"We are supremely concerned with this: that the best of the past and of the present shall be given to the new, rising generation."

"We are willing to leave many questions with the scientists and there is no conflict between science and religion. At most, all scientists can really discover is God's truth and God's way of working. In the main, they have been servants of God, pulling aside the curtain and revealing God's work and nature to us."

"Let us welcome the truth from any quarter. Do not let us be disturbed, God is in His world and He has not given over the helm of His universe."

"The only faith that will stand the test of today and the future is: First, a faith that can stand the test of open-mindedness, recognizing all truth as leading to God; second, the faith that believes that God is equal to all the demands of the world upon Him."

There was nothing in the address delivered at the opening of the school or in any subsequent remarks at the auditorium not represented in principle by these quotations from my notes. The purpose of this address at the opening was to state the position of the school in dealing with the problems of its students under conditions that are difficult and perplexing.

The central idea presented in these notes is obviously that we must honestly and sincerely try to help inquiring people so to understand the word of God and their world, and to solve the problems of their times, that they may be able to preserve and to develop a vital Christian faith and experience; that the teachers of religion must not only be permitted to think and to ask questions but must be encouraged to do so in order that they may have a reason for their faith and their teaching, and that if possible every questioning person must be helped to find a sound basis for his religious faith that does not seem to compel him to deny the integrity of his reason. This is the position taken at the opening of the school and maintained consistently by the management throughout. Persons may differ from us in judgment on many questions, but we object to judgments of our course based upon representations that are incorrect, or positions that we have not taken.

In harmony with the viewpoint expressed above, it has been the custom of the Leadership Training School, from the beginning, to secure the maturest and most competent Christian students of the Bible, and of the problems of religious education which the management has been able to discover. Care has been given to select men of ripe Christian experience.

In the selection of Dr. S. G. Bland, the choice was made with the same general intention as that which has governed the selection of other speakers in the past. He came to our General Conference, an honored representative from a sister Methodism, and is now pastor of a great Methodist church—Broadway Tabernacle, Toronto. It was not, however, until we heard his great sermon on the pre-eminence and headship of Jesus Christ over all, delivered during our General Conference, and afterwards published in the Methodist Review, that it occurred to us to invite him to Junaluska, and an informal invitation was made to him that very evening. Never have we heard a preacher who more highly exalted Jesus Christ and who revealed a profounder faith in His power to redeem humanity. This, added to the beautiful Christian spirit manifested by him, indicated that he would be an ideal teacher to speak to a group of teachers and leaders representing the very pick of their kind from Southern Methodism, which gather at the Leadership School at Lake Junaluska. It may be well to say, for the benefit of those who are not acquainted with the facts, that university professors teaching in this school have said to us that their students here are better pre-

PUBLIC OPINION PLUS

There are two words that explain America: Democracy and Protestantism. Those terms underlie our country like the foundation of rock supports the structures on Manhattan; they are the keys that open the chambers of our treasures; they illumine the story of our greatness and goodness; they also reveal some of our weakness and badness. For a democracy is not born full-fledged as Minerva sprang from the brow of Jove, it is wrought out of the people; it is not handed down from above, it is built up from the life of the average man. It is hampered and embarrassed by both the ambitions of the super-man and the ignorance of the sub-man; it depends for its life, strength and perpetuity on the middle-man, and it teaches this last man to stand flat footed and look level-eyed into the eyes of every other man, crowned or uncrowned, and say "I am your peer."

And so it is with Protestantism: it knows no king but Christ; it finds no infallibilities, no shibboleths however sacred, no dogmas however ancient, outside this one truly Super-Man. It is suspicious of the one who claims to come with new revelations; it is distrustful of him who claims there can be no new revelation. Yet Protestantism is the only branch of the faith that can consistently honor its prophets. Her very existence is a testimony to the truth of progressive truth. Only this she asks: Is your doctrine founded in the Democrit of Nazareth, the spiritual king of the race, and has it the sanction of the common experience of the average man?" The voice of the people is more nearly the voice of God.

But back of church and state, and safeguarding both is the mighty bulwark of public opinion plus—plus enlightenment. Unthinking peasantry and those bordering on barbarism may be ruled or ruined by a king who can boast with the famous (or infamous) Frenchman: "I am the state." That proud boast was answered by an aroused people whose opinions triumphed even though they waded through the red carnage of a revolution to their mastery. The composite mind of a free people is the mightiest force below the Almighty and is usually his agent. Supporting this opinion and leavening it with enlightenment is the "little red school and the little white church"—twin sisters in the task of redeeming the race from the curse of ignorance and the blight of sin. These agencies brought to their best will not need the aid of "invisible empire" nor alliances with kings, and only misguided men will take resort to secret diplomacy or sinister orders shrouded in mystery. We believe in nothing that cannot walk in the light of an enlightened public conscience; that cannot stand the glare of a pitiless but purifying public opinion.

BEYOND THE RANGES

Abraham was a man who stood upon the hill-top and saw the other side. There is a striking analogy between the life of Abraham and that of Enoch. Both were translated men—that is, men who were lifted above their immediate surroundings and led to anticipate other surroundings. Enoch dreamed of heaven, but Abraham dreamed of a land beyond the years, and dared to live in the land of his dreams. And to him has been accorded a great distinction: He lived before his time. Like Paul, he was "born out of due time"—born too soon.

There are days in the heart of winter that seem to anticipate the summer days of sunshine, days of warmth, days of calm. So it is in the winter of the moral world. There are hours in which humanity seems to make a leap into other centuries and other scenes. And here, standing as the foremost of faith adventurers, is Abraham as he anticipates the Christian era. The most mature of the gospels says: "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day, and he saw it, and was glad." In what sense is it meant that Abraham saw the day of Christ? Certainly not in the sense of a clairvoyant; that would have been no real revelation of Christ. The way that he foresaw the day of Christ was by living the life of that day.

MARY PLYLER

Just as the sun arose Wednesday morning to drive away the darkness that had enshrouded the earth during the night, the soul of Mary Plyler, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Plyler, was released from the body that had been suffering for eight weeks with a disease that baffled the skill of a half score of the best physicians that love could employ. For nearly a week the fond parents watched by the bedside of their little girl, hoping that a turn for the better might come, but realizing that the odds were against them. It was early Friday morning of last week that hope was almost lost. At that time Mary became unconscious and was never able to recognize those about her again.

Mary was one of the most precocious children that we have ever known. When she entered your presence you could scarcely realize that she was only an eight-year-old child. Her thoughts, her demeanor, her conversation were those of a mature person. Her manners were perfect. She often came to this writer and asked for a certain kind of paper. We took her to our stock room and watched her in admiration as she made selection from a large stock of paper, and the care which she took in placing everything back just as she found it, and the graciousness with which she showed her appreciation of the favor she seemed to think we had bestowed upon her.

It was easy for Mary to make two grades in school during the year. When she was but five years old she read newspapers and magazines readily and understandingly. It was the hope of the parents that she might develop into a great woman and had it been the will of the Father to spare her no doubt their dreams would have been realized.

She was born on February 24, 1915, making her eight and one-half years old.

The Advocate force bows its head in grief to sympathize with the editor and his good wife in this hour of their supreme grief. May God richly manifest His presence with them now and forever.

The funeral services will be held this afternoon at four o'clock at the residence of Brother and Sister Plyler, 1015 West Market street, by Rev. J. H. Barnhardt, pastor of West Market Street church. The body will be laid to rest in Green Hill cemetery.

THE BALM THAT CURES

No argument is required to convince thoughtful people that there is much distress in the world today. And yet there is much that is fine and noble and good. No organism is in perfect condition, perhaps, and a man who is hunting for symptoms may readily find them. We would not close our eyes to the real conditions, but there is such a thing as playing up the shortcomings of mankind until everybody becomes panicky. It is very much like reading a patent medicine almanac and fitting the symptoms described to our own case until we actually think we are hopelessly stricken unless we purchase a bottle of Dr. Quack's dope and begin taking it at once. The fact is that there was nothing the matter with any part of our anatomy all the while except the brain. We simply allowed ourselves to be duped by some cheap propagandist who sat in a back room somewhere and wrote so eloquently that the reader would almost think that all the human organs were engaged in a war of rebellion.

We can sympathize with the opinions of men and women who are engaged in a study of human affairs at home and abroad, that there is much strife among men today, and many indications of future struggle and conflict. Many people after spending a short vacation in Europe rush into print and declare that war is pending; that we should or should not have gone into the League of Nations; and that the next war is going to be the most horrible exhibition of brutality that has ever been dreamed of.

Well, war may come again, but holding that possibility over our heads day and night, summer and winter, year in and year out, is going to hasten the day of war instead of preventing it. We would not close our eyes to the facts—the sad, stern, sobering facts, but we are weary of the excessive chatter dealing with the sordid selfishness of grasping nations being served to us morning, noon and night, until everybody concerned is thinking bolshevik. Whatever other nations fought for in the late world war, America was told that we were in it to make future wars impossible. And now after giving so many of our boys to that ideal, we are not even allowed to foster the "Law, not war" spirit in our country without protest and criticism from the apostles of militarism.

But the supreme effrontery of the whole situation lies in charging Christianity with the responsibility of restraining selfish men from visiting disaster upon innocent peoples. Many years ago the Man of Peace caused Peter to sheath his sword. He did not then, nor does he now, use coercion in attaining the ends of peace. If men will allow Christianity a place in their thinking and acting, it will very soon stabilize the errant passions of the world. But so long as they hold aloof from its teachings there is no possible way for it to influence their actions, and their folly cannot be charged to the account of the Christian religion.

Where Christ lives and the principles of his religion are respected and practiced, there are but few problems. Thus we know the remedy for what ails the world. The root wrong is "disillusioned, hate-filled, wrong-minded, wrong-willed, wrong-souled men and women." And the only way to cure these ills of ours is to have breathed into our lives the breath of everlasting love.

THE COST OF LEADERSHIP

The path of duty is not always the path of safety; it is not ever the path of safety. Every leader must reach efficiency through struggle. There come times when he must be unpopular in order to be true; when he must look out over the kingdom he would afterward inherit, and know that it is better to wait and suffer than to enter prematurely or by cheap methods. Leadership in the Kingdom of God is a grand and beautiful thing, but it cannot be had for the asking. No such leader since the foundation of the world, be he man or Messiah, has ever come to that position except along the rugged, precipitous, vicarious road of service.

A mushroom prophet is a fake and a deceiver. He cannot grow up in a night and be strong. Back of every great reformer and churchman in history is to be found a long, dreary, plodding career of toil and self-preparation. We serve God and humanity, not by the sufferance of the people, but by the unimpeachable right of our own royal character developed into sovereign quality by years of trial and suffering.

It is not automatically fixed by some church conference whether we shall be men and women of real leadership. A vote of the officials may determine whether a given person is to be a steward or Sunday school superintendent or teacher or leader anywhere, but every person fixes for himself the measure of his usefulness, and the whole world of officialdom cannot make a great leader out of a sorry man.

While the sun shines and there are no shadows around us, when all about us is conducive to happiness, we oftentimes forget God. But when the shadows lengthen and sorrow breaks upon our souls we think of Him, and His nearness fills us with a joy and hope that brings peace to us. In such an hour if it were not for God life would be a burden and sorrow would break our hearts.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Western North Carolina Conference, Winston-Salem, October 17.

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

Rev. R. F. Huneycutt, of the Davidson charge, is engaged in revival work at Bethel church.

Rev. S. M. Needham, of Wilkesboro, assisted Rev. G. A. Plyler in a series of meetings at Woodleaf recently.

Rev. J. E. Abernethy, pastor of Trinity church, Charlotte, delivered his lecture, "Pictures and Parables of Yellowstone Park," in Gastonia recently.

Rev. J. A. Sharp of First Street, Albemarle, is at Sneed's Ferry this week assisting Rev. E. W. Downum of the Scott's Hill charge in a series of meetings.

The First Methodist church of Lexington has just completed a hut for the use of the congregation in its social meetings. This new building was opened for use last Friday.

The many friends of Bishop U. V. Darlington in the North Carolina conference will be glad to know that he is to be a visitor at Elizabeth City during the session of the conference.

Rev. J. A. Hornaday, of Maxton, occupied the pulpit of First Methodist church, Lenoir, last Sunday. Brother Hornaday is visiting President and Mrs. Hornaday, of Davenport College.

Rev. P. W. Tucker, pastor of First church, Lenoir, and his brother, who is a resident of Oklahoma, are visiting relatives and friends in Rowan county. Brother Tucker is on his annual vacation.

Mr. James R. Gullede, a graduate of Trinity College, has been appointed librarian at State College. Mr. Gullede is a native of Stanley county and is well qualified for the new duties to which he has been called.

Rev. R. F. Huneycutt, pastor, was assisted by Rev. Raymond Smith, of Erlanger, in a series of meetings at Good Hope church. Twenty-four connected themselves with the church and the membership was greatly strengthened.

Rev. D. R. Proffitt, of the East Greensboro charge, was with Rev. J. A. Bowles in a meeting at Union church on the Randleman-Naomi charge last week. There were a number of conversions and several accessions to the church.

Rev. J. S. Hiatt, of Burkhead, Winston-Salem, is doing the preaching at Bethlehem camp meeting this week. Large crowds are attending and much interest is being manifested. Rev. A. G. Loftin is the pastor.

Rev. N. H. D. Wilson, D. D., of First church, Elizabeth City, spent last Sunday in Greensboro, visiting relatives. Brother and Sister Wilson are at this time spending some days with friends and relatives at Chapel Hill.

Mrs. L. B. Hayes, who has been abroad for several weeks, sailed from Southampton August 24. She expects to arrive in New York the latter part of the week. Brother Hayes will join her in the metropolis and spend a few days looking over the big city.

Rev. E. C. Sell, pastor of Goldston circuit, conducted an interesting meeting at Asbury church last week. At the close of the meeting Friday afternoon eight persons were baptized and nine new members received into the church.

The First church choir, Lexington, has had the reputation for a long time of being one of the best choirs in the state, but it has needed its organ remodeled for some time. This has been done at a cost of something like one thousand dollars. The organ has been electrified and practically rebuilt.

Rev. C. M. Pickens, pastor of First church, Albemarle, will begin a series of meetings in his church next Sunday. Much preliminary work has already been done. Quite a number of cottage prayer meetings have been held and the choir is arranging for special music during the meeting.

Rev. S. T. Barber, pastor of the Ahoskie charge, is kept busy these days assisting the brethren in meetings. Recently he was at Severn, where the membership of the church was increased 15 per cent. He also assisted at Colerain where a very successful meeting was held.

Dr. W. P. Few, president of Trinity College, delivered an address at the A. and T. College, this city, Wednesday. He was heard with a great deal of interest by those present.

Rev. T. M. Grant, of Hertford, is being used by the brethren of the Elizabeth City district in revival meetings this summer. He recently held meetings on the North Gates, Perquimans and Chowan charges, and the results have been good.

Rev. E. L. Hillman, the young and consecrated pastor of the Scotland Neck charge, held a very successful meeting at his Palmyra church last week. Reports coming from there indicate that Brother Hillman did some very fine preaching and that the results were very satisfactory.

Rev. A. L. Lucas assisted Brother Howell in a meeting last week at West Bend church on the Deep River charge. Mr. Lucas did fine preaching. All the services were attended by large crowds. The church was greatly revived and many sinners were saved.

Rev. L. S. Massey, pastor at Red Springs, and who has been resting for several months and recuperating, is back at work and greatly improved in health. It is learned that the people of Red Springs greatly enjoyed the ministry of Brother Hornaday, who subbed for Brother Massey during the summer.

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Cobb of Fremont, the pastor united in matrimony Miss Maud Cobb to Mr. Claude Grigg of Gibson, N. C., Tuesday evening at 8:30, August 21st. They will reside in Gibson, where the groom is elected superintendent of schools.

Mr. George L. Hackney, the new president of the Wesley Bible Class Federation of the Western North Carolina conference, will deliver an address next Sunday at Hickory Grove church, in Mecklenburg county, to the Board of Lay Activities in that church. The Ivey Choral Club will furnish music for the occasion.

The Norwood Methodist church was awarded the banner at the Sunday school convention of Stanley county, held recently in the Baptist church, Oakboro, for having the largest number in attendance. Central church, Albemarle, was a close second. Norwood had twenty-three present and traveled twenty-three miles. Central had twenty-two present.

At the close of the meeting at Muir's Chapel, of the West Greensboro charge, Sunday afternoon the congregation presented their pastor, Rev. C. F. Sherrill, with a nice purse and directed that he spend it during his vacation which he expects to spend at Moore's Springs. Brother Sherrill has not been in real good health recently, but he hopes that his trip to the springs will prove beneficial to him.

The Southern Assembly, Lake Junaluska, has just issued from the press a very beautiful souvenir, "Junaluska," which was issued for the benefit of the Literary Department of the Lake Junaluska Woman's Club. This is to be sold and the proceeds will be used for the benefit of the Woman's Club. Mr. J. Dale Stentz, Lake Junaluska, will be glad to supply anyone who may wish a copy.

The Advocate regrets to learn of the death of Mrs. Julia Killian Dryman, mother of Rev. F. O. Dryman, pastor of our church at Norwood. Sister Dryman died August 17th and was buried at Flatt's Methodist cemetery the next day. She was a native of Macon county and among its hills she will rest till the resurrection. A more extended notice will be given of the going away of this good woman next week.

Miss Juanita Craven, a most excellent young woman of Climax, died while on a visit to Asheville last Saturday. It is learned that she had ptomaine poisoning. Miss Craven was a consecrated Christian and earnest worker in Bethlehem church. Her funeral was held on Sunday, the first day of the camp meeting, and it is said that the largest congregation that was ever known to be at that old church was present to pay the last respects to one whom everybody loved.

BON VOYAGE

Within the next few weeks many boys and girls from our Methodist homes in North Carolina will be leaving the romantic, fairy-inhabited land of their childhood fancies for the broader realm of college or university life. Some will be going out for the first time, while others will return to tasks which were laid down temporarily last June.

It is an anxious moment for all concerned. To the student it marks a high experience which he has long anticipated. It means the loosing of the cable which binds the physical craft to the home pier, and a launching out into the untried sea of self-reliance. It matters not how far away the receiving port nor what the stress of wave and wind that awaits, there is no hint of this in the harbor as the vessel rides out to sea. Youth is self-confident, optimistic, courageous. The same compass which directs him from the home port and finds for him the course of safety in all the lonely days ahead, will bring him back again at the end of the voyage.

But back at home there are those who watch the skies and study the weather chart in the hope that all the elements may be favorable to a successful voyage and a happy return. Let us earnestly hope that every such vessel may be seaworthy and that they may all come back in safety bearing their precious cargoes gathered from classic lands beyond the surging seas of intellectual adventure.

THE CANNON-SHACKFORD DISCUSSION

The Advocate has received several articles and resolutions commending Bishop Cannon in the stand he took in the recent Junaluska discussion. We wish it to be known that the Advocate stands four square by the doctrines of the Methodist church, and it greatly deplores the fact that at this time when all the forces of Methodism should be united in carrying out the great programs of the church that a matter of this kind has been injected. We think that it is best for the matter to be dropped where it is, and that there be no further discussion of the matter. The editor of the Advocate is at this time watching at the bedside of a very sick child and the assistant editor will not assume the responsibility for the publication of other articles bearing on this subject. We feel confident that it is not best for our church, and that it cannot benefit anyone to continue a discussion that will not be of any service to anyone. We are giving Dr. Shackford the same space that we gave Bishop Cannon. We could not be just and do otherwise, but this will be the last that we feel justified in publishing at least till the editor gets back to his desk.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE BOARD OF LAY ACTIVITIES, LAKE JUNALUSKA, AUGUST 9-10, 1923

Whereas, the Christian Education Movement by reason of its great importance has been given the right of way in the church from August 1st to November 30th of this year, therefore be it resolved:

First, That we give this movement our unqualified endorsement and call upon all our boards and lay activities to co-operate in every possible way in carrying on this work.

Second, That as an organization we regard it as our major task during these months, especially in the local congregations, to promote this movement and to assist in the collection of pledges.

Third, We urge that the Christian Education committee be appointed in every church and be requested with the co-operation of the pastors to hold meetings in the interest of this cause, to provide lay speakers, to organize teams to assist the local collectors and to promote the movement in such other ways as seem wise.

Fourth, That our general secretary be instructed to send out to the entire organization full information as to those plans and such other suggestions as he may determine.

Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. This is he of whom I said, after me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me. And I knew him not: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water. I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him. And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me: "Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptized with the Holy Ghost." And I saw and bare record that this is the Son of God.—John the Baptist.

THE REAL POSITION OF THE MANAGEMENT OF THE JUNALUSKA LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL

pared to study the problems of religious education than are their usual classes in the universities. The group this year was probably the most intelligently prepared to consider those problems that has ever been assembled in a summer school for this purpose in the history of the church.

When we select speakers in the manner indicated, we have not felt that it was necessary either to control them or to indorse them at every point. Whether or not it was wise for Dr. Bland to give very frankly what is found in Hasting's Bible Dictionary, generally recognized as the foremost Bible dictionary in our language, and in more recent Bible dictionaries and commentaries—and Dr. Bland states that he was following these closely—is a question which the management of the school did not and has not felt called upon to answer. This, however, was Dr. Bland's approach.

Dr. Bland's obvious purpose was to show that in the face of the accepted findings of a great body of Christian Bible scholars, it is perilous to rest our faith upon the assumption that they are wrong, or to ask thinking people to shut their eyes to the facts. He felt that he must state the situation frankly in order to give a solution. But, in all fairness to him, it should be borne in mind that a very small proportion of his lectures was given to stating the problems. In fact, as he himself has pointed out, practically all the points which have been printed and objected to in the press were set forth in one lecture, yet he delivered a series of eighteen lectures—six in the Auditorium and twelve in the Religious Education Building. It is difficult to understand how any fair-minded persons who consider Dr. Bland's work, taken as a whole, would say other than that it was constructive and reassuring, and that his spirit was sympathetic and thoroughly Christ-like. He was evidently eager in his desire to help people find a foundation for their faith that cannot be shaken, whether the conclusions of scholars are true or otherwise. Dr. Bland has stated that he was following more closely than any other authority on recent scholarship the general position occupied by the latest English Bible commentary, issued since the war, and contributed to by some sixty or more of the foremost and most distinguished scholars of Great Britain. He did not undertake to give the evidence—pro or con—nor did he insist that anybody must accept their conclusions. He said frankly and repeatedly that each man must form his own conclusions and that our Christian religion rests upon foundations that are not affected by these conclusions. Then he undertook to give a view of the great and growing revelation of God to Israel through the centuries, culminating in the person and work of Jesus, which he held would help us to see the whole process as of God. The greatest miracle of all the centuries, save that of Jesus, he said, is the miracle of God's dealing with Israel and of the high points of moral and spiritual vision to which he brought them. And then in reply to a question, Dr. Bland said, "If there is anything that I believe above everything else in the world, it is the divinity of Jesus Christ." He sought to show that the Christian faith is faith in a person and does not stand or fall with the literal accuracy of all parts of the Bible.

The position of the management of the school was, not to express any position for or against the accuracy of the conclusions of scholarship stated by Dr. Bland, but in harmony with the spirit of the quotations given in the first part of this paper, it was said that in the face of the fact that there is a substantial agreement on a number of matters among large numbers of Bible scholars—such, for instance, as the contribution to Hasting's Bible Dictionary—we do not strengthen the faith of thoughtful, inquiring people who already know something of the existence of the views of these scholars, when we adopt the method of ridicule or denunciation of the scholars; and that it is not the Christian spirit to denounce as untrue and insincere Christian men who do accept the viewpoint of such Bible scholars, since many of the real Christian leaders of today, as a matter of fact, hold a view in harmony with the position taken by these scholars, and yet are unquestionably loyal to Jesus Christ and the Bible. We said that our position must be so to help the teachers of today to understand the Bible that their faith shall not depend upon their being kept in ignorance of these views in question, since this is obviously no longer possible.

That there easily may be difference of opinion as to the wisdom of Dr. Bland's frank presentation of some things, especially those presented in the one lecture referred to, we readily grant, but any suggestion that the management of the school planned that he should say these particular things, or knew that he would say them, or any suggestion that the management of the school has set itself for a defense of the views of scholarship as presented by Dr. Bland, or anybody else, is not justified by the facts. The questions of scholarship we leave with the scholars.

But regardless of any such difference of opinion as to method, that Dr. Bland did do a wonderful, helpful and constructive work that deepened and strengthened the Christian faith of large numbers in the Bible and in Jesus Christ is beyond question. Any fair description of his work would indicate that he gave an inspiring presentation of the view of a growing revelation of God in Israel, rising to ever higher heights of moral and spiritual truth, and culminating in the world's supreme revelation of God in His Son. He was clear in his recognition and emphasis upon the inspiration and authority of the Old Testament, at the same time he believed that he was giving constructive help to his hearers by saying that their faith in the inspiration of the Old Testament is not dependent upon a mechanical and literalistic view of the inspiration of the scriptures.

Voluntary testimonials have come to us from all types of people present, including a man of years of experience in evangelistic work, a university professor who had drifted from his faith because of what he had held to be the conflict of science with the literalistic view of the inspiration of the scriptures, large numbers of young college men and women, numbers of pastors, and mothers, Sunday school teachers and officers of years of experience, business men, missionaries—all of whom expressed their very great joy that they had had the privilege of getting the help of these lectures. Many of them say that Dr. Bland has led them to a greater assurance of faith and made their Bible more sure and clear to them. One young man who had felt he could not hold to the church any longer, was brought back to sure foundations, and to give his life to the ministry or some other specific form of religious work. No lecturer in the history of the school has ever had such evident fruits as indicated by the large number of expressions of increased faith and better understanding of the Word of God on the part of the students of the school.

We are at one of the critical moments of history, when the faith of a new generation, reared in an atmosphere of inquiry and investigation, is at stake, and with it the future of our religion and of our civilization. To that generation, those who are older are now about to turn over the control of the affairs of men in this world. It is imperative, therefore, that the way shall be cleared of all mechanical obstruction for a living faith in the living Christ, a faith that is open-minded and unafraid, but that rests supremely upon the person of Jesus and the God and Father of Jesus who is the Lord of the whole earth.

It is imperative that in a day when every true educator is insisting that people shall search for the truth for themselves, that those who are battling for sure foundation shall not be told that it is dangerous to investigate, or shall be made to feel that the Christian faith is imperiled by science or scholarship, or that they necessarily must choose between faith and scholarship, or faith and science.

This, we believe, to be essentially the position of our own Methodism—the historic position of John Wesley, representing the real spirit and genius of the Great Methodist movement which has never placed its primary emphasis upon theological distinctions—this, that while holding an intelligent faith in the Bible as the revelation of God, our primary emphasis must ever be upon the life and experience of living folks, and that we must think and let think, and must help those who do think to find the everlasting foundations beneath their feet.

The above statement made by Dr. J. W. Shackford, General Secretary, is a true and correct presentation of the principles set forth by Dr. Shackford in his address delivered on the occasion of the opening of our Leadership School at Junaluska in July, 1923.

A brief repetition of these principles was also contained in the statement made by Dr. Shackford at the close of the series of addresses delivered by Dr. S. G. Bland; and these principles governed the selection of Dr. Bland and every other speaker and teacher selected by us for leading our students during the period of the Leadership School.

Some days after this statement was prepared I invited a number of persons who had been on the grounds during the period of our first school, and who had heard Dr. Shackford's address, and also all of Dr. Bland's addresses. This group contained mature men and women—Sunday school teachers, mothers, preachers, conference superintendents and others. They were invited without any knowledge whatever as to the purpose of the meeting. The statement was carefully read in their presence and upon the completion of the reading, they were asked whether or not they thought the statement true and accurate, to which question they individually replied that it was not only true and correct, but that it was an unusually clear statement of the utterances and policy of the General Secretary; and gave it their unanimous and unqualified indorsement. (Signed) L. F. Sensabaugh.

I have read the foregoing statement in regard to certain lectures at Lake Junaluska during the season of 1923, and find it entirely correct.

I heard the lectures referred to, and with the exception of one, in which the speaker gave the conclusions of scholarship such as are published in Peak's Commentary and Hasting's Bible Dictionary, they were all good, and true to a spiritual interpretation of the Holy Scriptures. Even in the lecture excepted above, the speaker's insistence upon the divine inspiration of the Old Testament writings was impressive throughout.

If the eighteen lectures this speaker delivered be taken together, it would be difficult to find a more reverent, spiritual and helpful series anywhere. His exaltation of Christ as the meaning and end of the Divine Revelation was unsurpassed, and many who did not accept what he gave from the Biblical scholars have acknowledged deep obligation for spiritual help through this course.

I deeply regret that the one-sided and unfair exploitation of this incident before the church has disturbed the feelings of some good men.

GOINGS ON—WISE AND OTHERWISE

By Rev. W. O. Butler.

Pastors can pick up information from evangelists in the matter of the time element in revival meetings. Evangelists know that a week or ten days or two weeks is not enough time to reach results worth while in a protracted meeting. Much harm has resulted from short term meetings. For instance, a meeting closes after a ten days' run. In the congregation are persons who have been moved almost to the point of yielding to the gospel call, but the meeting suddenly closes. Next meeting finds them harder to move. This process goes on for years and the result is a gospel hardened people. The preacher wonders at their stolidity. Such a situation has come about by unfair dealing with souls on the part of preachers and churches. A circuit preacher with four churches might do more in soul saving with two annual meetings, giving plenty of time to each, than having four short term meetings.

Consolidation has satisfactorily solved the rural school problem. The same policy will come dangerously near solving the country church problem. In these days of automobile transportation many difficult matters can be met successfully that could not be so well adjusted in the former days. Take four or five rural churches located within four to six miles of each other, find the center of population of this membership, drive down a stake at that point, get the approval of the group of churches to make a consolidation, and erect a roomy, handsome church house on modern plans and specifications. Then find another group of churches and get them to do likewise. Here you have two strong, large roomy rural churches, which can be served by one preacher twice a month, instead of eight or ten weak and struggling churches with preaching once a month. This would also help settle the matter of a shortness in man power in the pulpit.

A MIDSUMMER CRUISE ON THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA

By Rev. S. H. C. Burgin, D.D.

A vari-colored picture of foreign shores piques one's interest. Turning the pages of a really seeing traveler's book fills one with a desire to see and know the tragedies, biographies and joys that go to make national history. Both of these are inspiring, but to see the lands themselves, to discover each for your own self, is one of the greatest joys that can come to the interested traveler.

