. "The burning bush" of the Arabian desert served to call Moses aside for special fellowship with his God. To Job He spoke out of the whirlwind, but Elijah heard him not in wind or flame, for the whisperings of the Eternal were to him in "the still small voice." Isaiah, enraptured, saw the glories of the Lord amid the holy splendors of the temple and in the midst of these cried: "Here am I, send me." Saul of Tarsus was overtaken on the highway and John Wesley felt a strangely warmed heart, but God was by these sundry methods through the ages carrying on His work among the children of men. Multitudinous and marvelous are the methods of our God! Why should any man, therefore, seek to limit God to his own little pet scheme of doing things? Think, if such a thing is thinkable, of God shutting the world up to one mode of baptism or a single method of "getting religion!"

The General Assembly is now getting well into the work of its biennial session. The good people of the state should keep an eye on the work of their lawmakers and render what aid they can in the important task of formulating just and beneficial laws for the people of our beloved state. If in your judgment existing laws should be amended or repealed or new laws enacted, do not fail to let your representatives know your wish in the matter. The great majority of the members of the General Assembly in our opinion desire to serve their constituency to the best of their ability. But it may become necessary for you to inform him of your wish in regard to matters of legislation and he will thank you for it.

Neighbor, what are your liabilities? We do not mean the mortgage on your farm, the notes you carry in the bank, or the heavy claims that others have upon your business, which claims may eventually spell bankruptcy. We mean those things which reduce the sum total of your holdings in the real possessions of life and thereby rob you of the joys of living. The liabilities of some are hurtful facilities of speech, they talk too much, say unkind and unjust things. With others there is an infirmity of temper, or a selfishness that robs life of its deepest joys. To get rid of such liabilities would be a long step forward toward a kind of success that all men should covet and that is in the reach of everyone.

Some editors and other writers for the public seem to be greatly disturbed because the preachers and moral leaders in prominent places oppose the return of Fatty Arbuckle to the screen. These men say that the preachers whose message is forgiveness are unwilling to forgive Fatty and allow him another chance. Such objectors ignorantly or otherwise miss the point entirely. The Bible is an old book, but it will clear up most modern questions of right and wrong. Listen to the Book: "Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright. For we know how that afterward, when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected: For he found no place for repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears." (Heb. xii. 16, 17). The birthright gone cannot be restored. Fatty Arbuckle sold out at a pajama party and he is now in the fix of Esau. This is not a question determined by the arbitrary wish of ministers of the gospel and other ethical and spiritual leaders, it is a matter fixed by the Eternal Author of all things who gave to us the necessary order of the moral universe.

"THY WORD GIVETH LIGHT"

The preacher who goes out to win souls is sure to encounter many things that will sorely test his faith. He will find the world, the flesh and the devil arrayed against him. His soul will at times be overwhelmed by the spiritual stupidity of many professed disciples of our Master. The inability on the part of people to properly estimate spiritual values will test his faith in mankind.

But the Holy Bible will come mightily to his help. These ringing words of Scripture will be to his jaded spirit like the music of silver bells:

"He that is wise winneth souls."

"The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost."

"He who converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death."

"I am made all things to all men, that I may by all means save some."

"They that are wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."

A BAPTISM OF FIRE

Not water baptism. That counts for little. The water may be sprinkled, or poured, or the candidate may go under, but the result is the same. Saints are not made that way. Men are not equipped by baptismal washings for heroic and holy service. The baptism that counts is a baptism of fire. Fire burns out the dross and leaves the pure metal. Fire is the mightiest agent for cleansing. The pulpit that has been set on fire becomes an object of interest. Men come running to a fire. The fire-bell, the fire-whistle and the pulpit that sounds a fire alarm set the crowds a-going. And the fire of the pulpit is likely to set fire to the pew. In the winter there should be a fire burning in the stove in the church and in the preacher of the pulpit. But for the preacher it is winter all the year. His must be a perpetual burning. The prophets and apostles were men of the burning heart.

SHOOT HIM ON THE SPOT

That is the policy of the bootlegger toward the officer of the law. A high-powered automobile, a high-powered Colt's revolver, a few fruit jars, jugs, cans and crates of high-powered liquor and the bootlegger is out for any high handed crime that suits his purpose at the moment. An officer of the law is no more than a dirty dog to these assassins of the highway and of the street.

Policeman McCuiston, one of the kindest-hearted and best men of the Greensboro police force, was shot down without a moment's warning by Carl Talley and his gang, and the zeal of some was shown only in an effort to punish the officers who pursued these fleeing murderers. And this Greensboro tragedy was by no means the last instance of officers of the law being shot by these notorious enemies of law who propose to sell liquor at any and all costs.

The present General Assembly should close up some loopholes in the present laws against the manufacture and sale of liquor and then there should be the adoption by all judicial officers of a policy that would send all convicted offenders to the chain gang for such terms as would put an end to the illicit traffic in liquor. Liquor dealers who are at heart murderers must be made to feel the mailed fist of legal justice.

A convention that has for its primary object law enforcement and the end of the bootlegger in North Carolina will be held in Raleigh, January 16. All good citizens who can arrange to attend should be in Raleigh next Tuesday.

Let pastors see that the churches next Sunday elect delegates to this convention and let the pastors and other good citizens be on hand for this important meeting. This is a good opportunity to serve your state and help to put an end to the work of the bootlegger, the most daring and high handed criminal that now infests our borders.

STARS THROUGH CYPRESS TREES

The Christian religion has to do with two worlds, the one that now is and the one that is to come. For this reason "godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." This present life at best is but a span. The shuttle flies swiftly and the web has soon been completed. The years are too short and too few to satisfy the heart of man. He must have an outlook of broader sweep and a larger sphere than mortal life in which faith, hope and love may find satisfaction for themselves.

John Greenleaf Whittier has presented this idea with surpassing beauty in the following well known lines:

Yet Love will dream and Faith will trust,
Since He who knows our needs is just,
That somehow, somewhere, meet we must.

Alas for him who never sees

The stares shine through his cypress trees!

Who, hopeless, lays his dead away,

Nor looks to see the breaking day

Across the mournful marble play;

Who has not learned in hours of faith,

The truth to flesh and sense unknown,

That Life is ever lord of Death,

And Love can never lose its own!

BEAVER OR RAT

Mr. James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, puts an important truth in such terse and incisive sentences that they cut like the teeth of the beaver, the animal upon whose head our Secretary of Labor puts a crown. Listen to Mr. Davis:

"When I meet a man who is a loafer and a destroyer, I know he is alien to me. I fear him and all his breed. The beaver is a builder, and the rat is a destroyer; yet they both belong to the rodent race. Some men are by nature beavers, and some are rats; yet they all belong to the human race. The people that came to this country in the early days were of the beaver type, and they built up America because it was their nature to build. Then the rat-people began coming here, to house under the roof that others built. And they try to undermine and ruin it because it is their nature to destroy. They call themselves anarchists."

NO MAGIC WAND

No man can divorce himself entirely from his past life. His yesterdays necessarily encamp close upon the heels of today. The past, the present and future of every life are closely interwoven. The past, whether good or bad, cannot be laid aside as one does a garment. For the lives of us all are rooted into the soil of by-gone years. The tender plant may grow out of a dry ground, but it grows out of a soil already provided, whether that soil be favorable or unfavorable to the growing plant.

Furthermore, the things lost are seldom recovered. The younger son of the parable came to enjoy the robe, the ring, the feast, the welcome, but he never got back all those treasures that he carried away. These remained in the far off country, and in consequence he went through life poorer than he otherwise might have gone.

People should disabuse their minds of the notion that religion is a sort of magic wand that one may wave over his head and all the things that are ugly, hurtful, and sinful become as if they had been drowned in the depth of the sea and by some magical process that life begins anew in the rose garden of the Lord where it may unhindered bear all manner of fruits that enrich the kingdom of heaven.

A pious parentage, a religious home, early acquaintance with the finer and better things of life and the start that such influences give a lad or a lass are forces from which no life can possibly escape. If parents, and preachers, and all social and religious teachers miss this fundamental point, their preaching is vain, their faith is vain, and of all men who labor for personal and social salvation they are most to be pitied.

A SPECIAL DUTY FOR THE LEGISLATURE

The state law as it now exists does not conform to the national law upon the subject of the control of the liquor traffic. Why not make the state law to conform to the Volstead Act?

The Anti-Saloon League explains the differences as they now exist between the state and federal laws. Here are the points of difference:

"In answer to your question as to what are the differences between the state law and the Volstead Act, we will say there are a good many. The state law allows the manufacture and sale of wine and intoxicating ciders. The federal law does not. The state law allows the possession of liquor for beverage purposes, the Volstead law does not. The state law provides no nuisance act, the federal law does. The state law as interpreted by the supreme court of North Carolina under two decisions has an automobile law that is ineffective; the Volstead law has an automobile law which is effective. The state law has no provision to arrest and punish the land owner, or the other person that may be behind the liquor business, and on whose land the blockader makes liquor, and who is in 'cahoot' with the liquor making, but the federal law has a provision that can catch him."

PREACHERS AND BOOTLEGGERS

Letters from various sections of the state have reached this office urging the Advocate to throw its influence against the lawless behavior of the bootlegger. Some of the people evidently are becoming alarmed over conditions in our state and nation. One man writes, "The liquor situation is becoming desperate both in the state and nation."

It is a hopeful sign when the citizens of North Carolina begin to wake up on this question. These defiant lawbreakers will be put out of business just as soon as the good citizens set themselves to the task.

We trust that the Methodist preachers of North Carolina will get into this fight. These men in an earlier day blazed the trail along which the hosts of prohibitionists later marched. Brave men were needed to pioneer the way when the liquor power entrenched behind the law in defiance laughed at men who dared to oppose it. But God was with them in the fight and they won. The Methodist preacher must get into the fight again. He has been resting for a spell, but the clarion calls of his prophetic voice must again be lifted up against the bootlegger, and against the booze drinker.

Let the preachers from the vantage point of the pulpit speak out in such fashion that the men and women of our congregations will become aroused upon the issues of good government, the majesty of the law and the removal from our midst of deliberate and defiant lawbreakers. Put those fellows who have been breaking the law to breaking rock on the roads. Clothe in stripes the man whose meat and drink has been to mock at garments of righteousness. As the stern old Scotch Puritans of another day were accustomed to say, "Let them know there is a God in Israel."

Of our fifteen bishops the names of one-third of the whole number begins with one letter of the alphabet as follows: Denny, Darlington, Dubose, Dickey, Dobbs: Murrah, Mouzon, Moore, McMurry forms a group of four with a common initial. There remains only six names and these group themselves in pairs after the following order: Atkins, Ainsworth, Beauchamp, Boaz, Candler, Cannon, and Hendrix, Hay. All Methodist preachers whose names begin with D or M may be able to find in this some encouragement to seek episcopal honors.

We cannot all say clever things, but we all can say kind things, and the kind word will linger in the heart and keep on doing business in the life long after the most brilliant speech has slipped from memory.—The New Guide.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Rev. W. E. Abernethy has accepted a call to the First Baptist church of Leaksville and has entered upon his duties.

Rev. Daniel Lane and the Stantonburg people for the third time has put the Advocate in the budget this year. Good for Lane and Stantonburg. They say it pays.

On January 6th Mr. William Tucker and Miss Audry Atchison were united in marriage at Muir's Chapel Methodist parsonage. Rev. C. F. Sherrill performed the ceremony.

"Mrs. Lottie Burrage Rodgers announces the marriage of her daughter, Pearle, to Mr. Charles Ottis Floyd, on Tuesday, January second, nineteen hundred and twenty-three, Salisbury, N. C."

We have been asked whether it is true that "Cyclone Mack," the evangelist, has joined the Baptist church. Yes, it is true. He was baptized several weeks ago, by one of the Baptist pastors of Wilmington, N. C.

"The Merchant of Venice" will be given at Carolina College on January 15 by the Elizabethan Players. The college community and the people of Maxton are looking forward with interest to the presentation of this great Shakespearean play.

Mrs. A. W. Mohn is director of the Glee Club at Louisburg College and under the exceptional supervision of Mrs. Mohn the club is making an enviable record. Mrs. Mohn's ability is greatly appreciated by the entire student body.

Rev. J. O. Banks, of the Swannanoa circuit, starts into his second year with finest prospects. His people have gladly given him an increase in salary this year, fixing the same at $1000, and a new church at Azalia has been practically built since conference.

"Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bruce Cameron announce the marriage of their daughter, Viola, to Reverend Nathan Martin Wright, on Wednesday, January the third, nineteen hundred and twenty-three, Durham, North Carolina. At home after January the twelfth, Tyner, N. C."

Carrboro charge set up last conference composed of Carrboro and Orange church near Chapel Hill have started well. Improvement is to be made on both the church and parsonage at Carrboro, and they have set themselves to take good care of their preacher, Rev. J. W. Autry.

West Greensboro charge on Spring Garden street extension is one of our strong appointments. It is composed of a noble and generous people. Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Sherrill in addition to a generous pounding are constantly the recipients of many expressions of kindness and love.

By an error in the minutes of the recent session of the North Carolina conference Brother R. E. Atkinson of the Mt. Olive circuit appears as a supernumerary. This, of course, is a mistake. Brother Atkinson is hale and hearty and starting off in fine shape on the Mt. Olive circuit.

Rev. J. R. Walker is distressed that in the report of his pounding we failed to mention the potatoes that he got. This is not the only error that the Advocate has made, but is a grave omission on our part and we humbly beg the pardon of our good friend. He is not an Irishman, but he is a great potato eater.

Rev. H. M. Blair preached last Sunday morning at Carraway Memorial for Rev. J. W. Kennedy, the pastor, who is still suffering from a stubborn case of sciatica. Announcement of Brother Kennedy's illness was noted several weeks ago in the Advocate. We regret to state that his improvement is very slow.

"The Bible's Baptism" is a booklet by Rev. O. P. Fitzgerald of Oriental, N. C. The author gives as the purpose and scope of the present discussion, "to present briefly the teachings of baptism as found in the Word of God and to follow in a way the administration of the ordinance through the history of the church."

Rev. H. C. Byrum has had the "flu," but even the influenza has not been able to irritate this genial spirit. He is now in just as fine humor as ever. Brother Byrum has begun a great year on the Rock Springs circuit. Unprecedented interest in the Epworth Leagues, improvement in the Sunday schools, better financial system and a new church at Denver are among the notes of progress on that charge.

Married, at the home of the bride, November 22, 1922, Miss Lottie Moore and Fred Carr, Rev. R. R. Grant performing the ceremony.

Rev. E. C. Glenn of Rocky Mount is open for two or three revivals this year. The brethren will take note of this announcement.

Rev. E. R. Welch, pastor of Chestnut Street church, has been elected president of the Asheville Ministerial Association for the year 1923.

Married, at the parsonage in Roxboro, N. C., January 6, 1923, Mr. Bennie Foushee and Miss Floyd Wrenn, both of Person county, B. C. Thompson officiating.

The Leasburg church is installing a private plant for lighting their church, and the other churches of the charge will extend the system to the parsonage so that the preacher and his family may enjoy the electric lights also. It seems that the people are always ready to follow where S. F. Nicks leads.

M. E. Cotton, whose voice is like to that of a prophet of righteousness when it comes to his philippic against the bootlegger and his pleas for law enforcement was in the Advocate office last Monday on his return from a day in Mt. Airy. He spoke Sunday morning in Central church, Mt. Airy, and found the people enthusiastic for law enforcement and they assured Mr. Cotton that a big delegation would be on hand for the Raleigh convention next Tuesday.

Rev. J. E. Blalock is having unusual experience this year on the Hillsboro circuit. He is building a new parsonage and rebuilding the old so as to make it practically a new house. These are both to be his first rate homes in every particular. The circuit is to be divided next conference and the new parsonage will be at Cedar Grove; the old parsonage at Hillsboro will be made new for the preacher who goes to that circuit next year. The new circuit will be known as the Cedar Grove. The pastor and people of the old Hillsboro, with its eleven hundred and forty-nine members, have a great program laid out for the year.

Rev. H. C. Sprinkle, presiding elder of the Asheville district, gives an interesting bill of particulars as to his own garden: "Please say to the multiplied scores of friends who have cheered us with greetings during the holiday season, but have had not a line from me 'fore or aft, that every message has been fully appreciated. The explanation of my apparent indifference is that for three weeks I have been cultivating a vile plant, in my own garden, of mongrel form—50-50-50, cold, grippe, flu—which has been threatening to go to seed in pneumonia, and the pesky thing has not left any time for the other plants and herbs. I am thankful to say, however, that with the help of the doctor, and with the good wife in authority, as nurse, we have nipped the thing in the bud, and I will soon be out again."

Rev. D. V. York, who is in evangelistic work in North Carolina at present, was in our office Wednesday, January 3rd. He has just returned from Oklahoma on a visit to his family. Brother York held nine meetings in five months during last year, in this state, and reports that he had in those meetings within five months time 1100 genuine "mourners' bench" conversions, and during the conference year he had 1310 conversions; 150 young people volunteered for life service; 300 family altars were erected, and 40,000 chapters read in the Bible reading department by the church members where meetings were held. Brother York is open for a few engagements during this year. If any brother wishes to use him he can be had by addressing him at Rutherford College, N. C.

Here are two letters which the Advocate received in the same mail: "I am an invalid, and a member of the Methodist church, and have been getting the Advocate complimentary for some time, until a few weeks ago the subscription some one gave me ran out. I miss the dear old paper, but am not able to pay for it." The other letter reads: "Will have to stop my paper. I am not able to pay for it. I would love so much to have it come on, but am not able to pay for it." We receive letters like these nearly every day. The Advocate is carrying a large number of these dear people free, but cannot carry all. Who will send it to these two good women who have been subscribers a long time, but who have been reduced to circumstances that will not permit them to pay for a paper that is dear to them. Send us the money. We will notify them who is paying for their Advocate. We have on file a number of letters just like the above.

Rev. J. B. Hurley begins the close of his quadrennium at Roxboro. His people believe in him and are ready to follow. This vigorous and devoted congregation, in addition to meeting obligations, will pay their preacher $3,000 this year.

Rev. M. G. Ervin says: "Please announce in the Advocate that my address, as pastor of the Mill Brook circuit, is Trinity College, Durham, N. C., and not the address given in the North Carolina Conference Journal."

A newspaper office is not all hum drum. The incoming mail is at times well worth reading. Here is a recent letter just as the author wrote it: "Dear Editor of the Advocate. Your Ignorance is Refreshing. What Business is it to You Who Belongs to the K. K. K. I am a methodist and Like to read the Advocate But, You Will Haft to stop my Paper if You are going to Knock the Ku Klux Klan. A methodist."

The Leasburg circuit has made an advance of $200 on salary of their pastor, Rev. S. F. Nicks. The matter of a new four year high school in or near Leasburg, to be secured by the union of three or four districts, is of chief interest to the people of that section just now. Brother Nicks is much interested and is taking a leading part in this enterprise. The school is practically assured and it will mark a new day in the way of educational opportunities for the children of that section of Person and Caswell.

Person circuit has advanced the salary of Rev. B. C. Thompson to $2500. Thompson lives in the $11,000 parsonage and keeps open house to his parishioners and to his friends. Could Francis Asbury, who knew nothing better than his old gig, see Thompson ride up to Concord in his new Studebaker to be greeted by his congregation who have all come in cars of one kind and another—well, no one can begin to imagine just what the old bishop would think. The day has changed but the spirit of Asbury abides.

Just a minute. The Advocate Special starts the first day of February. We want this to be the most successful year in the history of the paper. There are 25,000 copies sent out to subscribers each week. We do not want to lose a single one of these. Our goal is to get all old subscribers to renew, and add 5000 new ones to the list. We call upon all our good friends to help us to reach this goal. The Wesleyan Advocate, organ of Georgia Methodism, is calling upon the two conferences in the Cracker State to give it 25,000 subscribers this year. The N. C. Christian Advocate must keep ahead. Everything you can do will be appreciated.

Rev. J. M. Rowland, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, expects to conduct a Christian Advocate Tour to Palestine, Egypt and Europe the coming summer. Twice before this has Dr. Rowland conducted parties through this same territory and with good success. His last tour was in the summer of 1921 and the members of the party brought back flattering reports of the trip and of Brother Rowland as the conductor. He promises more for the money than one can secure elsewhere and any person interested in travel this coming summer will do well to write Dr. Rowland, Richmond, Virginia. Among those of North Carolina who visited Egypt, Palestine and Europe in the summer of 1921 with Mr. Rowland's party we at the moment recall the names of Revs. C. M. Pickens, E. R. Welch, A. L. Stanford, A. P. Ratledge and Mrs. E. L. Hillman. There were others whose names we do not just now recall.

Rev. J. O. Banks says: "For the first time in the history of Swannanoa circuit this charge has advanced itself to the $1000 class, raising the salary this year $375. We are looking forward to the best year in our history in every way. The Sunday schools are organizing Wesley classes; the cradle roll and home department are all being organized. We plan to put our Sunday schools in the forefront and train the children to become workers with children. Azalea has since annual conference built a new church with four Sunday school rooms, and we were able to use the new structure for our Christmas exercise and for worship yesterday. We are asking God to give us a year of great revivals and a baptism of the Holy Spirit, and would like to get in touch with some spirit-filled evangelistic preacher who could give us three or four meetings without having to guarantee him any certain amount for the service. Would he glad to exchange meetings with some brother pastor in a reasonable distance."

HOW DOES YOUR GARDEN GROW?

How does your garden grow? with maids all in a row; and boys, like sturdy hollyhocks, to form a background. Just as the florist tells you about the lily bulb—it's all in the bulb, the beautiful foliage and the lovely blossom; it is your care that unfolds the beauty. However, don't be in too great a hurry. To get the best results, it is necessary to keep the bulbs in the dark for a season and then, with roots well established, there comes vigorous foliage and the lovely flowers.

But what are girls and boys made of? Mischievous and fun and all that's nice. So, why try to rush them into grown-ups? Why shorten the period of adolescence? A little waiting will repay in the luxuriance of beauty. "It's all in the bulb," and it's all in the personality you want to develop. So, keep them in the dark awhile, away from the sickening glare of the day's sensation and the world's excitement. Keep them removed from the noises of the squeaking hurdy-gurdy, the loathsome jazz and the jargon of the streets.

Let the boys and girls romp over the fields until they find bob white with her brood; let them picnic in the woods until they learn the blue-bird's note and wander still farther until they feel the penetrating note of the thrush and they can say in truth: "So the merry brown thrush sings away in the tree, To you and to me, to you and to me."

The Japanese take great pride in their ability to outdo nature and pervert the growth of a tree that might have towered above his fellows in the forest into a small garden specimen suitable for a flower-pot. This is interesting to observe and we commend the scientific gardener, but when this experiment is tried upon our humanity the effort becomes serious and it is a cause for sincere regret.

Think of young people just entering their teens entertaining at bridge during the afternoon; or a company of gay young children gathering at a home for a morning dance in summer; or a children's party being given in the form of a fancy dress ball.

What pitiable, dwarfed specimens of humanity the present-day culture will produce! How can the dwarfed wizened womanhood of such a culture measure up to the demands of the new freedom given womankind?

When the world is topsy-turvy, and the armies of the nations can't set it right, then woman, who has been guardian of the spiritual forces of earth, is expected to keep the white flower of her life unblemished by the soot and filth of the malicious multitude.

WHITHER WILL THE WOMEN LEAD US?

We have made much of the saving power of woman and talked enthusiastically about the hand that rules the world. This has all been done before woman was clothed with present day freedom and power. Surely, we have a right to expect much more of her in this her new day. The only danger is that she has more responsibilities than she can care for and more freedom than she is able to use to advantage.

Many of the old conventions have been pushed aside and some chafe under the few that remain. Some of the symptoms are not such as to bring comfort. To pass through a train and find college girls with a suitcase set up for a card-table, with all the abandon of men in the smoker with the poker chips; and to be confronted with mothers in the home standing for extravagance and worldly display, one can but fear for the future. However much responsibility women may assume in the field of politics, we all do know that the women are responsible for the social sins that infest society. The men are great sinners, but they do not have to answer for this. Whenever there are high or low social standards in a community a little investigation will show that the women are responsible. They hold the whip-handle here just as much as they do as to what and how much or how few clothes they will wear. Love of show is the sin of women as the love of money is the sin of men.

The increase of wealth gratifies the vanity of women and ministers to the cupidity of men and therein tends to crush both by its own weight. Mommsen tells us that when the Roman mother counted her children her jewels the people were safe; but when the day came that the only disgrace known was to be poor, the empire fell.

The danger always lies with a people who become rich and worldly, forgetful of the fine old virtues that made them great in the days of their poverty. Women will contend with animated enthusiasm that there is no harm in any of the things they allow in their homes and among their children, but they are not able to show any of those taken up with their worldly rounds and extravagant display that count for anything in the way of practical godliness. Many of them go to church and say Lord, Lord, but they are not able to convince the world that this is anything more than the rest of their rounds—a vain and empty show.

This peril is not confined to those who are actually rich. Some of these are the salt of the earth. It extends to all those who have caught the spirit of the world, for worldliness is a spirit that gets hold of people in country and in town. The so-called rounds of worldliness that have become so prevalent, especially since the war, are only symptoms of a spirit that pervades the land. It is in the country as well as in the town.

Are the women going to save us or are they going to mistake liberty for license and keep up the abandon of war-times when the sanctity of the Sabbath, the sanctity of life, the sanctity of womanhood, and the sanctity of religion received a fearful blow.

Some of the women who make a persistent plea for the abolition of the double standard would get more sympathy from genuine men were it not that they mean by a single standard a dropping to the level of the standard set by the men. Women must continue to be women, with all that is implied in that fine old word of the language, if they are to lead us up and on.

The silent forces in the quiet places where character is formed have always been most potential. This may remain true and count for more than the loud display and shoddy pretense in the face of a wicked and adulterous generation. Too close contact with "the lewd fellows of the baser sort" has not the approval of Holy Writ.

WHAT WILL THE END BE?

Beginnings are always interesting. To trace the genesis of ideas is illuminating; to discover the origins of movements, instructive; and to disclose the hours of vision, inspiring. These pregnant moments of the soul are sacred and big with destiny. Few can fully realize what they mean and that unto what they will grow.

The Rev. A. L. Barnes-Lawrence, writing of Cecil Rhodes at Oxford, refers to what this his intimate college friend told him when he came up to Oxford to receive his D. C. L. degree in 1899: "Just a quarter of a century later," says Mr. Barnes-Lawrence, "in talking with me about those old times, Rhodes has told me that even he was fired with an ambition to advance the boundaries of civilization by extending the British Empire to the regions beyond; and it was deeply interesting to me to say how much he had always felt indebted to the educational course at Oxford, which had cleared his vision, fixed his aim, stimulated his enthusiasm, and sustained him in his after-life amid the thousand difficulties which beset him in the pursuit of his ideal. These phrases are perhaps mine rather than his, but they represent accurately what he intended to convey with reference to his indebtedness to the university and to his old college."

That same year, 1899, Cecil Rhodes returned to South Africa and made a speech in which he made his first public reference to a long cherished scheme of his for the foundation and endowment of a teaching university at Cape Town, where the young men of each and all of the South African states might mingle together in common fellowship. Thus by bringing them together, a better understanding would result between British and Dutch, and greater sympathy would be found to exist between the two races as the youth grew up.

Cecil Rhodes intended to erect a building somewhere on the outskirts of Cape Town. This building was to be an exact replica of Oriol College, his old college at Oxford. In all outward appearances the South African institution should reproduce the Oriol of Oxford. Rhodes had plans drawn and forwarded to him; but at the eleventh hour, he had to abandon the scheme because the Dutch community had opened a training college somewhere up the country and he feared that this might give some offence to the founders of that institution.

In all this one does not have to go far to find the origin of the Rhodes Scholars now at the old English University. These young men, through the benefactions of Cecil Rhodes, go up year after year from all the English speaking world to mingle together in common fellowship at Oxford, much as Rhodes expected young men from all the divisions of South Africa to do at Cape Town. These would take care of the union of South Africa, as he expected the Rhodes Scholars to do for the entire English-speaking world.

Some one is reported to have asked during the great life of Cecil Rhodes, "What is his creed?" The reply was, "Man, what does it matter; that man is building an empire." It is safe to affirm that he dreamed of more than an empire in South Africa: Cecil Rhodes desired and expected that the Rhodes Scholars would do much to bring about a union of all the peoples who are the beneficiaries of his benefaction.

CHECK UP YOUR BUSINESS

The business man takes an inventory of his stock and checks up after his employees. The utmost fidelity is shown in this by the man who achieves success; he holds himself and all associated with him to the strictest account. The same is true of the housewife who successfully meets the demands of her home burdened with the innumerable details which are her constant care. Most failures result from want of care and the lack of alertness in following up and pushing to conclusion the work entered. Many compelled to do business on small capital, both mental and material, succeed admirably because they have the ability to keep doggedly at it at the last detail and for the final finish.

In the face of these facts, men and women of more than the average in all that goes to make up life show the slightest concern for these elements of success. The new Discipline has provision for the Sunday school superintendents, the lay leaders, Epworth Leagues and women's societies to make quarterly reports, supplementary to the report of the preacher in charge. But little attention, however, is given to this provision for a quarterly check-up. Many pastors seem to have no sense of the immense value of a regular review of what is being done. Simply putting to record the facts gathered is of slight import compared with the "check-up." Not a few churches and church organizations simply fall to pieces for want of keeping up with the organization; a result the life perishes in the midst of the dissolution. How often do we need to be told that in order to conserve life it must be organized and a care must be had for keeping intact the organization?

Were the leaders of our church-life to remember this principle and act upon it, the year before us would have a far different story to tell.

NO TWELVE MONTHS TO HARVEST

In Methodist circles in North Carolina, the first three months of the new conference year will soon be past. This is almost beyond comprehension when we come to consider the attitude of those who are supposed to be the leaders in some of the churches. No financial system has been set going; No energetic effort put forth for rallying the lagging forces; no bugle-call for a notable advance. All hands have been marking time with full expectation of a rich and full harvest in the end. How disappointing will the end be.

There is not a farmer who is worth his salt that has not during these winter days set himself to making preparation for the months that are to come. Before the warm spring days have given assurance that the winter is past, these men of energy and enterprise will have all alignments made for the victory that awaits him. We once heard a fine lawyer remark to a client that he must remember that lawsuits are won before the clients go into the courthouse. This is about true in all the contests of life. Could we once come to appreciate the value of beginning in time and keeping doggedly at it, our church work would prove a glorious success. God has always been able to work with those who will work; and to win victories with the three hundred who are eager for the fray.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS?

By C. C. Broughton, Troy, N. C.

After reading and hearing so much I am bound to stand by the conviction that these "dreadful young people" are just as moral, just as high-minded and just as serious of purpose as were their fathers and mothers at the same age, and, besides their stock of information is immeasurably greater.

Lack of Country Homes.

And yet, taken as a whole they lack something. They lack a thing difficult to describe, but perfectly easy of understanding to anybody whose recollection goes back a half century to the old fashioned country home, where most of the successful men and women of the present generation were born and reared.

Except in the country, and here and there in town, the old fashioned home and its influence are all but lost and our young people show it.

"Oh, but we all have homes," you object. But the homes you mean are not for the most part the home I am thinking about as these words are written. Recollection revives the picture of the old homestead.

Was it the one-room log cabin with fireplace and loft, or was it the more pretentious "big house?" Here in this old homestead we were born, here were nursed in our infant illness, and here we held our quilting bees, spelling matches, and in these communities everybody attended the protracted meetings. There were no rented public halls in those days, the chaperon was not yet in the land, and the life of the young was life of the family, and it was all ours, to all intents and for all practical purposes. No king ever stood better seized of his domain, not better pleased with his possessions, than were we with the homestead that was ours.

He was conscious of few needs beyond his personal ability to provide, and he was not a spend-thrift, because, first of all there was little on which money could be spent—no theatres, no hired entertainments, no bills. Blessed memory!

The childish fancy enlarges the boundaries of what it sees, so does recollection cheat us of our sense of proportion, and so does the old homestead exert upon the child life, and upon after life as well, an influence that nothing else can equal and nothing else can supply.

The joys and satisfactions of the old homestead were single ones, and mostly home-made. The influence was healthful and inspiring, teaching responsibility, resourcefulness, thrift and moderation in demands for pleasure, homely virtues, these but all necessary to any people that hope to develop a lasting civilization.

Gone are the homesteads of our father's day, except for the open country, and even here the family depends on outside enterprise, hired and paid for, to supply a considerable share of the necessities and pleasures of life.

We used to build a fire in the stove of a frosty morning; now we open the radiator. We used to burn tallow candles for lighting; now we turn on the switch. We used to make our soft soap and do our washing; now we send to the laundry for treatment with bleaching powders. We used to bring water from the old spring; now we turn a faucet set in the wall.

Do not misunderstand me. I would not go back to the days and the doings of the pioneers, but I would if I could bring back into the lives of our young people, and of the older, something of the spirit that pervaded the homestead of the early days.

Looked at impartially almost from any angle the home is, in the vast majority of cases off the farm, shattered into fragments and bits. In many instances the members of the household do not even "get down to breakfast" at the same time, so that as a family the parents and children are seldom together. Little wonder that people drift away from the childhood so easily, and that divorce is multiplying. Born in hospitals, fed and clothed at home, but brought up in schools and clubs, we are fast becoming only half domesticated. The father leads one life in business and in the club, the children, from little tots up, lead another in the school and its adjuncts, the fraternity and society, while the mother, deserted most of the time, resorts or reverts to her club life. And the home, as a home in distinction from a place in which to eat and sleep, is virtually broken up. For the evening is little better than the day, because between club entertainments, dances, and other activities, with a stream of movies thrown in for good measure, the evening goes like the day, each group after its own fashion, a poor substitute for the old-time family gathering by the winter fireside.

And how long can we remain civilized unless we find a real substitute for the old homestead, something that shall hold the old and the young together and grip their souls long enough for the young to get something of the experience of, and association with, those of the older generation who brought them into the world.

They are great young people these days. They are vastly better informed than their mothers and fathers. They have been set adrift and left to their own devices at too young an age. With a little real help at the start they will do famously, but the family must move with the world, not drop out; for society, both old and young, never needed it before as it needs it now.

Nobody wants the old-time self-sufficing homestead back again, but we do want some of the results of that form of living, and with all our varied activities the home deserves some remnant, at least, of our undivided attention. And the home has a right to a share, at least, of the time and thought and loyalty of every one of its members, a time to settle down, to subside from the dance of death that has taken possession of so many of us, especially the young, driving from this "date" to that, four or five times perhaps in a single evening.

This thing can be done, and the home can be cultivated by main strength, if necessary, until the present craze of organizing everybody into everything shall have subsided, and we shall begin to cluster around the home again and to know each other individually as human beings, as well as collectively. When this is done the old country church and its principles will be re-established once more.

The children need it; the father needs it; the mother almost deserted needs it; and the country needs it most of all.

On highway's side, where oft were seen
The wild dog and the vulture keen
Tug for limbs and gnaw the face
Of some starving child of our race.

CALL FOR CONVENTION TO AID LAW ENFORCEMENT, RALEIGH, JAN. 16, 1923

The call upon the temperance forces in this hour is to mobilize their influence to aid in the enforcement of the laws preventing the manufacture and sale of intoxicants. North Carolina was one of the first commonwealths to put the ban on the saloon and the still by the popular vote of the people. Having outlawed the legal manufacture and sale of liquor, it behooves us to be vigilant to prevent the annulment of the law by law-breakers. What can the temperance people do to end the machinations of the bootleggers and the clandestine making of intoxicants. We must do any all things within our power to hold what we have won. Let the temperance forces take counsel one of another, agree upon the best plan, and in unity battle to secure the enforcement of the prohibition laws and the Eighteenth Amendment.

A one day's convention of all the temperance forces in North Carolina is hereby called to meet in Raleigh, January 16, 1923. This is the anniversary of the going into effect of the national prohibition amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Let there be a great gathering in Raleigh on that day to highly resolve that the law shall not be flouted.

All lovers of law, all friends of temperance are invited and all churches and other patriotic organizations are requested to send delegates. Distinguished and eloquent speakers have accepted invitations to be present.

HOW FAR HAVE WE BEEN?

By E. C. Durham.

How far have we been,
O children of men,
Since the ringing of the bells last year?
How much did we live,
How much did we give,
'Midst distress, disaster, and tear?

Oh, the months have gone,
And the days have flown,
But the passing of time is not life:
The question for me,
As well as for thee,
Is, How have I treated my wife,
My daughter, my son,
My parents—each one—
And my friend and foe in the strife?

Again you are here—
Another New Year!
Where'foundest thou me today?
Where now is my track?
Is it forward, or back,
From where it was found that day?
Am I growing, or shrinking?
Am I blank, or thinking?
Is it right—what I do and say?
What better am I
As onward I fly
On the wings of Destiny's way?

MRS. EDGAR LEE HART

On Thursday, December 28, an hour before midnight, Mrs. Addie McKinne Hart, wife of Edgar Lee Hart, of this city, was called away from this world to another. For ten days she had been ill of influenza-pneumonia, and from the first it had been apparent to physicians and to every one that if she lived she had a terrific battle to fight. She fought it bravely and patiently, and lost. Funeral services were held next day in Grace church, of which she was a member, and on Saturday morning in First church, Rocky Mount, in which city her body was laid away to rest under many, many flowers. Her pastor, Rev. J. M. Daniel, Rev. A. L. Ormond, Rev. H. M. North and Rev. F. S. Love took part in the services. Left to mourn are her husband, whose devotion to her has been matched only by hers to him, her mother, Mrs. D. E. McKinne, and three brothers, Frank B., David F. and Malcolm, all of Louisburg, and a host of friends in this city and state, the South, and indeed the whole country.

In her passing we have sustained a loss which cannot be measured or understood. Her life was so many-sided, her service so varied and valuable, her worth to good causes so inestimable, that it is difficult to determine what to say—one cannot say all. Caught in the grip of a disease in the face of which medical science confesses itself to be largely helpless, she was cut off in the prime and glory of her womanhood; and we are left with a sorrow that is soothed only through faith and by the memory of a Christian life, and with the question to which there is no answer, save the answer that is God.

Her city knew her as one who never grew tired, and who never stinted in service. Her happiness seemed to be most complete when she was engaged in some ministry to those who had need. Civic causes, benevolent enterprises, such as the Near East, or Russian, or Chinese Relief, invariably called on her for leadership and help, and invariably had ready full and effective response. The last thing she did before being prostrated by illness was to help in the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals.

Her church knew her as one who gave her first and best to the cause of Christ. As a conference officer in the Woman's Missionary Society, as president or other officer in the local auxiliary, her wide information upon missionary subjects and upon general church affairs, the zeal with which she gave herself to whatever service she might be called on for, and the reverence and devotion with which her work was done, marked her as a servant of Christ rarely equaled. The ministry of her church found in her a loyal supporter and an invaluable friend, as those who have been pastor to her, as well as many others, can testify. She and her husband have made their delightful home in this city a sort of haven for these servants of the Lord; and scattered throughout the whole church are those who have known the charm and Christian hospitality of "Heartsease" at Lake Junaluska.

Last summer she and Captain Hart spent several months abroad, visiting England, Spain, France, Italy, Constantinople, Syria, Egypt, the Holy Land, and Oberammergau. Of the first few days of this voyage she said: "There were hundreds of passengers on the boat. Among them were the frivolous and the pleasure-seekers, and others for study and instruction. As the old saying goes, 'Birds of a feather will flock together.' I soon found myself among the preachers, and the teachers, and the students, who came to learn more about our Lord and the land in which He lived." In a letter written while abroad she said, "I felt that I wanted to say a special good-bye at the last meeting (of the missionary society) I attended, but decided I would not. One thing I wanted to say was that, whatever might come to me, I should always look upon the years that I had tried to serve Grace auxiliary as the happiest years of my life. And I realize that whatever service I have rendered has been a hundred fold more benefit to me than to anyone else." After her return she dwelt much in conversation on three things: The orphanages of the Near East Relief, the Holy Land, and the Passion Play. Her last public service for her church was an address on a Wednesday night, telling the story of her trip, with special emphasis on these things. And throughout the last two or three days of her life, when she was racked with pain, she talked much of the holy places and scenes in Palestine, of the Cross at Oberammergau, and of the Cross at Lake Junaluska, saying of this last, that it ought to be lighted all the time. By a strange fitness and harmony of intuition, many of those who sent flowers for her grave had them wrought into the form of a cross, the symbol of the sacrifice of the Lord whom having not seen she loved, and of the faith which triumphs over death.

Two years ago at a watch night service she unintentionally gave to those who heard her words which may justly be taken as the keynote of her life. After having outlined some of the plans of the missionary society, of which she was then president, for the coming year she said, "Above everything else we may do, we want to keep the Christ before us; and whatever we may do, to do it in His name."

NEW CLUB AT WEST MARKET

A men's club was organized last Monday night at West Market Street church, Greensboro, with Dr. J. W. Wheeler, president, A. C. Davis, vice president, and G. G. Dickson, secretary. The roll of charter members numbered 93. At a future meeting subject to the call of the officers the organization will be perfected by the selection of a name, the adoption of a constitution, the election of additional officers and other minor matters like the time of meeting, etc. Before the election of officers, Rev. J. H. Barnhardt, the pastor of the church, had charge of the meeting and among other things presented the speaker of the evening, Rev. W. A. Jenkins, pastor of Central church, Concord, N. C. Brother Jenkins delivered a splendid address on Brotherhood and Fellowship. He seemed to know just what ought to be said upon such an occasion, and said it in a manly, straightforward way that appealed strongly to the 115 men who had just finished a good supper provided by the Susanna Wesley class of West Market Street church. The presence of Mr. Jenkins added greatly to the occasion and the club will doubtless call upon him at some future time for additional service of the sort that he is so capable of rendering when a bunch of men are in need of an interesting and timely speaker. The club gives promise of becoming a big asset to that congregation under the leadership of Dr. Wheeler.

SHALL WE CLINCH THE NAILS?

The prohibition amendment was adopted when and because the moral Christian sentiment of the nation demanded with practically united voice the abolition of the liquor traffic as the enemy of the entire social order—the school, the church, the home, the state. Pulpit and press set forth the awful facts in the indictment, the argument was unanswerable, conviction followed, and the traffic was branded as an outlaw.

Three years have passed. The leopard has changed his name—from saloon to bootlegger—but not his spots. Its defenders put indulgence of sensual appetite and lust for gain above the welfare of society, including its child life. The claim that prohibition cannot be enforced has been changing to the boastful threat, "Prohibition shall not be enforced." The traffic, though outlawed, is defiant, aggressive, desperate, murderous. Its lawlessness is persistently and successfully encouraged by newspapers like the New York World and the Baltimore Sun; by state and federal officials including judges on the bench, who have been stimulatingly lenient, even quiescent in their attitude toward the enforcement of the prohibition law; and by that selfish element of society, which feels no responsibility for the welfare of others, and which does not know the meaning of St. Paul's appeal, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak and not to please ourselves."

But these are the same old enemies: hostile, abusive newspapers, indifferent, hostile or corrupt officials, "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God" and fellowman. We fought these enemies in other days openly, fearlessly, and persistently, and we won! What is the difference today? The difference is not in our enemies, it is in ourselves. We have stopped aggressive fighting, if indeed we are not in some places on the defensive. We are now faced squarely with the question:

SHALL WE CLINCH THE NAILS? Shall we determine right now that the prohibition law shall be effectively enforced, and that there shall be an end to this period of toleration of the sensual, the covetous, and the lawless? The moral Christian sentiment of the nation as organized in the Christian church can do this, and no other power in the nation can do it. We must recognize squarely that the same responsibility is upon the church for the effective enforcement of the prohibition law that was upon us for the passage of the law. Christian leaders and workers who banded themselves together to overthrow the saloon and its evils must band together against the bootleggers and their allies. The appeals for the protection of the home, the safety of child life, and of society in general, against the "blind tiger" must be made with the same earnest persistence as was formerly used in the struggle with the saloon. And last, but by no means least, the responsibility of Christian citizens—men and women—for the election of trustworthy, oath-keeping state and national government officials must be emphasized and re-emphasized.

The President of the United States declared in his recent message to Congress that the administration pledges itself to the enforcement of the prohibition law. If the pulpit, the Sunday schools, the Epworth Leagues, the conferences and assemblies of the Christian church will equal their record of efficiency and earnestness of the pre-prohibition days, we will again win a great victory for the good of the nation and of the world.

Let us all throw ourselves wholeheartedly, aggressively, persistently behind the President and give the "bootlegger," the "booze-lover," the "wet" newspaper and the "wet" officials to understand that the moral Christian sentiment of the nation which demanded the abolition of the legalized liquor traffic is now demanding just as positively the abolition of the outlaw traffic.

Shall we clinch our nails now?

James Cannon,

Chm. Com. on Temperance and Social Service.

CARD FROM REV. S. T. BARBER

If any of the brethren feel that they will want me in meetings at any time this year, whether early or later or whether they can name the date just now or not, I shall be glad to hear from them at once. I must keep busy some way. I think on the whole my meetings were successful last year. I held twenty-five meetings and have a large number of letters complimenting the work done.

My work is not sensational, but I believe it sound and lasting. Many of the brethren have said they never had better help. If any one can use me right away, please call on me. But if you want your meeting later still, write me that you want me to reserve a date for you. Brethren, this work was given me without my request for it and my success depends upon the calls I get and the meetings I may be able to hold. I believe the Lord will give us success in any place where we may be called. Some men seem to fear the matter of finance. Don't worry about that. Just give me a chance to hold the meeting and let the collection take care of itself. I promise not to hurt you there.

Yours for the Master, S. T. Barber.

NOTICE OF BOARD MEETINGS

At a recent meeting of the College of Bishops in New Orleans, I was requested by the bishops to see representatives of the various general boards and arrange dates for their several meetings and for the spring meeting of the College of Bishops. The several dates have been arranged as follows:

Board of Education, Nashville, April 11-12.

Sunday School Board, Nashville, April 18-19-20.

Centenary Commission, Nashville, April 20.

Board of Finance, St. Louis, April 23-24.

Board of Church Extension, Louisville, April 25-26.

College of Bishops, Nashville, April 27-28-29-30.

Board of Missions, Nashville, May 1-2-3-4.

At the 11 o'clock hour last Sunday at First church, Salisbury, Mrs. J. B. Ross, lovingly remembered by this congregation as "Miss Grace" McCubbins, spoke on the customs and people of Korea. Mrs. Ross has been in Korea for five years, having gone there originally as a special medical missionary from First church. She had many interesting things to say about the Koreans and their customs and conditions and she told the story in an interesting way.

"Books are masters who instruct without rods or ferules, without words or anger, without bread or money. If you approach them they are not asleep; if you seek them, they do not hide; if you blunder, they do not scold; if you are ignorant, they do not laugh at you."—Richard LeBury.

WESTVIEW CHARGE GOOD TO PASTOR

On Saturday night before Christmas Marvin church came with a great pounding. Those that did not come sent. The pounding included abundance of fruits, meats, chickens, sugar, milk, butter, cakes.

Westview church warmed us with a handsome motor robe. Westview, Marvin, Bethel and Houk's Sunday schools provided treats for the pastor and his family.

On Christmas day Brother W. B. Morrison and Sister Morrison, of Fair Grove, brought in a box of good things. For all the above and for other gifts the pastor and family are thankful.

Another thing to be grateful for is a good sized increase in salary.

Last year was a good year spiritually and materially. May this be better.
J. R. Walker.

RECEPTION IN CHADBOURN

Complimentary to Rev. B. O. Merritt and his fair young bride, the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the Chadbourn Methodist church, gave a gorgeous reception just prior to the Christmas season.

Mrs. W. F. Smith, who is known for her gracious hospitality, offered her lovely new home for the reception and the doors were thrown wide open in cheerful welcome to the many invited guests. The spacious lower floor in all its beauty and freshness was set aglow with the effective grouping of electric lights, the soft glow of candles, the broad blaze from the quaint fireplace and the scene presented was one of festal splendor.

Mrs. Paul Mashburn, dressed in pink Georgette crepe, received all guests at the door and with her usual grace and dignity passed them on to the receiving line which was headed by Mrs. W. F. Smith, hostess, beautifully attired in Spanish lace over satin. Next stood Mr. and Mrs. Merritt—the winsome little bride was charming in a combination of blue and black satin with draperies of black lace. Others in the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Koonce and Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Willis.

Miss Annie Hall, gowned in pink silk, and Miss Gretchel Harpe in blue Georgette crepe presided over the punch bowl which stood under a veritable bower of ferns and flowers.

Miss Artemicia Smith and Miss Jessie Inman, two of Chadbourn's most beloved and influential Epworth League workers, from their realm of roses and ferns dispensed the most delicious ice cream and cake to the throngs as they floated by.

Excellent music added to the cheer and the beautiful songs rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Strole and Mrs. Guy Bailey will long be remembered.

The Methodists were too unselfish to enjoy these pleasures alone, so invitations were issued to all members of all churches in the town to share the joys with them, and for the two hours Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians mingled in delightful pleasure and showered upon the young bride and groom the best of wishes and congratulations.

ANSONVILLE DOES WELL

May I say through the Advocate that Ansonville Methodists are still on the map. Yesterday the offering for the Children's Home was the largest in the history of the school, one young people's class alone paying seven dollars. We have a most excellent superintendent, Rev. O. E. Ross, and a good set of teachers. The Sunday school enrollment is much larger than the church membership.

Here yesterday I also secured on our conference collections $136. With grateful hearts we hope to be able to be of larger service in the Master's cause.
D. S. Richardson, Pastor.

CATAWBA

The people of Catawba charge are real Methodists, because they are generous and have proven the same by action since the last annual conference. The stewards at the first quarterly conference increased the pastor's salary $300, and there has been a continuous pounding from the time we were returned to this charge by the bishop until now. This has consisted of everything that is good for a Methodist preacher and family, both to eat and wear.

We have been somewhat handicapped since conference by the "influenza." Each of our congregations have been stricken by it and two have had to discontinue services for some time, but the Lord has been wonderfully good to us—we have not lost a single member by death. The churches will resume their regular schedule of worship Sunday.

We are in early spring going to enlarge two of our churches. There is much lumber on the ground at Hopewell at this time to enlarge and build Sunday school rooms to make room for the growing school. We have four of the best superintendents to be found in the country. They are Messrs. Oscar Sherrill, A. J. Cloninger, G. A. Fisher and Alvia Martin.

The congregation at Catawba is raising funds to enlarge and build Sunday school class rooms which is needed badly. This work will be done in the early spring, just after the district conference, which we are planning to have with us in the early part of the year.

We are planning and praying that many things may come to pass on this work during the year. We ask that you pray for us.

A. C. Kennedy, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

Whereas our beloved brother, Rev. G. T. Adams, who for four years as pastor of the St. Paul Methodist church has, according to the practice of the church to which he belongs, been appointed to another field to which he is now removed, we, the members of the Ministerial Association of Goldsboro, N. C., do hereby unanimously bear tribute to the good work accomplished and the fine influence exerted by our beloved brother during his stay in our midst. Both in and out of the pulpit Brother Adams was strong and efficient. His ability to know and attract people is far above the ordinary. In spite of the heavy labor necessary in a very large and growing congregation, Brother Adams knew almost everybody in town and was always ready to respond to a call of distress and to take an active part in the inter-denominational and public affairs. His brethren of the ministry learned to appreciate very highly his kindly nature, his attractive personality, and his sympathetic understanding of their problems.

The ministerial association does further extend to him its best wishes and prayers for his further success in his new work and also prays that he may be preserved in health and strength for many years to labor in the vineyard.

J. W. Potter, President.
Ira L. Jones, Secretary.

WEST DURHAM HEARD FROM ONCE MORE

It was our preference to come back here for the third year. Our people seem even gladder to have us than last year, judging from every token at our command. They say so and then they prove it with the "stuff." On Thanksgiving eve Brother Hibberd's class gave us the most severe pounding we have ever had from a single class. They came about forty strong, with their songs and prayers and gifts and fed our souls, leaving us to feed our bodies on the good things left. We had not entirely recovered when last night headed by some members of the board of stewards, gave us a complete surprise in the way of a general good old fashioned pounding. They took full possession for a few minutes, and then left us to again revel in the delight of this mountain top experience, and repeat again in our hearts what we learned some time ago, "that it is not such a bad thing to be a preacher after all." Many thanks to all these friends for all their kindness and gifts.

The outlook for our church this year is hopeful. We are laying some plans and starting a fund looking to the erection of a modern departmentalized Sunday school building, which will be a part of the new church plant.

We would like for the editor of our good church paper to come down to see us soon at West Durham. Come to the district conference to be held in our church.
J. W. Bradley, P. C.

WEAVERVILLE CIRCUIT

I have begun my second year on this charge. The past year was one of constructive work with very encouraging results. The salary for the pastor is at least two hundred dollars above what it was a year ago. The parsonage has been remodeled and is comfortable to live in. It has been lighted by electricity, new bathroom, and complete plumbing furnishings have been installed; also Majestic range, giving cold and hot water, etc.

We have been profusely pounded by Barnardsville, Pleasant Grove and Flint Hill. Numerous presents have been given us from Salem and Alexander's Chapel. In fact, all the churches have shown appreciation of us in substantial acts of kindness both by purse and presents.

We have held thirty days in protracted meetings, Rev. Pearley E. Parker helping us. Brother Parker is a complete fit both in and out of the pulpit. He is congenial, adaptable, practical, likeable, spiritual, fruitful, and calculated to do good and build up. Our people are kind to us. We like them and they like us. Therefore we hope, mutually working together, to have a good and fruitful year.

Rev. H. C. Sprinkle, our new presiding elder, is entering on his work with the outlook favorable, and the pointers are all encouraging for good results.
A. J. Burrus.

YANCEYVILLE CIRCUIT

Christmas holidays are over once more and the regular routine again. As we look back over the past few days many pleasant remembrances come flocking into my mind. Space and time will prevent me from telling all that has happened to this preacher in the past few days.

I will begin at the climax for fear time, ink and paper might become exhausted before I reach the climax and the best be left untold. You will think me very materialistic, but that's all right. You would be, too, if you tasted sausage like I ate for breakfast this morning. That sausage came out of a great pounding.

The Romans were noted for their materialism, and especially for the high living kind of materialism. Julius Caesar never tasted such good sausage as the people make in Caswell county. On Christmas eve at Bethel church my automobile was parked. Some time

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

during the services, just before or just after, my automobile was filled with the best things in North Carolina. I know I am saying a whole lot when I say the best things in North Carolina, for that means the best things of the whole world, for North Carolina leads the whole world in good "eats." Yes, that was a good pounding; I never had a better. I never want a better, for it was as good a pounding as could be; and poundings are some of the best things of the world from a material viewpoint. My family join me in saying, "We thank you."

This is not all that happened in the last few days. A merchant turned me into his store and just simply told me to help myself. This happened over about Shady Grove church, but the merchant was not a member of the Methodist church. Quite a number of presents came from my Shady Grove people, and they told me that they were not through. I received quite a number of presents from different parts of my charge. I cannot tell all in this letter. I want to write about the best parsonage in the North Carolina conference, also one of the best country churches you have ever seen. I am beginning my fourth year on this charge. Some preacher will be turning his eyes toward Caswell soon. I can just say to that preacher, whoever he may be, when he comes to this charge he will find some of the best people the Lord ever made. I will not write any more now, but there is more to follow in a very few days.

PRAYER

O God, Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth, make us thy faithful messengers and ministers, that we may do the work that thou hast given us to do, not with eye service as men pleasers, but in singleness of heart, as becometh the children of the Highest. We pray for the emancipation of workers everywhere from the discordant service of mammon, and for the sacification of labor in every calling and handicraft, that to all things we do be done in righteousness, in truth, and in beauty, for the obedience and for human wealth in humble imitation of Him who is the Master Workman of us all and who some times was among us as one that serveth, thy Son our Saviour, Jesus Christ. Amen. —From "Service and Prayers for Church and Home," in Missionary Prayer and Meditation.

THE PASSING OF MRS. E. L. HART

Sorrow in the death of Mrs. Hart is conference wide. Wherever she was known she was admired for her ability, valued for her faithfulness to obligation, revered for her spirituality and consecration, and loved for her gracious charm of manner and her loyalty in friendship. In her many of us have lost a strong personal friend, our conference one of its most effective workers, and our church one of its most devoted members. We extend our heart deep sympathy to those loved ones she has left for a while, praying that they may find the comfort and courage to face life without her, that only the heavenly Father, whom she loved and served, can give.

TO EVERY MISSIONARY SOCIETY PRESIDENT

A new year is now beginning in the missionary society. You are a new president, whether or not you have ever served before; your officers are new; your membership is offering new prayers, giving new service and making new gifts. Let all be in keeping with the opportunity which the new year brings.

At the January meeting special emphasis must be laid upon these facts. Make it a season of reconsecration — the membership to prayer, service, and giving because it is the time for the pledges to be made. Let prayerful emphasis be put upon the stewardship feature by making a forceful presentation of the leaflet, "My Missionary Gift for 1923." Make the signing of the pledge cards a time of serious thought and earnest prayer. Do not slight the women who are absent from the January meeting by failing to see that they have an opportunity to make a pledge for the new year. The treasurer should select a committee who will personally interview the absentees and place a pledge card in the hands of every member of the society. Great care should be taken in following up these cards. Moreover, every new member gotten during the year should be asked to make a pledge.

Do not close the January meeting without giving time to the New Year resolutions. Let every woman present have an opportunity to voice her desire and purpose to perform a larger service through the missionary society. This feature of the program should be a very helpful and impressive one.

The closing months of 1922 have witnessed great activity on the part of the district secretaries in holding group meetings. It has been the privilege of the organization secretary to attend these meetings in two conferences, and she has been greatly encouraged by the attendance and enthusiasm manifest in these meetings. One district secretary writes that the immediate result of one of her meetings was a new society and one reorganized, and that both of these societies promised that during the last quarter all funds for the entire year would be paid in full.

The officers of the society often do not realize what encouragement they give the district secretary when they make their reports promptly. Let every society plan to do this throughout the year. One district secretary in Western North Carolina is rejoicing in a report from every one of her fifty-one auxiliaries for the third quarter of 1922. Let your society do its part in making your district secretary as happy as this one.

Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb,
Organization Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On November 17, 1922, God in His infinite wisdom called to her eternal home the soul of Mrs. D. L. Maury, one of our faithful members of the Methodist Missionary Society. Her going has broken long and happy association, and made a sad vacancy in the Anderson Auxiliary; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we bow in humble submission to the will of the Father, who cannot make a mistake, and commend the bereaved and broken hearts to His loving care, who alone can bind up and heal them.

Second, That in her passing this Missionary Society has lost a faithful member, though she was not present with us much on account of her feeble health. That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy and point them to the God that knoweth best.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes, a copy sent to the family, the North Carolina Christian Advocate and Our Missionary News.

Mrs. B. W. Thach,
Mrs. W. F. B. Sawyer,
Mrs. Linwood Hunter.

Hertford, Dec. 18, 1922.

WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICE

The Windsor auxiliary has just held a very interesting and successful week of prayer service.

The president, Mrs. Pattie Morris, conducted the service for the first afternoon. Each day following a different member of the society conducted it. Each day after the Week of Prayer program was rendered and collection taken the balance of the afternoon was devoted to the reading and discussion of the book for this quarter, "Women and Missions." In this way there were more of the members who read the book than before, and every one seemed to thoroughly enjoy it. The offerings for the week amounted to $16.20.

The annual box of fall and winter clothing for our girl at the orphanage was sent in November, amounting to $32.20.

We meet twice a month, one is the business, the other the devotional meeting.

The Windsor auxiliary, though small, has done good work this year, but when we consider the many blessings that have been ours, we feel that we should do much more and better work for the Lord and His kingdom.

Mrs. Bessie Dunston, Cor. Sec.

NEW OFFICERS

The Nashville Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society elected the following officers for the term of 1923 as follows:

President—Mrs. N. B. Dozier.
Vice President—Miss Louise Sills.
Secretary—Mrs. S. F. Austin.

Treasurer—Miss Sallie Benson.
Assistant Treasurer—Mrs. J. N. Sills.
Supt. Children's Work—Mrs. T. B. Dameron.
Supt. Y. P. Work—Mrs. Futrell.
Asst. Supt. Y. P. Work—Mrs. R. C. Calton.
Supt. Social Work—Mrs. J. L. Robertson.
Asst. Supt. Social Work—Mrs. E. S. Paddison.
Supt. Study and Publicity—Miss Leda Carter.
Chm. Local Work—Mrs. J. T. Strickland.
Agent for Voice—Mrs. Alice Burton.
Mrs. F. M. Lane, Cor. Sec.

A CALL TO PRAYER

A day of prayer for missions is called by the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America and the Council of Women for Home Missions for February 16, 1923. We urge every auxiliary to observe this day. It will broaden your vision and your sympathies as you unite with the women of other denominations in this time of intercession. Literature may be secured by ordering from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT LITERATURE

Programs—Two leaflets are allowed to each auxiliary free. Whenever the auxiliaries are divided into circles and these circles conduct separate programs, one leaflet is allowed for each circle. Extra leaflets, 5 cents.

Yearbooks—One year book is sent to each auxiliary free. Extra copies may be secured by addressing Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn. Price: Adult, 10 cents each; Young People and Juniors, 6 cents each.

Picture Sheets—A beautiful picture sheet representing our Mexican work this side of the border, for use in the February program, may be secured for 20 cents.

Handbooks—The new Adult "Handbook" will come from the press in a few days. One copy free to each auxiliary. Extra copies, 5 cents.

Mission Study Manual—A new "Mission Study Manual," telling how to organize and conduct a class. Price, 10 cents. Order from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

Etylus Photographus—One of our conference presidents says concerning it: "Stylus Photographus mailed to me. When the package came I opened and began to read it standing. I read five chapters before I realized I was still standing. It is so unique, attractive and instructive. Every woman of every missionary society should have a copy."

When God and Man Meet—The MacDonell Lectures, delivered by Dr. W. J. Young at the Scarritt Bible and Training School. This book possesses a fine devotional value, one that will stir your thought concerning your own relationship to God. Order from the Scarritt Bible and Training School, Kansas City, Mo. Price $1.50.

Western North Carolina Conference

A PLEA

Just let men come and linger at thy feet,
O loving Saviour, for a little while;
And as I linger there speak peace
Unto my anxious heart.
The way is dark and shadows fall,
I sometimes lose my way,
Then hold me closer, Saviour,
And let me rest awhile;
Or, if Thou bidst me onward move,
Go with me, whereso'er Thou wilt.
Lest I should wander, leave me not,
And as I forward press, o'er vale or hill,
Or rugged mountain side,
O let me keep mine eyes forever fixed on Thee,

And lead me on.
Be Thou my beacon light,
And guide my doubtful steps Into Eternity.

—Mrs. E. M. Anderson.

Our mission is part of the work of Jesus Christ. Christ cannot save the world unless you and I help him. We shall never see the world evangelized while we spend twenty times as much on ourselves as on missions. It is just as incumbent on us to labor to earn for giving on six days as to rest on the seventh day. You cannot eliminate the spirit of giving without eliminating Christianity itself. It is a crime for the head of the family to do all the giving. It is part of each person's worship and life. Every two dollars wasted by a Christian means that somewhere in this world some one goes unreached. Self-sacrifice is the first law of grace. Before every purchase we need to ask: "Is this the thing for a person to buy who is living for the evangelization of the world?"—J. Campbell White.

WHY ORGANIZE A YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY?

It always gives us pleasure to chronicle the organization of a new missionary society and especially if that society is composed of the young people of our churches, for we fully realize the necessity and importance of enlisting the young men and women of our churches in Christian service.

We should have a larger number of Y. P. organizations in the Western North Carolina conference and to that end we must work during 1923. The future work of our missionary society depends upon these young people, and if we neglect their missionary training our work in the future will not be so strong and progressive as it is at the present. We urge the co-operation of all district secretaries, local superintendents of Y. P. work and ask that they put forth a special effort along this line during this new year.

Read the following answers to the above question and see the vital reasons for increased efforts in the interest of our boys and girls.

1. The church needs a world vision if there is ever to come a world redemption. This vision can best be grasped by the young people of the church.

2. The young people need for this day a sense of world comradeship; only through united study can the common interests and desires of the young life of the world be realized, thereby deepening the sense of a common brotherhood.

3. The responsibility for financing certain fields is put upon the young people of the church, and it is only through an organized effort that this obligation can be met.

4. The ranks of the missionary forces at the home base must soon be filled by the young people, and they should be trained for service.

5. The call for missionaries is louder than ever before, and unless the young people hear of the needs of the world, they cannot hear this call.

6. The command "Go ye into all the world" is to the young people of our day especially.

North Carolina Conference

WILMINGTON, FEBRUARY 11-17

The week of February 11-17 has been definitely agreed upon as the time for a great Standard Training School for the Sunday school workers of Wilmington and vicinity. It will be a co-operative school, Methodists and Presbyterians combining forces and working together for the biggest and best school ever held in New Hanover.

The plan is to offer seven courses: specialization courses in the Beginner, Primary, Junior, and Intermediate-Senior departments, a course in Principles of Teaching and a Bible course for teachers above the Senior department, and a course in the Organization and Administration of the Sunday school for superintendents, pastors, and other officers and assistants. The faculty personnel has not been quite definitely determined as yet, but some of the leading Sunday school workers of the two denominations will do the teaching.

RALEIGH SCHOOL IS NEXT

Our next Standard Training School will be held in Raleigh January 28-February 4, at which time it is expected Sunday school officers and teachers and prospective workers from a large portion of the Raleigh district will come together each evening and devote a definite amount of time and energy to a careful study of principles underlying successful Sunday school work and practical problems of Sunday school management. The date: January 28-February 4; the place, Edenton Street church. Let's be there!

READ THE NEW DISCIPLINE

The last General Conference re-wrote Chapter XII of the Discipline, Sunday school legislation, in its entirety. Much of the old legislation has been reorganized and restated, and a considerable amount of new legislation has been introduced. The mission of the Sunday school, its organization, and the relation and duties of the boards, presiding elders, pastors, superintendents, and other officers to it, are clearly state, and it will be found quite instructive and helpful to study the chapter as a whole carefully.

SOME INTERESTING "SHALLS"

It is not our purpose to give a resume of the Sunday school legislation as contained in the new Discipline nor to call attention necessarily to the more important sections of it, for it is all important. It is the law of our church as touching the Sunday school. We call attention simply to a few interesting "shalls":

P. 380. The (Sunday School) Board is authorized, with the consent of the conference, to employ an executive secretary, who shall be the conference superintendent of Sunday school work. (Thus the name of the executive secretary is changed from "field secretary" to "conference superintendent of Sunday school work").

P. 385. A Sunday school shall be organized in every congregation where ten persons can be assembled for that purpose, and mission Sunday schools shall be organized wherever practicable.

P. 387. The quarterly conference of each circuit and station shall be a board of managers, having charge of all Sunday schools within its bounds. . . . It shall be the duty of the quarterly conference to keep itself informed as to the condition and needs of the Sunday schools under its care, and to see that they are furnished with all necessary equipment.

P. 389. Each Sunday school shall have a Workers' Council, which shall be composed of the pastor and general and departmental officers and the teachers of the school.

P. 390. It shall be the duty of the superintendent to see that the Sunday school is organized according to the standards established by the General Sunday School Board.

For a complete statement of the duties of the superintendent and other officers, read that section relating to the local school, which may be had free upon application to L. L. Gobbel, Durham, N. C.

"STANDARDS ESTABLISHED"

Standards of organization and operation of Methodist Sunday schools have been carefully worked out by the General Sunday School Board. These standards are called Programs of Work, there being a Program of Work for the school of the one-room type, one for the school of the class-room type, and one for the thoroughly departmental Sunday school. We are giving special attention this year to the promotion of these standards. Already quite a number of superintendents and pastors have secured copies of them. Paragraph 390 of the Discipline makes it the duty of the superintendent "to see that the Sunday school is organized according to the standards established by the General Sunday School Board." Mr. Superintendent, if your school does not already have this Program of Work, write to Conference Superintendent of Sunday School Work, Durham, N. C., today for it.

EVERYMAN'S BIBLE CLASS

Everyman's Bible class of Rosemary Sunday school made a record last year of which it might well be proud. With an enrollment of 38, it had an average attendance of 26 and made offerings totalling $724.35. L. S. Connor is president, George Gurly, vice president, W. H. Marks, secretary, and F. C. Hege, teacher.

The Young Men's class of the same Sunday school is also a live one and is doing good work. For the past year the enrollment was 38 and the average attendance 27. C. W. Davis is teacher and R. D. Jenkins, assistant.

A PROGRAM OF EVANGELISM

The one supreme aim of every Sunday school should be to lead each pupil to a knowledge of God's will and a definite acceptance of Jesus Christ as personal Saviour and Lord and to develop Christian character that is expressed through worship, right living, and efficient service. To this end all the activities of the Sunday school should always be directed.

Experience has shown, however, that it is very much worth while to set apart seasons for special evangelistic effort, and the Sunday school leaders of our church have designated the first three months of this new year for this purpose, the campaign to be carefully planned, under the direction of the pastor, and to culminate on Easter Sunday. The General Sunday School Board has suggested a general plan, which appears in the December Sunday School Magazine.

The Sunday schools of the North Carolina conference made a splendid record last year, 3,948 pupils joining the church. With the proper effort perhaps twice that number might be won definitely to the church this year. Let's study the plans suggested, modify them, if necessary, to fit your local situation, and set ourselves earnestly about this supremely important business.

KEEP THE FIRES BURNING

Is your Sunday school building comfortably heated? Is the fire built well in advance of the opening hour? These are important questions. They should be answered in the affirmative by every one of the 730 Sunday schools in the conference. Let's not go into winter quarters.

And, then, how about your spiritual fires? Let's keep them aglow, to the end that we may get real joy out of our work and that this year may be the most fruitful of all.

Western North Carolina Conference

LET'S KEEP IT UP

Three years ago it was stated in these columns that none of us would be satisfied till there was at least as big a Sunday school enrollment as our church membership. Then the difference was in round numbers 18,000. There are now in our conference 125,746 church members and 121,772 Sunday school pupils, a difference of 3,974. This difference must be wiped out by the time we meet at Winston-Salem next October. "A Sunday school scholar for each church member" has been our slogan. If we keep on our toes the goal will be reached. Sunday school workers, let's keep on growing!

AN INDEX

We should always remember that a Sunday school is a school. Rub that in your cranium and every time it tries to get out push it right back. A Sunday school is a school. Folks who go to school should study and try to learn. Might do some rubbing on that too. A school should have something to study. Our Methodist Sunday schools have mighty fine literature, about the best made. See that it is not wasted. Also see that your school gets enough. One of the best ways to test the growth of real value in our schools is to watch the purchases for literature. Three years ago our schools in the Western North Carolina conference spent $37,957 for supplies. The next year we spent $47,494 for materials and this last year our purchases went to $52,596. This is an index into what is going on in the inside.

DO YOU KNOW?

Do you know that there is a good Sunday school story paper printed for our Methodist boys and girls under ten years of age? It is called "Boys and Girls" and is published weekly.

Do you know that there is a weekly story paper for boys between ten and seventeen years of age? It is called the "Haversack."

Do you know that there is a story paper published for girls between ten and seventeen years of age? It is called "The Torchbearer" and comes weekly.

Do you know that "The Young People" is a fine weekly for those over seventeen who want something worth while to read? "If you know these things happy are you if you do them." Write Lamar and Barton, Publishers, Nashville, Tenn., or Richmond, Va.

IT IS SET UP

During the holidays there was a meeting held at Gastonia with the Methodist and Presbyterian pastors and superintendents for discussing the advisability of holding in the near future a Co-operative Standard Training School for the Sunday school workers of the two denominations. The idea was pleasing and beginning Sunday afternoon, March 18, and closing the following Friday night the Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school workers of Gastonia and vicinity will study side by side for the betterment of their Sunday schools. Six courses will be offered and a strong faculty will be secured. Of course all our Methodist leaders are solidly behind this movement. You will hear more about the Gastonia Co-operative School.

DENTON CIRCUIT

December 31st, the fifty-third Sunday in 1922, was spent with Rev. J. N. Randall, the hustling young pastor of the Denton circuit, and his Sunday school workers in an all-day Sunday school institute. The first part of the program consisted of a model Sunday school conducted by your humble servant. At the eleven o'clock hour Miss Jenkins and the conference superintendent spoke and then came dinner. In the afternoon the discussions centered around the Sunday school "Program of Work" and was heartily entered into. Four of the six schools of the circuit were well represented. Pastor Randall is serving his second year on the Denton charge, and for that matter his second year in the ministry, and he is bringing things to pass. The people are rallying to his leadership and are doing more than ever before, and doing it more easily. Randall is one of those courageous fellows who went to school after he got married. He is not yet through his schooling and in a year or two will drop out to learn some more. A loyal wife and two fine little girls make his home happy. Randall and the Denton circuit are getting up a trot on the road to progress.

HOME SWEET HOME

My good home folks at Lexington sometimes get mighty tired of me for agitating so many things. They think there are wheels in my head. But with the leadership of Supt. George Hackney and "Parson" Hutchins things are shaping up finely. Our town's slogan, "Lexington leads," is applying to our Sunday school work right along. One of the latest successes is the holding of regular Workers' Council meetings. In our last one the following decisions were arrived at:

That all five of the departments would begin school promptly at 9:45 each Sunday morning and close at least five minutes before preaching time.

That a Workers' Council would continue to be held monthly with pre-arranged programs.

That official recognition would be given each teacher who provided for his class each Sunday during the coming year.

That official recognition would be given every pupil who came to school every Sunday during the year.

That suitable song books would be purchased for the Young People's and Adult department, the others having been supplied.

That our pastor, Rev. W. L. Hutchins, would conduct a training class each Wednesday evening at the prayer meeting hour, the text to be used being "The Training in the Devotional Life."

That the school strive as early as possible to reach type "B" of the "Program of Work."

LEADERS AND LAGGERS

In the following tables are given the church membership, Sunday school enrollment and Sunday school enrollment percentage on church membership of each charge in the North Wilkesboro and Salisbury districts. If you will carefully note these figures you can, in a measure, tell where the best work is going on. Church membership first, Sunday school enrollment second, percentage third.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

Rev. Daniel Lane, Stantonsburg, N. C.
G. C. Chalker, 1119 Realty Building,
Charlotte, N. C.

Western North Carolina Conference

GREENSBORO DISTRICT NEWS

The January meeting of the Greensboro District Union will be held at West Market Street church Thursday night, January 11th. Owing to the Efficiency Institute, the December meeting was postponed and it is requested that we have a large attendance at the January meeting.

We are glad to report Bro. E. P. Bilups is recovering nicely from an operation recently performed at Wesley Long Hospital. We are also pleased to report that our district secretary, Mr. Dan B. Fields, is able to be out again. He had the misfortune to be sick during the institute.

PROXIMITY LEAGUE

Here is a league that is and will continue to do things. The only thing that is holding them back is the fact that they have not yet caught the union spirit. We are hoping they will attend the next meeting and know that they will never miss another.

Their president, Mr. W. J. Brown, is a real live wire and they are doing a great work. On Sunday before Christmas they went to the Masonic and Eastern Star Home west of the city and sang carols for the old folks there and then back to Proximity to sing for the sick and aged. This is the true social service spirit.

RAMSEUR AND FRANKLINVILLE

It was a real pleasure to have the privilege of accompanying Miss Bradley, Miss Mary Anderson and our district secretary, Mr. Grady Dawson, to the churches and leagues of Ramseur and Franklinville. Miss Bradley had charge of the morning service at Ramseur and her inspiring talk was called a real sermon by all the congregation. League time found Miss Bradley and Mr. Dawson with the Franklinville League and they report a large crowd and all interested in the league.

Miss Anderson and myself met with the Ramseur League. They have a large membership and growing and trying (that is what counts), and under the efficient leadership of Mrs. J. P. Cox you may look out for them. It was just like being at home, for it was at this church that I received my first league training. D. L. Webster.

ATTENTION, TREASURERS

The local treasurers of the Western North Carolina Conference will please take notice that our conference treasurer, Mr. P. L. Plyler, has changed his address to P. O. Box 705, Hickory, N. C. Why not give him a welcome to Hickory with a growing stream of checks and money orders for our "African Special" and conference dues?

MR. EVANS IN CUBA

For several weeks past Mr. Garfield, central office superintendent in charge of missions, has been in Cuba in the interest of the Epworth League work there and those of us fortunate enough to be on his mailing list have received some interesting accounts of the things he has found there. He is giving us some vivid pictures of conditions that should challenge the youth of the Southern Methodist church. There are bright spots in his reports, however, for to quote from a recent letter written from Santiago, "A revival meeting is in progress here conducted by the pastor and one of our native preachers. There have been a number of responses to become candidates for membership. The youth of Cuba are ready for the gospel."

ATTENTION, DISTRICT SECRETARIES

You and your assistant district secretary should receive report blanks from the central office early in January, so that you will be able to send in your reports before January 15th. Let's have a report from every secretary on time this quarter.

The district secretary should report (1) our conference president, Rev. W. W. Edwards, Y. M. C. A., Asheville, N. C. (2) Rev. E. O. Harbin, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. (3) Keep one on file. Notice that the district secretaries do not now report to the conference junior and intermediate superintendent, but since we are so fortunate as to have a field secretary, report to her—Miss Grace Bradley, Cornelius, N. C.

The assistant district secretaries report to the following: (1) Rev. W. W. Edwards, Y. M. C. A., Asheville, N. C. (2) Miss Ida Mallory Cobb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. (3) Miss Gertrude Falls, Brevard, N. C. (4) Keep one on file. If the central office sends you five blanks send the other to Miss Grace Bradley, Cornelius, N. C. Notice that the assistant district secretaries do not report to the district secretaries, but in order that each may be informed regarding the work of the district they should let each other know what is being done.

Gertrude Falls,
Junior and Intermediate Supt.

ATTENTION, EPWORTH ERA AGENTS

"Epworth Era Day is the second Sunday in January. It should be made the occasion of securing subscriptions and renewals for our league organ. It will be appropriate for the Epworth Era agent to take charge of this service. The ideal is the Era in every Epworthian's home."—The Epworth League Handbook.

Our Epworth Era is one of the oldest and best of the publications of our church. Established in 1894 it has come down to us through years of service until 1923 finds the largest circulation in its history. Thus the Era will be better this year than ever before. Besides keeping us in touch with our Epworth League work at home and abroad and furnishing material for our programs it affords wholesome reading and is well worth while from a literary point of view. Most of all it broadens our view of the world, tells what other leaguers are doing, gives us a vision of the tasks to be done, inspires us to greater activities and helps us to lead a more consistent Christian life. Epworth Leaguers, do not depend on what you hear from the Era at the League meeting, but have your own copy and read it, every page, and when you have finished pass it on to someone else. Subscribe now while the drive is on—not only to help us to attain our goal but for your own benefit. Remember that a man is what he reads, so choose the best. Do your bit toward furthering the kingdom of Christ. Mildred Sherrill, Era Agent.

North Carolina Conference

ARE WE ALIVE TO THE "HOUR MOVEMENT" AS METHODISTS?

Let's all of us look for just a minute to a few comparative statistics of our Epworth League growth last year with that of the Baptist Young People's Union.

At the recent state convention held in Winston-Salem the Baptists reported 40,183 members and 1025 Young People's Unions with four hundred new unions organized in the state this year. We have not the statistics from the Western North Carolina conference for last year, but we think it is only a little ahead of our own conference, and we only reported seventy-four new chapters with a total increase of only 2742 members and a total membership of 9117. Apparently

IN CHRIST'S NAME WE MUST CARRY ON

Of the more than $35,000,000 of new money subscribed in the Centenary $15,811,000 has been collected. The remainder is now due and the need for a good share of this is desperate. At least $4,000,000 will be required to meet the obligations made for 1922 and to carry on the work up to the meeting of the Board in 1923.

The Bishops are leading in the movement to collect these pledges. In their recent message to the churches they say, "The Centenary, by the payments already made, has revitalized all of our missionary operations, and has thrilled every field with the possibility of immediate, marvellous achievement. Failure to consummate this movement will inevitably bring disaster to many of our most important enterprises and break the superb spirit that is now ascendant in all our work. Because of this fact the collection of these pledges is the outstanding immediate task before us."

During January, February, March and April the appeal will be made in all of our churches. There are 673 churches in 550 cities that have pledges $10,000 or more. An immediate appeal will be made to these stronger churches and following this appeal will be taken to the last church and the last subscriber.

The Bishops will be in the field constantly.

By action of the Board of Missions the Secretaries will give three-fourths of their time to the campaign.

Conference leaders, presiding elders, pastors and thousands of laymen will carry the appeal throughout our great connection.

The question is, Will Mr. Methodist see it through?

He certainly will.

It is a solemn pledge and his honor is involved.

The need today is even greater than when the pledge was made.

The Centenary has made possible for our Church the most radiant quadrennium in all its history, and its completion should be the pride of every Methodist.

From every foreign field we occupy our brethren and sisters are looking this way, and we will keep faith with them.

we are outclassed. Giving our Western conference blame for half (instead of equal credit) we are still outnumbered more than two to one throughout the state. Well, now, we've got to get busy.

A LETTER FROM MANTEO EPWORTH LEAGUE

We are heartily ashamed that we have let our Epworth League neglect keeping up with the conference league work. Our weekly programs and attendance are as good as they have ever been. There were 123 present at our last Sunday night devotional service.

We have sent in our thirty dollars mission pledge to the treasurer. We are determined to get that in early. Please send list of conference officers and their addresses. Also the location of the league conference for this year. We understand that it has not been placed. If this be true the Manteo Epworth League wishes to invite the conference to our church. Reasonable steamboat facilities can be arranged.

NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE LEAGUE OFFICERS

We publish again for the benefit of others as well as the Manteo League the list of officers with their addresses:

President—Rev. F. S. Love, Wilson.
Vice President—Rev. E. C. Few, Nashville.

I am publishing in this week's notes a very interesting letter from one of our former girls who is now at the Scarritt Bible College, Kansas City, Mo. It is a letter written to the officers and children during Thanksgiving week. It shows how much she appreciates the Methodist Orphanage. I trust that all of our friends will read it and learn for themselves just how much good the orphanage is doing for our fatherless children. I also want our church to know what we are getting back in pure lives and consecrated service as a result of our investment.

Thursday evening of Christmas week from three to five o'clock Hon. and Mrs. Josephus Daniels graciously entertained our officers and children at their new home, Wakestone. At the door the children and officers were cordially greeted by the distinguished host and hostess. Every possible attention and courtesy were shown us during the reception. Many exhibits which Mr. Daniels gathered while Secretary of the Navy were of great interest to the children. Abundance of ice cream and cake were served and the children returned to the Orphanage feeling that they had one of the most delightful times of their lives. Mr. Daniels is one of our trustees and takes a lively interest in our Home and in each child. We are delighted to have him our next door neighbor because we feel that we have in him a friend worth while.

Dearest Orphanage Family:

On this glad season of the year my thoughts in a peculiar sense drift back to you—yes, you, whom I love as no other. Often as I think of you I'm not able to control my thoughts, and I will, against my will, think of what I will be deprived of if I never get to spend another Thanksgiving, Christmas or Easter with you who are there now. You see after this coming summer I'm afraid I will not be able to be with you in person, to work with you, to live with you and have that interest in every individual because you'll be scattered, your interest will be in other things and your time so taken up that you'll never give Bettie a second thought. But listen, there will ever be a big spot in my heart for each of you and time nor distance will never be able to erase my memories of you. Now all of that sounds very pessimistic, but it is true that there is coming a time when, unless we strive very hard, we will be hurried with work and we'll lose sight of one another. Boys and girls, officers and faculty, let us guard against letting anything so take up our time that we will become careless in keeping up with one another.

Up through the years of my life there have been three outstanding periods. First, is the first twelve years of my life, which were spent with my earthly parents and sisters and brothers in a little home. They were joyous days, but God had something far better in life for us and to work His purposes—He broke up the little home tie.

Second, is the next six years which was with you in our Orphanage Home. They, too, were days and years of happiness but they were more than that—they were years of Christian training. I often wonder whether I would have ever become very much had I not been so fortunate as to have received that. Oh! I never cease to praise God for leading me there and I feel greatly indebted to the Orphanage for what it has meant to me and to hundreds of others. Tonight in our prayer service I rose to my feet and mentioned a few of the outstanding things for which I had thanked and praised God, and you may know I praised Him for the faith I have in His leadership and I praised Him that His guiding hand led me to the orphanage.

A third period in this life I'm living now. Here we glorify God and here we are thrown with God's elect—those who have received a vision of God, and those who have let the Holy Spirit come and abide in their hearts. Oh, it's a rare privilege to be here, and it's so wonderful to be called to service for God. It is a blessing for which I am very thankful, though unworthy and incapable to do His work, but we have His rich promises and He has promised to be with us and bless us and help us bear fruit for Him.

All of this may not be at all interesting to you, it is of a vital interest to me, and, brothers and sisters, please pray for this one of your number who has been called to give my life in service for Him. Never a day passes but what I think of you and pray for you and our Home. You who are now there have a responsibility, for it is up to you to keep high the noblest ideals and maintain the Christ-like spirit which should always dominate the heart-life of our home.

Tonight my thoughts turn to you individually, yes, from Troy on up to the biggest—Bill Fulford, for instance. I hope this has not been a joy killer, for it is just my thoughts and sentiments tonight. I love you all.

Bettie Bass.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

Christmas at the Children's Home is such a big affair I hardly know where to begin to tell about it. A friend who was spending Christmas with us, and who made the round with us Christmas morning to see the little folks find what Santa Claus had left, said that this was the first real Christmas that he had ever seen. A hundred and fifty children finding the tracks of Santa Claus on Christmas morning is something to see and remember.

There were six Christmas trees on the hill. The little girls had the largest—a tall cedar that reached from the floor to the ceiling.

The tree at the superintendent's cottage was a little pine that stood in a corner on a table in the dining room.

The two at the boys' building filled the alcoves back of the study halls. The boys helped to decorate theirs and took great pride in its beauty.

At the little girls' cottage the room was kept locked until Christmas morning, when the door was thrown open the procession of little girls headed by Polly and Dorothy marched in and the tree in all its lighted splendor and gay decorations burst into vision as a beautiful surprise. The tree filled the center of the room and their presents were piled in their little chairs in a circle around the wall. Doll carriages, doll beds, cradles, little tables and bundles too big for the chairs stood in front.

Dolls! I never saw so many dolls in all my life before—but I did not hear any little girl say that she had too many dolls. Such pretty dolls, too, there were, I almost felt like sitting down on the floor and playing dolls myself. Anyway there was a beautiful little doll dresser and a cradle that I would have loved to win.

And such a chatter as those little girls did set up! It sounded like a jay-bird chorus broke loose! They tore off red wrapping paper, pink, blue, white wrapping paper—whatever kind things happened to be wrapped in—broke seals, pulled off tags, and ribbons, and strings, and found sleepy-dolls, or china beauties, or lovely bisque twins, or dainty little babies in long clothes and caps, and tea sets and picture books, and cute little handkerchiefs and other things.

We would have enjoyed watching them play longer, but had to hurry on to start things at the boys' building.

The little boys had a Santa Claus to hand out their presents. The little fellows were seated in chairs in front of the Christmas tree. At first quiet reigned while the matron said a few words about how Santa Claus tried to bring equal gifts to all, but that some had relatives who had sent them extra gifts, but that all had enough nice gifts to make a happy Christmas.

As the packages were handed around, with the assistance of some little helpers, and the boys began to unwrap popguns, sweaters, footballs, bolo sticks, jumping-jacks, gloves, games, etc., the quiet was gradually submerged by lively comment.

A sled, gift to the crowd from Mr. Bradshaw, was handed out, and someone suggested three cheers for Mr. Bradshaw! And the boys shouted the cheers as though they liked both Mr. Bradshaw and the exercise of cheering.

One little fellow, I noticed, was slow in finding out how the repeating popgun that he received was fired. But presently he caught the trick, and directly the gun was popping at the rate of sixty pops a minute.

The boys of Tise building No. 1 also received a sled from Mr. Bradshaw.

When we left, the boys with the bolo sticks were out in front making energetic attempts to jump along without falling off.

Both the boys and girls got many nice gifts—as near as possible something they had expressed a wish for.

This was made possible through the kindness and forethought of the many who remember the children of The Home at Christmas. Some sent money for the purchase of presents, some sent gifts suggested and some sent gifts of their own selection.

Some weeks before Christmas, Margaret Wood asked the matrons to get from the children a list of the things that they wanted—a first and second and third choice. Many of the children chose useful things—sweaters, fountain pens, baseball shoes and work baskets. Margaret, by writing to those who had offered to help with the Christmas gifts, and to those who usually send gifts, and to those who might wish to do so, most of the list was provided for.

Tryon Street Sunday school, Charlotte, sent $83 which went far in getting the baseball shoes, sweaters and doll carriages.

Sunday before Christmas came—Christmas Eve—Margaret began to be anxious about a list of things that were still due. But in the afternoon a machine from High Point rolled up to the door, and it looked like old Santa had swapped his sled and reindeers for an automobile. The machine was piled full of the nicest things! Doll furniture that would turn any doll's head to own—dressers, beds, tables, and a lovely little wicker doll carriage. And thirty-eight pairs of bedroom slippers. High Point Sunday school had already sent $15 for some sweaters.

After the furniture was brought in Mr. Harmon, who is superintendent of the Wesley Memorial Sunday school, handed Mr. Wood a pasteboard box which contained a very unique gift to the children of The Home. Mr. Wood opened the box and took out thirty-three feet of white tape to which was pinned, with a Christmas tag to each, a long row of new dollar bills—$103.

I imagine the string of dollars was used as an interesting exhibit in their Sunday school that morning.

It looked interesting to us. A new dollar bill is pretty any time, with the eagle sitting in the middle of it so nice and perky, seeming to say with his waving wings, "Watch out, I can easily fly away." And 103 dollar bills in one pile look almost too pretty to be true.

The superintendent has distributed part of it, giving the dairy boys one each, the kitchen girls one each. I don't know how far down the line he has gotten. Most of the larger ones, I guess, have some want that a dollar would help supply, but the little fellows seem to have very little resources in getting value received for the cash that gets to them.

There were numerous gifts that I haven't told about. Many were delivered to the children from the office that I did not see. And the packages that came over here to be allotted were so numerous that I am afraid that I do not remember a lot of them.

I noticed a number of dolls and nice things from Sylva Sunday school. Miss Lee Motz Lea's Sunday school class sent in presents for twelve little girls. There was a pocketbook in each package with a dime in each.

Mrs. Sterritte of Statesville sent a gift to each child in The Home, distributing the names among her friends who sent the gifts from different places.

Miss Eunice Robert's Sunday school class, Shelby, sent a number of gifts to some little girls.

Park Place, Greensboro, sent thirteen pairs of bedroom slippers.

The Young People's Missionary Society, Wadesboro, sent seven nice work baskets, furnished with thread, thimble, scissors and needles.

Reidsville Sunday school sent in a handkerchief and nice pair of stockings for every child in The Home.

There were enough handkerchiefs sent in to give every girl four and every boy three.

A large box of nice dolls, attractively dressed, came from Mooresville Christmas Eve. Every child of doll size had been abundantly provided with dolls, so we are keeping them till the dolls in active service have gone the way of all good dolls. It is sad to speak of in this connection, but little girls' dolls, especially when they play together in groups, like the poet's rose and dear gazelle, are subject to early decay.

A little of the money sent to buy Christmas presents was left, so we are using it to buy bedroom slippers and kimonas for the children who need them.

Perhaps you may think that little boys do not care for fancy things, but the pretty bedroom slippers that were sent to the little boys were met with fond appreciation. The first night after wearing them up to bed they were reluctant to pull them off, and some of them went to sleep hugging them tightly in their arms.

Martha Mann Wood.

IN CHARLIE'S POCKET

"What's in your pocket, Charlie?" I asked.

"O, nothing much," he stated.

That night I sewed a button on
And just investigated.

I turned the pocket inside out;
It scarcely took a minute.

You'll think I'm joking, I've no doubt,
But this is what was in it:

A top, a handkerchief in rags,
Some marbles and a whistle,
A pencil and two paper bags,
Some chalk and a toy pistol,
Five nails, a screw, a hammer head,
Two candles stuck together,
Some cigar bands, a bit of lead,
Some scraps of soiled leather,
A cookie—stale, no longer round—
A knife, an old brass locket.

This is the "nothing much" I found
In Charlie Porge's pocket.

LONG CHONG, SHORT CHONG

Chong Woo was a cunning little Chinese boy, as fat as butter and as yellow as a pumpkin. His clothes were quite marvelous. On dress-up occasions he always wore an embroidered blue jacket, mauve-colored trousers, and red slippers with cat faces on the toes. His mother said the little bewiskered faces were to make him as sure-footed as the cat.

Chong's home was next door to the mission compound, and Mother Woo was very fond of the missionary lady. So just to be friendly she used to send her little son over there once a week to polish spoons for her.

At first Chong, being a wee bit lazy, didn't like to do it, even if the missionary always did give him sugar cookies.

Then one day he found out something that made the job seem like play. After he had polished a spoon, he would hold it up and look at it, then laugh until he nearly popped out of his blue jacket. The honorable missionary heard him having such a good time back in the kitchen that she went to find out what it all was about.

"Ho, ho, ho, I'm making little looking-glasses!" shouted Chong gleefully as he held up a shining, polished spoon. "See, long Chong this way; short Chong that way!"

Sure enough, when he held up the spoon lengthwise and peered into its bowl there was reflected such a funny Chong Woo, very thin and very mournful. When he turned the spoon sideways, there appeared a roly-poly Chong Woo with very, very fat cheeks and mouth and nose.

"Chong like to polish; him come twice a week all time now," said the little boy as he cheerfully rubbed up the last spoon and accepted as pay a big round sugar cookie. "Little looking glass, him lots of fun."—Exchange.

A SOUTH AMERICAN BREAKFAST

The average American's breakfast is no mean meal with its fruit, cereal, eggs, toast, and coffee, and yet it is not as elaborate as the morning meal of an Englishman, who likes some fish or meat (or both) as well as the above mentioned dishes. It is the Latin peoples who eat sparingly in the morning, and the poor among them live on a slender diet day in and day out. In "A Child's Day in South America," Mary F. Sweney describes a typical coffee-breakfast:

"Carmelita, run and see if the lechero is coming. He is very late." The lechero is the milkman. How can one have coffee-breakfast without milk?

So Carmelita ran to the door of the court-yard and came back calling, "Yes, there he is, just turning the corner."

She caught up the saucepan, her mother gave her a ten-cent nickel, and Carmelita went to the street door

Her little brother, Manuelito, went, too, for he wished to see the cows.

There was the milkman with his soft red cap on his head. There were the three cows and with every cow was her calf and every calf had a leather bag tied over its nose and mouth. There were breathing-holes in the bags, but not one drop of milk could the hungry calf get till the milkman took off the nose-bag.

"Oh!" said Manuelito, "see that little new calf. It can hardly walk. This is the first time it has come." The little new calf had a little new nose-bag, and about its neck was a strong cord. The other end of the long cord was tied to the tail of the mother-cow. That was so the little new calf should learn to follow the cow and not stray away and get lost.

The milkman took the saucepan from Carmelita and sat down on his heels beside the big, red cow, and milked right into the saucepan. He milked fast till the pan looked nearly full of white, foamy milk. Then he gave it to Carmelita, tucked the ten-cent nickel into his pocket on his leather belt and went driving his cows to the door of the next customer. And the bay calf went wabbling along, tied to the tail of the mother-cow.

When Carmelita took the saucepan in her mother said, "What a small quart of milk! It is half froth. Now, run and buy the bread."

So Carmelita ran to the baker's with a ten-cent nickel and a clean napkin and brought back six little crusty rolls. Of course Manuelito went, too, and the baker gave him a tiny sweet cracker which Manuelito called "la yapa." When they came back the coffee was ready, and the saucepan was on the red coals in the brazier just outside the door, so the milk was almost hot.

The mother took a bowl and put in plenty of coffee and a little milk and gave it with a crusty roll to the father, who sat on a box inside the room and ate his breakfast. She put plenty of milk and a little coffee into two little bowls and gave them to Carmelita and Manuelito with two of the crusty rolls, and they sat on the doorstep with the bowls on the floor beside them. The mother took a bowl with her share of the coffee and the milk and a crusty roll and she sat on the foot of the bed, for there were no chairs, and they all had breakfast.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

MOTHER, CLEAN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"

Even Cross, Feverish, Sick Children Love its Taste and it Never Fails to Empty Little Bowels

Hurry mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If your child is constipated, bilious, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good liver and bowel action is often all that is necessary. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup." It never cramps or overacts. Full directions for babies and children of all ages are printed on each bottle. Say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

A New Discovery Makes Hens Lay

Any poultry raiser can easily and quickly double his profits by doubling his egg yield through the remarkable discovery of M. B. Smith, a Kansas city chemist.

Working along entirely original lines, Mr. Smith discovered why hens lay less in winter than in summer and perfected a formula that turns loafers into layers and profit makers.

Within five or six days this discovery, which is called Ditto Egg Tablets, will rejuvenate your flock. Your hens will go strutting and cackling about with red combs and full of life and pep. Every nest will yield an egg nearly every day in the week, which means a lot, since eggs are certain to sell for 60 cents or more. This is not guess work as over 100,000 successful poultry raisers testify to the value of Mr. Smith's products.

Although different from anything you ever heard of, Ditto Egg Tablets are easily administered by simply dropping in drinking water.

So confident is Mr. Smith you can double or triple your egg yield, that he offers to send two large $1 packages of Ditto Egg Tablets (enough for a season) to any reader who will write for them. If you are satisfied they cost only $1 on this introductory offer, otherwise, nothing.

Send No Money—just your name and address to M. B. Smith, 1289 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. The two $1 packages will be mailed immediately. When they arrive, pay the postman only $1 and postage. Use the tablets 10 days. If you are not getting more eggs or are not satisfied for any reason, simply return unused tablets and your money will be returned immediately without question. A big Kansas City bank guarantees the reliability of this offer. Write today before this introductory offer is withdrawn, as you can sell one package to a friend and thus get your own free

IF SICK, BILIOUS!
START YOUR LIVER

Don't Take Calomel! "Dodson's Liver Tone" Acts Better and Doesn't Gripe, Salivate or Make You Sick—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bowes. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

Easy Now to Double Winter Egg Yield

Proven Remedy Gives Remarkable Results—Turns "Boarder" Hens Into Profitable Layers—

Winter egg yields, double and treble those of former years, are now being made by many poultrymen through the use of a compound that science has finally perfected.

This wonderful remedy, which is called "Hick's Egg-Lay," contains the most expensive ingredients mixed so as to work like magic on the egg yield. The medicine acts on the reproductive organs and causes double and triple the number of ova (the germ cell of the egg) to be produced. Thus you get many more eggs and get them during the time they bring the highest prices.

Hick's Egg-Lay is prepared for convenience in tablet form. Simply dissolve one tablet in the quart of water. This is the surest, easiest and quickest way ever discovered to get more eggs.

A Trial Costs You Nothing

Mr. Hick is so confident that Hick's Egg-Lay Tablets will double or treble your egg yield that he is making a special guaranteed offer of one regular double strength $1.00 package of Egg-Lay Tablets and a full six $1.00 packages of Hick's famous Lice-Go Tablets all for $1.00.

Lice-Go is added to the drinking water. The medicine taken into the system of the bird comes out through the oil glands of the skin and every louse or mite quickly leaves the body. Keeps the birds always free without the poultry raiser doing any work. If you would rather have two $1.00 packages of Egg-Lay Tablets or two $1.00 packages of Lice-Go instead of one of each, say so on your order. Send $1.00 today (currency, money order, check, etc.) to Chas. H. Hick & Company, Dept. 916, 1018 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Illinois. If you prefer, send no money. Just your name and address and pay postman $1.00 and postage on delivery. If after thirty days trial, you are not absolutely satisfied, write Mr. Hick and your money will be refunded. This offer is absolutely guaranteed, so don't hesitate to make the test.

THE KINGDOM IN GOLDSBORO

Nineteen Twenty-three — Past, Present and Outlook—Future Bright With Promise—Personals.

By W. O. Butler.

One of the strongholds of Methodism in North Carolina may be reckoned Goldsboro, the growing, progressive, bristling, promising city of the eastern section. The new year opens auspiciously from a material standpoint, with many new and attractive and promising enterprises to be added to those already in operation, entitling this city to the distinction given it by the press as "The Best Town" in the Old North State.

Alongside of this splendid outlook stands the Kingdom of God in the midst. As in the past so in the future the church will keep pace with this growth in material wealth by corresponding expansion and progress along spiritual lines. Already we can safely say that Goldsboro is a religious town. As evidence we note that there are some three Methodist churches, five Baptist, one Presbyterian, one Episcopal one Christian, one Quaker, a Jewish synagogue, one Catholic, and a Pentecostal church, with missions, totaling fifteen organizations. Along with these there is a Ministerial Union, a Christian Laymen's Federation and a Woman's Federation. These are aggressive forces in the moral and religious uplift of a population of 12,000 to 14,000 people.

The intention of this article is to inform the readers of the Advocate concerning Methodism in our midst. We have three churches—St. Paul, St. John and Elm Street. The first-named has the distinction of ranking among the largest number of members in the North Carolina Conference. The present pastor, Rev. C. L. Read, has just entered upon his pastorate, succeeding Rev. G. T. Adams, one of the poular and leading pastors of his conference, after a quadrennium of successful work in which St. Paul loomed large as an aggressive, militant force in church affairs.

Rev. C. L. Read and his splendid wife enter this field under favorable outlook—a great church with over a thousand communicants, a board of stewards, over thirty in number, ranking among the leaders in the local business world, a Sunday school with nearly 650 on roll, a large Baraca class of splendid liberal men, a woman's missionary society with more members perhaps than any like organization in the state, a large Philanthropic class of enterprising lady workers, and other aggressive organizations. Besides these, St. Paul church has two mission stations in Wayne county, where there are Sunday schools and the gospel preached twice a month at each place. The writer is in charge of these missions, and St. Paul church largely contributes to his support. Thus it will be seen that Brother Read enters a field that indicates much work and will require great energy and has the promise of great success, which we sincerely wish for him.

St. John church, after a quadrennium of successful work, under the care of Rev. J. W. Potter, ably assisted by his devout and earnest wife, enters the new year with its pastor returned to them for the fifth year and under the most favorable auspices. It has been much mooted that this church would grow more rapidly if it had a new location. In the event of such a consummation, it would be well to hold on to the present location as a mission station and not abandon that field altogether. St. John church carried the crown last year in that all benevolences and pastor's salary were paid thirty days before the annual conference assembled. It has a fine board of stewards and several organizations.

Elm Street church is under the pastoral care of Rev. C. T. Jerome, an experienced pastor and active worker, ably assisted by the board of stewards and organizations in the memberships. He has been returned for the second year. This church has been slow in its growth for some years. It is likely a change of location would give an impetus to this church that would result in more rapid growth and greater prosperity. And this suggests that Goldsboro ought to have a local church extension society to take into consideration present needs and the occupation of strategic points in this city that is destined to reach 25,000 to 50,000 population in the future. Instead of three, there ought to be plans laid for double that number of strong, self-supporting churches in Goldsboro.

Rev. F. M. Shamberger, presiding elder of the New Bern district, was recently among us and preached at St. Paul a practical and able sermon. He postponed the first quarterly conference to a later date for St. Paul and the missions.

It is likely that Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, D. D., who ranks as the greatest living preacher, will be invited to hold a Bible conference here the present year. There is no abler expositor of the Scriptures than this great Presbyterian divine. Goldsboro, just at this time, needs his expositions and unifying messages, and it will give an impetus to spiritual forces in our midst for him to come.

I do not pray to see the shining beauty Of highest knowledge most divinely true;

I pray, that knowing well my duty, This I may do.

I do not ask that men with flattering finger

Should point me out within the crowded mart, But that only the thought of me may linger

In one glad heart.

I would not rise upon the men below me,

Or pulling at the robes of men above;

I would that friends, a few dear friends, may know me, And, knowing, love.

I do not pray for palaces of splendor Or far among the world's delights to roam;

I pray that I may know the meaning tender Of home, sweet home.

IN MEMORIAM

BOSWELL—On November 30 death came to the relief of our friend and brother, Frank Boswell, who had been suffering for several months with cancer. He knew he could never be well again. But through it all he was patient without a murmur, always looking to the calling away from his suffering with a sense of joy, for he knew in whom he trusted. Brother Boswell had been a faithful member of the Methodist church for many years. He was faithful to the end, never letting anything come between him and his duty to God, keeping faith with men and with God. How rich is that church which year after year can produce such ripened characters for the kingdom. He was laid to rest in Oak Grove cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor. God bless his sorrowing widow and his loved ones. W. T. Cheek.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

God has seen fit to take from our midst one of our most faithful and loyal members, Mrs. Thomas W. Rowell, who died on Thursday, December 14, 1922. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we, the Wesley Bible class of Bethel Sunday school, Roseboro, bow in submission to Him.

Second, That our hearts are sad because of her going and that we shall miss her ever ready help in carrying on our work.

Third, That we hold in grateful remembrance her faithfulness to duty and commend to all her Christian life.

Fourth, That we extend our deepest sympathy to the husband and little children, and to her aged mother and father and many brothers and sisters.

Fifth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, and that copies be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate and to each of the county papers.

Mrs. R. K. Herring,
Mrs. F. A. Carson,
Mrs. L. S. Pusey.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His wisdom has taken from our midst our friend, neighbor and co-worker, John Olin Heptinstall, and we as members of the first quarterly conference of the Halifax circuit, feeling the loss most keenly, desire to give some expression to our sorrow in the death of our brother.

And whereas, Brother Heptinstall was ever faithful to his church, supporting at all times the ordinances, ready at all times to do his part to further the cause of the Master, being a kind neighbor, a faithful friend and a father to his pastor.

Therefore be it resolved, that we bow in humble submission to the One that makes no mistakes and that we profit by his life of usefulness, and that we extend to the family our Christian sympathy and prayers in their great sorrow which is our sorrow likewise.

And that a copy of these resolutions be recorded on the minutes of this meeting, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.

Humbly submitted,
E. Dana Dickens,
Thos. H. Dickens,
Committee.

GILBERT—It was in the autumn of 1922 when Mrs. V. C. Gilbert, a faithful member of Shady Grove Methodist church, departed this life and entered the abode of the saints to await the resurrection morn. Her going was after a life of useful service to her Lord, and she was now ripe for a better world. How similar was her transition to the golden leaves that were now carpeting the earth after their mission had been finished!

Sister Gilbert was noted for her piety and for the Christian family she reared. She had been a widow for a long while, and the responsibility of bringing up her children fell upon her shoulders during all these years. But God was with her. No finer characters can be found anywhere than the offspring of this sainted mother. Her teachings and prayers are bearing fruit in the lives of her children, all of whom are married, and are rearing families of their own. Her sons and daughters are scattered over the earth,

Wash the Poisons of RHEUMATISM

SCIATICA, NEURALGIA AND URIC ACID

Out of Your System With Shivar Spring Mineral Water.

The Guarantee.

Think of it! A mineral water of such wonderful blood-cleansing power that it is actually shipped to every state in the Union and even to foreign lands under a positive guarantee that the price will be refunded, should the user report no benefit.

Shivar Mineral Water is unquestionably the greatest of all American mineral spring waters and there are thousands who contend that it is the best mineral water in all the world.

In Rheumatism and in other forms of auto-intoxication such as Sciatica, Neuralgia, Chronic Headache and Uric Acid Diathesis, Shivar Mineral Water has succeeded where every known medicine had failed. Physicians attribute this to its peculiar power of dissolving and completely washing out of the system the leucomaines, or body poisons that cause these diseases.

Delightful to drink, wonderful in its blood-cleansing power, Shivar Spring Water may be shipped any distance, at any season, without losing its virtues in the slightest.

Though a thousand miles away, you may use it in your home with identically the same results, as if you drank it at the Spring.

The Results.

Read the following letters which are fair samples of tens of thousands that are received at the Spring, then accept our guarantee offer. It gives you the equivalent of a three-weeks' visit to this celebrated Spring, with no charge for the water if you report no benefit. Sign your acceptance on the coupon below.

Leeds, South Carolina. I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent result. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.
C. A. C., M. D.

Union, South Carolina.

I have suffered from headaches for the past ten years, due to constipation, but since using your Water I have been greatly benefitted and scarcely have headaches at all. It has made me feel better in every respect and has given me a fine appetite, something I did not have before.
C. B. C.

Warrenton, Virginia.

It is doing my rheumatism so much good. My limbs are beginning to feel like new ones.
MRS. J. R. C.

Chancellor, Alabama.

I have been for many years affected with uric acid and kidney trouble, and the Mineral Water has helped me more than anything I have ever done for them, and therefore heartily recommend same to all who need a speedy relief.
W. F. M., M. D.

Florence, South Carolina.

I suffered with indigestion and kidney trouble and a year ago was stricken with acute articular rheumatism; was helpless for months, and since using your spring water I am walking without any crutch and improving daily. Indigestion much relieved. I wish I could write Shivar Spring Water in the sky so that the world could become acquainted with it.
Mrs. T. V.

Atlanta, Georgia.

In the interest of the afflicted I cheerfully state, seeing your advertisement in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, I decided to try Shivar Spring Water in the case of my daughter, who had been a sufferer from a malignant type of sciatica, and could get no permanent relief from medicine. After using the Water a few weeks she has almost entirely gotten relief from pain. In this case it has been a great blessing.

but they carried with them their mother's Christ. None can go into these homes without feeling a sacred atmosphere. As they were trained in the way they should go, from that way they have not departed.

Aunt Jennie, as we used to call her, has been greatly missed. She was a faithful attendant at the house of God to the end of her life. Her influence for good can never be estimated on earth. She was a blessing and an inspiration to all who met her. She is gone, but we know where to find her. May we hear her sweet voice as she calls us over the jasper set. We prepare to meet her again where we will be together forever in that land we call heaven where parting is no more.

EDWARDS—K. F. Edwards of Bethany church, Jefferson circuit, departed for heaven October 23, 1922, aged 69 years, three months and 24 days. September 5, 1874, he was married to Mary E. Roy; January 22, 1896, was married to Sofrona Blackburn; December 24, 1920, he was married to Cora Miller, who with his brother, two sisters and nine children survive his departure.

Brother Edwards reminded me of the godly man, like a "tree planted by the river" (Ps. 1). He was an exemplary citizen. He lived a life above reproach. His friends were many, his enemies few and all forgiven. He loved his family with that compelling affection which is reciprocated by them, making family life one blessed boon.

He was a devout Christian, having a conscious, definite experience of saving grace, which enabled him to live right and be faithful to his church and pastors and friends and to often "shout out" in meeting. I believed in him. From him I learned what a Christian is like. When barefoot and timid he encouraged me; he baptized me with his sunny influence and cheer and caused me to hope in God. I devoutly thank God for him. The young folks loved him. He was always young and cheerful with them. In his presence our badness was ashamed of its existence. He was one of the best all-round men I ever knew. He will be greatly missed. His influence will outlive this generation. He rejoiced much in the hope of immortality. Heaven was to him a glorious reality "about to be revealed." He has gone to heaven to rejoice in the presence of Jesus with Mary, Sophrona, Joe, Annie, Kelley and a host of others who went up from Bethany.

Now, adieu, brother "kin." We greatly miss your helping hand, your good advice, your genial spirit and constant cheer and your prayers. But your life has been a blessed success. We miss you, your life has blessed us. So we love you and your departure draws us on toward heaven. We expect to see you soon at the "meeting in the air." Till then we rejoice in "Christ Our Hope." All praise be unto God, forever.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS

"Day by day, in every way, I am getting better and better," is Dr. Coue's formula for the cure of human ills. Will Hays has adopted the same method with the "movies." Mr. Hays calls upon the American people to say after him, "Day by day, in every way, the 'movies' are getting better and better." But the response is not quite so near unanimous as Mr. Hays would desire and as he really expected.

* * * *

Judge Stack last week at Greensboro sent a "holiness" preacher to the roads sixty days for driving an automobile when intoxicated and further enjoined that for the next six months this man should not be allowed to preach. This action of the judge grew out of his desire that the Christian ministry shall be clean. He sent a married man who had deserted his sick wife and had seduced an innocent girl under promise of marriage to the roads for three years. Such a judge as this is to be commended in the most emphatic terms. Yet he is not a man who delights in the bestowal of heavy penalties. But there are crimes that call for penalties of great severity.

John the Baptist laid the ax to the root of the tree, but when he went to chopping down the trees of sin he did not have an ax handle a thousand miles long. Jesus looked the Scribes and Pharisees in the face and told them plainly that they were hypocrites. Why should a preacher thunder against the Mormons beyond the Rocky Mountains, or the Roman Catholics a thousand miles away, when bootleggers, adulterers, Sabbath breakers, and men who worship mammon are easily within reach of his voice. The reader has heard of the man who preached against the sin of dancing to a little bunch of old maids and a lame Confederate soldier and about the evils of theatre-going to a congregation of rustics who never saw a theatre. But these are not the only two instances when the gospel messenger has missed the mark.

Mr. G. F. Ivey of Hickory, N. C., has written the Saturday Evening Post as follows: "For the past twenty-five years I have been a subscriber to your paper and read practically everything in it. I have always considered it the best periodical of its kind, but have noticed recently that the moral tone is not near equal to what it formerly was. In the last number, January 6th, in three separate articles you portrayed your heroines as using profanity and in one, "The Princess of Paradise Island," actually explained that it is now permissible for women to swear. Your best feminine characters are often smoking cigarettes, sometimes drinking blockade liquor, and not long ago you had one of them, a married woman, out at three o'clock in the night with a man and tried to show that this was a commendable act on her part." Brother Ivey does well to have a care for the moral tone of our periodicals and is to be commended for his friendly criticism of a paper that he appreciates, but that allows its contributors to lower the moral tone of their writings as the tendency of the times seems too willing to allow.

The usual delegations were present at one of the Sunday tabernacle meetings when Mr. Rodeheaver asked for their favorite songs. The Delco Light people called for "Brighten the corner where you are"; the raincoat delegation said "There shall be showers of blessings"; the laundry delegation selected "Wash me and I shall be whiter than snow"; but when one delegation called for "My Mother's Bible," the great assembly ceased to laugh and grew strangely serious as a flood of tender memories poured in upon the individuals of that tabernacle meeting. For the angel of love who had bent in tenderness over the cradle of infancy and had taught the old fashioned virtues in the impressionable years of childhood spoke again to that great throng.

Most men when boys went barefoot and all barefooted boys stub their toes. Not once, but many times. The following lines, therefore, should serve to remind most men of their childhood days and may stir a feeling of sympathy for the man who has stubbed his toe:

"Long th' road of human life you see a fellow travelin' slow,
An' like as not you'll find he's some poor chap that's stubbed his toe.
He was makin' swmimin' headway, but he bumped into a stone,
An' his friends all hurried onward, an' left him there alone.
He ain't sobbin' or ain't sniffin'—he's too old for tears an' eries,
But he's grievin' just as earnest if it only comes in sighs,
An' it does a heap of good sometimes to go a little slow,
An' say a word of comfort to th' man that's stubbed his toe."

A mother's aid law should be enacted by the present General Assembly. With a little financial assistance the widowed mother could keep her little ones with her and give them the inestimable blessings of a mother's loving care, rather than send her children to an orphanage, even if room can be found for them in such an institution. The sheltering care of a mother's love is a hundred fold better for the child than any institution that can be provided, and this is no attempt to discount the orphanages. In fact, these homes provided by the churches and fraternal orders are the finest institutions of our civilization, but the orphanages are not able to care for one-half of the needy children of North Carolina. Perhaps none see as clearly as do the superintendents of our orphanages the need of a mother's aid law to assist in caring for the childhood of our state. It would supplement the work of our orphanages in an economical manner and at the same time preserve the natural method of keeping mother and child together. By all means, give us a mother's aid law for North Carolina.

METHODIST ADAPTATION

The power of adaptation to existing conditions and present demands has been one of the great secrets of Methodist success. Susannah Wesley gave her son John the first lesson in this when she converted him to the idea of "field preaching." Asbury and his co-laborers in America became past masters in this art. To Jesse Lee, perhaps, belongs the credit of giving Asbury to understand that clerical robes and ritualistic services could not be used with success among the pioneers of America. But Bishop Asbury was responsible for the pioneer preachers going to the scattered settlements in every section of the English colonies. These men did not wait for churches. The open air, the pioneer cabin, the brush arbor, the log meeting house, the courthouses at the county seats, any of these served the purpose of the itinerant preachers till churches could be organized and buildings erected.

Then those pioneer leaders were wise enough not to wait for college trained men to minister to the people. These could not be had, so they sent unlettered men who knew God and had religion to minister to the unlettered children of American forests who were "as sheep without a shepherd."

But as civilization developed and the church grew the methods of American Methodism changed. The early Methodist made a reputation for shouting, but Methodists can be just as cold and formal as Presbyterians with not half of their piety, and when occasion demands are willing to attempt the ritualism of Episcopalians, even if they bungle the job. Their daring in adaptation is rather stimulating.

Over in Chicago the old First Methodist church is now erecting a skyscraper that will do credit to the tallest buildings of the "Loop District" of the "Windy City." Some have talked about this "tallest church in the world" as being an expression of the new idea of religion which is away from the old idea of humility and poverty. All this speculation about its being a change in the spirit of religion has no basis in fact. That tall building is nothing but Methodism adapting itself to the "Loop District" of Chicago, just as it adaptes its buildings to Asheville, Charlotte, Raleigh, Black Jack Ridge and Gum Swamp. And it is all right for the Methodist church to continue to adapt itself to conditions, just so it does not adapt itself to the "world, the flesh and the devil." The idea is to be all things to all men in order that some may be saved. So let us not be alarmed about these outward manifestations if the heart keeps right. The height of the house and the size of the altar are secondary. The fire on the altar is the primary consideration.

AS TO OBITUARIES

It is a rule of long standing with practically all religious newspapers that obituaries and resolutions of respect must be brief, or if friends of those who have died wish an extended notice published that it must be paid for in excess of the maximum words allowed. A large number of papers only allow fifty words free. The Advocate publishes one hundred free, but for all words in excess of that number must be paid for at the rate of one cent per word. This rule applies to every one except preachers and their families. There is no exception whatever.

Usually the preacher writes the appreciation, and, of course, it is necessary for us to send him a bill for excess words, and he pays it and says nothing about it. Certainly we have nothing to do with that arrangement, but it seems to us that it is not just right for the pastor to be called upon to pay for the publication of matter of this kind, and it would not be out of place for the loved ones of the deceased to say to the pastor to have the bill sent to them.

The Advocate would much prefer to confine all obituaries to 100 words, but when we undertook this a year or so ago there was at once a great protest, hence we had to go back to the old order of things.

THE GREATEST BENEFACITOR OF THE LAST CENTURY

This distinction belongs to Louis Pasteur, a Frenchman. His establishment of the germ theory of infectious diseases has revolutionized surgery and the practice of medicine based upon this new theory bears slight resemblance to former methods. The modern surgeon, thanks to Pasteur, has occasion to rejoice in the triumphs of his knowledge and skill. Vaccination introduced a new day in preventive medicine. Even diphtheria, frightful monster, has surrendered to the discovery of Pasteur. Pastuerized milk has made his name a household word and the Pasteur treatment for rabies is familiar to all. The Pasteur Institute in Paris is a Mecca for the world of medicine.

December 27, 1822, was the date of his birth. These hundred years have been the greatest in the history of medicine and surgery, mainly through the discoveries of Louis Pasteur.

THE HEAD OF A SAINT, THE HEART OF A SERPENT

The head may be right and the heart be wrong. That is, a man may think correctly upon abstract questions and at the same time have unkind and unchristian feelings toward his fellowmen. For instance, there may be an abundance of zeal for Christian doctrine and an utter absence of the Christian spirit. Every syllable of the creed may be correct, while the heart may contain the venom of the serpent. Orthodox in head, herodox in heart! Some of the blackest chapters in human history find their explanation right here.

In the last few centuries the world has made gratifying progress at this point. Yet there are some among us even in this land of religious liberty who are more concerned about their own personal opinions of doctrine than they are about the spirit of Christ, although the Word says: "Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his."

COMING THROUGH THE AIR

Up in North Carolina, where Dr. Plyler edits that splendid conference paper, the North Carolina Advocate, a certain congregation, Goldsboro, if we remember correctly, is reported to have presented their pastor with an airplane, so as to facilitate his visiting. We wonder if that sort of fad will grow in the Tar Heel state. If so, we may look for Brother Plyler to fly in on us down in sunny Florida almost any day, for we all know how he loves this country noted for its orange groves and citrus fruit. Our advice to our good brother, however, is in the language of another writer in North Carolina, "Stick to mother earth unless you are homesick for heaven."—Florida Advocate.

Airplanes, Dr. Wilson, are reserved for North Carolina pastors. Editors are not so fortunate, or unfortunate, as the case may be. Our only regret is in being deprived of a visit to Florida in the hope of getting a sight of your citrus groves. Bring a box of fruit with you to Columbia next month and thereby make the annual meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association really worth while. What is better, load a Lakeland car from the college campus and drive through to Columbia and we will crown you king.

Dr. J. W. Peacock, who escaped last fall from the criminal insane department of the state prison, has been heard from in Florida. He was guilty of one of the most brutal crimes ever committed in North Carolina. If sane when he killed the Thomasville officer he should by all legal and moral considerations have gone direct to the electric chair. If he was insane as the alienists testified at the trial he should be locked up for the remainder of his days. There would be as much justification to allow a wild Bengal tiger to run at large as to have Peacock loose in a community. It remains to be seen what becomes of his case, but by every consideration that has to do with the welfare and safety of society, there is no place for him in any community.

FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

Citizens from every section of the state gathered in Raleigh last Tuesday to discuss some modifications in the present prohibition laws of North Carolina and to plan for a stricter enforcement of the law.

It was one of the most largely attended conventions of the anti-liquor forces that has met in Raleigh for quite a number of years. The convention on account of the presence of Methodist preachers had the appearance of a Methodist conference. But it was, not simply a meeting of preachers. In fact the ministers were in the minority. Quite a few ladies were present and men from all walks of life in every part of the state. North Carolina is evidently becoming aroused upon the subject of law enforcement.

This convention of representative men and women asked the General Assembly to so enact that the Volstead law shall become the law of North Carolina. This will give the federal officers and the state and county officers a common objective so far as the law is concerned. It will also close up some gaps in the present state laws so that the conviction of bootleggers will not be so difficult as it has been.

With a little activity now on the part of the people in securing the laws we need and then every man on the job to see that these laws are enforced and we will put the bootlegger out of business in North Carolina.

Mr. W. N. Everett, a member of the House of Representatives, has been appointed Secretary of State to succeed Col. J. Bryan Grimes, deceased. The new appointee of Governor Morrison is popular and influential with his fellow members of the General Assembly and with the people of his home county, Richmond, where he has large business interests. The Everetts are eminent in Rockingham and the new Secretary of State will preserve the best traditions of his name and become a worthy successor to Col. Grimes who for long years served his state with becoming dignity and efficiency.

Whittier was a poet and not a theologian. But his spiritual interpretations of Christian truth too often put to shame the so-called theologians of every age. Listen to him in this:

"Thank God! that I have lived to see the time
When the great truth begins at last to find
An utterance from the deep heart of mankind,
Earnest and clear, that all Revenge is Crime!
That man is holier than a creed—that all
Restraint upon him must consult his good,
Hope's sunshine linger on his prison wall,
And love look in upon his solitude.
The beautiful lesson which our Savior taught through long dark centuries its way hath wrought . . .
And words, to which by Galilee's lake shore
The humble fishers listened with hushed oar,
Have found an echo in the general heart,
And of the public faith become a living part."

The January number of "The South Atlantic Quarterly" is up to the usual standard of this high class journal devoted to the discussion of literary, historical, economic and social questions. It is under the joint editorship of Dr. W. K. Boyd and Dr. W. H. Wannamaker of Trinity College and is published by the South Atlantic Publishing Company. The table of contents of the January number is as follows: "On Prison Reform," Clinton Rogers Woodruff; "Catherine Potter Stith and Her Meeting with Lord Byron," Adolph B. Benson; "Ernest Lavisse—French Historian and Educator," Othon Guerlac; "Childe Rolande Redivivus (A Fantasy)," Charles B. Shaw; "Thomas Holcroft—Man of Letters," Capt. Eldridge Colby, U. S. A.; "The Wisdom of Al-Ghazali," P. B. McDonald; "Taphia," Robert Withington; "Book Reviews." Thinking people in all sections of the country and especially in the South should have "The South Atlantic Quarterly." The subscription price is $3.00 a year.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Somebody please mail us a copy of the Western North Carolina Journal for 1913.

Rev. F. L. Fownsend and his family are now located in Durham. They have formerly lived on their farm near Chapel Hill.

Courtesy is the quality that keeps a woman smiling when a departing guest stands at the open screen and lets flies in.—Fremont Tribune.

The presiding elders of the two North Carolina conferences are to meet next Tuesday, January 22, in Charlotte in the interest of the Centenary collections.

Rev. S. E. Mercer, the presiding elder, announces that Rev. J. W. Bryan of South Carolina has been appointed preacher in charge of the Ahoskie circuit. Brother Bryan has already begun his work.

Bishop Beauchamp after spending several weeks visiting conferences and speaking with great effectiveness in many centers will sail for Europe on January 30, to supervise the important and growing work in our missions there.

Bishop Dobbs after spending a few weeks in the home land sailed for Brazil on December 23, to give his personal attention to the great program of building and expansion in our three conferences there.

The Park Place congregation of this city expects to have the new $10,000 parsonage on Park Circle completed by February 1. This building is admirably located and the pastor and his family are looking forward with pleasure to the time when they will occupy their new home.

Rev. R. B. John, who has suffered at intervals for some months and was quite unwell during the recent annual conference, has recently spent two weeks in a hospital in Fayetteville. He is out again and we trust is on the road to complete recovery. This will be good news to Brother John's hosts of friends in North Carolina.

Rev. Dr. R. F. Bumpas, who was appointed to Jenkins Memorial, Raleigh, at the recent session of the North Carolina conference, and Rev. L. B. Pattishall, who was sent to Epworth, have been exchanged. Brother Pattishall, who had done three years of fine work at Jenkins Memorial, remains there for another year and Brother Bumpas takes up the work at Epworth. The exchange was made at the suggestion of Dr. Bumpas.

Brother Thomas Ritch, one of the oldest and most faithful members of Belmont Park church, Charlotte, died at his home on January 5th. He had been in failing health for a number of years, but for a few days previous to his death his family thought him to be very much better. He died while asleep. Brother Ritch was 68 years of age and had been a faithful member of the Methodist church since boyhood. He was a good man.

"The Old North Church" of Boston on December 31 celebrated its two hundredth anniversary. This is the church in the tower of which the lanterns were hung the night of Paul Revere's memorable ride to warn the countryside of the British invasion. The church is now surrounded by Italians, but religious services are still maintained in the historic old church.

One-half million dollars reported in November and December, though some of the conferences postponed Pay-up Week and many of the larger churches have not yet been heard from. Of this amount the North Carolina conference paid $16,085, the Western North Carolina conference $8,428. In the language of our Bishop Mouzon, our people are "going the second mile," that is, paying their pledges as they fall due. They vowed unto the Lord and are paying their vows.

The Southern Methodist Press Association will hold its annual meeting February 21-22 in Columbia, S. C. These meetings bring together the editors of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the discussion of questions of mutual interest and are occasions of rare interest and profit. Dr. Carlton D. Harris of Baltimore is president of the Association. The secretary-treasurer is Dr. J. A. Burrow of Nashville, Tenn. The meeting last year was in Lakeland, Fla. These meetings of the Association are as a rule largely attended. Limited space prevents our giving the program.

Revs. S. E. Mercer and S. A. Cotton, presiding elders of the Weldon and Washington districts respectively, have announced that their district conferences will be held the weeks following the first and third Sundays in April.

Rev. R. O. Eller, pastor of Salem station, is the happy owner of a brand new Buick, the gift of his people. No pastor now has a better, and few have as good a car as the Rev. R. O. Eller. The Salem people have done themselves proud.

Rev. C. M. Pickens is winning golden opinions in his new pastorate at Albemarle. The people regard him the best preacher at all. The church now has one of the largest Sunday school classes in the state. The attendance is about one hundred and forty.

Under a bank of flowers Mrs. John Stewart was laid to rest in Friendship cemetery January 12. A beautiful life was hers. To her home and church she was devoted. She was a great sufferer without complaint. Most beautiful was her trust in God. Her death was a translation. Rev. C. F. Sherrill conducted the funeral services.

A synthetic apple oil possessing the aroma of ripe apples has been prepared by the Bureau of Chemistry. The preparation has the merit of having no substance in it that does not occur naturally in the apple. The oil, being volatile, may not be used in the preparation of food products that have to be heated, but is especially suitable for flavoring ice cream and cold drinks.—Dearborn Independent.

Duty is what one expects from others. Luck is only a short way of spelling pluck. High words are apt to consist of low language. Worry is interest paid on trouble before it becomes due. A man with a lame tale frequently halts in the telling. The man who does what he pleases is seldom pleased with what he does. We may be led into temptation the first time, but after that we generally find our own way.—London Answers.

On December 31st a watch night service was held at the Stedman Methodist church. In spite of the heavy rainstorm which came up at eleven o'clock, the appointed hour of meeting, a very good number attended. The pastor, Rev. R. F. Taylor, made an unusually interesting and profitable talk to those present. During the singing of the hymn, "Ring the Bells of Heaven," the hands of the clock pointed to midnight and the Bern Bullard Memorial Bell rang the old year out with six strokes and ushered the new year in with six more. Rev. Mr. Taylor believes in observing this old custom.

Dr. Albert D. Betts of Beaufort, S. C., a few weeks ago dug into the General Minutes for the average of salaries of the preachers of several conferences. He found the highest to be that of the North Carolina, $1,659, and the lowest the Northwest, $580; the general average is $1,275. The Baltimore stands fourteenth with $1,354. The old conference maintains a position among those in the lead in the Centenary and many other enterprises, but lags behind on the salary proposition. Will not our laymen put it where it properly belongs?—Baltimore Southern Methodist.

James, the nine-year-old son of Rev. and Mrs. B. H. Black, of the Oxford circuit, was right seriously shot by a playmate a few days after Christmas. It seems that a number of the neighbor boys had received air rifles for Christmas and had formed the habit of shooting each other for the fun of seeing them "jump." One young fellow not realizing the difference between a 22 rifle and an air rifle tried the former on James with almost fatal results. The boy was rushed to the hospital in Oxford, and a surgical operation performed. We are pleased to announce that the young fellow is doing nicely and is thought to be out of danger.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION

The annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held in the chapel of the Church Extension building, Louisville, Kentucky, beginning Wednesday, April 25th, at 9:30 a. m.

T. D. Ellis, Secretary.

When two theologians argue, the devil always steals the gem of charity and blinds the eyes of tolerance.

TO THE PASTORS OF NORTH CAROLINA

Brethren: The three celebrated evangelistic singers, the Wisdom Sisters, who charmed our last General Conference, can be secured for our state for six weeks beginning April 29th if you desire their services.

Broad Street, Statesville, wants them from April 29th to May 13th, and if you wish them for any of the remaining four weeks (May 13th to June 10th) please advise me immediately. Their rates are $150 per week and entertainment. They defray their own traveling expenses when employed in the same general section for as long as six weeks.

John W. Moore.

WHAT WE FOUND AT MARION

1. A well filled pantry in a refinished and refurnished parsonage.
2. A cordial welcome to a well organized church in a growing town.
3. An aggressive board of stewards who, in order to make a substantial advance in salary, cheerfully increased their own assessments on an average of over 50 per cent each.
4. A nice fat turkey in the parsonage coop on Christmas morning, a gift of the livest Ladies' Aid in all Southern Methodism.

Some Initial Steps Taken in Two Months.

1. The first pastoral round completed.
2. Twenty-five new members added to the membership of the church.
3. Two thousand dollars secured last week to pay up all indebtedness, both ancient and modern, on our church plant here.
4. The church officially designated "First Methodist Church," by act of the first quarterly conference.

Poovey.

A PASTOR'S WIFE "SHOWERED"

The Woman's Missionary Society of Main Street Methodist church of Thomasville, N. C., held a very interesting meeting Monday afternoon at the residence of Miss Jennie Pennington on Randolph street. At the close of the meeting after refreshments had been served the large company of ladies—members of the missionary society—surprised and greatly pleased their new pastor's wife, Mrs. A. C. Gibbs, by "showering" her with a number of beautiful gifts for her personal use. The occasion was delightful in every respect.

FORWARD MOVEMENTS HARMONIZE

The committee appointed by the General Conference to harmonize the forward movements of the church met in Nashville recently and arranged for a division of time so as to avoid confusion and conflicts as follows:

For the year 1923 the Centenary will have right of way during January, February, March and April and the Educational Movement during August, September, October and November. The Board of Finance will have February 1 to July 1, 1924, for the Superannuate Endowment Fund, and the Centenary will have December 1923 and January 1924 for special emphasis and collections.

During the period when one interest has the right of way, the others may "carry on," in a normal way, the work of cultivation and collection, but will not call upon the general organizations and public agencies of the church such as pastors, presiding elders, bishops, lay activities, etc.

Let the following figures make their own comment, or you may ponder until your comment comes. The Methodist Episcopal Church has now eighty hospitals with a total of 6,975 beds. The smallest is at Windom, Minn. The largest at Indianapolis, Ind. During the year past, 198,253 patients were cared for, increase of 50,000 over the preceding year. It cost $3.99 a day to care for each patient. Free service work amounted to $669,614 and part-pay to $300,000. The total property and land values of these hospitals is $18,483,756. Our church has forty-five homes for children with 3,281 children cared for. The property value of these homes is $3,456,593. There are thirty-seven homes for the aged in which 1,704 fathers and mothers are kept as guests at a cost of seventy-four cents a day. Five homes for working girls, one home for young men, and one for retired ministers, conclude this interesting list of homes of healing and of help under the direction of the Board of Hospitals and Homes.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

THE ELDER OF THE DURHAM DISTRICT WRITES

A MONUMENT TO THE BLACK MAMMY

The undertaking of the Daughters of the Confederacy to place a monument in the capital of this nation is worthy of all praise. The speech of Congressman Steadman of the Fifth district of North Carolina in behalf of the bill granting permission for this work in Washington was worthy of the man and of the occasion that called it forth in the beginning of this year 1923. For one of the few remaining followers of Lee to stand in the halls of Congress and make a plea in behalf of an enterprise fostered by the Jefferson Davis Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy to do honor to the memory of the old negro woman of other days is highly significant. This act is more than a testimony to the healing touch of time, although the past fifty years have done much to bring about a changed attitude towards the issues of the sixties.

Major Steadman made mention of the devotion shown by the old mammy to the children under her care and spoke in eloquent periods of the affection the whites cherished for the blacks. This is an old story that fills full the best traditions of the South, and this tender care and undying devotion on the part of the old black mammy would be sufficient to move a grateful people to leave some enduring memorial in brass or stone; but more than gratitude for faithful services rendered is involved in this venture, for the whites received far more than fine fidelity from the blacks through the long years of their sojourn together in these southern parallels.

No one has told of the faith and conviction in the reality of the unseen gained by the white man from the black. This can never be gathered up by the scientific investigator and put in such tangible form as to make others fully understand. The stories told of "ghosts and hants" and spirits of every imaginable sort went deep into the imagination of the southern children and the Uncle Remus stories followed them through life. The simple faith in a God that had to do in every act and experience of life kept the sense of deity and the reality of the spirit world very close to southern boys and girls. They could never get entirely away from these awfully and tragic experiences of those who had them in charge at the most impressionable period of life.

That is a most interesting story Rev. L. E. B. Rosser, now in charge of the Williams Normal Industrial School of South Boston, Va., tells of his experience in Georgia with certain noted men of our church who influenced him in becoming a minister in the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. But of more interest is the story of how Young J. Allen, our first great missionary to China, was with the grandmother of this Rosser at a negro camp meeting when, as a boy in the teens, the youthful Allen was converted and shouted all over the place. A right good beginning to make a missionary.

But this is all aside from the memorial to the old southern mammy in Washington save to suggest that the South owes the negro a much larger debt than that intimated in the object for which this memorial is to stand.

All honor to the Daughters who are no doubt building in a far more significant way than any one has even surmised in this tribute to a loyal and devoted people.

A WALK UNDER THE STARS

The rounds of the Durham district often call for early rising to catch certain morning trains. The morning of which we write was in January—one of those clear, crisp frosty mornings with which the year sometimes begins in our latitude. These mornings make life worth living for the one out in time to enjoy the exhilaration. The walk for a mile down Main street to the station made the blood tingle and caused the imagination to run riot. Venus beamed in all her beauty in the eastern sky and, to the west, the moon, a little past the full, shone in resplendent glory. Lights began to blink in factory and office building. The Leggett and Myers offices had every light burning. Here and there a janitor, late to his work, hastened with quickened step. The weenie stands were ready to serve "hot dogs," and the empty street cars, first on the line, rattled on their way. A lone policeman was on his beat and ever and anon, in his own jocular way, a son of Africa greeted some fellow acquaintance.

How changed will be these streets in an hour as white and black hasten to mill and factory! We could but rejoice that a blessed quiet lay across this land in which we follow peaceful pursuits rather than those of carnage and death.

Somehow, in a vivid strange way, this hour suggested by contrast the zero-hour of September 29, 1918, when our own boys pressed across "No Man's Land" and broke the Hindenburg line. Of a sudden, these reveries were arrested, for there, a few paces away, in front of the county court house, stood the Memorial Fountain, bearing the forty-eight names of the Durham boys who "went west," some of them on that memorable day. Strange, and yet it is not strange, under the blended rays of the arc-light and the waning moon, the whiteness of the stone became more pronounced. We turned from it all and looked up at the open heavens and offered a prayer to Him who is above the stars.

How peaceful were the skies overhead and how fine the promise of a glorious day! It was 5:30—so often the zero-hour with the boys in France and Belgium. Imagination swept on swift wings, stirred by contrast between this hour in our favored land and those days when the boys were overseas. We could but look up at the stars and be glad.

THE CHAPEL HILL CHURCH

Every Methodist who went to Chapel Hill and all who are specially interested in the religious work at the University will do well to set his house in order to help in the work enterprised at Chapel Hill. The plans will soon be in shape to give the friends a glimpse of what is to be, and then the opportunity will be offered for material aid. This building program is so magnificent in its proportions and so extensive in its influence that men of vision and enterprise will be charmed. Rev. Walter Patten is enjoying the new parsonage and, in anticipation, is filled with joy over the new church.

HONORABLE RUFUS A. DOUGHTON

The Grand Old Man and the Grand Young Man are some of the terms used by the newspaper reporters in referring to the Honorable R. A. Doughton of North Carolina. For more than a quarter of a century this noble man and valuable citizen has filled a large place in this state. The people of Allegheny feel that they can not get on without his services and the people of the entire state feel more comfortable when he is in the General Assembly. We became familiar with R. A. Doughton of Allegheny; now we know R. A. Doughton of North Carolina. Since T. J. Jarivs, the first citizen of North Carolina, passed, we find Rufe Doughton coming to a foremost place in the affections of North Carolinians.

NORTH CAROLINA METHODISM MOST FORTUNATE

The finest and most encouraging feature of our Methodism is the absence of disputes over the non-essential in doctrine and practice. We have escaped the usual conflicts that arise between the conservatives and the progressives. We are all progressive in North Carolina. We are busy in saving sinners, in preaching righteousness, in building churches and parsonages, in promoting our educational enterprises, in forwarding the work of missions, in securing a better trained ministry and laity, and in striving to keep pace with the advance of North Carolina. We have no time for contending over the incidentals. We would follow John Wesley's advice, "Preach on the great themes" and bend every energy to spread scriptural holiness over the land.

METHODIST SUMMER SCHOOL AT TRINITY

The ten days following the Trinity commencement are becoming more and more significant in the life of the two conferences of this state. The session next June will fill the bill in every respect if all plans can be carried out.