History has piled her treasures all along the Mediterranean shores in heaps of ruins, pictures, color and tradition that fill one's mind with a great joy.

A blue sea, day after day, smooth and restful to the horizon's rim, a steady, easy-going vessel, the Tuscania, whose Scotch Captain Bone is not only a worthy seaman, but a noted author as well, a Scotch crew, a group of five hundred American travelers, twenty-six clergymen, twenty-three physicians, many teachers, professors, and authors, as well as many out merely for sight-seeing, make meeting people quite as much an adventure as touching new lands.

Leaving New York by sea is always inspiring. Our people on ship had hundreds of gay-hued streamers which we threw to people on shore and as we pulled away the slender cords that held us broke and faces dimmed and waving handkerchiefs receded, and then our only goddess faded away, and "home" and loved ones were lost in the dimness of distance. A cruise assumes a more leisurely ocean gait than any other type of passenger voyage, and twelve or fifteen knots per hour has been our regular time, but the Tuscania did eighteen and twenty knots with just as steady decks when extra speed was necessary.

Funchal, Madeira, was our first day ashore and nature spilled a perfect riot of fruit, flower and picturesque setting on a blue sea-girt island. Embroidery, beads, big comfy chairs, fruit, flowers and even a white-faced monkey were added to our impediments on deck after that visit.

Lisbon—still, stately and rather uninviting, but fully worth an acquaintance, next interested us, and here began an endless picture of gorgeous cathedral scenes, rich pictures and an access of colorful ornamentation that increased every step we took.

Portugal is a very restless republic. We were told that the body of one deceased president was locked in a church to keep the angry populace from throwing it into the river Aagus, and also that twenty-five prime ministers had followed each other in rapid succession.

Granada is a city of rare beauty. The famous Alhambra, Generalife, cathedrals, Carthusian monastery beggar description. Gay shawls, high combs and black mantillas give the Spanish woman her very own place she is fast losing when she puts on American clothes.

Nice was quiet, but gave the most satisfying day. The famous gambling place had its full quota of eager-eyed darers of fate, but summer is not the high society season and only Mary Garden and Ibanez, the novelist, were among the notables.

Nice was quite, but gave the most satisfying lunch of a long line of lunches—good, bad, indifferent and impossible. Monaco seemed a toy kingdom, indeed, after living in Texas. Genoa charmed everybody, even more than Naples. Its relics of Columbus, his home, the cathedral where he said his mass and where Paganini played, filled out the life of Columbus, whose high places we had seen at Granada.

Vesuvius was disappointing, as she had lost some nineteen hundred feet of her height in 1908, and had only a slender veil of white smoke to indicate her very uncertain disposition; but Strambolli was very satisfying one morning at five o'clock, when red ribbons of flame glimmered through the clouds over her head, and Aetna was a shadowy shape of a huge mountain, too sullen to allow herself seen only when in a good humor.

Pompeii, the dead city, which had filled my boyish dreams with sympathy and interest, stretched its roofless houses far, far under the pitiless glare of a noon-day Italian sun and staring publicity of hundreds of tourists, making the story of its life, ambitions and destruction very real in its present desolation. Capri and Sonento, lapped by sapphire sea, and with every foot redolent with some bit of biography and history—Caruso's favorite hotel, Marion Crawford's home, Tiberius, Caesar's old castle, from whose precipitous height he threw down those who disagreed with him, and on and on ad infinitum.

This day we touched Dalamatia early, and all day have passed her shores—Albania, Montenegro and the mountainous shore line of these storied and lately war-torn little kingdoms. They seemed very quiet, quaint and very lonely as we sped past.

Venice—St. Mark's, the Doge's palace and hundreds of storied towers, monuments, canals and bridges filled days with endless interest and recalled much fact and fancy almost lost to memory.

Flume and d'Annunzio's bomb-broken palace—its sullen unrest, lack of work and vast empty warehouses—Addrassion and its gay fiesta and seeing the young crown prince alight from his yacht, added interest to July 26th.

The comforts, broad spaces and unusual conveniences of our homeland stand in bold contrast to these lands of history, tradition, ignorance, dirt and disease. The dominance of Catholicism and what it brings and the radiant joy and freedom of Protestantism are two great facts travel around this great sea accents.

Divine service on Sunday, music, lectures and pictures fill the days, and sight-seeing a few days brings one back to a familiar stateroom for rest and peace. Sunday in Athens and a service Sunday night by full moon on the Acropolis fill us with deep memories.

The days are swiftly passing and soon the Holy Land will open its gates for us to follow the Master's footsteps over hill and valley. Friends are dearer, work for God and good more compelling, and all the enlarging program of our great church more world-needed from these shores.

Sent from Adriatic Sea, 800 miles south of Athens. Dated July 27, 1923.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA SHARES THE GRIEF OF AMERICA

J. L. Neill.

The tragic going of President Harding has shocked all of us. Regardless of our political affiliations or differences of opinions concerning world issues, we must recognize the calamity of such an experience at this time in the history of nations.

Yesterday afternoon (August 7th) a memorial service was held in his memory. This was held at four o'clock at St. Martin's in the Wall, an old church about which you no doubt have heard much, whose history dates back to 1180. Instead of waiting Mr. Lewis Einstein, American minister to Czechoslovakia, urged that the service be held yesterday because of the difference in time. Unless the memorial had been set for that hour it would have been impossible to hold an official memorial service here at the same time as the funeral service in America. In other words it would have been delayed for many days. As arranged the service was altogether official and held under the authority of the American legation. The program was as follows:

Hymn No. 460, "Lead Kindly Light."

Scripture reading (1 Corinthians 15)—C. S. Winans, American.

Prayer—J. L. Neill.

Condolence of President Masaryk and Czech Government—John Masaryk.

Memorial Address—Lewis Einstein, U. S. Minister to Czechoslovakia.

Hymn No. 744, "Crossing the Bar."

Benediction—Mr. Ray Legate, Budapest.

The music was furnished by a group of seventeen young American university students with Mrs. Neill at the organ. These young men are in charge of Mr. Legate of the European Student Relief and are here on a tour of inspection and study. The entire service was not more than forty-five minutes in length. It was official in character in that it was announced by Mr. Einstein for the State Department and the entire diplomatic and consular corps of Prague were present in their official capacity and full dress. It was really impressive. The house was filled to its capacity, even the gallery, and there were many American tourists present.

One of my friends stated some days ago that he was a hundred per cent American when he left home, but that now he was a thousand per cent. I do not think a thousand per cent could express my feeling toward America and her institutions. While we bemoan the going of President Harding we rejoice that the man who takes his place is a man of simple democracy and thorough American tastes, whose ancestors helped to make the moral fabric of our nation. We feel here in Czechoslovakia that the reins of government have been placed in steady hands and have no doubt of the future.

SPIRITUAL HEALTH

Samuel Johnson.

It is common knowledge that the body (physical man) has certain requirements. It has certain needs that must be met. That is, they must be met if the health of it is to be maintained. The rule is when any one of these needs is not properly met suffering is the result. Sometimes it is death. Many times it is suffering and then death. While this is true many people don't take time to think it out and consider it as they should. The health of the body is important, very important. But there is something more important than that. This is the health of the soul. The body is the tabernacle of the soul (or inner man) while here. So while the tabernacle is important, the inhabitant—the real man—is more so. Rightly considering the needs of the body may help us to better understand those of the soul. For the soul, or inner man, has needs. And they are similar, very similar, to those of the body. First of all the body needs fresh air. Deprive it of this it is soon lifeless. It breathes momentarily. Many people by limiting their supply of fresh air injure their health. The soul breathes momentarily. It breathes faith, trust, hope. For be it known that these are similar. At least faith and trust are. Faith is to the soul what fresh air is to the body. Should you lose completely your faith in God's love and power, and fail to trust Him to keep you, your spiritual life would be gone.

Secondly, your body needs protection. As soon as corn "comes up" it needs protection from the crows; young chicks need protection from hawks. And so we need protection. We wear clothes as a protection against heat and cold. We need protection from disease germs, wrecks, accidents, etc. In short, we need to be protected from any and everything that would injure the body. The soul needs protection. We are enjoined to put on the whole armour of God. (See Ephesians, 6). We are wisely enjoined to "Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men. Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it, and pass away." (Prov. 4:13-14). If our bodies are exposed to disease germs we may become affected. If our souls are exposed to those whose souls are diseased there is danger. We can't always avoid exposure to either physical or spiritual dangers. We need to act with wisdom here. We are told that "He will not allow us to be tempted above that we are able to bear." This is conditional, of course. We must follow the Bible. Christ said, "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation."

Thirdly, we need food. We need this daily. Most of us eat three times each day as a rule. Our souls also need food. Where can we get this? There are several sources of supply. Reading and studying the Bible, hearing the word preached or expounded, by reading other good literature than the Bible, by conversing with other Christians, and by worship in the home and at church. We need to draw from all these sources. The pastor is meant to be a shepherd. Jesus told Peter to feed His sheep. Brother, what are you feeding them on?

Fourthly, the body needs sleep. What does sleep do for us? It rests us. It renews our energy. In short it fits us to use a new day. We go to bed tired and worn with the day's work. Our energy is low. In the morning we feel like a new person. We have the energy for a big job. We have confidence that we can accomplish something. Prayer does all this for the soul. I mean private prayer. Try it. And let us note that while sleeping the body is practically cut loose from its surroundings—from the world. The same is true of the soul while praying.

Fifthly, the body needs exercise. Exercise helps to digest the food, and so to get the good out of it. Work (exercise) learns you how to work, and keeps you fit for work. The soul needs exercise. Oh, how many spiritual dyspeptics there are! And what is exercise? Discharging your Christian duties and doing anything to advance the kingdom of God.

FIELD NEWS

DEEP RIVER CHARGE

We have just closed a two weeks' campaign here for God. The Lord sent to us Bro. Wm. Stewart, a man of God, and he brought to us the plain gospel. About thirty-four were converted and reclaimed. As a result of this meeting ten came into the M. E. church, eight by profession of faith and two by letter, four into the M. P. church and two into the Baptist.

We thank God that the devil's ranks have been broken into and that God's kingdom is making advancement. There are several yet who ought to come into the church and we pray God that they may and help to fight the evil one. Again we say, thank God for sending Brother Stewart and Brother and Sister Goodchild to us at this time, for indeed they have been a blessing to us. And we pray God's blessing upon their labors.

Mrs. J. A. Howell.

ROANOKE ISLAND

We have held revival meetings at Manteo and also at Wanchese on the Roanoke Island charge. Dr. N. H. D. Wilson, pastor of First church, Elizabeth City, was with us in Manteo and did all the preaching, and we were all greatly benefited. We had eight to join the church on profession of faith.

Brother Wilson is a theologian and a splendid evangelist, and God is using this great man of God in the large field of usefulness. We were all very much delighted with his preaching and his consecrated life in our midst.

Bro. J. M. Jolliffe, pastor of the Hatteras charge, was with us at Wanchese. All of our Wanchese people were well pleased with Brother Jolliffe's preaching and much good was accomplished. At this meeting thirty-three were received into the church. To God be all the praise.

A. W. Price, Pastor.

GROUP QUARTERLY CONFERENCES

The third quarterly conference for the current year 1923 met in Mount Olivet Methodist church, Manteo, Thursday, August 16th, at 8 o'clock p. m. This conference met in group session and the following charges were represented: Roanoke Island, Hatteras, Kennekeet, Stumpy Point, Kitty Hawk and Dare circuit.

The pastors of all the charges were present except Bro. E. J. Midgett of the Kitty Hawk charge, who could not be present on account of sickness. All the sessions were presided over by our beloved presiding elder, Bro. C. B. Culbreth. A goodly number of official members of the various charges were present, and the reports of both pastors and the brethren were very encouraging. Special stress was put upon Sunday school, Epworth League and mission work.

Rev. T. M. Grant of Hertford was present and gave a splendid address upon the necessity and importance of the Epworth League. Bro. L. L. Gobel, superintendent of Sunday school work, and also Miss Georgia S. Keene, superintendent of the department of Sunday school elementary work, was with us, and both Mr. Gobel and Miss Keene were heard with much delight, and their services were doubtless of very much value to the Sunday schools. We were glad that they placed the emphasis upon constructive work in the Sunday school. We regretted very much that Mrs. Hawkins of Hertford could not be present to represent the woman's missionary work. She was kept away on account of illness. However, Mrs. P. H. Williams of Elizabeth City was present and spoke in behalf of this great work. Before the conference finally adjourned with the Friday night session a motion was offered by Rev. T. M. Grant with a view of looking into the importance of and encouraging an annual meeting to be held at some time during the summer near the center of these six charges, with the view and purpose of bringing together the workers of our church, Sunday school, Epworth League and missionary societies, and to have the field workers in these various departments of church work to meet with them and discuss the better methods and plans of work which will mean advancement on all lines of service for the Master. The motion was carried by unanimous vote. I wish to say that I sincerely believe that a meeting of this kind, and with the aim in view as Brother Grant outlined it, would be of untold value to the church and to each of its departments of work. Brethren and sisters, let us encourage this important movement. A. W. Price.

WAXHAW CHARGE

I must tell the readers of the Advocate a little of the doings of this charge. These heroic Christians at the different churches constitute a splendid working force. It is good to have so many live working people such as we have on the Waxhaw charge.

Our eight days' meeting at Waxhaw was indeed a lively one. Rev. T. J. Houck of Pineville was with us and did the preaching between Sundays. He is a strong, forceful speaker and knows how to put the truth. Our people were delighted with him. There were nine professions and three joined the church. Brother Houck is fine help. The church got a great blessing out of this meeting.

FLEATHER'S CHAPEL ON DURHAM CIRCUIT, TO BE DEDICATED SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 2 BY BISHOP COLLINS DENNY

This beautiful house of worship was built during the four years' pastorate of Rev. J. C. Humble, the pews, light plant and other furnishings being installed soon after his last service at the close of last year. It was ready for use and paid for at the beginning of this year. The total cost was $3000. J. D. Fletcher is chairman of the building committee. A. M. Carpenter is superintendent of the Sunday school. We shall be pleased to have the "Advocate man" at our dedication and acquaint him with the many other interesting facts and the many good Methodist people in this community who will be here happy-hearted on this good day. W. F. Craven.

We held a six days' meeting at Mineral Springs. The Lord was with us. There were fifteen professions and six joined. We closed with a love feast. It was good to be there. Some praised the Lord aloud. Several pledged to take up family prayers.

Our meeting at Bond's Grove was moving up finely till I broke down and had to suspend. The revival fires were burning among the people. There were nine professions and nine joined. We closed this meeting with a love feast. Here they praised the Lord.

I expect to hold the love feasts till they take it out of the law of the church. Three promised to establish family altars.

This brings us to the Pleasant Grove Camp Meeting. My! here we had a sweeping time. The day of the necessity for the camp meeting may have passed, but its usefulness and power still lingers. This approached the old time kind. Most of the preaching was done by preachers who were reared in this (Union) county: Rev. Sam Belk now of Atlanta, Ga., Rev. J. F. Moser of Cherryville, Rev. H. C. Byrum of Rock Springs, and Rev. T. J. Huggins of Weddington charge. Mrs. C. L. Steidley of Gastonia led the music, held the children's services and preached three times to great congregations.

The preaching was of high order. Dr. Belk was at his best. He is a scholarly man and a godly preacher. He held his audiences with rapt attention. He is held in high esteem in this county and loved, as well as the other preachers gone out from this county.

Sister Steidley is a combination woman. She is a consecrated servant of God. You feel it as she speaks to the people and sings. She conducted the nine o'clock service for the children and young people. She knows how to handle them. She preached three times at the three o'clock hour, and held the audience as few men can do.

Rev. T. J. Huggins of Weddington charge preached the opening sermon, which was a strong one.

Just how many professions and reclamations is hard to say, but a goodly number. But many people were lifted to a greater height in real Christian experience. Some shouted aloud. Thirty-one gave their names for membership for the different churches.

About $450 was raised to pay the expenses of the meeting and to improve the camp ground.

E. N. Crowder.

EXPEDITING THE WORK OF THE FOURTH QUARTERLY CON- FERENCE

The fourth quarterly conference in this part of our territory always comes at the busiest season of the year and if the work is properly done it requires a prolonged session. So many reports are to be submitted and plans for the next year formulated that in many cases very important work must be hurried over to the detriment of the church.

I have found one thing which greatly expedites the work of this conference. Let each pastor prepare triplicate copies of all his boards with his nominations for the different officers to be elected for each church leaving sufficient space for amendments and additions. One of these he can retain for his records, the second for his recording steward and the third for the presiding elder. If this is done the election of the various boards can be carried through in a very short time and the records will be uniform.

Our busy laymen will appreciate this preparation and as a result they will join with zest in the work of this laborious conference.

W. A. Newell.

I KNOW A NAME, A NAME, A NAME

"I know a land that is sunk in shame
Of hearts that faint and tire;
But I know a Name, a Name, a Name
That can set that land on fire.

I know a soul that is steeped in sin,
That no man's art can cure;
But I know a Name, a Name, a Name
That can make that soul all pure.

I know a life that is lost to God,
Bound down by things of earth;
But I know a Name, a Name, a Name
That can bring that soul new birth.

So listen, my heart, an angel speaks
To save thy life from dross;
Christ Jesus is the Name, the Name—
He saves by way of the cross.

—Author Unknown.

MATTHEWS CHARGE

On Wednesday night, August 22nd, we closed what I am pleased to call a successful evangelistic campaign for the Matthews charge. The pastor did the preaching at Bethel and Indian Trail. Brother A. C. Tippett, one of the able and fast growing young preachers of our conference, did the preaching at our Matthews church. Brother Tippett held his large audiences charmed for eleven days and nights. His sermons were all strong and full of gospel truth. Prof. George R. Hawkes led in the singing in all the meetings for the charge. Brother Hawkes is among the best of our evangelistic singers. He delighted as well as inspired all our audience with his melodious solos. I am persuaded to believe that many were led to conviction and on to conversion under the influence of his gospel songs. I feel sure that all our churches have been greatly built up in faith and numbers as a result of these meetings.

R. E. Hinshaw, Pastor.

REPORT COMMITTEE ON CHRISTIAN LITERATURE, N. WILKESBORO DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Literature made its initial entrance into the world when primitive man first expressed his thoughts by the use of crude hieroglyphics. Literature was one of the first fruits of civilization, and as this early civilization was very crude, its literature lacked culture and refinement; but as men advanced in the channel of civilization, literature likewise moved forward. In studying the history of any nation we discover, invariably, that its literature is a reliable index of its state of civilization. No nation has ever approached a higher ideal than that which has been set forth in the literature which it produced.

In view of the fact that literature not only reflects the grade of our living, but that it also is influential in fashioning and moulding the lives of men, we must more carefully guard the standards of our literature. Much of the modern literature is void of the beautiful and ennobling qualities which elevate thought and life. Unwholesome literature does not, and cannot, purify and life humanity, and yet our literature is drifting toward unwholesomeness. Shall this be the index of our civilization? Shall our public demand light and frivolous literature spiced with slang? The libraries in many of our homes are filled with this kind of literature. John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, realized the powerful influence of literature for he himself had been influenced by the religious works of at least three authors. He urged his ministers to put good books into the early Methodist homes, and by so doing he set forth the great truth that to put a religious book into a home was to plant in it a permanent religious force. May we see to it that our libraries are made up of only the very best books.

The business and political world has long realized the favorable results derived from the use of the printed page. It is a messenger that can easily reach every fireside. We need to awake to a fuller realization of the importance of the printed page in the spread of the gospel. From last year's annual conference organ we find that too few of our people are reading the North Carolina Christian Advocate. There are about five thousand church members in the North Wilkesboro district, and by estimating five church members to each home, we calculate that there are approximately one thousand homes in this district. There are about three hundred subscribers to the North Carolina Christian Advocate in the district, which reveals that the conference journal comes to less than one home in every three. It can be easily estimated that practically every Methodist home in the district receives either a weekly or daily newspaper together with one or more monthly magazines. What preacher has not heard this reply when trying to secure subscribers to the Advocate, "I'd like to take it, but I already have more papers than I can read." A farmer reads a farm journal in order that he may become a more efficient farmer, and may we realize that we become more efficient Methodists—and more than that—more efficient Christians by reading the N. C. Christian Advocate. We urge that we shall labor and not be satisfied until we have placed this paper into every Methodist home.

We recommend further that our Sunday schools use our own literature, not that we imply that other denominational literature is not good, but because we can use our own tools better. In addition to this, we recommend that wherever possible Sunday school libraries be installed.

As a further recommendation we offer this, that more of our people should study the Discipline. We know too little about our church.

Lastly, we would not forget the Bible, which towers pre-eminently above all other literature, and which was written by men inspired by God. It is the Masterpiece of the ages. Other literature has come and gone, but the Bible has come down to us from antiquity, losing neither its meaning or significance. It contains the words of life for all men. May we read more of the Bible. Too many of our center tables are stacked with worldly books, while the Bible, the most interesting, the most sacred, and the most inspiring Book is hidden away from sight. May we regard the Bible as the Book of all books and read and study it frequently.

MISSIONS AND CENTENARY COLLECTIONS

Report of committee, North Wilkesboro District Conference, North Wilkesboro, May 29-30, 1923:

It has been ordained by Infinite Wisdom that the world should be saved by the "foolishness of preaching." To this task men have been divinely called and commissioned. The church has been made the medium through which the work is to be done. The method by which the church seeks to accomplish the task goes under the general term "missions."

The word "mission" is an abbreviation of the word "commission." In the language of the Christian church this has reference to what is known as the "great commission," "Go ye into all the world and preach this gospel to every creature."

Missions, therefore, becomes not a part of the work of the church but the work of the church. Not a phase of her task, but her supreme effort. Every phase of the activities of the church must be in obedience to the command to preach the gospel to every creature—at home and abroad, thus making every man the keeper of his brother. The terrible question has come thundering across the ages, "Where is thy brother?" In what state is he? What is his condition? What does he need?

Thus our obligation arises to determine the state of all humanity, and to find the means of supplying the needs that may be found. Modern missionary effort has assumed the task of discovering and supplying the religious needs of the whole world.

Our great Centenary movement was the first adequate effort to base religious activity upon the needs of the world. Before the conception of the idea that issued in that titanic movement, the church had been studied with a view to determining her strength and willingness to supply the most urgent needs of a few of the peoples of the world. This movement was based upon a realization that the church could do anything that she ought to do.

In the light of this understanding the needs of the world have been determined, and the church has been asked to supply those needs. This request has been responded to in the Centenary pledges of the church in true Methodist style, filling up the measure of 35 millions to overflowing with more than 50 millions. Financial depression has made payments of these pledges, in many instances, almost a present impossibility. But your committee has faith in the integrity of our great church, and do not hesitate to prophesy that these pledges will be paid to the last penny by a very large majority of our people. In some instances an extension of time may, and probably will, have to be granted. But we do most earnestly hope that the people of the North Wilkesboro district will not require a single day beyond absolute necessity in meeting their Centenary obligations.

This is a most sacred fund. It is designed for the salvation of the lost souls of men in every land. And it is so interwoven with our "conference collections" that full payment of all the connectional claims and conference assessments every year will have the added advantage of taking care of the pledges of some who promised in good faith, but were not able to redeem their pledge. Each charge and church was given credit as a missionary pledge for an amount five times as great as the amount paid by such church the year previous to the pledge campaign—it being supposed that no church would pay less than it had been paying. Therefore, those churches and charges that have been paying more on the general claims than they paid the year previous to the year the pledges were made have been piling up a surplus over and above the amount of credits allowed in the campaign, and will consequently be in better shape at the end of the five year period.

Let us remember also that the living of your pastors on the mission charges of our own district and our annual conference is dependent upon the payment of conference assessments and Centenary pledges, and let us make a supreme effort this year and make whatever sacrifices may be necessary to pay all these claims.

Respectfully submitted,

M. T. Smathers, Chm.

BROTHER CADE ON BROADWAY

The following is taken from a personal letter, but we feel sure that it will be of general interest to Advocate readers:

Mrs. Cade and I have been vacating in Yankee land for a week and a half. We first came to Ocean Grove and Asbury Park in New Jersey. Ocean Grove is the great Methodist assembly grounds. One is impressed there that Methodism is a very going concern. We were there last Sunday and worshiped with about nine thousand others in the Auditorium that morning. That evening we attended service at the First Methodist church in Asbury Park. It will accommodate about a thousand, and every seat was taken.

This Sunday we attended the Madison Avenue Methodist church here in New York City. It is in the very heart of the city and the wealthy residence section. It is a good large church. But there were forty-six people present. The assistant pastor was in charge. The sermon, the music, and the whole thing was poor. We will try it elsewhere tonight.

The attendance at church this morning was in marked contrast to the attendance at the Polo Grounds ball game yesterday between the Giants and St. Louis. There was an attendance of twenty-five thousand. The Giants won. I saw a game a few days before when the Reds beat the Giants.

It has been a very interesting visit here. I have tried to study life and human institutions from the many angles as found here. I have been in the great banking houses on Wall Street and in the slums. I have been in the great churches such as St. Patrick's, St. John's the Divine, and Trinity. I have also been in one of the Bowery missions where I saw the rear end of human life with still a little spark of divine life and hope remaining.

We shall leave tomorrow for a few days at my father's home in Harnett county. I shall return to Morehead Friday. We have been blessed with preachers there this summer. Bros. Shamburger, McRae and H. A. Humble have spent a month there with their families.

We will have our revival about the middle of October. Brother Scoville of Jarvis Memorial is to be with me.

We are making some progress. We are getting a large quantity of material on the ground for our Sunday school building. We propose to build for a five hundred school. We have recently repaired the church and painted it outside and inside. Also painted the parsonage. There are few better parsonages in the conference.

W. A. Cade.

NEW FRUIT EXCHANGE OPENED AT CINCINNATI

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 27.—Fruit and vegetable growers throughout the South will be interested in the formal opening of the new Cincinnati Fruit Exchange building here as it will provide better facilities for handling the large volume of perishable products from the South destined for markets of the Middle West which moves through Cincinnati.

The new building was built by the Southern Railway System and has been leased for a long term to the United Auction Company, composed of the principal fruit and vegetable handlers of Cincinnati. It is of reinforced concrete construction and has every modern facility. The lower floor will be used as a warehouse and has Southern Railway tracks on one side and a paved teamway on the other. The auction room and the offices of the various dealers are located on the second floor. Both telegraph companies have their own offices in the building.

The location of the exchange building on the Vine Street terminal of the Southern makes it very convenient both for the prompt handling of cars arriving from the South and for the delivery of produce to Cincinnati dealers.

HARDING'S CREED

Remember there are two sides to every question. Get both.

Be truthful.

Get the facts. Mistakes are inevitable, but strive for accuracy. I would rather have one story exactly right than a hundred half wrong.

Be decent. Be fair. Be generous.

Boost—don't knock. There's good in everybody. Bring out the good in everybody, and never needlessly hurt the feelings of anybody.

In reporting a political gathering, get the facts; tell the story as it is, not as you would like to have it.

Treat all parties alike. If there is any politics to be played, we will play it in our editorial columns.

Treat all religious matter reverently.

If it can possibly be avoided, never bring ignominy to an innocent woman or child in telling of the misdeeds or misfortune of a relative. Don't wait to be asked, but do it without the asking.

And, above all, be clean. Never let a dirty word or suggestive story get into type.

I want this paper so conducted that it can go into any home without destroying the innocence of any child.—The Newspaper Creed of President Harding posted in the office of the Marion Star.

CITY MISSION CONFERENCE, EASTERN DIVISION

The Regional Conference on City Mission Work, composed of representatives from the Department of Woman's Work, from the Woman's Missionary Council and from the City Mission Boards, with a goodly group of deaconesses and home missionaries, met at Lake Junaluska on July 25th and 26th. Between fifty and sixty accredited delegates were present. The morning devotional services were led by Dr. Paul Kern, from the Theological Department of Southern Methodist University, at which time he gave the Bible lesson, leading the thoughts of the conference along the lines of the sources of inspiration for Christian service. At Wednesday night service Dr. W. J. Young, of Emory University, spoke on the Home Mission Task out of the fullness of his own rich experience as student of the times, as a teacher and city pastor.

The program was carried out that was suggested by the committee on program appointed at the last session of the Woman's Missionary Council. The discussions were illuminating and entered into with interest and enthusiasm. The specific results, apart from the impartation of sympathetic unity of thought in the achieving of the great task, were set forth by the committee on findings, whose report with all recommendations presented was adopted by the body.

One of the recommendations of this committee resulted in the organization of the city boards into a permanent conference to hold annual meetings to promote fellowship among those engaged in a common task, and to develop the educational aspects of city mission work. For the coming year Mrs. J. N. McEachern, vice president of City Mission Board of Atlanta, Ga., was elected president; Mr. H. F. Foster, president of the City Mission Board of New Orleans, La., secretary.

Western Division.

The Regional Conference of City Mission Boards for the western section of our church was held at Mt. Sequoyah June 12th and 13th. Mrs. Fred Lamb, of Kansas City, was elected chairman of the conference, and presided during the meeting. Although the attendance was not large, the interest and enthusiasm were of the highest order. In addition to the reports given by the several city mission boards' representatives many vital topics were discussed. The scope of city mission work, the organization of city mission boards, and the outline plans of city mission work which included the day nursery, kindergarten, clubs for boys and girls, mothers' clubs, clinics, etc., were presented with many practical suggestions for the promotion of these activities. The daily vacation Bible school, good will industries and other activities were considered, and those who were in attendance were unanimous in their judgment that a permanent organization was most desirable.

TO SCARRITT

The Lucy H. Robertson scholarship fund at Scarritt will be applied this year to the training of two of our girls from W. N. C. conference—Miss Ethel Bost and Miss Naomi Howell. Mrs. Dunham says of these young ladies: "They will be an honor to our conference."

It is a disappointment that Miss Ione McClure of Winston-Salem is physically unfit to enter Scarritt this year, but we trust she will be able to go next year. Ione has been making good all the years of her young life in whatever situation she had been placed, and whether "at home or abroad" she will still be busy with worth while things.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, death has entered the ranks of the Daisy Davies Missionary Society of Wesley Memorial church and has called home one of our beloved members, Mrs. W. B. Hall.

Whereas, Mrs. Hall was one of the leaders in our organization, and was always ready with her gifts and service; therefore be it resolved:

First, That while we deeply mourn our loss, we rejoice in the assurance that she has entered her rest and reward.