Dr. Andrew Sledd has been secured to give a course in New Testament. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan will preach the sermon on the second Sunday in June, and also give a series of lectures before the school. A full list of speakers and teachers will be announced.

The purpose of this announcement is once again to remind all who are interested that the days of preparation are now upon us. The undergraduates should make such use of the correspondence school and so arrange their work that in June a full review can be made and examinations passed. Preparation on the part of all should be in the making that all things may be ready when the hour arrives to meet on Trinity campus for the annual "round up" of ideas. The preachers should make full use of this opportunity to renew their forces and to conserve their waning energies.

But the opportunity awaits more than the preachers. The last two days, June 14, 15, this year will be given over to a meeting of the laymen. Not that this will in any way interfere with the usual class-work of the school but special features will be added of special interest to laymen. General Secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities, Mr. G. L. Morelock, will be present. Several hundred enterprising laymen of North Carolina Methodism ought to be present to enjoy the many good things going.

TRINITY ALUMNI CALLED TO THE COLORS

The expanding life of Trinity College makes fresh demands for increased resources and enlarged facilities. An urgent call comes to every old student to carry forward the Trinity standard. To this end, plans are taking shape to organize and to utilize the Trinity constituency. If this work is pushed to a glorious consummation, some will have to agonize.

The plan for this organization calls for leaders confined to certain local areas in the state limited by presiding elders' districts. The unit within these boundaries is the county. Mr. R. E. Thigpen, '22, has been elected assistant alumni secretary and will give all his time to the work. Within the next few months, meetings will be held in various sections of North Carolina to organize the alumni forces and to foster interest in the general alumni fund. Old Trinity students can render valuable services in this time of most urgent need by offering all possible help in making these meetings a success.

Trinity is just now in the midst of the finest possibilities for taking the first place in every respect if all the alumni and friends will rally in a great way. Since 1918, the college has gone, in number of students, from 456 to 906. The expansion, in other respects, must keep pace to meet this day of opportunity. All resources are taxed to the limit and the urgency is for the friends of Trinity and all who are interested in meeting the demands of the hour to join in this task. The appeal comes with unusual emphasis to those who have shared the life of the old foster mother in other days.

All who have their faces to the sunrise can but be tremendously interested in Trinity's call to catch step for this advance in the glorious field of larger service.

HOW ARE THE MIGHTY FALLEN!

T. F. Glenn.

The writer perhaps was more intimately acquainted with Bishop R. G. Waterhouse than any other preacher in our church. I was his pastor when he was licensed to preach and he was my junior preacher during the first year in the ministry. We had charge of three towns in the Tennessee Valley—Kinston, Rockwood and Rhea Springs. He grew upon his father's farm near the latter place, a hale, hearty, cheerful youth with a bright, intelligent, benevolent face and an attractive physique. In the public school of the town he had won distinction as a declaimer. A wise old superannuate preacher living in the community cherished a high admiration for the boy—he felt sure he had discovered in "the egg," as it were, a future great pulpit orator. And the predictions of the veteran in-erant were fulfilled.

We fought shoulder to shoulder in this splendid field and under the guidance of the heavenly Paraclete won victories for our Lord's kingdom. A friendship grew up between us something like that of David and Johnathan—a friendship that grew deeper and stronger as the years went by. During this year he often visited us in the parsonage and he was almost as dear to us as an own son. After his health failed he wrote us that we were dearer to him since the death of his parents than any one else. We seemed like foster-parents to him.

After his election to the episcopacy at the Asheville General Conference, he came to me and putting his arms around me asked me to pray that the Great Head of the Church might give him strength and wisdom for his arduous duties. He seemed humbled rather than elated by his election to the great office.

He was a student in Hiawasse College one or two sessions. I think it was chiefly through our influence that he finally decided to go to Emory and Henry College. As president of this famous old college he was a worthy successor of the distinguished men who made the institution celebrated in the South. He had great executive ability—the college took on new life under his administration.

He was gifted with wit and humor which he inherited from his mother who was a sensible, quick-witted woman. He won golden opinions in the Old North State as a pulpit orator and as a presiding officer, when he held our Eastern and Western conferences. He showed that he was easily the peer of any member of the episcopacy. His old friends were delighted to know that his election to the highest office in the gift of the church was triumphantly vindicated.

He was a diligent student—mastered books and intermeddled with all knowledge. He devoted his activities, energies and enthusiasm to the cause of his divine Master.

He was a master of assemblies. In building his sermons he did not neglect method which is one of the chief merits of a public address. There was unity combined with orderly evolution, growth and progression—one idea naturally suggesting another.

The great themes of the gospel filled his mind with spiritual grandeur kindled and exalted his imagination. His pulpit ministrations took their coloring from the fundamental doctrines of the Cross: he regarded the Cross as the central fact of human history. He drew his arrows from the Almighty's quiver. He wielded a genuine Damascus blade of heavenly temper keen. He utterly repudiated the doctrines of the higher destructive critics like A. S. Truett, Spinoza, the Jew, Wellhausen, our American, Harry Fosdick and many others. He believed with St. Paul that all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, that holy men of old wrote and spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit.

Nature was partial to this gifted son of the Volunteer State, and richly endowed him both intellectually and physically—stamping upon his handsome face and commanding physique the signatures of nobility.

While president of Emory and Henry College he delivered an address on Christian education before the Western North Carolina conference in Asheville. I was delighted to see my old comrade on the platform. He was in the flush of manhood's prime—his deep bass voice was in good tune. Kindled by the inspiration and excitement of his theme and the presence of a great and appreciative audience it is not strange that such a master of thought and language should deliver a masterly and eloquent discourse.

SUPPERTABLE TALK

L. B. Hayes.

The girl is fourteen and an average ninth grader who has possibly had super-average opportunities. She speaks without embarrassment and represents the fine healthy minded type of American youth. The conversation turned to the topic of the preachers she had heard in her community and this experience was related with some laughter: "You know, it is funny since we had evolution in our high school nearly every preacher that I have heard tries to bring in something against the theory of evolution, and when they get on that we school girls look at each other and wink. They seem to think evolution is something awful and it tickles us." Her name is legion.

Are we surprised that boys and girls lose their respect for the church when high school children laugh at our preachers? When a man makes a dogmatic statement against the idea of evolution without intelligently discussing it there is but one of two conclusions possible. With average students: either he is ignorant or he is unfair and either consideration will seriously cripple him with his young folk.

On the other hand, while some interpretation of evolution seems to be the only tenable theory of the creation and development of things, it is not a solution of anything and remains the most unpreachable truth that can be proclaimed to the world that needs Christ. Dying men cannot wait on redemption by evolution—life is too short.

HEBREWS ELEVEN DESCRIBES TWENTIETH CENTURY MARTYRDOM

"They were stoned, were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword. They wandered in sheepskin and goatskin, being destitute, afflicted, tormented." . . . "They wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth."

This day is this scripture written, nineteen hundred years ago, concerning the martyrdom of the heroes of the faith, fulfilled again in the sight of all the world. The last decade is the most terrible page of modern history, and the most appalling paragraph of that page is that hundreds of thousands of Christians in the twentieth century have suffered the most horrible persecution, because they were Christians. We have been shocked by the destruction and death wrought by the war and by the horrors of the famine of China and Russia. But the Armenians are not suffering from the famine nor from the ordinary fortunes of war. They are suffering as martyrs to their Christian faith.

In 1915, taking advantage of the absorption of the great Christian nations in the war, the Turkish government officially decreed the absolute extermination of the Armenian people, and forthwith deported over one million of them into the Mesopotamian desert, where over eight hundred thousand perished. Since the close of the war, thousands more have been deported and slaughtered in the Cilicia and Black Sea territory. And at Smyrna although the war was with Greece and not with the Armenians, the Armenian quarter was the first to be attacked and after the most horrible looting, outrages and murders, it was totally destroyed by fire. The Armenian patriarch, Zaven, declares that over two million Armenians have been killed since 1915, not in battle with the Turks, but in deliberate, carefully-planned, cold-blooded massacres in their homes, by deportation in the "deserts and mountains and dens and caves of the earth." And these atrocities have been committed not only in the sight of, but in the face of the strongest protests of the great Christian nations of the world. But the Turks simply jeered at the protests and no government, not even our own, has dared to declare its purpose to protect the Armenians and to prevent further massacres of innocent, helpless, non-combatant Christians. No greater shame has come to Christendom in modern times.

As we have not prevented these atrocities, the least we can do is to care for the destitute, afflicted, tormented refugees and for the orphans of the martyrs. Because of the unparalleled nature of this great tragedy, our General Conference wired a special message to the President of the United States and appointed a special committee to care for the great need. That committee has set apart Sunday, January 21, as a special day, on which day it requests that all our pastors present to our people the facts concerning the persecutions and martyrdom of their fellow-Christians in Turkish lands, and also give opportunity to all our people to contribute to alleviate suffering and to save lives.

What shall we do? Shall we not show our genuine fellowship with our Armenian Christian brethren by ministering "to the fatherless and widows in their affliction?"

Contributions made by individuals, Sunday school, Epworth League, or congregation, may be sent to J. D. Hamilton, Treasurer, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

WELL-DIGGER, OR WELL-CLEANER, WHICH?

J. S. Gibbs.

In the twenty-sixth chapter of Genesis I find a very suggestive statement, "And Isaac digged again the wells, which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father: for the Philistines had stopped them up."

In the lives of Abraham, and Isaac, two different types of men are portrayed, but each in the scale of usefulness was of equal value.

In Abraham we have an unusual man, a very rare character. In his day he stood out as a giant oak in a weary land. He was not a dreamer, but a man of vision. He was led daily by the guidance of an invisible hand. He launched out from kindred and friends, and discovered and explored for himself unknown lands. We may truly call him a man of resolute firmness—a pathfinder. I will call him a well-digger.

Isaac, Abraham's son, cannot be called an unusual man. He is a more domestic character, one who is fully satisfied by traveling old paths, and drinking from familiar wells. Yet we cannot class him as less useful. I will call him a well-cleaner.

These two classes of men have meant much to the world. I may rightfully say that all constructive forces (i. e. so far as man is concerned) will come under the metaphorical head of either well-digger or well-cleaner. From a religious standpoint I am unable to say which has and which will prove most beneficial in the end when the scales of justice shall weigh every man's life. So I will confine these words to the praise of the well-diggers and well-cleaners.

As we drink from the many wells of life we should not forget the well-diggers, those who first probed the desert lands and brought out streams of water to a thirsty world. They have been comparatively few in number. Yet if you search diligently the history of the years, you will find the well-digger stationed as sentinels along the line. In the field of knowledge they have dug for us the wells of philosophy, science, invention, and religion, and have sought for and have brought to light mental and spiritual resources unbounded.

I know very little about philosophy, but I pause in reverence as I name the names of Plato and Aristotle; they who by their genius shaped the channel in which philosophic thought was to flow in the future.

In the other fields of science we should not hesitate to name the names of Kepler, Galileo, Newton, Fermat, and a host of others who were noted well-diggers.

As I approach the great fountain of religion, the fountain from whence all other streams flow, I again pause while naming those who have pierced deepest into its sweetness. Yet why should anyone hesitate to name the names of Abraham, Isaac, David, and the Apostle Paul? In the Biblical record Abraham stands at the head of the list as a religious well-digger. Through faith he was able to sink deep into the stream of sacrificial suffering, and stand out as a great father of faith.

Isaiah with a prophetic eye opened up the boundless stream of God's love, by telling to the world the promise of a coming King whose suffering and death would atone for its sin.

David proved the eternal goodness of God, and basked his soul in the sunlight of his love.

Paul masterfully connected the law and the prophets with the life and teachings of Jesus, forming a stream of theology, the same if kept open will quench a thirsty world.

Here is where I call your attention to the usefulness of well-cleaners. In these latter days I fear that many of our good men (but not well-diggers) in their mad rush for reputation and power have sought for fountains, and have dug wells in desert lands, leaving the true wells of our Christian fathers to be filled by the unmerciful hands of a skeptical world. They, too, have dug wells, and have brought forth bitter waters from the stream of death. The unceasing hands of a Philistine world are still at work. It has succeeded in burying deep many springs of the heart's true life. The wells are choked!

That is the sad fact on which we have to concentrate our toils. But that involves another fact, bright and inspiring and thrilling—the wells are there, for our fathers have drunk from them.

Isaac and his servants worked with a will, with a steady enthusiasm, amidst those piles of stone and heaps of earth. A bystander knowing nothing of the history of those desert spots might well have wondered at the sight of such hopeful toil amid such unpromising surroundings. But they who were doing the work were in possession of one fact that afforded them complete inspiration. They knew that there were springs of water if they only had the energy and patience to come at them. So let us do as Isaac did—willingly and patiently clean out the wells from which our father drank, knowing that he who drinks deepest shall receive the greatest reward.

Never in the history of the church has the need been so imperative, and the call so urgent as now, for real men who will unhesitatingly clean out the old wells, and urgently call the world to quench its thirst. We do not stand in need of new dogmas and a new theology. But we do need many faithful domestic characters like Isaac who will content themselves to the humble yet glorious task of well-cleaning.

FIELD NEWS

DIMMETTE AND SHALLOTTE

Just a few words that you may have a note to print. Mrs. Dimmette and children and I visited relatives in the western part of the state after conference, and on our return a few of the lady members had a good supper prepared for us.

Just before Christmas the Camp church at Shallotte brought in many good things to eat that the pastor and his family might have a good supply for Christmas.

The churches have made a good beginning and we are expecting and praying for a good year.

KENNEKEET CHARGE

At the last session of the North Carolina conference we were appointed to the Kennekeet charge. Two days later we left Raleigh over the Norfolk and Southern railroad for our new field. Leaving the train at Elizabeth City we got aboard the boat and came to Manteo, where we spent the night. At five o'clock the next morning we took the mail boat for Avon and reached here about one-thirty p. m. As we were drawing to the shore we saw something like fifty or seventy-five people standing on the bank waiting for the boat. We were soon informed they were there to meet the new preacher. Upon reaching the shore, Brother A. W. Price, our predecessor, was the first to shake hands with us. After receiving a hearty hand-shake from a number of others we were accompanied to the parsonage, where we found a nice dinner prepared for us. When the crowd dispersed we looked over the parsonage and found it well furnished.

Immediately after the appointments were read we were told that we would be happy here and we have found it true, as we have enjoyed every minute of our stay here so far. We have never met a more generous hearted people than we have found on this charge.

Since coming here we have been the recipients of a continuous pounding by different ones. On Saturday night before Christmas the people of Avon came together and gave us such a large pounding that our little girl, Agnes, wanted to know if we were going to run a store. We thought this was the climax, but to our surprise the church gave Brother Price and myself a nice fountain pen each for a new year's present.

The pastor's salary is paid monthly. We have a board of stewards who know their job and stay by it.

This charge is a three point work. We have three nice churches, three good Sunday schools, three class meetings, three ladies' aid societies and two Bible circle reading classes. The pastor was present at one of the Bible reading classes of which about thirty young people took part. We have a nice set of young people and you are going to hear from them later.

We expect to do our best for the Advocate this year. We are sending fifteen new subscriptions with check to cover. You need not doubt Kennekeet, for it is all right C. A. Johnson.

NOT SO BAD

There is nothing unusual about pastors being pounded. During the years of my active service as a pastor there was scarcely a year that my people did not soundly pound us. But some how or other I had the impression that when a preacher was superannuated poundings would be no more. If superannuates are frequently pounded they say very little about it, else I have overlooked it. I did see in the Advocate an expression of appreciation of a pounding given to a superannuate a short while ago, but I believe it was the first time I noticed anything of the sort.

REV. B. F. FINCHER

I am sending you a photograph of my old ugly self, and the old house in which I was born May 15, 1856, some two or three miles east of Waxhaw in Union county. It is now a dilapidated old building, having been moved some little distance from the old site several years ago and used as a barn, or shuck-pen, on the farm of Brother Leathan Richardson, a brother of Brother S. E. Richardson.

Brother S. E. Richardson and I were both born in this old house, and he and I both joined conference the same year. I regret so much that Brother Eli did not get his picture made with me and the old shuck-pen last year. He is so dwarf like in size and I so giant like it would be such a contrast to see.

Well, I am writing this to say to the readers of the Advocate that the people of Maxton administered to this writer and his good wife an old time pounding on the night of January 9th. Wife and I had spent the day trying to get things straight in our home on North Elm street, and we were somewhat tired as we sat by the fire and read. The first thing we knew a great multitude of men, women and children swept through the hall and into the room in which we were sitting, every one well loaded with packages, bundles and boxes. From this room the bearers of precious gifts to the expastor of dear old St. Pauls and his wife marched into the dining room with their burdens and deposited them on and under the dining table. It would require more space to mention all the articles brought to us than you would be willing to give for this letter, but I can truly say it was one of the severest poundings we have ever experienced or witnessed. Various and useful articles for use in the kitchen were not overlooked as the great quantity of groceries were collected for the visit. The best part of the occasion was the consciousness on our part that the love of the people among whom we have lived the past four years inspired the visit and the gifts. We found ourselves utterly unable to find fitting words to express our appreciation of the continued kindness of these dear friends, so we all bowed our heads and invoked the best blessings of the great Father upon them.

The good people at old Pleasant Grove have built a new tent and donated to me. I cannot express how much I appreciate all this kindness. This old camp ground is a very sacred place to me, as it was there where I was so graciously converted during a camp meeting in August, 1872.

I was licensed to exhort in 1881 by Marquis L. Wood, P. E. Then licensed to preach in 1884 by T. W. Guthrie, P. E. I was ordained deacon at New Bern in 1888 by Bishop John G. Granberry. Then ordained elder at Greensboro in 1900 by Bishop H. C. Morrison. I served as supply eleven years. I was received in the W. N. C. conference at Gastonia in 1901. This makes my thirty-third year in the pastorate.

After all, it is not so bad to be a superannuate, provided the superannuate lives in Maxton.

J. A. Hornaday.

CORDIALLY RECEIVED AT LAUREL SPRINGS

We were told before coming here we would find a good people. Have been received very cordially and made us feel at home by pounding us at once. We feel very grateful for all the kindness shown us.

We are planning and praying for a great year. They have just finished a pretty little church here, very comfortably and conveniently arranged; will install heating plant at once. Just organized an Epworth League here, and will have our first service Sunday night. Will let you hear later in regard to its work; planning to organize another league at another church on charge (Snead's Grove). Have a fine lot of young people and feel they can do a great work; have great confidence in our young people. These two leagues will make a great team for the Master. Pray for us.

W. J. DuBois.

WEAVERVILLE STATION

We were made glad at our conference at Monroe when the appointing authorities said that we were to remain at Weaverville for another year. Upon our arrival here last year we received a cordial welcome and since that time these good people have not ceased to show us kindness.

When we came we found a splendid new church building in the process of erection. The auditorium, pastor's study and four classrooms were being used. During the past year we have built the choir loft, and through the generosity of Mrs. C. R. Moore, a faithful member of our church, and Mr. H. A. Dunham of Asheville we have installed a fourteen hundred dollar organ. We have also completed our Sunday school department so that we have an excellent plant which is modern in every respect. Our kitchen and dining room has been furnished.

Besides, a splendid new nine-room parsonage has been built within the past three years. It has furnace heat, lights, water and all modern conveniences.

On the second day of last May I entered the hospital and underwent an operation. Through that and other sickness in my family, the consideration and care shown us by the congregation was nothing short of beautiful. Their devotion to their church is wonderful, as is clearly seen by what they have done and are doing. A finer group of people cannot be found anywhere. It is a pleasure indeed to serve them.

Weaver College is a great asset to our church and town. There is a group of splendid young people here this year again. It is a great opportunity, as well as a responsibility, to preach to them. Prof. A. M. Norton with the splendid faculty are working earnestly with these young people and they are doing a work that will tell in time to come. This is the ideal place for the school. We thank God for its record of the past, but let us make it even a greater institution in the future. Having such excellent church schools as we do, and realizing the urgent need of Christian education as we do, let us see to it that our boys and girls have the advantage offered them in our church schools.

Brother H. C. Sprinkle, our presiding elder, has been in for several days with influenza. He is much better at present, we are glad to report. We have a great deal of sickness in our congregation at present.

In our town, as in all others, we have some who are not Christians. We are praying for and expecting a great revival this year. Pray for us.

COOL SPRINGS CIRCUIT

January 14, the second Sunday in 1923, was spent with our hustling pastor, Rev. J. E. McSwain. He filled his regular appointment here and preached an interesting sermon.

We are all proud of our pastor. He is little but is loud. Pastor McSwain is serving his second year on the Cool Springs charge. The people are rallying to his leadership and are doing more than ever before, and doing it more easily.

Our Sunday school work is growing rapidly. Christians, let's keep praying. Prayer meeting at Clarksbury has been going on the third year—and Sunday school workers, let's not let it freeze out this winter!

The Ladies' Aid Society of this place is progressing nicely. We have 21 members on roll and each one is doing his part.

Our president, Mrs. Lacy Laither is sick. We are wishing for her a speedy recovery and that she will soon be able to fill her place.

Miss Bertie St ud, Asst. Sec.

FROM CHOWAN TO HALIFAX

The three years which we spent with the good people of the Chowan circuit were for us in most every respect very pleasant and happy and what we term most successful years. We found there some as faithful and loyal men, women, boys and girls as can be found anywhere—"the salt of the earth and the light of the world."

One week before our last conference session the good people of Anderson's church, with a few of the members of Center Hill church, gave us a large pounding which consisted of most everything to eat, with eleven nice chickens and ten dollars in money to touch it ff.

During the last days of the conference year we had quite a struggle to bring our finances out in full and this news reached Mrs. Mattie White of Hertfoia. She said, "Call on me before going to conference and I will give fifty dollars to help make up the deficit." This good woman has always known how to use her money to glorify God and bless the world. We were still in need of twenty-five dollars to make up the deficit at Center Hill church, and Miss Madeline Perry passed us a check for this amount. Blessings on these good women for the interest which they manifested on our behalf, and behalf of the Center Hill people and the kingdom of God.

At the close of our conference Bishop Denny read us out for the Halifax circuit, and when we were saying goodbye to the people of Center Hill some of our young friends said "Go to Halifax," and to Halifax we came.

We feel that "the lines have fallen unto us in pleasant places," for we have never found a more faithful and loyal people than we have here. They all know how to sing and a number of the laymen know how to preach.

Poundings in a small measure have been coming in both from the town and the country ever since we arrived, and on Christmas we went with a few of the brethren and children into every needy home we could find in and around the town and supplied them with clothing, food, toys and money. We also visited the sick for miles away and prayed with them. On our return in the late afternoon one of the brethren notified me that he and his family were coming around to sit with us after supper for a while, and about 7:15 they came, and for every ten minutes they kept coming until our living room was packed.

In a short while Santa Claus appeared ringing his bell and wanted to know if the Methodist preacher lived here; said that he had been inquiring where he lived and had been directed here. We told him this was the place, and asked him was he married. He said no, but wanted to be and that he paid for goods before he moved them, and as a fee he dropped a nice large hen in the floor. Well, with all that company I had a scuffle to catch her, and I at last caught the hen and that broke up the ceremony.

He then presented a present to the teacher of the Wesley Bible class, and one to the Sunday school superintendent and the teacher of the Wesley Bible class gave Santa Claus a present to carry to the president of that class.

Santa Claus called on a few of the brethren and they placed almost a cart load of provisions in the pantry.

We read the 23rd Psalm and prayed, speeches were made, and we had a touch of an old time Methodist revival, dismissed with prayer, said goodbye and parted.

May He who makes no mistakes make us a blessing to every home and every individual on this circuit, and may the first of the Holy Spirit be burning on the altar of our hearts and never go out. "Peace on earth, good will to men." Julian L. Midgette.

PRAY WITHOUT CEASING

Our Bibles tell us to pray without ceasing and one of the sharpest rebukes I have had lately came from a colored woman. This woman has been sick for some time and I have been in to see her several times. She has worked some for me during the past year and I had found her honest, truthful and the best of all a Christian. That afternoon I found her propped up in bed reading her Bible. I was in a teasing humor, so I jollied her about being afraid she was going to die, and she looked up at me and said, "I read my Bible all the time," and then she said, "Don't you think, my pastor came to see me today and didn't even pray with me." I said, "Well, if you wanted him to pray for you, why didn't you ask him." "Well," she said, "I thought if he wanted to pray with me he would." She said, "There have been mid-day prayer meetings all round here and they have not come here a single time."

Now what struck me so deeply was this, I had been in and out a number of times and yet could not remember a single time I had ever prayed for her, and there was her pastor who had even neglected it. If we are to "pray without ceasing," how very far some of us are falling short of God's demands. Mrs. Hattie Barlow.

THE BOYS WE LIKE

The boy who never makes fun of old age, no matter how decrepit or unfortunate or evil it may be. God's hand rests lovingly on the aged head.

The boy who never calls anybody names, no matter what anybody calls him.

The boy who is never cruel. The boy who never lies. Even white lies leave black spots on the character.

The boy who never makes fun of a companion because of a misfortune he could not help.

The boy who never hesitates to say "No" when asked to do a wrong thing.

The boy who never quarrels. The boy who never forgets that God made him to be a joyous, loving, helpful being.—The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

A CHASE BROTHERS PIANO IN EVERY SOUTHERN CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL

Superb Instruments Particularly Built for Such Work Offered at Special Price for Introduction Into Southern Sunday Schools and Churches

The Chase Brothers Piano needs no introduction into Southern homes. It has been for over half a century one of the most popular pianos in the country. Its excellent construction has marked it as one of the nation's leaders and its superb tone has won a place in the hearts and homes of thousands of Southerners.

It is likewise well-known and generally used in Southern Churches and Sunday Schools. But, the Chase-Hackley Piano Company has an ambition to place a Chase Brothers Piano in every Southern Sunday School and Church.

With this aim in view, one of their leading Pianos, Style A-2, has been especially perfected to fill the requirements of the Sunday School and Church, and this special instrument is being offered to churches and Sunday Schools throughout the South through their Superintendents and officers at a particularly low price. Thus, many Sunday Schools and churches are enabled, at little cost, to install a fine instrument particularly built for their use.

While many Chase Brothers Pianos are in use in the South, this special proposition only applies to Sunday Schools and Churches and is offered to encourage a development of Church and Sunday School music in the South.

Sunday School Superintendents and Church Officers may obtain this proposition in detail and secure more definite information in regard to Chase Brothers Pianos by applying to the Chase-Hackley Piano Company, 611 Virginia Railway Building, Richmond, Virginia, or by visiting their nearest Chase Brothers Dealer.

The Chase Brothers Piano, so popular throughout the South, is sold in many appropriate styles—Uprights, Grands, Players, Miniature Grands and Uprights, or Reproducing Pianos, all in standard finishes.

The Special Sunday School and Church Piano, Style A-2, is durable and will withstand the roughest usage, all types of weather and movement from one room or auditorium to another, without injury or retuning.

Its volume is full, its tone sweet and resonant, and its finish and design particularly pleasing.

EVERY BOY and GIRL SHOULD HAVE A BIBLE. The Bible is the word of God, the first Book of Books for the entire civilized world. The laws of Nations are based on the principles mentioned in the Bible. Its early impressions on the youthful mind are both beneficial and enduring. It builds character and its influence is toward Christianity and Right Living. It stands for all that is good and Noble and symbolizes the highest ideals of Life.

These Special Editions Have Been Prepared to Appeal to the Child's Own Interest

All efforts of the imagination and all descriptions in Words cannot make the Land of the Bible as real and vivid as a walk through it by means of Pictures. There has been so little change in that part of the Orient that pictures of its scenes as they now are show the very places as they actually existed in the time of Jesus and the Apostles.

The Colored Picture Styles illuminate in natural colors Pictures of scenes and places taken from nature; and life in the Holy Land in manners, customs, dress and homes as they now exist, but so like olden times that one may imagine oneself going about with Jesus as He healed, taught and walked through the streets of Jerusalem. Each picture is accompanied by a complete description of the scene portrayed.

SELF-PRONOUNCING SUNDAY-SCHOOL SCHOLARS' BIBLES with BEAUTIFUL COLORED PICTURES of Scenes in Bible Lands.

Also NEW PRACTICAL HELPS to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in Scriptural Information.

ANOTHER DAY

God gives thee, friend, another day,
A little space for work and play;
A time for faith, a time for love,
A time to lift thine eyes above,
And, seeing there a Face divine,
A time to catch its glow in thine.

Another day God gives thee, friend,
Thy small mistakes, perchance, to mend;

Thy joys with other hearts to share,
Thy help their heavy loads to bear.
From rise of sun to close of day
God bids thee serve and watch and pray.

Thou canst not tell how short or long
May be the hours till evensong;
But every moment may be bright
And beautiful in heaven's light
If evermore upon thy way
Thy grateful heart is wont to say:
"This little place is mine to fill According to my Lord's sweet will."

WHERE TROUBLES GO

A crowd of troubles passed him by,
As he with courage waited,
He said, "Where do you troubles fly
When you are thus belated?"
"We go," they said, "to those who mope,
Who look on life dejected;
Who weakly say good-bye to hope,
We go where we're expected."

A JAPANESE LEGEND

Hofus was a poor stonecutter in Japan. His food was coarse, and his clothing was plain, but he was happy and content with his lot, until one day he took a load of stone to the house of a rich man. When Hofus saw the evidence of wealth, he cried: "O, that Hofus was rich!"

As Hofus said this a fairy cried, "Have thy wish!" and immediately Hofus was rich. He ceased to work and lived in luxury and contentment, until one day he saw a prince with a snow-white carriage, snow-white horse, a golden umbrella, and many, many servants.

Then cried Hofus, "O, that Hofus were a prince!" No sooner had Hofus uttered his wish than he became a prince. Hofus was happy and content as a prince until one day, riding in his beautiful carriage under his golden umbrella, he sweltered and burned in the rays of the sun.

"The sun is greater than I," cried Hofus. "O, that Hofus were the sun!" Immediately Hofus became the sun, and he was happy and content until a great cloud came and entirely hid the sun.

Then cried Hofus: "The cloud is greater than I. O, that Hofus were the cloud!" Immediately Hofus became a cloud. Hofus was happy and content as a cloud, until the cloud fell as rain and swept everything before it except a great rock which stood unmoved by the torrent.

Then cried Hofus: "The rock is greater than I. O, that Hofus were only a rock!" Immediately Hofus became a rock, and he was happy and content as a rock, until one day a stonecutter came to the rock and began to split it.

Then cried Hofus: "The stonecutter is greater than I. O, that Hofus were a stonecutter!" Immediately Hofus became a stonecutter, as he had been before, and this time Hofus was really happy and content, for he had learned that there are great disadvantages in every station in life, and that the best place for each of us is exactly where God has put us.—From Story-Worship Programs, by the Exposition.

IN THE LAND OF BEGINNING AGAIN

I wish that there were some wonderful place

Called the Land of Beginning Again,
Where all our mistakes and all our heartaches,

And all of our poor selfish grief
Could be dropped, like a shabby old coat, at the door,
And never put on again.

I wish we could come on it all unaware,

Like the hunter that finds a lost trail;
And I wish that the one whom blindness had done

The greatest injustice of all
Could be at the gates, like an old friend that waits

For the comrade he's gladdest to hail.

We would find all the things we intended to do,

But forgot, and remembered—too late;

Little praises unspoken, little promises broken,
And all of the thousand and one

Little duties neglected that might have perfected
The day for one less fortunate.

It wouldn't be possible not to be kind
In the Land of Beginning Again;

And the ones we misjudged—and the ones whom we grudged
Their moment of victory here

Would find in the grasp of our loving handclasp

More than penitent lips could explain.

For what had been hardest we'd know had been best,

And what had seemed loss would be gain,

For there isn't a sting that will not take wing

When we've faced it and laughed it away;

And I think that the laughter is most what we're after

In the Land of Beginning Again.

So I wish that there were some wonderful place

Called the Land of Beginning Again,
Where all our mistakes and all our heartaches,

And all our poor, selfish grief
Could be dropped, like a shabby old coat, at the door,

And never put on again.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Hertford Methodist church met the first Monday in January at the home of Mrs. J. T. White. Mrs. White, who has been a faithful and efficient president for the past four years, presided. The various circle chairmen gave in their reports for the year.

This being the regular meeting for the election of officers Mrs. White, our president, in a few well chosen words told how much she appreciated the faithful co-operation of the society during her administration, and also stated that she did not wish to be considered for re-election.

The following officers were elected for the year 1923:

President—Mrs. R. E. Brinn.

Vice President—Mrs. R. M. Riddick.

Cor. Secretary—Mrs. W. H. Jenkins.

Rec. Secretary—Mrs. T. J. Niven, Jr.

Treasurer—Miss Kate Blanchard.

Local Treasurer—Mrs. Symon Rutenburg.

Asst. Supt. Young People—Mrs. C. Stokes.

Asst. Supt. Children's Work—Mrs. J. M. Weeks.

Asst. Supt. Study and Publicity—Mrs. R. L. Knowles.

Asst. Supt. Social Service—Mrs. R. T. Brinn.

Chairman Local Work—Miss Pattie Whedbee.

Before this meeting adjourned Mrs. Brinn, our new president, called a meeting for January 5th. of both the old and the new officers, to report on the work done during the past year and to start new work for the present year.

After the adjournment of our meeting we were delightfully entertained by our hostess, Mrs. White.

Mrs. R. L. Knowles,
Supt. Study and Puplicity.

GROWING WISELY

The Sunday school work of the Southern Methodist Church is growing rapidly. Better than that, it is growing wisely. One is impressed with this fact as he comes in contact with those who are developing policies. For four days preceding the annual meeting of employed Sunday school workers of Southern Methodism, now in session at Nashville, Tenn., it was my privilege and pleasure to meet with the general staff and five other conference workers of my kind to discuss policies to present to the larger meeting now in session and then to the General Board of Sunday School Work for ratification. While there have been many and varied differences of opinion as to detail, principles of a unified nature stand out pre-eminently. It seems to be plain that our work is solidly founded and wisely led. It is fundamental. When I get home I shall want to speak more in detail, but for the present am content to say that not only growth attends our Sunday school work but wise growth.

LEADERS AND LAGGERS

In the following tables are given the church membership and Sunday school enrollment for each charge in the Asheville, Charlotte, Greensboro, Marion and Mount Airy districts. The other six districts have already been reported in these columns. By noting these facts one can, in a measure, see where our Sunday school work is most emphasized. The first figures stand for church membership, the second for Sunday school enrollment and the third for Sunday school enrollment percentage on church membership.

North Carolina Conference

FINE NEW YEAR PROSPECTS

This new year, now just a few days old, gives promise of becoming a splendid one. From the Sunday school standpoint it has earmarks that are promising. As a conference, as districts, as charges and local schools, we are facing opportunities with the determination and, we believe, the assurance, that they will be met and that this is going to be the best year our Sunday schools have ever experienced.

Evidences are too numerous to mention. To be sure there are some few obstacles, but often it is the obstacles that make the task interesting. One of the most encouraging signs is the ever increasing interest and attention pastors are giving the Sunday school and its task of securing trained leaders.

For instance, Rev. A. J. Parker, of St. Johns and Gibson charge, sat down the first day of January and wrote as follows:

"I am at last hot on the trail of a teacher training class. Have arranged with the superintendent of the public school here to teach a class once a week on Wednesday night. I want you to tell me what book to get; want to shape the course so that it will fit in with the courses to be given at the training school next summer at Maxton."

This good pastor is not only working in his own school on the task of training leaders but is looking forward to sending a good representation to Carolina College, Maxton, for the standard training school August 6-11.

We take this as typical of what is engaging the minds of many of our pastors and to indicate that our leadership training work throughout the conference this year is going to surpass the good record of last year.

GENERAL COUNCIL SESSION

The fourteenth annual meeting of the General Sunday School Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was in session in Nashville, Tenn., January 9-15. This council is made up of the general board, conference superintendents of Sunday school work, elementary superintendents, conference board chairmen, directors of religious education, and certain outstanding college professors working in the field of religious education. These Sunday school leaders take council together at least once a year, compare experiences, and lay plans for the wise promotion of Sunday school work in Southern Methodism. The writer and Miss Keene represented the North Carolina conference at the meeting.

An interesting sidelight on the council personnel, which embraces the Sunday school leaders of the entire connection, is North Carolina's contribution. Holding membership in the General Council, in addition to North Carolina conference's representatives referred to above, are Prof. H. E. Spence, chairman of our conference board; O. V. Woosley, Miss Virginia Jenkins, and Rev. W. A. Lambeth, Western North Carolina conference superintendent, elementary superintendent, and board chairman, respectively; F. M. Williamson, a Tar Heel now serving as superintendent of Sunday school work of the Florida conference; and Dr. L. W. Crawford, a North Carolinian now a professor in George Peabody Teachers' College. Another man, almost a Tar Heel, is M. W. Brabham, superintendent of the Department of Sunday School Administration, formerly conference superintendent (field secretary) of the North Carolina conference.

Space will not permit a detailed account of the meeting. Suffice it to say that vital topics were considered, decisions arrived at, and plans made which are destined to carry forward, in a most progressive way, the great work which has made such rapid strides in recent years.

OUR CENTENARY PLEDGES

Southern Methodist Sunday schools pledges approximately $2,500,000 to the Centenary, of which amount about half has been paid to date. Our conference, of course, contributed splendidly to these pledges and to the paying. In order to carry forward the great work which has been started in new and old mission fields, however, there is a most pressing need that unpaid pledges be paid up to date. We are told that our mission board faces three alternatives, one or the other of which must be met between now and May 1: (1) Borrow about four millions of dollars, or (2) withdraw workers from the field, or (3) collect unpaid pledges. Our Sunday schools can help wonderfully if they will pay up and then continue to meet the pledges as they become due. As a part of the Sunday school's program of missionary education it cannot afford not to stand by its pledges and continue, as long as it exists, to teach its boys and girls the missionary spirit and to guide them in missionary service and giving. Mr. Superintendent, Mr. Class Treasurer, send that check to John E. Edgerton, Centenary Treasurer, Nashville, Tenn.

RALEIGH DISTRICT SCHOOL

Every Sunday school worker and pastor in the Raleigh district that can possibly do so is reminded of the opportunity to attend a Standard Training School at Edenton Street church January 28-February 4. This is to be the first standard training school ever held in the Raleigh district, and plans have been made to the end that it may be one of the best ever held in the conference.

Practical courses dealing with the various departments of Sunday school work will be offered, for which credit on the standard Sunday school course will be given. Through this school earnest workers are afforded an opportunity to become a more effective worker, and it is the hope of the board of managers that Sunday schools for miles around Raleigh will send their pastors, officers, teachers, and prospective workers. The following courses will be offered by the persons whose names are set opposite the courses:

Beginner Organization—Mrs. C. L. Van Noppen.
Primary Organization—Miss Keene.
Junior Organization—Mrs. E. R. Michaux.

Pupil Study—Prof. H. E. Spence.
Organization and Administration of the Sunday School—M. W. Brabham.
Don't forget the date. Let's make January 28 mark the beginning of even greater things through the Sunday schools of the Raleigh district.

ALL TOGETHER, WILMINGTON

February 11-17! Draw a red circle around these dates on your calendar if you live in Wilmington or vicinity. This is the week of the great co-operative training school for the Sunday school and church leaders of Wilmington and vicinity, and if you are in the least interested in the future of your Sunday school, it will be worth while to you to attend and take one of the seven courses to be offered.

It's to be a training school for both Methodists and Presbyterians. Our good friends, the Presbyterians, are going to share with us in this school in every sense of the word. They are going to be represented in great numbers. Let's be there, too.

EPWORTH LEAGUE SOCIAL

In order to increase the membership and attendance of the Walter Lambeth Epworth League of Stedman the league in September was divided in two sides, the White and the Gold. The contest continued until the last Sunday in December, when the score was counted, proving the White side ahead in membership and attendance.

As a fitting climax to this contest Miss Frances Taylor invited the league to have their social with her at the Methodist parsonage. Consequently about seven-thirty o'clock Monday night, January 1st, a joyous crowd of young people was welcomed at the parsonage door by Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Taylor and Frances Carter.

The reception hall, parlor and study had been tastefully decorated with potted ferns and other greens, adding cheer to the whole occasion.

When Miss Cornie Maxwell, our president, called this boisterous young crowd to order we thought, for the moment, that we were in school, but she relieved our minds by asking several questions that required answers to be gotten from the face of a two-cent stamp." Miss Mae Swann and Mr. Herbert Maxwell were the winners of the first prize in this contest.

Following this a refreshing course of hot chocolate, wafers and marshmallows was served, while entertaining selections were rendered on the piano by Miss Nancy Moose.

The hardest task of all came when we were asked to write our signatures in a legible hand. The attempts were judged and Miss Susan Carr won first prize.

At ten o'clock the merry party said "good-night" to their hostess, wishing that she would have a most successful and enjoyable spring term of work at Louisburg College, and return to have us meet with her again.

Cornie Maxwell, President.
Alice Averitt, Secretary.

NEWS FROM CHARLOTTE

The Charlotte Epworth League Union held its regular quarterly meeting on Monday night, January 8th, at Chadwick church with more than two hundred leaguers present. This being designated Missionary evening, Miss Blanche Gluck, fourth department superintendent for the union; had charge of the devotional meeting and Miss Flora Boone, president of the Hawthorne Lane League, read several passages of Scripture with special reference to missions. Miss Fannie Bame and Mr. Clarence Williams led in prayer and Miss Ruth Anthony, a life service volunteer and a senior at Queens College, made a very interesting and enjoyable talk on "The Call for Missionaries." During this part of the service the Charlotte Union orchestra rendered several selections. This was the first appearance of the orchestra before the union and many complimentary remarks were heard regarding the music they made.

Following the devotional service Mr. Jas. S. Sease, president of the union, took the chair and conducted the business meeting. The matter of subscriptions to the Epworth Era and our new conference paper was discussed by our Era agent, Mr. A. W. Phillips. Mrs. C. V. Fute, district secretary, spoke of the call for a Near East program and it was decided, in the absence of any instructions, that the leagues of Charlotte would have this program on the fourth Sunday night.

Mr. Sease then spoke of the coming efficiency institute and the conference to be held here in June and closed his talk with a plea for consecrated service on the part of the leaguers during the present year.

Chadwick won the attendance banner with one hundred per cent of her members present, and Trinity won the merit banner, tying with Dilworth on percentage but winning because a larger per cent of her members were present.

TRINITY LEAGUE NOTES

At the regular monthly business meeting of the Trinity League, held at the church on Tuesday evening, January 9th, reports of the work for the past quarter were made and the business of the league discussed.

During this meeting the remarkable work being done by our Intermediate League was brought to light and excited favorable comment of those present. This group of twenty-three young people are interested in their work and are being trained in a manner that is very gratifying. During the past three months these young boys and girls, with their leader, Mrs. R. E. Sease, made 106 visits to the sick and during the holidays distributed fruits and groceries to some needy families beside doing their regular work and raising their regular amounts for missions and other necessary expenses of the league. The efforts of Mrs. Sease with these young people cannot be too highly praised and the training of these boys and girls are getting is going to be of great value to the church in the years to come.

PASTOR DELIGHTED WITH EDENTON

It seems to me that a word from this field is in order. We were delayed by sickness in getting on the field, and did not get settled in the parsonage until Friday, January 5th.

We arrived on an early morning train and were carried to the home of Dr. W. A. Legget, who is chairman of our board of stewards, where we received breakfast and a most royal reception. To say we found things in "tip-top shape" is to express it mildly. A number of the ladies served a very sumptuous dinner for us at the parsonage and spent several hours with us. With it they had filled the parsonage pantry with all kinds of good things to eat, and we have not wanted for anything since we came to the field.

The people here seem to be made up of the "more excellent type," and everything points toward a fine work with them. Several meetings with the workers indicate that the work is in fine shape, and moving along in a splendid way. The church auxiliaries are doing good work and the church mission has steadily increased until the enrollment is now 118, which is the largest yet. We appreciate the appointment given us at the Raleigh conference, and though it's our first experience with the good people of the Methodist church, our primary aim is to make good and do the work our hands find to do.

J. Vincent Knight.

A LETTER TO METHODIST MEN

Dear Brethren of North Carolina Methodism:

Some of you believe intensely in educating boys and are less enthusiastic about girls. But the great majority of you believe in educating both boys and girls. Majorities are often wrong, but this majority is everlastingly right. Therefore I appeal with courage and hope to the intelligent and Christian men of my church and beg them to found at Paine College a scholarship for a North Carolina Negro girl.

Do not say "Let the women do it." The women will follow your lead, but the men have more money than the

IF BILIOUS, SICK! TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

You're bilious! Your liver is sluggish! You feel lazy, dizzy and all knocked out. Your head is dull, your tongue is coated; breath bad; stomach sour and bowels constipated. But don't take salivating calomel. It makes you sick, you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel crashes into sour bile like dynamite, breaking it up. That's when you feel that awful nausea and cramping.

If you want to enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight. Your druggist or dealer sells you a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents under my personal money-back guarantee that each spoonful will clean your sluggish liver better than a dose of nasty calomel and that it won't make you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is real liver medicine. You'll know it next morning because you will wake up feeling fine, your liver will be working, your headache and dizziness gone, your stomach will be sweet and your bowels regular. You will feel like working; you'll be cheerful; full of vigor and ambition.

Dodson's Liver Tone is entirely vegetable, therefore harmless and can not salivate. Give it to your children.

women and they have more authority as well as more experience in investing money. Besides, some women will help in a "man's enterprise" who would hesitate to invest in a "woman's dream."

There is no such scholarship as I mention at Paine College, but there must be.

Have you ever thought that your making an investment in the Christian education of our state's Negro girls would be a tremendously practical step toward the Christian solution of "The South's Negro problem?"

All students of life agree that no race can rise higher than the motherhood of the race. In every community there is a difference between the children of illiterate mothers and the children whose mothers are educated. This difference is not one of mentality so much as of manners and morals. The fathers may or may not be educated gentlemen, but they, much less than the mothers, get credit when the children turn out well, or the blame when a child disgraces the family. This rule seems at times unjust or untrue. It is nevertheless the rule by which civilization proceeds or retrogrades. What else means the proverbs, "The hands that rocks the cradle rules the world," "No truly great man had a fool for a mother," etc.? What is true of all races must be true of the Negro race. Its greatest need today and tomorrow is Christian mothers. Will you not, for Christ's sake, prepare one North Carolina Negro girl for the holy office of wife and mother by giving her a chance at Paine College? "Educate a boy, you educate one citizen; educate a girl, you educate a family." When the spiritually illiterate Negro girl becomes a mother, how great is the darkness of her family!

In the name of Simon, who first bore our Saviour's cross, in the name of Rufus and his mother, who was a mother to Saint Paul, in the name of John Wesley Gilbert, who labored with Bishop Lambuth for Africa, in the name of William Capers, who founded the Mission to the Slaves, I implore you, brethren, to do this service for the Negro race. Board and tuition for one year at Paine College is $160. If thirty-two men will give five dollars apiece, the scholarship is an accomplished fact for one year. If sixty-four men will give two dollars and fifty cents apiece, the beneficent task will be done. If one hundred men will give two dollars each, the scholarship and traveling expenses will be more than paid.

I already have in mind a young girl for the place. Will you not make her, yourself, and your Master happy by giving her "a chance" in Paine College?

I shall look eagerly for your responses through the columns of the Advocate. I hope to hear from some of you personally. My address is Mocksville, N. C.

(Miss) Alice J. Lee.

Our children are placed under renewed obligations to Hon. and Mrs. Josephus Daniels for their valuable Christmas gift of a piano. Each Christmas these friends of long standing make a donation to our children which contributes much to their happiness. We count ourselves fortunate in numbering Mr. and Mrs. Daniels among our most enthusiastic friends.

It would be a fine thing for individuals and Wesley classes to begin the new year by providing support for a number of our children. All who have undertaken it have been graciously blessed. I covet this privilege and blessing for all my friends. I shall be glad to correspond with all interested parties.

Christmas was a great occasion at the Methodist Orphanage. The Jenkins and McGee girls gave two plays which were well gotten up and beautifully rendered. The Cole boys gave a play which showed great talent. Their performance was highly enjoyed by the entire Orphanage family. During the holidays there were several sociables which brought much pleasure to the children. If you want to see the happiest set of children in North Carolina visit the Methodist Orphanage at Christmas time.

Christmas brought good cheer to our two hundred and fifty children. From many sections of the conference kind-hearted friends sent us gifts and good "eats." Ever since the Orphanage was established more than twenty years ago, the Methodists of Raleigh have counted it one of their highest joys to make glad the heart of our children. Never a Christmas goes by without having special attention shown us by the circles of Edenton Street church. These noble women led by Sister I. M. Proctor put a present for each child on the Orphanage Christmas tree. Most of the gifts are of real service to the children. To all of our devoted friends we extend our sincere thanks for their friendly remembrance of us.

MEHHDIST ORPHANS GIVE SPLENDID CONCERT

Sixteen boys and girls from the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh came up yesterday and gave a sacred concert at Front Street Methodist church last night at 7 o'clock. The church was filled and many sat in the Sunday school auditorium for the occasion.

There has never been a class of orphans here to give a higher class of entertainment than given by these boys and girls. Thirteen of the number were almost grown, possibly 15 or 16 years of age, while the other three were smaller. The entire class did exceptionally well. The vocal and reading numbers were classics and were given with a bearing and training and reverence that showed the splendid work done by the instructors at the Orphanage. Especial mention should be given the pianist, a charming girl of 16, who played with the skill and ease of a professional.

Rev. A. S. Barnes, superintendent, and Mrs. Nellie Rives, instructor, were with them and helped very much in the meeting. Mr. Barnes spoke and told of the aims and needs of the Orphanage and the record of some of their children. Mrs. Rives, who formerly lived here, had the training of the pupils and they showed her careful and gentle training. Her many friends were glad to see her again. The entire occasion was one of especial merit and consecration.—Burlington News.

GLORIOUS GIVING

We have no language to express our gratitude to God and the Baptists of North Carolina for their generous contributions this Thanksgiving season. Our treasurer has already reported about $70,000 and we have no doubt the offering will easily total $75,000.

No special pressure was brought to bear to secure this magnificent contribution. It was the spontaneous expression of a great people of their affection for this institution. We are happy in the thought that the Orphanage has behind it a people so willing and devoted and generous.

We wish we had the time and the space to mention many of the churches that made actual sacrifice in their contributions. Not all of them are so-called great churches. Some of them are the churches by the side of the road—the friends of man.

The wonderful orphanage spirit among the North Carolina Baptists has been all through the years, and is now, a great asset to the denomination. It has broken the crust in many a heart and let the sunshine in. All our institutions and organizations are the beneficiaries of this fine orphanage sentiment. This institution has been the pioneer to pave the way to the enlargement and spiritual development of our people.

It is to the orphanage a Thanksgiving day indeed; and it is no less blessed to the givers who made the day glorious, for, after all, it is more blessed to give than to receive. At the orphanage hour in the convention today the most appropriate song will be the long metre doxology.—Charity and Children.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

It is sad to turn from the page of Christmas joy and pleasures to a chapter of anxieties and difficulties attendant upon an outbreak of the "flu" in the Home.

First a few cases started with the little boys and then they began to get sick in larger numbers. Soon the limited space in the infirmary was filled. The sewing room and store room in the Gray building were then cleared out and filled with twenty beds for the girls who began to be taken down. Then one dormitory in the Tise building was appropriated to the sick among the larger boys.

As the first boys to be sick became convalescent they were moved back to their own building and a convalescent ward started in the study halls. The High Point infirmary was again filled, this time with girls. Up to this time there have been more than eighty cases.

It is a pathetic sight to see whole rows of beds filled with sick children. Fortunately not many of them have been very ill—a few had fever that was a little alarming, but so far they have withstood the disease without complications.

Among the teachers and officers only Mrs. Hasty, matron of the little boys' cottage, Mrs. Duncan of the Cornelius Cottage, and Mr. Bradshaw, the principal of the school, have been ill.

Mrs. Thompson has a well organized nursing force and is kept busy seeing that all needs are supplied at the three different infirmaries.

We have four trained nurses and two other nurses, who are sparing no pains and labor to make their patients comfortable and get them well.

School has been suspended for a week and the teachers have been doing efficient service as nurses' helpers and assistant matrons. We are fortunate to have a corps of teachers of such fine spirit and resourceful intelligence.

Mr. Bradshaw was much missed when the flu took him out of the working force and put him to bed.

Mr. Efrd and John M. have fortunately remained well and have been kept on the go early and late, doing everything that two such handy men could where there is so much to be done.

John M. even dreams of keeping busy in his sleep. His roommate says he called out in his sleep the other night: "Yes 'm,I'm coming, I'll be there directly!"

The kitchen and the laundry are kept active on reduced force. While meals for the sick and fresh sheets for the infirmary make extra work, of course.

Paul C. is sick and the superintendent is building his own furnace fires, as well as looking after the sick and well, the office business and extra demands of various kinds. He gets up so early now and makes his last round so late that he is likely to have the experience of the Irishman who was hired to a hustling western farmer—meet himself getting up in the morning when he turned in to bed at night.

But the worst of our flu experience is over, we hope. All the sick are making a successful recovery so far. While the anxiety of having so many sick at once is trying, there is much to be thankful for.

Martha M. Wood.

SOME THINGS ARE WRONG

Why is it that some folks are all of the time clamoring for modification of the prohibition law and saying the people do not respect it, while theft, murder, picture shows and virtue are violated more than ever before and not a word is said about repealing; except I notice that there is one representative in the state legislature who offered a bill to repeal capital punishment. God save that man—capital punishment has always been recognized as just and right by God's holy word.

I contend that society is responsible for all of these violations of law and morals. About twenty-five years ago a prominent Republican of Chicago in Congress in closing the debate on seating a man from Salt Lake City, on a question of morals, declared that the people were watching to see what Congress would do with this bill, saying, "Away down South in Dixie honor is religion, galantry is law and virtue the highest ideal of a beautiful young womanhood."

How is it today the bars are down on murder, theft, virtue, politics and picture shows? I claim that society controls all of these. Fathers and mothers, your family religion is defective. We must erect family altars, read and study God's word, live clean and pure lives before our children, have them regularly at Sunday school and church, educate them in Christian colleges where God's word is a regular part of the curriculum, have them baptized, let them grow up in pure, clean society, and read good books. Then look after our friends and neighbors who do not belong to any church or Sunday school, cultivate them and do all in our power to bring them into God's kingdom; pray with them earnestly each morning and evening. No person is too mean or low down for God's grace to reach down and save him. The men and women who are leading clean lives must take hold of society and purify it, must do their duty in politics, etc. You cannot stand aloof for fear of getting your garments soiled. God demands of each of us to help to save the world.

Our society has been shorn of its high standing of virtue by the picture shows. Will the legislature let them run and carry the states to hell, or close them and lift the states by the mighty fulcrum of its power to its former high standard of society and virtue?

Our Sunday school teachers must invite their classes to spend the evening occasionally with them and through their scholars invite those of their neighbors who do not attend any Sunday school. Statistics tell us that there are in North Carolina 883,390 persons under twenty-five years of age who have no religious instructions at home, nor have they ever attended any Sunday school, which is about one-third of our population. Educators tell us that those of this number entering college have blunted or hardened moral natures, making it difficult to interest them in religious subjects.

Dedicated to my own mongrel, "Casey"
Bertha Lyon McKinney.
He hasn't any pedigree,
He isn't much on looks,
You'd never find a dog like him
In any story books;
He's jes' my dog.

In color he's as yaller
As the onryest yaller cur,
But when I think of his devotion
It fills my eyes with blur;
He's jes' my dog.

He wouldn't bring a dollar
If I wish'ed ter hev him sold,
But every single yaller hair
To me is purest gold;
He's jes' my dog.

THE DOG WHO TRAMPED 592 MILES

Recently the newspapers have been publishing a remarkable story of a dog, shipped by express from East St. Louis, Ill., to Owen, Wis., a distance of 592 miles, who, after three months and a half, turned up at his old home, emaciated, and hungry, having been thirty days on his long hike back. The story was so unusual that we wrote to the original owner, Mr. George Schaub, assistant foreman of the Wiggins Ferry Company, who lives in Centreville Station, a suburb of East St. Louis. Promptly came this reply about his collie:

November 18, 1922.

I was glad to hear that you are interested in the record of our dog "Shep." There is no mistake in the newspaper account. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch reporter heard about the dog and came from St. Louis to get his story. Shep was about fourteen months old, when, on November 16, 1921, we shipped him to my wife's aunt, Mrs. John Welty, who lives on a cattle ranch at Owen. He stayed at Owen, Wis., till January 30, 1922, as we learned from Mrs. Welty, who wrote soon after, telling us that he had disappeared. On March 2, 1922, at 4 o'clock, Shep appeared at our door. He was a skeleton, his hair was matted down, his feet were worn and almost bleeding, his toenails were worn off. He sat down in my kitchen and cried as though he was a human being. When the children asked him, "Shep, did you come home?" he would cry. And the children cried, and my wife almost cried. When I came home, Shep cried again. He could not bear for us to leave him a moment. When he would lie down, he would growl, as he seemed completely worn out. For two weeks we had to treat him very tenderly. We have now broken him of his whining ways. There can be no mistake about his being my dog. I could not believe he was, as all collies look so much alike, till I recognized his only distinctive mark—his tail was broken at the third joint. Shep is the life of our family now. He will never be sent away again. I am sending you his picture. Thanking you for your interest.

Geo. Schaub.

DOROTHY'S LITTLE POEMS

I am a little girl eleven years old. My name is Dorothy Newsom. I wrote a letter to you and saw my name in the Christian Advocate. Two or three times when I didn't have anything to do I made up a few short verses. One night when I was already in the bed I made up this one:

Good Night.

Good night to everybody,
Good night to everything,
Good night to the crickets
And to all the birds that sing.
Good night to the sweet fresh air,
Good night to the odor of spring,

Good night to the stars that watch me,
Good night to everything.

One time I was coming through the country from a visit and I made up this one:

Now I'm On My Knees.

And now I'm on my knees to pray,
I ask: "Have I done my duty today?
O have I done the things I should
To make me kind, loving and good?"

I am in the fifth grade. I had to make up a verse to hand in, so this is what I made up:

The Knitting Cat.

I had a cat that learned to knit;
Upon a sofa she would sit,
And twist the thread both in and out,
And turn the needles round about.

(Dorothy, we are delighted with your poems and know that the readers of the Advocate will be.—Ed.)

AMY'S REVENGE

By Mabel Ingold.

Amy bit her pencil lead indignantly, her whole face livid with anger. "I hate you, Belle Brown!" she cried. "Till, I'll—"

The other laughed scornfully. "What would you do really, Amy Moore?" she teased, "except give my apple back?"

Amy sank into her seat sobbing. It was her third year at school and it was Belle's fourth. But they were both in the same grade. All Amy's efforts to make friends with her little classmate were in vain. Belle, her senior by three years, who lacking Amy's bright, quick intellect, regarded her ever with a feeling of intense jealousy, finding an endless source of delight in annoying her little schoolmate.

One morning during recess Belle's large red apple disappeared from upon her desk. Amy who had spent the entire period in the school room was of course the one to whom Belle turned accusingly. "You know you took it, Amy," she cried. "There was no one in here at recess but you." "But Belle, I didn't," protested the other earnestly. "Of course you did," retorted her schoolmate, grieving over what to her was a great loss. "I bet you hid it! Give it to me, 'cause I want my apple."

"I haven't seen your old apple!" cried Amy hotly. To be accused of such dishonesty was more than she could endure. "I don't know who took it, but I didn't." But Belle ignored her and turning angrily left the room.

That evening the two parted without a word. The vexed and angry because of her loss, the other miserable and indignant.

"Oh, how could she accuse me of such a thing?" sobbed Amy as she walked homeward. Suddenly her slender form stiffened, the curly head was tossed resolutely back, and with quickened pace she turned in at the front gate. She would show Belle Brown that she didn't care a mite what she said about her. She would have—revenge for Belle's hateful conduct. How dared she to accuse her of such a shameful act.

The next day the two exchanged not a word and the following evening Amy was more miserable than ever. She had tried very hard to make friends with Belle and this was her reward. She told herself that she would never try again. It was a pleasant afternoon and Amy decided to go home by the meadow. True it was nearly half a mile farther, but the sun was so warm and bright and it was still early it would be a long while before dark. Amy was sure she could see the small minnows in the big meadow brook if the recent rain had not raised the water too much. Thus resolved she turned her course and strolled down the field road leading through the meadow to her home. As she neared the brook which ran through a clump of alders she heard

If your child is listless, full of cold, has colic, or if the stomach is sour, breath bad, tongue coated, a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" will quickly start liver and bowel action. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works the constipation poison, sour bile and waste right out and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today may save a sick child tomorrow. It never cramps or overacts. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

voices. Instantly she recognized her would-be friend, Belle, and her little two-year-old sister. The latter was playing upon the bank of the swollen stream, for the rain had raised the water even more than Amy had dreamed. Belle was gathering some late fall flowers some few yards distant.

Amy suppressed a startled cry, for the child was leaning forward, gazing as though fascinated into the swirling muddy water of the meadow brook. And even as Amy watched she lost her footing and fell face downward into the angry stream. She uttered a terrified cry which caused Belle to turn in alarm just as Amy plunged into the rushing water. A few minutes later she struggled to the bank carrying her dripping burden which she placed in the sister's outstretched arms. "Here she is. I caught her as she started to sink the third time. Spread my coat on the bank here and lay her down," commanded Amy almost exhausted, scrambling up on the bank and taking from the sobbing Belle her burden she placed it upon the coat. The fact that Amy was only eleven did not prevent her having a distinct knowledge of what she must do in case of drowning. The last summer had been spent near the seashore where she had once seen her father restore a drowning man to consciousness. Therefore when she realized that Belle's little sister had all but been drowned she set about anxiously to restore her. It was a hard task, but Amy worked faithfully. First loosening the wet clothes and freeing the lungs of water, then alternately compressing and expanding the lower ribs. At length the blue eyes opened and met Belle's tear-filled ones. The child was saved. For half an hour Amy had worked faithfully; during this time neither had spoken.

"Now I must go," said Amy, catching up her books and lunch box. Take May home and put on some dry clothes. Just leave her wrapped in my coat until you get there; I won't need it." "Wait a minute," pleaded Belle. "Let's be friends, can't we? You've saved May and I'm so ashamed of myself."

"Do you think I took your apple?" queried Amy, hesitatingly. "No-o," admitted Belle blushing. I knew all the while you didn't, but somebody did, and I wanted to believe it was you, but somehow I couldn't. Oh, Amy, I was so hateful.

The other smiled happily and she realized that she had had her revenge.

CHRISTMAS VAGARIES

By R. E. Atkinson.

The Christmas tide is the most universal of all holidays, and, perhaps, the true meaning and spirit is least understood by the populace. Christmas was made possible by the advent of the Christ, who was given for a lost world. He was a gift. We celebrate during this holiday with songs of joy and gladness, and present gifts to our friends to extend the greetings of the Christ spirit, that the recipient's joy might be full. In presenting gifts, we do not only imitate the ancients and the Magi, but we tner into the spirit of our Lord who was born on this glad good day. As he walked among men he frequently taught that "It is more blessed to give than to receive." The angels o'er the Judean hills sang, the shepherds worshiped, and the wise men worshiped and gave Him rare gifts—gold, frankincense, and myrrh. He who is versed in the true spirit and meaning of the Christmas tide, would think as he observed the general practices and customs of this generation, that the chief thing to do during the Christmas holidays is to have a big glorious time. To eat, drink, and be merry. To pamper a selfish and sensual life. To look forward to, and plan and pray for a superabundance of plum pudding, turkey and cranberry sauce.

The child life is literally overwhelmed by the spirit of selfishness and greed. Overwhelmed in body and soul. The chief business of many parents and children is to display what they have received. Parading a personal and selfish pride, which is absolutely foreign to the Christ and true Christmas spirit. Multitudes soo no farther than Santa with his pack of toys, nuts, and confections. They magnify his generous spirit and ubiquitous nature by telling o'er and o'er how he visits every home in every land, and distributes his gifts to the children of men.

The big thing, and the glory of it all with the masses, is to get the goods and feast in frolic and fun to the breaking point—until hob-goblins haunt and stare till the wee hours of the morning, and cries of fear and pain supplant the songs of praise. Christ is buried so deep beneath the boxes, parcels and packages that His name is rarely mentioned and seldom associated with the Christmas festivities. The little ones know that Christ was born, as we say, on Christmas day, but he is seldom thought of as the one who makes all good gifts possible. As the mind of the child develops it begins to ask questions about Santa's funny freaks and fun—how it is possible for him to do so many unusual things in such a short time. The answer to most of their inquiring and anxious little minds receive is an untruth. They are kept duped with a myth, and dismissed, often, because the parent would rather keep the child in ignorance than depart from, or break faith with a mythical custom and spirit, which was born in the home and age of heathenism.

I take pleasure in quoting a statement made by Dr. Chas. D. Bulla, corresponding secretary of the Sunday School Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and printed on one of the posters sent out by the Sunday School Board for the purpose of evangelizing the Sunday school. First, because the statement is timely, and second, because multitudes of Methodist parents do not seem to know the crime of keeping their children duped and deluded relative to Santa Claus. The statement of Dr. Bulla is as follows:

"The old-fashioned Christmas came to that home. Of course the children found out that Santa Claus and father were one and the same person. But for all that there was an unflinching interest in the reindeer and sleigh and the strangely filled stockings. What if father and mother were in partnership with the kindly old man from the land of snows?"

I repeat Dr. Bulla's question: What if the child does know that father and mother are in partnership with Santa Claus? The real joy and pleasure of the child on Christmas does not depend upon its dense ignorance of Santa Claus.

It is not objectionable to indulge in the lighter, superficial and prevalent spirit—Santa, providing, however, the weighty and more important matters pertaining to the child's salvation be not neglected. Let one play the roll of Santa, if they may, and relish a plenty of fine fun, but see to it that the finer, fuller, and deeper meaning of Christmas encircle every tree and pervade the air. That every child see more and feel more on Christmas day than is expressed in the burning yule log or twigs of holly, which are mere relics of a Druidical and pagan ceremony. The Christmas tide is no time for "taps" and the throb of muffled drums, the musketry, and the roar of cannon. These are the accompaniments of Independence day, and the implements of war. To herald the birth of the Prince of Peace with the habiliments of war is a real travesty—yes, a parody, simple and pure. To join in the chorus of the angels: "Joy to the world the Lord is come," is not to give occasion to casualties—tetanos, blinded sight, and mangled and maimed body and limbs, but to seek to establish peace on earth and good will toward all men.

"Sambo, what's a university?" "A university am a place where they teaches yuh how to stawve to death in a gentlemanly an' cultured manah."—Life.

The Boll Weevil gets a blow from an entirely new quarter-

Cotton farmers will be glad to know that fresh help against the weevil is now offered in the trustworthy old Royster fertilizers. The formulas have been revised in the light of new discoveries, to make plant food more quickly available.

For nearly forty years Royster fertilizers have been known as reliable—and this season they will be more satisfactory than ever before.

Promotes Early Growth

As soon as Government demonstrations proved the value of early maturity, the entire resources of the Royster organization were turned upon revising formulas so the cotton farmer could profit by this knowledge.

The phosphoric acid and the nitrogen in Royster brands have been made more quickly available to push plants to early maturity. Only the scientifically tested and proven materials, for which Royster is famous, are used.

Ask Your County Agent

Your county agent will tell you the tremendous importance of this. Get his advice in your weevil fight. Plant less cotton, plant earlier, use enough Royster fertilizer, cultivate often, gather damaged squares, poison with calcium arsenate and destroy stalks early. Do these simple things and any good farmer can grow cotton despite the weevil.

Study Fertilizer

Learn to use fertilizer in ways to earn the most money from it. Fertilizer differs in quality just as seed. To save $1 a ton, don't risk your time, labor and money put on a crop by using fertilizer of doubtful reliability. Royster formulas contain only material which has been chosen because of its special value to that particular crop, scientifically tested for its quality and compounded skillfully in the proportions experience has proven right. Every bag of genuine Royster fertilizer has the F. S. R. trademark plainly stamped on the back.

Experiment station tests prove the profit in using the right quantity of fertilizer. You wouldn't sow a handful of wheat to the acre. Don't skimp the fertilizer. On cotton, use at least 600 pounds and if possible 1,000 pounds to the acre.

A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

OBEYING OUR MARCHING ORDERS

In a very true sense, in propagating the gospel there is no "foreign field," for in God's sight the world is one, and all human beings are the children of his household. For convenience we divide our missionary activities into "home" and "foreign."

All true missionaries begin at home. The twelve had these marching orders first: "Into any city of the Gentiles go ye not, . . . but to the last sheep of the house of Israel." To have sent them abroad, with their limited training and confused conception of the kingdom, would have been disastrous both to them and to their message; but they were able to speak to their countrymen, which was at once a test of their ability and a training and preparation for larger orders. Men and women should never be sent abroad who have shown no fitness for work, nor success in the same, at home.

Tolstoy said: "The greatest modern sin is abstract love for humanity, impersonal love for those we neither know nor see. There is no need for sacrifice in such love; we are so pleased with ourselves, and the conscience is fooled. We must love our neighbors, those we live with and who are in our way and embarrass us." This is good doctrine, for the man or woman who brings things to pass in the foreign field will have had a record of doing things effectively at home.

After a successful mission at home, after the clearing and confirmation of their faith by the resurrection of Jesus from the dead, the eleven received the larger "marching orders"—viz.: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," etc.

The Duke of Wellington was once asked: "Is it any use to preach the gospel to the Hindu?" "What," said the Duke, "are your marching orders?" "O, our orders are to preach the gospel to every creature," was the answer. "Very well," said the Duke, "you must obey orders." This was the voice of a soldier who had sworn allegiance to his country and trained himself to carry out the orders of those having its best interests in charge. Shall a soldier be more loyal to his rulers than we to the great Captain of our salvation who has the welfare of the world in His commands?

When the proposal to evangelize the world was brought before the Scotch Assembly in 1796 it was met with a resolution to the effect that so long as there remained an uneducated or unsaved person at home, it was absurd and preposterous to talk of sending missionaries abroad. Whereupon Dr. Erskine called to the moderator saying, "Rax we that Bible!" and read the words of that great commissioner which burst upon the assembly like a thunderbolt and changed the assembly into a great evangelizing agency. There's no dodging our "marching orders," when once we look squarely at them. "Someone has blundered" was the explanation of the slaughter of the gallant six hundred at the charge of Boloklova, but their fame and glory were in being true to their orders. No "blunder" is bound up in the marching orders of our Lord. Tough we die in fulfilling them, we shall "conquer though we die." It was such a spirit of faith in God's promise and obedience to His command that produced the courage and fortitude and patience of Robert Morrison and William Carey.

The late Gen. Frederick Funston, while a colonel in the Philippine Islands one held a strategic and perilous position which seemed almost impossible for him to maintain, the odds against him were so great. General Otis sent him this message: "Col. Funston, how long can you hold your position?" Quickly Funston sent back the reply: "Till I am mustered out." Such was the stuff of which Morrison and Carey and a host of others who have gone forth to execute their "orders" of their Lord were made. If only the church of today were imbued with such courage and confidence, the world would speedily be conquered at the feet of Jesus.

"The love of Christ constraineth me." So surely as we have any love at all for Him, we are going to have enough for our fellowman to believe that His "orders" are neither impracticable nor impossible. A child lost in the swamps, half starved and almost frozen, was found by a searching party. Its first words were: "I want to see my papa." It is to answer this cry for the Father God, by our brothers in all pagan lands that Jesus orders us forth. Have we love enough to go? Our own salvation and glory are bound up with our obedience to this command. The locomotive, automobile, and gas range have a glory in proportion as they fulfill the service for which they were intended and their preservation hinges upon the rendering of that service. Failing to do so they are relegated to the scrap heap. The flavor and value of salt is in its saving power, and the value of the lamp is in its power of illumination. If neither salvation nor light proceeds from us as individuals or churches we are cast upon the scrap heap or trodden upon the highways. Someone asked Sam Heggenbottom, a missionary to the lepers of India: "Is it safe to work among the lepers?" "Yes," he replied, "if it's my job to work among the lepers, it's safer than for me to work anywhere else."

The only place of safety for any of us who name the name of Christ is inside His marching orders and not outside of them.—Rev. T. C. Ragsdale.

IN MEMORIAM

SPEIGHT—W. H. Speight, who died near Hookerton, N. C., in the home of his son on November 29, 1922, was about eighty-five years old, and had lived the greater part of his life in Green county. He was one of the old members of the Methodist church of this section and lived a loyal, faithful life. He left a large family connection, all of whom have our prayers and sympathy, and commend to them the God of their father, who kept him in the sunshine and the shadows.

R. R. G.

TUNSTALL—On November 11, 1922, in the little town of Maury, Green county, N. C., the spirit of Mrs. Sallie Tunstall left us and now dwells "in the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Indeed we miss her—in her home, her church, her friends in the community—all very keenly her absence. She lived sixty-seven happy years. She joined the Methodist church early in life and died happy in its service. To her devoted husband, W. J. Tunstall, who misses her so much, we offer the Word she loved so much. May its promises become sweeter as he comes into the untold days. May the memories of holy motherhood bless her son and her grandchildren.

R. R. G.

KNIGHT—On December 9, 1922, the death angel knocked at our home and called our dear little son, Archie Joseph, to a home not made with hands, where he will know no sorrow, and where death will never come. Joseph was two years, ten months and 28 days old. He was a bright little sunbeam too all who knew him. His going away has left our home sad and lonely, but yet we are glad to know that Jesus gave him and has only called him home. He contracted membrane croup and did not live long. He wanted to go to see granddame, but did not get to go. His remains were taken to Camp Ground church and gently laid to rest beside his little brother, who preceded him to the grave. May we all strive to meet him some sweet day.

From Mother, Aunt, Grandmother.

HERRING—Mrs. Katie Winders Herring, wife of J. A. Herring, was born August 9, 1868, married June 21, 1890, and died October 13, 1922.

She was converted in early childhood and joined Mt. Gilead Baptist church, but soon after her marriage she came to Trinity M. E. Church, South, Sampson county, Magnolia charge, with her husband, in which she lived a faithful and consistent Christian life till the end came.

Her husband and seven children survive her—Mrs. P. D. Merritt, Mrs. J. M. Devane, Mrs. J. H. Herring, Mr. Atwood, James and Inez Herring, and nine grandchildren.

The church has lost a strong supporter, the community a comrade and friend, the home a helpmate and mother. Weep not for the deceased, but prepare to meet thy God.

T. W. Lee.

NUNN—On the night of December 31st Mrs. Ida Joyce Nunn fell asleep to rise no more to the cares and duties of this earthly scene. She had been sick several days, but apparently was in no danger, laughing and talking as usual the afternoon before she died. Her sudden and unexpected departure was an awful shock to her family and friends. Mrs. Nunn was a woman of decided character, sincere, independent and energetic, commanding the respect of the whole community.

Left a widow when really young she managed by hard work and economy to raise five children, who were devoted to her. She is gone and will be sorely missed, not only by her family but by her church, Sunday school and missionary society of which she was a regular and faithful attendant. But we will say of her in the words of the poet:

"Come not back again to sorrow,
Come not back again to suffer,
Where the famine and the fever
Wear the heart and waste the body."

May the Lord comfort her loved ones in this sore trial.

Mrs. W. G. Bell.

MAUNEY—With sadness and regret we report the death of our beloved member, Sister R. S. Mauney, who was 66 years old.

Sister Mauney has been a true member of the M. E. Church, South, since childhood days. In this church she rendered great service till God said, "It is enough."

It was on December 11 that God sent his death angel and took from our midst our beloved sister.

Sister Mauney's home was always welcome to the ministers. There was never a time but what she was ready to lend a helping hand to those in trouble. She also realized her time was drawing to a close, and she said that she had a happy band to welcome her on the other side, and above all she said, "Jesus will welcome me." So she had on the garment of readiness and death was only sweet for her. Heaven is not reached at a single bound;

But we build the ladder by which we rise

From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,

And we mount to the summit round by round.

May the blessings of the great God rest upon the bereaved ones.

Rev. T. L. Noble.

SORRELS—Ida Scoggins Sorrels was born June 6, 1870, and departed this life December 30, 1922, age 52 years, six months and 24 days.

She was married to Virgil O. Sorrels on December 1, 1894, and to this union was born five children, Roswell K. Sorrels of Cliffside, N. C., Frank and Joe Sorrels of Caroleen, N. C., and Mrs. Geo. F. Spratt and Laurence Sorrels of Gilkey, N. C., all of whom with her beloved husband survive.

She was converted in early girlhood and joined the Baptist church and remained a consistent member of the same until the early part of 1922, when she joined the Methodist church at Gilkey with her husband.

Her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Gilkey on December 31, 1922, and on account of the illness of her pastor, Rev. J. P. Hornbuckle, the funeral was conducted by Rev. J. O. Ervin, pastor of the Rutherfordton Methodist church.

The large number who attended the funeral and the beautiful floral offerings attest the high esteem in which she was held in the community.

She was a true friend and neighbor, a devoted wife and mother and will be greatly missed in the home, the church and the community. C. F. Cline.

MRS. LOUISE HOYLE CLEGG

The subject of this sketch was favored with a well-bred, patriotic and noble parentage—Capt. Lemuel J. and Mrs. Mary Ella Round Hoyle. And right worthily did she bear this nobility of gentle birth, gentle manners, and gentle devotion to principle and duty.

In early life she gave her heart, life and endowments into the possession, control and service of the Savior. Her faith was more than a formal homage paid to Deity, more than a passing fancy for the gifts of God, and even more than a coin of exchange for the peace, joy and love of Christ. She found in her simple, childlike trust a bond of union with her Lord more beautiful than the garlands of Eden, more precious than the gold of Ophir, and more powerful than the armies of Armageddon.

On November 27, 1901, she united her heart, life and fortunes with those of Mr. Mark B. Clegg. Shortly afterward her willingness and anxiety to serve made it easy, yea, delightful for him to heed the divine call to exchange the teaching profession for the highest of all vocations—the Christian ministry. And a more loyal, consecrated, and self-sacrificing helpmeet never graced a Methodist parsonage or sustained the ambition, courage and fidelity of a Methodist itinerant. Her simplicity of approach, her cheerfulness of disposition, and her cordiality of demeanor gave her quick access to all hearts and homes. By the confession of her irrepressible optimism many a burden was lifted, many a hardship was overcome, many a task was made easier, and many a life became more hopeful. And in the last great day of glorification hundreds from El Bethel, Crouse, King's Mountain, Henrietta, Caroleen, Rutherford College and Murphy, who shared the benedictions of her friendship and service, will rise up and call her blessed.

"In her tongue was the law of kindness." During an acquaintance of nearly thirty years this writer never heard her speak a harsh, uncharitable word against a human being. It is extremely doubtful that she ever entertained the least unworthy suspicion, or harbored the least resentment, or ever intentionally wounded the feelings of an associate.

September 28, 1922, was Coronation Day. A trip was planned and executed to have another choice view of exhilarating mountain scenery. After an hour of worshipful admiration of these wonderful works of God, preparations were made to return. Fate at once seized the steering wheel of the auto. Fate quickly turned the machine over the mountain declivity. Fate ruthlessly struck the hour of destiny. Did I say Fate? No, not Fate. It was the order of the King, "Come up higher." It was the Father's call to rest and reward. It was the Savior's way of translation to the skies. The same hand of love that had guided her footsteps through the years was holding out to her the bright, starry crown of ineffable glory. Her work of faith and labor of love gave reassurance that from the green-clad mountains of Western North Carolina her ransomed and happy spirit was escorted by an angelic convoy to "the everlasting hills" of the better land. The queen of the home had received her promotion to become a queen in Paradise.

Like Mary of Bethany, at the quiet hour, facing either the Book or the Throne, she delighted to sit at Jesus' feet to her "the still small voice" speaking His messages of wisdom, inspiration, and comfort, and to feel the touch of transformation into His image and likeness. Like Mary, she poured out the precious ointment of her life that Christ's program of life, love and uplift might have a glorious fulfillment. And, like Mary, "she did what she could" to enthrone the Lord of glory in the hearts and lives of those she loved. And furthermore, like Mary, there has been recorded for her in the book of life an everlasting memorial—a memorial of a faith that never quailed, of an interest that never tired, of a zeal that never flagged, of a love that never grew cold, and of a loyalty that never knew abatement.

By a Former Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

How uncertain is life! God in His infinite wisdom has called to rest Hugh B. Knox, one of the most promising young men of Winton, N. C.

On the morning of December 29, 1922, while out hunting Hugh was accidentally shot and died before reaching home.

Since childhood Hugh had been a faithful member of the Winton M. E. church and had been secretary of the Sunday school for some time. He was always at his post ready and willing to perform his duty. We miss his sunny face in our Sunday school, for he was always present unless providentially hindered, but we feel that he is sweetly resting with Jesus. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we, the members of Winton M. E. Sunday school, as he was always in his place ready for work, so we would follow his example of faithfulness and service.

Second, That we extend to his parents our sympathy and prayers in their great sorrow.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the minutes of our Sunday school, a copy sent to the family, and a copy sent to each the North Carolina Christian Advocate and the Hertford County Herald for publication.

Miss Mary Williams,
Mrs. C. M. Brett,
Miss Wanda Harkrader,
Committee.

FIKE—Isaac S. Fike was born July 3, 1891, in Pittsboro and died December 28, 1922, at Troy. He was married to Miss Ethel Nance, of Troy, October 15, 1913. To this union were born two sons, Horace and Raukin. His untimely death was a shock to the entire community. He was sick only a few days. He will be greatly missed. At the time of his death he was welfare officer of Montgomery county, a leading Mason, a steward in his church and teacher of the young men's Bible class. Our brother was a splendid Christian character. Our sympathies are with the wife, sons, mother and sister in the loss they have sustained in the death of this loved one.

J. W. Harrell, Pastor.

Wholehearted workers are the only laborers who have a permanent position in the kingdom of God.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS

Judge Grady snaps his finger at the public and says that it is none of their business what he belongs to. This is after the election. If the question had been raised before the election an answer would in all probability have been forthcoming in short order. That in itself does not serve to elevate an official in the public mind. The public knows when it gets a square deal, and public officials are public servants in a democracy and the public has a right to inquire into their conduct.

"Shall not the judge of all the earth do right," was the expressed belief of the Father of the Faithful, and this declaration of the ancient patriarch has been translated into the faith of the ages. Sometimes "clouds and darkness are round about Him," as the Psalmist declared, "but justice and judgment are the habitation of His throne." Even when right is on the scaffold and wrong is on the throne, the eye of the Eternal is keeping watch and the scales of justice tarry in His all-powerful hand. It is this faith that girds with strength the chosen servants of the Most High and giveth victory to every righteous course.

Zion's Herald with the elaborate and attractive edition of January 10 celebrated its centenary. When the paper was established in 1823 New England had a Methodist membership of 20,024 members, now there is in the Boston area over which Bishop E. H. Hughes presides 143,639 members, of which number 11,052 are non-resident members. These New England Methodists cannot boast of great numbers, but they have from the beginning had an abiding interest in good reading matter. This explains the long and successful career of Zion's Herald. Among its editors have been some of the most eminent of the country and it is now one of the very best among Methodist periodicals.

Government by majorities is the correct method in a democracy. But this does not imply that the majority should become an object of worship or that minorities should be ignored. Minorities have rights and frequently are blessed with visions and ideals that are beyond the reach of the majority. In the world's great crises and epochs the minorities have been right and the majorities wrong. It was so in the days of Socrates; it was so in the days of Jesus; it was so in the days of John Huss. The multitudes are unwilling to become pioneers. The prohibitionists are in the majority now, but fifty years ago they were a little minority and the object of constant ridicule. But that minority was right and the majority wrong. Honor the few who dare to march in the vanguard of right.

Ellis Paxon Oberholtzer, for six years a member of the board of censors of the state of Pennsylvania, lays bare the very heart of the "movies" and shows that the business is rotten to the core. Patrons of the picture houses, the managers of the business and everybody else acquainted with moviedom know that he gives the facts just as they exist. Here is what he says:

"Sex is the one potently dominant idea in the minds of the men who are gambling in the public taste for nasty photographic stories. The capitalist who is financing the picture-producing company, the executive officer whom he hires to make money for him, and the directors in the studios expend much of their time and energy in trying to devise that which will show the male and female in some unusual and new relationship. The public, sated by much looking at films, night after night, must be aroused from the apathy which comes from having long ago seen all that is proper to be shown, and we have been plunged into an abysmal morass of fornication, adultery, pandering and prostitution. The seduction of mill girls and stenographers by their employers, men living with mistresses, and women consorting with men without marriage are flashed into the eyes of old and young, willy nilly, in our movie houses."

"The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars. It is in ourselves." Yet people trust to luck. They attribute their deeds and the character of their lives to destiny. With many environment is the god that shapes their lives and determines their destiny. Circumstances, they say, makes or unmakes the man, as the case may be. The things without cause us to lose sight of that which is within.

The hollow sea-shell, which for years hath stood
On dusty shelves, when held against the ear
Proclaims its stormy parent, and we hear
The faint, farmurmur of the breaking flood.
We hear the sea. The sea? It is the blood
In our own veins, impetuous and new.

Saint Paul was Christianity's master builder. He said so himself. "As a wise master builder I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon." And the history of the Christian centuries has verified the declaration of the world's greatest Christian. As a Hebrew he had been narrow in thought, and sought to confine religion within the narrow walls of Phariseism. Some are still disposed to limit faith to their own particular sect. Some hidebound Methodists do likewise. Some narrow minded Baptists do likewise. The Roman Catholic with arrogance declares that salvation is confined to his ecclesiastical organization. Paul, the Pharisee, was also cruel in practice, persecuting those not of his creed. His meat and drink was to make an end of all those who followed the Nazarene. But when he became a Christian, Paul thought in world relations. He took the Christian religion out of the corner where some thought to place it as an exerescence of Juadism and set it forth as a world religion, universal in scope and untrammelled by swaddling bands and childish opinions. This made Paul a missionary if he be consistent, and he was consistent. But he was not a missionary of the academic type, satisfied with theories and injunctions. This mighty man, on the contrary, was one who battled for his Lord in the "high places of the field." As a founder of churches, an expounder of doctrines, and an advocate of the Christian faith, he was the incomparable workman of all the Christian centuries.

THE JOINT COMMISSION AT WORK

In its recent session at Cincinnati, Ohio, the Joint Commission on Unification began its work of bringing together the Northern and Southern churches by proposing two jurisdictions. One of these is to embrace the Northern church as it now is and the other to embrace the Southern church as it now is. These are to be united in one general conference, the powers of which are to be hereafter determined.

This is little more at present than the suggestion of a method of procedure. The details must be presented at greater length before one can form an intelligent opinion of the merits or demerits of the plan.

Just now it looks like the harnessing up of the two Methodisms into a two horse team, instead of having two one horse teams as at present. The new plan may work fine if we do not get too many tongues between the horses. If so, the team may balk when we get to a hard pull. We shall see.

IS ROMAN CATHOLICISM BAD?

Tarboro, N. C., Jan. 16, 1923.

Editor N. C. Christian Advocate,
Greensboro, N. C.

Dear Sir:

I read with interest your article in Sunday, the 15th, issue of the News and Observer.

I think you have the right idea in regard to the Klan, but I can not quite get your idea in regard to the Catholic Church. You say that "we, too, are against all that is bad in Roman Catholicism, and that the Confessional is one of the dirty things in Romanism." I know that you are a more learned man than I, and I assume that you are honest in your convictions, and presume that since you have stated publicly that there are bad things in the Catholic Church, that you would be glad to give one the information you have on some of it at least, that you may set one right.

I would be very glad if you would also state wherein the Confessional is dirty—and the purpose of the mask.

I am a Catholic, and am not writing this with any ill will, but will thank you for any information you can give. Very respectfully,

Chas. Meighan.

Mr. Meighan has in a polite and respectful manner asked for further information about the Roman Catholic Church, particularly about the Confessional, and we are glad to give the desired information, or rather to make clear what we meant by the statement which he quotes from a former editorial of ours.

In the outset we would have it understood that in our opinion there are just as pious people in the Roman Catholic Church as can be found anywhere. They do the very best that they know how and an angel could do no more. Neither do we believe that the Roman Catholic Church is wholly bad. It is not. There is much good in it. Many of its doctrines are in accord with the Bible and based upon the teachings of Jesus Christ. But in the face of these concessions we assert most positively that the Roman Catholic Hierarchy has been and is the source of unnumbered evils. It is bad, very bad.

But we have been asked, particularly, about the Confessional. We do not in answer quote from Protestant authority, but from The Catholic Encyclopedia, which has been issued under Roman censorship and has, therefore, the ecclesiastical stamp of accuracy.

This authority says "Confession is the avowal of one's own sins made to a duly authorized priest for the purpose of obtaining their forgiveness through the power of the keys." The same authority declares, also, "God retains sin once committed so long as it is not remitted by the church."

These official declarations simply mean that a man can forgive sins and that God has shut Himself up in this matter to the dictates of the Roman Catholic Church. Can Bill Jones forgive the sins of Tom Brown against God. Will God shut himself up to the dictates of a Roman Catholic priest regardless of how ignorant and dissolute he may be? The very suggestion is absurd to the last degree.

The answer of course will be made that not the man but the priest forgives, that God has committed this authority to the priests through the church. If so why did He limit this to Roman priests? Why no such authority granted to Protestant ministers or Hebrew prophets, or even the priesthood of Israel? The fact is that this doctrine of putting the Roman priesthood between the souls of men and their God is only a piece of ecclesiastical arrogance without authority in reason or the Word of God, and is assumed over men not for their spiritual benefit but in order to get them under the power of the priesthood and to use them as subjects of the Roman church. For men and women to be given such erroneous instructions and thereby make them willing slaves to such an ecclesiastical despotism is deplorably bad, and where it is done there is no religious liberty, which is unspeakably dear to every true American. That God alone forgives sins, and that the soul has direct approach to Him without priestly intervention is the doctrine that guarantees religious liberty.

To quote from the same authority on public and private confession we have: "Public confession, as made in the hearing of a number of people (i. e. a congregation) differs from private, or secret confession, which is made to the priest alone and is often called auricular, i. e., spoken into the ear of the confessor."

This private, or auricular confession, that is spoken into the ear of the priest is what we had in mind in speaking of some of the secret or masked performances of Romanism.

This practice of bringing the priest and the confessor together in secret behind the curtains of the Confessional offers an opportunity for much dirty work. The unscrupulous priest can extort money from men for private uses and in turn promise full forgiveness of their sins. The lecherous priest has in the secrecy of the Confessional where women and girls meet him alone an opportunity to practice his arts of seduction and in addition to other wiles that he may employ to get women and girls to listen to his plans is the promise of the forgiveness of all sin in case they surrender to his desires.

To what extent these things are carried on no one can tell with accuracy, but we do know that persistent reports of such practices have through the years, yea, through the centuries clung about the secret confessional.

If the Roman Catholic church would bring the Confessional out into the open and compel its corrupt priests to clean up their immoral lives in Catholic countries, the world would think much better of Roman Catholicism.

The name of Mr. Meighan leads us to think that he is a man of foreign birth who has come from some Roman Catholic country in order to enjoy the more favorable opportunities of this country. If he has not, thousands are coming yearly from Roman Catholic countries to enjoy the larger freedom and better advantages of America. A fact that leads us to say that there is not a country on the face of the earth under the dominion of Romanism that enjoys material prosperity, to say nothing of civil and religious liberty. Romanism throttles pretty much everything that is good. Its blight never fails to rest upon a land when once it gets a strangle hold. But this is another story.

Revs. J. C. Wooten, S. A. Cotton and M. T. Plyler, presiding elders of the Raleigh, Washington and Durham districts, respectively, spent Tuesday night in Greensboro on their return from the meeting of the presiding elders in Charlotte, Tuesday. Messrs. Wooten and Cotton were the guests for the night of Rev. T. A. Sikes. These are busy men with the multitudinous duties of their offices upon them. They left on the morning train for home.

The Advocate campaign begins February 1. Let all the friends of the paper get ready for the good work ahead of us. Our goal is 30,000 subscribers for the Advocate.

AT OLD TRINITY

It was our pleasure last Sunday morning to preach for Rev. J. E. Woosley at Trinity. Those Methodists no longer worship in the old college chapel. They have built a beautiful new church that is up-to-date in every particular and adequate for their every need. The music last Sunday morning was equal to the best one hears in the big city churches. About 15 years ago, after he had retired from the active ministry, Rev. F. H. Wood, then living at Trinity, planted out two little maple trees. This act of the old Methodist preacher's planting out trees perplexed the mind of Maj. Bruce Craven, who was not as wise then as he is now. Why should an old man awaiting the sunset call be planting out trees, was unanswered in the mind of the young lawyer. But now those trees furnish shade for the front yard of the new Methodist church at Trinity. Brother Wood went to his eternal reward ten years ago, but those who come to the village church to worship through the coming years can enjoy the shade of the trees planted by the aged itinerant. The good deeds of a man live after him. Blessed is the man that planteth trees, or that preserveth those already serving their mission on the earth.

THE NEW SECRETARY OF THE GENERAL HOSPITAL BOARD

On another page of this issue of the Advocate appears Bishop Candler's announcement of the election of Dr. C. C. Selecman as secretary of the General Hospital Board.

Dr. Selecman when elected to this important position was pastor of First church, Dallas, Texas, one of the great churches of the South. Before coming to Dallas, Dr. Selecman rendered conspicuous service as pastor in Los Angeles, Cal. He is one of the capable and aggressive men of our church who gives a good account of himself on all occasions. He has been deeply interested in the hospital work of the church and in our opinion the board has made a wise selection. Dr. Selecman has a great field and he will cultivate it in such a manner as to bring forth fruit. The church should set itself in a whole-hearted fashion to this great task of providing adequate hospital facilities for our people. The Golden Cross Society should yield large returns as soon as our people take up this work in earnest. The Red Cross by its annual "roll call" raises enormous sums of money. Why should not the church by a similar method gather a million or more annually for its hospital work?

Read what Bishop Candler has to say this week upon the subject. His paper is chock full of information and at the same time stimulating.

PRESIDING ELDERS MEET

The presiding elders of the episcopal district composed of the North and South Carolina annual conferences held a joint session in Charlotte on Tuesday, January 23. The meeting was held in the interest of the Centenary movement. At the present time there is a deficit of about $2,000,000 in the treasury of this fund, and unless this amount is raised by the first of May Dr. W. G. Cram, directing secretary of missions, stated disaster would necessarily be the result. All the mission work in Europe is depending entirely on this fund for support and all new work in every field will have to be abandoned unless the church comes to the rescue and meets the obligations made in the Centenary campaign four years ago. Plans were perfected on Tuesday for an intensive campaign to be waged in February and March for the purpose of placing the emergency on the hearts of our people. In the next issue of the Advocate these plans will be given in detail. Special teams are to be sent to strategic points from the head office in Nashville, and other speakers will go to places where the largest number can be reached.

All the elders of the South Carolina and North Carolina conferences were present and all but one of the Western North Carolina. The missionary secretaries of both sections were also present as well as Dr. Cram.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Rev. A. L. Aycock of Canton has been visiting his aged and greatly afflicted mother, who lives in lower Cabarrus.

Rev. R. F. Mock of Harmony, Concord, has treated his church to a new coat of paint within and without, and otherwise improved the property.

Rev. and Mrs. F. O. Dryman of Norwood have been spending nearly two weeks at the bedside of Brother Dryman's mother, who has been desperately ill.

Rev. W. A. Rollins of Concord circuit has a new church nearing completion at Rocky Ridge adjoining the property of the Jackson Training School. It is a nice brick structure.

We are in receipt of this interesting information from Liberty: "Rev. A. L. Lucas, pastor at Liberty, has just closed a successful meeting in East Tennessee. We guess they liked him; they gave him a brand new Ford and some money."

Rev. B. F. Fincher, pastor of our church at Kerr Street, Concord, is spending some time with his daughter in Charlotte and taking treatment from Dr. W. O. Nesbit. He has been quite indisposed for several weeks.

The Cabarrus County Methodist Ministers Association was organized Monday of this week with the following officers: W. A. Jenkins, president; R. A. Swarengen, vice president; J. Frank Armstrong, secretary.

We thank the brethren who so kindly mailed us copies of the Western North Carolina Conference Journals asked for last week. Our file for that conference is now complete. Please some one mail us one or all of the following of the North Carolina conference: 1888, 1893, 1895, 1896, 1897. These will complete our file for the North Carolina conference, and, when received, will be bound and kept for reference in this office. Thanks.

A Methodist submits the following for publication: "The Methodist church was born largely out of a protest at the immorality and frumpery (forms and ceremonies that had become meaningless) in the church then existing. Yesterday I witnessed a silly frumpery, the installation of a Methodist board of stewards. Whither are we drifting?"

Rev. J. Frank Armstrong of Forest Hill, Concord, returned last week from the presidents' meeting of the Epworth League held in McKendree church, Nashville. Bishop H. M. Bucose and Bishop E. L. Mouzon were present and addressed this annual meeting of Epworth Leaguers from practically all the conferences in Southern Methodism. Franklin, Jr., accompanied his father.

Rev. A. J. Burrus writes: "Mrs. Albert Aiken died January 18, 1923. She was a good wife, good mother, kind neighbor and friend, and a faithful devoted Christian. She was a member of Alexander's Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church, South, from youth. She was cheerful, expecting the end, and was ready. Her husband is left lonely."

Rev. C. B. Culbreth, presiding elder of the Elizabeth City district, was in Greensboro a few hours last Thursday. He had come to attend a meeting of the joint committees of the Methodist Protestant church and Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He reports that the Elizabeth City district seems to be in pretty good condition and the outlook hopeful.

Rev. Z. B. Randall, pastor, kindly sends us the following: "Evangelist Thurston B. Price, Lake Junaluska, N. C., and singer, Julian P. Moorman, Bristol, Va., were with us for a meeting in Grove Avenue Methodist church, January 7-21. These men are the best help I have had in revival work. I certainly trust they will be much used, for theirs is a type of evangelism much needed in our church. East Radford, Va."

"Rev. J. B. Hyder, a local elder of our church and who served as a supply on several charges in our conference, has passed to his reward. He was a useful man and did great good. He was expecting the end and was ready." The foregoing message has reached us through the kindness of Rev. A. J. Burrus, pastor of the Weaverville circuit. Brother Hyder lived at Barnardsville and has been a very useful local preacher. His work in the pastorate was quite successful. The people appreciated him as a man, as a preacher and as a pastor. The church made progress under his ministry. We regret to hear of the death of this good man.

"Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Hoyle announce the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Tuesday, the twenty-third of January, nineteen hundred and twenty-three, Kings Mountain, North Carolina. Robert Hoyle. Rebecca Wilson. 1873-1923."

The people of North Carolina heard with regret of the burning of Trinity church, Durham, last Sunday morning. Trinity was conspicuous among the churches of North Carolina. The loss is quite considerable in spite of the protection by insurance, but the congregation is planning to build at once. We may expect them under the leadership of Rev. A. D. Wilcox to build a great temple that will do credit to Durham and to Methodism through the years to come.

The citizens of Alamance county are doing a fine thing for Elon College, whose administration building was destroyed by fire on January 18, by undertaking to raise $100,000 to aid the college in rebuilding. A mass meeting was held in Burlington the day following the fire and a committee appointed to undertake the work at once. Alamance citizens, regardless of church affiliations, are enthusiastic over the movement and invite any person interested in aiding the college to join them. C. B. Riddle, Burlington, N. C., is secretary of the committee, to whom any donation may be sent.

Judge A. M. Stack of Monroe and Solicitor J. F. Spruill, both of them new officials and useful Methodist laymen, began their work as judge and solicitor, respectively, last week in Greensboro. Each of these gentlemen made an admirable beginning. Judge Stack is a merciful judge, but he exercises his mercy only in those cases that deserve mercy. Before him came some of the big "bootleggers" of the county. Men who live in fine houses, sell liquor and trust to paying their way out. He sent these fellows to the chain gang, and in addition imposed heavy fines. The chain gang is the remedy for selling liquor, especially for the big offenders. Judge Stack knows this. Mr. Spruill made a splendid record as state solicitor. The interests of the state are safe in his hands. He is a worthy and capable successor of J. C. Bower.

Another students' recital was given last Monday night in Greensboro College in the Odell Memorial building. The acoustic properties have been greatly improved and the echo so noticeable last fall has been remedied. The playing and singing Monday night was heard distinctly in every part of the building. The students gave a splendid program of piano and vocal numbers from the well known composers. America is always represented by at least one composer. Those taking part were: Vocalists, Misses Alleece Sapp, Greensboro, and Louise Beal, Gastonia; pianists, Misses Elizabeth Richardson, LaFollette, Tenn., Magarenta Lassiter, Fairmont, Lillian Hall, Lumber Bridge, Blanche Burrus, Weaverville, Louise Beal, Gastonia, Annycy Worsham, Ruffin, Elizabeth Wilson, Alleece Sapp, Cornelia Neal, Elizabeth Simpson and Bailey Watson, Greensboro. The next students' recital will be given February 5. The series of recitals is attracting considerable attention because of the splendid work done each month.

Dr. Edward Leigh Pell, author, lecturer and preacher of Richmond, Va., is an ardent believer in young people, and while on his tours likes to lecture in the intervals between his meetings as often as possible for young people's organizations without compensation. Dr. Pell is holding meetings in the South this winter, and federations of Bible classes or young people's societies planning to hold a public rally and wishing his services, may be able to secure one of his open nights without cost, except for traveling expenses, if application is made at once. All of Dr. Pell's popular lectures, though of a light, entertaining character, are designed to strengthen the faith of young men and women. After his St. Louis meeting early in April Dr. Pell will go north and to Canada. A Pell meeting is described as a development of the Bible conference idea (usually known as a Faith-building Week or All for Christ Week) and is devoted exclusively to an attempt to present "The Real Jesus and What He Really Taught" under conditions which the Holy Spirit can use in making Christ real to men. Dr. Pell believes that the most pressing business before us today is to rescue men and women from this furious, blinding maelstrom of materialities which we call our modern life, and keep them out long enough to lead them to a point where it will be possible for them, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit to catch a vision of the real Christ—the Christ of Paul and of every great believer since Paul's day.

Rev. J. H. Barnhardt, pastor of West Market Street church, has been confined to his room for several days with a severe cold. But he hopes before many days to be out and ready for work.

Mrs. L. B. Hayes of Greensboro, who has been quite ill with pneumonia for a week, is better now and the prospects are that she will soon be herself again. This attack of pneumonia was preceded by a deep cold or possibly a light case of "flu." For several days her friends were quite anxious about her condition.

Dr. B. F. Few, the father of President W. P. Few of Trinity College, died last Sunday afternoon at his home in Greer, South Carolina, aged 93 years. He was a surgeon in the Confederate army and had continued the practice of medicine till a few months ago. His was a very remarkable career. Only a few months ago the mother of Dr. W. P. Few died at Greer after a brief illness. Our deepest sympathies are extended to Dr. Few in the loss of his aged parents, who had lived so long and so well.

Rev. L. R. Gaines, pastor of the Marners circuit, was an interesting caller at our office Tuesday afternoon as he passed through Greensboro on his way to visit his wife at Graphite, where Mrs. Gaines is spending a little while for her health. Brother Gaines is now planning to build a new parsonage at Marners. He is just completing his fourth church on that charge. Two of these are new organizations that have been effected since he went to the charge sixteen months ago. Good for the preacher and people of the Marners charge!

DAVENPORT COLLEGE

The first semester examinations at Davenport College have just ended and the new term has begun under most favorable circumstances. So far the influenza epidemic which has been prevalent in all parts of the state has not made its appearance at Davenport.

Miss Maude Hartley has taken charge of the Art department since the holidays and this popular department is engaging the earnest attention of several who have been students of art before and of some just beginning. Miss Ethel Coffey, who was head of the department during the past term, resigned during the fall and was married to Mr. Fitzhugh Hoyle, of Lincolnton, during the holidays.

Miss Annie Greene, teacher in the Science department, was recently called to her home in Atlanta on account of the death of her brother. She has the sympathy of the whole community, for her father, a Methodist preacher in the Georgia conference, and her mother have both been ill with influenza and her return to her work here was delayed.

Plans are being perfected for a campaign in behalf of Davenport College to aid in constructing a much-needed annex to the main building. It is estimated that this new building can be built for about fifty thousand dollars. For years this has been one of Davenport's greatest needs. Now the friends of the college, the alumnae, the members of the Western North Carolina conference and the friends of education everywhere will stand by the trustees of the institution in this laudable effort. The new annex will give room for more dormitory accommodation, for dining and kitchen facilities and for the departments of music, art, and domestic science.

Miss Inez Northrop, a young Methodist woman of exceptional ability and of wide experience, will this week be added to the already strong faculty at Davenport. She is a university graduate and has taken post graduate work at New York State Normal College and at Columbia University. She comes as teacher of Economics and English.

THE SELF-FORGETFUL PIONEERS

A day spent with the Wright Brothers at Kill Devil Hill on the North Carolina coast about eight years ago proved delightful and full of inspiration. At this spot a few years before the occasion mentioned, after some ten or twelve years of unremitting effort, the Wrights had done the first flying in the history of the world with a heavier than air machine, Orville Wright pointed out the exact spot from which his machine arose and the point at which it came to the ground, nearly a quarter of a mile up the beach. All the world was now interested in the work the Wrights were doing.

These brothers, with a friend from England, were making some further tests on this lone spot far from the busy world. Three reporters camped there and sent out messages to all the world of what was taking place at Kill Devil Hill, but the Wrights paid no attention to what the papers were saying. They had been there six weeks and had not seen a newspaper, though they might have secured them each day. The winds blew and the wild ducks kept their distance while these pioneers of new fields of endeavor labored on. They were happy and expectant. How refreshing to meet a man or a company of men wrapped up in some definite task! Inventors are usually men drawn away from all else in their efforts to chart some unknown waters. Such become oblivious of time and place and know nothing of the humdrum coming to the man who simply marks time and waits for the clock to strike.

The unconscious workers who know the thrill of the fresh attack live a life and enjoy a gladness that never comes to the dull plodders of the commonplace. Religious pioneers always enjoy an eager enthusiasm and jubilant advance unknown to later adherents. Our Methodist forefathers preached and sang and prayed as they pushed their way through the forests and over the plains, forgetful of the wonderful heroism displayed in those heroic days. They had set themselves to a definite task and rejoiced in the advances made. They were always exploring new fields and enjoying the thrill of the fresh attack. We who remain are forced to the monotonous rounds of the well known—too often this becomes the well known commonplace.

Few fields remain to explore. Our only recourse is to try new methods and enterprise larger undertakings. The call for self-forgetful laborers in this region is urgent and persistent. Many a man would find the wheels of life oiled afresh and a new thrill in his work were he to undertake a real constructive task in a fine new self-forgetful way. Many a church would thrill in a new and wonderful way could preacher and officials, to say nothing of the crowd, be brought to appreciate the possibilities awaiting them as they set themselves to pioneer new fields. Not necessarily new lands beyond the seas or unexplored fields at home call most loudly for the spirit of the pioneer in home and church and market. Our own homes and churches and market-places stand in need of men and women who are mindful of the perils and are ready to set themselves to fresh tasks to make them genuinely Christian.

Many voices are abroad and reformers of every type cry aloud, but these are not the hope of this or any other day. The quiet, devoted, consecrated men and women who live and plod on in their own Christly way have been and always will be the stay of home and church and market-place. Among these are ever those who know the gladness of a definite task in the dull routine of life as they pioneer new fields of experience and enjoy fresh victories over the enemies without and within.

"SIX MARRIED AND SIX PARTED"

A woman who lives in a small mill community casually remarked that during the Christmas holidays "six married and six parted." "Some of these had been married about a year and some of these marriages this Christmas were a big surprise," she added. All such situations as this indicate the sore need of stricter regulations by our marriage laws.

The requirement that notice should be given the register of deeds before a license is granted will do much to ward off hasty marriages and may, in many cases, prevent ill-advised matches. The eugenic marriage law passed by the last General Assembly was a distinct advance over all former enactments, but it is by no means perfect. This present General Assembly should give careful attention to this. For what can be more important than to throw all possible safeguards about the institution of marriage? The purity and the perpetuity of the home owes much to the estimate placed upon the marriage bonds. Care at this point will greatly reduce the number of divorces.

Scarcely a legislature assembles without some member's moving for a letting down the bars so as to make divorce easier. That the home may be protected, that humanly may be helped, that society may be put on a sure foundation, that the family may be made more secure? No, a little investigation usually discloses some client that must be taken care of with little regard for the evil that may result. Could we keep the unscrupulous lawyers and the unclean men out of the legislature, tampering with divorce laws would cease; and were we to hedge about and make more difficult the securing of a marriage license, we would greatly reduce the number of divorces.

THE DEEP WOODS NO LONGER ISOLATED

Mr. R. L. Baldwin, an enterprising business man and most useful citizen of Durham, spent a few days following the holidays with his brother and several other gentlemen on a hunting trip in the woods of Virginia. The brother took with him his radio outfit and changed the whole situation for the party. A little negro boy climbed a tree and put a wire near the top and then he made fast the other end of the wire to the top of the house used for the camp; soon they were ready for business. Pittsburg, Syracuse, New York, Atlanta and other points were in reach. Even the market reports at the close of the day were received. Mr. Baldwin found the experiment a most delightful as well as unique one for a hunting trip; the usual sense of isolation gave place to a feeling of oneness with the world.

Some will esteem this a distinct advance in all that makes for living; others will count such a distinct loss. Can it be that all the solitudes have been invaded and the last opportunity of being alone has fled? It does seem that isolation of space is about gone; but how about the isolation of soul? The really lonely people belong to the latter class; and move too often in the crowds, mocked by the multitudes.

CLUBS OF UNUSUAL SIGNIFICANCE

One of the hopeful features of business life today is the rapid growth and influential place held by such clubs as the Rotary and the Kiwanis and the Lions. They have few regulations and bonds of an external nature and they spend little time in taking care of their own place and reputation. This whole movement is largely a thing of the spirit. It indicates a spirit in the business world other than that of tooth and nail. Self must give place to service, and co-operation be put above deadly competition. A Rotarian or a Kiwanian or a Lion who is not able to follow the gleam and live above the sordid and the selfish would do well to give place to another, for he can be nothing more than a hewer of wood and a drawer of water.

The democracy and unrestrained fellowship among the members fostered by the rule of addressing each other by the Christian name, and other similar customs, tends to put a premium on real manhood rather than on the artificial distinctions inevitable in all organized society. In such fellowship and by such co-operation, the highest and best in men are fostered. To keep steadily before a group the welfare of the community and respect for the less favored can but result in that which gains the respect of all genuine and true men and women.

The most potential and generally pervasive influences at work in the world can not be weighed in balances and measured by yard-sticks; these evade the gross standards of earth. The same may be said of the example set and the inspiration given by the men of the clubs mentioned, if they but live up to the spirit and principles proclaimed.

THE CALL OF THE MINISTRY

Frank Culbreth.

It is interesting but not very instructive to read the public press on the shortage of candidates for the ministry. In this article we need not consider all the causes advanced for this shortage. Three will be sufficient to show the prevailing opinion. First, there is the religious doubt engendered by the war and the disillusionment caused by the discord and strife which followed it; second, the economic handicaps of the ministry, and third, the financial sacrifices involved in entering the ministry. These opinions are interesting not that they furnish any information that could be used in the solution of the problem, but because they reflect the public conception of the ministry and the functions of the church and its ministers. In contrast to much that is being said and written on this subject, generally by persons whose interest in it is little more than news interest and whose motive is to put their wares before the reading and listening public, even at risk of seeming presumptuous I shall endeavor to give what I think should be the church's view and solution of the problem. For the correct view as well as the solution is with the church. And since the clergy largely represents the human leadership of the church, I shall deal with the causes and their removal in their relation to the ministry.

The cause of this shortage of candidates for the ministry is in the church, the whole church is chiefly to blame, and the church can remove the cause, solve the problem whenever it is willing to pay the price. Of course there are always extenuating circumstances, cross currents, and outside influences making it more difficult for the church to do its work and to solve its problems. But the church is of God and Christ is not only its leader but He is its head. And we have the promise that the gates of hell shall not prevail against us. We dare not say that God in Christ has failed the church in any particular. The cause is with, and within the church, and not outside. And since the ministry is the regular and divinely appointed leadership of the church a good part of the blame must be placed upon the ministers and the immediate move is theirs. They are to lead and failure to do so in any sphere of the church's activities will be most serious if not disastrous to the whole church.

The proper and right way to study the problem we have before us and to discover its solution is through the study and as understanding of the office and functions of the Christian ministry. This will furnish us the true perspective to the heart of the whole situation. I believe through this perspective we shall see that the real cause has been obscured and much that has been said and written dealt only with relations. Upon the whole church rests the responsibility of producing and maintaining its ministry as well as determining the quality of that ministry. Many men with ability to become great preachers, good and useful pastors have become unacceptable largely through the influence and indifference of congregations they served, while other congregations have done much to make good preacher and useful pastors out of men of very limited ability. The influence of the congregation upon the preacher is more direct and immediate than is generally realized. Here, the bread cast upon the waters return not only after many days but on the same day and the same hour. No congregation is worthy of a better pastor than it has in the active ranks, or has produced.

In placing the chief blame for the shortage of candidates for the ministry upon the ministers themselves, and in affirming that the church can not only supply the need but can largely determine the quality of its ministers, I am not unmindful of the divine element in constituting the ministry of the church. Of course the divine is an essential element, but for our purpose we need not consider that great truth in this paper. God has always constituted the ministry of His church, but the church has helped or hindered in the promotion of this work according to its attitude towards the means ordained of God for this purpose, and its spiritual state and condition. There is no scarcity of material out of which to make preachers a plenty, and God is always ready to do His part, just as He is always ready to forgive and to convert the sinner. But as the conversion of the sinner waits on his faith and repentance so does the supplying of the need of ministers wait upon the church's use of the means ordained of God, its making the sacrifice, and its paying the price. The church has not failed to emphasize the divine call and its necessity. The truth is we have lost sight of some other essentials, and thus while the church is waiting on God, God is waiting on the church.

I say this reverently for the means God has ordained for any certain end will, when wisely used, most certainly reach that end. As far as the human will allow the divine call to go, God is as truly and as unmistakably calling a sufficiency of men into the ministry as at any time within the history of the church. There may be some trouble with our hearing. On one occasion the Master said, "Take heed how ye hear."

It does not come within the scope and purpose of this paper to comprehensively consider the Divine Call to the ministry. There is no rule nor set of rules by which we can say just when the call begins in a life and when it is consummated. Nor can we confine the Spirit in His manner of approach to the human mind and heart to a set of rules. Nor can we say that the call is irresistible. God does not deal with men in mass, but always with the individual. He always adjusts himself to the temperament and mentality of each individual. God does not suppress but draws out. The divinely called will always feel the divine constraint or coercion. There is a door to the ministry and there "is some other way." The man who enters merely as an alternative has missed the door of the sheep and has gone in in another way. The call also humbles, and there is the divinely called a humility that is not of this world but of God. There is also an independence, a fearlessness about the called of God that dignifies and elevates all that he does. A man may mistake his sense of want, emptiness, lacking something for this divine humility. This is a fatal mistake. He may on the other hand mistake his self-consciousness in the major key for this divine fear. This also is fatal. However, the man who is conscious of what he has is much stronger than the man who is only conscious of what he lacks. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson says that "Adulation and disparagement are both deadly. Conceit and despondency are twin enemies of pulpit power."

The Call to the Ministry may be a misnomer for this article. But any way it will in part help to prepare the reader for the one that is to follow under the caption, "The Minister Sent."

UNDERGRADUATES, PREACHERS' INSTITUTES AND CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS

As is well known, the law of our church makes it mandatory upon all undergraduate preachers to pursue their conference courses of study through the correspondence school or in a summer institute. This means all of the course. A part of it may be taken in the correspondence school and a part in the institute. But no annual conference can pass an undergraduate to a higher class who has not successfully taken all his studies in one or the other. The institute must be one which is approved by the Board of Education. At the request of the Board of Education, the Educational Commission of our church last August at their meeting at Lake Junaluska, established the conditions to which such institutes must measure up in order to be approved by the Board of Education. These conditions have been published in our conference organs. Extra copies of them can be had from this office.

Many of those who have studied the situation for years are convinced that the best results will be obtained by our undergraduates taking their studies through both agencies, viz., the correspondence school and the summer institute. There are from six to nine books in each year's course of study. On these the correspondence schools give an average of sixty lessons. At the close of these lessons an examination is given on each book. This work is to be done in a twelve months' enrollment. The average time required by each student to finish these courses is six months. There is nothing that will take the place of this regular drill and instruction. These lessons are prepared by the students, and sent in to the correspondence schools at Emory University or Southern Methodist University. They are corrected by the theological professors and returned to the student. No one thing has marked a greater advance in a larger number of our ministers' efficiency than the correspondence school work. It is invaluable.

The summer institute is also of large value. It should also be promoted and encouraged in every way. It has the valuable elements of personal touch with the instructor, and with one's fellow students, and the inspiration of the platform addresses. To attempt, however, to equalize the correspondence school method and the summer institute method of taking the course of study is impossible. A partial substitute is offered if one carefully masters the books before going to the institute. One-third of the time of the summer institute is taken up with examinations. Another third is consumed in the two platform addresses each day. This leaves only three or four of the ten days of the institute for the classroom review of from seven to nine books. Of course, it is utterly impossible to do more than bow to the volumes as one gallops by at full speed. For these reasons, one of our leading colleges has stopped trying to give the undergraduate conference courses at its summer institute, but devotes its institute (one of the best) to inspirational lessons and addresses on more advanced subjects. For the same reason several of our leading colleges offer only two books per year from the undergraduate course of study at their excellent summer institutes. Some of our best college professors after trying it have told me that to attempt to give the whole undergraduate course of study at the summer institute was a "farce" (that was the word they used), with which they are not willing to be longer connected. Other teachers in these summer institutes have told me that to attempt to give the whole undergraduate course at a summer institute was little better than the old and discarded method of giving these examinations at the sessions of the annual conferences, which method in many instances degenerated into a scandalous humbug. Other professors in the institutes have told me that some students whose examinations at the institute were approved, boasted that they never looked at the books in the course of study until they came to the institute.

These facts are given not by any means to discredit the summer institutes, but to show that some of them have done superficial work in the past and to emphasize the importance of the institute hereafter rigidly enforcing the moderate and easy conditions set for them by the Education Commission.

For the above reasons, therefore, the best method for our undergraduates is to have the indispensable drill and instruction of the correspondence school study, and also the inspiration of the summer institute. And it is most earnestly hoped that all our undergraduates will pursue this method and at once write for enrollment in the correspondence school of their territory—those west of the Mississippi river to Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, and those east of the Mississippi to Emory University, Ga., and that they will also arrange to attend the summer institute of their conference.

The Educational Commission in view of the above facts has put in as one indispensable requirement that no student can pass the course at the institute unless he has in advance prepared a digest of the book, approved by his professor. They have also tried to stiffen up the conditions of the summer institute in various other ways.

The object of this article is to stir up our pure minds by way of remembrance with a few brief exhortations in the interest of a better trained ministry:

(1) We earnestly urge those charged with the selection of the faculties of the summer institutes to make no complimentary selections, but to select men with an enthusiasm for scholarship. A summer institute may be of real value, or it may easily become the insubstantial figment of a dream, according to the type of men who are put in charge of it.

(2) We earnestly urge the faculty of every preachers' institute to see to it that the few and moderate rules for the institutes, fixed by the Education Commission are strictly carried out in order that the institute may be approved by the Board of Education.

(3) We earnestly urge the faculties of the institutes not to press all men to take all the course at the institute. Some men of better capacity or equipment can do so. Others cannot in justice to themselves or the work.

(4) We earnestly urge every member of an annual conference examining committee on the course of study to write at once to the undergraduates under his charge, urging them to enroll promptly with the correspondence school and also to make their arrangements to attend the summer institute.

(5) We earnestly urge every undergraduate who conscientiously desires to equip himself for the great and holy work of the ministry, and not merely like a greased pig to slip through some hole in the fence to the next higher class, to write at once for enrollment in the correspondence school and also to make his preparation to attend the summer institute of his conference.

(The brethren will save time by not writing to me about the work of the correspondence school, as numbers of them still do. I have had no responsibility for the details of the correspondence schools for four years. My office is in Nashville).

This office knows only the same interest in the correspondence schools and in the summer institutes and wishes for all of them the utmost success possible. All of the above is written simply from an earnest desire to see in our pulpits an ever increasingly better trained class of men. We have the agencies for bringing this about. Let us use them.

There are three ways in which young preachers get through the conference courses of study, viz., cum laude, magna cum laude and mirabile dictu.

The object of this article is to beg that we all unite to throw to discard the last method.

Secretary Ministerial Supply and Training.

THINGS HALLOWED

W. A. Betts.

Any disesteem of sacred things is by Scriptural standard (Hebrews 12:16) to be regarded as profanity.

The Sabbath and woman were God's last and best thoughts for Adam's welfare. A devout perusal of the Biblical account of the origin of the one and the creation of the other will enforce this conviction upon unprejudiced minds. Therefrom also it will be seen that worship and companionship are two accentuated needs of man.

Moreover, the fact should be recognized that womanhood, the crowning product of creative power and wisdom, is no less sacred in the eyes of God than is the Sabbath, since both were made by Him for man. And man's highest good demands a due regard for these pre-eminent gifts divine. Accordingly fearful penalties follow swiftly upon a disregard of duty toward them both.

The key columns of ancient architecture, as in the temple of Dagon at Gaza, received the main weight of the roof and galleries thereunto attached. The temple of human society is thus supported by the Sabbath and womanhood. These columns of strength and beauty kept inviolate, our social structure is secure. But if the Sampson of self-indulgence and sensuality be allowed to place his polluting palms of power upon these divinely ordained pillars, our social and national life as well are doomed.

Both these objects of such endearment to our Lord simply must be shielded from desecration, lest we forfeit the divine favor and bring destruction upon ourselves and our posterity.

John G. Nethardt, in "A Bundle of Myrrh," has truly declared:

"Over and over is He crucified

Whenever man besmirches womanhood."

The highest earthly trust committed to man is the protection of womanhood against the multitude of evils that imperil her personal purity. He is by divine appointment her only guardian. His chivalry ignobly dies when a man betrays this honorable trust.

The security of our religious and civil liberties as a nation manifestly rests upon a due observance of the Lord's day throughout our borders. History, sacred and secular, undoubtedly furnishes infallible proof of it. The Israelites lost their national inheritance through disregard of it (2 Chron. 20:21) and are today a scattered and peeled people in the earth.

REPORT ON THE JOINT COMMISSION ON UNIFICATION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH AND THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH

At the closing session in Cincinnati, Ohio, of the Joint Commission on Unification January 19 the enclosed document was approved by the adoption of the following resolution:

"That the joint commission does now approve the statement of principles contained in the paper submitted as a preliminary report, and commits the statement for purposes of further consideration and the development of details to a committee to be composed of eight persons from each commission."

In accordance with the action taken, the following joint committee was appointed:

- From the Methodist Episcopal Church: Bishop William F. Anderson, Cincinnati, Ohio. Bishop William F. McDowell, Washington, D. C. Rev. David G. Downey, New York City. Rev. Frank Mason North, New York City. Rev. Archibald Moore, Oakland, Maryland. Ernest H. Cherrington, Westerville, Ohio.

- A. W. Harris, New York City. William A. Elliott, Meadville, Pa. From the Methodist Episcopal Church, South: Bishop John M. Moore, Dallas, Texas. Bishop E. D. Mouzon, Nashville, Tenn. Rev. T. D. Ellis, Louisville, Ky. Rev. Paul H. Linn, Fayette, Mo. Rev. Stonewall Anderson, Nashville, Tenn. Judge J. S. Candler, Atlanta, Ga. R. S. Hyer, Dallas, Texas. Judge H. H. White, Alexandria, La.

H. H. Sherman, Secretary, Commission on Unification, M. E. Church, South. A. W. Harris, Secretary, Commission on Unification, M. E. Church.

PRELIMINARY REPORT: STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLES

Whereas, we hold that the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are essentially one church, one in origin, in spirit, in belief, in polity, in ministry, and in purpose, and believing that they should become one in name, in ritual, in terms of membership, in administrative activities and bodies in the home and foreign field, and in order that this essential unity may become effective, the following plan of union is presented for adoption by the processes required in each church:

That a church be organized by uniting the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under a constitution with a General Conference and two Jurisdictional Conferences.

The name of the church shall be _____

Jurisdictions.

Jurisdiction No. 1 shall be composed of those annual conferences in America and various mission fields now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Jurisdiction No. 2 shall be composed of those annual conferences in America and the various mission fields now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Each Jurisdiction shall have a Jurisdictional conference with the full powers now possessed by the general conferences of the two respective churches except in so far as those powers may be limited by the constitution of the general conference hereinafter provided for and by such other powers as may be delegated to the general conference by the jurisdictional conferences from time to time.

General Conference.

There shall be a general conference composed as the general conferences of the two respective churches are now or may hereafter be constituted. The powers and limitations of this general conference to be as hereafter defined by this joint commission. Every vote in the general conference shall require the accepted majority vote of each jurisdiction to be effective.

DR. C. C. SELECMAN ELECTED SECRETARY GENERAL HOSPITAL BOARD

The General Hospital Board held a called meeting at the office of the board, 416 Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, Ga., on January 17th, and Rev. C. C. Selecman, D. D., was elected secretary of the board.

Dr. Selecman has rendered distinguished service in the pastorate in Missouri, California, Louisiana and Texas. He is deeply interested in the hospital work of our church, and has given more thought to it, perhaps, than any man in the church. The Golden Cross Society is a conception of his, and the work of enrolling the members of our church in this great movement will receive his special attention.

He will move his residence to Atlanta within the next thirty days, and from the office of the board there he will prosecute the work of hospital building and maintenance throughout the church.

At its recent meeting the General Hospital Board expressed by formal resolution the conviction that two hospitals for patients suffering from tuberculosis should be erected by our church, one for the eastern part of the church should be located somewhere in Western North Carolina, and one for the western part of the church to be located somewhere in Colorado or New Mexico. These enterprises cannot be established by the board at this time on account of lack of funds; but it is believed that many persons will be ready to contribute to this purpose and that at no distant date the two institutions may be established.

Our church numbers now nearly or quite 2,500,000 souls, and if even one-half of the members of the church throughout the connection enroll in the Golden Cross Society it will be possible for the General Hospital Board to establish a Methodist hospital at every point in the borders of the church where such an institution ought to be placed. By a similar movement the Northern Methodist church raised during the past year more than $700,000, and their work has just begun. Certainly our church can do as well, and the General Hospital Board confidently expects enthusiastic support in every part of the church.

Every annual conference has without a dissenting vote accepted with enthusiasm the hospital program adopted by the General Conference held in Hot Springs last May, and it is hoped their adoption of this plan was something more than a mere formality.

A number of proposals for the establishment of hospitals were brought to the attention of the General Hospital Board, and they will be considered as rapidly as financial and other conditions will permit.

The General Hospital Board will not approve the establishment nor contribute to the maintenance of any institution that does not come up to a good standard of hospital equipment. Every institution founded or supported through the aid of the General Hospital Board must be such that it can serve well patients who may ask its ministrations and reflect credit upon the church. No money will be wasted upon any unworthy or inefficient enterprise.

Warren A. Candler, President General Hospital Board.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The committee appointed at the Law Enforcement Convention at Raleigh January 16, 1923, to petition the General Assembly asking for the passage of the bill reports as follows:

Petition to the House.

We, the undersigned citizens of _____ county, North Carolina, respectfully petition the General Assembly, now in session, to enact into law House Bill No. 205, "A bill to be entitled an Act to make the state law conform to the national law in relation to intoxicating liquors."

Petition to the House.

We, the undersigned citizens of _____ county, North Carolina, respectfully petition the General Assembly, now in session, to enact into law House Bill No. 205, "A bill to be entitled an Act to make the state law conform to the national law in relation to intoxicating liquors."

Resolution to the House.

We, a congregation of citizens, assembled in _____ church (or Sunday school) _____ county, by standing vote, request the General Assembly of North Carolina, now in session, to pass House Bill No. 205, a bill to be entitled "An Act to make the state law conform to the national law in relation to intoxicating liquors."

We authorize our presiding officer to immediately send a copy of this to our representative to be introduced in the House.

_____ Presiding Officer or Pastor.

Resolution to the Senate.

We, a congregation of citizens, assembled in _____ church (or Sunday school) _____ county, by standing vote, request the General Assembly of North Carolina, now in session, to pass House Bill No. 205, a bill to be entitled "An Act to make the state law conform to the national law in relation to intoxicating liquors."

We authorize our presiding officer to immediately send a copy of this to our representative to be introduced in the Senate.

_____ Presiding Officer or Pastor.

This Law Enforcement Convention was composed of delegates from church, Sunday schools, law and order leagues, and other patriotic organizations from fifty-two counties.

The bill was introduced in the House Friday, January 19, by Mr. Z. V. Turlington. It is House bill No. 205. The committee hopes to arrange for a hearing before the joint committee on the 30th.

Please get busy with the petitions. Have each individual to sign two, one for the Senate and the other for the House. When this is done, rush them to Raleigh, addressing one to your representative, and the other to your senator, and send a letter or postal to the Anti-Saloon League at Raleigh telling them how many names were on each petition.

The resolutions are for use in Sunday schools, church services, classes and mass meetings of any sort. Both resolutions should be properly signed by the presiding officer, pastor, or secretary, as the case might be, and rushed to Raleigh to the representative and the senator.

Dr. Dan Atkins, D. D., C. H. Mebane, R. L. Davis, Chas. S. Wallace, Committee.

MEETING OF THE JOINT COMMISSION

The commission appointed by the Western North Carolina conference of the M. E. Church, South, the North Carolina conference of the M. E. Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church of the North Carolina conference held its first meeting on January 19th, 1923, at West Market Street M. E. church, Greensboro.

The purpose of the meeting was to seek to bring about a closer fellowship and more understandable co-operation between the two denominations—specifically in North Carolina.

The members of the commission from the M. E. Church, South, are M. T. Plyler, W. P. Few, C. B. Culbreth, J. H. Barnhardt, F. N. Tate and J. F. Kirk.

Members of the M. P. commission are T. M. Johnson, L. F. Ross, R. C. Stubbins, J. A. Allen, R. F. Williams and J. D. Williams.

Those present at the meeting of the M. E. Church, South, M. T. Plyler, C. B. Culbreth, J. F. Kirk and J. H. Barnhardt.

Members present from the M. P. Church, J. D. Williams, J. H. Allen, R. C. Stubbins, R. F. Williams; substituting for J. M. Johnson and L. F. Ross, R. M. Andrews and A. G. Dixon.

The meeting was opened by M. T. Plyler. A. G. Dixon conducted the devotionals.

M. T. Plyler was elected chairman, R. C. Stubbins, secretary.

M. T. Plyler explained the purpose of the meeting as an effort to bring about a better understanding or co-operation between the two denominations in the state. Practically all the members present spoke on the subject and were favorable to such a movement. A motion was passed asking the annual conferences to make the organization permanent.

On motion A. G. Nixon and M. T. Plyler were made a committee to prepare an address to the participating conferences, to be published in the M. P. Herald and the N. C. Christian Advocate, embodying such ideas of joint mediation as may be deemed advisable for the denomination. The meeting adjourned to meet upon call of the chairman. R. C. Stubbins, Secretary.

THINGS GOING GOOD

You might be interested to know that the work on the East Roxboro and Longhurst charge has started off in splendid shape for the new year. Our Sunday schools are especially encouraging. We have begun the raising of funds with which to build Sunday school rooms at Longhurst. We need them very badly and hope to have them shortly. The old bell, which was too small, has been replaced with a large sweet-toned bell. A new and better plan of finance will be used in each church this year. Our work is making steady progress, and we are looking to the future with confidence.

THE METHODIST CHURCH AND MOTHER'S PENSION

In this week's issue of the Advocate you state editorially that a law should be enacted by the present General Assembly giving aid to helpless mothers. Good. I like your closing sentence which reads: "By all means give us a Mother's Aid Law for North Carolina."

Permit me to call your attention, and the attention of your readers, to the fact that our last annual conference endorsed such a move. Here is the exact language: "Since it is agreed that widowed mothers suffer greater hardships without their children's earnings, we advocate a state bill for some form of mother's assistance act, such as has been found good in other states. We believe that worthy mothers should by such a provision be enabled to keep their young children with them, rather than have them scattered in institutions."

I hope to live to see the day when our great church will enter the realm of home-finding for whole orphans. This is the best and the cheapest method for doing orphanage work. Then we will be in position to render more valuable aid to those homes from which either mother or father has been taken. W. L. Hutchins.

KANNAPOLIS

We have several organizations here that, we are proud to say, are doing splendid work. We enrolled nearly 1200 in Sunday school last year, and the average attendance is fair. We have three Epworth Leagues that are doing splendid work. We also have three interesting and effective missionary societies. We have a board of stewards composed of spiritual men who are determined to do things.

But it was especially of the work of our junior board of stewards that I intended to write at this time. This board is composed of fifteen boys and girls and unmarried young men and young women. When we planned our every member canvass, we gave this board all of the unmarried boys and girls in the church and asked them not only to canvass these young people for their pledges, but to be their stewards during the year. This board secured over $2300 in pledges from the boys and girls in our church, and in many instances the parents are still paying as much or more than formerly. This board has already been a great blessing to our church, and if the interest manifested thus far continues, eternity alone will reveal the entire results for good. I would advise any church to try this, or a similar plan, and put the young people to work.

After the big pounding was over, the work continued on the installment plan and we have received nearly all kinds of meats, including chickens, milk and butter to eat, and linen for the preacher to wear as well as towels for the entire family, etc. Besides the church building us a garage and fencing the parsonage lot, Mr. Whitley's class of boys have had a cement walk laid in front of the parsonage, and I am going to give Mr. Widenhouse's class of girls the privilege of screening the parsonage, and I am sure, even before I ask it, that it will be done.

Our responsibilities and privileges are large here, but our people have a great faith in a powerful God. Pray for us. R. A. Swaringen, Pastor.

TRUTH TABLETS

By D. H. Tuttle.

You are a good house cleaner. Can you keep your Soul-house clean?—Isa. 52:11.

"Hambones" says: Some folks worry so much over dey troubles dat dey faces look as if dey dun wore out two or three bodies.—Philp. 4:6-7.

A bunch of sweet peas from God's garden: Penitence, Pardon, Peace, Purity, Piety, Power, and Paradise. May this bouquet adorn your bosom in life, death and eternity.—Prov. 22:11.

When sin hurts your conscience as bad as a splinter under your finger nail hurts your body, you won't be long in asking God for Jesus' sake to get it out for you.—1 John 1:9.

Which is doing most business for you: The pressing club by cleaning your clothes, or Jesus Christ through His precious blood in keeping your character clean? Character first.—1 John 1:7.

Are you passing through a great trial at this time? An affliction of the body, or some outward trouble? If so, do not expect God to remove it while you complain, or murmur about it. God sent it to test your patience, no doubt, and will not remove it till you "let patience have her perfect," while you endure it with sweet resignation to His will. Read at once James 1:2-3-4, Rom. 5:3-4-5, and 1st Peter 1:3 to 9. Also 3rd stanza Hymn No. 315, our Church Hymnal. May Jesus faith anchor hold steady while the storm is on.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION

This word of appreciation may seem to be getting in on a belated schedule, but it's coming on the principle that it's better late than never.

After serving the good people of Franklin Avenue Methodist church, Gastonia, for two years—and in many respects a more kind and loyal little flock no preacher ever served—for their tokens of kindness and appreciation were many and substantial. Ever an anon during the time we were there they were doing some little something to let you know that they were thinking about you.

And then these tokens of kindness were manifested sometimes in a very substantial way. For instance, they gave us a little Overland car, gave Mrs. Robbins a linen shower, and last but not least, they gave me on leaving a nice suit of clothes. And I want to say to them, as we said before, we haven't words to express our appreciation of these acts of kindness. May the Lord bless and reward every one. I don't see how we could get along up here without the little "Baby Overland," and Mrs. Robbins is enjoying the linen very much—and the suit of clothes—well, I'm wearing it every day as a reminder of the big hearted laymen of Franking Avenue church.

Now back to the main line. As I started out to say, after serving these people for two years, the first of November last we loaded the little Overland, shook hands with a number of friends who had gathered to say goodbye, and then stepping on the gas (as the modern phrase goes) away we came—right through Shelby, Rutherfordton, Chimney Rock, Asheville, and on to the Lake Junaluska charge—Lake Junaluska, the heart of Southern Methodism and a marvel for beauty.

We spent the first few days at Clyde. These good people received us very cordially and treated us nicely, and I want to assure them that this kindness was highly appreciated. And then we came on to the lake, where we are comfortably domiciled in Bro. Frank Siler's house, which is equipped with modern conveniences, nicely furnished, and beautiful for location. If a fellow will stand here where I am sitting, look out across the placid waters of the lake at the Balsam, Eagle's Nest, and many other points just as grand, then at these beautiful cottages round about the lake, and his soul is not stirred, there isn't anything in him to stir.

Not only are we pleasantly situated, but happy in the work. And with such men as J. Dale Stentz, Herbert Gibson, Edwin Fincher, Mack Fish, Zeb Corzine and others as leaders, I see no reason why we should not have a fine year up here in this hill country.

The first Sunday in December we began a two weeks meeting at Clyde, Brother Groce, the district evangelist, doing the preaching, and Brother George Hawks leading the singing. At the close of the meeting quite a number of young people came forward offering themselves for life service, should the Lord call them to this work.

Brothers Groce and Hawks make a valuable team. And I predict for them a very successful revival campaign throughout the district.

W. M. Robbins.

CHADBOURN CHARGE

Our second year on the Chadbourn charge has started off in a very promising manner. The good people of the charge have made us feel welcome in their midst for another year, not only by telling us that they were glad to have us returned, but also by the many good things they have done for us.

When we arrived in Chadbourn after conference we found that the ladies of Chadbourn church, aided by contributions from Fair Bluff and Evergreen churches, had changed agreeably the appearance of the parsonage, by hanging new curtains to the windows, placing new rugs on the floors, furnishing the kitchen with many useful utensils and by supplying our pantry with many good things to eat.

Since our return the good people from all over the charge have been supplying us with many things that make glad the heart of a preacher, such as sweet potatoes, pork, and various kinds of vegetables.

There seems to be an increased interest in the work of the church all over the charge. The Sunday schools are better attended. The one in Chadbourn has grown to the extent that we are now considering plans for building Sunday school rooms. The handsome church in Fair Bluff has been further beautified by exchanging the oil lamps for electric lights. Every church on the charge is beginning the year with increased zeal for the cause of Christ.

We have a kind people to serve who are ready to follow any plans to build up and strengthen the church of God in their midst, and who are doing their best to make us happy in our work with them. Rev. B. O. Merritt.

RED SPRINGS CHARGE

At least the former pastors of Red Springs charge will be glad to know that the church has purchased the former home of Miss Alta Marsh, located almost opposite the church, for a parsonage. The price paid was five thousand dollars, and the brethren are delighted that they have been able to secure it. We moved in the first day of January.

The old parsonage, located on Second avenue, has been sold for three thousand dollars, and is now occupied by Brother R. C. Adams, one of our truest members and lay leader of the charge. It has been the home of the preacher so long that it will take some time for a number of our people to get used to a different location; but it is gratifying that the old parsonage home has not fallen into the hands of the Phillistines. The service and responsibility of a lay leader is not so far removed from that of a preacher after all.

The first quarterly conference was held Sunday night, January 21st, following a strong sermon by our beloved presiding elder, Brother Shore. One important item to the preacher is that the board increased the pastor's salary $100. Everybody has been exceedingly kind to us, and we are praying for a great year.

L. S. Massey, P. C.

A DELIGHTFUL OCCASION AT PLYMOUTH

The Wesley Bible class, numbering sixty, of the Methodist church, was entertained at a banquet Thursday evening in the basement of the court house. The long table was beautifully decorated with candles and exergreen. The following was served by the ladies of the church: Oyster cocktail, chicken salad, saltines, pickles, salted peanuts, mints, fruit salad and coffee.