Second, That we have lost one of our most useful and consecrated members.

Third, That we extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the husband and infant son, a copy sent to the High Point Enterprise and Christian Advocate for publication, and that these resolutions be read at our September meeting.

SEEK FIRST THE KINGDOM

The kingdom of God is not built by spiritual mechanics, but by spiritual power. It does not deal in machinery, but with life. It does not exalt institutions, but personality. Its chief elements are fatherhood and sonship, truth and holiness, life and love, redemption from sin, and salvation for service. It was to be extended by men who were called "Follow Me," men who were taught "Learn of Me," and by men who were sent, "As thou didst send me in the world, even so send I them into the world."—Walter R. Lambuth.

For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are the sons of God. (Rom. 8:14).

The Kingdom of God is . . . righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. (Rom. 14:17).—Lambuth-Bennett Book of Remembrance.

NEW MISSIONARY TO CHINA

"Among the new missionaries soon to leave, and accepted yesterday, was Rev. Wm. Steele, son of our Mrs. Hume Steele. He goes to China." Mrs. Flora Kendall sends us this item of interest from Junaluska, where she is attending the School of Missions. Mrs. Hume Steele, our council superintendent of study, is one of our most prominent and efficient missionary women. We congratulate her on the consecration of her son and pray that God will bless his labors "in His Name."

THE BURDEN BEARER

I lift the ever-present burden of widowhood orphanage, disability, sickness and advanced age of the itinerancy and of the laity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by providing "a home of their own," or its equivalent, to comfort and support them during all the years of life thereafter.

"Safety first" is my guiding star in all business matters and "brother love" in all manner of service. My premium rates are adequate to give insurance at cost (30 per cent lower than commercial companies require.) Expense of management is reduced to the minimum, being the lowest amount permissible while insuring efficiency. Personal profit, investment methods, and employed paid agents are not allowed. This is saved for the Certificate holders.

Benefit certificates are issued for insurance protection in amounts of $3,000 or less per application on following attractive plans: Whole life; twenty-premium life; endowment at age sixty and seventy; term to age fifty, sixty, and seventy; annuity, and combination of plans.

The itinerant preache of the past has had no chance. Shall they of the future fare no better?

By their own institution, ingenuity, thrift, and divine Providence they are solving their financial problems. The sting of superannuation is removed.

CARRYING ON

There are many ways and means being used by your conference Sunday school workers in the promotion of religious education in our midst. Some of these are public addresses, conferences with the officers and teachers of the local Sunday school, consultation meetings with building committees, circuit and charge institutes, booster meetings and training schools. During the past five years nearly every charge has been visited with some form of the foregoing service, many of them having been visited quite a number of times. While all these agencies will continue to be used we are coming more and more to the intensive training part of the program and therefore our training schools will receive an increasing amount of our time. The two forms of service that seem to count for most are the conferences with building committees and the weeks of training in our schools.

-AUTOMOBILING

Every time I hear anyone say that the automobiles are ruining the church work I feel like reminding him of some instances where this accommodating vehicle has been the means by which earnest Christian endeavorers have worked hard all day and then come many miles to our standard night schools to better learn how to do the Lord's work. Let me cite a few outstanding instances. Quite a large number came to the Greensboro school from High Point and Trinity, fifteen and twenty miles away. Two car loads from Lexington and Erlanger, twenty-one miles away, and one car load from Farmington, twenty-three miles away, regularly attended the Winston-Salem school. Practically every charge in Gaston county sent representatives to the Gastonia school, some of them coming twenty miles. At our Shelby school fine delegations came from the Polkville, Belwood and Cherryville charges, the Polkville delegation being so far the banner circuit delegation. Some of these people came twenty-one miles. The Hickory school drew wonderfully from Lenoir, twenty-one miles away, the attendance each night being over thirty. Rutherford College, twelve miles away, had a large delegation in regular attendance. The Littlejohns delegation traveled twenty-eight miles to attend. Hendersonville, twenty-one miles away, and Weaverville, eleven miles away, liberally patronized the Asheville school. At the present writing Glen Alpine, eighteen miles away, and Old Fort, fourteen miles away, together with a smaller delegation from N.C. are sending good delegations to the Marion school. It is not the automobile; it is the folks.

THE MARION SCHOOL

At the present writing we are conducting the Marion Standard Training School. It is not as large as some others conducted but the quality of the folks and kind of work done is up to any school. Among our students working for credit are Revs. Z. Paris, W. E. Poovey, J. I. Spinks, E. D. Ballard, R. C. Goforth and P. H. Brittain, and Supts. T. A. Holton of Marion and G. B. Strickland of Old Fort. Three other fine students are D. E. Hudgins, D. F. Giles and C. F. James.

There are so many fine ladies doing the work that I can't enumerate them. The ladies always do most in our church work.

Four courses are being given as follows:

Primary Organization and Administration, Miss Georgia Keene, instructor.

Junior Organization and Administration, Miss Virginia Jenkins, instructor.

Principles of Religious Teaching, Prof. C. T. Carr, instructor.

Sunday School Organization and Administration, O. V. Woosley, instructor.

LENOIR AND DAVENPORT

In a meeting at the First Methodist church, Lenoir, Saturday evening, August 18, with several of the leading Sunday school promoters of our congregation there the Lenoir-Davenport Standard Training School was set up and organized with the following board of managers: J. E. Shell, president; C. L. Hornaday, vice president; L. H. Wall, secretary; E. F. Allen, treasurer; L. B. Huntley, text book distributor. Of course Rev. P. W. Tucker, the pastor, was right there helping us in everything. The school will be held at Davenport College, beginning Sunday afternoon, September 30, and will extend through five following night sessions, beginning at 7:30 and closing at 9:30 o'clock. Six courses will be offered as follows: Sunday School and Organization, Principles of Religious Teaching, The Church at Work, Intermediate-Senior Organization and Administration, Junior Organization and Administration, and Primary Organization and Administration. Splendid delegations are expected from Morganton, Hickory, Granite Falls, Rutherford College, Hudson and surrounding country. The Lenoir school is going to be a jim dandy.

TRAINING SCHOOLS

During this conference year standard training schools have been held in eight of the eleven districts at the following places: Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Salisbury-Spencer, Charlotte, Gastonia, Shelby, Hickory, Asheville and Marion. Before the convening of our annual conference it is expected that two other schools will have been conducted; one at Mooresville and the other at Lenoir. These schools have drawn attendance from surrounding territory to the extent of twenty or more miles.

GLEN ALPINE

We have not got much of a church building at Glen Alpine, but we have some mighty fine people there and about the best little pastor, for his years, that one runs across. Rev. R. C. Goforth is certainly doing a fine piece of work there. One of the oldest members of the church told me last Tuesday as Miss Jenkins, Miss Keene and I were there to attend a big picnic and Sunday school booster meeting, that everybody liked Goforth, that he had never heard a single person say anything against him. They can certainly say much for him. He is wonderful with the youth of his congregation. Near the church they have constructed two beautiful log huts, one for the Boy Scouts and the other for the Camp Fire Girls, the pastor leading both these activities. About the church are beautiful and well kept borders and beds of cannas and zenias, so arranged as to give the whole place a lovely setting. The church is spotlessly kept and the boys and girls find pleasure in being a part of all that goes on. Just four years ago Glen Alpine was on a large circuit and was doing mighty little along any line. Now it is a station and does a great deal in every line. Recently a commodious parsonage has been bought and is about paid for, the salary has been greatly increased and now plans are formulating for a large and commodious church plant. Led by the pastor Glen Alpine is sending eighteen people eighteen miles each day each night this week to the Marion training school.

SYLVA

By the time this appears in print the Sylva non-standard training school for Sylva and surrounding territory will have been held. Rev. O. J. Jones, the pastor, will teach Principles of Religious Teaching, Miss Jenkins will teach a course in Elementary work and your humble servant will give instruction in Organization and Administration of the Sunday School. Sylva has one of the best Sunday schools in the Waynesville district, but those good people, led by the unassuming but constructive Jones, are not satisfied with anything but the best. We are going to have a good school at Sylva.

Beginning Sunday afternoon, September 2, at three o'clock in the Sunday school building of the First Presbyterian church at Mooresville the first Co-operative Standard Training School for Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school workers will begin. Prospects are good for splendid delegations to attend from Statesville, Davidson-Fairview, Mount Zion, Mooresville circuit, Troutman circuit and Rock Springs circuit. Our Mooresville Methodist people are joining hands with their Presbyterian churchmen in making this one of the best training schools. The following courses and instructors will help make the school: Sunday School Organization and Administration, O. V. Woosley. Principles of Religious Teaching, C. T. Carr.

Intermediate - Senior Organization and Administration, Mrs. H. B. Bunch. Junior Organization and Administration, Miss Georgia Keene.

North Carolina Conference

TWO WEEKS WITH BETSY

Emphasizing Sunday school work in general and the official Program in particular, your conference superintendent of Sunday school work spent two weeks, August 12-26, in the Elizabeth City district, visiting schools in Gates county and "down the sound." Miss Keene, our elementary superintendent, was with us the first week, making appeal wherever she went for the Sunday schools to "treat the children right." We made these visits with and at the request of Rev. C. B. Culbreth, the presiding elder, who is making progress in his effort to put on a constructive program in his district.

SUNDAY IN GATES COUNTY

Miss Keene and the writer, accompanied by Mrs. Culbreth, who taught with us in our Rockingham District Standard Training School at Maxton, August 6-11, left for Gates county immediately at the close of our school at Maxton Saturday morning and found ourselves in Gatesville by noon Sunday, there to begin again work in the interest of Sunday school improvement. Sunday afternoon the writer went with the presiding elder to Gates church and there had an opportunity to speak to an interested little band of people and to explain the Program of Work for one-room Sunday schools, with the result that Gates Sunday school is beginning to work by this program. Incidentally, let it be said that Gates Sunday school is remarkable in at least one respect: It has an enrollment about five times as large as the church membership, there being about 50 in Sunday school and 11 members of the church.

Sunday night the writer was with the pastor, Rev. J. O. Long, at Savages and addressed a splendid congregation. Here, too, the Program of Work was presented and explained, with the same favorable response as at Gates.

AT MURFREESBORO MONDAY

Monday evening your conference superintendent of Sunday school work jumped out of Gates over into Hertford for a meeting with the Sunday school workers of Murfreesboro and Winton, at Murfreesboro. With him went Rev. J. O. Long and Rev. E. R. Clegg, pastors of North Gates and Gatesville charges, respectively, who likewise wanted to learn how Rev. L. C. Larkin and his good people of Murfreesboro and Winton are running their Sunday schools. They also took time to admire that splendid new parsonage at Murfreesboro, just recently completed. It was an interesting meeting we had. After talks by Rev. Messrs. Larkin and Long and the writer, we checked the Murfreesboro Sunday school by Program of Work "C," which the school adopted in May, and we found that it is entitled to credit for nine of the ten points of the program and, therefore, to be called an advanced school of this type. Only one or two minor details remain to be provided for before this school will get credit for all ten points and become a standard school. Superintendent, pastor and people have been working diligently to make their school standard, and success is about to crown their efforts.

CITY ROADS—FIRST CHURCH

Miss Keene met with the workers of City Roads and First church, Elizabeth City, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, respectively, and presented the elementary programs of work, or standards of efficiency for Cradle Roll, Beginner, Primary, and Junior departments. These workers were enthusiastic, says Miss Keene, and are planning to adopt these programs. First church has an "A" type Sunday school building and equipment, and Supt. Hooper is anxious to have all departments working toward "A" standards. We know they can do it and believe they will.

City Roads Sunday school is doing good work and is planning to build a larger and better Sunday school building some time. It has adopted Program of Work "B," and we expect, as a result of Miss Keene's visit, that all the elementary departments will adopt their respective programs of work.

Both of these schools observed Children's Week last year and are planning to do so again in October.

RIDING THE WIND AND WAVES

From Elizabeth City Thursday our party, consisting of Miss Keene, Rev. T. M. Grant, Rev. Mr. Culbreth, and the writer, went to Manteo for a conference of all the six charges down the sound. Thursday evening in Mt. Olivet church, Manteo, the conference convened. Friday was the main day, during which the Sunday school, Epworth League and missionary societies were considered, with addresses on the League by Rev. Mr. Grant, on the Sunday school by Miss Keene and the writer, and on the missionary society work by Mrs. P. H. Williams and Rev. Mr. Culbreth, who, as presiding officer, also had quite a bit to say about the other interests of the church. Immediately at the close of consideration of these various interests of the church the presiding elder held, Friday night, a joint quarterly conference for the six charges represented. Some immediate results of this conference, as affecting the Sunday school, were the placing of Programs of Work in several schools and the decision to hold next year a Sunday school training school for the six charges at some central point, perhaps Manteo or Stumpy Point.

From the Manteo conference the presiding elder and the writer set out on a visit to all the charges down the

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

North Carolina Conference

WASHINGTON DISTRICT HAS A GREAT INSTITUTE

The Washington district Epworth leaguers assembled in Jarvis Memorial church, Greenville, N. C., the evening of August 14 in the opening session of the 1923 district institute. Devotional service was conducted by Rev. V. P. Scoville, pastor of Jarvis Memorial church. Mr. D. M. Clarke welcomed the institute and was followed by our Epworth League president, Rev. Thomas M. Grant, who discussed "My Business as an Epworth Leaguer."

The next number on the program was an interesting feature of the institute, as it was a demonstration of how to put on a program of recreation and culture, the subject being "A Practical Program of Recreation and Culture." The subject of the cultural part of the program was John Wesley. His life was discussed. At the close of this service all were ready to go home feeling that we had had a good opening service when the president of the Greenville chapter announced, "The best is yet to come." We were invited to the reception room where we had a very jolly time.

Wednesday was begun at six o'clock with the observance of the morning watch.

At nine o'clock our institute was continued. Devotional service conducted by Mr. Clarence Watt. After the organization and enrollment of the institute and the appointment of committees, chapter finances were discussed by Mr. Gehrman Cobb of Goldsboro, who as treasurer of the North Carolina Epworth League never fails to do his bit.

Mr. Henry Fisher of the Elm City chapter, son of our Rev. G. W. Fisher, and graduate of Trinity College, was called from the audience to tell "What I Think of the Epworth League." He did it with very choice words, making the delegates think more of the great organization to which they belong.

The significance and importance of the Junior and Intermediate work was discussed by Miss Hazel Thompson, conference superintendent of Junior Epworth League Work. It is not necessary for me to say "She's all right," because most of you know her, but I do want to say that she's as good a conference Junior superintendent as she is a district secretary. She is doing her part to give the boys and girls of junior age what's coming to them.

Rev. Daniel Lane told the institute about the department of worship—what it includes. Brother Lane is on the job when it comes to Epworth League work. We all like him.

After an intermission of twenty minutes Mr. Samuel E. Leonard, superintendent of Public Welfare of Wilson county, presented a program of social service. He showed how the Junior, Intermediate and Senior leagues could be of service to the church and the cause of Christ by showing a special interest in the Cradle Roll and Home departments of the Sunday school.

It seems to us that there is a great opportunity for service in these departments.

The morning address was delivered by our beloved Love. Brother Love's subject was "My Place in the Epworth League." He instilled in each leaguer, in his usual way, a desire to go back home and put just a little more into the league than ever before.

The next thing on the program was dinner. It was a barbecue dinner, too, the like of which I have never seen.

At two o'clock the leaguers reassembled to continue the program. The business was completed and the district secretary discussed the council meeting and the business meeting.

Rev. Solon A. Cotton, our presiding elder, discussed the work of the department of missions. His subject was the "Epworth League and the Centenary."

Rev. F. Swindell Love comes back to the bat in the third inning and drives home a message on "Efficiency." Benediction by Rev. John M. Wright, pastor of our church at Ayden, and we adjourned to meet in our final session of the institute at 8 p. m.

The first thing on the evening program was to award the Washington District Epworth League banner to the best league in the district. Measured by the standard of efficiency, the Eureka Senior Epworth League, Fremont circuit, made the highest grade—90 per cent—and will be awarded the banner.

The conclusion of the service was in the charge of Rev. J. Marvin Ormond, professor of Biblical Literature of Trinity College. Mr. Ormond was very effective in the presentation of his message, and when he invited all who desired and were determined to do just what God wanted them to do to come to the front and shake his hand, all the leagues marched to the front and took the pledge. It was a glorious time. Norman Vaughan.

"GRAND AND GLORIOUS" AT NORTH WILKESBORO

Friday evening, July 27, Mr. Dawkins, Henry and Mr. Dean Norris gave a lawn party at the home of Mr. J. C. Henry for the Senior Epworth League and a number of other young people. The guests were greeted at the steps by the hosts and were directed by Miss Ruth Henry to a corner of the lawn, where Misses Sara Henry and Myrtle Norris served refreshments. Several outdoor games were enjoyed by those present. Just before time to go home delicious ice cream and cakes were served. Everybody left feeling that they had had a grand and glorious time. Cor. ## THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

Rev. C. A. Wood.....Superintendent

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

Martha M. Wood.

Looking from our cottage down the hill to the public road, where continually streams whirl by, one has the impression of living in a busy city suburb. Looking up the hill through the trees and over the fields, there comes a feeling of country life and seclusion. Then again by the abundant presence of the birds, chipmunks and rabbits, and the near calls of partridge and dove, it would be easy to believe at times that the pines circled a bit of the wild woods.

The other night we were just dropping off to sleep when a squawking and fluttering of chickens in the chicken yard at the superintendent's cottage sounded as though some marauding animal was making murderous intrusion on the chickens that were roosting outside the henhouse.

Hastily putting on slippers and dressing gowns the household hurried to the rescue.

The chicken yard is partly shaded by a group of pines, and the side of the fence this way is screened by running roses and shrubbery; so that when we got out there it was impossible to see very well what the shadows concealed, and one small flashlight directed here and there did not shed much illumination around.

But knowing where the coop was located, I presently discovered that all the chickens had been frightened out and scattered, and on a nearby board on the ground streaks of blood indicated that one or more had met a violent death. And, sure enough, looking more closely under the coop, we discovered two nice fat young chickens lying bloody and dead.

We were puzzled as well as disturbed by the discovery, for we could not find any track or sign of anything around.

We went back to bed and next morning Margaret told me that something had got another chicken in the night—that she and Ollie had heard the chickens squall again, and had gone out and found one half eaten. We judged by the looks of it that the trespasser must have been an opossum. So Mr. Wood had Ralph R. to bring down a trap and set it. Ralph had trapped rats with great success, catching over a hundred. The superintendent paying a cent per tail for rats, some of the boys had made themselves a little spending money and rid the place of a large number of rats.

Ralph examined around the chicken yard carefully and set his trap near a hole he found under the far side of the fence.

I had not much hopes of the capture of the thief, but at early daylight next morning we heard a triumphant call under the window—"Miss Margaret! I got him! I got him!"

And looking down we saw Ralph holding a grey 'possum by the tail.

One day near the end of the week a wholesale house phoned that they were overstocked with bananas and wished to inquire if The Home could use some.

The superintendent responded with promptness and pleasure that he judged The Home taste for bananas to be of a highly appreciative order.

Then the kind inquirer wished to know how many bunches we could use. The superintendent was somewhat at a loss how to estimate the exact figures in bunches, but he told them how many folks live at The Home, and a truck brought out 28 bunches of nice ripe bananas. And, my, how those big bunches melted down in the next three days!

Yesterday a covered mountain wagon turned in from the road with a load of apples to sell. Some way apples from a mountain wagon always seem to taste better than other apples—unless it is apples eaten in a mountain orchard, or selected from a mountain apple house, where bins of red, pink, yellow and striped beauties offer a confusing wealth of choice—till one learns a line of favorites.

The apples that turned into The Home grounds were a load of Buckinghams from the Mount Airy country. We bought ten bushels at $1.25 per bushel, and found them good for eating and fine cooked, whether fried as large round brown disks sprinkled with sugar for breakfast, or baked whole for supper, or made into juicy pies for dinner.

Yes, the Buckinghams taste pretty good at this season. When we lived in the mountains where orchards full of apples often went to waste, we were very choice about the kind of apples we ate, but apples are apples these days.

Friday afternoon the children of The Home had a delightful treat. The gentlemen of the Kiwanis Club provided tickets to a picture show—and the picture was Jackie Coogan in "Circus Days."

At two o'clock sharp, the appointed time, twenty-two automobiles rolled into The Home grounds and lined up around the cottages.

The little girls were already standing around in their many-colored Sunday dresses, the little boys marched promptly down, and Mr. Bradshaw supplied each and all with a red card tag and loaded them quickly into the machines—and away they went just like magic.

And two cops, mounted on motorcycles, headed the line of machines, which to the little boys' point of view added much to the enjoyment of the ride in the procession. Especially when the cops held up all the traffic and gave right of way to the long line of machines they were safe-conducting.

And at the Auditorium the cops helped the children to get in and out and saw them safe home again.

Some of the grownups did not go, but Myrtle and Louie, who stay at our house, said the picture was grand!

The boys are cleaning up the grounds behind the school building. The boxes and odds and ends of things waiting indefinitely on the old woodyard to be converted into kindling have been retired to more secluded quarters, and the scraps of lumber and chips likewise hauled off and the ground raked over nicely. The improvement it makes in that part of the grounds is very striking—and so pleasing that we think we shall presently get inspiration enough to move the old broken down lime shed that is disfiguring the landscape behind the Tise Building.

It is hard to believe that vacation is nearly over. The Home school begins Tuesday, September the 4th. Mr. Bradshaw expects the teachers to get in the last of this week to get organized for the opening of school.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

WANTED

1. Money for building program.
2. Organized classes to support children.
3. Individuals to assume support of orphans.
4. Monthly offerings from every Sunday school.
5. Seven passenger automobile for singing class.
6. Friends to write Orphanage in their wills.
7. Thanksgiving observed in every church and Sunday school.

There are hundreds of well-to-do families in our conference who have no children to provide for and train. They could easily provide support for one of our children. I do not mean for them to take a child into their home, but send the necessary amount to the Orphanage. Such a course would add new interest to life, and at the same time confer a great blessing upon some child who would appreciate this interest and love. I shall be glad to correspond with all interested friends.

The singing class reports a delightful visit to Jonesboro and Sanford. The class gave sacred concerts at these two points on the third Sunday. Large and appreciative congregations were present to give their encouragement and endorsement to the class. I regret that circumstances were such that I could not accompany the class. Going with the class gives me a fine opportunity to present the needs, achievements and ideals of our beloved Methodist Orphanage. Usually I take about ten or fifteen minutes to tell the congregation about their Orphanage and how they can better serve it. I do not appeal for money on these visits—that is, for offerings while present. I do ask and urge that after we are gone that larger contributions be made through regular channels of the church. I am seriously endeavoring to enlist every Sunday school, organized class and many individuals of means to support a child in our Home. I have been fairly successful in this undertaking so far, but the time has come when I must greatly increase the number or be lacking in means with which to finance our Orphanage. Owing to our lack of funds I must urge our friends to rally to our support NOW.

I have bought five hundred tons of coal for our fall and winter needs. This coal has to be paid for as it is delivered. In addition to this, we have all of our August bills to pay the first of September. Unless the churches bestir themselves we shall have to borrow several thousand dollars before conference. In order to meet our August accounts we shall have to borrow money by the tenth of September. So far our Methodist Orphanage has been very fortunate in meeting all of its accounts promptly. We must not break the record this year. The prospects for great crops and good prices ought to encourage us to redouble our efforts to take care of the financial needs of our two hundred and fifty children. Remember, kind reader, that I have no other way of letting you know of our needs except through the Orphanage page of the Advocate. This request is meant as a direct and personal appeal to you. This is not mine, but the appeal of our orphan children whom we all love. Nothing can possibly give us greater joy than to make sacrifices for their needs. I trust that many more of our Methodists will learn the secret of happiness by sharing their means with our children.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Checks to Claimants Returned Unclaimed.—On July 1, 1923, the Board of Finance made the 1923 pro rata distribution to all the claimants of the church, the same representing the net income of $41,469.75 from the Superannate Endowment Fund for the fiscal year which closed March 31, 1923. Practically all of the checks seem to have been received by the claimants, but a few of the letters sent out to certain claimants have been returned to the office unclaimed. These will now be listed, together with the addresses from which they were returned, and by annual conferences, as follows:

Central Texas conference, Mrs. P. M. Riley, Arlington, Texas. Memphis conference, Mrs. N. R. Marr, Normal, Tenn. North Alabama conference, Mrs. C. D. Brooks, Anniston, Ala.; Mrs. L. C. Sims, Dolomite, Ala. North Arkansas conference, Mrs. J. D. Rutledge, Blytheville, Ark. North Georgia conference, Mrs. M. L. Troutman, Rome, Ga.; Mrs. A. G. Carpenter, Canon, Ga.; Rev. O. M. Hawkins, Emory University, Ga. North Texas conference, Mrs. L. L. Naugle, Station A, Dallas, Texas; Mrs. I. W. Clark, care of A. B. Carter, 4416 Gramercy Place, Los Angeles, Cal. Northwest Texas conference, Mrs. John F. Caperton, 211 Rogers Avenue, Macon, Ga.; Mrs. J. W. Gibbens, care of Y. M. C. A., San Antonio, Texas. Pacific conference, Mrs. W. A. Lindsey, 2534 Bancroft Way, Berkeley, Cal.; Rev. R. R. Raymond, Thermal, Cal. South Carolina conference, Mrs. H. J. Cauthen, Charleston, S. C.; Rev. T. B. Owen, Wilkesboro, N. C. Texas conference, Mrs. R. A. Burroughs, Waco, Texas; Mrs. S. D. Horger, Newton, Texas; Mrs. W. H. Crum, Greenville, Texas. Virginia conference, Mrs. Charles W. Cain, Portsmouth, Va. Western Virginia conference, Mrs. W. H. Surgeon, Wayland, Ky. West Texas conference, Mrs. J. T. Williamson, Bryan, Texas. Missouri conference, Rev. S. H. Milam, Pineville, Mo.; Mrs. C. K. Shilling, Fayette, Mo.

One claimant, namely, Mrs. R. A. Giddens, of the Holston annual conference, the board has been unable for three years to locate and has three checks for her benefit when her correct address can be secured.

Any information that can be furnished the board concerning the present addresses of the above-mentioned claimants will be appreciated. They should have the money due them, which is represented in these unclaimed checks, and it cannot be paid until the correct addresses are in hand.

The Tug of a Lone Woman Shut-In.—About two years ago a letter was received from Mrs. Kate C. Shaw, 211 Walnut street, Wilmington, N. C., in which was expressed the desire to do something practical for the benefit of the Superannate Endowment Fund. The letter indicated that the writer was a shut-in and that whatever she did would have to be done through difficulties which surrounded her.

Mrs. Shaw called a number of her personal friends into council, and they decided that each one would attempt to raise a few dollars for the purpose stated, placing same in a savings box to be opened on the birthday of Mrs. Shaw. As a result, on August 2, 1922, Mrs. Shaw sent to the board a check for $52 for the fund. In the letter which accompanied this check she was radiant with enthusiasm at the success achieved by her efforts, but regretted she could not do more, stating: "It is hard to live and work when one half of one's body is as dead and as lifeless and as helpless as if the whole were ready for the grave. O, the pain and misery that I daily endure makes my spirit sink down! But I feed my soul on the rich promises that are in His Word, which manna sustains me from day to day. My pastor's secretary has promised to call the women of the church to meet at my home again, and I am going to ask them to help me in getting together a Christmas gift for our dear old heroes. I do hope they have become interested enough to do it all over again. I will do my best in writing to friends, soliciting them to help; and if I do not get but $10, that will be better than nothing."

On December 26, 1922, Mrs. Shaw wrote another letter in which she sent a check for $87 for the fund, the same being the Christmas gift alluded to in the foregoing. She wrote: "I wish I could send more, but for one in my condition I can only look to God and thank Him for enabling me to do this much. He has done it, not I. And I am thanking Him for using me a little. The ladies met at my home yesterday, and after we counted our Christmas offering one of them proposed that we go on with the work. This made me very happy. Therefore we will have another opening of our boxes at the Eastertide. I may be in the hallelujah land at that time, but I assure you that if I leave this world others will come forward to help you in this great work. When you write please do not praise me more than you do the other women who are helping. I am afraid they will feel it. Encourage us all. We are just a few women who want to help you in the tremendous task which you have undertaken. When the time comes for the special effort to raise the ten million dollars, I feel that you are just as sure to carry it to successful issue as can be. I do hope the joy bells may ring for you their sweetest Christmas joys."

On April 24 Mrs. Shaw wrote again, sending a check for $55 for the Superannate Endowment Fund. She stated as follows: "The good ladies who are helping me with this work have unanimously decided to continue our efforts at least until my birthday, which is in August (should I live that long). So I can count on one more donation to send you. I hope the work will continue as long as I live. I try to make the meetings as pleasant and interesting as possible, and so far the ladies seem thoroughly to enjoy it. We have readings and singing, and anything I can find concerning our superannates is read. I am doing all in my power to keep up the interest and will continue to do so while I live."

It has not been my privilege to meet this saintly woman face to face. However, everything that she writes bears evidence that she is truly one of God's elect. If sweet-spirited and kind hearted Mrs. Shaw, though a shut-in and a great sufferer, can find ways and means to assist the great cause of superannate endowment, what should be done by thousands of women of the church who are blessed with the best of health and strength? Sometimes I become discouraged under the strain of the heavy work upon me, but then it is I think of letters such as those quoted above received from Mrs. Shaw, and I am ashamed of myself and determine to go forward with greater enthusiasm than ever. God bless this good woman, make his face to shine upon her, and give her peace. She is giving her last strength to the promotion of a cause which will erect for her a monument more lasting than the chiseled granite. I trust that many lovers of the superannate cause will write her a letter of appreciation. Such expressions of love and gratitude would be to her like the music of springtime.

From the Wilds of Central Africa.—On July 25 a letter was received from the Board of Missions with a check for $40 for the Superannate Endowment Fund, the same being sent by order of Rev. E. B. Stilz, missionary. I wrote Rev. W. M. Cassetty, Jr., acting treasurer of the Board of Missions, requesting the details concerning this contribution and asking for a copy of the letter sent by Brother Stilz to the Board of Missions when he directed that this $40 be paid to the Board of Finance for superannate endowment. Brother Cassetty replied promptly as follows: "This amount ($40) sent at the request of Brother Stilz was on one of our regular 'order for payment blanks.' On this order he makes no explanations; merely instructs us to send $40 to your board and deduct from his salary. He is a missionary in Lusambo, Sankura District, Congo Belge, Central Africa, and his salary is $770 per annum."

My purpose in calling attention to the above is that the readers of this page may appreciate how far the interest in the cause of superannate endowment is reaching. There has never been an appeal made to the church for any purpose that has received a more emphatic and universal response than the cause of the "forgotten man" is receiving. Little children, invalid men and women, preachers on scant salaries, missionaries—all, of every hard condition thinkable, are already responding out of their hard situations in a spirit of sacrifice. The interest in this cause even now so manifest and from such sources should shame the thousands of our people who are better situated into doing for the "forgotten man" something that will forever relieve his necessities and let him spend his last days in comfort and in peace.

So far as I am concerned, I am wholly committed to carry on what has been begun by the Board of Finance with every bit of nerve and force and endurance given me until my church shall be acclaimed by all the world as being just to those whom she has used in achieving her greatness. Will you, dear reader, make solemn covenant with me to do likewise?

"Some day," we say, and turn our eyes
Toward the fair hills of Paradise.

Some day, some time, a sweet, new rest
Shall blossom, flower-like, in each breast.

Some time, some day, our eyes shall see
The faces kept in memory.

Some day their hands shall clasp our hands
Just over in the morning lands.

Some day our ears shall hear the song
Of triumph over sin and wrong.

Some day, some time, but oh! not yet;
But we will wait and not forget

That some day all these things shall be,
And rest be given to you and me.

So wait, my friends, though years move slow,
The happy time will come, we know.

If a popular vote were taken to decide who is the greatest of our living American humorists, it is highly probable that Mr. Cobb would be the winner. His power of appeal is to all men, from the laborer to the scholarly scientist. It is curiously true that no one can be gloomier than the humorist when he invades the realm of gloom, while the merriest of humorists sometimes carry around with the most dismal of faces. Irvin S. Cobb, happily, has not this kind of personality, but he would be striking a high note of humor if he tried to pose as a thing of beauty. That he is not foolish enough to do this is evidenced by the fact that he once gave the following description of himself when asked by a man who did not know what kind of man Cobb was:

"Well, to be perfectly frank with you, he is related to my wife by marriage, and if you don't object to a brief sketch, with all the technicalities eliminated, I should say in appearance he is rather bulky, standing six feet high, not especially beautiful, a light roan in color with a black mane. His figure is undecided but might be called buncy in places. He belongs to several clubs, including the Yonkers Press Club and the Park Hill Democratic Morning Club, and has always, like his father, who was a Confederate soldier, voted the Democratic ticket. He has had one wife and one child, and still has them."

Cobb is a son of the South. He was born in Paducah, Kentucky, and grew to manhood in that town. His life was like that of any other Kentucky town boy of that day so far as the manner of it was concerned, but one may feel reasonably sure that he was not an ordinary youngster. A sudden change came over the spirit of his dream in the years of his boyhood, and of this he has written in his delightful autobiography, entitled "Stick-fuls":

"I was born and brought up in one of those border-state towns that Northern people call Southern, and far Southern people call Western. When this town had about fifteen thousand inhabitants, and when I had just turned sixteen, being then a lank, gangling youngster, who was getting ready to go off to military school as a preliminary to a college education, a sudden and disastrous shift in the family finances made it imperative for me to make my own living."

Young Cobb had had little experience earning money, but he met the necessity of doing so cheerfully and looked about for that often elusive thing, a job. An uncle gave him the opportunity of entering his office as a law student, but there was no prospect of immediate cash returns from this position, so he "scouted around town" for a job carrying with it immediate pecuniary rewards. It was not forthcoming, and one day his father asked him how he would like to go into a newspaper office in the town. This at once appealed to his imagination. No job could be more in harmony with his inclinations. Why this was true is given in his own words:

"A print-shop always had a lure for me. I cannot recall a time when the smell of ink and of print-paper did not draw me; nor the time when the mere sight of a sheet of clean paper failed to arouse in me a desire to make black marks on it. My earliest known photograph shows me, at the tender age of twenty months, lying flat on my stomach—I could lie flat on my stomach then—engaged in scribbling upon a sheet of paper. Tradition has it that on this occasion, having been dressed in my Sunday best and taken under paternal escort to the photographer's establishment, I resolutely refused to be interested in the promise of the officiating functionary that a little bird was to come out of the black box. It would seem, at that moment, I cared little for ornithological phenomena. It is also recorded that I howled, opening my mouth widely. I am constrained to believe that when, at that age, I opened my mouth widely, I must have looked a good deal like a detachable rim. Now my parents did not desire to have an interior view of me. The knew already that I possessed superior acoustic qualities, and had no wish to preserve the revealed aspects of my personal sounding-board with the aid of the camera's eye. Rather, they longed that I might be shown with my features composed; for already the Home Beautiful movement was spreading in America."

At the tender age of sixteen young Cobb began his journalistic career, the sum total of his first day's work as a reporter being represented in the following item in the paper employing him as a purveyor of news:

"Cal Evitts, the efficient and popular market master, says there were more rabbits brought to the local markets this week than any other week this winter. Molly Cottontails sold this morning for ten cents dressed or five cents undressed."

It was with this reportorial effort that the now world-famous Irvin Cobb made his entrance into the world of journalism. There had been no agreement in regard to the amount he was to be paid for his valuable efforts as a reporter, and no payment at all was forthcoming for three weeks. Then the owner of the paper gave him a dollar and seventy-five cents. This caused him to feel almost as if he were walking on velvet, and settled definitely his status as a journalist. He was now a full-fledged reporter, and the world looked good to him. When he had been with the paper two months his pay envelope contained four dollars every Saturday, and he was thoroughly convinced that he had found his right and proper field of effort.

Naturally, his rampant sense of humor found expression in his way of "putting things," and once it came near being his undoing. The story is given in his own words:

"There was a rather pompous, self-sufficient lawyer in town, one of the old-school silver-tongued orators. With him the paper was at outs politically. Even I a seventeen-year-old boy, could see through his pretensions and appreciate that he was mostly a large bluff inhabiting a Prince Albert coat. We were taking a slender little wire service then and padding it out in the office to make a front-page column in telegraph. One day there came along a dispatch from the state capital giving a list of delegates who had been appointed by the governor for an irrigation congress out West somewhere. The last name on the list was the name of our champion silver-tongue. I ran the special just as it stood, with this headline over it:

"A Good Joke
Will Be Found at the Extreme Southern End of This Dispatch."

The town saw the point, and the whole town laughed at it—all except the silver-tongued one."

Had it not been for the interference of another member of the staff it would have gone hard with young Cobb when the furiously indignant "silver-tongued one" came to the office to get even with the perpetrator of the joke.

Cobb was still with the Paducah paper when he was twenty-one years old, and was drawing a salary of twelve dollars a week, which was quite an enviable sum at that time. Reporters had more perquisites than they have now. They rode free on both steam and street railways, and their pockets always had "passes" of some kind in them. No doubt Mr. Cobb is quite right when he says, "A cub reporter on a country paper could get more free transportation over trunk lines than a railroad president can get now." Young Cobb added materially to his salary by acting as correspondent for a number of city papers, and he had the pleasure and inspiration of knowing that he was a growing journalist. He was always on the lookout for something big to send to the city papers, and it was a proud day in his career when he "covered" a thrilling tale of murder for The Chicago Tribune and received the following letter from the editor:

"Dear Sir: You did excellent work in covering the Merry story for this paper, and I wish to thank you. I have instructed the cashier to send you a check for fifty dollars as a bonus. Yours truly, Joseph Medill."

The regular pay a column for the story he had so well "covered" was another fifty dollars.

Thus the young reporter and his desire to get into wider fields of effort grew. It was not, however, until he was about twenty-six years old that he went to New York with a couple of hundred dollars in his pocket and full confidence in his ability to land a job. It was August and a poor time of the year to be looking for work of almost any kind. He gives in his own words an account of how he was partly disillusioned:

"There was one man upon whom I was depending for help to land a job. He hailed from the town where I was born, and he had made a success as a newspaper man in St. Louis and Chicago before he came East. With a fine large optimism and generosity he had written me that it would be no trouble at all, but a pleasure, for him to find an opening for me in New York. I called on him the first thing that morning, to learn the distressing truth that if he found an opening anywhere he'd want it himself. He had been laid off—so he delicately phrased the state of affairs—and he had had no regular employment for some weeks now; and the silver lining of his change pocket had run low and become exceedingly thin. Five minutes spent in his company, listening to what he had to say, gave me an illuminating insight into the uncertain and transitory character of the average newspaper job in New York—illuminating but also distressing."

Two weeks were spent canvassing the New York newspapers, with such deplorable lack of results that Cobb did not even see an editor or any one else in authority. Each night found him in his little hall bedroom in his boarding house with even a small prospect of a job eluding him. Then he had a happy thought. He sat down and wrote to the New York editors about as flippant a letter as even he could write. The communication ended with these lines:

"This is positively your last chance. I have grown weary of studying the wall-paper design in your anteroom. A modest appreciation of my own worth forbids me doing business with your head office boy any longer. Unless you grab me right away I will go elsewhere and leave your paper flat on its back right here in the middle of a hard summer, and your whole life hereafter will be one vast surging regret. The line forms on the left; applications considered in the order in which they are received; triflers and professional flirts save stamps. Write, wire, or call at the above address."

Cobb went to a stenographer and had thirteen separate copies of this letter made which he sent to thirteen editors. The next morning the first editor upon whom he called was willing to see him. "If you've got half as much ability as you have gall," he said to the youthful journalist, "consider yourself hired." And hired he was at the munificent salary of fifteen dollars a week.

The evening mail brought a letter from Arthur Brisbane inviting the merry young humorist to call and see him, and from that time forward the young reporter was never without a job. Of the way in which he finally made good the world has proof in the many books he has written and in the frequency with which one finds his name in the best periodicals. Had he written nothing but "Speaking of Operations," the world would owe Irvin Cobb a large debt of gratitude for the merriment he has put into it. Many will agree with one of his biographers, Robert H. Cobb, when he says of Irvin Cobb:

"He has already written twenty times more than Bret Harte turned out during his entire career. He has made more people laugh and turned out better short stories. He has all of Harte's subtle and delicate feeling, and will, if he is spared, write better novels about the people of today than Harte, with all his genius and imagination, wrote about the Pioneers. I know of no single instance where one man has shown such fecundity and quality as Irvin Cobb has so far evinced, and it is my opinion that his complete work at fifty will contain more good humor, more good short stories, and at least one bigger novel than the work of any other single contemporaneous figure."—J. L. Harbour, in Zion's Herald.

WHEN THE CLOUDS ARE GONE

He leads us on,
By paths we did not know:
Upwards he leads us, though our steps be slow.
Though oft we faint and falter by the way,
Thought storms and darkness oft obscure the day,
Yet when the clouds are gone
We know he leads us on.

He leads us on
Through all the unquiet years;
Past all our dream-land hopes and doubts and fears,
He guides our steps. Through all the tangled maze
Of sin, of sorrow, and o'erclouded days,
We know his will is done;
And still he leads us on.

173 SPECIAL PEACH TRAINS OPERATED BY THE SOUTHERN

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 27.—To put Georgia peaches on the distant markets of the East and West in the fast time necessary to insure their arrival in good condition, the Southern Railway System operated 173 special peach trains during the season that has just come to a close. All were run from Atlanta, 106 going to Potomac Yards, Va., and 67 to Cincinnati, the Southern having handled altogether 5,700 cars of this highly perishable fruit with practically 100 per cent efficiency.

Of this total 5,312 cars were re-iced at Inman Yards, the Southern's Atlanta terminal, at which peaches from South Georgia are concentrated; 3,250 were moved east through Potomac Yards, 1,792 north through Chattanooga, Cincinnati and Louisville, 44 west through Birmingham; 26 south through Macon, and 20 to connections and consignees at Atlanta.

In addition, 135 cars were moved north from Chattanooga and 255 cars were moved east, 229 from the Cornelia section in northeast Georgia, 22 from northwest Georgia, and four from Augusta.

Including August 18, the total movement from Georgia had been 8,559 cars, according to reports of the United States Department of Agriculture. This is the second largest crop ever produced by Georgia orchards, having been exceeded only by the crop of 1921, which ran to 10,468 cars.

During the entire 1923 season, the supply of refrigerator cars and ice was ample, this together with the excellent transportation service having contributed in large measure to the satisfactory condition in which the fruit reached market and the good returns received by the growers.

PRIDE AND PREJUDICE

"We have no part in David nor inheritance in the son of Jesse. To your tents, O Israel."—2 Sam. 20:1.

Troubles never come singly. Out of fires apparently dead small zephyrs fan great flames. David is restored to his kingdom but the dissensions are not all over. He had placated Judah and won them by the appeal of his own kinship. It is great to be acknowledged as relations of blood royal. The "Mayflower" folk are a great host, and chips of that old bark are found in thousands of family trees the nation over. But "bloody little Benjamin" raises the standard of revolt, because he had not been recognized to any extent. His pride was involved, and he was mad clean through. Instance somebody omitted on the program, or that noted singer passed by when the solos were assigned. More church rows are started by sins of omission than by any positive crimes of its members. How often all the beautiful principles of the kingdom of God are forgotten when our pride is touched! When the other gets praise and the publicity, and we are left out, it is hard "to take joyfully the spoiling of our goods," and we knew we could deliver them had we only had a chance. O, that we might learn to be omitted without grieving. "Blessed are the poor in spirit" who are willing to serve without any newspaper publicity, knowing that in heaven they have a greater reward.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

sound, this tour to consume a week and wind up at Hatteras Sunday, August 26. Points visited included Wanchese, Nag's Head, Mann's Harbor, Rodanthe, Salvo, Avon, Buxton, Frisco, and Hatteras. It was a trip worth while, for we had an opportunity to discuss in detail the problems and possibilities of the Sunday school and to adopt plans for its improvement.

It was likewise quite an experience for this Sandfiddler, originally a Hillbillie. It converted him, for the time being at least, into a seaman apprentice. When we traveled it was through the wind and the waves; when we thought, it was mainly of the winds and the waves; and when we dreamed, it was of the same things. We were right in them, and they were all about us. Water, water everywhere.

NOT ALL WIND AND WAVES

We came in contact with wind and waves all right, but these were not all. We learned to know the people as fine, big-hearted, accommodating folk, who have a high regard for the church and Sunday school. And the country, most of it water, 'tis true, lacks a great deal being all marsh and waste. On Roanoke Island, especially, there is fertile farm land, well suited to the cultivation of corn and other crops, and particularly of figs and peaches. The finest figs grown anywhere in the state grow there, and experiments are being made which may make Roanoke Island as famous for its peaches as the sandhills.

MANTEO AND WANCHESE

Two good Sunday schools serve our people of Roanoke Island. At Manteo, the home of Rev. A. W. Price, pastor of the charge, is a school of 239 members, superintended by Mr. T. R. Creef, a good man and one of the liveliest wires on the island. It has nine classes, each class meets in a separate class room, it has a Cradle Roll, a Home department, a workers' council, and several Wesley classes. It has adopted the official Program of Work and before many months, we predict, will be a standard Sunday school.

At Wanchese, where the writer attended Sunday school Sunday, August 19, and where he addressed the congregation at the 11 o'clock hour and met with the workers immediately following, there is a school of 360 members, with 21 classes and a Cradle Roll department. These people have a large and attractive church auditorium, but they lack Sunday school equipment. They need class rooms and departmental rooms, and we believe they will provide them. Mr. A. C. Daniels is the superintendent.

RUTHERFORD COLLEGE

RUTHERFORD COLLEGE, N. C.

NEXT TERM OPENS SEPTEMBER 4TH

Rutherford College offers four years accredited High School work, and two years of College work.

These are some of the interesting considerations:

1. Modern equipment.
2. An efficient faculty.
3. The breezy and healthful location.
4. Modest expenses (from $150 to $250).
5. The unusually purposeful and religious students in attendance—fifty-five of whom last year were ministerial students, twenty-two volunteer workers, twenty-two members of the evangelistic singing class.
6. The very earnest disposition on the part of the management of the school to raise the standard of scholarship to the highest possible attainment.

Other information will be gladly furnished on request.

SCHOOL AT STUMPY POINT

At Stumpy Point last week was held a non-standard training school for the Sunday school workers of Stumpy Point, Mann's Harbor and other places. Rev. E. L. Stack, of Elizabeth City, gave the instruction, teaching Cunningham and North's "Organization and Administration of the Sunday School." A more detailed report will be given later.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY

All Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are expected to observe, according to our Discipline, "the third Sunday in April, or as near thereto as practicable, as Sunday School Day," with program and offering. Most schools have already observed the day, and it is to be hoped that the others will do so soon. The offering, contrary to previous years, is not to be sent to the Sunday School Board, but applied to the conference collections of the local church. Mention of this fact has been made previously, but we make it again for the information of any school that has not so understood before.

IN MEMORIAM

MONTGOMERY — Myrtle Edney Montgomery of Henderson county, N. C., was born July 10, 1901, departed this life August 1, 1923.

During her illness she called to her mother and said to her that Jesus was coming, and her mother told her to trust in Him. She said, "I am, and He is going to carry me through."

May the dear heavenly Father comfort her sorrowing loved ones, and may each of them press on until they all have reached the heavenly land.

C. F. Tate, Pastor.

HARRELL—Everett Harrell was born in Duplin county, North Carolina, September, 1849, in which county he lived the greater part of his life, and died May 1, 1923.

He joined the Charity Methodist church in early manhood, but when the Rose Hill church was built he transferred his membership there.

He married Miss Martha Matthews, a devout Christian woman, who meant a great deal to her husband, and who is left to mourn his loss. To this union were born thirteen children, three boys and ten girls, ten of whom are now living.

The church and community will miss Brother Harrell, but most of all his family will miss him. T. W. L.

BRADSHAW—Samuel L. Bradshaw was born February 19, 1882, and died August 1, 1923. Brother Bradshaw was converted under the preaching of Rev. E. C. Glenn in early manhood, and joined the Rose Hill Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which he lived the remainder of his life.

He married Miss Mittie Henry, who made him a faithful helpmeet. He is survived by his wife, mother, four brothers and two sisters.

Brother Bradshaw was a successful business man. He was serving as treasurer for the new church plant at the time of his death. The church and community are grieved over his going. T. W. L.

JOHNSON—Arminius DeKalb Johnson was born November 10, 1847, and died April 25, 1923. Brother Johnson was reared by deeply pious parents, and he, like they, was always noted for his piety.

He married Mary Maria Williams February 22, 1877, and to this union were born three children, Mrs. A. J. Ward, Mrs. W. B. Murray, and Mrs. J. S. Carr, all of Duplin county.

Brother Johnson was happily converted when about forty years of age and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Kenansville, N. C., at which place he continued a faithful, consistent working Christian until the end came. He served as steward for more than thirty years, and during a part of this period he served as Sunday school superintendent, at which time he and his devoted wife were shaping and fashioning the character of their daughters who have built splendid Christian homes.

Brother Johnson volunteered as a Confederate soldier at the age of seventeen, and fought for the cause which he thought was right.

He was standard keeper of Duplin county for several years and was acting in that capacity at the time of his death. He died at the home of his youngest daughter, Mrs. J. S. Carr, with whom he had lived the last few years of his life.

The writer became his pastor about ten years ago when only a boy preacher, untried and inexperienced, but Brother Johnson always stood by him, and constantly gave him fatherly advice. It was the writer's privilege to be with him often during the last days of his life, and he was always calm and ready to bow to the will of our heavenly Father.

Daughters, weep not for father, for our loss is his eternal gain.

T. W. L.

WRIGHT—Ann Elizabeth Wright, whom every one knew was "Miss Lizzie," was born June 18, 1867, and died July 12, 1923, in a Charlotte sanitarium after a lingering illness of several months. She was the daughter of D. D. and Elizabeth Smith Wright. Early in life she was converted under the ministry of Rev. Baxter Phillips, and joined St. Johns church. She grew into a beautiful Christian character, and the church had no more faithful member than she. Her greatest activity was in the Woman's Missionary Society. For years she was its secretary; she was a life member. She will be greatly missed. While in the hospital an operation was had in the hopes of saving her life, but to no avail. During all these long weary months she bore her suffering patiently; there was no murmuring. Her faith was strong and she gave every evidence that she was patiently waiting for her heavenly Father's call.

She leaves to mourn their loss a mother nearly 90 years old, two brothers, C. W. Wright of Gibson, N. C., and R. L. Wright of Laurinburg, N. C., and one sister, Mrs. W. R. Johnson of Laurel Hill, N. C.

A. J. Parker.

SMITH—Mrs. Rose Sterling Smith, wife of Wm. H. Smith of Mocksville, died July 30, aged 50 years, five months and 15 days. She is survived by husband and three children, Mrs. C. M. McKinney, William and Luna Smith. She joined the Presbyterian church in childhood. About twenty years ago she joined the Methodist church with her husband. She was an earnest, sincere Christian woman. She was ready to die when the summons came. Those who knew her best loved her most. A. C. Swofford, pastor.

GREENWOOD — Mrs. Sandusky Greenwood, wife of John Greenwood, was born in Madison county, N. C., about 1876, and died in the State Hospital at Morganton, where she had been an inmate for nearly ten years, April 25, 1923. Mrs. Greenwood was for years a faithful member of the Methodist church in Andrews, N. C. For the greater part of her life she was an invalid, but was always true to her church, which she dearly loved. A good woman has gone to her eternal reward. J. P. Hipps.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Sarah Ann Baum was born February 15, 1881, and died July 28, 1923.

Sarah early in life joined the M. E. Church, South, and gave even from girlhood unusual service. Her closest friends were the ones who marveled most at the patient, untiring devotion to church and all who came daily in contact with her. In all her walks of life she showed the same faithfulness. As a school girl she was looked upon as a leader. Well she might have been, for even then she kept before her the standard she so early set. Several communities have had the opportunity of uplift as it came from her life; for she taught in the public schools in our state for a number of years and we have record that the sweet influence of her life still abides.

Her last work with us was organizing the primary department of our Sunday school, of which she was superintendent.

It is not for us to understand why one with such talent should have so great an affliction; but the last five years of her life her mind was clouded, yet we have evidence that in her sane moments until the end she still trusted in her Maker. In her last talk with her pastor she said "All is well." We'll know why clouds instead of sun were over many a cherished plan; Why song has ceased when scarce begun.

'Tis there sometime we'll understand. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That Bethany Sunday School has sustained the loss of a leader and builder.

Second, That we humbly submit to Him who doeth all things well, and join the bereaved family in their sorrow.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and a copy be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.

Mrs. Aldean Simpson,
Mrs. Nettie Daniels,
Mrs. Cleopatra Daniels,
Evelyn Davis.

EDITORIAL ~ PARAGRAPHS

There is a Balm in Gilead. There is a Physician there. "There is no sorrow that heaven cannot heal." It is a great comfort to know that all of us have access to that Balm and that the Physician is ready for a call at any moment, and that our God will wipe away all tears from our eyes.

All who have gone out from home rejoice when they can come again and sit around father and mother's table. They count it all joy. We wonder why it is that when our heavenly Father's table is set that so many absent themselves from it. It seems that when communion Sunday comes that many see fit to be out of their places. That should be the glad day in the life of every Christian.

At the recent session of the Raleigh district conference held at Princeton the statement was made on the conference floor that a young man of the district felt called to the gospel ministry, but that it was not possible for him to prosecute his studies for lack of means. A committee was appointed to look into the matter and to devise ways and means whereby this worthy young man might prepare himself for the high calling of the ministry. When the committee made its report it was found that, though the district would assume the education of the young man, there were no means available for use at present. Rev. Walter Peele immediately stated that he had interviewed some of the leading laymen of Edenton Street, of which church he is in the fifth year of a great pastorate, and that his church would assume the responsibility of the first year in college for the young man. It seems to us that Edenton Street could not do a finer thing, and that the example set by that church should be followed by many more churches in North Carolina.

At the approaching sessions of our conferences, no doubt, other names will be added to the "honor roll" of the conferences. A number of fine men who have rendered the church and state good service will be forced by age or failing health to ask for the superannuate relation. These men, many of them, will go out not knowing whither they go. If it were not for grateful children they would possibly have to go to an alms house. They have lived simply all their lives, but because of meager salary and many responsibilities they have not been able to lay by much for the day they saw ahead. What is a great and wealthy church going to do about these good men? Can it afford to "turn them out to grass" like an old horse that has served his day of usefulness? Every conference ought to double the assessment for this cause, and there should be no slackers when the campaign for $10,000,000 is started next year. That should be the easiest money the church has ever raised. There is not an interest of the church that should appeal to the masses more than the superannuate fund. There are a large number of rich men in the church who would be much richer in their lives if they would contribute liberally when the campaign is put on.

There comes a time in the life of every man when sincere friendship is appreciated more than costly gems or any other worldly good, and but for friends in those hours life would almost be unendurable, but even the love and kindness of the dearest friends on earth will not be able to succor us in the supreme hour of our need. The only one who then can help is He who stood "and wept with the sorrowing sisters," and exclaimed, "I am the resurrection and the Life."

The secular papers throughout the country that are inclined to sympathize with the liquor traffic, and seem to take a delight in belittling those who favor the enforcement of the 18th amendment to the constitution of the United States, have given great prominence to the charges of grand larceny and forgery which a grand jury in New York City has found against Mr. W. H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of that state. If Mr. Anderson is guilty he ought to suffer for his crime. But listen to the board of directors of the Anti-Saloon League of New York state:

"We admit that Mr. Anderson received the money mentioned in the indictments. But this board, in the exercise of its legal power, had previously unanimously authorized its payment, has since ratified it, now approves and upholds it, and squarely denies that the League has been robbed of a penny."

Liquor papers and advocates of the liquor traffic will scruple to crush any man who is trying to put down the accursed stuff. No man's character or even life is safe in the hands of such a bunch. It is time for all lovers of sobriety and law to take a firm stand and stand regardless of the cost.

Paragraph 11 of the Articles of Religion reads as follows, and is the final announcement of the Methodist church as to its faith in the Holy Scriptures:

"Of the Sufficiency of the Holy Scriptures for Salvation.—Holy Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation; so that whatsoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man, that it should be believed as an article of the faith, or be thought requisite or necessary to salvation. In the name of the Holy Scripture, we do understand those canonical books of the Old and New Testament, of whose authority was never any doubt in the church.

"Of the Names of the Canonical Books.—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, Joshua, Judges, Ruth, The First Book of Samuel, The Second Book of Samuel, The First Book of Kings, The Second Book of Kings, The First Book of Chronicles, The Second Book of Chronicles, The Book of Ezra, The Book of Nehemiah, The Book of Esther, The Book of Job, The Psalms, The Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, or the Preacher, Cantica, or Songs of Solomon, Four Prophets the greater, Twelve Prophets the less.

"All the Books of the New Testament, as they are commonly received, we do receive and account canonical."

WHY NOT BE FAIR?

There is a proneness in the very best of us to discount what another does. We can not grant to the other fellow what we would like for him to grant us. Every institution of whatsoever nature should be able to stand on its own merits and not the misfortunes of others. A manufacturing enterprise is known by what it produces, and not by the largeness of its physical plant or the equipment of machinery. We once knew of a small cotton mill with only a few thousand spindles that kept its products sold far in advance all the time. Even when other mills in the community were closed down for want of orders this little mill kept humming day and night. We inquired as to why this was the case. The answer was that it makes just a little bit better grade of yarn than any mill in this section, hence the orders. It almost disgusts us to hear a man who is representing one interest speak disparagingly of a competitor. Recently a traveling man was in our office trying to sell us an article that he represented. He asked us where we had been getting our supply. We informed him. He at once began to tell of the shortcomings of his competitor's goods. He was at once told that if his article had any merits to tell us about it. We were not interested in the demerits of the competitor. Just a little while ago we were sitting in a restaurant. There were two young fellows sitting near. One of them was an agent for one of the leading educational institutions in the state. The other was a sophomore in another institution which has the reputation of being one of the best known and highly appreciated educational institutions of the United States. The agent for the one was doing all in his power to induce the sophomore to leave the institution to which he had been going and to go to his. If he ever mentioned a single thing that would commend his institution to the young man we failed to hear it. He did tell of all the shortcomings of the other, however. It would seem from the conversation that the college to which the sophomore had become attached was unworthy a charter from the state. We wondered why he did not let that institution alone. If it is like he says it is it will die, and deserves to die. But if the institution that the bright young man was representing had any merits we thought he should have mentioned them. Another thing that we could not understand: Why is it that one institution of learning is forced to go to another institution to undertake to persuade students to leave one and go to another? There are hundreds of high school graduates that ought to attend college. Why not spend time and money in getting them to prosecute their studies? It is a mighty little business for a great educational institution to try to induce students to leave another institution. We trust that our Methodist schools will never be guilty of such a thing.

CHURCH AMUSEMENTS

[In recent years a number of preachers and church leaders have been discussing ways and means for holding the young people, or as it is sometimes expressed, "Tie them on to the church." It has been suggested that moving picture machines be placed in the church. Some churches have installed bowling alleys, organized basket ball teams, established radio or industrial clubs, none of which is to be despised, if properly handled. But, so far as we have been informed, none of these things have been able to hold those for whom it was intended. The fact of the case is when young people want these kind of amusements they will not go to the church for them. They will go where these things properly belong, and that place certainly is not the church.] As to this kind of amusements in the church, Dr. John Hall said truly and wisely: "A church has no vocation to provide amusements. They may be necessities, like French clocks or other luxuries to some people, but the church has not been called into existence to provide them. There are very few cases of a church operating in the entertainment line and strengthening itself as a church thereby. Far more frequently it holds the people while it amuses only; and when it forsakes the operative, theatrical, spectacular, or sociable and returns to its proper business, the constituents go where they can get the real thing for which end the feeble imitation prepared them."

The business of the church is of far more importance to men than to amuse. It deals in eternal things. Men want to flee to the church when in distress. They need and want something that this world cannot give. "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I unto thee," said the Apostle, and he took the poor man by the right hand and commanded that he rise and walk. It is that which is far above silly amusements. It is that which satisfies, and gives peace and joy. "I, and if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me." Wherever Jesus is, and His disposition is manifest and where His love is supreme there will be no need of any outside amusements to attract the crowd. Let the church remain true to its one business, the preaching of the gospel to every creature, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever He has commanded and there need be no fear about the crowd.