Mr. Z. U. Norman, the able teacher of the class, and one of the leading lawyers of Plymouth, acted as toastmaster. After responses from the ministers of the town Judge J. H. Kerr, the principle speaker of the evening, was introduced. In his address, which was one of the best ever delivered in Plymouth, he said one of the great needs of the world today was the all round trained man. He spoke of the essentials in the development of such a man—the intellectual, the physical and the spiritual. He said we should be proud of our great state, and the progress she is making along all lines. He appealed to the citizenship of the state to stand for law and order. He paid a beautiful tribute to the country and small town and city church.

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"God . . . hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth."—Acts 17:24-26.

RACE RELATIONS SUNDAY

At its last meeting, November 21, 1922, the Committee on Negro Americans of the Home Missions Council passed the following resolution in response to the request of the Commission on Church and Race Relations of the Federal Council:

"It was voted that as representing the boards doing Negro work who use the second Sunday in February for promotional purposes, we approve of Sunday, February 11, as 'Race Relations Sunday,' and that our boards be asked to co-operate in making this date effective both for promotional and inter-racial purposes."

The above action of the Home Missions Council was indorsed by the Council Commission on Race Relations. Every pastor will have a request from the Home Missions Council asking that he give a strong message from the pulpit on this special day. The commission urges the women of our auxiliaries to lend their services in every way possible to promote the proper observance of this Sunday.

MISSION AND BIBLE STUDY

There seems to be no question of more vital importance to all our people, before the public for study, no harder problem to be solved, than that of Inter-Racial Relations. It is being considered and studied by almost every group of thoughtful, earnest, constructive people throughout the South. The women's clubs, of secular and religious social service workers, are having an important place in the work that is being planned and carried out for the betterment of the relations between our white and colored people. That we as auxiliary women may have our part, and do intelligently our bit in this work which has been endorsed by our whole Southern Methodist Church, including our own Council, the "Negro" has been selected for the subject of study in our auxiliary mission study classes during the following months. The books have been carefully selected by our leaders, and I am urging each superintendent of mission study to make a special effort this quarter to form and conduct a class using one of the books to be named later. This may not be a popular subject—we are so accustomed to thinking of the Negro as we meet him in the kitchen, over our washtubs, in the nursery, and in the garden or yard, very often receiving "trifling" service from him, that we look at him in the very narrowest way. But it is very increasingly necessary that we get away from this attitude, which has so far been only that of our own rights, and remember that these colored people are our own people—they "belong to us" yet, and we are responsible for them, just as truly as they belonged to our fathers, who acknowledged their responsibility, and in most instances did the best they could to measure up to it—that they have their privileges and rights, as God's children, and citizens with us of our great country. So, if we have any small, personal feeling against this subject, let's put it aside for the sake of the bigger, broader interests, and enter wholeheartedly into the study of, and try to get out of it all the good there is in it, and give out of ourselves all the best there is in us, not only to the study, but to doing all we can individually towards helping to increase the good feeling between the white and colored people in our own community. It should be, and I am sure is, a matter for a pleasant sense of pride with us all, that our state is said to be the best along these lines of all the Southern States, but there is still room for improvement; so let's study and find out what we can do, beginning first with a determination to have a sympathetic understanding.

NOTICE

It is urged most earnestly that every auxiliary at once send a list of its officers for 1923 to its own district secretary. It is very necessary that the district secretaries should have these lists—they have much business to transact with the auxiliaries, and as much of must be done by correspondence, they must know at the beginning of the year to whom they must write to give and also gain information of importance in planning for and carrying on the year's work. In their turn, also, the district secretaries are urged to send a complete list of the names of their different auxiliaries with the names and addresses of their president and superintendents of study and publicity to the conference superintendent of study and publicity. It is important that she should have these three items of information, in order that she may successfully get the "Bulletin" into every auxiliary, as well as to get the study information to them. The names of the auxiliaries are asked for, because in many of our churches there are from two to four auxiliaries, and it is desired to fit each auxiliary with its own special officers. The superintendent of literature should also be furnished with a list of the auxiliaries with names and addresses of the presidents, as she has material that must be mailed regularly. Will the presidents and district secretaries please attend to these matters for the sake of us all.

HOOKERTON AUXILIARY

Since nothing has been written from our Hookerton Mission Society for quite a while, I am writing to let the ladies know we are still alive. Yes, we are working on from year to year, and I think advancing some along all lines.

We have about twenty-five members enrolled, and usually a very good attendance at the monthly meetings. We observed the Week of Prayer—the meetings were interesting, well attended and offerings liberal. For all purposes we have raised $433.30 this year, more than we have ever raised before.

Mrs. R. R. Grant, our pastor's wife, has conducted a very interesting study class. We have studied four books, one on the foreign and one on the home work, one on the Bible, and the History of Methodism. I would recommend "The Meaning of Service," by H. E. Fosdick, to all the study circles that wish to take up a Bible study, for it is a spiritual uplift to anyone who will read it thoughtfully and prayerfully.

We have clothed a little girl at the Methodist Orphanage for a number of years, and it has been a great pleasure to us. About half our ladies take the Missionary Voice and some Our Missionary News.

I hope and pray that we may all work harder and do more for the advancement of Christ's kingdom on the earth in 1923.

Mrs. Helen R. Palmer, Cor. Sec.

ROSMAN ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Society of the Rosman Methodist church met at the parsonage January 15th. The pastor, Rev. G. A. B. Holderby, read the first chapter of Send Peter and opened the meeting with prayer.

The following are the officers for 1923:

President—Mrs. G. A. B. Holdreby.
Vice President—Mrs. Dr. Lynch.
Secretary—Mrs. Mayme Bartleson.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. E. White.
Press Reporter—Miss Margaret E. F. Holderby.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Holderby and the meeting adjourned with prayer by the pastor, to meet at the parsonage Thursday, January 25. Margaret E. F. Holderby.

WHAT WILT THOU HAVE ME TO DO?

Hast thou, my Master, aught for me to do

To honor thee today?

Hast thou a word of love to some poor soul

That I may say?

For see, this world that thou hast made so fair

Within its heart is sad.

Thousands are lonely, thousands sigh and weep,

But few are glad.

And which among them all is mine today?

O guide my willing feet

To some poor soul that, fainting on the way,

Needs comfort sweet;

Or into some sick room, where I may speak

With tenderness of thee,

And, showing thee and what thou art, O Christ,

Bid sorrow flee!

Or unto one whose straits call not for words,

To one in want, in need,

Who asks not counsel, but would take from me

A loving deed.

Surely thou hast some work for me to do.

O open thou mine eyes

To see how thou wouldst have it done

And where it lies!

—Selected.

Dear Methodist Sisters:

I find upon investigation that there are no scholarships for colored girls at Paine College.

It seems to me that a wonderful opportunity is here offered to the white women of our North Carolina Methodism. To prove our sincerity in our expressed purpose to work together for the uplift of the Negro race and to show our faith in the possibilities of Christi an development in Negro character, what better investment can we make just now than to found a scholarship for a N. C. Negro girl at Paine College? One hundred and sixty dollars will pay a student's board and tuition for one year. Cannot the women of our two conferences assume this amount for 1923-1924? I have already in mind a good girl who could be greatly helped by you if you are willing. Let's do it, sisters. The name of the scholarship may be decided when the scholarship is an established fact. All of us can suggest names that would be highly appropriate. "The William Capers Scholarship," "The Walter and Daisy Lambuth Scholarship," the "Mary Black," or "Lucy Cunningham," or "Frances Bumpass" Scholarship. Any one of these would make a strong appeal to the hearts of North Carolina Methodist women. But the first thing is to make sure of the one hundred and sixty dollars. Our home mission subject for the year—The Negro—must not be academic only. Let's do something, and do it now.

Let's talk to one another through the Advocate. I hope to hear personally from some of you. My address is Mocksville, N. C.

Bertha Marvin Lee.

We are just in receipt of information from our treasurer, Mrs. Peacock, that our conference fell a little short of the financial goal for 1922, which was $42,250, while total receipts for 1922 were only $42,036.46. Charlotte, Greensboro, Salisbury and Statesville districts were over. Let us not be discouraged with the deficit, but let the fact that there was a deficit spur us on to greater effort for 1923.

NEW OFFICERS FOR WEST END

The newly elected officers for Women's Missionary Society at West End church, Winston-Salem, are as follows:

ALL IS READY AT RALEIGH

Word comes from Raleigh that prospects are splendid for a quite successful Standard Training School there January 28-February 3. The presiding elder, pastors, superintendents and others are reported as being enthusiastically behind the project, and large numbers are expected to enroll for a week of intensive, inspiring instruction and training. The following local committees are at work:

Board of Managers—Rev. W. W. Peele, chairman, Rev. J. C. Wooten, Rev. H. I. Glass, Dr. R. F. Bumpas, Rev. L. B. Pattishall, R. E. Prince, and Joseph G. Brown.

Publicity Committee—Miss Susan Iden and Jule B. Warren.

Registration Committee—Rev. H. I. Glass, chairman, J. B. Robeson, P. B. Magruder, Mrs. Radcliff, and Mrs. L. B. Pattishall.

Entertainment and Arrangements—C. A. Dillon, Mrs. Nellie Reeves, and Mrs. W. L. Nevins.

Finance Committee—Henry J. Young.

Five courses of instruction will be offered and class work will begin Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

SUNDAY SCHOOL EVANGELISM

Methodism believes in receiving children and young people into the church. Last year 3,948 Sunday school pupils in the North Carolina conference were received into church membership. The supreme aim of the Sunday school is to "lead each pupil to a knowledge of God's will and an acceptance of Jesus Christ as personal Saviour and Lord, and to develop a Christian character that is expressed through worship, right living, and efficient service."

Joining the church, however, should never be allowed to become a perfunctory matter. No young person should be received into church membership without a previous course of definite instruction and a period of special instruction. Our Methodism takes these facts into account, also, and through the General Sunday School Board has prepared a suggestive program of evangelism. Methodist Sunday schools are asked to study this program and to make use of it.

The Sunday School Magazines for December, January and February contain this program in full. Leaflet literature has been prepared for free distribution to pastors and schools interested. Read what the Magazine has to say and write for these leaflets.

OUR NET INCREASE IS 7,106

Eliminating a few simple errors in our last conference Journal we find that there was a net increase of 7,106 in the enrollment of our Sunday schools, giving us a total enrollment in all departments of 90,821, instead of 89,169 as printed in the Journal. The errors referred to, in most instances, are the result of the failure to consider the officers and teachers as members of the school. Another error, amounting to 433, is the result of the failure to include in the calculations the schools of the Burlington circuit. In the rush of conference week these errors slipped by the statistical secretaries, and consequently into the Journal. The present enrollment, by districts, this year and last, follows:

Durham	11,014	12,607	1,593

Elizabeth City	8,816	9,500	684
Fayetteville	8,365	10,498	2,133
New Bern	10,680	11,118	438
Raleigh	9,788	10,035	247
Rockingham	9,414	9,822	408
Washington	9,746	10,405	659
Weldon	7,693	8,588	895
Wilmington	8,199	8,248	49
Totals	83,715	90,821	7,106

A GOAL FOR OUR METHODISM

"One million increase in Sunday school membership" was adopted by the General Sunday School Council in session in Nashville, Tenn. last week as an objective for Southern Methodism during the present quadrennium.

North Carolina conference is responsible for her part of this one million.

As a conference our goal, as a minimum, is a Sunday school enrollment equal to church membership, and we are asking every Sunday school to adopt this as one of its goals for the quadrennium.

North Carolina conference has a church membership of 105,379. Her Sunday school enrollment is 90,821. Our Sunday school procession, therefore, is behind to the tune of 14,558!

How much of this is your school going to increase this year?

WASHINGTON PHILATHEAS

The first monthly meeting of the Wesley Philathea Bible Class for the new year was held on Monday evening at the home of the president, Miss Bernice Nicholson. From the large number present one would feel that class interest was keen and the outlook for 1923 most promising. The new members present for the first time were most welcome and their presence added much to the meeting.

After an appropriate scripture lesson for the beginning of a new year, and prayer, the general routine of business was quickly disposed of, and the question that has been of greatest interest to the class for some time—namely—the clothing of a little girl at our Methodist Orphanage—was discussed, and plans were matured in her favor. We are proud to have little Audrey Lassiter for our own.

The committee on the selection of a mission study for the coming year asked for more time for their work. This being granted, a discussion of this matter followed, and the class hopes to begin this work in February, when its meeting will be held with Mrs. Ed. P. Rhodes, vice president. During a pleasant social hour the hostess served delicious refreshments.

The class greatly appreciates the efforts of Mrs. J. H. McCracken as teacher and leader for the past two years, and to her we owe much of our success. Each member is delighted to have her with us for 1923, and through her teaching and leadership we feel sure we will go forward.

Miss Edith G. Brown,
Cor. Sec.

Western North Carolina Conference

LET'S CATCH UP!

The largest conference in the Southern Methodist church is the Virginia conference. It has a church membership of 145,779 and a Sunday school enrollment of 129,677. The Western North Carolina conference has church membership of 125,746 and a Sunday school enrollment of 121,772. In Sunday school enrollment we are just 7,905 behind the leaders. Let's catch up!

GOING SOME

The Baptist Sunday school enrollment gain for the past two years in the 100 counties of North Carolina is reported to be 44,468. The Methodist Sunday school enrollment gain in 44 counties of North Carolina, the Western North Carolina conference, is reported at 22,074. In the same territory the Baptist Sunday school percentage enrollment on church membership is 81.7, while the Methodist Sunday school percentage enrollment on church membership is 96.8. When the Methodist can outcount the Baptist they are going some.

BLUE SEAL DIPLOMAS

There are twelve units in the Standard Training Course of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Each of these units carries with it twelve lessons, or text book with twelve chapters in it. When one has completed four given general units of credit he is entitled to what is called an "Incomplete Diploma." When four other units are completed he is entitled to a "Blue Seal Diploma." The following persons in the Western North Carolina conference have obtained their "Blue Seals":

- Miss Maud McKinnon, Charlotte.
- Miss Jennie L. Hunt, Greensboro.
- Rev. C. L. Kirkpatrick, Hickory.
- Miss Annie Cook, Newton.
- Miss Eva Wilkinson, Newton.
- Prof. A. C. Sherrill, Newton.

We have thirty persons who have secured their "Incomplete Diplomas." Miss Maud McKinnon is the only "Gold Seal Diploma" possessor in our midst, she having done all twelve units, eight general units and four specialization units in a given field. Your humble servant has enough units for a "Gold Seal," but they are so scattered that they do not correlate into credit.

OFFICIAL RECOGNITION

Supt. E. D. Grubb, of the Walnut Street Sunday school, Greensboro, can plan for big things and at the same time keep up with details. He keeps in touch with his individual folks. He has furnished for this page a cut of Miss Eda Cole, who has been present every Sunday at her class for the past six years. Miss Cole is to be congratulated and Mr. Grubb commended for his official recognition of her splendid achievement.

In this same school the following have been present every Sunday for the length of time opposite their names:

- Helen Hicks, four years.
- Louise Hicks, three years.
- Eugene Grubb, three years.
- James Brewer, three years.
- Carl Hunt, three years.
- Paul Nance, three years.
- David Grubb, two years.
- Blanche Norwood, two years.
- Jennette Brewer, two years.
- Thelma Cole, two years.
- Elizabeth May Everhart, two years.
- Mozelle Koonts, two years.
- Jasper Jenkins, one year.
- Howard Swaney, one year.
- John Taylor Brewer, one year.
- Louis Huffstetler, one year.
- Helen Shields, one year.
- Edna Candle, one year.
- Annie May Morgan, one year.

MISS EDA COLE

CHARLOTTE FACULTY

The third annual Standard Training School for Sunday School Leaders will convene at Trinity church, Sunday afternoon, February 4th, at three o'clock and will extend through the following Friday night. The courses and instructors are as follows:

Beginner Lesson Materials—Mrs. G. W. Green, Greeleyville, S. C.

Primary Lesson Materials—Miss Marie McDonald, Columbia, S. C.

Junior Lesson Materials—Miss Anna Marie Hansen, Winter Haven, Fla.

Intermediate-Senior Agencies—Rev. J. C. Robertson, Danville, Va.

Sunday School Management—Mr. M. W. Brabham, Nashville, Tenn.

Principles of Teaching—Rev. C. C. Weaver, Monroe, N. C.

Bible-Life of Jesus—Rev. C. S. Kirkpatrick, Hickory, N. C.

LEADING AND LAGGING

The Western North Carolina conference leads our connection in Sunday school numerical growth. Our general promotion work is growing mighty well. But we are lagging in preparation. Our leadership training work is just beginning to get under way. We will of course remember that we were one of the most recent large conference recruits in this work and therefore have not had time to do great things, but the facts remain that we are lagging in the matter of teacher training. This lagging must go to leading. We shall give this matter increased attention.

TRAINING STUDENTS

The training for leadership report for November has just reached this office. It contains this information:

Prof. A. C. Reynolds has a class of six students at Waynesville.

Rev. J. F. Kirk has a class of nineteen students at Salisbury.

Mrs. J. M. Mull, of Morganton, and Rev. M. W. Heckard, of Gastonia, are individual students.

The hundred and ninety credits were issued during the month. They came from the Salisbury-Spencer, Greensboro and Winston-Salem schools.

GREENSBORO DISTRICT

It was a great meeting that the Greensboro District held at West Market Street church on Thursday night, January 11th. One hundred and fifty leaguers and many visitors were present. The church was well filled and everybody was happy, including Dr. Barnhardt. The doctor made us feel welcome with that smile that is all his own.

Owing to illness in his family Bro. Fields, our president, was unable to meet with us. His own health being bad, Dan feels that he should be relieved of his duties as president. The union reluctantly acceded to his request and, in appreciation of excellent rendered, elected Mr. Wilbur Stamey, vice president, to fill the unexpired term as president.

Our district secretary, Mr. Grady Dawson, presided over the meeting. Dr. Barnhardt read the scripture lesson and Brother Barber, pastor of the Glenwood church, led in prayer.

Jamestown won the attendance banner with thirty-eight members present, and Holt's Chapel again won the merit banner with 100 per cent. Liberty was second with 95 per cent, Spring Garden third with 80 per cent. All are gaining each month and we hope to have several 100 per cent efficient leagues before the conference year closes. It can be done, as is proved by Holt's Chapel's example, and what they can do the rest of us surely can. It takes only religion and hard work to make the grade.

The fourth department work was ably presented by the superintendent of that department from Carraway Memorial League. Brother Barber, the business manager of the Epworth Echo, told us of the business end of the paper. Let's remember that a paper can't run on good wishes these days. The writer tried to present the "Tar Heel Leaguer." Awaiting developments.

We were glad to have Brother Harrison from the Christian Endeavor Union with us. His short talk was very inspiring.

In the near future all the church unions of young people's work are going to meet together, the place and time to be decided later. Carl Ljung, R. H. Lowdermilk and D. L. Webster were appointed to represent the Epworth League in a joint conference to arrange the program, time and place.

After the devotional and business meeting Mr. Carl Ljung, president of the West Market League asked us to follow him to the basement where the social hour was held. After several games and refreshments, we adjourned to meet with Centenary Thursday night, February 8th.

It would be unfair to our two famous comedians and singers, Rev. L. B. Hayes of Park Place and Rev. G. T. Bond of Spring Garden Street, to leave them unsung. Their selections were enjoyed and appreciated.

D. L. Webster.

A NEW LEAGUE IN CHARLOTTE DISTRICT

At the request of the pastor, Rev. S. Taylor, and other leaders, Mrs. C. V. Fite, district secretary, went to Morven, N. C., Sunday, January 14th, and organized a Senior and Intermediate League in the Morven Methodist church. The Senior league has seventeen charter members with the following officers:

President—Miss Daisy Lee Northcutt.
Vice President—Mr. J. V. Webb.

Secretary—Mr. D. F. Garris.
Treasurer—Mr. E. A. Spencer.
Devotional Supt.—Mr. J. F. Northcutt.
Social Service Supt.—Mrs. Lee Northcutt.
Recreational Supt.—Miss Nora Pegues.
Missionary Supt.—Mrs. T. H. Britt.
Epworth Era Agent—Miss Mildred Teal.

The people appear to be interested in the young life of the church and, because they bought five handbooks at the organization of their league, we predict for them a life of growth and usefulness. The officers for the Intermediate league will be elected at a later date.

TO THE EPWORTH LEAGUES OF THE N. C. CONFERENCES

Dear Fellow Leaguers:

Six months have passed since our last assembly in Morehead City. What has the first half of this conference year meant to your league? I am sure there is not a league in our conference that has accomplished all we would like to have, but we must determine to make the last half the best in the history of our league.

As your treasurer I am writing each league in our conference with regard to our mission pledge to the African Special. It is the purpose of the Central Office to collect this pledge in full as near as possible during the months of February and March.

Below I am asking a few questions which I would appreciate if you would answer and return to me as early as possible. This will greatly help me and at the same time make our records complete.

1. Did your league make a pledge to the African Special at our last assembly? .....
2. If not will you give it to me now? $.....
3. State amount paid by your league to date. $.....
4. Does your league use the budget system? .....
5. Will you not endeavor to make a payment during February or March? .....
6. Amount enclosed with answer to these questions. $.....

If you can I would greatly appreciate your sending me the entire amount of your pledge with answer to above questions. With best wishes to each member of your chapter, I beg to remain,
Yours in the bonds, "All for Christ,"
C. Gehrman Cobb, Treas.
N. C. Conf. Epworth League.

We hope every league and leaguer will take notice of the letter above, written by our treasurer, Gehrman Cobb, concerning pledges now due. Unless you who are now reading this pay your individual pledge how do you expect your league to pay its pledge?

The above is a copy of the letter our treasurer has taken the pains to send to every league in the North Carolina conference, unless by accident some league is overlooked, or some letter miscarries. We desire also to stress promptness in paying all pledges. We note with deep regret that instead of making progress in this important phase of our league work there was a total decrease of eighty-eight dollars in our missionary contributions the past year. Durham district made the worst slump—three hundred and eighty-five dollars under the year before.

With 9117 Epworth Leaguers in the North Carolina conference we paid $3439 to carry or send "glad tidings of salvation to the millions of other young people who sit in darkness." This is about the price of one movie a year, considerably less than the price of a cold drink a month. Shame on us who claim to be followers of Christ in such an age that we treat the work for which He gave Himself, and

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

I discovered a vegetable compound that does the work of dangerous, sickening calomel and I want every reader of this paper to buy a bottle for a few cents and if it doesn't straighten you up better and quicker than salivating calomel just go back to the store and get your money back.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your thirty feet of bowels of the sour bile and constipation poison which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable.

I guarantee that one spoonful of this harmless liquid liver medicine will relieve the headache, biliousness, coated tongue, ague, malaria, sour stomach or any other distress caused by a torpid liver as quickly as a dose of vile, nauseating calomel, besides it will not make you sick or keep you from a day's work.

Calomel is poison—it's mercury—it attacks the bones, often causing rheumatism. Calomel is dangerous. It sickens—while my Dodson's Liver Tone is safe, pleasant and harmless. Eat anything afterwards, because it can not salivate. Give it to the children because it doesn't upset the stomach or shock the liver. Take a spoonful tonight and wake up feeling fine and ready for a full day's work.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

The First Baptist church of New Bern made a wonderful thanksgiving contribution of $1227.54—in the face of fire and distress.—Charity and Children.

The boys and girls who are trained at the Methodist Orphanage, as a rule, are loyal to their old Home. The further they get away from the Orphanage and the older they become the keener their sense of appreciation. Below I am publishing two letters which will serve as a sample of the numerous letters I receive frequently from our sons and daughters. The influence of the Home serves to restrain them from wrong doing, and at the same time inspires them to high thinking and noble living.

Now the Christmas holidays are over and almost everybody has settled down to work, I am expecting our friends, Sunday schools and organized classes to respond to our needs by keeping offerings and pledges met each month. My observation has been that the classes and schools which allow themselves to fall behind find it a difficult job to catch up again. By meeting their obligations month by month it becomes an easy matter as well as a great source of joy. So in the very beginning of the year I wish to urge prompt attention upon the part of all to this important matter.

Since Christmas we have had lots of influenza. Several of the teachers and matrons and a large number of the children have been confined to their beds. We have had two cases of pneumonia, but the skill of Dr. J. H. McGee and the tender nursing of Miss Laura Breeze brought them through. Drs. J. H. McGee and Clarence Judd are devoted to our children and render them the most efficient service. No orphanage could be more fortunate in the fine type of Christian physicians than the Methodist Orphanage. This statement applies to our dentists, Drs. J. M. Fleming and H. O. Lineberger, who are untiring in their services to our large family. To each of these we extend our hearty thanks for their valuable services.

No. 5, U. S. Military Academy,
West Point, N. Y.

I have just received your letter. I wish to express my appreciation for your remembrance of me at this joyous time of the year. Indeed your letter brought back again those fond memories of the most delightful days of my life. I shall never forget those care free days at the beautiful home I had for ten years. However, I am afraid that I must decline your kind invitation to the Easter festivities. We are allowed leaves of absence only at Christmas time or at the end of the third class year. This rule is invariable.

I was required to take the examination in English. I do not know whether or not I passed it, but I think I did. It was a very difficult examination. I was not required to take the examination in any of the other subjects.

Hoping to hear from you again in the near future, I remain,
Sincerely, Mitchell Giddens.

"I am writing a few lines to let you know how I am getting along.

I am well and enjoying life, and I am getting along all right so far in my studies.

Mr. Barnes, I certainly am glad that I was so fortunate in making the orphanage my home for eight years. I learned principles from the kind teaching that you all gave me that have moulded my character and kept me from the temptations that confronted me after I had been out in the world so short a time. I realize that you and all the other teachers did all you could to make it a home as near as you could for me.

I have been laughed at because I would not take part in some things that I have seen other boys do, and I realize that it is the kind teaching that has kept me from yielding so far to these temptations."

* * * *

"It would seem that hundreds of people in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, can find in the example stated a suggestion on the importance of making the right kind of wills. What a sad comment upon a life it is when the day after the funeral reveals the candle snuffed out without a scratch of the pen in the interest of needy causes! Think of the hands in this world that are stretched out to men and women of wealth pleading assistance. It is bad enough for these possessors of wealth while they live to ignore the importuning hands. But for them to continue doing it after their own hands lie crossed upon their bosoms in silent death is nothing short of criminal negligence. If I had wealth, I should be afraid to appear before the Judge in the next world, when I had left this one without dividing my substance at least in part among the worthy benefolences so dear to the heart of the Judge."

* * * *

It is only fair to ask that the orphanage be judged by the finished product that it sends out. This is the test by which the colleges ask that judgment shall be passed upon them. No school or college is measured by the poorest student that has entered his name upon the list. The fellow who does not study but who wastes his time and resents restrictions is not the one to reflect what a college can do. Nor does any one pass judgment upon the institution by watching him. Even a factory is not judged by its worst product but by its best. At the orphanage we receive some material that is not promising and we receive a great deal that is warped and twisted. Fortunately also much excellent material comes to our mill. It is out of good material that fine results can be had. Our friends are invited to judge our work by the character of those who have done their best while here to avail themselves of the privileges offered and who have therefore received the impress of the institution.—The Connie Maxwell.

Among the agencies of the church none holds a dearer place in the hearts of the people than does the orphanage. Its appeal ever goes direct to the heart and moves the will as nothing else can. In this fact we find one of the most healthy symptoms in our modern development of Christianity. Time was when the disciples thought the Master had no time for the "little child," but He became better known and we have learned that He who accords "little children" the first place is most like Him.

The Thornwell Orphanage has won for itself a unique place among the orphanages of the land. It stands a monument of faith, a pioneer in its ideal and without a peer in the emphasis it places upon the value of the life. True to its origin in the faith of a child, it has striven to be a Home in all that term should mean to a child.

Its fame has gone abroad and its imperishable work blesses the world. Some time ago two men walked into a cafe in New York and seated themselves at a table opposite a stranger. They were talking of Thornwell Orphanage. The one said, "You know I would like to see the man who as a little boy gave Dr. Jacobs the half dollar that started that institution." "Well," says the stranger, "you are looking at him now, for I am he." The coincident was too much for his modest soul; he had to own up his personal identity.

It is a great joy to have men appreciate and praise our deeds, but how much greater joy to know that the Master knows and praises when we care for His little ones. We are issuing this number of "Presbyterian Progress" as the "Orphanage Special" with the fond hope that every one of our more than eleven thousand readers shall be among the supporters of that cherished institution. No man can afford not to be, the opportunity being given.—G. G. Mayes, Editor.

Advocate Months

Every Methodist in North Carolina ought to be a regular reader of the North Carolina Christian Advocate.

This year should be the best in the history of the paper. We now have the largest circulation of any one of the Advocates published in Southern Methodism.

The paper goes into about one-third of our homes. There are 25,000 subscribers at this time. The management does not want to lose any of these. All of the 25,000 as renewals and 5,000 new ones during February, March and April is the goal.

We earnestly trust that all our preachers and other friends will join us in making this the best, biggest and best year in the history of the paper.

Park Place, Greensboro, and Stantonsburg charge have put the paper in every home represented in the membership. What charge will be the next one to do this?

NECTAR FOR HUMMING-BIRDS

"Aunt Helen," said Barbara, sitting down in one end of the swaying hammock in which Aunt Helen lay reading, "Aunt Helen, I wish humming-birds liked us."

"Humming-birds?" answered Aunt Helen, absently; then, laying down her book, she said with more interest: "It would be nice. I didn't know they liked anybody. Do they?"

"Well, I don't know whether they like her," admitted Barbara, "but they're in her garden all the time, every minute all day long."

"Have you been over in Mrs. Joyce's garden this morning?" asked Aunt Helen, her eyes smiling at her little niece's solemn face. "Don't you think maybe it's Mrs. Joyce's lovely gay garden that the humming-birds are fond of, not Mrs. Joyce? Though if humming-birds are fond of any one, I admit they're probably fond of Mrs. Joyce. She's as nice, every bit, as her garden, isn't she? And that's saying a great deal."

"She loves the humming-birds," went on Barbara. "She says the garden wouldn't be as lovely if they weren't flashing around in it all day. She says I may sit on the wall or on that nice step that leads into the shed all day if I want to and watch them. And I have watched them and watched them, and I wish I could make them want to come over to see us."

"They'd come if we had sweet posies for them to sip honey out of," said Aunt Helen. "But you know and I know that it's too late to start a garden this year. Why don't you plant a little garden all yourself next summer just as soon as we come up, and the rest of this summer you might tell Mrs. Joyce's humming-birds of the plan and invite them to visit us next year, arriving with the first posy?"

Barbara smiled in spite of herself. "I will," she said, "but next summer is ages to wait. I want the humming-birds to come this summer." Barbara, once a project in her mind, never wanted to wait a minute for its accomplishment.

"Well," said Aunt Helen, "let's content ourselves this summer with our own cozy shady porch. See, the vines have grown so fast this last week that we'll have to cut out our little openings for windows again. Don't you want to get the scissors now?"

Obediently but listlessly, Barbara went inside for the kitchen scissors, and was soon snipping the persistent vines. "Wish they had flowers on them, so the humming-birds would come," she said, her mind still filled with her one idea. "Isn't there any way at all to get them to come, Aunt Helen, without a whole garden of flowers? Most always you know a way for everything."

Aunt Helen smiled at the unconscious compliment and, swinging lazily, but her quick wits to work. Finally she said, laughing. "It might work. There's no harm in trying." And to herself she added, "And it will give the child something to do all day."

"Oh, what?" begged Barbara, eyes alight, voice singing with interest. "How can we, Aunt Helen?"

"I'm not promising, mind you—it's only a scheme," said Aunt Helen—"but if you want to run up attic and hunt up the old silk bag"—

Without further instructions Barbara was off and away, racing up the attic stairs. "And pick out scraps of all the bright-colored silks," Aunt Helen went on, as if there had been no interruption, when Barbara, breathless, returned, and had emptied the gay contents on the floor. "Pink and blue and lavender and yellow as ifha blue and lavender and yellow and red—any color you see that looks as if it might be a flower growing in a garden"—

"Aunt Helen!" Barbara remonstrated. "It wouldn't be fun to fool them!"

"We'll not fool them," Aunt Helen assured her. "Scraps of silk are only half the plan."

"And what's the other half?" Barbara, sitting beside the gay pile of pieces, looked not unlike a flower herself.

"The other half," said Aunt Helen, "is bottles. Yes," in answer to Barbara's astonishment, "bottles. And I should think they ought to be the lightest you can find and as many as you can get."

"Vanilla bottles?" asked Barbara. "Mercy, no, tiny bottles. Let me see. Somewhere in the attic there are some, a lot, that grandmother used to keep sugar pills in. Maybe they're in the bottom drawer of the old bureau; maybe they're in a pasteboard box in the old green seachest under the west window. You'll have to hunt. I've forgotten where I did see them."

Off and away ran Barbara for the second time, and in a few minutes was back, an old pasteboard shoe-box in her hand. "There are millions," she said joyfully.

"Now what do we do?"

"Hardly millions, but plenty," said Aunt Helen, getting out of the hammock and emptying the little bottles out on the piazza table. "Now we'll tie a gay necktie around the neck of each bottle so, and then we'll fill the bottle with sugar water"—

"Oh, yes," sang Barbara, running for the kitchen.

"And then we'll tie each bottle to the vine, outside, so the humming-birds may see."

"And they'll think the silk is a flower, and when they get here they'll find the sweet water to dip their bills into, just the way they run their long bills down in the flowers!"

"Exactly," said Aunt Helen, as interested as her small niece. "Won't people passing think we've lost our wits!" she added, laughing.

It wasn't long before the green porch vine was as gaily bedecked as though it had miraculously burst into multicolored bloom. No garden flowers could be gayer in color than the bits of waving silk, and Barbara's busy fingers had seen to it that every bottle was used.

As you may imagine, next morning Barbara was up with the birds, and, still as a mouse, she sat under a little pine-tree, her eyes glued to the porch vines. Mrs. Joyce's garden was so near by that perhaps that was the reason the humming-birds so soon found Barbara's party—for a real party the humming-birds thought it. Sugar and water was every bit as good as the honey they found in flowers—so they must have thought, because all day they came to the "silk-bottle-vine porch," as Barbara called it, and seemed as much at home, fitting in and out of the leaves as they did in Mrs. Joyce's real garden.

And Barbara still ran often to Mrs. Joyce's garden to see the humming-birds flash from one flower to another; and Mrs. Joyce often came to Barbara's porch to watch the humming-birds enjoy their sugar and water; and Aunt Helen had lived up to her reputation of always thinking of something; and Barbara was happy because the humming-birds wanted to come to see her that summer, instead of waiting a whole long year.—Rose Brooks, in The Christian Register.

PREJUDICE

I am prejudiced against the word prejudice.

* * *

Prejudice sounds like the swamps where chills, fevers and malaria are bred. It hasn't the glow and blush of health.

* * *

Prejudice has no outlook. It is perverted and pessimistic. It gasps like the one possessed is diseased.

* * *

Prejudice does not take deep root and flourish in good, great and grand natures. It thrives only in mediocrity.

* * *

You have entertained some prejudice against a man, when you were not your better self, and yet possess a big heart, but if your chronic condition is petty prejudice, you have a small soul.

* * *

There are some natures that are incapable of prejudice, while others can not free themselves of this incubus.

* * *

In all great causes men who have been destined to be leaders have created deep-seated and prolonged prejudice.

* * *

The indomitable purpose of Woodrow Wilson to give the world a League of Nations and preserve the peace of the world brought upon his lonely heart the undeserved prejudice of the nation, and forced the paralytic stroke that silenced his voice.

* * *

Jesus Christ, who undertook to save the world, was dragged to the accursed cross and crowned with the thorns of prejudice and nailed to the despised tree with the spikes of prejudice. Jesus Christ was the victim of the venom of the prejudice of misguided men.

* * *

As God sits upon His regal throne looking down upon the defeated victims of prejudice, He would say of those who prejudice with a stab that they are worthy successors of the long-faced, long-robed hypocrites that prejudged Him, two thousand years ago, in the streets of old Jerusalem among the Judean hills.

PASTOR AT FREMONT PRESENTED A FORD COUPE

My people and other friends have recently presented me with a new Ford coupe. It was a most generous act on the part of this fine people, and this pastor is profoundly grateful to each one who has had a hand in this splendid thing. We have had many other kindnesses shown us since conference, all of which we deeply appreciate. Our work is starting off well, and we are hoping and praying for a great year. Just now we are in the grip of the "flu" somewhat over the charge, and thus our congregations at present are reduced on that account. However, as the people recuperate and weather becomes milder we hope to loom up larger along all lines of church activity this year than correspondingly last year. J. A. Dailey.

"Bill," said a sailor looking up from his writing, "do you spell 'sense' with a 'c' or an 's'?"

"That depends," replied his friend. "Do you refer to money or brains?"

"Am, I don't mean either of them two," was the reply. "What I want to say is, 'I ain't seen him sense.'"

A CALL TO THE LAYMEN OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH

The recent address of the bishops issued immediately after their meeting at New Orleans in December on the imperative necessity of collecting the Centenary pledges should find a response in the heart of every layman throughout the entire church. This address sets forth clearly the embarrassment which confronts our workers in every field, in our home and foreign missionary enterprises, involving the entire program throughout the whole territory in which our church is striving to serve its day and generation. It shows conclusively that disaster will come to our various missionary enterprises unless the entire church awakes to the necessity of immediate action in the matter of paying our Centenary pledges. Careful consideration of the situation will justify the conclusion that the very honor of our church is at stake, and that failure upon our part to bring success to the ends of the Centenary with its great spiritual dynamic will invite immediate disaster to the whole program of our great church.

In this stirring message to our entire church the bishops have given a most suggestive recognition to the newly organized boards of lay activities. The following is their message to the various lay leaders of our organization:

"We would respectfully suggest to the newly constituted Board of Lay Activities that its primary and principal task at this particular time, as it seems to us, is the collection of the Centenary pledges and we therefore call upon all lay leaders, conference, district, charge and church, to assume new, constant and abiding responsibility for the collection of all the pledges within their respective jurisdictions and ask that they do not cease their labors until the entire subscription list in each case is completely cleared."

Not only do we find the bishops alling upon the laymen at this crisis in the history of the Centenary Movement, but also our leaders who constitute the small army of field generals in this movement. The Centenary secretaries are earnestly calling upon the laymen for a deliverance of the full force of our organization in the four months emergency campaign which is upon us. The following are the resolutions unanimously passed by the Centenary secretaries in their session in Nashville, Tennessee, December 28-29, 1922:

"In facing the strenuous period of the next four months when we, the Centenary field secretaries, representing the great Centenary Movement throughout the church, are to make appeal for the collection of pledges, we can but recall the magnificent support that we received from lay leaders and the great body of laymen throughout the church during the inspirational period, resulting in the magnificent sum raised by subscription of about thirty-six million dollars. And remembering the fact that men and women of our church under the leadership of district secretaries and church directors and local church directors, who were busy with their own affairs, laid aside everything to make possible this great achievement, therefore

Be it resolved, first, That we rely without any reservation upon the support of the lay members of our church in this emergency campaign to raise four millions of dollars by May 1st, 1923.

Second, That as we face this great emergency campaign we earnestly and respectfully request the united assistance of the organization of Lay Activities throughout the church.

Third, That we request that the Boards of Lay Activities through their organizations give us all possible assistance and deliver themselves in this emergency campaign which means so much to the church.

Fourth, That we request the district organization of Lay Activities to furnish to the pastors lay speakers from now until the end of the campaign.

Fifth, we congratulate the Board of Lay Activities in the rapid perfection of its organization throughout the church, that we already in our various church activities feel the effect of this organization."

Respectfully submitted,

James Thomas,
A. J. Cauthen,
D. L. Blackmore.

These resolutions show the implicit faith our leaders have in our laymen and their belief in our lay organization to render effective service in the emergency campaign. Our hearts are thrilled by this appeal to give ourselves unreservedly during the next four months to this great task. We can do this, and in the doing, as our organization gets into action for this great cause, there will come a unity of purpose and a consciousness of power to achieve that will in the end make our organization invincible for any task the church may call upon us to perform.

And so while we are working steadily and patiently along our four main channels—Stewardship, Evangelism, Christian Education and Social Service—we must see and rejoice that here is our first great opportunity to function effectively as a great church-wide organization, or church board. The laymen have never yet failed when our church has called upon them for a great service—they will not fail now.

Our church needs us! Other denominations have their eyes upon us! Suffering humanity looks to us with outstretched hands! The great suffering, tender heart of God our Father yearns for us to "go forward!" We cannot fail Him! We must rally to this call!

Let every Board of Lay Activities, every lay leader, every chairman of lay committees, every lay speaker give himself wholeheartedly to this great task. May God guide us and give us wisdom and strength and inspire all of us to bring to a glorious consummation the great Centenary Movement!

G. L. Morelock,

Gen. Sec. Ben. Board of Lay Activities.

Rev. and Mrs. W. R. Shelton entertained their hosts of friends at a beautiful reception on Tuesday evening, the occasion being the fifth anniversary of their marriage. The entire lower floor of the home was thrown open and artistically decorated with quantities of long leaf pine, bowls of fragrant narcissi, and vases of rose and white carnations. The guests were greeted upon arrival by Mrs. T. C. Coxe and Miss Johnnie Dunlap, and shown to the cloak rooms by Mesdames Frank Bennett, H. W. Little and Clarence Burns. Miss Mary Plunkett presented them to the receiving line, which was composed of the host and hostess, Mrs. Hart of Roanoke Rapids, mother of the hostess, Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Douglass, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Hamaker, and Mrs. C. L. Jackson. Mrs. Shelton was most becomingly gowned in rose taffeta with silver trimmings and her mother wore a handsome dress of dark blue and flesh colored georgette, while the other ladies of the receiving party were also beautifully attired. Misses Eleanor Horton, Mary Alice Caudle and Anne Little Massemore invited the guests into the dining room. Here the same lovely color scheme of rose, white and green was used, the table being covered with a handsome Maderia cloth and having as its center decoration a gilded basket, filled with carnations and graceful sprays of fern. Delicious cake and coffee, followed by mints and salted nuts were served by Misses Louise Ross, Bessie Dockery, Rosa Moss, Netta Little and Virginia Ross. Receiving and assisting with the hospitalities in the other rooms were Mesdames C. C. Bennett, Paul Kiker, J. E. Tillman, W. N. Jeans, J. W. Massemore and Miss Bessie Plunkett. Rev. and Mrs. Shelton were the recipients of numerous handsome and useful gifts in wood, appropriate to this happy occasion, and during the appointed hours about two hundred and fifty guests called to extend their good wishes and to enjoy the charming hospitality of the popular host and hostess.—Wadesboro Messenger and Intelligencer.

A CONTINUOUS FEAST

I wish to state that on returning to the Person Street and Calvary charge the pastor and his family were very cordially received. On returning from our annual conference, held in Raleigh, the pastor was surprised by a delegation from Calvary church who had prepared a very fine supper and at supper time came to the parsonage and took charge of the dining room and kitchen, thus becoming the hosts of the parsonage family and making them the guests in their own home. A good number of the ladies were present as were some of the men, and some of our company were Baptists as well as Methodists; yet all the company seemed to enjoy very greatly this fine spirited social meeting.

Following this Monday night's meeting we were again surprised when on Wednesday night a very good company of our Person Street congregation came to the parsonage with a very substantial pounding for the pastor and his family. This was indeed a pounding worthy of the name. Many good things to eat were left in the dining room, even a ready dressed chicken as well as cake ready for Thanksgiving. There were other churches represented in this pounding as well as our own, and all the good company seemed to be very joyful. So after the dining table had been loaded down we had a social meeting together, after which prayer and words of appreciation were offered by the pastor. Then the good company departed rejoicing.

But this is not all. The next day following this substantial pounding, which was Thanksgiving Day, brought another great surprise when a delegation from Calvary church drove up in cars and a grocery delivery truck with another substantial pounding which was worthy of the name. Other churches were also represented in this, a Baptist deacon as well as a Methodist steward. There were also many good things to eat in this pounding—chicken as well as ham, and as in the other, flour meal and lard. So with this joyful company of people we also had a social meeting, and prayer and words of appreciation were offered by the pastor, after which this happy company also left rejoicing, as they also realized as the other company that their pastor and his family had plenty to eat for days to come. As received in both of these poundings we had a barrel and one-eighth of flour, twenty pounds of good lard, sixty pounds of sugar, and other things too numerous to mention which ran the value to fifty dollars or more. For all these things we are very thankful and we pray that we may be able to repay these in Christian service.

We have begun this conference year by giving our Methodist Orphanage a thank offering amounting to $184.66, of which amount Calvary church gave $175.21. Pray for us that this may be the greatest year of our ministry thus far on this charge.

Please permit me to say further that our new presiding elder, Bro. R. H. Willis, has made a very good impression on our people, and they are already liking him fine.

E. C. Maness, P. C.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

A New Discovery Makes Hens Lay

Any poultry raiser can easily and quickly double his profits by doubling his egg yield through the remarkable discovery of M. B. Smith, a Kansas city chemist.

Working along entirely original lines, Mr. Smith discovered why hens lay less in winter than in summer and perfected a formula that turns loafers into layers and profit makers.

Within five or six days this discovery, which is called Ditto Egg Tablets, will rejuvenate your flock. Your hens will go strutting and cackling about with red combs and full of life and pep. Every nest will yield an egg nearly every day in the week, which means a lot, since eggs are certain to sell for 60 cents or more. This is not guess work as over 100,000 successful poultry raisers testify to the value of Mr. Smith's products.

Although different from anything you ever heard of, Ditto Egg Tablets are easily administered by simply dropping in drinking water.

So confident is Mr. Smith you can double or triple your egg yield, that he offers to send two large $1 packages of Ditto Egg Tablets (enough for a season) to any reader who will write for them. If you are satisfied they cost only $1 on this introductory offer, otherwise, nothing.

Send No Money—just your name and address to M. B. Smith, 1289 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. The two $1 packages will be mailed immediately. When they arrive, pay the postman only $1 and postage. Use the tablets 10 days. If you are not getting more eggs or are not satisfied for any reason, simply return unused tablets and your money will be returned immediately without question. A big Kansas City bank guarantees the reliability of this offer. Write today before this introductory offer is withdrawn, as you can sell one package to a friend and thus get your own free.

Dear Sirs: I have been using your 3-8-3 tobacco goods ever since you have been in business; making field tests every few years with the leading brands of fertilizer of other makes and in every instance the difference has been in favor of your goods. I have made fine tobacco every year with your goods, that we had anything like a favorable season, but this year I used your Robertson Special 3-8-3 with your Cotton Seed Meal formula mixed and I have the finest crop I have ever made. I also used your 12-10-1 for corn and have a most excellent crop. I take great pleasure in recommending your goods to all of my fellow farmers.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FREEDOM FROM LAXATIVES

Discovery by Scientists Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Medical authorities have found that the gentle lubricating action of Nujol most closely resembles that of Nature's own lubricant. As Nujol is not a laxative it cannot gripe. It is in no sense a medicine. And like pure water it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is prescribed by physicians; used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

IN MEMORIAM

WHITSON—Elizabeth Whitson was born April 12, 1907, and died January 2, 1923. She was 15 years, 8 months and 21 days old.

She was burned to death trying to make a fire with kerosene oil—only lived a few hours. Two doctors and loving friends did all they could to save her, but her Lord needed one more jewel in His kingdom. She said before she died she was going to rest and would soon be a little angel with wings, and I know she is. May her loved ones live so they will meet her. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones. Her loving aunt,
Mrs. W. R. Beasley.

CARAWAY—Mrs. W. M. Caraway, of Hookerton, N. C., was one of the best women it has been my privilege to know. The beautiful tribute of her sorrowing husband, given to me in confidence, was a seal and confirmation of what others felt and believed her life to be. She died on December 24, 1922, leaving besides her devoted husband, sons and daughters and grandchildren, all of whom have our prayers, and it is so sweet for them to go on knowing which way to go to find their departed loved ones.
R. R. G.

McLAUCHLIN — Thomas Monroe McLauchlin was born March 18 in Scotland county, near Gibson, and died at the old home October 6, 1922. He was the son of John and Mary McLauchlin. He was kind and sympathetic, a member of St. Johns church, with which he united early in life. He leaves one brother, John L. McLauchlin, and the following sisters: Mrs. H. C. Smith, Mrs. J. A. Livingston, Mrs. W. T. Wright, Mrs. Cora Mudd and Miss Carrie McLauchlin. He never married, but with his sister, Miss Carrie, lived together at the old home. He suffered much during his last illness, through which he lingered for some time; he was patient in his sufferings and considerate of those about him. The bereaved ones have our sympathies.
A. J. Parker.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

God in His all wise providence has seen fit to take from our midst our esteemed brother co-worker, Mr. William J. Gardner, who passed from this life November 29, 1922. He died as he lived, trusting in the Lord. We shall miss him greatly, for we have lost our faithful Bible teacher, and the prayers of a good man from our church, Gardner's Chapel, which was named for him. He was a faithful husband and a good and kind father. We shall miss him greatly, but we should not grieve, for our loss is his gain.

We resolve that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, one to the North Carolina Advocate and one to the Fayetteville Observer.

Mrs. C. H. Johnson,
Mrs. J. A. Cai
Miss Ada Hall.

CARTER—Mrs. Laura Carter died at her home in Weaverville November 13, 1922, at the age of 57. On February 19, 1885, she was married to J. D. Carter, who survives her. To them were born ten children; eight of them survive.

Sister Carter was a consecrated Christian woman. Since girlhood she had been a faithful member of the Methodist church. She was the center of attraction in her home, a blessing to her church and a great influence for good in her community. She was a faithful wife and mother. Those who knew her best loved her most.

Funeral services were conducted November 14th by her pastor at the Weaverville M. E. Church, South, where she was a member. Following this service her body was laid to rest in the Barnard cemetery. May the Lord comfort her family and large circle of friends.
B. C. Reavis, Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, our kind heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom removed from our midst, on December 22, 1922, our much loved friend and co-worker, Mr. R. H. Biggerstaff; therefore be it resolved:

First, That the Senior Sunday school class and Oak Grove M. E. Church, South, of which he was a most excellent and worthy member, wish to record our sincere love and appreciation of the devotion and dignity which marked his consecrated Christian life.

Second, That we will cherish the memory of his Christian character and influence in our Sunday school class and church.

Third, That we, the surviving members, feel deeply our loss, and will endeavor to follow his example in being wholeheartedly true in the services and offerings of our church and Sunday school.

Fourth, We thank God for having felt the influence of his gentle Christian life radiating its goodness and power to all those about him.

Fifth, We extend to his bereaved ones our tender sympathy, and trust that his life as a husband and father will lead and beckon them to follow on till they shall pass like him into the home of the soul on the other side.
J. M. K. Randall, Teacher.
W. A. Jolley,
Thomas Bome.

ROSS—Williamson Jackson Ross, son of Green B. and Elizabeth Page Ross, and grandson of Williamson and Betsy Odom Ross of Virginia, was born in Montgomery county, now Stanly county, May 28, 1831. He was married to Nancy C. Smith, daughter of Parham Smith, December 25, 1855. He was converted and joined the Methodist church while still a young man, and filled every position open to a layman in the local church. He died at Burlington, N. C., December 30, 1922, and was buried at his old home at N W London, in Stanly county. It will be seen from the above that he was in his ninety-second year at the time of his death.

There were ten children, four of whom are living, Mrs. W. F. Galloway and Samuel B. Ross of Burlington, William J. Ross of Concord, and Craig H. Ross of Knoxville, Tenn.

He was for a number of years in business in Albemarle, and was one of the pioneer builders of that town, and also of the Methodist church at that place.
John F. Kirk.

FARRAR—Ebenezer church and community was made sad to learn that almost identical with the going of the old year Mrs. Sarah Frances Farrar had gone, too. Sister Farrar had been sick for only a few days with pneumonia, therefore many of her friends were not prepared for the shock that came to us on the last day of the old year that she had slipped quietly away the night before.

She was the daughter of Thomas A. Morrow, of Alamance county, and was twice married. Her first husband was W. J. Rigsbee. Her second husband, Ruffin Farrar, survives her.

Early in life Mrs. Farrar joined Bethlehem Presbyterian church in Alamance county. After her marriage to Mr. Farrar she joined the Methodist church with her husband. She was a splendid Christian character, a faithful worker in the church and Sunday school. She took the Lord at His word and gave to Him one-tenth of all she had. No one knew her but to appreciate the gentleness of her character.

She leaves a husband, two sisters, two brothers, some step-children, who seem almost as if her own, and a host of friends to mourn her going.

The funeral services were held in Ebenezer church, Haw River charge, January 1, 1923, by the writer, and her body laid to rest in the cemetery nearby.

Her husband and other sorrowing loved ones we would commend to Him who has said, "My grace is sufficient for you."
Jno. R. Edwards, Pastor.

BLANCHARD—The little town of Hertford, North Carolina, on the afternoon of November 17, 1922, was filled with sorrow when it became known that Mr. Thomas C. Blanchard, one of its oldest citizens, had died. Mingled with the sadness occasioned by his going away from us was a sense of gratitude for the fine life he had given to the community.

From the time of his birth, February 17, 1847, until his death, November 17, 1922, he lived in Perquimans county, spending forty-seven years in the mercantile business. Brother Blanchard came down to the end of his long period of business association with men, having won the respect of those with whom he dealt. They looked upon him and called him good.

Behind this universal acceptance of Brother Blanchard as a good man were the fine qualities of his soul. His life impressed men with the idea of soul value.

Among his many attractive characteristics was a wholesome spirit of optimism, generating and radiating cheer as he touched men. The world loved to grow hopeful and courageous in the warmth of his smile. His joy was magnetic and soul stimulating, but was free from the base and unrefined.

Our friend caused men to look up, amid their disturbances, by his unflinching allegiance to the church of Christ. His loyalty to this divine institution became a holy passion to him which has come to glorious fruition in a similar devotion by his children. The church was first with him and for her he was willing to make sacrifice whenever called.

By applying the teachings of Christ to the business of living, he secured the faith of many and inspired others. His Christianity was alive and fruitful at all times, for he knew how to be honest when it meant financial loss and to be truthful when others were afraid.

The charm of Brother Blanchard's domestic life was refreshing and magnetic. It was in the home that this great soul delighted. To visit him, sustained and graced by a wealth of affection, which went to him so freely from his family and to see him touching them with the richness of his love, was indeed a soul privilege. To know him in his home was to know that there is a God and that he is a kind and loving God. In 1912 he retired from active business and lived joyously in the love that his home afforded.

Brother Blanchard was married twice. The first time to Miss Mary J. Simpson and the second time to Mrs. Kate Montgomery, who survives him. Mr. J. L. Blanchard, a child of the first marriage, together with several children by the second marriage also survive him. The other children are Miss Kate M. Blanchard, Mrs. O. Y. Yarborough, Mr. William Preston Blanchard and Mr. Robert Stewart Blanchard. We commend these to the tender mercy of a loving Father.

"Now the laborer's task is o'er,
Now the battle day is past,
Now upon the farther shore
Lands the voyage at last.
Father, in Thy gracious keeping Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Death has again entered the ranks of the Woman's Missionary Society of Anderson church and has called home the sweet spirit of Mrs. J. O. Perry. Mrs. Perry was 68 years old the 26th of December, 1922; died January 9th, 1923. The church and society will feel keenly their loss.

Resolved first, To the sorrowing ones we extend our heartfelt sympathy, and pray that the God whom they serve may be with them in especial tenderness in this, their hour of great need.

Second, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, one to the Advocate, one to the Missionary News and one recorded on the minutes of the society.

Mrs. W. O. Hunter,
Mrs. J. B. Winslow,
Mrs. Linwood Hunter,
Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On January 3, 1923, our friend and brother, C. J. Matthews, in the providence of God was called to his eternal home. By his death our Sunday school and the Friendly Class have lost a faithful and loyal member. His presence in our class was spiritually helpful, disclosing to us a life of godly love and ideal of righteousness. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That the members of the Friendly Class of Main Street Methodist church desire to publicly express our sorrow of the departure of our brother who was often with us, which showed his love and interest in the Sabbath school. That we will endeavor to follow his example, one through a long life showed his faithful attendance as teacher and superintendent.

Second, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family in this dark hour and pray that the blessing of the good Lord may abide with them.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the North Carolina Christian Advocate and the Reidsville Review for publication, and a copy to be kept on file in the Friendly Class.

N. B. Norman,
M. D. Giles,
D. R. Allen,
Committee.

The most unexpected thing to see among our fellow creatures is a mean man trying to do right.

"I feel good today," said the woman who had a long while before divorced all joy from her life. "But I always feel the worst when I feel the best because I know how bad I am going to feel when I get to feeling bad again."

Shoe sole religion seems to be a discovery of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate. "The loyalty of some Methodists is no thicker than the pastor's shoe sole," says the Wesleyan. Brother King, if you are not already supplied with that sort of Methodists in Georgia we can ship you a few car load lots from North Carolina without material loss to ourselves.

Strange that a man who is insane in North Carolina is sane in Florida? Such seems to be the fact in the case of Dr. J. W. Peacock. Is the standard for sanity so much higher in North Carolina that a man who is unable to pass the examination here can get by in good order in Florida? We are inclined to agree with Charity and Children in the following: "Multitudes of our people entertain the opinion of Mr. Bumble that 'the law is a ass'—at least that is what it proves itself to be in this Peacock case. Another thing is borne in upon our minds and that is that an alienist is about as much of 'a ass' as the law."

The efforts to harmonize the Word of God with the dogmas of science seems to us at times a bit too strenuous. For the notions of science change with the passing years. At one time, for example, it was accepted without controversy that the earth was flat, now there is no question but that the world is round. The notion that the earth is the center of things has been exchanged for the heliocentric theory. The dogmas of science like the dogmas of religion are not abiding. Why then all this strife about dogma whether it be scientific or religious? More especially, why should there be in each succeeding century some insistent demand to reconcile the Bible with the prevalent scientific notions of that particular time? Just as the answers in philosophy change and the questions abide, so the dogmas in science and religion change, but science and the Word of God abide. Such considerations as these should save us from undue irritation in the discussion of dogmatic differences.

To get out of purgatory by the use of lottery tickets is to us a new method of escape from the purgatorial fires. Yet that is the method adopted by some of the Roman Catholic priests in Mexico. The plan is to sell these tickets at $1.00 apiece and the four persons who hold the highest numbers will have one of their loved ones released from purgatory. The kinfolks of all who hold unlucky tickets will have to burn on for centuries. The advertisement runs like this:

"Another raffle for souls will be held at this same blessed Church of the Redeemer on January 1, at which four bleeding and tortured souls will be released from purgatory to heaven, according to the four highest tickets in the most holy lottery. Tickets $1.00. To be had of the father in charge. Will you for the poor sum of $1.00 leave your loved ones to burn in purgatory for ages?"

"He was just a dog. But we could trust him. When he understood what was wanted of him, he did it to the very best of his ability. He shirked no duties. He was our trusted friend and helper. We miss him, now that he is dead, but he lives on in our memory. We are better and have been and will continue to be happier for having had such a friend—just a dog." Good for the Nashville Advocate!

After the days of weariness, the long nights of watching, the rough road and the blistered feet, the burden of the load and the dark shadows that obscured the narrow pathway, one wonders in a glance over the past how he ever made the trip. The secret is in this, "As thy days may demand, shall thy strength ever be." So it has been and so it will continue to be. We must learn to live a day at a time. "Sufficient unto the day are evils thereof," but sufficient unto the day also is the strength of all who put their trust in God. To His own, God giveth the victory.

The following pen sketch by Col. J. P. Cook, editor of the Uplift, will be appreciated by all who remember Charlotte, N. C., twenty or twenty-five years ago: "Not many years ago one could sit down in front of the Central Hotel in Charlotte, strike up a chat with the late H. C. Eccles or his associate, George Bryan (with old man Grate Springs in his 'jim-swing' sitting off to one side, a-counting how he could save another dollar to add to his wealth) and the name of every man, woman and child that passed would be called out by the great hotelists. In that day we sat out in the street with our feet braced against the curbing."

Why did Col. Cook fail to describe those meals at the old Central Hotel? Big, rich, juicy steaks as large as the cloud that Elijah's servant saw at the close of the long drouth. The cloud "no bigger than a man's hand" brought an abundance of rain to Israel, so the steak big as a man's hand was but a prophecy of the things that loaded the tables when Eccles and Bryan managed the Central—wonderful to tell, rates $2.00 a day, meals 50 cents each. Alas! alas! those days will never come back.

It is bad, deplorably bad for a preacher not to pay his debts. Any man who undertakes to minister in holy things and at the same time allows grocery, dry goods and other bills to go unpaid is riding to a fall. There is no escape for him. But what about a church that is dishonest? It promises to pay its pastor a certain stipulated amount and then allows him to go to conference with part of his salary unpaid. A church of that sort is just as guilty before God and in the eyes of all right thinking men as the preacher is who fails to pay his just debts, and sometimes even more so, for the church is able to pay and the preacher, owing to some misfortune or some failure on the part of his church, is not able to meet his obligation. Let us have honest preachers, and at the same time let us have honest churches. "Owe no man anything but to love one another."

"REVEREND SMITH" — SPARE US, MESSRS. EDITORS! OH, SPARE US!

By R. H. Bennett.

"Reverend Smith"—faugh! The very idea! This atrocious and unconscionable rhetorical guttersnipe was sired by a jest and born of a laugh. Or as Shakespeare would say, linguistically speaking, it was "ditch delivered of a drab." Some years ago our jokesters began to write up a mythical personage yept "Reverend Johnsing." He was a member of "The Limekiln Club" (colored), a goggle eyed, balb mouthed, splay footed, bandy legged, long shanked Senegambian, an angel in ebony so to speak, albeit somewhat of a fallen one, being better acquainted with the unlocked chicken houses of his neighbors than with orthodox clerical ethics. His name, "Reverend Johnsing" was as much of a joke as his grotesque personality, the humor in them both lying in the absurd disresemblance to a correct name and to the proper standard of personality in a preacher, either white or black.

We laughed at him with the humorists for a little while, but soon specks began to appear on the sky. Now and then a newspaper reporter with no sense of humor or acquaintance with the language, began to drop references in print to "Reverend Smith," or "Reverend Brown." At first we either took these also for jokes or treated them as such. But alas and alack, the thing has grown by leaps and bounds to such an extent that we see the ghost of "Reverend Johnsing's" title appearing in reputable newspapers and actually once in a while ogling us with its goggle eyes in the church press. I even recall an instance where a preacher in print, in violation of the law that "dog does not eat dog," has actually libelled his brother minister as "Reverend Williams."

"It is to laugh." But unless a quick resolution throttles the impulse the laugh ends in something akin to profanity. For when a man calls you Reverend Smith, you feel like he had knocked off your hat slapped you in the face and said, "You goggle eyed, blab mouthed, splay footed, bandy legged, long shanked ignorant humbug of a hypocritical chicken stealing negro parson!" And of course your Irish rushes at once up to one hundred and ten degrees and you feel that the only reply appropriate is to draw a rhetorical black oak shilalah and make a large and effective dent in his linguistic cranium.

But will some expert student of female affairs kindly inform me of the adequate and proper action when the aforesaid affront comes from one of the fair sex. Now and then "long distance" calls me to the phone. "Is that Reverend Bennett?" "No, Miss, I beg your pardon. This is not Reverend Bennett. This is Reverend R. H. Bennett, or Reverend Mister Bennett, or Reverend Doctor Bennett, whichever you choose, but this not Reverend Bennett. I know of no such person." But is it as water off a duck's back. In that same pleasant voice that the Bell people train "Central" to use, the same voice in which she no doubt replies to inmates of lunatic asylums and with whom she probably classes you, she repeats in the next breath, "Reverend Bennett, Atlanta (or Richmond or Memphis as the case may be) wants to talk to you"—and there you are.

And now the janitors and "cabbies" are going a bowshot further and leaving off the "Smith." They hail you in a shipper way simply as "Reverend"—a sort of grass widow title anchored to no surname.

The first time I heard the meretricious appellation in question was in one of my early pastorates from a book agent innocent of grammar or literature. He seemed a type of those who use the epithet in question, being apparently a twin to Mr. Kremlin in Disraeli's Sybil who was distinguished for his ignorance. Mr. Kremlin had only one idea and that was wrong. This man wished to sell me a cyclopaedia and his trump card was the statement that if I would buy the book that my own life record should be printed in the magnus opus. In spite of my skepticism on this point, he drew his notebook and pencil on me and proceeded to ask, "Now then, Reverend Bennett, when was you born?"

Will some one please tell me why a preacher should be "Reverend Smith" any more than a lawyer is "Legal Jones," or a physician "Medical Brown," or an editor "Literary Johnson," or a storekeeper "Mercantile Williams," or a pedagogue "Scholastic Simpson," or a farmer "Agricultural Hudgins," or the milk man "Lactical Waters," or the fruit man "Huckleberry Hicks," or a sawmill proprietor "Lumbering Black," or a dentist "Jawbone Jones," or a surgeon Sawbone Hall," or the all round scamp of the community "Mephistophelian Moore?"

In the name of Joseph Addison or Thomas Babington Macaulay, will not our dear editor friends protect us from "Epithetical Penny-aliner?" Will they not pass this word along? Will they not war on "Reporterial Robinson" and "Typothetical Proofreader" that this fly-blown entitlement of the ministry must be forever banished from respectable newspapers or the perpetrators thereof shall be consigned to a journalistic oblivion without a resurrection?

"I desire a league offensive and defensive with all men" on this issue. "I summon all forward looking men," and all backward looking and upward looking and downward looking men to the standard. "Let us highly resolve" that offensive vulgarisms shall not win, but that English, pure, sweet, gentle, courteous English "of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

And will not the public, you gentle reader and every one else, "Right Reverend and Wrong Reverend of every order" help us drive this flea bitten cur from under our linguistic bed? Here, take this poker to him! We must get him out even if we have to turn the hose on him. It were better to wet the whole room than for all the family to catch a rhetorical mangle.

SHALL WE BECOME TOO STARCHY?

Canon Simpson in describing a service a while ago in St. Paul Cathedral, where amid the diminishing formality of the Anglican church he himself ran up into the pulpit with his coat tails flying and shouted to those who had rendered a soul stirring selection. "Thank you, my friends, thank you very much! Praise the Lord!" Then from the answering multitudes which had rendered the chorus came the cries of "Hallelujah! Praise the Lord!"

Canon Simpson continues with this striking utterance:

"So you see that we are losing much of our starchiness, and capturing something of your Methodist fire. You, on the other hand, are learning the beauty of Gothic architecture; you are singing "Amen" at the end of your hymns; you are discovering the attractiveness of liturgical services. All very good things! But beware lest you steal our starchiness, lest, like Gehazi, in seeking a gift from Naaman, the leprosy also of Naaman cleave unto you."

Those are timely words of warning that this official of the Anglican church utters for the benefit of Methodists. When a Methodist steals Episcopalian starchiness the urge is in the wrong direction and there is unquestionably a danger that the leprosy of Naaman may cleave unto us.

The city of Durham offers for the North Carolina Medical College the Watts hospital with increased facilities that makes its value $300,000, twenty-eight acres of land, $500,000 for college buildings and an endowment of $3,500,000. This is upon condition that there be created a public body known as the North Carolina Medical College, the trustees of which is to be appointed by the governor with the consent of the state senate and that the state make an annual appropriation to the college that equals the income from $3,500,000. This offer is being made to the board of trustees of the State University. It remains to be seen whether the offer will be accepted by the trustees and the General Assembly of North Carolina. The question of a medical college for North Carolina will not down and we may expect the college sooner or later.

THE OLD TIME RELIGION

With a vast majority of people the old time religion gets a sentimental acceptance, if not a practical demonstration. We are for it heart and soul without even a show of compromise. In the popular song, which is bad poetry but good sentiment, we are told that it was good enough for Abraham, for Moses, for Daniel, for Paul and that it is good enough for me.

In view of all this how would it do to inquire what the old time religion really does for a man, as illustrated in those mighty men of a far off day whose lives were inspired and guided thereby?

The old time religion made of Abraham a daring spiritual pioneer. It took him out of the beaten paths of his ancestors, away from his native home, and sent him on a road that he knew not. The old time religion with Abraham was not conservative, but splendidly progressive. It made of him the man who could blaze the trail along which the generations were to travel to that city "whose builder and maker is God." The one distinctive thing about the religion of Abraham was that he gave little concern to "the tradition of the elders," but was exceedingly sensitive to the voice of God. Just two things were constantly before his eyes, one of these was the future, and the other was the supremacy of spiritual values. Lot's wife looked back, but Abraham at all times looked ahead, and it mattered not how much his flocks and herds increased the old patriarch esteemed all the more the invisible things that are eternal.

Moses had the old time religion, and like Abraham, his life marks an epoch in the history of God's people. His religion effected the social and industrial life of his people. The slaves under his leadership were to become free-men, and those oppressed industrially were to be brought out into the new freedom. In a word, old time religion with Moses had to do with social and industrial conditions.

When the church of today addresses its energies to social and industrial righteousness, there are quite a few who cry out, "Stop, let us stick to the old time religion," when this very thing is old time religion—old as Moses.

Fortunate is he who when emphasizing one aspect of truth does not overlook the other side. For that reason the life of Daniel just here serves a good purpose. He stood as a tower of strength for those ancient principles of righteousness that are eternal. God and his fathers had taught him not to "defile himself with the king's meat." And not Babylon with its wiles nor the king with his prestige could turn him one hairsbreadth from those standards of right which had become the God-given heritage of his people. This lesson of Daniel's life ought to be laid to heart by the American people when so great a number of agencies are at work upon the very foundations of our civilization.

The old time religion was good enough for Paul. But Paul was a progressive after he became a Christian. Before that he had been a conservative. Most men when they announce themselves as progressive get to piddling with some heresy, or with some excrescence of thought which is utterly unprofitable. But Paul's progressiveness carried him away from sects to a world religion and made him an interpreter of Jesus Christ, "who is the image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature; for it hath pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell." Paul was a progressive who learned the larger Christ. Beware of the progressive who seeks to take away from the person of Jesus Christ. He is a spiritual anarchist who is blasting at the rock of ages.

The Methodist preachers of Greensboro to the number of twenty with their wives got together last Tuesday evening at Spring Garden Street church for a supper and a good social meeting. The ladies of Spring Garden church served an elegant supper. This was followed by one minute speeches. The occasion was well worth while, as it gave to these toilers at a common task a delightful evening together.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Some one please send the Advocate copies of the North Carolina Conference Journal for 1892, 1895 and 1897. Any one of these will be appreciated.

Rev. C. M. Carpenter, pastor of the Marshville circuit, has recently undergone an operation for appendicitis. He is reported to be getting along nicely and expects to be out of the hospital in a little while.

Mrs. J. K. Terrell says: "My mother, the widow of Rev. W. H. Cooper, will be eighty-four years old the fourteenth day of February. A card of remembrance from any of the preachers, their wives or from any friend would cheer her."

Mr. and Mrs. Z. V. Snipes, strong pillars in our church at Dunn, were delightful callers at the Advocate office last Friday. They brought the information that the Fayetteville district conference will be held in Dunn instead of Lillington. Brother and Sister Snipes are delighted with their new pastor, Rev. G. T. Adams.

Rev. Leon M. Hall, student in Yale Divinity School, requests us to call attention to the fact that he is still handling Dean Chas. R. Brown's book, "The Art of Preaching." Mr. Hall will send this book to any address for $1.90. His address is box 1123 Yale Station, New Haven, Conn. The book is one of the best written on that subject.

"On Sunday, January 7, writes Rev. D. N. Caviness, "Miss Otie Gill of Raleigh slipped away from earth to be forever with her Lord. Hers was a beautiful Christian life, characterized by faithfulness and love. She touched others to sweeten their lives and lighten their burdens; and truly the world was made better by her having lived in it. She was a devoted member of Central church from which the funeral was held, conducted by her former pastor, D. N. Caviness. The attendance at the funeral and the beautiful floral offerings seemed a very fitting tribute to her splendid life."

Rev. and Mrs. J. E. McSwain wish to thank the Providence church for the many useful and good things that were brought to the Cool Spring parsonage last week by Mr. and Mrs. John Heath, Mrs. W. M. Watt and Mrs. Maude Lentz. Names on the various packages are too numerous to mention, but we are enjoying the good things and loving the donors, and families in future years who come this way will enjoy the nice new quilts given by Mrs. William Watt and Mrs. Lentz and other articles given by Mrs. Heath to the parsonage. What would the Methodist preacher and his family do were it not for such good friends as these? May God bless them every one.

Rev. D. N. Caviness sends us the following sorrowful note: "The passing of Mrs. Hubert J. Bailey of Apex on January 13 removed from that community one of the most beautiful Christian characters it has been the pleasure of the writer to know. For generations her ancestors were pious, consecrated church people. Reared at the altars of the Methodist church, it is not strange that she should have been a faithful, valued member thereof from early childhood. Her devoted husband and the three little daughters are sadly bereft in her going. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor from the Apex Methodist church as the evening shadows were gathering."

Hon. S. J. Durham of Gastonia, N. C., sends us the following paragraph from a letter he had just received from one of our honored superannuate ministers: "I am not a beggar, yet I need help. My occupation is gone. My ability to work is gone. My health is gone. I have had to take my daughters out of school for lack of funds. My son, who was making a fine reputation as a teacher, has lost his health. We sent him to a hospital in Boston. Expert physicians pronounced his trouble 'diabetes.' He is no longer able to help us, nor to sustain himself, and must soon return to the hospital. We are dependent upon our people to help us. Another son is teaching, and helping us cheerfully, magnanimously, and still I need help. Where shall I find it?" For obvious reasons we withheld the name of this worthy brother, but we trust that the readers of the Advocate will help him in this hour of need. Send the money to Bro. S. J. Durham, Gastonia, or if more convenient send to the Advocate office and we will forward to Brother Durham, who will see that our needy brother gets the help.

"We are well pleased with Bishop Denny's returning us to the Wentworth charge, and hope to be a great blessing to these good people. They have been pounding us continuously since our return; but Lowe's church capped the climax by sending us a whole big truck load of provisions. We are in clover knee deep in June." So writes Rev. C. P. Goode.

According to press reports, Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, for 16 years president of the University of Chicago, will retire from the presidency of that institution February 20, and Dr. E. D. Burton of the Divinity School will become his successor. Dr. Judson has been connected with this institution since 1892 and he will be retained as president emeritus of the university.

The booklet written by Rev. H. L. Atkins, one of the superannuate preachers of the Western North Carolina conference, "Our Loved Ones Gone, or the Bible View of Life After Death," will come from the Advocate press in a few days, and all the orders received at this office will be promptly filled. This pamphlet is well worth the price, 20 cents, and all who wish a copy would do well to order at once. The price made by the author is single copy 20 cents; one dozen $1.80; one hundred $10; one thousand $80.

Rev. J. E. Holden has been mobbed. Give attention to his story: "When you wish to tell about a pounding just take up the one we got from our Kenly folks a few nights ago. Two preachers in the mob, and everybody else almost, it seemed to us. And such a pile of good stuff to eat! And don't forget to tell that Brother McRay Boyette, of the Lucanna congregation had just sent us a whole hog. It's awful to be anything but a preacher. Poor editors! We wish to thank all these folks most heartily, and to tell them it makes us desire to serve them better."

Lexington lost one of its most valuable citizens and the Methodist church one of its best and most devoted members last Thursday when Mr. D. K. Cecil passed to his eternal reward. He lacked only a few weeks of being 72 years of age. For more than 50 years his busy life had been spent in the service of mankind. Others reaped the richest fruitage of his toil. He was always ready and glad to help other folks. The Methodist church has never had a more devoted member and official than Daniel King Cecil. He was chairman of the board of stewards of the Lexington church when he died. His funeral services last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock was one of the most largely attended that we have seen for a long while. The services were conducted by Rev. W. L. Hutchins, the pastor, assisted by Rev. W. A. Newell, the presiding elder, and Rev. A. W. Plyler, the editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate. Scores of people can join with Mayor T. B. Eldridge of Raleigh when he wrote: "News of the passing of David K. Cecil brings a tinge of sadness into my life today. Dave Cecil was one of the best men I ever knew and one of the best friends I ever had."

Dr. E. K. McLarty is fixed like a High Point pastor should expect to be. Here is a bill of particulars: "Mine is a very sluggish pen. It requires an extraordinary inspiration to push it along. But just such an inspiration is at hand. After waiting three months for very extensive repairs on the parsonage we have now entered upon our possessions. And, Mr. Editor, it is hard for us to realize that we are living in a parsonage. Just think of hard wood floors, handsome druggets, heavily upholstered chairs, box springs, old ivory, mahogany and quartered oak bed room furniture, a dining room suit of walnut, beautiful electrical fixtures, etc., etc.! Do you wonder that we have a feeling that a mistake has been made. Some time ago in a sermon I used a figure of speech that cost me a curtain lecture. I was trying to emphasize the cheapness of a certain commodity by saying it was as cheap as parsonage furniture. I will discontinue the use of that figure while I am in High Point. If you find it difficult to believe these statements I have made, you are near enough to run over and verify them. Indeed we are very happy and comfortable. The work here is most promising. I never had larger or more attentive congregations anywhere. We have just organized an Epworth League with about a hundred members. You may be sure we are going to do our best for those people who are doing their best for us."

Rev. J. B. Tabor, our pastor at Burnsville, has been laid up for a week or two with "flu." This is the first time in his entire ministry that Brother Tabor has missed two Sundays in succession on account of sickness. He is better now and hopes to be about his work right soon.

Last Monday night the Men's Bible Class of Tryon Street church, Charlotte, enjoyed one of the most delightful banquets in the history of the class. About 100 men were present. Mr. W. D. Wilkinson is of the opinion that out of this meeting will grow a new Sunday school department and possibly a new church. The addresses of the evening were as follows: W. D. Wilkinson, president of the class, subject—What the Men Should Do for Tryon Street Church; J. Wilson Smith, teacher of class, subject—Consecration; James A. Bell, teacher young men's class, subject—Revival; Judge W. F. Harding, subject—Credit; Rev. H. G. Hardin, pastor, subject—What I Want the Men to Do for Tryon Street Church. Foundation—Will your religion stand the test at death and at the judgment bar of God?

REV. PAUL DECATOR ANTHONY

This promising young minister died January 24, 1923, at his old home in Cleveland county after several weeks' illness from typhoid fever. He was 25 years of age.

At the last conference in Monroe he was admitted on trial and appointed to the Mars Hill circuit, where he took up the work with commendable zeal and with every assurance of success.

While on a short visit to his home folks during the Christmas holidays he was taken ill and was never permitted to return to his work beyond the mountains.

He leaves a wife and a young son, his father, mother, three brothers and three sisters who are sorely bereaved by his untimely departure. The church has lost a young itinerant who gave promise of faithful and effective service. Our heartfelt sympathy is hereby expressed to the sorrowing relatives and friends.

A tribute to this young minister from Brother Beverly Wilson will appear next week.

REV. AND MRS. R. M. HOYLE CELEBRATE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Tuesday evening, January 23, through a constant downpour of snow and hail, two hundred people assembled in the Methodist church of King's Mountain to join in the celebration of the golden wedding of Rev. and Mrs. R. M. Hoyle. The church had been beautifully decorated for this happy event in the lives of the pastor and his wife.

Preceding the formal ceremonies of the evening, a social hour was spent in the church parlors and Sunday school department where refreshments were served. We quote from The Herald a story of the ceremonies in the church and at the same time congratulate this happy couple who have reached together the golden milestone:

"After the choir had sung a bridal chorus the bridal party marched down the middle aisle of the church as follows: Chas. Saunders and Dwight Laughlin, Lloyd Ormand and Lawrence Lovell, Caleb Hoyle and Mrs. J. M. Wells, Rev. and Mrs. R. M. Hoyle. An improvised altar of green ivy and gold occupied the chancel of the church and the bridal party stood against this altar while Harry Falls made the presentation speech. The following tokens were presented to Rev. and Mrs. Hoyle: A gold watch and chain to him and a gold brooch to her, by the congregation of the Methodist church of which he is pastor; to him a gold pencil by Rev. H. B. Schaeffer, and a five dollar gold coin by Capt. Dilling, and a ten dollar coin by the Hon. C. R. Hoey of Shelby.

The rest of the bridal party being seated Rev. Mr. Hoyle made a most beautiful response in which he expressed, in some degree, his appreciation of the presents, but said he appreciated far more the spirit that prompted the giving. Mr. Hoyle's response was followed by "Silver Threads Among the Gold," sung by Mrs. Charles Williams, accompanied on piano by Mrs. Hunter Patterson.

Rev. A. H. Sims, Rev. M. G. Latham, Rev. H. B. Schaeffer and G. G. Page in turn made short talks which were followed by the Doxology and the service closed with the benediction by Rev. H. B. Schaeffer."

THE CORRECTIVE DIET

Dr. E. V. McCollum, professor of biochemistry in Johns Hopkins University, in a recent address before the Crowell Scientific Society of Trinity College, on "The Relation of Diet to Physical Development" told of the place of food in physical well being. The prevention of disease and the best physical development is largely a matter of fact, if we are to believe the conclusions of this eminent scientist. Dr. McCollum contends that the enormous increase of the use of bolted white flour, coupled with the consumption of canned peas and other vegetables of different kinds, with too little of cheese and milk and butter fat and not enough of raw fruits and leafy vegetables, accounted for the want of health and proper development.

Dr. McCollum is doing much to teach the average American how to postpone old age by giving strict attention to diet and thereby keeping all the bodily functions in a vigorous state. He claims that the majority of people may move out of the twilight zone of ill health and enjoy the full freedom of bodily vigor by learning to discriminate in their daily food. The diet of the average person is deficient in quantity of milk taken, in the amount of fresh fruits, raw vegetables and leafy vegetables eaten. This specialist insists that every one should have a quart of milk, or its equivalent, two salads of fruits or raw vegetables each day, and one liberal serving of a cooked leafy vegetable. "Eat what you want," says Dr. McCollum, "tfer you have eaten as you should."

BOIL A PONE; BAKE A PIE

The old people of eastern Carolina made much of boiled dinners. A ham bone boiled with cabbage or collards or some such vegetable was the regulation diet for dinner. In western Carolina the stress was on baking pies, which were used by many for each of the three meals of the day. To eat apple pie for breakfast in the early hours of the day called for a vigorous appetite; but it was often done by the hardy sons of the hills.

The west was a land of fruits and berries, ready at hand for the bakery of the housewife; in the east, vegetables grew in abundant profusion, easy to be gathered for the pot. As a result, the people of the hills used fruits in abundance, while those in the flat lands consumed vegetables all the year round.

This was done before the specialists on diet began to tell us that a quart of milk each day, or its equivalent, two salads of fresh raw vegetables, or of uncooked fruits, and a liberal serving of cooked green leafy vegetables should be taken each day. The east got the leafy vegetables and the west got the fruit, and some of the dairy products. In this they were ahead of the food experts and went before the discoveries of present day tests; but each section was falling far short of the demands for the best health and vigor. We southern people eat too much white meat and white bread in a land where dairy products, and the yield of the garden and of the orchard could be had in such abundance as to enrich and make healthy and strong an industrious and enterprising people.

The hardy sons of toil, who lived in the open, eat plain food, and slept undisturbed, subdued the wilderness and laid the foundation of the cities which are now the portion of our lot, with their steam-heated houses, breakfast foods, and bacon and eggs. These modern conveniences of a progressive people may prove our undoing unless we have a care for the essentials of life. Vitamines were in the blood of our forefathers, though vitamine was unknown in the laboratory. Fortunately for us, these last days, will be the continued vigor possible for a people who will use the best known in the practice of the ancients and the discoveries of present day scientists. To drink a quart of milk each day and to eat two salads is good advice; to boil a bone and to bake a pie is also the part of wisdom. We are what we feed on.

Those who care to moralize and to preach a little have a free field to proceed in applying this principle to the mind and to the spirit, using as a text: A man is what he feeds on.

THE LATE REVELERS AND THE EARLY RISERS

How different the night in which wander forth the sons of Belial flushed with insolence and wine, and the early morning in which the men who toil face again the tasks of life! The darkness hides dark deeds and foul thoughts; the light arouses fresh energies for the daily rounds. How blessed the man who can look the world in the face every new day and say from his heart, "Another blessed day in which to labor!"

The revelers through the late hours of the night never know the joy of those, who with fresh energies and new courage, answer the call of the morning. Any one with observant eye is painfully aware of the physical depletion, mental exhaustion and moral degeneration characteristic of the crowds that frequent dance halls, and such places, in our towns and cities. City populations are evermore in a state of decay. Cities die at the top and rot at the heart. But for the steady stream of rich red blood flowing in from the villages and country places and the moral fiber attending this inflow our cities would all be modern Sodoms.

Why make such observations in a religious paper? On the face of it, absurdity is written in bold type, for revelers do not read church papers; do not read literature of any kind. Their mental pabulum is the movies. These words, however, are not for the crowds of the night, but for the toilers of the day.

The lights in the windows on the side streets and the country roads, telling of the early risers ready for the call of mill and field causes faith in human kind and hope for the race to spring afresh. We never pass man or woman in the deep shadows of the morning, hastening to the rounds of the day, but we feel a fresh impulse to more diligent efforts in the urgent tasks of life—to the joyous rounds of the day.

How can a good minister of Jesus Christ loiter on the crowded ways, filled with the multitudes burdened and driven by the merciless necessities which are so largely the common lot of man! The thud of the heavy shoe of the toiler on the pavement and the call of the farm-boy across the fields a like urge to early rising and diligent service—the King's business requires haste.

Are you, gentle reader, one of the enforced laborers, aroused before the dawn, that must be up and off? Then why not be thankful to be numbered with the royal sons of toil, rather than to be classed with the revelers doomed to eternal night? The panacea for most of the ills of life is the gospel of work.

OUT OF THE ASHES A GREATER TRINITY

The burning of Trinity church, Durham, removes a landmark and brings a pang to a thousand Methodists who had learned to love the old church with its many associations from the days Durham was a small hamlet, unknown and little esteemed. The broken arches remind of other days, but the unbroken spirit of old Trinity gives assurance of the Trinity that is to be.

The new plant will cost around $300,000, but this is not the best of Trinity church. It is rich in good deeds and has made heavy investments all about the world. There is scarcely a church of any denomination in Durham, either white or colored, in which Trinity has not made an investment. General J. S. Carr, for more than a generation chairman of the official board, has led in beneficent deeds. His gifts have reached many lands and the missionaries of the Orient have welcomed his coming. Trinity has made investments at home and abroad to aid in housing groups of Methodists around the world, though its own church home has gone up in smoke. How rich is Trinity in this hour of its temporary desolation!

Trinity church, due to its location in Durham and its relation to the increasing number of students at Trinity College, to say nothing of its past achievements and its present place in the life of Methodism, must build in a great way so as to be able to minister to Durham, to North Carolina, to the world.

While the flames roared that fateful Sunday morning, a colored man handed the pastor a five dollar bill, saying that he wanted to make the first contribution for rebuilding, for they had never called on Trinity church without receiving aid. Hundreds have the same testimony to give. But the best is yet to be in the life and labors of Trinity.

THE MINISTER SENT

Frank Culbreth.

The church, the pulpit, and the public press have had a great deal to say concerning the dearth of candidates for the ministry and the divine call to the ministry. But from no source have I seen or heard anything concerning the preacher being divinely sent to his field, the time and place being divinely chosen. The silence of the church on this subject would indicate the supposition that when God gets a man into the ministry the divine work has been finished and that God has nothing more to do with the whole affair, leaving the time, place, and the work in detail to men. If there could be any comparison I should say that the God-sent man is of more importance than the God-called man. That is to say that the preacher needs to be sent of God into the field, to the work as well as to be called of God into the service. If divine intervention or co-operation is essential in getting men ordained as ambassadors of God, divine intervention or co-operation is even more essential in the detailed work of the ambassadors. It does not matter very much just what system of supplying the people with a preacher and the preacher with a field is used. Any system may be so used of men as to allow very little say so in where and when a preacher goes to work. And no system in itself will prevent God getting a willing worker to work when and where He wants him. It makes very little difference whither a preacher is sent to a charge by a bishop, or whither he is called by a congregation, or whither he is self-invited. There may be advantages and disadvantages in all three methods. I would not say that it is, for I do not know, but I think our itinerant system approaches nearest the ideal. I am quite sure it approaches nearest my ideal and suits me best. I applied for admission on trial with the firm conviction that Methodist preachers were God-sent men. For the first four years of my ministry this conviction was intensified—it may be by the various committees—but since being thrown with older men and hearing them talk, perhaps more freely, the conviction has not had an abnormal growth. In His providence God has constituted in His church proper authorities to select the preacher for the work and the work for the preacher. Wherever this constituted authority is left free to do its work according to its best judgment I still believe as steadfastly as I believe anything that God sends a Methodist preacher to his work or field. This belief is essential to our itinerant system. Our ministers and our church will to a very great extent lose their spiritual power whenever this conviction passes out of the life of any considerable part of either the laity or the ministry. For this reason it is of the utmost importance that our bishops and their advisers be not interfered with, and that they be left unhampered and free to do their work. I feel that less of confidence here has already turned at least a few strong, capable men from the ministry of our church. Since this shortage of candidates for the ministry is in part our problem it is imperative that we do right ourselves. The solution of this problem will not be found in any one thing we may or may not do, but in our faithfulness to the work assigned us, even to the minutest details, in our consecration, giving ourselves wholly to our work, and in our loyalty and fidelity to the system through which we are working. It is here we need most the consciousness of the divine presence and guidance. God does not leave us to find and to do our work alone. He calls us from things primarily that he may send us directly to something, and in spirit and power He goes with us.

The four Gospel narratives would indicate that Christ gave very little consideration to the selecting and calling of the twelve, and there is all but no record of the calling of the seventy that He sent out as missionaries. After months of most careful preparation He sent them out to work with positive, definite and full instructions as to where they should go, and how they should prosecute their work. These instructions are of no less importance now than they were then. The minister's call, his message are of the utmost importance, and so also is the time, place, and manner of the delivery of that message. A preacher's opportunity is within the bounds of his charge. Here his success or failure is made, for here is the point of contact. If he goes in the full assurance that God has sent him to this particular work and that God goes with him he will be a success in spite of the human agencies that were used in making the appointment. But if he goes without this divine assurance he will be a failure and no human agency can make him a success. Here his preaching, his manner, and his conduct will prove or disprove to his congregation his call to the ministry. No congregation will become or even remain spiritual under the preaching of a man whose divine call it does not believe in. No congregation will grow in grace under the preaching of a man whose services it regards as professional or the man as a hireling, and whose services are secured on the same principle as other hirelings and professionals. Under such preaching and such conceptions of the ministry how can true men be called into the ministry! If a man is going to work solely for wages, I can not see for the life of me why he should hire to a church or its congregation. If there is any one thing that the Methodist preachers need more than anything else, and that will be more fruitful in the life of the congregation, it is that they go to their charges and to every duty and task on the charge in the full assurance that they are sent of God, that God is with them and that His approval rests upon their labors. This will secure for them the love, respect, and confidence of the congregation as nothing else will. It will give them power and influence they can not secure in any other way. The Holy Spirit will have access to the heart and life of the young people through such a ministry. Religion appeals to old age because of the forgiveness, the solace, the remedies, and the reliefs which it offers for past sins, but it appeals to youth because of the hope and the aspiration which it inspires. Religion put on any lower motive will be weak if not impotent in its appeal.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, may have in its ministry men who have never been divinely called, but it has and is still suffering more from the number who lack assurance that they are divinely sent to the charge and are divinely controlled while there. How can a man feel that he is divinely sent to a charge when the authorities which the church has properly constituted to make the appointment has had little more to do with it than to confirm an appointment that other influences have made. I am profoundly convinced that here is a weak spot in our church and the sooner we recognize it and set ourselves to the task of correcting it the better it will be for the whole church. Some preachers fail in their ministry because they never allowed God to put them anywhere, while others have failed because they would not stay put. In these two articles, "The Call" and "The Commission of the Preacher" we have tried to emphasize the human element. In the third and last article we shall deal with the workman at his work, emphasizing the place and importance of the human element in preaching the gospel.

A CRISIS IN THE HISTORY OF METHODISM AT THE N. C. C. W.

In 1919 pressure was brought to bear upon Spring Garden Street congregation to build an adequate church to care for the growing part of the city in which the church is located, and to provide ample accommodation for the Methodist girls attending the North Carolina College for Women. The challenge was accepted, and one of the finest buildings in the conference now stands just across the street from the great state school with more than thirteen hundred students in attendance. More than four hundred and fifty of this number are Methodist girls. Plans were laid to erect a building that would cost fifty thousand dollars, but before it was accomplished, with increasing prices in both labor and material, the cost had run far beyond the first estimate. The property is now valued at $125,000. The entire student body and faculty have met in the church a number of times. It is not a local affair—every sermon preached in this church is preached to the state of North Carolina, because many of the students attend and will go from here to lead in the educational work of the state. The local congregation has made and is continuing to make unbelievable sacrifices. The load is beyond their power to lift. There remains a debt of more than forty thousand dollars to be paid. There is not a wealthy family in the church measured by dollars and cents, but no finer body of intelligent, far-seeing and consecrated people are to be found in the whole Southern Methodist Church. There is an easy solution to this great problem if every Methodist from the mountains to the sea will do what he or she can for this state-wide cause. If it were simply a local task, no effort would be made to secure help from the outside, but it is not local. The debt was incurred largely to be able to minister to your daughters attending the school. Every section of the state will be blessed through this church if its hands are loosed and it is permitted to function as it should. Any Methodist who wishes to do a big thing for the kingdom of God, can do it right here by helping lift this debt. This is the only church of its kind in the state, standing at the very gates of the temple of learning ready to keep the religious side of the students trained in keeping with their intellectual growth. Here is one feasible way to pay off this debt: If $25,000 of the indebtedness is raised within sixty days, the local church can easily handle the remainder of the debt, and the burden will be forever gone. There are 25,000 subscribers to the North Carolina Advocate. If they will send us $1.00 each, during the next thirty days, the debt will be paid and that dollar will preach to generations unborn. I am sure that if the Methodists of this state knew the conditions as they really are, that such a response would be made that within less than ten days every penny of the amount sought would be in the hands of the treasurer of the building fund. I know of no place in all Methodism where your money will mean more to Christian civilization than to put it here where the finest womanhood of the state is being trained. Please help us if you can. Do it today. Do not wait; if you do, you will perhaps forget our crying need. We must have your help. A list of all who come to our rescue will be framed and placed as a memorial in the church. Dr. A. W. Plyler, editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, knows our condition and is heart and soul with us.

Most fraternally,

G. T. Bond, Pastor,

Spring Garden Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Send all money to W. A. Mann, Treasurer, 710 Highland Avenue, Greensboro, N. C. A receipt will be mailed you.

TIME TO WHISTLE FROM RUTHERFORDTON

They say that the Rev. Sam P. Jones said: "Small boats cannot run and whistle at the same time; they must stop to whistle." Now we do not make any special claim of being in the small boat class, or in any way of being in the boat business, but for the information and pleasure of the faithful readers of the Advocate we think it at least courteous to stop long enough to speak from and for Rutherfordton.

We are told that Bishop Francis Asbury passed through Rutherfordton (then Rutherfordtown) more than one hundred years before we came to the place. He found the court in session and looked in upon it and decided it did not look like congenial company for Methodists, and so passed on. I am glad to say we find here also the tracks of the Revs. Geo. W. Ivey, T. C. Jordan and a number of other good, though less venerable, men who wrought well in their day and generation.

However, the date of keenest interest to us (I mean the entire family) was the day when we came to town. Of course it is superfluous to say to anyone who knows the Rutherfordton folk that the reception was all one could expect of any people. Yes, the "warm supper," the "heavy pounding" and words of cheer and all that were only natural to these good people. It was all so fine that I told the congregation at prayer service on that Wednesday evening that I was sorry for anyone who was not in some way mixed up with the family of an itinerant Methodist preacher. So many good things come our way. Well, we fell in love with the charge on first sight. First, for what it was, and secondly, for what our faith says it is going to be in the not distant future. We are handicapped for want of a modern church building, it is true. But one of the oldest and best men of our conference said to me as we returned from Monroe: "Ervin, go up there and build a church. They have needed one for 25 years and they are able to build it." I came and found that Brother Hoyle was correct in both contentions, and I think the people are about unanimous in accepting the first—that they really do need a church. But pray, brethren, that we may be able by grace and wisdom to cause them to fully accept Brother Hoyle's second contention—"they are able to build it." Brother Hoyle knows they are, I know they are, and the Lord knows they are. And we are expecting the entire congregation to accept that fact and act upon it, in the near future. For we intend to break ground about the time the farmers are planting their corn.

Well, of course the good stewards got together and among other things they raised the pastor's salary to the tune of 25 per cent and arranged to pay up monthly as other good organizations do. Bro. D. B. Johnson is the chairman of our board and is also clerk of the court of our county. You see we have changed clerks since Brother Asbury came to Rutherfordtown.

Love to all our brother pastors and to all the readers of our most splendid conference organ. Bros. Plyler, and Sikes, you are doing a fine business. I give you my hand and heart on that. J. O. Erwin.

METHODIST SUMMER SCHOOL AT TRINITY COLLEGE

D. M. Litaker.

I am delighted to see that the managers of the Summer School have already booked Dr. G. Campbell Morgan and Dr. Andrew Sledd each for a series of lectures next summer. Dr. Morgan stands at the top in the whole world as a Bible teacher, sound and sane and scholarly. His coming will draw many to the Summer School. Dr. Sledd, son-in-law of Bishop Candler, is one of the most brilliant of the highly efficient instructors in Candler School of Theology. If we had not others, these two men would give us plenty to think about.

Since the Educational Commission has indispensably required that every student passing work at the Summer School must prepare a digest of each book before coming to the school, it would be well for all our undergraduates to take notice that our Summer School will be operating under that law next summer.

From my experience of five years as one of the instructors of the Summer School, handling Logic and History of Methodism, I am fully prepared to back up every word of Dr. Bennett in last week's Advocate about the inadequacy of the Summer School unless the student will thoroughly prepare the books before hand. I have been advising the young preachers to take the work in the Correspondence School just as the ministerial students in Trinity and Rutherford and Weaver take the work there, not as a requirement, but as an equipment for service. I have called attention to the fact that nowhere else can so much be secured for so little outlay in money as the Correspondence School furnishes. Dr. Bennett is right in advising that every young preacher take the correspondence work and then attend the Summer School and, if he desires, pass his work there.

My dear young brother, you will need all that both these schools can do for you. Buckle down right now and determine to make the best preacher you are capable of ever being. Three elements enter: Religion, efficiency in service, and intellectual equipment. You may have the first and the second; don't forget the third. It's indispensable.

DR. PINSON AND PARTY RETURNS

Dr. W. W. Pinson, general secretary of the Board of Missions, and Mrs. Pinson, arrived in Nashville Wednesday, the 24th, from the Orient, in response to a cablegram from the board directing him to return to lend aid during the Centenary campaign. Plans had been made to sail for home on February 20th, but in response to the call of the board the party of six, which included Bishop H. A. Boaz and family, Miss Mabel K. Howell and Dr. and Mrs. Pinson, left Yokohama on the 17th instant aboard the steamship Jefferson and landed in Seattle after a rough voyage.

The party were gone six months and traveled over twenty thousand miles. Says Dr. Pinson, "We had work cut out for every day. The problems were so many and so varied that it was somewhat of a disappointment to all concerned when the emergency call came to return home. There was never a time nor place where Christian service counted for more than in the East today. A wonderful opportunity to help is presented every member of the church."

"I WANT TO BE AN ELDER"

I want to be an elder
 And with the elders stand;
 A felt hat on my forehead,
 A black book in my hand.

I want to roam the district
 And ask the questions round,
 To see the parson's families
 And cover all the ground.

I want to take my fish hook
 And try the ponds and brooks,
 And eat the ham and gravey.
 And never study books.

I want to be an elder
 To be with elders found,
 To stand before the bishop
 And switch the box cars round.

JONESBORO CIRCUIT

One of the stewards in Jonesboro said to me a few weeks ago in discussing certain arrangements for the quarterly conference that they long to see one real good quarterly conference in Jonesboro. They they explained that for several years the weather has been inclement and only a few came to the business session.

I am glad to say that this steward has a other tune to sing and is now saying we had such a fine meeting and everything was grand.

Last Saturday, January 20, was the occasion of our first quarterly conference for this year. Rev. R. H. Willis, the new presiding elder on this Fayetteville district, was present and preached a most helpful and timely sermon. Then the ladies served lunch in the Sunday school rooms which was enjoyed by all. For the good hot coffee and the elegant dinner eaten by red hot stoves made every one enjoy the social hour.

After this the business session was held. I hope it does not seem too much like blowing your own horn and real egotism to say that this was a real good conference. All the reports from the Sunday school superintendents, charge lay leader, president of Woman's Missionary Society, Epworth League and pastor were good. The work is very well organized and in good shape for a successful and profitable year.

On Sunday morning there was a large congregation present to hear Brother Willis. This means there were 237 present in the Sunday school and the large church full to overflowing to hear him. And he did not disappoint that vast audience. His sermon on the Potter making vessels as it is recorded in Jeremiah was handled in a most instructive and appealing manner. So many have told me that it was such a benefit to them.

Brother Willis and his good wife who came with him certainly made a great hit with our people here. It can be truly said of both of them: They came, they saw, they conquered. Yes, we really want the elder and his wife in Jonesboro again.

We are praying for a great year. May God help us to do our duty.
 B. E. Stanfield.

BATH CIRCUIT NEWS

It seems to me that I should say a few words from this part of "God's moral vineyard."

In the first place, we feel that we were fortunate in being returned for another year, as we are among good people who show by their various acts of kindness that their minister and family shall not want the common necessities of life.

I know there is nothing unusual about preachers being pounded, but there is certainly something unusual in the way it is done.

We had such an experience a few nights before Christmas, when the good ladies of Bath came to the parsonage with flour, sausages, "bones," ham, coffee, sugar, jams, jellies, etc., and just completely covered the dining table, and we can truly say that it was one of the severest poundings we ever experienced or witnessed. But the poundings do not stop. This is a four charge circuit and everywhere we go something is placed in our old Paige car to gladden the hearts of inmates of the parsonage. We cannot find words to express our feelings, but pray God to bless them all.

The new year starts out with bright prospects. Our Epworth League at Bath has taken on new life through the untiring efforts of its young president, Miss Lucile Brooks. Recently a campaign was launched for new members, and the enrollment jumped from 17 charter members to about 65. The losing side very charmingly entertained the winners at the public school building, which was enjoyed by all. May the good Lord use these young people to His glory.

We are planning for and expecting a good year.

Much of our work this year will be among the young people, operating with the home to create Christian men and women for the future conquest of the world. Why should we go on Sunday after Sunday preaching to the old people? They are not the hope of the world. But the children are.

Then we are putting greater stress upon prayer this year. If prayer, real humble prayer out of the heart, cannot unite the members of the great family of God among the different sects, then we may as well despair of ever obeying the command of Jesus to make disciples of the nations. Pray for us.

I want to mention especially our little church and Sunday school at Pine-town. For several years it has been a little struggling school, but Brother Noblock has taken the situation over, has enlisted the services of several of the teachers in the graded schools and things are on a "boom." Nothing dull about Pinetown Sunday school now.

The church has just been treated to a new coat of paint, and the best of all, many came forward at our January meeting and said before preacher and people that they were going to be better men and women during the year 1923.

May the Lord bless them abundantly.
 R. J. Lough, P. C.

KEEPING STEP WITH THE SONG

The first week in December brought us another move in the itinerant rounds. When the hour came we found our affections fixed in the good, rich soil of Mount Olive and the Mount Olive circuit. Our stay with the choice spirits of that good field was all too short—to us. They shall be held in everlasting remembrance.

Just a few hours run through a delightful sunny afternoon brought us and our household belongings to our present home, the Durham circuit parsonage, near Trinity College grounds.

Ending a strenuous week and a strenuous day, we met a greeting that made us glad. It was refreshing and fine! Ladies from the several churches and some of the laymen had come and set the house in order. Brother J. C. Humble, faithful man and friend, and his good wife, were leaving the home and premises in neat good taste. They were a part of the cheering group of our good friends tarrying to give us welcome, and were present to join us in the splendid supper that had been prepared. A thousand thanks to all for this thoughtful kindness, so unselfish and in the Master's name!

And the kindness continues. We found the pantry shelves provided

Mining German Potash

Good Healthy Crops

The South learned years ago that Kainit and the other German Potash Salts prevented Cotton Rust and other plant diseases, and at the same time greatly increased the yield.

Scientific investigations now show that both Potash and Magnesia are helpful in combating plant diseases.

All the German Potash Salts that are used in Cotton fertilizers contain soluble magnesia.

If you will insist on having your fertilizer contain at least 5 per cent of Potash derived from Genuine German Potash Salts, you will secure at the same time enough magnesia to insure against plant diseases due to magnesia hunger.

For Tobacco, and for those Fruits which are injured by Chlorin, the fertilizer should carry 10 per cent of Potash, derived from Sulfate of Potash or from Sulfate of Potash Magnesia.

Use the latter if your Tobacco leaves are not sound.

with choice goods borne by kindly hands from many homes. Delightful tokens of Christian love and of the Christmas spirit already come!

On Sunday, December 24, we went to Bethany at eleven o'clock, met a good congregation and had a good service. At close of the service we found our car, all unknown to us, filled with gifts for the pastor and his family from this interesting congregation.

Regular steps are being taken and funds being secured to add to the furnishings and comforts of the parsonage. Committees had been appointed for this purpose, one for each church, before our arrival.

Have gone to all our churches enough times to meet many of our people. We find many good citizens, men and women, among these beautiful hills of sturdy type, active and strong, who seem to me to mean much as forces for righteousness. Some of the strong currents of life are astir all about us here. We are singing "Onward, Christian soldier," and trying to keep step with the spirit of the song.

BATTLEBORO AND WHITAKERS

We have been most kindly received on the Battleboro and Whitakers charge. Things are moving off smoothly and we are hopeful for a great year. One might think, in a field where there are but two hundred and fifty members there was little to do aside from preaching, but such is not the case here. We have already found plenty of real hard, constructive work that needs to be done. Our people have been exceptionally kind to us since our coming. A splendid pantry shower from our Battleboro friends, and the nice things continue to come. A continuous stream of kindness from our Whitakers friends make one feel like it is good to be among such splendid people. Most of our Methodist folks know that this charge has been one which was, or seemed to be content with paying their preacher a small salary, not because they loved their preacher less, but for lack of a larger vision of the Master's kingdom. If this lack has been a reproach to them they have wiped it out this year. At our first quarterly conference our stewards took an advanced step in this matter and fixed the salary at $2500, which is an increase over last year of $1000. This places Battleboro and Whitakers among the best paying charges in the conference, except the city churches, and shows the splendid liberality and willingness of these people, when once they see the possibilities of their field. It is needless to say the pastor appreciates this splendid consideration on the part of the people. In the survey of the field there is much found to be done. There are more people not affiliated with any church than in any field we have served in twenty-five years of our ministry, even in communities of a much larger population. There is serious need for much improvement in church buildings, particularly in providing Sunday school accommodations. Really we need one new church building, a parsonage and other improvements. How soon these good people will be willing to undertake this constructive work remains to be told later. We are in the midst of many denominations and the population of the communities is small. This has weakened the membership of all the churches numerically and the inability of many to reconcile the differences in beliefs has caused them to remain out of the church. But our congregations are increasing with every service and we are working with a large faith in the leadership of the Spirit, and hoping for large success in every detail of the work. Our presiding elder is in high favor with our people. He is giving all diligence to promote every interest of the field and his wisdom in his administration is already bearing fruit. Nearly all of our people read the Advocate and we shall do our best to hold them as subscribers. Come down and we will let you talk to as fine a people as can be found anywhere.

J. C. Humble.

NOTES FROM MORGANTON

Acknowledgement of favors bestowed and benefits received is a blessing to the recipients and well pleasing to those who do these deeds of kindness. No individual or church is too great or prominent to act on this principle or feel its effects when rightly expressed. Our Lord appreciated a kindness and commended the spirit of gratitude. What would Methodist preachers do but for kind, generous hearts and lavish hands? The frequent changes of homes and going into new and strange environments and conditions would be unbearable but for the warm, affectionate farewells of old friends and the hearty, cordial greetings of those we are sent to serve and the generous provisions made for our comfort and happiness in our new fields of labor. It is a blessed thing to all concerned that our people generally are providing better and more substantially for those sent of God to serve them. To God we give thanks; to our people, unreserved service.

We will never forget the kind friends at Albemarle, and the well-nigh universal regret expressed when we left them. Their many tokens of love will be kept in the itinerant archives of their appreciative friends. God's blessings upon them and their new pastor forever!

Morganton was a new town to us and we were new to our people. Our reception has been all that could be expected—a warm house, a well supplied pantry, generous and varied Christmas remembrances, large and appreciative congregations, notwithstanding the recent "flu" epidemic and disagreeable weather, a substantial increase for our material support, one bed room, dining room and cook room have been fitted up with new furniture; or, it might be better expressed to say that a Majestic range and oil stove with all needed vessels have been placed in the cook room. These are some of the things these good people have done for us. About 400 pastoral calls have been made and twenty-three have been received into the church, four of these by vows. Our people are planning other good things, material and spiritual, for the church. We are making earnest and definite efforts to pay the Centenary subscriptions to date. The town is taking on new life, and substantial growth is in evidence everywhere. We are happy in our work and are praying for and expecting a good year with this loyal people.

PARKTON POUNDS PREACHER

For fear that E. C. Manness and some other preachers of the Fayetteville district will think that they have the only people who know how to "pound" the preacher, a few lines from the Parkton charge is in order. My people down here in Parkton don't wait until the preacher goes to conference and returns to pound him. Just a little while before our annual conference convened in Raleigh our people here in Parkton stormed the parsonage and nearly pounded the preacher to death. And since conference he has been pounded three times and has been the recipient of a number of individual gifts—money, wood, etc. And two churches yet to be heard from. Can you beat that?

Everything in good shape for a prosperous year. Best wishes to the Advocate.

"THE LORD GAVE IT TO ME"

An uneducated Indian village woman perhaps fifty years of age gave her heart to Christ and, after doing so, pledged her tithe to the support of the church. Her income was one rupee per week, or thirty-three and one-third cents, four rupees per month or one dollar thirty-three and one-third cents. Every Sunday morning she brought her tithe to the church. One Sunday, in addition to her tithe, she put in two annas( four cents) more. The missionary saw what she had done and asked her why, in all her poverty, after she had given her tenth she had given the two annas more. She looked up with a smile and explained that she had done a little extra work during the week and had received the two annas. She said God had given it to her and now she would give it back to him.—Selected.

TWO NEW SOCIETIES ON CHARLOTTE DISTRICT

On Sunday, January 21st, it was my privilege to visit two churches on the Matthews circuit. This was in response to an invitation from the pastor, Mr. Henshaw. He had made all arrangements for me had announced my coming and invited the women to be present.

In the morning it was my pleasure to visit Matthews church. The pastor was unable to be present on account of illness, but the laymen of that church conducted a most helpful service in the form of an "old time class meeting," after which I presented the work of the Woman's Missionary Society and then organized a society with ten members. Mrs. Mark Lemon, Matthews, is the president.

In the afternoon I went to Indian Trail. Here I found a large congregation assembled, composed of men, women and young people. It was a pleasure to talk to this interested congregation about the work which we are doing in our missionary societies. We organized an adult society with ten members, and Mrs. J. V. Kendall, Indian Trail, was made president.

We closed just in time to board the train for Monroe, and this closed a busy but pleasant day in the service of the Master.

SOCIAL SERVICE NOTES

It is important that every auxiliary have one of the new corresponding secretary's books. In it will be found especially new report blank for the auxiliary social service superintendent. This report blank is much larger and fuller than the old one; not only does it give space for reporting the varied activities properly, but it carries many suggestions about work to the superintendent by the nature of questions. Let every social service superintendent see that she has one of these new forms for reporting before the quarter ends April 1. The book can be ordered from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

An Inter-Racial Questionnaire

will be sent to each superintendent of social service in the near future. This is being sent out from headquarters, and it is desired that it be filled out and returned to the conference superintendent of social service, Mrs. F. S. Love, Wilson, N. C., by March 1. It will be remembered that the council established this commission on Race Relations, in charge of Mrs. Luke Johnson, and this commission is anxious to get an idea of just what is being done in the different communities. The questionnaire suggests things that can be done, and each superintendent is urged when she receives it to try to get some of the things done. Make an honest effort to do something; at least appoint the inter-racial committee, who can study conditions and report to the auxiliary.

Social Service Work the Past Quarter.

The reports coming to the conference superintendent of social service this past quarter indicate that some very fine work is being done in many places in this department of the auxiliaries. One of the most discouraging things is that so few auxiliaries over the conference report. Out of 335 adult auxiliaries in the conference only 45 reported this list quarter. Isn't that enough to dishearten even a very optimistic conference superintendent? Of the auxiliaries reporting, all are doing the relief and charity work, visiting the sick and strangers, lending a helping hand to those in need and trouble, thus brightening the lives of many unfortunate ones. Many are helping in county institutions, holding services in jails, county homes, stokades; some are assisting the Red Cross, aiding the welfare officers, lending their influence in school board elections, promoting health campaigns, working in the Y. W. C. A., parent-teacher associations, aiding in anti-tuberculosis campaigns. Two or three auxiliaries have done some inter-racial work, holding a mass meeting with the negro women of the community, one working in a drive for a colored hospital funds; one works with the negroes in the jail. Several of the auxiliaries have exchanged courtesies with rural church women, and have organized two new auxiliaries in the country. It would be so gne if every auxiliary would determine now that a report of this phase of the missionary work would come to the conference superintendent by April 1. Every auxiliary, no doubt, does some social service work. We want to know about it, and the conference superintendent is always glad and anxious to help every auviliary superintendent in every possible way.

Helps for Social Service Programs.

In our conference the helps for the quarterly social service meetings are sent to the presidents of the auxiliaries with the helps for the monthly missionary meetings. Every social service superintendent should ask her president about the material for the March meeting now. This material should have come with the literature for the other meetings, and if the president forgets to turn it over to the social service superintendent, the superintendent must just ask her about it. Very often there comes to the conference superintendent the complaint that the auxiliary superintendent never gets or has the use of the social service helps for the program. The conference superintendent is trying to arrange to have some of the material on hand, so she can supply it to some of these auxiliaries that seem not to get theirs. But it is not always easy to get a supply from Nashville after it has been furnished once. Please report to Mrs. F. S. Love, Wilson, if your auxiliary does not get the helps each quarter for the social service meeting. Mrs. F. S. Love,
Conf. Supt. Social Service.

PUBLIC WELFARE BULLETIN

To those doing social service work interested in prison reform we would call attention to the Bulletin of the North Carolina State Board of Charities and Public Welfare" for the first quarter, January-March, 1923. It is "A study of prison conditions in North Carolina," and contains much valuable information you need in your work. It is terribly interesting and enlightening. Write to Mrs. Clarence Johnson, Commissioner, Raleigh, N. C., for a copy of it.

MY MISSIONARY SOCIETY FOR 1923

Must be abreast of the times—up-to-date—a 1923 model. Plans and policies of other years adapted and remodeled or replaced in accordance with the latest and best plans and policies of the stirring times we live in. No lag, no drag. Society well officered, committees at work; "everybody at the task."

Must have instructive and interesting programs. There is no news quite so thrilling as missionary news. It has to do with a great seething world in which the battel for truth, righteousness, and justice is being waged against the mighty forces of sin, ignorance and prejudice. Through these programs we learn where our fields, what our responsibility, and who our representatives. Such momentous information must not be dimmed by dullness or lack of attractiveness. Let it so ring out as to challenge the attention of the church.

Well conducted mission study classes must supplement the missionary education of the membership.

Must co-operate with all agencies that are working for uplift and human betterment in the community; must stand out as a force for reform and helpfulness upon which all other such forces may rely for support and co-operation. Must line up all Methodist women to do their part in all worthy movements.

Must serve the needy and dependent classes; build up the spiritual forces of the local church, aiding the pastor in personal evangelism, ministering to the shut-in and the sick.

Must pray in secret and unitedly; in family circles and voluntary groups for the coming of the kindom; for wisdom and power upon the misionaries sent out—often by name; for power for native Christians; for justice for the alien, the negro, the ignorant and down-trodden of every class; for ourselves, that we may not fail the cause of God.

Must give so as to please Him who said, "Freely ye have received, freely give"; lovingly, lavishly, sacrificially, joyfully, more than ever before because we know more and love more.

CENTENARY EMERGENCY CAMPAIGN

When this Bulletin comes from the press, the Centenary Commission will be engaged in an emergency campaign. Its goal is the collection of four millions of dollars by May 1. Six teams, composed of bishops, missionary secretaries, missionaries and other leaders will be allocated to different sections of the church. They will visit the cties and large towns, hoping in this way to get the missionary message into the entire church. It is especially requested that the presidents and members of the Woman's Missionary Societies give full co-operation to the teams by planning for their coming and assisting in the collections wherever possible.

Western North Carolina Conference

REV. B. C. REAVIS

When you look into the face of Rev. B. C. Reavis you are privileged to see a real fellow. There is none more humble, more consecrated, more considerate or more painstaking than the one whose picture adorns this page. It has been my pleasure to work with Reavis on circuit and on station and in each instance he was found so busy doing good as to have no time for complaining about anything. Every one likes Reavis and Reavis likes every one.

Born and brought up on a farm nine miles out from Statesville, in Iredell county, our young pastor had plenty of time to think as he followed the plow and pushed the hoe. His schooling was obtained at Cool Springs Academy, Rutherford and Trinity College. While at Trinity he served for two years the Lakewood congregation in Durham. On coming to the Western North Carolina conference he was appointed to the Dudley Shoals circuit, where for three years he did good work. He is now serving his second year at Weaverville station, where a most successful pastorate obtains. Because of his interest in and knowledge of Sunday school work he was at our last annual conference placed on the Sunday School Board.

Several years ago Brother Reavis was happily married to Miss Gertha Cartner, of Davie county. This union has been blessed by two fine boys, Clyde and Hugh. The whole Reavis family patronize the Sunday school.

RANDOLPH CIRCUIT

The Randolph circuit, composed of six churches, holds a charge Sunday school institute every fifth Sunday afternoon and is getting much benefit from the meetings. Because the last fifth Sunday came during the holidays the institute for that date was postponed till Sunday afternoon, January 21st, and it was my pleasure to be present at this meeting and lead the discussions. Much good is being done. The schools are trying to follow our church's "Program of Work." Graded Lessons, Cradle Rolls, proper classification, Workers' Councils and Home Departments include some of the advances made. The Trinity school will departmentalize its work. Miss Olivia Woosley is president of the circuit institute.

Rev. J. E. Woosley is serving his second third year on the Randolph circuit, he having been on the charge twenty-five years ago, and he is looking after all the church's interests. Although in his fortieth year in the ministry he preaches three times every Sunday, visits his sick people and is always building something. He says he had rather wear out than rust out.

NERVINE

Last week I took myself to Charlotte and after pumping nerve into myself went right into a Centenary meeting of the presiding elders of the four conferences of the two Carolinas, thereby directing some little attention to the Sunday school cause. My business there was to consult with "Our Elders" about a very important matter. The business was accomplished. "Our Elders" were not the best looking fellows there, but they were the most democratic fellows there. "Hillbillies" are not noted for looks, but rather for overcoming obstacles. Hurrah for the "Hillbillie Elders" of the Old North State! They are delivering the goods.

ALBEMARLE

Yesterday I went to Albemarle to talk over with Pastor Pickens, Superintendent Reap and Promoter H. L. Horton the plans for a big Sunday school building for First church. Everything is all too small for the growing business there and must be enlarged. Keep your eye on Albemarle.

WESLEY BIBLE CLASS

Some months ago notice was sent out in the Adult Students that Wesley Bible Class fees would be increased and dues expected. This matter has not been definitely settled and this notice is to advise all Western North Carolina conference Wesley classes to remain in existing state till April, when the General Sunday School Board will pass on the matter.

CENTENARY MONEY

Of the $1,109,374.44 raised by the Sunday schools on the Centenary the Sunday schools of the Western North Carolina conference have contributed $52,659.83, this being the fifth largest amount. Right soon efforts will be put forth to get our Sunday schools to pay all arrearages, and continue their good work. Sunday school Centenary money goes to Col. John E. Edgerton, Box 38, Nashville, Tenn.

OURS

Recently while on a trip to Nashville to the Sunday School Council meeting I visited in turn Vanderbilt, George Peabody and Emory universities, getting a right good layman's insight into them. They are all great, but I came home thinking more of Trinity College.

North Carolina Conference

OUR WILMINGTON FACULTY

Seven outstanding Sunday school workers, specialists in their respective departments, have been selected to do the teaching in the Co-operative Standard Training School to begin at Wilmington February 11. They are:

Mrs. C. L. VanNoppen, of Greensboro, "Beginner Lesson Materials."

Miss Georgie Keene, Conference Elementary Superintendent, "Primary Organization."

Miss Grace Killingsworth, of Orangeburg, S. C., "Junior Lesson Materials."

Rev. J. Q. Schisler, Department of Leadership Training, Nashville, Tenn., "Organization and Administration of the Sunday School."

Prof. Claude Carr, Synodical Superintendent, Mooresville, "Principles of Teaching."

TRINITY TO BUILD GREATER

Fire which completely destroyed the church and Sunday school building of Trinity church, Durham, Sunday, January 21, will not keep the Trinity congregation from "carrying on." Arrangements have been made to hold Sunday school in one of the graded school buildings of the city, and preaching services will be held in various places until such a time as the new church and Sunday school building can be erected. It is said that the new building will more than likely be built on the old site and that approximately $300,000 will be spent in building it.

LAKWOOD PLANS TO GROW

Lakewood Methodist church, Durham, in addition to promoting its plans for an up-to-date Sunday school addition to its equipment, has just purchased a vacant lot adjoining the church property. This lot will probably be used for recreational purposes until the congregation decides to build a parsonage. Rev. W. C. Ball, the pastor, is doing a splendid work, and the congregation is loyal to his leadership. Mr. V. E. Wilson is superintendent of the Sunday school.

EMPHASIS ON EVANGELISM

Sunday school workers throughout Southern Methodism are expected to place special emphasis on evangelism between now and Easter, and every loyal superintendent should help by

- (1) Informing himself concerning the plans.
- (2) Informing his co-workers at once.
- (3) Talking with his pastor.

(4) Opening the way in the school. The general plan, as outlined by the General Sunday School Board, which may be modified as to time and other details to fit local conditions, is as follows:

(1) January: Make all necessary preparations.

(2) February: Present the claims of Jesus Christ.

(3) March: Instruct—inspire for church membership.

(4) Easter: Receive into church membership.

For further information address L. L. Gobbel, Durham, N. C., or Dr. J. W. Shackford, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

PROGRAM OF EVANGELISM

It has been well said that:

"A carefully prepared plan looking to the winning of Sunday school pupils to a profession of faith in Jesus Christ will, if faithfully carried on, reduce the fearful losses experienced in every generation. No human effort can replace, but every human effort may be made to serve, the spiritual powers which are promised to us through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

DOING BUSINESS AT WILSON

Read these encouraging lines from Superintendent A. E. Bishop of First church, Wilson:

"Please send me a copy of the Program of Work for the class-room type Sunday school and one for the thoroughly departmental Sunday school. We expect soon to have our school thoroughly departmentalized. Of course we cannot do this until we get our new building, but we hope to have our building started very soon.

"We are getting our program of evangelism lined up and are expecting some great results."

WANTS TO DO IT RIGHT

"Please send me literature for the Wesley Bible class. I have been elected president of a Wesley Bible class and would like to carry out the work as it should be."

So writes Mrs. J. E. Underwood, of Rich Square, who adds that her class plans to contribute to the proposed Baby Cottage at our Orphanage. The class has heretofore been clothing a boy there.

WINFALL TRAINING CLASS

Rev. W. T. Phipps, of Winfall, Perquimans circuit, writes that he is planning the organization of a teacher-training class. He has secured a Standard Training Course catalogue and will doubtless proceed with this highly important and fruitful work at once.

FROM A "TEXAS TAR HEEL"

"As a Texas Tar Heel I read the N. C. A. with interest. I want your 'complete statement' (of the duties of the superintendent and other officers) mentioned on page 9 in the Sunday School Work department (of January 11). You are doing a splendid work as editor."

The foregoing paragraph came to the editor of this column from Mr. W. A. Betts, of Cherokee, Texas, under date of January 20.

We are glad to furnish the information requested, Mr. Betts, and thank you for your abiding interest in the Advocate and especially our Sunday school department. Call upon us again; we are at the service of Tar Heels everywhere.

A SCHOOL IN A NEW FIELD

C. W. Dockery, of Rusk, has written for a copy of the Program of Work for the small Sunday school. He says he is starting a school in a new field and wishes to begin right. We hold that Mr. Dockery has begun right by securing the Program of Work, being "the standards established by the General Sunday School Board," according

NOTICE TO THE LADIES

Owing to the continued illness of my husband, who has been down sick about a year with tuberculosis and an abscess on his lungs, with little hopes of his recovery, it therefore devolves on me to make us a living, though I am in a very low state of health myself. Therefore I am offering the celebrated New Perfected Parisian Art Embroidery Needle, the ladies' favorite, at half price, fifty cents instead of one dollar, the regular price, parcel post prepaid, as I need the money. Show a Christian spirit and a desire to follow the golden rule by patronizing me. Thanks. Agents wanted. Address Mrs. Rachel V. Thomas, 3260 River Road, Columbus, Ga.

SAYS DR. IVEY OF "A PALESTINE PILGRIMAGE"

"The author has recorded many things which the reader of the best travel literature would enjoy. He has the temper and spiritual insight which make him open-eyed, vivacious, and magnetic as a writer. The book is charming in contents and typography. It is good to look at—good printing, good press work, good paper, good arrangement."

Sales are very encouraging. Order from the author, Rev. E. R. Welch, Asheville, N. C. 200 pages, $2.00.

WEAVER PIANOS

"When good fellows get together!"

THEN it is that voices are let go, when hearts are lifted and it's always fair weather!

Doubly lucky are those good fellows who get together where there is a Weaver Piano; for where there is a Weaver, there is good music.

Its beautiful, clear singing tone is an inspiration—it gets people singing whether they want to or not.

Tone superiority is just one of the many advantages possessed by this master instrument.

Mechanically, it is perfect. Every part of its superb action is made of the very best materials obtainable, designed and put together by skilled, conscientious artisans and backed by the experience of half a century.

Its harmony of line and finish appeal to the artistic eye at once—simplicity and fine materials being the basis of its beauty.

These qualities have won for the Weaver the enthusiastic endorsements of the world's leading professional musicians and music lovers—have placed it in a class by itself as a musical instrument.

OUR NEEDS

MONEY WITH WHICH TO PURSUE OUR BUILDING PROGRAM THROUGH.

* * * * *

Basket ball has awakened much interest among our boys and girls during the past few weeks. Our boys have won over Wakefield High School and our girls over Clayton High School. The Raleigh High girls beat our girls last week. We have several games booked for the near future and our children are looking forward to them with increasing interest and enthusiasm.

* * * * *

Mr. R. L. Brown, superintendent of Oxford Orphanage, paid us a short visit one day last week while attending the Grand Lodge of Masons. Brother Brown has wrought well during the past twelve or fifteen years he has served as superintendent of the old and honored institution. The heart of every true Mason swells with pride as his thoughts turn to this home for the fatherless.

* * * * *

For the past few days we have been breaking ground and making preparation for our gardens and farm. We broke most of our ground before Christmas. This year we are subsoiling with the hope that we may get better results. Our boys are being taught intelligent and scientific farming under the direction of Mr. Walker, who was trained at State College.

* * * * *

The Rose Literary Society met for the first time Saturday night since the Christmas holidays. An interesting program was carried out. This society, which bears the name of the sainted W. W. Rose, has accomplished great things in the life of our High School. Rev. W. W. Rose was the first person to give a contribution toward the building of the Methodist Orphanage.

* * * * *

It would be a fine thing for the orphanage and the churches if some big-hearted friend would give us a seven-passenger automobile so we could take our Singing Class out real often. The old second hand cars which we bought a year and a half ago are worn out. This makes it impossible for us to visit many of our churches, since we can only go out Saturdays and return Sundays or Mondays. We do not make regular tours throughout the conference, as all of our children go to school half of each day while they perform duties the other half. If some one who has a good seven-passenger car which they could dispose of as I have suggested, it would mean a great deal to our orphanage in reaching the churches with the Singing Class.

Recently we had a landscape gardener looking over our campus, relative to locating new buildings and beautifying the grounds. It is the purpose of the board of trustees to make this a great and wonderful home, and they are particularly anxious that no mistake shall be made in locating buildings which would mar the looks of the orphanage. Brother S. C. Vann, who has put so much money in the making of our home, expressed himself as being heartily in favor of this plan to determine the location of future buildings so no blunder can be made in the important matter. In the near future we will have a home which will accommodate at least five hundred children and the buildings will be conveniently and artistically grouped and located.

* * * * *

The thought has occurred to me that possibly a few not knowing the facts might not understand why the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh should make appeals for money when the Children's Home at Winston-Salem seldom if ever makes appeals for support. Possibly a few words just here will clear up the whole situation. The orphanage assessment for the Children's Home at Winston-Salem is several thousand dollars more than the orphanage assessment for the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh. In addition to this we have our hundred more children to care for than our sister orphanage of Western North Carolina conference. Furthermore, there are several other minor reasons for this difference which I need not mention in this connection. When the Children's Home becomes as large as our Raleigh Orphanage, it will have to make many and urgent appeals for support unless the assessment is larger and the endowment greatly increased. Our conference does not raise one-half of the amount of money it takes to maintain our Home and make improvements. We have no financial agent in the field, neither does the superintendent visit from church to church to raise funds for the Methodist Orphanage. The appeal through the Advocate is the only alternative we have by which we reach our constituency and secure sufficient funds to meet our ever increasing needs. I trust that this explanation is sufficient to show why I call upon our people for support. It is this or financial failure.

* * * * *

I have a secret I wish to whisper in some attentive ear. As I see it and as the board of trustees view it this is no time to launch a new campaign to raise money even for the Methodist Orphanage. The Centenary and Educational pledges are still to be collected in a large measure. At least two or three more years will pass before these great forward movements of the church will have been consummated. There are many other worthy and pressing needs being brought to bear upon the conscience of our people. This means a large outlay of money. In view of these facts we feel that it would be inopportune to begin a great drive even for our own beloved Methodist Orphanage. To wait two or three years longer, however, would mean that we are to close the only door of hope to hundreds of fatherless children. This would be unchristian and unhumanitarian. Our North Carolina Methodism is numerically strong and numbers many who have great possessions. To invest two or three hundred thousand dollars in buildings, making room for two hundred and fifty more orphan children, would be the biggest investment in the conservation and training of child-life that anyone could make. The dividends on such an investment as this would mean far more happiness than dividends realized on stocks and bonds. Unless a few of our wealthy men and women come to our relief NOW we must say NO to hundreds of children who ought to come to our Methodist Orphanage, and who in the providence of God have a right to look to us for home and tender care. Because we cannot look to the church as a whole to launch a great campaign for two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, I make this appeal to the rich for suffi-

IF SICK, BILIOUS! START YOUR LIVER

Don't Take Calomel! "Dodson's Liver Tone" Acts Better and Doesn't Gripe, Salivate or Make You Sick—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

cient funds to put across the great building program which the trustees have outlined. Unless our friends of great means respond promptly, postponement is inevitable. Such a course would be most heartless. Of all who have means and generous and noble impulses let me beg that they devote a part of their wealth to the carrying out of this great forward movement of our beloved Methodist Orphanage, which was launched last June by the board of trustees in their annual session.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

I should have written last week to say that "Day by day, in every way, we are getting better," and that all were well and out except one little girl.

Several of the grown folks, worn out with nursing and the extra work, caught a little of the common cold and were laid up for a day or two, but all are up again and the nurses are gone. We were sorry to see them go, but

IN MEMORIAM

CARTER—Wm. T. Carter, who died near Smith Grove, Davie county, N. C., in the home of his son on December 25, 1922, was about 80 years old, and had lived all his life in Davie county. He was one of the oldest members of the Methodist church of this section and lived a loyal, faithful life. He left a large family connection, all of whom have our prayers and sympathy, and commend to them the God of their father, who kept him in the sunshine and the shadows.

D. F. T.

SPRY—On December 6, 1922, the death angel knocked at the home of Brother W. G. and Vera Spry and called their dear little daughter, Levada, to a home not made with hands, where she will know no sorrow and where death will never come. Levada was a little over two years old. She was a bright little sunbeam to all who knew her. Her going away has left their home sad and lonely. She contracted diphtheria and membranous croup and did not live long. Our sympathies are with the father and mother in the loss they have sustained in the death of this loved one.

D. F. T.

RIVER—Quietly and peacefully after a brief illness with influenza-pneumonia, Sister Evie River fell on sleep at her home near Broadway January 13, 1923.

She was the daughter of Mr. J. R. Bright of Chatham county and was born April 6, 1884. In 1910 she married Mr. Henry A. River of the same county, but later they moved to Jonesboro and became actively identified with the Methodist church here.

When a mere girl Sister Rives gave her heart to God and joined old Asbury Methodist church near her home. She was indeed a good Christian woman, a loving wife, a kind, tender mother and a true friend. To know her was but to admire the beautiful traits of character and see the realities of a genuine Christian life. Her friends and acquaintances loved her dearly and recognized that her quiet, gentle manner was but the index of the beautiful life and character of one of God's own children.

Her parents, husband, two sweet little girls, two sisters and a brother, with many other relatives, are left to grieve her going away. But we know where she is, for she heard the call of her Saviour and was not afraid and is at rest.

B. E. Stanfield, P. C.

UNDERWOOD—Mrs. Delilah Ann Underwood (nee Thomas) was born near Sanford October 2, 1842, and died at her home near the place of her birth January 19, 1923.

On January 20, 1876, she was married to Mr. Abel Underwood. This date happened to be the day of her funeral. The husband and three children with other relatives and friends survive her.

For a long number of years Sister Underwood was a great sufferer due in part to an automobile accident. She was a loyal good woman, true to the church and a faithful Christian. It is said that when her children were small she always had them ready on Sunday morning to go several miles to Sunday school on time. She bore her sufferings with genuine Christian patience and fortitude and was always hopeful and cheerful. We have every reason to believe that she has entered into the rest that remains for the people of God.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer in Buffalo Presbyterian church and she sleeps in that cemetery.

B. E. Stanfield.

REEVES—David Marshall Reeves was born September 24, 1881, and died at Long's Sanatorium in Statesville January 22, 1923, aged 41 years, three months and 29 days. He leaves a wife, two children, a father and mother, several brothers and sisters. The parents and most of the family connection reside in Stanly county, near Albemarle. The deceased had just recently completed and moved into a beautiful bungalow on his farm on the highway between Alebmarle and the Swift Island bridge. How sad that one just in the maturity of manhood should be so suddenly removed. He had been a member of the Methodist church from early youth.

E. J. Poe, Pastor.

ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB

Takes the Guess Out of Piano Buying

So many people have bought guaranteed pianos on the old-time installment plan only to find in a few years that they had a tin-panny instrument instead of a high-grade musical instrument of which they could feel proud. And, when they tried to get protection on the guarantee they find that the company from whom they bought had gone out of business. It is indeed a sad story.

The Advocate Piano Club insures its members against this outrage by enabling them to procure their instruments from one of the oldest and best known Piano Houses in America. Dozens of Clubs have been formed and never yet has a buyer been disappointed. Arrangements have been perfected with Ludden & Bates, Southern Music House, which makes piano buying safe and easy. Ludden & Bates have been selling Pianos and Player-Pianos throughout the South for over 50 years. It is a reliable house whose guarantee means exactly what it says. They are not in business today and out tomorrow, but are ever ready and willing to make good on every promise they make.

What the Advocate Piano Club Means to You

- 1st. It means that you are buying at wholesale prices instead of retail prices. Each Club consists of 100 members who by buying together gain a much better price than any one purchaser can procure. You are only responsible for your own purchase, but by joining the Club you are helping the other 99 members to get wholesale prices and they are helping you.
- 2nd. You are guaranteed perfect satisfaction by a reliable Music House. You try the Piano or Player-Piano in your own home before you obligate to keep it.
- 3rd. By joining the Club you are extended the most convenient terms of monthly, quarterly or yearly payments based on the lowest net cash price. This represents a tremendous saving as compared with the customary installment prices which are usually much higher than cash prices.
- 4th. The family of a Club Member is fully protected in case of the death of the purchaser. If the regulations of the Club have been complied with, the unpaid balance is cancelled and the family is given a receipt in full.
- 5th. You have the privilege of trading in your old piano at its real valuation, for a new piano or player-piano.

What Other Club Members Say

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.
 "The Piano is a treasure, and everyone remarks on the sweetness of tone, and it has been so much pleasure to the family. The Club Plan places the Piano in so many homes that otherwise would have to wait an indefinite time to buy. Accept my sincere thanks for your courteous treatment."
 MRS. R. A. SPINKS.

College Grove, Tenn.
 Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.
 "In regard to the Piano, I am perfectly delighted with it, and everyone that has heard it, or has played on it says they never heard a finer toned one; and I can observe such a vast difference in this one and others that are in this community, that have been placed by agents. Too, every one, even those that know nothing about music, can tell the superiority of this piano over others. Wishing you much success, I am."

 "I have had one of your pianos in my home for several months and I find that it comes up to your representation in every particular. Your Club Plan for the payment of same strikes me as being very lenient and I think that every home can afford a Piano on this basis. Trusting that you have a very prosperous business along this line, I am."

LONG—Bro. Jesse R. Long was born January 18, 1847, near Leasburg, N. C., and died suddenly at his home near Roxboro, N. C., December 9, 1922. On February 11, 1883, was married to Lula Dickson of Person county. He leaves a devoted wife, two sons and four daughters to mourn their loss. In early life he was converted and joined Oak Grove M. E. church, remaining a consistent member of same until his death. He was highly esteemed by a large circle of friends for the many good traits of character he possessed. May our heavenly Father comfort and sustain the loved ones and bring them together in heaven. B. C. Thompson.

RIVENBARK—Mrs. B. M. Rivenbark of Watha, N. C., died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. L. Brown on the evening of December 27, 1922, at the age of 75 years. She was the daughter of C. S. Garriss, and is survived by two sons, Weaver of Wakefield, Va., Worth of Goldsboro, and four daughters, Mrs. R. L. Brown, Mrs. R. W. Rich, Mrs. Arthur Anderson and Mrs. L. N. Johnson of this place. She was for many years a devoted member of the Watha M. E. church, from which she will be greatly missed. She was laid to rest in the family burying ground. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. H. Caviness, assisted by Rev. Mr. Clark. The community sympathizes with the family in their great loss. A Friend.

MARSHBURN—Mrs. Polly Marshburn was born in Duplin county September 20, 1850, died October 12, 1922. She was married to J. D. Marshburn in 1879. Besides her husband she is survived by four children, these being E. M., A. W., J. I. and Mrs. Lula Garriss, all of this place. Also one half brother, Moses Horne of Wilmington, N. C. Mrs. Marshburn for many years was a faithful member of the Watha M. E. church; always had a smile and a kind word for everyone. She was laid to rest in the Mt. Holly cemetery near Waltha. The community extends their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family. A Friend.

DUNCAN—January 6, 1923, the death angel removed from earth Sister Joanna Duncan, who was born in Person county April 3, 1847. In early life she joined Oak Grove Methodist church and for a long time lived a consecrated Christian. She suffered greatly, but it was borne patiently. Just before the close of her career she testified to her assurance of a home in heaven. May the three children left on earth follow her good example and join her in the home above. B. C. Thompson, P. BIG CO-OPERATIVE SCHOOL

Meeting in Grace church Thursday night, representatives of the various Methodist and Presbyterian churches of Wilmington, together with Prof. Claude Carr, leader of Sunday school work of the North Carolina Presbyterian synod, and the writer, representing our conference Sunday School Board, perfected plans for a big co-operative Standard Training School to be held Grace church February 11-16. The meeting was enthusiastic, and the prospects for a great school are bright. The following officers and committees were named to make further preparations for the school:

Board of Managers—Rev. W. A. Stanbury, chairman, Maj. W. A. Graham, Rev. J. O. Mann, M. F. Allen, W. K. Mintz, W. H. Shaffer, W. W. Morton, C. T. McKeithan, Marvin J. Cowell, Earl Jones, M. Pearsall and H. E. Boney.

Publicity—Rev. H. C. Smith and Rev. J. E. Purcell.

Finance—C. E. Clarke and H. E. O'Keef.

Enrollment—Miss Edna Wilkins, W. W. Morton, Miss I. McDougall, Mrs. John Hall, Mrs. H. R. Collett, Miss Agnes Irwin, Miss Martha Voshall, Mrs. W. K. Mintz, M. F. Allen, Mrs. M. J. Cowell, and Mrs. L. D. Latta.

Educational Directors—L. L. Gobel and Prof. Claude Carr.

I DON'T KNOW WHY

If I have been rightly informed, the churches all started with the poor, but as soon as they got a little wealth, and a little worldly knowledge, they sold out to the world and went into a social reform; and that soon will deny the divinity of Christ and the witness of the spirit and the next step is to leave Christ out of our life and worship.

When Christ is left out of our life, we turn our back on the poor, and seek the money centers and those who are of a certain social circle.

God sent Moses to the wilderness to feed sheep; Paul to the Gentiles; Wesley to the slums among the poor. When Moses met Christ at the burning bush, Paul on the road to Damascus, and Wesley in the prayer meeting it changed the course of their lives and sent them where there was need and suffering; but I fear with the most of us today the most dollars makes the strongest call and not the real need of men reaches our ear.

I believe it would be a great blessing to the church, and a good many of us preachers, if we could get away from the Christ of social reform and find the Christ that was despised and rejected; the one that was acquainted with grief and sorrow, because men were lost. If we could noly share part of His life, love and power. In other words, the church needs to be converted; then there would not be so much swearing and worldliness in the church. F. F. Eure.

BOOK ENDORSED BY GREENSBORO METHODIST MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Whereas, it appears that the consumption of tobacco in the various forms is on the increase, and especially does it seem that the cigarette habit is steadily and rapidly becoming more prevalent, due to the popularity given it during the war when they were copiously supplied our soldier boys, thus forming the habit in thousands who were hitherto free from it, until the magnitude and gravity of this worse than useless thing seem to endanger both the health and the morals of our people, going almost unchecked and unrebuked by our timid preachers and teachers and being taken somewhat as a matter of course by all.

Therefore, be it resolved, that we have seen and read with pleasure the strong and ably written book published by Rev. T. J. Ogburn, which is a fearless expose of the tobacco evil, and that we heartily endorse this book and wish for it a wide and useful circulation. L. B. Hayes, Sec.

HIDDENITE CHARGE

We came to this work two years ago last November and found it somewhat disturbed over being born again—that is, having been made a new charge. I am glad to say, however, that the storm soon calmed and the ship has been sailing slowly but surely ever since.

During the past two years there have been several added to the church, and many of the former members have been made new ones. The increase in the spirituality of the charge is one of the most encouraging things about it. We believe that it means as much to get a member of the church saved as it does to get one who is not a member converted.

During the past two years there have lent eight-room parsonage has been built. You will also find by reference to the conference Journal that all the collections have been paid in full. This has been done with very little effort on the part of the pastor. The people did it because they wanted to do it.

I notice in the Advocate that several of the brethren report poundings. Well, the very same thing has been happening over here. On Christmas eve both Midway and Liberty pounded us, and they know how it is done.

We are praying for and expecting a good year. We have a fine people to serve. We love them devotedly, and we have every reason to believe that they love us.

Let me say in closing that if all concerned are as well pleased with the present arrangement on this charge so far as the pastor is concerned, as he—why, I am fixed indefinitely.

Would you sow a handful to an acre?

What would you say of a farmer who sowed a handful of wheat to an acre? Take care not to make the same mistake when you apply commercial plant food. The best authorities in the land declare that your cash return on fertilizer is many times larger when fertilizer is applied in sufficiently large quantities.

At North Carolina Experiment Station, on sandy loam soil, the use of 1000 lbs. of fertilizer per acre made a cotton crop that yielded six times as much profit on the fertilizer investment as when only 200 lbs. was applied per acre.

Some fertilizer is worth more than other fertilizer for the same reason that some mules are worth more than other mules. You know how expensive a cheap mule can be. Think how unwise it is to risk all the time and labor and seed you put on a crop by trying to save $1 a ton on the fertilizer.

We are proud to say that Royster's fertilizers have never been made to meet a price. They are made of the best materials obtainable, compounded to meet the special food requirements of the crops for which the fertilizer is intended. For nearly 40 years Royster fertilizer has been the reliable, dependable friend of the man who demands something besides a cheap price to recommend a fertilizer to him. Royster's brand means a balanced ration of plant food, scientifically prepared for the particular crop, and made available in just the proper proportions.

For instance, Royster's famous old cotton mixtures have been scientifically revised to insure an early crop, which is so important in fighting the weevil. Look for the well known FSR trademark on the back of every bag. It's like sterling on silver. F. S. Royster Guano Co.

cannot sail kites where there is no wind and no space to run.

One little boy had his kite confiscated at the very beginning of the season. Two of his Christmas handkerchiefs went up as kite tail ballast. Handkerchiefs were supposed to be reserved for bad cold usage. Sniffing may not inconvenience the young seriously, but their elders have decided prejudices against it.

Mr. Bradshaw, however, is too kind to keep a little boy's kite long in solitary confinement. He was pleased when I sent a fat tow sack full of rags and cloth scraps up to the dormitory. He hasn't forgotten how necessary kite tail material is at this season, and comprehends the value of lessening temptation to misappropriation.

Miss Ivey, too, has a heart when it comes to helping little boys have a good time. She can make perfectly good sticky kite paste. Besides, she knows a place in Charlotte where kites can be bought ready made. And Mr. Ivey, her father, who owns a big store in that city, sent over recently a hundred store-kites! Kites in lovely colors and fascinating shapes of birds and flags and other designs.

The first snow came too soon after the "flu" to be available for sliding. And with three new sleds and numerous old ones waiting long weeks for an opportunity to be used, it was a big disappointment when the superintendent came up to the dining room the morning after the sleet and announced that they would have to wait and hope for another good snow soon.

The cows are in their comfortable new quarters in the big barn. Eight hogs have recently been made into fresh meat. Back bone, spare ribs, livermush—and the rest of the kinds of good, fresh pork make a pleasant variation to the bill of fare.

The Home has two new officers, Mr. Gentry, an efficient dairyman, and Mr. Dillworth, an expert truck gardener.

The rains interrupted the spring plowing, but considerable ground had been plowed for spring sowing. The superintendent hopes to have the Home truck patches furnish a large proportion of the vegetables for the table needs. Growing vegetables and getting them to the kitchen for a table of a hundred and seventy is no little job. The garden is supplying fine collards, salad of several kinds, salsify, parsnips and turnips. All of our good potatoes have been eaten up. This year we will plant two crops.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

Insure in The Methodist Mutual—owned and controlled by the two North Carolina Conferences.

Mrs. Rosenbach Needed Money

AND HOW SHE TURNED SPARE HALF HOURS INTO $179.62—ALL IN SEVENTEEN WEEKS—AN AVERAGE OF $10.59 A WEEK—AND WITHOUT STEPPING OUT OF THE HOUSE.

It was neither his fault nor hers that the Rosenbachs were so often hard pressed.

Mr. Rosenbach earns good wages. And Mrs. Rosenbach knows how to make every dollar go as far as a dollar possibly can.

But somehow the week's pay was never quite enough.

No matter how carefully she planned and figured, or how carefully she economized, there were always things she had to do without—things she had set her heart on.

But now all that is a thing of the past.

Mrs. Rosenbach doesn't have to make last season's dresses or suits or hats do her another year. She no longer has to mend and remake the children's old clothes instead of buying new ones. If she wants a new rug or a new piece of furniture, or wants to go to a concert or have some other pleasure, she now has a way to provide the necessary money.

What Has Brought This Happy Change?

It is an interesting story. And all the more so because any woman with two hands and a little spare time, and the willingness to use it, may easily straighten out the money problem in the same way that Mrs. Rosenbach solved hers.

The Secret

Here is the whole secret—Mrs. Rosenbach has become one of the many spare time home workers for the Home Profits Hosiery Company.

Whenever she has a little time, Mrs. Rosenbach sits down at the handy little Home Profit Knitter sent to her by the Home Profit Hosiery Company and knits socks—men's, women's or children's.

From the nicely turned heel to the cuff at the top, this wonderful little machine shapes and knits each sock or stocking. Mrs. Rosenbach says it is all so easy—and such a pleasant change from housework—that it seems more like a diversion than work.

Above all, every hour that Mrs. Rosenbach spends at her Home Profit Knitter means extra money for her. She sends the finished hose to the Home Profit Hosiery Company, and gets good pay for every pair she knits in accordance with specifications—all guaranteed in advance.

$10.59 EXTRA EACH WEEK

Mrs. Rosenbach received her knitter last April. Between then and the last week of August—a period of 17 weeks—she received from the Home Profit Hosiery Company a total of 17 checks, amounting to $179.62.

That is an average of $10.59 per week. Every penny of it earned in spare time—time that would otherwise have been wasted.

Then, too, Mrs. Rosenbach earned this extra money in the privacy of her own home—didn't have to step out of the house. All without interfering with her regular household duties. Started and stopped her knitting just when she felt like it—did as much or as little each day or week as she pleased. At all times absolutely her own boss. No wonder that Mrs. Rosenbach, like so many others, says that this is the ideal way to add to one's income.

Of course, not every woman earns as much as Mrs. Rosenbach does, but, on the other hand, some women have received even larger checks for their socks. It all depends on how anxious you are to earn money and on how rapidly you work and ship the finished socks to us.

More Home Workers Needed

The Home Profit Hosiery Company wants more spare time home workers like Mrs. Rosenbach—many more. The demand for genuine home-knit wool hose of the kind so easily fashioned on the Home Profits

Knitter is steady—because these hose wear longer, fit better and look better than ordinary factory hose.

The machine itself does both the shaping and the knitting, and our illustrated instruction book explains the operation in a simple and easily understood manner.

The Purchase Price is Guaranteed

We guarantee to buy all the socks and stockings you knit on our machine with our Waskill yarn and to pay you a guaranteed and fixed in-advance price for every pair. An equivalent amount of yarn for every pair you send us is furnished free.

How much you can earn at this work simply depends on how much time you give it—and that of course rests entirely with you. A few minutes now and then—an hour a day—two hours—just as you find time and have the inclination.

You can count on getting a check from us just as often as you send in hose, whether you knit two or three dozen pairs a day or only that many in a week or month. How often you receive a check and the size of each check only depends on your output of socks.

things for the children. Maybe it's some old bills you have been worrying about. Maybe to help pay for a home. No matter for what purpose you want extra money, here is a pleasant and sure year-round way to earn it. All you need are two hands, a little spare time and one of these Master Knitters.

Even $2 extra each week means $104 a year. $5 extra each week means $260 a year. $10 extra each week means $520 a year. Think of all the things you can buy—all the pleasure and comforts you might have—with that much additional money.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS

Have a care for the sort of notices made from the pulpit on Sunday. The pulpit should be no bulletin board for every trivial notice, or a place for the free advertisement of all kinds of wares. Even railroad stations and United States postoffices are protected from such rubbish. Should not the church have some protection from the things that, if not unclean, are common?

* * * *

Jacob passed himself off on Isaac for Esau. Then Laban passed Leah off on Jacob for Rachel. This is but the beginning of the fruits of duplicity that were as the apples of Sodom to Jacob all along the way. The chickens have a great habit of returning home to roost. The experience of the ages only serves to confirm the accuracy of the apostolic declaration that a man will reap what he sows. But man persistently refuses to be governed by this truth.

The Richmond Christian Advocate has hit upon an apt illustration of the ethics of Roman Catholicism. Here is the exact language of our neighbor:

"A dispatch from Rome says the Pope of Rome is giving his aid to the 'Anti-blasphemy Society.' The society needs friends and a lottery has been organized to increase the treasury. The Pope is giving it endorsement and urging the people to patronize the vicious gambling scheme in order to help the Anti-blasphemy Society, which reminds us of a man we met not long ago on a much belated train. He was cursing in brimstone and sulphur because he would be too late to hear Billy Sunday preach."

* * * *

Mark Guy Pearce, the great London preacher and author, who on January 2, 1923, celebrated his eighty-first birthday, continues the use of clear and forcible language. Here is a recent utterance worthy of repetition: "Orthodoxy without brotherliness, and religion without love are the most cruel things that ever came into God's world." Every page of human history confirms the truthfulness of that declaration. To divorce the spirit of Christ from the doctrines of Christianity has been the age long tragedy of Christian history. This is no fling at sound doctrine, but a reminder that a right spirit is just as important as right thinking. The two should never be divorced.

It is interesting to note that Jesus in his miracles demanded human co-operation. In fact these miracles were more supplementary, than they were substitutionary. If so in the extraordinary events of the Master's busy life, how much more should we expect human co-operation in the things of daily routine? Yet men and women are constantly demanding, if not openly, in the secret chamber of their own hearts that God become their substitute rather than their fellow worker in the sphere of human responsibility and possibility. "God will not do for us what we can do for ourselves" has become trite. Yet in it is a great truth that none should overlook. God has made man his fellow worker. Human resources are of supreme importance in the economy of God. How dare any man fold them in a napkin?

An additional bond issue of $15,000,000 for good roads has been ordered by the General Assembly, practically without opposition. The automobile has converted the most conservative North Carolinian into a good roads enthusiast. When a man buys an automobile his love for mud takes wings. In fact if driving a car cannot convert a miser into a spendthrift the case is hopeless. Henry Ford should be termed the road builder.

The Mother's Aid bill has practically the unanimous endorsement of the state press and of the social and religious organizations of the state. The people are anxious for the bill to become a law. It will meet an urgent need in caring for helpless children whose fathers are dead. A little money used to aid mothers in the care of their dependent children will yield larger returns than in any other way that it can possibly be expended. We cannot believe that a single member of the General Assembly will be so heartless and unwise as to oppose the measure.

* * * *

Just as we expected, Dr. Carlton D. Harris, editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, president of the Southern Methodist Press Association and the most delightful after dinner speaker that we know, is in trouble, and a whole lot of trouble. The head and front of his offending was in writing a little irony and his readers took him seriously. The subject of his irony was Editor T. N. Ivey and what he had written in the Christian Advocate about the modern dance. Now some of the readers of the Baltimore are sure that their editor has lost his head and advocates the dance. This is not all. We warn Dr. Harris that some of his readers, if he doesn't look out, will charge him with worse than publishing "rot" when they read what was in last week's paper. Here it is: "A woman was knocked down by a dog and run over by a Ford. When picked up she was asked if she was hurt. 'The dog didn't hurt me,' she answered, 'but the tin can tied to his tail did.'"

* * * *

The Joint Commission has suggested a plan for the unification of the Northern and Southern branches of Episcopal Methodism that by its very simplicity commends itself to the people called Methodists. To form each church as it exists at present into a jurisdiction and then combine the two jurisdictions into a federation is as simple a plan as one can well conceive. And if the thirteen colonies could form a federation that has grown into the federal government with its group of commonwealths which are represented by the stars in our flag, it does seem that two jurisdictions might get together in an ecclesiastical federation that should prove mutually helpful and that would mean greater progress for the kingdom of God in the earth. This will not come immediately, if it comes at all, but let us live in hope of a satisfactory union of Episcopal Methodism. There is too much in common between the two churches for them to forever remain separate and frequently indulging in the spectacle of worshipping a common Saviour at rival altars.

"CHAPEL TALKS" BY JOHN CARLISLE KILGO

Whether table talks, conference talks or chapel talks, by Bishop John C. Kilgo, they alike sparkle with a brilliancy that was peculiar to this eminent college president and gifted preacher. Hence, North Carolina readers need not be even reminded that these fifty-two Chapel Talks that W. D. Newsom has brought out in an attractive volume are good to the superlative degree. These talks were delivered by Dr. Kilgo while president of Trinity College, and stenographically reported by D. W. Newsom, the editor of the book, and revised by the author.

The editor in his preface among other things says:

"Dr. Kilgo adopted the custom of talking to his students once or twice a week during the morning chapel hour, and the most representative of these talks have been selected for this volume.

"It is doubtful if any man in the country ever exerted a more wholesome or uplifting influence over a body of college students than did Dr. Kilgo during these morning hour chapel talks with his boys. They were usually the topic of conversation during the remainder of the day, and the currents of hundreds of young lives took their setting from these fatherly talks."

The subjects of these "Chapel Talks" are suggestive of the wide range of topics that commanded the attention of their author. Here are a few: "The Dollar," "Telling the Truth," "The Poet and the Cart Driver," "Walking With God," "Small Things," "Cotton and Character," "War," "A Call to the Ministry," "Christmas and Home," "Companionship With a Great Idea."

D. W. Newsom has done a valuable piece of work in the collecting and editing these "Chapel Talks" of the brilliant and inimitable Kilgo. All his old students will want the book, so will his numerous friends and admirers throughout the country and all lovers of a good book that hasn't a dull sentence in it and that is worth many times its cost.

Lamar & Barton, Nashville, Tenn., are the publishers. The book may be had of the Advocate Publishing Company, Greensboro, N. C. Price $1.25.

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN IS NOW ON

The Advocate is not accustomed to talk about itself. We have not for almost a year even mentioned the matter of the renewal of subscriptions. No plea for new subscribers has been entered. We have printed no opinions from eminent church leaders as to the unspeakable value of the church paper. The public has been denied excerpts from letters which reach us with words of encouragement and flattery concerning the superior excellence of the Advocate. Such excerpts might have been given by the hundreds, but we have studiously avoided everything that had the appearance of "talking shop."

The time has come now when we must say a few things about ourselves. For the Advocate is now entering upon its revival campaign. Methodism cannot get along without revivals and all things Methodist must lean heavily upon the revival campaign. This is both natural and logical. He who expects to move on a dead level will find after a while that he is not moving at all. The Advocate, like all other things Methodist, falls in with the approved methods of campaigning.

Through the loyalty and zeal of our friends for the last two years the Advocate has at this season of the year enjoyed eminently successful campaigns which have added more than 10,000 new names to our list of subscribers. These subscriptions expire within the next month or two and we must look after their renewal, for we do not wish to lose one of them. And in order to do this there must be a special effort put forth by pastors and other church leaders. Right at this point, therefore, is one of the important tasks of the present campaign.

Then in almost every pastoral charge there are large numbers of people who will become subscribers and readers of the paper, if they only have their attention directed to the paper and to its indispensable value to all who care to be intelligent Methodists. These should be given an opportunity to subscribe for the Advocate.

It is inspiring to know that the Methodist church from Hot Springs to Hatteras, or better, from Murphy to Manteo, has set itself to the important task of placing the Advocate in the homes of our people. The paper goes now to 25,000 homes, but the number must be increased if we keep pace with a growing church and minister as we should to the needs of our people. The church paper ought to go into every home.

A great number of the pastors are beginning to talk the Advocate campaign and are laying plans for the work. Quite a few have already written saying that their respective charges will make a good showing when the time comes to submit their report.

We expect this to be one of the most successful of all the Advocate campaigns, because the people are coming with each passing month to a better appreciation of the paper.

THE OLD LOG SCHOOL HOUSE

To most men and women beyond fifty years of age the old log school house is a vivid if not a precious memory. To the boys and girls of the present day it is an inscrutable mystery. Trained in the modern school buildings with vestibules, hallways, cloak rooms, modern desks and oftentimes steam heat and electric lights, the youth of today cannot form an adequate and accurate conception of those makeshifts of houses where their grandparents went to school.

On the shores of the Yadkin river in Davidson county has been erected a replica of the cabin in which Daniel Boone lived before he moved to Kentucky in the beginning of that career which made him the outstanding figure among American backwoodsmen. Why not build for the benefit of the rising generation a replica of those old log school houses with the big open fireplace, old straight back chair for the teacher, slab seats for the scholars—didn't have pupils in those days—and the ever memorable desk in the back end of the single room house where the chinking and daubing had been knocked out to let the light fall through the crack upon the children's copybooks as they learned the fine art of writing. Build the replica, for we should not despise those primitive school houses even if a more glorious day has arrived.

What a revolution has taken place in North Carolina in the matter of school buildings! The present building program of the state will add eight hundred new structures at a cost of $25,000,000. Think of it! Right here where a generation or two ago the old log house held dominion, now millions are being spent for the education of the children of North Carolina. This means much for our state. Among other things it calls for trained ministers. An ignorant man need not get a license to preach because there is no place for him.

THE USUAL AMOUNT OF GUSH

With the approach of Lincoln's birthday, February 12, some of the northern papers are indulging their usual extravagance of speech and emotional excesses about Abraham Lincoln. It seems that this annual gush would become undesirable to the most ardent admirers of that great American, whose life and character was a standing rebuke to such.

One paper has carried the parallel between Abraham Lincoln and Jesus Christ. We are expecting some editor or contributor to declare that Lincoln was greater than Jesus and then proceed to show wherein this is true. It is sure to come sooner or later. Lincoln was the typical American and a great man whose name is honored by all who are able to appreciate real greatness, but all this tinsel and gilding of his reputation with words seems to be in deplorably bad taste, if nothing more.

A PRESIDING ELDER GOES IN TO WIN

Rev. C. B. Culbreth, presiding elder of the Elizabeth City district, starts right.

My Dear Fellow Workers:

Listen here! "In brief the plan is: that the Advocate is to give five free trips to Lake Junaluska next summer. Two to the North Carolina conference, two to the Western North Carolina conference and one to the conference which secures the largest number of new subscribers and renewals during the months of February, March and April of this year, on a percentage basis, the presiding elders of the conference which wins the trip, will name the person who is to receive benefit of it.

The two districts in each conference which secures the largest number on a percentage basis will have the privilege through the presiding elder, district lay leader and one other person to be appointed by the presiding elder, to name the person or persons who are to be beneficiaries of this offer."

I directed the Advocate campaign against the Biblical Recorder in the Rockingham district in 1921 and in the Durham district in 1922, and each of these districts won first place in the North Carolina conference. And now the Advocate folks have asked me to direct the campaign in the Elizabeth City district.

I am sure every pastor in the district is anxious to win one of these trips for himself, or some of his people. We must win one of them. Each pastor may work out his own plan. But the most successful that I have known is the following: Let the pastor appoint a committee in each of his churches of his most enthusiastic workers. This committee should be divided into two teams. These teams may compete with each other for the largest number of subscriptions. The defeated team may entertain the successful team with a social and refreshments. I am Sincerely yours,

C. B. Culbreth.

Brother Culbreth writes us: "This is just a STARTER. If we do not get one of your trips, we will know the reason why. The foregoing letter has gone out to all the preachers in the district."

A man who has never been defeated in an Advocate campaign, as is the case with C. B. Culbreth, can speak with confidence. With this presiding elder leading those pastors and splendid people of the "Albemarle Country" we may expect great things from the Elizabeth City district in the coming campaign. Hurrah for Culbreth and his cohorts!

"TO THE LAW AND THE TESTIMONY"

All good citizens render a willing obedience to the laws of the land. All good Methodists desire to know the laws of their church and to be subject thereto. For that reason as we stand upon the threshold of our Advocate campaign, we are herewith giving the law of our church as it relates to the conference organs. The following is copied from the latest edition of the Discipline:

"For the better instruction of our members and for the promotion of all annual conference enterprises, as well as the general work of the church, let conference organs be maintained by groups of annual conferences, or by a single annual conference where conditions require it, and, when necessary, let assessments be made for the support of these organs. By means of the budget plan, or in some other practical way, let each church put the conference organ into every Methodist home. Let the circulation of church periodicals and the distribution of Christian literature be diligently and faithfully promoted by pastors and official members. Let each pastor report, for insertion in the conference statistics, the number of Methodist families in his charge and the number of conference organs and general organs taken, and the amount raised for the circulation of these organs."

"Prophecies differ according to the temperament. A woman was asked, 'Where is your husband?' She answered, 'If the ice is as thick as he thinks it is, he is skating; if it is as thin as I think it is, he is swimming.'"

PEOPLE AND THINGS

The following is from Rev. W. G. Lowe, pastor at Plymouth: "Two teams have been appointed in Plymouth to push the Advocate campaign. The leader of one team is Mrs. Inez Willorford and the leader of the other team is Miss Ruth Ayers, both of Plymouth." A good start. Let others follow this example.

The "flu" germ that the Rockefeller Institute has separated is so small that it must be magnified 1,000 times before it becomes visible under the microscope, and it passes readily through the walls of the filters of the laboratory. These facts add to the absurdity of wearing a mask of cloth, as was done by some in the first great epidemic to prevent contagion. That was just about as effective as it would be to attempt to raise gnats in a bird cage.

Brother W D Wilkinson in his address at the men's Bible class banquet of Tryon Street, Charlotte, gave that fine company of men much to think about and the class is fortunate to have such a consecrated and enthusiastic president. He emphasized in his address the need of consecration, the place of revivals as the one great agency in the making of Methodism and of the urgent demand for better facilities in order to properly care for the growing Sunday school in his church.

Rev. J. H. Frizelle of Raeford is in good humor and writes as follows: "The new year has started nicely. Plans considered and adopted by the quarterly conference for advanced work during the year. Sunday school work to have special attention as we have been doing. Salary ample and all collections in hands of board of stewards to be handled by them. Elder in high favor, and justly so. Some talk of new church buildings in the near future. Advocate in good favor. Come over soon and we will let you preach one of your old sermons to a good congregation. This means either of you."

The death last Thursday morning of Mr. David H. Anderson of Charlotte removes a prominent figure from the city and his departure is mourned by a host of friends. He had been a steward in Tryon Street church 40 years, his business interests were extensive and his friends numerous. He had been a citizen of Charlotte 50 years, having come to the city at the age of 19 from Statesville, where he was born and spent his childhood years. His parents were Thomas C. and Nancy R. Anderson. He was one of a family of brothers who have made a great record for themselves in the social, industrial, professional and religious life of North Carolina.

Rev. S. E. Richardson, pastor of the China Grove charge, is preparing for a great day Sunday, February 18. Mrs. Grace McCubbins Ross will address the Sunday school at 10 o'clock. At 11 o'clock Dr. T. F. Marr, the presiding elder, will preach and follow the sermon with the second quarterly conference. Mrs. D. A. Beaver will speak at two o'clock and Mrs. E. H. Miller at 2:30 in the afternoon. Rev. T. A. Sikes, business manager of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, will preach at night. The day is to be a general rally day with special emphasis on missions and the Advocate campaign. Everybody of the community is being urged to attend.

The students' recital that was given last Monday evening in Odell Memorial building at Greensboro College attracted a splendid audience. It was the seventh recital for the year. According to the announcements by Prof. Church 98 compositions have been given, 48 students have played piano solos and eight have sung solos. It was an exceptionally well balanced program with students from all of the teachers in all departments. Some unusual talent was brought out, all of the students appearing for the first time in these recitals. The school this year has taken a great step forward in bringing before the public these students, many of them with marked talent, and all showing careful training. The following took part: Violinist, Miss Annie Lu Jackson, Greensboro; vocalists, Misses Dorothy Waldrop, Hendersonville; Martha Anderson, Williamston; pianists, Misses Grace Curtis, Louise Womble, Elizabeth Mann, Mildred Michaux, Lorna Mae Wilson, Margaret Barnhardt, Greensboro; Nellie Bird Woods, Roxboro; Claire Watson, Severn; Maude Hooker, Kinston; Zelda Barnes, Clayton; Ruth Hoyle, Cornelius.

Work, suspended some time ago on the big annex of the Forest Hill Methodist church, will be resumed at once and the enterprise rushed to completion. This was the enthusiastic decision of the church at the regular preaching service yesterday morning. The pastor spoke very briefly and turned the meeting over to the congregation. There were no set speeches, but a large number spoke with unusual feeling and pledged themselves to pay the outstanding subscriptions on the building fund and continue the work till it is done. When the last touch has been put upon this building it will be one of the largest and best arranged churches in this section of the state.—Concord Times.

A total of 285868 additional spindles were installed in cotton mills in the South during the year 1922, 154,996, considerably more than half the total, being installed in North Carolina mills. A total of 807,720 spindles will be installed in Southern cotton mills during the present year. Of this number 583,760 will be installed in North Carolina mills. North Carolina leads the entire South in the total number of cotton mills, having a total of 501 mills with 5,530,188 spindles, 78,000 looms and 18,290 knitting machines. It may be deduced from the figures given that North Carolina installed more than 50 per cent of all the spindles installed in the South last year. She will install more than 72 per cent of the spindles being installed in the South during this year. She installed 37 per cent of the knitting machines installed last year.

The call in last week's Advocate by Rev. G. T. Bond, the pastor of Spring Garden street church, to the Methodists of North Carolina to assist in the struggle to lift the heavy debt is meeting with a generous response. We give a letter written by a prominent physician of High Point. He writes as follows: "Mrs. _____ was reading the call to subscribers of the Advocate to come to the help of Spring Garden church, and she asked me to send her dollar, and along with hers I enclose one also. I think the suggestion one of the best I have heard in a long time. No one will feel the cost, and the amount would liquidate half or more of the indebtedness of the church. I hope every subscriber will answer with the dollar." Hundreds of readers will doubtless be glad to answer this call. Write W. A. Mann, Greensboro, N. C.

It is reported that Dr. Roy Nelson has made a discovery that will eventually save millions of dollars to the farmers of the United States. "This discovery affects plant diseases in the so-called mosaic disease in plants. According to the American Association for the Advancement of Science these diseases annually destroy 30 per cent of the potato crop in America, and large proportions of the tomato, bean, lettuce and clover and tobacco crops. This discovery is considered by scientists to be the most important discovery in the study of plant diseases made in the United States during the past 20 years. Dr. Nelson is 30 years of age, and has been a student at the University of Michigan for two years." Dr. Nelson is a son of W. P. Nelson and a grandson of Rev. J. S. Nelson, a well known member in other years of the Western North Carolina conference.

In our last issue appeared a line or two from a Methodist who criticised the public installation of a board of stewards. As a result we are in receipt of a letter from a brother who says, "As you print it without a name I presume that you approve the sentiment expressed and assume responsibility for it." This assumption of our brother is without a basis of fact. For we do not agree with all our correspondents write, neither do we withhold from publication everything that is out of harmony with our own opinions. Our policy is to allow as large freedom of expression to our people as is possible for a church organ. Frequently at the request of a correspondent we withhold the name and designate the writer by some other method, but that does not imply that we assume responsibility for his opinions. In the instance under discussion we did not at all indorse the objections offered to the installation of stewards. On the contrary, we think the practice good. Some churches have been at it for years and it has worked well. The public installation of the officers of the Woman's Missionary Society has also become the annual practice of some churches. Nothing new in all this. Our surprise is that such an incidental matter of extensive practice should have produced any discussion either pro or con.

If any reader of the Advocate knows where some good second hand church seats can be bought at a reasonable price, please write to Rev. H. E. Lance, Elizabethtown, N. C.

Upon the insistent invitation of Col. Geo. H. Bellamy and Mr. J. L. Beal, of Raleigh, Rev. J. Frank Armstrong of Concord has accepted the chairmanship of Cabarrus county in the Near East campaign. Mr. Armstrong was chairman of Cabarrus last year and was able to roll up a surplus above our quota of nearly 50 per cent. Word comes from Raleigh that the people in every part of the state are responding with a liberality never before known.

Wednesday morning just before going to press we received a message from Bro. V. P. Scoville, pastor at Greenville, saying that Mrs. Scoville had undergone an operation Tuesday afternoon for appendicitis. Her condition does not appear to be serious and the surgeon hopes for a speedy recovery. It was only a few weeks ago that Brother Scoville's oldest son was stricken with appendicitis accompanied by complications that resulted in his death. Brother Scoville and his family are being sorely tried. We trust that Mrs. Scoville may speedily recover from this attack which does not appear to be dangerous in its nature.

NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE MINUTES

The Minutes of the North Carolina conference were mailed out just before Christmas, but I find that a number of the preachers failed to receive their package. If any one from from whom I have not yet heard has still not received his allotment, and he will notify me, I will be glad to mail him another package. R. H. Willis, Secretary.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE

The executive committee of the Board of Church Extension of the Western North Carolina conference will meet in the pastor's study of West Market Street M. E. church, Greensboro, Tuesday afternoon, March 6, at 2 o'clock.

Only applications for loans and donations which are to go to the General Board of Church Extension will be considered at this time.

Applicants for loans and donations are requested to mail applications to the secretary promptly, so they may be presented to the executive committee on the above date. Those wishing to appear before the committee are at liberty to do so.

J. H. Barnhardt, President.

Fred C. Odell, Secretary,
P. O. Box 137, Greensboro, N. C.

DR. MARVIN L. SMOOT IS DEAD

The death last Tuesday, February 6, of Dr. Marvin L. Smoot of Fayetteville came to us unexpectedly and will be a cause of sorrow to his many friends throughout the state. He was a physician of great ability. Several years at the beginning of his career he was located at Spencer and engaged in the general practice of medicine. Eleven years ago he moved to Fayetteville, N. C., and confined his practice to the eye, ear, nose and throat, being associated with Drs. J. M. Lilly and W. S. Jordan.

Dr. Smoot achieved a splendid reputation in his profession and was a citizen of the highest standing. He was active in church work. At the time of his death he was superintendent of the Sunday school of Hay Street Methodist church and an influential member of the board of stewards.

Few men held the confidence and esteem of the community in greater degree than did Dr. Smoot. He served in the medical corps of the army during the war.

Dr. Smoot leaves as wife, formerly Miss Giddens, of Goldsboro, and two children, aged 16 and 14. He is also survived by three brothers and a sister, these being Dr. T. A. Smoot of Danville, Va., former pastor of the Hay Street Methodist church of Fayetteville, Dr. Edward Smoot, of Concord, and A. L. Smoot and Miss Cora Smoot, of Salisbury, of which city Dr. Smoot was a native.

To the stricken family we extend our deepest and tenderest sympathies, as we mourn the departure of Dr. Smoot.

"God be thanked for books; they are voices of the distant and the dead and make us heirs of the spiritual life of past ages."—Channing.

WHERE DO YOU FIND GOD?

In the same room on the same bed, in a little house beside a country road where only the neighbors came and went, lay, for seventeen years, a woman acquainted only with plain people and the common ways of life. The motto, "God Bless Our Home," and two inartistic family portraits were on the walls, and a well-thumbed black Bible lay nearby on the bed. A thin, worn body with little promise of a better day ahead awaited all who called. Naturally, one expected to find a wan, sad face and to hear an undertone of complaint; but not so. A jubilant note was in the voice and the face seemed to be the face of an angel. As the thin hand fell gently and lovingly on the old Bible, a wonderful pathos gathered in the words, "I could not get along but for this good old book." The whole room was filled with a strange sense of victory for all who could enter into the life of the suffering saint.

Tolstoi turned to the Greek church to find God; then he went to the men of the cloister, but God was not there; then he sought for God in the philosophies, to be disappointed again. Finally, he turned to the plain people with their long centuries of devoted living and he found God in the hearts of the plain people. By this he learned that God is in the hearts of men—of all men. In this respect Tolstoi was a good Methodist.

THE CHURCH AT THE UNIVERSITY

The joint commission charged with building the new Methodist church at Chapel Hill has approved plans on which one of the first architects of the country has given more than a year's study. After two trips from New York to study fully the local situation, the architect, Mr. Gamball Rodgers, concluded that the colonial type best fitted the situation at Chapel Hill, and he has made drawings and photographs which will soon be in shape to give to the people of North Carolina. This will be done at an early day.

A gentleman who knows North Carolina like a book and has traveled around the world says this will be the prettiest church in the state. The commission hopes that it may meet the expectation of the thousands interested as well as fill the urgent need at the University of the state.

THE INMOST CORE OF METHODISM

Shall we stress that which has sent the followers of Wesley on a victorious crusade around the world, calling for holiness of heart and life? Or, must we turn our attention to caring for the fringes of the Methodist garment? The vestments of religion had a front place in England when the Wesleyan revival began in the heart of John Wesley and his collaborators. Stress was put upon all that made for regularity in church and creed and ritual. The Pharisees were then and are always ready to compass land and sea to make proselytes. The outside and the incidentals of religion are put above the spirit and life. This makes the Pharisee, both ancient and modern.

Could we always remember that Christianity did not spring from the New Testament but the New Testament from Christianity, we would be saved from many false conclusions. Christianity began as a religion of the spirit with the Spirit of God guiding from within those who had the mind of Christ. It did not begin as a religion of books, but a religion of the spirit. Soon, books resulted and an organization began to take shape. Back to the things of the spirit, of the inner life, went John Wesley when his heart was strangely warmed and Methodism was born. That little Englishman, with his heart aglow, could take his stand in the midst of the formal and corrupt eighteenth century and say, "We think and let think." Sure of God and unafraid, he could join hands with all who would be saved from sin unto holiness of heart and life.

This does not say that Wesley had no creed. He did. The thirty-nine articles of the church of England were his, but he proceeded to cut out fourteen of these; he had the King James version of the Bible, but he proceeded to make a version of his own; he had a reverence for the church and its Order of Service that went beyond all of his day, but he took to the streets and the open fields. Above creed and dogma and ritual went the things of the spirit. Could John Wesley hear the contentions of some who strive for certain shiboleths which they have made essential, could he know of the vituperations hurled against all who differ from them, how his righteous soul would flame with indignation because of the false emphasis. They are placing the stress on the non-essential rather than upon the real core and heart of religion.

Why in every age should there arise those who feel a divine commission to defend their views of the Bible and of Jesus and of His church as though these needed any such defense? Is it because their own spiritual life has perished and they are content with the outer casement? Or, is it the outcropping of a foolish egotism? This is not so strange for those who make essential a certain dogma, or rite, or ritual, or institution; but, for a Methodist who has been taught that the new wine is always going into new bottles, that the spirit and the life are the essentials, that the externals are but the chaff, it passes belief. He has God and Jesus and his own soul. These remain though all else perish.

Many of the fathers knew not enough to be troubled about the passing of the things that can be shaken, but they did know Jesus as precious to their own souls and could shout and sing and pray. They were not even self-righteous enough to quarrel with all who did not agree with them; but they did win victories because they held fast to the core of Methodism. The rest took care of itself.

AN UNUSUAL MASS MEETING

The gathering of a representative group of the citizens of Durham in a mass meeting to consider the proposition for the medical school which is just now enlisting so much interest in North Carolina was unusual in the spirit displayed and in the proposition proposed.

The offer of the Watts hospital, which with its holdings totals $2,000,000; the twenty-eight acres adjoining the hospital, suited for a site; the $500,000 from the city of Durham for the first buildings needed; the $3,500,000 for endowment were enough to make the evening notable. Not often more than $6,000,000 is offered to the state of North Carolina for any one enterprise. Has it ever been done in the history of the state?

But better than the offer of tangible resources was the spirit manifest. Mention was made of the recent offer of the city of Charlotte to the University School of Medicine and several speakers took occasion to pay tribute to the Queen City for its fine enterprise and splendid citizenship. Moreover, in all the discussion, an earnest desire to make possible an institution that would serve all the people of all this section of our land found expression again and again. No religious lines of cleavage or institutional alignment should be allowed to interfere with this effort to minister to human needs, especially the needs that would be served by a medical school that would be second to none in all the land. Nothing can be more effective in building a community spirit and fined in developing a great people than such an unusual mass meeting as that held in Durham January 29, 1923.

THE REVIVAL OF THE COLONIAL

A distinct revival of the colonial in architecture is apparent wherever there is building enterprise. After a period when the turret and cupola were displayed on the four corners of so many dwellings, now there is a distinct relief in the quiet dignity of the plainer structure.

Since the taste of a majority of Americans is demanding a return to the simple lines in home-building, it is worth while to consider the lady of the manor and her personal characteristics in contrast to the woman of today.

Woman must, in a measure, be shaped by the period in which she lives, but still she has a certain independence of being which no period of history has the power to overthrow. Despite many conditions to the contrary, certain women of every nation have proven that they can think out a life and live it. However, it is the woman who first lived in the colonial homes of our nation that is to be considered at this time.

In our commonwealth she first settled and lived in the Albemarle section which developed from the Jamestown colony. Her ancestors being English for centuries, naturally her tastes were decidedly English. It was not enough to be the lady of the house; she also desired to be the lady of the out-of-doors. Just as essential to her happiness as the china tea-set, was the garden in which grew vegetables and herbs—sweet marjoram, thyme, sweet basil, catnip and lavender—as well as the old fashion pinks, the lilies, roses, lilacs, blue-bottles, hyacinths and jonquils. She had a passion for the sweet-smelling plants that grew; bunches of lavender were carefully laid in her linen chests and between her vari-colored bed spreads, quilted in fancy designs; and as she went about her premises every one would know that—

"She was there

By the fragrance in the air,"

for her toilet was never considered complete without a drop or two of her favorite perfume.

She wore elegant clothes, but you recall that the ladies in the days of the Edenton tea-party were much incensed when public mention was made of their costumes. In their estimation it was vulgar to speak of a lady's wearing apparel.

This lady of the early days didn't try to run all the men out of public office, but she had her own ideas and she made them grow. Yes, she made her ideas to grow into the citizenship of the nation.

It is interesting to note what use she made of many an old adage.

In expressing her ideal of a woman, she would say: "A lady in the parlor and a lady in the kitchen;" to teach the rising generation thrift, she would say: "When poverty comes in at the door, love flies out at the window." Often she would express disapproval of the flirt by repeating: "Pick and choose and the best refuse."

Though she did not seek the public platform herself, yet she enjoyed the orators of her day, especially those of the pulpit. She conscientiously believed that those men received their messages from above and, for that reason, she gave them a reverence peculiarly their own. To have her minister in her home was one of her chief joys and the best of everything was spread before him.

Would that her clear judgment, her refined taste, her dignified manner, her quiet, persuasive personality might penetrate the lives of our modern women!

MEETING OF THE PRESIDING ELDERS AT CHARLOTTE

More than twenty elders met in Charlotte at the call of Bishop Denny to consider with Dr. Cram and Secretary Courtney of North Carolina and the secretary from South Carolina the matter of Centenary collections. The urgency of this move was fully realized by all and due consideration given to the matter in hand. But this is not the item of note at this time.

Passing over the men from South Carolina, one can but feel grateful for the twenty men who are in charge of the districts in the two North Carolina conferences. They are not men noted for unusual endowments in any particular. There is not a scholar among them, as the reckoning of the schools go; no one of the number has any reputation as a theologian; the silver tongued orator belongs not to the group; and no one boasts of being perfect. These twenty Methodist preachers, devoted to their work and the calling wherewith they are called, are trying in all fidelity to keep up the rounds of their daily tasks in town and country place in promoting the work among the more than two hundred and twenty-five thousand Methodists scattered from Murphy to Manteo. An equal number of Methodist preachers could be found in the two conferences who would do the work equally as well, but not with more devotion to the tasks assigned them.

As one who has had some experience in all fields of service in town and country, as pastor and presiding elder, we are free to say that were every Methodist preacher to work as hard as the average presiding elder, few charges would be found falling behind for want of a preacher who is on his job.

A TRIBUTE TO LITTLE ROBERT STOCKS

"Only a baby's grave—
A foot or two at the most,
Of tear bedewed sod:
But a loving God
Knows what the little grave cost."

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Stocks of Leaksville was full of joy at Christmas, for dear little Robert, their only child, just twenty-five months old, was so happy in the new experiences which Christmas brings to childhood. Little did we think then that the earthly life of this lovely child was so nearly at an end. Indeed we know not what a day may bring forth. Very soon after the dawn of the new year fatal disease preyed upon him and on the sixth of January his pure spirit left its casket of clay and winged its flight to the upper and better country.

He was a bright and beautiful child—the favorite of many friends—and when it was known that his brief pilgrimage was closed a pall of sadness fell upon the whole community.

We can't fathom the mysteries of Providence. Now we see through a glass darkly, but some day we shall understand the secrets, which for a season the good Father wisely keeps from us.

We know the child is safe in the shelter of the fold. Safe in the arms of Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

After a fitting funeral service in the presence of many friends we laid the little body in the grave to sleep until the resurrection morning, and covered the grave with floral offerings abundant and beautiful.

Sorrow fills the parents' hearts, but through the gloom and shadow they can grasp the meaning of the blessed promises and hope sometime, somewhere, for an eternal reunion.

"Only a baby's life—
Brief as a perfumed kiss,
So fleet it goes:
But our Father knows
We are nearer to Him for this."
William L. Sherrill.

PAUL DECATUR ANTHONY

By Beverly Wilson.

Paul Decatur Anthony was born October 24, 1897. He joined the M. E. Church, South, when but a boy. He had hardly reached majority when he heard and answered the call to the ministry. Brother Anthony believed that a call to the ministry was also a call to preparation for that great work. Accordingly, by the aid of a devoted father he entered Rutherford College as a ministerial student and graduated from the high school department May 11, 1920, and on May 10, 1922, he finished the college course of that institution.

Brother Anthony seemed especially gifted in making friends wherever he went; consequently he soon had a host of warm-hearted, loyal and devoted friends among his schoolmates and other associates.

While yet in school he was married to Miss Anna Bell, who became his worthy companion for life, to share his burdens and rejoice in his triumphs.

At the district conference of the Shelby district, held at King's Mountain last spring, he was recommended to the annual conference for admission on trial.

Brother Anthony was received on trial into the Western North Carolina conference at the session of that body, held in Monroe, October 18-23, 1922, and was appointed by Bishop Collins Denny to the Mars Hill charge. He went to his work with a buoyant spirit and glad heart and assumed the responsibilities of pastor.

With great faith, hope and courage he at once set to work to build up that part of the kingdom, which had been committed to his care. He found that his charge had no parsonage in which to house the pastor. With a stout heart and willing hands he launched a movement to build. The holiday season found him in the midst of this work, which he laid down as he thought temporarily, to visit his devoted father and mother and other relatives in his native county. But alas, he was stricken with typhoid fever in a fatal illness. After lingering for several weeks, in spite of all that loving hands and medical skill could do his stalwart frame yielded to the ravages of the disease, his stout heart grew still, and the spirit of Paul Decatur Anthony returned to God who gave it.

When he was called from labor to reward January 24, 1923, he was twenty-five years, three months and five days of age.

Besides his father, mother, wife and little son, he leaves three brothers and three sisters to mourn his departure.

"It is not death to die,
To leave this weary road;
And 'midst the Brotherhood on high,
To be at peace with God."

He was laid to rest on Sunday, January 28, 3 p. m., at Salem church near Shelby, in the presence of the largest congregation that ever gathered there.

THE INSTALLATION OF STEWARDS

In the North Carolina Christian Advocate of January 25th a Methodist asks "Whither are we drifting?" because he has witnessed the installation of a board of stewards.

This Methodist wants to know why our stewards and trustees as well should not be ordained or in some way set apart for their special work. I believe we are in greater danger of putting too little stress on the offices of our church than we are of magnifying them. Let the church know who its stewards are and who are its trustees. A simple ordination service would tend to make these officers feel more keenly the obligations of their office and hence be more diligent in the performance of duty.

Not long ago a member of the board of trustees of a certain Methodist church was asked if he considered the heating plant in his church safe. "I don't know anything about it" was his reply. On being told that he was one of the trustees and should know he replied, "I did not know it."

If he had been ordained even in the simplest manner he would at least have known he was a trustee. Another Methodist.

IS IT JUST?

For more than a quarter of a century I have been a member of the Board of Finance of the North Carolina conference, and for almost a score of years I have been secretary of the board. As secretary of the board it devolved upon me to secure information concerning the conditions and needs of claimants on the funds to be apportioned by the board. This information was secured directly from the claimants and from the pastors of the claimants. Many times during these years, alone in my study, as I read the letters from the claimants, my head and heart have been deeply pained at the tone of the letters. Feeling and realizing their actual need for larger apportionments, after stating their cases in detail, they made their appeal for an increase. Looking and praying over the letters from the claimants, and then considering the amount we would have to distribute, I knew that it would require ten times as much as the board would have to make the allowances asked for, though they were entirely reasonable. In very rare cases there has been mild complaint, but almost without exception the claimants have thankfully accepted the amounts sent to them and made no complaint.

But the statements above made are preliminary to something else. As a rule men, preachers and laymen, with whom I have been associated on this board have been sympathetic friends of the claimants, and very much concerned about the important work they had in hand. But one thing I have noticed at our annual meetings that always grated on my feelings, and I have several times spoken of it. In many cases when the name of a claimant was called, and his representation of his case made known to the board, the question was asked: "Has he not a son who is making good money?" or "Has she not a daughter whose husband holds a good position?" In some cases it is true that claimants have children who are able to aid them, and in many cases they have been bound to do it, or see them suffer for the necessities of life. In many cases, probably all cases, I have no doubt the children gladly procured for their fathers and mothers, now incapacitated for any sort of service, the necessities of life. But is it just that the children, who in many cases have claims of their own upon them, should be compelled to care for their parents who gave their lives in service to the church they loved? Furthermore, is it just to subject the claimants to this feeling of dependence upon their children for the bread they eat?

The allowance now made to claimants on this fund is considerably larger than it was when I first became a member of the board, but even now it is scarcely enough to pay the rent for a house in which to live.

In a few cases, by closest economy, preachers while active provide a home in which to spend their declining years, but in most cases these homes are not all paid for, and when salary ceases there is no way for them to make further payments, and they are disturbed by thoughts of meeting the next payments.

I am glad a movement is on foot to do a better part by claimants on this sacred fund. I know the Head of the Church is pleased with the movement, and I feel quite sure it will succeed.

J. A. Hornaday.

A STEP FORWARD IN HOSPITAL WORK

Thos. A. Smoot.

The General Hospital Board met January 17, in Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, to outline a policy and lay plans for the further development of this important interest of the church. Rev. C. C. Selecman, D. D., of Dallas, Texas, was elected executive secretary, with headquarters in Atlanta. He is expected to enter upon his active duties not later than February 15.

Dr. Selecman brings to his new office an aggressive spirit, a wide experience, and a deep interest in the matter of building hospitals, developing a literature on the subject, and of enlisting the sympathy and support of the people in this most worthy cause. The new secretary comes from the pastorate, where he has rendered distinguished service. Just now his church in Dallas is in the midst of a great building enterprise, and will no doubt feel keenly the loss of his leadership. However, the larger interest of the church at large seemed to demand his services.

The board went on record, by resolution, as favoring the establishment of two great tuberculosis sanitariums, one in the west and one in the east. The latter would seem logically to belong to that wonderful country around Asheville, so famous as a resort for the sick. It would seem that eastern conferences might well concentrate upon such an enterprise. If the hospital boards of those conferences in the Carolinas and Virginia, and perhaps others, would unite upon this interest, it seems apparent that the large constituency embraced in those areas would respond with liberality and enthusiasm to the establishment and support of a great institution in life, might find hope and healing.

We must make a beginning somewhere. And a great objective is inspirational. The formation of Golden Cross societies in our congregations, with even the contribution of one dollar a member, as annual dues, would work wonders. Twenty per cent of the money so raised would go to the General Board, while eighty per cent would be retained by the Hospital Board of the annual conference for furthering its own work.

Dr. Selecman will render every possible help to the church at large in organizing Golden Cross societies, and in developing interest in the hospital movement. The secretary's office is 416 Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, Ga. Leaflets and Golden Cross membership cards may be had on application, along with helpful suggestions as to procedure.

N. C. CONFERENCE CHURCH EXTENSION

The executive meeting of the Board of Church Extension for the N. C. conference is called to meet in Durham at Memorial church on March 13th, the hour of one o'clock p. m. All applications to the General Board must be in hand at that time as the General Board will not consider an application which has not been endorsed by this committee, and this is your last chance this year.

Let any pastor who has not his application in write to Rev. J. E. Holden, Kenly, for application blanks, and see that every question is answered and the blank questions filled out properly, and countersigned by the elder. You will find blank space in the application for any statement, and this is much preferable to writing a separate letter which may be detached from the report and application.

CENTENARY EMERGENCY CAMPAIGN

The object of the Centenary Emergency Campaign is to reach every church with the good news of the success that has attended the work of the Centenary in all our mission fields and to make a special effort in every church to collect the payments due on the Centenary. This campaign is on and will continue through April. Pastors, lay leaders and Centenary treasurers are urged to co-operate in this undertaking. Our people ought to know of the work being done by the Centenary workers and when this knowledge is carried to our people at large the Centenary pledges will be paid.

A team of strong Centenary speakers will spend a month in North Carolina, March the 9th to April 8th. They will be able to reach only a part of our churches, but we ought to be able to give a majority of our church membership an opportunity to hear these interesting and helpful speakers. Each member of the team of six will speak twice on Sundays, and during the week the team will be divided into teams of two each, and will speak each night during the week. Below is the itinerary:

FINES CREEK CIRCUIT

I reached my circuit in time to fill the appointment at Fines Creek church the first Sunday in November. I had a fine congregation and a warm reception. Bro. D. R. Noland brought our goods out in time for us to have things in good shape by November 16, when my family came.

The good ladies had prepared a nice, warm supper before our arrival.

My wife and daughter were taken sick soon after they came. Then for about two weeks I had to wait on the sick and keep house. But the good neighbors would come in about once a day, cook us something to eat and help me clean up the house. We were fortunate in having as our nearest neighbor Dr. W. A. Graham. He was ever ready to do what he could.

We have had influenza about all over the circuit. I have buried two infants at White Oak, one lady at Fines Creek Baptist church, and Sister Graham, wife of Dr. W. A. Graham, at Fines Creek Methodist church.

Have they pounded you? I think they have. They have pounded us with a fine cow and rough feed to feed her all winter. Then with all kinds of good things to eat, and some of the best wood I ever saw to cook with. And still the good things come.

We have served good people before, but it seems to me these are the kindest people we have ever served. The travel is a little hard for me now. I had not been on a horse's back in about fifteen years, but now I ride a horse about ten miles to C taloochee, and walk and lead my horse up the mountain for about a mile. But I sure enjoy preaching to those people over there when I get there. One brother said, "I am glad you are here, but it is a heavy work for you." If I could call back twenty years I could stand it better. A car is not worth much in the winter time here, but they furnish a horse whenever I need one free of charge. The people are kind and appreciative and I am going to do the best I can for them.

N. M. Modlin, P. C.

THE PEOPLE OF TODD CIRCUIT GOOD TO THEIR PREACHER

After spending two pleasant years on the Fines Creek circuit we arrived at Todd, N. C., on November 7. We found no parsonage and for that reason we were some time getting straightened out to housekeeping. We have purchased a nice little parsonage and have most all the furnishings and just a plenty in the pantry. We went to housekeeping about Thanksgiving Day, and Thanksgiving evening the people of Blackburn's Chapel gave us a real nice pounding, and on Saturday before Christmas the people of Bowie sent us another nice pounding and before we had hardly had time to make room for the second pounding a third one came from the good people of Hopewell. The poundings consisted of flour, meat, beans, potatoes, sugar, lard, apples, cabbage and canned goods in abundance. For all this we are very grateful and by the help of God we hope to be able to make this circuit one among the best circuits in the North Wilkesboro district. We have received on profession of faith fourteen and two by certificate, and we are making plans to build a church at Bowie, which is so badly needed. We have made our second round and find the field white to harvest, but we have a few faithful members who will stand by us in this great work. We are praying and looking forward to a great revival on the Todd circuit this year.

T. G. Williams, P. C.

YANCEYVILLE

Yanceyville, located in the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains, is the county seat of Caswell county. In the distance you can hear the whistle of the locomotive, for that "monstrous horse of civilization that devours coal and snorts fire" has never disturbed this quiet little village. The older citizens here have longed for and dreamed of the coming railroad for the past seventy years, but it did not come. The sand clay road has arrived—a road more costly than former railroads and many times more valuable. Fifteen minutes takes us to the railroad station by automobile. Not many of us go to the station, but travel in our own automobiles. Yanceyville no longer needs a railroad. In earlier days this town was one of the centers of North Carolina. In the year 1800 Yanceyville had a population of 2000. Not many of our towns had so large a population in those early days. As late as 1850 Caswell county ranged second in importance among the counties of the state. Our present courthouse was erected in 1859. When built this court house had no equal among the court houses of the state. The architecture of this building is one of the best specimens in the whole Southern states.

We have three historic church buildings, Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian. I will write more about the churches later. I am writing now about the material side of our town and county. Quite a number of nice dwellings have been erected in recent years. Many more will be erected in the near future. Our handsome new bank building is nearing completion. This building would do credit to a town of 5000 inhabitants and we only have a few hundred.

The contract has been let for a $30,000 high school building which will be rushed to completion. The court house square, around which cluster the business houses of the town, two years ago was a red patch of clay which when it rained became a mudhole. The Daughters of the Confederacy of the county has transformed this piece of land into a park covered in lawn grass, and in the center erected a beautiful Confederate monument at a cost of about $4000.

Before I leave town and begin to tell you about the country I had better mention our Methodist parsonage. This home is located near the center of the town and is the most picturesque dwelling in Yanceyville. The lot on which the building stands is bordered by a boxwood hedge which has been kept neatly trimmed for more than a hundred years. The garden contains nearly one acre of land of the most fertile kind. Part of the garden is laid off for flowers in the old southern style. The flowers that bloom here each summer date back many years and were planted by hands long since still. The building is a large ten-room structure built of brick, stuccoed with cement, marked off in stone imitation and painted gray. We have our own gas and water plants. Yanceyville circuit purchased this home for the preacher at the cost of $10,000.

Three years ago there was not a mile of sand clay road in the county. Now we have nearly 200 miles of sand clay roads. Across one side of the county we have a hard surface road which will soon be finished. All of the towns of the county are connected by sand clay and hard surface roads. The county in a very short period of time has changed from one of the most inaccessible to one of the most accessible. The county has spent more than $500,000 in the past three years on roads, and the state will soon reach the $500,000 mark in the county and go beyond it. This will give Caswell county more than $1,000,000 in good roads.

Many of the big old ante-bellum dwellings are yet standing and are kept in good repair. Electric lights and running water are found in many of these homes. Many new dwellings are to be seen in most every community. More improvement has been made in the past four years in Caswell county than in 50 years before.

I have written more than I intended in this letter. In my next letter, which will follow this soon, I will give a short history of Methodism in Caswell and tell of the progress of the church. We not only have the best country, the best circuit parsonage, but also the best country churches in North Carolina. J. T. Standford.

THE PEOPLE READ THE ADVOCATE AND TREAT PASTOR WELL

Not being well fortified for such (only one strong) we have not received the poundings, many of the brethren seem to have had, but since coming to the Duke charge we have learned how great it is to be a Methodist preacher and live among a people who are interested in his welfare.

Our first quarterly conference was held Sunday night, January 28. Rev. R. H. Willis, our presiding elder, preached an excellent sermon, after which he administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The people of this charge read the Advocate. One said only tonight that he told his friends it was the best paper published. At annual conference fifty-eight subscribers were reported, and with Black's Chapel added the to the charge the number of the entire charge is around sixty-five.

GOOD NEWS FROM SHOAL CREEK

I wish to say through your good paper that the Lord and His good people on the Shoal Creek charge have been very good to us. This is our third year here, and the people received us on our return with open arms and such a hospitality that only the people in Western North Carolina know how to give.

The best of all though is that we have been having a real outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and are praying for and expecting more. We have had eight conversions among the Cherokee Indians and have not held our meeting with them yet.

On the second Sunday in January we began a meeting at Ravensford with Rev. T. A. Groce doing the preaching and Prof. Geo. R. Hawks doing the singing, and I want to say that I have never been associated with a better pair of men.

A CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank Rev. M. T. Smather through the Advocate for his kindness in sending us the Advocate for the past two years, which we have enjoyed very much.

Mrs. Ida Rogers and Daughters. Andrews, N. C.

MARRIAGES

On December 21, 1922, in Southport, N. C., Mr. Daniel E. Lewis of Wilmington, N. C., and Miss Gertie Lancaster of Southport were married, Rev. J. C. Whedbee officiating.

At the parsonage in Southport, January 20, 1923, Mr. Harry Robinson and Miss Florence Pigott, both of Supply, N. C., were married, Rev. J. C. Whedbee, officiating.

At the home of Mr. Alec Swain in Southport, N. C., Mr. Harry W. Andrews of Rocky Mount, N. C., and Miss Amelia Swain were married January 22, 1923, Rev. J. C. Whedbee officiating.

A COUNTRY CHURCH

The country church that keeps pace with Calvary on the Halifax circuit has got to hustle.

They have torn down the old one-room church, and in its place they are building an up-to-date church with Sunday school rooms to cost about forty-five hundred dollars, and they are paying the bill as they go with the purpose in view of having it ready to dedicate by the middle of the summer.

These good people are wide-awake in every respect. At each appointment they fill their preacher's car with good things to eat and the stewards either make a payment on the salary or say they will the next time you come, and they live up to their promise.

They are about to make monthly payments. Certainly that old saying which we have been hearing for more than a half century from a certain class of leaders, "Let the stations pay monthly and the circuits pay quarterly," ought to have never been born, for it is the duty of country people, "Upon the first day of the week . . . lay by him in store, as God has prospered him, that there be no gathering when I come, and to bring in all the tithes," as it is for the town people—and it is a gospel truth that should have had special emphasis laid on it all through the years past by both preachers and church officials.

The Master said, "If ye love me keep my commandments." And we ought to be grateful enough to keep a financial commandment as any other, especially as easy as it is to do.

Now it may be that I have made John's mistake. For after his and Mary's engagement to marry Mary said, "John, why don't you talk some more?" and John replied, "I tell you, Mary, I done and talked too much already." If I have Calvary will let you know it.

BURNSVILLE

As this is the second week I have been confined to my room with "flu," thought I would take advantage of the opportunity to write concerning my work and people. This is the first time I have missed an appointment for years on account of sickness, and have never missed but few during all my ministerial life and the first time I have missed two Sundays in succession. But this is my first experience with influenza. Have had it all around me and been with it, but never before had it.

The people of Burnsville have been exceedingly kind since we came among them and especially during my illness. I have been much hindered in getting my work organized. Before Christmas we were busy getting settled. During the holidays we had to spend the time with the children. Just after the holidays we were engaged in a meeting at Concord for two weeks. Since then we have been sick most of the time.

Our meeting at Concord resulted in twenty conversions and nine accessions to the church. It was a union meeting. Brother Namy, pastor of the Baptist church, and Brother Will Baker, local preacher in our church, assisted in the meeting.

Hon. G. E. Gardner, who has been in declining health for some time, is at Charlotte under the treatment of Dr. Lane, where he seems to be improving slowly. He is making a heroic fight for the recovery of his health. He is a man of wonderful will power and of dauntless courage. He is greatly missed in the church and town. We hope for his speedy recovery. We have not got a large membership or congregation, but have some choice spirits. The Baptists and Presbyterians have schools here under the control of their churches. This gives them the advantage of the Methodists in the way of congregations. These schools, scholars and teachers, attend their services in a body. This gives them a good congregation independent of the town.

We see some signs of growth in our church. The congregation is improving. We have a good Woman's Missionary Society. The Junior Missionary Society renders a very interesting program each week. The Sunday school is planning for enlargement. The children are unusually bright and are very much interested in church work. We hope to be able to carry out at least a part of the evangelistic program put on by our Sunday school leaders for the months of January, February and March. We need revivals. This will settle all other questions.

EAST FLAT ROCK METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday, the 28th, was a busy day with the saints of Flat Rock church. Six services were held during the day—Sunday school at 10 a. m., preaching at the eleven o'clock hour by the pastor, Rev. M. W. Dargan; subject, "Growth in Christian Life." Right here I would like to say Brother Dargan is one of the very best preachers in the M. E. church. Our people are delighted with his splendid sermons. Every plan used indicates thoughtful preparation. He is one of the best organizers for personal work. He stands squarely for the fundamental doctrines of the Methodist church. He believes the Bible and presents its great truths in such force and power that his hearers are led to believe in the same manner.

Going back to our program of last Sunday. At three-thirty p. m. we organized a Junior League. At five-thirty the Senior League held their session. At seven-thirty preaching again by the pastor, after which the church conference was held and the various committees elected. All these services were well attended. This is going some, but when the weather conditions improve and the "flu has flown," then you will please "excuse our dust." We believe our church as a whole is in better condition than it has ever been, but there must be no slackers in the Lord's ranks. The enemy is ever on the alert, and to ward off his combat and keep him in the background we must prove valiant soldiers of the cross of our Christ. Let us be about our "Father's business."

East Flat Rock M. E. church is catching new visions and we pray that in the near future that every member will be filled with such zeal for the great work that those who come in contact with us can but say, "They go forward in the spirit according to the divine plan."

To God be all the glory! Pray for us! Mrs. R. M. Patterson.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes. To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. SUGGESTION FOR MISSION STUDY CLASSES

Ask the permission and co-operation of your pastor to convert his Wednesday evening prayer meeting, for six consecutive weeks during this quarter, of which two months remain, into a "school of missions," after you have gained the promise of all the mission study superintendents and leaders of all the other auxiliaries, adult, young people and children to join in carrying out the plan.

After the opening hymn and prayer on Wednesday evenings, conducted by your pastor, he would announce the separation of the congregation into classes, as many as you like or can form, but certainly one adult, one young people's, one intermediate, one junior, and one class of men, which your pastor himself would teach by lecture, using any missionary subjects he may choose. Just at this time when a strenuous campaign is to be put on to collect the unpaid Centenary subscriptions, he could make this a great help to him in successfully accomplishing this hard task that has been set before him. A definite length of time should be set for the lessons, not less than 45 minutes, after which your pastor would call you together again for a short closing prayer, song or benediction. Before the first meeting of this "school of missions" all the preliminary arrangements should be made, and to provide for this I suggest these committees, each with its reliable chairman: Materials, Posters, Membership—each auxiliary having its own committees.

The materials committee would provide the books decided upon for study, with the accompanying "Suggestions for Leaders," maps, charts, pictures, blackboard and chalk, or any other material needed, assembling them in whatever room or place in the church shall have been selected for the lesson. The posters committee would have appropriate and attractive posters on display in the vestibule of the church every Sunday morning for purposes of information and publicity, and have announcements describing the next lessons made at both services. With deft fingers, a quick mind and a willing heart to do the work posters can be made most valuable factors in this campaign.

The membership committee would form the auxiliary class, or classes, and keep up the weekly attendance by phone, little friendly notes of reminder, house to house calls, or in any other effective way. This committee would be large enough to help the pastor keep up his class if he desired it.

The superintendent would select the book to be studied from among those recommended by Council, give the name and the number of books required with a list of any other material needed to the chairman of the materials committee; map out her course of study to fit the length of the term; furnish the chairman of the posters committee with the subjects of the lessons; assign the lessons ahead of time, and thoroughly prepare herself to teach and finish each lesson in its allotted time.

This would be a splendid method of conducting standard classes, but of course the success of the plan, or rather the plan itself depends upon gaining the permission of your pastor and upon the co-operation of all the missionary agencies of the church. In churches where the membership is large and good teachers or leaders available there might be several study groups of the same auxiliary. The same groups meeting together regularly every time would be reported as so many classes. At the end of the session of six weeks there might be a grand review, closing with a delightful social hour. This could be done, with advantage to the whole church, twice a year—six weeks in the fall for the foreign study, and six weeks in the first quarter for the home study, using the books recommended by Council, and the pastor selecting his own subjects.

As helps we recommend: "Mission Study Manual," telling how to organize and conduct a class, price 10 cents; "Posters and Poster Making," containing all sorts of splendid suggestions as to the use of posters in plans for missionary education, price 25 cents. Order from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

Order textbooks and suggestions for leaders from Lamar & Barton, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. For further information write to

CLASSES IN M. AND B. STUDY FOR HONOR ROLL AND HONORABLE MENTION

"The superintendent of study and publicity shall be responsible for the organization of mission study and Bible study classes and prayer circles, and for the dissemination of missionary information through the church and secular press. She shall report quarterly to the conference superintendent of study and publicity."—Article 8 from By-Laws for Adult Auxiliaries, 1922.

"A standard mission study class is a small group with a leader, making a systematic study of a book or a problem in missions, holding weekly meetings, and using the discussion method. It is far better to finish the study of a book in a month or six weeks than to continue its study for so many months. The discussion method is far more profitable than the lecture method. We do not debar the class from becoming standard if the group is large. The emphasis in standard work is on the weekly meeting and the discussion method. Classes for which credit may be given in the standard training schools under the Sunday School Board and our board have definite requirements for which credits may be given. We have not worked out a system by which we can credit mission study work done in the local auxiliaries. We hope to do this in the near future. At present we are urging classes to hold weekly meetings and to use the discussion method. We are also urging a systematic study with a leader responsible for the conduct of the class, rather than different women lecturing on separate chapters. The level of mission study has been lifted. The women are doing much better work than was done formerly."—Mrs. Hume R. Steele, Council Supt. of Study and Publicity, Nov. 29, 1922, in answer to my questions, "What is a standard mission study class? For what work may credits be given, how, and by whom?"

Using the By-Law quoted above, the questions upon which superintendent of study and publicity are expected to report, Mrs. Steele's definition of a standard study class, and the idea of the conference honor roll suggested in a recent number of the Missionary Voice, I have worked out for the North Carolina conference the following:

Study Honor Roll.

1. Foreign mission study standard class, 15.
2. Home mission study standard class, 15.
3. Bible study standard class, 15.
4. Prayer circles organized, 10.
5. Reading circles organized, 10.
6. Missionary library, 5.
7. Organizing mission and Bible study in sister auxiliary, 5.

8. Presenting Bulletin in monthly meetings, 5.

9. Sending missionary items to local papers regularly, 5.

10. Sending missionary items to Advocate or Our Missionary News, 5.

11. Prompt, accurate and full quarterly reports, 5.

12. Using latest Council report sheets, 5.

To attain to this honor roll requires 85 points, 55 of which must be acquired by making Nos. 1, 2, 3, 11 and 12.

Honorable Mention.

1. Foreign mission study class conducted as best suits class, 15.

2. Home mission study class conducted as best suits class, 15.

3. Bible study conducted as best suits class, 15.

4. Prayer circles organized, 10.

5. Reading circle organized, 10.

6. missionary library, 5.

7. Organizing mission and Bible study in sister auxiliary, 5.

8. Presenting Bulletin in monthly meetings, 5.

9. Sending missionary items to local papers regularly, 5.

10. Sending missionary items to Advocate and Our Missionary News, 5.

11. Prompt, accurate and full quarterly reports, 5.

12. Using latest Council report sheets, 5.

To attain Honorable Mention requires 85 points, 55 of which must be acquired by making Nos. 1, 2, 3, 11 and 12.

At conference some special mark of attainment to be decided upon will be presented to those auxiliaries making either the study honor roll or honorable mention.

CHILDREN AT THE HEAVENLY GATE

Little travelers Zionward,
Each one entering into rest,
In the kingdom of your Lord,
In the mansions of the blest;
There, to welcome, Jesus waits,
Gives the crowns his followers win—
Lift your heads, ye golden gates!
Let the little travelers in!

Who are they, whose little feet,
Pacing life's dark journey through,
Now have reached that heavenly seat
They had ever kept in view?
"I, from Greenland's frozen land;"
"I, from India's sultry plain;"
"I, from Afric's barren sand;"
"I, from islands of the main."

"All our earthly journey past,
Every tear and pain gone by,
Here together met at last,
At the portal of the sky!"
Each the welcome "Come" awaits,
Conquers over death and sin—
Lift your heads, ye golden gates!
Let the little travelers in!
—Methodist Hymnal of 1850.

REPORT OF NEW ORGANIZATION

Mrs. B. T. Morris, district secretary of Shelby district, reports the organization of a new children's society at Main Street Belmont with a membership of thirteen, and Mrs. W. H. Crenshaw for superintendent. The list of officers for this new organization is as follows:

President, Elizabeth Gaston; first vice president, Ruth Kale; second vice

NEW OFFICERS

The Missionary Society of the Henrietta Methodist church met last week and elected new officers for this year as follows:

President—Mrs. J. C. Postell.
First Vice President—Mrs. G. W. Harris.

Second Vice President—Mrs. J. F. Whisnant.

Third Vice President—Mrs. Mae Hawkins.

Fourth Vice President—Miss Lilla Martin.

Recording Secretary—Miss Marietta Dandridge.

Cor. Secretary—Miss Sallie Wacaser.

Treasurer Local Dept.—Miss Virginia Edwards.

Treasurer Foreign Dept.—Miss Thelma Gibson.

Agent for Voice—Mrs. W. C. Crocker.

We are very sorry to give up Mrs. R. C. Hicks, our retiring president, who has served most faithfully for the past two years; but her declining health will not permit her to serve any longer.

Our record shows that this society made more money last year than any society in the Marion district.

W. M. PICKENS

I am delighted to present to you this week the youngest member of the Sunday School Board, and, I dare say, the youngest member of any board in the history of our conference. He is a preacher's boy, one of the five talented sons of Rev. and Mrs. C. M. Pickens, who now lead our growing congregation at First church, Albemarle. If I were picking a vocation for our fine young unmarried friend it would be that of Religious Educational Director of some forward looking congregation.

I wrote Pickens for some data about himself and he replied to the point as follows: "Birthplace, Spring City, Tenn.; birth date, September 21, 1896; education, Weaver College 1912-14, Trinity College 1914-16, A. B., University North Carolina, summers 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922; member of Knights of Pythias, D. O. K. K., York rite Mason, Shriner, American Legion; teacher of mathematics and science in Salisbury high school. If this is not sufficient send for me or use your imagination. Very sincerely, W. M. Pickens."

CONFERENCE COUNCIL

At First church, Salisbury, last Tuesday we had a very eventful Sunday school meeting to outline our Sunday school plans for this year. Our meeting was favored with the presence of the executive committee of the Sunday School Board, ten of the eleven presiding elders, eight of the eleven district Sunday school superintendents and several other leaders. Beginning at two o'clock the first session extended till five-thirty and after a splendid supper, prepared by one of the circles of First church, another session extended to eight-thirty, when Chairman W. A. Lambeth declared the meeting a wonderful success. Every district was represented except the North Wilkesboro, and Presiding Elder Williams would have been present but for a prearranged quarterly meeting. Every once in the while I will want to tell you what was agreed upon at this meeting.

SEVENTEEN THOUSAND

After discussion the presiding elder and district superintendent for each district decided that the following membership gains should be recorded this year:

Asheville district .....	2,000
Charlotte district .....	2,000
Greensboro district .....	2,000
Marion district .....	1,000
Mount Airy district .....	1,000
N. Wilkesboro district .....	500
Salisbury district .....	1,500
Shelby district .....	1,500
Statesville district .....	2,000
Waynesville district .....	2,000
Waynesville district .....	1,500
Winston-Salem district .....	2,000

Earnest and systematic effort will be put forth to enroll these 17,000 new Sunday school scholars.

PRESENT!

The following men of affairs, district Sunday school superintendents, were present at our recent Council meeting:

- E. L. Brown, Asheville.
- D. E. Henderson, Charlotte.
- I. F. Craven, Ramseur.
- C. A. Reap, Albemarle.
- Marshall Dilling, Gastonia.
- R. C. Bunch, Statesville.
- A. C. Reynolds, Waynesville.
- G. L. Hackney, Lexington.

Mr. A. C. Reynolds got up at three a. m., drove through Asheville to Black Mountain, where he could find an open garage, and there caught an early train for our meeting. You can't down a working man.

ABSENT!

Joe Kjellander, Morganton. Heads a three million dollar concern and the first of the month accounting held him at home.

E. H. Kochtitzky, Mount Airy. Mrs. Kochtitzky was all and of course he should have been with her.

J. R. Hix, North Wilkesboro. Pressing business engagements held him at home.

They had excuses. They also had reasons.

FUNNY

At our supper every one was asked by Tastmaster Lambeth to give some funny incident in his Sunday school life. D. E. Henderson arose and dryly said, "The funniest thing I ever saw is ten presiding elders at a Sunday school meeting." The crowd roared.

A POSTAL CARD

"Dear Woosley:
Randleman is still on the map, waiting at the door for you to rap; She has waited long, waiting still, For an appointment you to fill.

Yours, J. A. Bowles."

I am going Sunday, March 4th. Saturday night before we will have a big time. We will open up a keg of nails and kill a big 'un.

BELMONT PARK

Last Sunday Miss Jenkins went to Belmont Park, Charlotte, and since she did not return at once to the office wrote me a note. It said: "I enjoyed my visit to Belmont Park, where I received a most cordial reception. In spite of sickness and a very rainy morning there was a goodly number present. I liked the friendly, enthusiastic, co-operative spirit of those people. They have done a great many things for their children and they are willing to do more. They are squarely behind the Charlotte Training School. I saw your two letters posted on the bulletin board and a most attractive poster announcing the school."

TAKING CREDIT

"I have finished reading Cuninggim and North's Organization and Administration of the Sunday School and am on this mail writing the Training Department, Nashville, Tenn., for questions for the examination.

Yours, E. J. Poe."

Albemarle, N. C.

SIXTEEN WIDE-AWAKES

"I am enclosing price and application for certificate for a Senior Wesley Class. It is composed of sixteen wide-awake, ambitious girls—most of them in their middle teens, ready to go forth and conquer the world and all in it is. Come up and tell us how to do it.

With best wishes for you and your work,

Sincerely,

Mrs. J. B. Tabor."

Burnsville, N. C.

North Carolina Conference

NORTH CAROLINA IN THE FORE-FRONT

By M. W. Brabham.

Last summer a group of workers were sitting together when the question of progress and advancement in various fields came up for discussion. Of this group each one had held such public positions as would afford opportunity for seeing many sections of the United States and forming at least a general opinion as to places favorably and unfavorably. Only one of the group was a native of North Carolina. One other member of the group had spent some years in the state, but had not resided there for more than six years. When the general consensus of opinion was arrived at, it was found that the group had but one mind as to the state which stood out as the best all round state in the Union. North Carolina was that state.

The educational program, the good roars investments, the advancement along lines of church enterprises as well as other phases of life were reviewed and considered. In a few instances some other states were thought to be in advance of North Carolina, but when the complete development was thought of, the Old North State won hands down.

As one who spent five delightful years in North Carolina I wish to say that the Sunday school workers of the Methodist church in this state have a challenging program and the advancement being made in the field of religious education is beyond what even the most optimistic of us dreamed ten years ago. Under the leadership of the Sunday school boards of this state there is being given to every Methodist Sunday school worker a place for the investment of time and money unequalled by any organization. If I am permitted to urge a people for whom I have such high regard and admiration, I wish to say this word: If you have one dollar of money and one hour of time which you wish to invest for the upbuilding of the state of North Carolina as the Methodist Church thinks it should be developed along the lines of religious education as conceived by the Sunday school, put that dollar and that hour into the hands of Mr. L. L. Gobbel of the North Carolina conference and Mr. O. V. Woosley of the Western North Carolina conference, and let them use you and yours in the commanding program of work which they are carrying forward. There may be other organizations outside the church which would like to do our task. The fact remains that they have never been able to do so up to this time and the outlook now is that they never can. Too long have waited for others. Progress has been made since we began our own work.

During the two weeks I am spending in this state I am being exhilarated by the delightful co-operation which I see being given to the two Sunday school boards of the Methodist Church in North Carolina. Let the good work continue!

RALEIGH TRAINING SCHOOL

Decidedly successful is the way those who attended refer to the Raleigh Standard Training School held in Edenton Street church last week. All the Methodist churches of the city were represented in the enrollment, as were also several schools of the district outside of Raleigh, and the attendance, in spite of rainy weather, influenza, and a few other things over which we had no control, was excellent. Some came from Smithfield to the training school regularly, a distance of over thirty miles.

The feature of the school, however, was not the size of the enrollment, as gratifying as was that, but the interest and enthusiasm with which those who attended entered into the work. It was a real school of twelve fifty-minute class periods extending through six days, and some intensive study was done. Many earned the certificate of credit on the Standard Training Course, the names of whom will be given next week.

The instructors were Miss Keene, M. W. Brabham, Mrs. E. R. Michaux, Prof. H. E. Spence and Mrs. M. H. McArdle. Rev. W. W. Peele was chairman of the board of managers and L. L. Gobbel educational director.

AND IT'S WILMINGTON NEXT

Next week in Grace church, Wilmington, will be held the third Standard Training School for Sunday school leaders ever held for Methodist churches of the New Hanover capital, and all hands are looking forward to an unusually good school. Six courses of study will be given. This is to be a co-operative school in that we are working with the Presbyterians. The date is February 11-16. Let's go, Methodists!

AS TO OUR DISTRICT WORK

It shall be our purpose this year to complete, in each district, if possible, a simple working organization. It would be easy to form a paper organization with nominal officers galore, but such is not our purpose. Rather shall we attempt to find those who are willing to accept one of the two or three offices in each district organization and then do some real work. Simplicity shall be our motto.

Already we have done something at this. But we have gone slow, purposefully. Co-operating with the presiding elders we have secured the following district secretaries:

- Raleigh District—R. E. Prince.
- Weldon—E. S. Yarbrough.
- Wilmington—M. J. Cowell.
- New Bern—J. S. Hargett.

Mr. J. F. Marquett, of Trenton, is also doing work among the organized classes of the New Bern district as Wesley Bible class superintendent.

Miss Keene, conference elementary superintendent, has secured district elementary superintendents as follows:

- Rockingham District—Mrs. E. B. Ward.
- Fayetteville—Mrs. J. A. King.
- Elizabeth City—Mrs. C. R. Pugh.

Other district workers will be announced later. We are announcing these now in order that you may know who they are and use them. We bespeak for these voluntary workers your hearty co-operation.

ELEMENTARY CONFERENCE

For the purpose of planning for more aggressive work in the elementary field Miss Keene, conference elementary superintendent, arranged a meeting in Raleigh, Saturday, January 27, with Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, general elementary superintendent, Nashville, Tenn. In addition to these present were Mrs. E. B. Ward, of Rowland, Rockingham district elementary superintendent, and Miss Virginia Jenkins, of Lexington, elementary superintendent of the Western North Carolina conference. You will be seeing and hearing more about this meeting as the weeks come and go.

North Carolina Conference

NEW SECRETARY ON THE JOB

We note with pleasure that Rev. W. H. Vaughan, Wilson, our new secretary succeeding Rev. J. Herbert Miller, is entering into his work in dead earnest, and is sending a letter to each pastor of the Washington district requesting a report on League chapters, the number of young people in each church between the ages of nine and fourteen, and between fourteen and thirty; also what other young people's organizations there are providing training for our young people.

This is a good idea to carry out throughout the conference. If every pastor would put more thought and time in learning these elementary facts about the number of young people of these Junior, Intermediate and Senior league ages, then discover what percentage of these have organizations to fit and meet their age and needs, and make an "honest to goodness" effort to meet the discovered needs we'd soon be going good.

There are seventy-seven churches with only thirty leagues in the Washington district. Practically none of these are fully awake to the far-reaching possibilities of our young people's work.

The Maysville League has just completed an "In Weñbo Nyama's Land" and would love to sell their seventeen books to some other chapters at 25 cents each. Address J. C. Stallings, President, Maysville, N. C.

NEW OFFICERS AT STANTONSBURG

Since nothing has been written from Lebanon Society for some time, I am writing to let the other societies know we are still alive. Our first meeting for 1923 was held Saturday, January 20th, with Mrs. Tom Edmundson, Jr., and we added two new members, having had a very good year considering our society is very small. We hope to have a still better year this year. Our average attendance is four or five and we have raised $60.85 dues for local work. We have only nine on roll. We have helped one who is sick and in need in our neighborhood, and still expect to help her as long as she needs it. The following officers were elected for 1923:

President—Mrs. E. C. Exum.
Vice President—Mrs. Mattie Edmundson.
Rec. Secretary—Mrs. Jim Candan.
Cor. Secretary—Mrs. Tom Edmundson, Jr.
Treasurer—Miss Ruth Tyndall.
Supt. Supplies—Mrs. K. S. Grantham.
Agent for Voice—Miss Moami Grantham.
Mrs. Tom Edmundson, Jr.

A platitude is just an epigram you have heard before.—Atlanta Constitution.

RANDALL LEAGUE ELECTS OFFICERS

The corresponding secretary of the Randall League at Norwood advises us of a recent enthusiastic meeting of that league when the following officers were elected:

President—Miss Duo. Wwarengen.
Vice President—Miss Gene Bell Blacklock.
Secretary and Treasurer—Craven Allen.

Epworth Era Agent—Eli Snuggs.
Cor. Secretary—Swillie Russell.
Supt. First Dept.—Stella Mae Johnson.
Supt. Second Dept.—Edna Simpson.
Supt. Third Dept.—Virginia Allen.
Supt. Fourth Dept.—Raymond Johnson.

CALVARY LEAGUE ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

The following is a list of the newly elected officers of Calvary League at Charlotte:

President—I. M. Dotson.
Vice President—A. W. Phillips.
Secretary—Miss Mildred Blackburn.
Treasurer—W. G. Helms.
Epworth Era and Tar Heel Leaguer Agent—Miss Lottie Bixby.
Supt. First Dept.—I. F. Clonts.
Supt. Second Dept.—Mrs. Bessie Blackburn.
Supt. Third Dept.—Miss Lottie Bixby.
Supt. Fourth Dept.—J. S. Hinson.

This list of officers, composed as it is of some of the state's best league workers, speaks well for the future of Calvary and they have challenged Trinity, Charlotte's one hundred per cent league, to an interesting race this year and we know that Calvary will make a good record.

ARDOR OF EPWORTH LEAGUE NOT CHILLED

In spite of sleet and rain, a strong representation from the several Methodist churches of the community gathered Wednesday night, January 31st, at the Y. M. C. A. the Asheville District Epworth League banquet, at which the speaker of the evening was Rev. Dr. Ashley Chappell, pastor of the Central Methodist church.

Dr. Chappell has long been an admirer of young people's work and he gave expression to his interest in the program of activities outlined by the league. His address was replete with wit and wisdom and appealed to the workers to devote the best in them to the kingdom of God.

A tabulation of those attending showed the various organizations represented by the following numbers: Central church, 45; Bethel, 2; Chestnut, 32; Haywood, 28; West Asheville, 18; Mount Pleasant, 3; Biltmore, 13.

Dunn's orchestra, consisting of Albert Dunn, Victor Robinson, Robert Wright, Johnnie Farmer and Eddie Turner, furnished the music. S. J. Perkinson lead the group singing. The following gave short talks on why they believed in the Epworth League: A. E. Ashe, Miss Ruth Brown, Miss Myrtle Merrill, V. F. Hawkins and V. R. Patterson. C. C. Mills, secretary of the Asheville district, also made a short talk.

The ladies preparing the banquet were Mrs. W. W. Edwards, Mrs. E. R. Welch, Mrs. Eugene Bartlett, Mrs. H. P. Jones, Mrs. K. N. Goodlake and Mrs. A. L. Grant.

Those serving were Miss Helen Luther, Mrs. Ashley Chappell, Mrs. C. R. Brannon, Mrs. Lena Dunn, Miss Hattie McKay, Mrs. G. W. Jones and Miss Mildred Jones.

The decorating was done by H. A. Erwin. Votes of thanks were extended all who had helped to make the banquet a success.

Three-year-old Jack was playing on the veranda iwth his daddy when a friend came along. As daddies are always eager to show what their offspring can do, he asked Jack if he would say his prayers for the gentleman. In dismay the little fellow cried out, "But, daddy, I hasn't got my pajamas on."

Johnny—What makes that new baby at your home cry so much, Tommy?

Tommy—It don't cry so much; and, anyway, if you had all your hair off and your teeth out and your legs were so weak you couldn't stand on them, I guess you'd feel like crying, too.—The Cornelian.

IF BILIOUS, SICK! TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

You're bilious! Your liver is sluggish! You feel lazy, dizzy and all knocked out. Your head is dull, your tongue is coated; breath bad; stomach sour and bowels constipated. But don't take salivating calomel. It makes you sick, you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel crashes into sour bile like dynamite, breaking it up. That's when you feel that awful nausea and cramping.

If you want to enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight. Your druggist or dealer sells you a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents under my personal money-back guarantee that each spoonful will clean your sluggish liver better than a dose of nasty calomel and that it won't make you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is real liver medicine. You'll know it next morning because you will wake up feeling fine, your liver will be working, your headache and dizziness gone, your stomach will be sweet and your bowels regular. You will feel like working; you'll be cheerful; full of vigor and ambition.

Dodson's Liver Tone is entirely vegetable, therefore harmless and can not salivate. Give it to your children.

I am giving a clipping in these notes which illustrates in a striking manner the magnitude of work which Presbyterians of Texas have undertaken. It gives me peculiar joy to know that other orphanages are going forward in their God given task, but pains me to my heart's core for our own beloved Methodist Orphanage to turn away from its door scores and hundreds of orphan children who are begging for a place to call home. How I do wish from the depth of my soul that some one blessed with means and filled with the spirit of Christ would write me that these touching appeals shall not go unheeded and unanswered any longer.

The Social Service Conference is a strong agent in moulding and crystallizing public opinion. Social mindedness is an essential factor in the solution of many of civilization's perplexing problems. It is up to us to bring about many needed reforms, and trust God to transform human society so that the race may be properly related to the present world and that which is to come. Unless all of our social service work is shot through with the spirit and example of Christ, there can be no hope for ultimate success. Let us land our influence and active cooperation to every agency whose object is to make the world a better place in which to live, but realizing at the same time that unless God works in and through us all of our labor will come to naught.

It would be a most commendable thing if an individual or church would assume the privilege of erecting one or more of the group of buildings which the trustees have planned to build just as soon as funds are available. These might be memorials to some dear ones or to some outstanding character in the town, county or state. For instance, the Methodists of Wayne county might do honor to themselves by erecting a building at the Orphanage to perpetuate the memory of the late Judge W. R. Allen who served for many years as a member of our board of trustees and did so much for the development of our Home. A number of our counties might take this suggestion and put up buildings here which would serve a double purpose—perpetuating the memory of some distinguished Methodist and at the same time provide shelter for those who are out in the night crying for the light. Unless some one of commanding influence puts the ball in motion this suggestion will come to naught. What great leader will organize such a movement and put it over in his or her county or church?

ALBANY ORPHANAGE BUILDING COSTING $300,000 IS PLANNED

Fireproof buildings to be erected for the Presbyterian Orphanage at Albany at a total cost of $300,000 are being designed by the David S. Castle Company, architects and engineers, of Dallas, and Edward F. O'Brien, associated with Mr. Castle. It is the intention of the trustees to establish one of the most modern orphanages in the Southwest, embodying a number of features never before utilized in this state, according to architects.

Since the fire which nearly destroyed the entire orphanage about a year ago, all of the children have been housed in one building, said to be entirely inadequate. A meeting of the trustees of the orphanage will be held at Albany January 4, at which time plans will be made to award the contract and the work is expected to be well under way during the first part of this year.

To avoid what has been termed institutionalizing the children, a plan designated the cottage system will be employed in re-establishing the orphanage. In addition to the administration building, vocational school buildings and auditorium, twelve brick cottages, each intended to house about twenty-four children, will be constructed. Each of these cottages will constitute a home in itself with bedrooms, dining room, kitchen and living room. The younger children will be placed under the care of the older orphans in each cottage.

Adjoining the administration building of two stories will be the auditorium, with a seating capacity of 500, with modern stage equipment. Situated at one end of the administration building will be the girls' vocational school with facilities for instructions in cooking, sewing, typewriting, stenography and bookkeeping. At the other end of the main building will be the boys' vocational school, with iron-working machine shop, mechanical drawing room, lecture room, carpenter shop and lathe and finishing rooms.

In addition to these buildings, which will constitute the main group, will be a barn, boiler house, dairy, garage, infirmary and superintendent's cottage.

Every orphanage in Texas of importance, and a number elsewhere, have been visited by Mr. Castle and Mr. O'Brien in order to gain a knowledge of the best designs for such institutions.

RAY COON AND RUSTY FOX

"Ray," said Mrs. Coon one fine winter morning, "I wish I had some way to get this basket of rolls and chicken over to your grandma. She is looking for it, I know."

"I know a good way," said Ray Coon. "It is red with a string tied to it."

He scampered around the house and came back with his sled. Three minutes later he was marching gayly across the fields, dragging a basket of good things on his sled. All at once he began to sniff the wind. "I smell apples," he said. "Just as sure as I live I smell apples. Um-um, but I'd like to have a big, juicy, red one!"

Just then Rusty Fox came striding into view. He was just about to take a bite in a large winesap apple.

"Hello, Ray," he said. "Are you carrying the wash in that basket?"

"O, no," said Ray, with his eyes glued to the juicy apple. It made his mouth water. "This is some food that my mother is sending my grandmother."

Rusty bit deep into the winesap. "Ah, I see," he said. "Apples, perhaps?"

Ray shook his head. "We have no apples," he said wistfully. "This is chicken."

At the word "chicken" Rutsy's nose began to quiver in a strange way. He gazed intently at the basket with his sharp little eyes. And while he gazed at the basket Ray Coon gazed at the winesap. There was a long silence.

"Do you like apples?" Rusty Fox asked suddenly.

Ray jumped. "Indeed, I do," he said heartily.

"Well, you can get all you want at my Cousin Sally Fox's, over on the other hill," said Rusty. "Tell her I sent you."

"O, thank you!" Ray said. But as he tightened his hold on the rope and turned in the direction of the house the other stopped him.

"Wait a minte," Rusty said. "On second thought I'd advise you to leave that sled with me. Cousin Sally is very fussy about having things dragged around her yard."

So Ray passed the rope trustfully over to Rusty and went hurrying away toward the house on the other hill. When he reached the brow of the hill, he turned to look back. To his dismay, Rusty Fox was running off at top speed with the sled. Ray shrieked and waved his arms, but Rusty took no notice of him; he only ran the faster. There was nothing for Ray to do but follow as fast as he could. He came over the slope of the hill and down the other side like a swift rolling, squeaking rubber ball.

All at once there were other squeaks on the still winter air, shrill, angry squeaks that rose higher and higher. Ray stopped and peered toward the bottom of the hill. There he saw Rusty tangled in a barbed-wire fence. The sled had slipped under the wire and had turned entirely around, basket and all, but Rusty himself was caught fast.

Ray Coon ran down the hill and rolled under the lowest strand of wire without hurting himself. Then he came running to help Rusty. But there was nothing he could do. Rusty had struggled so that he was caught tight in the wire; worse still, he had cut his leg badly. And all the time he kept snarling at the wire as if it were a live thing holding him.

Ray turned and ran for his cousin, Farmer Bear, who lived a quarter of a mile away. Farmer Bear was something of a doctor and knew what to do. In three minutes after he reached the spot he had freed Rusty Fox from the wire and was carefully binding up his leg.

Ray Coon looked on soberly. He felt sorry for Rusty, but he took pains to grasp the rope of the sled very tight.

Rusty had the grace to be ashamed of himself. "You are a good chap, Ray," he said.

"Not very," Ray Coon replied. "Goodby, Rusty; I must go and carry this basket to my grandmother."

"Wait," said Rusty Fox cheerfully. He drew a big winesap apple from his pocket and held it out to Ray Coon.

Ray took the apple joyfully. As he walked along toward his grandmother's eating it he thought to himself: "I suppose I was pretty careless. I'll be glad when this basket is safe at my grandmother's house, that I will indeed!"—G. H. Smith, in Youth's Companion.

SUNSHINE AND RAIN

Thank God for the golden sunshine,
Thank God for its warmth and light;
Thank God for the beautiful sunshine
That makes earth's shadows bright.

Thank God for the glowing sunshine
That He sends us day by day;
Thank God for the beautiful sunshine
That brightens earth's toilsome way.

Thank Him again for the refreshing rain
That comes to each drooping flower;
And thank Him for the sweet refrain
Of the song birds after the shower.

Thank Him for the gentle rain that falls
On the long, hard road of life;
And thank Him for the heavenly rain
That settles the dust of strife.

Tho' earthly skies are dark and drear,
And deep-toned thunders roll,
Thank God for the love and strength
I get
From the sunshine in my soul.

Sunshine, beautiful sunshine—
That blessing from above;

"A GREATER WEAVER COLLEGE" IS THE SLOGAN

By W. F. Sandford, Sec.

Weaver College was the scene of an enthusiastic gathering today of the Methodist ministers of the Asheville district, who met in joint session with the trustees of the college to consider the interests of the institution to plan for the betterment of its equipment and a broader advertisement of its claims on the Methodist people of Western North Carolina.

The college has long been recognized as a factor in the education of the youth of the country surrounding it, and no small number of influential men and women of the state can point to it with a degree of pride and claim it as the moulder of higher ideals that paved the way to greater usefulness.

To begin with Weaverville is historic ground for Methodism. In the early days of the church Bishop Asbury's voice was heard proclaiming the gospel to a congregation gathered under a stately old oak that still stands strong and sturdy. Annual conferences—one held by Bishop Capers in 1836, and one by Bishop James in 1843—have called Methodist preachers together amongst these lofty hills and this people of noble ancestry and sent them forth on their mission with renewed energy into new fields. Old Reems creek camp ground, now a part of the college campus, was once the annual gathering place of the Methodists in the day of camp meetings.

In this atmosphere was born the Weaver College of today that lives to perpetuate the faith of the fathers. But the men who met today are obsessed with the thought that the time has arrived when it should be more than a "mountain school," with its limited equipment, and that the Methodist church can well afford to broaden its scope of usefulness and get behind a movement to enlarge its facilities with buildings and equipment for the accommodation of the increasing demand.

The buildings are crowded to full capacity and President A. M. Norton hangs out the "no room" sign. In his report he declares "the college has gone as far as it can until enlargements are made."

The new Skinner building for young men, just recently completed and occupied for the first time, must have its duplicate for young women. A library supplied with up-to-date books is one of the great needs. Increased dining room space must be had. An enclosed court for winter athletics has been projected, and the larger part of the cost has been offered by some prominent laymen. The ministers' conference of Asheville district went on record as favoring these improvements and stands pledged to lead the movement to provide them.

Dr. Ashley Chappel's address on character, which was replete with apt illustrations and earnest pleas for Christian education and the future of Weaver College, was the feature of the day. He plead for a greater institution—one that would fill the requirements of Buncombe county and adjacent territory.

The luncheon hour—and the college faculty made it a great and successful occasion—was enlivened by speeches from the visiting laymen and ministers, none of whom lost sight of the object in view—to put new life into the college and 'put it on the map' of North Carolina Methodism.

The report of Treasurer C. W. Brown shows the institution on a sound financial basis. That of President Norton, the personnel of the student body as of higher order than last year, and the work of the year most satisfactory.

By the action of the ministers' conference the first Sunday in March becomes Weaver College Day throughout the Asheville district, when the interests of the college will be presented by the pastors to their congregations. It is believed that this concerted movement will bring the results outlined.

A "Greater Weaver College" is the slogan of the Methodists of the Asheville district.

INFORMATION SOUGHT

I attended the Methodist conference in Raleigh in November on Friday and heard Walt Holcomb preach on the raising of Lazareth from the dead. He pictured Mary as being an impure woman; said her mother died of a broken heart on account of her wayward daughter. I was almost stunned by this statement, as I had always looked upon the Bethany family as being almost an ideal one. Both Mr. Bryan and Mr. Ellis in their comment on the Sunday school lesson recently held the same view, and every preacher and Bible student I have asked about it say they never thought of Mary as being an impure woman.

If Mr. Holcomb or any other one has any Bible proof for such a statement, I would like to know where they get it. Mr. Holcomb has no more right to tamper with a Bible character than he has with the character of a living woman. J. P. Hunt.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

will do well to add to their library. Written by Mr. M. W. Brabham, formerly of this conference, now with the General Sunday School Board, it is a book of practical help and one that has grown out of a wide and intimate experience in the Sunday school. Purposely simple and elementary in its approach to and treatment of the subject, this book will be especially suggestive and stimulating to those who desire to begin to acquaint themselves with the great task of the Sunday school and how to aid in its accomplishment. It may be ordered from our publishing house at Richmond or Nashville. The price is $1.50.

PROGRAM OF EVANGELISM

Reports from here and there over the conference indicate that many of our pastors, superintendents and teachers are very much interested in the program of evangelism outlined for Southern Methodist Sunday schools, and some of them are at work on it. The most recent report came from Supt. Cheatham of Franklinton, who says that his pastor, Rev. O. W. Dowd, and his workers are following the plan earnestly and are expecting wonderful results.

Are you acquainted with this program? Is your school profiting by it?

OUR OWN M. W. BRABHAM

Our Sunday school workers of Raleigh and vicinity had the privilege last week of coming again in helpful contact with one of the outstanding Sunday school workers of Southern Methodism and, for that matter, one of the foremost Sunday school leaders of the country. Representing the General Sunday School Board as instructor in our Raleigh Standard Training School, Mr. M. W. Brabham, for five years superintendent of Sunday school work (field secretary) of the North Carolina conference, now superintendent of the Department of Sunday School Administration, General Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tenn., contributed largely to the success of the school. Mr. Brabham is remembered very kindly and pleasantly by Sunday school workers of this conference, who have watched with interest his ever enlarging influence and usefulness in the cause of Christ as represented in the Sunday school. We were delighted to have him in our field and look forward to his early return.

Dear Friends and Brethren:

For a number of years it has been our custom to call attention to the close of our fiscal year and to extend to the customers and friends of the Publishing House sincere gratitude for their valued patronage. Every recurrence of the occasion brings increased gratitude and appreciation.

Our fiscal year closes with the last day of February, and we shall need all the money we can collect in order to meet heavy maturing obligations. Besides this, at that time the Commercial Auditors employed by the Book Committee go over all of our accounts, and to find accounts due and unpaid reflects not only on the Agents, but on the customers concerned.

Please examine the labels on your papers; if past due, send us a check. If you have a regular account with the House, for either Merchandise, Sunday school literature, or supplies, which is due, send us a check for all the account or for as much of it as possible.

We wish to impress the importance of this matter upon you and ask that you give this your cooperation by sending us your remittance before February 28.

NEW THEOLOGY?

In studying the Sunday school lesson for Sunday, January 28, in the Methodist Young People's Quarterly I was shocked to come upon this (as I believe unscriptural) statement: "Lazarus and the rich man were both in hades (hell) but how different their lots!"

Now, let's follow up this thought a little closer. I suppose according to this new theological exegesis we should read Luke 16:23 thus: "And in hell he (the rich man) lifted up his eyes, being in torment, and seeth Abraham (in hades or hell) afar off and Lazarus in his (Abraham's) bosom." This puts the trio in hell. Now, beloved, I must dissent from such a view as this, with all due respect for our most worthy Sunday school editor, and to all others who take his view of this scripture.

You will excuse me for my unlearned views, but I am of the old school type, and I firmly believe hell means hell, and heaven means heaven, and that when a soul passes out of this life it goes back to God who gave it and enters into the "joy" of the Lord, or is rejected of God as an unfaithful and unprofitable servant and is turned into hell with all the "nations that forget God," and where there is "weeping and gnashing of teeth." I believe that man has to do with the physical and temporal life involuntarily. He positively has no choice in the matter of birth into this world, but he does have much (not to say all) to do with where he shall spend great eternity. We choose whom we will serve, and thereby settle on our eternal abiding place. If we choose to serve God heaven will be our home, but if we serve Satan hell (not hades, the grave,) is our eternal portion. Another thing I notice in this Exegesis of Lesson of January 28. The writer refers to the account of Lazarus and the rich man as being a parable. Now I have never found any ground in "Holy Writ" for classing this as a parable. Nowhere is it referred to as a parable. I notice some "high authority" commentators refer to it as a parable—but let us hear what Jesus says about it in Luke 16:19-20: "There was a certain rich man, and there was a certain beggar," etc. Any little school boy ought to understand that "there was a certain rich man," "a certain beggar" means no indefinite article, but a very certain man or beggar.

Brethren, I firmly believe that Lazarus actually was laid at the rich man's gate, and that he actually died and is now in heaven and that the rich man is now, and always will be, in torment. But, granting it is a parable does not weaken the point a bit. Seeing the type is only a faint representation of the anti-type.

With love to all the brethren and best wishes for the Advocate,

Your brother in Eccl. 12:13,

G. A. B. Holderby.

South and the great percentage of that growth at points on the Southern. In 1922, mills in the South consumed 3,977,847 bales of cotton, which was 60.74 per cent of the total consumption in the United States.

On January 1, 1923, twenty-seven new plants and additions which will operate 3,052 looms and 270,640 spindles were under construction at points on the Southern. The directory shows that in the year ended July 31, 1922, new spindles numbering 244,669 were installed in the South and only 83,301 in other parts of the country. Many other interesting facts and figures showing the tendency of textile development toward the South are included.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

Insure In The Methodist Mutual—owned and controlled by the two North Carolina Conferences.

W. E. WEBB, Secretary

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On January 1, 1923, God called Cicero Ballard, our faithful superintendent, to his eternal home.

By his death our Sunday school has lost one of its most loyal members. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That the members of Macedonia Sunday school desire to express our sorrow for the loss of our leader.

Second, That we follow his example by carrying on the good work he was so interested in. But God told him he had done enough, he could go up higher.

Third, That we extend our sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and pray God's blessings upon them in their sad bereavement.

Mrs. I. G. Harris, Mrs. G. O. Mullinix, Miss Bessie Casper, Committee.

CLEGG—In the death of R. B. Clegg, Mt. Zion, Pittsboro circuit, Chatham county, lost a friend and a man of strength and character. His love and devotion to his home and his children was perfectly beautiful. From childhood he followed his Lord with a child-like faith and a deep consecration. The last hours of his life were spent with a peculiar consciousness of his Master's presence. He stepped out of the natural into the spiritual without a doubt to cloud his hope of eternal life.

As a superintendent of his Sunday school and a steward of his church he gave his mind, soul and body without reservation. He loved the body of Christ with an everlasting love. To him the church was the bride of Christ. He served this institution officially for some thirty-five years. For twenty-five years he served the circuit as recording steward faithfully. He watched every detail of the work with a single eye. The circuit feels deeply and keenly the loss of this good man.

His children, Mrs. G. L. Bynum, Lizzie, Janie and Callie Clegg, are followers of their father's Christ, living devout, consecrated lives. While they miss his council and protection, yet they are rejoicing because of his faithful life and victorious death. May God, the Father, ever keep them in the palm of His hand, as the apple of His eye, saving them from all harm and protecting them from every danger. J. J. Boone.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Run, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

CABBAGE PLANTS, Fulwood's Frostproof cabbage plants ready now. Varieties, Jersey and Charleston Wakefield, Succession and Flat Dutch. Prices, by express, 1,000 to 4,000 at $1.50 per 1,000; 5,000 to $9,000 at $1.25 per 1,000; 10,000 and over at $1.00 per 1,000. By parcel post postpaid, 100 for 50c; 500 for $1.25; 1,000 for $2.25. First class plants from best Long Island seed. Satisfaction guaranteed or money returned. P. D. Fulwood, Tifton, Ga.

IN MEMORIAM

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom and boundless love has seen fit to remove from us our co-worker, Miss Bettie Wade, be it resolved:

That we thank our heavenly Father for her devotion and loyalty to the Saviour she served and to the church of which she was a member.

That we appreciate the fact that the keynote of her life was love and loving kindness.

That we rejoice in the blessed joy that is hers, as she now is called to a higher service in the presence of her King.

That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Sunday school, a copy delivered to the family, and a copy be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.
Her Sunday School Class.

WADE—Sister Bettie Wade was born August 7, 1851, and died January 2, 1923. She has lived at Cumberland, N. C., where her life was spent in service to her community, to her church, and for sixty years an employee in the cotton mill of the village. For more than fifty years she was a member of the Methodist church which she loved so well.

It was my privilege to be with her several times in her last illness and to learn of her that all was well with her soul.

As the funeral procession advanced to the church for the funeral the cotton mill came to a standstill, and the operatives fled into the church and reverently joined with us in paying the last tribute of respect unto our deceased sister.

May God bless all those who were near and dear to Sister Wade, and may they be kept unto eternal life.

W. L. Maness, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has taken from her loved ones and the Ladies' Aid Society the loving spirit of Mrs. Ira Buck, Friday, December 29, 1922.

She was a faithful member of our society, always ready to do her duty. We are grieved over our loss, yet we are submissive to our Father's will.

Ida, whose life was so loving and peaceful, was sick just a few days with influenza. She leaves a devoted husband, six children, one a few days old, loving parents, two sisters and three brothers to grieve for her.

Therefore be it resolved:
First, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we take this means of expressing our sorrow.

Second, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy and love to the family, praying God to deal gently with them in this dark hour of bereavement.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one spread on the minutes of our society and one sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.

Mrs. W. T. Cheek,
Mrs. C. F. D. Bell,
Mrs. W. C. Williams,
Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

God has seen fit to take from our society one of its most faithful and loyal members, Alice Jones, age ten years, who died January 13, 1923. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we, the Junior Missionary Society of Main Street M. E. church of Reidsville, N. C., bow in humble submission to God's will.

Second, That our hearts are made sad because of her going, and that we shall miss her ever ready help in carrying on our work.

Third, That we hold in grateful remembrance her faithfulness to duty and commend to all her bright Christian life.

Fourth, That we extend to her parents, sisters and brothers our deepest sympathy.

Sixth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, to the N. C. Christian Advocate and to the Reidsville Review.

Mildred Moores,
Frances Whittemore,
Ruby Williams.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has taken from our midst Martin L. Tucker on January 9, 1923. Be it resolved:

First, That we as officials of the Spencer Memorial M. E. Church, South, of North Charlotte, will miss his constant and able service both as an official and member of the church.

Second, That we will cherish his memory in the coming years.

Third, That we as representatives of the church express our sympathy to the sorrowing family.

Fourth, That we insert a copy of these resolutions on our quarterly conference records, a copy be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, that they be read at our next service of worship, and a copy be sent to the stricken family.

The officials of the church, by J. O. Simmons,
L. E. Anderson,
M. C. Honeycutt,
Committee.

FOY—Mrs. Nora Dozier Foy was born in Britton's Neck, S. C., August 23, 1850, and died at her home in Scotts Hill, N. C., January 11, 1923.

Sister Foy was reared in one of those old Southern homes where culture and Christianity were embodied in the family life. Her father, Dr. Dozier, was a true type of the old Southern gentleman; also her mother possessed those qualities which go to make up true womanhood.

In the morning of life Sister Foy accepted Christ as her Saviour, under whose sheltering wing she ever found a sweet refuge amidst the trials and sorrows of life. It was a real inspiration to everyone who came in touch with her noble life and Christian character. In her home life she was simple, loving and kind to all, always ready to lend a helping hand to those in distress.

Another landmark has been removed, a warm heart has ceased, a kind and generous neighbor has gone. The loss will be sadly felt by her wide circle of friends and community, especially her church. She was a member of Scotts Hill Methodist church for 50 years. She loved her church and was always faithful in every respect.

Nearly four years ago her devoted husband, J. T. Foy, was called from her side to his eternal home, where changes never come. Since then she has walked the lonely pathway of life, looking forward with pleasure to the time when the summons should come to join her loved ones in that land where separation, sorrow and suffering are unknown.

She leaves behind one sister, Mrs. F. M. Foy, of Scotts Hill, and one brother, Mr. Lawrence Dozier, of South Carolina. The funeral services were conducted in her late home by myself, her former pastor, at her request, which was attended by a large host of sorrowing friends and relatives. The remains were laid away beside her late husband in Oak Dale cemetery, Wilmington, there to remain until time shall be no more.

C. N. Phillips.

HUBBARD—Daisy Williams Hubbard, daughter of Rev. J. V. Williams, died in her Ohio home, January 24, 1923. She leaves four children—daughter twenty-two, son eight, daughter six, and son five years of age. She is survived by her husband, E. E. Hubbard, New London, Ohio.

GILL—On January 7, 1923, Miss Otie Gill passed away after a few weeks' sickness. She fell asleep and passed away as she lived—for her Lord and her church, for which she was a faithful member, and her Sunday school, being a member of the Central M. E. church of Raleigh. She has gone to her reward from her earthly labors in peace and happiness, for which she has lived and worked for. She was loved by all who knew her. She has done her duty on this earth to reap her reward in heaven. She leaves to mourn her loss one twin sister, Mrs. James Ashcraft, with whom she resided at the time of her death. The funeral was conducted from the Central M. E. church of Raleigh by Rev. Dr. Caviness of the Cary circuit, who paid a lovely tribute to her past life. The remains were laid to rest in the City cemetery.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On Monday evening, January 8, 1923, God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to take from the Willing Workers' Class of the Methodist church one of our beloved members, Mrs. C. W. Richardson; therefore be it resolved:

First, That in her death our class has lost a faithful and willing worker. Although on account of feeble health she has not attended the class regularly for some time, she was always ready and anxious to do what she could at home.

Second, That we extend to the family our love and sympathy in this dark hour of bereavement and point them to God who knows best.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Johnstonian, the North Carolina Christian Advocate, a copy to the family and a copy spread in the minutes of our class.

Mrs. A. K. Eason,
Mrs. M. R. Wall,
Mrs. W. T. Woodard.

BUCK—Mr. J. T. Buck's home was made very sad on the evening of December 29th, when it was learned that Mrs. Buck, who had been sick for but a very few days, had died. She leaves her husband and five little children, her father and mother and three brothers and two sisters. Her brother, Rev. W. R. Hardesty, who now is on the South Alamance circuit, was at her bedside when the end came. She was a good wife and a good mother. She was 34 years old when she departed this life. Our heavenly Father was so gracious to let her stay long enough to sow the seed of righteousness in the hearts of her children. May they ever remain in love. The funeral service was conducted by the pastor. She was laid to rest in Harlam cemetery.
W. T. Cheek.

LANGDAIL—Mrs. Durant Langdail was 70 years of age when she departed this life. She was a good wife and a good mother. She was loyal to Christ and her church and was loved by many who knew her. She departed this life on the 16th day of December. She leaves a husband and three children, one son and two daughters, to mourn her loss. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. E. B. Craven in the absence of her pastor, and her remains laid to rest in Tuttle Grove cemetery to await the resurrection morn. The home is shrouded in gloom, but over them hangs God's blessing—"low I am with you always."
Her pastor, W. T. Cheek.

PRYOR—Nellie Mary Strader Pryor was born September 15, 1891, and died of influenza January 3, 1923. She leaves a father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Strader, a husband, Mr. John Pryor, to whom she was married in 1912, and six children to mourn the loss of an obedient daughter, a faithful companion, and a loving mother.

She joined the Methodist church in girlhood and lived a consistent member till death. She was a good neighbor and a consecrated Christian. We do not mourn as those without hope. The body lies in Mt. Carmel cemetery awaiting resurrection.
W. R. Jenkins.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, the Divine Providence, in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to take from our midst and our society Sister John L. Wells, who departed this life on November 13, 1922; now, therefore be it resolved:

First, That while we deplore her death we bow ourselves in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

Second, That in the death of Mrs. Wells this society has lost one of its truest and most faithful members.

Third, That we extend our heartfelt sympathies to her family in the hour of sadness and bereavement, and commend them to Him who is a Comforter in a time of trouble.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate and our local papers.

Woman's Missionary Society of the First M. E. Church.

Mrs. A. G. James,
Mrs. C. H. Lane,
Mrs. C. R. Barrow,
Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, it has pleased our heavenly Father to take from our midst one of the oldest and best members of our Sunday school at Friendship M. E. church—James Love, age near 84 years. He was always at his post, ready and willing to perform his duty. We miss his sunny face in our Sunday school, for he was always present unless providentially hindered. But we feel that he is sweetly resting with Jesus. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we feel deeply the loss of his presence and prayers so we would follow his example of faithfulness and service.

Second, As he showed to our Sunday school a beautiful Christian character, we should also strive for more Christ-like lives.

Third, That we extend to his family our sympathy and prayer in their great sorrow, which is our sorrow likewise.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to the N. C. Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy be spread on the minutes of our Sunday school.

R. N. Whisenant,
C. R. Cline,
R. A. Allen,
Committee.

WINSLOW—Little Gordon Winslow, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Winslow, of Savage, N. C., who was severely burned on Tuesday, January 16, 1923, dying five hours later, was born November 17, 1920, and was two years and two months old on day of burial. He was a bright little fellow and we lament his untimely death. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved parents and sisters and brothers. Funeral services were conducted on Wednesday afternoon at Parker's M. E. church by the pastor, Rev. J. O. Long. "Safe in the arms of Jesus, Safe on His gentle breast,
There by His love overshadowed,
Sweetly his soul shall rest."
His Aunt.

WALTERS—Alleen, the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Walters, died at the home of her parents on October 28, 1922, after an operation for appendicitis. She was a favorite in the community. Her teacher and all her schoolmates almost idolized her, and she had made friends of all who knew her. Her illness was so sudden, she taking sick on Friday and died Sunday, that the whole community was shocked. Rev. J. C. Williams, pastor of the Mt. Tirzah circuit, conducted the funeral and burial took place at New Bethel church. The sympathy of the many friends of the family goes out to them in this hour of their grief. This is written by one of her schoolmates.
Koma Hall.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

God saw fit on the morning of November 26, 1922, to send the death angel into the home of Mr. T. J. Mann, to bear the soul of Mrs. Bettie Gibbs through the portals. She had for many months patiently endured the trials of disease and suffering. Having given her life to Christ in early girlhood she daily walked with Him through a pilgrimage of seventy years, and was connected with the different societies of her church, one of which was the Ladies' Aid of Amity M. E. church.

So great was our love for her, and so keenly shall we miss her presence, that we resolve:

First, That we will emulate her example, walk in the paths she has trod, climb up to the same high plane of salvation upon which she stood and be as ready as she was for the final call to come up higher.

Second, That we extend our love and sympathy to the bereaved son, daughter, friends and loved ones, for whom she will be waiting in the glory land.

Third, That we hold in grateful remembrance her faithfulness to duty and commend to all her Christian life.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be placed upon the minutes of our society, a copy be sent to the family of the deceased and one to the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.

Miss Bettie Mann,
Mrs. J. J. Lewis,
Mrs. Mary Jennette,
Mrs. John Mann.

"Waking Up the Indifferent Boy" was the subject of an address a little while ago before the Rotary Club of Thomasville by Prof. R. L. Flowers of Trinity College. The members and visitors were delighted with his earnest and eloquent address. One can hardly think of a more important subject for the consideration of a club that is set for municipal progress and other questions that engage the attention of Rotarians. For all things else are second in importance to the making of the right sort of men.

"Correction does much, but encouragement does more. Encouragement after censure is as the sun after the shower," declared Goethe. Tired people, lonely people, disheartened people, sick people are on every hand and all of them need the good, helpful ministries of him and her whose mission it is to encourage. The pleasant smile, the friendly greeting, the word of good cheer, the kindly deed, the message of hope, all serve to make life better and brighter. Glad tidings are among humanity's greatest needs, and the pure gospel of Christ is nothing else but this. "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be for all people."

* * * *

People love to be treated as the sons and daughters of a royal line. The good opinion of other folks helps a man to live up to that standard. It aids a man to have a good reputation to maintain. To brag on a man generally gets better results than to blame him. Both Peter and Thomas were rated surprisingly high by the Master, not so much for what they were, as on account of what they were to become. Jesus in His estimates not only took in the present but also the possibilities and probabilities of the future. The past and the present of Mary Magdalene were not especially inviting to Jesus, but the years had in store a life that should be as ointment poured forth. It is good to look through the eyes of faith.

* * * *

It is bad for a man not to be able to look other men in the eye, but it is worse when he cannot look himself in the eye. To know that he is a walking fraud, and that his inner self is not what he would have, other people think that he is, must fill a man with scorn and contempt for himself. His pretending to himself that he is playing successfully a smart game, is but a case of "whistling to keep his courage up." Some men have to hold their noses to keep out the stench of their own characters. "Oh wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" becomes the fit cry of such a wretch.

I have to live with myself, and so
I want to be fit for myself to know.
I want to be able, as days go by,
Always to look myself straight in the eye.

I want to go out with my head erect,
I want to deserve all men's respect:
But here in the struggle for fame and pelf,
I want to be able to like myself.

Parental partiality is a grievous fault. The family pet is almost certain to be spoiled, while the neglected child, sensitive to every slight, cannot cherish a becoming respect and love for the parents. The children naturally insist upon equal treatment. A toy for one means a toy for all. This elemental demand on the part of the children of a family for equal gifts carries an exhortation to parents to shun all partiality in the treatment of their children. "Equal rights to all and special privileges to none" is the sound law of a democracy. The same law should govern the household. Partiality in parents toward their children is a crime for which they will and ought to suffer. There is no respect of persons with our heavenly Father and the earthly parents should as near as possible follow His example.

Dr. John R. Mott in his continent-wide tour is striving to quicken the religious life and work of the Y. M. C. A. The General Secretary desires to re-establish and re-emphasize the religious work of the Association. It is reassuring to see that the leaders are laying fresh emphasis upon the things distinctly religious. The taunt has repeatedly of late years been flung at the Y. M. C. A. that it is little more than an athletic association and a social club. That stricture may be too severe, but none can deny that the evangelistic note and the passion for the salvation of men has in a great measure departed from the Y. M. C. A., and the emphasis has been put elsewhere. To win young men and boys to Christ was the first great task of the Association, and it is gratifying to see the promise of a return to its first work.

According to Abraham Lincoln's own statement, the books which he had access to in his early life were, the Bible, "Robinson Crusoe," "The Pilgrim's Progress," Shakespeare, Burns, Weem's "Life of Washington," and a history of the United States. This collection of books lacked quite a bit of being equal to the "Harvard five foot shelf," but it is a list not to be despised in the very heart of the world's learning and culture. This youth of the frontier where books were scarce read and reread these rare volumes till the treasures contained therein had become his own. In early life he mastered a few great books and that was enough. Modern scholars take considerable pleasure in making light of Weem's "Life of Washington," but the impress of its opening paragraph appears in the life and character of Abraham Lincoln. This first paragraph of Weem's seems more like an account of Lincoln than of Washington:

"His education was of the private and proper sort. Dead languages, pride and pedantry had no charm for him who always preferred sense to sound, the kernel to the shell. A grammatical knowledge of his mother tongue—the mathematics—geography—history—natural and moral philosophy, were the valuable objects of his youthful studies: And in these he made the proficiency of one who always loved to go deep. At school he was remarkable for good nature and candor, qualities which gave him so entirely the hearts of his young companions that a reference to him was the usual mode of deciding differences."

THE PEACH INSTEAD OF THE PINE

The Sandhills of North Carolina were at one time the gibe of those more promising sections of the state which encompassed this belt of sand. But that tick infested range for scrub cattle and pine rooster hogs has in recent years been converted into a garden of Hesperides, where the fruits are luscious and golden and the people are heaping their coffers with the yellow metal.

Those great peach orchards are barren in winter, with not a sprig of green, but in spring and summer they are as good to look at as the orange groves of Florida. And the financial returns from those orchards are large and sure. In the twenty-eight years since the beginning of this particular industry there has not been the failure of a single crop. As the figures will show, the growing of peaches on these sand hills is already quite an extensive business, but it is just in its infancy. In 1918, 43 cars were shipped, 80 in 1919, in 1920 the cars numbered 342, in 1921 they ran to 600, and last year the figures reached 1400 cars valued at $1,500,000. The estimate for this year is 2500 cars. At the present rate of increase the years are not far distant when the world will be amazed at the extent and the profits of peach growing in North Carolina.

No Crash in the Speed Limit.

It requires a bit less than seven hours to make the trip by rail from Greensboro to Aberdeen in the heart of the peach belt. Automobiles make it in less than four hours. The railroads by way of Raleigh make it in five and a half hours. But to go the short line with a fifteen minutes between trains at High Point and a like interval at Ashboro, it requires six hours and fifty-five minutes of steady travel to reach one's destination. We made the trip last Saturday afternoon. These long hours on a short line offered an abundance of time at the end of a busy week for rest and reflection, which we really enjoyed.

Samarcaud on this line and located near the upper border of the peach belt is a very unusual name for a town in that section, in fact for any part of North Carolina. Upon inquiry we learned that the name was imported from the Far East by a mining engineer who came to that section and planted a peach orchard. When the state established an institution for unfortunate girls, the institution took the name of the village in which it is located. By the way, this is one of the very best institutions in North Carolina. One who has never visited the place has no idea what that place is doing for girls of all ages, who have never had a fair chance in life.

Our train pulled into Aberdeen on time. The town has a Scotch name and a worthy descendant of the Highlands, Rev. E. H. McWhorter, not a "minister of the Kirk," but the Methodist bishop of Aberdeen and of all the country round took us in hand and with his good wife provided the most delightful hospitality. That stay in the Aberdeen parsonage will be cherished as a delightful memory.

Sunday at Church.

The Page Memorial church, erected in memory of the sterling Methodist layman who by his energy, business acumen and daring created a new industrial epoch in that section of North Carolina, is one of the most attractive pieces of church architecture in the state. It is a beautiful memorial to the man who enriched the world with those sons and daughters, the oldest of which represented the American nation at the Court of St. James through the period of the great World War, and the youngest is now building for his native state the great system of public highways which are to put us at the very front in the great sisterhood of states.

It was a profitable and delightful half hour that we spent in the Sunday school class of Hon. Robt. N. Page, when he talked on "Prayer" as it is taught us in the parables of the unjust judge and of the Pharisee and publican. We are careful in the selection of words when we say that the exposition of these parables by this eminent layman and sterling citizen of North Carolina was the most illuminating, suggestive and helpful that we have ever heard. A man must know God and men and be familiar with his Bible to speak as Mr. Page did last Sunday morning.

Brother McWhorter is in great favor with his church and with all that section of country. They are going to work him to death if he will allow it. He has a regular appointment at the Sanatorium, they are anxious to have him preach regularly at Southern Pines and there has been a call for him at Samarcaud.

The Advocate has a large company of readers at Aberdeen and the probability is that this strong church will put the Advocate in the budget and send it to every home in the congregation. We trust that they will.

PARK PLACE IN THE FRONT RANKS

During the year 1922 the board of stewards of Park Place church, this city, put the Advocate in the budget and sent it to every family represented in the membership of that church. The results were so satisfactory that the board has unanimously decided to continue the church paper in the budget this year. Hear what Bro. Hayes, the pastor, has to say:

"I am glad to report that our board of stewards at Park Place has decided to continue the Advocate in the church budget and send it to every family in the congregation. We believe this to be a good business proposition as well as a fine spiritual investment.

Let me say in closing that the Advocate has never been better and so far as I can judge is unsurpassed by any religious journal in the South.

L. B. Hayes."

RAMBLINGS OF ASSISTANT EDITOR

The fact that greater interests in homes for preachers is being manifest is proven conclusively when one is permitted to make an inspection of the parsonages at Morven, Wadesboro and Main Street, Gastonia. If there are better preachers' homes anywhere it has not been our good fortune to see them. Last year Brother Taylor and that select people on the Morven charge completed their new parsonage. It is a house of fine architecture and is built for convenience and comfort. Taylor was the architect and did a good job of it. The house contains nine rooms and a large closet in connection with each of them. This is one of the best parsonages in the conference. That fine charge will get together, of course, and furnish it in a befitting style.

Rev. J. H. West is not only a good presiding elder, but he knows how to plan and complete a home. That parsonage at Wadesboro is a monument to him and those who were associated with him in the work at Wadesboro. There is no more comfortable home in that thriving city than the one occupied by Rev. W. R. Shelton, the energetic and popular pastor of our church there. That good congregation not only built a home that was worthy of it, but also furnished it in keeping with the house.

But the most complete preacher's home and nicely furnished parsonage that we have ever seen or heard of is the one occupied by the Rev. William A. Lambeth over at Gastonia. When that prince of gentlemen and increasingly popular preacher and pastor drove us up in front of that home we thought he was taking us to one of the neighbors in order to shake us. But not so. It was the parsonage. A magnificent brick house, modern in every respect. We felt that we ought to pull off our shoes before we entered such a palace. If Brother Stanford planned that house we are at a loss to know why he can't plan to get some one to live in a parsonage with him. As you enter you are ushered into a large living room with hardwood floors and beautiful walls with dining room and den adjoining. On the second floor are bed rooms, sleeping porch, the pastor's study, etc. In the garret provision has been made for wash day. The clothes can be hung up there and not be exposed to the weather. In the basement is a low pressure steam boiler which heats the entire house. There is also a laundry close by equipped with one of the best washing machines that we have ever seen. There is no family in Gastonia that is housed in a more comfortable home than the pastor of Main Street church. The one thing that pleased us most is the furnishings of that parsonage. In the bedrooms some of Mr. Fred Tate's best bed room suits are found. In the living rooms as handsome overstuffed furniture as is found anywhere is displayed. The only thing in the world to cause Lambeth any disturbance is the thought that the time will come when he will be forced to surrender that fine home to another.

In our ramblings last Saturday, Sunday and Monday we touched at Morven, Wadesboro and Gastonia. At Morven we found Rev. Seymour Taylor more popular in the closing year of his quadrennium than he was the first year. He has a hard work, but is doing the job. Seven churches to look after and preaching three times every Sunday is a man's job, but Taylor is doing the work to the satisfaction of his people. They are perfectly willing to have him returned for the fifth year. It is a delightful experience to be permitted to spend a night in that consecrated home presided over by Sister Taylor. It was our good fortune to be privileged to preach twice for Brother Taylor last Sunday. In the morning at New Hope and in the afternoon at Bethel. At the latter place a church building that is the best we have ever seen in the country is just being completed. Last Sunday's was the second service held in the main auditorium of this splendid building. It will cost completed about $20,000 and has been paid for as the work progressed.

At night we had a delightful service and fine fellowship with Rev. W. R. Shelton and that great Wadesboro congregation. They go to church at night down that way. Shelton is living in high clover. The people treat him nicely and love him immensely. He not only has time to keep up with his many church duties, but is a leader in civic affairs. He engineered the organization of a Chamber of Commerce and other matters for the betterment of the city, is scout master and preaches to a crowded house morning and evening.

Monday morning at 11 o'clock we found ourselves in the Gaston county Methodist preachers' meeting in the office of Main Street church, Gastonia. Thirteen of the sixteen pastors in that county were present and Presiding Elder Jordan was at the throttle. We have been attending preachers' meetings all our ministerial life, but that one Monday was the most interesting that we have ever attended. Brother Jordan had all the preachers to make reports of work done since conference. Many of the brethren made excellent reports. Brother Wilkinson of Park Street, Belmont, has received one hundred and seven members since conference. One of the preachers made the statement that in his charge it was rather difficult to collect money for church purposes, but that one store which handled soft drinks on the side, had kept a strict account of Coca-Cola sales for one month and that he had sold more than 19,000 bottles entailing a cost of about $1,000 or $1,200 per year, and that there were three or four others in the town that sold as much more than this merchant. Another preacher said that one merchant over in his town had informed him that he averaged about the same. All told in these two towns there is sold in one year about $75,000 worth of Coca-Cola to say nothing of the other drinks.

Brother Jordan had lunch served to all the preachers at his expense. This is a good example for all the presiding elders to follow, and always have the business manager of the Advocate on hand.

In all these places we found that the Advocate is in high favor with both preachers and people, and all expressed the determination to increase the circulation and to get all the old subscribers to renew. The preachers on the Shelby district say they are going to win one of the trips to Junaluska for one of their number. They talk the Advocate and a number of them expressed their determination to make a canvass of every member and attempt to put it in every family represented in the membership of their churches.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Rev. W. A. Lambeth and family will leave Gastonia next Monday for a stay of ten days in New York City.

Married, at the residence of Mr. Guy P. Harris, Harrisville, N. C., on February 11, 1923, Mr. John M. Robinson to Mrs. Ada B. Sasser, Andrew J. Groves officiating.

Mrs. W. E. Poovey, the wife of our pastor at Marion, is in the Biltmore hospital, where she underwent a serious operation last week. Her friends will rejoice to learn of her speedy recovery.

Rev. Sam Maxwell, who is now at Yale University, New Haven, Conn., writes that he can serve some pastor in an Easter revival campaign. Any pastor interested will take note of this announcement.

Rev. J. C. Brown sends us this message from the Landis circuit: "Our Sunday school is growing at Landis. We have on roll now about seventy. We are expecting a great year on the Landis circuit. The interest is good on the work as a rule."

Mrs. E. M. Hoyle writing from Cornelius to the Advocate adds these agreeable words about the pastor, Rev. J. H. Bradley: "Our new preacher seems to be just the man we need and we hope to break the record and keep him four or five years."

"The Model Church," by Rev. C. T. Thrift, of Farmville, has just come from the Advocate press. This is a small pamphlet which can be read in an hour, and the time could not be spent to greater profit. The price is 10 cents, single copy; $3.50 per 100. Order from the author.

Rev. E. H. McWhorter will begin revival services in his church at Aberdeen the fourth Sunday in March. Rev. W. W. Peele will do the preaching. He is a former pastor of that church and the people of the community are looking forward with delight to the return of Mr. Peele, who is now the eminently popular pastor of Edenton Street church, Raleigh.

"The Reverend Daniel Herndon Tuttle requests the honour of your presence at the marriage of his daughter, Sally May, to Mr. William Ryal Woodall, on Wednesday, the twenty-first of February, at nine o'clock in the evening, Centenary Methodist church, Smithfield, North Carolina." We extend in advance of the happy event both good wishes and congratulations.

We met a little while ago a lady who is said to be the best business woman in North Carolina, and like a sensible reader of the Advocate is accustomed to do she was commending the paper and concluded with this rather remarkable statement that when three years of age she learned her letters in the Advocate. That was an early start for the child and the Advocate had the honor of becoming a helper in that good work. We wish we were at liberty to give the lady's name; it would interest all Carolinians. The lesson is, subscribe for the Advocate.

Bishop and Mrs. James Atkins entertained last week at a beautifully appointed dinner in their elegant new residence at Lake Junaluska. The sun parlor and living room were beautiful with an array of bright colored potted plants. The color scheme used in the dining room was white and green. The narcissus being used as the flower scheme. A delicious five-course dinner was served. Covers were laid for eight. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Jas. E. Dickerson, Asheville, Gen. and Mrs. Robert Gilmer, Dr. and Mrs. John Shackford, Nashville, Tenn.—Courier.

Mr. W. H. Hall, president of the Young Men's Bible class, Canton, announces that his class offers $50 to start a subscription among the Bible classes of the Western North Carolina conference for the purchase of a seven-passenger car for the Children's Home at Winston-Salem. This action is the result of a suggestion in the Advocate by Rev. C. A. Wood, the superintendent, that the Home greatly needs such a car. If other classes will respond with $25, $50 or $100 contributions the amount can soon be raised. The Advocate will take pleasure in making acknowledgement of such contributions. What say the Bible classes of Western North Carolina to this proposition from the Canton Bible class? Who will be the first to respond?

If any reader of the Advocate knows where some good second hand church seats can be bought, please write to Mr. John H. Jones, Timberlake, N. C.

DURHAM TALKS BACK TO "BETSY"

The Durham district is not boasting of what will be done in the Advocate campaign. The boys in the trenches say that they expect to lead as usual. The Durham does not talk; it rides in the band wagon. That is the record of one year ago, and things are taking shape again. Tell Culbreth that he need not think that he has everything in a swing even though he is eldery in the "Betsy" district.

ANTI-KU KLUX LEGISLATION

In its passage of the Milliken bill the House will receive the approval of all good citizens of North Carolina. It is to be presumed that the Senate will not annul what the House has done. If any changes are made it should be to the strengthening of the measure that at this writing has passed the second reading in the House. We are anxious to see a law enacted that will bring us Americans to look all other Americans in the face. There is something wrong when men come to trust in the mask. It is good to know what sort of company men keep. "Let a little sunshine in."

"Four hundred and sixty-seven years ago the first book was printed from movable type. That book was the Bible and it took five years to complete the task. One of these books sold recently for $50,000. Today great presses printing for the American Bible Society are turning off copies of the Gospels at the rate of 10,000 an hour to be sold in the whole world for one cent each. In the intervening years the Bible has never been off the press. It has had a steady run for more than four centuries. Yet if all the Bibles printed in all the years since printing was invented were available today, there would not be enough to supply the world's present population. The present rate of production of Bibles is not as great as the birth rate. Large portions of the population of the world are still unable to get the whole Bible or even a main part in their native tongue. It must be said to the credit of the church that a vast work has been done in giving the Bible to the world. In whole or in part the Bible has been translated into 770 languages or dialects. During the past decade the Bible has appeared in a new language on an average of every six weeks. In the past century some 550,000,000 copies of the Bible have been prepared by the Bible Societies."

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY AND DIVORCE

The bill pending in the legislature that would make insanity a ground for divorce should be killed dead as a door nail. So should any and all measures that would loosen the divorce laws. According to the plain teachings of Jesus Christ there is but one ground for divorce and that is adultery, and a Christian lawmaker has no moral right to even consider any other.

A majority of the members of the present General Assembly profess to be Christian men and if these men obey the plain words of the Master there will be no letting down the gap on the grounds of an expediency that rests wholly upon the dictates of the flesh, or some other low consideration.

Christian men when they come to legislate on moral questions should stand by the explicit instructions of Jesus Christ. Will our legislators at Raleigh do so? If they do we have nothing to fear as to results. We are glad to see that the News and Observer, as usual, is on the right side of this great moral issue.

RUTHERFORD COLLEGE NOTES

The college enrollment is now 206.

Rev. W. F. Elliott will begin the protracted meeting at Bolinger's chapel next Sunday with preaching at 11 a. m. by Evangelist R. A. Taylor, who will preach during the meeting. Mr. Elliott will preach at the college chapel Sunday at 11 a. m.

Pastor W. F. Elliott preached an excellent sermon at the college last night, baptized Rev. R. A. Taylor's baby and announced the reception of six members by certificate.

The college boys are conducting a prayer meeting each morning this week in the college basement at 6:30. This is encouraging.

Miss Grace Bradley was here last Saturday to make arrangements for the Epworth League Institute.

News has reached here that Rev. L. E. Stacy is quite ill with pneumonia at his home at Fallston. His first wife was a sister of Mrs. J. W. Glass and the mother of Mrs. Charles Weaver, once president of this college.

The Epworth League of the Marion district will hold an institute at this place beginning March 16. The two most outstanding features of this institute will be, first, it will be an efficiency institute, which means that each delegate attending all the meetings of the institute will be given a certificate counting a unit on the Christian culture diploma; second, Mr. E. O. Haskin of the central office and author of "Phunology" will be present and give several addresses. He will also direct the social features of the occasion.

We hope soon to have work renewed on the walls of our new church, but the weather remains too uncertain to start in just yet. However, much rock and sand are needed and wagons may find work any day at hauling rock from the quarries. The treasurer, Rev. W. F. Elliott, is in a receptive mood and —yes, smiles every time a payment is made.

J. T. Stover.

REV. W. S. HALES IS DEAD

Last Monday evening at 8 o'clock Rev. W. S. Hales, our pastor at Badin and one of the well known members of the Western North Carolina conference, died at his home in Badin following a few days' illness with pneumonia. He was at the time of his death slightly better of the pneumonia, but his heart gave out.

The funeral services were held at Badin Wednesday at 11 o'clock. Dr. T. F. Marr, his presiding elder, assisted by Rev. John F. Kirk, pastor of First church, Salisbury, and Rev. J. Ed. Thompson, pastor at Belmont and a conference classmate of Brother Hales. The interment was in the Charlotte cemetery.

Rev. W. S. Hales joined the North Carolina conference at Wilson in 1879, making this his forty-fourth year in the itinerant ministry. Of the men who entered the conference with him, Revs. J. Ed. Thompson and F. L. Townsend of the Western North Carolina conference, J. O. Guthrie, F. B. McCall and D. A. Watkins of the North Carolina conference are still living. Only three members of the W. N. C. conference, Revs. D. Atkins, J. A. Cook and W. M. Boring, are now in the active work who have served longer than he.

At the first session of the Western North Carolina conference, which convened at Concord November 26, 1890, Rev. W. S. Hales was appointed to the Mt. Pleasant circuit. This was his second year on that charge. His appointments from that date to the present are as follows: '92, King's Mountain; '93, Thomasville station; '94, '95, '96, '97, Greensboro circuit; '98, '99, '00, Ruffin circuit; '01, '02, '03, Uwharrie circuit; '04, Kernersville circuit; '05, '06, Ansonville circuit; '07, '08, Belmont Park, Charlotte; '09, '10, Pineville circuit; '11, '12, Stanley Creek; '13, '14, '15, Gibsonville; '16, First Street, Albemarle; '17, '18, '19, '20, China Grove; '21, '22, Kerr Street, Concord; '23, Badin.