JACKSON TRAINING SCHOOL

The Advocate is in receipt of the following invitation to the opening of the Jackson Training School:

"The superintendent and officers of the Stonewall Jackson Manual Training and Industrial School request the honor of your presence at the formal opening and dedicatory exercises of the James William Cannon Memorial Building on Tuesday afternoon, at three o'clock, September eleventh, nineteen hundred and twenty-three, Concord, N. C."

This institution is doing a large amount of good, and is worthy the support and prayers of every citizen of North Carolina. Mr. J. P. Cook, who thought and prayed the institution into existence, is a benefactor of North Carolina that should be highly appreciated. Many a derelict that would have drifted into crime and to prison has been reclaimed and made fit for society through the institution that opens its doors for the new year on September 11.

A pleasing feature that will take place at the same time is the opening and dedication of the new James William Cannon Memorial building. This new house was made possible by the generosity of Mrs. J. W. Cannon, of Concord, and is a memorial to her late husband, Mr. James William Cannon.

GREENSBORO COLLEGE OPENS

Greensboro College, the oldest chartered college for women in the state, opened its doors on Wednesday for the beginning of the new school year. Reports coming from that institution indicate that the enrollment for the first day was the largest in the history of the college. It is expected that this will be the most successful year of this honored institution. Many improvements have been made in the physical equipment during the summer, the most important of which is the purchasing of the new pipe organ which will be installed in the Odell Memorial building as soon as possible.

In thinking of the schools fostered by our church we are faced with the fact that the Methodist church is not prepared to take care of its young people. The Advocate is reliably informed that it has been necessary for Trinity to turn away from its doors a large number of young women who were anxious to enter, but there was no room for them. We know of several who were exceedingly anxious to attend a school of their own denomination, but were forced to go elsewhere because there was not sufficient rooming facilities. We often wonder why there are more Methodist young people in other schools, but here is one reason: We have not prepared to take care of the large number that want to enter college each year. Every educational institution owned by the Methodist church is in need of a larger endowment and a larger equipment. This great church of ours is amply able to provide this and it ought to do it.

TAKING STOCK

The quotation given below was taken from the West Market Calendar of last Sunday, and we believe it is worthy a place in the columns of the Advocate:

"Am I doing my part?" Why ask the question? Because there is a personal responsibility in the case of each one of us for the welfare of the church. This is the test: if every member should be an exact duplicate of myself—attend the services as I do, pay in proportion as I do, and in general support and foster the church as I do—what would be the result? Would he enlarge or diminish the kingdom's boundaries? These are vital questions and should be answered by each one personally. Lord, teach me my part and give me courage to do it."

The one great need of the church is for each individual member to realize that he is an important part in the workings of the church that honors him with a place on its roll. It so often happens that many of the members of a church have to be fed instead of being feeders, and frequently they have to be fed on milk. They are not strong enough for meat. Now, that the summer is gone and autumn is here, let us all turn over a new leaf and try to be of some real service to God and to humanity.

THE DANCE

It is indeed painful to the better thinking part of the church membership to read accounts of dances that are attended by some of our young people from the best Methodist homes in the state. It is seldom that one can look through the society columns of our daily papers without feeling that a number of our people, and some of them the very best of people, so far forget the eternal fitness of things as to allow their children to indulge in this questionable pastime. A recent exchange says of the dance:

"The dance never has been associated with the purest and best in life. The dancing church members are not the true children of God, nor are they the soul winners for Christ. This form of recreation never creates a Christian—it discredits a Christian and produces a sensualist. It will not make it easier for young people to lead purer lives nor increase their love for the service to God and man. The crying need of the hour is more deep-seated religion. The church must become active against the gigantic social evil and lust of the individual."

Anything that will not promote the interest of the Kingdom of God or make better men and women must not be tolerated by the church that was bought at such a great price.

BASE HOSPITAL SIXTY-FIVE

One of the real big things done to win the war was the organization of the Base Hospital Unit 65, made up almost entirely of North Carolina doctors, nurses and men and organized by Dr. J. W. Long, one of the leading surgeons of the South and a militant Methodist worthy of the name of John Wesley. Colonel Long labored with unflinching zeal, closing his own hospital here for the organization, and had associated with him some of the best doctors, nurses and men in the state. Recently this remarkable unit held a reunion in the city of Greensboro which was very largely attended, more than one hundred gathering around the banquet table in the O. Henry Hotel. They reached France just in time to take part in handling the terrible influenza epidemic. On one day the unit received as many as fifteen hundred patients and the same day evacuated one thousand. A grand total of 37,133 cases passed through this hospital.

The influence of the church paper is directly as the mass of its circulation. Where every family has it the total influence on opinions in the church is distinctly felt. Where only a few take it, it may aid the opinions of the few, but how can it command the attitude of the church as a whole.—Selected.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Western North Carolina Conference, Winston-Salem, October 17.

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

Rev. A. S. Parker is in the midst of a protracted meeting at Richlands this week. His father-in-law, Rev. J. B. Thompson, is doing the preaching.

Bishop Collins Denny was a visitor to the state last Sunday, when he preached in the new Fletcher's Chapel church on the Durham circuit. The bishop dedicated the new house of worship.

Rev. G. A. Stamper, of Green Street, Winston-Salem, is to be the preacher during the revival meeting at Burkhead next week. Brother J. S. Hiatt is the pastor. Brother Stamper will also assist Rev. R. L. Forbis week after next.

Rev. Luther Bridgers, one of the general evangelists of our church, is engaged in an evangelistic campaign at Seneca, S. C. He will go from there to Gastonia, where he will assist Rev. W. A. Lambeth, of Main Street, in a series of meetings.

Rev. A. W. Plyler and family are spending the week visiting relatives and friends in Concord. Brother Plyler expects to return to Greensboro the latter part of the week and will be at his desk in the Advocate office.

Rev. B. C. Thompson, of the Person charge, is with Rev. J. T. Draper, of the Warren charge, in a meeting at Providence church. These are two of the choice spirits of the North Carolina conference and their efforts should be crowned with much success.

Rev. Franklin N. Parker, D. D., dean of the theological department of Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., has been filling the pulpit of Epworth, Norfolk, during the summer in the absence of Dr. Jas. W. Moore, the pastor, who has been traveling in Europe.

We were sorry to miss the visit of our old conference classmate, Rev. C. H. Caviness, who was a visitor in our office last Saturday. He was on his way down to Randolph county to assist in a meeting in his old church. Come again, when we are at home.

Mr. E. R. Sikes, who had been spending the summer with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. T. A. Sikes, left last Saturday for Hertford, where he joined his wife. They will leave the latter part of the week for Hanover, N. H., where Mr. Sikes holds a chair in the department of economics in Dartmouth College.

Rev. J. H. Barnhardt, of West Market Street church, Rev. W. A. Newell, presiding elder of the Winston-Salem district, and Rev. P. W. Tucker, pastor of First church, Lenoir, are over in Davie county fishing this week. We imagine if a person was depending upon that bunch to feed him with fish that he would give up and die.

The series of meetings will begin at Haw Branch on the Jacksonville-Richlands work on September 16th. Rev. A. S. Parker, the pastor, expects to do his own preaching. We do not know what kind of a preacher that young pastor is, but we do know that he is a fine singer and that he can get other folks to sing.

On Sunday, August 5th, the Cherryville circuit Sunday school rally was held in the new church at Cherryville. There was a large attendance. Addresses were delivered by Prof. Claude Moser, Rev. E. P. Stabler of Bessemer City and others. The day was greatly enjoyed by all present and many new plans were adopted looking to the betterment of the work in the bounds of the charge. Brother Moser is serving his sixth year as pastor and all these years have been years of progress.

The Advocate has just completed sending out statements of subscription accounts to all who are behind with their subscriptions. We wish to thank the large number who have responded to our appeal. It has been a great help to us in getting over the lean months. We are now sending lists to our pastors for their use in making collections here before going to conference. It will be greatly appreciated if all who can will hand the amount they are due to their pastor before he leaves for conference.

Rev. S. T. Barber, of the Ahoskie charge, was a visitor in Greensboro last week. He had been to see his mother at Reidsville, who has been quite sick recently. Brother Barber has been assisting in a number of meetings this summer and has done excellent preaching, according to the reports in the local papers.

Rev. T. J. Houck, of Pineville, was in our office a short while last Thursday. He was on his way to Franklinville, where he was to assist Rev. W. L. Scott in a meeting. Brother Scott met him here and we were delighted to see his face. He reports that the Ramseur-Franklinville charge is progressing nicely and that he expects to make good reports at Winston next month.

Rev. R. L. Owenby, of the Tennessee conference, recently visited his mother in Asheville. Brother Owenby was formerly a member of the Western North Carolina conference, but transferred west several years ago. He was a member of the Oklahoma conference for a number of years and filled some of the most important charges in those conferences. He is now pastor at Columbia, Tenn.

Rev. C. M. Pickens is in a series of meetings in his church at Albemarle this week. He is doing the preaching and Mrs. C. L. Steidley of Gastonia is in charge of the personal workers and also the singing. Much preliminary work was done and Brother Pickens and his people are expecting a successful meeting.

Rev. G. W. Perry, of the Carthage charge, has recently assisted Rev. J. J. Boone in a series of meetings at Brown's Chapel. The Advocate learns that Brother Perry greatly pleased the folks that have known him all their lives. He was reared near that old church.

Rev. G. A. Stamper, of Green Street, Winston-Salem, was a visitor in our office on Monday of this week. He reported that he had just closed a meeting in his church. There had been 20 additions up to Sunday night. It is expected that others will join later. Brother Stamper is very much pleased with his work and from all accounts has done a very fine year's work.

Rev. L. B. Hayes, pastor of Park Place church, this city, left last Thursday night for New York City, where he joined Mrs. Hayes, who landed Friday from an extended trip abroad, during which time she visited the devastated districts of France and Belgium. She also spent some time in England. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes arrived home Wednesday night.

The Weaver Bulletin, a quarterly publication gotten out in the interest of Weaver College, is on our desk. It is full of information concerning the alumni of that institution. The subscription price is 50 cents per year and all old students of Weaver as well as friends of that college would be well repaid if they would send that amount to F. A. Manchester, managing editor, Weaverville, N. C., and have him enter them as regular readers of the Bulletin.

Rev. W. L. Sherrill, who was forced to rest for several weeks on account of illness, has returned to his work at Leaksville and is in fine shape physically. Brother Richardson, who served that good people during the absence of Brother Sherrill, says that "his people were glad to receive him back home; that they love him and that he is in high favor with them." Brother Richardson also says that he was delighted to serve the peaksville people during the enforced absence of their pastor, and that his stay was very pleasant. It would be a mighty hard man to suit if he was not pleased with that fine Leaksville congregation.

FIFTEEN GREAT EARTHQUAKE DISASTERS SINCE APRIL, 1906

A list of great earthquake disasters since 1906, with casualties and property loss, follows:

April 18, 1906—San Francisco, Calif., earthquake, followed by fire; 452 killed; 1,500 injured; property damage $357,000,000.

August 16, 1906—Valparaiso, Chile, 1,500 killed; 3,000 injured; (both estimated); property damage $100,000,000.

January 14, 1907—Kingston, Jamaica; 1,000 killed; 2,000 injured (estimate); property damage $25,000,000.

December 28, 1908—Sicily and Calahria; 76,483 killed; 95,470 injured; property damage beyond calculation; towns of Messina, Faro, Santa Teresa, Scalmeta, Reggio, Gallico, San Giovanni, Pellaro, and Palmi, wholly or partly destroyed.

April 18 to May 5, 1910—Cartage and adjoining towns, Costa Rica; 15,000 killed, 5,000 injured (estimated); town wrecked; property damage $7,000,000.

August 9, 1912—Thrace and Asia Minor; 3,000 killed; 30,000 injured; 50 villages wrecked, three swallowed up in earth. No estimate of property damage possible.

June 14, 1913—Tirnova, Bulgaria; 250 killed; 377 injured; town destroyed.

August, 1913—Falcon and Hope Islands, Tongo group, swallowed up by sea; 500 or more dead.

November 10, 1913—Challhuanca, Peru; 250 dead; 1,000 injured; town destroyed.

December 19, 1913—Ambrim Island, New Hebrides, partly submerged; 500 dead.

January 19, 1914—Sakura, Japan, earthquake and volcanic eruption; 250 killed; 700 injured; property damage $2,000,000.

March 15, 1914—Island of Hondo, Japan; 360 killed; 200 injured (most of killed were miners entombed in collapse of copper mine.)

May 3, 1914—Catania, Sicily; 200 killed; 500 or more injured; many nearby villages destroyed.

October 3, 1914—Northern Asia Minor; 2,500 killed; over 5,000 injured, 300 square miles of territory laid waste.

June 15, 1923—Northwest Persia, from 6,000 to 20,000 killed; 250,000 made homeless.

September 1, 1923—Yokohama and Tokio, Japan; earthquake, fire and tidal wave; 250,000 killed; 1,000,000 homeless. The greatest disaster of the kind in the history of the world.

JEWELRY AND DIAMONDS GIVEN TO THE CHURCH

The Board of Church Extension receives many contributions to the funds for church building administered by it. We have recently received a gift of unusual interest. A minister, seventy-four years of age, has sent us jewelry and diamonds at an estimated value of $3,000,000, with the request that we sell them and add the amount received to our funds.

This is not the only contribution made to the Board of Church Extension by this good brother. He has created a loan fund amounting now to $6,000.00. Evidently he prizes good houses of worship for our people more than the glitter of gold and the sparkle of diamonds. T. D. Ellis, Sec.

THE JAPAN DISASTER

It is distressing news that comes to us from Japan. The mind is taxed to think of 250,000 lives being destroyed in almost an instant and 1,000,000 persons rendered homeless with but little food and clothing. Beginning at noon Saturday last there were a series of earthquakes which razed most of the city of Tokio, the capital, Yokohama and other cities in the vicinity. The disaster was continued by fire which broke out in scores of places. Tidal waves followed, engulfing and washing into the sea hundreds of buildings. Then came a typhoon, adding a final and tragic touch to what is probably the greatest calamity of modern times. The Advocate has made special effort to get some tidings from the missionaries in Japan, but has not been successful. Rev. S. A. Stewart and family were due to arrive in Tokio two days before the disaster. Rev. Sneed Ogburn, another North Carolinian, with his family are in Japan.

Surely the people of America will rush supplies and aid to the stricken people across the sea. Later news indicates that the President Jefferson on which ship Brother Stewart and family were returning was safe.

MR. ANGLIER B. DUKE DROWNED

Mr. Anglier B. Duke, son of B. N. Duke, of Durham and New York, was drowned on Monday morning at Greenwich, Conn., when a small boat in which he was riding was capsized. Mr. Duke was a graduate of Trinity College and one of its largest benefactors. He recently made a gift of something like $25,000 to the gymnasium which is just about completed. The Advocate joins the hosts of friends of Mr. and Mrs. Duke in extending sympathy. Mr. Duke's body will be brought to Durham for burial.

THROUGH NORTHERN NEW ENGLAND AND CANADA

By A. P. Brantley.

It was a great pleasure for me to spend a part of my summer vacation traveling through northern New England and parts of Canada. It was a real treat, after having been tied down for two years to a rather strenuous course of study in Boston University, to leave the old historic city and branch out into further fields of interest. With this in mind we boarded the train from the North Station, over the Vermont Central. First passing through the important manufacturing cities, some of which are noted especially in their past for their clash between labor and capital, or the birthplace of unions and the cradle of strikes, such as Lowell, Lawrence, Manchester, etc.

After leaving the larger cities we passed through miles of territory dotted here and there with smaller towns and villages, all overlooking the still waters of the Merrimac river. To me this is one of the most imposing and picturesque bodies of water I have seen. It must certainly have been created for its beauty, for it is yet to be harnessed, and its wasted forces, if there be any, utilized for the necessary development of the country. This is evidently due to the lack of falls.

We next entered some of the farming sections. I had a particular interest in this part, for having heard from intimate friends whose homes were located in said localities of the New England farming, I must say that I was woefully disappointed. The farming in the northern and western part of Massachusetts is of the lightest type, and that of New Hampshire lighter still. A slight improvement is discernible in Vermont. I can readily see why our President was forking hay on his father's farm in Vermont during his vacation, for if he desired to work and do farm work that was about all he could do. Signs of forest fires are discernible on every side, thus curtailing the growth of the forests which are so badly needed in New England. Stone walls are as common as they are down on Cape Cod. All speak forth in silent tones the hard yet lasting works of the early Pilgrim Fathers.

As we journeyed on the hills grew into mountains till at last we found ourselves in the heart of the Green Mountains of Vermont. They are of an extremely rugged nature and can in no way be compared with the Blue Ridge of North Carolina. Yet the White Mountains of New Hampshire runs the Blue Ridge, which is the Alps of America, a close race. She has Mt. Washington with all the imposing grandeur, but Mt. Mitchell stands king of the mountains east of the Rockies. The most noticeable thing about the Green Mountains is the fact that there is that vast amount of territory so undesirable and useless. Few homes dotted here and there over the mountains show the foregoing statement correct, for their unkept and untidy conditions show a lack of interest and a general decay in progress and improvement. Stopping over for a few days in the heart of the Green Mountains we were able to study the conditions more thoroughly. We hiked in several directions and learned many interesting things about the place.

The outstanding impression made on me was the lack of religious interests manifested on every hand. This was one thing particular I had in mind in touring Vermont and New Hampshire, for having studied the rural conditions of Vermont and New Hampshire I desired to have first hand information. Many villages and towns of considerable size are wholly without ministers; scores of the rural churches have been closed for the lack of interest in both attendants and leaders. The conditions are not at all encouraging.

Leaving the States we entered in the long level plains or plateaus of Canada. Farming is done on an extensive scale, especially in the southern parts of Canada. This year seems to be blessed with a great crop of oats and buckwheat.

Through the great stretches of level fields we journeyed on, seeing only a rundown house now and then, surmising that most farms were worked by those who lived in the cities such as St. Johns, etc., and motored out to their farms. At last we reached the great metropolis, Montreal, of the Canadians. Here we found a modern city and beautifully kept. Arriving late Saturday night we were forced through circumstances to have our first impressions made on the Sabbath, which was by no means repulsive. One very interesting thing was that the Sabbath was kept more like the Sabbath than it is in most American cities. I had some preconceived idea about the place. One was that all stores or rather business would be open, but instead practically everything was closed and a great majority of the people going to church. As it is a city of churches the people make use of them. We were out early for nine o'clock Sunday school at St. James Methodist; also for service. This is one of the largest Protestant churches in Montreal. We then decided to go to 12 o'clock mass at the famous Notre Dame Cathedral, the finest church in America—said to be. It will comfortably seat ten thousand people. It was a show to see the church illuminated at its best. We were conducted through the church with a guide showing us the anterooms, etc., telling us that the finest paintings in the world were seen there. The entire service was in Latin and French. Very few empty seats were noticed; in fact, people were standing in the rear by the scores. The question arose in my mind when I walked from that great imposing edifice, What is it that draws the people, and what do they carry away with them? Collections were taken at every turn, and scores of people were lighting candles at ten cents each for a certain desire they wanted from God. I could not help thinking of Hosea's words, "And there shall be, like people, like priests," together with Isaiah in his first chapter saying, "To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? Bring me no more vain oblations (unto me), incense is an abomination unto me."

From here we went to St. James Cathedral, one-third the size of St. Peter's at Rome, and built on the exact style and plan. This was just off Dominion Square, one of the most popular places in the city of Montreal. I notice that our Catholic brethren have the ability to select the most strategic places in cities for their churches. This is not a bad idea, even for the Protestants. Many other places in Montreal were visited with as much interest, but a large part of our time was consumed in the great churches, for it is a city of churches. Yet while passing I might say, though a city of churches and the people attend them, there are signs on every hand which show the lack of prohibition.

From Montreal we boarded the ship Quebec for the city of Quebec. Here I pause long enough to pay my respects to the enjoyable trip up the St. Lawrence; a twelve hours ride was never more thoroughly enjoyed as that one. The scenery was of the most beautiful. Mountains rising here and there, to be broken by vast plains being bordered by mountain ranges, all of which gave one a feeling and inspiration of the beautiful.

Arriving in the quaint old city of Quebec we immediately felt as though we were far off in some extreme foreign city. From the harbor the famous citadel looked down upon us as a great castle with high walls of protection. Over against this was the Chateau Frontenac, the loveliest hotel in Canada with its high dome reaching into the sky; all spoke forth in silence an atmosphere of complete mastery of the situation. Catholic churches were discernible on every hand all the way up the St. Lawrence and more especially in Quebec. The one thing that was paramount in my mind with reference to Quebec was the Plains of Abraham which every school boy reads about with keen interest, and feel that they could almost see General Wolf and Montcalm in their encounter. A great monument marks the place where Wolf fell, also at another place nearby a monument is raised to do honor to the great Montcalm. Then to the Citadel, which is a real fort today, with all modern equipments. The old wall around the city is still visible, but shows signs of decay. We were conducted through the fort by a Canadian soldier, and one of the most interesting things to be seen there was the small gun captured by the British at Bunker Hill. It is called the Bunker Hill gun, and every American tourist looks with a longing eye upon it. On the other hand, it makes an American feel like picking it up and taking it back home. The present walls of the fort were built in 1812, taking eight years to complete the work. It looks as though it would not be an easy job to take the fort. And one wonders how the English ever took the fort from the French. From here we were off to visit the church of the Holy Sacrament, where perpetual adoration is carried on. In this church from five to ten white nuns pray continually day and night. In the altar there are always this number. They relieve each other every five or six hours, but there is scarcely a move made by them while they pray for those long hours in one position. When one enters the first impression is of a hall of ghosts, which gradually fades into a pitiable state and makes one feel like saying with the Wise Man, "Be ye not over righteous lest ye die before your time." Extremes are never advisable. It is good to pray, but we should try to help answer our prayers, and in serving humanity we serve God. But to go into seclusion and cut away from humanity in such forms is bosh which has been tossed to the junk heaps years ago. From here we were conducted to the Parliament building, which corresponds very much to our state houses, but the most noted thing which is to be seen in this hall of fame is all Canada's great men together with many of England's. In the great corridor which holds these pictures is seen Woodrow Wilson's picture high above all other pictures. This so attracted my attention I asked the guide what it meant. He said that all Canada thought that Woodrow Wilson was the greatest man that the world has ever produced. This was indeed gratifying to an American and especially to a Southerner. Another place of interest is that of St. Anne a few miles out from the city of Quebec. This is known as the Mecca for the Catholics, the shrine where all Catholics long to visit before they die. This place is supposed to hold the crosses and images of saints, from which come the power to heal all diseases, and many crutches, etc., are there to show what has been done. It would be surprising to see the great number of people who are still as ignorant as they were in the dark ages. Many people visit that place continually, believing that they will be healed. Catholicism has complete sway in Quebec. I saw dozens of churches and only once did I see a Protestant. Millions of dollars are being wrapped up in church edifices. Many people are ignorant and poor, yet they are being drained by the so-called Infallible Church. Quebec is a backward and unprogressive city, a fair sample of the reign of Catholicism.

Tomorrow we start for the Isle of Shoal, on Star Island, off Portsmouth, New Hampshire, for a week's conference of religious education for the young people of New England, a summer resort turned into a worth-while institution. On our way back we will stop off at Newberryport to visit the tomb of the Rev. George Whitefield.

BETTER WORK BY THE LAITY

The last General Conference made provision for a great forward movement in the Southern Methodist church in her Lay Activities Board. It holds out a prospect that is rich in results if we will use it.

I am fully aware that "God has ordained by the foolishness of preaching that the world shall be saved." But preaching does not always mean standing in the pulpit and declaiming an oration or a sermon. Some of the most effectual preaching ever delivered has been by men and women who never spoke to a congregation in their lives.

In the last five weeks I've visited every district in our conference, and I give it as my serious and well digested judgment that our people are suffering for want of exercise. I've presented the program of the church and told the preachers and a few laymen what to do. Easy enough to tell any one what to do, but doing is the trouble. Our preachers are loyal and in earnest, but when we ask them to put on a program they say: "Where are the men to come from to fill these offices? I can scarcely get stewards to do my work—where am I to get these other men? Yes, I've got members, but they will not accept any task. They simply begin to make excuses and tell me that they can't, and I have no way to compel them."

All of this disorganization could be very readily explained. I'm not trying to make excuses now. I'm trying to face facts as they are and not dodge or explain them.

These difficulties are to be found in every church in the conference. What is to be done? I believe I have a very simple remedy. The plan is this:

Start out with your converts of this year to use this card below. When any one wants to join the church make him or her at the time of entrance fill out the top blank and then check the line of activity they will agree to act in. If they will not do this hold the membership in abeyance until they do. Then sign your name as pastor and put the card in the index file where it will be preserved for all times. If the member moves away to another charge don't try to hold on to him, but urge him to join the church wherever he goes. If you are solicitous for his membership at some other point, take a blank card, fill it out in duplicate, being sure to check out the line of activity he has agreed to work in, fill out the lower blank and send to your brother pastor in another charge. Take out the card from your file and put it in the back of the file to keep as a record for all time as the history of the members.

In ten years the preachers will have material that they can lay their hands upon for any duty they need them for. Those who are now in the church and can't be persuaded to take active work should not be left inactive. Make it the business, preacher and lay worker, to keep after them until they consent to do some definite work.

I honestly believe that if our evangelism would take this turn for the next twelve months we would have more real revivals, more souls would be converted, built up, strengthened and established in genuine Christian experience, and the Kingdom of Christ would be strengthened in a marvelous way.

Pastor in charge, .....

There is not a business house anywhere that would not fail if it conserved its resources as poorly as the church does. Now, do not let's get over-pious and say that this is reducing religion to book-keeping. Sure it is. The only trouble with the church is that it hasn't had enough business system in its affairs as it should have had. If God keeps books to see whether we have robbed Him in tithes and offerings will He not take cognizance of a defection in our membership? If He counts the ninety and nine sheep to find if the one is lacking, will He not take notice of the millions of straying members? If He keeps a record of each piece of coin to see if one piece be lost, what will He do to us when we fail to note the lost members of our congregations?

I raise this query: Is a man better off as an inactive, non-working, idle member of the church than he would be if left out in the world unchurch-ed with the knowledge of his lost condition?

Our only aim is to help to conserve the resources of God's Kingdom. I believe this simple plan, if honestly and conscientiously worked, will stop a great leakage and bring new life and vitality and Christian experience in our membership.

The Lay Activities Board will furnish any pastor these cards who will agree to use them in his work. Write to your district lay leader—he will gladly help you in every way possible.

Sincerely yours, Chas. H. Ireland,

BOARD OF LAY ACTIVITIES AND THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT

By G. T. Morelock, Board of Lay Activities.

The success of the Christian Education Movement is not less vital to the interests of our church and the Kingdom of God than that of the Centenary. Both movements were providential and came as an expression of deep concern of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the preservation of our Christian civilization and the salvation of a lost and ruined world.

The Christian Education Movement relates itself in a definite way to the whole program of the church—Evangelism, Missions, Sunday Schools, Social Service, etc. The great problem of the successful execution of any program is that of capable and efficient leadership. There are other considerations involved in the Christian Education Movement, because this movement relates itself to the whole problem of religious education in America, but the heart of the movement is just here—a program of Christian education that will give us the trained leadership necessary to carry on the work of the church. Our ministers, missionaries, and trained lay workers in the local churches in the past have come from our Christian colleges and schools. It is safe to conclude that they will come from this source in the future. The state colleges and universities are not furnishing them, and surely we have too much pride to expect our Baptist or Presbyterian brethren to do this for us. They couldn't if they would, and so we have no alternative. We must equip and endow our own institutions to do this work and render this necessary service. The work of our local church is dependent upon this. The larger program of our great connectionalism must come to a standstill without it. Hence there is nothing, absolutely nothing, before our church today more important than the Christian Education Movement.

It would be no exaggeration to say that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, needs today one hundred million dollars for her universities, colleges and schools. The South has great resources and offers the greatest opportunity of any section of the United States at the present moment, and the tide of money and men is set in her direction. We have the purest Anglo-Saxon stock of people and have preserved the best traditions of our race. We have conserved the finest and best of a Christian civilization. It remains to be seen what we can and shall do in this new era of material prosperity into which we are just entering. I believe I voice the consensus of the religious thought of America when I say that we shall need to mobilize all the spiritual resources at our command to meet the new conditions and situations that are inevitable as the South develops in textile and other manufacturing industries. Nothing but a strong, aggressive, militant church can grapple with the situation and solve the problems that are even now pressing in upon us. If we are to meet these new conditions and solve these problems, we must have a trained, aggressive leadership capable of directing all the forces of the church in a program of a positive Christianity which can make the largest possible contributions to the needs of the South, our nation, and the world of humanity. We must look to our own Christian colleges for this leadership. We cannot expect them from any other source.

Our obligation in the premises is plain and our duty clear. We must pay promptly our Christian Education pledges and seek by every means in our power to create a public sentiment on the question of Christian education that will secure large and small donations from time to time as the needs of our schools and colleges may demand.

The leaders of the Christian Education Movement in their plans for carrying on have thought it wise to place large responsibility upon the Board of Lay Activities and Christian Education Committee of this board for the collection of the pledges. My hope is that our response shall be in like measure to their judgment and confidence. I trust that every Board of Lay Activities and Christian Education committee will respond whole-heartedly. I hope that no board nor individual will feel that there is any attempt upon the part of the educational leaders to make "a collection agency" out of the Board of Lay Activities, but they are asking us to assist in the completion of a great task which we ourselves as laymen helped to initiate. We have made the pledges to this movement, and now there is a high obligation upon us to do all in our power to secure every dollar that was pledged. All of this is needed and more.

The Board of Lay Activities of each local church should exercise all possible diligence in organizing the Christian Education committee and should insist that its major task during August, September, October and November is to assist the pastor and the local collector in their plans for the collection of the Christian Education pledges.

I would make three suggestions that seem to me to be practicable. First, in co-operation with the pastor, let the Christian Education committee give one or two public programs on the subject of Christian education. The chairman of this committee should write to the Board of Education, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tennessee, for literature and suggestions. The board will co-operate promptly. Second, the largest possible use of lay speakers on this subject should be made in the local church and in the rural charges. Third, the Christian Education committee should organize teams in the local church that will assist the collector in presenting the claims of this movement to every subscriber.