His was a long and spotless record as an itinerant Methodist preacher. He was the very soul of honor. No stain ever touched his escutcheon. Fidelity to every trust was written large over every page of his life. There was nothing of the meteoric about him, but for more than forty-three consecutive years he served well his day and generation and now has the plaudit of his Lord, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

One of the last acts of his earthly ministry was to receive 23 new members into his church at Badin where he had entered upon a successful year. The incident is suggestive of the career of this quiet, faithful minister who wrought so well for his Master.

He leaves a wife, one daughter, Miss Ethel, who teaches in Concord, a son in Philadelphia and another son who is a student at Rutherford College, to mourn the going away of a devoted husband and a kind and affectionate father. The bereaved have our tenderest sympathies.

From The Inkhorn of an Itinerant

A BLOT ON OUR ANGLO SAXON ESCUTCHEON

The land rings from side to side with the doings of the Klu Klux Klan. The newspapers are full of their foul deeds, and legislative halls resound with voices many for and against this crowd that fears the light of day. In this respect, they are like a certain personage mentioned in a good old Book with which we are all familiar. Men of courage and a high sense of honor—men of Anglo-Saxon blood and spirit—are not ashamed to let their identity be known.

Such an order is doomed. The history of Anglo-Saxon love of fair play; the struggles for English liberty through the centuries; the principles upon which America rests; the constitution which knows no race, class or creed; the right of every man to be tried by his peers in open court; the fundamental principles upon which our Protestantism rests; the practice of men of honor and courage; and the demands of our holy religion are all against the methods of the coward and midnight assassin, even though it be done in the name of law and order by misguided men, who, in other respects are regarded citizens above reproach. The old doctrine that such procedure must be tolerated that good may come is the doctrine of the Jesuit—an order that has blackened the pages of history and has been spurned by the nations that loved honor and fair play. How long must this blot remain on our escutcheon?

A PEOPLE ON WHEELS

It has been said that the difference between China and America is the difference the wheel has made. This is an exaggeration and has but a semblance of fact behind it; still, enough remains to occasion serious consideration, for a people with wheelbarrows on their heads must be quite different from a people with wheels under them. The wheel enters largely into American life, even though we ignore the number of Americans with wheels in their heads.

Itinerant moves around over the country no little, especially in North Carolina, and he never passes a day in going across the country but a new sense of appreciation of what is being done in this commonwealth crowds in upon him. During the wet, snowy weeks of the winter in the sections of the hard-surface or of the well kept sand-clay roads, business has gone right on. Utterly impossible is it for the sections mired down to keep up with these more progressive neighborhoods. The tendency is for the more progressive spirits to move out to the places of finer possibilities, leaving the rest to struggle on in a losing fight with untoward circumstance.

We scarcely realize the change that has come with the motor car. Once farmers spent all the day to go to market; now they go in a few hours. A Ford car will carry more stuff fifteen miles an hour than a two-horse wagon could take at the rate of three miles a few years ago. Often, at country churches, not a vehicle is seen save the motor car. The people are on wheels and the good road is a necessity. It costs big money and it will continue to cost, but then the direct tax to good roads is not to be compared with the indirect tax to bad roads. Mud and sand clog the wheels of progress. The wheel is rolling us on.

BACK OF A MAN'S OUTLOOK

The average American believes strongly in being the architect of his own fortune and the arbiter of his own destiny. His outlook is self-determined. Self-made, he is proud of his maker and very sure that he has blazed the trail along which his feet are destined to go. Forgetful, if not ignorant, of the blood and sweat of yesterday, greedily and recklessly he claims the tomorrows. Such attitude of mind and limitation of life tends to make us a nation of ingrates—thankless, cruel and sceptical.

Man is not the measure of all things save as he is related to all else and relates himself to the past and the present and the future. As the little flower in the crannied wall is related to all things in heaven and earth so is he who is above flowers and sparrows, a part of all that is in heaven and earth. Back of the individual man, calm and unafraid, forgetful and self-sufficient, with face set like a flint, remain in the flesh or out of it, father and mother and a long hereditary line of varied breed. Homes, schools, churches, governments, occupations, fields and forests, mountains and deserts, storms and sunshine, ideals and aspirations, God and the eternities, have gone into the making of this line. We are all a most vital part of all that has gone before and of all that is over and above us. In this, our own favored land, where some would have us to live our life apart from all the peoples of earth, we know that the best of our possessions came across the water. Our language and our literature, our laws and principles of government, our traditions and religious heritage all came out of the years that have fled. Though dead and gone, as we say in common speech, the generations are always with us and the shadow of the past hangs over us—more glorious still, the light of the centuries shine on the pathway ahead. Could we be duly appreciative of our debt to the past, in this larger respect, and of the favors done us by newsboy and milkman while we are still asleep, by the sailor who sails the seas and the farmer who plows the fields, by the truth-seeker in library and laboratory, by the mothers who mother the race and the saints who make us sure of God, we would be more grateful for the blessings bestowed and, consequently, the happier all the day through. How the groan would give place to gladness and the miseries would turn into a hallelujah! Life would be a joy and God a glorious reality.

"Back of the loaf is the snowy flour,
And back of the flour the mill,
And back of the mill the sun and the shower,
The rain and the Father's will."

A kindly feeling for all earnest souls constrains us to a sense of pity for the zealous mortals who, ever and anon, must with hot haste, and, at times, with bitterness of spirit, come to defend God and His Book and their own notions about the fundamentals of the kingdom. They cry out with intense bitterness of spirit against the scientific and religious theories that have their little day and cease to be, as though the sun would cease to shine, and God would cease to be, were they not heard. It all argues a want of faith in God and especially in Him who came to show us God. He walked in fine assurance of the reality of the Father, free from all the theories of man, with the one purpose to save the lost, and with no word of vituperation save against those who did not ring true—such as the Scribes and Pharisees whose religion was a matter of the non-essentials for which they would compass land and sea to make one proselyte.

Man is the product of the ages and the outcome of the eternities, the offspring of deity and a being incurably religious; therefore, he is eternally related and needing not the defense of man's puny effort. Moreover, he need not attempt to isolate himself from the past and to live mindful only of his own selfish interests. To live wisely and well, he must hold fast to his heritage and have a regard for posterity. A curse rests upon the man who will not plant trees for another generation, as well as upon the man so ungrateful as not to be thankful for the fruit of an ancient planting. From generation to generation is the order of God's movements. A recognition of this truth contributes to an unwavering faith in the God who is on His throne and renders more glorious the outlook—across the land and beyond the stars.

THINK ON THIS

"The conditions of a man's character is of more concern than the character of a man's condition," is the putting of the situation in dealing with Dives and Lazarus, in a Sunday school class of Trinity boys, by Dr. W. I. Cranford. Lazarus in the one case, Dives in the other, furnished the opportunity for this great thinker and humble Christian to drive home an important truth in a great way. Think about that; turn it over; run it out across life; view it from the vantage ground of the beyond, the more striking becomes the doctrine set forth. These Trinity boys have a rare privilege did they only know it. They will appreciate it one day as they older grow.

THE N. C. CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

What the North Carolina Christian Advocate is, and why every Methodist should read it, is a fact that should engage our attention as we enter upon the Advocate campaign.

The prophet, Hosea, said: "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." And I am free to say that many of our Methodist people fail to measure up to duty for lack of information. And much of this information must be gotten in the columns of the church paper.

It is my purpose in this article to give a kind of outline of the bill of fare that comes to us each week in the N. C. Christian Advocate.

One of ability said to me recently that the editorial paragraphs on the front page are worth the price of the paper.

The writings of preachers and laymen on subjects both moral and religious furnish us much food to mind and soul.

The children's page with the stories that teach a moral is adapted to childhood, and as they grow older they will learn to read the whole paper.

The Epworth League is an important organization of our church, for it develops the young life and fits them for any place in the church. So the League work is given a place in the Advocate to report what these young people are doing for the Master.

The Sunday school page. It is worth while to read what O. V. Woosley, our stem winding secretary of the S. S. work, has to say, as well as the writings of others on this important phase of our work.

The Woman's Work. The good women are doing a great work. And the reports that they bring to us in the Advocate each week are stirring and helpful. Read all about what they are doing.

The letters from the pastors who are on the firing line should be read with keen interest, for this shows how the war is going.

And who is he who is not interested in the progress of his church? Listen! One pastor writes, "We had a great meeting at Smith's Grove. The Spirit was with us in great power. The whole church was revived. There were eighty-seven professions and forty-eight taken into the church. We keep up with the progress of the church by reading the church paper.

Brother Wood of our Children's Home has a page to tell us how we are taking care of the children.

Then we notice who have fallen on the battlefield as conquerors and gone to their reward.

The announcement of the quarterly conference is no small item.

Another says: "I don't like the paper." If I am invited to take a meal and the table is loaded with the best of food of all kinds and I sit down, look over the table, say I don't like it and walk away, what would you say? He is sick or has no appetite.

So after this bill of fare, a church member says I don't like the paper he is abnormal to say the least.

Our editors are giving us such a good paper, let us move onward and roll up to the thirty thousand mark.

E. N. Crowder.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE FAYETTEVILLE DISTRICT

Dear Brethren:

The campaign is on again for the Advocate for renewals and new subscribers. The fields are white unto harvest and we can yet do a great amount of good by carefully and intelligently working our fields for subscribers.

You can see the importance of diligent effort just now. We have the largest circulation for the Advocate of any conference organ in Southern Methodism. We cannot afford to lose a single subscriber for that reason. Then who can estimate the value of Christian literature in the homes of our people? This country is flooded with all sorts of papers, books, magazines and literature both good and bad.

May I insist that each of you make a special business-like canvass at once. We must have one of those free trips to Lake Junaluska for the Fayetteville district. Let us do our part.

If I can assist you call on me.

B. E. Stanfield,
Director, Fayetteville District.

THE SOUTHERN METHODIST CHURCH MUST GO FORWARD IN ITS WORLD PROGRAM

The quadrennium just closed marks the most brilliant period in the history of the Southern Methodist church. In the hour of a world war there came to our church the vision of a great world enterprise. To the world need there awoke in the hearts of our people a wonderful response. In the history of Christianity no denomination ever rallied to a task more courageously than has Southern Methodism to the Centenary Movement.

With the presentation of the world's need a million of our membership subscribed thirty-seven millions of dollars for the enlargement of a program for world evangelization. Most carefully had the committee of one hundred and the Centenary Commission made a survey of our responsibility in the fields which we had already occupied and in the new fields to which we felt called.

Our church under the direction of the Board of Missions has conscientiously followed out that world survey as laid down from the beginning of the Centenary period. Nearly seventeen millions of dollars of new money has been collected. We have felt the tremendous spring of our church at home and have seen with great joy the advance in the home field.

The spirit of co-operation and of faith which possessed our church in this world program at home spread across the seas and the self-same spirit was reproduced in every mission field in foreign lands. Our church has moved with such wonderful rapidity and the enlargement has come in such a brief time that we were scarcely aware of the demands that would be upon us in the immediate future. There can be no just criticism of this great advance and enlargement, or in the administration of the funds for the purposes for which they were raised.

The demand for adequate finance to continue the program on the Centenary basis is crucial in every field at home and abroad. For some reason or reasons the payment of the Centenary pledges has not kept pace with the demand for money. It is needless now to discuss what these reasons may be. We face a great and immediate emergency in which the collection of pledges must be made. Four millions of dollars collected by the first of May is the minimum amount that will take care of the program which is now on. This is not an impossible task for our church. We are able to take care of this situation, but to do it every conference and every district and every charge in Southern Methodism must pay their quota of this four millions of dollars.

The enlarged work has been undertaken in good faith by our church, believing that the men and women who subscribed this money would redeem their pledges. The need of the hour will be told in every conference, and in every church in every conference. Bishops, secretaries, pastors and laymen have pledged themselves that this money shall be collected. Surely every church and every subscriber will count it a joy to do their part in this great emergency to which we have come in our Centenary program. The accomplishment of the task of the collection of four millions of dollars by May 1st, demands a co-operation of every factor, every element that goes to our great church organization. Payments of pledges in this hour may mean self-sacrifice on the part of many of the subscribers to the Centenary fund, but if it means sacrifices, it will also bring a greater blessing.

Let our whole church arise as one man and move forward until the victory is assured.

W. B. Beauchamp.

THE BIBLE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

We have the same constitution that we had in 1873, so far as the present subject is concerned. In a great majority of the public schools of North Carolina fifty years ago the New Testament was used as a reading book. This practice was occasioned by two causes, (1) the scarcity of readers, and (2) in the New Testament the subject matter concerned vital things, revealed everlasting truths and expressed in a manner that made of them then, as well as now, the finest of literature. Nobody raised any howl then. Why should there be a howl now?

Is there any sound fear why anybody should be injured by hearing the Word of God read daily? On the contrary, there are many reasons why all should be benefitted. The state recognizes a God in the oaths she administers. Is it inconsistent that her children hear the word of that same God read?

There are too many evidences of the influences the Bible and the religious truths it teaches have had on our citizenship and our civilization to outlaw its use among the children, who, in this restless age, are in dire need of just such training as the reading, if not the study, of the Bible furnishes. There is much more substantial benefit and less harm in the reading of the Bible than the reading and study of many of the mythological stories that creep into school literature. The position we are taking on the use of the Bible in the public school smacks too much of the stunt of straining at a gnat and swallowing a whale.—The Uplift.

BREVARD INSTITUTE

By C. H. Trowbride.

The regular Centenary revival service for Brevard Institute was conducted January 22-26, by Rev. C. S. Kirkpatrick, of Hickory, North Carolina. Brother Kirkpatrick served as pastor of Brevard station more than ten years ago and he was particularly welcome and particularly able to get into the hearts of the pupils. He reached Brevard Monday afternoon and conducted a brief introductory service that night. Thereafter he preached morning and night in the institute study hall until Saturday morning. In addition to these preaching services he held office hours for consultation with individual students through the morning of each day and he attended and took part in the early morning prayer meetings before breakfast each morning. His clear-cut, logical sermons carried conviction, and his attractive personality and his own enjoyment of religion served to increase the personal appeal of his service. The word was preached with power throughout the meeting and resulted in convictions and reclamations in each service. The Thursday night meeting was one of wonderful power. It has rarely been equaled and has never been surpassed in the writer's experience. The boarding students attended each service regularly and were eager for the word of truth. The day students came in considerable numbers, and those who did so were blessed.

A religious census taken in the dormitories before the meeting showed 85 who considered themselves to be Christians, 36 who felt they were not, and 21 who were doubtful. Of these 142 pupils 133 were church members. So far as is known, only two of those who were not Christians refused to give their hearts to God, though it is impossible to count definitely the decisions of young people. Several who previously had considered themselves Christians learned during the meeting that they were not, and sought and found a deeper work in their hearts.

Every effort is being made to conserve the results of the meeting. In the first place, Brother Kirkpatrick held out no impracticable doctrine and closed the meeting with the feeling strong that the fight was beginning and not already won. The pupils seem to realize that they must keep busy and they all seem eager for any form of Christian activity. The Institute Sunday school trains two sets of officers each year, and the new officers have been installed since the meeting. They have been selected from among the usually careful students who had not considered themselves Christians but who had real experiences during the meeting.

The Sunday school class is taken as the unit for religious and philanthropic work, and at times operates very much as an old-fashioned Methodist class meeting did. The members talk quite freely to each other and all feel a personal responsibility for the others.

The students were assigned to classes last fall with this plan in view, and they are quite homogeneous spiritually. The tasks assigned each class are therefore such as appeal to the disposition of the individuals composing them. An effort is made within each class to consider the personality and the religious status of each member in the actual working out of the class duty.

The spiritual condition of the school has never seemed better, and it is hoped that the results of the meeting and of the follow up work may be felt throughout the state as the pupils go to their homes.

THE PROVINCIAL NEW YORKER SHOULD VISIT NORTH CAROLINA

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, New York City, is quoted by Dr. William Louis Poteat, president of Wake Forest College, as dissenting from the grounds of the Eighteenth Amendment, and as regarding the "statutes based upon it as forcible and immoral and a tyrannical invasion of private life and personal conduct." Dr. Butler goes further and announces that the amendment "can never be enforced by any expenditure of money and effort." That there is a grain of truth in all of this Dr. Poteat vigorously denies.

It may be that Dr. Butler has lived in New York too long that he needs to get outside and see America a bit. He might profit by a suggestion made by an Ohio man to the editorial staff of the New York World, as follows:

"A man I know who transacts business in both New York and Cleveland says there are two kinds of citizens in New York. One class maintains that civilization only reaches as far as Yonkers, and the other class concedes mankind may be considered civilized as far as Poughkeepsie.

"Of course this fact explains why your New York wet journals do not know that there is a Middle West. Especially The World seems thus affected. Now we, living in this wilderness, wish that in some way The New York World and others of the kind could be made to see that the Middle West and the Far West look on booze-killing laws as a sign of progress, that the condition of wetness which New York delights in is obsolescent, that it is un-American. Furthermore, New York is not considered of prime importance by the ninety-five per cent of the United States which does not live within its borders, and that in consequence it will have to come into line with the great majority of the people of this country. In other words, the tail can't wag the dog. The country is through with booze, light or heavy. . . . .

"The New York World ought to send its editorial force out into the American portion of the United States and see the progress that is being made outside of the "civilized" area which ends at Poughkeepsie. They might find that New York, with its European population and customs, is not the United States."

An invitation is herewith extended to Dr. Butler to visit North Carolina, for instance. G. M. Daniel.

WE ARE FACING AN EMERGENCY

A. J. Weeks.

Our church is facing right now a real emergency and it is important that every Methodist understand just how real and how serious it is. The Centenary period is practically over, but the Centenary task is not quite finished. Of the $35,000,000 pledged in the Centenary campaign, about $16,000,000 has been collected; and practically all of the remainder is now due. Unless $4,000,000 can be collected on past due pledges by the first of May our missionary program will be seriously interfered with. Since the beginning of the Centenary we have built many churches, schools and other institutions necessary to the best and most successful missionary work. We have sent out 240 new missionaries, thus almost doubling our forces in the field. This enlarged force of workers and greater number of institutions places upon the church an added financial responsibility. In good faith improvements were made, larger and better institutions were established and a large force of workers sent to the front. The maintenance of our enlarged work depends upon the collection of Centenary funds.

Realizing the extreme need our bishops, secretaries, presiding elders, and other interested laymen are entering into a campaign which will continue four months is necessary to gather these needed funds. It is a time when the last Methodist must do his best. So far the Centenary has absolutely made good. The church has had the greatest success of its history during this Centenary period, and this success has been in every foreign field we occupy, as well as in the homeland. Meetings are being held now throughout the church and will be continued until the last congregation and the last subscriber to the Centenary fund is reached.

The honor of the church is involved, as the success of our part of the missionary enterprise depends upon the immediate redemption of our pledges.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES

I have a bound volume of "The Methodist Magazine" of 1818, twelve monthly issues, published by J. Soule and T. Mason for the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States. John C. Totten, printer. In the February issue I find a table of statistics that I thought probably would interest some of the readers of the Advocate. The table verbatim:

Table with 2 columns: Location and Number. Includes entries for America (White, Colored), Ohio Conference, Missouri, Tennessee, Mississippi, South Carolina, Virginia, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, New England, Genesee, and Grand total.

Table with 2 columns: Location and Number. Includes entries for Europe (Great Britain, Ireland, France, Southern and Western Africa, Ceylon and Continental India, New South Wales, West Indies, British America and Newfoundland), Total, and American connection.

Total No. in world .....462,611 Number traveling preachers stationed in America, 716.

Number traveling preachers in European Methodism: Stationed in Great Britain, 671; Ireland, 104; foreign missions, 101.

Total number traveling preachers throughout the world, 1592.

From the above it will appear obvious to every candid and impartial reader that the Wesleyan Methodist have not been the least among the various religious denominations in their missionary zeal and labor.—Minutes of the year 1817. A. G. Loftin.

THE NEVER HEARD OF

I have heard of pastors being snowed under, presiding elders showered, editors badly sprinkled—but think of a local evangelist being stormed!

The good people of Glenwood, Nealsville, N. C., came in on us with many good things, for which we are thankful. May the Lord richly bless them. J. D. Pyatt.

WELL RECEIVED AT PRINCETON

We have been received on the Princeton circuit for our fourth year. We are not so fortunate as our neighboring pastor, Brother Holden, because of the scarcity of preachers, still the Princeton people are always ready to keep their preacher, and did so by giving us a good pounding, for which we are grateful. Although this was a little severe, the pounding spirit is kept up over the work, for the pastor is continually receiving good things. May God send His blessings on these good people and help us to do our duty. W. G. Farrar.

A FEW WORDS FROM HELTON

To the Advocate Family:

Perhaps a word from Helton would not be out of order as I have not written this year. The outlook is very good now. I have held two of my revival meetings with the average success. There are several candidates for church membership.

This is our fourth year on the charge and we feel that it will be as good as the preceding years.

The people seem to be interested more than common. They raised the assessment for pastor's salary about two hundred and fifty dollars. Also they did not forget to pound us. Brethren, pray for us this year that God's will may be done. W. E. Moretz, P. C.

FROM THE MACON CIRCUIT

My whole family and I have been fighting "flu" since January 13th. I am not able for much business yet. Rev. John T. Teague is in charge of my work for the present.

Flu, bad weather, awful roads, etc., have put a quietus on most every business here. Several deaths, mostly among the aged, some yet seriously ill.

I organized last year every way required by the Discipline. Also I hold communion and church conference services in mid-week preceding each quarterly conference. However, sickness prevented my first round for this year, which should have begun January 13—quarterly meeting January 28. And because of this I was not able to start up the campaign for the Advocate; but inclosed you will find names and addresses of Advocate committee. Incidentally this will also furnish postoffices in the bounds of my charge. W. I. Hughes.

MARION DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTICE

The Marion district conference will convene at Rutherfordton on March 18th at 7:30 p. m. and will close on the 21st at noon.

The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. W. F. Elliott of Connelly Springs, followed by the administration of the Lord's Supper.

All the pastors are requested to be present for a brief conference immediately after the service.

All connectional and conference representatives are cordially invited.

Committees—License: W. E. Poovey, R. C. Goforth and J. J. Gray. Orders and Recommendations: W. R. Ware, J. C. Postelle and Parker Holmes.

Z. Paris, P. E.

FROM "THE GRAVEYARD OF THE ATLANTIC"

The graveyard of the Atlantic is still on the map, although we have been silent since conference.

Yes, we have been pounded again, and this time from all quarters, with good things too numerous to mention—and they continue to pound.

We know what it is to have good fish and oysters here. Come and prove it, and see a community of Methodists. The Conference Journal, by mistake, gives us no credit for baptizing babies, but our report shows we baptized forty last year.

Our people received us gladly on our return for the second year. We live in the midst of a kindly people. They are not all saints, but we have some of the salt of the earth here. We are hoping to make some improvements on some of the churches this year in order to take care of our Sunday schools, of which we are justly proud. Our Sunday school enrollment far outnumbers our church membership.

Surely the Lord has blessed us in our labors here with this people. And as we continue to receive expressions of appreciation from them we humble ourselves and bow the knee to our heavenly Father and ask Him to give us grace and wisdom to be a true pastor to them and that the Christ may be magnified both in our ministry and in our daily life.

We will not forget the Advocate in our ministrations. J. M. Joliff.

THE DISTRICT LAY LEADERS MEET

A meeting of the district lay leaders of the Western North Carolina conference was held at Salisbury on February 8th.

Nine of the eleven districts were represented. The other two were unavoidably detained on account of being sick and being members of the legislature. This was, indeed, a very fine showing, which indicates an intense interest on the part of all of the district lay leaders. We believe that this can be improved upon in our next meeting by having the associate lay leaders present with lay leaders.

Our general secretary, Brother Morelock, was present and gave us a full resume of the work of the whole church and brought an inspiring message to all. Brothers T. F. Marr and John Kirk were with us to help, encourage and advise us.

We endeavored to get a grasp upon the problems that confront this conference and decided upon certain definite action which we are exceedingly anxious to have put into effect at once.

The following things confront us:

First, We think it most important that the every-member canvass be put on in every church for the purpose of providing a subscription budget for all of the running expenses of the church. If this has not been done it should be done without further delay. The necessity for a subscription from every member of the church—however young—was stressed.

Second, A service every Sunday in every church in every work is one of the things that we want to accomplish.

Third, We want to stress evangelism as the impelling force in our efforts to carry on our work.

It was decided that the laymen's work was not to supercede any of the organizations now functioning in the church, but was to be an aid and an assistant to all of these organizations in order to help them carry out successfully the work that they are created to perform.

The elders will be requested to call, at an early date—not later than between the 1st and 10th of April—a meeting to be held in each presiding elder's district with all the lay workers in the district with a view of helping as much as possible in the carrying out the program laid out by the Board of Lay Activities.

One of the important things that is now before us is the collection of the Centenary pledges. The lay workers are, therefore, urged to aid the Centenary treasurers in their efforts to collect these amounts. Where parties have died or misfortune has overtaken them the local congregations are urged to assume these shortages and thus make the Centenary a financial success.

An executive committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. C. H. Ireland, E. A. Cole, Fred N. Tate, George L. Hackney and A. D. Ivie.

The pastors are requested to provide minute speakers before each service during the month of March with the view of pressing the collection of the Centenary subscriptions.

We have a big program, but are able to perform the work. We are working for the most successful year we have had in the conference. To this end let us all labor and pray.

Yours very truly,

Charles H. Ireland, Conf. Lay Leader.

NOT WRITING BUT SAWING WOOD

We have not been writing to the paper, but nevertheless we have been trying to saw wood. We have a loyal people here at Westford. They have painted the parsonage, put some new furniture into it, have furnished most of the lumber for me to make a garage, have paid several hundred dollars on old debts, have been keeping four or five children in the Near East, besides many dollars spent on regular expenses. The board of stewards have adopted the budget system and are endeavoring to pay as they go.

We have a good Sunday school, Epworth League, Ladies' Aid Society and several classes in the Sunday school which are equal to an Aid Society. We have one of the best choirs and usually have two prayer meetings each week.

On our part, we have built a garage and storage house together, have painted some in parsonage, done some work on yard and have taken a religious census of our community. We have added a few names to our church roll, but there are many more that ought to be on our roll whose names are scattered here and there. Then we have a large class of people who are not members of any church.

Next week we expect to have all the resident Methodist preachers of Concord preach for us. We have six resident preachers who will occupy our pulpit one at a time, from Monday evening to Saturday evening. We are expecting a great time.

J. C. Umberger.

FROM EAST LAURINBURG

We have a good preacher and we all love him. Mr. Culbreth has been doing some plain preaching; he certainly gives us the medicine right.

Our Sunday school is fine. We have an average of about 280; our offerings will average $8.

We are expecting our presiding elder, Mr. Shore, to preach for us next Sunday night. He will tell us something good. H. L. Caison.

IN SEARCH OF THE GRAIL

By Mary Preston Bynum.

The crusaders of long ago
Set forth upon their quest
With steadfast hearts and spirits true,
Nor ever dared to rest;
So, Lord, may we crusaders be,
Thy word our coat of mail,
Thy Truth and light our armor bright,
Thy holy will our grail.

May we be strong and brave and true,
As quick to do the right
As all the strongest, truest knights
Who fought the bravest fight;
Till battles done and victories won,
And dangers met and past,
With radiant souls we reach our goals,
And find our grail at last.

THANKS TO BOSTIC CIRCUIT PEOPLE

I wish through the Advocate to express my thanks to the people of Bostic circuit for the many acts of kindness shown us since our return here for the third year. We have had many kind and encouraging words from many of the people; but there have been more substantial expressions than words.

These people have built one of the best parsonages in the Marion district and we are now occupying it. It is built of brick and contains six rooms on the first floor and three rooms on second floor. Two of the rooms above are not ceiled, but this could be done in a few days if the rooms are needed.

Well, we have been pounded, too. It began on Thanksgiving day by the Hopewell congregation. We were asked to go out and hold service for them, but when the service was over the people gathered around the preacher's Ford and loaded it to its full capacity—with flour, canned fruit and various kinds of groceries. Then on Thursday before Christmas Bro. J. M. K. Randall, our charge lay leader, came up from Oak Grove, bringing a goodly number of men and women with him. When they were through unloading we found the pantry not only well supplied for Christmas but for days to come. Also the Cedar Grove people sent in the same day a nice box of canned fruit and a bag of apples.

On Saturday, January 20th, the Bostic folks let us know that they could pound, too. So they came in—Methodists, Presbyterians and Baptists. They brought a nice supply of groceries and furnishing to beautify and make more comfortable the new parsonage.

Last but not least the Salem congregation began a pounding Friday morning, January 26, and ended at night, when Bro. E. N. Washburn loaded his truck with men, women and children and drove down to the parsonage. They all came in and we enjoyed the evening together, but when they were leaving we found that it was not only a social visit for they had quietly unloaded on the porch another pounding.

We feel very grateful to these good people for such expressions of love and esteem, and we pray that God may bless each one of them.

L. L. Smith.

A CHURCH WORTHY OF PRAISE

The new Methodist church here is an honor to Southern Methodism. Friends from other towns visiting here say that we have a church that would be a credit to any town within the bounds of our conference. I shall not attempt to give a description of the building for the reason that I could not if I were to try. I can say that it is an up-to-date church built to take care of the Sunday school, the social activities of both young people and woman's department and a splendid auditorium that will seat comfortably six hundred people or more without using the balcony.

The people here have made a great sacrifice to get the church, and the sacrifice is being made in the finest spirit I ever saw manifested. There is not a dissenting voice, not a note out of harmony. The entire church is giving their best in time, brains and money to see that no mistake is made. The spirit and zeal of some of our people here have inspired this entire community. The people from all over the community come and look over the church and express appreciation that the leaders of the church here are doing something worthy of all praise. When it is said that the church is being built to take care of the needs of the fine people in the country for several miles out from Bethel, one sees that there is nothing selfish in the project. In fact that is one of the best things about the program here after all. The idea that since we have good roads leading into town, to build a modern church big enough to take care of the needs and at the same time challenge the respect and admiration of the people from the country will go a long way toward solving our country church problem in this part of the country. In my judgment good roads and automobiles may force us to have fewer churches, but we will have better churches—churches that can and will serve the people better in every way. So with the most unselfish motive and in the finest spirit our people are going their limit to do that which is a credit to them indeed. I might say that the interest already manifested on the part of our good people in the country assure us that it will be a success. It is already a success.

One more thing will be of interest to our people everywhere. Brother Trotman, the former pastor, and his good men here have put over the business side of the project at about half what most congregations would have spent. I venture that there are more brains in the church here than most any other church that has been built within the bounds of our conference within the past year. I have had nothing to do with it, for it was done when I came here, so I speak freely. I make the statement after serious consideration. I think also that our church plans and the method employed in erecting would appeal to some; at least it might be worth time to investigate if you plan to build.

L. L. Smith.

PROGRESS ALL ALONG THE LINE

It is due the Bethel charge, on the Charlotte district, that a few lines be written as to what is transpiring within its bounds.

First, let me say that we experienced the usual Christmas pounding from the Bethel congregation. The night it came was "something fierce" as for weather, enough to stop any other crowd but the Bethelites. There were not so many of them, but the spirit that prompted them to come out such a night made up for the lack of a crowd. Besides this organized pounding we have been the recipients of expressions of good will from the people we serve almost every day since our arrival. If I were not afraid of making other folks envious I would tell about the many visitors that have come to the parsonage with fresh meat, some of them coming the second time, and one good brother brought an honest-to-goodness ham.

There have been large and inspiring congregations to preach to at the principal churches, especially are the young people in evidence. And these young folks are about the most promising that it has been my privilege to meet in many a day.

The stewards have willingly granted a very substantial increase in salary and all the churches have put on, or are arranging to put on, a systematic campaign for raising the finances.

During the latter part of Brother Hunnicutt's pastorate a building program was started at Bethel, the foundation being laid before conference. By the time this is in print, after many delays, we expect to have the roof on what will be one of the best arranged and most imposing country churches in the whole conference. This is saying quite a little but, Brother Sikes, you will back up the statement when you come down next summer. It is an ambitious program that this little company has undertaken, but they are determined to see it through at whatever cost. We expect to be in this building before next conference.

The little town of Oakboro is preparing for the advent of two cotton mills. Our people realize that this means new responsibilities for them and are preparing to meet them.

Taking it all together we are very much encouraged and hope to be able to report progress along all lines of activity. Robert E. Hunt.

STATESVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Statesville district conference will be held in the town of Catawba March 21, 22 and 23. The first day beginning at 9 a. m. will be devoted to organizing the new lay activities in the district. Along with this the Centenary cause will be presented by the official team from Nashville and the district will be organized for that work. All the lay leaders from every church and all the Centenary treasurers are invited to attend as guests, and they will be furnished entertainment just as if they were delegates.

The hospitable people of Catawba greatly desired the conference to meet with them and they are taking no little pleasure in preparing to entertain it in royal style. Let every delegate and invited guest be present.

TO SUPERINTENDENTS OF STUDY AND PUBLICITY AND AUXILIARY PRESIDENTS

In this issue of the Advocate you will find a report of the study work of our conference for 1922 as reported to the conference superintendent of study and publicity. I fear that some of the study work done by the auxiliaries has not been duly reported. If you find, in looking over this report, that the study work of your auxiliary is not being reported, will you please make a special effort to see that it is reported in the future.

A recent letter from our educational secretary, Mrs. H. R. Steele, says: "Let us set as our goal for 1923, 'A Report from Each Auxiliary Each Quarter.' If we can do this, we will have at the end of 1923 the best report that we have ever had.

Urge reports from Young People's and Junior classes. This represents a weak spot in our system of reporting. May we work and pray together this year to strengthen it.

Urge the use of the new report books. The blanks are so much more satisfactory. Our reports will be more accurate when all of the auxiliaries are supplied with the new books.

I have been gratified at the use of the books on the Negro, but we must urge even a larger study of this problem which lies so close to us in the southland. We of the South can help to solve the problem of the interracial relationships. The study of these books will give us the Christian viewpoint and will help us in promoting more friendly relations. The study of these books is social service work as well as mission study. In organizing classes to study this problem we have an opportunity to co-operate with the social service committees."

For the past two years we have been making special effort to promote Bible study in our conference and Mrs. Steele's letter contained the gratifying news that our conference stood second in Bible study among all the conferences in Southern Methodism.

The new year is well on its way and I hope you have already organized your study classes. If you have not please do so at once, that you may complete your book before the heat of the summer months interrupts the work.

The success of the work is due largely to your prayers and your co-operation. With loving good wishes, I am,
Sincerely yours,

Mrs. R. M. Courtney.

DILWORTH AUXILIARY

As it has been quite a while since you have heard from the Dilworth Auxiliary, I write to tell you that we are yet alive and doing fine. To prove to you our spirit of good fellowship we had a social meeting on the afternoon of the 29th from 3:30 to 5:30—a get-together meeting for the purpose of welcoming new members and other friends of our church. Circle No. 2 gave a little play called "The Clinic of a Missionary Specialist," which afforded amusement, at the same time impressing all with the sad fact that we are prone to make so many flimsy excuses when called on to do missionary work and meeting our obligations in the society. We had some fine selections in songs, given by Miss Wood of Dilworth school and Miss Elizabeth Bacon; also had interesting readings by Mrs. Campbell and Miss Mary Ellen Watts, which added greatly to the entertainment.

Circle No. 1 served refreshments, after which all joined in the professional handshake, agreeing to meet socially every fourth Monday.

Yours in the work,
Supt. Study and Publicity.

ANSWER TO MISS LEE

Dear Sisters:

In answer to Miss Lee's appeal in last week's Advocate concerning the scholarship at Paine College, this scholarship of only one hundred and sixty dollars could be paid by thirty-two of our largest auxiliaries paying the sum of five dollars a year.

Or, if 32 of the largest auxiliaries would pay ten a year, and some of the smaller five a year, could we not have a half dozen negro girls of fine character from W. N. C. conference training at Paine to return to our state and give their race the benefit of this training?

Western N. C. Methodists women do not do things by halves. What about it, sisters? Would it not be a fine and encouraging bit of this harvest that lies white at our feet if we garnered in this sheaf?

Then at least the other conferences could "put their finger on" one interracial round of the ladder—anyway, that the W. N. C. conference has begun to climb on!

North Carolina has the reputation of being better to her negroes than any other Southern state. Let us guard this good report with "zealous care" and let men of all classes know that women do not want them to turn beasts and be a party to any mob!

How many auxiliaries will consider this scholarship? Will you let Miss Lee hear from you? She has suggested a splendid thing for our conference and should and I believe will have a fine response.

Mrs. Frederick L. Siler,
Supt. Social Service.

Of all expression, that which cannot be expressed. —Story.

PASSING OF MRS. J. P. BROWN OF FAIRMONT, N. C.

The death of Mrs. Brown brings much sorrow to many hearts. She had been such an active worker in church work of all kinds. Especially was she well informed about the great missionary work that is going on, until a few years ago, when her health became so impaired that she could not keep the work up quite so well as before.

To know Mrs. Brown was to love her. She was a kind, loving friend to all, both young and old. She was much older than I, but I loved her so much and spent many pleasant hours with her. She never forgot to say kind words to sorrowing ones, words of the right kind, words that meant most.

My very deepest sympathy goes out to her loved ones. You, my dear missionary sisters of Fairmont, know better than I how faithful and generous she was to your society. You have missed her faithful attendance and her unselfish service. May you be women who are strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. May you always choose Christ, as she did, until you are called to meet our friend and co-laborer and to be with Him forever.

Goodbye, my dear friend. May God keep me faithful so that I will meet you again. Mrs. Nan Julia Taylor.

THESE 68 EARNED CREDIT

Sixty-eight Sunday school workers representing seven Sunday schools earned the certificates of credit on the Standard Training Course in the Raleigh Standard Training School. These attended regularly and did all the work assigned by the instructors. The enrollment was approximately 150.

The certificates, awarded in the various churches Sunday morning following the close of the school, were distributed as follows: Edenton Street, 42; Central, 17; Orphanage, 3; Jenkins Memorial, 2; North Vanguard Chapel, 2; First Presbyterian, 1; New Garden, Guilford College, 1.

Following are the names of those who earned certificates:

Beginner Organization and Administration, Mrs. M. H. McArdle, Norfolk, Va., instructor—Mrs. L. W. Blanton, Mrs. John Cole, J. R. Sechrest, Mrs. James Thiem, Mrs. Wray White, Miss Mary Frances Craven, Miss Lona Hinchshaw, Mrs. J. B. Martin, and Miss Annie Richardson.

Primary Organization and Administration, Miss Georgia Keene, conference elementary superintendent, Durham, instructor—Miss Carolyn Baldwin, Mrs. Rosa Banks, Miss Alice Best, Miss Bessie B. Brown, Mrs. E. D. Cody, Miss Grace Dillon, Mrs. Clyde A. Dillon, Clyde A. Dillon, Miss Mary D. George, Miss Daisy K. Green, Mrs. L. H. Grubbs, Mrs. Grier Hudson, Miss Mary McGee, Mrs. J. E. Rudy, and Miss Irene Stephenson.

Junior Organization and Administration, Mrs. E. R. Michaux, Greensboro, instructor—Miss Eunice Blair, Miss Bessie T. Brown, Miss Ruth Dew, Mrs. L. M. Ferguson, Mrs. H. I. Glass, Miss Emily Guilford, Mrs. W. H. Harris, Miss Eugenia Herring, Mrs. W. S. Ingram, Miss Eleanor C. Morgan, Miss Henre Eitta Owens, Mrs. W. J. Richardson, G. Rolsma, Mrs. J. R. Sechrest, Miss Mamie Speas, Mrs. Chas. F. Harris, Mrs. D. G. Allen, Miss Mary Thompson, and Mrs. J. E. Stevick.

Organization and Administration of the Sunday School, M. W. Brabham, Nashville, Tenn., instructor—Dr. Albert Anderson, Miss Vara L. Herring, Rev. W. W. Peele, R. E. Prince, Miss Sally Reese, Rev. H. I. Glass, and F. S. Blair.

Pupil Study, Prof. H. E. Spence, Trinity College, Durham, instructor, Mrs. A. S. Barnes, Miss Narcissa Hutchings, Miss Mabel Day, Mrs. Lillian B. Hinson, Mrs. John A. Park, Frank B. Brown, A. F. Roller, Miss Florence Fitzgerald, Miss Pauline Herring, Miss Monnie McDonald, Mayor T. B. Aldridge, Mrs. Lillian Parker Wallace, Dr. C. O. Abernethy, Miss Sadie Ball, Mrs. Ava Crowder, Miss Pearl Whitley, Mrs. L. W. Lancaster, and Mrs. John A. Watts.

TEACHING FOR 25 YEARS

Fifty-two years of regular service as teacher in the Sunday school! Such is the record of Miss Narcissa Hutchings, of Edenton Street church, Raleigh. Miss Hutchings is entitled to a distinguished service medal, but she isn't looking for such recognition. She's one of those faithful souls who delight in serving.

Miss Hutchings, moreover, is not thinking of resigning or retiring, either. Rather is she preparing for even more efficient service in the future. She was one of the sixty-eight who earned the certificate of credit in the Raleigh Standard Training School!

WILSON AWARDS CONTRACT

Contract has been awarded for the construction of an up-to-date Sunday school building at First church, Wilson. Plans call for a departmental Sunday school that will provide for a Sunday school of 1,000. The contract price of the building is $72,000, which, when equipped, will represent an outlay of approximately $80,000 or $85,000. Rev. F. S. Love is the pastor and A. E. Bishop the superintendent.

HAMLET IS MARCHING ON

Hamlet Sunday school is marching on. Listen to this statement of its activities and progress:

"The Sunday school runs like a big machine, doing business on a big scale. After crowding the church to the doors and packing the class rooms to the limit the old Presbyterian church was secured for the Primary department, yet we have about half the equipment needed for the school. We have several organized classes doing good work, but the Daughters of Wesley excels them all and deserves special mention. This is a class of married ladies with a membership of eighty, and new members are added every Sunday. The teacher, Miss Covington, says she must have more room. Frequently it is difficult to find room for all who come. This class visits the sick as well as the new-comers to the city, cares for the needy, holds a business and social meeting every month, and do many other worth-while things that space will not allow recording here."

MISS KEENE IN BURLINGTON

Miss Keene, our elementary superintendent, spent Sunday, February 4, in Burlington in the interest of elementary work in the Alamance city. She reports a splendid Sunday school interest there.

OUR CENTENARY SPECIALS

Our Sunday schools can do themselves and the great Centenary cause a distinct service between now and May 1 by taking care of the Centenary Specials subscribed during the Centenary campaign. There is being organized a great pay-up campaign which will be pressed throughout Methodism in the next few months. Our Sunday schools will be spared any undue pressure; no high pressure will be applied to the Sunday school. Centenary leaders are leaving the matter of collections and cultivation of missionary interest in the Sunday school to Sunday school workers.

We call upon you who have subscribed to Centenary Specials, therefore, to pay up to date and endeavor to keep up. Remittances should be sent to John E. Edgerton, Box 38, Nashville, Tenn. Schools or classes which have paid out and wish to continue systematic missionary giving have an opportunity to select another special. If interested, address L. L. Gobbel, Durham, N. C.

At any rate, let's take care of our pledges!

BRANSON'S NEW BUILDING

Branson, Durham, is progressing with its new building enterprise. A handsome Sunday school and church building is going up on the corner of a prominent square in the eastern part of the city near the old church. Rev. H. C. Ewing is pastor and E. C. Gunter, superintendent.

Western North Carolina Conference

AT CHARLOTTE

We are this week at Charlotte conducting our third annual Standard Training School for our loyal Methodist Sunday school workers. The school is being held at Trinity church and everything in reason is being done by the congregation to make the school a success. The women of the congregation are serving supper in the basement of the church to those who do not have time to get to and from home after work hours. Seven courses are being given and an enrollment of 302 was registered at the opening session. The opening attendance from the various churches was as follows: Trinity 68, Tryon Street 54, Calvary 35, Hawthorne Lane 34, Belmont Park 28, Dilworth 25, Brevard Street 14, Spencer Memorial 12, Duncan Memorial 8, Seversville 2, Chadwick 2, Central, Monroe, 9, Lexington 3, other denominations 8. Our faculty is composed of Miss G. W. Green, Greeleyville, S. C., Miss Marie McDonald, Columbia, S. C., Miss Anna Hansen, Winter Haven, Fla., Rev. J. C. Rohertson, Danville, Va., Mr. M. W. Brabham, Nashville, Tenn., Rev. C. S. Kirkpatrick, Hickory, N. C., and Rev. C. C. Weaver, Monroe, N. C.

NEXT!

Our next Standard Training School will be held at Gastonia where we will co-operate with the Presbyterians in holding a joint school, this being readily done because of the marked similarity of the two courses of study and also because of the fact that there is a working agreement between the Sunday school departments of the two denominations. Brothers Jordan and Lambeth tell me that we will have a fine enrollment at Gastonia, not only from the city but from the entire county, together with King's Mountain in Cleveland county. It takes more than a course of study and a faculty to make a school. It takes folks. It is therefore a distinct satisfaction to know that prospects are good all the way round.

Our courses and faculty are here noted: Beginner Lesson Materials, Mrs. C. L. Van Noppen, Greensboro; Primary Lesson Materials, Mrs. G. W. Green, Greeleyville, S. C.; Junior Lesson Materials, Miss Virginia Jenkins, Lexington; Intermediate-Senior Organization and Administration, Mrs. B. H. Bunch, Raleigh; Principles of Teaching, Prof. C. T. Carr, Mooresville; Sunday School Organization and Administration, Prof. H. E. Spence, Durham. The school begins Sunday afternoon, March 18th.

HICKORY GROVE

Sunday, February 4th, was very inclement but Rev. Ebenezer Myers, pastor for the third year of Hickory Grove and Derita congregations, sent in to Charlotte for me and soon the seven miles were traversed, and I was again at the splendid community center of Hickory Grove. I was there to talk Sunday school promotion and to urge the furthering of the proposed addition to the church. Then, too, Presiding Elder Craven said I must go and substitute for him since his physician had ordered him to refrain from speaking for some days lest his throat continue to bother him. I went and had a good time. After the Sunday school session and the eleven o'clock hour's service Brother Myers pressed me in at his second quarterly conference as "being the elder," stating that he did not like to ask the questions and then answer them. Well, I did that very thing. I asked the questions in seriousness and exhorted just like I have heard ever so many times. You know, most anybody can be an "elder," so long as there is nothing to do but ask the questions of the quarterly conference. Brother and Sister Myers are getting along well at Hickory Grove. Theirs was the cleanest country church I have visited in many months.

SONG BOOKS

When you get song books for your Sunday school please be careful. There are more worthless song books in our schools than there should be. Most every singing master has some pet hook and many times these books are not conducive to worshipful singing. The following books have been approved for our Sunday schools: For the one-room type school, "Songs for the Sunday School," "Songs of Praise and Service," "Worship in Song," "Revival Praises," and "Young People's Hymnal." For Sunday school members above twelve years of age, "The Methodist Hymnal," "The Little Hymn Book," "Hymnal for American Youth," "Worship in Song," (Revised edition). For Beginner children, "Songs for the Little Child," "Songs for Little People." For Primary children, "Melodies," "Carols." For Junior boys and girls, "Hymnal for American Youth," "Junior Hymns and Carols," "Junior Programs." All these song books can be obtained from Lamar and Barton, Nashville or Richmond.

TOLD YOU SO

"We held our quarterly conference last Friday and I talked with Brother Paris about the additional 1,000 Sunday school scholars this year for Marion district. Of course we are going to see that Marion district 'goes over the top' in this respect this year. After receiving your letter I have gone over facts and figures and am satisfied that it is possible for us to do this and am mapping out a campaign to enlist the aid of every pastor and superintendent on the district. This is absolutely necessary and I believe that we have the best set of these men over any other district in the conference. It has been my privilege during the past year to get in personal touch with practically every man on the district and the support accorded me last year was all that could be desired. The result was that whereas we had a loss the preceding year of two per cent we had a gain of 11 per cent last year and the impetus will carry us through to large gains this year.

Joe Kjellander."

Morganton, N. C.

GETTING AT IT

"Kindly allow me to state to you again of the inspiration I feel that our Salisbury meeting was for the cause of Sunday school work in Western North Carolina conference. As chairman of the Salisbury district Sunday school work I would like to carry this inspiration and information back to the most remote Sunday schools in any of our circuits. Many of our Sunday schools in the rural districts can much easier take on new life as spring approaches, therefore I would like some means of getting this work before the superintendents and teachers in Rowan, Cabarrus and Stanly counties at an early date as possible. I have thought on this plan: That we hold a brief conference in each county and there make an effort to have all the superintendents and as many Sunday school teachers and pastors present as possible, and outline to them the plans of our Sunday school work. I would like to try that here in Stanly first and then shall take up the work in Caharrus and Rowan counties, if the matter proves feasible and successful.

Charles A. Reap."

Albemarle, N. C.

GLORY HALLELUJAH!

"In our council meeting we decided to put on the campaign of Evangelism in our Sunday school, as outlined by our General Board. We are giving three months to this. I got my incomplete diploma last week in the Standard Training Course and yesterday organized a Leadership Training Class with sixteen members. I canvassed my Sunday school and selected those I thought should take the work."

So writes Rev. M. W. Heckard, of Trinity, Gastonia, and I am inclined to shout, "Glory Hallelujah." Some weeks ago while in Nashville I noted in the outgoing mail from the training department a letter to Heckard, marked "Examination Questions." Right then

GREENSBORO DISTRICT UNION MEETING

Regardless of the weather they were there—one of the largest crowds in the history of the union were at Centenary Thursday night for the regular monthly meeting. Our new president, Mr. Wilbur Stamey, presiding, proved himself to be a live wire, always on the job.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Mr. Tuttle, the Centenary pastor. He gave us an inspiring talk on missions.

Brothers Barber and Billups told us about the condition of the Epworth Echo financially. All present now understand that it takes more than good wishes and air to run a paper—must say that the leagues are responding wholeheartedly and their financial worries will soon be a thing of the past.

After a delightful social hour we adjourned to meet with Carraway Memorial, White Oak, Thursday night, March 8th.

GREENSBORO DISTRICT PASTORS

After visiting most of the charges of this district I feel that I must write something about the way the pastors are encouraging and promoting the Epworth League.

First, our presiding elder, Brother Womble, just to use his own words, "I believe in the young people and their work." Not a charge in the district but that the pastor doesn't feel the same way as our presiding elder.

Dr. McLarty at High Point doesn't say much, but results speak for themselves. Going to Wesley Memorial he found no league. Just a short time ago it was quietly announced a league with nearly one hundred members had been organized.

And so on for each charge something like the above can be said. Now young people, the rest is up to us. Are we going to co-operate with our pastors in this great work for our Master?

ATTENTION, LEAGUERS!

Did you know that Anniversary Day has been changed to the second Sunday in April instead of May? The programs for this can be secured by writing to Central Office, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

It's the one time in the year to get your chapter before the people and it's the only time in the year that a public offering is taken for the purpose of carrying on League work.

Let's have Anniversary Day the second Sunday in April, or as near that date as possible, throughout the Western North Carolina conference. It's one point in the Standard of Efficiency that we can all make, so begin now to plan for the best Anniversary Day ever, taking either the morning or evening service, whichever suits your pastor better.

I'm hoping that every league chapter in the Western North Carolina conference will be able to report the observance of Anniversary Day at our conference in Charlotte next June and this can be made possible if every chapter will begin now to plan for this.

Please remember the day is the second Sunday in April and Mr. P. L. Plyler, Hickory, N. C., is the man to send your offering to.

Best grades bring top prices

Who gets the best prices for his tobacco? Why, the farmer who brings in the best grades, of course. If you use high grade fertilizer intelligently, you will not only make a bigger crop, but your tobacco will be of a better grade than usual, and will mature earlier.

There are just two things to remember in using fertilizer for making better grades; first, put your trust in a reliable, dependable old brand like Royster's; second, use enough to get the best returns. Of course, no brand is a substitute for good cultivation and care, and unless you are the kind of farmer who gives his tobacco good farming brains, we'd just as soon you did not use Royster fertilizer.

Royster's tobacco fertilizer is a scientifically balanced food, made from the best materials obtainable in the whole world, and skillfully compounded in just the right proportions to fill the requirements of the plant. It is not the cheapest fertilizer, but it is as closely priced as the quality of its contents allow. Nearly 40 years experience in the fertilization of tobacco guarantees the rare merit of Royster's mixtures.

Read this experience of a good tobacco farmer:

"Two croppers had five acres each in the same field with nothing between but truck row. One of them used Royster's and the other used fertilizer of another manufacturer; the land was prepared at the same time and in the same way; the same quantity of fertilizer per acre was used and put out the same day; plants were drawn from the same pits on the same day; set out by the same planter and the hands; cultivated alike; cured in the same barn by the same man; graded and sold by same parties. The tobacco grown with Royster's fertilizer sold for $625.53 more than that grown with other fertilizer."

Field Tested Fertilizers

tion about our Centenary Movement.

Returning from our conference at Raleigh I was taken unconscious with the "flu." With the help of medical skill I was soon up, only by exposure or some cause to have a relapse of this terrible disease. For a month or more I have been in my room much of the time in bed. During this time I have in some measure realized what is meant by the "Forgotten Man." Dr. Todd has not put it too strong!

For the information of my many friends that I feel I have in both the N. C. conferences, I wish to say I feel that I am on the road to recovery, and could be out now were it not for the inclement weather.

I feel under great obligations to the physician, good neighbors and friends. Also my devoted wife—and more than all to the Giver of every good and perfect gift, for the prospect of health and doing something again in the great harvest field of the world in way of helping to carry on the Lord's work for the salvation of a sin cursed world.

But what about the Centenary? I think I might say Centenary crisis! It seems to be the honor of our church is at stake. Let us meet the obligations. How? With money—we have plenty of it! Let our preachers again set the ball in motion as they did at the first.

The laity look to the preachers to lead in everything. I see in the Advocate a wonderful increase of salary in both conferences. Nearly all have gone over the thousand dollar mark. Add to this the wonderful poundings. The salaries of the two N. C. conferences for the preachers have moved up in the neighborhood of the million mark! Say nothing of poundings, this is a good showing for the loyalty and consecration of our people. Let all the preachers put the tithe of this year in the Centenary collection. Oh, says the preacher, we can't afford it! We answer, you can't afford not to put it in. The poundings to be tithed for the Centenary also? Yes, tithe that also. From whence came the zeal and enthusiasm at the beginning of the Centenary? From the preachers. Now let the preachers make another Centenary drive for canceling this huge debt (for it is a debt) by paying a tithe of this year's salary, all Southern Methodism joining, the preachers in the lead. Our Methodism will be saved the humiliation and, best of all, the plans of our leading men for the welfare and enlargement of our great church will be realized.

But what about the superannuate? Let him make this special effort also. Although he is the forgotten man, as a soldier of the Cross he can risk his little earthly possessions in the Lord's hands! In fact, he is the man or rather the preacher that has made the good pastorate of the modern preacher possible—largely so. Am I not right? He (the superannuate) served the work for four or five hundred dollars (sometimes for less) that are giving their thousands, and a new auto (not Ford) to the preacher. Not only so, but the old preacher has had the experience of moving when snow was on the ground, the thermometer ranging around zero, arriving at a cold parsonage, and then the preacher compelled to go and look for a store to buy a little flour, white sides and black molasses! In modern times, as a rule, the superannuate knows nothing of poundings. We have noticed the unusual poundings in the Advocate this winter, for which we are glad the preachers are being cared for so well. But we notice only two superannuates pounded (Bros. Usery and Hornaday). Yet the superannuate tenting on the shore of the great deep sea often can imagine he can hear the splash of the boatman's oar coming to bear him to the celestial shore. He can continue to trust Him, whom he has known and served for so many years.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

Rev. C. A. Wood .....Superintendent

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

Some of our readers of the Advocate know that the Methodists of North Carolina have two orphanages. One at Raleigh, of which the Rev. A. S. Barnes is superintendent, and one at Winston-Salem. Both of these orphanages together have one page in the Advocate (except when we of the Children's Home are crowded off the map). Brother Barnes is a wise man and energetic. He believes in advertising his work, and he does it. And he tells the Methodists of North Carolina what are the needs of the orphanage work. And he tells it so straight and so effectually that some of the people have begun to get sore about it. And they seem to have him rattled, for he undertakes to explain why he appears to be asking for more money than the Children's Home.

His explanation is, The Children's Home doesn't need money. Now what do you know about that?

Nobody needs money more than the Children's Home. We don't get near as much as we need. We need money to care for the children who are here; and we need still more money to take care of the hundreds of children who ought to be here—our children who are in need, and who look to us Methodists for life and hope, and we haven't help for them because we haven't enough money. Every week brings appeals for home-room for some helpless child. Two poor mothers in particular have been keeping the path warm, hoping for some chance to turn up a vacancy so that their two small children may be received and they themselves get a fighting chance to make a living. A letter received this week begs for an opening for a little boy who has neither mother nor father. But the dormitories are full.

If Brother Barnes has a hundred more orphans than we to provide for it is because we have not yet provided room for many children in our territory who are in distressing need of institutional care. Now we need money to build houses for that hundred more children. We need more money than that—we need it more urgently.

We haven't been asking for money in exactly the same way that he has. But we have tried to make our people think of us in terms of boys and girls. We have tried to get them interested in our daily lives. We have tried to give them a glimpse of our hopes and our sorrows, and we have been hoping that the "still small voice" was reaching the ear of the people. And we were likewise hoping that Brother Barnes' exhortations. He is a good exhorter, he likes to exhort, and we have shared his profit. Therefore, it hasn't been necessary for us to plead so directly while he has been doing it so well. But don't get the idea that our needs are small. Our needs, like the needs of the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh, will never be met until we have money enough to succor every needy child that looks to us for help.

We hope to begin building other dormitories in the spring, but building in these days of high prices is no cheap task; and maintaining an institution with worthy employees and creditable furnishings is a money-taking enterprise. We were fortunate in getting a large bequest last year and that helps out both in building and maintenance, but considering the amount of building that is needed and the quality of buildings that an institution this class requires, and the large sum that it takes to maintain a family of The Home size, nothing but a steady, generous flow of contributions from the Methodists of our conference can keep us safe and prosperous.

If there are any readers of the Advocate who feel that they are doing all they can for the work, and find the appeals of the orphanages monotonous I would say to him: "If you will turn in and help us to awaken the lethargic and indifferent you, will be doing a great deal better work than throwing hard words at Brother Barnes, and demanding that he keep silence in the face of ruin that is coming to so many motherless and fatherless children."

As for the man who is doing nothing for the friendless children, he doesn't read the Advocate, and, therefore, it is vain to put any words in the Advocate for him. But we beg the readers of the Advocate to help us to awaken the entire church. Were the Methodists of North Carolina to raise twice as much money every year for the orphanage work as they are now doing they would not be doing too much. On the contrary, until every congregation and every Sunday school, nay until every member of the church is doing something for the unfortunate children in our midst the measure of the service of the great Methodist church will not be filled.

Charles A. Wood.

Last week I attended Masonic and Odd Fellows lodges in Raleigh. The thing that impressed me most about these noble orders is the deep interest they take in the orphan children of the state. Every Mason and Odd Fellows in good standing is proud of the orphanages at Oxford and Goldsboro. Nothing has made these two orders more popular than the work they are doing in behalf of the fatherless.

One of our most dependable boys has a position with one of the leading business men of Eastern Carolina. After leaving us he borrowed money to continue his studies and then enlisted in the service and fought for world-wide democracy. # THE VERY PIANO FOR YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL OR CHURCH

Chase Brothers Pianos Popular Throughout the South for Over Half Century, Find New Field of Activity Through Their Adaptability to Sunday School and Church

To further encourage the development of better music in the Sunday Schools and Churches of the South and in a campaign to establish the Chase Brothers Piano not only in the Southern homes but also in Southern Sunday Schools and Churches, the Chase-Hackley Piano Company has perfected an instrument, which by virtue of its substantial build, full volume and resonant tone is peculiarly fitted for such use. They are offering it almost at cost to Southern Sunday Schools and Churches.

The Chase Brothers Piano is already well-known in many Southern homes, for it has played an important part for over half a century, in the development of musical talent of the young. Likewise it is in service in many Southern Churches and Sunday Schools.

This particular model A-2 will stand up under hardest usage. It will withstand heat and cold and changing weather without injury. It can be moved from one room or auditorium to another without the necessity of retuning, and it will give excellent service through a long period of years.

It is built with a full volume, capable of filling the entire auditorium and likewise capable of toning down for a smaller room.

Its tone is richly sweet and mellow and especially adapted to reproducing, with proper emphasis and inspiration, the sacred songs of the Sunday School and Church,—a proficiency of which Chase Brothers piano builders are most proud.

This instrument is offered to churches and Sunday Schools, through their officials, at a particularly low introductory price. This reduction represents a great saving and offers the Piano at almost cost. This enables many churches and Sunday Schools, with limited incomes, to procure this especially built Piano for their work.

Church and Sunday School officials may secure this rebate in price by applying to the Chase-Hackley Piano Company at 611 Virginia Railway Building, Richmond, Virginia, or to their nearest Chase Brothers dealer.

Chase Brothers Pianos are made not only in the Sunday School and church design, but likewise in many artistic designs for the home, including Grands, Miniature Grands, Uprights, Miniature Uprights, Players, Reproducing Pianos, Excelsior Players, Hackley & Carlisle Uprights.

They have for years ranked among the best Pianos in use in the South. Their sweet and mellow tone, easy action, light touch and splendid volume make them both pleasing and popular.

in fair play. This half million dollars campaign for the fatherless is following close on the heels of their seventy-five million dollar campaign when nearly one hundred million dollars was pledged by the Southern Baptists. I am glad to see our Baptists making such generous provisions for the training and care of orphans under their care. It pains my heart to be forced to say NO every week to many of the fatherless of our North Carolina conference, when we have abundance and even abundance in our midst. How I do wish some one would come to our relief and make provision for five hundred instead of two hundred and fifty children!

THE WASHINGTON BIRTHDAY PARTY

Carl and Emily Herren were much excited over the Washington Birthday party, for they had between them a wonderful secret. They were going to dress like George and Martha Washington and tell stories to the other children and afterwards help pass the refreshments. There would be ice cream with a chocolate hatchet in the middle, and cherries sent all the way from California.

The three-cornered hat for Carl had already come from the city and was stored away in the wardrobe upstairs, but the dressmaker did not finish the rest of the costumes until the afternoon of the party.

Emily and Carl went to the dressmaker's house early that afternoon and put the big package on their sled. Then they started for home as fast as they could go. Since there had been a thaw and a freeze the day before, the streets were slippery, and sliding down the hills was great fun. Carl sat in front to guide and Emily sat behind, holding the package in her lap.

They passed a boy and a girl walking along the road and talking so earnestly that they did not even look up when Carl guided the sled round them.

"I do wish that we could go to the party, George," the little girl was saying.

"I do too, but my trousers are nothing but patches and your dress is faded."

Carl and Emily heard no more because the sled reached the top of another hill and swept down it with a swoop.

"George Keller and his sister Martha can't go to the party because they have nothing to wear," Carl said when the sled had finally come to a stop.

"That must be the reason why they never come to Sunday school," said Emily thoughtfully.

"I don't suppose it would do to tell them they could wear our best clothes," suggested Carl.

"No, it wouldn't," his sister answered.

Then Carl looked at Emily, and Emily looked at Carl. There was a way, but they did not want to think about it. Carl picked up the sled rope, and they started for home.

But all of a sudden Emily stopped. "I'm going to let Martha wear my Martha Washington dress," she said with a little catch in her voice, for it was hard to give up the chance of wearing the pretty flowered dress and of powdering her hair. "I'll take it to her now."

"I'll go with you and give the George Washington suit to George. He and Martha can tell the stories just as well as you and I could," said Carl.

They turned round and started to go up the long hill to the Keller home. The hill was slippery and hard to climb, but at last, much out of breath, they turned into the Keller yard. George and Martha were just at the door of the house.

"Here are the suit and the dress," Carl called to them. Then he stopped, not knowing what to say next.

"This is a Martha Washington dress, and this is a George Washington suit," Emily said and began to untie the package. "We want you to wear them."

"To the party?" asked Martha, much astonished.

"Yes, to the party. You are to tell the story about the cherry tree, and George is to tell about the colt. Then you must help pass the ice cream. It has hatchets in the middle and cherries that came from California. Will you?"

"Oh, of course we will!" Martha cried delightedly.

"Meet us at the corner by the drug store," said Emily.

"I'll bring you the hat that goes with the costume," Carl added to George.

That evening the four children met at the corner, and George put on the little three-cornered hat that had come from the city. Together they climbed the steps of the house where the party was. When they went into the living room the children laughed and shouted, "Look at Martha and George!"

"Martha and George are dressed up like Martha and George Washington!" exclaimed the youngest girl in the room. Then everybody laughed again.

"Why, I never thought of that," Emily whispered to her brother.

"I didn't think of it either," Carl whispered back. "Aren't you glad that we did it?"

Emily nodded her curly head happily. "Doesn't Martha look sweet in that dress? And with his hair powdered, George looks exactly like George Washington. Sh! Martha's beginning my—her story."—Ina Agnes Pool, in Youth's Companion.

A WREN HOUSE IN A POST

Although we put out ten new nesting boxes in the spring for the birds of our garden, we soon found that we were lacking in sufficient accommodations for the wrens. These tiny members of the feathered tribes display here, as they do the world over, a habit of building both false and true nests. They constructed their rough little nurseries not only in the boxes designed for them, but in many others as well, even usurping an apartment in the martin's flat-building. We knew they could not occupy them all.

Yet, realizing their fondness for a goodly number of homes as we never had before, we soon found an opportunity for supplying them. This came about with the construction of a fence between the lawn and the vegetable garden. The supporting posts for the lattice panels were square in shape, and hollow from the top rail upwards. So in some half dozen of the posts we converted this space into private apartments for the wrens, making the openings on the east, or garden side.

It is needless to say that one of these apartments de luxe was soon occupied by a pair of little brown tenants. In due time it sheltered the second brood of wren babies. False nests were promptly built in two of the other flats, but they were never entirely completed, nor at any time occupied, so far as we know. We noted with some degree of satisfaction that these tenants of ours obtained their food almost entirely from the garden, making constant warfare on the many insect pests to be found there during the season. In fact they proved so desirable that we were only too glad to supply them with a private bath on the roof free of charge.—Frances Higgins, in Our Dumb Animals.

FROM THE TOP

"I was very glad to have Miss Virginia Jenkins with us. I think you are to be congratulated on having her as your elementary superintendent, for I am entirely sure she is going to make good."

These choice words came today in a letter from Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, elementary superintendent of the Southern Methodist church. Long ago I learned to pay lots of attention to what Miss Kennedy said. She says what she means and means what she says.

PASSING THE BUCK

Whenever you see bad spelling and bad language in these columns you must place the blame on the proof reader, none other than their majesties, the editors.

Last week the Advocate had me saying, "Mrs. Kochtitzky was all and of course he should have been with her." Mrs. Kochtitzky is of great value but not all, for there is a fine daughter in the home. Mrs. Kochtitzky was ill.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM NEW SALEM

The second quarterly meeting was held February 3rd. Our presiding elder, Dr. D. M. Litaker, preached a very enjoyable and instructive sermon at 11 o'clock, after which every one enjoyed a great feast for the inner man in the form of fried chicken, pork, sausage, cake, pickles and pies—in fact, everything the good ladies of the church could think of. Our pastor feared we would not have enough dinner, but his fears were soon relieved. He ate so much he was miserable the whole afternoon.

After dinner the business session of the conference was held. The pastor, Rev. J. E. McSwain's written report on what has been done and what he wished to do this year was enough to make the most uninterested member sit up and take notice of the opportunities we have as a church, when there is a real live God-fearing pastor to lead them.

The reports of the different societies were encouraging. All Sunday schools are in very good shape, considering the season and the flu epidemic. We do not have any schools that stopped for the winter on the charge. The financial report was good with a very encouraging outlook for the year.

Sunday morning Rev. J. W. Moore of Broad Street church of Statesville, by Dr. D. M. Litaker's invitation, delivered a great message to the congregation, at which five persons were converted.

Our Sunday school has been small on account of sickness, but is growing very rapidly considering the weather. The singing has not been as good as usual mostly due to the absence of the organist.

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

I discovered a vegetable compound that does the work of dangerous, sickening calomel and I want every reader of this paper to buy a bottle for a few cents and if it doesn't straighten you up better and quicker than salivating calomel just go back to the store and get your money back.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your thirty feet of bowels of the sour bile and constipation poison which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable.

I guarantee that one spoonful of this harmless liquid liver medicine will relieve the headache, biliousness, coated tongue, ague, malaria, sour stomach or any other distress caused by a torpid liver as quickly as a dose of vile, nauseating calomel, besides it will not make you sick or keep you from a day's work.

Calomel is poison—it's mercury—it attacks the bones, often causing rheumatism. Calomel is dangerous. It sickens—while my Dodson's Liver Tone is safe, pleasant and harmless. Eat anything afterwards, because it can not salivate. Give it to the children because if doesn't upset the stomach or shock the liver. Take a spoonful tonight and wake up feeling fine and ready for a full day's work.

SOME OF THE GRAND SCENERY OF MOUNTAINS OF COLORADO

By Rev. H. F. Starr.

We arrived in Denver on Saturday at 7:45 a. m., June 24, 1922, to visit our daughters, Mrs. N. W. Meadows and Miss Lelah Starr, and found the entire family at the station waiting for us. We were soon in the car and driven to their home, where a good hot breakfast was served. After we enjoyed the hospitality of the family, consisting of Mr. Meadows and wife, little son Victor, Jr., and Miss Lelah Starr, we took a ride down street with our daughter in her car, then rested and talked all day. Sunday afternoon we were driven out to see some of the city of Denver. In the evening we drove to the civic center to see the beautiful sunset, which is indescribable. No artist can ever paint anything so beautiful.

Monday, June 26, we all gathered our wraps and overcoats, packed up in the car with plenty of good things to eat, and drove to the top of Lookout Mountain. After viewing some of the grandeur and beautiful scenes for 200 miles across the plains and the snow-capped mountains north and west of us, and the graves of Buffalo Bill and wife on the peak of Lookout Mountain, we had supper cooked on a fire on the top of the mountain, which we all enjoyed so much. After talking about the wonderful works of creation and enjoying the prattles and chatter of our little grandson we again piled in the car to start for home in the city 25 miles away, and as we were driven around the curves on the mountain side facing the city of Golden at the foot of the mountain and the city of Denver 25 miles away, the most beautiful sight we had ever looked down on was these cities, so beautifully lighted, we being hundreds of feet above. Denver, 25 miles away, looked to us as a golden city, every street as a stream of light as if about six feet apart. We viewed this scene for some time, then drove down the beautiful curved road to the foot of the mountain and on through Golden and back to Denver at 9:30. Had a good night's rest; spent Tuesday at home; Mr. and Mrs. Hasloff came over in the morning. Mrs. Hasloff is a North Carolinian.

Monday, July 3rd, drove out twelve miles in the country to Mr. Shafer's cherry orchard to get cherries. Saw ten acres of cherries, which grow in abundance in Colorado, and are much larger and finer than any in N. C. At night we drove to the City Park, with 480 acres and two lakes, one large enough for large motor boats to operate and scores of smaller size boats. This lake is near the center of the city. Has the most beautiful fountain in the world, operated one hour every evening from eight to nine o'clock. It is operated by electric works lighting up the many streams of water as they spout up in the air, showing every color and every shape, some to the height of 100 feet, and at times dropping down as a blaze of fire as if the lake was on fire, then blending into rainbow colors and falling back into a spray of many colors. This is the most beautiful sight ever produced by man.

July 4th, drove through the city, listened to the grand music, visited the parks and zoo and other places of interest.

July 5th, spent most of the day resting and making ready to go to Colorado Springs on next day. July 6th, at 9 a. m., again with our daughter, Miss Lelah, at her post in her car, was out for a drive to Colorado Springs, 75 miles from Denver, reaching that beautiful city by 12 o'clock. However, on the way were in the most terrible sand storm we ever witnessed, followed by a downpour of rain and hail lasting about 15 minutes. We were compelled to turn on the lights and stop to keep from being in a wreck with other cars. But we made the drive safe and ate our lunch in the car on the street of the city.

After driving around over the city at 2 p. m. left for Manitou, a city 12 miles farther at the foot of the mountains, a grand and beautiful place. After securing a room at the hotel we drove up the mountain to the cave of the winds, the grandest scenery we have ever seen. The altitude of this cave is 7475 feet at the entrance, with sixteen different rooms or apartments, with the most beautiful formations of every color—when lighted up gives a rainbow effect. Some places are so narrow from one room to another we must go single file and bend low to pass through. The last room or apartment is 200 feet above the entrance; the distance around in the cave is three-fourths of a mile. We were told this cave of the winds was first discovered in 1885 by two boys, one 11 and one 14 years old, who had wandered up a trail on the mountain side, seeing a hole or cave in the mountain, went in and wandered around and lost their way in the dark cave and for two days and nights were in that dark cold cave. All of the police force and fire company were searching for the boys, at last found tracks at the mouth of the cave and went in, and after some time with lanterns and guns and clubs to protect themselves from bears or any other animals that they might meet, found the boys almost frozen and tired and hungry, and in searching for the lost boys found one of the grandest and most wonderful places in this country. And since 1905 the state of Colorado has beautified and lighted up the cave and built a beautiful driveway, and thousands of people go up there every year to see the beauties of creation which were hidden in the mountain. Oh, that man would praise the Lord for His wonderful works. After spending some time up there we drove down the winding driveway to the hotel at the foot of the mountain, and after driving the car in a garage for safe keeping for the night we went to our room in the hotel and rested a while, had supper and rested for the night. Next morning after breakfast at six o'clock, Friday, July 7th, we again nestled in the car and drove to the Garden of the Gods and saw more of the wonderful works of creation, then down the foot of the mountain near Pike's Peak and into Cheyenne Canyon up to Seven Falls. This canyon is grand all the way, and the falls is a grand and beautiful stream gushing out from the mountain hundreds of feet above with seven complete falls, the water as clear as crystal. After we had spent some time there looking at the beautiful sights and making some kodak pictures, we turned back down the little stream, looking again at the great rocks and mountains on the other side. When we were again out in the bigger world we drove into North Cheyenne Canyon to see more of the wonders of world. This canyon leads up to Helen Hunt Falls, another beautiful place. Then up the mountain again over the high drive over the top of this mountain and down on the other side to the foot near Manitou, then back to Colorado Springs; and leaving there about 5 p. m. drove back to Denver, about 75 miles, reaching home at 9 p. m., tired but full of energy, happy as children.

Wednesday, 12th, rested all day; drove out at night. Thursday, 13th, drove into Bear Creek Canyon, 25 miles from Denver. Had breakfast at 8:30 in the canyon by the side of Bear Creek in a little village called Starr-buck, then drove up the high drive over the top of Lookout Mountain; passed through Evergreen, a small but beautiful town on the mountain side, and on to Bergan Park and a number of parks and camping places kept up by the people of Denver and the state for the public to use free. Had lunch on top of Lookout Mountain. At 12 noon drove down the mountain side and back to Denver at 1:30 p. m.

Tuesday, 18th, drove to Boulder, 35 miles, home of University of Colorado, a grand but rugged city—a chautauhome. We drove up into the chautauqua canyon, ate dinner on the mountain side, where we had a grand view of the city of Boulder and the plains for 100 miles, all the time in sight of the snow covered mountains. After dinner we drove down and through the city, viewing the grand sights and then into Boulder Canyon for ten miles, following Boulder creek with great mountains and rocks on either side hundreds of feet above us and hanging over us and all around us as we followed the stream, crossing from one side to the other. Then back through the city and on into Berkly Park, ate supper seated on the carpet of grass, and after looking at the places of amusement for a while made a drive for home.

On Saturday, July 29th, we were packing and making ready to start back to North Carolina, and all through the day friends were calling to bid us goodbye, and after the last supper with our children at 6 p. m. we left the home with the family driving us to the station to take for home. We must say goodbye with tears and kisses. We were soon rolling on east towards St. Louis, and Asheville, N. C., reaching Salisbury Tuesday evening. Spent the night there, and to Greensboro on Wednesday morning, spending the day and night in Greensboro, where we had left our car with our son, Dr. Starr. On Thursday morning drove to Ruffin, our home.

This tells only a small part of the scenery and the grandeur of the trip.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

IN MEMORIAM

HASSELL—Alethia Bessie Hassell was born on Roanoke Island December 14, 1859, and died in Manteo, N. C., January 8, 1922. She leaves two sons and one daughter and three sisters, besides a large concourse of friends to lament her death. We trust that they may all meet her in heaven. Weep not my friends. God is too good and wise to make a mistake, but He doth work all things together for good to them that love and fear Him. She had been a member of the Methodist church for many years. A. W. Price.

SMOOT—S. J. Smoot was born November 13, 1856; called up higher November 3, 1922. He leaves behind a wife and eight children. Two of his children have gone on before. He was converted in early life and joined Salem Methodist church, in which he was a loyal member till death. He was a good man. In prayer he could scarcely be surpassed. While he prayed it seemed that all heaven would bend low to hear his sweet, gentle voice.

He was a great singer. He was gifted with an alto voice that is scarcely surpassed. To be in his presence was a great privilege to anyone. The going away of this great and good man is a great loss to the church and to the community.

HOOKER—Isaac N. Hooker was born March 22, 1857, and died December 4, 1922, aged 65 years two months and eight days. He joined the Methodist church in early life and was a faithful member until God called him home. A good worker in the church, always ready and willing to do what he could to promote the cause of God and help to hasten the coming of His kingdom into the hearts of humanity. He leaves a host of friends and relatives to weep because he has left us. May our gracious Father comfort the bereaved. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Brother Hines, the Baptist pastor in the Methodist church at Wanchese. A. W. Price, Pastor.

WALKER—Henry Clay Walker was born June 28, 1845, departed this life January 26, 1923, age 77 years, six months and 28 days. He was a faithful member of the Methodist church, South. He had been a sufferer for sixteen years, though patient. He died in the faith. He expressed himself many times as being ready and willing to go. He was a man loved by all who knew him. He is survived by a wife that was devoted to her task, six sons and two daughters, twenty-eight grandchildren, three great-grandchildren. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, assisted by his former pastor, S. E. Richardson. C. Brown.

BIGGERSTAFF—I. N. Biggerstaff died at his home in Forest City January 20, at the age of 76 years. Bro. Biggerstaff had been in failing health for a year or more. He was a consistent member of the Methodist church, had been a steward in the church for forty years or more and loyal to his church. Though he was feeble he attended church almost to the last; was one of the oldest members of the church at this place. He was a good man and will be greatly missed. He is survived by his wife and three children, who have the deepest sympathy of their many friends. Truly a good man has been taken from us. Parker Holmes.

McDANIELS—Robert L. McDaniels was born June 10, 1853; called to heaven January 4, 1923. He is survived by his wife, three sons and one daughter. He professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist church at Salem in early life and was a faithful Christian till death. He was a faithful steward for many years. The church has been greatly blessed by this good man. His place in church was never vacant unless he was providentially hindered. He loved his church. Under his roof was a resting place for preachers. The latchstring hung on the outside of the door. This good man will be greatly missed for many years.

KEAL—The subject of this sketch, Mrs. Adline Keal, was born in Southport, December 7, 1866, and died in Raleigh, N. C., January 21, 1923. She joined the Methodist church in Southport in early childhood and remained a consistent member until she was called to join the church triumphant. She leaves three children to mourn their loss, two sons and one daughter. We laid her away in the cemetery at Southport January 23rd to await the final resurrection. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord.

J. C. Whedbee, P. C.

CARTWRIGHT—On November 26, 1922, one of the most beautiful family circles I ever knew was broken when the spirit of Dr. R. N. Cartwright of Fairfield slipped over into the great beyond. He was one of earth's choice spirits, unostentatious, retiring in manner, and pure as gold, and nobody was ever more devoted to family and friends than he. Represented his county once in legislature, and in his life always. Sixty-five years old, good physician, Methodist, and a friend of God and all that was good. Earth produces but few like him. The members of his family who survive him are Mrs. Cartwright, Ben and Elizena, his two children. To these our sympathy goes in their loss and loneliness.

J. E. Holden,
Former pastor.

HIPPS—The Lord in His infinite wisdom saw fit to take from our midst on the 14th day of January, 1923, Bro. Cape Hipps, a much loved and esteemed friend and brother. He leaves a family of loved ones and a host of friends to mourn his departing. He was a man that was respected and loved by those who knew him best. He had been a member and ardent lover of the Methodist church for over forty-five years. He was faithful to attend all of its services as long as he was able, and it was one of his greatest burdens to bear in his last days that he could no longer attend its services. When he prayed it seemed that he talked to one he knew and trusted, and he could sing the old hymns with a spirit that would stir the hearts of all who heard.

He leaves behind a faithful wife, three daughters, four sons, one sister, and one brother and a number of grandchildren to follow on to where he is now at rest. On the thirtieth day of last July he was seventy-three years old and he leaves a record that we all might profit by. May the Lord in His love and mercy comfort the hearts of the bereaved and prepare them to meet him in the glory to come.

J. R. Church, P. C.

FINCANNON—Miss Lola Engeline Fincannon of Gilkey, N. C., was born January 27, 1893, and died January 8, 1923, being 29 years, 11 months and 19 days old. Lola was a good girl. She joined the M. E. church when ten years old and lived a consistent member of same while she lived. For several years she was afflicted with epilepsy and for the last few years she was an invalid, not able to attend church. But during all her suffering she never murmured or complained, but was always cheerful and kind to those around her. Lola has gone to that sweet rest that remains for the children of God. J. D. Fincannon.

LOVE—James Love was born April 9, 1839, near Leasburg in Caswell county. At an early age he was converted and joined the Methodist church. He was married to Miss Ann E. Featherston in 1862.

For many years he resided in Catawba county, to which he removed to make his home. His home, where he and his wife reared a fine family of children, is six miles east of Newton. He helped to found Friendship Methodist church and till his death in January 9, 1923, he served in the church as an official. He filled faithfully and acceptably the office of Sunday school superintendent, steward and trustee. He lived as nearly a blameless life as we see on earth and no man in his part of the country was more loved. He enjoyed the unbounded confidence of those who knew him. He leaves a family of sons and daughters who are an honor to the home from which they came. One of the daughters is the wife of Rev. G. W. Fisher of the North Carolina conference.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God our heavenly Father in His wisdom and love saw fit on October 28, 1922, to remove from our midst our beloved brother and faithful co-worker, Samuel Biggerstaff. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we, the members of the first quarterly conference of Bostic circuit, feel deeply the loss we have sustained in his death, but we bow submissively to the will of God, knowing that He doeth all things well.

Second, That the memory of his long and faithful service to God and the church as steward, trustee and Sunday school superintendent will ever be an inspiration to us.

Third, That we extend to his loved ones left behind our sincere sympathy and pray God's blessings upon each one of them.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, one to the North Carolina Christian Advocate and one recorded on the minutes of our quarterly conference.

E. N. Washburn,
C. C. Holifield,
E. A. Martin,
J. M. K. Randall,
L. L. Smith.

CECIL—"Uncle Dave" (D. K. Cecil) has gone to his reward, leaving us First Street M. E. church, Lexington, N. C., member of board of stewards, president of Baraca class, a conscientious and consistent Christian, attending church and church meetings, always on time, a hard working man but always ready to give liberally to any worthy cause, never asking others to give more than they wished.

Those of us who knew him best loved him most. While we sorrow deeply in our loss we praise God that we can look forward to meeting him in our home where he will be waiting with a smile and hand outstretched to greet us there as he has so often greeted us here; but he will not need to say, "How are you this morning?" for there we shall see as we are seen and know as we are known; and when again we shall clasp Uncle Dave's hand there will be no sorrow, no goodbye, no pain, no time.

Youth will be eternal and our greatest joys while here will sink into the utmost insignificance compared with the least of your joys when we reach our Father's house. There we shall dwell in peace and joy free from sin and sadness. Earthly fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters will be as dear to others as they are to us, for there we will all be brethren, loving each other even as Christ loves us.

We thank God for Uncle Dave's life.
A. M. Swigart.

KNIGHT—On the morning of January 9th Mrs. Belle Cooke Knight was stricken with paralysis and on the following evening her soul went to meet the God whom she had served faithfully for 59 years. She united with the Methodist church in childhood and remained faithful to that institution throughout her life. She was an ideal Christian, a devoted mother, a kind friend, and the world will be a richer place for others to live in because of the pure and unselfish life which she has left for an example.

She is survived by ten children—Fred W., Philip T., Roy and John A. Knight of Gulf, G. A. Knight of Winston-Salem, Mrs. Levy R. Tindal, Jr., Misses Bessie and Mary Knight of Washington, D. C., Mrs. J. U. Smith of Charlotte, and Maude H. Knight of Tarrant; two grandchildren, Levy Tindal, III, of Washington, D. C., and Marian Mae Knight of Winston-Salem.

The funeral services were conducted from the Presbyterian church of Gulf by Rev. J. C. Cummings, assisted by Rev. C. L. Wicker and Rev. E. C. Sell, and the body laid to rest in that cemetery beside her husband who preceded her to the grave less than three years ago.

How glad she must have been to lay aside all cares of this world and meet her God, for we believe she could truly say: "For I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day." And how beautiful must have been His smile when He said: "Well done, enter into thy rest."

HARRIS—Walter P. Harris, of Aurelian Springs, was born January 20, 1856, and died of pneumonia at his home January 21, 1923. He was married June 1, 1882, to Miss Alice P. Sledge. To this union were born six children, three boys and three girls. They with the mother and a number of relatives and friends are left to mourn his loss. Early in life Brother Harris was converted and joined Mt. Tabor Methodist church and lived a true, faithful and loyal member until death. He abhorred evil of every kind, and believed in men living up to their profession. He was kind and sympathetic; he studied the Bible daily and lived its truths to the best of his knowledge and ability. He served as a steward of his church for many years and was trustee at his death. May each of the bereaved ones find comfort in following in his footsteps.
Julian L. Midgette.

KERR—Mrs. Mary Lou Kerr, wife of James A. Kerr of Mecklenburg county, N. C., was born November 27, 1846, and died December 27, 1922. She is survived by her husband and her four children, Mrs. J. L. Howie of Chicago, Ill., Dr. J. E. Kerr of Winston-Salem, N. C., and W. J. and S. E. Kerr of the Harrison community in Mecklenburg county. Sister Kerr had for many years been a member of the M. E. Church, South, at Harrison, where her body was buried to await the great resurrection day. She was a faithful Christian mother, a true wife, a good neighbor; in fact she was one of our best women, loved by everybody, and that sweet Christian spirit that she had in health remained with her through her long and painful illness, and she was faithful unto the end. May God bless the aged husband and all the children, and may we all meet her in heaven is my humble prayer.
T. J. Houck, Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, on January 20, 1923, one of our most faithful and loyal members, Mr. I. N. Biggerstaff, was suddenly called from this life of service to that greater life above; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we, the Wesley Bible class of East Main M. E. church, Forest City, bow in humble submission to the plan of our God.

Second, That though we shall miss him we hold in great remembrance his faithfulness to duty and commend to all his Christian life.

Third, That we extend to the family our deepest sympathy in their great sorrow which is our sorrow.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family also to the Courier and North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On January 3rd 1923, God in His infinite wisdom called to his eternal home the soul of Mr. J. B. Farish, one of our faithful members of Bethel Methodist church.

We know we shall miss him, for he was always present unless providentially hindered, and ever willing and ready to give and do his part in the upbuilding of God's kingdom here on earth.

There were no strangers to him—he always made friends with every child even, and had something cheerful and witty to say to everybody. He lived a quiet peaceful life and the death angel took him in his sleep without a struggle.

Asleep in Jesus—peaceful rest, Whose waking is supremely best! No fear, no woe shall dim that hour That manifests the Saviour's power.

Therefore be it resolved that we, the members of Bethel Methodist church, follow his example of giving, attending and a kind word to all.

Second. That we extend to his family our sympathy, love and prayers in their great sorrow.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the minutes of our Sunday school record and a copy sent to the N. C. Christian Advocate for publication.

C. H. King,
J. A. Cobb,
Mrs. Pattie J. King,
Committee.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS

To say a thing loud does not make it true, to say it louder does not make it truer, and to say it loudest does not make it truest of all. Yet some men preach after that style. Some lawyers behave that way before a jury in the court house. What's the use? For sound is not sense and tumult is not truth.

"Mysterious Millions" is the way that the Biblical Recorder speaks of the Durham offer for a State Medical College, and at the same time issues a warning against receiving gifts from Trinity College with strings tied to them that might sacrifice the principle of the separation of church and state. It is surprising how a serious minded editor could crowd so much humor into an article of one or two little paragraphs.

* * * *

"Sell your Ford and buy a mule" was Judge Shaw's order to a rather sorry sort of man who was arraigned in his court at Dobson for unlawfully operating an automobile. The order of the court further specifies that the aforesaid citizen shall not own or operate an automobile for a term of two years. If he violates this order of the court, the prospective owner of a mule will serve a sentence on the chaingang. All of this is very good, but what if the Ford will not bring the price of a mule?

It has been said that youth should take the sky-line trail. But some prefer the primrose path, or the shady lane. Such men as Abraham Lincoln hit the sky-line trail. Somehow it comes easier for the frontier lad, acquainted with the inevitable hardships of the pioneer, to explore the hitherto untraveled trail than it does for the child of fortune. Theodore Roosevelt was a striking exception to this rule. All honor to Roosevelt, the typical American, not only for what he dared, but for what he actually accomplished. The lives of such men should be a shining example and a perpetual inspiration to the young.

The strangle-hold of Roman Catholicism is disastrous in all its consequences. This is no figure of speech or figment of the imagination. It is a deplorable fact. No country in the iron grip of Romanism is commercially prosperous. Look them all over and see how emphatically true this is. The Roman Catholic church is hostile to both civil and religious liberty. Every page of history touched by the Roman Catholic Hierarchy bears living witness to this declaration. The Roman Catholic church by a system of prenuptial agreements seeks to control life before it comes into existence. By its doctrine of purgatory it seeks to control life after death and by its system of indulgences claims the power for pay to shorten the period of purgatorial suffering. From the days of Tetzal, and before, down to the present this practice of indulgences has been a great source of unrighteous revenue. Furthermore, this monster of history, enemy of freedom, and mother of ignorance for the masses is striving to get a strangle-hold upon the political life of America. Roman Catholicism is as great an enemy to American institutions as satan is to Paradise.

The absentees from church on cold Sundays indicate that the spiritual garments of some are very thin. The vacant seats in church when it rains show that the religion of some people is not waterproof. That is, if the trouble be external, rather than internal. It may be that low, spiritual vitality makes these absentees unusually sensitive to the cold, or fearful of the ill effects of a little moisture. Business, pleasure, social duties, and such like, are not affected in this respect like church attendance and other religious obligations.

"Faith of our fathers! living still
In spite of runeon, fire, and sword;
O how our hearts beat high with joy
Whene'er we hear that glorious word!"

That faith evidently does not belong to some of us.

To ride a hobby, to become infatuated with a fad, to take alarm at the tea-pot tempest in the realm of truth, are of interest to a great many people, but of little profit to any. For children to blow soap bubbles is a sane and wholesome amusement that appeals to the constructive imagination of the child. For "grown-ups" to become engrossed with hobbies, fads and imaginary dangers is both foolish and hurtful. All the more so, because those who are enticed thereby take these things most seriously. New York City, constantly seeking after something new, is the nesting place for most of these excessences of the social organism and the metropolitan papers scatter them abroad, as upon the wings of the wind. Coue and Grant occupy the center of the stage just now, tomorrow it will be someone else.

Variety of climate without the extremes, no big cities with their attendant problems, but a score or more of little cities which are beehives of industry: That is North Carolina whose treasures at one time were "tar, pitch and turpentine," but now the old state stands fifth among the sisterhood of states in the value of its agricultural products, is at the very front in the manufacture of cotton goods, and its furniture finds a place in the markets of the world. The apples of the mountains, the peaches of the sand hills, and the strawberries of the east are not only a source of tremendous wealth, but they are unsurpassed in quality. While the soil, climate, landscape, products both of the fields and the factories are characterized by an amazing variety, the population of the state is pre-eminently homogeneous. It is made up almost wholly of a native population with a sprinkling of Africans who are descendents of the slaves of antebellum days and now constitute a valuable part of the citizenship of the state. At one time North Carolina was classed educationally with Arkansas, but that reproach has passed from us. Those who come now to scoff, remain to wonder at the educational progress in North Carolina within the last twenty-five years. Hard surface roads, new schoolhouses and bigger and better churches, are now the order of the day in a state whose industrial progress has become the admiration of the nation.

ROYAL SPLENDORS IN AN EGYPTIAN TOMB

Treasures valued at $40,000,000 have already been found in the outer chambers of the tomb of the Egyptian king, Tut-Ankh-Amen, in the Valley of the Kings near Luxor, Egypt, and these do not include the contents of the mortuary chamber where rests the mummy of that once mighty Pharaoh.

This promises to be one of the most stupendous discoveries in the history of archeological research. The Egyptologists have been thrilled by the discovery of these splendors of royalty which are now unearthed after a burial of 3200 years. And the world at large is greatly interested in these evidences of wealth and extravagance among the ancient kings of Egypt. This is one of the tombs that the robbers of other centuries failed to find and in consequence the original treasures are all in place undisturbed.

A list of some of the things known to have been found in the outer chambers of this tomb are here given. The Time's list follows:

"First, they saw three magnificent state couches, all gilt, with exquisite carving and animal heads, of Typhon, Hathor, and lion. On these rested beds beautifully carved, gilt, inlaid with ivory and semi-precious stones, and also innumerable boxes of exquisite workmanship. One of these boxes was inlaid with ebony and ivory, with gilt inscriptions; on a third box, which contained royal robes, handsomely embroidered, precious stones, and golden sandals, were beautifully painted scenes. There was a stool of ebony inlaid with ivory, with the most delicately carved duck's feet—also a child's stool of fine and beautiful workmanship. Beneath one of the couches was the State Throne of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, probably one of the most beautiful specimens of art ever discovered. There was also a heavily gilt chair, with portraits of the king and queen, the whole encrusted with turquoise, cornelian, lapis, and other semi-precious stones. There were also four chariots, the sides of which were encrusted with semi-precious stones and rich gold decoration. These were dismantled, with a charioteer's apron of leopards' skins hanging over the seat. There were also some exquisite alabaster vases with very intricate and unknown design, all of one piece, and some handsome blue Egyptian faience, and enormous quantities of provisions for the dead, comprising trussed duck, haunches of venison, etc., all packed in boxes, according to the custom of the time. There were some remarkable wreaths, still looking evergreen, and one of the boxes contained rolls of papyri, which are expected to render a mass of information."

Only last week the seals were broken and the mortuary chamber of this tomb has been entered by the archeologists who have the work in hand. This inner chamber was found to possess treasures and regal splendors akin to those of the sections already explored.

Here is an account telegraphed to all parts of the world which is of intense and permanent interest:

"Opening of the mortuary chamber in the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen showed the sarcophagus of the Pharaoh to be still in the same position in which it was placed by his mourners more than 3,000 years ago.

When exploring scientists, after removing the delicate seals, broke their way through the masonry of the inner chamber door, they were confronted with splendors which, upon the first cursory examination, appear to surpass even those of the antechamber which have held the interest of the entire world.

The exploring party, headed by Howard Carter, exclaimed with amazement at finding the center chamber, which is about 14 feet square, occupied by an immense gilded canopy, richly inscribed.

The canopy was closed, but there was a door, and the opening of this revealed inside what is undoubtedly Tut-Ankh-Amen's coffin. For the present, however, these were left undisturbed.

A large crowd of visitors and newspaper men had assembled early in the morning in anticipation of the unsealing. Before the work was started, impressions of the seals on the masonry were taken by the eminent Egyptologists, James H. Breasted and Allen Gardiner.

A canopic jar, which probably contains the heart and other internal organs of the king, was found inside the canopy.

One feature of the discovery in the inner chamber was a magnificent statue of a cat, richly painted, which has stood sentry over the dead Pharaoh through the centuries he has lain there. The chamber is filled with splendid furniture, in orderly array. It also holds several superb gold chariots, an exquisite ivory and ebony box and many beautiful alabaster vases."

The valuable contents of this tomb, both those which have been removed and those which remain, will be treated chemically so as to insure their preservation. This will require time and careful work of experts. Hence we may expect to hear quite a bit of the work for the next year or two and eventually some of these treasures may find a place in the museums of this country.

THE REVIVAL

Revivals are being announced in all sections of North Carolina. It goes without saying that those are important occasions in the life of a church. If the work is to be of a perfunctory sort, the meeting had better never be appointed, for the results will be hurtful. Care should be exercised, also, that due emphasis be given to every aspect of the task in hand. Prayer should not be substituted for organization, neither should the reverse occur. Tremendous emphasis should be placed at every point, if the best possible results are to be attained. The study of the word of God, meditation, prayer, the effective organization of every department of the church, board of stewards, Sunday school, Epworth leagues, missionary societies, and extensive advertising go into the preparation for the revival. In the meeting every possible emphasis should be put upon the preaching, the singing, the personal work. The idea is use to the utmost limit every agency that can be commanded for this harvest season in the church.

Sensational preaching need not be feared if it is profound enough. The trouble with what we are accustomed to call sensational preaching is its surface character—a skimming of the foam or splashing among the driftwood on the current. Big talk about fads, foibles, social whims and such like, without touching the great things of sin and salvation is what has been the bane of the so-called sensational preaching. Attacks upon sin of all sorts and a touching of the deeper centers of life and character after the style of the ancient prophets is the sort of preaching we need in the revival and at all times.

SUNDAY AT BELMONT AND TRYON STREET

We had the pleasure last Sunday of being with the Belmont congregation at the morning hour and with the Tryon Street congregation, Charlotte, at night. Rev. J. Ed. Thompson is now in his fifth year at Belmont and beginning, as he says, his second quadrennium. He has made a great record there and is planning to keep the good work going in the future. He and the people have reason to be proud of the splendid new parsonage, where the pastor lives in all comfort. The church is now carrying $3,000 in building and loan to build an adequate Sunday school department for the growing school. This work will be commenced just as soon as the $2,000 debt on the parsonage has been paid, which will not be long. Brother Thompson is happy in his work and the people appreciate him most highly.

It was a delight for us to be at Tryon Street church Sunday evening. Brother H. G. Hardin, the cultured and affable gentleman that he is, treated us with a cordiality and graciousness that was appreciated to the limit. To again greet old friends, quite a few, filled the evening with pleasant memories of the occasion, and we live in the fond hope of being allowed to return at some future date. Things are going good at Tryon Street and the popular pastor is happy in his work.

THE SOUTH AN EXAMPLE FOR THE WORLD TODAY

In a discriminating tribute to the conduct of the South in the years that followed the Civil War, President Harding has presented a fact of history in terms that will be duly appreciated by the Southern people. Here is what the Chief Magistrate of the nation says about the example that the South set for the guidance and inspiration of a war-wasted world today: "In my judgment the reconstruction of the South, by the people of the South, in the face of tremendous discouragements following the war, set the finest example that could be urged upon a war-wasted world today. The men of Lee's and Johnston's armies went home to their tasks of reconstruction, with hearts of courage and purpose of determination to overcome all obstacles; to deserve the good will and the help of others by proving their own good will and by helping themselves to the utmost of their capacity. They had earned the respect and regard of their opponents on the battlefield; they earned it yet more completely and emphatically by their conduct afterward, and in earning it, they insured not only the Union's restoration, but its advance to that splendid place which it holds in the family of nations."

GIVE SPRING GARDEN A LIFT

In this number of the Advocate is a plea from Rev. G. T. Bond, the pastor of Spring Garden Street church, Greensboro, and from Rev. W. G. Womble, the presiding elder of the district, in behalf of that heroic congregation at Spring Garden in their present effort to get rid of a debt that must be paid. Read what the pastor and the presiding elder have to say and then come to the help of this church which is striving to take care of one of the most important situations in the state, that is, to provide adequate church facilities for the hundreds of Methodist girls who attend the North Carolina College for Women. Write a check and send it in without a moment's delay.

"TRAVELS IN THE OLD WORLD"

J. H. Barnhardt.

Many books have been written in many ways by many people on the subject of travel, but one of the most recent and one of the best of these books I have seen is by Rev. J. M. Rowland, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate.

This author is well known in North Carolina by a large circle of people who have read and keenly enjoyed his original and scintillating articles in the church press, as well as his former book on "Blue Ridge Breezes."

This latest volume is the result of the author's observations in Palestine and other countries where he has traveled extensively. It is written in his characteristic, breezy style. He combines in an unusual way a recital of facts and experiences and a lucid description of historic places and customs, with a sympathetic study of the people, the whole being expressed in choice and pleasing language shot through with the author's well-known humor which delights the reader and imparts to the whole volume a distinct flavor of real entertainment.

Upon the whole "Travels in the Old World" is a work of art. Besides, it is one of the most readable books. It is commended to all who like a first class travel story done in exquisite form by an experienced globe trotter. The price is $1.50, and may be ordered from the author, Rev. J. M. Rowland, editor Richmond Christian Advocate, Richmond, Va.

GOD AND I

I pluck an acorn from the greensward, and hold it to my ear; and this is what it says to me: "By and by the birds will come and nest in me. By and by I will furnish shade for the cattle. By and by I will provide warmth for the home in the pleasant fire. By and by I will be shelter from the storm to those who have gone under the roof. By and by I will be the strong ribs of the great vessel, and the tempest will beat against me in vain while I carry men across the Atlantic." Oh, foolish little acorn, wilt thou be all this? Hark, and the acorn answers, "Yes; God and I."—Lyman Abbott.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

The postoffice address of Rev. T. L. Noble is Murphy, N. C., Route 2.

Rev. Walt Holcomb preached last Sunday in Richmond, Va. He was at Grace in the morning and Union Station at night.

Rev. C. C. Selecman, who had been elected secretary of the hospital board, has declined the position and will remain at First church, Dallas, Texas.

Good reports reach us of the work of Rev. R. F. Mock, pastor of the Harmony church, Concord. This is his first year on that charge and the prospects are flattering.

Rev. J. W. Moore, pastor of Broad Street church, Statesville, will assist Rev. J. H. Barnhardt in a meeting at West Market Street church, beginning March 12, and to continue ten days or two weeks.

Rev. B. F. Fincher, pastor of Kerr Street church, Concord, is not at all well these days, we are sorry to announce. We trust that his health may improve and that he will before long be himself again.

Miss Margaret Norman Newell of Rocky Mount, N. C., and Mr. Berrien Walker Newell of Macon, Ga., were married Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, February 10, in the First church, Rocky Mount, Rev. H. M. North officiating.

Rev. J. V. Williams sends us the message that he is "sick but better." We rejoice to learn of his improvement. Trust he will soon be well. He has an article on our table awaiting a place in the Advocate. It is, like all that he writes, interesting and will get in.

The churches of Elizabeth City will hold a simultaneous evangelistic service beginning with the 15th of April. All of the churches of the city will take part. Dr. E. K. McLarty will preach in First church. Rev. L. B. Hayes of Park Place, Greensboro, will be the preacher at City Roads.

The Methodist people at Kannapolis are laying plans for $12,000 in improvements on their church. Among the changes will be a new heating plant and an enlargement of the Sunday school department. Brother Swearngen is much encouraged with the success of the work at Kannapolis.

Rev. W. L. Scott, pastor at Ramseur and Franklinville, was in the Advocate office one day last week. He is greatly pleased with his new work, and speaks in the highest terms of his people and of their many kindnesses to him and he is expecting a great year with that splendid people of one of the most delightful pastoral charges in the state.

Mr. Bascum Henry Kimrey and Miss Annie L. Moore were united in marriage at Muir's Chapel Methodist parsonage, Spring Garden Street Extension, 11 a. m. February 15th. Rev. C. F. Sherrill performed the ceremony. Mrs. Kimrey is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Moore, of Greensboro. Mr. Kimrey is a prosperous business man of the city.

Mrs. W. T. Phipps, the wife of Rev. W. T. Phipps, pastor of the Perquimans circuit, underwent a serious operation last week at the Union Memorial Hospital, Baltimore, Md. Mrs. Phipps will be at the hospital till March 1, if not longer, and her friends can address her at the said hospital. The surgeon regards the operation entirely successful. We trust that Mrs. Phipps will soon be able to return home.

Mr. W. A. Mann, treasurer of Spring Garden Street church, Greensboro, desires hereby to express the heartfelt thanks of that congregation to friends who have contributed to the liquidation of the debt that has been crushing that church. These contributions have come from every section of North Carolina and from Virginia and South Carolina. The names of these friends will be held in grateful remembrance and placed in the archives of the church.

Dr. W. B. North commends Brother Stewart in the following terms: "I take pleasure in recommending to any of our brethren in the N. C. or W. N. C. conference, who may desire first class assistance in revival work at any time, Rev. William Stewart of Front Street station, Burlington, N. C. Brother Stewart is a most excellent man and a very successful revivalist. Every one desiring to secure his valuable services will please write to him or to me at Burlington, N. C."

Rev. A. W. Plyler is in Columbia attending the Methodist Press Association. Brother Plyler is to deliver one of the principal addresses of the association.

Rev. A. S. Barnes, superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage, Raleigh, paid the Advocate a delightful call Wednesday. Brother Barnes reports that things in the North Carolina conference are in good shape.

Mr. Cecil Addison Boren, Jr., and Miss Louise Bergman were united in marriage February 17th, 6 p. m., at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Bergman, Pomona, N. C., Rev. C. F. Sherrill, the pastor, performed the ceremony.

A card from Rev. J. W. Bradley, one of the leaders in the Advocate campaign in the Durham district, declares that the Durham is determined to stand at the head among the twenty districts in the state. When Bradley says it, it is usually so.

Rev. S. T. Barber, who was at the last session of the Western North Carolina conference appointed conference evangelist, has been appointed to the Ahoskie charge in the North Carolina conference. Brother Barber is already on the field at work. We are sure that he will delight the good people he has been appointed to serve, and that he and his new charge will have a good year together.

We regret our inability up to this time to find a place in the Advocate for the copy of a bill to Prohibit Bathing in Public Places on Sunday in North Carolina that has been submitted for publication by Rev. E. L. Stack with some good reasons offered by our brother why it should become a law. This method of Sabbath desecration, to say nothing of a violation oftentimes of the rules of common decency, has stirred the righteous indignation of Brother Stack and he is right. But this General Assembly will hardly reach that question in the few days that remain.

"According to press reports, Rev. Marion Nelson Waldrip, pastor of the Central Methodist church, Kansas City, held a congregation of one thousand seated until he completed his sermon, while firemen were fighting a fire in the basement of his church. Not only this, but there were six people converted during the service. The blaze in the basement was practically extinguished as the six converts stood before the pastor, in the thick of smoke, as the service was completed."—Texas Christian Advocate. Fire seems to have a good effect on folks in Kansas City, even if it is not of the eternal sort.

Nearly 300 Methodist women, members of Main Street church, were the guests last night of the men of that congregation at a dinner served in the banquet hall of the Young People's Building adjoining the church. The men waited on the tables, washed the dishes, and in fact did all the work. For two hours and a half the women, of age above 18, enjoyed a real treat in the splendid dinner, good music, fun furnished by the waiters and a touch of seriousness appearing in two brief addresses, one by J. H. Separk, toastmaster, and the other by the pastor, Rev. W. A. Lambeth.—Gastonia Gazette.

Dr. Richard N. Price, the oldest member of the Holston conference, died at his home in Morristown, Tenn., last week after several years of "age and feebleness extreme," being well past ninety years. Nobody is surprised at his going, but all heads are bowed at the news, and all hearts do the honored veteran reverence. He was a unique character. Bold, original, talented, quick at wit, humorous without trying to be so, a hater of shams, and a lover of truth, he lived a worthy life among us, and passes to a rich reward. The triumvirate—Sulins, Price, and Richardson—is broken up below, but joined together above. His like will never be in our midst again. His influence will long linger with us. Some one will write more fully of his life and death.—Central Methodist Advocate.

—The seventeen white annual conferences which include all the Southern states show a total increase of 18,782 in membership last year. Practically the whole of this was in the border states, Oklahoma leading with 5,726, then West Virginia (2,796), Wilmington (2,237), Baltimore (2,120), Missouri (2,113), Holston (1,445), Saint Louis (1,448), and Saint John's River (517). There is practically no growth of the white membership of the Methodist Episcopal church in the states of the "Old South"—a fact which has important bearings upon the plan of unification by two jurisdictions, as is now proposed.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

Rev. H. G. Hardin, pastor of Tryon Street church, Charlotte, will have with him Rev. M. B. Stokes in evangelistic services from March 18-25. Brother Stokes is one of our eminently successful missionaries in Korea who is home on furlough. The Tryon Street congregation will hear him gladly.

Mr. M. M. Fox, superintendent of that fine Sunday school at Siler City, and one of the strong laymen of that charge, ran in to pay us a pop call Tuesday. He is enthusiastic over the fact that they are now using a part of their new church plant. Brother Fox says that Rev. O. I. Hinson, the new pastor, has taken hold of things vigorously at Siler City, and that they are all delighted with his ministry.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. David Murray, 1009 North Third street, Wilmington, N. C., was the scene of a beautiful wedding Monday morning, January 22, when their daughter, Miss Cora, became the bride of Mr. Thomas Bailes of Baltimore, Rev. A. J. Hobbs, Jr., pastor of the bride, officiating. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bailes left for a northern tour, after which they will be at home at Sparrow's Point, Maryland.

Dr. G. T. Rowe, Nashville, Tenn., who had been at the bedside of his brother, Dr. H. B. Rowe, Mt. Airy, N. C., for the last three weeks, spent a few hours last Thursday evening in Greensboro on his way home. He reports that his brother, who has been critically ill for weeks, is better and on the road to recovery. Dr. Rowe expects to be with Rev. J. F. Armstrong, at Forest Hill, Concord, in a meeting in May. The Book Editor will assist Rev. J. F. Kirk in a revival at First church, Salisbury, in June. These churches and communities will enjoy the fine services of Brother Rowe.

Agnes Marjolaine, infant daughter of Rev. and Mrs. L. B. Hayes, died suddenly last Monday morning at 10:45 o'clock at the home of the parents, 111 West Fisher avenue, Greensboro. The baby was two-and-a-half months old. The nurse had gone into an adjoining room for a few moments when she heard the child cry and returned to find it already dead. Paralysis of the heart is believed to have been the cause of the little one's death. The funeral services were held Tuesday morning at the residence of the parents, having been conducted by Revs. G. T. Bond, W. F. Womble and R. G. Tuttle. Interment was in Greene Hill cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes in their deep bereavement have the tenderest sympathies of the Park Place congregation of which Brother Hayes is pastor, and of their many friends throughout North Carolina. The loss of the baby is a heavy stroke upon the fond parents. They have our deepest sympathy. Sister Hayes had only partially recovered from a severe attack of pneumonia, and was away from home at the time of the baby's death, taking a course of treatment under her mother, Dr. Rockwell.

AN URGENT PLEA BY A PRESIDING ELDER

I want to call every reader's special attention to the article in this week's Advocate written by Rev. G. T. Bond. I know the situation thoroughly and most heartily endorse all that is said in that article.

I know of no more faithful, heroic band of Christian men and women than the Spring Garden Street church, and they could and would cheerfully provide a house of worship adequate for their own needs. But while they are glad to provide a church home for the 400 or 500 Methodist young women in the North Carolina College for Women, in addition to their own needs, yet in doing this they have taken a burden on themselves hard to carry, and it seems to me that North Carolina Methodism would be glad to come to their relief as it is largely for North Carolina young women. The two North Carolina conferences are now planning to contribute liberally to the erection of an adequate church home at Chapel Hill for the hundreds of Methodist young men in the State University. This is as it should be. Let us also come to the rescue of the good people who have provided a church home for the young women of our state school—and do it now. W. F. Womble, P. E.

I do not ask to be exempt from sorrows, for that is the recompense of saints; but I ask not to be left to natural sorrows without the consolations of thy Spirit.—Blaise Pascal.

From The Inkhorn of an Itinerant

A UNIQUE SHAFT OF SACRED IMPORT

Little is given us of the stone set, upon which Jacob poured oil early in the morning, following his wonderful vision in the night when the angels ran up and down the ladder of the sky. Doubtless this is well, for it allows the imagination freedom. But how about this which we have in fuller detail?

About ten miles south of Roxboro in Person county, N. C., on a ridge in an open field, less than a hundred yards from a small dwelling and a barn, stands a white shaft about six feet high, obelisk in form, with lettering on two sides. One side bears these words:

"This Shaft Marks the Spot Where I Surrendered to the Call of God to Preach the Gospel.

Date 1901.

J. W. Bradsher."

On another side of the stone are chiseled the words of the First Psalm, through the third verse.

In the distance, one would conclude that this stone is a monument to some friend who had departed this life, but not so. The colored man who had this shaft placed still lives and preaches the gospel in that section. Any one who knows of a case similar to this would do well to let the public know. Is this the only one in North Carolina set to mark the surrender of a life to the service of God? This is really a Bethel by the way.

CAN ONE THINK SOUTH OF NORTH CAROLINA?

Itinerant chanced to meet with a gentleman on the train a few days ago who, as usual, set up a number of interrogation points in his mind. One of these was the caption of this article. Speaking of his son, who is now teaching in the lower South, and the remunerative position which is his, this alert and thoughtful citizen of the world—yes, of the world, for the going of his feet as well as the range of his mind has covered much of the planet—observed that he would much prefer that his boy were living in another section of the country, more favorable to his continued development, for "a man cannot think south of North Carolina."

How much there is to this observation, Itinerant will not pretend to say. We do know, however, that the people of this commonwealth have been inclined to demand freedom of thought and action. The early stand against British oppression was not more pronounced than the later stand of North Carolina against the neighborhood-mind and the unreasoning racial antagonism characteristic of some of the commonwealths to the south of us; and this is said with the full realization that our sins, in this respect, have been such as to bring shame and reproach. Still, men have breathed the free air under the pines of the level lands and looked out with clear vision from the peaks of the uplands. Ministers of religion of many creeds have spoken their convictions unafraid; leaders of more than one political party could be heard on every stump; educators in class room, library and laboratory have been free to think and to investigate, with the result that the sturdy English, the hardy Scot, the thrifty Dutch, and the impulsive Irish of the early days are developing into a great, free, aggressive, commanding commonwealth.

Shall we be true to our heritage and mindful of our obligation? Should there be something in the observation under discussion, we have an obligation beyond that of our fondest dreams? In these parallels, under these friendly skies, among these hardy sons of the soil, we have given us the opportunity to train a noble breed and to build institutions that will minister to a world far beyond our own boundaries. The background and the atmosphere are both favorable. Our Protestant religion thrives in an atmosphere of freedom; genuine education can be carried on in none other; and without it democracy cannot endure. Where men are free to live and to think and to love, religion becomes a regnant force and life becomes a joy. To escape the bondage of ignorance in the backwoods only to become bound by certain intellectual dogmas of scientist, philosopher, or theologian; or, what is worse, to become an intellectual anarchist, bound by nothing, is to be of all men the most miserable. An ignorant backwoodsman is always preferable to an intelligent knave or an intellectual anarchist.

But the truth that makes men free belongs not to the ignorance in the woods or to the pedant in the schools; neither to the blind dogmatists in religion nor to the indifferent agnostic in science. "If the Son shall make you free ye shall be free indeed!"

In a conversation carried on by two youngsters in an adjoining seat, Itinerant could hear distinctly the contention of these college boys. One claimed that his institution was much broader, because no special emphasis was given to religion; the other institution, he admitted, was more intense, but much narrower, because of the stress put upon religion. From this thesis, an animated discussion followed; most of which, as a matter of course, was the merest kindergarten in religion and life. Still, these boys were repeating what supposed wiser heads have been saying over and over again. Indeed, many hold it beyond all dispute that to be religious is to be narrow and to be irreligious is to be broad and liberal.

Much confusion, to the hurt of religion and genuine education, exists here. Many religious dogmas do narrow and fetter, and the old contention that ignorance is the mother of devotion shackles the mind. But these are not religion. Religion has to do with the inner spirit; the soul in its relation to God. The mind has to do with ideas and calls for the free use of these. Religion broadens a man; intellect frees him. Both of these make him broad and free. Some intellectuals boast much of their breadth, and they are broad and free in their outlook, but most miserably narrow in their sympathies. Many a plain, suffering saint is so broad in sympathy as to embrace the world and strives to help the needy of earth, while those who boast of their intellectual breadth are as narrow and cruel as Shylock. Religious culture and intellectual freedom enable one to live a large, free life, brave and unafraid. The one fundamental need in all of our educational life in the free air of North Carolina, from the kindergarten to the university, in state and church schools, is a religion that is vital, free from cant and pretense, and vigorous in shaping ethical ideals and moral practices. In the midst of such a situation, freedom to think becomes a blessing, promising an ever enlarging life to a fortunate people.

FIGURES THAT SHOULD GIVE US PAUSE

Mr. G. L. Morelock, speaking to the laymen at Raleigh, gave some figures well worth the consideration of all. The best estimate has it that ten per cent of our laymen are engaged in some active service in the church. Twenty-five per cent are contributing members; and forty per cent go to church. What a field for the enlistment of crusaders in a cause!

The Sunday school is the one exclusive layman's organization in the church and it is in sore need of more and better workers. The start has been made and it remains for the laymen to carry the work to a happy conclusion.

The figures for the country church are still more arresting: Ninety per cent of the missionaries come from the country; eighty per cent of the preachers hail from the same source; seventy-five per cent of the Sunday school workers started there; and eighty-five per cent of all business leaders started in the woods. Could we fully appreciate the full significance of these statements, the entire church would be changed in its attitude towards the church of the open country.

The men in our town and city churches (most of whom were born and partially reared in the country) do not fully realize the debt due those left behind or else they would give more money and render better service in keeping the life fresh and hopeful out there in those discouraging situations. Our laymen ought to organize and be ready to go wherever they are needed to stimulate church and Sunday school. This is one field that is always open and promising.

THE BIBLE, REASON AND EXPERIENCE

Any one who reads John Wesley must be impressed with the many times he used the Bible, the reason and experience in making a test of religion. Does not this account for the sanity of this wonderful man in all his wide and varied range of life and experience in making a test of religion.

One who follows the sway of emotional tides under the influence of religious experience is apt to go off into all kinds of fanatical vagaries; one who depends upon rational processes in dealing with the issues of life will soon come to his wits end; and one who attempts to know the Bible without the aid of reason and a living experience must end in confusion. Only by the use of the God-given mind, undergirded by a living experience, can this wonderful Book of religion be understood, for some things are spiritually discerned—especially, the words of the old Book which are spirit and life.

Wesley had to do with the emotional fanatics whom he would have to test all their religious experience by the use of aided by human reason. Could he have a word with the blind traditionalists of this day, who scout the use of the intellect in religion, we know well that little comfort would come to those who cry "rationalist," whenever scholarship is allowed a place in religious procedure. He would say, "think and let think," and test all by the Bible and reason and experience, and let this be done in love. As when he was preaching at the watch-night service in Cork from the text, "Though I had all faith, so as to remove mountains, and have not love, I am nothing." "A hard saying," Wesley enters in his Journal, "yet absolutely necessary to be insisted on, particularly among the people called Methodists. Otherwise, how many of them will build on the sand, on an unloving, unholy faith."

LAYMEN MEET IN RALEIGH

At the call of Dr. W. P. Few, lay leader of the North Carolina conference, a number of district leaders and others interested in the work of the laymen met in the Raleigh Hotel, February 9, 1923. Mr. G. L. Morelock, general secretary of lay activities, was present and gave a capital address. Plans were laid for a series of meetings in every district of the conference looking to perfecting the organization in this conference. Mr. Morelock will give his entire time for a round in the North Carolina conference between March 14 and 29. The schedule of these meetings will be announced later.

"The business of the church is to make Christian men and women and to make a Christian society," urged Mr. Morelock, "and the time has come for a program that will enlist in this service." If the church is doing the most important work in the world, the effort should be to enlist in this work. Special stress is to be laid upon enlisting the laymen of the Methodist church to this end. It will be well to watch for the program in the several districts.

Present at Raleigh were: Dr. W. P. Few, Durham; Dr. M. L. Mathews, Sanford; Messrs. W. E. Sharpe, Burlington; Z. V. Snipes, Dunn; D. U. Sanderlin, Fayetteville; W. G. Womble, Raleigh; H. J. Whitmore, Henderson; G. L. Morelock, Nashville, Tenn., and Revs. R. H. Willis, L. B. Jones, J. C. Wooten and M. T. Plyler.

Dr. Few presided and Mr. Womble acted as secretary. Following the address of Mr. Morelock and the luncheon the time was spent in laying plans for future efforts in the conference. X.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE

The executive committee of the Board of Church Extension of the Western North Carolina conference will meet in the pastor's study of West Market Street M. E. church, Greensboro, Tuesday afternoon, March 6, at 2 o'clock.

Only applications for loans and donations which are to go to the General Board of Church Extension will be considered at this time.

Applicants for loans and donations are requested to mail applications to the secretary promptly, so they may be presented to the executive committee on the above date. Those wishing to appear before the committee are at liberty to do so.

J. H. Barnhardt, President.

Fred C. Odell, Secretary,

P. O. Box 137, Greensboro, N. C.

What I must do is all that concerns me, not what the people think. It is easy in solitude to live after our own opinions; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Emerson.

THE GOLDEN CROSS SOCIETY

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Our General Conference acted wisely, and none too soon, when it organized a General Hospital Board looking to the establishment and maintaining of hospitals throughout the borders of our great church.

Indeed, this work has been neglected by the Methodists far too long. Without hospitals we cannot do our duty to the sick and suffering of the land, especially the poor and those who are unable to give proper care to the members of their household who are overtaken by diseases or wounded by accidents.

The General Conference organized also the "Golden Cross Society" which it made auxiliary to the General Hospital Board of the church, and upon which the General Hospital Board must demand largely for the funds with which it is expected to promote the hospital work of the church.

The Golden Cross Society is not an organization which has meetings and conventions, but is rather an enrollment of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, somewhat like the enrollment of the supporters of the Red Cross Society. Its members are enrolled in the office of the General Hospital Board, 416 Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, Ga., and each signs a card containing this pledge:

"Desiring to manifest my love to Christ by serving and helping the sick, the needy and the unfortunate, I hereby enroll as a member of The Golden Cross Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Write me as one who loves his fellow men."

Adult members pay $1.00 a year and children under fourteen years of age pay 25 cents. In addition to these members there are special memberships as follows:

Supporting memberships .....	$10.00
Sustaining memberships .....	25.00
Service memberships .....	50.00
Life Memberships .....	100.00
Life patron .....	500.00
Knight of the Golden Cross .....	10,000.00

Eighty per cent of the funds accruing from membership fees in the Golden Cross Society is used for the erection, endowment and support of hospitals under direction of patronizing conferences and endorsed by the General Hospital Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and twenty per cent of the funds goes to the support of the General Hospital Board.

In our great church there are 2,500,000 members and if even so many as half of them enroll in the Golden Cross Society the General Hospital Board can soon put a Methodist hospital at every point in the South where one ought to be, and thus we shall take from the Roman Catholics the work which we, as Methodists, ought to do and which we have allowed them to do for us far too long.

Surely, every loyal Methodist will quickly enroll in the Golden Cross Society and give active support to the hospital work of our church.

From a similar enrollment in the Northern Methodist Church there was raised during the year 1922 for hospitals in that church more than $700,000. By consequence the Northern Methodists now have above eighty well equipped and well conducted hospitals.

Southern Methodism has only four hospitals in actual operation, and three more are in actual process of erection.

Our church ought to have not less than one great hospital for each state in which we have a work, and these hospitals we can have if we are half as zealous as our Northern Methodist brethren.

Southern Baptists are also engaging in hospital work and their hospitals are multiplying rapidly.

In this great effort on behalf of the sick and suffering Southern Methodism must not fall behind the foremost church in the land.

READER, GIVE HEED TO THIS

My Dear Reader:

We are at the end of the rope. We are not squealing but we are pleading for your help in a matter that concerns the welfare of the state. Spring Garden Street Methodist church was built with the specific purpose in mind of caring for the Methodist girls attending the North Carolina College for Women. The church property is valued at $125,000. We still owe $46,000. If we can raise the sum of $25,000 within the next sixty days our hands will then be loosed and we will be able to do the work that we should.

Our people have made and are still making unbelievable sacrifices, but we cannot make the final grade unless you come to our rescue. If every Methodist of the state who subscribes for the Christian Advocate will send us at least ONE DOLLAR each the problem will be solved. I know that you are called upon most every day to support this and that, but there has never been a more worthy cause presented to the Methodists of this state than amply providing for the FOUR HUNDRED AND FIFTY METHODIST GIRLS who attend the great State College at whose door our church stands. Brother Pastor, won't you please present this cause to your people and have them to help us? I regret to make this appeal, but when a man cannot swim, and the water is so deep that he cannot touch the bottom, if the banks are lined with strong men who have the ropes, he would be foolish if he did not sound the alarm. You have the ropes, we are in the stream crying for your help. We trust that you will give us your brotherly consideration.

All communications should be sent to W. A. Mann, 710 Highland Avenue, Greensboro, N. C.

Most fraternally,
G. T. Bond, Pastor.

THE ALTAR FLOWERS

By Rev. J. H. Barnhardt.

O little flowers so sweet and mild,
You were not called to bloom unseen!
There is on earth some suffering child,
To whom your mission so serene
May be proclaimed in fragrant speech,
Eclipsing all the ample reach
Of human words.

Unto the sacred house of prayer
You went to cheer the waiting throng;
When, lo, the King who lingered there
Fixed on your cheek, by praise and song
The lovely form and radiant face
Of Him who made the lilies grace
Sweet Galilee.

Here by the hand of God's elite,
You came to me with chalice fresh,
From which I drank the nectar sweet,
That satisfied my aching flesh
And fevered brow, as though caress
Of sacred, healing holiness
Were on me laid.

And now I know in deeper ways,
How true is human love and warm;
And how the love of Christ ablaze
In subtle tint and fragrant form
May bless and heal the ones who pray
In weariness by life's highway
For coming strength.

RIBBONS, DURABLE MOPS, RUMMAGE SALES

Dear Brother Pastor:

Do you ever get letters that read like this?
"Dear Pastor: Permit us to suggest a method whereby the treasury of your church, or of some organization within your church, can be greatly enlarged." Then follows a very flattering proposition with reference to the sale of some very fancy "ribbons" or "durable mops" or "calendars," etc., etc. These wonderful wares are to be received at absolute wholesale prices. "You send us fifty cents" for this wonderful guaranteed-never-to-wear-out "mop" or "ribbon," etc., "and sell same to the members of your organization at retail prices and make 100 per cent profit." And here is the bait thrown out to ease the conscience of the would-be customer: "You will be surprised at the number you can sell because it is in support of a worthy cause and is article of merit."

What would you think of some shoe dealer or clothing merchant in your city if he were to come to you with a proposition like that? Yet it would be just as legitimate, and the reason given for the one might be given with as good sense for the other, "It is a worthy cause and is an article of merit." Both sides of the proposition may be absolutely true, but nevertheless that does not justify your church in taking up the shoe business or the clothing business in order to enlarge her treasury. How enticing they do make it! "You can easily see that the result will net quite a tidy sum."

I have been quoting for the most part from a letter that you as a pastor doubtless received also, with the kindly suggestion that you pass it on to the president of your woman's organization. I do hope you are not guilty of yielding to the subtle suggestion. I take all such letters, along with many others that are equally worthless, and smooth them out and put them under a weight, then use them to make sermon outlines on later. Even then I feel a little guilty.

In the last two months no less than six representatives of such commercial concerns as mentioned have called at my study in an effort to interest me in their pretty schemes of enabling our churches better to solve their financial difficulties. After explaining very emphatically to these agents the reasons why I would tolerate no such schemes of raising money in my church, I drew from three of them the frank admission that they believed such methods unsound and harmful; and the other three went away angry, one of them saying that if he could not "work" my church, he could "work" some other.

And he will! Some church or some organization within some church will bite. "A worthy cause and an article of merit." "Why not?" some one will say.

The law allows such business concerns to palm their wares off on many of our unsuspecting, well-meaning church people. As a business deal it is permitted, whatever one may say about the ethics of it. Their agents are ladies and gentlemen of very good appearance. They know how to "put it across." But as a scheme for enlarging the treasury of a church or any organization within a church, it is an abomination unto the Lord! The same may be said about "rummage sales" and "church suppers," and of every other method except the one true method of supporting the greatest of all enterprises in this world, the Kingdom of God.

All such schemes are unfair to the business men of the community, in the first place. Their business, to which they give their whole time, and for which they, in order to serve well their fellowmen, assume a great many risks, ought not to meet competition at the hands of church organizations which have to pay neither taxes nor rent, and which assume none of the common risks of business. Business men have told me this very frankly, and they are absolutely right!

As for "rummage sales" the same may be said, with this in addition: It is not showing proper respect to the Lord of all life when we give Him the "left-overs" instead of the "first fruits" of our toil. If anyone has on hand any old door mats, worn-out rugs, bedsprings, chairs, baby carriages, rat traps, or dog houses, let him look up some poor family that might have use for such things, only do not say that the church is doing it. If it is done in the name of the church, let the truck be loaded with brand new things, otherwise the poor might think the church is a cheap affair.

If a pastor wants to pauperize, cheapen and eventually kill a church, just let him allow his church, or any organization within his church, to resort to any of these methods just mentioned, and there will be no need of speed-limit signs along the way.

We have in all of our well organized churches a committee on finance whose sole business it is to make all necessary provision for the support of the church. They are selected on account of their wide experience in business affairs and their superior knowledge of business methods such as every successful church must practice. These men should be consulted by the pastor and every organization in the church before attempts are made to secure money for any purpose within the church. I am quite sure that you will not find one such committee in a thousand who would approve of the spurious methods mentioned above.

Let every man, woman and child, "according to his ability" give of his substance, regularly, systematically, and voluntarily, to the support of the biggest, best, most vital as well as most wonderful of all causes, the cause of Christ, and our churches will not have to resort to the cheap methods referred to above. Moreover, church suppers will not then be robbed of their first and only reason for being born, namely, to aid in the development of friendship and fellowship among the followers of the Master.

CENTENARY NOTES

Centenary Speakers.

The special Centenary speaking teams, one of which will be in North Carolina from March 9th to April 8th, are already at work in some parts of the church. Reports from these teams are very encouraging. Dr. R. L. Russell reports from Missouri, "Spirit good throughout the state. Great victory in Kansas City." Dr. J. W. Perry reports from South Carolina that the outlook is encouraging. Dr. E. H. Rawlings reports that the old Centenary spirit is revived in the Virginia and Baltimore conferences.

The Story of the Centenary to Date.

A forty-page book telling of the achievements of the Centenary to date is just from the press. This book has been sent to each pastor and to each lay leader by the office at Nashville. I have three hundred copies and can furnish it to interested persons on application. If you want a copy send me your name and address.

Centenary Literature for Distribution.

A very interesting and helpful leaflet, "Did You Know?" has recently been published by the Centenary Commission. This leaflet ought to be in the hands of every member of our church. It contains information that answers many questions that are being asked about the Centenary. I shall be glad to furnish this in sufficient quantity for distribution.

The Wilkes Methodist Bulletin.

Rev. M. T. Smathers and his officials have published an eight-page paper which is full of information and inspiration for the membership of their church, and, as for that, for all who are interested in the establishment of the kingdom. In glancing over this publication I find: The Bishops' Message on the Centenary as our primary and major task now; an account of the China Mission Conference and Bishop Hay's first message; Bishop Beauchamp's article on "The Supreme Need of the Hour"; Bishop Cannon's statement on the work in Mexico; two articles on the Siberia Mission; one of "The Home Work," another on "The Country Church," and another on "Progress in Korea." There is an interesting story of "Missionary Specials."

Centenary Treasurers.

We have over 1,600 local church Centenary treasurers in North Carolina. They are a fine bunch of folks. They have done and are doing a wonderful piece of work for the building of the kingdom. I would like to write of the work of some of these treasurers.

ers. I may do this if I can get the time. There is a treasurer over in the Greensboro district that I would like to tell about, there is another in the Winston-Salem, in fact there are some in every district in the state whose faithfulness, accuracy and promptness are a delight. Do we have any treasurers that give concern? Yes, occasionally we find one who has not entered into the spirit of the Centenary, one who is careless and pessimistic. Occasionally we find a treasurer who has lost hope of collecting the Centenary. He says the folks are not going to pay. Frequently in cases of this kind the people have not paid their Centenary because they have not been solicited to do so. R. M. Courtney, Centenary Field Secretary, Thomasville, N. C.

ARE WE FACING AN EMERGENCY?

Read this thoughtfully and prayerfully. "Our church is facing right now a real emergency, and it is important that every Methodist understand just how real and how serious it is. The Centenary period is practically over, but the Centenary task is not quite half finished. Of the $35,000,000 pledged in the Centenary campaign, about $16,000,000 has been collected, and practically all of the remainder is due. Unless $4,000,000 can be collected on past due pledges by the first of May, our missionary program will be seriously interfered with.

Realizing the extreme needs, our bishops, secretaries, presiding elders, and other interested laymen are entering into a campaign which will continue four months if necessary to gather these needed funds. It is a time when the last Methodist must do his best. So far the Centenary has absolutely made good. The church has had the greatest success of its history during this Centenary period and this success has been in every foreign field we occupy as well as in the homeland.

Meetings are being held now throughout the church and will be continued until the last congregation and the last subscriber to the Centenary fund is reached." Of course Greensboro district is going to do her part. That we may plan for the campaign, I am asking every pastor, charge lay leader and Centenary treasurer in the district to meet in West Market Street church, Greensboro, on Friday, March 9th, at 2 p. m. Rev. R. M. Courtney will meet with us.

All the pastors, charge lay leaders and Centenary treasurers in Greensboro district will please be present.

W. F. Womble.

OUT AFTER TEN WEEKS

For ten weeks we have been indoors, and most of the time in bed on account of sciatica. I am thankful indeed to be able to go to church again, and to see so many long-suffering and faithful friends who have shown much patience and kindness in every way with a sick pastor.

Just before Christmas these good people came forth in a real pounding that lasted for weeks. In many ways they have set forth their sympathy and patience with one unable to get out to help them in the least.

May the dear Lord bless them abundantly this year, and may this be the very best year in the history of Carraway Memorial church is the prayer of the pastor. We have been in our pulpit now for the last two Sundays, and hope from now on to be able to do much for the cause of Christ here, and to show in return for their good works the real spirit of our common Master.

We hope to do something for the Advocate also now soon. With a heart full of love for the Advocate men, and success in getting its pages into many more hands and hearts. I am sure every family should have the Advocate; every member should read it. It not only gets better every year, but every number is better than the preceding one. J. W. Kennedy.

POUNDED FROM AFAR

The preachers are prolific in their reports of poundings, but I can beat them in one respect. The pounding that came to us this Valentine's day came from more points of the compass and covers more territory than any I have read about. Think of a pounding from Fremont and Rich Square and Conway and Elizabethtown and Durham and West Virginia all the same day. Yes, and from Charleston, too. I have read of "Old Mother Hubbard who lived in a shoe, who had so many children she didn't know what to do," but I have so many children that I don't know what they are going to do with me. May a gracious heavenly Father reward them for their thoughtfulness of their parents.

Before I close I want to sanction Brother Hunt's criticism of a certain preacher for slandering a Bible character. Strange that a preacher should want to do such a thing. If he must rake up scum and filth there is enough near home. He needn't go to Bethany to find it. A fellow said he saw a black cat in a dark room at midnight. If there had been a black cat there he could not have seen it in the dark. What he saw was something in his head, or maybe in his heart. I have always thought of Mary and Martha and Lazarus as devoted friends of Jesus and he as passionately fond of them. He loved to tarry with them. Any one who would reflect upon either has damaged the whole circle. A preacher has to be careful or he will say too much. D. L. Earnhardt.

RAEFORD CHARGE

I see in the Advocate lots of notices of "Poundings," "Storm Parties," "Preachers Mobbed" and all sorts of stunts cut by folks in showing how they felt towards their pastors. That's all very fine and I am glad for them and their pastors. But I am reminded of the old negro preacher's prayer for rain: "Lord, don't send no hill sweepers and gully washers; but, Lord, jest send us a steady drizzle drozzle." That's been the way these good folks have treated us since we have been here and from the look of Roberson last time I saw him, it has been their way for a long time. "Jest a steady drozzle" of hams, sausage, liver puddings, turnip salad, turnips, potatoes, backbones, spare ribs, brooms, collards, lightwood, wood, butter, eggs, and so on. I won't go any further with the list. I wouldn't have Sikes get dissatisfied, and when he hears of things like the above he gets powerful restless. I just wanted to let you know that these folks know just how to treat their preacher and that we are not behind the best of you in the good things to eat and so on. Fact is if either one of you will run over some second or fourth Sunday we will let you preach to a sure-enough congregation and hear a sure-enough choir and see a sure-enough Sunday school, but I warn you beforehand, load your preaching gun well, for these folks are used to good preaching when our elder comes around.

One of the strange things about this charge is, it is "nip and tuck" between Raeford, Parkers and Bowmore as to which will outdo the other in being good to their pastor. Now, I have said all this not to get the Advocate force dissatisfied, nor to make any other preacher begin setting his sail this way, but just to let you know Raeford don't make a great noise because she is too busy taking care of their pastor and his family and keeping the standard high along all church lines, and you need not be surprised if the boll weevil don't get us, to hear of a modern church building with up-to-date Sunday school equipments this fall. Just keep your eye on Raeford, and after our four years are out then you can bid for it, but until then, hands off.

Jas. H. Frizelle.

CAMP FREE

Camp meeting at Camp Free is set for August 1st to 12th. Rev. Joseph Owens of Boaz, Ala., Rev. C. F. Wimberly of our Bethel church, Charleston, S. C., and Rev. C. G. Trumball, editor S. S. Times, Philadelphia, are definitely engaged as chief preachers for this year's camp. A rare opportunity for defeated souls to learn the way of victory in Jesus.

Jim H. Green, Mgr.

THINGS OF INTEREST

It was with much regret that I saw the Roanoke circuit divided and lose its name; and it was with still deeper personal feeling that I gave one church (erected in part) to Brother Smith, Littleton, and another church (the foundation cleared) to Brother Midgett, Halifax.

It was a labor of love, pain and pleasure intermingled that secured the site of Bethel and made possible a new building at Calvary. With the funds in sight for these two buildings and the raising of a small debt on Tabor church (built under the leadership of Brother Towle) three churches, all with Sunday school rooms, ample for the membership, would have been dedicated in the same year.

"I planted, Apollos watered, but it is God that giveth the increase."

Chowan circuit greeted us—now that the better half has arrived—with cordiality that is very much appreciated. Many have added the usual things that make an appeal to the appetite.

We look forward to a helpful year to people and pastor alike. May our work be blessed in His name.

N. M. Wright.

A CARD OF THANKS

We are indeed grateful to every one who has so kindly sent their contributions and letters of encouragement. We have had checks from one end of the state to the other, from the mountains to the sea, and from Rock Hill, S. S., to Sigma, Va.,—checks from $1.00 to $25—and we are coming to believe that we are not by ourselves in this struggle.

We hope that every reader of the Advocate will send their dollar. It may look like a small matter to the individual, but it will mean a great deal to us. And here is hoping that you will send us a dollar or perhaps a $5 or even an $10. We need it.

Ask Bond, ask Plyler, ask Kirkpatrick, ask Barnhardt, ask Lambeth, ask Ireland. They know and will tell you the truth about it. Kirkpatrick sent one hundred last time.

May God bless us all in this great work.

Fraternally yours,

W. A. Mann,

WHO IS TO BLAME?

We notice that "The Inkhorn of an Itinerant" is highly exultant in praising the first lady of the land. Among the commendations which particularly attracted our attention was that she listened attentively to the public orators of the day, believing that they had messages from above, not herself seeking the platform and trying to run the men out of office, and always sat before the ministers the best dishes that her pantry could afford.