A concerted effort upon the part of the pastor, the collector, the Board of Lay Activities, and the Christian Education committee will surely secure the needed result. This is not a conjecture; it is a statement of fact taken from the field of actual experience.

May we not earnestly call upon every conference, district, associate district, charge, and church lay leader to do everything in his power to see that the program suggested above is carried out in every local church?

WAGES IN THE PULPIT

Dr. Malcolm J. MacLeod, pastor of the Church of St. Nicholas, spoke out recently on a subject which is nearer the hearts of clergymen much more often than it is discussed in the pulpit—the underpaid preacher. In the United States the preacher receives smaller reward for his services than the members of any other profession, smaller in many cases than the wages of common laborers in his parish, and never commensurate, even in the richest communities, with the position he holds.

The reasons for this situation are various and disputable. It may be, as Dr. MacLeod hints, that the church members want their pastor to hold a somewhat subordinate and parasitic place in the social realm. The more secure a man's financial standing the more independent he is likely to be in his criticism of contemporary customs and morals. Or it may be that the churches pay little because preachers aren't worth so much as others on the market.

Whatever the cause, the effects are patent. Because of his small salary the minister has a constant fight on his hands to maintain appearances and at the same time keep clear of debt, to educate his family and buy needed books without mortgaging himself for more than he will ever be able to meet.

"How can any mortal interpret the laws of civic betterment," Dr. MacLeod asks, "not to speak of the laws of the Kingdom of God, if he can not favorably look his fellow man in the face? How can a woman be a leader in the missionary society if her husband owes the butcher and the baker, whose wives are sitting down in front listening to her?" Here is a reform which can begin only within the church.—N. Y. World.

Recreation for young and old in the church is about to be overdone rather than underdone in these strenuous times. More thought seems to be expended in providing entertainment and amusement for the members, especially the young, than providing means for the growth of the soul. This is a delicate question and needs proper and careful handling. Some phases of the amusement problem need to be looked after by parents in the home as well as by those who feel solicitude about the morals and religious life of our young people. One of the growing evils of the times is the familiarity of the sexes. The Scout recreation, the camping expeditions, the half-nakedness at the bathing pools are not conducive to decent morals, much less any religious tendency. The idea of the going out of young girls and young men in Scout camps at night, and having a week's company out in the woods of girls and boys, and men and women bathing together in pools and streams, even under the sanction of the church, will be more conducive to devilry than to piety. It is time to call a halt, for with the present impetus toward the bad, it will not take a score of years to reveal the pitiful condition that virtue is only a name among us.—Rev. W. O. Butler.

FIELD NEWS

SPRING HOPE CHARGE

We are now closing a splendid meeting at Gibson Memorial in Spring Hope.

God has greatly blessed us and large congregations have been present. The 8 o'clock morning services have been exceedingly sweet. Many souls have been blessed and a splendid class added to the church.

Bro. W. H. Winstead of Goldsboro has done a fine work as leader in the singing. He is a consecrated young man with a splendid voice and every quality for the work. Our people are greatly pleased with him and his work. Any brother minister will be fortunate to secure him to help him. A born leader of the young and zealous for the cause of Christ, we are glad we were fortunate to secure him. His address for the present will be Spring Hope, N. C., as he will be with me for the next two weeks anyway.

W. E. Trotman.

MARCUS CHURCH DEDICATED

Twelve years ago Rev. N. L. Seabolt organized a small group of Christians into a church about four miles from Jackson Springs. The name given this church was Marcus.

For eleven years the above congregation worshiped in an abandoned schoolhouse. But last year they felt the time had come to build a church, and so with their own hands and money, together with some help from others and the Conference Church Extension Board they built a neat church that will house their congregation for some time.

This church has at present seventy-five members, seventy-three of whom are in reach of the church and attend its services fairly regular. The oldest member is in her ninety-first year and attends church at least once a month. It has a good Sunday school and had in attendance upon the Sunday School Training School at Maxton last month four young ladies and two young men, all of whom took a credit.

On Sunday, August 19th, this church was dedicated. Rev. N. L. Seabolt, its founder, preached the sermon and dedicated the house. The congregation at this service filled the house and then left almost as many outside as were on the outside. After the services I heard many complimentary expressions about the sermon and him who preached it. And any casual observer could see that Brother Seabolt's old parishioners were overjoyed at having him in their midst again.

W. H. Brown.

OLD UNION MEETING

We had a very fine meeting following our Old Union Home Coming Day. Some fifteen or twenty were converted, five united with our church, and at the close we baptized fourteen infants which broke the record for that church. The history of Old Union dates back nearly forty years, as was stated in Miss Dora Redding's splendid historical sketch which recently appeared in our Advocate, yet that community has largely been dominated by the Quaker influence and our people are more under that influence than they think, hence they have been indifferent about dedicating their children to God by baptism. Bro. D. R. Proffitt of the East Greensboro charge was with us from the beginning to the end of the meeting and did some excellent preaching which our people enjoyed. Brother Proffitt is a good man, full of the Holy Ghost and faith, which is the highest compliment that can be paid to any preacher of the gospel. I wish to acknowledge with gratitude to my people the very great kindness they showed me by giving me a vacation which I spent at Junaluska, returning much improved every way. Randleman is a good place and there is no better in which to work for God and humanity. J. A. Bowles.

THOMASVILLE CIRCUIT

We are closing out our third year on this charge. We hope it is not out of place to speak of some things the Lord has done for us. We have held four meetings and are now in the fifth. Rev. Jim Green preached four weeks at Fairgrove and one week at Unity, with Brother Newsome to lead the singing. These meetings resulted in more than 50 conversions and a goodly number of accessions. Rev. A. C. Kennedy preached for us at Prospect. Brother Newsome led the singing. We had eight conversions and several accessions. At Pleasant Hill we did our own preaching and Brother Newsome led the singing. We had more than 30 conversions. Sixteen joined the church and we are expecting others to join. Most of the Sunday schools have doubled in numbers and attendance and some have increased threefold. We have dedicated our new church at Fairgrove this year. On third Sunday in September Rev. W. A. Newell, our presiding elder, will dedicate our new church at Pine Woods. He will also dedicate six new Sunday school rooms at Prospect church. Our new church at Fairview has been enclosed and we are holding a meeting there at this time. When the church is completed it will cost over $6000. We are serving fine people. The people of Thomasville have been very kind to us. Bro. F. S. Lambeth has been much help to us in church work, also Brother Pope and others.

We give God all the praise. There has been progress also along financial lines. We are working and praying for a clean sheet at conference.

T. B. Johnson.

CHINA GROVE CHARGE

You have not heard from China Grove since Brother Richardson's death, and would probably like to know what is going on over here. We came to the work on the 3rd of July and since that time have been trying quietly to fit into work and plans Brother Richardson was forced by death to lay down. The people received us with open arms and pommelled us with pound packages a plenty the first night here.

People and preacher are becoming acquainted, while both are striving to have closer and more intimate acquaintanceship with God.

Two things of special interest to former pastors and those who know us will not be out of place here. An all day service was held at Harris' Chapel on August 19th. China Grove Sunday school furnished a Sunday School Day program and Harris Chapel the dinner. This with a sermon by the pastor and another by Bro. M. B. Woosley gave us a full and profitable day together.

The annual Sunday school picnic last Saturday with most of the school present gave China Grove Methodists an outing and added stimulus to our Sunday school work. Brother O. V. W. watch our Sunday school.

You will hear from us again when our new church gets going good.

W. E. Hauss, P. C.

WOODLEAF CHARGE

Our pastor, Rev. G. A. Plyler, assisted Rev. S. M. Needham of Wilkesboro in a series of meetings at Gay's Chapel recently. We found Brother Needham to be a man of God, a strong preacher and a fighter of the devil. Sixteen joined the church at the close of the meeting.

Brother Needham is a preacher of the old time religion and does not hesitate to denounce evolution and all the foolishness that seems to be creeping in to break our old time faith. Thank God for such preachers as he and our Brother Plyler. If we heed their teaching we can still sing the old song,

We are traveling on to God
In the way our fathers trod.
T. S. Kincaid.

REVIVAL AT COLD SPRING

Rev. W. T. Albright closed a twelve days' centralized circuit meeting at Cold Spring church last night. Rev. W. L. Dawson of Summerfield charge did the preaching. The meeting attracted large congregations and was a real revival, reaching the membership and lifting them to a spiritual attitude many degrees above the plane on which they were living before the meeting began. There were quite a number of persons outside the pale of the church converted and fifteen or eighteen added to the membership.

Brother Dawson is a logical, forceful and spiritual preacher, one among our very best in the conference. And in his ability to interpret and vividly illustrate scripture he would satisfy the membership of our largest and most intelligent congregations in the larger cities. I believe it to be due him to say this, and I believe I am a judge of good preaching. Brother Albright is a fine pastor and a good gospel preacher. He is closing his second successful year on the Mt. Pleasant charge. He will be engaged in a meeting at Friendship church next week. N. R. Richardson.

A WORD FROM HUNTERSVILLE

We think the little charge at Huntersville deserves worthy mention in our paper. At present this little station church has only one hundred and eleven members. You can judge for yourself as to how many of that number really back up the enterprises of the church. Nevertheless we paid over thirteen hundred dollars last year to the work of the kingdom.

We have just closed a revival meeting which was a wonderful success. Our church could not accommodate the crowds that came night after night to hear Rev. W. G. Pratt, the boy evangelist from Rutherford College, who did the preaching. He is the most promising young evangelist we know anything about and we highly recommend his work to the brethren. There were between 75 and 100 conversions and reclamations. Several of these will be received into the church next Sunday. Many of them were of other denominations.

The offering made by the people to Mr. Pratt is worthy of mention. They expressed their appreciation to the amount of $150.

As a unit in the far flung battle line of God's great army we request an interest in the prayers of our people that we may continue to go forward.

H. R. Ashmore, P. C.

The Lord Jesus Christ is the unique Personality of all history. His birth was a miracle. Before that event, he was God. In that event, he became man. Since that event, he has been, and will ever be, both God and man, in the two distinct natures that constitute the one Person, Jesus Christ. He is the only begotten of his Father, the Son of God from all eternity. Since that is true, the Lord Jesus Christ is the only possible Savior, the one hope of the world.—Religious Telescope.

PROGRESS AT GIBSONVILLE

Just a word to say that Gibsonville is still on the map. We are raising the money to put a piano in our church at Gibsonville. The church at Whitsett has furnished some repair work on the inside that adds materially to the church. We have received twenty into our church this year and there is a bright prospect for some ten or twelve more before conference. Bro. R. G. Tuttle will be with me beginning next Sunday in a meeting at Whitsett.

Counting all we have made a marked improvement this year.

Geo. W. Clay.

A SUMMER'S WORK AT BLOWING ROCK

Let me ask, in the beginning, the reader's pardon for the personal references in this, for I cannot properly express it without being personal. You may not know that the church at Blowing Rock is attached to Boone, ten miles away, and that it is given each second Sunday and fifth Sundays; that it has less than 20 members, with only two adult males on the list, and is Rev. G. C. Brinkman's work. Last year I worked in the Sunday school and held up the pastor's hands as best I could; but this year we took a new hold, as many will recall my letter in the Advocate in June. A committee selected a list of preachers to choose from, and delegated to me the work of writing all these asking that each one give us a Sunday during July or August. That alone was right much of a task, but in addition I took over the Sunday school, became sexton and bell-ringer, advertising man and sign writer, and it is useless to say that, with family duties, I have had a very busy vacation.

When I sent an invitation to the brethren that have served us I set no dates, leaving it to the men to say when they could best come; and by some strange coincident, perhaps by a higher power, the dates selected covered each Sabbath except one, with but one double, and one of these asked to be excused if any one else wanted that date. Those who have so kindly served us: Revs. A. D. Wilcox, G. C. Brinkman, the pastor; W. O. Goode; W. A. Lutz of Trinity Lutheran church, Charlotte; (accidentally) J. H. Barnhardt, H. G. Hardin, Bishop Collins Denny and W. A. Stanbury. The work was placed before the mission board at the last conference and it underwrote the work, sending us fifty dollars as a nucleus fund; that with collections and the liberality of Mr. J. A. Gray and that splendid Methodist, W. O. Spencer, manager of the Green Park Hotel, has enabled me to pay the expenses to date, and one collection was given, by request and special announcement, to the ladies to pay a note due on the organ, and any remainder will go into the treasury on the regular collections.

Of course the crowning events were the days given us by Bishop Denny. His preaching was a benediction to the large congregations that had come from five states, and who heard him at his best, and the association with him was an inspiration. The Bishop said he felt he had done us little good by coming to us. My reply was: "Let us who have listened to you be the judge of that." All the good men who served the church brought splendid messages and enjoyed a week end on this "top of the world." Personally I am deeply grateful to them all, with just two regrets—that I could not have each one as my house guest, nor give them better congregations.

What do I think of the summer's work?

What did Bishop Denny say of it?

I feel that the small amount of mission money has been well spent. Personally I am all the better for the task performed. Bishop Denny has been so situated as to have large experience in trying to carry the preached Word to summer resort visitors, and does not hesitate to say he has seldom seen it profitable. Otherwise attentive church members generally feel they have left church duties behind when they come to such a place as this. Blowing Rock has been a place of rest for more than forty years, even when it was a terrible punishment to get there. But now, with fine roads, autos and enlarged and enlarging accommodations it is just getting on the map. More people have been on this mountain this year than ever before. The fact that so many people own summer homes here, or rent homes for the summer, and the fact that we have a few Methodists here to keep the flame alive makes the church at Blowing Rock, as I see it, different from a resort hotel away from a large population of native settlers. Added to that fact is the further fact that there are four other congregations located here—the Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists and Free Will Baptists. Four of the churches are in the village, and the other three are more fortunately located than we are. Ours is on a pretty lot, but in the meanest place in the village to reach on foot or to park an auto. It is my opinion, and I have lot's of company in this thought, that the thing to do is to build another church on a different location, making it attractive as well as conveniently located. Why? Briefly, the Presbyterian church is a memorial to the late Dr. J. Rumble, so long loved at Salisbury. The Episcopal church is a memorial to the late Mrs. W. W. Stringfellow; and both of these are of native stone and as attractive as is possible to make them and each have summer congregations that are worth while. Their plate collections in July and August about run them all the year. The Baptists are now building a ten thousand dollar new house, with outer walls of natural bark. This last congregation, like ours, is small, but full of faith in the future.

More and more Methodists are coming here each season, and with a well located, attractive church (of which I am going to write another article) we should have good congregations, and the work will be largely self-sustaining, either for an all time summer pastor or for invited preachers during the summer season. There is apparent indifference on the part of local membership, but when we consider that these have to work while the season is on, in many ways, to take care of the thousands that come and go, they are in a degree excusable. I have already trespassed on space, but I cannot say it in less, and this is just half. What I have done voluntarily has been done because I love Methodism. Left alone I would prefer to do less than I have done this year, but if I am permitted to spend next season here, I will be found on duty again, even if less conspicuous.

THE ONCOMING GENERATION

The young men and women of the present day are a puzzle and a worry to their elders. Their unconventional views of life and their questioning attitude toward matters which their parents accepted as forever settled have perplexed their fathers and mothers, and their conduct and conversation have supplied infinite occasion for fault-finding criticism. Epithets of every sort have been flung at them. There is one nickname for the fledgling in pinfeathers who audaciously launches out on her callow wings, and another term for the maiden who specializes in the lure of sex. As a class we hear them spoken of as "these wild young people." The Honorable Socrates Potter, the quaint old Yankee philosopher who is one of the creations of Irving Bachelier's imagination, has described them as "the first unspanked generation"—a two-edged adjective, suggesting in a single word their undisciplined demeanor and at the same time locating the blame with those who have spared the rod.

Probably it is fairer to these young folks who, whether spanked or unspanked, are soon to hold the rod of empire, of family, church, and state in their own hands, to call them simply "The Oncoming Generation." For swiftly and surely they are coming on and within a few years at the longest they will take control for better or for worse.

It is a grave mistake for those who must soon yield their places to the younger generation to think that all the criticism is on one side. The youngsters themselves have their own opinions as well and do not hesitate to express them. To the charge that they are departing from the accustomed ways they reply, "Where have your accustomed ways brought the world to?" They point to the old standard of international ethics which landed the world in a war that took bloody toll of their generation, and they say we must have something different better. They look out upon an industrial system that has filled the nations with internal strife, strikes, lockouts and massacres, and they say, if this is the wisdom of the ages, we are through with it. Experiments can bring nothing worse. They may even do better! They go to church, mingle among professed Christian people and compare their actions with the teachings of Christ, as they find them in the gospels, and they note how far the practice of Christianity lags behind its precepts. We hear them saying, "We feel the need of religion. We can conceive nothing more magnificent than the message of Christ, but we find in the churches a formal religion and only in rare instances would we discern from the spirit and acts of your church members the fact that they have been with Christ, and that that mind is in them which was also in Christ Jesus." They are quoted as saying, "We are interested in the religion which you have formulated for our inspection. We have examined it, and we have examined you. Either there is nothing in it, or else it means a great deal more than you are getting out of it. We do not care for formulas. We must have a religion that will help us to live."

Are they not right? Only here and there have souls caught the spiritual glimpses that make them less forlorn. Only a few are living the gospel, letting its love, and sympathy, and unselfishness master their lives. Prejudice and self-seeking, social ambitions, industrial rivalries, race hatreds, reveal themselves in the character of church members under the keen analysis of youth.

Can we expect a boy to accept Christ's mandate, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," when his "Christian" father belongs to an organization based on the negation of that principle? Is the employer's daughter to believe in the Sunday religion of a father who grows rich on "sweated" labor? Will the workingman's child honor a father's religion when she knows that he does not give full value for his wage?

It would be better for the world and the church of tomorrow if professed Christians of mature years should turn from their present habit of criticizing the young and begin to examine themselves—each himself, not each another. The true fundamentalism is that which lives according to the basic principles of Christianity, not that which exhausts itself in precise definitions of orthodoxy. The Oncoming Generation has little patience with meticulous definitions, it is all for reality. It is inclined to turn away from discussions of the language of a creed, and to demand to be shown the way to a vital fellowship with Christ. It is impatient of the formal expressions of Christianity which once held such sway over the imagination and emotion of mankind, and it wants to learn how to be better men and women. If it questions our creed, it is because it sees how little it helps us to live.

Our duty to the Oncoming Generation is clear. We have to rehabilitate our own professions in their eyes by showing them in our daily lives the faith which we profess, and which we have urged upon them. The time has passed when they can be won to the gospel in any other way.

It is a costly price to pay. Nothing less than the giving our ourselves. We cannot preach to them with any prospect of success if our own spirit and conduct will not stand the tests to which they will submit it. To win the Oncoming Generation we must first give ourselves to Christ in honest, full surrender of all our powers. Then there will be that winsome reality to our religion that alone will impress the young about us, who, whatever they may say, are nevertheless keenly observant and unerring in their discernment between the genuine and the sham.—New York Christian Advocate.

THE CREATOR

I looked in the face of a rose,
As it nodded in springtime and smiled;
I saw where eternity glows
In the sweet tender eyes of a child.
I sought in the depths of a mine,
I looked in a sunbeam in air;
They each bore an image divine,
The Creator was everywhere.

I looked at the set of the sun,
And the crag that reflected its light;
I thought on the day that was done,
And I pondered the stars of the night;
And I looked in the eyes of a man
Who had stumbled through sinning to prayer;
God's finger prints there I could scan,
He awaited me everywhere.

FEDERATION OF NORTHAMPTON COUNTY AUXILIARIES

The meeting at Garysburg July 26th of the Federation of Missionary Societies of the M. E. Church, South, of Northampton county, was one of inspiration and results.

The business of the federation was disposed of wisely and promptly by the efficient president, Mrs. J. B. Stephenson, Mrs. E. J. Gay acting as secretary pro tem. An unusually fine program was given and was throughout in keeping with the missionary spirit. Rev. Wm. Towe, the pastor of Garysburg, gave his hearty co-operation and paid eloquent tribute to the far-reaching influence of woman's work. The absence of Mrs. Harvey Boney, who was to have addressed the federation, was regretted. Miss Anna Graham was welcomed and later brought matters of importance before the auxiliaries, to which they gave ready response. Rev. J. B. Thompson of Conway showed his interest by his presence at the gathering.

Our conference superintendent of social service, Mrs. Lee Johnson, full of the Junaluska spirit, presented with enthusiasm the cause she represents. A greater number of reports and more earnest effort in this work it is hoped will be the result of her talk.

Dinner in the grove served by the Garysburg auxiliary proved a feast of good things.

In the afternoon session the Bright Jewels of Garysburg gave a most interesting and instructive program. The singing was especially fine.

On report of the nominating committee the following officers were elected: Mrs. J. B. Stephenson, president; Mrs. J. F. Shoulars, vice president; Mrs. E. J. Gay secretary and treasurer. A superintendent was appointed in each auxiliary to look after the weaker churches and organize auxiliaries when possible.

Most of the auxiliaries were well represented and their reports interesting. A committee was appointed to consider ways and means for the college education of our missionary volunteer, also a committee to frame constitution and by-laws. The next meeting will be held in Jackson October 18th.

An offering was made for expenses, a rising vote of thanks given the Garysburg auxiliary for their welcome and hospitality, and the meeting was closed with a benediction by Rev. Wm. Towe.

Miss M. C. Bagley, Sec.

MISSION STUDY TEXT BOOKS RECOMMENDED FOR 1923-24

The themes for the year 1923-24 are: Home: "Saving America Through Her Boys and Girls"; Foreign, "Japan."

The following books are published by the Missionary Education Movement and are recommended for study:

Adult.

"The Debt Eternal," John H. Finley. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Planned especially for intensive study classes and discussion groups. A challenge to the Christian forces of America to meet their responsibility for the child life of the nation.

"Suggestions to Leaders of Classes," Price, paper, 15 cents.

"The Child and America's Future," Jay S. Stowell. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

For use where a shorter and more simple treatment of the theme is desirable. Especially adapted for group study.

"Suggestions to Leaders of Classes," Ralph A. Felton. Price, paper, 15 cents.

"Creative Forces in Japan," Galen M. Fisher. Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

A research study of Japan, fully illustrated with maps and bibliography.

Additional Publications.

JULIA BRYAN HALL, RED SPRINGS, N. C.

On May 10, 1923, as the day was dying, the spirit of Miss Julia Bryan Hall, sister of Gen. G. H. Hall and Mrs. A. B. Pearsall of Red Springs, peacefully took its flight to join the company of the faithful who have gone before.

Miss Hall, who was in her seventy-fourth year, was born and reared in Fayetteville, being the eldest daughter of the late Egbert and Susan Hall. About thirty years ago she moved to Red Springs and at the time of her death was living with her sister, Mrs. A. B. Pearsall.

She was a woman of great intelligence, gentle manners, and a devout Christian, being exceedingly well informed about all the interests of the Methodist church to which she was so devoted. Always she was a tireless worker, as Sunday school teacher, organizer, or president of the Woman's Missionary Society, besides assuming many minor responsibilities in the little Red Springs church in its first days. Perhaps her chief interest was in the missionary cause to which she devoted many hours of study and work. She kept up with all the missionaries and took a prayerful personal interest in the life and work of each one. The missionary society of which she was once president will miss her greatly.

Her ministrations and loving service in the family circle were a blessing and help and the shining example of her pure, saintly life rested as a benediction on those with whom she lived.

With her broad culture and lovely personality Miss Hall graced and made happier every circle in which she moved and with the passing of her gentle, self-effacing spirit the sorrow of her loved ones is lightened with the assurance that a saint has gone home to live with her Lord.—Contributed.

Western North Carolina Conference

My Dear Sister:

When the Woman's Missionary Council was in annual session an invalid in the Hannon House for incurables in Mobile lovingly volunteered to give herself in prayer for the Bennett Memorial, as it is impossible for her to enter the active campaign. From this beautiful pledge the committee has developed the Bennett Prayer League, and has given me the high privilege of being the leader.

I am writing, therefore, to ask your assistance in getting this league organized. In two conference societies there are already bands of "shut-ins." Have you such a plan for utilizing the invalids and the infirm in your conference? If so, kindly put me in touch with the person who has supervision of that work.

If you have no such band, please have this subject brought before your auxiliaries with request that they send me names and addresses of those who would like to have membership in the Bennett Prayer League.

In order that we may be of real, individual service, I am asking that each conference secretary or some person who has part in the campaign for funds or other special work for the Memorial, write me in advance so we may communicate with our members and thus unitedly keep the specific object before the Lord. We will welcome any suggestion from you which make this work effective.

The wonderful possibilities of this service to the church, the workers and the nation grow upon me daily as I seek guidance for the mobilization of this hitherto unused force of the church. Pray that God may be glorified through our supplication.

Yours with love,

Mrs. R. W. MacDonell.

Dear Sisters of the Woman's Missionary Society of the W. N. C. Conference:

The above letter from Mrs. R. W. MacDonell so fully explains the purpose of the Prayer League in connection with the Belle H. Bennett Memorial that I feel it necessary merely to emphasize it by calling attention to the earnest plea Mrs. MacDonell, as leader of the Prayer League, makes to the women of Southern Methodism to unite in this band of intercessors for the carrying out of the great work contemplated in the raising of the memorial fund which has a double object of honoring our great leader, who "though dead yet speaketh" through the noble example she has left us, but which is also designed to carry forward with greater efficiency the great work to which she dedicated her consecrated life.

I trust this appeal from Mrs. MacDonell may reach and touch the hearts of all our missionary women, as well as other Christian women throughout the bounds of our conference, and call forth a ready response.

Mrs. MacDonell's address is 406 Surrey St., Chevy Chase, Washington, D. C.

May there be many names sent to her of those who desire to become members of the Prayer League. If the auxiliaries will comply with the request to form "shut-in" bands, they may for the present report to their district secretaries until such a time as the special conference leader can be appointed.

Earnestly praying that our conference society may be a leader in this great service,

Yours for the work,
Lucy H. Roberson, Pres.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AFTER

Personal.

Twenty-five years ago August 24 the editor of your Woman's Page began her life as an itinerant. Our honeymoon was one whole day long, crossing the Blue Ridge in a carriage, drawn by two pretty black horses, driven by an old "uncle" the same color.

Arriving about six o'clock at Mt. Airy, where the groom was pastor, we found friends awaiting us, and every provision for our comfort in the rented parsonage. The preacher's wife practiced and experimented in the art of learning the preacher's wife's business on the Mt. Airy folk for three happy years. Then the great wheel of our itinerary system turned for us, as it "hath a way" of turning, and passed us on—to find a new home, and other friends. On and on, this great wheel has, with the years, wheeled us always into pleasant places, and we are rich in the sweet and abiding friendships which have grown from these years of service. After revolving duly for twenty-five years it transpired that the 25th anniversary of our marriage finds us at our starting point—and here begins the story.

About four o'clock in the afternoon of August 24th as the bride of twenty-five years ago sat idling, dreaming, thinking, while the groom busied himself with the workmen on the new building—ladies began to arrive, bearing flowers, smiles, congratulations and so forth. While a young lady went to bring in the groom the bride stood in the midst, fumbling around for something to say, and asked: "Well, ladies, am I having a party, or reception, or anything, or what am I doing?" They promptly answered: "You do not seem to be doing much of anything." The groom came in perspiring but gracious, and when order was restored Mrs. J. R. Paddison, the eldest member of our congregation, and one whom every pastor's

THIRTEEN ADOPT PROGRAM

Thirteen Sunday schools in the Elizabeth City district adopted the official Program of Work for Methodist Sunday schools as a result of the recent visit of your conference superintendent of Sunday school work to the district. Not one school in which the program was explained failed to see in it merit or to want the help which it affords; every school visited wanted the program and secured it. Following are these schools, with their superintendents:

- Mann's Harbor—C. W. Mann.
- Colington—A. L. Meekins.
- Manteo—T. R. Creef.
- Wanchese—A. C. Daniels.
- Rodanthe—R. H. Midgett.
- Salvo—L. Y. Gray.
- Avon—James Scarborough.
- Buxton—C. P. Gray.
- Frisco—A. J. Fulcher.
- Hatteras—W. W. Gaskill.
- Hertford—J. C. Blanchard.
- Gates—F. H. Smith.
- Savages—J. A. Baker.

Several Sunday schools in the district had previously adopted this program and are endeavoring to follow it to the improvement of their work. Others will adopt it and work by it as soon as they learn what it is and how it helps earnest workers in their efforts to go forward to higher standards of efficiency.

THEY HEARD US GLADLY

When we wrote our contributions to these columns last week we were at Rodanthe, a little village on "the banks" in Dare county. In company with Rev. C. B. Culbreth, presiding elder of the Elizabeth City district, we were beginning the second lap of a two weeks tour of Sunday schools in the district, one of the purposes of which was to explain to the workers the official Program of Work for Methodist Sunday schools and to arouse them to the necessity of doing more wisely and effectively the great work of the religious training and development of boys and girls, men and women, in the Sunday school. Our schedule of appointments called for one or more meetings a day through an entire week, touching every school on "the banks." This schedule we followed, and the people heard us gladly. They not only came to the meetings, but listened with apparently great interest as we endeavored to lay before them plans and to suggest some practical improvements which they might make in their organization, equipment and teaching force.

WHERE SEA MEETS SOUND

Our tour ended at Hatteras Sunday evening. We had been at Rodanthe Tuesday, Salvo Wednesday, Avon Thursday, Buxton Friday, and Frisco Saturday, and Sunday morning found us in the Sunday school at Hatteras, where 148 of the 177 pupils enrolled had assembled. The writer spoke briefly to the school, and the presiding elder preached at 11 o'clock, the pastor, Rev. J. M. Joliff, being at Frisco in a protracted meeting. At 8 o'clock both the presiding elder and the writer spoke before a splendid congregation.

The Hatteras folk are sticking by their guns in spite of storm and tide. Although their church building has been blown about once or twice and damaged considerably by the excessive wind which frequently prevails there, they have anchored it to the ground by cables and expect to continue to do business at the same old stand. Mr. W. W. Gaskill, superintendent of the Sunday school, who is approaching the four-score mile post, has been in charge of the Sunday school for about twenty-five years. He secured the official Program of Work for his school and, like the superintendents of the other schools we visited, will enlist the pastor and other officers and teachers in putting this program into effect.