He wishes "her judgment, her refined taste, her dignified manner, her quiet, persuasive personality might penetrate the lives of our modern woman!"

We are very much interested in the elevation of our sex and would be pleased to know how we might attempt to clear ourselves of so much censure and regain her celebrity.

Psychologists tell us that the mind grows upon what it is fed. The Bible says, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." While this verse refers to the masculine we infer it also means the feminine.

With these two points in view will the writer please explain why woman transgressed? Was it because the first lady of the land listened too attentively to the men and used her persuasive voice in elevating them to a higher life, leaving the young women untutored and undisciplined, or did the men not yield to her refined taste and persuasive personality, fall short and slip the young women from under her care and train them, or is it for some reason of which we are not acquainted?

Anyway, why have we modern women so transgressed, and who must come to their realization of their duty to us or they themselves change in order to feed our minds and train us, will the itinerant please explain?

"Who killed Cock Robin?"

Miss Mary Rudisill.

CLARKS-BETHEL CHURCH ON THE KENNEKEET CHARGE

Dear Editor: Please allow me a little space in the Advocate to speak a few words in behalf of Clarks-Bethel church located in the extreme eastern part of the state and right on the borders of the Atlantic ocean, where the roaring of the breakers will let a restless fellow lie down and sleep in peace.

Before entering upon my subject, I see an article in the Advocate, written by a certain preacher concerning a certain country church. He claims that the church that keeps pace with this church has got to hustle. That sounds good.

Coming back to my subject, Clarks-Bethel church at Salvo, N. C., has always paid in full everything that has been put upon her in the line of finances, and this good brother preacher knows this, for he has served this church with great credit for two and one-half years, and knows this to be true.

In the beginning of the Centenary campaign this church went over the top at the Sunday school hour in fifteen minutes after we started the subscription pledge cards. At the end of each year we have paid all pledges due and at this writing every pledge has been paid in full and I have the receipt from Mr. D. H. Dixon, Goldsboro, N. C., with every pledge from Clarks-Bethel church, Salvo, N. C., paid in full, and we have only done our duty as we pledged to do; and until every city and country church does this they have failed to do their duty. Come up and settle your Centenary pledges as you promised to do and get on the honor roll with Clarks-Bethel church, located on the banks of the Atlantic ocean at Salvo, North Carolina.

Luther Y. Gray,

Local Church Treasurer.

YANCEYVILLE

In my first communication I wrote of the material advancement of Caswell county in very recent years. In this letter I want to deal more directly with the church and religious conditions in this section of the country.

Yanceyville and the surrounding country was settled and brought to a comparatively high state of civilization during the colonial days. The forest was cleared away by slave labor hundreds of years ago. Tobacco has been the chief crop here for centuries. No finer tobacco has ever been grown than is grown in Caswell county. The tobacco which Sir Walter Raleigh smoked during the days of Queen Elizabeth was very probably grown on these lands. Not many years ago the largest tobacco factories of the world were built on the hills of Caswell county.

These last few sentences got left out of my first letter, so I will enclose them in this one.

The material side of the church has never kept pace with the secular material development. Those who lived in those old colonial mansions, and on down to the days just before the Civil War worshiped in log meeting houses and small frame buildings. Nice churches were very rare in those days.

"Tempus fugit" and in its flight ushers in many changes. We have nice churches on this charge and "every day and every way they are getting better and better." Locust Hill is one of the younger churches of the charge, located in a large oak grove on a public highway. A very pretty frame building painted white, making a very pleasing appearance against a green background of pine forest. Its memorial windows tell of departed saints who builded better than they knew, laying solid foundations for coming generations. These good people have recently installed a very handsome piano and provided nice little chairs for the juniors of the church. These good people of Locust Hill are some of the best people on earth.

Traveling north six miles over a future hard surface road—in twelve months this hard surface road will materialize—you will come to Prospect church. This is one of those good country churches built in recent years. Here we find a large grove of hard-wood trees; in the center stands a beautiful church, well built and well furnished. The memorial windows speak to us of departed heroes and heroines. The pastor who ministers to this congregation will ever carry in his mind many pleasant memories.

I must hurry on, for I see this epistle is growing long and Advocate space is valuable.

Fourteen miles along a sand clay road, flanked by beautiful landscapes brings us to Bethel. This is a new church built of white pressed brick, covered with green tile. The architecture is Grecian. With the exception of our courthouse this is the best piece of architecture in the county. The inside finish of the church is very nice. The pews and pulpit furniture are of the best and most modern type. The splendid piano is a gift from the ladies. Those ladies do so much for the church.

Here I must digress just a little and tell a little story of progress. These good people—and they are of America's best—had worshiped for many years in a little frame building 30x40 feet. Not long after they began building the church the county saw the nice church and said at once, that nice church needs a nice sand clay road, so the road came. A big-hearted philanthropist came and looked at the church and road and said this community needs a school, and so he donated $20,000 for a school. The house was built; it proved too small. The county has plans to enlarge the building, and this same said philanthropist comes and looks again and says the school needs a teacherage, so he plans to build the teacherage. The church moved and the whole community moved and things happened. This community has produced great financiers, philanthropists and ministers. Great things will continue to happen here.

A few miles to the north and you will see Shady Grove. A large church with a large opportunity. Here is one of the neatest, prettiest country churches I have ever seen. These Shady Grove people are planning to improve this beautiful church. The church has been a great power for good in this community. It is one of the old churches, only four miles out from Danville, Va. Shady Grove has given Danville some of her finest Christian workers. I enjoy these fine Christian people very much.

Now, Mr. Editor, don't bite your lip too much, for this letter is getting long and I know it. A few words about Yanceyville church is yet to come. I would like to write a short sketch of the three churches here—Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist—for they all have interesting histories; but space will not permit.

Yanceyville is one of the oldest churches in the state. It has a glorious past and a bright future. Almost a hundred years ago the present building was put up. The church was remodeled only a few years ago. I have a splendid picture of the church, and I will send you one if you will promise to put it on the front page of the Advocate. It is a large brick church with memorial windows, four big columns in front, following the old southern style. Here is a little bit of history connected with the church I will give you. This was taken from the tombstone of one of the former members: "Sacred to the memory of Sterling Gunn, a soldier in the War of Independence, who fired the first cannon at York and was an eye-witness to the surrender of Cornwallis. He was for more than forty years a prominent member of the M. E. church, who died August 13, 1852, age 88 years three months and four days." The son of the man mentioned above, Dr. Allen Gunn, who was also a member of this church, built the home we now own as the Methodist parsonage. When I have more time and space I will write more fully of this historic church. The preacher who lives in Yanceyville will have very pleasant surroundings, among a very kind people including all denominations. I am closing or completing my four years. My stay has been pleasant and profitable in many ways. We have added 155 names to the church roll in the past three years. The Sunday schools are making progress. The ladies' work on the charge is well organized and they have worked wonders in church development. Yanceyville circuit is climbing toward the head of the list of circuits. It will soon reach the place if it keeps up the pace. We are trying to put the church abreast of the times in every way. The church occupies a spiritual field, but material is necessary for its progress. With $100,000 spent for good roads in the county in the past three years, in the same period more than $200,000 for public schools, while in the same length of time churches have not spent over $40,000. The church is the largest factor in material development, and yet it is often forgotten in the mad rush in business.

The largest returns which man has ever received came from dollars and cents invested in manhood and womanhood. This is the business of the church. Co-operation in secular business is good; co-operation in church is better.

THREE MISSIONARIES TO MAKE SPEECH AT MEETING

Plans are almost complete for the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Carolina conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which meets at Henderson April 25-27, the dates having been fixed at a recent session of officers in Rocky Mount.

Miss May Edla Smith, Gatesville, president, stated that the program for the meetings has been almost completed and will be made public at an early date. Three missionaries who have been in foreign fields and who were residents of North Carolina will be present to deliver addresses on their experiences and plans for the future, she stated, adding that several officials headquarters of the church in Nashville, Tenn., have promised to attend.

In addition to the features of the meeting the usual annual reports will be presented.

A preliminary announcement of the treasurer's report shows that the women of the conference have subscribed approximately $86 000 for missions during the year, exclusive of Centenary pledges. Mrs. F. B. Kinne, of Louisburg, is treasurer, and she stated that throughout the conference the women had given close co-operation in raising funds and that a better record for the fiscal year is expected by officials.

The Rocky Mount meeting was attended by twelve officials of the conference and each expressed herself as being well pleased with progress reported for 1922.

TWO NEW YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES

We are glad to announce the organization of two young people's societies recently and welcome them most cordially into the "Conference Family," hoping that they may each grow and become great organizations in the churches which they represent. The first of these was organized at Statesville, North Carolina, the latter part of January, with Mrs. J. E. Scroggs as leader. The officers are: President, Miss Helen Sherrill; vice president, Miss Helen Scroggs; recording secretary, Miss Tass Crowson; corresponding secretary, Miss Elizabeth Anderson; treasurer, Miss Nora Townsend; Supt. mission study and publicity, Miss Lucille Beam; Supt. social service, Miss Elizabeth Monday; Supt. supplies, Miss Beulah Henley.

The other society organized is the Belle Bennett Young People at Lexington, with Mrs. W. L. Hutchins and Miss Elizabeth Barnes as leaders. Officers chosen are: President, Miss Virginia McCarn; vice president, Miss Agnes Peacock; recording secretary, Miss Elizabeth Knight; corresponding secretary, Miss Lois Hackney; treasurer, Miss Christine McCrary; Supt. mission study and publicity, Miss Elizabeth Hackney; Supt. supplies, Miss Lillian Peacock.

HONOR ROLL FOR CHILDREN

We are indeed glad that during the year 1922 thirty of our children's missionary societies in the conference have attained the Honor Roll. So few are here for the first time and we hope that next year there will be many more added to this number.

Before giving the Honor Roll list, we wish to give the Standard of Excellence for children's missionary societies.

Standard of Excellence for Juniors.

Ten credits are given for each of the following:

Ten per cent increase in membership.

Average attendance at each meeting of one-half the membership.

Regular monthly offering by each member.

Pledge paid in full.

Each mission study class.

One subscriber to Young Christian Worker for every three members.

Week of Prayer observed.

Daily Bible study pledged by fifty per cent of membership.

Promotion exercise from baby division to junior division.

Promotion exercise from junior division to young people's society.

At the close of the year the auxiliary superintendent of children's work will sum up the credits. If eighty or more points are made a report of this must be made to the conference superintendent, who will furnish for the first year an Honor Roll Certificate. For each of the succeeding years that the society makes the necessary number of credits the conference superintendent will supply seals to be attached to this certificate.

Wilcox, Jr., J. O. Williams.

LEADERS

In the Charlotte school the following pastors and general superintendents took credit:

Tryon Street, Rev. H. G. Hardin and O. J. Rock.

Trinity, E. R. Bucher.
Hawthorne Lane, J. B. Ivey.
Brevard Street, Rev. T. F. Higgins (Gold Seal Diploma).

Belmont Park, Rev. W. B. Davis.
Calvary, Rev. C. M. Sharp and G. W. Dooley.

Duncan Memorial, A. A. Short.
Chadwick, C. D. Campbell.

There are no better informed nor busier men in Charlotte than the foregoing, yet they found time to study, write papers and learn. It is a fine thing to ask teachers to go to the school. It is a better thing to go with them. The folks who know the most are always willing to learn more.

CENTRAL, CONCORD

At the request of Rev. W. A. Jenkins, pastor, Mr. M. W. Brabham and I ran over to Concord from the Charlotte school and met with the building committee of Central church to discuss plans for the new Sunday school building that is going to be erected there at once. We found Jenkins surrounded with good, open-minded men. The Sunday school plant at Central is going to be well adapted to the religious educational needs of a whole generation.

ARCHITECTURE

Mr. J. M. McMichael, architect of Charlotte, N. C., has probably built more churches than any other man in the state. More of these churches are for the Baptist than for the Methodist, but he can build a real departmentized Methodist church. He knows what we want and can build for inside use as well as outside beauty. He took quite a bit of time last week to learn from Mr. M. W. Brabham just what our church is committed to in the way of Sunday school architecture. No, he does not know that this is being written.

POLKTON

Answering a cordial invitation from Rev. D. C. Ballard, Miss Jenkins and I went from the Charlotte school to Polkton to spend Sunday, February 11th, in the interest of the Sunday school cause. We found earnest, loyal and intelligent people who wanted to use the best means in their Sunday school work. Arriving at the church, a nice brick building, at nine-thirty we found plenty to be interested in till after fixe o'clock in the afternoon. It has been a long time since I have had just such a day. First we had a real Sunday school and then at eleven o'clock Miss Jenkins and I spoke. Following this service lunch was served in individual plates and then for over three hours in the afternoon we discussed the why and the how of the Sunday school. It was no make-believe affair either. Those people, led by Supt. J. W. Cameron, county farm demonstrator, are awakening to real religious educational activity. It will be remembered that at the last annual conference the old Polkton circuit of seven churches was divided and now Polkton and two other churches, Mt. Vernon, the home church of Rev. J. M. Rowland, and Poplar Hill, are paying as much as the seven paid last year. Drs. T. M. and L. C. Smith, fellows who do not stop with the tenth, are leading spirits at Polkton. Of course Brother Ballard carries a smile as he goes about doing good. There is something stirring at Polkton.

GREEN STREET

Green Street, Winston-Salem, is a wonder. I doubt whether we have a better Sunday school in the conference. This school meets in five sections and each department is ably led. Mrs. W. M. Biles has charge of the Cradle Roll and Beginners, Mrs. A. W. Cline the Primaries, A. W. Cline the Juniors, H. F. Thompson the Intermediate-Seniors and H. C. Jones the Young People and Adults, as well as being general superintendent. These departments are holding monthly meetings with special opportunity for development. Very few nights come when there is not something doing at Green Street.

Last Wednesday evening Brother Thompson had the Intermediate-Seniors and their parents come together in a Valentine social evening and I was invited to talk to them. It was good to be there.

Rev. G. A. Stamper, pastor, tells me that he has never seen a group of people more interested in their church work. He says they seem to be best satisfied when working about the church. Supt. H. C. Jones, who has not missed going to Sunday school somewhere in twelve years, is a most constructive promoter. His parting statement to me was, "We've got the biggest preacher in Winston-Salem."

OUR WILMINGTON SCHOOL

Two hundred and forty Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school leaders were enrolled in our Co-operative Standard Training School held in Grace Methodist church, Wilmington, last week, and approximately fifty per cent of this number will receive certificates of credit for attending and doing the required reading and writing.

These over two hundred followers of Wesley and Calvin having common aims and feeling alike the need for a keener insight into the teaching mission of their common Christ and for better methods of carrying forward His work as represented in the modern Sunday school, united in a week of intensive training. The immediate results have been gratifying, and we believe the permanent effects will be far-reaching and bring forth much fruit.

Pastors, officers, teachers and young people enrolled. Six courses in various departments of Sunday school work were offered. The names of those earning the certificates, together with the courses and instructors, will be given next week.

TRAINING WEEK AT GIBSON

February 23-28 will be training week for our Sunday school workers of that section of the Rockingham district centering about Gibson. Miss Keene and the writer will conduct at Gibson a non-standard training school. Rev. A. J. Parker, the pastor, has been busy for some time setting things in order and expects to have a good attendance. This will seek to serve several rural Sunday schools.

TRAINING WORK AT FAISON

Following close on the heels of our Gibson non-standard training school will be a similar training enterprise at Faison for the Faison-Warsaw charge and as much of the Wilmington district as can be touched from this point.

Rev. Chas. M. Lance, pastor of the Faison-Warsaw charge, and committees which he has named are seeking to bring together all the Sunday school officers and teachers of the community. Miss Keene and the writer will offer courses in modern Sunday school principles and methods and seek to stimulate the workers to greater zeal and effectiveness. Rev. J. M. Daniel, the presiding elder, will probably be on hand at least part of the time to give us the benefit of his counsel and encouragement.

FIFTH AVENUE, WILMINGTON

Steps are being taken to complete the new Sunday school building at Fifth Avenue, Wilmington. Work on this structure was halted a few months ago due to various circumstances, but now it is about to be resumed and will be continued to completion. Mr. Thos. J. Gore and Rev. A. L. Ormond, the pastor, who are quite actively behind this effort to finish the building, express the belief that it will be ready for occupancy by May 1. When finished, it will take care of a Sunday school of 1,000 or 1,200 pupils.

DOES YOUR SCHOOL HAVE IT?

"This certifies that the bearer's Sunday school has paid its Centenary pledge IN FULL TO DATE."

The foregoing is the heart of a certificate issued by W. G. Cram, directing secretary, and John E. Edgerton, secretary-treasurer, to each Sunday school which is up with its payments on its Centenary pledge.

A great many of our Sunday schools have paid up to date. How about your Sunday school?

DON'T FORGET EVANGELISM

Sunday school officers and teachers should always have as their chief objective the bringing of their pupils to a definite acceptance of Jesus as personal Saviour and Lord. March 4 has been designated this year as Decision Day, and April 1, Easter, has been suggested in our Program of Evangelism as the time for receiving into church membership those who make the decision on Decision Day or between that day and Easter.

It isn't a bit too early to begin planning and praying and working now toward these special days. In fact, if they are to be made most worth while, it is quite necessary to begin early and make careful preparation in advance. Many of our workers are familiar with the Program of Evangelism as outlined by the General Sunday School Board and referred to more than once in these columns before. If you are not entirely familiar with this program, however, and want to acquaint yourself with its many helpful suggestions, write L. L. Gobbel, Durham, N. C., for leaflets on the subject.

Let's not lose sight of or neglect our most important task!

SOME OF OUR SPECIAL DAYS

The live Sunday school superintendent need never allow his Sunday program to become dull or monotonous. In addition to the spice and variety which his own initiative will suggest, there are the special days, each of which calls for a different program and a special emphasis. Here are some of them for the weeks immediately ahead of us:

February 25—Monthly Missionary Day.

March 4—Decision Day.

March 25—Missionary Day.

April 1—Easter.

April 15—Sunday School Day.

NON-STANDARD SCHOOLS

We are working these days on a schedule of non-standard training schools to be held between now and June 1. We are planning a series of such schools to be held over the conference touching each district perhaps in one or more places. The efforts of

THE LEAGUE MEMBERS WAKE UP

The Epworth League members of Moore's Methodist church gave a social on Saturday night, February 10, for the first time in several months. The meeting was held at Hart Grove schoolhouse near the church.

Short program was given by the league members. This was enjoyed by both young and old. After the program a course of hot chocolate and cake was served; then ice cream, candy and peanuts were sold. The money which was received for these will be used for the benefit of the church.

The rest of the evening was enjoyed by playing games in which all took part. Everyone went home feeling as if the evening's work had been a success and the league members have decided to give a social once a month hereafter.

Alice Tucker.

Dear Leaguers:

The month of March has been set aside for the campaign for the organization of Intermediate and Junior Epworth League chapters in our church. It is a well known fact that many of our finest boys and girls are being lost to our church because we have not found some attractive activity to secure their interest in the church. This interest must be secured and must be maintained.

Our boys and girls are really hungry for the finest and best, and where this is presented in the right way there is a splendid response. They can be easily led away from the church; they can also be led by the church into a life of usefulness and helpfulness to others. What shall we do? The answer is for us to make.

The Intermediate Epworth League is the organization of the church to give the fourfold development of the boy and girl of the "teen age" and to give the desire for activity a chance for full expression in the work of the league. The method of work is "Learn to do by doing." Your young people need it. Will you supply it for them?

Get in touch with your assistant district secretary, district secretary, conference intermediate superintendent or conference president. Either one of them will be glad to send you information and help you organize.

Let us also pray for the intermediate boys and girls of our church during these days. James E. Ellis,

Intermediate League Secretary,
810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

LEAGUE NIGHT AT THE ORPHANAGE, RALEIGH

Sunday evening, February 11th, the Methodist Orphanage leagues, both Junior and Senior, showed their district secretary that they could conduct a real, live, sure enough devotional meeting.

The Junior service began at 6:30 p. m., using "The Fork in the Road" as their subject. The Lord's Prayer was repeated by all, a hymn sung, then Miss Minnie Howard recited "The Fork in the Road." A duet was sung by Misses Pauline Thomas and Louise Swain, followed by a reading, "The Companion on the Way," by Lee Stainback, and "True to the Road" by Miss Thelma Davis. These Junior leagues are coming strong and will soon lead in the Raleigh district if some of our other young folks don't "watch out."

The Senior League meeting at 7:30 p. m. with Miss Bertha Smith leading was an inspiration and a revelation of what young people can do with a little preparation.

They followed one of the programs as outlined in our Epworth Era, and Miss Eula Purnell showed us that she can act and recite as well as she can play basket ball. Of course the singing class had an active part in this program.

Raleigh district leagues would do well to visit the Orphanage leagues some Sunday night.

Western North Carolina Conference

ZION EPWORTH LEAGUE

It has been some time since I have reported on the work of our league, so I would like to state a few things we have done since then. During the Richmond county fair, held at Rockingham last fall, we fixed a booth and sold things to eat. This was made possible by the good people of the community and our expenses were very small. During the four days we cleared $140, which we now have in our treasury.

The next way we have planned to raise money is by getting a play. With this money we have planned to build Sunday school rooms in our church as we need them very much.

Our league has not been as interesting, from a devotional standpoint, as it should be, so at our last meeting we discussed ways to increase the interest in this, the most important part, of our league work and decided on the following:

1. The superintendent of each department should study the handbook in order to thoroughly understand the work and how to carry out their respective parts.

2. Each home should have a copy of the Epworth Era and every number should study the program to familiarize themselves with the work and thus increase their interest.

3. The program committee should meet, make out and distribute the programs a week before the devotional meeting so that those on the program will be prepared to carry out their parts.

We discussed the matter of a campaign to increase the attendance, but reached no definite conclusion and would appreciate plans or information from any chapter that has had a successful campaign of this nature.

Hattie Ellerbe, Cor. Sec.

TO LEAGUERS OF NORTH WILKESBORO DISTRICT

I have just written a letter to the chapter presidents, but through the League page of the Advocate I want to talk to all the league members of the district. (I hope every one reads the Advocate.)

The North Carolina Christian Advocate gives a whole page of itself to the League conferences of North Carolina, and the Western North Carolina Epworth League conference is publishing a paper of its own, through which each chapter may know what others are doing—that is, if they will let it be known. Too often, however, the Advocate page is conspicuous because of the absence of league news and the presence of advertisements, and the "Tar Heel Leaguer" is about to die for lack of attention.

Let's give Mr. Chalker, editor of the Advocate page, something to do and help the "Tar Heel Leaguer" by writing to them about what our chapter is doing or planning to do.

I heard someone say the other day that what the Epworth League needs is more "Peptimism," and I heard one pastor say in regard to one league that the biggest trouble with it was that it lacked piety in the devotional meeting. Let's give the Epworth League what it needs—Piety, Pep and Publicity.

Yours for a better Epworth League,
Ruth Colvard, Dis. Sec.

IF SICK, BILIOUS! START YOUR LIVER

Don't Take Calomel! "Dodson's Liver Tone" Acts Better and Doesn't Gripe, Salivate or Make You Sick—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

INTERMEDIATE CITY LEAGUE UNION MEETING

On February 5th the Intermediate City League Union of Charlotte held its regular quarterly meeting at the Spencer Memorial Methodist church in North Charlotte.

The city union consists of leagues from the following churches: Calvary, Hoskins, Spencer Memorial, Brevard Street, Hawthorne Lane, Trinity, Seversville, Belmont Park and Dilworth.

The new president for 1923, James Turbyfield, presided at the meeting. The devotional service was of great inspiration to all. After the devotional service interesting talks were given by Rev. Mr. J. H. Armbrust, Mr. J. S. Sease, Mrs. C. Z. Fite, and Rev. Mr. Davenport.

At each quarterly meeting a banner is given to the league which has the largest per cent of its members present. At this meeting the banner was won by Spencer Memorial League, which had ninety-eight per cent of its members present.

After the program there was a social hour. Stunts were given by the different leagues, after which games were played, and delightful refreshments were served by the Spencer Memorial League.

The committee in charge of the meeting was: Mrs. J. M. James, city Supt. Intermediate leagues; Mrs. S. M. Strange, city Supt. Junior leagues; Mrs. J. S. Osborne, Supt. Spencer Memorial league.

Nelson J. Miles is now making dates for spring and summer evangelistic services as choir leader, using Rodeheaver's Victory Songs. Pastors desiring his service may write him at Box 95, Dayton, Va.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

By the time this note is read we hope to have our Irish potatoes, garden peas, lettuce, mustard, beets and spring turnips planted. From actual experience we have learned many years ago that it pays to plant these vegetables at the earliest possible date. The finest potatoes and English peas the writer ever made were planted in January.

* * * *

Our girls have played several games of basket ball and have lost only one game this season. The boys have played seven games and lost only one out of these seven and then lost by one point. Last week they beat the Fayetteville High School twenty to eight and the Oxford Orphanage High School aggregation eighteen to fourteen. Both these games were played in Raleigh. This is a fine record for the team that has had no coach to assist them in their training. Orphanage boys and girls have the winning spirit implanted deep down in their souls. This is the explanation why so many succeed in life. Grit, grace and self-reliance are mighty factors in achieving success in life and in building an untarnished character that will stand when the winds of adversity blow and the floods of sorrow and disappointment descend upon the soul.

* * * *

Rotary clubs are great promoters of forward movements in the community as well as factors in creating and developing a better fellowship among all classes. Someone has said of Rotary that it is to the development of a community what a starter is to an automobile. It starts and fosters all worthy undertakings. Since I have had a little opportunity to study at close range the workings of Rotary, I have been impressed that the churches could profit by some of their fine characteristics. Many noble causes suffer and die because here are not more starters in the church. There is a certain group of men and women in every church who could underwrite every financial need and guarantee success in the higher realms of the spiritual if they would only put themselves at the disposal of the great Head of the church and put the same degree of enthusiasm into the kingdom as they do in their private affairs. I can take one or two men and women from each church in the conference with the above qualifications and put over any kind of program for our Methodist Orphanage. In many communities we have some good starters, but that number is too limited. Let's have some more of the Rotary spirit for our great orphanage and then we will start up something on a really big scale.

* * * *

After eight years of active service in the Orphanage work, I am convinced that we need vocational training for many of our boys and girls. I think we ought to maintain our grammar school and four years of high school. A considerable number of these under our care do not care for the professions; they want to enter some of the trades. When they arrive at eighteen, the time set for their dismissal from the orphanage, they ought to be so equipped that they can do scientific farming or enter some of the worthy trades, and make a livelihood for themselves and not have to drift hither and thither with no occupation in which they are proficient. To send more boys and girls out into the world with no vocational training is absolutely unfair and cruel. Yet that is just what our orphanage is doing to some extent. An industrial building, well equipped, would enable us to give many of our children such training as would fit them to render society helpful service and at the same time prepare them to make a comfortable living for themselves. Would it not be a fine thing for someone with means to write or telephone me that he or she would underwrite such a proposition?

* * * *

The executive committee is holding frequent meetings, trying to come to the wisest conclusions in formulating plans for the future enlargement of our orphanage. I have never seen a set of more painstaking men than those who compose our executive committee. They want to do the very best they can for the good of the orphanage, and at the same time make a dollar go as far as possible. Within a short time they will have a definite working plan so when some noble benefactor comes forward with the necessary means, there will be no delay in carrying forward to a successful conclusion the larger development that has been previously outlined by the entire board of trustees. The landscape architect has been secured, and architects for buildings are being consulted so that we may be absolutely certain that no mistake will be made in the nature and location of the proposed buildings. The individuals who have done so much for our orphanage are particularly concerned that everything about the Home shall be harmonious and artistic as well as serviceable. They want to combine the aesthetic and the utility which is very commendable. These friends fully appreciate the fact that beautiful surroundings are potent factors in the moulding and shaping of character. While we are deeply interested in a lovely campus and substantial buildings, the thing that is uppermost in the hearts of all who contribute to the success of our work is that our orphan children have a bright, happy home, where they can grow up to young manhood and womanhood with high ideals and Christian character, which will fit them for the life that now is and for the life which is to come.

MT. AIRY DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Mt. Airy district conference will convene in Elkin on Tuesday, March 6th at 9 a. m. We are hoping to have Bishop Denny with us. We are very anxious that all members of the body will answer to roll call at the above hour, thus making it possible for the first day to be full of work.

We urge all the pastors of the district to prepare short written detachable reports covering items under paragraph 93, pages 50 and 51 of the Discipline, minus item six. The various committees will need these in the creation of their reports.

The law of the church requires all local preachers to bring or send to the district conference written reports of their labors during the year, and to ask in person, by letter, or by some one authorized to make the request for the renewal of their license. We hope all our local preachers will govern themselves accordingly. A committee will be created charged with the responsibility of giving the conference all needed information about our local preachers before the vote is taken to pass the character and renew the license of each one. Rev. J. T. Ratledge of Walnut Cove, N. C., will be the chairman of this committee. Let every local preacher who cannot be present send his report to the chairman in time for the committee to report on the first day of the conference.

All those representing conference and general interests of the church will have a chance to be heard. The committee will be glad to furnish them entertainment on condition they notify Rev. A. P. Ratledge, pastor of the church at Elkin. The second day of the conference (Wednesday) will perhaps be the most convenient time for these brethren to speak. Both the editors of the North Carolina Christian Advocate are invited to be present all the time.

We are expecting the twenty-one pastors to do their utmost in securing full delegations. J. H. West.

GOOD FOR R. J. LOUGH AND MISS LUCILLE

We note with pride the peppy, pious letter of Lough in the field on the firing line in our most ancient little burg of Bath. The following from this letter is worthy of comment:

"Much of our work will be with the young people, operating with the home to create Christian men and women for the future. Why should we go on from Sunday to Sunday preaching to the old people? They are not the hope of the world but the young people are."

Under the wide-awake leadership of Miss Lucille Brooks their league has grown from seventeen to sixty-five members.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Sick or nervous headaches, backaches, women's aches almost instantly respond to the liquid remedy CAPUDINE. It stops the pain by removing the cause. Every home should keep a bottle handy. Sold by druggists, 10c, 30c, 60c. Insist upon getting CAPUDINE

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets That Are Nauseless, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs on the tongue at bed time, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size. (adv.)

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup
*****
Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.
*****

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using the well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FREEDOM FROM LAXATIVES

Discovery by Scientists Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Medical authorities have found that the gentle lubricating action of Nujol most closely resembles that of Nature's own lubricant. As Nujol is not a laxative it cannot gripe. It is in no sense a medicine. And like pure water it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is prescribed by physicians; used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

BROWN AND HIS TEETH

Two loggers who were working for my grandfather at a lumber camp up in the "great woods" came down to the farmhouse one evening in January while we were at supper, and, opening the outer door, one of them looked in and shouted, "Just come out here, squire, and see the biggest muskrat in the world!"

The other logger had the animal by the tail, which looked like a large mortar pestle flattened out. "I tell ye he's heavy!" he exclaimed. "Weighs a good thirty pounds!"

The old squire laughed. "Why, men," he said, "hat's no muskrat. That's a beaver! Where did you get him?"

They had found the animal wallowing in a snowdrift near the bank of a large brook. During the previous week there had been a January thaw with rain, followed by sharp cold and a snowstorm; it is likely that the thaw had flooded the beaver out of his winter house. The two loggers had never seen a beaver before, for at that time beavers were scarce in the Maine woods. They had thought that the animal they had found was the king and father of all the muskrats!

After we had examined him the man carried him into the wagon house adjoining the woodhouse and shut him under a large pine box, turned bottom up and weighted with half a dozen loose bricks. But the next morning there was a large hole in the side of the box and no beaver inside. We boys discovered him behind the oats bin and captured him by throwing a horse blanket over him. Then from a thousand of loose bricks that were piled against the wall at the back of the wagon house we laid a pen for him in the far corner of the building; we covered the top with a sheet-iron fireboard such as folk use to close up a fireplace.

We supposed that we had him where he would be unable to gnaw out, but on the following morning we found that he had chiseled a hole through the pine planks of the floor and had descended into the dark space beneath.

At the same time grandmother, who had gone to the cellar of the farmhouse to fetch butter for breakfast, was startled to see a large brown animal leap down from a vegetable bin and give the floor a loud slap with his tail. She came up in haste without her butter, but she soon learned that the intruder was merely the beaver, which had come along beneath the woodhouse and had entered the cellar, where he had been eating carrots. But when we tried to catch him he retired beneath the wagon house, and, as it was not easy to reach him there, we let him alone.

Later we found that in the course of three days he had made a comfortable nest for himself of straw, chaff, hay and other litter that he had brought from beneath the floor of the stable, which adjoined the wagon house. And at the end of several days we discovered that the vegetables, particularly the carrots, were rapidly disappearing from the cellar of the house; indeed several bushels were gone. The beaver no doubt was hoarding them in his nest. It was easy enough to put a stop to the thieving by walling up with bricks the aperture beneath the woodhouse into the cellar.

After that we saw nothing more of our beaver for six or eight weeks and nearly forgot him. I suppose he was living on his stolen store.

In March, however, he made his appearance in the woodhouse and gnawed sticks of green wood that had bark on them; and about that time too he made himself unpopular with the old squire by going outdoors and felling two small mountain-ash trees that had stood behind the wagon house. He ate most of the bark on the branches and probably would have continued his logging operations in the garden and orchard had we not begun feeding him rutabaga "turnips such as we gave to the cattle.

Brown—as the girls named him—waxed sleek on the turnips and by April had become so tame that we could stroke him as you would stroke a cat, and he seemed to be quite as fond of it as a cat is. If frightened, he would give a leap, then a scoot forward; then slap! would come his heavy tail on the floor. When cuffed he would squall pitifully and for some time afterwards would sit and shake his head.

One night early in May he went to the goose pond, and before morning he had cut down the one willow tree that stood by it; the trunk was perhaps six inches in diameter. The act displeased grandmother greatly, for in hot weather her geese were accustomed to sit on the water in the shade of the willow.

Now that the tree was down it was of no use to disturb the beaver, and during the next two months he cut the trunk and the branches into logs, each about two feet long, and, working mostly at night, made desultory attempts to build with them a dam across the little rill that ran from the pond. But he did not complete the dam, probably because he was disturbed a good deal, and at last he returned to his nest under the wagon house. The girls fed him frequently with dry crusts of bread; and really he liked bread and rutabagas much better than he liked tree bark. After every few nights, however, we could see that he had been to the goose pond again and had put in a few fagots and done a little plastering with mud. Instinct prompted him to work there, but, now that the necessity that had implanted the instinct in his ancestors no longer drove him to work, he soon left off and came back to his rutabagas and bread.

But in September the wild, provident instinct of the animal revived again, more powerfully. He now set to work every night and in the course of a week completed a typical beaver dam of fagots, mud and grass, which raised the goose pond fully a foot. He even carried sticks of stove wood all the way from the woodpile, and sometimes he worked by day. Whenever any of us boys drew rear he would sit up and glance at us out of the corner of his eye in a most knowing manner.

My cousin Addison thought we might breed beavers for their skins there at the goose pond, and, since we all wished to see whether he would build a house, we drew a small load of green poplar wood there from the wood lot. Brown appeared to know just what the wood was for, and now that his dam was done, he began to put up a house in the middle of the pond where the water was perhaps three feet deep. He worked steadily and in the course of a fortnight had his house covered and "shingled" with grass and mud. Then he forsook his nest under the wagon house and lived in his own house, though he came round to the kitchen door for bread. He also raided the vegetable garden for carrots and turnips and carried away a quantity to store up.

During the latter part of September and in early October he would sit on top of his house for hours at a time, looking round. If a dog came along, he slid off and, giving the water a slap with his tail, dived down to the door of the house and went inside and remained there for a while. Dogs in-

MOTHER, YOUR CHILD'S BOWELS NEED "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"

Even Cross, Feverish, Sick Children Love its Taste
and it Never Fails to Empty Little Bowels

If your child is listless, full of cold, has colic, or if the stomach is sour, breath bad, tongue coated, a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" will quickly start liver and bowel action. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works the constipation poison, sour bile and waste right out and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today may save a sick child tomorrow. It never cramps or overacts. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

deed troubled him a good deal, one dog especially, a large brindled mongrel that belonged to a boy neighbor of ours, Alfred Batchelder. The dog was a neighborhood nuisance and was always worrying poultry, calves and sheep and frequently sneaking about kitchen doors to pick up bones or to steal.

As a matter of fact there was not much love lost between Alfred and ourselves. He was a rude, bragging, arrogant boy and was much addicted to playing spiteful tricks. "I'd like to see Tige get hold of that beaver-ours once!" he used to shout as he went by. "Tige would shake the liver out of him!"

In fact Alfred slyly set the dog on poor Brown every time he passed and saw the beaver out. "Sick 'em!" he would exclaim in low tones; then he would stand by the roadside wall to see Tige race down across the field to the pond. The thing became so provoking that Addison talked of shooting the dog, but the old squire forbade him.

One morning while we were at breakfast we heard Tige bark—we knew his bark as well as we knew Alfred's voice—and ran out to see the end of a very queer struggle. Brown evidently had been on his way from his house in the pond up to the kitchen door for his breakfast when Alfred and Tige had spied him; then, hearing the dog, no doubt he had turned to run back to the pond. But he was too late. Tige had caught up with him just as he reached the pond and had grabbed him by his very thick, fleshy tail close to his body. Feeling the dog's teeth, Brown whirled and gripped Tige by his tail, also close to his body.

When it came to tail chewing Brown instantly displayed the greater power. With two nips of those sharp, chisel-like teeth of his he bit Tige's tail nearly off, so that it hung by a bit of skin. The yell Tige gave could have been heard for half a mile. He lost his nerve too and, letting go his hold, bolted, howling, up through the field to his master. His tail was dragging on the ground, and as he ran he kept glancing back at it first on one side and then on the other.

Of course we boys laughed. I doubt whether a good fight and a decisive victory would have made us feel one half so jubilant. As for Alfred, he scarcely replied at all, but took his pet home to be doctored. Tige was a very borbait dog to the end of his days.

What had happened probably cost Brown his life. Less than a week afterwards, during the time of the hunter's moon, some of our folks heard the report of a gun in the night and the following morning we discovered the beaver lying dead in the pond beside his house, with just the tip of his big tail out of water. He had been shot through the head with a bullet, probably while he was sitting on his house.

Our first thoughts naturally were of our neighbor; yet we did not believe that Alfred was good marksman enough to hit a beaver by moonlight. Some one, however, had fired the shot that ended the life of our pet. Grandmother had his skin made into a muff, and several years later the lady gave it to my cousin Ellen, who still treasures it among the keepsakes of our young days at the farm.—C. A. Stephens, in Youth's Companion.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS ORGANIZES

The young ladies of Harmony Methodist church, Concord, met at the parsonage Friday night and perfected the organization of their Sunday school class.

This class began with four regular members about three months ago. It now has about eighteen or nineteen regular members. The officers were elected as follows:

President, Emma Howell; secretary, Emma Cochran; Cor. secretary, Mabel Micenheimer. Mrs. Mock was selected teacher of the class, and the name Willing Workers was given.

Committees were appointed for looking after the sick and strangers of the church.

After the business hour we enjoyed a social hour, carrying out the Valentine spirit, both in decoration and in playing games. Refreshments were then served. All went home reporting a good time. R.

A FINE PEOPLE

We don't think our coming here to Town Creek charge deserves special mention, but our cordial reception and kind treatment since arriving are worthy of note. The good people of Bolivia (one of my churches) gave us an old time pounding on Saturday night, January 27th. The others are sending theirs in on the installment plan. We have a fine people to work with and for. Pray that I may be equal to the task and may be a blessing to the entire charge. We feel very grateful to the ones that have helped provide these things for their pastor.

Best wishes to the Advocate.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

your conference workers will be supplemented by various pastors and others specially fitted for this kind of work who have agreed to help project our leadership training program into all corners of the conference. It is our purpose to plant these schools in rural charges—circuits and stations—where for various reasons it is impractical to hold standard schools. An effort will be made to bring together Sunday school workers of one or more circuits or stations at a place most accessible to the various schools and to give them an opportunity to become better acquainted with modern principles and methods of Sunday school work.

EVERY STEWARD IN SCHOOL

Every steward of Edenton Street church, Raleigh, is a member of Edenton Street Sunday school and working at the job! The Sunday school is thus closely identified with and tied to the official members of the church and receives from them that assistance and encouragement so indespesible to most effective Sunday school work and growth.

But how does it happen that these stewards are so interested in the Sunday school? Many ask this question. Well, there are perhaps several reasons. A partial explanation, if not a reason, is that it is one of the unwritten laws of the church that every steward must find his place in the Sunday school. If he is not already in the Sunday school, when he becomes a steward, he becomes a member of the school or he does not remain a steward.

There are over 1500 pupils enrolled in this school.

Wanted—Every Methodist steward to find his place in his Sunday school. The school needs him and he needs the school. Answer quick.

AT WORK IN BIG FASHION AT KINSTON

Kindly allow me a few lines to tell something of what we are doing down here at Queen Street.

Following Rev. Charles L. Reed, who so faithfully and efficiently ministered to our people for four years preceding last annual conference, Rev. C. K. Proctor came to us from Central church, Raleigh. Brother Proctor's first sermon for us was at the service on Thanksgiving Day. In addition to his own Methodist congregation many visitors were present, and by his address he made quite a favorable impression. He has now been with us for about three months and seems by this time to have "struck his normal stride." He has impressed us all as being a live wire in God's service— young, energetic and enthusiastic. His going in and coming out among us, as well as his public messages, reveals the fact that he is deeply spiritual, well-equipped and a vigorous champion of the Christ, whom at all times he delights to exalt.

But Brother Proctor is not trying to do all the work down here by himself. One of the first things that happened after his pastorate began was a shaking up of the board of stewards; not that any of them were shaken out, but that all of them were put to work, or at least each given a specific job and diplomatically invited to "go to it." The entire membership of the board has been divided into committees. These committees were appointed by the board itself, and to each has been assigned the duty of caring for and fostering some special phase of the life and activity of the church. Mr. C. F. Harvey is chairman of our board of stewards and as such becomes ex-officio member of each committee. Not only have the committees been appointed but they have gone to work, and their written reports read at the first meeting this month indicate aggressiveness on the part of each one.

But not only have the "official brethren" been put to work, the women also are doing things. Recognizing the eternal fitness of things and possibly imbibing some of the spirit of activity that is prevalent, with fine zeal they have written an enviable record of achievement during recent months. They have handsomely and comfortably furnished a parsonage, have sponsored a reception having for its purpose the bringing together of the church membership, socially, as well as the better introduction of Mr. and Mrs. Proctor, and show considerably increased activity in all branches of woman's work. Neither have the interests of the young people been neglected. In fact that side of the life of the church is being especially emphasized. A few Sunday evenings ago the officers of the senior and junior Epworth leagues were publicly installed, after the pastor had preached to them an excellent specially prepared sermon.

And the Sunday school, too, is girding up its loins for larger achievement. The superintendent for the new year is Mr. Braxton B. Jones, formerly of Elizabeth City. Mr. Jones was for several years principal of the Kinston high school and is now a successful attorney at the Kinston bar. He is a graduate of Trinity College and is well equipped for the work of leadership. He has taken hold of the work of the Sunday school at Queen Street with energy and ability, and the outlook is bright for a successful year's work in this field of endeavor.

There are lots of other things, Mr. Editor, that might be mentioned. But what's the use of trying to tell it all? We will therefore desist at this point and simply report progress all along the line. D. T. Edwards.

We must listen if we would understand. We must not intrench ourselves in our own sorrow so as to leave no open door for him to enter with his healing and comforting balm.—Mrs. C. L. Goodell.

EVERY BOY and GIRL SHOULD HAVE A BIBLE. The Bible is the word of God, the first Book of Books for the entire civilized world. The laws of Nations are based on the principles mentioned in the Bible. Its early impressions on the youthful mind are both beneficial and enduring. It builds character and its influence is toward Christianity and Right Living. It stands for all that is good and Noble and symbolizes the highest ideals of Life.

These Special Editions Have Been Prepared to Appeal to the Child's Own Interest

All efforts of the imagination and all descriptions in Words cannot make the Land of the Bible as real and vivid as a walk through it by means of Pictures. There has been so little change in that part of the Orient that pictures of its scenes as they now are show the very places as they actually existed in the time of Jesus and the Apostles.

The Colored Picture Styles illuminate in natural colors Pictures of scenes and places taken from nature; and life in the Holy Land in manners, customs, dress and homes as they now exist, but so like olden times that one may imagine oneself going about with Jesus as He healed, taught and walked through the streets of Jerusalem. Each picture is accompanied by a complete description of the scene portrayed.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

Insure in The Methodist Mutual—owned and controlled by the two North Carolina Conferences.

IN MEMORIAM

BOYD—Mrs. Harriet Selma Boyd was born near Catawba in Catawba county, N. C., January 6, 1829, and died at the home of M. L. Robinson, her son-in-law, near Maiden, N. C., January 18, 1923, age 94 years and 12 days.

She was married to William Boyd February 5, 1851. Her husband died September 7, 1882. She leaves three daughters, 18 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

She was converted in early life and joined the Methodist church and remained a faithful member of the same to the day of her death.

Ira Erwin.

ALLEN—Linus W. Allen of Ansonville, N. C., after battling with a severe attack of pneumonia for several days passed away at his home on January 19, 1923, leaving a wife and two small boys, also his father, mother, brother and sister, to mourn his loss. He was a member of the Methodist church. The burial services were conducted by the writer, being assisted by Rev. Mr. Burrus, Baptist minister of Wingate, N. C., after which his earthly remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Red Hill Baptist church, May the Great Comforter sustain the grief-stricken wife and the two little boys, and may they remember that God is too good to do evil and too wise to make a mistake.

R. S. Richardson.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has removed from us our aged, faithful and much beloved brother, John J. Taylor, and

Whereas, from early childhood to the mature age of eighty-five Brother Taylor has been known among us as one of the most faithful of God's people, and

Whereas, he has been for more than sixty years a faithful and beloved member of this quarterly conference. Therefore, be it resolved:

First, That Cedar Grove church and the quarterly conference of the Hillsboro circuit have lost one of our most devout, consecrated, deeply spiritual, and faithful members.

Second, That while we deeply mourn our loss we rejoice in the hope that it is well with him and that his reward is that of a faithful and worthy servant of God.

Third, That we extend to the members of the bereaved family our love and sympathy in their deep bereavement.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this quarterly conference, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and a copy to the Advocate.

H. E. Haley,
J. W. Jordan,
W. H. McDade,
Committee.

BROWN—The passing of Mrs. J. P. Brown of Fairmont brings much sorrow to many hearts. She had been such an active worker in church work of all kinds, especially was she well informed about the great missionary work that is going on, until a few years ago when her health became so impaired she could not keep in touch with the work so well as before.

To know Mrs. Brown was to love her. She was a kind, loving friend to all, both old and young. She was much older than I, but I loved her so much and spent many pleasant hours with her. She never forgot to say kind words to sorrowing ones, words of the right kind, words that meant most.

My very deepest sympathy goes out to her loved ones. You, my dear missionary sisters of Fairmont, know better than I how faithful and generous she was to your society. You have missed her faithful attendance and her unselfish service.

May you be women who are strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. May you always choose Christ as she did, until you are called to meet our friend and co-laborer and be with Him forever.

Good-bye, my dear friend. May God keep me faithful so that I will meet you again.

Mrs. Nan Julia Taylor.

CARTER—Angeline V. Jones was born May 28, 1868. She was married to J. A. Carter. To this union were born three children, all of whom are now living. Mr. Carter died several years ago.

Angeline was converted early in life and joined the Methodist church at Greenwood, of which church she was a member when she died. She was a good woman and interested in church work. May God bless her loved ones.

She was sixty-two years, eight months and twenty-five days old. She died January 23, 1923.

W. E. Moretz, P. C.

GIBSON—Some one has said that death loves a shining mark. And sometimes it seems that the sweetest and best are taken, while others not so good are left. It was certainly true that when death claimed Ruby Gibson it took one of the brightest, purest and most beloved young girls.

She quietly fell on sleep at the home of her mother, Mrs. Alice Gibson, at Steel's Mill, January 31, 1923, after a brief illness with pneumonia.

Ruby was born August 11, 1906, and was the youngest of a large family. Last year she professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist church. But even before she was a loyal Sunday school worker and always took an interest in the church. During her illness she talked of Jesus her Saviour and sang so many beautiful songs.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, assisted by the writer, and interment at Green Lake church by the side of her father, who preceded her to heaven about six years ago. May God comfort the bereaved family.

B. E. Stanfield.

TWEED—James H. Tweed was born in Lincoln county, Tennessee, on May 2, 1841. He was married to Miss Susan Sherrill in November, 1881. To this union was born four children, one of whom died in infancy. Those living are S. B. and Hamilton Tweed and Mr. Lawrence Clayton. Besides his good wife he also leaves one brother, T. W. Tweed, and sister, Mrs. Martha Gibson.

Early in life Brother Tweed made a profession of religion and joined the Presbyterian church. After moving to Buncombe county, N. C., he joined the M. E. Church, South, and up to his death he was a consistent member of the Tweed's Chapel church. He loved his church and was always there as long as he was able to go. All preachers who have served the Fairview circuit found Brother Tweed's home the preacher's home. For three years he was a soldier in the Civil War, and for sixty-two years a soldier of his Lord and Master.

On December 13 his body was laid to rest in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

T. A. Groce.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, on Saturday, January 13, our heavenly Father called Bro. Geo. H. Yow from the busy scenes of this earthly life into the joys of eternal bliss, and in his departure there has been removed from our midst a most faithful member and worker of our Sunday school, one whose voice in song has been an inspiration to multitudes through the years, and whose piety and devotion to his Lord was a beautiful characteristic of his life; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, and who has called our friend and brother home.

Second, That we extend to the bereaved family our sympathy and express to them our love, knowing that no words can drive away their sorrow nor heal their broken hearts, but unto Him who is able to comfort and give the balm of healing, we would commend them, and bid them look up through the clouds and tears of this present time, to a glorious meeting with their father and husband on the eternal shore.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to the bereaved family, and a copy sent our local papers and the Christian Advocate for publication.

J. C. Green,
E. T. Kearns,
R. L. Pope,
Committee.

Main Street M. E. Sunday School.

HARTSELL—After several weeks of suffering the Father reached down and took to Himself the spirit of little John Calhoun, the 18-months-old son of Wade C. and Mrs. Lynn Hartsell, on February 4, 1923. It is a great sorrow that has come to this home, but the One who has permitted the blow to fall is supplying grace according to their needs and the parents are submissive.

R. E. H.

SIMPSON—Annis Elmire Edwards Simpson was born July 24, 1856, and died December 20, 1922. She was married to A. E. Simpson November 26, 1883. This union was blessed with eight children, two having passed away in infancy. Mrs. Simpson in early girlhood accepted Jesus for her Saviour and joined the Methodist church at Burusville. She was a patient sufferer and after several weeks of lingering the Master called her home. Her husband and children, relatives and friends survive. May their loss be heaven's gain. Her body with tender care was laid to rest in the cemetery at Concord church after appropriate service by her pastor.

D. S. Richardson, P. C.

AYCOCK—Rachael Clara Perry was born at Gold Hill, N. C., October 23, 1843, and died at her home at Cabarrus, N. C., January 25, 1923. On September 11, 1870, she was married to John H. Aycock, thus journeying with him for more than 51 years. Brother Aycock still survives. To this union six children were born. Two died in infancy. Those surviving are: Rev. A. L. Aycock of the W. N. C. conference, stationed at Canton, Sam G., Lonnie W. and Miss Lillie, all of Cabarrus. Sister Aycock joined the church in early life and lived a consistent member until she was called home. She had been in feeble health for a long time and was confined to her bed for some months. We buried her at Bethel church. May God comfort the sorrowing ones.

R. E. H.

FARMER—In the midst of his school work, while a Sophomore at Trinity College, Henry B. Farmer was suddenly called away by death January 7, 1923.

He was the youngest son of W. D. Farmer of Nash county and was 19 years of age. It was his intention to become a physician and he was getting ready for his chosen profession. He was a favorite with his college mates and at home, being of a cheerful, bright nature and very kind to every one. I knew him from childhood and considered him a very fine young man with a good moral character and pleasing manners. Some years ago he gave his heart to God and became a member of Mt. Pleasant church.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer, being assisted by Rev. L. C. Brothers, pastor of the church. Dean W. H. Wannamaker paid a beautiful tribute to Henry, and his classmate and roommate also spoke a few words. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. May the Lord help the bereaved parents, brothers and other relatives to bear this great sorrow.

B. E. Stanfield.

CLARKE—Miss Jean Lea Clarke died at the Anson Sanatorium, Wadesboro, N. C., January 22, 1923. She was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stokes M. Clarke of the Concord community, four miles from Ansonville, N. C. She had been a great sufferer for twenty years. She taught school for some years and taught until within a short time before she went to the hospital on Christmas Day. She was a member of Concord Methodist church, also a teacher in the Sunday school. She was in the bloom of young womanhood, a leader in her community and had many friends. She will be missed in the church, Sunday school, community and needless to say in the home. Burial services at Concord church, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. R. Shelton of Wadesboro, and her earthly remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery, and the grave was banked over with flowers, beautiful and fragrant. She bore her affliction patiently and heroically. The Lord comfort the grief-stricken family and friends. "Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep from which none ever wakes to weep." Her place can hardly be filled.

D. S. Richardson.

GRAHAM—Mrs. Laura Noland Graham was born December 19, 1858; died January 22, 1923; age 64 years one month and 11 days. She was married to Dr. W. A. Graham April 2, 1879. Besides her husband she has left to mourn their loss the following children: H. N. Graham, Knoxville, Tenn.; Mrs. Nettie Akeley, Murphy, N. C.; Mrs. Mattie Ferguson, H. E. and W. A. Graham, Jr., Waynesville, N. C.; Mrs. Irene Payne, Canton, N. C.; Mrs. Annie May Freeman, Hendersonville, N. C., and Miss Nellie Graham, Crabtree, N. C. She is also survived by three sisters, four brothers and a host of friends. Sister Graham united with the Methodist church at Fines Creek in early life and made a useful member. She was ever looking after the church, parsonage and preacher. The last time she was away from home was last summer—then she went to church. Earth is the poorer because of her going away, but heaven is the richer. We know where to find her, and we shall meet her again.

The funeral service was held by the writer at Fines Creek church in the presence of a sympathizing congregation, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery there to await the resurrection of the just.

N. M. Modlin, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, on January 30, 1923, our kind heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom called to her eternal home the soul of Mrs. J. M. Boyett, one of the most faithful and loyal members of the Sarah Blalock Circle of Central M. E. church, Albemarle, N. C. In her removal, the church and especially the circle feels most keenly the loss of one who at all times stood ready to do all she could. She was a consecrated Christian and was ever ready with her gifts and service. Her presence in our circle was inspiring. To its cause she gave liberally. Therefore, be it resolved:

First, That we wish to record our sincere love and appreciation of the devotion and influence which marked her Christian life.

Second, That we, the surviving members, feel deeply our loss and will endeavor to follow her example in being wholeheartedly true in the purpose and undertakings of our circle.

Third, That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy and love in this dark hour of bereavement and point them to God, who knoweth best.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be entered on the minutes of the circle, one be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate and one to the family.

Mrs. J. E. Kluttz,
Mrs. H. F. Deese,
Mrs. I. H. Underwood,
Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our presence here on earth to His own divine presence above our beloved brother and co-worker, David K. Cecil.

Therefore we miss his presence among us but bow in submission to Him that doeth all things well. We miss the spotless character example that David K. Cecil set for those who came in contact with him, but are resolved that in our own lives which, after all is a short span compared to eternity we will endeavor to emulate his shining example.

Second, That we as strivers after good in the First Methodist Sunday school of Lexington, N. C., mourn his loss, with his family, to whom our hearts go out in the deepest sympathy and whom we commend the healing love of our heavenly Father and His comforting promises to those who mourn.

Third, That the Sunday school of the First Methodist church of Lexington, N. C., has lost a valued member and a Christian gentleman; that the community has lost a valuable citizen, who by his many virtues won and held the love and esteem of all with whom he came in contact.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to the Lexington Dispatch and the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS

"We are out in a fight against jazz, drivel, tinsel, penny collections and slang as a teaching vehicle in the Sunday school," is the way that one puts it who is out for higher standards in Sunday school and church services. Those terms that he employs are sharp and they cut like a surgeon's knife.

* * * *

"Hats off!" The flag is passing by. Shoes off. That is Moses at the "burning bush." The "Star Spangled Banner" is being played. Let everybody stand. Prayer is being offered. Let the entire congregation bow before their Maker. These are all attitudes of respect and reverence, and such attitudes merit approval. Only the fool mocks at the things that are worthy of respect and reverence.

* * * *

"Every day in every way," etc., as an instrument with which to arouse the sub-conscious self to worthy action or as a catch phrase has become a jest for the wide world. Perhaps it merits nothing better. But as a goal for conscious endeavor, the phrase should not be despised. A better farmer, a better merchant, a better preacher, a better steward, a better Christian. "Excelsior" is the word in every department of life.

* * * *

Mississippi is said to be the only state in the Union which by constitutional provision prohibits the bequeathing of property for charitable objects. It seems strange that such a provision should have been written into the constitution of an American commonwealth. At the next election the citizens of Mississippi will be given an opportunity to remove, what should be to them, this objectionable clause from their organic law.

Use your head. We have the facts and the "poetry" to prove that it is the thing to do. The woodpecker is responsible for the facts and the Shreveport Gusher fathers the "poetry." Here it is:

"A woodpecker pecks out a great many pecks,
Of sawdust when building a hut,
He works like a nigger to make the hole bigger,
And he's sore if his cutter won't cut.
He won't bother with plans of cheap artisans;
But there's one thing can rightly be said,
The whole excavation has this explanation—
He builds it by using his head."

Alabaster vases, gilded couches, inlaid thrones, chariots adorned with gold and precious stones are among the treasures found in the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, the first tomb of these Egyptian kings that the robbers had not despoiled before the archeologists had an opportunity to make a survey of these treasure houses of Egyptian wealth. Many of these tombs before the robbers carried away their treasures doubtless contained even greater riches than does this last and greatest of all discoveries of the archeologists. These facts serve to give emphasis to Heb. xi:26: "Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt."

The world deep down in its heart respects the man who does not, when speaking, look over his spectacles to see who is in the audience, or who constantly keeps his ear to the ground to catch if he can the direction of the marching feet of the multitude. For such a man usually has the fear of God before his eyes and his ears are bent to catch the voice of the Eternal. God has never called time-servers to be prophets and apostles.

* * * *

Lord Nelson captured a French vessel and when the captain was brought on board Nelson's vessel, he walked up to the admiral and extended his hand. "Your sword first, please," said Nelson. That was proper under the circumstances. There must be surrender. Here is a lesson to the sinner approaching Jesus Christ. There must be the surrender of something. Are we about to forget this fact? It is not the prayer of a man who stands up and thanks God that he is not as other men are, but the man who bows down and cries, "God have mercy upon me, a sinner," that is acceptable to God. Penitence, surrender, submission cannot pass out of the Christian vocabulary. But we are in grave danger at this point. The Pharisee is making desperate efforts to get to the front place in our religious life.

The broader view helps mightily as we stand face to face with life's mysteries. Not now, but hereafter we shall understand, sheds light on the dark and winding pathway of the average mortal. And human experience even before the journey is half complete serves to teach us that such a faith is no fanciful dream but a glorious truth. The poet has well said:

"Some time, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forever have set,
The things which our weak judgment has spurned,
The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet—
Will flash before us, out of life's dark night,
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue,
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love most true."

What has become of the "dead line" for ministers of the gospel? Twenty-five years ago preachers were being constantly warned of that fatal line, invisible, but none the less real, when their services would be no longer effective, or acceptable. But now the "dead line" is rarely if ever mentioned. Ministers fifty years of age and beyond are now doing the best work of their lives. Men are learning that life is not measured by the calendar. They are even coming to understand that the enthusiasm of youth is more largely a matter of spirit than of bodily energies. The man who is wise does not live according to the dictates of the flesh but under the control of his higher nature. Even pitching baseball is not entirely a question of muscle. How absurd, then, is the notion that a man should cease to be effective as a gospel minister when his hair turns gray or his speed on the track suffers loss? A man is not to be rated as a horse or a fox-hound.

REV. T. J. OGBURN CLOSES A MINISTRY OF FIFTY-SEVEN YEARS

At noon last Saturday, February 24, Rev. T. J. Ogburn, a superannuate member of the Western North Carolina conference, at the age of 73 years, closed his gospel ministry of 57 years and went to his eternal reward. Death came suddenly, as he had desired, resulting probably from a blood clot in the brain.

Since retiring from the active ministry at the High Point conference in 1921, Dr. Ogburn had made his home in Greensboro, where he died.

The funeral services were held in West Market Street church, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The ministers who took part in the services were Revs. J. H. Barnhardt, pastor of the church, W. F. Kennett of the Methodist Protestant church, G. T. Bond, pastor of Spring Garden Street church, and A. W. Plyler, editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate.

Rev. W. F. Kennett spoke tender words in appreciation of his dear, departed friend, who seven years ago had selected the hymns to be used and requested him to speak at the funeral services. Emphasis was placed by the speaker upon Brother Ogburn's passionate devotion to his ministry, his loyalty to the dictates of conscience and his courage in battling with evil of every kind.

The congregation that packed the church was a high tribute to the worth and popularity of the man. The chief citizens of Greensboro, his old parishioners of Grace church, friends and admirers from all this section of the state and quite a number of ministers from various churches of Greensboro, High Point and other places were present for these solemn services. The interment was in Greene Hill cemetery, where flowers in great profusion and beauty covered the grave of God's devoted servant.

His ministry began 57 years ago, when on the first Sunday in August he, a lad of 16 years, preached his first sermon. From that day to the end of his life preaching the gospel of the Son of God has been the unflinching passion of his life.

The greater part of his life was spent in the Methodist Protestant church, where he was for years an outstanding figure in the ministerial ranks of our sister church.

He was for twelve years the secretary of the board of missions of that church and, also, served several years as president of the North Carolina conference. He filled all stations of honor and trust with signal distinction.

In 1913 he transferred from the North Carolina conference of the Methodist Protestant church to the Western North Carolina conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was never a stranger among us. Well and favorably known by all the older members of the conference before his transfer to us, the Western North Carolina conference regarded him from the first as if he had been a member of the body all his life. The entire conference will mourn his departure. He was one of the honored and loved members of this great body of itinerant Methodist preachers.

Brother Ogburn, besides his widow, leaves three sons: Dr. H. H. Ogburn, a skilled surgeon of Greensboro, Thomas Ogburn, Richmond, Va., and Rogers Ogburn, a student in medicine at Cornell University, and four daughters, Mrs. W. C. Jones, High Point, Mrs. T. B. Whitaker, Oak Ridge, Miss Hilda Ogburn, Greensboro, and Mrs. L. L. Gaskill, who resides in Mexico.

To his family belongs the heritage of a good name, "rather to be chosen than great riches," more than half a century of devoted service to his Lord, and a ministerial career that touched and blessed all classes and conditions of mankind. Apostolic zeal, the daring of ancient prophets and a Christian spirit of humility were the outstanding characteristics of this devoted minister who ever lived with an eye single to the glory of God and with the one consuming desire that he might finish his course with joy, which he did.

EVANGELISM THAT COUNTS

True Christianity is aggressive. "Like a mighty army moves the church of God." That is, if it fulfills its mission. It is not the business of the church to mark time. The church of God must wage a relentless warfare against the devil and all his works. The battle must be relentless, persistent, sin-killing.

We hear it said that the people are gospel-hardened. It may be that they are method-hardened. Try a new method. Cast the sermon in a new mold. Introduce fresh features into the service. Put a new passion into the preaching.

This would probably call us back to the old methods. For in a good many places the old would be new. If the people are surfeited on the old give them something new. That is new to them. The things that are eternal are always new, but there must be adaptation. Milk or meat just according to the power of digestion was St. Paul's method.

NOT SIMPLY A KINK IN DOCTRINE

Dr. Charles W. Eliot is of the opinion that the ministry of the Unitarian church is made up too largely from the ministry of other churches. We think so too. One reason for this is that Unitarianism does not produce many ministers from its own ranks. Another explanation is that quite a large number of those men who find themselves in accord with the doctrines of the Unitarian church get into the church where they properly belong. Our only regret is that every man who denies the deity of Jesus Christ does not at once transfer his membership to the Unitarian church.

But Dr. Eliot is surfeited with these "come overs" into his church. We are sure that Dr. Eliot's complaint is just. These "heretics" from other Christian churches are distasteful to the Unitarians. This fact is a credit to Unitarians.

But it is rather hard on men who were compelled to break the shackles of orthodoxy, to find that they are not wanted in the fold which promised room for their greater learning and larger vision. We suspect that the Unitarian church is coming to find that these men whose doctrinal notions would not fit the church to which they belonged are just about as much of a misfit in other respects even in the Unitarian church. There are in men more kinks than those of doctrine. And these kinks frequently like troubles go in battalions and are gathered into a single individual. It is not surprising that Dr. Eliot complains.

Another one of the satanic methods of the liquor crowd in their fight against prohibition has come to light in New York, where a picture represents Volstead arresting Christ at Cana of Galilee for turning water into wine, and the picture also shows W. J. Bryan overturning a jar of wine upon that same occasion. It has ever been the delight of the liquor gang to strike at the sanctities of life. This of course reacts against them, but they are too stupid when it comes to a perception of the finer things of life to see it, and they are so low in their thoughts and plans that nothing seems too bad for them to do. This country is not going to be controlled by that gang and they will eventually come to understand that their base methods of warfare will not win victories for them with the American people. New York City is not America, but thousands of those provincial citizens of the metropolis really think so. This explains much that New York says and does in behalf of liquor.

Rev. J. J. Gray of Spindale, N. C., writes the Advocate about one of our superannuate preachers who is in great financial straits. He is sick, his wife is helpless, he has spent his conference allowance, and has no means of support. Brother Gray has collected some by private solicitation but needs more. Will the reader of this notice send a contribution to Rev. J. J. Gray, Spindale, N. C.? This worthy brother in his afflictions is in great need.

IS OUR FRIEND SEEKING THE MARTYR'S CROWN?

Mr. Archibald Johnson, the gifted editor of Charity and Children, last week in an editorial on "The Bondage of Fear," which was packed full of good sense and timely truth, wrote this sentence:

"A few years ago Dr. William H. Whitsett, one of the gentlest and best of men, was driven from his place in the Baptist Theological Seminary because he dared to deviate from the beaten track, and do a little independent thinking and speaking."

The reader will recall how Dr. Whitsett produced the historic facts which established the learned professor's contention that the English Baptists did not confine baptism to the one mode of immersion. This fact spoiled the favorite theory that baptism by immersion came to us in an unbroken line from John the Baptist.

The result was that Dr. Whitsett, as Brother Johnson says, had to get out of the seminary. In other words, truth had to surrender to prejudice. We like our friend's frank, free speech on all questions, and should be sorry if the men who crucified Whitsett should turn upon him for making mention of the incident as he does.

AN EXPLANATION THAT EXPLAINS

Years ago David and Isaac came to a good town in the hill country of North Carolina, put up a store, prospered in business and finally made an assignment. A farmer who had lost in the failure came to town and in red hot terms told Isaac just what he thought of him and David and of everybody like them, and the irate farmer closed by saying he "could never understand why God picked out the Jews to be His chosen people."

Isaac who had listened through it all without a word of reply at last ventured this remark, "Vell, I guess it vas the best He could do jist at that time."

While Isaac's ethics were badly at fault, we must admit that his reply contained some sound philosophy of history.

We ask why God does so and so, or why He allows this or that. The explanation is that He does the best He can with what He has to work with.

LAURELS FOR THE COMMON MAN

The sword from time immemorial has been a favorite subject with the poets. Not so with the plow-share, although the plow-share provides food for man, while the sword is an instrument for slaughter. Orators shine as stars of the first magnitude. But who ever heard of the farmer in a stellar role? Yet the world can get along very well without the orators, but cannot get along at all without the farmers. We gaze with rapture upon the spectacular and the unusual, but are blind to the commonplace and have no song for the necessities of life. We can see God in the wine at Cana of Galilee, although no voice divine speaks to us from the cornfields and vineyards of our own beloved land.

There should be fresh laurels for those who toil at the common task. For the woman who washes children's faces in the morning and mends little garments by the light of evening. For the man with a hoe, or trowel, or chisel, or ledger. The men and women, who unheralded and unsung, are doing the world's work deserve a song.

To divorce a man or woman who has committed no wrong, but simply had the misfortune to lose his or her mind, is a crime in the eyes of God and of all right thinking men and it's not to the credit of those lawmakers who advocated such a measure. Let us hope that Florida's shame shall never touch our state. The word of God and the common decencies of humanity ought to be respected in a Christian commonwealth.

Life is not a diamond, but a seed with possibilities of endless growth.—J. R. Miller.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Rev. and Mrs. T. S. Coble of Youngsville announce the birth of a daughter, Eugenia Elizabeth, February 11, 1923.

The C. E. Landreth Bible class of Spring Garden church, Greensboro, surprised Mrs. J. W. Cless on her fiftieth birthday.

Mrs. W. A. Barber, wife of the pastor of our Glenwood church, is a patient at Dr. Long's hospital, and is reported to be doing nicely.

Rev. J. O. Cox and his people do not mind the weather even if the wind does blow. There was a good attendance at his second quarterly conference at Horse Shoe, and things are going well on the old Mills River charge.

Rev. J. R. Spainhour, a young local preacher of King, N. C., and a former student of Rutherford College, has been appointed by the presiding elder of the Asheville district to supply the Mars Hill circuit and is now on the job.

Rev. T. C. Jordan, the popular pastor, has captured Bethel. The congregations are growing, new members are being added to the church, and in a systematic way those busy laymen are keeping salaries up to date. Bethel is on the up-grade.

Rev. A. A. Godfrey of Creston, N. C., has been kept close by the bed of his sick wife, who has been ill more than seven weeks. She was taken to the hospital in Bristol February 20th. Her loved ones and friends hope for her a speedy recovery.

The people of Hendersonville report their recent revival, conducted by their gifted pastor, Dr. Frank Siler, as a success. As a result of this meeting sixty-nine new members have been added to the church, thirty of them on profession of faith. The Epworth League has taken on new life and is in a very flourishing condition. A junior congregation has been duly organized and with so wise a leader as Mrs. Siler in charge, assisted by her competent helpers, large and wholesome results will inevitably follow, with that fine group of young people.

A young aviator has been attending Alnutt Memorial church, Baltimore, for some time. He has grown more and more interested as he continued to attend the services. Some weeks ago a call came to him to come to Burlington, Iowa, on account of the extreme illness of his grandfather. At the same time his parents, whom he had not seen for six years, were anxious to see him again. He proceeded without a stop to Burlington. On Sunday, January 26, he left Burlington at six o'clock in the morning, and traveled 1295 miles, arriving at Clifton Park, Baltimore, at 7 p. m. He traveled without a stop. Leaving his machine in the park he proceeded to the church and, at the invitation of the pastor, he went to the altar and was happily converted. This, we believe, is the first time a man has flown 1300 miles to seek Christ. It suggests a new use for the aeroplane.—The Methodist Protestant.

Among all the churches of the state the Methodists lead in the General Assembly of North Carolina. In both houses there are 48 Methodists and the Baptists come next with 44 members in both Senate and House. The figures in detail as gathered by the statistician are as follows: In the House are 30 Methodists, 29 Baptists, 19 Presbyterians, 17 Episcopalians, three Lutherans and two Christians. In the Senate there are 18 Methodists, 15 Baptists, four Presbyterians, two Episcopalians, three Lutherans and one Quaker. There are other figures of interest. For instance, the Senate out of a membership of 50 has only two bachelors, while the House in a membership of 119 has 17 unmarried members. A greater number of young men in the House perhaps accounts for this relative discrepancy in the figures of House and Senate. In the House are 43 lawyers, 39 farmers, nine merchants, five doctors, two manufacturers, two insurance agents, one printer and five politicians. There is evidently some mistake in that last figure. In the Senate are 86 lawyers, nine farmers, three manufacturers, doctor, educator, insurance agent, one each, politicians three, according to the figures. The foregoing figures indicate that the Methodists and the lawyers have the lion's share of the present General Assembly. We shall soon see what they do with this opportunity to serve their state.

Rev. H. E. Lance requests that we report an error in last week's item which stated that Trinity church at Elizabethton was 150 years old. The figures should have been 75 years old.

Rev. W. A. Sunday began a six weeks' revival campaign last Sunday in Columbia, S. C. A tabernacle to seat 7,000 has been erected at a central point in the city and Columbia is looking forward to a great meeting.

Rev. E. K. Whidden, pastor of the Asheville circuit, has been confined to his room with "flu" for a period, but is now out and active at his task. His people are planning to help him to get a car, in the near future, which speaks well for him and them.

Rev. E. M. Avett, the pastor, will begin revival services March 2 to continue till 11th at Polkville. Brother Avett will do the preaching and Prof. T. B. Jones of Atlanta, Ga., will lead the singing. Services each day at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

The many friends of Dr. M. Bradshaw, pastor of Memorial church, Durham, will rejoice to know that he is rapidly recuperating from his recent illness which has kept him from his work for about six weeks. He was in Watts Hospital for some, but is back home at this time. It is earnestly hoped that Brother Bradshaw will soon be in good shape again.

Beginning March 15, Rev. D. V. York will be at Hot Springs in a revival campaign with Rev. A. A. Angel, the pastor of that church. The revival will follow immediately upon the close of the Asheville district conference which embraces March 13, 14. Brother Angel is now in a meeting at Ottingers, another church of his two miles below Hot Springs.

Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Terrill who returned this week to their work in Brazil was given a delightful reception just before their departure by Prof. and Mrs. M. T. Hinshaw of Rutherford College. It proved to be a happy occasion, with music, refreshments, gifts to the departing missionaries and the greetings of a host of friends who bade them journeying mercies on their long voyage.

Mr. Max Barnhardt, son of Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Barnhardt of Greensboro, has been elected president of his class at Trinity College. This is Mr. Barnhardt's first year at Trinity and his friends will rejoice to know that he is taking such a fine stand in the college community. We congratulate him upon this honor of being president of the big freshman class at Trinity College.

Luther Burbank, the plant magician, will be 74 years of age March 7, 1923. All southern California is planning a golden jubilee in honor of his completion of fifty years in plant breeding and development. Mr. Burbank's home is at Santa Rosa and most of the festivities will take place there. Burbank is without a peer in his sphere as Edison is in his. According to the calendar both are advanced in life. But age has not yet touched either of these two unusual men.

HURRAH FOR THE ADVOCATE!

If anybody should be of a skeptical turn as to the merits of our conference organ, that skepticism will take wings upon reading the following poem which has cheered all the hard working men of the shop, particularly the editor and business manager. Miss Nettie Brown writes:

There's no paper in the state
That beats the Christian Advocate;
Throughout its pages the reader finds
The splendid work of master minds.

It strikes the movies many a blow,
And proves it clear that they should go
Out of school, church, and state
At a tremendous rapid rate.

The other evils of the day
Are all treated in this way.
Oh! long and fierce is the battle for right;
So fight, brave soldiers, with all your might.

We thank the gracious Father above
With heart-felt gratitude and love
For the Conference Organ we call our own,
And which to our hearts so dear has grown.

To the editors all praise is due,
For they are tested out true and blue;
And every reader declares he likes
A. W. Plyler and T. A. Sikes.

Rev. R. L. Forbis sends us this cheering note: "We have just closed a two weeks' meeting at Ranlo. About fifty professions and reclamations. Several joined the church. The pastor did the preaching. We are soon to begin building our two churches. Also one by one we are getting subscribers to the church paper."

BISHOP DENNY TO BE AT MT. AIRY DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Bishop Denny will hold my district conference at Elkin. He is also expected to preach for Dr. H. K. Boyer at Central church the first Sunday in March.

J. A. Cook, M. H. Vestal and J. J. Eads will be our district conference committee for license orders, admission and readmission. J. H. West.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The eleventh annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Western North Carolina conference will be held at Monroe April 24th to 27th. Let each society elect delegates at the March meeting.

Mrs. Lucy H. Robertson, Pres.
Mrs. H. A. Dunham, Cor. Sec.

THE SOUTHERN METHODIST PRESS ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association was held last Thursday and Friday, February 21-22, in Columbia, S. C. There were two busy days devoted to the work of the association with three sessions Thursday—morning, afternoon and night. These meetings were interspersed with luncheons, drives and other courtesies extended the visiting editors.

In the regular sessions "shop talk," which is of little general interest, consumed most of the time. But this opportunity to express publicly the editors' appreciation of numerous courtesies cannot pass unimproved. A luncheon at one o'clock Thursday gave the representatives of the press an opportunity to hear Rev. W. W. Alexander, secretary of the commission on inter-race relations, speak upon the subject of the suppression of lynchings in the South. Late in the afternoon the Men's Club of Washington Street Methodist church, where the association held its meetings, gave the visitors a ride to the points of general interest about the city. Among the points visited was Camp Jackson, where as many as 85,000 were trained at one time during the war. The place is now without signs of life and very few houses remain.

The drive ended at the Columbia College, where the editors in company with the Methodist preachers of the city and the faculty and students of the college enjoyed an hour together. The supper was elegant and the hour delightful. It was a treat that turned back the dial several years in a man's life to hear those girls sing some of their college songs. We have not seen a finer body of college students anywhere than those Columbia girls.

There were of course the inevitable speeches by representatives of the faculty and of the visitors. A speech after dinner is a risky undertaking. But those present seemed to enjoy all the speeches.

Friday, Jacobs and Co. gave the editors and business managers an elegant luncheon at the Jefferson that was greatly appreciated by all who were fortunate enough to attend.

Too much cannot be said in behalf of the attentions and courtesies of Dr. R. E. Stackhouse, editor, and Dr. J. H. Noland, business manager, of the Southern Christian Advocate, who were hosts to these representatives of the Southern Methodist press. The kindness of these brethren will be held in perpetual remembrance.

Those attending the convention were: C. D. Harris of the Baltimore Southern Methodist; J. M. Rowland of the Richmond Christian Advocate; L. J. Ballard of the Wesleyan Advocate; J. A. Burrow of the Central Methodist Advocate; F. S. Parker of the Epworth Era; R. S. Satterfield of the Nashville Christian Advocate; R. E. Stackhouse of the Southern Christian Advocate; H. H. Ahrens of the Methodist Publishing House in Nashville; J. H. Noland of the Southern Christian Advocate; A. W. Plyler of the North Carolina Advocate; H. T. Carley of the New Orleans Advocate; G. B. Winton of the St. Louis Advocate; A. C. Miller of the Arkansas Methodist; N. E. Lazenby of the Alabama Advocate; P. E. Riley, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, and T. R. Wiggins of the publishing house.

From The Inkhorn of an Itinerant

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL SIFTER

In the old days every well regulated home had a sieve that was most generally known as a sifter. Itinerant has seen many a sifter during his peripatetic days and noted how wonderfully useful they are. In these last days, he has found that the Teacher Training is the sifter of the Sunday school. That is, the teacher training effort discloses what is in the church and in those who compose the Sunday school force.

The Standard Training School is a most valuable institution in training for every line of work demanded in the modern Sunday school, and North Carolina is profiting no little by what is being done. The future is full of promise for achievements not dreamed of a few years ago. But, apart from the training actually accomplished, the effort is proving to be a wonderful revelation. The sifter is at work. Preachers and superintendents and teachers never know how much they care, or how little real interest remains, until the call comes for a real advance. Some schools are in a sorry plight, but they are not aware of it until a call comes to begin in earnest to do the work. Those who will not prepare to teach or to preach may be sure that God does not care much for their pleas for help though they howl like dervishes or make pretense equal to the holy rollers. After the sifting, Peter was not so sure, and he was far more teachable and better able to care for the lambs and the sheep. It may be we are passing through the sifting process these last days in such a way as to make known the genuine wheat in the midst of all the chaff and rubbish.

The wind driveth the chaff away, but the genuine wheat remains to nourish, or to germinate and produce more grain. The sifter has its place and is of value in securing that which is of real worth and of enduring quality. Let the sifter sift.

THE OLD AND EVER PRESENT TERROR

The oldest book known is the Book of the Dead, and this belongs to Egypt. The present interest aroused just now in the discoveries being made in that land of ancient tombs reminds us afresh of the ancient fear of death. Professor Breasted, the eminent Egyptologist of the University of Chicago, who is at present associated with the dead kings of the long gone centuries, says that in all Egyptian thought the chief and dominant note throughout is the insistent, even passionate protest against death. The word death never occurs in the Pyramid Texts, except in the negative, or when applied to a foe. Over and over again, we hear that indomitable assurance that the dead lives.

Tennyson's familiar lines represent the mood of these old dwellers by the Nile:

"Tis life, whereof our nerves are scant,
Oh life, not death, for which we pant;
More life, and fuller, that I want."

In the light of man's long struggle through all the past to escape the terrors of death, the more significant becomes the Christian doctrine of the resurrection. The Easter anthem makes universal appeal: "I am the resurrection and the life."

AN UNUSUAL TRIBUTE TO AMBASSADOR PAGE

The five most eminent statesmen now in British public life have signed a letter appealing for a memorial to the late American ambassador, Mr. Walter Page. Each one of these five—Mr. Bonar Law, Lord Balfour, Mr. Asquith, Mr. Lloyd George and Viscount Grey of Falloden—had ample opportunity during the war to understand the true greatness of Mr. Page's character and his faithful friendship for this country. His "Life and Letters" have been read by thousands to whom political biographers, as a rule, make no appeal. The book is constantly talked of, quoted and recommended in private society. The scene which has most impressed the general reader is that of the weary diplomatist, after a day's exhausting toil, sitting for hours in the dim firelight of his bedroom, an pondering over problems until the dawn had crept in. Not till the solution was clear in his own mind did he seek rest, and then he slept like a child. His "Letters" prove Mr. Page to have been "one of the best friends Great Britain ever had, and a far-seeing and practical crusader in Anglo-American co-operation." There is nothing in Britain to mark the fact that he lived here for five years as United States ambassador, and that in a crisis he served his own country and our so well. The public will agree with the signatories of the letter that this omission must be repaired.

The British Weekly, from which the above noble tribute is taken, adds: "It is proposed to commemorate Mr. Page by a tablet in Westminster Abbey and perhaps also by the endowment of a "Page" scholarship at one of our universities."

A CAT ON GUARD FOR THREE THOUSAND YEARS

The press dispatches telling of the wonders in the tomb of Tutankhamen, the ancient Pharaoh, announce that in the inner chamber was a magnificent statute of a cat, richly painted, which had stood sentry over the dead through the long centuries. A statement like that starts up all kinds of ruminations and raises anew the place of the cat in the life of the world. Think of a cat on guard for more than three thousand years!

The cat is known all over the world, save in Australia and that section of the planet. From prehistoric times, the cat has held a notable place in Egypt, both dead and alive. Some of them were embalmed that they might take their place among the immortals. The best evidence indicates that the domestic cat of Europe and America is a lineal descendant of the Egyptian tribe.

We are not told how large a place the black cat filled in the ancient world. America knows the black cat of strange and fearful import. For one to cross the road in front of a negro means that he must turn back and find another road for his journey. The black cat will eat out the eyes of the dead and haunt the living. Edgar Allen Poe had trouble with the Black Cat. Pluto, with his one eye, haunted him to the death. That brute beast followed him by day and by night so that Poe knew not the blessing of rest any more. Even when driven to murder and the concealment of his victim in the wall down in the dark, damp basement, the presence was still with him. There upon the head of the corpse, "with red extended mouth and solitary eye of fire, sat the hideous beast whose craft had seduced me into murder, and whose informing voice had consigned me to the hangman."

But the cat has a better nature and a finer record. Many do not know that the United States government appropriates money to feed cats for the protection they afford against rats in the public buildings at Washington. Just how large a place of service the cat has rendered the world in this respect will never be known, but we may be sure that much credit belongs to the cat in the world's fight against the rat.

More than this. Who will ever know the pleasure the kitten has brought to childhood, and the comforts of cats for old maids, if we are to give any credence to the many flings made by a cruel and thoughtless world at the lot of a long-suffering and noble company who get much comfort in reminding their sisters that "t is better to wish you had than to wish you hadn't." Then, there is that other domestic infelicity, "Who is going to put the cat out at night?"

But we have gone far afield from the cat on guard in the tomb of one of the Pharaohs in ancient Egypt. After all, it is rather appropriate that a representative of these nocturnal wanderers, who have gone up and down the world since the record of the race began, should sit on guard through the millenniums in the midst of that oriental splendor. Still, there is something unacanny in the thought of a cat keeping watch for three thousand years over the mummy of a dead king!

THE DAYS OF PREPARATION HAVE COME

The shut door follows upon the lack of provision against the time of necessity. The wise are those who provide against such hours of desperation. Could we be wise as the ant and busy as the bee in the days of preparation, few would know the despairing cry, "And the door was shut!"

To illustrate: In our North Carolina Methodism, following the custom of a century or more, preachers and people are looking forward to the summer revival at which time the Lord will meet in a wonderful way with his people. So universal is this hope that, in many places, little is done more than follow the perfunctory rounds until the favored season has come—the set time to favor Zion. The church has always got on thus; why not continue as did the fathers?

It is no use to parley or to dispute over this query. All who are alert and eager for the kingdom to come and the church to advance know that no such slothful way of going about the saving of men will win in this day. Good ministers and devoted laymen will be found utilizing the many and varied means essential to meeting the issues of this day. The same old gospel able to deal with the same old human nature is needed to be set going along the varied lines of activity necessary to reach all men and to develop all of every man for the best and highest. To hear the gospel call and surrender at the foot of the cross is a good start—but it is only a start. We need more care of the children and more nurture of believers, along with the gospel call. The country revival gets all the people together when proper preparation has been made and the fullest use should be made of this occasion. Where two services are held, children can be gathered in one group and instructed, Sunday school workers in another, and the other adults in a more general group for instruction and spiritual appeal. Then in the second service, all can come together for the purely evangelistic effort. This method gets away from the old plan of meeting, and it will be found to minister in a more varied way and result in a wider appeal. Work will be done that will last for the continued upbuilding of church and community. Too often, the revival is nothing more than an emotional upheaval that subsides with little to show for the effort.

But let this be put down once for all: if such a revival is to be held this summer, preparation should begin at once in home, church, Sunday school and community life. Then, effort should be made to enlist, during the special meeting, a worker who can care for the children, another who can look after the music, another who is authority on Sunday schools, and one who can preach a gospel that saves to the uttermost. All these elements may meet in two people; or four may be employed, most of whom can be found locally. If possible, enlist two or more churches in this effort. Perhaps we will learn some day that it is folly for a man to hold six meetings at half a dozen churches in as many weeks. Concentration of effort, over a longer period of time with a more varied corps of workers, must be made the rule in our country revivals. All this calls for wisdom, energy and pluck in the days of preparation through the winter and springtime into the harvest of the summer.

The foregoing suggestions do not apply to the churches that are hanging on to the old dead ways or to the preachers who are simply marking time as the machinery runs on in the same old grooves. Only those who are eager to keep out of the ruts and are fully convinced that God moves in many ways his wonders to perform can respond. This program calls for sweat and blood.

I find that it conduces to my mental health and happiness to find out all I can which is amiable and lovable in those I come in contact with, and to make the most of it. It may fall very short of what I was once wont to dream of, but it is better than nothing. It keeps the heart alive in its humanity, and till we shall be all spiritual this is alike our duty and our interest.—Moravian.

SUPPOSE

Suppose that on tomorrow she were coming—

My little lass who left me long ago;
And I again could see her gently roaming
From cloud to earth like pretty flakes of snow:
My wakeful eyes would peer into the gloaming,
Then weep because the moments moved so slow.

Suppose that Death were coming on tomorrow—

Sweet angel, whom in youth I dreaded so;
Would I, in fear, succumb to pagan sorrow—
Allow huge terrors in my heart to grow?
O joy! I'd think of her beyond the portals
Then kiss his friendly hand and say: Let's go.

W. L. Hutchins.

FAYETTEVILLE DISTRICT

I have just completed my first round on the Fayetteville district, and since this is a new field to me it will perhaps not be amiss for me to give through the Advocate some of my impressions.

District Parsonage.

First, let me say that the district has provided as a home for the presiding elder and his family one of the best parsonages to be found in the conference. The committee that secured this property for the church showed good business judgment, and are to be commended for making the deal that they did. It was bought several years ago for $7,500 and if put on the market now it would probably bring $12,000 or more. The house is large and commodious, well built and made of good material, conveniently arranged, and situated in the center of a large lot in one of the most desirable residential sections of the town. The district stewards have made a liberal allowance for the upkeep of the parsonage, and we hope soon, with a wise use of the money provided, to have it well furnished.

We moved in a few hours after the parsonage was vacated by Brother Bundy and his family and found everything in perfect order. We had the delightful experience of moving into a clean house. If all parsonages were left in the condition in which we found this one moving would not be such a disagreeable undertaking.

Other Church Property.

I have found in the district another parsonage that is one of the best in the conference. I refer to the one in Carthage, recently completed, and occupied by Brother G. W. Perry and family. The cost was about $8,000, and every dollar seems to have been spent to good advantage. I will not attempt to describe it. If you are passing through Carthage stop and see it.

I find also that considerable work has been done, and is being done, in the way of church building at several points in the district. Brother Gaines, on the Mamers circuit, is building a new, or rebuilding, at all four points in the circuit. Brother Stanfield, on the Jonesboro circuit, has been making improvements on several churches, in each case providing better equipment for Sunday school work. In one place he had the steeple torn down and four class rooms made out of the material. A pretty good use to make of church steeples. Sunday school rooms have been added to Calvary church in Fayetteville. Our people at Siler City are now using the basement of their new church. This church was begun several years ago and should be completed without further delay. When finished it will be a credit to the town and to Methodism. At Dunn and Sanford we have splendid church buildings, both completed in recent years. At Sanford additional Sunday school room has been provided in the basement, and the probability is that Dunn will soon have to enlarge to provide for the growing Sunday school. Extensive improvements at Hay Street church are contemplated.

Good Roads.

The presiding elder on the Fayetteville district can do his work now with much more ease than was possible a few years ago. Good highways have been built in all directions, and by using a car he can stay at home Friday night and reach the furthest church in the district by eleven o'clock on Saturday, and then not be too tired to do the day's work. I have made use of the train only once in making my appointments on the first round and might have used my car then.

Increase in Salaries.

Eleven of the 23 charges have increased the pastor's salary this year, the increases amounting to $2,460. Hay Street has gone from $3,000 to $3,600; Sanford from $2,500 to $3,000; Dunn from $2,200 to $2,500 (Black's chapel having been taken from this work). The following circuits have gone to $2,000: Parkton, Jonesboro, and Siler City. There are now six circuits in the district paying this salary, the others being Fayetteville, Carthage and Pittsboro. Last year there was only one district that had that many circuits paying that large a salary. Other charges that have made increases in salary are Buckhorn, Duke, Haw River, Hemp and Stedman.

A Common Failing.

Out side the stations, however, I find very few churches in which any special effort seems to be put forth to keep the salary paid up through the year. Only two of the churches in circuits had paid the salary in full for the quarter at the first quarterly conference. These were Olive Branch on the Buckhorn circuit and Moncure on the Pittsboro circuit. Carthage, Siler City and Duke lacked only a little of paying in full for the first quarter. Thirteen churches did not report anything paid.

Circuits Too Large.

There are in the Fayetteville district 103 churches served by 23 preachers, an average of 4 1-2 churches to the preacher. The average in the conference is 3 1-2. In order to give the churches in this district the same pastoral attention given to the churches throughout the conference we would have to have thirty preachers instead of twenty-three. We now have nine charges composed of six churches or more. Under these circumstances we cannot hope for the work to develop as it should. What is needed to remedy this situation is greater liberality on the part of the people, and more business-like methods employed by the stewards. We must try to bring this about and thus pave the way for the employment of more pastors.

District Conference.

Our district conference will convene in Sanford on Wednesday morning, March 14, at ten o'clock. We are holding the conference early in order that we may get the benefit of what is done there through the remainder of the year. We are hoping for a very profitable session and are anxious that every church in the district shall be benefited thereby. To this end let us have a full delegation from every charge, and let all be on time for the opening and remain to the close. The conference will be in session two days.

R. H. Willis.

SALIENT SAYINGS

By Walt Holcomb.

Radio has aroused the world. People got tired of being lectured and the popular lecturer by common consent retired.

* * *

Then the movies had the day, and folks flocked to the moving picture shows, where they could sit down and not be bothered.

* * *

Now they are worn out gadding around and want to remain at home awhile and allow the radio apparatus to entertain them. Anything that will keep people at home will be a godsend.

* * *

However, will the more luxuriously inclined men and women of the future take advantage of the modern way of harnessing the ethereal waves and receive the sermons of their favorite preachers as they recline on their Sunday morning couches, instead of occupying their customary pews? The answer is in the pastor's sermon.

* * *

The world is growing brighter, but, like the sun, it still has some black spots upon it.

* * *

Saying prayers is a baby's task, but praying prayers is a man's job.

* * *

Some folks join the church just like they join a club.

* * *

We want clear ideas for our head and clean ideals for our hearts.

* * *

Some people are very much distressed over women's dress. They have found fault of every fashion since I can remember. I am more afraid of the cut of a woman's eyes than I am of the cut of a woman's dress.

* * *

An electrical storm purifies the atmosphere, but it does not last always, and that is true of a real revival.

DEAN W. F. TILLET AND PROF. S. G. ATKINS

Of special interest to North Carolinians is the following story:

"At the meeting held in Indianapolis, Dean W. F. Tillett, of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tennessee, arose under a question of personal privilege to introduce the Negro who was born on Dean Tillett's father's property. The colored man was Prof. S. G. Atkins, founder and president of Slater State Normal College, of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, one of the most useful institutions supported by the state.

"My father, a Methodist preacher," said Dean Tillett, "and my mother were slave-holders. . . . Servants found necessary for work about the house were owned by slaves. . . . I remember distinctly how daily at the hour of family prayer the slaves that we owned were brought into the family room, listening with us children to the reading of the Bible, and our father prayed for them just as he did for his own children. . . . He believed that the time would come, and should come, when they would all be free; and he prayed for the coming of that day. . . . Among the small number of slaves owned by my father, the one we thought most of and loved best was named Allen Atkins. It is that man's son, born in the midst of the Civil War, who is here today as a member with me and you of this executive committee."

"President Atkins was invited to the front, and Dean Tillett, taking him by the hand, told him how much he admired the slave-father and the free son, and how he believed a rise from poverty and slavery to the presidency of a normal school was greater than any achievement that he himself could claim. He added that if their personal relations were to become standard for race relations there would be no further trouble."

THE LURE OF THE ORIENT

Bishop H. A. Boaz.

If the people at home could only realize the actual need on the mission field, it would be no trouble to secure the four million dollars necessary to carry on the work. I was in Korea less than a month ago and expecting to remain there until July, when a cablegram came calling me home at the earliest possible date to take part in the emergency Centenary pay-up-campaign. I did not want to come at this time, but on account of the urgency of the situation decided it would be best for me to come and do what little I could to present the great need of the foreign field to our people at home.

We closed the Japan mission meeting at Kobe January 5th and took the boat the next day at Yokohama. In Japan we need at least eight new missionaries to properly man the field. At this time they need thirty new church buildings. Perhaps one-half the amount of these buildings can be secured in Japan and the other half ought to be given by the people at home. Several new church buildings have already been constructed and in some of these the membership has been doubled within twelve months' time. One missionary reported that the membership could be doubled within twelve months time at almost every place where the new church is needed, if the new church could only be provided.

In Korea we need at least eight new missionaries and assistance on buildings, something like two hundred small church buildings where our people could be housed. In this wonderful country, within the last two years, about 25,000 people have been enrolled as inquirers. They want to become Christians and be baptized. They need instruction and they need assistance in building houses of worship where they may be instructed. Shall we give them the bread of life, or shall we deny it? Many of them are very poor but very eager to hear the gospel and to become followers of Christ.

In the Korea annual conference there were four church bands. These church bands are largely responsible for this great increase in the number of adherents. We have instructed those bands to continue their work until April or May, with the understanding that in all probability, on account of shortage of funds, it will be necessary for them to cease preaching the gospel to do something else that they might find to do. A leader of one of these bands in a meeting called recently to consider the work of the church, made a very strong appeal to be allowed to continue his work. With tears raining down his face and with many sobs he said, "Bishop, you have told me that in April or May I must cease preaching the gospel to our people God has commissioned me to preach. If you tell me now to quit preaching the gospel to my people who are starving for the bread of life, you will break my heart. My people must have the gospel and I must give it to them the best I can." Shall we tell this consecrated Korean preacher to cease preaching or shall we tell him to go ahead with the ministry of the world?

RALEIGH DISTRICT DOINGS

Central church intermediate leaguers are busy planning a Washington Birthday social under the able direction of Miss Mabel Day, their superintendent. The senior league reports "going over the top" with their African mission pledge.

Four Oaks circuit has two mighty fine leagues that "stand by the stuff." Elizabeth church league reports their mission pledge met, and Four Oaks leaguers are not only meeting their mission pledge but are helping pay for the new church building which will soon be completed.

Edenton Street League is engaged in a survey of the young people of Epworth League age belonging to their church. They are also planning an extensive advertising campaign to boost their league.

We look for a new senior league at Princeton, N. C. Brother W. G. Farrar, pastor.

THE BABY CIRCUIT

We feel a word from the "Baby" circuit will be appreciated by friends and former pastors.

Our last conference took a portion of Roanoke circuit and two churches of the Enfield and Halifax charge and formed the Halifax circuit. Our elder found in the swamps of Chowan a Midgette (in name and stature only) and sent him to look after the new-comer. From the first we felt sure conference had been good to us, and we know now that a better man could not be found. Brother Midgette does not think moss has any place under his feet or on his tongue, and if the people will only follow his example moss will soon be an unknown quantity on this charge. He is a good preacher and a fine "mixer," which has found expression in large and attentive congregations. It would do you good, Mr. Editor, to attend one of our prayer meetings and hear our children from six to fourteen read scripture and lead in prayer. There were fifty-three at our last service. How does this compare with Greensboro?

We have a live Sunday school also—three Wesley classes organized and doing good work. We have planned a strenuous year. Brother Midgette will organize an Epworth League this week and his good wife will look after this work, so we are anticipating a decided success of it.

We expect one of the best Easter services that has ever been held here and as good as can be held anywhere.

We are planning for a charge Sunday school rally in May, when the four Sunday schools will meet and have an all-day exercise. Then will follow our annual picnic—a good old Methodist Sunday school institution. We are expecting a good year for the "Baby," and with Brother Midgette to care for it you may expect to hear a good report. Come down and hear our preacher and see him dismiss his congregation at the door. If you do not want him to shake your hand you will have to stay at home and keep your door locked.

Mr. Editor, in the future you should be told to "go to Halifax," you may know they are the words of a friend wishing you well; but you will have to wait four years, for we hope we have Brother Midgette anchored. We must have him and his good wife as long as the Discipline will allow. Mrs. Midgette is a help-mete indeed. She can talk and preach as well as her husband. If all the charges had such leaders you would hear "A good year, Bishop," from all the preachers. We may report our developments later. Our preacher knows only one command, "Go forward!"

Ira G. Shaw.

MARY OF BETHANY

In your issue of February 8, Bro. J. P. Hunt writes concerning the character of Mary of Bethany. From the evidence in hand, it would seem that some would-be higher critics, for want of something to criticise, have tried to identify Mary with the woman of Luke 7. John tells us (12:1-8) that while Jesus was in Bethany, Mary anointed his feet with ointment and wiped them with her hair. Judas objected, saying that the ointment should have been sold and the proceeds given to the poor. In Luke's narrative we are told that while Jesus was dining at the house of Simon the Pharisee (evidently at Jerusalem) a woman who was a sinner "stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with ointment." This time the host himself objected, not because of the supposed waste, but because the woman was a sinner.

Those who attempt to identify these two acts contend that such an unusual occurrence would hardly have happened twice. This is made more certain by the high encomium the Lord pronounced upon Mary's act of devotion. It is argued that this would hardly have ensued if Mary had not been the first to perform such an act, or if she were only following the example of a sinful woman. Still, if there were only one anointing, we would be bound to admit that either Luke or John (or both) was rather careless as to details such as time, place, and attending circumstances.

If there were any doubt at all as to who Mary was, certainly it is settled in the way Luke does introduce Mary later on (10:38). Forms are used which indicate clearly that the characters are introduced for the first time: "A certain woman named Martha . . . had a sister called Mary," etc.

No; we may be sure that the two anointings are spoken of—one at Jerusalem in the house of Simon the Pharisee during the early part of Christ's ministry by a woman who was a sinner; the other at Bethany in the house of Simon the publican, immediately preceding the feast of the Passover, by pure, affectionate, grateful Mary, whose brother, Lazarus, had been raised from the dead.

As for Mary's mother having died of a broken heart because of the waywardness of her daughter, evidently this is only the product of somebody's imagination or else is learned from sources other than the Bible. Certainly none of the inspired writers tell us of any members of the Bethany family except Martha, and Mary, and Lazarus, each of whom Jesus loved without distinction or discrimination. M. R. Chambers.

MARY OF BETHANY

I saw Brother Hunt's inquiry and request for an explanation, and was present and heard what the evangelist had to say about Mary of Bethany. So without any desire to raise a controversy or to "throw mud" at a sinner so wonderfully pardoned and a soul so beautifully and completely saved as was Mary, still I am disposed to believe the preacher correct and that Mary was saved from all that he claimed.

I will gladly give my views and the benefit of a fresh research of the Scriptures.

There seems to be only four places in the gospels, one in each, where such an anointing is mentioned: Math. 26:6, Mark 14:3, Luke 7:36, and John 12:3. Upon careful examination of these accounts, there can be little if any doubt that Mary of Bethany, the sweet sister of Martha and Lazarus, was in each case the one who anointed our Lord, and that rather than there being two or more anointings there was in fact but just one. Three of these tell us it was in Bethany, and three, though not the same three, tell of its being in the house of Simon, two calling him Simon the Leper, and the other calling him a Pharisee whose name was Simon. Neither speaks of it being in the house of Mary, and only one mentions it as being Mary who did it. The one in which Mary is mentioned is identical with the one in Luke 7:36, in that the feet and not the head are mentioned. As to her character or reputation with reference to her virtue and previous life, all that is found against her is in Luke's account where she is called "a woman in the city, which was a sinner," where also Simon thinks within himself, saying, "This man if he were a prophet would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him for she is a sinner." And yet again where Jesus admits of her being the greater of the two debtors.

Rather than being offended, we are disposed to praise God for a display of grace sufficient to save Mary from whatever sin with which she might have been stained even if it was as bad as we fear, and to so cleanse her until there was not anything left but an enviable "good part" which shall not be taken away from her.

We have been in homes much like the Bethany home, ideal and beautiful, but for the proverbial "black sheep." Sometimes we have known them to be restored and the family circle made as complete as was this one. Sometimes a fair girl, sometimes a son, for the standard is equal with God. Sometimes it was the wife, and then again it was the husband. Sometimes it's a preacher's daughter, his wife, or he himself. Oh what a restitution and salvation He could still work—He who came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance—He who went to the bottom of the cesspool to bring gems for his crown, mentioned in the Bible, Mary of Bethany.

"Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins which are many, are forgiven."

"But one thing is needful, Martha, and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her." "Therefore let her alone." M. W. Hester.

WASHINGTON DISTRICT PREACHERS AND LAYMEN MEET AT TARBORO

Tuesday, February 20th, being the time and Tarboro the place, practically all of the twenty-seven preachers and not a few laymen of the Washington district journeyed forth by rail and road, braving the cold weather and bad roads in order to add their contribution to the meeting and at the same time carry home with them inspiration and the view of the other fellow concerning the work to be done for the year.

The presiding elder, Brother Cotton, with his usual vision and wisdom arranged the following program which was carried out to the letter:

1. "The pastor as a soul winner," G. W. Fisher.
2. "The responsibility of the pastor for the operation of the Epworth League," Daniel Lane.
3. "The Epworth League in the Washington District," W. N. Vaughan.
4. "The pastor and church finances," F. S. Love.
5. "The fifth Sunday on the circuit," N. B. Strickland.
6. "The responsibility of the pastor for the best use of his laymen," B. B. Slaughter.
7. "The pastor and lay activities on the circuit," J. A. Daily.
8. "The pastor and the Sunday school," W. C. Benson.
9. "The pastor and the Centenary," J. M. Wright.
10. "The importance of pastoral visiting," L. T. Singleton.
11. "Some of the greatest hindrances to the work of the town pastor," E. C. Few.
12. "Some of the greatest hindrances to the work of the rural pastor," J. H. Miller.
13. "The necessity of always keeping spiritually fit," E. C. Glenn.

The meeting adjourned for dinner at one o'clock. The good ladies of Saint James church served a meal that will not fade from our memories soon. When I say that it was a splendid "turkey" dinner I am saying nothing. (If you doubt the writer's judgment in the premises, just inquire of Brother Daily).

A part of the afternoon session was given over to the laymen. The district lay leader, Bro. C. G. Morris, of Washington, "the man who knows how," led this session, first delivering a fine address on "The Layman's Opportunity and Responsibility." Bros. W. H. Applewhite, Thorne of Farmville and others spoke interestingly and enthusiastically on topics under discussion. It was indeed great to see the interest taken in the meeting by the laymen of the district. It was prophesied that next year would see even the attendance of this year doubled. W. C. Benson.

ELIZABETHTOWN

The Advocate is a great thing for a pastor who has seven churches. It helps him to speak to and of his people. The latter has long been due the good folks of Elizabeth charge.

Elder Plyler of Durham asked the day after conference how I liked my new appointment. "I'll tell you later," said I. Brother Underwood, my predecessor, tells about it in his letter of information to me when he said: "You have the best circuit in the N. C. conference." That's an eye-opener, even to a P. E.

Already I've found reasons for Brother Underwood's statements. We think of the kindness shown us while we were down with the flu, the splendid pounding given by the good people of Elizabethtown on arriving, and the good things that come in from the country, too numerous to mention here. But we thank them all, especially Brother Singletary and R. McCall for hams. Brother McCall is noted for having other good things—a good case of religion, a good wife and a good-sized family—only fourteen children. I've never served a charge that had more loyal Methodist homes, and a people who seemed to be more consecrated than the good people of Bladen. In this field, planted with seven churches, there is much to do. Wesley's chapel to complete and dedicate, Abbottsburg to remodel, Clarkton to build, and much work to be done about the parsonage lot.

Two of our churches are interesting because of their age and construction, each having galleries for the benefit of the slaves. Trinity of Elizabethtown is more than one hundred and fifty years old and is still in good condition. The new set of cement steps and circular pews given to Trinity by Mrs. C. C. Covington are second to none. Of these the church is proud and still feels grateful to Mrs. Covington.

There is more to be said, but will wait for another time to tell about our Sunday schools, Epworth League and new P. E.

Best wishes and work for the Advocate. H. E. Lance.

CLIFFSIDE-AVONDALE

It has been some while since anything has appeared in our Advocate from the Cliffside and Avondale charge. This is not because we are dead or have gone out of business.

We are living in one of the cleanest and most hustling mill towns in the state. We have a very fine community building, opened for the public, and a splendid community spirit. Our school building and school are of the best. The owners and officers of the mill, in a special way, look after these things.

We have two Methodist congregations on this charge, one at Cliffside and the other at Avondale. Our people are wide-awake to the interest of our churches and are pushing forward along all lines. At Avondale, which is a new mill town, we have no church building, but we are planning to build a $12,000 brick church. We have been working on this problem for nearly a year, and will begin our building some time in the spring of the year. We hope to have it finished before our annual conference meets next fall.

Our Sunday schools and congregations are growing. Our Sunday school at Cliffside has almost doubled in membership since we came on this work a little more than a year ago. The enrollment in Sunday school is much larger than the membership of the church. In fact, our average attendance is almost equal to the membership of the church. With D. C. Cole as our superintendent we are pushing forward to make our school one of the best.

Our people on this charge have been very kind and generous toward us. We feel that we have never lived among a people that have treated us better. They have pounded us and remembered us by gifts again and again. Our field here is one that has in it the possibility of much growth. Our people here are looking forward to care for all the interest of our church.

We hope to put our Advocate in all of our Methodist homes. J. C. Keever, P. C.

A LETTER FROM CLARKSBURG

Yesterday was our regular preaching day—the fourth Sunday. Our pastor, Rev. J. E. McSwain, was present and preached a very enjoyable and instructive sermon.

Also we had an interesting prayer meeting Sunday night. It seems like everyone is trying to do his part. The lesson was taken from the fourth chapter of Mark, which is good for everyone to read. We are hoping our pastor will be with us on next Sunday night.

Will be glad to see members from other churches come and help out in our prayer service and singing. We are having splendid singing, but never gets too good but what it can be better. It is mostly us young people now; and, dear Christians, keep on praying. When one steps out let two come in his place.

Our Ladies' Aid Society has not met for some time on account of sickness and cold weather, but we hope every member will be present Saturday before the second Sunday at two o'clock. X.

FROM RUFFIN

Ruffin charge is still alive. The flu didn't knock any real life out of the church on Sunday, February 25th, at Ruffin. We had the largest congregation that we have had this year, both at 11 a. m. and at night. The music was fine and the pastor was at his best, and the people enjoyed the sermon. Rev. F. F. Starr used for his text a passage found in 1st Kings, 20-14: "Who shall order the battle? And he answered, thou." The leading thought was, the forces of evil will combine to try to destroy the power of righteousness. But we cannot afford to compromise with the agencies of the devil. The second thought was that God wants us to order the battle; not to wait for the forces of evil to overcome or destroy the energies and manhood of our young men and women. God will be true to His church and protect His own if we are true to God. At 7:15 a large congregation listened to another soul-stirring sermon from the text, 1st John, 1-7: "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin." H. F. S.

PROGRESS AT DAVENPORT COLLEGE

The campaign to raise fifty thousand dollars for making immediate enlargements and improvements in the plant of Davenport College is making good progress. As soon as the campaign was announced contributions began coming in. Many have come from students now enrolled in the college as students; others have come from former students, and still others who have never had any connection with the college but who wish to help the cause of education and see a suitable chance to do so in contributing to this fund for improving the only Methodist college for girls in the western part of the state.

The Davenport Weekly Record was founded just a little more than a year ago, and it is already well known in North Carolina and has established for itself a set of precedents and guiding principles. The capable and hard-working editor, Miss Mary Bulla, is making a name not only for the paper but for herself. The editorial aim is to make the Record equal to any other college paper in the state, if not better. Inventiveness and style in writing are encouraged, and interesting departments peculiar to the Record are to be found among its columns.

A system of fire alarms and fire drills planned to take care of any possible emergency, however remote, has been worked out and every occupant of the college buildings is familiar with it and instantly ready to respond. New fire extinguishers and other apparatus have also been purchased and their use explained to the students and teachers. These are among the many things for the safety and comfort of Davenport folk that are being instituted.

Extensive remodeling is being done in the basement of Cornelius Hall. The floors and some of the walls have been taken out and are being replaced with concrete. The space for recitations and other necessary functions of the college will thus be considerably enlarged by making available certain space that heretofore has not been usefully occupied. Wesley Taylor.

"The world will be better, happier, and richer when me and women have more interests in common, more occupations that are alike, and when the great heart of home goes out into the world since the homeless world has needed it so long."

Corns

Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

GOOD POSITIONS

Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete our commercial and stenographic courses.

Our aim this season is to enroll a very large number of such students who can be trained for high and responsible positions.

Won't you be one to enroll? A postal addressed to us will bring you our catalog. Write for it.

Grippe

Physicians advise keeping the bowels open as a safeguard against Grippe or Influenza.

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

SOMETHING LASTING

He built a house; time laid it in the dust;
He wrote a book; its title now forgot;
He ruled a city, but his name is not
On any tablet graven, or where rust
Can gather from disuse, or marble bust.
He took a child from out a wretched cot,
Who on the state dishonor might have brought,
And reared him to the Christian's hope and trust.
The boy to manhood grown became a light
To many souls, and preached for human need
The wondrous love of the Omnipotent.
The work has multiplied like stars at night
When darkness deepens; every noble deed
Lasts longer than a granite monument.

—Sarah K. Bolton.

"ABIDE WITH ME"

There are few hymns whose notes are more tender and more comforting when comfort is needed than the familiar one of Rev. Henry F. Lyte. The circumstances of its writing appear in a little story which is told. He was pastor in a little fishing village for more than twenty-five years. His ministry has been richly blessed to the sailors and fishermen of the village. His health failed, and his physician ordered him to a milder climate, Italy. Before leaving he alarmed his friends and his family by announcing that he intended to preach to his people once more. He did so and administered the communion. That same evening he handed to a friend the words and music of his great hymn. The first stanza shows its appropriateness:

"Abide with me! Fast falls the evening,
The darkness deepens—Lord, with me abide!
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, O abide with me!"

In less than two months after writing this hymn he died, was buried at Nice, Italy, and a marble cross marks his last resting place.—The Presbyterian.

THE MOTHER'S AID BILL

I want our Methodist missionary women to know that I sent fifty letters to members of the legislature now in session at Raleigh, telling them that the women of our conference were in favor of the Mothers Aid Bill. At the suggestion of Mrs. Newell, I wrote directly to them as the bill was to come up at an early date.

I would like for you all to know that I have received several replies, all promising to see the bill made a law, which will make every mother's heart glad to know that a mother can get aid from the state to enable her to keep her children with her instead of sending them to our overcrowded orphanages.

The managers of our state institutions for child care are all heartily in favor of the bill. Forty-two other states of the Union have this Mother's Aid. They have found it so good that our state must be the next to link herself with this humane law. And North Carolina is particularly well fitted to carry out this aid at once, as we are better organized for child welfare than most any state in the Union. This help to mothers comes through the approval of our juvenile judges and county superintendents of Public Welfare that each of our counties have.

With this supervision this money can be properly administered. I wanted you "good sisters" to know that I had used your names as a body in this fine matter, for I felt assured that I would have your approval.

Mrs. Frederick L. Siler,
Supt. S. S. W. N. C. Conf.

DR. KILGO'S "CHAPEL TALKS"

The following announcement taken from Nashville Christian Advocate of February 16th will be of interest to many of our readers:

On our cover page this week appears one of the "Chapel Talks" of Bishop John C. Kilgo, taken from the book bearing that title, edited by D. W. Newsom and published by Lamar & Barton. The book is just off the press. The one objection this writer has to the book is that he could not quit reading it when he had no time to spare. The book was placed in his hands when he was so busy that he had not time to give to it. Nevertheless, he read the book for an hour and a half before he could lay it down and go on with the work that was so pressing. The reader who cannot get inspiration out of this book and the preacher who cannot get sermons out of this book—well, there is something wrong with them. But we do not believe that either such people or such preachers can be found. Better read this book at once. The price is $1.25.

KNOWING GOD THROUGH PRAYER

I know not by what methods rare,
But this I know, God answers prayer.
I know that he has given his word
Which tells me prayer is always heard,
And will be answered soon or late,
And so I pray and calmly wait.
I know not if the blessing sought
Will come in just the way I sought,
But leave my prayers with him alone,
Whose will is wiser than my own,
Assured that he will grant my 'quest
Or send some answer far more blest."
—Selected from Miss Bennett's Notebook: "Lambuth-Bennett Book of Remembrance."

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL

The date for the meeting of our Council this year has been set for April 4-11, and the place, Mobile, Ala. The delegates from the North Carolina conference are Miss May Edla Smith, president, and Mrs. Harvey Boney, corresponding secretary; alternates, Mrs. N. H. D. Wilson and Mrs. F. B. McKinne. The Council Bulletin will as usual be published immediately after the meeting. This will contain the most important items of interest to our women of matters that come before the Council for consideration, discussion and decision. The subscription price is twenty-five cents, and it would be a good idea to have in every auxiliary somebody who would solicit subscriptions to this valuable and most interesting pamphlet.

Following closely upon the Council, April 24-27, our own conference will be held in Henderson. As soon as the program of this conference shall have been completed it will be published for the information of our women.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Since it has pleased our heavenly Father to take from us our beloved sister, Mrs. Ellen Willis, we, the executive board of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Carolina conference, wish to place on record: First, That although our hearts are sad because we shall see her face on earth no more, yet we would bow in submission to the will of our heavenly Father, rejoicing in the thought that she is now in the presence of that Saviour whom she served so faithfully here, and rendering more efficient service in that higher sphere to which she has been exalted.

Second, As we hold in grateful remembrance her beautiful example of untiring and efficient devotion to every interest of our work, while for six years she was our president, this interest continuing even after failing health compelled her to retire to a more limited field of service—"faithful to the end" may truly be said of her.

Third, We extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy, knowing well what a vacancy her going away has made in their lives, praying that they may have the abiding presence of the great Comforter.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, one placed on the minutes of our society, and one sent to the North Carolina Advocate and to the Missionary News.

Mrs. S. H. Scott,
Mrs. F. B. McKinne,
Mrs. Ida T. Wilkins,
Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His goodness did give to us for a time our Mrs. E. L. Hart of Wilmington, to be our faithful co-worker in our efforts to advance His kingdom, and by the example of her life so entirely consecrated to Him, to be to us also an inspiration in our own daily Christian walk; therefore we, the women of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Society, do resolve:

First, That we thank Him for His goodness.

Second, That we grieve for her untimely passing, but not as those who sorrow without hope, for we know that if we be faithful, as she was, we shall see her again in His day.

Third, That our heart deep sympathy extends to her loved ones, who long for the touch of her vanished hand, for the sound of her voice that is still; to her friends who miss her genial kindness, her warmth of understanding; to her pastor, losing her fine spirit of co-operation with him in his plans; to her church, her missionary society, and the needy ones to whom she ministered, so self-forgetting in her work for their upbuilding and needs, praying that He whose comfort is as that of a mother for her child, may so comfort and sustain them in their sorrow and loss.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her devoted husband, that a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Carolina conference, and that copies be sent to the Woman's Page of the North Carolina Christian Advocate and to Our Missionary News.

Mrs. J. LeGrand Everett,
Mrs. N. H. D. Wilson,
Mrs. Harvey Boney,
Committee.

ANNUAL MEETING WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL

The Woman's Missionary Council will hold its thirteenth annual meeting in St. Francis Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Mobile, Alabama, April 4-11, 1923.

The meeting will open at 8 o'clock, Wednesday evening, with an inspirational service in loving remembrance of Miss Belle H. Bennett.

The first business session will be at nine o'clock Thursday morning.

An executive committee meeting will be held Wednesday afternoon and the workers' conference will meet during the business session of the Council.

Reduced railway rates of one and one-half fare have been secured. This, according to the certificate plan, requires an attendance of 250 persons who have paid a normal one way fare of sixty-seven cents or more on the going trip. Tickets purchased from March 31st to April 6th will be good until April 14th if the certificate secured when tickets purchased is properly validated. Validation dates are April 7th and 11th.

Council headquarters will be at Hotel Cawthon, St. Francis street.

Mrs. L. P. Adams, general chairman of local committees, care Adams Auto Co., Mobile, Ala., will furnish desired information concerning hotels, boarding houses, etc.

Mrs. F. F. Stephens,
Vice President.
Mrs. Fitzgerald S. Parker,
Recording Secretary.

REV. C. S. KIRKPATRICK

Rev. C. S. Kirkpatrick, who is serving his second quadrennium on our Sunday School Board, is one of the best balanced men I know. He knows relative values. No phase of the church work suffers in his hands. One week he can be very successful in holding a revival and the next do exceedingly fine work as an instructor in a standard training school. I have seen him place a Sunday school institute in the midst of a revival meeting and cause each to gain from the other. I know of no man whose opinion carries farther with those who want wise counsel.

Kirkpatrick is a mountain white, a product of Haywood county, his birthplace being only a few miles from the present site of Lake Junaluska. He was educated at Weaver College, George Peabody College for Teachers and Vanderbilt University, having graduated from the last two named institutions. On joining the Western North Carolina conference in 1905 he has ministered to the people at Andrews, Brevard, Canton, Mooresville, Spring Garden Street, Greensboro, and is now serving his third year at Hickory. He always leaves a congregation a great deal larger and better than when he found it.

He met his fate and his mate in the person of Miss Effie Atkinson, of Centerville, Tenn. This happy union has been blessed with four talented children, Rebecca, Charles, Catherine and Frances.

PROGRAM OF WORK

A growing number of our Sunday schools are procuring wall charts showing the Program of Work for Southern Methodist Sunday schools. While this is purely a voluntary matter it is very important to have a guide to direct our work and a measuring instrument to indicate progress. Such is the purpose of the Program of Work. At present there are two of these Programs of Work, one called the "C" type, for the one room church or the church with just a few class rooms, and the other, called the "B" type, for the class room type of church. Eventually there will be the "A" type, for the completely departmentized Sunday school, but for the present we will confine our interest to the "C" and "B" types. In a short while I shall want to give you a list of the schools working on these Programs of Work. If your school does not have a Program of Work and you think it ought to have one, please write your conference superintendent of Sunday school work. There are going to be mighty few progressive schools without this Program of Work. Better get an early start on it. Qualifying for the points it contains is a process and not an event.

LOOK WHO'S HERE

"I wish to say that we have been working on Program of Work "C" for about three months and are now ready for nine seals on our chart. We hope to be ready for the other one in the near future."

So writes Supt. S. H. Pennington, of Cramerton. He and his good pastor and the pastor's wife, Rev. and Mrs. C. M. McKinney, are leading in a very constructive way. It was my great delight to be with these good people several months ago and to note the signs of progress everywhere.

KANNAPOLIS

Sunday, February 18th, was the coldest day of the year, but not too cold to keep over 300 Sunday school pupils from coming to Kannapolis Methodist Sunday school; and they, for the most part, were there on time too. Arriving early I found the janitor busy with his fires, saying as he threw in coal, that he had been firing that way since four o'clock that morning. A good janitor is a great promoter of righteousness.

Supt. A. H. Sides and Pastor R. A. Swaringen were on hand before starting time and soon Sunday school was under way. After speaking briefly to the Sunday school and four classes Brother Swaringen gave me right of way at the eleven o'clock hour before a large congregation. In the afternoon we held a Workers' Council for an hour just prior to the coming of Dr. Marr for the quarterly conference. Reports made showed a healthy condition of affairs at Kannapolis. Swaringen is stirring things in his characteristic way. Soon quite a building enterprise will be undertaken and the good work now going on can be accelerated. Brother Swaringen has a great help in his good wife. They have six boys, two of whom are working their way through Trinity College, one preparing himself for the ministry. I like to come in contact with a family like that.

HICKORY AND LENOIR

Miss Jenkins spent last Sunday with the Elementary workers in our Sunday schools at Hickory and Lenoir. After attending the Sunday school session at Hickory and holding a brief conference with the Elementary officers and teachers she hastened over to Lenoir, where in the afternoon a most profitable Council meeting was held. Miss Jenkins reports a most satisfactory trip in spite of the intense weather. The object of her trip was to meet the good people at these points, check up the work being done in her field and call attention to the proposed standard training school at Hickory for middle April. The good people in these two congregations made a lasting impression on Miss Jenkins.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL TRANSFER

Supt. G. F. Ivey runs a Sunday school transfer, though he charges no fares. In addition to getting his own family to Sunday school on time he gets his splendid son, a product of Trinity College, to make two trips, one to East Hickory and the other to West Hickory, for Sunday school children. This is practical Christianity. There is more religion in one such trip than a whole life of unfulfilled good intentions. One of the ways to make a community better is to have folks to Sunday school. Thank the Lord for the Iveys.

WHAT DO YOU GIVE?

It is worth while to go to Sunday school for what one can get out of it. It is more worth while to go for what one can put into it. Every one can contribute something. One can pray, another can sing, another can teach, and another can discuss the lesson. But this is not all. Recently I ran across a fine old man who regularly attends Sunday school and when he was asked what he did for the Sunday school he replied that he carried a pocket full of trimmed lead pencils for the use of the teachers. He did vastly more than that, but he did that. What do you give your Sunday school?

WESLEY CLASS FEDERATION

Our fifth annual Wesley Bible Class Federation for the Western North Carolina conference will be held at Lake Junaluska, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 9th, 10th and 11th. Mark this down on your calendar. President J. B. Ivey is working out a fine program.

Boney, Miss Jane S. Hall, J. M. Harvey, Mrs. J. M. Harvey, Rev. W. W. Morton, Mrs. J. E. Purcell and Miss Clarabell Williams.

WANT ANOTHER LIKE IT

The co-operative training school recently held for the Methodist and Presbyterian churches of Wilmington was the first co-operative school ever held in the North Carolina conference, but prospects are that it will not be the last one. So well pleased were all concerned with the first that they adopted unanimously a resolution, presented by Maj. W. A. Graham and Rev. W. W. Morton, to the effect that "we heartily endorse the arrangement for a co-operative school and express our sense of deep pleasure and great blessing derived from the fellowship with the Christian workers of the two communions and the several churches and recommend that a similar school be conducted next year, if practicable, and we pledge ourselves to its support."

This resolution was prefaced with the statement that "this co-operative training school has most successfully supplied the need which we have all felt for an enlarged vision of our Sunday school opportunities and for practical training of each worker for his task."

W. D. McCaig and Marvin J. Cowell presented another resolution at the final session of the school, which was adopted, calling for a rising vote of thanks to the faculty, consisting of Rev. J. Q. Schisler, of Nashville, Tenn., Miss Elizazeth Shields, of Richmond, Va., Miss Grace Killingsworth, of Orangeburg, S. C., Miss Georgia S. Keene, of Durham, Mrs. B. H. Bunch, of Raleigh, Claude T. Carr, of Mooresville, and L. L. Gobbel, of Durham, the latter director of the school, for their devotion to their work.

PLANS FOR DURHAM SCHOOL

A Standard Training School for the Sunday school workers of Durham and as much of the Durham district as can be conveniently served will be held at Trinity College, Durham, April 8-13, according to plans set on foot at a meeting of the board of managers and other leaders held last week. The members of the board are Prof. H. E. Spence, chairman, Rev. A. D. Wilcox, Rev. M. T. Plyler, E. C. Gunter, J. H. Coman, V. E. Wilson, Rev. N. M. Wellman, Rev. W. F. Craven, Prof. Holland Holton, Rev. J. W. Bradley, D. B.

IN MEMORIAM

NORRIS—The death angel visited the home of our dear brother, J. B. Norris on January 12, 1923, and took from him his dearly beloved wife. On May 10, 1899, she was happily married to J. B. Norris. To this union was born eight children, three sons and five daughters. Sister Norris leaves a heart-broken husband and family.

She was converted and joined the Stony Fork Baptist church January 20, 1894. After her marriage she attended the Methodist church at Fairview with her husband and was a faithful worker in that church. She lived a life of consecration and self-denial. Her greatest happiness was in making others bappy. How we miss her, but we feel that our loss is her gain. She was a devoted wife and mother. Dear loved ones mourn not as those who have no hope. She sleeps to awake on the resurrection morn. It behooves us all to strive to live closer to Jesus and meet our loved ones in God's great city.

Despite the bad weather quite a large number of friends and loved ones attended the last sad rites. The funeral was conducted by the writer at Fairview Methodist church. Gone, we know not from what pain. Oh, ye pearly gates of heaven swing together and shut her in.

T. G. Williams, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

The Wesley Bible class of Tabor church wishes to give expression to the sorrow that has recently befallen them as a body and individually in the sad dispensation of Providence in removing from our midst our much beloved friend and neighbor, feeling deeply the loss of his friendship and faithfulness, and desiring to record the same on the minutes of our church record, have adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, it has pleased an all wise God to remove from our church our brother, Walter P. Harris; therefore he is resolved, that while we bow in humility and reverence to the will of our heavenly Father, we deeply deplore the sad passing away of our most faithful brother, whose heart and mind were always centered upon the interest of his church and community and upon whose judgment and advice we had implicit faith.

His devotion to his church which be served so long as trustee and his love for his wife and children was beautiful beyond expression. His faith in God was an inspiration to all who knew him. He was faithful in every walk of life, a good neighbor, a good friend, and a devoted husband and father. We can benefit from his life of faithfulness.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minute book of the church and a copy each be sent to his wife and to the Christian Advocate.

V. C. Matthews.

WOODS—Mrs. Emeline Hall Woods, wife of W. D. Woods, born May 17, 1843, died at the old home near Hillsboro in Orange county, January 23, 1923. In early life she professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist church at New Bethel, then a part of the old Hillsboro charge. On February 3, 1864, she was united in marriage to Mr. Doak Woods, who at that time was a soldier in the Civil War and at home on furlough. Her church membership was then transferred to Little River Presbyterian church, and there remained a faithful and consecrated member of the church of her husband and children for more than half a century.

Mrs. Woods was the mother of ten children, had fifty grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren. In her immediate family were four boys and six girls. The only one of the boys now living is Mr. C. N. Woods, near Hillsboro, with whom his mother lived. The other children are: Mrs. P. A. Flinton, Cullowbee; Mrs. S. T. Latta, Hillsboro; Mrs. J. H. McCracken, Washington; Mrs. A. C. Reynolds, Waynesville; Mrs. S. F. Nicks, Leasburg, and Mrs. I. B. McKay, Durham. Miss Mary Hall, Mrs. Lou Laws and Mr. W. E. Hall are the two sisters and one rother that still survive her.

Mrs. Wood was known and will be long remembered for her great strength of Christian character, life of service and sacrifice. Like Dorcas of old, the sick, the needy, the sorrowing and suffering found in her an open heart, ready and helpful hand. Her quiet manner of speech, her wise council of good common sense, her gentle touch, her Christ-like spirit of sympathy, together with a cheerful, smiling face caused her to be sought after for the sick room not only among her own relatives, but all who knew her rejoiced at her coming and were always helped and comforted by her stay.

For a lady of her age she possessed an unusual amount of strength and vitality. While in her eightieth year she was away from home helping to take care of her sick neighbor and friend, Mrs. Harriet Latta, when first taken sick with pneumonia on Friday. She seemed at once to realize the situation and quietly requested to be removed to her home nearby. She was now too weak to struggle with disease very long. On Tuesday night of the following week at nine o'clock, while surrounded by her devoted children, she quietly breathed the last.

Hers was truly that of a beautiful Christian life, lived largely for the good of others. Her well worn Bible was her constant daily companion. The many marked texts and passages of scripture had been of inspiration and lifted her into a life of Christian experience we all would do well to imitate.

The funeral services were conducted at Little River church by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Henderlite, at noon Tuesday, January 25. A very large crowd of relatives and friends attended the service and a beautiful floral offering covered the little mound that marked the last resting place of her body, while the spirit returned to God who gave it. How beautiful are they that die in the Lord. What is the price of a virtuous woman?—Proverbs 31:10-31.

S. F. N.

LITTLE—On January 19, 1923, the death angel knocked at our home and called our dear little son, Robert Edward, to a home not made with hands, where he will know no sorrow and where death will never come. Robert was three years, seven months and three days old. He was a bright little sunbeam to all who knew him. His going away has left our home sad and lonely, but yet we are glad to know that Jesus gave him and has only called him home. He contracted pneumonia and was a great sufferer until the end came. Funeral service was conducted by Rev. C. A. Lawrence. His remains were taken to Farmville cemetery and gently laid to rest. May we all strive to meet him some day.

From Mother.

Learn the truth about Fertilizer

Commercial fertilizer is not magic. It is no substitute for work, or for farming brains. It will not make a successful farmer out of a shiftless, ignorant failure. Fertilizer varies in quality like corn or tobacco or cotton, and some brands are worth more than others. Good fertilizers, like Royster's reliable old mixtures, are a godsend to good farmers who learn how to best use them to make money.

Each crop has its individual food requirements; different soils require different treatment. Every Royster fertilizer is a scientifically balanced food ration, compounded from the best materials obtainable in the proportions best calculated to supply the needs of the crop for which it is intended.

Nearly 40 years experience enters into the making of the Royster mixtures, and hundreds of thousands of the country's best farmers pin their faith to this famous old brand.

It's shortsighted economy to risk all the time, labor and seed put into a crop in order to save $1 a ton on fertilizer. The most experienced farmers have decided that a fertilizer must have something beside price to recommend it, and they recognize that in the Royster trademark they have a guarantee of highest quality and surest results.

Remember, it is necessary to use sufficient fertilizer per acre to get worthwhile results. If you starve your crops you'll get the same results as if you starve your stock.

Unless a farmer is going to use Royster's fertilizers properly, we'd rather he'd misuse and abuse some other brand. We are proud of the Royster reputation for quality, and will preserve it in every way. To help our friends obtain the utmost in results we urge farmers to seek from us information about the proper use of fertilizer. Write freely for advice to Farm Service Department, F. S. Royster Guano Company.

OUR ORPHANAGE WORK

METHODIST ORPHANAGE RALEIGH, N. C.

A. S. Barnes ..... Superintendent
Mrs. Mattie Jenkins .....Matron
Owned and maintained by the North Carolina Conference.

FORM OF BEQUEST

I do hereby will and bequeath to The Methodist Orphanage, Raleigh, N. C., contemplated by the charter under the Act of the General Assembly of North Carolina .....(here designate the bequest) .....

THE CHILDREN'S HOME WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

Rev. C. A. Wood .....Superintendent

Orphanage high school basket ball team defeated State College Freshmen last week on the auditorium floor. Our boys feel rather important after beating a college team 28 to 18. In all their undertakings our boys and girls count on success, and for that reason rarely ever fail at anything.

* * * *

One of our greatest needs is more good papers and magazines for our boys and girls. We ought to have at least a dozen in most of the cottages. How entertaining and helpful such reading matter would prove to our boys and girls who are so eager to read the best of current literature. A hundred dollars spent along this line would prove a great blessing to our two hundred and fifty children. How I wish some one would mail me their check with which to supply such literature.

* * * *

A great Methodist hospital for the North Carolina conference located on the campus of the Orphanage would meet a great need that has long been felt by our church. Several years ago the board of trustees voted that they would furnish a location whenever a sufficient amount of money became available. We have an ideal location on Glenwood Avenue, near the residence of Hon. Josephus Daniels. It would take several hundred thousand dollars to begin with. To meet the needs of a modern hospital we ought to have at least a million dollar endowment with which to finance such an enterprise.

* * * *

In planning an extension of our work very likely the executive committee will remodel the Jenkins building and make a modern school building out of it. We have fifty children housed in it and that is too many children under one roof if we want to obtain the best results from training. The building is also used for our eleven grade school, chapel, kitchen, dining room and officers, etc. We hope that this can be done, and that in the near future if we can secure a new kitchen and a dining room. We have the plans and specifications for this building. It will cost at least $60,000. An expenditure of $200,000 for buildings and general improvements at our Orphanage would be a wise investment.

* * * *

The Orphanage is absolutely dependent upon the voluntary contributions of the churches and individuals for the means with which to erect buildings. There is no appropriation from the conference or the state for this purpose. Many thousand dollars have to be raised annually to aid in meeting current expenses. As I see it unless some one with means comes across with a large contribution there is no hope of immediately relieving the distressing congestion which we are now experiencing because of the tremendous pressure brought to bear upon us to take care of the large numbers of fatherless children. I trust our people who are financially able to do something toward relieving this embarrassing situation will make this a matter of prayer that God may put it into some heart to respond to this worthy appeal.

Public sentiment demands that orphanages give their children as good training as the best homes and schools of the state give their children. This is as it should be. Any orphanage that falls below this standard justly merits the censure of the public. If I have correctly interpreted the mind of our Methodist people, there is a strong sentiment among them to the effect that our Orphanage should give to those committed to our hands the very best physical, mental and spiritual training. To fall short of this would be unworthy of our Methodism. In order for us to fully train and equip those under our care, we must secure the best teachers and matrons for the different departments. In addition to this, we must have the best of physical equipment. Highly educated teachers and trained workers call for a large outlay of money. But in the long run they are the cheapest, if we want the most satisfactory results. I believe our North Carolina Methodists as represented by our conference want to build here in Raleigh the best orphanage in American Methodism. This is not for vain glory, but a real desire to render the best service to the largest number who need its tender love and ministry. To accomplish this worthy end we must all put our shoulders to the wheel and push with all our might, not counting the cost, but congratulating ourselves that we have such a worthy task which calls out all that is best and noblest in our lives. To accomplish this undertaking I would summons our entire host, numbering more than one hundred thousand to renewed zeal and determination to put over at the earliest possible date the great building program outlined by the trustees at the last annual meeting of the board when they went on record as favoring an extension of our work which will double our present capacity. To fail in this sublime undertaking would put our great church in an embarrassing condition before the world. That we cannot afford.

A CLEVER SPIDER

Soon after breakfast one sunny morning Marian heard her young friend Dorothy at the door calling for her to come out and play.

"Hello, Dorothy!" she answered. "I can come just as soon as I finish dusting this room for mother."

"If you will give me a dust-cloth, I'll help you dust," offered her little neighbor. "Then we can play all the sooner."

So the two girls went to work together, Marian dusting the window-sill and Dorothy taking the nearest chair.

"Oh, Dorothy," Marian exclaimed suddenly, "look here! A new spider web in the window! Come and see the cunning spider sitting in the middle of it."

"Oh, I wonder if it will do the trick my daddy makes them do for me!" Dorothy cried, as she dropped her duster and ran to the window. "Wait a minute; I'll make it do the trick."

With a piece of paper in her hands Dorothy gently tore the spider's web, taking care not to destroy it but only to break away a small section or two.

Marian could not help an exclamation of fright as the spider darted out of its web; but it did not run far. It stopped on the window-sill close to the web, standing so motionless that if the girls had not been watching they would have seen nothing but a brown speck in the wood. It certainly did not look like a spider.

"Is that all?" asked Marian, disappointed. "I thought it was going to do a trick."

"Just you wait," replied Dorothy. "She is frightened now, and my daddy says this is her way of hiding from her enemies, by standing so still they won't notice her. As soon as she thinks she is safe she will come out."

The two girls stood almost as still as the spider, waiting, watching for the tiny brown spot to move. All at once they saw it stir, then dart quickly back into the web. After running about to see how much harm had been done, the spider stopped a moment as if to think the matter over. Then she ran swiftly down one side of the torn place, spinning a web as she went. So quickly did she mend the web that the girls could not see how it was done.

"Why, the clever little creature!" cried Marian. "She has mended the hole that you made. I didn't suppose a spider knew enough to do that."

"They do, though. That is what my daddy showed me. I could hardly believe it when I first saw one."

"My mother says," remarked Marian, "that it is a good housekeeper who mends a tear as soon as it is made. I think this spider must be a very good housekeeper, better than I am sometimes."

"What shall we do with her now?" "Let's open the window and push her out. She can make a new web outdoors."

So they did. Then the two girls hurried to finish their dusting so that they could run out and play together in the sunshine; and Marian's mother, who had been listening, thought the spider was not the only good little housekeeper she knew.—Selected.

TWO BOYS AND TWO DOGS

Thomas came running in, out of breath. "I think it's just awful the way dogs fight!" he cried, when he could get his breath. "Dash and a stray dog are going for each other out in the road, and there wasn't one thing to fight about, either!"

Father said he would walk straight out and stop such doings, and Thomas hurried along after him, still indignant.

Laurie spoke up from the window-seat. "I know what started the fight," he remarked; "I saw 'em begin. Dash found the stray dog sniffing at an old, dry bone that's been lying near the gate for days, and tried to take it away from him. Wasn't that mean, Cousin Will?"

"Why, yes, I suppose he had buried it weeks ago and dug it up again, but it couldn't possibly have been any good to him, so why raise a row over it?"

Cousin Will said he could not imagine, and put on his hat and went for a drive with father, while Laurie curled up in the window and was soon far away in an exciting story.

Presently Thomas came back and began looking around for something to do with himself, not being a reader like his brother. As he whistled about aimlessly, his eyes fell on an old stick of sealing-wax in a corner of the mantelpiece.

"Just the thing to mend my ball with," he said aloud to himself.

Laurie glanced up from his book. "Thomas Lindsay, you know as well as you know your name that that's my wax!"

"I didn't know anything of the kind," retorted Thomas, swelling; "but if it is, you've left it around here for ages, and I found it, and now I'm going to use it."

Laurie got up and said that he should not; Thomas contended that he would. Laurie confessed he had forgotten all about the article, but that, nevertheless, it was still his.

A scuffle began, and when three chairs had been turned over, the tablecloth pulled awry, and two pairs of cheeks were blazing red, father and Cousin Will walked in, looking for something they had forgotten. Both boys tried to explain, talking very fast at the same time. Father looked at one; Cousin Will fixed serious eyes on the other. The stick of sealing-wax was nothing but a pinch of dust on the floor.

When the tale stopped for a second, father said: "Thomas, my son, I had to go out again and run the strange dog off with a whip to keep him from coming here and making needless disturbance."

Thomas shuffled his feet, remembering his late indignation. Then he left the room. Father found what he wanted, and went too.

Cousin Will loitered a moment. "What are you going to do about your sealing wax, Laurie?" he wanted to know. "Did you value it very much?"

"No," Laurie replied. "Fact is, I didn't." He was setting up the chairs and straightening the cloth, but he did not look up.

"Something like the bone and Dash, eh?" his cousin went on.

"Just like that," Laurie owned.

"We locked Dash up awhile to teach him manners," Cousin Will went on, thoughtfully.

Laurie gave a long whistle that ended in a laugh. "Whew!" he remarked. "I'm going to find Thomas, and we'll tell father to turn Dash out and count on us not to be so silly next time."

"Come on," Thomas called from the doorway, "I'm ready." And from that day their quarreling ceased.—Nancy Byrd Turner, in Picture Story Paper.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

Cameron, Jr., Prof. R. N. Wilson, and L. L. Gobbel. This school, which will be the fifth for Durham, seek to serve a larger number of Sunday schools than ever before. Six standard courses will be offered.

BIG SCHOOL FOR ALAMANCE

Meeting in Graham Thursday, our pastors and superintendents of Alamance county went on record as eagerly desiring a Standard Training School and, assisted by the writer, made preliminary plans for such a school to be held in Graham the week of April 15-20. The board of managers are: Rev. G. M. Daniel, chairman, Rev. W. B. North, Rev. N. S. Coltrane, Rev. Lindsay Frazier, Rev. N. C. Yearby, and Rev. W. R. Hardesty. Various committees were named and steps taken looking to the enlistment of the Sunday school workers of this section of the Durham district for a week of intensive training for more effective service in the great Sunday school army.

COURSES FOR OUR PASTORS

Preachers and their wives attending the Summer School for Preachers at Trinity College in June will have a splendid opportunity to take courses in Sunday school work. At least two standard units will be offered as a part of the summer school curriculum. Prof. Hugh H. Harris, of Emory University, will give one course, and negotiations are under way for another outstanding instructor in the field of religious education. Quite a number of our pastors took one of the Sunday school courses offered last year, and many more, it is believed, will take advantage of this unusual opportunity this year.

EXPECTS TO GET DIPLOMA

Rev. C. N. Phillips, pastor of Wilmington circuit, is the most recent recruit to the ranks of that constantly enlarging list of pastors who are taking for credit the units in the standard Sunday school training course with the exception of continuing this work until they have earned the gold seal diploma. This good pastor earned a certificate of credit in the recent training school in Wilmington, and so enthusiastic is he about this work that he plans not to wait for the next school but to take additional units by correspondence. And may his tribe increase!

IT WOULD HELP GREATLY

It would help the Sunday school cause in North Carolina greatly if every superintendent would do the following:

1. Complete at least one unit in the standard training course.
2. Secure the Program of Work which his school should use and seek to meet its conditions.
3. Read regularly "The Methodist Superintendent and His Helpers."
4. Read Chapter XIII of the new Discipline.

According to Unity, a certain church recently issued an advertisement thus: "Services at 10:30 a. m. Subject—'The Three Great Failures'—Choir, Sermon, Pipe Organ Offertory. All welcome."

Fatal in Most Cases.

Bonar Law proceeded to illustrate his point by telling the story of a Highlander who was lying ill in the last stages of exhaustion in a hospital, and asked that some one play for him on the bagpipes. The nurse had a warm heart and brought a piper into the room to play his entrancing music. The Highlander soldier recovered. But other patients in the hospital all died.—From a cable dispatch in the Toronto Mail and Empire.

WEAVER PIANOS

A MORE perfect harmony of words and melody than "The Rosary" probably does not exist. It is perfection—and it is this perfection which has made "The Rosary" one of the most beloved songs of our time.

This is the just reward of perfection in anything—it is the reward which has been earned by Weaver Pianos, because for more than half a century the men who have made these master instruments have striven for perfection.

Their single aim has been to build a piano which will combine exquisite tone quality, beauty of line, and a mechanism which is so well made that it is lost to sight in the beauty of the music it produces.

This perfection in every detail has earned for Weaver Pianos a place in the hearts and homes of the American people. It has won the enthusiastic endorsements of the world's leading professional musicians.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets That Are Nauseless, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the new, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs on the tongue at bed time, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size. (adv.)

Headaches Vanish

Sick or nervous headaches, backaches, women's aches almost instantly respond to the liquid remedy CAPUDINE. It stops the pain by removing the cause. Every home should keep a bottle handy. Sold by druggists, 10c, 30c, 60c. CAPUDINE Insist upon getting

JUST TRY A SMILE

By Blanche Bloor Schleppey.

A friend came in the other day
To sit awhile.
I said, "I'm blue."
She said, "Have you
Just tried a smile?"

I scanned her face; it seemed divine.
The rank and file
Could never guess
The blessedness
Of just her smile.

I smiled and felt new joy within
My heart, the while.
So if you're blue,
Now why don't you
Just try a smile?
(These verses are sent by Dr. Parish from Manila.)

HIGH TIME TO WIND THAT CLOCK

Says Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton, a Massachusetts lady abundant in service and wise in counsel: "Public opinion is like a clock; it has to be wound up frequently or it will stop altogether." And she justly says that her proverb applies just now, above all, to the public opinion which condemned the saloon in America and brought about prohibition. The temperance people thought the old clock would go on everlastingly after it had struck the prohibition hour. So they neglected to wind it up. And it has almost run down. Wind the clock again, then, ladies and gentlemen. Talk, circulate literature, speak for sobriety, put up strong fights in politics, shame lawbreaking wherever you see it, no matter in how distinguished society, and the run-down clock will soon be ticking again as lively as ever.—The Continent.

IVEY HOSPITAL EXTENDS ITS HELPFUL MINISTRY

Dr. W. T. Reid, though at home on furlough, keeps in close touch with his hospital back at Songdo, and in a letter of January 16, shares with you the latest news: "You will be interested to know that a letter from our Korean secretary at Ivey Hospital, dated December 14th, last, reports that as a result of the follow-up evangelistic work of our hospital preaching band for the past six months, two new groups have been established in places where there was formerly no regular worship, numbering 36 and 39 members each. These groups have gathered around ex-patients of our hospital, an nuclei, the Korean evangelist, who won the patient for Christ in the hospital, following the next month after his discharge from the ward, to his home, and preaching from that vantage ground to all his neighbors. God is blessing this work and we greatly rejoice that His Spirit is finding entrance into the hearts of the people through the work committed to our care. This work is being carried on at considerable financial sacrifice to the Korean members of the hospital staff and God is honoring their zeal for His cause by giving fruitage."

At the beginning of the Centenary we were working in seven foreign fields. Today we are working in eleven. The last year before the Centenary we spent $700,000 for foreign missions. In this good year of grace, in the providence of God, we are spending for foreign work nearly three million five hundred thousand dollars.—E. H. Rawlings.

IF BILIOUS, SICK! TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

You're bilious! Your liver is sluggish! You feel lazy, dizzy and all knocked out. Your head is dull, your tongue is coated; breath bad; stomach sour and bowels constipated. But don't take salivating calomel. It makes you sick, you may lose a day's work. Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel crashes into sour bile like dynamite, breaking it up. That's when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you want to enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight. Your druggist or dealer sells you a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents under my personal money-back guarantee that each spoonful will clean your sluggish liver better than a dose of nasty calomel and that it won't make you sick. Dodson's Liver Tone is real liver medicine. You'll know it next morning because you will wake up feeling fine, your liver will be working, your headache and dizziness gone, your stomach will be sweet and your bowels regular. You will feel like working; you'll be cheerful; full of vigor and ambition. Dodson's Liver Tone is entirely vegetable, therefore harmless and can not salivate. Give it to your children.

IN MEMORIAM

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Death has entered the ranks of the Philathea class of Mt. Zion church, Cornelius, N. C., and taken from us our co-worker, Mrs. Ernest Baker. Though not permitted to attend the class regularly we felt that she was with us in spirit, and was anxious to do her part in all good works.

Resolved first, to the sorrowing ones we extend our heartfelt sympathy and pray that the good whom they serve may be with them in especial tenderness in this their hour of great need.

Second, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, one to the Advocate and one recorded on the minutes of our class.

Mrs. E. M. Hoyle,
Mrs. W. W. Washam,
Mrs. J. P. Harviel,
Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas God, our Father, in His wisdom and love saw fit on May 31st, 1922, to remove from our midst our beloved brother, James H. Buchanan; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we, the members of the quarterly conference of East Greensboro charge, feel deeply our loss in his death, but we bow submissively to the will of God, knowing that He doeth all things well. Brother Buchanan was born November 18, 1837, joined Holt's Chapel M. E. church, South, in 1872, and remained a faithful member until his death. During this time he held the office of district steward for a number of years, and the office of steward and trustee until his death. These positions he filled with great loyalty to the church of his adoption.

Second, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the quarterly conference and a copy sent the N. C. Christian Advocate.

W. C. Fleming, Rec. Sec.

ABERNETHY—Junie V. Abernethy (nee Crites), wife of Vardie M. Abernethy, died February 13, 1923. She had lived in this world about 27 years. She was sick for ten days preceding her death. She died of peritonitis. During her last illness she suffered much, yet she did not complain and all the while was very patient.

At the time of her death she was a member of the Methodist church at Avondale. For the last eleven years of her life she lived a faithful, consistent Christian life. She will be much missed by her co-laborers in the Lord's work. Her mind was clear and she remained conscious up to the very last of her earthly life. She said she was sorry to leave her husband and two little boys, Paul and Charles, but if it was the Lord's will she was ready and willing to go.

Her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Forest City. Truly a good woman has gone from us to her heavenly reward. J. C. Keever, P. C.

GRIFFIN—Mrs. Annie D. Griffin was born September 24, 1883, near Gibson, N. C., and died near the place of her birth January 16, 1923, being 39 years old. She leaves to mourn their loss her husband, her father, W. W. Wright; three brothers, Zek, Al, and Lawrence; three sisters, Mrs. Mary Sanford, Mrs. Lucy Monroe and Miss Blanche Wright. Her aunt, Miss Lizzie Wright, and her grandmother, Mrs. D. D. Wright, who is nearing 89 years of age.

On April 27, 1913, she was happily married to Mr. R. L. Griffin, in whom she found a loving husband, tender, true and always considerate for her comfort. Sister Griffin was an affectionate wife, a helpmate in whom her husband was justly proud. She was converted and joined old St. John's Methodist church when she was a small child, was ever faithful to her vows, and to her every opportunity was an open door and the voice of her Lord calling her to service, which she willingly rendered. Her illness was long and drawn out. She spent some time in the state sanatorium fighting tuberculosis, and it appeared that she had won, and came home. For awhile she gained rapidly, but a second at-

SCIATICA, NEURALGIA AND URIC ACID

Out of Your System With Shivar Spring Mineral Water.

The Guarantee.

Think of it! A mineral water of such wonderful blood-cleansing power that it is actually shipped to every state in the Union and even to foreign lands under a positive guarantee that the price will be refunded, should the user report no benefit.

Shivar Mineral Water is unquestionably the greatest of all American mineral spring waters and there are thousands who contend that it is the best mineral water in all the world.

In Rheumatism and in other forms of auto-intoxication such as Sciatica, Neuralgia, Chronic Headache and Uric Acid Diathesis, Shivar Mineral Water has succeeded where every known medicine had failed. Physicians attribute this to its peculiar power of dissolving and completely washing out of the system the leucamines, or body poisons that cause these diseases.

Delightful to drink, wonderful in its blood-cleansing power, Shivar Spring Water may be shipped any distance, at any season, without losing its virtues in the slightest.

Though a thousand miles away, you may use it in your home with identically the same results, as if you drank it at the Spring.

The Results.

Read the following letters which are fair samples of tens of thousands that are received at the Spring, then accept our guarantee offer. It gives you the equivalent of a three-weeks' visit to this celebrated Spring, with no charge for the water if you report no benefit. Sign your acceptance on the coupon below.

tack of the flu woke the old disease in all its force. She suffered long and patiently; her peace with God had been made and she knew it. There were times when she suffered greatly, but she was happy in a Saviour's love, waiting with joy the time when the summons should come. It was a benediction to visit her, whose faith was so bright and experience so clear. Her life made a profound impression on all who came to see her. She was greatly missed, both by the family and community.

RICH—On Friday evening, January 19, 1923, God called unto Himself one of our best and most beloved citizens, Miss Ida F. Rich. Sister Rich was born in Sampson county near Clinton, June 21, 1864. She professed faith in Christ in youth and joined Bethany Methodist church, Steadman charge, August 4, 1883, during the pastorate of the late Rev. C. M. Gentry. But she later transferred her membership to Tabor church of the same charge, where she held her membership until about sixteen years ago, when on moving to Fayetteville she allied herself with Calvary Methodist church, of which remained a very loyal, consecrated, consistent member until her death.

Sister Rich lived with her sister, Mrs. J. McP. Geddie, until the death of her sister, and still with Mr. Geddie and the children until the death of Geddie. Since that time she made her home with her niece, Mrs. J. A. Hair, at which place she died. She had been sick for several weeks prior to her death, during all of which time she manifested a very humble Christian spirit. We had hoped at one time for her recovery, but only in vain.

Now that she has been taken from our midst she will be greatly missed because she was a great friend to those with whom she came in contact and with whom she had dealings and, too, she scattered sunshine of sympathy, joy and love on the pathway of life for those about her. Her life has been a benediction to the community in which she lived and the community has been made better by her life having been spent in it, because her life was a very beautiful Christian character and was given in service for others. She loved her home and relatives, and was as a mother to her nephews and nieces with whom she lived and as a faithful grandmother to their children. She died as she lived, trusting in God, but until the last she seemed loath to leave her relatives and friends, though she had no fear of death. So she calmly told her relatives good-bye before going to meet our Saviour and become one of His holy angels. To mourn her departure she leaves one brother and one half-brother, besides her nephews, nieces and a great host of friends.

The funeral was conducted at her home by her pastor, assisted by Rev. D. E. Deaton and Rev. W. L. Maness, after which her body was taken and laid to rest in the sacred cemetery of Bethany church. May God richly bless and comfort the bereaved and make them to realize that heaven is made brighter by their loss, and that they may meet again "some sweet day." E. C. Maness, P. C.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS

Some of the milk and water religionists and academic theologians seem anxious to put all blood out of religion and are inclined to get rid of the Cross of Calvary because it is a bloody cross. These self appointed wise acers are entirely too fastidious for a world that is cursed with sin and blackened by ignorance and the attendant group of horrors which accompany these monsters of earth. Such religious teachers of the parlor and the pleasure ground appear blind to the facts of history and of life. They ought to learn from Lowell:

“By the light of burning martyrs
Christ’s bleeding feet I track,
Toiling up new Calvaries ever
With the Cross that turns not back.
And those moments of anguish number
How each generation learned
Some new word in that grand credo
Which in prophets’ hearts have burned,
Since the first man stood God conquered
With his face to heaven upturned.”

“I do not set my ignorance up against the knowledge of other people,” was the sage remark of Bishop Collins Denny in the course of a brief chat last Friday in the editorial rooms of the Advocate. There is a volumn or two in the Bishop’s utterance. One of the great annoyances of the world is the widespread practice of people in setting their ignorance against the knowledge of other people. Their ignorance of science, for example, is set against the knowledge of the scientist. Their ignorance of theology is set against the knowledge of the theologian. Novices in all departments of life set themselves against the masters in their respective departments. The same may be said of prejudice. Men set prejudice against knowledge just about as frequently as they do ignorance. Let truth come into their midst, as Paul came preaching in Ephesus, and for more than two hours they cry “Great is Diana of the Ephesians.”

To offer advice to young preachers has been considered the thing to do, but to offer anything of that sort to mature preachers is regarded in some quarters gross presumption. Here is a sentence from one of our editors upon this very point: “We would not presume to offer suggestions to the preachers who are mature in age and thought and whose learning and experience makes them teachers rather than pupils.” Can a man be a teacher who is not still a pupil? When did any man become so wise and mature that he had no need of fresh knowledge? Is a man fit to teach who has closed the windows of his soul to all that is without. In our judgment whenever any man, preacher or layman, ceases to learn and resents any offered instruction, that man has already encamped on the “dead line.” The great men of earth without a single exception have been earnest seekers after truth to the end of their days. A man who refuses to receive instruction is already fossilized, or else he has fallen a victim to his own egotism.

Stop finding fault with the young. As to the old sinners: “Lay on McDuff, lay on McDuff!” The big sinners of the world are not among the young, but among the middle-aged and the old. As a rule a man does not learn how to reach the limit of wickedness before he is thirty years old. The sins of youth are often the result of inexperience rather than of experience as is too frequently the case with those further advanced in years. Hot blood gives momentum to youthful sins, while malice and the deliberate plans of a wicked heart are back of the evil deeds of the more mature. Give the young credit for the good that is in them and encourage them with those things that are of good report. Join your voice with the crowd that is cheering youth on to victory in the great game of life.

Dr. W. P. Merrill has been preaching a series of sermons in the Brick church, New York City, on the general theme, “The Virtues of Young America,” and the congregations have been filling the auditorium of the church. Among the sermon topics were: “Directness—The tendency to avoid duplicity and compromise, and go straight to the goal; Frankness—Sincere and outspoken dealing with all the forces of life; Freedom—Interest in the future and its promise, rather than in the past and its traditions; Practicality—The tendency to express convictions in action, rather than in word.” In this is much food for thought for preachers and other church leaders. The eye of youth is on the future and not upon the past. The young are by nature idealists. They delight to hear of the “true, the beautiful and the good.” Let the emphasis, therefore, be put not upon the past but on the future, not on prohibitions, but upon ideals, not upon the ugly and base things of life, but upon those that are “lovely and of good report.” In a word, exalt the virtues of Young America, for they are many.

Wouldn’t it be fine if we could get a rest from the literature of despair and from the heralds of disaster? They tell us Russia has gone to the bow-wows, India is in turmoil, and China is on the eve of some catastrophe. War is about to break out in Europe, or the economic upheaval threatens to engulf the world. “Trends” and “tendencies” cause the observant to stand aghast. All this can go into books without annoyance, for we are not compelled to open these chambers of horror. But when it is thrust from the pulpit upon a long suffering congregation and retailed before the public in public addresses, we cry out for deliverance. The world just now needs above all else the glad tidings of salvation through Christ, and an application of New Testament righteousness to the life of the individual and to the community both at home and abroad. This discussion of world conditions and world problems has gone to seed. Men talk wisely about world conditions and economic disaster and such like when they do not know what will be the price of Ford cars next August, or what the boll weevil will do this summer.

PRAYERS AT CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY

A series of revival meetings have been held recently in the great examination hall of Cambridge University, England. At these meetings prayers were offered of which the two that follow are typical:

"Christ, whom the common people heard gladly, Lord of Sincerity and Truth, before Whom all that is hollow and unreal shrivels up and is consumed away; give us the spirit of Reality; help us fearlessly and honestly to seek for truth and to listen to Thy challenge; cleanse us from prejudice and partisanship, and purge from our inmost souls, O Lord, whatsoever loveth and maketh a lie. Amen."

Another characteristic series of petitions ran:

"Son of Mary, consecrate our homes.
Son of David, cleanse our politics.
Son of Man, rule among the nations.
Son of God, give us life eternal.
Jesus, the Carpenter, hallow our daily work.
Jesus, the Christ, deliver the world that waits for Thee.

Jesus, the Saviour, save us from ourselves.
Jesus, the Life-Giver, make us living men."

These prayers are not only of interest to us in showing how Christ was presented to those groups of students at Cambridge, but they serve to teach any and all of us how we ought to pray.

HABITS OF THE MINISTER

The Watchman-Examiner has been sent a note for the joke column, but the editor calls it pathetic, tragic. Here is the whole story:

"One of our subscribers sends us the following, with the suggestion that we might use it in our 'joke column': 'This is what a good woman wrote to a minister's wife: 'I wish you were here to give some hint to our pastor that he needs to get his clothes pressed, and put on a clean collar, and several other things that we can't say out loud. He is a good man, and can preach very good sermons, but!— And his wife is much the same.' We publish the item, but not in our 'joke column,' because, as we see it, it is no joke. It is pathetic! It has in it the elements of tragedy! Here is a good man, an able preacher, who is making his people ashamed of him because of his slovenly and untidy appearance; who is discounting his work, handicapping his influence and lessening the appeal and power of the gospel in the community by habits for which there is no possible excuse or palliation. A minister must first of all be a gentleman, and soiled linen, dirty hands, grimy nails, and spotted and rumpled clothes are not the marks of a gentleman. It may not always be possible for him to be well dressed, but it will always be possible for him to be clean. Soap and water are cheap, and neatness in dress and person will cover a multitude of defects. Cleanliness is not only next to godliness, as John Wesley said, but it is a good recommendation for godliness, particularly when it is characteristic of a minister of the gospel.'"

SUNDAY IN NEWTON

Rev. W. B. Shinn had an attack of "flu," got out too soon and as a result had to go to bed again. In this emergency Bro. L. H. Phillips, a leading layman of Newton, wired the Advocate for help. The editor answered the call and occupied Brother Shinn's pulpit last Sunday morning. The congregation was large and the visiting minister enjoyed himself very much among these loyal friends of the Advocate.

Here is as good a place as any to say that Prof. A. C. Sherrill, who looks after the interests of the church paper in that congregation, has appointed a strong and active committee which with Brother Sherrill will canvass the entire congregation, a thing they have never done before, and he expects to retain all the present subscribers and add a large list of new names. Such a systematic effort never fails to bring good results.

There were 350 in Sunday school last Sunday morning. The urgent need just now of that church is more room for the Sunday school. This they expect to have before long by further excavations in the basement of the church and by the building of a hut close by the church.

Brother T. W. Saunders is the alert superintendent of the large and constantly growing Sunday school. There is an orchestra of ten pieces and a delightful feature is the music by the orchestra and the whole-hearted singing of the school.

We are indebted to Messrs. L. H. Phillips and H. H. Lowry for social courtesies and we enjoyed an interesting hour with Mr. C. H. Mebane, the editor of the Catawba News-Enterprise, who makes it hot for lawbreakers in that section of the state.

Brother Shinn has his church thoroughly organized, is alert to all the interests of the kingdom and hopes right soon to be out and on the job again. His little six-year-old girl has the "flu" also, but seemed to be slightly better last Sunday.

MOVIES MAKE WAR ON CHURCHES IN OHIO

According to reports there, the churches and the movies are in conflict in Ohio. According to the Christian Century, the Ohio Christian, the organ of the State Federation of Churches, faces a bitter conflict with the movie interests. In spite of the order of Will Hays, the state censor has barred the Arbutle films from being shown in Ohio, but ahead there looms a conflict with three salients on the part of the movie people. These three points are: Plans to eliminate non-theatrical competition by shutting off the source of supply of films for exhibition in churches, schools and similar institutions; a projected effort to secure legislation at the present session of the general assembly, wiping out or weakening state film censorship; a legislative drive against the present Sunday observance statutes of the state which makes the operation of motion picture theatres on Sunday illegal.—(Nashville) Christian Advocate.

Notwithstanding all this and much more that might be offered, church members who claim to be too poor to pay their church dues, enrich the movie trust and help maintain Hollywood by pouring their money into the box offices of the picture houses.

It does appear to be about time for a whole lot of church members to become ashamed of themselves and to mend their ways. Jesus Christ so loved the church that he gave himself for it, "that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing." The church ought to get rid of some of these spots and wrinkles.

A GOOD RECORD

In conversation with Mr. J. H. Bridgers, one of the foremost laymen of our church in the state, and who was for 16 years a member of the Joint Board of Finance of the North Carolina conference and its treasurer for nine years, he made the statement that he had handled something like four hundred checks each year that he was treasurer of the board signed by preachers, making a total of about 3,600 checks passing through his hands, and that only two of them were even delayed in being cashed. One of these was not honored because a layman, who had failed to pay his assessment before his pastor went to conference, promised to deposit to the credit of his pastor $5, but failed to do so. The other preacher's check that was not paid was because the bank had closed before the check got back home. In each case the preacher made the check good. We do not claim that the ministry is due any credit for this good showing because common honesty will not permit a man to give a check when he has no money in the bank to protect it, but it is gratifying to know that our ministers are so careful about their financial obligations.

A special program by the Woman's Missionary Society of Spruce Pine church will be rendered on Sunday morning, March 18, at 11 o'clock. All fields occupied by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be represented in the program. The Advocate representative has promised to be present and represent the church organ.

REV. J. M. ORMOND BACK HOME

Rev. J. M. Ormond, who has been a member of the faculty of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, for the past year, has returned to his native state, and has become a member of the faculty of the Biblical department of Trinity College. He assumed his new responsibilities on the first of March. North Carolina Methodism is exceedingly fortunate in the return of Brother Ormond, and especially so that he is to have a part in the training of the young men and women at Trinity. He is well qualified for his new duties, and will be a benediction to the student body at Trinity. The Advocate extends a most cordial welcome to Brother and Sister Ormond on their return home.

UNCLE JOE CANNON

His retirement to private life at the expiration of the last congress gives to Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois the distinction of having served longest in the history of the nation. He was nominated 25 times and elected 23 times, giving him forty-six years in the House. He was Speaker for four terms. His first vote in the house fifty years ago was cast for James G. Blaine for Speaker and he was elected. Cannon at that time could not be classed as a youth as he was 37 years of age.

When born in Guilford county, N. C., 87 years ago there was not a yard of railroad in the state. Andrew Jackson was at that time President of the United States.

Uncle Joe Cannon is not a man whose character will be held before the youth of the country as a model, for he was not, neither will he go down in history as a statesman who rendered conspicuous service for his country. But he will be referred to for many years as one of the interesting and picturesque figures in congressional history, and it may be a long time before his record for length of service shall have been broken.

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN

It takes North Carolina Methodism a long time to get warmed up, but when she gets aroused there is nothing that can stop her. In all departments of church activities she is always in the lead. For two years the N. C. Christian Advocate has blazed the way for all other religious papers in the South by having the largest subscription list of any of them. Fair-minded critics have said time and again that in every way the organ of North Carolina Methodism is the best paper among all the Advocates, with a possible exception of the general organ.

Of course, we propose that this paper shall lead in the future as it has done in the past. Several of the Advocates are camping on our trail in the matter of subscriptions. But we are slow to believe that we will be overtaken by any of them.

During the month of February the weather was exceedingly bad, and our people got off to a bad start in the campaign, but when the sun came out about the first of March, the friends of the paper pulled off their coats and went to work with a vim. During the past week nice lists have been received from Revs. J. E. Thompson, B. F. Boone, J. W. Vestal, B. C. Thompson, L. S. Massey, R. H. Kennington, G. T. Wilkinson, Prof. A. C. Sherrill and others.

The editor and business manager are making special efforts for one of them to be present at every district conference, and we hope that the preachers will give every old subscriber an opportunity to renew and those who are not subscribers to send in their subscription to the district conference. But it is not necessary to wait till then. Just mail your list at once if preferable.

Let all the preachers, committees and other friends of the paper put forth special effort during March and April to secure the renewal of all the 25,000 that are now on the list and to increase the circulation to 30,000.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

The people at Roper are building a good parsonage for their pastor, Rev. E. L. Hill. The work goes good at Roper.

Rev. S. T. Barber is well pleased with his new work at Ahsokie and the people are delighted with him. We predict that this will be a successful year on the Ahsokie charge.

Rev. W. R. Royal spent a day last week in Greensboro. He brings a good report from Laurinburg. We greatly enjoyed an hour's chat with this sterling itinerant.

The recent edition of "Idle Comments" by Isaac Erwin Avery is exhausted. The Advocate has just a few copies left. Any one desiring a copy will do well to order at once. Price $2.00, postage extra.

Mr. Henry R. Allen and Miss Eula Lee Pridgen were united in marriage at the home of the bride's father, Mr. J. D. Pridgen, Kelly, N. C., on Wednesday, February 28, 1923, Rev. E. C. Sell, of Goldston, N. C., officiating.

Plymouth station has increased the pastor's salary from $1400 to $1800. W. G. Lowe is the pastor and he is delighted with Plymouth and the parsonage which after extensive improvements is like a new house.

Rev. A. W. Price, the bishop of historic Roanoke Island, is still making Methodist history over there. He expects to raise the conference collections in full at both the churches of that charge on Easter Sunday.

Brother Holderby says: "I would like to hold a few meetings for any of the pastors of the W. N. C. conference or the N. C. conference. Can come any time. Address, Rev. G. A. B. Holderby, Rosman, N. C."

A very promising Epworth League has been organized at Fairview, and Rev. Allen H. Whistner, the pastor, through the systematic organization of the charge and his most active pastoral work, bids fair to bring the Fairview circuit into a new day.

Rev. A. E. Brown in addition to his work as pastor at Stumpy Point is teaching school. This special arrangement is proving quite satisfactory to both the preacher and the people. They are all happy at Stumpy Point.

When the Elizabeth City district conference meets at Mackey's the third week in July, that ecclesiastical assembly of the Albemarle will gather in a bran new church. The people have all plans made to finish their church before that date.

Rev. M. W. Dargan drives a high powered car, but when he steps on the gas the enthusiastic folks of the Flat Rock-Fletcher charge follow close behind him. There was every evidence of life at the second quarterly conference recently held at Naples.

Rev. S. F. Nicks of the Leasburg circuit is planning an Advocate service at each church on his charge. He proposes at these services to present the claims of the Advocate and give his people the opportunity to renew or subscribe to the church paper.

The Y. M. C. A. of Rutherford College held revival services for three days last week. Rev. C. S. Kirkpatrick of Hickory did the preaching. The meeting though brief was pronounced a fine success. Brother Kirkpatrick will assist Brother C. C. Weaver at Monroe in a meeting the week before Easter.

Rev. S. E. Mercer, the presiding elder of Weldon district, announces that on account of the session of superior court at Jackson the date of the district conference has been changed from April 4-6 to April 11-13. All persons interested will keep in mind the change of date.

Rev. C. B. Culbreth reports that practically every charge in his district is interested in the Advocate campaign. M. T. Plyler says that the Durham district does not brag but rides the band wagon. It may be that Culbreth and his cohorts may before long be on the aforesaid wagon.

Rev. C. A. Johnson of the Kennekeet circuit, at the first quarterly conference made a great report. All salaries were overpaid, $100 had been made on collections and he had 17 new subscribers to the Advocate to his credit with this work just begun. He is delighted with his work and the people are charmed with their pastor.

Rev. R. E. Hunt, of Bethel charge, in the Charlotte district, paid us a call on Tuesday. Brother Hunt reports that his work is in fine shape and that he is preaching to the largest congregations of his life.

We have a report direct from Augusta, Ga., which states that Dr. C. C. Jarrell, pastor of St. John's church, Augusta, has just been chosen as secretary of the Hospital Board. Dr. C. C. Selecman of First church, Dallas, Texas, was first elected, but on account of the pressure brought upon him at Dallas to remain in that city he declined the office. Dr. Jarrell is quite popular in Augusta.

The Searchlight in announcing the coming of "Cyclone Mack" to the First Baptist church of Fort Worth, Texas, says in black face type, "Last year he came as a Methodist minister. This year he comes as a full-fledged Baptist in spite of the devil and some preachers." We are at a loss to know what preachers joined hands with the devil to prevent "Cyclone Mack" from becoming a Baptist.

The church at Tryon has been lifted up to the level of the street, and rooms are being fitted up in the basement to take ample care of the Sunday school, while the whole building is being overhauled and beautified. Rev. R. P. Fikes, the pastor, doesn't do any bragging, but no congregation ever had a truer leader, and his people speak in loud praise of his very high order of sermons.

Rev. A. A. Angel, of Hot Springs charge, has been engaged in revival services in one of his churches during the past two weeks. Up to last Sunday 25 had joined the church. Brother Angel reports more than 70 conversions in the meeting. He will have Rev. D. V. York in a series of meetings at Hot Springs, which will immediately follow the district conference which meets at Hot Springs next week.

Rev. T. G. Vickers, who is in his second year with that splendid congregation at Henderson, is moving on toward the completion of plans to begin the erection of a new church plant which, with furnishings, will represent an expenditure of about $150,000. A most desirable lot has been secured, and plans are in the hands of an architect. It is expected that work will begin on this new house of worship about the first of June.

Rev. L. B. Jones, the good looking pastor of Steel Street, Sanford, has just issued a Bulletin for his church, which contains a great deal of information which is of interest to his people. We notice in it that Mrs. D. L. St. Clair, Mrs. D. C. Lawrence and Miss Sadie Matthews have been appointed to look after the interest of the Advocate in Steel Street. We are confident that the church paper will receive good attention by these select ladies.

Rev. Thos. F. Higgins, pastor of Brevard Street, Charlotte, and Miss Katie James Hyatt will be married in Burnsville next Saturday, March 10, Rev. J. B. Tabor officiating. After a bridal trip the young couple will be at home in the Brevard Street parsonage, which the people of that charge have already made ready for the coming of the bride into their midst. The Advocate in advance extends good wishes and congratulations.

Rev. L. S. Massey was among the first to send in a good list of subscribers in the Advocate campaign. Brother Massey from long experience knows the inside workings of the Advocate office, and in consequence has an intelligent sympathy for the men "who grind at the mill." If every pastor could spend a while in this office, he would, like Brother Massey, be an enthusiastic worker for the Advocate on the field.

Rev. J. A. Cook, pastor of Mount Airy circuit, is rapidly getting things in shape for erection of a splendid church building at Salem. The committee who has the matter in charge have practically agreed on plans and are now making a canvass of the membership and others for funds with which to do the work. They expect to build a brick structure which will contain eight class rooms and a large auditorium and when completed will cost about $15,000. This is the oldest Methodist church in this section of the state, having been organized more than 60 years ago. For many years the Methodists of Mount Airy belonged and attended services at old Salem, as it was then the only Methodist church in their reach. It still has a membership of over 200, and much enthusiasm is being manifested in the anticipation of a splendid and adequate house of worship.—Mt. Airy News.

The reports are that the folks are filling the splendid auditorium of Haywood Street, Asheville, morning and evening, to hear the vigorous and popular pastor, Carlock Hawk. When this Hawk once catches them he doesn't turn them loose.

Rev. W. W. Peele, pastor of Edenton Street, Raleigh, will assist Rev. J. W. Moore at Broad Street, Statesville, in a series of meetings the latter part of May and first of June. These two pastor-evangelists should be exceedingly successful at Broad Street.

Rev. R. H. Willis, the presiding elder of the Fayetteville district, was greeted by 21 official members of the Fayetteville circuit at the second quarterly conference held last Saturday. Brother W. L. Maness, the pastor, is enthusiastic in his praise of his new elder and says his sermons were helpful and inspiring.

The Advocate regrets to chronicle the death of Mrs. Ellen Frances Patten, mother of Rev. Walter Patten, our pastor at Chapel Hill. Mrs. Patten died at St. Cloud, Fla., where she had been living for the past two years. The body was brought back to her old home at Calypso and buried, the funeral services being conducted from the Presbyterian church, where Mrs. Patten was a member. We hope to give a more extended notice later.

Rev. R. H. Kennington, who has so wisely led the Lowell charge during the past three years, was a visitor in the Advocate office Tuesday morning. Brother Kennington is always planning for the enlargement of the kingdom of God, and usually gets his people to work in harmony with him. At present he is busy paying off the indebtedness on his new church at Lowell. He brought us a nice check for a number of renewal subscriptions to the Advocate and informed us that he had barely begun his campaign.

Rev. J. A. Fry, pastor of the Spruce Pine charge, Marion district, delighted the Advocate office by a visit on Tuesday afternoon. He was in Greensboro attending a meeting of the executive committee of the Board of Church Extension, which met in West Market Street church. Brother Fry reports that his parsonage has just been remodeled at a cost of about $500, and that a quantity of new furniture had been installed. He and family are now enjoying a modern home. This pastor stated that material is being ordered and plans perfected for a new brick veneered church building, which will be rushed to completion. This new house of worship will cost complete about $10,000.

CHANGE IN QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

The Rougemont quarterly conference will be held at Mt. Sylvan on Thursday, March 15. This is one day earlier than advertised. Let all be present with their reports. M. T. Plyler, P. E.

BISHOP DENNY IN GREENSBORO AND MOUNT AIRY

Bishop Collins Denny arrived in Greensboro last Friday afternoon from Atlanta, Ga., where he had attended a meeting of the Commission on the Constitution of the Church which was directed by the last General Conference at Hot Springs. The commission met at Emory University March 1. But little was done except to organize and appoint some committees. Bishop Warren Candler was elected chairman of the commission and Hon. M. E. Lawson of Missouri was elected secretary. The commission named three committees: A committee on Doctrine, of which Bishop Candler is chairman; a committee on Organization with Bishop McMurry, chairman. Bishop Denny is chairman of the committee on Terms of Members.

The bishop left on the evening train for Mount Airy to spend Saturday and Sunday. He was booked to preach at a quarterly meeting and also in Mt. Airy. Think of a real bishop, not a sub-bishop, but the genuine article at a quarterly meeting in the country on Saturday!

Tuesday morning he was on hand for the opening of the Mt. Airy district conference at Elkin. The Mt. Airy district appreciated greatly the presence of Bishop Denny at the Elkin conference, which adjourned Wednesday afternoon.

"He that plants thorns shall not gather roses."
"Keep your face towards the sunshine, and the shadows will fall behind you."

From The Inkhorn of an Itinerant

AT THE GRAVE OF JAMES O'KELLY

James O'Kelly, who broke with Francis Asbury in the early days of Methodism in this country and founded the Christian church, lies buried about ten miles south of Durham, a little off the Fayetteville road. His grave, with about a half dozen others, is back of the house, now occupied by a colored family, in the edge of the woods. A low rock wall surrounds the graveyard which is now overgrown with trees, some of which are three or four inches in diameter. The whole place has an air of neglect.

A stone about twenty inches square at the base and six feet high, almost an obelisk in form, stands at the head of the grave. On the west side are inscribed these words:

ERECTED BY HIS CHRISTIAN FRIENDS

TO THE MEMORY OF

JAMES O'KELLY OF N. C.

"THE SOUTHERN CHAMPION OF CHRISTIAN FREEDOM"

No dates are given and nothing to indicate in what cause was he "The Champion of Christian Freedom." We would like to know who is quoted in that and in what respect he was the champion of Christian freedom. Surely, the mere matter of an issue about church government did not involve Christian freedom to any extent.

We feel that this grave ought to have more consideration and, we think, it a pity that the inscription was not fuller.

THE PINK OF THE PEACH

The rapidly developing industry in the Sand Hill section of North Carolina, in which the culture of the peach has a first place, makes strange appeal to those away, no less than to those who are in the midst of the enterprise. The pink of the peach in the springtime becomes a prophecy as alluring as the delicate shades in the cheek of a child and the ruddier glow in the maiden's blush. "Sweet as a peach," whispered into the willing ear of the maiden, all aglow with the hope of the years, has always left strange imaginings and filled with expectancy the days to come. But the peaches of Moore county, brought to the pink of perfection, stir expectations greater than any cherished by youth in the morning-time of life. Would that some poet may arise to sing in proper measures the glory and the grandeur never once dreamed of in the days when the stretches of sand and scrubby growth, both vegetable and animal, furnished a scanty and unpromising outlook!

Poets have their favorite flowers and sing of their beauty. Full attention has been given the innocent daisy and the wee modest violet. Burns "To a Mountain Daisy" tells of the "Wee, modest, crimson-tipped flower," and Shakespeare frequently alludes to "the nodding violet"—

"Violets dim,

But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath."

In Japan, the cherry tree holds a foremost place; and in Scandinavian mythology, the apple has played an important part. It has a large place in the life of the world today, and the citrus fruits contribute much to the health and the happiness of the world. The scent of the orange blossoms hang about the marriage altar and the roses and the lilies are everywhere. It would seem that the peach is destined to usher in the springtime of the world.

About the time the woodpecker pecks and the blue bird sings, the pink of the peach begins to appear, giving promise of that nameless something in the air that soon is everywhere throughout all these southern parallels. Lo, the springtime has come and soon the summer is upon us. Then all the sand-hills are aglow with life and expectancy, dreaming of rich rewards and still larger holdings of orchards destined to leave behind the marvellous tales of this wonderful land which so filled the imaginations of the men who came in search of glory and of gold.

The stories told of California fruits and the boastings of the flavor of the Georgia peach must all be revised and the true story told when the record is written of the Sand Hills of the Old North State.

In these tinted fields, studded with the trees planted but yesterday, abide health, happiness and wealth.

Gather ye peach-buds while ye may,
Old time is still a-flying;
And this same flower that smiles today,
Tomorrow will be dying.

THE TROUBLE FOUND AT LAST

A colored citizen of these United States of America has made a most valuable discovery. The dungeon of one's self is nothing compared to the prison walls of which he speaks. This is the way he puts it: In this age, the intelligence is prisoner of the syllogism.

Now roll that over in your mind and see what a predicament we are in! The intelligence is prisoner of the syllogism! What is that? That must be Aristotelian logic gone to seed. It must be an effort to rebuild the wonderful one hoss shay,

"That was built in such a logical way

It ran a hundred years to a day,
And then, of a sudden, it—"

Well, it went to pieces all at once,

"All at once and nothing first—

Just as bubbles do when they burst."

The trouble of the world is the syllogism. The intelligence has been made a prisoner. This is the way it works:

Entangling alliances are dangerous; to have anything to do with European affairs is to become entangled: Therefore, America should have nothing to do with the people of Europe. The intelligence is prisoner of the syllogism.

The Bible tells us that God made the world; it is dangerous to faith to suggest the method of His procedure: Therefore, the method of evolution is dangerous. The intelligence is prisoner of the syllogism.

A state should have all the money it wants to carry on its affairs; there is a limit to the amount of money to be had: Therefore, the men who warn of overstepping the limit are enemies of the common good. The intelligence is prisoner of the syllogism.

To state the case a little more concretely:

The Bible is a divine revelation; Itinerant believes that his notion of what the Bible teaches is the truth: Therefore, all who differ from him are wrong and guilty of heresy. The intelligence is prisoner of the syllogism.

The syllogism is going to have much to answer for in causing such a situation in which the world finds itself in matters of religion and government. When shall we be done once for all with the wonderful one hoss shay? "Logic is logic. That is all I say."

Has the colored brother diagnosed the case properly? Is the intelligence really a prisoner of the syllogism? Will some of those who know turn on the light?

SLIGHTLY CONFUSED AND YET PLEASED

A friend wrote in complimentary terms about taking "the light from under the bushel"; and now comes another who says, "That is good 'stuff' you are giving us through the Advocate," and he adds, "As the boys on the ball-field have been heard to say, 'Pour it in him, old boy.'" Itinerant has heard some such phrase used with such an overplus of meanings that he is loath to make the possible applications. The first conclusions, however, is that this is a call for more "stuff." So we take it and are pleased.

Now, this gives us an opportunity to make a plea for all to get in the game for a larger subscription list. It is nothing short of a shame to have so much fragrance lost on the desert air. Fifty thousand ought to be reading each week the high class "stuff" found in the columns of the Advocate. Some want chaff and wind, others ask for the best of the good; all can be accommodated. Tell it in Gath and publish it in Ashkelon; make it known from Dan to Beer-Sheba; in modern phrase, proclaim it from Murphy to Manteo that there is a flying sheet issuing from Greensboro that sends its message afar, but its chief function is to be a guide, philosopher and friend for the followers of Wesley who live between the sounding sea and the still solemn mountain tops that nest about Mitchell and Plsghah. Let all who would be a disseminator of the well worth while get in the game.

SAINTLINESS

By T. F. Glenn.

Occasionally I hear a sermon that so stirs and thrills that the spirit of exhortation comes upon me. The Rev. O. P. Ader's most admirable sermon on holiness started trains of thought in my mind that still haunt me. It is possible to achieve saintliness in this world. We need saints in the pulpit, saints in the pew, and saints in the home. But our modern life is not conducive to saintship. Most of us are too busy to pray and meditate—we have no time for communion with God, the Father of our spirits. We forget the wise old proverbs which tell that "haste makes waste," "less haste more speed," "prayer and provender never hinder a journey." Jesus says, when thou prayest enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret." This is the first lesson in the school of prayer—you enter your closet, shut the world out and shut yourself in with God. And remember that prayer is not a monologue but a dialogue. We should pray in the attitude of little Samuel in the temple in Shiloh, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." This suggests that great text: "Be still, and know that I am God." This is not an unreasonable or arbitrary command, it is a psychological necessity of our fallen nature. Take a kindred text from Isaiah: "In quietness and confidence is your strength." Most of us are in too great a hurry to discover what wondrous strength there is in quietness and confidence. Jacob learned this great lesson at Bethel where he had the sublime vision of the mystic ladder up and down which the angels swiftly moved. This was one of the three great crises in the patriarch's life. He met God here and came to know Him as never before.

We are told that some of the old religions thought of God as a woman. In the last chapter of Isaiah the prophet represents God as saying: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you." You have seen the mother spend sleepless nights over the cradle trying to keep life in the little body of a dear child—the child in its delirium would call for its mamma, not knowing that she was present, and it would thrust away the hand that administered the medicine meant to relieve its suffering. That is like you and me. We call upon God in the dark night of adversity, but fail to realize that He is present, that He is "our arm" morning, noon and night. When every other refuge fails you may put your trust under the shadow of His wings. At Bethel Jacob exclaimed: "Surely the Lord is in this place, and I knew it not." He may have thought of God as a tribal God—as the God of Abraham, and his father Isaac. He was surprised perhaps to find Him near the heathen city of Luz.

But how does God reveal himself? In three ways—in nature, in man who was created in His image and likeness, in His Son who is the brightness of His glory and the express image of His person. "The invisible things of Him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even His eternal power and Godhead." The heavens declare the wisdom and the omnipotence of God and the majesty of His glory. The rolling thunder is His voice and the lightning is the glance of His eye. He rides upon the cherub and flies upon the wings of the wind. He maketh the clouds His chariot. He brings forth the sun from tabernacle in the morning, guides him in his career through the heavens and directs him back to his tent at nightfall.

It is in Him we live and move and have our being. If He should withdraw His presence for a moment the Tom Paines and Ingersols would soon have no breath with which to blaspheme His name or to denounce His inspired Word. Do not put God far off among the stellar worlds. Think of Him as present with you.

God reveals himself more fully in His Incarnate Son. Jesus said to Philip, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." God is like Jesus. His life was mercy. He never saw tears but He dried them up, grief but He assuaged it, sorrow but He relieved it; He unstopped the ears of the deaf, poured light upon sightless eyeballs. God is like that.

THE BIBLE AND DESTRUCTIVE CRITICS

Second Timothy 3:16: "All Scriptures is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness."

Second Peter 1:21: "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

If these Scriptures are true the Bible is not to be subjected to the criticism of man.

By criticism is meant the study of the Scriptures with the purpose of finding out and eliminating anything that is not in accord with the notions or tastes of the critics.

I take the ground that the attitude of the critic toward the Bible is both irreverent and presumptuous and is a very dangerous thing to do, for in Rev. 22:18-19, we read, "For I testify to every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life and out of the holy city, and from the things that are written in this book."

We can tamper with men and human institutions, but when we come to tampering with God's word and divine things, we had better undertake to handle the forked lightning.

I believe the whole Bible as we have it is inspired of God. The Orthodox or Dynamic theory of inspiration commends itself to men and women of faith in God and we accept the Bible as God's book. The critic admits only the latitudinarian theory of inspiration which seems to be a mere intellectual affair, poetical fervor caused by the friction of thought through the brain and is wholly within the one thus inspired. That there is such an inspiration to speakers and writers no one will deny who has spoken or written in a real sense; but such an inspiration could not make a book of many books such as the Bible, a consistent and agreeable whole.

Some things that prove the inspiration of the Bible might be considered here:

1. The excellency of the doctrines, precepts and promises and other instructions which it contains.
2. The simplicity and majesty of the style and much of it from uncultured men.

3. To the agreement of the different parts and the scope of the whole on all essential points.

4. The testimony they bear to man's fallen and ruined state and the way of salvation through Christ and the agreement of the writers of different ages, times and circumstances shows that one super-mind controlled and inspired all of them.

5. The writers themselves claimed divine inspiration and their claims are fully established by the miracles they wrought and other supernatural manifestations.

But I am not writing with any hope of convincing any of the critics of their errors. I know that it is of no use. No fundamentalist even among our greatest scholars could do that. "Ephraim is joined to his idols," and the conceit of the whole bunch in their pretended scholarship and wonderful discoveries so blinds them that they see nothing else. Their constant references in their writings to the Scholars and always to the Apostles of Darwinian Evolution show their infatuation for that old skeleton that should have been buried years ago. Darwin certainly did his race a great damage as he perhaps realized in his last days, for he is quoted as saying he would have to die an agnostic. I would like to know why men want to teach Darwinism and stay in the church that has for its foundation the Bible. Why don't they go on with their science and form or build a structure of their own in which their doctrines may shine out and show it up in all its glory? But, no, they want to hang on to the church and endeavor to drag it down with them. The church which was built up by holy men of God inspired by the Holy Spirit and built upon the Rock, the Lord Jesus Christ, whose Christhood they deny and the Bible which they deny also.

The first thing these gentlemen should do if they are going to preach Darwinism is to withdraw from the church, the only consistent thing for them to do. When men go out to preach doctrines that are entirely antagonistic to the doctrines of their church as some of our preachers are doing, what should be done with them? They antagonize the following of our articles of religion: Nos. I, II, III, V, VI and XX. If this is not heresy and that of the rankest and most aggravated form, then what is it? Do we still try men for heresy? But some one will cry out, "Oh, you are intolerant." Yes, I am. There are certain things that cannot be tolerated and this is one of them. So the church should expel them if they do not withdraw. Why do I advise such a course? Because they are determined to take the church and the schools with them. And the church must use drastic means to get rid of their doctrine. They are conceited enough to think they are taking the church with them.

No, Brother Editor, we have not gone over. Very few have when we compare those who have with those who have not. The great rank and file of our preachers and laymen have not budged toward going, not even thinking of it. But I here and now admit a fear and sound a note of warning that if we will let you and your crowd have our periodicals, colleges and other educational institutions, that a few years hence you will have a majority or at least enough to cripple the church in its education, evangelization and service. We have a bit of it at Trinity College, a bit of it at Emory University and Vanderbilt has had it for years, and is no doubt in my mind the chief cause of their taking the university as they have from the church—they wanted to follow some of the northern universities. Those who have kept up with Dr. Grant of the Protestant Episcopal church of New York in his defiant statements to Bishop Manning will notice his claim that it (the Destructive Criticism) is taught in every modern university of the Western World.

On December 26 in Cambridge, Mass., a convention of Evolutionists passed a resolution committing themselves to the purpose of putting their teachings into the schools of the country, and they are doing it just as fast as they can. While the church sleeps the enemy sows the tares. We have been asleep while we have been electing these fellows to the General Conference. A large per cent of them are in the General Conference than in any other body, as we have been electing the men who have had better opportunities for scholarship, but I shall never vote for another one and shall use my influence to keep them out of our law-making body as well as out of our educational institutions, as this is the only way to save the church.

I suppose the next thing we may look for will be an effort to recast the faith and creed of our church. I remember when a few of this same kind of teachers undertook to have the creed changed, but they found themselves up against too difficult an undertaking.

The great bulk of our preachers and laymen are sound in the faith and we will remain so if our colleges and universities can be controlled, but they are making young preachers of this type. Watch Trinity and other colleges send their young preachers who graduate there to the northern universities where they are teaching it.

Locke, the celebrated philosopher, said: "Of all the men we meet with, nine out of ten are what they are, good or bad, useful or not, according to their education." It is the kind of education that makes these Rationalists. The youth gets under the influence of these Rationalists at an age that he is easily influenced. His theological views are not formed, so they fix him, stamp him and he goes out full of pride and ambition, thinking he has all there is, he is in line with the scholars. These critics have no gospel message for the people; their message is one of only darkness and uncertainty. They deny the Bible account of creation in general and of man in particular. Hence there is with them no fall of man and therefore no need of redemption; no atonement, no mediation, no propitiation for sin and of course no shedding of blood was necessary; and if there had been need of atoning blood, there was none that was efficacious, as Christ, the only one for whom such claims have been made, was only a man and his blood would be of no more value than that of any other man.

They have no song of redemption, no song of the returning wanderer or prodigal to his God, of the lost sheep found, or a sinner saved by grace. The only song that is appropriate for them is "Hark, from the Tomb a Doleful Sound," and they can sing only the ~~three~~ first stanzas of that, as the fourth and last is a ~~prayer~~ for grace. It is from this crowd that we hear of the "New Revival," (a "tearless revival as was sounded out from Nashville during the Centenary campaign), a revival with no warnings from Mount Sinai and no promises of pardon, peace and cleansing from Mount Calvary, but a revival such as the clubs and fraternal orders have, when they want members, surveys, drives, etc., a simple campaign for members, or a trick or scheme to get the children in without an adequate chance for conversion through Decision Days in the Sunday schools—and this is the way to fill up the church with worldlings who do not know or love God or His church.

One of these critics said in his address at our summer school for preachers at Trinity College, "The Higher Critics have saved me my Bible." I took this as a boast of his former unbelief in the Bible, but when the critics came along and denatured the Bible (took the Deity out of it) he then could accept it. The difference between him and some of the rest of us is that they are trying to take our Bible away from us, but I am so glad that they cannot do it.

I am not writing this in defence of the Bible. It does not have to be defended, apologized for, bolstered up, or anything of the kind. It has stood all the storms of the skeptics in all the ages and it only needs to be preached, believed and obeyed and this will bring us peace here and heaven in the end. Then, why am I writing this? As a protection to the people, the young, the defenseless, those who have not studied and settled these things for themselves.

We will preach and stand by the Old Book and "earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Amen. E. Myers.

"There is no place so dark that the light of heaven will not come to it."

"The darkest shadows of life are those which a man himself makes when he stands in his own light."

THE DEMONSTRATION

If I could make my motor go
The way that agent made it
The day he drove it to my home
And pridefully displayed it!
If I could stall an engine's knock
And keep a spring from squeaking
With that good salesman's line of gab
Or hold a valve from leaking,
I'd feel much safer in the boat
When I go forth to drive—
Feel far more certain that at length
In safety I'd arrive.
I'd burn of costly gasoline
A great deal less, by far,
Were I as skillful as the chap
Who sold to me my car!
It seemed, what time he chauffed me 'round
As though we rode on air;
There was no bump; there was no shock;
No friction anywhere!
The engine was as silent
As the graveyard rabbit's tread
As it goes pussyfooting
'Round the dwellings of the dead.
But since he left the thing to me
And bore away my check,
The blooming bus is noisy as
A freight train in a wreck.
Though using all discretion in
The choosing of my track,
The thing goes jouncing, bouncing,
Till it nearly breaks my back!

When he had done a score of miles,
He showed me that the gas
Was high as when he started;
Yet when I'm in charge—alas!
I need a filling station
Every forty miles or so—
A league to every gallon
Is the furthest it will go.
No, I'm not kicking, brother,
For I have a great machine—
The advertisements tell me so
In every magazine.
Yet, oh, could I but make it work
The way that agent made it
The day he brought it to my house
And pridefully displayed it!

Virginia all in one day. Then he added, "Yes, and from Charleston, too." Now I am quite sure that every one who knows Brother Earnhardt was pleased to know that he was so generously remembered on Valentine's Day. He is worthy of every good thing that comes his way.

But this writer and his wife have also been pounded from afar. Not from so many places, but from several very dear friends in the good town of Weldon. And with the very substantial token of an enduring friendship token itself. A letter from Mrs. H. C. Spiers of Weldon came in the morning's mail Wednesday, the last day of February. Mrs. Spiers has been a highly esteemed friend of ours for more than a quarter of a century, and her letters are always interesting and inspiring to us. Opening the letter from her Wednesday of last week I found a check for fifty-one dollars and thirty-five cents enclosed with the letter. The letter began like this: "I trust the enclosed check will be a reminder that we continue to love and appreciate you both." A little further on in the letter she said that a few nights ago she got to 'thinking of you both (wife and myself) and the debt on your little home, and decided to send a check for five dollars to help to pay the debt.'" She said she mentioned it to one of our good friends, Mr. Ed. Clark, on her way down town the next day, and he said he wanted to send a like amount. Good Dr. Zollcoffer heard of it, and he too became interested. Then dear Brother W. L. Knight heard of it and he chipped in. Other friends heard of the movement started by Mrs. Spiers, and made contributions, running the total amount up to the handsome sum above mentioned.

But at the hazard of seeming to "blow my own horn" I wish to mention that which I appreciate more than anything else in connection with this pounding from afar. And to do this I will just quote a sentence from the letter. It follows: "While you served as our pastor you held the banner of the cross high, never did you allow it to trail in the dust, and you sent forth no uncertain sound, and you both have the respect of the members," etc.

The check will help to meet the next and last payment on our little home when it falls due, and we are very thankful for it, but we appreciate the many expressions of love and esteem beyond all else. The Father bless the saints at Weldon. W. A. Hornaday.

NOTICE

Bishop Collins Denny will be on the Grifton charge on the second Sunday in April and will at that time dedicate Sharon church at eleven o'clock and preach in Grifton at night. All former pastors of the Grifton charge are cordially invited and wanted so much that if the expense is too much for them we will help bear their expense. We want all the pastors of former years to be sure and come. We would be very glad to have the Advocate man come and be with us on April 8, 1923. S. T. Moyle.

FROM THE BRUSHIES

The Alexander charge with its five churches is coming along very nicely. Our presiding elder, Rev. D. M. Litaaker, is wide awake to all of the interests of the church and is a most thorough-going, careful elder, and besides being a good business man he is a very fine preacher. He never preaches a common or ordinary sermon, but always gives one something big to think about, and presents it in a different way to any that we have ever heard.

We have had lots of sickness this winter and there is still plenty of sickness among our people. The preacher's family had sickness in it practically all of December, January and half of February, but now spring is coming, the sun is shining, and it seems that everybody wants to get back to regular church work again. God be praised that we have had very few deaths, yet our heart goes out in sympathy to those who have lost loved ones.

We are all going to have to work harder during the rest of the year. Good wishes to the Advocate family.

Taylorville Sunday school is humming. Just look at this report for 1922: General fund, $99.80; missions, $35.22; Children's Home, $79.73; total $214.75; average attendance, 70; chapters read in the Bible, 8741. Capt. W. T. Rowland not only knows how to conduct a train, but also knows how to conduct a Sunday school. He keeps the interest up all the time.

A. R. Bell.

THE TWO SACRAMENTS, THE LORD'S SUPPER AND BAPTISM

"Why should we worry ourselves about them if the people do not know what they stand for?"

"Why should we worry?" The puzzle is we read in 1st Cor. 11:29: "Eateth and drinketh damnation to himself."

No sane man wants to do that. That scares many away from the Lord's supper. Paul did not mean damnation. That Greek word knima never means damnation as we understand the term to mean. Paul said, if properly translated, "If ye drink and eat to gluttony we will be criticised by the world and condemn ourselves—not symbolizing the Lord's broken body and shed blood, we will bring the sacrament into disrepute." The broken body and shed blood should be shown to the world by the small pieces of bread and sip of wine.

The symbol of the Baptism of the Holy Ghost should be with as little water as would show how the Holy Ghost falls on the soul. If we understand these sacraments they teach beautiful lessons. The water shows how God lets the Holy Ghost fall into the soul to regenerate us. The bread, the staff of life, shows us how we must live on Christ as does also the wine or grape juice which was a food in Christ's time. We must feed on Christ after we are born into His kingdom.

By these sacraments we show to the world our faith in His saving grace, and His food for our souls' daily bread till He comes again. We have no right as some claim to omit these till He comes again. J. H. Brendall.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare, and really there is nothing better for coughs. Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"EXCEPT MY PROPERTY"

Bishop Henderson.

I must not be regarded as irreverent when I express my conviction of how multitudes of people sing songs of surrender with very decided reservations. Frances Ridley Havergal has written for us one of the most effective hymns of consecration in our entire hymnal. But note how many of our people sing it:

Take my life and let it be,
Consecrated, Lord, to Thee;
(Except my property).

Take my love; my Lord, I pour
At thy feet its treasure store
(Except my property).

Take myself and I will be Ever, only, all for Thee
(Except my property).

My readers will protest that this ruins the hymn. Certainly it does. It ruins the harmony. It breaks the metre. It destroys the rhythm. But that is exactly what happens when I leave my property out of my surrender to God. If Christ is to be Lord of my life, I must crown Him Lord of my property as well as the Lord of my personality. How futile and how faithless to sing:

All hail the power of Jesus name
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem
And crown Him Lord of all
(Except my property).

Men would not dare to sing it in this fashion. But that is the way countless members of the church live the truth of the hymn called "Coronation." It is no worse to sing it with the lips than it is to say it with the life.

NOTES FROM JAPAN

Dear Mr. Editor:

The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the Japan Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was held in the new Mission House, Kobe, the first of January. Bishop Boaz presided until he departed for America on January 5th. After that time Dr. J. C. C. Newton and Dr. J. T. Meyers acted as presiding officers. We had a very successful session. Dr. W. W. Pinson, Mrs. Pinson, and Miss Mabel K. Howell of the Board of Missions, Nashville, were present. Dr. Pinson and Miss Howell made several inspiring and instructive addresses.

On returning from the mission meeting we found that during our absence we had been pounded—not with ham, bacon, chickens and sugar, but with stones thrown from the street. As a result we were minus eight perfectly good window panes. We have received two similar poundings during the past week. May the good Lord bless the pounder, and cause his poundings to cease. The policemen have told us to "Go anshin nasai," and have promised to lend their efforts in putting a stop to it.

The kind of pounding mentioned, however, I am glad to say, is not representative of the attitude of the Japanese people. As a rule these people are often invited to attend a "kansha kwai," a sort of thanksgiving service. A friend of mine who married last year and who has since been living with his mother-in-law, moved away from her the other day and he held a "kansha kwai." Can you beat that in America?

The other night while Mrs. Shaver and I were returning from prayer meeting, we were attracted to a neighboring temple by the songs and prayers of the people worshipping there. This is an eye temple. There were men and women there with afflicted eyes calling upon the eye god to heal them. I have often seen men and women on their way to or on their way from the hospital stop, and after bathing their eyes with water from a common basin, worship before the temple.

This night (although a very cold night) we saw a woman with bare feet running over the stones between the temple gate and the temple, all the while murmuring a prayer, a prayer for healing. Upon inquiry, we learned that this distance must be gone over one hundred times each day for twenty-one days, with bare feet, in order to secure cleansing.

The Japanese word used to denote the number of Gods in Japan means 8,000,000. But a Japanese told me recently that there were really only a few hundred different gods in Japan. Some of these are made of wood, some of stone, and some of metal. Some of these gods are family gods and are worshipped in the home, while others are worshipped in the shrines and temples. The people worship these gods reverently, earnestly, and frequently by clapping their hands three times and bowing before them. The worshippers often give of their best to these gods. Recently I saw a woman give her god a piece of cake, the best she had. I saw another old woman go about in the temple yard and offer rice to the many stone images that were there. She gave the best that she had. I have seen children forced to clap their hands, bow before the burning candles, and pray. They do not know any better. They are reared this way. While you deplore their ignorance you can't help, somehow, admiring their earnestness. Ours is the task to teach them a better way, a way that leads to the true God, and to eternal life through Him. It is not an easy task. We didn't expect it to be. But we are here to do our best, and we are happy in His service.

A few nights ago there was a driving-the-devil-away night. This feat was accomplished by throwing peas into the devil's face. If peas would drive him away, I certainly would "lay in" a supply. I fear, however, that it will take more than peas to drive the devil out of the lives of those who are so persistent in following him.

Please permit me to say that the work on the Hiroshima circuit is moving along satisfactorily. Many souls are being saved, and quite a number are being brought into the church. We organized a new church on the sacred island of Itsukushima about a week ago. Other places are calling for us. One of the greatest needs on my work at present is for new church buildings. We are still having 'o worship in small, dark Japanese houses.

Mr. Editor, will you permit me to make a suggestion? Well, here it is: Let us have published each week in the good old North Carolina Christian Advocate a news letter from Rutherford College, Weaver College, Trinity College, and from other schools of our church in the state. I think there used to be such a letter published each week from Trinity College. I think all the readers of the Advocate would appreciate it. If not, they ought to. We want to know what is happening at these schools, especially along the lines that are of most interest to the church.

I didn't expect to write such a long letter. "Gomen kudasai."

NEW ALL STEEL COACHES FOR SOUTHERN RAILWAY TRAINS

Atlanta, Ga., March 5.—One hundred new all steel passenger train cars which were ordered by the Southern Railway System in May, 1922, are now being received and placed in service in through limited trains. Forty coaches, ten combined passenger-baggage cars, twenty-five baggage-express cars, twenty postal cars, and five combined mail and baggage cars are included in the order.

The coaches are modern in every respect and have many features for the comfort of passengers, including screened windows and electric lighting of the indirect flood type. Eighty passengers can be comfortably seated.

The combined cars will be operated in trains Nos. 25 and 26, the "Memphis Special," between Washington and Memphis; Nos. 29 and 30, the "Birmingham Special," between Washington and Birmingham; Nos. 137 and 138, the "Atlanta Special," between Washington and Atlanta; and the coaches in the following trains:

Nos. 25 and 26, Washington-Memphis; Nos. 41 and 42, Washington-Chattanooga; Nos. 31 and 32, the "Augusta Special," Washington-Augusta; Nos. 29 and 30, Washington-Birmingham; Nos. 137 and 138, Washington-Atlanta; Nos. 35 and 36, Washington-Atlanta; Nos. 13-28 and 27-14, the "Carolina Special," Cincinnati-Charleston; Nos. 9 and 10, Asheville-Columbia; Nos. 5 and 6, the "Suwanee River Special," Cincinnati-St. Petersburg Fla.; Nos. 7 and 8, the "Kansas City-Florida Special," Kansas City-Jacksonville; Nos. 9 and 10, Atlanta-Jacksonville; Nos. 26 and 27, Atlanta-Jacksonville; Nos. 24 and 25, Atlanta-Macon; Nos. 28 and 29, Atlanta-Macon.

The new cars will release similar all-steel cars which have been in service for a few years which will in turn be paced in other through trains, releasing steel-underframe cars which will take the place of wooden cars, now in service on light lines. It is expected that all this new equipment will be in service by the end of March.

The beam in the eye and the chip on the shoulder are taken from the same tree.—Religious Telescope.

ANNOUNCEMENT

I will be glad to assist anyone in need of a singer during the year in revival work. During March, April and May write me Roanoke Rapids, N. C. My permanent address is 9 Crew St., Atlanta, Ga. R. L. Milam.

SOUTHERN COLLEGE OF CHIRO-PRACTIC—614 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Ivy 0503 or 2122 Atlanta. Students can matriculate on first of each month.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY YOUR PIANO

The Advocate is Now Starting Its First 1923 Piano Club, and You Are Invited to Become a Member and Share in the Benefits and Privileges.

Arrangements have been perfected between the advertising managers of the Advocate and Ludden & Bates, Southern Music House, to continue the Piano Club because it has been found so satisfactory. Every member of the Club is positively protected and the saving that can be made is large. Many people buy pianos every year on the ordinary installment plan, only to find that in a few years their instrument is tin-panny and they feel like apologizing for it instead of feeling proud of it.

The Advocate Piano Club protects you against this outrage. Your instrument is guaranteed by Ludden & Bates, who have been selling Pianos throughout the South for over 50 years. Their guarantee means something, because they are not in business today and out tomorrow. They are always anxious to see that you are entirely satisfied.

Why You Should Join the Club.

Each Club consists of 100 members, who by buying together get their instruments at wholesale price. Understand, you are only responsible for your own purchase, but you make this big saving.

You are extended the most convenient terms of monthly, quarterly or yearly payments based on the lowest net cash price. This means a big saving over the ordinary installment prices, which are usually much higher than cash prices.

These are just some of the attractive features of the Club. There are many others, which will be gladly furnished if you will write Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. Ask for their beautiful catalogue. (adv.)

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Springs,
Box 4 B, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

Science's Discovery Routs Chicken Lice

Mineralized Water Gets Rid of Dusting or Spraying—Birds Delouse Themselves Fine for Baby Chicks and all Poultry

A recent discovery promises to revolutionize all the commonly accepted methods for keeping poultry free from lice and mites. This wonderful product keeps the poultry always lice-free without the poultry raiser doing any work. It is the simplest, easiest, surest and best method ever discovered.

Hick's Lice-Go, which is the name of this remarkable lice remedy, is dropped in the chicken's drinking water. Taken into the system of the bird, it comes out through the oil glands of the skin and every louse or mite leaves the body. It is guaranteed to help the hatchability of the eggs and cannot injure the flavor of the eggs or meat; is harmless to chicks and does not affect the plumage. A few days treatment at the start and then a little added to the drinking water each month is all that is necessary.

Send No Money—just your name and address to Chas. M. Hick & Company, Dept. 356, 1018 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. A card will do. Mr. Hick is so confident that Hick's Lice-Go will get rid of every louse or mite that he will send you two large double strength $1.00 packages for the price of one. When they arrive, pay postman only $1.00 and postage. Sell one to your neighbor and get yours free. If you are not absolutely satisfied after 30 days trial, your money will be refunded. This offer is guaranteed by two big Chicago banks, who say that Mr. Hick will do exactly as he agrees without question or argument. Write today before this remarkable trial offer is withdrawn.

MY LOCAL CHURCH A MISSIONARY CHURCH

The great missionary enterprise is the heart of the church and any church in which this interest is low cannot measure to its full efficiency as a center of power and influence for the gospel of Christ. It should be the prayer and supreme effort of every missionary-hearted woman to have a part in making her church truly a missionary church, and there is a large service which the missionary society, as an organization, can render in bringing this about. The program of your church, if it is a missionary church, must include the following items:

1. Missionary messages from the pulpit at least several times during each year.
2. A Sunday school organized for missionary teaching and giving by having attractive monthly missionary programs.
3. Frequent mid-week prayer services devoted to intercession for our missionary work.
4. A strong missionary committee actively at work directing and perfecting the missionary teaching and service of all the organizations.
5. A yearly school of missions providing a course of study for every class of the membership.
6. Missionary literature supplied through every possible channel to every class of persons in the church and a large list of subscribers to the missionary periodical of the church.
7. A well organized and active Woman's Missionary Society.
8. Additional missionary training for the young people and children through missionary societies distinctly for them, or through the missionary department of the Epworth League.
9. Representatives from the church in the home and foreign fields.
10. A special in the Sunday school or in the regular church budget.

Will you not, as a missionary society, study the above schedule and plan both as individual and as an organization and set on foot as far as you have the opportunity and influence as many of the above lines of work in your church as are not already being operated and put into every missionary organization and department of your church the utmost support and service?

A body of missionary-minded women can do more than you dream of to make your church a church in which the missionary fervor shall be manifested by prayer, service, and gifts.—Bulletin.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL

The Woman's Missionary Council will hold its thirteenth annual meeting in St. Francis Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Mobile, Ala., April 4-11, 1923.

The Council headquarters will be at Hotel Cawthon, St. Francis street. The general chairman of the local committees is Mrs. L. P. Adams. Her address is care of Adams Auto Company, Mobile.

A railway rate of one and one-half fare has been secured according to the certificate plan. Selling date of ticket, March 31-April 6. Validation dates, April 7 and 11. Last honoring date, April 14. An attendance of 250 persons who have paid normal, one way fare of sixty-seven cents or more on going trip is required.

SUBSCRIBE NOW TO THE COUNCIL BULLETIN, 25 CENTS

The Council Bulletin, containing the full proceedings of the Council sessions to be held in Mobile, April 4-11, will be issued this year, as usual. The first issue will contain a full account of the memorial service to our beloved late president, which will be held on Wednesday evening, April 4. Write your name and address plainly and send with 25 cents to Mrs. S. G. Barnett, Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn., and the Council Bulletin will be sent you as soon as it comes from the press.

FEDERATION OF METHODIST WOMEN

The New Hanover Federation of Methodist women met Friday afternoon, February 23, at Grace church, with Mrs. L. O. Ellis, president, presiding, and was attended by representatives of the various churches of the county.

Rev. A. L. Ormond, of Fifth Avenue church, read the scripture lesson, and Rev. Mr. Hobbs of Epworth church led in prayer. Mr. Ormond gave a brief sketch of woman's advancement through the love and power of Jesus Christ, which led to a discussion of woman in her field of duties to the home, church and foreign land, making clear why every woman should enroll with some missionary society.

It is the intention of the federation to make possible a complete education through Scarritt Training School for a Wilmington district girl, who is now a student in Brevard Training School.

Mrs. E. S. Collins sweetly sang a favorite selection while an offering for the establishment of this scholarship was taken.

The program was then turned over to Mrs. G. L. Clendenin of Grace church, who in a very few words made the ladies feel they were not among strangers.

A brief sketch of the work that is going on, existing conditions and improvements in Korea was given by Miss Ida Hawken, who has recently returned from that foreign field. She also told what the Centenary movement had meant to the Koreans. A solo of unusual beauty and sweetness was sung by Miss Felker of Grace church.

During the social hour which followed, the ladies of Grace church served a delicious ice course.

Mrs. E. J. Callahan.

NATIONAL NEGRO HEALTH WEEK APRIL 1-7

The ninth annual National Negro Health Week, which is now being planned, should secure a more general interest in an understanding of health problems and health education than any which has preceded it.

In accordance with the request of the Annual Tuskegee Negro Conference, co-operating with other influential organizations, an invitation has been extended to all organizations, agencies, and newspapers to unite in an effort to reduce preventable sickness and deaths and to increase vitality and resistance to disease, which will tend to increase the well-being, earning capacity, and service of the healthy citizen, to home, community, and country.

A splendid program has been prepared, including lectures by ministers, doctors, nurses, and other qualified persons. One day will be set aside for Hygiene Day, on which health films, slides, and exhibits will be used. Special emphasis is being put on the Fly and Mosquito Day, Tuberculosis Day, Children's Health, Church Sanitation, and General Clean-Up Day.

Tuskegee Institute will be glad to furnish or co-operate in helping any individual or group to receive the necessary health literature.—Bulletin.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

It is with regret that we chronicle the death of our friend and co-worker,

Miss Mollie Bridgers, sister of Mrs. Geo. D. Bizzell, Goldsboro, N. C. Her death occurred December 20, 1922.

For many years she was a devoted and loyal member of St. Paul church.

We, as members of the Woman's Missionary Society, resolve:

First, That we extend our sincere sympathies to the bereaved family in their great loss. She was always an interested, generous, active member of the society, and we miss her from our midst.

Second, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be placed upon the minutes of the society, and one be sent to the N. C. Christian Advocate.

Mrs. W. H. Cobb,
Mrs. J. W. Daniels,
Mrs. Junius Sloucomb.

NOT

It sighs low in every heart.

We hear it, each and all—
A song of those who answer not,
However we may call.
Then thro' the silence of the breast
We see them as of yore—
The kind, the brave, the true, the sweet,
Who walk with us no more.

'Tis hard to take the burden up,
When these have laid it down;
They brightened all the joy of life,
They softened every frown;
But oh, 'tis good to think of them,
When we are troubled sore!
Thanks be to God that such have been,
Though they are here no more!

More homelike seems the vast unknown,
Since they have entered there;
To follow them were not so hard,
Wherever they may fare;
They cannot be where God is not,
On any sea or shore;
Whate'er betides, thy love abides,
Our God, forevermore!
—Exchange.

Dear Mrs. Wilson:

I have received a request signed "A Perplexed Member," asking me to explain through the Advocate column what each member of the missionary auxiliary is expected to contribute to the conference expense fund and how much to the relief and retirement fund. Will you give me space for the following, which I copy from "Helps for Missionary Societies":

"Each member is asked to pay ten cents a year toward the relief and retirement fund."

"Each conference is allowed to fix an amount that will be asked of each member for the purpose of meeting the expenses of the conference society, such as the travel of the conference officers, the holding of district meetings, paying for postage and stationery, and the purchase of leaflets and other literature. This fund is known as the conference expense fund and should be emphasized in each auxiliary, as dues and pledges are not allowed to be used for local expenses."

In our conference fifty cents a year has been fixed as the amount asked from each member for the conference expense fund. This amount with the ten cents a year for relief and retirement fund, and the dues, which are two dollars and forty cents a year, makes a total of three dollars a year for each member besides the voluntary pledge.

Hoping this will be quite clear, I am,
Cordially yours,
Mrs. P. N. Peacock, Treas.

We would suggest that all "perplexed members" provide themselves with "Helps for Missionary Societies" from Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. The cost is small, only 10 cents each, and it is more than worth that price.

These are some suggestive "Don'ts for Missionary Societies" taken from The Woman's Missionary Friend, the missionary magazine of the M. E. church, which, by the way, is a splendid paper. We hope our auxiliaries will read these and profit thereby.

Don't let your auxiliary get into a rut.

Don't forget to invite non-members to the meetings.

Don't fail to have well prepared programs.

Don't say "It can't be done" or "I haven't time."

Don't let a few do all the work; use every member in the auxiliary.

Don't fail to advertise your society meetings in every way possible.

Don't miss reading the missionary magazine (The Voice) from cover to cover.

Don't think that money can be raised only by suppers and entertainments.

Don't neglect the sick and the shut-ins. Use the social service department.

Don't fail to have Miss Faith, Miss Enthusiasm and Miss Hopeful present at all the meetings.

Don't fail to pray daily for the missionary society.

Don't think the auxiliary is doing all it can do.

Don't forget that standing still is ceasing to live.

Don't use only those who have special talent, hunt up and develop latent talent.

Don't allow the text book to be used in mission study circles. Prepare the lesson at home.

Don't have long, dry papers.

Don't feel that the indifferent or opposing woman cannot be reached.

Don't overlook the timid woman who cannot do public work. She will frequently do fine committee work.

ST. JOHN'S-GIBSON CHARGE

A week of intensive training was given our Sunday school workers of St. John's and Gibson charge, Rockingham district, ending last Wednesday night. Meeting in Gibson church for six successive evenings, these workers, brought together under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. A. J. Parker, attended classes taught by Miss Keene and the writer, and gave themselves earnestly and enthusiastically to the study of their Sunday school tasks and how better to meet them. Thirty or more officers, teachers and prospective workers from Gibson and St. John's Sunday schools, including a few from other denominations, took advantage of this training opportunity. Eight or ten of this number will answer the examination questions for a certificate of credit on the standard training course. All expressed themselves pleased with the week's work, and we are expecting to see results in terms of more effective teaching and training.

OUR SCOTLAND COUNTY FOLK

A week in Scotland county, in the heart of that great agricultural section centering about Gibson or Laurinburg, is enough to convince anyone that these are a people who really "live at home and board at the same place." With their broad acres and fertile fields, their magnificent homes with modern conveniences, they are giving themselves not only to the production of cotton and pure-bred hogs and cattle, but also to the development of Christian men and women. There is the soil which produces cotton two bales to the acre, and theirs is the environment out of which have come such leaders in church and state as the Peeles, the Gibsons, the Neals, and others.

SUPT. WILLIE H. GIBSON

Mr. Willie H. Gibson, a progressive Scotland county farmer, has recently become superintendent of our Sunday school at Gibson, succeeding Mr. W. D. Reynolds, who resigned to become teacher of an adult class, and already there are evidences tending to prove the wisdom of his selection for this important position. Working in close relation with his pastor, Rev. A. J. Parker, and with his corps of teachers and officers, he is setting about to improve the organization and extend its sphere of usefulness. There has been organized a Cradle Roll department, with Mrs. T. J. Adams as superintendent, and a Home department, with Mrs. A. J. Parker as superintendent, and both have started off quite promisingly. Following close on the heels of the non-standard training school just closed, several Wesley classes are in the process of organization, and Graded Lessons are about to be introduced for the Beginner children. He is also securing our official Program of Work with the view to building his school up to the point where it will rank as a standard school. Superintendent Gibson is awake to the responsibilities and opportunities of his office and is going about faithfully to meet them. He is fortunate in having a splendid corps of teachers and helpers and, we believe, the school is fortunate in having them all.

OUR CENTENARY PLEDGES

A study of the Centenary pledges in the Sunday schools of the North Carolina conference shows the following interesting facts:

Amount pledged .....	$76,532.65
Amount paid 1919 .....	5,799.51
Amount paid 1920 .....	8,400.76
Amount paid 1921 .....	6,497.66
Amount paid 1922 .....	4,607.40
Total paid .....	25,305.33
Due and unpaid end of 1922	51,227.32

Our first object, Mr. Superintendent, should be the paying of our pledges in full, and it should be our aim to do this in a manner that will prove of spiritual and educational value to our Sunday school. Our second, but as some one has said, by no means secondary, task should be to get our school to continue systematic missionary giving.

If your Sunday school's pledge is in the form of a recurring special, and is paid up to date, why not retain this special as a definite and continuous object for missionary giving?

If your school has not been taking missionary specials but merely giving the offerings of Missionary Day to missions in general, why not take a missionary special so as to render concrete the work your school is doing, thus contributing to the educational value of your missionary giving?

For information concerning these specials, write L. L. Gobbel, Durham, N. C. Send all payments on your Centenary pledges to Col. John E. Edgerton, Treasurer, Box 600, Nashville, Tenn.

EASTER AND EVANGELISM

There are just three Sundays between now and Easter. Last Sunday was Decision Day in our Sunday schools, and doubtless many boys and girls decided definitely to unite with the church. Some of our pastors and Sunday school workers will use the time between now and Easter to prepare these candidates for membership. There is something about Easter time that makes it especially appropriate for receiving members into the church. Let us give prayerful and careful attention to this important work.

HAMLET SOON WILL BUILD

Our Sunday school at Hamlet is to have a modern Sunday school building. Plans for a three-story structure have been made, and Rev. W. C. Martin, the pastor, says that it is the purpose of the building committee to begin the construction this month. The building will be 50 by 74 feet, three stories high, and will cost about $30,000. Mr. Martin says the building will be thoroughly departmental and plans have been approved by our joint commission on architecture.

ON THE PASQUOTANK CHARGE

Rev. E. L. Stack, of the Pasquotank charge, is organizing teacher-training classes in his Sunday schools. Writing to the editor of these paragraphs a few days ago about another matter, he added a line to the effect that he is starting classes at three of his churches and expects to teach "Principles of Religious Training."

TRAINING WORK AT RAEFORD

Training classes started some weeks ago at Raeford by Supt. L. E. Reaves and Pastor Jas. H. Frizelle, with Prof. W. B. Covington and Prof. W. P. Hawfield as teachers, are enjoying their work so well that they will take up additional courses. Mr. Frizelle has just written for a dozen sets of examination questions for one of the classes, which has been studying "The Pupil," saying that it was ready for the examinations and that the other class would be ready in a few more Sundays. Raeford Sunday school has adopted this training work as a definite part of the school's program.

SCHOOL AT MOREHEAD CITY

We are looking forward to a pleasant week in Morehead City. March 18-23 is the date set for a non-standard training school for the Sunday school workers there. Rev. W. A. Cade, the pastor, is preparing the way for the work at his end of the line, and he writes encouragingly of the prospects for a good attendance. Three courses will be offered, as follows: Elementary course, Miss Keene; "Principles of Religious Training," Rev. Mr. Cade; and "The Sunday School," L. L. Gobbel.

WE ARE NOW IN FAISON

Miss Keene and the writer are this week at Faison conducting a non-standard training school for the Faison-Warsaw charge. At this writing (just before the opening) prospects are that there will be a good attendance upon this school. Rev. C. M. Lance and various committees are in charge of local preparations.

Western North Carolina Conference

TUITION

Every once in the while I run across a Methodist layman who has been talked into making a liberal contribution to the non-denominational Sunday school work on the assurance that the money is needed to promote mountain work in Western North Carolina. In many instances these public spirited men, because of the alarming situation presented, give more at one time through this channel than they have ever given their denominational Sunday school work. Not only the Methodists, but the Baptists and Presbyterians are each doing more constructive work in the mountains than all non-denominational agencies combined. Our Baptist laymen have discovered this long ago and our Methodist laymen are finding it out. No Sunday school program can successfully be divorced from the church of which it is a part. We pay our tuition and learn.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY

By the time this appears in print blanks will have been sent to all Western North Carolina conference Sunday school superintendents for their use in securing, free of charge, Sunday School Day programs. This feature day should be observed on the third Sunday in April if convenient. If not observed then the first convenient time should be selected. We are going to do business with Sunday School Day this year.

DECEMBER CROP

The official report from the Leadership Training Department at Nashville, Tenn., has just reached this office. It contains good reading matter. It says that during the closing month of June of 1922 the following individual credits were issued:

- Miss Lillie B. Young, Greensboro, two certificates.
- Miss Julia Campbell, Greensboro, one certificate.
- Rev. M. W. Heckard, Gastonia, three certificates.
- Rev. J. H. Brendall, Coleridge, one certificate.
- Rev. G. W. Williams, Mount Airy, one certificate.

Reading further the report points out that 118 credits were enrolled from the Greensboro school and 108 from the Winston-Salem school.

The December crop of Sunday school "wide-awakes" amounts to 234.

FAIRVIEW CIRCUIT

The Fairview circuit is composed of four churches located in the rich valleys of Cane and Brushy creeks just under the summits of the Blue Ridge, some ten miles out from Asheville. Rev. A. H. Whisner, the talented pastor of this charge, joined our conference some twenty years ago, but because of ill health had to give up his work. After regaining his health while living in Washington City he came back to us last fall and is now doing mighty good work. I have never seen better prepared reports than he read to Presiding Elder H. C. Sprinkle and his quarterly conference last Saturday. He is alive to every interest of the church and finds especial interest in promoting the development of his young people. Brother Sprinkle turned part of this quarterly conference into a Sunday school institute and we had a good time at old Sharon church Saturday and Sunday, February 24th and 25th. Some mighty fine people live on the Fairview circuit. Even though they are small their Sunday schools run the year round.

FLAT ROCK-FLETCHER

Hurrying from a good dinner Brother Sprinkle drove his Ford coupe at a steady gait and after ten miles we were at the village of Naples, on the highway between Asheville and Hendersonville, where the Flat Rock-Fletcher circuit quarterly conference was held following a powerful sermon by the Elder. After Bro. M. W. Dargan, pastor, had reported things in fine shape, the Sunday school cause was presented to an appreciative audience. Dargan and his crowd are doing things. Their smile is worth while.

TRYON

It was well after five o'clock and twenty-five miles and the Blue Ridge lay between us and Tryon, where the hustling Sprinkle had an engagement at seven-thirty. So off we sped with the Elder at the wheel. All was easy till we reached the incline beyond the Ridge, where we trusted in God and Sprinkle's judgment. I have crossed the Ridge at various points from Aलगany to Cherokee, but this trip about got me. Nightfall was at hand and the road was narrow and terribly crooked, so that the ten miles of ups and downs were thrilling.

But we got to Tryon all right, where some mighty fine people live and there the Elder preached while I "scotched" and talked Sunday school. Pastor R. P. Fikes had good reports. The Tryon people are enlarging their church so as to do better Sunday school work. I'm going to Tryon again.

A PREACHERS' MEETING

Bright and early Monday morning we were up and on our way to Asheville for the preachers' meeting at ten-thirty. Here we found Miss Virginia Jenkins talking to the pastors about the church and the small child, and Rev. R. M. Courtney talking about the church and the Centenary. I talked about the Asheville Standard Training School. It was enthusiastically decided to have the school. The date set was May 6-11. Six courses will be given. Lots more was done at this preachers' meeting, but there was no smoking in it.

MORGANTON

Returning from the skyland I stopped off at Morganton to be with Joe Kjellander and his workers' council Monday night. I never refuse an opportunity to get in touch with the Morganton people. They do things. Their Sunday school is growing mightily. Last Sunday they had 83 men scholars and the beginning has just been made. At this meeting Miss Jenkins outlined Sunday school fundamentals and I talked standards to the folks. In spite of a rain storm there was a full attendance, among the number being the pastor, Rev. H. R. Ware, and Revs. J. C. Gentry and J. M. Price, pastors on the Morganton circuit.

North Carolina Conference

ANNOUNCEMENT EXTRAORDINARY

The Epworth League of the North Carolina conference meets in annual assembly June 18-24, 1923, at Morehead City, in the state of North Carolina. It is hereby announced that a Poster Exhibit will be held in connection with this assembly, and each district is invited to submit posters.

The posters are to be on cardboard, 16x24 inch cardboard to be white or colored.

Posters can be drawn in pencil, ink, crayon, charcoal, pastel, water color, or oil. In the event that none of these mediums are used, paper "cutouts" may be pasted on cardboard to make a poster design.

These posters are to advertise some phase of our league work or meetings. The district having the best poster exhibit will be awarded ten one year subscriptions to the Epworth Era.

All posters must be mailed or delivered to Rev. Philip Schwartz, P. O. Box 120, Raleigh, N. C., on or before May 31, 1923. Posters sent forward after that date will not be considered!

Philip Schwartz, Director.

CABINET MEETING AT WILSON

The mid-winter meeting of the Cabinet of the North Carolina Conference Epworth League was held in Hotel Cherry, Wilson, February 8, with President F. S. Love presiding.

Rev. W. A. Cade brought an inspirational message from the meeting held in Nashville, Tenn., stressing the spiritual tendency of assemblies in general and of our assembly to be held in the early summer—June 18-24, at Morehead City.

Edna Wilkins presented the Intermediate and Junior problems, and her message from Nashville was a plea for an Intermediate and Junior secretary to take entire charge of the work, said secretary to be appointed by the district secretary for each district.

A creditable amount has been forwarded to Col. Edgerton for the Africa Special, and the months of February and March are going to see practically all of the pledges to the Africa Special paid in full.

The real work of the evening was the assembly plans. President Love has secured two of the most prominent men in Methodism to be with us as instructors and platform speakers. This was a strong nucleus upon which to build, and with the other instructors and speakers whom they are trying to secure, forecast one of the very best meetings of its kind ever held in the state. They are adding one of the most attractive features for this assembly—a real singer to direct this important part of any meeting. Several were suggested, from whom one is to be selected. The appointment of a dean is being considered and Mrs. F. S. Love was appointed chaperone general.

SCOTLAND NECK

The Epworth League of the Scotland Neck Methodist church held the first meeting of its new year Tuesday, February 27, 1923, in the Baraca room of the church. Many leaguers attended and the program was carried through with a fine spirit. At the opening "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus" was sung, and a passage from John 6:24-40 was read. We were then led in prayer.

The following program entitled, "The Wheels of the Epworth League" was rendered:

Reading—Ten Epworth Leaguers.

Remarks by the president.

The president's place.

The position of the vice president, the secretary and treasurer, the corresponding secretary and the Epworth Era Agent.

The work of the first department.

The work of the second department.

The work of the third department.

The work of the fourth department.

What the Council is, and why it is important.

All these were splendid talks and were enjoyed by all.

The last number on the program, a song "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" was then sung and the meeting was closed by the League benediction.

Musette Kitchin, Cor. Sec.

A NEW LEAGUE

On Wednesday night, February 21, 1923, a Senior Epworth League was organized in Granville Street Methodist church, Halifax, N. C., by Rev. J. L. Midgette and wife.

We have a charter membership of forty-four and we hope soon to have every man and woman in the town not already engaged in religious work.

The young people have entered into this new work with enthusiasm.

The officers are: President, Perry Mellikin; vice president, Linville E. Midgette; secretary, Miss Ruth Hancock; treasurer, Hugh Webb; 1st Supt., Miss Mary Richardson; 2nd Supt., Miss Mildred Campbell; 3rd Supt., Charles Boykin; 4th Supt., Willie L. Johnson; Cor. Sec., Edwin Coppedge; Era agent, Miss Louise Jennings.

E. F. Coppedge.

Western North Carolina Conference

MARION DISTRICT INSTITUTE

Miss Grace Bradley, field secretary for the Western North Carolina Epworth League conference, states that arrangements have been made and a splendid program prepared for a Marión district efficiency institute at Rutherford College, March 16-18, at which time delegates from the district will attend in great numbers.

B. L. Lunsford, vice president of the conference and secretary of Marion district, states that he has been receiving communications from the various chapters in his district and a large attendance is expected. Each chapter is expected to send four delegates and the president of the chapter, and that the delegates attending every session of the institute will be awarded credits for their Christian Culture certificates.

Mr. E. O. Harbin of Nashville, Tenn., who is identified with the general headquarters and author of Phonology, will be in attendance at this institute and contribute largely toward the various lines of instruction given. The slogan is "Be a Live Wire," and the live wire idea is carried throughout the program.

Dr. Z. Paris, presiding elder, Prof. T. A. Holton, Rev. W. E. Poovey, Rev. N. C. Williams, Rev. M. T. Hinshaw, and many others are to take part in this program. The program begins Friday evening, March 16th, at 7:30, with an address by Prof. Holton, followed by a social hour, and closes Sunday afternoon at 3:30 with a Fourth department discussion by Miss Viola Cline, of Gilkey, N. C.

B. L. Lunsford, Dis. Sec.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Blue Ridge Breezes

BY REV. J. M. ROWLAND

THERE is no land more enchanting than the mountains of the South. Their beauty equals anything on the globe, and their breezes are good for the soul. The people have flavor all their own, and you have missed much if you do not know them. Some efforts to picture this land on the printed page have failed because the writers did not know the mountains and their people.

The author of Blue Ridge Breezes for ten years lived in the mountains. His heart was full of love and sympathy, and his eyes saw and his artistic soul produced in Blue Ridge Breezes one of the best pictures of this enchanted land.

It is full of action, spice, humor, pathos, romance, and human blood. You should not be satisfied until Blue Ridge Breezes blow on your heart.

A FEW COMMENTS:

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

The Oxford Orphanage proposes to erect a modern school building for the children of that institution. This timely undertaking has the endorsement of every member of this noble order. Every orphanage in the state seems to be going forward in new enterprises except our own beloved Methodist Orphanage. Shall we lag when others are going forward and the need imperative?

"The board of directors of the Orphanage will meet in Raleigh Saturday to perfect plans for the new high school building which will be built as soon as possible. The plans now are to have it completed by school opening time in September. The building will be fireproof. We will have the service of Mr. J. J. Blair, director of school house planning, to assist in getting us a model school building. The architect has not yet been selected and the contract, of course, will not be let until after the plans are adopted."—Orphan's Friend.

"For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required." These words are as true today as when Christ uttered them many centuries ago. I often wonder how some people of great means and attainments can expect to escape the stern law of justice and equity when they have to give an account of their stewardship. There are so many needs today which are not supplied. Selfishness is contradictory to Christianity. "But whoso hath this world's goods and seeth his brother hath need, and shutteth his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" This question, with an eternal significance, ought to ring in our consciences and arouse those who are shutting up their bowels of compassion from those who need.

A few weeks ago I intimated that we needed a seven-passenger car to aid us in taking our singing class to the churches on Sundays. When the spring opens and the roads become better, we would like to visit many churches with our fine class, but we shall be denied that privilege unless we can get a good car. It would be a fine thing for some church to make us a present of one. We need to get closer to the people and let them know just what we are accomplishing. If we had a good car we could get to them easier and much cheaper. Let's get that seven-passenger car!

The fourth Sunday in February gave me my first opportunity to address the congregation at Parker's church on the Lillington circuit. The church is about fifty miles from Raleigh, and the roads were almost perfect. The trip down was easily made in two hours and I did not feel the least bit tired by the ride. For a winter congregation the attendance was good. Possibly it would have been otherwise had they known that a visitor was going to conduct the services. I am indebted to Brother C. R. Ross for the opportunity to meet the good people of Parker's. Brother J. H. Williams gave me a pressing invitation to take dinner with him which I gladly accepted. The entertainment and fellowship was of the highest order. Upon my return home I felt like singing "The End of a Perfect Day."

The Methodist Orphanage Alumni Association will hold its annual reunion at the orphanage during the Easter holidays. The girls are getting up a good play for the reunion. Our boys will give a minstrel for the pleasure of the old boys and girls. We expect to have an interesting baseball game between our present team and the boys who used to play on teams when they were here. On Monday we will have our usual Easter picnic at Lassiter's mill pond. The alumni will hold a very important meeting some time during the reunion. We are planning great things and we are expecting the biggest crowd we have ever had the privilege of entertaining at any of the previous reunions. Our former sons and daughters are cordially invited to be present.

Within a few days we expect that the landscape gardener will select locations for the buildings which the board of trustees intend to erect as soon as sufficient funds become available. The first building to go up will be the baby cottage. We need a few thousand dollars more to add to the amount that we now have in the bank with which to complete the building. Here and there I have found friends who have promised to give us a lift before we begin actual construction, and we are counting on them to come to our relief now. Let me say to those who have given not to be impatient over the delay. We will have our dreams fulfilled in the near future.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

If it isn't one thing it is another, and if it is not that it is something else. The last absorbing experience at The Home has been vaccination and sore arms.

It doesn't take much smallpox scare in a community before intelligent people begin to consider the advisability of getting vaccinated. A few rumors, a few items in the newspapers, and the superintendent consulted Dr. Gray about having the children vaccinated.

The doctor thought it should be done, and made arrangements with the health department for assistance in getting it done conveniently. So easily are such things accomplished now-a-days that two hours after Dr. Gray came out, with an assistant doctor and two nurses, all the children and such grown folks as showed up were all vaccinated.

The doctor said that probably some might be a little sick from the vaccination, and recommended a dose of castor oil for all such. So we all kept as well as possible. For, notwithstanding the undeniable merits of castor oil and its established favor with doctors and matrons and other guardians of the young, it has never risen to any degree of popularity with those who oftenest have it to swallow. Still, in the course of two weeks, a considerable amount of the half-a-gallon bottle full that John M. brought out from town has managed to get itself consumed somehow.

Billie and James H. have been in the infirmary with deep colds for several days, but are well on the mend now. A bag of a dozen fresh eggs sent them the other day when they had begun to feel like eating, made them smile broadly.

Edward C., who has been in the hospital so long, is getting well too. Mr. Wood went to see him this afternoon, and Edward said that he could move his leg now and that it was not as long as the other. Three months in a hospital must seem a long time to a little boy.

Miss Minnie Hire, who has been matron at the little girls' cottage for a long time, feels that she needs a rest and change, and has resigned. The

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

Some time ago some of us bought from The Perry Pictures Company, Malden, Mass., a number of large pictures for the living rooms of the cottages. The pictures came and we bought the glass for them over in town. The frames were to be made in The Home shop out of some nice walnut lumber that Mr. Binkley had there. But we were a long time getting the picture frames made. The poet never said a truer thing than when he wrote that "Art is long." She is pretty sure to be long in all her dimensions. In the press of more necessary things, picture frames very easily get classed as trifles, and postponed for a convenient season. And idle time is as rare on The Hill as roses in January.

However, Mr. Binkley did not forget the frames, and was able to get one made occasionally, and finally the whole sixteen were sent down. Getting the glass fitted and the pictures trimmed and the backboard tacked on was no short-time job. Margaret put in a whole day of steady work at it, and is getting them hung as the boys have time to help.

But what matters time and trouble if the final results are satisfactory? The frames were all that good pictures need wish—handsome walnut, brown in color to match the sepia tints of the pictures, well finished and well made.

Only the pictures in the living rooms of the boys' building have been hung so far. They add more than one could well have imagined to the attractiveness of the room.

The titles of the pictures bought are: Washington Crossing the Delaware, by Leutze.

The Horse Fair, by Rosa Bonheur. Convent of Cappussino. Grand Canal and Franchette's Palace.

The Lake, by Corrot.

Return of the Mayflower, by Boughton.

Sir Galahad, by Watts. Pilgrims Going to Church, by Boughton.

The Divine Shepherd, by Murillo. Christ and the Doctors, by Hofmann. Three Horse Heads, by Herring. Can't You Talk, by Holmes. The Shepherdess, by Lerolle. Mother and Child, by Murillo. The Gleaners, by Millet. Feeding Her Birds, by Millet. A Helping Hand, by Renouf. Martha Mann Wood.

RUNAWAY HIPPIITY

Grandma Bunny was getting ready to go out. "My dear," said she to Mrs. Bunny, "no nice rabbit ever ties her bonnet strings behind her ears!" Then she tied hers carefully in front of her ears and started out to do the marketing.

Grandma Bunny was a well-bred rabbit. She was most careful about her person and her manners. Her buttons were never missing or loose; her petticoat never showed the slightest bit below her dress, and her bonnet strings were always tied properly in front of her ears.

Those were just the reasons why Hippity Rabbit was somewhat afraid of his grandmother, for of course such a strict grandmother might sometimes seem cross to small rabbits who were likely to get their paws and faces dirty at any time or lose buttons anywhere. Hippity had even been known to hide sometimes when he saw his grandmother coming.

It was a snowy wintry day when Grandma Bunny started out to do the marketing, and as she was about to turn White Birch Corner to call on an old friend she saw footprints in the snow. Adjusting her lorgnette, which is a pair of glasses with a long handle, she leaned over to examine the footprints more closely.

"Why—why!" she exclaimed. "Those do appear to be my grandson Hippity's footsteps! I shall see what mischief he is up to now, so far from home and running so fast instead of walking properly, as he should. I wonder what he is after."

Grandmother knew that Hippity had been running very fast because his hind feet had struck the snow in front of his forefeet at every jump, and the footprints were very far apart.

All the while Hippity was running father and farther away. He knew that it was naughty to go so far when his mother had told him not to, but he was having such fun! It seemed to Hippity that he had not had such fun for a long time. He made long jumps in the clean, white snow, sometimes straight ahead and sometimes round and round in circles. He kept hopping and hopping and hopping until he began to get a little tired and hungry. He hopped along more slowly, and it was then that he smelled something good. He wiggled his little nose up and down very fast and sniffed and sniffed, but he could not tell whether he smelled parsnips, which his mother sometimes brought him, or oats that he himself found in the fields now and then; but he hopped gently in the direction that the smell came from until to his great surprise he came to a little house quite unlike any that he had ever seen before.

Hippity was sure that none of his friends had ever built such a queer house. It was rough and not at all pleasing except for the good smell that came from inside. Stranger than anything else was the fact that the house seemed to have only one door, wide and low and easily seen. That was strange, because no rabbit or squirrel or field mouse or any other wise little animal that Hippity knew would ever think for a minute of building a house with only one door, and that one in plain sight! Why, just that morning he had heard his mother say, "We must have another door; six are not enough."

"But still," thought Hippity, "whoever built that house must have a fine dinner inside," and he wished that he had been invited.

Now Mother Bunny had told him many times never to go into strangers' houses, and always to knock on the door when he went to the neighbors'. But Hippity said to himself, "There does not seem to be anyone at home, and if I just crawl quietly in, perhaps I can look round and come out before anyone knows." He did want to get closer to that smell!

Four little steps and he was at the strange door. Two more very careful little steps and he was inside. It was a plain house, not at all homelike, but one more step away hung a beautiful parsnip. Hippity wanted it more than he had wanted anything for a long time, for he was hungry. No one was there to stop him from eating it, or, better still, dragging it home. How proud they would all be of him! So he set his little teeth in it and gave a tug.

There was a big noise then. Thump! It seemed as if the whole house fell right down over him and the door was gone! Hippity had walked into a trap made by some boys who wanted a rabbit to play with; but he did not know that it was a trap. He knew that it was dark and strange; and the longer he stayed the more frightened he became.

He put his nose into all the corners, one at a time, but there were no cracks in any of them. He stood up very tall to look carefully at the ceiling, but there was not the smallest opening in the ceiling. He smelled all about where that strange door had been but found no way to get out. He even scratched at the floor in the hope of finding a hole that would go down deep underground and then come out into the open air; but wherever he dug his paws struck something hard, and he had to give it up.

Sitting very still and shivery, Hippity began to wonder how long he should have to stay there. Perhaps till dinner time! Perhaps longer! Maybe no one would ever come to let him out! His dear, nice, warm, soft mother! Why had he ever left her? Why hadn't he stayed near home as she had told him to? He remembered all the bad things he had done, all the times he had run away, the birthday cake he had eaten before the party, the flowers he had nibbled off his mother's best hat and the times when he had hid from his grandmother. He was terribly sorry for everything, but for himself most of all.

Suddenly there was a noise outside. Hippity was so frightened that he jumped wildly from side to side of the little house and bumped his nose and the top of his head; then, trembling, he shrank back into a corner.

The sweetest voice he had ever heard said, "Hippity, what are you doing in there?"

Hippity's heart jumped all round inside him for joy. It was his own grandmother! Never till then did he know how much he loved her. She lifted the top of the trap, and Hippity flew out. How good it felt to be out on the beautiful sunlit snow again!

Grandmother took his paw and on the way home she told him that she had followed his footprints to the strange house and how glad she was that she had got there before anything worse had happened to him. Grandma Bunny was old and wise and knew a trap when she saw one.

"Hippity," she said as they were going home, "you are very dear to me."

And Hippity said, "Granny, I love you." — Marguerite Benjamin, in Youth's Companion.

Twenty times, day and night, He cured it, and died an archdeacon.

A Kansas farmer had just built a big barn. One day as he was setting off for town he told his two sons to cut a small hole in one of the sides so that the cat could get in or out at will.

The boys cut a hole just beside the big barn door, but when the farmer returned and saw it, he was displeased.

"Why can't I depend on you boys to do a single thing right?" he exclaimed angrily. "Don't you know that hole is in the wrong place?"

"Why?" asked the boys.

The farmer fairly snorted. Leaping from his buggy, he seized the barn door and swung it open, and, of course, it covered the aperture.

"Now, where is your cat hole?" He shouted. "How in the name of sense can the cat get into the barn when the door's open?"—Youth's Companion.

Standard Training School to be held about the middle of April. It is practically assured that Lenoir, Granite Falls, Hickory, Newton and adjoining territory will come together for an honest-to-goodness week of training for better Sunday school work. Kirkpatrick says, "What ought to be done can be done," and that their ought to be a school at Hickory.

A BIG TIME

Nice, neat little folders announcing the program of the Men's Wesley Bible Class of Central Methodist church, Albemarle, read as follows: "The Men's Wesley Bible Class of Central Methodist church invites you to attend the much-talked-of banquet Thursday evening, March the first, at 8 o'clock." Further down on the folder it read, "The time, Thursday, March 1st, 1923, at 8 p. m. The place, second floor of Snuggs & Heath's new building on Main street. What you will get, good music, good fun, good eats. What it will cost, nothing—leave your pocketbook at home."

Among the speakers announced by toastmaster and teacher of the class, R. L. Smith, were Messrs. W. T. Huckabee, Rev. C. M. Pickens, C. A. Reap, O. H. Phillips, W. A. Smith, S. J. Horton and John D. Heath of Albemarle, and John C. Sikes, Monroe, Judge W. F. Harding, Charlotte, and your humble servant. A male quartet and an orchestra gave splendid musical numbers. It was mighty good to be with the 130 men who attended the banquet with the idea of enjoying a good social evening together and at the same time promote the building of an elaborate Sunday school annex to the present splendid church edifice. The Men's Bible Class of Albemarle is composed of the hustling little city's leaders and it is doing great things in the name of the Lord. The class is built around a good organization supporting R. L. Smith, its teacher and one of the strong laymen of North Carolina Methodism.

IF SICK TODAY! TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

I discovered a vegetable compound that does the work of dangerous, sickening calomel and I want every reader of this paper to buy a bottle for a few cents and if it doesn't straighten you up better and quicker than salivating calomel just go back to the store and get your money back.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your thirty feet of bowels of the sour bile and constipation poison which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable.

I guarantee that one spoonful of this harmless liquid liver medicine will relieve the headache, biliousness, coated tongue, ague, malaria, sour stomach or any other distress caused by a torpid liver as quickly as a dose of vile, nauseating calomel, besides it will not make you sick or keep you from a day's work.

Calomel is poison—it's mercury—it attacks the bones, often causing rheumatism. Calomel is dangerous. It sickens—while my Dodson's Liver Tone is safe, pleasant and harmless. Eat anything afterwards, because it can not salivate. Give it to the children because it doesn't upset the stomach or shock the liver. Take a spoonful tonight and wake up feeling fine and ready for a full day's work.

THE WORLD'S BIBLE

Christ has no hands but our hands
To do His work today;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in His way;
He has no tongues but our tongues
To tell men how He died;
He has not help but our help
To bring them to His side.

We are the only Bible
The careless world will read;
We are the sinner's gospel;
We are the scoffer's creed;
We are the Lord's last message,
Given in deed and word:
What if the type is crooked?
What is the print is blurred?

What if our hands are busy
With other work than His?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's allurements is?
What if our tongues are speaking
Of things His lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help Him
And hasten His return?
—Annie Johnson Flint.

"I'm glad the sky is painted blue;
And the earth is painted green;
And such a lot of nice fresh air
Is sandwiched in between."

IN MEMORIAM

JOHNSON—Alice Louise Johnson was born May 15, 1878, died February 7, 1923, aged 44 years, eight months and 22 days. She took sick with influenza December 27, pneumonia following, which caused her death. She was a member of the Methodist church five years and has made many friends to long remember her. I always found her kind as a friend and as a mother in the home. She leaves a husband, four children, three sisters, two brothers and two grandchildren to mourn her. May God bless the bereaved family. Her pastor, G. L. Wilkinson.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

God in His wisdom has taken from St. Andrews M. E. church a faithful member, a teacher from our Sunday school and a former member from our missionary society.

On January 19, 1923, Mrs. Mary Usher was called to her heavenly home. We, the members of the missionary society, resolve:

First, That while we sorrow for her going and our hearts are sad because she will not meet with us again on earth, we feel that all is well with her. We extend our sympathy to her bereaved family and pray God to deal gently with the motherless children.

Second, That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the minutes of our society, a copy sent to the family, and a copy to the N. C. Christian Advocate for publication.

- Mrs. W. H. King, Miss Rosa McLean, Miss Columbia Piner, Miss Maggie T. Gilmore.

COX—On January 5, 1923, Miss Pearl Cox, daughter of J. A. and Mrs. Bessie Cox, passed to her reward after an illness of two years. She was born in Durham April 23, 1883. She united with Trinity church at the age of eleven or twelve and was a consistent member until her death. She was a teacher at Trinity Sunday school and in the public schools of West Durham. In this work she had made a host of friends among the young people. She was not merely a teacher of the young—she was a lover of young people. For several years she taught in Vance county and had a host of friends in that section.

Miss Pearl was a character of unusual worth. Intelligent, religious and affectionate, she was the center of a wide circle of intimate friends. The greatest cross that she had to bear was the fact that she could no longer carry on her work. She gave her heart and her life to her task. When she could give no more she was broken-hearted. She died in possession of a great faith in God and her last days were full of peace and quiet. A. D. Wilcox.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Death has again entered the ranks of the Woman's Missionary Society of Plank chapel, and has called home one of our oldest and one of our sweetest-spirited members, Mrs. P. J. Allen.

Mrs. Allen was in her eighty-second year and "fell asleep" on December 28, 1922. Our church, society and community keenly feels their loss; therefore be it resolved:

First, That the Woman's Missionary Society has lost one of its most earnest and faithful members, that we deeply feel our loss, and will endeavor to follow her example in being true to all the services of our church.

Second, That we will ever cherish the memory of her Christian character and her wonderful ability of always looking on the bright side of life, no matter how dark the clouds.

Third, That we extend to the bereaved family our tender love and sympathy, and pray that He, who doeth all things well, may abide with them.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, to the Hendersonville Dispatch for publication and a copy be spread upon the minutes of our society.

- Mrs. T. C. Gill, Mrs. P. C. Smith, Mrs. H. F. Mitchell.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, our parsonage is overshadowed by grief because of the passing from earth to heaven of Mrs. McCracken's mother; therefore be it resolved:

First, We, the members of Woman's Missionary Society, wish to extend our deepest sympathy to our friend and co-worker in this her great sorrow, and to assure her of a loving interest in our prayers.

Second, That we commend her to the care of Him who alone can bind up and heal the broken heart.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, a copy to Sister McCracken, and a copy recorded in the minutes of our missionary society.

- Mrs. S. A. Cotten, Mrs. C. A. Walters, Mrs. T. G. Moore.

PETERSON—Jefferson Lee Peterson was born September 10, 1864, and died January 2, 1923. He was the son of James and Caroline McKay Peterson and was born and reared in Sampson county.

On December 22, 1897, he married Miss Ethel Lindsay, daughter of John A. and Matilda McKay of Bladen county. To this union three children were born, but only one, Miss Mildred Peterson, is living.

Mr. Peterson joined the Baptist church in Sampson county in young manhood. He was a good man and ever ready to lend a helping hand to those in need. It was the writer's privilege only to know Brother Peterson a few months, but during this time we were impressed with his noble qualities. May God comfort the loved ones left to mourn. G. H. Biggs.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has called home our beloved brother and president of our class, T. A. Clark;

And, whereas, through his untiring efforts and faithfulness as president, the class took on new life and made wonderful progress which revealed the character of the work of our president, we, the members of the Asbury Bible class of Branson Methodist church, feeling the loss so keenly, desire to give expression to our sorrow; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we bow in humble submission to the divine will of God.

Second, That we profit by his life of usefulness.

Third, That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy in their great sorrow which is our sorrow likewise.

Fourth; That a copy of these resolutions be recorded by our secretary, a copy sent to the family, and a copy sent to the Morning Herald, a copy to the Durham Sun, and a copy to the North Carolina Christian Advocate.

- W. H. McMahan, G. B. Inslr, J. R. Stone, Committee.

HOWARD—Rachel Elizabeth, wife of J. A. Howard, died at her home on Center avenue, Mooresville, Friday, January 5, 1923. She was seventy-seven years of age. Converted in early childhood, she had never known anything else but to serve God. And a more faithful member the Methodist church has never known. A sufferer for several years, she showed a spirit of Christian courage and patience that was a benediction to all that visited her. She passed into rest in perfect confidence and love. No pains of body could disturb the sweet trust in Christ, who had been her constant companion for over sixty years. The sweet ministry of her children in all her confinement was a revelation of the spirit of love that marked the home.

Funeral services at Central church, January 6, by the pastor, assisted by Rev. R. A. White of First Presbyterian church. L. B. Abernethy, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

The Ladies' Aid Society of Calvary M. E. church, Fayetteville, meets at this time with hearts made sad by the recent death of one of its most faithful members, Miss Ida Rich, who was known as "Auntie" to everyone. The life of this good woman was a great blessing in the community and in the Master's service, and we who have known her and appreciate her example wish to express the love and esteem in which she was held. Therefore be it resolved:

That she shall endeavor to live up to the beautiful example set by her life and continue our efforts to uphold the cause for which her hands labored so long and lovingly in this society.

That while she will be sadly missed we bow to the Supreme Will and rejoice in the blessed memory of the years of her companionship with us, knowing that heaven is made much richer, more beautiful and dearer because she is there.

That a copy of these resolutions be read at the February meeting of the society, one sent to our local paper and North Carolina Christian Advocate; also one sent to the family, extending to her loved ones the sympathetic assurance that the blessed memory of her life will sustain and comfort in the days that are to come.

- Mrs. A. F. Barrett, Mrs. L. H. Porter, Mrs. A. R. Craven, Mrs. Roland Britt, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, death has removed from this life our beloved brother, T. Walter Cuthbertson, be it Resolved, by the board of stewards of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Charlotte, N. C., that this church, as well as this entire community, has suffered in his death a great and irreparable loss. Brother Cuthbertson was among those instrumental in the establishment of Trinity church and was a member of the board of stewards from its foundation. He contributed greatly at all times to the spiritual as well as the material welfare and prosperity of the church. Religion with him was a principle that guided his life and actions, and his zeal for the church and its works was an inspiration to us all. Brother Cuthbertson was of a quiet and unassuming disposition; but the foundation of his faith in God and the religion of Jesus Christ were laid deep and sustained him in all the trials of life. Under all circumstances he measured up to the full stature of a man and a Christian. His sound counsel and advice will be greatly missed by the officials of the church and his example and influence by the congregation.

Resolved further, That our sympathy goes out to his household. They will miss his love and the sweet influence of his Christian precept and example; but will hold these as sacred memories and be guided by them in the years to come.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes and that copies be sent to the family and to the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.

- W. H. Davidson, P. C. Whitlock, Committee.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT

Dr. J. H. McMullan, of Edenton, North Carolina, was born July 7th, 1849, and died December 10th, 1922. He was one of eight children of Rev. Jeremiah McMullan and Frances Dabney McMullan. His father was a Methodist minister. Rev. Mr. McMullan was born in Green county, Va., but for many years was a resident of Hertford, N. C. Two sisters survive Dr. McMullan, Mrs. George Newby and Mrs. K. R. Nebold, both of Hertford, N. C.

Dr. McMullan married, Miss Lina Tucker of Perquimans county, N. C., and to this union were born six daughters and two sons. Mrs. McMullan departed this life eight years ago; two daughters, Lizzie and Fannie, died while very young. The surviving children are: Mrs. J. Norfleet Pruden, Mrs. D. M. Elliott, and Miss Jessie McMullan, of Edenton, N. C., Mrs. W. Bond, Jr., of Denver, Colorado, Mrs. J. H. McMullan, Jr., of Edenton, N. C., and Mr. Harry McMullan, of Washington, N. C.

In his home Dr. McMullan was an affectionate father, a provident parent, and a real comrade for each member of the family. In the church he was for 30 years a steward and for many years chairman of the board; all organizations and projects of the kingdom found in him a zealous and consecrated friend; he was regularly in his pew and was a devout worshiper. In the community he was without a superior in the amount of wholesome influence exerted with all classes of society. Unassuming in manner, eminent in ability, modest in achievement, kindly disposed to all yet firm for the right, a dignified, smiling Christian friend, Christian physician and Christian gentleman, Dr. McMullan has a permanent abiding place in the best affections of the people.

This sketch and tribute to Dr. McMullan was adopted at the meeting of the quarterly conference at the Edenton Methodist Episcopal Church, South, this January 26th, 1923, and for the board of stewards, the membership of the church, and for the quarterly conference, ordered spread upon the quarterly conference records, a copy sent to the Edenton papers, a copy sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, and a copy sent to the family.

MYRICK—Miss Sallie Mae Myrick, daughter of D. H. and Lottie Myrick, was born September 17, 1907, and died of influenza February 12, 1923. She had been sick only a few days when death claimed her.

At the age of twelve she was converted and joined Calvary Methodist church and was known in the community by every one for her faithful, loyal, consecrated life. Because of her faithfulness at home, church and the Sunday school she received flowers while she lived. We hold in grateful remembrance her faithfulness to duty and commend to all her bright Christian life.

She leaves a father, mother, four brothers and two sisters and a large number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. We extend our heartfelt sympathy and love to the family, praying God to deal gently with them in this dark hour of bereavement. Julian L. Midgette.

HARDEE—Again we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well. On February 6, 1923, God in His infinite wisdom took from our midst Bryan H. Hardee.

Mr. Hardee was born May 15, 1852, in one of those southern homes where culture and Christianity were embodied in the family life. He was born near Simpson, Pitt county, where he spent his entire life.

On March 15, 1881, he was happily married to Talitha E. Nelson. To this union was born seven children. His Christian wife and five godly children are left to mourn their loss. The children are J. B. Hardee, L. T. Hardee, A. J. Hardee, and Mrs. Cumi E. Tucker of Chicod, N. C., and C. F. Hardee of Greenville, N. C.

To them we extend our heart-felt sympathy, and point them to the God he loved and served. May they emulate his example, walk in the paths he has trod, climb up to the same high plane of salvation upon which he stood, and be as ready as he was for the final call to come up higher.

Several years ago he accepted Christ and joined Simpson Methodist church. He loved his heavenly Father and was true to his church.

In the community he was a most admirable citizen. He was loved and respected by all who knew him. At all times he was a friend to his neighbor and promoting the best interests of his community. Another landmark has been removed, a warm heart has ceased, a kind and generous neighbor has gone. He delighted in the success of his friends and the progress of his county.

In his home life he was loving and kind—a devoted husband and a sincere father.

His body was laid to rest in the family burying grounds near his late residence in the presence of many mourning friends and relatives. The beautiful flowers placed on his grave by friends spoke the tender messages of their appreciation of his life.

May God comfort the grief-stricken wife, children and grandchildren. May they look forward to a joyful meeting in heaven, where death does not separate and tears do not fall. J. C. Galloway.

God will fairly flood your life with all the power He can trust you to use wholly for Him.—S. D. Gordon.

To make or re-make a man with a motto or to build paradise upon a jingle is the new order of the day. Ask Dr. Coue. The Almighty may, after the old expressions, "speak worlds into existence." But mere man will hardly find a panacea for all ills of life in a single formula of words. Wouldn't it be fine if he could? No calomel, no castor oil, no surgeon's knife; just word,, words, words!

* * * *

He who worships at the shrine of his own goodness is not a pagan, but worse. He is both an egotist and a Pharisee and these spell out in big letters selfishness and self-righteousness. Some of the outward evidences of these inner experiences are, a parade of piety, a pointing of scornful fingers at the less pretentious, and a vociferous claim of superior spiritual attainments. Our Master did not lift up his voice in the streets, but these professed disciples of the meek and lowly Nazarene lift up their voices on every possible occasion.

* * * *

The knights of King Arthur took as one of their vows "to speak no slander, no , nor to listen to it." Could all people live up to that high standard, what a different world this would be! The same may be said of scandal. There is a strange relish on the part of many for the social garbage can. They take a special delight in drinking from the sewer ditches where the stench rises to heaven. Why this eagerness on the part of people for social filth? "To speak no scandal, no, nor to listen to it," would be a good vow for the scandal-monger and all who will listen to him.

"Blessed be letters—they are the true heart talkers." So declared an English author in praise of those frank, friendly communications which one friend sends another. Now, some enthusiastic lover of books has written: "Books are ladders up which climb human hearts to heights sublime." Why not climb those ladders more frequently than we do? Climb to the top of the tall mountain peaks where there is "a vision splendid," climb to the arch of the rainbow where the colors are deepest and where the fabled pot of gold really is, climb to the very stars where one may sight the headlands of eternity.

"Books are ladders—rung by rung
Climbing where the Psalms were sung
Up where Angel voices sing
And Anthems, Everlasting ring!

Books are ladders, strong, which lift
Human souls on wings, as swift
As wistful winds that sweep wide ways
To where some sky-born vision plays!"

Any attempt to make life easy is certain to result in its being hard. On the other hand, to approach life with a resolute purpose and to take up its tasks in a spirit of heroic endeavor give a guarantee that the loftiest achievements will become a delight. The man who sows as he sings is the man who can join in the song of the reapers. A flabby nerve and a flabby spirit never wins, whether it be on the athletic field or on the field of life.

* * * *

The luckiest people in the world are not those who depend upon luck, but those who utterly ignore it. The moon, according to some, is good for potatoes, but luck is not good for a man. Neither the fault nor the fortune are in our stars, they are in ourselves. Iron in the blood is better than a rabbit-foot in the pocket. The measure of Washington, Lincoln and Lee, the immortal American trio, is to be found not with the goddess of fortune, but within their own matchless personalities.

* * * *

Love's yoke is always easy and its burden is light. Mother toils hard and toils incessantly for her children, but it is no sacrifice, it is a delight. The mother whose toil for her children becomes a sacrifice is no mother at all. She is either a hireling or a slave. It was no sacrifice on his part for Jesus to come to earth. It was an unspeakable joy. Indeed, love compelled him to come. Jesus talked little of sacrifice. Others filled the Bible with that word. We ought to stop talking about the sacrifices that we are making for the Master. A willing and joyous obedience is better than all the sacrifices upon every altar of earth.

* * * *

When Martin Luther was toiling at his version of the Bible, he imagined that he saw the devil and promptly hurled his inkstand at the arch enemy. The incident is highly suggestive of the attack that Luther made upon "the devil and all his works" when he translated the Holy Scriptures into the vernacular of the common people. The inkstand is a good instrument with which to fight the devil. The church has not been as wise as it should in carrying its books and periodicals to the very people who need them most, that is, the very large class which has not yet become interested in good religious literature. The effort should be to reach the multitudes.

Woman had little chance in the world before Jesus came. Yet she figures largely in the Old Testament. Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel, Miriam, Hannah, Ruth, Esther, and a host less conspicuous, many of whom are unnamed, occupy an important place in those ancient Scriptures. Hannah, as the maker of great men; Ruth, as a passionate pilgrim at whose feet the world bows in admiration and praise; Esther, the uncrowned queen whose unselfish daring ever commands the admiration of mankind, occupy the front seats upon the stage of earth's immortals. Study the Bible with the influence of woman in mind and one will be amazed to find what God wrought through her in spite of existing ignorance and prejudice.

A GREAT AND GOOD WOMAN GONE

Mrs. Mary Cleaves Daniels at the age of 87 died in the home of her son, Judge Frank Daniels, in Goldsboro, N. C., at an early morning hour on March 7. The funeral services were held Thursday, March 8, at 11 o'clock in the First Methodist church, Wilson, N. C. Rev. E. H. Davis of Clinton, assisted by Rev. F. S. Love, pastor of the First Methodist church at Wilson, and Rev. C. L. Read, pastor of St. Paul's church, Goldsboro, conducted these services.

Mrs. Daniels was the mother of Hon. Joseph Daniels of Raleigh, N. C., Judge Frank Daniels of Goldsboro and Mr. C. C. Daniels of New York.

Just as Susannah Wesley, the mother of the immortal John and Charles Wesley, was greater than the sons whom she gave to the world, so was Mrs. Mary Daniels who at a ripe old age has been called to her eternal reward greater than the eminent men whom she has given to this present generation and who have made such a good record in life. This is another reminder of the well known truth that before every great and good man goes a great and good woman.

Rev. E. H. Davis, who conducted the funeral services pays this tribute to his aged and honored friend:

"Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season." These words of Eliphaz to Job whom he came to comfort but oftener wounded were prophetic. Through God's mercy they were fully realized in the life of the patriarch. "In a full age," like a shock of corn cometh in his season." Just as complete fulfillment do they find in the life of Mrs. Mary Cleaves Daniels, who on the morning of March 7 went from the home of her son, Judge F. A. Daniels, in Goldsboro to answer the summons on the other side. In a full age, not merely as indicated by the flight of time through eighty-seven years while God in love to her and to hers was extending her pilgrimage here, but full in the meaning and content and effect of her life, in the certain results achieved known and read of all, achieved not with flare of trumpets but quietly as the day comes or as the seasons change. An orphan at an immature age, a widow at thirty-four with three small children, at a time when in her section and throughout the South the souls of the people were tried as never before and have not been since—when the hearts of many actually failed for fear. At Plymouth Rock some years ago, the occasion being the unveiling of a monument to the Pilgrim Fathers, Edward Everett after depicting the horrors of that voyage and of the landing in the dead of winter said, "That the page of history could not on any rule of human probability say what will be the fate of that little band of adventurers." With all confidence do I say that it would have been just as bold a thing for any prophet of 1865 to forecast just what in God's providence came to this good woman and her family—her resources so far as material things go practically nothing—only her strong arm, her clear head, her sound heart. To these must be added her strong faith in God which never failed or flagged. No draft upon Him was ever made hesitatingly—none was ever returned unhonored or protested. To one of her sons she said during her last illness, "Frank, do you remember that song Bro. Frank Wood used to sing so sweetly, 'He leadeth me, O blessed thought?' Then they sang some of it together. She added, 'He has led me ever. When I myself was but an orphan, in my widowhood with just you children and now at the close he is still leading.' Her life was an every day illustration of her faith. She showed it not in words. She never sought to lead, but was ever content to follow and to do and—when it was her portion—to suffer. She loved to read and to speak of the fruits of the Spirit—love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance—and in her life each one found constant illustration. Not only her children, for whom there is now for a while a great blank in life, will rise up and call her blessed, but hosts of friends in Goldsboro, in Raleigh, in Washington, as well as in her beloved Wilson, where her church membership ever remained and where she elected to have her last resting place, will join them in their estimating the life of this good woman.

A gifted man, a college president, himself a preacher and a preacher's son, said in a telegram to the family in the midst of their sorrow, "I can never overestimate my debt to your mother. She gave me the clearest idea of Christ I ever had."

Tender and beautiful is the following tribute from Judge George P. Pell:

"As I stood at the open grave in the old city cemetery in Raleigh while the precious body of my sainted mother was being lowered, a great woman came up to me and said, 'We have always regarded your mother and Mrs. Daniels as the two greatest mothers living.' That was a statement which will cling to my memory as long as time lasts. It was a great tribute and it was paid by one of the greatest women of the state. 'My mother and mother Daniels,' two great, noble, pure, God-fearing, unselfish, intelligent, devoted mothers. I have had the great privilege of loving both, of being under the influence of both, of seeing the effect of the influence of their lives on many. My dear mother has now been gone to heaven fifteen years. Mother Daniels made her triumphant entry early this morning. Who can estimate the true value of their lives? No one but God himself. Man hath not a measuring-rod sufficient. Their lives were lives of love and faith, of simple beauty.

Mother Daniels! How could we have asked that she remain longer? For eighty-seven years she was here, and fully seventy of those years were years of service. Can we object that the God who made her, who framed her lofty character and moulded her great heart, has taken her to those lofty heights of eternal joy? Surely not—but oh, 'tis hard."

THE DISTRICT CONFERENCE AT ELKIN

Elkin, the gem of the Yadkin river valley, did itself proud Tuesday and Wednesday, March 7-8, when the Mount Airy district conference assembled in the beautiful Methodist church of that town for a two days' session.

The presence and presidency of Bishop Collins Denny added very materially to the success of the conference. Rev. J. H. West, the presiding elder, was alert to every interest of the occasion and nothing escaped his attention. Ministers and laymen were on hand in goodly numbers and appeared to be deeply interested in every detail of business. The visitors were numerous. In another column the secretary calls the roll of these visitors and also gives the names of the lay delegates elected to the annual conference and the name of the one candidate who was licensed to preach.

A feature of the conference was the sermon Tuesday evening by Bishop Denny. His subject was "Mary at the Sepulcher" and from almost any viewpoint it was a great sermon. The congregation that filled the church regardless of the downpour of rain, was many times repaid for having braved the storm to hear the bishop preach.

The presiding elder, the pastors and other leaders are pressing the battle in the Mt. Airy district and they are winning victories, too. The pessimists and other evangelists of despair, if on hand at Elkin, failed to make themselves known.

Rev. A. P. Ratledge did his work well as conference host. He is spoken of as a very fine preacher and the people of Elkin esteem him most highly.

No conference ever enjoyed more delightful entertainment. Elkin left nothing undone that could add to the pleasure of her visitors. Those elegant homes and those generous hearts of the good citizens of that choice community were thrown wide open to the guests. It is not surprising that practically everybody remained over till the close of the conference Wednesday afternoon.

In company with Bishop Denny and the presiding elder, we enjoyed the delightful hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond H. Chatham. The memory of those days is a joy and we shall look forward for an opportunity to return.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AT WORK IN TOWN AND COUNTRY

By William Mouzon Brabham.

The superintendent of the Department of Sunday School Administration of the great Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has set forth in this eminently practical volume a very complete survey of the problems connected with the small Sunday school in open country and in the town or village. The school of less than two hundred members is kept in mind throughout. Every page contains statements of actual facts and suggestions which have grown out of wide experience. An indispensable guide book for Sunday school workers in small towns and rural communities.

The author says: "The material has been tested in many training schools and lends itself admirably to use in standard training school work. It is especially suited for use as an introductory work with those who have not been accustomed to technical study. While primarily for workers in the small school as indicated above, it will be found stimulating and suggestive for workers everywhere. References and thought-provoking questions accompany each chapter."

Dr. E. B. Chappell writes: "Since a large proportion of our earnest and faithful Sunday school officers and teachers are entirely untrained, the first approach to them must necessarily be simple and elementary. We must begin with them at the beginning and lay a foundation for more complete and thorough preparation which is to follow.

"And this is precisely what the author had in mind in the preparation of the chapters which follow. He has been for many years actively engaged as a Sunday school field worker in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, first as a conference superintendent and then as superintendent of the Department of School Administration under the General Sunday School Board. During these years he has not only made a thorough study of educational theory and methods, but has had the benefit of wide practical experience and abundant opportunity for acquiring first-hand information as to the actual needs of the average Sunday school.

"Out of this wide and varied experience this volume has grown. It is not written for scholars, but is designed as a practical introductory handbook for Sunday school officers and teachers who desire to take the first steps in a course of preparation for this work. Such officers and teachers may accept the author's counsel with entire confidence, since his suggestions are the outcome, not of mere theory, but of direct personal observation and experience. The volume may be used with profit by those who are looking for a brief, practical survey of the field of Sunday school work or by Sunday school boards that desire an introductory course of lessons for those who find themselves called to take up Sunday school work without definite preparation."

A remarkable campaign in the interest of the Near East Relief has just been colled in Cabarrus county. Rev. J. Frank Armstrong, county chairman, started out to raise in cash and pledges the sum of $3240, but this quota was oversubscribed by nearly 225 per cent, the total now running to $7400. The Raleigh News and Observer declares this to be "unprecedented" in the state.

A large number of churches for the next few weeks will be engaged in revival services. It is a time of supreme importance in the life of the church. It is a season set apart for the quickening of the spiritual life of the church and for the gathering in of those who may be "just outside." These things will require first of all earnest prayer. The spirit must be allowed to do His work in the heart of the individual. Then, the word must be preached, but the messenger's heart at the time must be aflame with the fires that come from above. Song is an essential part of revival services. All great revivals have been accompanied by the singing of sacred songs.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Dr. Plato T. Durham was in a revival meeting last week at Birmingham-Southern College, Birmingham, Ala.

Rev. J. A. Bowles of Randleman delighted this office with his presence for a little while last Friday. He brings a good report from Randleman, and as usual when he is pastor the church moves forward.

Mr. R. E. Thigpen, a graduate of Trinity College with two years of training in the law school, has been added to the force in the office of Alumni Secretary of Trinity College. Mr. Thigpen will devote his time to plans for building up the general alumni fund.

Bishop Collins Denny of Richmond, Va., will be present at the Marion district conference and preside over its deliberations after Monday. The conference will convene on Sunday night, March 18, preaching by Rev. W. F. Elliott, the communion service and organization taking place that night.

Rev. F. O. Dryman at Norwood has entered upon the most promising pastorate of his life. Joy fills his heart as there are signs of progress everywhere. Loyalty on the part of officials and members, big congregations, and a growing Sunday school, are among the encouraging features of the Norwood church.

Rev. T. C. Jordan, who has made a good beginning at Bethel church, Asheville, will start a two weeks' meeting on Sunday, March 18. The pastor is planning and praying for a great revival. The people have received Brother Jordan with great cordiality, pounded him unmercifully and treated him in every way as a pastor enjoys being treated.

The Alabama Christian Advocate has 28 churches on its roll of honor. That is of churches which have the Advocate in every home. That is a fine showing. The Alabama Christian Advocate is going ahead by leaps and bounds in this campaign for new subscribers. If North Carolina Methodists do not watch out Alabama is going to be in the lead in a few weeks. Let's not allow that.

Mr. A. D. Ivie, a prominent layman of Leaksville, says that the people of his church are greatly pleased with Rev. W. L. Sherrill, who is their pastor. A good preacher, a fine mixer with the people, a man of sound judgment who knows people and knows how to get things done, the church enjoys the leadership of such a man. The people of Leaksville seems to know how to appreciate genuine worth.

The Centenary teams will be in North Carolina till April 9. They are reaching three or four churches every day during the week and eight or ten on Sundays. This will enable these special Centenary speakers to touch the largest churches in the two conferences and through the pastors' conferences to talk to practically all the pastors about these important collections. Large returns will undoubtedly result from this especial effort on the part of Centenary leaders.

A $50,000 Sunday school building for Central church, Mt. Airy, is now in process of construction, work having begun this week. This handsome structure that will meet every demand of the congregation will be pushed to completion. Years ago when H. K. Boyer became pastor at Mt. Airy, the church was struggling with a debt which they paid off easily after the arrival of the man who has returned to that church for his second pastorate, and now the new building is going up apparently with all ease. Rev. H. K. Boyer seems to be a magician in that section of Zion.

Dr. C. L. Read allows his curiosity to dictate an interesting item. Here it is: "I am not asking for publication, nor by way of criticism, but to quiet my curiosity, whether by accident or intention or 'malice aforethought' both Lincoln and Roosevelt were eulogized in the columns of the Advocate on the 22nd of February, while Brother George and his 'labors on the cherry tree' and other performances of varying degrees of importance were overlooked entirely?" For the benefit of our curious friend we hasten to say that Washington needs no eulogy from this frail pen. His place in history is secure. The cherry tree is safe, also, even if some modern critics speak in a jocular vein of his "labors on the cherry tree." Any man who cannot tell a lie is justly entitled to immortality.

It is with deep regret that we announce the death last Tuesday, March 7, of Col. W. W. Stringfield at his home in Waynesville, N. C. He was 86 years of age, a son of Dr. Thos. Stringfield, the first editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate and a man for long years prominent in his community, a sterling Methodist and an influential citizen.

Rev. J. B. Tabor sends us the following interesting note: "Miss Kate Hyatt and Rev. Thomas F. Higgins were married in the Methodist church at Burnsville, March 10, Rev. J. B. Tabor officiating. Miss Hyatt was educated at Davenport College, a member of the Methodist church, teacher of the junior boys' Sunday school class, and one of our finest and best Christian women and most useful church worker and worthy in every way of being the wife and helpmate of a Methodist itinerant preacher. Rev. Thomas F. Higgins is one of the promising young preachers of the conference—educated at Rutherford College, Trinity College and Yale University. A bright and useful future is before them. May the greatest success attend them."

The pastors and Centenary treasurers of the Greensboro district were in session last Friday afternoon at West Market Street church. At night a supper was served the pastors and representative leaders from each church in and around Greensboro. Bishop H. M. Dubose delivered the principal address of the evening. Dr. E. H. Rawlings, one of the foreign missionary secretaries of the church, spoke briefly of the present, urgent need of funds. Sunday morning Drs. Walt Holcomb, E. H. Rawlings and R. M. Courtney were the speakers at West Market, Centenary and Park Place churches, respectively. Teams in the afternoon canvassed the congregations in an effort to collect Centenary subscriptions which are now due. Sunday was Centenary day for Greensboro.

The congregation of Centenary church, Winston-Salem, after worshipping for weeks elsewhere will return next Sunday to their church, which has been thoroughly overhauled and a readjustment made in the location of pulpit, choir and organ by placing the organ in what was the Sunday school room which permits a change in the location of the pulpit and choir. These changes give room for additional pews at the front which have been placed. The Centenary auditorium now has the appearance of a new church. Work is being pushed on the new Sunday school building which is at present up to the first floor. An unusual feature of the building will be a roof garden. Perhaps this is the first church in the state to make such provision for the heated season. Unquestionably it will prove a popular place through the summer months when people love to seek the open air.

STATESVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Statesville district conference will be held in the town of Catawba beginning Wednesday, March 21st, at 11 o'clock. The first day will be devoted exclusively to the Centenary and the lay activities. All the Centenary treasurers and lay leaders are invited to attend, and they will be furnished entertainment.

Representatives of church interests are invited to present the causes committed to them. We hope Bishop Denny may be with us.

D. M. Litaker, P. E.

MARION DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Marion district conference will convene at Rutherfordton on Sunday, March 18, at 7:30 p. m.

After preaching by W. F. Elliott and the administration of the Lord's Supper, there will be a pastors' conference, to plan for revival, Centenary, Sunday school, Epworth League, orphanage, educational, woman's missionary society, conference collection, Advocate and preacher's salary campaigns throughout the district.

Let all our pastors be present and let us know who needs help in these campaigns and who are willing to help.

Let every pastor see that his report and quarterly conference records are at the conference. Let every local preacher have his written report and request for renewal of license at the conference.

Let every charge lay leader be present at the lay leaders' meeting Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Every pastor, delegate, lay leader, connectional and conference representative are urged to be there and make themselves at home. Z. Paris, P. E.