HELP FOR SUPERINTENDENTS

Superintendents who are interested in making their "opening exercises" or worship service more interesting and worshipful and in keeping themselves informed about what is going on among other schools of Southern Methodism need not go far to find the very help that will make these things possible. There is a little magazine called "The Methodist Superintendent and His Helpers," published monthly, which gives a suggested program of worship for every Sunday in the month. These programs have been carefully worked out and give the superintendent who tries to follow them something fresh and interesting every Sunday. They will help him get out and stay out of the rut into which all too many superintendents have allowed themselves to drift. In addition to these worship programs, there are always fifteen or twenty pages of short items of news, inspiration, suggestions and memoranda.

This little magazine is edited by Mr. M. W. Brabham, head of the department of Sunday school administration, General Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tenn., who for four or five years was at the head of our Sunday school work in this conference, is published by Lamar & Barton, Agents, Nashville and Richmond, and may be ordered along with other Sunday school literature and supplies. And one of the good things about it is that it costs only twenty-five cents a year, and five copies to one address cost only one dollar a year. It costs the publishers much more than the price they ask for it, and it is worth more. The subscription price hardly takes care of more than the postage. It is sold at this price so every superintendent might get it, and we sincerely hope superintendents in the North Carolina conference not now getting it regularly will place their order right away and give their boys and girls, men and women, the advantage which it affords. Some schools receive anywhere from ten to seventy copies; every school should receive at least one copy.

DO YOU PLAN TO REMODEL?

Many congregations are planning to remodel their church buildings and to add Sunday school equipment. If yours is such a congregation, it should have the benefit of the experience of other congregations which have remodeled and of those of our denomination who have made a special study of adapting old buildings to new needs and improved plans of Sunday school work. The joint committee on church and Sunday school architecture as appointed by the General Sunday School Board and the Board of Church Extension is in a position to give you valuable helps and suggestions and perhaps save you from serious and costly mistakes. Any communication concerning working plans, blue prints and other particulars should be addressed to Rev. J. A. Baylor, Architectural Secretary, General Board of Church Extension, Louisville, Ky. We have in our office at Durham also two or three pamphlets full of helpful ideas, which pamphlets we will mail free to any who may desire them.

One of the most suggestive and concise pieces of literature on this subject coming under our observation is the August number of "The Methodist Superintendent and His Helpers," which is given over almost entirely to the important matter of church building and especially to plans for congregations comparatively small. Write us for a copy of this issue, or, better still, subscribe for "The Methodist Superintendent and His Helpers" and have the publishers to start your subscription by sending you the August issue.

CHILDREN'S WEEK

Miss Georgia Keene, your conference elementary superintendent, had splendid responses last year from schools which she asked to observe Children's Week and is expecting even better responses this year, growing out of an appreciation of the fine results that have come where Children's Week has been pushed. We want to assure you that we believe no finer thing can be done for the children and, therefore, for the future church and nation, than a whole-hearted carrying out of Children's Week plans. If you have not already written to Miss Keene for these plans, do so right away. The time is some week in October, and we should familiarize ourselves with the plans right away. So write to Miss Georgia Keene, College Station, Durham, N. C., and she will give you all the help you need.

CHILDREN'S WEEK

During the month of October twelve of the leading evangelical denominations of America have agreed to observe Children's Week. Wherever it is convenient the week of November 14-21 is preferred for observing this work. It will be remembered that the observance of Children's Week was first promoted by the Elementary department of the Southern Methodist church. The promotion of this worthy enterprise has now grown to a nationwide observance. Beginning with the inception of this movement the Western North Carolina conference, in company with a group of other leading conferences in Southern Methodism, observed Children's Week for the first time in April, 1921. On the following April a much larger number of our leading congregations observed Children's Week. The week was not observed in April this year for the reason that the date of its observance was changed to October. It is earnestly hoped that the work attendant to the observance of Children's Week will be done on a much larger scale this year than ever before.

If it is profitable in community fairs, county fairs and state fairs to set aside a special time for the promotion of growing better grain and better hogs it is even more fitting that an annual week be set aside for the growing of better children. Each year three important phases of child life are considered. The topics for consideration this year are "Home training and the problem of authority," "The power of adult example" and "The child a citizen."

The observance of Children's Week will be promoted by Sunday school officers and teachers of children under twelve years of age. The chief lines of activity will be "Home Visitation," "Parents' Meeting," and "Forward Steps." Those Sunday schools that have observed Children's Week in the past will testify to its beneficial results.

For general directions, leaflet materials and advice write to Miss Virginia Jenkins, Elementary Superintendent, Lexington, N. C.

THANK YOU

It is never too late to do good. We shall be delighted to have reports of Sunday schools that have observed Sunday School Day right up to the convening of our annual conference. Since last report the following Sunday schools have joined our Sunday School Day Honor Roll:

SUCCESSFUL

Marion Co-operative Standard Training School for Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school workers held in the public school building at Marion August 19-24 was quite successful. The total enrollment was eighty-four, fifty-six being Methodists and twenty-eight Presbyterians. In addition to these definitely enrolled there were many visitors who dropped in from time to time. Fifty-two did all the work and received certificates of credit, thirty-six being Methodists and sixteen Presbyterians. The following Methodists received credit:

Sunday School Organization and Administration, O. V. Woosley, instructor—Rev. Z. Paris, Rev. R. C. Go-forth, Rev. P. H. Brittain, T. A. Hol-ton, G. B. Strickland, R. K. Shotwell.

Principles of Religious Teaching, C. T. Carr, instructor—Mrs. C. R. Mc-Call, D. E. Hudgins, Rev. W. E. Poo-vey, Mrs. D. F. Giles, Mrs. J. Q. Gil-ke, Mrs. W. B. Malone, Margaret Taylor, Boyce Sprinkle, Rev. E. D. Ballard, Mrs. M. T. Harbison, Mrs. R. H. Bomar, Mrs. A. M. Davis, Mrs. G. B. Strickland, Miss Rosa Simpson, Mrs. S. M. Hoffman.

Junior Organization and Administra-tion, Miss Virginia Jenkins, instructor—Miss Lucy Davis, Miss Viola Giles, Mrs. T. A. Holton, B. H. Laughridge, Daphne Spratt, Mrs. J. A. Steppe.

Primary Organization and Administra-tion, Miss Georgia Keene, instructor—Audrey Alphin, Joyce Decker, Irene Franklin, Ruth Hall, Mrs. A. T. Ledbetter, Mrs. Joe Tate, Willie Mae Watkins, Mrs. H. H. Witherspoon, Catherine Giles.

PARIS AND POOVEY

I always feel thankful towards lead-ers when they not only urge their fol-lowers to do a good thing but also lead in doing the thing themselves. Rev. Z. Paris, presiding elder of the Marion district, and Rev. W. E. Poo-vey, pastor of the First Methodist church at Marion, have urged for a number of months the holding of a Standard Training School at Marion. When this school was provided they took full advantage of it. They read their books, wrote their papers and received credit. May their kind con-tinue to increase.

JONES AND COMPANY

Yesterday I drove a Ford 235 miles, returning from Sylva, where Rev. O. J. Jones and two dozen of his leading Sunday school workers met with Miss Jenkins and me in a non-standard training school. Brother Jones is doing a very constructive piece of work at Sylva and it is no wonder that he is gratefully appreciated. Mrs. Jones and their interesting family are a great help to the pastor in all that he does. It was delightful to be in their home during the time of our training school. I am urging the Sylva people to set the pace for modern Sunday school efficiency in the Waynesville district and if the other Sunday schools are not mindful of their ad-vancement such will soon be the case. It is always a satisfaction to spend a while with our good people at Sylva.

LEAGUERS OF ATLANTA MOVING

The Atlanta League Union held recently an efficiency institute which brought to Trinity church some of the "leading lights" of our church. Among them we note Rev. E. O. Harbin and Miss Ida Mallary Coble of the Central Office, Rev. Harvey Porter and Mr. Arva Floyd and Dr. W. J. Young of Emory University.

Platform addresses were delivered by Prof. W. H. Sutton, Dr. H. W. Cox and Dr. J. E. Ellis.

Dr. B. O. Holtzendorf is the hustling president of this great union of Atlanta leaguers.

READ, JUNIORS AND INTERMEDIATE DISTRICT SECRETARIES

Let me remind you that September is the month set aside for foreign mission study in the Junior leagues. Surely there is no mission study book more charming than "The Honorable Japanese Fan" by Applegarth. In every chapter there is a definite appeal to boys and girls. The chapters can be studied the last half hour of your league service or you might meet one afternoon in each week. If you are unable to get the book in time to finish in September, study it in October. When you have finished the book plan a "Japanese social," which I am sure will prove effective. Will you write immediately to your local Junior superintendents and ask them to take up this study? Let's try to make this year the "crowning year" in Junior work. I am so anxious to promote junior work and my success depends on you as an assistant district secretary. So let me beg you not to fail me. If I can be of any assistance to you at any time please call on me. Can I depend on you to make every effort possible to organize a Junior league in every church where it is possible to do so? This is your work and let's not be satisfied till we have done all we can. Remember I am at your service.

Please get your reports to me by the 10th of each month in which they are due. Thank you.

Mrs. Jennie M. James,
Conf. Junior Supt.

MT. HOLLY EPWORTHIAN'S PLANNING BIG THINGS

I am sending some news from the Mt. Holly Senior Epworth League to be reported in the North Carolina Advocate. I hope it will escape the waste basket, for we would like to let the other leaguers know what we are doing.

In May, 1923, the Mt. Holly Senior Epworth League was reorganized with the following officers:

- President—Miss Edith Hoover.
- Vice President—Jack Tucker.
- Secretary—Miss Lillian Dunn.
- Treasurer—Ceph Adlar.
- Cor. Sec.—Miss Grace Jenkins.
- First Dept. Supt.—Miss Annie Ader.
- Second Dept. Supt.—Miss Bessie Rumage.
- Third Dept. Supt.—Miss Jennie Lee Lineberger.
- Fourth Dept. Supt.—Miss Mildred Thompson.
- Epworth Era Agent—Miss Carrie Mae Kendall.

Our league is planning to do a great work during the following year, and we ask each and every league to pray for us.

Grace Jenkins,
Cor. Sec.

WESTVIEW LEAGUERS ARE ENTERTAINED

Miss Ethel Thornburg entertained the league of Westview Methodist church at the attractive new home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Thornburg, in Oak Grove Saturday evening, August 25.

About 45 young people enjoyed Miss Thornburg's hospitality. After many interesting games the hostess served delicious cream and cake.

SOME ERUPTION—MAY IT SPREAD!

Yes, that's just it! And the bits of lava and ash are much more useful and interesting than any Mount Vesuvius has as yet yielded up for public attention. There are many reasons for this great outburst of league spirit and enthusiasm. Many of our leaguers have been wearing that toll worn, haunted expression peculiar to school and college students. But now that we have passed those days of labor we are free to use all our energy toward the betterment of the league. Then we have been spurred toward higher goals by Mr. Albert Will and Miss Gladys Styron. These members have just returned from conference in South Carolina and Alabama and they haven't yet finished telling us all the new ideas and peppy little stunts they secured while away.

But this eruption of enthusiasm is nothing in comparison to what is expected after our return from Oxford. About fourteen of our members will be in Oxford next week and after they return—well, just watch us boil!

Catherine Hopkins.

A THURSDAY EVENING AT CENTRAL CHURCH

A hot summer night, an Epworth League social, games (same old games), refreshments, and then home, tired and overheated. "Wish I hadn't gone." But not at Central church Thursday evening.

Miss Mexie Herring is to be congratulated upon the splendid direction of her first social. Some twenty-six or more young people were present.

Introductions were in order and a mixing game commenced that carried through the entire evening. It was a privilege to sit out the different games (they were of that type) and become better acquainted with the visitors present. We discovered one Presbyterian from Dunn, N. C., who played the piano for us, a live B. Y. P. U. from Goldsboro, and another from Durham, together with four more Baptists. They enjoyed being Epworth Leaguers for the evening.

The close of the social came with Miss Ethel Coats at the piano and Miss Eleanor Morgan and Mrs. Hinson singing a beautiful duet of God and His love.

Yes, it was a hot summer evening, but it was an altogether different social with quiet games really enjoyed and new friendships developed. And we went our way homeward feeling rested and thanking God for young folks who love and serve Him.

A SUCCESSFUL INSTITUTE IN WASHINGTON DISTRICT

Just a few words about our district institute. We had a great one, I think. We did not have so many delegates at our opening service Tuesday evening, but we had more delegates than are usually in attendance at the opening service of a district conference. And, too, a good many of them left before the closing service, which was a great service. But on the whole our institute was a success.

The consecration service led by Rev. J. Marvin Ormond was the greatest service of its kind that I have ever attended. Every leaguer present, and there must have been one hundred, expressed his desire and determination to follow the God planned life. The invitation at the close of the service was not only for those who were volunteers for the ministry or foreign field, but for all who were determined to follow God's plan for his life.

The institute was attended by 83 delegates from the several chapters in the district. This of course does not include members of the Greenville chapter. Norman Vaughan.

POLICY OF WAYNE COUNTY EPWORTH LEAGUE UNION

1. It shall be our aim to hold twelve interesting and helpful devotional meetings during the year. We shall try to make them as entertaining, varied and spiritually helpful as possible.

2. These meetings shall be in charge of the league at whose church union meeting is to be held. Each person on program shall be notified at least one week in advance.

3. To hold a combined business and social meeting every three months.

4. To maintain the three covenants—Quiet Hour, Fellow Workers, and Christian Stewardship.

5. To organize an Epworth League in every M. E. church in Wayne county.

6. To encourage, foster and strengthen all new or needy leagues.

7. To encourage individual leagues to make their pledge to Africa Special in the future as large as possible.

8. To solemnly pledge ourselves to assist the pastors and the official board of the church in any such way as may be requested, and to seek to make the league a vital force in the life of the church and community. We want our pastors to know that there is at least one organization in the church, namely, the Epworth League, which stands wholeheartedly behind them in all their endeavors, and which will gladly set its hand to any task which they assign.

9. To maintain and be governed by the constitution and by-laws as given in the handbook.

10. To urge each leaguer to become personally acquainted with all members of the union.

11. To urge all members of the leagues and of the churches to become tithers.

12. To encourage the reading of good literature, especially the Bible, Epworth Era and Christian Advocate.

Mrs. Mary L. Daniels,
Chm. of Committee.

POLICY OF BECKWETH EPWORTH LEAGUE, SMITHFIELD

It is the aim of the Beckweth Epworth League chapter:

1. To maintain the highest standard of efficiency possible as outlined in the standard of efficiency prescribed by the Epworth League Board.

2. To conduct weekly devotional meetings throughout the year, to maintain a Quiet Hour covenant and to carry on personal evangelistic work through a Fellow Workers covenant.

3. To conduct a literary social every month and to encourage wholesome games and amusements.

4. To create an intelligent and enthusiastic interest in missions.

5. To hold regular monthly council meetings and business meetings and to keep an accurate record of work done.

6. To see that each active member has some part in the devotional meetings and that a good attendance is secured.

7. To observe the regular league calendar throughout the year.

8. To co-operate with our district secretary and Advocate editor.

9. To elect and pay the expenses of two delegates to the Eastern Carolina conference.

Mary Louise Turner, Sec.

POLICY OF SENIOR LEAGUE, CITY ROAD, ELIZABETH CITY

For the purpose of making our league effective and thorough in its work, we purpose to carry out the following policy:

1. To hold fifty-two devotional meetings during the year.

2. To render twelve missionary programs, to conduct mission study class, and to pay our African Special.

3. To hold monthly council and business meetings, and require written reports from all officers.

4. To arrange a varied social each month.

5. To conduct monthly services at the jail and county home, and further, to relieve the suffering by the giving of sympathy, visiting, carrying flowers and rendering material aid.

6. To maintain the three leagues covenants—Quiet Hour, Fellow Workers, and Christian Stewardship.

7. To seek to increase our membership and to make our present membership more interested in our work.

8. To aid the Junior League in every possible way, and to assist the church and Sunday school leaders.

9. To adopt the following budget and raise it by membership dues, free will offerings and such other means as the league may direct:

African Special .....	$ 20
Orphan's clothes .....	60
Centenary pledge .....	10
Delegate's fund .....	20
Second Dept. ....	10
Third Dept. ....	36
Supplies .....	12
Miscellaneous .....	8
Total .....	$176

A NEW LEAGUE AT ALLIANCE

On Sunday night, August 27, at the Methodist Church at Alliance, Rev. W. N. Vaughn came and organized an Epworth League. He spoke on Epworth League work and its purpose. The officers were elected as follows:

President—Benjamin F. Cozart.
Vice President—Miss Genevieve Campen.

Sec. Treas. and Cor. Sec.—Whitford McCotter.

Epworth Era Agent—Miss Pheobe Hooker.

First Supt.—Earl Ireland.

Second Supt.—Miss Erma Miller.

Third Supt.—Miss Ruth White.

Fourth Supt.—Miss Florence Heath.

There were twenty-five members enrolled that night. More are expected soon. Whitford McCotter, Sec.

ANOTHER NEW ONE IN WILMINGTON DISTRICT

On the evening of July 5, 1923, the young people of Evergreen M. E. church met with their pastor, Rev. B. O. Merritt, and organized an Epworth League. The following officers were elected:

President—Bennie Usrey.

Vice President—Page Benton.

Sec. and Treas.—Vera Usrey.

Era Agent—Boyd Benton.

First Supt.—Nancy Usrey.

Second Supt.—Rubey Benton.

Third Supt.—Eunice Benton.

Fourth Supt.—Lucy Swain.

There were only eleven members enrolled the first night, but since then the membership has increased to thirty-two.

We have a meeting every Sunday night with interesting programs. All of the young people seem very enthusiastic about the work and we are expecting great things of our league.

Vera Usrey, Cor. Sec.

NEW LEAGUE AT INDIAN SPRINGS

Daniels' Chapel Epworth League organized a league at Indian Springs, near Goldsboro, on Sunday, August 26. This is the third league they have organized in Wayne county.

Power and best wishes to the new league and congratulations to Daniels' Chapel.

WANTED

1. Money for building program.
2. Organized classes to support children.
3. Individuals to assume support of orphans.
4. Monthly offerings from every Sunday school.
5. Seven-passenger automobile for singing class.
6. Friends to write Orphanage in their wills.
7. Thanksgiving observed in every church and Sunday school.

* * * *

I am taking the liberty of publishing a personal letter from one of our good friends. This letter expresses what many have told me before. I want to request that all read it because it shows the high esteem in which the Orphanage is held by those who have an intimate knowledge of its workings.

* * * *

"Just a few lines to express to you our appreciation of having the children with us last Sunday morning and present to us their splendid entertainment.

I have heard nothing but words of praise of them and their concert. I have heard many compliments paid the children and Mrs. Rives from both Methodists and all of the other denominations of our town.

As a Methodist I feel like this visit will prove a blessing to our church and Sunday school. It shows to the members just what is being done at our orphanage."

* * * *

In order to meet our current expenses and provide large sums to carry out our proposed building program we want a Thanksgiving offering from every church and Sunday school in the North Carolina conference. To accomplish this worthy purpose I believe every pastor and Sunday school superintendent will not only give us their approval, but whole-hearted co-operation. For the manifold blessings of Almighty God upon us as a people, we shall be glad to express our gratitude to Him in a great offering during the Thanksgiving season. To make this undertaking a glowing success we must begin to make our plans in the near future. Our Baptists accomplish wonders for their orphanage at Thanksgiving. Shall our Methodists do less for their orphanage? Let us rise to the occasion this year and beat the Baptists as we did in the Advocate campaign!

The investment that the North Carolina conference is making in our Methodist Orphanage must be pleasing to the Head of the church. From our Orphanage is flowing a stream of young life that is destined to bless and enrich the life of our people. A number of the boys trained in our Home will be preachers of the Word, leaders in the church and prominent in the business and professional world; while many of our girls will become missionaries, deaconesses, teachers, nurses and home builders.

Do such results justify the outlay of thousands of dollars annually? The church of God cannot engage in a grander work, and from no other source does there come such a rich harvest of young, consecrated life. In rendering this Christian service, the church is training many of its future leaders who will repay us many times for all that we have invested in the lives of these precious children. When we see the real facts in this light, then we shall appreciate the worth and meaning of our beloved Methodist Orphanage. In view of these facts we can clearly see that our Orphanage is not a liability but a rich asset.

In the forward look of God's plan of Salvation his Son always held a central position; for he was the appointed Savior. "God so loved the world, that he gave his begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Those words referred to an eternal purpose of God, and to its expression in an eternal Gift, which was manifested in the fullness of time. So it was almost every great declaration that God has made concerning salvation. He has fully recognized the sonship of Jesus Christ. Frequently he has given that truth particular emphasis.—Religious Telescope.

Overdose.

A sad looking woman of mature years appeared on the street pushing a baby carriage, in which was a fine, healthy infant, howling lustily. A friend approached.

"Why, Mrs. Lufkins!" she ejaculated. "What a darling baby! But you haven't any children. Whose is it?" "You're wrong, my dear," replied the sad-faced one. "This is my husband. He went too far with the gland cure."—American Legion Weekly.

Action of the General Sunday School Board as to Increasing the Sunday School Enrollment

The Board gave its approval to the following suggestion relating to the building up of an increased enrollment in our Sunday schools:

1. That on Promotion and Training Day special emphasis should be given to the strengthening of the school organization with a view to being ready to receive new members in the succeeding weeks.
2. That Rally Day be devoted especially to the enlistment and quickening of the Sunday school membership.
3. The following Rally Day special effort should be made to increase the enrollment of the Sunday schools through carefully directed plans.
4. That in all plans for securing new members high-pressure contests and spasmodic efforts which merely look toward numbers as an end rather than as a beginning should be avoided, and that in plans for such gatherings care should be given to the assimilation of new members into vital relations with the class and Sunday school work and also to any needed follow-up work for holding new members.
5. That the following practical helps may very well be included in a constructive membership campaign:
  - (1) A religious census urged in every community for the purpose of securing definite information.
  - (2) The distribution of leaflet literature setting forth facts and giving suggestions as to procedure.
  - (3) The fixing of approximate dates for the special campaign to close, such as January 1.
  - (4) Connecting the campaign consciously with the evangelistic effort to follow during the early months of 1924.

Multitudes of children and youth are without religious training. Let us seek them out and bring them in and win them for Christ.

"We cannot save the people unless we teach them, and we cannot teach them unless we reach them."

The Call of the Conference Claimants

Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

OPEN LETTER TO THE CHURCH CONCERNING A VITAL MATTER

Dear Brethren: When the contents of this letter come to your attention, the annual conferences will have begun their meetings for the fall of 1923. The general conference provided that the cause of superannuate endowment should have right of way for presentation at these meetings. The directing committee of the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment has arranged a schedule for the presentation of the plan of the movement at every annual conference. I expect personally to visit twenty-six of the thirty-eight annual conferences to be held in the homeland, and at the other twelve I shall have strong representatives to take care of our work. In order that our plan may be properly presented, this open letter is given to the church, calling attention to some things that are of supreme importance in connection with our presentation of the plan, as follows:

An Appeal to the Bishops.—It is commonly known among us that the bishop of an annual conference is in position to do effective service in behalf of any subject presented under his presidency for the consideration of the body. All of our bishops, as far as I have been able to observe, try to give due consideration to the presentation of any matter having a place in the crowded program of the annual conference. Therefore it can be expected that every bishop will be thoughtful and considerate of the superannuate cause when its representatives appear. However, in the light of the fact that the plan of the special effort for the worn-out preachers is one that rests its hope of success entirely with the church's regular organized forces without any supplementary organization whatever, am I presuming too much when I request our bishops to give through their presidency of the annual conferences unusual attention and direction to the superannuate program? Since this special effort comes after the church has been strongly in the grip of two other great financial movements, wherein the first and choice strength of all of us was wholly consecrated for the success of those movements, I believe that our bishops will find a hearty response in the hearts of all of our people if they will give special attention to a forceful presentation of the plan looking to provide an old-age comfort for the worn-out servants of the church.

An Appeal to the Presiding Elders.—The church has approximately three hundred presiding elders. They are always busy, but at the meeting of the annual conference they work under a strain from start to finish. The temptation of a presiding elder to leave the conference room to get a drink of water when some connectional cause is about to be presented is one that is difficult to resist. How do I know? Well, you see, I have been a presiding elder. Now, my dear brothers, may I urge you to get that drink of water this year before you come to conference? When the secretary of the Board of Finance or any of his representatives stands before the annual conference this fall to plead the cause of superannuate endowment, it is desired that every man who has been a presiding elder for the conference year 1922-23 and every man who might be a presiding elder for the conference year 1923-24 will take his place on the front pew (or all the pews) and listen intently to every word spoken on his subject. We are depending on these three hundred leaders of the districts of the whole church to accept much of the responsibility for the success of the special effort for superannuate endowment in their respective districts. No man can successfully guide a movement unless he knows the plan of it in detail. The only chance that the presiding elders will have to come into a thorough knowledge of the special effort plan as explained by those who know it will be at the annual conferences this fall. I am not preaching but pleading. I am not pleading for myself but for the old-age comfort of my preacher brothers. By the way, let me remind you that superannuation often comes to those who have been presiding elders. Remember, brothers mine, to be on the front seat bright and happy-faced, interested, expectant, and eager to go—not needing a drink of water.

An Appeal to Pastors.—Now I am getting into my class, for I have done everything, everywhere, any time that any of you pastors have done. My first appointment as a supply pastor was to a hole in the ground. It had been an underground ice house, and it was donated (as a joke) for a church lot. Bishop W. F. McMurry, then presiding elder, appointed me as a supply pastor to nothing but this hole in the ground and the infidel. I have ridden the hard circuit and caught malarial fever; have served the half station, the small station, and other stations. No pastor has had a burden that I have not felt, a disappointment that has not stung me, or been poorer than I in this world's goods. Boys, I am one of you. I know your habits, too, especially at annual conference time. It is so much easier to stand under the big shade trees on the lawn talking in groups than it is to swelter inside the church listening to long speeches that are sometimes dull. But hear me. I am going to your annual conference this fall, or some one else whom I shall send, to talk to you about the time when you will go up to annual conference for an appointment and get the superannuated relation instead. I want to present to you a plan that will make provision for your comfortable living after that dreadful day. If you stand on the lawn under the shade trees, lay out on me while I am trying to get something started for the benefit of yourself, wife, and maybe an invalid son or daughter, you are a different sort of man than I have taken you to be. Come along to annual conference, every one of you, and come with the determination to get everything that is said concerning the plan for adequate superannuate endowment. Then go away from conference with the avowed purpose to carry through so far as you are concerned. There are about sixty-five hundred pastors in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and all of you are marking time for the day of superannuation, not knowing just when it will come. Some of you will enter the list this fall, and some will barely squeeze by. Come on to conference, men, and let us put our heads and shoulders together for a supreme effort in behalf of the most sacred cause that was ever brought to the attention of Southern Methodism.

An Appeal to the Lay Members.—I have been a layman, too. I was reared on the farm, plowed corn and shocked it, sowed wheat and reaped and threshed it, worked in the oat fields and hay fields, set out tobacco on the hillsides and later cured it in the barns, worked with cattle, hogs, etc., and know how a farmer feels when his interest is due on the mortgage and three months to go before the crop can be sold. My brothers and sisters, they have been telling me that you are ready to make proper provision for the superannuates when the church gives you the chance. Thank the good Lord, the church has voted you the chance! At the annual conference held this fall there will be present representatives of the Board of Finance to tell you all about the plan. I do hope that many of you will attend conference so that you may hear all about it and that, having heard, you will go back to your homes and get behind the movement with the same determination that you handle your personal business affairs. There is a class of worn-out people in our church that we have been calling by the name the "forgotten man." I do not like the name and am anxious to change it. To make the change will cost the church ten million dollars, to be used as superannuate endowment. But the reproach upon us for forgetting our worn-out preachers and widows of preachers is so great that we can well afford to raise the ten million dollars to get rid of the ugly name. I want to see the lay members at the annual conferences this fall, and I trust they will receive the plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment with great enthusiasm. For more than twenty years the church has been promising to do something extraordinary for her superannuates, but nothing much has been done. Now we have come to a time when the church authorities give liberty to proceed with a real program. What a shameful disgrace it will be if we fail to use this chance to the best advantage! Therefore I appeal to the lay members of the annual conferences to attend the meetings of these bodies this fall and come with the avowed purpose to give the representatives of the "forgotten man" rapt attention. Faithfully yours, Luther E. Todd, Sec.

Your Children Should Have the Advantages of Music!

MUSIC is an inspiration, an education to children. It teaches them self-expression; it helps them to appreciate the better and more beautiful things of life, and it gives them an accomplishment that will bring both them and you a great deal of pleasure in later years.

The Weaver piano is a true companion to the growing girl and boy. It makes possible many happy evenings for you all—evenings spent listening to your children play—or playing for them while they sing.

There is a remarkable richness of tone about the Weaver that you will like the minute you hear it. Its action is easy and responsive. It is beautiful in design and finish. Any one who knows anything about piano mechanism will tell you that the Weaver piano is as nearly perfect as it is possible to make a piano.

You can have the Weaver in your home. Only a small outlay down is necessary and the Weaver is yours, to enjoy the whole time you're paying for it. The terms are purposely made easy. These terms will buy a Weaver upright, grand or player piano. Write us to-day for further information.

A HURRY CALL

Good morning, Mr. Doctor Man.
I'm coming to you quick,
Because I'm so dreadful 'fraid
My dollies will get sick.
Ruth's doll has got the fever,
An' Flossie's has the mumps,
An' Stella's has the hookin' cough,
An' Beth's some awful bumps.
Clarissa's has a broken leg,
An' Faye's has lost one eye.
An' Susie's has some chicken pox
And measles, too—O my!
So hurry, Mr. Doctor Man,
An' blaccinate my two;
For if these dreadful things should spread,
Whatever should I do?

—Picture World.

THE STORY OF A DONKEY

John had one habit. He would cry, long and loud, when things did not go to suit him. It distressed father and mother, for John was four years old, and they wanted him to be a man and not a cry-baby. They had talked to him about it many times, but still John cried.

One day something went wrong, and John began to cry. Aunt Helen went over to John's blackboard and picked up a piece of chalk. John saw her through his tears but went on crying.

"Once," Aunt Helen began, "there was a boy whose name began with J." John heard her, but he only cried louder.

"Sometimes," Aunt Helen said, "he smiled; sometimes he looked cross; and some other times he opened his mouth wide and cried loud, like a baby, even though he was four years old."

John was not crying now. He was standing close beside Aunt Helen, watching her, but Aunt Helen didn't turn round to look at him. She just went on talking.