"Dollar Day" is being observed monthly in the Forest Hill Sunday school at Concord. Last Sunday the collection amounted to more than $350. This goes into the building fund of the church.

A series of meetings are in progress at West Market Street church, Greensboro, this week. Rev. J. H. Barnhardt is being assisted by Rev. J. W. Moore, pastor of Broad Street church, Statesville. Brother Moore is preaching strong gospel sermons, and interest has been growing from the beginning. The meeting will run through next week.

Rev. W. L. Hutchins, pastor of First Methodist church, Lexington, has been honored by Governor Morrison by being appointed one of the five state commissioners of public welfare, who have under their general direction the public welfare work of the state and county. Mr. Hutchins has been active in the promotion of welfare work for several years and is one of the trustees of the Children's Home Society, which maintains a splendid institution at Greensboro.

"Our Dead, or the Life After Death," by Rev. H. L. Atkins, a superannuate member of the Western North Carolina conference, who has been in Texas for many years battling with disease, is now ready for distribution. The booklet contains 26 pages and is worth many times the price. Orders will be filled at the Advocate office the day they are received. Price per copy, 20 cents; per dozen, $1.80; 100, $10. Order from Christian Advocate.

A pleasing note was received Tuesday morning from Rev. F. E. Dixon, pastor of our church at Roberdell. Brother Dixon sent in a list of 32 renewals and new subscribers to the Advocate, stating that they were all operatives in the Ledbetter Mills, and that Mr. Henry Ledbetter, one of the most successful business men in Rockingham and a strong layman in our church there, was sending these as a present to the Methodists employed in his mill. A fine example for others to follow. Thank you, Bro. Ledbetter.

Hurrah for Geo. G. Herman and the Waynesville Methodists! They are to soon have an elegant new church. We clip from the Haywood Journal: "Work is now progressing rapidly, and it is hoped that the church will be ready for the first service some time in October. It is expected that the cost will be about $75,000, exclusive of the lot and probably the equipment. The architect, Rev. J. A. Baylor, architectural secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, drew his plans well. There are practically three units, the main auditorium, which is 48 feet wide and 61 feet eight inches long, with sloping floor opening on the front to a capacious porch with large columns reaching from the floor to the gables and over a basement twelve feet pitch and concrete floor, constituting one unit. The Sunday school building, for it is a separate building although connected with the church proper, containing an auditorium, fifteen class rooms forms the second unit, this unit being three stories high. The third unit is the heating plant building, which, while joined to the Sunday school building, is under a separate roof. The foundation is to be concrete, the walls brick with tapestry quality for the outside, and the roof asbestos concrete. Stone trimmings will give the exterior a beautiful finish. To the pastor credit is due for his wise approach to the building project. This is the sixth church built and a big debt paid on another during his thirty-four years of ministry."

GREENSBORO DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Greensboro district conference will meet in Pleasant Garden church on Thursday, April 5th, at 10 a. m., and will close on Friday afternoon. We expect Bishop Denny to be with us and preside.

It is very important that all members be present at the opening and remain through the entire conference. All local preachers will please be present or send reports as required by Discipline.

We earnestly insist that every charge lay leader be present, especially on Friday, as on that day some time will be devoted to their work. Visitors are invited. They will please notify Rev. A. G. Lofton, Pleasant Garden, N. C., when to expect them.

The following committees are appointed: On license, R. G. Tuttle, G. T. Bond, C. F. Sherrill; on orders and admission, J. H. Barnhardt, T. J. Rogers, M. F. Moores. W. F. Womble, P. E.

SHORT SERMON

By

Rev. J. H. Jowett, D. D.

THE VALUE OF THE INDIVIDUAL

Text: John 10:3. "He calleth His own sheep by name, and leadeth them out." Our Saviour never spoke of "the mass," nor had He any equivalent to the term. And He never spoke of "the classes," nor had any such jumbled term a place in His vocabulary. In our Saviour's thought the individual was never lost in the crowd. It is altogether different with our selves. We soon reach the limit of our power to discriminate and to separate unit from unit in the gathered multitude. Even the camera, with its extraordinary sensitive discernment, fails to retain the individual when he is one of a mighty crowd.

But Jesus never lost the perception of the individual, however great may have been the crowd. He calls His sheep by name. His names for people are not racial names in which the personality is lost. They are personal names, sharply defining the individual life. He goes through the crowded streets of Capernaum, and He calls Matthew the publican. He moves amid the dense throngs of Jericho, and He picks out Zaccheus by name. And these are not exceptional cases, they are typical. His interest is ever in the individual. And He does not distinguish only the rare, showy flowers in the garden—some vestal lily, some passionate rose, He is also concerned with "the grass of the field." He is not only interested in the gorgeous birds of the woodland, "strange bright birds with their starry wings, which bear the rich hues of all glorious things"; He is equally attracted by the sparrow, and in His word He immortalizes it. Yes, He knows us, whether we are distinguished or obscure—whether it be a mystical Nathaniel, or a blind Bartimaeus, who is by the wayside begging. In the record of Jesus no one is lost in the crowd.

And our Saviour comes to us, not to round off and destroy our individuality, but rather to enrich and perfect it. When His redeeming grace begins to minister to us, and to carry out His will, it does not erase all our idiosyncrasies. Our distinctive faculties are not subdued, nor are they set in such formal relations that we are all as like one another as houses in a terraced row. Grace does not standardize the saints; there are many more types than one. Grace does not erase the graces, and turn the varied landscape into little plots of exactly the same measure, and having precisely the same growths. How uninteresting it would all be if our differences were wiped out, and we were merged in undistinguished uniformity! Suppose that in the bird-world there was a revolution, in which wings and feathers were to be redistributed. Suppose the sparrow were to borrow a few feathers from the bird of paradise, and the more gorgeous bird were to borrow some of the sparrow's homely brown, until they were as alike as two pins! No, that is not the way! Christ comes to develop our individuality.

Our Saviour comes to bring every life to its purpose and distinctive glory. Everyone's endowments are like an unopened bulb, and Christ comes to unpack them, to elicit their strength and beauty by the awakening ministries of His grace. "To present every man perfect in Christ Jesus!" That is to be our destiny. In Christ, every one is to become complete, and every one is to be crowned with spiritual distinction.

That will be the ever-growing attractiveness of the eternal world. Our personal development will never cease. We shall always be presenting to one another new and fascinating glimpses of personal growth. Heaven is a realm where wonder is never satiated, but is always fed and free.

SEASONAL SPIRITUALS

By Dr. Walt Holcomb.

Sitting in a swing, in God's big outdoors, wondering how to respond to an editor's request for an article on the need for a general revival.

The sun is shining; the songsters are singing; the chickens are cackling; the flowers are blooming; the grass is growing; the children are playing; and, the people are smiling.

The snow has melted from the hills; the icicles have dropped from the trees; the earth has thawed on the surface; the clouds have closed against the winter rains; the cold wind has ceased to howl around the corner; the thermometer is climbing away from zero.

Behold, nature is starting her annual revival. Springtime is here. Nature had backslidden since last summer and fall. Now, she is returning from her back sliding. What a time of refreshing within the realm of nature. Back of nature is God; and, this is the season of the Most High, as are all revival seasons.

Why isn't the beginning of spring the most suggestive season for a revival of the spiritual life in the Christian and the church? Then, the closing day of March will say, "Good morning, Easter Sunday." The resurrection day, so typical of a resurrected and revived religion, in the soul of man and heart of the church. As Christ arose from the tomb of the dead, so man arises from the sepulcher of sin. The resurrection glory and power is the revival splendor and dynamics of the church. It was springtime when Christ was resurrected.

As the need is general for a revival of nature, so the need is all inclusive for the children of men and the church of God. Not a tiny germ of grass will fail to share in the resuscitating requisites of a revival in nature. Because the need is general the supply of life is all sufficient. As the need is church-wide and includes those for whom the church is responsible, so the all-pervading, all-penetrating and all-powering grace of God is extensive in its scope and work.

A perennial revival is incompatible with nature; inconsistent with Scripture; and, contrary to experience of saints. Seasonal life is in harmony with nature; in accord with Scripture; and, in keeping with the experience of saints. Thank God, I have perennial life in my soul since I was born again. There have been seasonal revivals as I have experienced visitations from God, in season and out of season. The church may have perennial life—amplified by seasonal revivals.

Nature's revival is quiet, still and silent. While it is fraught with expulsive force, it breaks upon the world as soft as down; as silent as the stars, as still as the dew. The songs of the night are the melody of nature's revival. It is when nature backslides that storms, cyclones and cataclysms appear.

The deepest, truest and biggest revival is when the church, that is true to the doctrines of the Bible, hears the still small voice, and awakes to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple. Revolutions only appear when nations and churches depart from the basic truths of democratic government and orthodox Christianity. While history records revolutionary revivals, it was only when the people had forgotten and forsaken the fundamental truths of the Book and the central teachings of the church.

Thank God, the Southern Methodist church does not need that kind of a revival today. Her bishops, elders, pastors, secretaries, editors, evangelists and people are the most loyal, faithful and orthodox followers of Jesus Christ, in Protestant Christianity. While, now and then, a doubtful voice may be heard in some quarters, it is a subdued voice; and, so long as sinners are convicted, surrendering souls are saved, and believing hearts are sanctified, I am not afraid of destructive critics and atheistic evolutionists. Shouts of new born souls will drown these uncertain voices.

What we need is a conservative revival that will carry forward the well thought out and well regulated life of the church, that must continue seven days in a week, fifty-two weeks in a year; and not a revolutionary revival that will throw a monkey-wrench into the church machinery, for two weeks, requiring the other fifty weeks of the year to adjust the machinery of the church of God. Organized and accredited evangelism is rapidly approaching this ideal.

The kind of travail necessary for such a springtime revival is the kind of travail that the earth puts forth. Too deep to be loud; too intense to be noisy; too spiritual to be superficial; and, too real to be unduly emotional. Nature's travail is to create and recreate life.

Signs of spring life are abundant. Signs of church life are more in evidence. The first sign of a general revival appearing on the horizon was when our General Conference, at Hot Springs, went on record urging the church to win a million souls during this quadrennium. The next appeared when our general evangelists, in session at Dallas, pledged their co-operation and allegiance to this call of the church. To remind and re-enforce this call, the general committee on evangelism, appointed Drs. Perry, Cram and Morris to prepare a paper urging the execution of the order and plan for a church-wide awakening. Bishop Ainsworth, the first to organize his forces, called together the pastors and laymen in his episcopal district at Macon, Jackson and Jacksonville. This was the most auspicious and outstanding revival program of the year.

As we "listen in" we are pleasantly and agreeably surprised at the reports coming to the editors of all conference organs, and our general organ, and the generous way in which our editors are broadcasting weekly the good news and glad tidings throughout our great church. As the encouraging reports come from along the Mason-Dixon line to the Gulf stream, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and beyond the rolling seas, from far-away Belgium, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Siberia-Manchuria, Korea, Brazil, Japan and China, let us take courage and push forward the most aggressive and progressive revival campaign, till conference meets, that Southern Methodism has known in her glorious past.

TO EMPHASIZE AN APPEAL

This is to second and emphasize, if possible, the appeal for funds being made by Spring Garden church. It is a local community financing a statewide proposition. It is the same sort of situation for our girls that Chapel Hill is for our boys. The membership of Spring Garden constitutes a loyal band, but the load is too heavy for them. Mail a contribution today to W. A. Mann, Treasurer, Highland Ave., Greensboro, N. C. C. S. Kirkpatrick.

STUDENT RECITALS AT LOUISBURG COLLEGE

The series of student recitals which are being given this session at Louisburg College indicate a commendable growth in artistic training. The third recital, given Tuesday evening, February 27, proved of unusual interest, the students of the departments of both music and expression showing exceptional ability to entertain as well as to appreciate and interpret their varied selections.

The following students were on the program: Josephine Bandy, Four Oaks; Ida Brown, Roanoke Rapids; Lois Crawley, Littleton; Susie Crowell, Thomasville; Julia Daniels, Wilson; Pauline Eason, Snow Hill; Etta Beale Grant, Hookerton; Ora Holden, Louisburg; Sarah Johnson, Stantonsburg; Louise Maye, Youngsville; Lois Sanford, Vass; Louise Taylor, Louisburg; Anna Gray Watson, Louisburg.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

"Now the Spirit (Holy Ghost) speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils.

"Speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron."

Some are they who would laugh me to scorn for affirming that I am looking for Jesus, the same who went away, to come most any day, and as he went. But I confess it seems to be mine to do the laughing, with so many signs confirming my happy and "blessed hope," most conspicuous of which are the two present day great revivals now on—not of Jesus and His blood to save and sanctify—but of Spiritualism and Darwinism to seduce and stultify.

Poor, blind, God-forsaken Spirit-abandoned offspring of Saul, son of Kish or "sons of an ape realizing that God is no more with them and answereth them not, neither by dreams nor by Urim nor by prophets, they have gone to disturbing the long time dead. How damp and musty and sepulchral it all smells.

For me I much prefer living in the open around Mt. Olivet, getting my inspiration from where the sky is clear and the air still laden with the fragrance and perfume of Him who went away, whom the angels affirmed would come again, in like manner, and keeping my gaze towards heaven, while all these things continue to come to pass. Looking up, knowing that my redemption draweth nigh. Amen! Even so come, Lord Jesus; come quickly.

M. W. Hester.

THE RIP VAN WINKLE STIGMA IS NO MORE

The Tar Heel state for years remained the Rip Van Winkle among the American commonwealths. The gentry to the north and the aristocrats to the south of us manifested much the same spirit of hauteur with the mention of North Carolina as when reference was made to Arkansas. But that day has passed, for the Tar Heel state is now on the band-wagon.

A gentleman who crosses the country often and swings around through the west and back over the plains remarked just a day ago, "Whether she deserved it or not, North Carolina is getting more advertising than any other state in the Union, for I never get on a train or stop at a hotel or make a trip across the country but I hear some one talking of the wonderful work being done on roads and schools and along general industrial lines."

The great mass of our people are scarcely aware of the wonderful transition that is on. The grogshop has given place to the school house, the ox cart to the automobile, the wayside loafer to the active son of toil. Where women carried a bundle with bent back along the weary road or tugged at the lines over an old mule, women now whisk along in a Ford with heads up and a general air of independence unknown generation ago. The Old North State is fully awake, causing the Old Dominion and the Palmetto State to sit at her feet to learn how it all came about. From the Diamond Shoals to the Black Dome, another spirit is in the air and a new urge is in the people. Rip is fully awake.

MESSAGES FROM A WAYSIDE WELL

Every one has a well by the wayside. Whether it be the well in which hung the "old oaken bucket" or a flowing fountain in some city square matters little. Some David is ever longing to drink of the water from the well of Bethlehem. The undying memories of childhood's happy hours render glorious some favored spot from which flows the rippling streams of joy to refresh and cheer through all the years.

But no well can compare with the Patriarch's on whose curb sat the Great Teacher, weary with the journey, as he talked with the woman of the checkered, broken life. Think of a Jew talking with a Samaritan! More's the wonder that he should speak with a woman—a woman of uncertain name. At the best, in the Orient, woman is lightly esteemed; on this occasion, the surprise was startling, for the disciples who were familiar with his association with publicans and sinners marvelled that he talked with the woman. Jesus defied every convention and ignored all social distinctions. Outward and formal considerations were pushed aside as Jesus pressed to the heart of the situation—to the core of being—speaking of the fountain within. The more startling the conduct of Jesus must have seemed to this woman who had lived so largely in the gross and sensuous rounds of life, with few appeals made to the finer and better self. True, the worn and weary Jew on the curb made mention of the object of first concern—the water in the well—and referred to the object of her desire; then, at once, did he pass from the water of the well to the fountain within. Could the situation have been more urgent?

The day was drawing to a close. For this woman whose life had been given to gratifying the animal appetites, the sun had set already and the dull, somber hues had deepened into a starless night. The kindly attention of decent people was not expected. How marvellous, and past all understanding, that this Jew should show such a kindly interest and make promise of waters springing up to an eternal day. Surely this was a bright star in a cheerless sky! Could he be any one save a messenger of heaven? Under his touch, all lines of differences had faded out; creeds and traditions counted for naught; even the gulf between Jew and Samaritan had been bridged. Out of the depths of the inner life flowed the waters unto the eternal day. Above creed and ritual and institution in religion is experience.

Along with this assurance of a fountain within for every one who would receive Him came the disclosure of God as a Spirit. In this wonderful message, the whole external scheme of things gave place to the internal and spiritual. A tribal god is out of the question. A local deity could never make possible a universal experience. So man's efforts to find God on Olympus, as did the Greeks; or on Gerizim, as did the Samaritans; or on Zion, as did the Jews, must give place to a God not limited to any one people or confined to any one place. At one stroke, Jesus swept away the limitations of time and place by disclosing the spirituality of God. No longer in this mountain or in that will some favored people, to the exclusion of all others, meet with God. Place and time shrivel into nothingness when it comes to dealing with God. Man need not attempt to put God in the concept or to measure him according to the measure of a man. A hundred years and a hundred thousand years are all the same to him. To put it in the language of Scripture, "One day is with the Lord as a thousand years and a thousand years as one day."

Acceptable worship is not a matter of time and place and form, but the meeting of spirit with spirit, unfettered and unafraid. Gross mediums such as priests and sacraments cannot condition the approach of earnest and humble spirits to God, for the Father seeketh such to worship him. Romish priests do not—and for that matter, none other—carry the keys of the Kingdom, able to admit or shut out whom they will. There is but one mediator between God and man, the Man Christ Jesus.

More wonderful to this woman than the message of the inner stream, and the further message of the spirituality of God, was the potency of his presence. How much of tenderness and pity was shown; how much of sympathetic interest was displayed in her checkered career; how much of an unusual awe may have stolen over her spirit is all a matter of conjecture. This much is implied in the narrative: The personal presence of Jesus had stirred this woman to her deepest depths; her past lived once more in awful reality as she went away telling of the man who told her all that ever she did. The sin and shame and burden of all the years crowded upon her. Not much is recorded of her and those five husbands, and the other of uncertain standing. Evidently, the potency of His personal presence caused the ghosts of the days that were dead to stand once more before her as she went with a convincing message to the people of the village. Many believed because of the message she brought them.

The message of the inner experience, and of the spirituality of God, and of the potency of His personal presence, which came to the woman at Jacob's well have made witnesses for Him in every land and under every sun. She learned of a new force that is spiritual, of a personality that grows, and of an association that is real fellowship, here and hereafter.

THE LEAGUE THAT HOLDS THE KEY

We often speak of the open door to service in a great day of opportunity, but that door does not stand as wide open as some would have us to believe. For many, this door is closed and securely locked, with no key in hand to make way for all who would enter. In our Methodism here in North Carolina many have found the golden key in the Epworth League. They get a training in the league that comes through no other organization in the church. Youth learns to do by doing; this principle is fundamental with the Epworth League.

Perhaps nothing has been more helpful in putting new life into the league than the town and county federations. Once a month representatives of the leagues of a certain prescribed section hold their union meetings. These afford a larger outlook and infuse fresh life into all who come together. The competition engendered and the challenges for bigger undertakings make a special appeal to the young men and women always eager for a contest. Then, we are learning that the league must make its appeal to young life rather than to those already fixed in their habits. The officers must be taken from the ranks of the boys and girls willing to venture.

The annual assembly in June is an event that ought to mean much. This year, June 18-23, the young people will gather again at Morehead City. Among the good things offered will be the presence of Dr. Dan Brummitt of Chicago and Dr. Ivan Lee Holt of St. Louis. If these gentlemen reach the high level on which they moved the time Itinerant had the privilege of hearing them, the leaguers will be charmed. Why should they not on the coast near the breaker-beaten strand in June—those rare days in June when come the perfect days? May the leaguers see visions and dream dreams!

GOLDEN CROSS WEEK

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The General Hospital Board has designated the week preceding and including Easter as a week for enrolling of members in the Golden Cross Society.

It is hoped that all our preachers and people will take notice of this fact and set forward this great cause during the period designated.

If the work of the General Hospital Board is to succeed, much depends upon the enrollment in the Golden Cross Society. In a recent article, Dr. C. C. Seleckman has given very succinct directions concerning the best method of enrolling members. He says:

"There is every reason to believe that we could raise many thousands of dollars through the Golden Cross Society, if every pastor would give it right of way for at least one Sunday in his charge. And by that I do not mean that he should devote the whole sermon or the whole hour to the Golden Cross. Let me set down in plainest language possible the simple step by which the best results may be obtained with the least effort:

1. Appoint the Golden Cross director for each church in your charge. Let this person be some man or woman, who has human sympathy, a good spirit of enthusiasm and a measure of leadership.

2. Agree with the director upon a date for the presentation of the Golden Cross membership cards to Sunday school, regular congregation, Epworth League and any other societies that may have a meeting on the appointed date.

3. At least one week in advance announce that on the specified date every member of the Sunday school, League and church, as well as visiting friends, will be given an opportunity to enroll in the Golden Cross.

4. An ample supply of membership cards and Golden Cross buttons should be secured at least a week in advance and distributed through the Sunday school classes and the congregation to all who are interested, in order that they may have time to fill them out and bring them back on the Golden Cross Sunday.

5. Put up a sign, just outside the church, or in the vestibule, saying, 'Next Sunday is Golden Cross Sunday,' and when the time arrives change this to read, 'Today is Golden Cross Sunday.'

6. After the sermon on the subject of the 'Good Samaritan' or any other gospel sermon, have the cards distributed through the congregation and after explaining the different kinds of memberships for adults and also the fact that children under fourteen years of age may become members by the payment of twenty-five cents a year, ask the people to sign their cards and have them ready for collection.

Before the benediction is pronounced and the congregation breaks up, in confusion, have cards taken up by ushers who will make sure that the money turned in corresponds to the amount represented on the card in each case.

It is not necessary to bring any pressure, to make any heated exhortation or do any so-called begging. If the people are given a chance to respond, they will respond, and thousands of dollars will flow into the hospital treasury of our great church. This will enable us to redeem the pledge we have made to our denomination, that now we are going to take our share of the responsibility of caring for the sick and suffering people of our land, and to manifest our love to Christ by serving and helping the sick, the needy and the unfortunate. Remembering that it is written, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself.'

Leaflets, cards and badges for membership for this enrollment will be furnished free of charge upon application to the General Hospital Board, 416 Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, Ga.

In our great church there are 2,500,000 members and if even so many as half of them enroll in the Golden Cross Society the General Hospital Board can soon put a Methodist hospital at every point in the South where one ought to be, and thus we shall take from the Roman Catholics the work which we, as Methodists, ought to do and which we have allowed them to do for us far too long.

President General Hospital Board.

My grand point in preaching is to break the hard heart, and to heal the broken one.—John Newton.

MT. ZION HAS OVERPAID CENTENARY PLEDGE

Mt. Zion on the South Lenoir charge has not only sent in the last Centenary pledge in full, but has paid several dollars over the amount pledged. All those who pledged have been very loyal, and it has been a pleasure to work with them for the Centenary. Much success to the Advocate.

LETTER FROM BROTHER RAYMOND BROWNING

After several futile attempts to get some of my friends in North Carolina to have some revivals during the winter months, I finally went to Maine and held a three weeks' revival in the town of Kennebunk. The weather was fearfully cold. Fifty-three inches of snow fell during the month of January and one night in February the thermometer registered twenty-eight below zero. In spite of the cold and an epidemic of "flu" some of the people came out to the services, and about a dozen were happily converted and nine joined the church. These figures will seem insignificant to anybody who has not seen the religious life of Maine. During all these long years since Jesse Lee of Virginia preached in that territory, and since Bishop Asbury and Joshua Soule sounded the gospel trumpet there, the Methodists have been able to gather only about twenty-three thousand followers. It must be said in fairness that the Methodists chiefly hold up the standard of godliness and piety. In spite of the blight of Unitarianism, Universalism, Christian Science and Catholicism there are some wonderfully stalwart saints to be found there, and in all the Methodist churches that I have visited I find a few devoted souls clinging tenaciously to the old class meetings.
My next revival will be with Rev. J. H. Danner in Spring Street Methodist church, Charleston, S. C., beginning next Sunday. After that I am planning to assemble all my helpers and continue in tent meetings until the "frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock." My tent is stored at Burlington, where we held our last big meeting in October under the auspices of Dr. North's church.

Beginning with our revival in April at Fayetteville, then Graham, Roxboro, Sumter and Burlington, I believe that season was the happiest and most fruitful of my evangelistic work thus far. Time would fail me to tell of the princely men with whom I was privileged to labor—Humble, Daniel, Hurley, Ferguson and Dr. North.

Sometimes when I read of the revivalists of other days and how richly God blessed their labors my heart grows heavy at the comparative meagerness of our results today, and then I wonder just what would have been the fruits of their labors if they had preached in these towns where there is the lurid and sensual picture show, automobiles swarming like flies, sensational newspapers, cheap and vulgar magazines, radio machines broadcasting amusement, jazz music and dancing, mixed bathing, and all the other refined abominations that we have to combat today. I am not disparaging the wonderful achievements of the evangelists of other days, but merely gathering faith and courage for another drive into the devil's territory.

This is my sixteenth year in evangelistic work, during which time I have preached in eighteen different states but most of my meetings, about one hundred, have been in North Carolina. It gives me great joy to know that my largest congregations and best results in every way are here where people know me best and yet bear with me in spite of my deficiencies and, as somebody said, "iddy-os-and-crazies."

With every good wish for the editor and the Advocate, I am,
Yours in Romans eight twenty-eight,
Raymond Browning.

MT. AIRY DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Mt. Airy district conference met in its thirty-sixth annual session in the Methodist church in Elkin, N. C., at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning March 6th, 1923, and was favored with the presence of Bishop Collins Denny, of Richmond, Va., who presided through its deliberations. It was an interesting, helpful and inspiring session. About thirty-eight per cent of the laity, and all of the twenty-one pastors were present, except Rev. M. E. Leftwich, of Sandy Ridge circuit.

Rev. R. M. Courtney, conference missionary secretary; Rev. A. W. Plyler, editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate; Prof. O. V. Wosley, Sunday school field secretary; Dr. S. B. Turrentine, president Greensboro College for Women; Rev. Charles A. Wood, superintendent of Children's Home; Prof. Hinshaw, of Rutherford College; and Miss Grace Bradley, Epworth League field secretary, were present and represented to the conference the interests of their respective fields of labor.

Rev. W. A. Nell, presiding elder of the Wins' on district; Rev. D. M. Lita-ker, presiding elder of the Statesville district; Rev. M. T. Smathers, of North Wilkesboro station; Rev. Z. E. Barnhardt, of Centenary church, Winston, were present as visitors.

Revs. H. K. Boyer, J. A. Cook, G. W. Williams and J. A. Snow were elected a licensing committee.

Summerfield and Boonville each extended an invitation for the next session of the district conference, and the invitation of Summerfield was unanimously accepted.

Granville B. Gwyn, of Ararat circuit, was granted license to preach.

Hon. A. D. Ivie was re-elected district lay leader, with C. W. Dockery and H. A. McPherson associate lay leaders.

C. W. Dockery, Rusk; E. C. Foy, Mount Airy; Rev. C. R. Hutchison, Walnut Cove; Hon. A. D. Ivie, Leaksville; W. R. Kiger, Mount Airy; G. T. Layne, Summerfield; W. G. Miller Elkin; and Mrs. J. L. Woltz, Mount Airy, were elected delegates to annual conference, with R. O. Gamble, Summerfield; J. D. Minick Mount Airy; Mrs. N. M. Pickett, Madison, and R. G. Smith, Elkin, as reserve delegates.

Notwithstanding the heavy down-pour of rain on Tuesday evening at 7:30, a large and appreciative congregation gathered to hear Bishop Denny preach. And they were highly pleased with the fine gospel message he brought them.

Rev. A. P. Ratledge, the pastor, and his good people of Elkin, know how to entertain a district conference, and place their guests under many obligations for the royal entertainment given them. W. M. Wall, Sec.

A SEVERE LICKING

The devil and his forces have just received a terrible walloping at Zion. Rev. J. L. Reynolds has just closed a twelve days' meeting here at this place with good results. Fifty-two souls have been saved and a great many joined the church. The church has been greatly revived, and we believe much and lasting good has been accomplished.

The Lord came down in great power and converted men hardened in sin and gloriously saved them. Men of mature years rose from the altar with beaming faces and praising God. On several occasions the Holy Ghost came down upon the whole congregation in mighty power, causing them to shout and praise God in the old-fashioned way. It seemed almost live a Pentecost of old.

Brother Reynolds is a consecrated man of God and never tires or gives up. His preaching sinks deep into sinners' hearts, causing them to repent and come to God. On several occasions he and a few faithful Christians labored till the midnight hour, pointing earnest seekers to the Lamb of God. It was at one of these sessions that the writer surrendered to Christ. We will always dearly love him for his devoted interest in us. May he attain still greater achievements and receive the blessings of heaven. X.

SUNDAY WITH THE METHODISTS

Dr. L. S. Massey, pastor of Trinity Methodist church, is a preacher who combines thoughtful and well worked utterances with a forceful and vigorous delivery, the result being that his message gets across to the man in the pew. He uses no pulpit pyrotechnics, but his is a simple eloquence. On last Sunday morning the sermon was taken from Matt. 5:47—a text in the form of a question—"What do ye more than others?"—the question put by Christ to his disciples. Said Dr. Massey in part: "The gospel is the sublimest challenge to man. It calls for the greatest sacrifice upon the part of man. The superiority of the Christian man must show itself in the things he does. The genuinely Christian man is a greater producer of wealth than the same man would be, for Christianity tends to efficiency, and the Christian man, therefore, makes a greater contribution to the wealth of the world, and likewise the Christian nation is in turn the greatest nation.

"Thousands of men have sold Christ for gain, but none have ever bought Him. What you are and what you should be are more important than what you have. The God of every man is life, and the Christian man must show his superiority in his life."

Dr. Massey discussed briefly the three things which produce a worthy character—heredity, environment and discipline—all of them exerting a great influence on a man's character, but over against even these important factors is Jesus Christ, the greatest power in a man's life. In the words of the text Jesus Christ expects each man to do more than others. Beginning his sermon with a question, Dr. Massey also closed with the question: "Have you your credentials?"—Red Springs Citizen.

CHRIST THE PATTERN

In our Sunday school studies for the past few months we have been studying under the greatest teacher the world has ever known or ever will know, and that is Jesus. He is giving us a beautiful pattern to shape our lives by. The dressmaker, if she undertakes to make a dress, studies her pattern. She then lays down her goods first. Then she reads carefully the directions, and placing the pattern on the goods she cuts closely to the pattern; then when the garment is complete it looks very much like the pattern it was made by.

I wonder how many Christians are studying the pattern that Christ has given us and placed ourselves on the altar, and are cutting so close to the pattern that the world can see Jesus in our lives. Are we wearing the beautiful robe of righteousness?

Zachaeus was anxious to see Jesus, and I think it must have been that kind look on His face and that sweet, gentle voice that said, "Zachaeus, make haste and come down, for today I must abide at thine house," that caused Zachaeus to repent; and that same kind look and gentle voice that explained to the woman at the well about the water of life; and that took the little children in His arms and blessed them and said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

The sinner is looking to see Jesus through His followers. It is a blessed privilege we have to be a follower of the meek and lowly Nazarine. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we might be called the children of God. I used to hear my sainted old father sing that grand old song, "The kingdom is coming, Oh! tell ye the story," and I thought it grand then, but to me now it seems sweeter than it did then. For of a truth God's kingdom, which I believe is His great love, will cover the earth as the waters cover the sea, and His banner which must be the cross shall be exalted.

May God help every one who may read this to get a greater vision of the Christ spirit. Mrs. J. A. Howell.

DR. WHITSETT AND THE "MODE" OF BAPTISM

Two years I have read your most excellent Christian Advocate, with pleasure and profit to myself. And so, referring to your editorial in the Advocate of March 1: "Is Our Friend Seeking the Martyr's Crown?" I come asking space to offer a negative (?) correction to two things you say in that editorial:

(1) "Dr. Whitsett produced the historic facts which established the learned professor's contention that the English Baptists did not confine baptism to the mode of immersion."

The reference seems to be to Dr. Whitsett's book A Question in Church History. Dr. Whitsett did not contend that the English Baptists "did not confine baptism to the one mode (?) of immersion"; but that for about 135 years prior to 1641, the Anabaptists in England—if they were immersionists at all—could not practice immersion on account of England's prohibitive laws, and that after the laws became more tolerant those people became Baptists by submitting to immersion.

Dr. Whitsett nowhere subscribes to the "mode theory" of baptism, but contends that New Testament baptism is immersion only, and that John the Baptist was the first to administer it, in the Jordan river in A. D. 30.

(2) "This fact spoiled the favorite theory that immersion came to us in an unbroken line from John the Baptist."

Baptists hold no theory that immersion came to them in an unbroken line from John the Baptist, but Baptists do hold that they have the immersion of believers on a profession of faith from the New Testament as their authority, and that the immersion of believers is the only baptism in the New Testament.

Baptists hold that the New Testament is supreme and final; and they want no higher or newer authority for their baptism and practices.

There may be some who call themselves Baptists who hold the "unbroken theory from John" which you mention, such as Primitives and Hardshells, etc., and there may be some who are prejudiced, but it is not those who in humility and love hold to His word as their law. A. B. Smith.

We gladly give space to Brother Smith's communication and desire to add that he only states in other terms and more at length the fact to which we referred about the English Baptists. The fact is just this: the English Baptists did not at all times baptize by immersion, if Dr. Whitsett was correct.

As to Baptists teaching that baptism comes in an unbroken line from John the Baptist, we are frank to say that some of them do not, but some of them do. We have heard them.

Why do Baptists reject immersion by the Methodists? They say that it is because the minister who performed the ordinance had not been properly baptized. That is, he was not in the succession, which is so much "bunk."

We have in mind a man who joined the Baptist church, and was baptized by a Baptist minister. But later he became a Methodist preacher and baptized Methodist members by immersion. Yet the Baptist churches would not ask these Methodist members who had been baptized by a one-time Baptist to take communion with them. How do these facts fit in with what we hear on every hand, that close communion rests on close baptism. Baptists cannot commune with Methodists because they have not been properly baptized? Why do Baptists refuse to commune with Methodists who have been properly baptized?—Ed.

"LEST WE FORGET"

In a great army it sometimes happens that the wounded has to drop out of line, the gap closes up and the one thus left has to sit down, with sickening heart, and see the moving columns pass—thus having forced home to himself the fact that his participation is a thing of the past.

For these years "The Forgotten Man"—the supernuminate—has been allowed only the privilege of watching the forces go by. It is gratifying that, at last, the leaders are becoming aware of the absent forms and faces and provision is being made for a more adequate remembrance of our afflicted and aged comrades.

But when the bivouac fires are kindled and we gather about the meeting places at night, do we ever think of the gallant, brave, courageous, dashing comrade who was in the thickest of the battle and who fell with the sword in his hand; or of the patient, earnest, faithful soldier who kept guard in the lonely valley or on the wind swept heights of the silent outpost and who died at this post? Their bodies are scattered in cemeteries throughout the land. Shall their memories perish? They labored and we have entered into their rest.

The last Western North Carolina conference determined to make an effort to locate the resting places of those who have gone, to keep a memorandum of the localities where future brethren of our ministry shall be buried, to provide some plan for making these graves, so as to render them distinctive, whenever and wherever seen, and to prevent same to the next annual conference for its decision.

In the meantime, we desire to ask all of our preachers in works where there are cemeteries, in which deceased preachers have been buried, that they have a committee appointed this spring (during April or May preferred) to visit such cemeteries, locate the graves, clean off the trash from the graves, place some flowers on them and make some kind of a marker so that they can be identified in the future. If it is agreeable at some prayer meeting night or at some other gathering in the church, won't you have a service in which the deeds and virtues of such brethren may be recalled and thus keep alive the memories of those to whom we owe a debt of gratitude?

We have the resting places of some. If you know of others please write us, giving the name and the place of burial. Charles H. Ireland, Greensboro, N. C.

LENOIR CIRCUIT THE BIRTH-PLACE OF PREACHERS

LENOIR CIRCUIT THE BIRTH-PLACE OF PREACHERS

It has been quite a while since Lenoir circuit has been heard from through the Advocate. Perhaps our pastor, Rev. F. H. Price, is too modest to tell of his own work on the circuit. So I am taking the liberty to speak a word for pastor and people.

This is Brother Price's fourth year and he has been giving very acceptable service both as pastor and preacher. The fact that he has been with us four years is evidence that Brother and Mrs. Price and little son, Jack, are very much liked by our people.

Besides preaching and looking after the pastoral duties of five churches he has, during the past year, had the oversight of building a new parsonage and a church at Olivet. The new parsonage is located in the country on the Morganton and Lenoir highway near Littlejohn's church, and is well planned and beautifully located.

Our people enjoy having the pastor's family in the community. Brother Price has done quite a lot of work on the parsonage and grounds and also on the church.

Mrs. Price has proven herself very helpful on the circuit as organist and leader in singing. She is a Sunday school teacher and enthusiastic worker in our missionary society at Littlejohn's.

Littlejohn's is the leading church of the charge, paying more than half of the salary of the pastor. Littlejohn's is the home church of many gospel preachers. Those living are Revs. M. H., D. R. and R. G. Tuttle, also Mark Tuttle, student at Trinity College; R. M. Courtney, conference missionary secretary; G. W. Clay and Lelia J. Tuttle, missionary to China. We also claim Rev. Clem Goforth as a "grandson" of the church.

We are now making special efforts to enlarge our Sunday school. H. M. Courtney has been elected Sunday school superintendent in place of the writer. Brother Litaker, our P. E., has been doing some splendid preaching for us.

Rev. R. M. Courtney preached for us the fourth Sunday in February. He always brings a great message.

The Advocate is certainly a great paper. Every family should have it. G. A. Tuttle.

ALL STAY FOR PREACHING

Up here in the W. N. C. conference, Asheville district, there is a little church called Tabernacle, and Rev. J. O. Banks is the beloved pastor. We just want folks to know we are living. We have a one-room church just finished. We have a good Sunday school, our average attendance is more than the church membership, and all stay for preaching. We have two organized classes, one for men and one for women. These classes are doing things. Our secretary looks after our wants in literature and our teachers are the very best. We have a home department and cradle roll. Our revival meeting will begin soon and our aim is, every sinner in our school a convert and every convert a member of the church with something to do. If any of the Advocate family ever comes this way stop and see us and stay for a good country dinner. And when you are talking to the Lord remember Tabernacle.

Your brother in Christ and for a forward march. A. J. Mason.

ALBEMARLE CIRCUIT

There were four of the elect ladies from Stony Hill church in the parsonage to welcome us and give us dinner when our family arrived in the fall, and nearly every time I have been to the community of Stony Hill since they have loaded up the Ford so that I have had to run in low gear part of the way home. One man made a present of 25 gallons of gasoline, and one Bethesda member recently furnished a fine ham weighing 31 pounds. They have kept me supplied with firewood so that I have about enough to last until the annual conference. The other night a box of groceries worth several dollars came in from one of the stores, and we told the man that we had not ordered them. He said he had been ordered to bring them to us. We 'phoned the store. They replied that they were bought and paid for by some of our Stony Hill members. The quarterly conference recently ordered the putting in the parsonage of sewer connection with the line that is being laid in our street.

Some of the other pastors have been boasting of their presiding elders. In Rev. T. F. Marr, D. D., the Salisbury district has one that when it comes to preaching ability and general all around fine qualities, we are ready to put up against about anybody in Southern Methodism.

I have been preaching at Baden Sunday nights since the sickness and death of Brother Hales, until a pastor could be secured for that important field. We hope to do our part in the Advocate campaign. E. J. Poe, P. C.

ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB PROTECTS YOU

Thousands of people have pianos in their homes of which they are proud, and which are a source of pleasure for years, while many others buy guaranteed pianos on the installment plan only to find that in a year or two the tone is harsh and tin-panny, and the cabinet is cracked to pieces. When they try to get protection on their guarantee they find that the company has gone out of business. Then what good is the guarantee?

The Advocate Piano Club absolutely protects you against this outrage. Arrangements have been made with Ludden & Bates, Southern Music House, which makes piano buying safe and easy. Ludden & Bates have been selling pianos and player-pianos throughout the South for over 50 years. It is a reliable house whose guarantee means exactly what it says.

Why the Club Protects You.

Each Club consists of 100 members who by buying together gain a much better price than any one purchaser can procure. You are only responsible for your own purchase, but by joining the Club you gain the benefit of car-load prices.

You are guaranteed perfect satisfaction by a reliable Music House; a guarantee that covers the life of your piano against defective labor and material.

By joining the club you are extended the most convenient terms of monthly, quarterly or yearly payments based on the lowest net cash price. This represents a big saving as compared with the ordinary installment prices which are much higher than cash prices.

You have the privilege of trading in your old piano at its real valuation, for a new one or a player-piano.

Investigate this safe and easy way to buy your instrument. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga. They will send you the Club's Catalogue and furnish full particulars. (adv.)

Rheumatism and Indigestion

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection. Dr. Crosby writes: "I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder Troubles and in Nervous and Sick Headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that, if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began to use Shivar Spring Water and in a short time was entirely relieved."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClain of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking 20 gallons of your Mineral water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from Rheumatism, Indigestion or from any curable disease accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to Shivar Springs.

Box 4 D, Shelton, S. C. Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

THE SUPREME NEED FOR PRAYER

Prayer, prevailing, intercessory prayer, is the supreme need of the hour; prayer for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon our Council and upon the loyal body of women they represent; prayer for a divine quickening of the church of God in our own land, until lives and money shall be poured out in loving, lavish abundance for the furtherance of the gospel in all lands; prayer for world peace, a peace so grounded upon the great principles of the Prince of Peace that war and bloodshed shall be no more.—Belle H. Bennett.

I give myself unto prayer. Psalm cix, 4.

Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you. James iv, 8.

For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest until his righteousness goes forth as brightness and her salvation as a lamp that burneth. Isaiah lxii, 1.—Lambuth-Bennett Book of Remembrance.

NOTICE

The eleventh annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Carolina conference will convene in Henderson April 24-27. We hope that each auxiliary in the conference will be represented.

It is requested by the good women of Henderson who will entertain us that names of delegates be sent to Mrs. R. J. Corbett, Henderson, N. C., during March. The prompt attention of the auxiliaries to this will be much appreciated.

Miss May Edla Smith, Pres.
Mrs. E. M. Snipes, Rec. Sec.

SUBSCRIBE NOW TO THE COUNCIL BULLETIN, 25 CENTS

The Council Bulletin, containing the full proceedings of the Council sessions to be held in Mobile, April 4-11, will be issued this year as usual. The first issue will contain a full account of the memorial service to our beloved late president, which will be held on Wednesday evening, April 4. Write your name and address plainly and send with 25 cents to Mrs. S. G. Barnett, Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn., and the Council Bulletin will be sent you as soon as it comes from the press.

NATIONAL NEGRO HEALTH WEEK APRIL 1-7

In accordance with the request of the annual Tuskegee Negro Conference, co-operating with other influential organizations, an invitation has been extended to all organizations, agencies and newspapers, to unite in an effort to reduce preventable sickness and deaths, and to increase vitality and resistance to disease, which will tend to increase the well-being, earning capacity and service of the healthy citizen to home, community and country. The following is the splendid program which has been prepared:

Sunday, April 1, Sermon and Lecture Day.

Health sermons and lectures by ministers, doctors and other qualified persons. Urge the carrying out of the health work program. Give references to health information and urge co-operation with organized agencies. Emphasize mother and infant welfare work to reduce high infant mortality.

Monday, April 2, Hygiene Day.

Personal and community hygiene talks by doctors, visiting nurses, social workers and other qualified persons. Social hygiene education and venereal disease control measures should be considered in special meetings. Health films, slides and exhibits should be used wherever possible under proper supervision.

Tuesday, April 3, "Swat the Fly," Day.

Destroy the breeding places of flies, also mosquitoes. Talk on the possibility and danger of disease being spread by insects and rats, and describe the methods of destroying them. All homes, markets, bakeries and food establishments should be screened against flies.

Wednesday, April 4, Tuberculosis Day.

Talks by doctors, visiting nurses, social workers and other qualified persons. Explain that tuberculosis (consumption) is not hereditary; that spread through carelessness; that treatment should begin early. Emphasize for prevention: 1. Good cheer. 2. Good food. 3. Fresh air. 4. Proper living.

Thursday, April 5, Children's Health Day.

Health programs, stories of modern health crusades, parades, etc. It is suggested that on or before this day school buildings and premises be put in sanitary condition, and if programs are rendered in school buildings, parents and patrons be invited to attend. It is suggested that ministers give health sermons or that physicians lecture on health in churches at least once a quarter. Some part of this day, Thursday, April 5, should be devoted to commemoration of the birthday of the late Booker T. Washington, founder of National Health Week.

Friday, April 6, Church Sanitation Day.

Clean churches thoroughly inside and out. Clear the yards of all rubbish, etc. Put toilets in sanitary condition. It is suggested that health entertainments or meetings for informal talks on the week's program and the Saturday general clean-up follow the day's work.

Saturday, April 7, General Clean-Up Day.

Complete all cleaning of homes, buildings and premises. The community supervising committee should prepare through its secretary or other person a report of the results of the health week's program and send copy or summary of report to newspapers and co-operating organizations.

It is suggested that a committee be organized in each community to supervise in the carrying out of the above program.

Send requests for other information and suggestions for the campaign to Dr. R. R. Moton, Principal, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama.

It is suggested that the county committee on Race Relations assume general responsibility for carrying out these plans and organizing sub-committees as suggested below.

Sub-Committee, Publicity, Duties—Have "clean-up," "paint-up" signs printed and posted. Local paint dealers should be interested to the extent of bearing the expenses. See editors.

Speakers—Secure speakers for churches. Secure speakers for schools.

Clean-Up Day—Secure volunteer assistance to special methods of clean-up along each street. If prizes are offered, secure prizes and arrange for judging and presentation.

Co-operation—Secure co-operation of city authorities in removing refuse and draining. Secure co-operation of colored lodges in advance of the week, so that full announcements may be made through them. Secure co-operation of local physicians. Secure co-operation of local school authorities to extent of seeing that sanitary arrangements at schools are satisfactory. Secure co-operation of real estate holders.

Seek the co-operation of local health officers, farm demonstration agents, superintendents and principals of schools, home demonstration agents, health council and white churches, negro leaders, local Red Cross chapters, local anti-tuberculosis committees.

Start work in time to get preliminary arrangements made. Have the announcement of Health Week made in all churches on Sunday, April 1st, and in lodge meetings the week before Health Week.—By request of Inter-Racial Committee.

COUNCIL MEETING

We call attention to the notice of the Woman's Missionary Council which will hold its thirteenth annual meeting in St. Francis Street M. E. Church, South, Mobile, Ala., April 4-11, 1923.

Our conference president, Mrs. Lucy H. Robertson, and conference corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. A. Dunham, will attend the council meeting.

The first service will be held on Wednesday evening and will be an inspirational service in loving remembrance of Miss Belle Bennett.

The first business session will be held on Thursday morning.

The Council is planning to establish a suitable memorial to Miss Bennett. The memorial fund is to be raised on the share plan, so that every one in the church who wishes may have a part in it.

NEW OFFICERS AT LINCOLN

The following officers for the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist church, Lincoln, were elected, but owing to sickness were not installed until Sunday morning, February 8:

- Mrs. A. W. Falvey, president.
- Mrs. S. W. McLean, vice president.
- Miss Eva James, Supt. Y. P.
- Mrs. A. D. Sigmon, Supt. children.
- Mrs. M. H. Kuhn, secretary.
- Mrs. J. T. Perkins, corresponding secretary.
- Mrs. R. J. Sifford, treasurer.
- Mrs. T. C. Abernethy, Supt. S. S.
- Mrs. S. F. Herndon, Supt. supplies.
- Mrs. R. H. Randall, Supt. S. & P.
- Mrs. John Carpenter, agent Voice.

- Local work:
- Mrs. B. C. Linebarger, chairman.
- Mrs. J. R. Gamble, vice chairman.
- Mrs. M. H. Kuhn, secretary.
- Mrs. Earl Padgett, treasurer.

We have an interesting mission study class of about forty members, who meet twice each month and study the book, "Building With India."

Mrs. R. H. Randall,
Supt. Study and Publicity.

ANNUAL MEETING AT MONROE

The eleventh annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Western North Carolina conference will be held at Monroe April 24th to 27th. Let each society elect delegates at the March meeting.

Mrs. Lucy H. Robertson, Pres.
Mrs. H. A. Dunham, Cor. Sec.

Delegates expecting to attend should send their names to Mrs. Atha Stevens, 605 W. Franklin Street, Monroe, N. C. Missionaries and council officers from Nashville are expected to be present and will add much to the interesting program that has been arranged. Be sure to elect delegates as early as possible and send in names early.

ANOTHER YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY IN SHELBY

For years Central church, Shelby, has had one of the live wide-awake young people's organizations in the conference, which has done a fine work under the leadership of Mrs. Geo. A. Hoyle, and now it gives us great pleasure to announce a younger sister, which has recently come into existence, in the person of a Junior Young People's Society, with Mrs. M. P. Coley as manager.

We predict for this organization a most successful career, and feel that a recent letter from Mrs. Coley, expresses to us the enthusiasm with which the work has started. She says, "In spite of the fact that it was sleeting on February 6th, our meeting day, we had twenty-nine members present." Now, isn't that splendid? Twenty-nine on a sleety day at a missionary meeting! Let others of us take notice and follow the example set by these live young folks. Officers are: President, Miss Frances Whisnant; vice president, Reid Young; recording secretary, Miss Louise Lever; corresponding secretary, Miss Hattie Gidney; treasurer, Miss Mae Coner; Supt. social service Miss Isabel Hoey.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN MT. HOLLY

Our missionary work in Mt. Holly is growing with our growing town. Recently we had at the Methodist church a get-together, get-acquainted meeting for the women. Mrs. Steidly, an evangelist from Gastonia, a speaker of rich and rare personality and of real power, addressed the ladies, bringing to us new inspiration. We added some members to our society, and all seem to feel increased interest in all the activities of the church.

Miss Mattie G. Kirkpatrick, a returned missionary from China, came to us on the last Sunday in February, and let the sick pastor rest while she led in the morning service. Her message was chock full of human interest and divine inspiration. At the evening hour she addressed the Epworth League. Two of our devoted young women signed up for life service. Her visit was a real benediction to our people, and we hope she may find a permanent place among us as a church worker if she cannot return to the foreign field.

Our Children's Missionary Society is in good working order. Out of a membership of fifty, forty were present at a recent meeting. We have a wide-awake, efficient superintendent in this society in the person of Mrs. Sewell Hunsuck, and we joyfully expect a great, good year's work with our young people.

Mrs. O. P. Ader, Vice Pres.

CAROLEEN OFFICERS

Following are the officers of Caroleen Methodist Missionary Society for 1923:

- Mrs. J. C. Pastell, president.
- Mrs. G. C. Hardin, vice president.
- Mrs. V. T. Martin, second vice president.

Miss Virginia Graham, social service superintendent.

- Mrs. D. C. Calvin, Cor. secretary.
- Mrs. J. T. Harris, treasurer.
- Mrs. T. B. Harrill, Rec. secretary.
- Mrs. C. E. Shober, Supt. Y. P.
- Mrs. D. C. Calvin, Cor. Sec.

Western North Carolina Conference

MR. WILLIAM LINEBERGER

Mr. William Lineberger, banker, capitalist and promoter, is superintendent of our leading Shelby Sunday school and is also the lay representative for the Shelby district on the Sunday School Board. Mr. Lineberger is the oldest son of the late J. D. Lineberger, who for a number of years was a prominent personage in North Carolina Methodism. William is a chip off the old block, very naturally so for the whole Lineberger family went to church together, sat at the front of the church together and thought together.

Mr. Lineberger, a comparatively young man, is a man of affairs. He is closely connected in quite a number of enterprises, but none nor all of these cheat him out of the pleasure of serving his church. He says of himself that his annual vacation is used in attending the sessions of the Western North Carolina annual conference. His Sunday school was one of the first in our bounds to departmentize and is now one of the best we have. It is a real school of religious education.

Some years ago Mr. Lineberger was happily married to Miss Mattie Flack, of his home town of Shelby. This union has been made happier by the addition of three children, Mary Mundy, in her eighth year, Adeline Hudlow, five, and William, Jr., two and a half years of age. Mr. Lineberger is at home to his friends at the Cleveland Bank and Trust Co., Shelby, N. C.

PAY UP

The Sunday schools of the Western North Carolina conference pledged themselves to pay during the five years of the Centenary $118,205.75. To date our schools have paid $52,659.83, not half the pledge. We are now in the last year of the five. The first thing to do is to pay up what we owe. Then the next thing is to select a good special missionary enterprise and keep up the giving. Our Sunday schools must be missionary societies, thus teaching missions to all our people. But just now let's give our attention to paying our honest debts. The Centenary is an honest debt. Let's pay it.

REV. J. A. BOWLES & CO.

At least two things can be said of Rev. J. A. Bowles, our pastor at Randleman. He knows how to work and feed a man. Beginning Saturday night, March 3rd, at a banquet of his officials from his three congregations, to which came Dr. J. H. Wheeler and C. H. Ireland, of Greensboro, and extending through a Sunday night mass meeting he used me to speak at five services. In addition to these services we went to Asheboro for an hour's conference with the Workers' Council there Sunday afternoon. The work was hard, mighty hard, but we were all happy in it and as Brother Bowles would say in his introductions, "It's hard work for him, but my, how he can eat!"

Things are going good at Randleman, the best I have known in years. Over twenty years ago I was for three years a teen age lad at Randleman while my father was pastor there, and since that time have kept in right close touch with the Randleman people. Some of God's choicest people live there and they have never grown weary in well doing. Brother and Sister Bowles are serving their fortieth year in the ministry, yet it seems that they are younger than when last I was with them. Only two of nine living children are now at home, Anna May, graduating this year from high school, and Charles, two years younger, a lad who likes to drive his father's car for good purposes. Brother Bowles is growing older by the calendar, but his eye is not dimmed to an appreciation of growing life. Our Sunday school work has a good friend in Rev. J. A. Bowles.

ASHEBORO

A hurried trip to Asheboro Sunday afternoon, March 4th, brought me in touch with several of the Workers' Council of our growing congregation there. Brother Willis was present. He is greatly loved by the Asheboro people as he leads them in his characteristic way. The Sunday school has just surveyed the town, using a "Willis map," and last Sunday it was the largest in the history of the church. The purpose of our meeting was to discuss a Randolph county standard training school to be held at Asheboro at some near convenient time. The school was heartily endorsed.

BULLY BOY!

"I have enrolled for the whole business, all eight courses in the Leadership Training Work and have sent for the books today. I am going to know the Sunday school from 'A to Z.' By taking this work I think I can be in a position to render more efficient service in the selection and training of my new teachers. We are going to need about fifteen new ones when our building is ready. The architect is now at work on our plans. We are going to have a roof garden among other things. Every department will be cared for from the cradle roll up. It is going to be great!"

W. A. Jenkins.

APRIL FOOL?

Sunday, April 22, is the day set apart by our church law, "The Discipline," for observing Sunday School Day. Nearly nine hundred letters have this week been sent out to our Sunday school superintendents giving directions for obtaining programs free of charge for the observance of this day. Will our schools fool us on this April day?

S. O. S.

The Sunday school program for this year for the Western North Carolina conference calls for an expenditure of $11,000. This money is spent in a territory where there are over 900 Methodist churches in which to do many types of religious educational work. The conference employs three whole time workers and there are thirty-three part time workers. We have in sight just $9,000 for this work. The deficit must be made up through the Sunday School Day offerings if it is made up at all. Will not every friend of the Methodist Sunday school work push the Sunday School Day program and offerings?

JUST A HINT

The Western North Carolina conference Sunday school workers need an automobile so as to reach more places in the same length of time. Make your Sunday School Day offering large and the Sunday School Board might buy us one. Send all money to H. A. Dunham, Treasurer, Asheville, N. C. He will smile and send you receipt.

MOUNT AIRY DISTRICT

The Mount Airy district conference was held at Elkin Tuesday and Wednesday, March 6th and 7th. It was presided over by Bishop Denny and was well attended. Brother West, the much-beloved presiding elder, arranged to give the Sunday school man a fine hearing on the afternoon of the first day, and when he had concluded helped him secure a list of splendid leaders who agreed to purchase and study Cunningham and North's Sunday School Organization and Administration, one of the units in the standard training course. Brother A. P. Ratledge, pastor, and the Elkin people were entertaining the conference in true Elkin spirit. Elkin is a mighty good place to go to. In addition to those who had already enrolled in the study course, and quite a number had, the following were listed: Messrs. J. T. Ratledge, C. J. Powers, J. P. Morris, J. J. Eads, W. Y. Ravenport, T. V. Crouse, W. M. Wall, E. A. Rotherock, W. L. Dawson, C. W. Bowling, C. C. Tothrow, W. L. Sherrill, W. J. S. Walker, J. S. Capps, H. T. McPherson, C. W. Dowers, W. R. Jenkins.

"WHO'S WHO" IN DISTRICTS

We are placing, this year, increasing emphasis upon district work. To assist your conference-wide leaders and workers in the promotion of Sunday school interest, enthusiasm, and improvement we are organizing in each presiding elder's district a simple district organization composed of two or three persons, in addition to the presiding elder, who have agreed to devote considerable time and attention to this work. Our plan is to have in each district three voluntary workers—namely, a district secretary, a district Wesley class superintendent, and a district elementary superintendent. These places are being filled cautiously and only as rapidly as the proper person can be found. Additional workers may be named as the need for them becomes apparent and the workers available.

The securing of these district workers does not mean, however, that your conference-wide workers are going to withhold one ounce of their energy from the work in the districts. They hope to serve the districts this year better than ever before and believe that working through and in conjunction with these district workers is one effective way of increasing their usefulness to the conference.

That you may know about these district workers we are going to publish in these columns from week to week a brief "Who's Who" in the districts. We begin this week with the district secretary of the Wilmington district.

MARVIN J. COWELL

We direct the attention of the Wilmington district Sunday school constituency in particular and the conference in general, to our district secretary of the Wilmington district—Marvin J. Cowell. Born in New Jersey in 1894, Mr. Cowell came to North Carolina in 1912, married into one of our fine Methodist families of Wilmington, and soon became quite active in the church work of his community. Here are a few of the offices which he holds at the present time, and active in them all: Steward in Wesley Memorial church, Wilmington; district steward and member of parsonage trustees, Wilmington district; Centenary treasurer and chairman parsonage trustees, Wilmington circuit; vice president Wilmington city Epworth League union; superintendent of Wesley Memorial Sunday school (which office he has held for five years); member of Conference Sunday School Board, district Sunday school secretary. He has attended several Standard Training Schools, as well as our great Junaluska Training School, and now holds three certificates of credit on the Standard Training Course. He's a thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason and a Shriner. He works for his church and his community, and sells life insurance and helps run a building and loan association to pay expenses.

Somebody has said, "If you want anything done, ask a busy man to do it."

DOINGS DOWN IN DUPLIN

Four days of intensive attention were given to the interests of the Sunday school at Faison last week. Miss Keene and the writer arrived in the Duplin town Saturday night and remained there until Thursday morning, and were busy all the time they were there. Between 50 and 60 Sunday school workers and parents of Faison and Warsaw made up the two classes, and quite a few of them were present every time. Twelve sessions were held by each class, the school meeting in the afternoon and at night.

Sunday, particularly, was a full day. Sunday morning, at the request of the pastor, Rev. C. M. Lance, Miss Keene and the writer addressed a splendid audience along Sunday school lines. In the afternoon two classes, and again at night an equal number, were held.

Aside from the class work, in which much interest was taken, an interesting feature was a story hour for the children in the afternoon just preceding the regular work of the school.

FAISON TO BUILD ROOMS

Immediately following our morning services Sunday, the officers of Faison church and Sunday school met and decided to proceed at once with plans to build two additional class rooms. Sentiment was strongly in favor of the additional equipment, although not quite unanimous. The boll weevil was to be considered. Mr. C. E. Weatherby, superintendent of the school, however, gave me the situation with a fine bit of philosophy that's worth remembering: He made the point that whereas the boll weevil is with us this year, we may have two boll weevils next year. They voted to build right away!

GRACE ADOPTS PROGRAM

Stopping over in Wilmington en route from Gibson to Faison, the writer had the pleasure of attending the regular monthly meeting of the Workers' Council of Grace Sunday school and of presenting to the Council the official Program of Work for Methodist Sunday schools of its type. This engagement with our Grace workers was made at the instance of our district secretary, Mr. Marvin J. Cowell, who assisted in presenting and explaining the program. Rev. W. A. Stanbury, the pastor, as well as the other workers, were enthusiastically in favor of adopting the program and working toward its points.

Interesting reports concerning the various departments and interests of the school were made to the Council, which was presided over by Treasurer E. G. Burkhead in the absence from the city of Maj. W. A. Graham, the superintendent.

North Carolina Conference

ATTENTION, ALL EPWORTH LEAGUERS

We are getting out our first League Special as an Easter edition. This medium is for the purpose of awakening and deepening interest. We therefore urge every league in the North Carolina conference to send us something at once concerning your membership, plans, policy, or work you are doing. This will deepen interest and help each local league so represented, and thus most help out the cause and accomplish the purpose of your publication.

We are writing personal letters to each district and conference league officer, but don't wait for this letter. Let us have your literary contributions, leadership suggestions, your bit, whatever it may be. This is no one man's business.

ANNIVERSARY DAY APRIL 8

Every league is urged to commemorate the birth of the Epworth League, April 8th, with an anniversary rally. A special pageant, "The Modern Prodigal," has been prepared for this program. Copies may be secured from Rev. E. L. Hillman, Scotland Neck.

This writer once visited Trinity church, Los Angeles, Cal., for a Sunday service, the birth place of the Epworth League. And since we are both the same age, the Epworth League and the Anniversary Day have been of special interest and moment to your League editor. This is the season also for the election of your officers for the coming year. We should all be most prayerful as well as careful in the planning and working out of these programs and problems, and in our choice of the most consecrated, intelligent officers possible, for the leadership determines the interest and life of any organization. Our unique work is the training of leaders.

We are delighted to hear that new leagues are being organized at Falling Creek, on the Mount Olive circuit, at Weldon, Murfreesboro, Fairmont, and at Rockingham. Let the good work go on.

SPECIAL MEETING, RALEIGH

Mr. Ted Mercer, noted Episcopal layman evangelist, spoke at a joint meeting of the Raleigh City Epworth League, Sunday evening, March 4th, at Edenton Street church. The Senior leagues of Central, Epworth and Edenton Street churches were present, together with the Methodist Orphanage league and the Christian Endeavor of the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Mercer told of his own wonderful experience and the power of Jesus Christ to save to the uttermost. He and Mr. H. H. Hadley, son of a Methodist minister, are holding a series of mission meetings this week at Christ's church, Raleigh, N. C.

NEW LEAGUE AT FALLING CREEK

We have just organized an Epworth League at Falling Creek Methodist church on the Mount Olive circuit and New Bern district, and these are the officers:

President—Mrs. E. A. Stevens, Jr.
Vice President—Mertie Laws.
Secretary—Miss Sodie Cox.
Cor. Secretary—Miss Henry Murphy.
Treasurer—Miss Henry Murphy.
Era Agent—William Jennette.
First Dept. Supt.—Haywood Cox.
Second Dept. Supt.—Miss Mertie Laws.
Third Dept. Supt.—E. A. Stevens, Jr.
Fourth Dept. Supt.—Miss Mildred Grantham.

CHARLOTTE EFFICIENCY INSTITUTE

Announcement is made by Mr. Jas. S. Sease, president of the Charlotte Epworth League Union, that plans have been perfected for the holding of Charlotte's third annual Efficiency Institute March 26th to 30th.

The board of directors was appointed some time ago and they have secured for the faculty some of our best posted leaguers who will teach league methods for the different departments, and they were able to secure Mr. Harbin of the Central Office, who will have charge of the third department.

Preliminary work has been done in the different leagues and the indications are that this institute, to be held at Trinity church, March 26th to 30th, will be the best that Charlotte has ever had.

ANNIVERSARY DAY ANNOUNCEMENT

Would your life have been as worth while if the Epworth League did not exist? Thirty-three years ago our General Conference gave us this organization. It has meant much to us who are leaguers, but there are thousands of Methodists, old and young, who may not know what big things we are doing. On the second Sunday in April, or as near that date as practical, we observe Anniversary Day as the birthday of the league. Our church discipline gives us this day on which to present our work to the entire organization. A program is prepared by the Central Office for use at the morning service. We believe much of the indifference to our organization is due to lack of information on the part of the membership of the church. Let's give the suggested program on April 8th and enlist the interest of those of our church not connected with the Epworth League.

This is the only time during the year when we ask the church for an offering to be used for the extension of Epworth League work. Please see that this offering is sent to Mr. P. L. Plyler, conference treasurer, at Hickory, N. C.

J. Paige King,
First Dept. Supt.

GREENSBORO DISTRICT UNION MEETING

Brother Walter Brown, the up and going president of the Carraway Memorial League, and his leaguers entertained the regular monthly meeting of the Greensboro District Union at the new White Oak Y. M. C. A. Thursday night, March 8th. In addition to being president of the league, Brother Brown is a member of the Y. M. C. A. staff at that place and this spacious new building was at our disposal and everyone had an enjoyable time.

The devotional meeting was conducted by the president and he named a nominating committee to report by next meeting a list for officers for the ensuing year. Jamestown won the decision in the singing contest over Spring Garden and then challenged Carraway Memorial for a contest at the next meeting. Another league reached the heights in percentage and we now have two leagues making a perfect grade. Liberty is the new league that joins with Carraway Memorial in this enviable record and Spring Garden is only ten points behind. The attendance banner was awarded to Carraway Memorial. Our presiding elder, Brother Womble, gave us an inspiring address on character. He again assured us of his co-operation in every effort to make the young people's work in the Greensboro district a living, vital factor in the church. Walnut Street having no representative present, we accordingly invited ourselves to meet with them Thursday night, April 12th.

D. L. Webster, Cor. Sec.

REV. AND MRS. A. S. RAPER ENTERTAIN

Thursday evening at the Methodist parsonage Rev. and Mrs. A. S. Raper delightfully entertained at a Washington birthday party.

The members of the Senior Epworth League of their church and other nearby friends were their guests. The rooms were charmingly arranged with decorations appropriate to the day. Numerous small flags were arranged throughout the rooms; streamers of red, white and blue were arranged in the hall; ferns and other plants were used in making the home look brighter.

Various contests, games and music were features of the evening entertainment.

Several delightful instrumental pieces were rendered on the piano by Mrs. S. C. Cornwell and Miss Sapoch, teacher of music in the Dallas high school.

The pastor, Rev. A. S. Raper, made a brief talk to the members of the league, urging loyalty and co-operation.

Refreshments, consisting of hot chocolate and block cake, were served, followed by red and white mints.

The favors for the evening were small hatchets, combining red, white and blue colors, bearing date of birth and death of George Washington.

About twenty-six boys and girls were present to enjoy the evening.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

In these notes will be found a paragraph from one of our most promising girls. She is writing about our splendid Epworth Leagues. Into this branch of our work she has put her best thought and highest endeavor. It is well worth your time to read such a splendid article by one of our finest girls.

* * * * *

Most of the boys and girls who borrowed from the Bettie Henly Vann Educational Loan Fund are paying back the loans very promptly. Just a few who have had reverses are finding it difficult to take up their notes. On the whole I am very much pleased with the response that is coming from those who took advantage of the loan to complete their higher education.

* * * * *

It is encouraging to have a young man full of enthusiasm and with a vision, like Mr. L. L. Gobbel, to lead in the work of our great Sunday school cause. He is bringing to the task a trained mind and a master passion to put our Sunday school cause in the forefront where it rightfully belongs. It behooves all Sunday school workers to give him their hearty and glad co-operation in all of his plans and undertakings.

* * * * *

We are bringing before our older boys and girls, men and women of prominence who are addressing them on subjects of vital interest. Last Sunday night, after the League service, Professor Layfield, president of King's Business College, addressed our boys and girls on the essentials of success. It was clear cut, sane and wholesome. Running through the address was the idea that the accumulation of wealth, within itself, does not constitute success. He put the emphasis of his address upon intelligent, Christian service. Such timely advice must result in permanent good to those whose good fortune it was to be present.

* * * * *

During the summer of nineteen twenty, we, the young people of the Methodist Orphanage, decided to organize ourselves into a league, which we did. We have had a good time working together. We are doubly happy when we remember that we are a band of young people who are trying to live up to and carry out our purpose of consecration, preparation and service. We began as one large league, but soon realized that in order for the different members to do very effective work we must divide ourselves into a senior and intermediate league. This we did. We are fully organized and are doing real league work. Doubtless some of our beginners who are doing such active work now will be of great service in Christian work when God needs them most. From the league services we have obtained more vital doctrines, precepts of the gospel, discipline of our hearts and minds, and above all, the dedication of self and time to God. We have a greater number of real leaders now than we had before we fully organized. This assures us that the league is meaning much to us young people, for it is training us for service.

Bertha Smith.

Maxton was visited the first Sunday morning in March by our singing class. A large and attentive congregation greeted us. The Baraca class at St. Paul church, Maxton, will undertake to put one of our girls through Carolina College, beginning next fall. This is a most worthy undertaking and deserves the hearty commendation of all our people. It was my good fortune to be guest of President Green, of Carolina College. He is enthusiastic over the college, and the college is being developed under his direction. Next fall will witness a larger attendance. The college badly needs a new dormitory. It would be a fine thing if some one of means would make such a building possible. If our Methodists of the Rockingham, Fayetteville, Wilmington and New Bern districts will give this college their support it can be made a most useful institution. Let us give President Green the co-operation which he has a right to expect from the southeastern part of the state. Brother J. L. Rumley has entered upon what promises to be a very successful pastorate.

* * * * *

Last Sunday night our singing class gave a sacred concert in Chestnut Street Methodist church, Lumberton, to a most attentive and appreciative congregation. We were there about two years ago, but the attendance this time was much larger than then. The orphanage collection last Sunday was one hundred and sixty-five dollars ($165). The Orphanage Day each month is one of the biggest events in the life of the Sunday school. Bro. K. M. Barnes, a prominent banker, is the popular and wide-awake superintendent of this growing Sunday school. The Sunday we were there the school reach the largest attendance in its history. The support that it gives our orphanage has much to do with its success. It was a joy to me to have fellowship with Brother Barnes and his family while I was in Lumberton. A few years ago he very generously gave us a thousand dollars for our Baby Cottage.

Lumberton is noted for many things, and especially for its generous support of the orphanage cause. For many years the Baptist church there enjoyed the distinction of being the largest contributor to the orphanage cause of any church in the world. Our Methodist friends are not so numerous in Lumberton, but they have taken the orphanage close to their great heart.

Dr. R. C. Beaman has entered upon his sixth year as pastor of Chestnut Street church. He is universally popular and deservedly so. He is one of the biggest preachers in Southern Methodism, and Lumberton has long since recognized that fact. He is happy in his work and the membership of his church is happy to have him to minister to them in holy things.

OUR LITTLE FOLKS

THREE LITTLE KITTENS

If I had three little kittens,
And could choose their colors, too,
I know just what the colors would be,
The red, white and blue.

And oh, how I would love them;
I would feed them every day,
And oh, how it would grieve me
If one should run away.

—Mabel Sue Copeland.

THE CIRCUS HORSE

Born in a mountain pasture,
Where star-eyed daisies grow
By streams of crystal water
Fed by the melting snow;
Sired by a Flemish stallion,
Foaled by an Arab mare,
Doing the will of my trainer
Under the spotlight's glare.

Prancing around the sawdust,
Steed to a tinselled Thing!
Toy for the public fancy,
I, who was born a king!
Slave to a piercing whistle,
Gaud for the public eye,
Young, I was fed with kindness,
Old, I am left to die.

Keeping time to the music
With each of my dainty feet,
The big parade moves slowly
Over the sweltering street.
Trained to obey the guiding
Touch of my rider's knee,
Thinking, while I'm obeying,
Thinking, if I were free!

Free in a mountain pasture,
Tossing my chestnut mane,
Flinging my heels and snorting
As though I were young again.
Only in dreams I wander
Far fields of flower and gorse,
For the blare of circus music
Is the doom of the circus horse.

—Reginald C. Barker, in Our Dumb Animals.

DAFFEY LEARNS SOME TRICKS

Two of the happiest chums to be found anywhere are little Nita Hayner and her collie puppy, Daffy. Wherever Nita goes Daffy follows her. They play together for hours at a time. When Nita takes her afternoon nap Daffy lies down near her bed and sleeps as long as she does. Every one who knows them calls them "lively chums."

One cold day when they could not play on the lawn Nita threw a beautiful rubber ball across the sitting room. Daffy ran after it, barking gaily, and brought it back to her in his mouth. This pleased Nita so much that she threw the ball away again just to see Daffy bring it back. Every time she threw it away he quickly brought it back to her. Nita was laughing so heartily and Daffy was barking so gladly that Mrs. Hayner came into the room to see what they were doing. She was so delighted that she joined in the frolic with them.

Nita's brother Fred said that he was going to teach Daffy to catch a ball in his mouth. Nita's ball was so big Daffy could hardly get it into his mouth, so Fred bought a smaller one. When Fred first pitched the ball to Daffy he would only run after it and bring it back. But Fred kept on pitching it to him. After a long time he caught it in his mouth and carried it to Nita. She gave him a great big hug and patted him on the head. Fred gave him a big chocolate. When Daffy ate the chocolate Fred pitched the ball to him again and he caught it. He soon learned this trick. Nita was overjoyed when she pitched the ball and he caught it for her. Nita wanted Fred to teach him more tricks.

Fred told Miss Moore, his Sunday school teacher, about Daffy's tricks. She said: "Fred, I have a nice little book that tells all about training dogs to do tricks. I will lend it to you."

"Oh, will you, Miss Moore," cried Fred.

"Yes, indeed, I will."

"Then I will train Daffy."

Miss Moore gave the book to Fred and he ran home with it. He soon found that if he wanted Daffy to learn tricks he must be kind to him. His mother told him to read all the book very carefully, and he did. Then he began teaching Daffy easy tricks.

In just a few days Daffy had learned to shake hands with people. When callers come he goes to them and holds out his paw to shake hands with them. It was easy to teach him to lie down and roll over when he wanted food. One day he saw Fred eating bread and he wanted some of it. He rolled over several times. But Fred did not notice him. Then he rolled, and rolled, and rolled. And what do you think he did then? He sat upon his hind legs and looked at Fred and whined. When Nita saw him do that she clapped her hands and laughed merrily. She had never seen a dog do that before. Fred then gave him some of his bread.

Nita wanted Daffy to do that again. Fred got some more bread and soon had Daffy sitting up to eat. He liked to be fed that way. When his food was brought he would sit up and wait to be fed.

Nita wanted Daffy to have a red high chair like she had, and sit by her at the table. She wanted him to wear a nice white bib just like she did. She did not know that he could not hold a spoon and feed himself. Mrs. Hayner would let Fred put a bib on Daffy and put him in a high chair, but not very close to the table. Sometimes he would sit there a long time.

Fred said he was going to teach Daffy table manners. One day he put a dress on him. Daffy liked that. Then Fred put one of Nita's baby caps on him and put him in a very small chair at Nita's little table. Fred had prepared Daffy's food so he could give him one bite at a time. At first this was too slow to suit Daffy, but Fred was kind to him. It took a long time to teach Daffy to eat slowly, but finally he learned. Fred was so kind and gentle that Daffy seemed to know that it was best to obey him.

Mrs. Hayner gave Nita and her little friends a Christmas party. Fred had Daffy do all his tricks for the children. They had never seen a dog do such things. Each one thought he was the finest dog they ever saw. Most of the little children asked their papas for collie dogs when they went home.

All the children who live near Nita like to visit her. They think Daffy is the finest play fellow in town. He has learned to play hide and seek with Nita. She does not understand why he can always find her but Fred knows. Dogs can follow people just by smelling where they have walked. This is why Nita cannot hide so Daffy cannot find her.

Fred says he is going to teach Daffy every trick in the book Miss Moore loaned him. He knows a great many good tricks now. Fred wants to make him a real show dog. He is a big fine fellow now and growing fast.

The very best trick Daffy knows he learned all by himself. When Mrs. Hayner dresses Nita for bed she always kneels at her mother's knee to say her evening prayer. Daffy often watched her do this. One evening, not long ago, what do you think he did? When Nita knelt at her mother's knee to pray Daffy walked slowly to Mrs. Hayner and placed his paws on her knee and laid his head on them. Every one thought this was his very best trick. Now he does it every evening. Mr. Hayner had a fine picture made of them at prayer and named it "Chums at Prayer." Each of his friends want one of these pictures. Wouldn't you like one?—William James Robinson in Word and Way.

MOTHER, MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS WITH "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"

Even Cross, Feverish, Sick Children Love its Taste
and it Never Fails to Empty Little Bowels

A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will quickly start liver and bowel action and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Fig Syrup" because it never fails to work the sour bile and constipation poison right out of the little stomach and bowels without cramping or overacting.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.

WORKING TOGETHER

One very cold winter night old Northwind and Little Jack Frost had a long talk, and I happened to overhear them.

Northwind called Jack Frost to see a snowdrift which he had blown into a fence corner, and it certainly was a beautiful snowdrift, although Jack Frost turned up his nose and laughed, saying: "I can make just as pretty things; just watch me."

Northwind decided to see what Jack Frost could do, so he wrapped his cloak about him and went to see Jack Frost work in a pond not far away.

As they flew on and on Jack Frost peeped in a window and saw a little boy sleeping. "Let's do something for Jackie Boy," whispered Jack Frost.

"We will!" shouted Northwind, and soon they were hard at work, Northwind puffing little flakes of snow against the window pane, while Jack Frost fastened them on and at the same time drew pictures of trees on the outside. Then Jack Frost hurriedly tasted the water in Jackie Boy's silver cup, which turned the water into ice, and crept out at the keyhole.

When Northwind and Jack Frost passed a tiny pond old Northwind fairly held his breath a moment with delight. Then he, being older, said: "Let's work together this winter."

"Agreed," laughed Jack Frost. "Will you ripple the top of this water while I freeze it?"

"That I will," answered old Northwind.

As Northwind and Jack Frost were going home next morning they saw Jacky Boy looking at the pretty pictures on his window. They tried to talk to him, but they rattled the window so noisily that Jackie Boy ran away to sit by the fire.

After breakfast Jackie Boy begged to go outside, and Jack Frost and Northwind were waiting to play with him. One pinched his nose and the other blew off his hat.

When he went in the house his cheeks were as red as roses and his fingers as purple as Jack Frost could make them, and he said to his mother, "I guess Jack Frost and Northwind do their work so well because they work together."—Iowa Story-Teller.

It was a hot sultry day in a great city. Seven cars were lined up in front of a busy filling station. Third from the end stood a leaking, steaming, rattling little five-passenger. In due time the line dwindled and the little five-passenger found itself parallel with the gas pipe.

"How many?" the man asked impatiently.

"One," answered Mr. Fliv with the air of a Rockefeller.

"One? What cha' tryin' to do. Wean it?"

True speech needs color and light. There is no occasion so dark but that it can be lightened by a warm, bright word.

O teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things thou dost impart,

And wing my words, that they may reach

The hidden depths of many a heart!

IF SICK, BILIOUS! START YOUR LIVER

Don't Take Calomel! "Dodson's Liver Tone" Acts Better and Doesn't Gripe, Salivate or Make You Sick—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

Cotton and Peanuts

WHY save the Cotton Crop from the boll weevil and then let rust destroy it? A fertilizer with 5 per cent of Potash will prevent cotton rust. A test on Peanuts showed that an 8-3-10 fertilizer gave nearly double the crop obtained from the use of same amount of 8-3-0. The 8-3-10 produced well filled nuts; the 8-3-0 produced a large lot of "Pops".

Potash is today the cheapest thing that goes into a fertilizer. Take advantage of this now—use it freely.

 building plans. Some congregations, as has been previously noted in these columns, are about to build new from the ground up, and others are going to expand by the addition of class rooms. Rose Hill, Wilmington district, is the latest to make known to us her plans to build. Mr. J. C. Mallard, superintendent of the Sunday school, is authority of the information that the Rose Hill congregation is looking forward to the building of a brand new Sunday school and church building. Details have not yet been definitely decided, but the structure will be of brick, and indications are that the interests of the Sunday school will be cared for first.

PROGRAMS ARE ORDERED
 We have just sent off to Lamar and Barton, agents for our Publishing House, orders for Sunday School Day Programs for every pastoral charge in the North Carolina conference. We are ordering what we think is an ample quantity in each case. If, however, any school finds itself in need of additional programs, a letter addressed to L. L. Gobel, Durham, N. C., will bring more. Sunday School Day should be observed the third Sunday in April or as near thereto as practicable, says section 393 of our Discipline.

ORPHANAGE SINGING CLASS AT FREMONT
 Rev. A. S. Barnes and Mrs. Reaves appeared in the Methodist church here Sunday, the 11th of March, at eleven o'clock with the class and rendered a sacred concert. It is needless for me to say that the exercise was of the highest order, for that fact was well established when I say that great quiet and earnestness swept over the congregation at the rendering of each selection of the splendid program. The people are lavish in their praise of the fine body of children representing our orphanage at Raleigh. Although the day was rainy and the streets and roads coated with a slush of mud, the church was filled to its capacity. It was indeed a glorious hour, and an hour fraught with enthusiastic sympathy for orphan children. Their presence made glad the children and the young people of the community as well as the older ones.
 Supt. Barnes was in his glory, for he was among his own kith and kin, since he was reared near Fremont. All

IN MEMORIAM

PRICE—On February 20th Mrs. Elizabeth Price, the wife of Mr. John Price of Antioch community, was called home to heaven at the ripe age of 88 years. She had renewed her covenant with God on last November and joined our church, and patiently and longingly awaited her call to come up higher. She leaves her husband, aged 75, and two sons and many friends to mourn her departure. May God smile favorably upon them. A. A. Angel.

WILLET—Bro. John Willett was 34 years old the 15th of last June. For the last eleven years he has been unable to work because of tuberculosis. He was a patient, cheerful invalid during those eleven years, and he went to sleep February 22nd. His Christian life was an exemplary one, and he retained his faith and confidence in God to the last. May God bless and comfort his parents, brother and sister and prepare them to meet their loved one above. R. A. Swaringen, Pastor.

THOMAS—Mrs. J. H. Thomas was born September 25, 1850; died February 19, 1923, aged 73 years, seven months and six days; married October 18, 1874; two children survive. She was a good, faithful mother and wife. She has been a consistent member of Bethlehem M. E. Church, South, for years. A good mother in Israel is gone. A calm and beautiful sunset reflects the glory of its Maker. God bless Brother Thomas.

Cbas. P. Goode.

DAGENHART—Catherine E. Dagenhart, passed away February 22, 1923, being 76 years, seven months and 12 days old. In 1865 she married Emanuel Dagenhart, who died 14 years ago. There are nine children living; also 61 grandchildren. In her girlhood she gave her heart to God and connected herself with the Methodist church, and was faithful to the end. Her body was laid to rest at Marvin church. The funeral was conducted by Rev. R. L. Melton. Her life was a benediction to us all and we know she is at rest.

Her Children.

HATHAWAY—On February 9 our hearts were saddened by the death of Clarence Hathaway. He was 81 years old and looked as if he had a great future. I knew him in health, saw him in sickness, looked at him die. Sinners die hard, Christians die easy; if so Clarence has gone to heaven. No one could die easier; he simply quit breathing. He realized his condition, but expressed no fear of death—only regret at leaving his loved ones. He leaves to mourn their loss a loving wife, two little boys, father and numerous relatives and friends.

Paul Williams.

MEADOR—Edward Peter Meador was born December 21, 1850; died January 29, 1923, aged 72 years, one month and eight days. Was married to Miss Mary E. Ratliff October 27, 1874. They have ten children, nine of whom are living. He was converted and joined Bethlehem M. E. Church, South, 21 years ago. He was a successful farmer, a good citizen and a kind neighbor. When the end came he was ready to go. He died in the faith. God bless his companion and children.

Chas. P. Goode.

CARVER—On February 22 at about 1:30 o'clock in the morning, while returning from his shack at the Bucho Lime Plant, as it was believed, to make the one-thirty train pouch, Mr. H. P. Carver, who has been their night watchman for the past three years, met his death, as it is believed, by a local freight train striking him while crossing the sidetrack. His body was found early in the morning lying between the main line and the side track. Mr. Carver was a member of our church at Antioch. He leaves several children and brothers and many friends to mourn his departure. May God sustain them in their grief and loss.

A. A. Angel.

MANION—Mrs. Essie Lasley Manion was born May 24, 1889; died February 16, 1923, aged 33 years, eight months and 24 days. Se was married to B. A. Manion December 24, 1914. She was regenerated and joined Salem M. E. Church, South, at the age of 12 years. Her Christian life was beautiful. She loved her church and her Saviour, and died in great peace. God bless her devoted husband and little seven-year-old son. Her pastor, Chas. P. Goode.

FREEZE—Franklin A. Freeze was born September 9, 1846; died February 21, 1923, aged 76 years, five months and 12 days. In the year 1872 he was married to Elizabeth Hoover. To this union were born six children, three of whom are living. In early life he was a member of the Lutheran church, later removing to Shiloh M. E. church, where he remained a faithful member until called to his reward. He was an affectionate husband, a kind father, a good citizen and will be missed by his church and community.

R. L. Melton.

ALEXANDER—Millard F. Alexander passed away December 23, 1922, being in his 71st year. In the year 1875 he was married to Miss Sarah Stewart. To this union were born seven children, all of whom are living. In early life he professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. church at Marvin, later removing to Bethlehem, where he remained a consistent member until his death. The funeral was conducted at the home by his pastor, Rev. R. L. Melton, and his body was laid to rest at Beulah church. A large crowd attended the funeral.

A Friend.

SHOOK—On January 8, 1923, young George E. Shook was struck by a falling tree and killed, being 20 years, eight months and five days old. At 11 years of age he gave his heart to God and joined the Methodist Episcopal church at Bethlehem. Later he removed to Bethel church, where he remained a consistent member until his death. He had just served a two year enlistment in the U. S. navy, and gave promise of a strong and useful manhood. His parents are heartbroken, his friends and kindred mourn their loss, but we bow to the will of Him who knoweth all things. The body was buried at Bethel church by his pastor.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has taken from our midst our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Jasper Sidbury, we, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Scott's Hill, N. C., resolve:

First, That in the death of Mrs. Sidbury our society has lost a faithful and willing worker.

Second, That we appreciate the fact that the keynote of her life was love and kindness. We feel deeply the loss of her presence, but we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

Third, That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy in this dark hour of bereavement.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the North Carolina Christian Advocate and a copy spread upon the minutes.

Mrs. Ella J. Lamb,
Mrs. R. L. Foy,
Miss Winnie Mae Byrd.

GILLESPIE—Joseph Gillespie was suddenly called away February 6, 1923. He was 84 years and 20 days old. His remains were laid to rest in the cemetery of Purdies church, where he was a member. A large crowd was present at his burial. This speaks for the high esteem in which he was held by his neighborhood.

For a number of years Brother Gillespie had been a member of Beth Carr Presbyterian church, but last year he united with the Methodist church at Purdies, where he had given much of his life as superintendent in the Sunday school, a teacher and conducting prayer meeting. Good books and papers were his daily companions. Many were the testimonies of the good life Brother Gillespie had lived. May God bless his widow and friends left behind.

H. E. Lance.

MOORE—John R. Moore was born March 7, 1846. He went to his heavenly home November 4, 1922. His sojourn here had been 76 years, seven months and 29 days. On January 20, 1874, he was happily married to Miss Ellen E. Mobley. To them were born five children, Mrs. E. W. Pugh and Mrs. J. I. Andrews of Reidsville, N. C., Mrs. W. T. Maynard of Greensboro, N. C., J. Nathan Moore, Danville, Va., and Janie, who preceded her father to the glory world ere she reached womanhood. The mother and companion left earth for her heavenly reward in 1894.

In 1896 Brother Moore married Miss Annie E. Mobley. Twelve years ago she was gathered with the faithful.

Bro. J. R. Moore was converted and joined Bethlehem M. E. Church, South, when about sixteen years old. He was a true servant of his church, always dependable. For more than fifty years he was a good and faithful steward. I am told that he was always a true friend to his pastor. I spent a few hours with him just two or three days before he departed. He told me he was ready to go when the Saviour would call him. On November 4th I fancy the Lord said, "Son, we have walked long enough together on earth—come home." And he was not, for God took him. God buries his workmen, but carries on his work. May Brother Moore's mantle be worthily worn by another of the Lord's anointed.

His pastor,
Chas. P. Goode.

a host of friends and relatives to mourn their loss.

Sister Perry was of a quiet, gentle nature and had a large circle of friends. She was widely known and greatly loved. On the night of her going her family and friends knew the end was near. It was a great shock to give her up. The funeral services were conducted at the little home near the roadside where she had lived for some time by Rev. T. M. Grant, pastor of Hertford Methodist church, assisted by Rev. Josiah Elliott of Hertford, a Baptist minister. We sang with touching tenderness some of her old favorite hymns. She was laid to rest in the family burying ground on the farm, a place she loved so well, and loving hands paid the last tribute of respect and esteem.

May our heavenly Father bless and comfort those who feel this stroke most keenly, and may we all meet her in our Father's house above.

"Asleep in Jesus; far from thee Thy kindred and their graves may be; But thine is still a blessed sleep, From which none ever wake to weep."

A Friend.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, our heavenly Father in His wisdom removed from us on February 11, 1923, our sister and co-worker, Mrs. Carrie Padgett; therefore be it resolved:

First, That the Junior Sunday school class of which she was a teacher, and Oak Grove M. E. Church, South, of which she was an excellent and worthy member, wish to record our love and appreciation of the devotion which marked her Christian life.

Second, That we cherish the memory of her Christian influence in our Sunday school and church.

Third, That we, the surviving members, feel deeply our love, and will endeavor to follow her in being true in the services and offerings to the church and Sunday school.

Fourth, We thank God for having felt the influence of her gentle Christian life.

Fifth, We extend to the bereaved ones our tender sympathy and trust that her life as a wife and mother will lead them on till they, like her, shall pass into the home of the soul.

The revival meeting calls for a zeal of peculiar intensity. Passion is a necessity of the effectual evangelistic appeal. But the weeks and even months that follow the revival call for deep concern in looking after the new converts. To train and care for the "babes in Christ" is absolutely essential if the church expects to conserve the results of the revival. Many deplorable blunders are made right at this point. Let us have a care for those who stand in special need of Christian interest, sympathy and help.

"Who dares think one thing and another tell
My soul detests him as the gates of hell."

So wrote the old pagan poet as his spirit revolted against that which is false. The lying tongue called forth sharp words, also, from St. James in a philippic which contains this red hot language: "And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity; so is the tongue among our members, that it defleth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell."

The cross has become a throne and the Crucified has been crowned. The "old ship of Zion" through the ages has proudly carried the cross upon her masthead. This symbol of sacrificial service stretches wide its arms of gold above earth's lordly cathedrals and is lifted high in the forefront of the conquering armies of our Christ. "All the light of sacred story gathers round its head sublime." Yet there are some who would get rid of the cross. Calvary with its blood is distasteful to these fastidious followers of an ethical Jesus. But the Christian centuries cry, "Give no heed to their fallacies and their follies." The Bible registers its protest. The heart of man, beaten and crushed by sin, cries not for sign posts, but for a place of refuge. The bleeding Samaritan by the wayside asks not for counsel, but for one stronger than he to pick him up and pour in oil and wine. Surrender the cross and the Christian religion will stagger to its death.

The first five commandments of the Decalogue are bound together with a common bond, as with a chain of gold. That bond is reverence. It is the big word in the first table of the Commandments. The first commandment orders us to worship God only. The second ordains a spiritual worship. But worship implies reverence. The third commandment is a specific command "not to take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." The fourth enjoins reverence for the Sabbath day. And the fifth is no exception to all the rest for it says: "Honor thy father and thy mother." Reverence for God, the one God, who is Spirit, for the Sabbath day, for one's parents, that is the message which God has given us in the first great table of the law. He has made this the one foundation of the entire social fabric. To profane His name, to profane His day, to dishonor one's father and mother is to dig out the mud-sills of society. Reverence, reverence, reverence is the supreme need of every age and each individual.

Inlets without outlets are disastrous. The dead sea has inlets but no outlets. In consequence, it is a sea of death. The miser has inlets and they stand wide open for the gold to come in. But he has closed up all the outlets. The gold must stay with him and its very presence serves to dwarf and damn his already shrivelled soul. The miser spirit which constantly seeks to get, but at all times refuses to give, should be feared as were the ancient plagues. The rose gives its fragrance, the bird gives its song, the vineyards and orchards of earth give their fruits. So must the Christian be a giver. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit."

Elbert Robb Zaring is editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate. His father was a Methodist preacher. Upon one occasion just before P. T. Barnum's circus visited the community, the elder Zaring was importuned by his official board to preach upon the evils of the circus. This he did in the vigorous fashion that characterized the early Methodist preachers of Illinois. Mr. Barnum having heard of the sermon announced that at the afternoon performance he would answer Dr. Zaring. All the officials were on hand to hear Barnum's reply to their pastor. Mr. Barnum appeared in person before the big assembly and simply stated that everything said by Dr. Zaring in his sermon about the circus is true. Would the reader be surprised to know that the entire official board instead of retiring after having heard Barnum's reply, stayed through to the end of the performance. And that was back in "the good old days" when saints are supposed to have been as plentiful as huckleberries are in Sampson county.

John Wesley said upon one occasion, "Our people die well." That is true of all good Christians. Interesting and inspiring are these dying declarations of some of God's children who were the world's great servants. Here are their last words:

Richard Baxter: "I have pain, but I have peace."

Edward Payson: "The battle is fought, the victory won."

John Wesley: "The best of all God is with us."

Charles Wesley: "I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness."

Susannah Wesley: "Children, I am going; lift a song of praise."

John Fletcher: "I am like a bird escaping from its cage."

Prince Albert: "Rock of Ages, cleft for me."

Lady Huntington: "I am going to my Father tonight."

Philip Melancthon: "Nothing now but heaven."

John Bradford, to his fellow-martyr: "Be of good comfort, we shall sup with Christ tonight."

Edward Perronet, author of "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name": "Glory to God in the height of his divinity! Glory to God in the depths of his humanity! Glory to God in all his sufficiency! Into his hands I commit my spirit."

FAYETTEVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The city of Sanford bears the distinction of being the only town in the state touched by the three great railroad systems of the state. It is also distinct in one other matter. It is just about one-half of the county seat of Lee county, Jonesboro sharing this honor with Sanford. In addition to three systems of railroads there are highways leading out in every direction, and it is an easy place of access, hence when Rev. R. H. Willis, the painstaking, courteous and consecrated presiding elder of the Fayetteville district, called the district conference to order in Steel Street church on last Wednesday morning, there were a large number of preachers and delegates present to answer the first roll call. Several of the charges had a full delegation.

Brother M. M. Fox, superintendent of the Sunday school at Siler City, was elected secretary and he and the presiding elder made a good team.

Brother Willis gave most of the first session over to the laymen and asked them to tell of progress that had been made in their churches during the past ten years. Many very encouraging talks were made, but some of the congregations are worshipping in the same building that their fathers used and many of them have the same system for church work.

At 11 o'clock Rev. G. T. Adams preached and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, he being assisted by Revs. J. C. Wooten, A. B. Crumpler, R. H. Willis and W. A. Piland. It was a time of self-examination and when all present seemed to realize the importance of a deeper consecration.

The afternoon of the first day was given over to the flock of "Rod Riders" that had swooped down on Brother Willis and almost swamped him, but all received words of kindness from the good elder and every fellow was given ample time to represent his interest. The main issue discussed was the Laymen's Movement. Dr. W. P. Few, conference lay leader, was present and made a short address and introduced Mr. G. L. Morelock, general secretary of the Board of Lay Activities, who enthusiastically addressed the conference. He has a large program mapped out for the laymen, and it will work if he can induce the brethren to roll up their sleeves and go to it.

Rev. R. L. Davis represented the Anti-Saloon League, Rev. A. S. Barnes the Methodist Orphanage and the assistant editor, the North Carolina Christian Advocate. Left over to speak on Thursday were Rev. S. B. Turrentine, D. D., Professor Mohn, Mr. L. L. Gobble, Miss Georgia Keene and possibly others.

The district is in fine shape and all are delighted with the new elder.

Of course, the one thing that pleased the Advocate man was the enthusiasm manifested toward the church paper. Brother Stanfield, the Advocate's leader in that district, assured us that the Fayetteville would be at least in speaking distance to the one on top. The other preachers and laymen present all said likewise. So we shall not be surprised if the Fayetteville runs all the other 19 districts a close race for highest honors this year.

Brother Fox will, no doubt, furnish us with a full report of the conference.

A WARM CONFERENCE AT HOT SPRINGS

Where Spring Creek enters the French Board, as that river of romance hurries through the Great Smokies, the mountains on the left bank of the river have been set back from this beautiful stream which both above and below is cramped by the cliffs that crowd upon its waters. The result is a mountain-girt garden where the waters fresh from nature's warm heart bubble up in never failing supply.

The place at first was called Warm Springs. But a little less than fifty years ago when the railroad with its Pullman cars supplanted the stage coach up and down the French Broad, the name was changed to Hot Springs.

I was the itinerant novice who served Hot Springs in 1893 when the present church, and the first Methodist church erected at that place, was built. I stayed two years. Later G. T. Rowe tried his hand upon Hot Springs as a young itinerant Methodist preacher. He did his work so well that at the end of one year the bishop needed him elsewhere. Then came Harold Turner, of blessed memory, who remained three years and broke all records in length of service. The Hot Springs Methodists now have an Angel to preach the everlasting gospel to them. His name goes into the conference journal as A. A. Angel. The people are fond of him. He has just closed a big revival at Ottinger's Chapel and is now in a meeting at Hot Springs with Dr. York assisting him.

I have been a long time getting to the district conference which met Tuesday morning, March 13, at 9:30 o'clock and closed Wednesday afternoon. Rev. H. C. Sprinkle, the alert, aggressive, hard-working and successful presiding elder of the Asheville district, was at the steering wheel, directed the course of the conference and attempted to control the gas. He ran the machine "in high" both up hill and down.

The laymen were prominent and effective in the work of the conference from beginning to end. Perhaps the most interesting session of all was Tuesday evening which was given over entirely to the laymen. H. A. Dunham, district lay leader, presided. He is a leader who leads. Edwin L. Brown conducted the devotional services and delivered a short sermon that would do credit to any preacher. The principal address of the evening was by C. H. Ireland, conference lay leader. He spoke well. Other laymen made brief talks, all of them number one. The preachers should note how well these laymen, all of them, can talk and govern themselves accordingly.

The conference voted by a big majority to sell the district parsonage at Weaverville and buy a home in Asheville for the presiding elder.

The conference from any viewpoint was a big success. The work goes well in the Asheville district. Details of the conference will come from the pen of W. F. Sanford, the secretary. A. W. P.

A CORRECTION

In a few recent issues of the Advocate an error was made in the Greensboro College advertisement by stating: "Rated by State Department of Education as Class B." The statement should have been: "Rated by State Department of Education as Class A." This means that a graduate from Greensboro College completing the course in Education is entitled to a teacher's highest grade certificate.

If appointing men to the office of the Presiding Eldership is an experiment, then the point of risk has certainly been passed on the Weldon district, where Rev. S. E. Mercer is in his second year. He is an affable associate with pastor and layman, is a sound, strong, fearless gospel preacher, and has but few equals in safe, helpful judgment in the business affairs of the church. At the least, this is his rating in Roanoke Rapids charge, where his one-time teacher is now subject to his authority.

"The Start and Finish of a Day" is the title of a little book by Thomas Arthur Smoot. The morning dew is not more refreshing than the contents of this dainty volume. And the style of the author is as attractive as the morning and evening sky in early autumn. "The Loving-Kindness of the Morning" is the suggestive title of the first chapter and "When the Sparrows Go to Sleep" is the subject of a chapter toward the close, and these two are suggestive of the style and contents of the book. But they are no better than the rest, such as "Opening Up the House" or "Gold in the West." T. A. Smoot has not done a finer piece of work than this and his friends will not let slip an opportunity to purchase this brochure from Lamar & Barton, Publishers. Price 50 cents.

THE ADVOCATE IN PRISON

From one of the big prisons in the state of Ohio comes a letter of deep human interest and one that out of the depths speaks a word of praise for our Advocate.

That part of the letter which is not too personal for publication follows:

Dear Editor: No doubt you will be surprised to hear from one who is so helpless in this world. But thanks be to God, Jesus is behind these gray walls as well as outside. Through the good officials of this institution I have gained permission to write you a letter of thanks. I want to thank you for the North Carolina Christian Advocate and you can be assured that it is received with great pleasure. I look forward for Monday night, for that is the time when it is delivered to me.

I should be ashamed to be writing from a place like this, but I am not. I only regret what I did to be sent here and have prayed to God, our Saviour, every day that He might forgive me and put the spirit within me that I may also win the forgiveness of my fellowmen.

Now, Mr. Editor, I am not much of a letter writer, especially to those I do not know, but I am

Yours in sincerity,

This letter of appreciation becomes an eloquent plea for the circulation of the North Carolina Christian Advocate. Our paper ought to go into the hands of all sorts and conditions of people. It should be in the homes of all, both the poor and the well to do. Those who are not able to pay for it should have it without cost, just as the gospel is without cost to all who cannot pay the preacher.

The church should be wise enough to provide its people with good reading, especially with its own publication. There is no more effective way to sow good seed which will spring up and bring forth an abundant harvest.

The wise pastor, in spite of the multitudinous demands that are upon him, will see to the circulation of his church paper, because he knows that such is necessary for the largest success.

Just now when the laymen of North Carolina are arousing themselves afresh for the tasks at hand in the church, there is no one field that promises larger fruitage for their labors than the circulation of our Advocate. If these men who are willing and anxious to render some effective service will adopt our suggestion they will be surprised at the results.

Friends, one and all, let's do our best to put our Advocate into the hands of our people. It will do so much good.

YOUR ATTENTION A MOMENT, PLEASE!

The plan is to begin next week a publication of the detailed reports of the Advocate campaign. These reports will show the number of new subscribers and renewals sent in from each pastoral charge with the name of the pastor of the charge. These will be arranged by districts and will show also the total from each presiding elder's district.

You must get your report in by Saturday in order that it may appear in the first tabulated figures. Get it in, if possible, for this first report, so that your charge will have credit from the start for its good work.

The Durham and the Elizabeth City districts have been making faces at each other and each patting himself on the back and boasting at the same time about who should ride in the band wagon.

While this was going on the battling cohorts of the Fayetteville under the leadership of Revs. R. H. Willis and B. E. Stanfield have moved around in front of the Durham and the "Betsy" and are now shouting back "Come on, boys." The situation is now beginning to take on some interesting features.

Rev. H. M. North in another column has a notice concerning a "go-to-college day." Great possibilities in our judgment are wrapped up in this new movement. Be sure to send and get these programs and observe the day. It will accomplish great things if properly observed.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Mrs. W. R. Odell of Concord has just returned from an extended trip to Florida.

Rev. S. T. Barber began a meeting last Sunday at Ahoskie. Brother Barber will do the preaching.

The Waynesville district conference will be held at Franklin, convening Wednesday, May 9th, at 8 p. m., and continuing throughout Thursday and Friday, the 10th and 11th.

Rev. D. H. Tuttle, commenced a meeting last Sunday at Smithfield with Rev. Jim Green assisting him. The meeting will continue till April 1. Expectations are for a great meeting.

The Intermediate Epworth League of Forest Hill, Concord, rendered a delightful program for the inmates of the Cabarrus county home last Sunday. Mrs. J. Frank Armstrong, the superintendent, accompanied the girls.

Community worker wants work. Any pastor or corporation wanting a good community worker, a graduate of Scarritt Bible and Training School, will do well to correspond with Miss B., in care of Rev. H. H. Jordan, Gastonia, N. C.

Prof. H. L. King of Asheville is 80 years of age, but is one of the expert auto drivers of the country. He is accustomed to take long trips to other states in his car. Who at his age can beat the record of Prof. King?

Mt. Sylva on the Rougemont circuit is to have a new church. They have the plans and a most desirable lot and the timber to supply the rough lumber is being cut. This will be an attractive church on the Durham-Roxboro highway.

Forest Hill, Concord, has enjoyed recently some lectures of a very high order. The speakers were Rev. J. M. Rowland, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, Rev. J. H. Barnhardt of West Market Street church, and Mr. Fred Odell of Greensboro.

The revival campaign at Aberdeen will begin Sunday, March 25. Rev. W. W. Peele, pastor of Edenton Street, Raleigh, will assist Brother Euclid McWhorter in these meetings. Extensive preparations have been made for this meeting and great results are expected.

We have several inquiries from friends as to why their obituary notices and resolutions of respect have not appeared. The reason for the delay is in our being overwhelmed with these communications for the last month or more. We are carrying these in the order of their arrival and as fast as we can. Yours, dear friend, will appear in order of its reaching the office. We regret the delay, but it is the best we can do under the circumstances.

Miss Maude Royden, the noted English preacher who has been delivering a series of lectures in this country, appeared Tuesday evening, March 13, before the faculty and students of the North Carolina College and a few invited guests. The address was delivered in Spring Garden Street Methodist church. Those who heard this widely known English woman spoke in highest terms of her lecture. She has made a fine impression in all parts of the United States where she has appeared upon the public platform.

Rev. A. Burgess has a meeting in progress at Grace church, this city. Rev. R. V. Self of West Asheville is doing the preaching. Last Sunday was a great day in the meeting and the interest has been good all the week. This new church, established less than two years ago on McAdoo Heights, is making fine progress and all connected with the work are greatly encouraged by the good success that comes to this church.

The Concord Union of Epworth Leagues, composed of local chapters in Concord and Kannapolis and the senior chapters of Mt. Olivet, is said to be one of the liveliest organizations in that section. At the last monthly meeting held in Harmony church, Concord, the crowd of young people was so large that in addition to overflowing the auditorium the large Sunday school room was occupied and chairs placed in the aisles. Brother Armstrong, pastor at Forest Hill, is the president.

Brother C. H. May of Whitakers writes in appreciation of his former pastor, Brother Singleton, and of his present pastor, Bro. John Humble. It is gratifying to hear a man speak well of his pastor.

Dr. Frank Siler has just closed a very fine revival in his church at Hendersonville. There were 63 accessions to the church, most of these on profession of faith. Brother Siler held his own meeting. The work goes well at Hendersonville.

The roof is going on the new church at Helena on the Mt. Tirzah work and this splendid church will soon be pushed to completion. All the material is on the ground. Rev. J. W. Williams and his people are much pleased with this undertaking.

Rev. W. H. Willis is in a two weeks' meeting at Ashboro to continue till Easter, with services at 8 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., noon shop meetings of 15 minutes each day, and four women's prayer meetings each afternoon. The subjects for each morning talk and evening message has been published and given into the hands of the people of the community. All things appear to be ready. We may look for results.

The district conference directory last week carried a notice of the change of date of the Shelby district conference March 29-30 to April 12-13, but we failed to carry a note from Brother Jordan explaining why the change. Here is the presiding elder's notice: "Owing to the conflict in the date of our district conference and superior court in Shelby the date of the conference has been changed from March 29-30 to April 12-13."

Rev. C. B. Culbreth, presiding elder of the Elizabeth City district, writes us that Mr. G. L. Morelock, our secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities, and Dr. W. P. Few, president of Trinity College and conference lay leader, will hold a conference with the Methodist laymen of the Elizabeth City district at the First Methodist church, Elizabeth City, March 24 and 25. The first service will be at 10:30 a. m. The Methodist preachers and laymen throughout the district are urged to be present.

Rev. W. G. Lowe sends us the following item from Plymouth: "Rev. C. B. Culbreth, presiding elder of the Elizabeth City district, preached both at the morning and evening hour to a full house at Plymouth last Sunday. Brother Culbreth has won a large place in the hearts of our people. The Sunday school work, the Centenary, the Orphanage and the Advocate are demanding our attention for the present. Our revival in Plymouth will begin April 16th. Rev. E. L. Hillman of Scotland Neck will be with us to do the preaching."

The revival services which have been in progress for the last ten days at West Market Street church, this city, have proven eminently successful. Rev. J. W. Moore of Statesville has with prophetic passion presented his gospel messages to very large congregations at all the services. Brother Moore is an effective preacher. He magnifies Jesus Christ in his person and in his work, preaches repentance from sin and faith in Jesus Christ as the only means of salvation. He emphasizes, also, the ethics of the gospel. But his messages which emphasize the great essentials of salvation are adapted to the modern viewpoint of the world. He does not mistake the outgrown shells of a former time for gospel fundamentals, neither does he mistake theories for facts. His sermons are of a sort that are sure of a hearing in this age and that cannot fail to accomplish great good. Greensboro has heard him gladly.

There is a minister down in Arkansas who is letting his name be used to sell stock in an oil company. The circulars sent out to innocent prospects contain his picture standing before a country congregation preaching. It also quotes Paul: "When you fail to provide, etc." In another part of his statement he says, "God has given this golden land to you and I and has provided means to retrieve past losses in oil investments." At another place he states in his letter to the prospect, "Let your faith in God and the Rev. ———— command you." And yet again, "Send what amount you can share with me the bountiful returns we are by God's command destined to receive." The only comfort we get out of the matter is that this fellow is not a Methodist preacher. We cannot find language severe enough to properly characterize one who so brazenly, debasingly commercializes his holy profession.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Rev. J. W. Ingle, pastor of Lafayette Street church, Shelby, began a two weeks' meeting last Sunday at his church with two services each day. Brother Ingle will do the preaching.

Rev. E. W. Fox is in a revival meeting at Race Street, Statesville, with Rev. R. A. Taylor doing the preaching. The work began last Sunday with prospects of a most successful revival.

Gipsy Smith is reported to have met a man on one of his voyages over from England who said to him, "My church is the church." The Gipsy replied: "Go fill your bath tub with water and say, 'This is the ocean.'"

The people of our church should be congratulated on what is apparently a greater desire to know more of the organization of the church. This is shown in the distribution of the 1922 Discipline. More copies of this edition have already been sold than during any previous quadrennium. The publishers have experienced difficulty in filling orders. In the haste to get the Discipline out as early as practicable, an edition of 25,000 was printed. This has been repeated by several 10,000 editions since. A supply will be ready for distribution about March 25th. We cannot urge too strongly the value of a Discipline in every Methodist home.

Mrs. Catherine Whitlock Banner of Mt. Airy died at her home at three o'clock Sunday afternoon. The funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon by Revs. H. K. Boyer and D. Vance Price. Mrs. Banner was 90 years of age, was married 68 years ago, for 63 years she had lived in the house where she died, and here for many years was the preacher's home. She was a devoted member of the Methodist church at Mt. Airy. Six children were born to Mrs. Banner: Mary Virginia, wife of Dr. W. S. Taylor of Mount Airy; Sarah, now Mrs. Hedges of California; Cella, who married George Parker of Tennessee, and who died in 1909; William Martin, who lives in Texas; Dr. Charles W. Banner of Greensboro, and John, with whom she lived.

We stated some time ago that according to the reports of the last conferences there are 231,388 members of the Southern Methodist church in North Carolina and that this state stands third with Texas and Georgia ahead of us. The first time that we met Bishop James Cannon, Jr., the alert bishop said, "I wish that in the exuberance of your state pride you would not make such big claims for North Carolina. Virginia has more Methodists than North Carolina." The bishop did not have the figures, but since has found them in the Richmond Christian Advocate and we are just in receipt of those figures, sent us by Bishop Cannon. Here they are: Virginia Methodists, 232,287. This gives Virginia a lead of 899, nothing to brag about, but it puts North Carolina in fourth place, to remain till the meeting of the next annual conference. We thank Bishop Cannon for the correction.

After a week's illness with pneumonia Brother A. A. Hinkle, aged 64 years, died last Saturday evening at his home in Greensboro and the funeral services were held in Centenary church Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. These services were conducted by Revs. R. G. Tuttle, H. C. Sprinkle, C. E. Hodgin and B. K. Mason. Brother Hinkle was a native of Davidson county, came to Greensboro 28 years ago, was a well known merchant of the city, a devoted member and steward of Centenary church, a remarkably successful Sunday school teacher of boys, of which he had quite a large class, and was highly esteemed in the community as was evidenced by the floral offerings and the attendance at his funeral. Surviving are four sons, A. Hoyle, M. W., Robert G. and C. M. Hinkle; three daughters, Mrs. E. M. Williams, Mrs. W. N. Vereen and Miss Annice Hinkle, all of Greensboro; four brothers, C. C. Hinkle, of Greensboro, J. M. and A. L. Hinkle, of Lexington, and D. A. Hinkle, of Welcome; and four sisters, Mrs. Julius Hege and Mrs. Eli Lopp, of Lexington, and Misses Minnie and Sarah Hinkle, of Welcome. His wife died about 20 years ago.

The object of preaching is, constantly, to remind mankind of what they are constantly forgetting; not to supply the defects of human intelligence, but to fortify the feebleness of human resolutions; to recall mankind from the bypaths where they turn into that broad path of salvation which all know, but which few tread.—Sydney Smith.

PLATITUDES IN THE PULPIT

A platitude is an inspired truism, a statement that is flat, dull, or commonplace, if we are to follow one definition. But why seek definition of that so much indulged in by the pulpit and so often inflicted upon the pew. To escape this peril is of practical concern.

For the preacher to reel off the fine words that none care to dispute is easy, safe and soothing. Formal and perfunctory statements of theological phrases sound wonderfully pious to some and Biblical phrases worn smooth in the oft handling seem most religious to others; but these count for naught. Many old sermons should be consigned to a bonfire and most of our truisms should be born again. A sermon without flesh and blood and heart and conscience amounts to little.

Conservative stagnation and professional cant are sore perils of the pulpit in every age. All mental alertness passes and the finer feelings die. The preacher afflicted thus may be wonderfully safe and entirely sound, free from all that might kindle a spark or raise a new issue, but he will never be a preacher that wins victories or preaches a crusade. The early Methodists were not of this tribe. Empty cant and dull platitudes inflicted upon unwilling hearers were not of their offending. They were sure to have a message able to drive home the truth, a message out of a soul in touch with God.

To escape the use of platitudes and smooth words by the use of crude epithets and vile speech, with the shallow pretense of hewing to the line and allowing the chips to fall where they will, is for a preacher to discount his ability and to disgrace his calling. The sermons preached by Jesus and Peter and Paul, if we are to accept the record, were of another stripe.

BUTTERMILK ON THE HOusetop

Of the origin and use of buttermilk much has been said in jest and in earnest. Who has not heard of the city boy on his first trip to the country enquiring for the cow that gives buttermilk? Who does not know of the many uses of buttermilk in these last days? But did anyone every hear of this elixir of life being used to put out fire? The doctors by the use of buttermilk have been putting out the light of the pesky little germs in the human system, but not until this good year has buttermilk been used to save insurance companies the inevitable loss resulting from flames unchecked.

Bishop Key, in his seventy-sixth year, walked with steady step and went with utmost regularity to three meals a day in order to satisfy a vigorous appetite that never failed him. Itinerant put this question to him: "Bishop, how do you keep so young?" In slow, deep drawing tones came this reply: "Well, I think there are two reasons for this. First, I have never lain awake at night hating folks. Then, about sixty years ago, I found that buttermilk was good for my health; so, I got about fifty years ahead of the world on buttermilk."

Governor Kitchin used to amuse his political gatherings much, in his great political campaigns, by telling, with much minuteness of detail and enthusiasm in the elaboration, of Colonel Clay Carter of Hyde county who runs six saw-mills with buttermilk.

Bishops and governors may tell in glowing periods of the uses of this modern stand-by of the doctors to keep their patients out of the fire, but now comes a Stokes county farmer who tells us that buttermilk saved his dwelling from the flames so that only a fifty dollar hole was burnt in the roof. He requested that the insurance company pay that. The marvel is he made no charge for the buttermilk.

Once upon a time, Itinerant heard a local celebrity at a rural gathering use all the glowing adjectives at his command to describe the bucolic scenes in the midst of which that favored group lived and moved and bad their being. He grew red in the face and flung his arms far and wide as he told of the rosy-faced girl, with milk pail on her round fat arm and skirts above her shoetops—this was before the day of short skirts—going down through the pasture to find old brindle, waking the birds with the jubilation of her song as she journeyed. A deep longing now fills the soul of Itinerant for some orator, with the native fire and duly sympathetic imagination, to describe in graphic terms that Stokes county farmer on the flaming roof of his domicile, just before the Ides of March, flinging buttermilk on the ruddy flames.

The poets have dealt with the milk maid. Will some one arise to tell of the virtues of buttermilk when the house is on fire?

ONE LEADER IN EACH CHURCH

The laymen's work is receiving special attention just now in North Carolina. This is well, for we are in sore need of a more effective organization and of a few people in each community who will give themselves to the work.

Could one man be found in each church who would become a real leader, a revolution would result. The world does not have many leaders and not a great number are needed at any one time in one place. A sufficient number of these could be found and developed in almost every community could we enlist the talent that is unused. The most capable too often will not even allow themselves to be considered, for they are not willing to bear the burden and heat of the day. Real leadership involves abnegation of self and an immense amount of drudge work for which little credit is received. Furthermore, infinite tact and patience is needed in the effort to discover and develop a leadership. More and more does the truthfulness of this statement appear in our present effort among the laymen in North Carolina.

We have depended too much on the public appeal in the work of the church. Many think that big talk before a big crowd in laying out some big plan with big expectations for the future will do the work. They forget that the real work of the world is done in the small group and that a few lead in the doing. A determined effort to find, at least, one in such church who would really lead would justify all the time and effort. The overhead organization of our lay work can not make much headway until we get in living touch through some one man with the local church. Bethel, Antioch, Shady Grove and Epworth must be reached.

HAS WOMAN ARRIVED?

Alice Robertson, congresswoman from Oklahoma, is reported to have said that she was going home to take up her work once more, convinced that the time had not yet come when a woman could do much in a political career. Doubtless, some such statement might be made by most of the women who have made a pass at working reform in the realm of legislative enactment. Have the women themselves taken themselves seriously in the affairs of church or of state in securing the ends desired by the use of political methods? A few individuals have, but when it comes to the mass, another story awaits us.

The strident voices calling loudly and, at times, with impatient insistence upon the women to take advantage of the new-found freedom and never to stop until every right in the realm of education and of politics and of religion has been granted indicate an indifference that lies deeper than the forms and casements of life. The demands social, educational, business, political, religious which have dropped down over night make strange and urgent appeal to those who have quaffed life's Peruna. To keep the country from going to the bow-wows while enjoying this fresh new freedom will not permit the present day woman, with all her rights, the quiet walks and homely ways that once belonged to the women of gentle pursuits.

The modern woman is liable to mistake publicity for potency; bigness for greatness; flurry for progress; loudness for success. To achieve, one must get in the face of the world, join in the hurrah of the street, and be seen in the crowd. We have made so much of big cities, big fortunes, big ships, big achievements on the hustings, in the market-place, and on the high seas, and even beyond every sea, that our women are sure that success follows lifting up the voice in the concourse and being found in the midst of the tumult.

That many should have grave apprehensions for the future is not strange. The loud, vulgar set, who measure the success of a social evening by the display of jewels, gowns and shoulders, with much publicity through the press, are robbed of those fine and delicate elements belonging to a cultured people whose women are low-voiced and gentlemanly. The women who jostle men in the market-place and fling themselves into the arena, the fierce contestants of man, trifle with the deepest issues of life and destiny and have to contend with the deepest instincts of a woman's soul. Woman can never get far from the superb intensity and fine abandon evermore present when the affections are involved. Because of this, poets do her reverence and the ordinary lords of creation fall dumb at her feet; and she herself will become a willing subject if not an abject slave, allowing an unworthy husband to rule over her. Woman keeps fresh the romance of the world. The old story of the beautiful young girl, mother of a mighty race, out by the wells in the evening time when the camels came over the horizon and the men told their story of love and their purpose to take her and make her the wife of the rich man's son is as fresh as the morning. Rebekah's willingness to be off the next day is the eternally feminine impulse old as Eden. O! the charm of the coming of the camels!

Furthermore, to the normal woman, the helpful ministries and the insistent cry of need, especially the littleness and the helplessness of infancy, make persistent appeal. Something in the heart of woman keeps fresh and green the desire to feed and to foster the race, furnishing bread for the body and love for the heart. Her's is to feed one generation and to produce another.

Robert Browning said:

"Open my heart and you will see
Graved inside of it, 'Italy.'

Open a woman's heart and you will find graved inside of it some such sentiment as this:

"Within a rose clad cottage
Beside a Southern sea,
A mother sat a-singing,
And her song came to me
Upon the scented South wind—
The seagull soared above,
While to her fair haired baby
She sang this song of love:

I love you when you are laughing,
I love you when you weep,
I love you when you're waking,
And I love you when you sleep.
You won't know how I love you,
How you I do adore;
And every day, you dove, you,
I love you more and more."

MESSAGE OF THE BISHOPS CONCERNING THE ENLARGED PROGRAM FOR THE LAYMEN OF OUR CHURCH

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dear Brethren:

We desire at this time to draw your attention to the work of the General Board of Lay Activities, authorized by the action of the General Conference of our church, sitting in Hot Springs, Arkansas, in May 1922.

It is worthy of mention that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has, from the very beginning of her history, sought to give places of large service to her laymen. Our General Conference consists of an equal number of clerical and lay delegates. Our laymen have full responsibility as delegates to our annual conferences, and serve on all annual conference boards. The district conference, the quarterly conference, and the church conference, are all conferences which are composed largely of laymen. It is evident, therefore, that in all the official conferences of the church, laymen have a useful and conspicuous place. The Laymen's Missionary Movement, organized some fifteen years ago, was a further step in the plans of our church to give to laymen a larger place of influence and of service. This organization had served in a conspicuous and effective way, especially in the enlargement and furtherance of the missionary program of the church. In the great Centenary and Christian Education Movements it was seen that many of the most useful conference, district and church directors were men who had been developed in the work of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. They had fully demonstrated both their ability and their readiness to lead in the great enterprises of the church.

Believing that the time had come for a broader and more complete organization, the leaders of the Laymen's Missionary Movement presented to the General Conference, in May, 1922, well-considered plans for the reorganization of the lay forces of the church. The General Conference responded by creating the General Board of Lay Activities. By many, this enactment is considered one of the most constructive and far-reaching pieces of work done by our recent General Conference.

We call your attention to the fact that the church faces conditions today which demand not only the gifts and graces of a well trained ministry, but also the business ability of her consecrated laymen. The past quadrennium, one of the most successful in all our history, revealed the fact that we have a great body of laymen who stand ready and willing to serve. The organization, therefore, of the General Board of Lay Activities comes, in our judgment, at an opportune and providential hour. This new board is created, not for administrative purposes, but for the purpose of co-operating with the other boards of the church in doing the work which they have in hand. To this end, larger lay activities must be encouraged and larger leadership among our laymen must be developed. This new organization should be a great factor in awakening our entire church to her world-wide responsibilities. For no church can ever begin to do the work of world-evangelization without effectively utilizing the laymen who constitute the rank and file of her membership.

The Board of Lay Activities plans to bring every local congregation into active co-operation with all our great denominational plans and purposes. This new organization, extending all the way from the General Board of Lay Activities to the annual conference, from the conference lay leader to the district lay leader, and from the district lay leader to the church lay leader, presents a logical way of reaching the last church and the last man in the church for enlarged service.

Some of the objectives which the Board of Lay Activities has set before itself for the present quadrennium are as follows:

1. It is proposed to bring to the local congregation a fuller realization of its relation to the connectional program of Methodism. No greater service can be rendered just now than successfully to relate the local congregation to the church-wide enterprise of our great denomination.
2. It is proposed to co-operate to the fullest extent with the forces of the church now undertaking to raise four million dollars on the Centenary pledges by the first day of May. The enthusiasm with which the Board of Lay Activities is entering upon this task, prophesies large success. The church is depending upon her laymen to play a large part in gathering in these funds. This organization is also co-operating with the Christian Education Movement, and stands ready for the heartiest service in the matter of the Superannuate Endowment Fund.

3. The Board of Lay Activities has realized the necessity for the paying in full of the benevolent assessments on the church, and is presenting this need and the best methods of accomplishing it through lay leaders in all the annual and district conferences of the church.

4. The great evangelistic campaign has made a special appeal to our laymen, and the Board of Lay Activities is co-operating heartily with the Commission on Evangelism. It is sought to develop a larger number of laymen in every congregation who will do personal work.

5. The principles of Christian stewardship, which were emphasized in the earlier days of the Centenary Movement, must be carried forward until they are adopted by our whole church as the practical plan for financing the Kingdom of God. The Board of Lay Activities is addressing itself with most commendable zeal to the task of giving to all our people intelligent plans for spreading abroad this gospel of Christian stewardship. There can scarcely be a greater service than this that our laymen can render. For our substance, as well as ourselves and our personal service, must all be consecrated to God, if His kingdom is to come and His will to be done on earth as it is done in heaven.

In these and in many other ways are our laymen placing themselves on the altar of God for service. We thank God and take courage. For the obligations that rest upon the Church of Christ in this hour of the world's need, are nothing short of tremendous. We face conditions unsettled, uncertain, and even chaotic. The evils of war were never more evident than they are now. The entire continent of Europe is staggering under a blow from the effects of which her ablest statesmen have as yet been entirely unable to deliver her. The awful shock of the greatest war in the history of mankind has been felt throughout the entire world, even among those peoples who live remotest from the main currents of the life of civilized nations. There is lack of understanding and harmony among the nations of the earth. There are hatred and suspicion where there should be confidence and co-operation. The one hope of the world is in the gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. If this war-torn and sin-cursed world is to be brought to Christ, all the forces of the kingdom must be utilized and the full power of the church of the Redeemer must be delivered for its salvation. We welcome, therefore, the response of our laymen to the call of the hour. We thank God for their consecration to the service of mankind. We rejoice in this renewed confidence of their devotion to Christ and His church.

We desire, therefore, to assure the Board of Lay Activities of our full and cordial co-operation; and we commend it and the work it is undertaking to the entire membership of our church.

We are your brethren and fellow-laborers in the work of the kingdom.

NEW SECRETARY OF GENERAL HOSPITAL BOARD

Rev. Charles C. Jarrell, D. D., has been elected secretary of the General Hospital Board to succeed Rev. Charles C. Selecman, D. D., who, feeling constrained by urgent conditions to remain in the pastorate of First church, Dallas, resigned the secretaryship.

Dr. Jarrell is a man of high character, good scholarship and excellent platform ability. He is possessed of uncommon executive gifts for the administration of matters of business.

He graduated with distinction from Emory College and subsequently took with honor his theological course at Vanderbilt University. Later he took special courses in Glasgow University in Scotland and the University of Berlin.

He was for a time a member of the faculty of Emory College, and served also as one of the directors of the Correspondence School.

He was one of the most successful commissioners for Emory University during the first years after the establishment of the institution and raised considerable funds for its endowment and equipment.

He brings to the work of the General Hospital Board eminent qualifications for it.

The North Georgia conference sent him as one of its representatives to the general conferences of 1918 and 1922.

At the time of his election he was pastor of St. John's church, Augusta, Ga., from which church he removes to Atlanta to assume the duties of his new position.

W. A. Candler.

THE TWO METHODISMS SPEAK

A Joint Statement of Vital Concern to North Carolina Methodism.

The Joint Commission of the conferences of the Methodist Protestant and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, appointed to cultivate more intimate and cordial relations between the two churches, at the meeting in Greensboro, January 18, 1923, caused the following address to be sent to the Methodists of North Carolina:

We are duly mindful of the common origin of our separate Methodisms, which are one in spirit, life and doctrine; and always have been a unit in the effort to spread scriptural holiness over the land. Moreover, the increasing complexity of the social order, with its problems and the readjustments going on about us, admonish us that our Methodist people must gather their forces for a more vigorous church life and unite for a mutual advance. Under the blessings of heaven, our two Methodist churches must become a still greater force for righteousness and spiritual advance in North Carolina. Every atom of energy must be mobilized against a common foe; less of power and effectiveness, due to unnecessary friction, must cease. What can Methodists do to contribute to this end? We would suggest:

1. That our preachers and people come to know the efforts and aspirations of each by cultivating more cordial and intimate relations one with the other. Interchange of pulpits and union of efforts in revival campaigns may prove helpful to this end.
2. That wherever the two churches are working side by side in a community careful attention and serious thought be given by both churches to see that some way be found to prevent antagonism and waste of energy in doing the work that Methodism as a whole should do. These local issues must be worked out by the good men and women who are on the ground and have been brought to see the sin of depleted strength that ought to be united against the enemies of righteousness.
3. That due attention be given to co-ordinating undertakings and to readjustments of churches in certain sections where both must continue a useless struggle until the best and wisest will be convinced of the folly of present methods. Why not move to have the conferences involved in this venture in North Carolina to establish a permanent Board of Mediation?
4. That we plan and pray that our two Methodisms may this good year of our Lord be one in spirit and aim and effort in doing the work to which we are called in North Carolina.

A popular preacher once said of his pulpit efforts: I always roar when I have nothing to say.

Send your audience away with a desire for, and an impulse toward spiritual improvement, or your preaching will be a failure.—Goulburn.

I don't like those mighty fine preachers who round off their sentences so beautifully that they are sure to roll off the sinner's conscience—Rowland Hill.

DURHAM DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Durham district conference will convene at West Durham at 10 a. m. Thursday, March 29. The pastors will please have ready brief written reports to submit. The local preachers will send in their reports and the pastors will see that a correct list of their local preachers is furnished the conference.

Mr. G. L. Morelock, secretary of laymen's work, will speak at 11:30 Thursday, and Drs. E. H. Rawlings and C. G. Hounshell will be heard at same hour Friday. These men are great and should be given a great hearing. The two days will be filled to the brim and we want a full attendance. We do not want delegates to get in late and leave before adjournment each day to go home. We are going to feed them and fill them to the full with something doing, so we do not want loafing or running away on the part of members of the conference. We are to be at West Durham for business. Every lay leader is expected at the conference on Thursday.

B. T. Hurley, J. E. Blalock and J. H. Buffaloe will act as committee on examination.

OUR DEAD, OR THE LIFE AFTER DEATH

By Rev. H. L. Atkins, Bandera, Texas, published by the Christian Advocate, Greensboro, N. C., price 20 cents for single copy, per dozen $1.80, one hundred copies $10.

Many Advocate readers would find in this little booklet the very thing for which their hearts have been hungering. As we reach the age in which our eyes turn toward the sunset we naturally find ourselves feeling for the solid rock upon which to found our hopes. We are not satisfied unless that hope is sure and steadfast. We find it safe and secure in the Word of God.

A few years ago the writer of this, having suffered much bodily pain, and having twice gone near the border land of the unseen, began a search for something on the subject of the future life, and was surprised at the paucity of our literature on the subject, especially of such a character as would direct our feet along the pathway of scriptural assurance. Mr. Atkins has, in this brief essay, given me more solid comfort than I have been able to find in all the pretentious volumes that have come under my notice. The fact is that much of what has been written on the subject has been founded upon a diluted religious sentiment rather than upon the teachings of divine revelation. After all, the Bible is the chart by which we must sail if we expect to make a safe landing. The Bible, moreover, gives us ample assurance that the future life of bliss is secure to all who die in the faith.

Mr. Atkins, the author of this treatise, is a superannuated member of the Western North Carolina conference, who, in the year 1904, while serving as presiding elder of the Shelby district, broke down completely in the midst of a useful career and took up his abode in West Texas where, amid suffering and in the face of the most adverse conditions, he has made the battle with disease. His strength is almost gone and he needs the help that the sale of this booklet would give him. Let all who read this note send the money at once for a copy; or better, for a dozen or one hundred copies, and thus help the needy author while helping themselves.

Address all orders to Rev. H. L. Atkins, Bandera, Texas, or to the Christian Advocate, Greensboro, N. C.

H. M. Blair.

SPRING GARDEN STREET M. E. CHURCH

The appeal of Spring Garden Street church has been answered by hundreds of Advocate readers from every section of our state.

This week we received a check for $16 from Mrs. Elizabeth Hinton Kittrell, corresponding secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, Jarvis Memorial church, Greenville, N. C. Mrs. Kittrell, a 1919 graduate of the N. C. C. W., presented the cause of our church to her society and sixteen of them threw dollars at her for Spring Garden church. Hurrah for these good women. We thank them and many other Advocate readers who have so kindly remembered us with dollars.

If only every Advocate reader could realize what one dollar means to a struggling people, I believe every one would send a dollar, post haste.

We are far short of the $25,000 which we need so much to put us on our feet and sometimes our blood runs cold as we face our obligations, but we get dollars and fives and tens from here and there over the state, and we begin to realize then that all the Methodists of North Carolina are with us and under God's great leadership we can do the seeming impossible.

Our presiding elder, Rev. W. F. Womble, handed us a check last week for $100, and as Brother G. T. Bond would say, "That's fine."

"Money talks" and now let all the bishops and presiding elders and pastors of the Eastern and Western conferences of North Carolina talk at one time, and if you send us one or an hundred dollars we insure you an investment where moth and rust doth not corrupt nor thieves break through and steal.

Yours for Methodism,

W. A. Mann, Treasurer,
710 Highland Ave., Greensboro, N. C.

SUCCESS OF THE CENTENARY CAMPAIGN

We are just in receipt of a message from Rev. R. M. Courtney which brings this heartening report: "Centenary emergency team of speakers meeting with gratifying response. Story of Centenary achievements and emergency profoundly stirring the people. Our goal is the Centenary message delivered to every congregation and the personal canvass made. North Carolina Methodists must raise four hundred thousand dollars of Centenary money before May 1st.

R. M. Courtney."

DAVENPORT COLLEGE

The campaign to secure funds for making needed enlargements and improvements at Davenport College, although as yet only modestly advertised, is making admirable progress. The faculty, the students, and many friends of the college are heartily co-operating with the president. Former students of Davenport, now living in many parts of the country and even of the world, are being furnished with information as to affairs at the college, and they will be glad to know that progress is being made, and more is to be expected, in keeping with the movements of the times.

The campus is being beautified. The walks and drives are being straightened, leveled and smoothed according to modern methods, and shrubbery, evergreens, rose bushes and flower beds, are being placed becomingly at various places.

The work of improving and extending the usefulness of the basement in Cornelius Hall is nearing completion. The department of chemistry is thus to have twice the space it has formerly had, and the business department is to have a large and handsome room. The amount of scientific apparatus in the department of chemistry has been doubled since last September. The masonry and furnishings of the newly arranged rooms in Cornelius Hall are very attractive and will undoubtedly have an encouraging effect in class room work.

Wesley Taylor, of the department of English, attended the annual convention of the North Carolina Council of English Teachers in Greensboro last week.

On Monday night, March 19, the faculty gave a dinner at the Carlheim Hotel to President and Mrs. Hornaday and to Miss Annie Neal Jones, niece of Mrs. Hornaday. The dinner was followed by an informal party at the college, held in the teachers' recreation room of main building.

RECITALS AT GREENSBORO COLLEGE

The Twilight Recitals that have been given since the holidays on every other Wednesday afternoon at Greensboro College closed yesterday with a program of compositions by Bach, it being the 238th anniversary of his birth. The other recitals included one on Old Organ Music, on Wagner, on French and on American composers. Prof. Church had the assistance of Mr. Alexander, Mr. Roy, Miss Mary Long, Miss Lolita Ellis, Misses Seiler, Bridgman, Tucker and Henninger, reader. The increasing attendance noted at each recital spoke well of the popularity of the series of recitals. Greensboro College is fortunate in having such artists who are also splendid teachers. The compositions given yesterday by Bach were:

Passacaglia (organ)—Prof. Church.

My Heart Ever Faithful—Mr. Alexander.

Chaconne (violin)—Mr. Roy.

Concerto in d minor, first movement piano and organ—Miss Tucker and Prof. Church.

BISHOP DENNY AT TRINITY CHURCH, DURHAM

Bishop Collins Denny will be at Trinity, Durham, next Sunday, March 25, to aid in the campaign for the new Trinity church. The bishop will preach at 11 o'clock and the campaign will be put over that afternoon. The organization is being worked out and Sunday is expected to mean much in the work of this great enterprise. The architect has been selected and he is at work on the plans. This is an undertaking that involves some $300,000.

GO-TO-COLLEGE DAY

Go-to-College Sunday will be observed very widely throughout the Southern Methodist church this spring. Our pastors and Sunday school superintendents are asked to lay great emphasis on this occasion. It is suggested that either the morning or the evening hour at church, or at least one-half of the Sunday school hour be used for this purpose. I will soon have a program prepared for this Go-to-College Day. Every pastor or superintendent who will observe this day will please let me know and I will furnish them with programs sufficient for the service. The sooner this day can be observed in the North Carolina conference the better it will be.

I hope to have many requests for these programs.

H. M. North, Sec. and Treas.,
Rocky Mount, N. C.

RUTHERFORD COLLEGE NOTES

The annual institute of the Epworth League of the Marion district of the Methodist church was held here beginning last Friday and closed Sunday afternoon. The discussions and reports showed that this organization is quite "a live wire," which was the central theme of the occasion. In spite of the downpour of rain Friday and Friday night there was a fine attendance from almost every part of the district.

It was quite a pleasure and a privilege to have so many bright, clean, consecrated young people to visit our town and leave the blessing of their enthusiasm on our hearts. When these live wires are a little more fully charged with the currents of divine power, the world will feel the shock of a mighty uplift.

Mr. J. U. Ledbetter and Mr. D. R. Shields have been permitted to spend a few days at home. The life of a traveling salesman would be unbearable were it not for these bright spots on the way. So it seems to me.

The visitors to the league institute from Hickory and Granite Falls added much to the occasion. Mr. M. S. Smith, the district secretary of the Statesville district, presided at the last meeting of the institute by request of our district secretary, Mr. B. L. Lunsford, who had to leave before the close to reach the seat of the district conference which convenes Sunday night in Rutherfordton.

Although it is impossible for me to give the names of the many visitors to the league institute, I must mention Presiding Elder Z. Paris, who was here the first night; Rev. N. C. Williams of Granite Falls, who delivered a strong address on Empowerment for Service; Rev. W. E. Poovey of Marion, who spoke on The Power-Dam, and Professor Harbin of Nashville, Tenn., the general director of the social department of the Epworth League.

BISHOP DENNY TO BE AT NEW BERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Bishop Denny will preside at the New Bern district conference which convenes in Mt. Olive Tuesday night, April 10th and continues through the following Thursday night. F. M. Shamberger, P. E.

A revival meeting is to begin in our church in Roanoke Rapids, Weldon district, North Carolina conference, with a series of five cottage prayer meetings which are being held this week. The church services will embrace March 25-April 1, inclusive, with 3:30 p. m. as the children's hour, and preaching by the pastor, R. H. Broom, at 7:30 each evening. The singing will be led by Rev. Wm. Towe, a much beloved former pastor, now of Garysburg, N. C., two of whose sons are active official laymen in the Roanoke Rapids church.

I preached as never sure to preach again, and as a dying man to dying men.—Baxter.

LANDIS CIRCUIT

We have just closed a very successful meeting at Unity, one of our churches. I feel sure that the people at this church have been wonderfully helped. We have a live people at Unity church. Men's prayer meeting every Wednesday night; young people's prayer meeting every Friday night. Mrs. M. C. Scercy has the oversight of the young people. Prayer meeting every Sunday night for all. These prayer meetings are well attended. We have between 25 and 30 that will lead in prayer. Unity church will soon furnish some fine leaders. Rev. Wm. J. Bryson of this place did the preaching, and he did it well. Brother Bryson is a graduate of Weaverville College, also of M. & H. He came to us from the Baptist church and will enter the conference this fall. He is a nephew of the late Dr. James H. Weaver. Anyone desiring help in a meeting and wishes to communicate with him, will address him at Landis, N. C. He would be glad to make some dates with some of the brethren.

J. C. Brown, P. C.