"This boy's name began with J. but it wasn't John. Oh, no! His name was Joey. Joey lived in the country, where they had horses, and cows, and pigs, and chickens, and almost everything except ponies; and Joey did wish he had a pony!

"One day a man came to Joey's home with something to sell. 'Oh, father!' Joey said, 'it is a pony.' It did look a bit like a pony, but it was not one. It was a dear little gray shaggy donkey, with long, floppy ears, and the kindest eyes you ever saw.

"'He's four years old,' the man said.

"Does he cry?" Joey's father asked.

"The man looked puzzled, first at Joey's father and then at Joey. 'Oh!' he said, and then he laughed. 'I don't think he knows how, but I guess he could learn.'

"'Oh, but we don't want him to learn, do we Joey?' asked Joey's father; and Joey said, 'No, sir.'

"Well,' the man said, 'if he doesn't ever hear anybody cry, maybe he won't learn how.'

"Joey's father bought the donkey, and Joey was so happy he felt as if he would never, never cry again.

"In a few days he and the donkey were very good friends. The donkey's name was Jerry. Every morning Jerry would come up to the side door and wait for Joey to come out and ride him and play with him.

"But one morning something went wrong at breakfast, and Joey cried. He cried loud, and he didn't want to stop; but all at once he heard a noise. It was louder than his crying, and it was out of doors. Joey had to stop crying and listen.

"E-aw, E-aw, E-aw-aw!' he heard.

"Joey's father got up from the breakfast table, and looked out of the door.

"'Oh, dear! oh, dear!' he said. 'It's Jerry. Now he's learned to cry! A crying boy and a crying donkey—that's too much! We can't keep them both. We have to keep the boy, so we'll have to get rid of the donkey.'

"'Oh, father, father! please don't,' Joey begged, and he was starting to cry again, but remembered just in time. 'Truly, father, I won't be a crying boy and then we can keep Jerry, can't we? And, father, maybe if I don't cry any more Jerry won't either.'

"Father promised to give them a trial, and Joey really did try not to be a cry-baby any more, and when you try real hard you can always do a thing, can't you, John?"

But John only answered, "Please tell me that again, auntie."—Caroline Kellogg, in Herald and Presbyter.

THE LEGEND OF SAINT CHRISTOPHER

There once lived in a far-away land a great giant, Offero by name. It was said that he could swim through mighty torrents, that he could pull forest trees up by their roots, that he could travel for miles through burning sands or over snow-covered mountains, and not grow weary.

One day the mighty Offero left his home and started out in search of one whom he might serve. "For," said he, "I want for my master the mightiest man in all the world."

He traveled for days until finally he came to a walled city, where he had heard there ruled a great king. When the monarch saw the giant approaching he greeted him gladly, for he saw his strong shoulders and his mighty arms, and he knew that he would be a faithful servant.

"I will make you a leader in my army," said the king. "Go forth and fight my enemies and win great victories for your master."

Offero fought hard and overcame the enemies of the king. When he returned to the palace he received great glory and honor. As he came into the presence of the king, the mighty monarch arose and said, "You have fought well, Offero. I shall make you the head of my armies, for with you in command I shall never fear any foe."

"Not even Satan?" asked a courtier standing by. But at the mention of Satan, the monarch's face grew pale, for he feared Satan above all other foes.

"Why do you fear Satan, O King?" asked Offero. "Is he mightier than yourself? I will leave you, then, for I would serve the strongest master in the world." Soon Offero left the presence of the king and was on his way in search of Satan, that he might serve him.

Almost before he knew it, Offero found the mighty Satan, who was glad to have the great giant for one of his servants. As before, Offero served his master well, traveling far and wide on his evil errands. Satan was greatly pleased at the work of Offero and one day he said, "With you to serve me, O mighty Offero, I no longer fear the Christ."

"The Christ?" cried Offero. "Do you fear the Christ? Why do you fear him? Is he more powerful than yourself?"

"O yes, Offero," answered Satan, "though I have always been his enemy, I have never succeeded in conquering him. I fear him more than the whole world."

"I will leave you then, as I left the mighty monarch," said Offero in disgust to Satan, "for I could not serve a coward. Let me find the Christ, whom even you fear. Him only shall I serve."

Over raging torrents and burning deserts traveled the mighty Offero. In strange lands he wandered for many months and in different cities all over the world he searched for the Christ whom he would serve, but nowhere could he find him.

He had grown weary of his quest, so he decided to build himself a hut beside a raging river, and there he lived, with still a longing in his heart to find the Christ that he might serve him. But he was not idle, nor was his great strength wasted, for he was so strong that he could carry the people on his back as he swam across the river from one side to the other. He was always ready to help the weary travelers across, not matter how fierce the storm, or how dark the night.

One night as Offero was just about to go to bed, he heard a faint voice outside his window. A terrible storm was raging. The wind was roaring through the trees of the forest and the great waves of the river beat against the shore. "Offero, Offero." Again sounded the voice, this time a little stronger, "Offero, Offero, won't you come and carry me across the river?"

Quick as a flash Offero was up and out of his hut, carrying his lantern in his hand, but he could find no hope. He searched the bank, and there, to his surprise, he saw a little child, all cold and wet.

Easily he lifted the small figure of the child to his strong shoulder, and with the help of a staff made his way through the rushing water. At first it was easy, but it seemed to Offero as the wind blew harder and as the rain beat against his face, and as the waters churned about his feet, that the child grew heavier and heavier. He thought that he would never reach the other shore. Bravely he fought against the waves, but even then he could hardly gain headway. The child kept growing heavier and heavier, and his arms were so tightly clasped about Offero's neck that he could scarcely breathe. At last he reached the shore and caught hold of the rocks and grass that he might pull himself out of the water. He was so exhausted that he hardly had strength to stand erect on the river's bank and set his burden down. But then he heard a voice saying, "Offero, you have served me well. From now on you shall be called Christophero, which means Christ-bearer, for in serving me you are helping to carry the burdens of the whole world."

And in the place of the little child, Offero saw the shining figure of the Christ, whom he had sought and found in deeds of service.—From "Knights of Service," Abingdon Press Religious Education Texts.

It was a Pike county woman who indited a note to the teacher concerning the punishment of her young hopeful. The note ran thus:

"Dear Miss —: You rite me about whippin' Sammy. I hereby give you permission to beat him up any time it is necessary to learn his lesson. He is just like his father—you have to learn him with a club. Pound nolege into him. I want him to get it and don't pay no attention to what his father says—I'll handle him."—Reading Eagle.

To a colored convert a Southern clergyman said: "Supposing you were walking along the road and saw a low-hanging branch and on that branch was a nice, fat chicken, what would you do?"

"Please don't ask dat question, boss," begged the convert.

"Oh, yes, tell me what you would do."

"Well, boss, you know I's only an infant in de kingdom," was the significant reply.—Boston Transcript.

family who ever served Mt. Airy remembers with affection, arose and read an original poem "To the Bride," following with very appropriate and touching remarks. She then presented us with a small package, attractively wrapped, containing fifty new silver dollars. "Mother Paddison's" tender words and the gift were received with broken remarks, punctuated with laughter and with tears in which everybody present "took part."

This is but an inadequate acknowledgement, here recorded, of a beautiful kindness fittingly expressed by friends we had loved long and well.

MRS. ELIZABETH LEDWELL

The Woman's Missionary Society of Calvary Methodist church, Charlotte, at its August meeting paid loving tribute to the memory of one of its members, Mrs. Elizabeth Ledwell, who passed away July 22, 1923.

Grandma Ledwell, as she was affectionately called by many, had lived long and well, being seventy-five years of age, and a lifelong member of Calvary church, having joined when a girl in a temporary place of worship before a church was built.

Mrs. Ledwell was a consistent Christian who attended all services of the church and missionary society when in good health, and was ever interested in the progress of her church.

We shall miss her greatly, but as we know "He doeth all things well," we resolve:

First, That we bow in humble submission to the good all Father who cares for us here below.

Second, That remembering her life while here with us shall strengthen our new church building at Waynesville. It is going to be a thing of beauty. The nearer it gets to completion the more one is impressed with it. Rev. G. D. Herman, the pastor, has labored during the past four years steadily and constructively till now after the usual setbacks to a big undertaking he is able to rejoice with his membership in the construction of one of the most modern plants in our conference.

I noted another thing connected with our Waynesville congregation that was very pleasing. A cottage was built down at Lake Junaluska for the Epworth Leaguers to use in their attendance upon the Epworth League Training School and other conferences held during the summer at the Lake.
During the League Training School there were thirty splendid young people from our church at Waynesville taking work there. I know of no finer investment than for a church to send a group of its promising young people to Lake Junaluska, where they may grow like Jesus grew—"In wisdom and in stature, and in favor with God and Man."

NEXT TERM OPENS SEPTEMBER 4TH

Rutherford College offers four years accredited High School work, and two years of College work.

These are some of the interesting considerations:

1. Modern equipment.
2. An efficient faculty.
3. The breezy and healthful location.
4. Modest expenses (from $150 to $200).
5. The unusually purposeful and religious students in attendance—fifty-five of whom last year were ministerial students, twenty-two volunteer workers, twenty-two members of the evangelistic singing class.
6. The very earnest disposition on the part of the management of the school to raise the standard of scholarship to the highest possible attainment.

Other information will be gladly furnished on request.

IN MEMORIAM

STONE—Miss Grace Dowd was born near Carabonton in the year 1900 and quietly fell on sleep at her home in Sanford August 4, 1923.

RICE—Nancy Jane Rice, wife of J. Bun Rice, died August 7, 1923, aged 67 years. She was converted at 15 and joined Bethlehem Methodist church, Bladen circuit, and remained a member till her death.

GURLEY—On August 15th death again invaded the ranks of Princeton Methodism, this time taking Agnes, the daughter of Mrs. Georgeanna Gurley. Agnes was in her nineteenth year. She graduated from the high school last spring and was held in high esteem by her classmates.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Since it has been the will of our heavenly Father to call from a life service our brother, Mr. J. L. Friddle, be it resolved:

First, That we, the members of the board of stewards of the Walnut Street Methodist church, bow in humble submission to the will of God.

Second, That we strive to follow his Christian example by being as willing to serve in any field of the Lord's work as he was.

Third, That while we miss him, we rejoice in the hope that it is well with him, and that his reward is that of the faithful servant of God.

Fourth, That we extend our sympathy and love to the bereaved family in their loss of such a Christian husband and father.

Fifth, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the bereaved family. Board of Stewards.

DRYMAN—Julia Killian Dryman was born near Brevard, N. C., April 16, 1848. Early in life she professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Mother had been a long, patient sufferer. Until a few months ago she had hoped to get well. But it was not so ordered. So serious had been her condition that a constant loving vigil had been kept for more than seven months. Many times she seemed to come to the border of the Great Divide only to come back to resume her great suffering with Christian fortitude.

Wash the Poisons of RHEUMATISM

SCIATICA, NEURALGIA AND URIC ACID

Out of Your System With Shivar Spring Mineral Water.

The Guarantee.

Think of it! A mineral water of such wonderful blood-cleansing power that it is actually shipped to every state in the Union and even to foreign lands under a positive guarantee that the price will be refunded, should the user report no benefit.

Shivar Mineral Water is unquestionably the greatest of all American mineral spring waters and there are thousands who contend that it is the best mineral water in all the world.

In Rheumatism and in other forms of auto-intoxication such as Sciatica, Neuralgia, Chronic Headache and Uric Acid Diathesis, Shivar Mineral Water has succeeded where every known medicine had failed. Physicians attribute this to its peculiar power of dissolving and completely washing out of the system the leucomaines, or body poisons that cause these diseases.

Delightful to drink, wonderful in its blood-cleansing power, Shivar Spring Water may be shipped any distance, at any season, without losing its virtues in the slightest.

Though a thousand miles away, you may use it in your home with identically the same results, as if you drank it at the Spring.

ried her into that eternal day where no night is. She has no wasting disease, for she is in the presence of the God of all the earth where, unhampered by physical ties, she lives, praises and works for her Lord and Saviour. Heaven is no strange place to us now for mother is there.

Mother was the last of a long-lived family. She was a staunch Methodist in her convictions. May her sons ever live worthily of the rich heritage she has left us. She was buried in Flatts Methodist church cemetery August, 18. Her Son.

POWELL—On August 1, 1923, a beautiful little girl came to brighten the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luincie Powell of Mill Spring, N. C., Route 1, and they call her Mary Eliza Powell. She at once became the idol of their hearts, but she was sent for only a short mission, for on August 24, 1923, God touched her and she slept. Surely it is an inestimable blessing to have been the parent of a child that has the stamp of heaven upon its brow, to hold it in one's arms, to minister to it, and then to give it back to God at His call, with the thought that in heaven as upon earth upon earth it is still our child.

As things of great value always cost, it is worth all the sorrow to have known this holy affection and to have this treasure in heaven. So grieve not, fond parents, for you know little Mary is "Safe in the arms of Jesus, Safe on His gentle breast, There by His love o'er-ruled, Sweetly her soul shall be bound, And may this link bind you to the Saviour every day." MASHBURN—Martha Jane Mashburn of Cullasaja, N. C., passed to her reward on July 10, 1923, being in the forty-fifth year of her age. She professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist church when in childhood and lived a faithful Christian life till death. The husband, eight children, mother, three sisters and four brothers survive. One of the brothers is a Methodist preacher, who is now at Hot Springs charge in the Asheville district.

The funeral services were held by the writer. R. E. Ward, Pastor.

BAUM—Miss Sarah Baum was born February 15, 1881, and died in Raleigh, N. C., July 28, 1923. She joined the Methodist church in Wanchese, N. C., (which was her native home) at an early age, and as long as she was physically able to attend the church and Sunday school I have never seen a more faithful Christian worker—always ready and willing to do whatever she could to promote the Master's cause. She leaves four brothers and one sister to mourn the loss of their consecrated sister, besides a host of friends and relatives. She was much loved by all who knew her. She has gone from our midst but not forgotten. Like the setting sun leaves a brightness in the sky, so the life of this Christian friend and sister will continue to linger with us. And may we all be made better and more faithful to God by her devoted life. A. W. Price.

Walter Hines Page, A Noble World Citizen

By George Cleaton Wilding

When I was about to begin this sketch I had in mind some such title as this: A Great Southerner. And that would be perfectly true, and, in a sense, quite fitting, for that balmy southland gave him birth, boyhood and burial. I stopped a moment and said to myself, "No, he is too big for such a sectional title as that." Then I was about to make it A Great American. I looked at that for a little time and, while it was strictly true, I concluded that even that splendid label did not quite measure up to the full stature of the great-souled man that I had in my mind's eye. So at last I concluded that nothing short of the title which I have flung to the breeze at the head of this paper would do him full justice. His great and generous life richly merited even this.

The life of this unique character stretched over two of the greatest wars in history. As a boy he had a vivid recollection of the Civil War in his own beloved South, and later an intimate knowledge of that dreadful European war that shook civilization.

The ancestor of the North Carolina Pages was a Lewis Page, who in the latter part of the eighteenth century left the original home in Virginia and started life anew in what was then regarded as the less civilized country to the south. One of the explanations given for this change was that his growing interest in the rising tide of Methodism had made him uncongenial to his church of England relatives. It also is safe to affirm that he had a strong desire to build up a new home in the wilderness, and this tendency lives in his descendants.

His son, Anderson Page, went farther south and acquired a plantation of about a thousand acres near Raleigh, North Carolina. He prospered and sent several of his sons to college, but one son, Allison Francis Page, was not so highly favored. One of these sons became a Methodist preacher, and the others went into professional and political life. But Allison, a giant in size, went to felling pine trees, logging in Cape Fear river, and driving an active lumber business. He was a brave, determined, rather dominating character, deeply abstemious and religious, a peculiar mixture of the Old Testament prophet and the frontiersman. He was the sturdy father of Walter Page, who dedicated one of his books, "The Rebuilding of Old Commonwealths," to this rugged father—"To the honored memory of my father, whose work as work built up the commonwealth." Indeed Frank Page, the name by which he was generally known, spent his whole life in these constructive labors. He founded two towns in North Carolina, Cary and Aberdeen. In the city of Raleigh he constructed hotels and other buildings. His restless spirit opened up Moore county, which includes the Pinehurst region; he scattered his logging camps and his sawmills all over that country; and he constructed a railroad through the pine woods that made him a rich man.

Although not especially versed in the learning of the schools he had a mind that was keen and far-reaching. He was a pioneer in politics as he was in the practical concerns of life. Although he was the son of slave-holding ancestors, and even owned slaves himself, he was not a believer in slavery. He loved the United States of America, not merely Moore county or North Carolina. He was a Whig, did not favor the extension of slavery, and did not regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as a sufficient provocation for the secession of the Southern States.

Walter inherited these rugged qualities of his heroic father, but he had some qualities which the father did not possess—an enthusiasm for literature and learning, and a love of the beautiful in nature and art—above all a gentleness of temperament and manner. These qualities came into his being from his cultured, gentle mother. On his father's side Page was undiluted English; on his mother's he was French and English. Her father was a Huguenot refugee, John Samuel Rabsteau, and her mother was of the English Barelay family. His great-grandmother Barclay kept a tavern, "The Half Way House," midway between Fayetteville and Raleigh. She was a staunch secessionist and had her front gate painted so as to represent the Confederate flag.

Walter's mother inherited some of the positive traits of her grandmother, but in a much subdued form. As a mature woman she was undemonstrative and soft-spoken; a Methodist of the old fashioned Wesleyan type. She dressed with a Quaker-like simplicity, her brown hair brushed flatly down upon a finely-shaped head, and her garments destitute of ruffles and ornamentations. The home which she directed was a home without card playing, smoking, dancing, wine-bibbing or other worldly frivolities; yet the memories of her presence which Catherine Page has left are not at all austere. Duty and morals ranked high with her and were instilled into the minds of her children. Yet she had a quiet sense of humor and a gentle love of fun. She had a real fondness for books, and Walter remembered her best as sitting with a book in her hand. And the books she read were always substantial ones. She was young when he was born and she played with him like a girl. She would go with him for long walks in the woods, sometimes spending the entire day, fishing along the brooks, hunting wild flowers, now and then pausing while his mother read to him from Scott and Dickens. These experiences he never forgot. As long as he lived this bond of companionship between them existed and he never tired of writing her about his adventures out in the busy world. He always wrote her a long and affectionate letter at Christmas time.

Such were the father and mother of Walter Page. They were married in 1849 and Walter, the third child, was born in 1855, in the small village of Cary—named by his father for a famous temperance orator of that time. When he was a lad of ten he saw Sherman's army march by their house, camping in their yard and house, wrecking things generally. This scene made a vivid impression upon his boyish mind.

AN UTTERANCE OF THE HEART

Eight and a half years ago a baby was born in our parsonage home. We named her Mary. That was the name of the mother of our Lord. It was, also, the name of one of her grandmothers. Under the constant ministry of the woman who gave her birth, the baby, like a choice and tender plant, grew in the sunshine of a mother's love. Of heaven's own blue were her big, dreamy eyes and in due time ringlets of gold clustered in rich profusion about her baby head. How dearly we loved her.

The coming of little Mary, as if by some sacred magic, brought into the lives of the parents a strange enchantment. Her presence gilded and glorified the home, and all life was touched with a new significance. The present was full of laughter and song and the joy bells were ringing down the years. For the day's work there was a fresh inspiration and a new urge to the footsteps returning home.

The parents with increasing interest and added joys watched her grow. To romp in childish glee with other little children and to hear such nursery stories as "Peter Rabbit" and "Cinderilla's Slipper" filled her little heart with delight. At an early age her toddling feet ran after the wild flowers, for Mary adored everything that is beautiful. Pansies and pink roses were among her favorite flowers.

And this little lover of beautiful things seemed to love everybody. With a father's partiality I have noted how the people who knew Mary loved her. The people of Lexington, where the child was born, the people of Wadesboro, where she spent the second and third years of her life, the people of Greensboro, where she lived almost six years, and her friends elsewhere, had all in great numbers enshrined the child in their heart of hearts. And her teachers in school had for her only words of praise.

But little Mary has been taken away. In this unspeakable hour billows of sorrow have gone over me. I am helpless and bewildered. Words of consolation that in sunny hours had appeared adequate for human needs are now no more than bubbles on an angry tide. Opinions hoary with age went down with a crash when Mary died, and even the pillars and palaces of our faith seemed ready to fall.

Out of these depths I cried unto the Lord. It was no audible voice. For speech and language had failed utterly. The cry was only the mute appeal of a broken heart. But the Father understands.

I have learned, also, that human sympathy can penetrate these depths. Those who have walked the pathway of grief know how to fathom the depths of suffering and beg to sit in silence and weep with the broken-hearted. The human heart tutored by the Man of Sorrows is wondrous kind.

Yet with all that Divine grace and human sympathy can offer life will not be as it has been. Some losses cannot be restored. But the mother and father dazed and blinded will be led by the hand of their child who is on the other side. Because Mary loved birds and flowers, they will have a deeper interest in these. Her love of books shall be to them in the sphere of knowledge a perpetual inspiration. Her devotion as a little child to the church calls for a whole-hearted service and the memory of her dear presence in the home, where the vacancy now appears unbearable, will be cherished as a rich heritage of the days that are no more.

ORATORICAL BOMBARDMENT

The old Trinity College building in Randolph county has been condemned because one wall is out of plumb and on account of other defects. This historic old structure, according to reports, cannot be used till present defects are remedied.

The men who attended Trinity College in other years at the old place will regret to learn that one of those strong walls is out of plumb, but will hardly be surprised when they recall the long and repeated oratorical bombardments hurled against those old walls in the by-gone years. Back in those days every student was an orator or made a violent attempt to become one. The preparation for the commencement speeches began at least a month beforehand and continued with increasing intensity up to the date for the final class contest. During these weeks the practice continued the whole night in the old college chapel. Those boys who could not get space on the rostrum in the first part of the night arose at the midnight hour—sometimes clad only in the night wind—and proceeded to turn their oratorical hammers upon the college walls and upon village sleepers. For years the old chapel walls encountered these long and annually repeated attacks without showing signs of surrender. But after more than thirty years the effects of those wordy bombardments have been published to the world. But Trinity College turned out orators in those days, even if college walls were made to totter.

A MODERN PROPHET

Dr. Zaring, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, has entered the role of prophecy. He dips into the future and then reports in his paper some of the things he sees fifty years hence. His latest reads as follows:

"Bishop Brown, who last fall returned to active work in his conference after eight years of splendid service in episcopal capacity, becomes pastor of our chief church in Atlanta. He goes back to the ranks with honor and distinction and is besought on every hand to aid in local causes. He prefers, however, to resume the pastorate where by reason of his extensive episcopal experience he will be able to serve the church in largest measure."

A little while ago he reported the transfer of pastors from cities in the North to churches in Atlanta and New Orleans, and likewise the transfer of pastors from the South to the North. Evidently Dr. Zaring expects a united Methodism, as well as a time limit to the episcopacy.

THE COUNTRY CHURCH

The Observer was making brief discourse a few days ago about the necessity for better support for the country churches. The impressive fact is brought out by the Social Service Commission of the Congregational Churches that "protestantism is 70 per cent rural in the United States." The prevailing condition of the country churches might seem to indicate that they are 50 per cent neglected. The country is the most important factor in the religious development of our national life. The condition in the country is impressively stated: No religious leadership exists in many country communities. A poor grade of ministry and a scheme of religious education wholly out of harmony and out of touch with modern conditions is overrunning whole regions. For rehabilitation of the country town there is needed a vital church with a sane gospel, a definite program for rural problems, a knowledge of the social factors to be encountered, and a program of community building is positively essential if the moral and the religious life of the country is to be conserved.

But what the rural church needs more than anything else is money. They are being handed too many stones in the shape of advice, than fostering support in the shape of money. Poor salaries mean "a poor grade of ministry." The country people are going to church these days in automobiles, while they depend on some other fellow to give the preacher a lift, or let him hoof it. Rejuvenation of the country churches is one of the pressing necessities of the day, but talk without money is never going to accomplish the end desired.—Charlotte Observer.

The Observer is correct in its diagnosis of the needs of the Methodist church, we are sure. As to protestantism we are not able to speak. But we are led to believe that Brother Harris has given a fair appraisal of the situation throughout the church, and there is need of a revival along this line.

OFF TO CONFERENCE

One month from now the preachers of the Western North Carolina conference will be packing their grips for the annual conference in Winston-Salem. Four weeks later the preachers of the North Carolina conference will be making ready for a like trip to Elizabeth City.

The assembling of the two annual conferences in North Carolina shortly after the close of the summer vacations should impress upon pastors and churches the great importance of plunging into the year's work immediately after the close of the annual conference and thereby make the fall and winter months count big in the work of the year.

Those who observed this important rule at the beginning of the present year are now doubtless in a position to close the year's work with ease and satisfaction. All who loitered in the outset will now find the annual tug tremendous.

But there is nothing to do but face the music and make the few remaining days count to the limit. Much can yet be done to save the day and bring up a creditable report if every one concerned will do his best.

Usually before conference there is great anxiety on the part of some pastors about their appointments for next year, and some churches are busy picking out preachers who will in their judgment beforehand meet every demand of the situation that to them seems peculiar and doubtless is because of the peculiar people who make up the congregation. All of this may be proper in its place, but in our judgment more good would accrue if such pastors and congregations would first finish up this present year's work in first class shape and then, if necessary, worry about next year's appointment. Oftentimes a good finish of the present year aids materially in the appointment of the year just ahead. All together for a great finish!

BENEFACTIONS OF ANGIER B. DUKE

Angier B. Duke, who was drowned Labor Day at Greenwich, Conn., has for a number of years lived in New York, but his bequests to public institutions come to North Carolina. The largest gift is $250,000 to Trinity College.

Other bequests included Memorial Methodist church, Durham, N. C., $20,000; Methodist orphanage for white children at Raleigh, N. C., $20,000; Methodist orphanage for white children at Winston-Salem, N. C., $5,000; Oxford orphan asylum for negro children at Oxford, N. C., $1,000; national religious training school at Durham, N. C., $1,000.

With all their success in business which carried them to the nation's metropolis the Dukes, like Walter Hines Page, the world citizen, of whom there is an admirable sketch in this issue of the Advocate, has remained loyal to the state of their nativity. Such examples of devotion to North Carolina are worthy of all commendation by the entire citizenship of the state.

AN ENTIRE COUNTY IN A REVIVAL CAMPAIGN

Beginning next Sunday, September 16, all the churches of Gaston county will begin evangelistic services. Preparations for this campaign have been under way all the summer. Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist and other churches are lined up for the task. This is a new venture in religious circles in North Carolina and the result will be watched with interest. We are looking for large results.

Seventeen Methodist churches will enter into this series of meetings, and the following reported evangelists secured: Main Street Methodist, Gastonia, Rev. W. A. Lambeth, pastor, Dr. Luther Bridges, Gainesville, Ga., evangelist; Trinity, Rev. W. M. Heckard, pastor, Mrs. C. F. Steidley, evangelist; Cherryville, Rev. J. F. Moser, pastor, Rev. J. W. Ingle, evangelist; Stanley, Rev. Albert Sherrill, pastor, Rev. J. A. Forbes, evangelist; High Shoals, Rev. A. S. Raper, pastor, does the preaching; Mt. Holly, Rev. O. P. Ader, pastor, Dr. J. Ed. Abernethy of Charlotte, evangelist; McAdenville, Rev. C. M. Campbell, pastor, Rev. H. G. Allen, evangelist, services begin Sunday, September 16.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Western North Carolina Conference, Winston-Salem, October 17.

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Hillman announce the birth of Anne Warlick on September 7; weight 7-1-4. Congratulations.

Mrs. G. A. Stamper, wife of our pastor at Greene Street, Winston-Salem, visited friends and relatives in Concord last week.

Rev. W. A. Barber last Sunday began a meeting at the Glenwood church, Greensboro. Rev. S. B. Williams of Whitmell, Va., is doing the preaching.

Rev. R. F. Mock and family of Harmony church, Concord, visited in Montgomery and Richmond counties recently. They are delighted with these prosperous counties.

Rev. J. A. Bowles with Rev. Ebenezer Myers assisting him is now in the second week of a meeting at Naomi church, Randleman. The services which have been attended with fine results will continue till next Sunday.

Write on one side of the paper only when your communication is for publication. Why annoy the linotype operator by writing on both sides of the paper? The waste basket is the proper place for all such communications.

Mrs. Jim Green and their son, Lanier, are in Charlotte Sanatorium for operations this week. Let all pray God's guiding, comforting presence. Any correspondence should be addressed to Brother Green in care of Charlotte Sanatorium office.

The revival services at Bethlehem camp meeting was attended by large congregations. Rev. J. S. Hiatt of Winston-Salem greatly endeared himself to the people by the strong gospel sermons he delivered. Twenty-six professed faith in Christ and fifteen united with the church.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Smith announce the marriage of their daughter, Adyleen Lillian, to Rev. Ivon L. Roberts on Wednesday, September the fifth, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three, Reidsville, N. C. At home after September the fifteenth, Davidson, N. C."

Rev. and Mrs. G. A. B. Holderby of 66 Bartlett street, Asheville, N. C., announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret Elizabeth Frances, to Mr. Frederick Otto Wolfing of Flint, Michigan, on Saturday, September the first, nineteen hundred twenty-three. At home after September fifteenth, Dresden Hotel, Flint, Michigan.

"Doctor and Mrs. Samuel Perry Burt request the honour of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Mary Exum, to Mr. Alexander Holloway Veazey on Tuesday, the eighteenth of September, at twelve o'clock at the Methodist Episcopal church, Louisburg, North Carolina. Will be at home after the first of October at Rosewood, Goldsboro, North Carolina."

Rev. W. C. Ormond sends us this information: "Brother Guy Hamilton, the appointed pastor to Riverside church, New Bern, having been released by Bishop Denny, is now leaving this charge for Boston University, where he will continue in education for greater service. By appointment of Bro. F. M. Shamburger I am here to relieve the pastor at this church, beginning my work on September 1."

Rev. R. O. Eller, Salem station, has just returned from a two weeks' vacation granted by his congregation with all expenses paid. In the Buick furnished by his people earlier in the year he toured three capitals—Raleigh, Richmond and Washington and other places of interest. Just before leaving on his vacation Mr. Eller closed the annual revival and received 16 members on profession of faith.

"An exemplary Christian from early childhood, and living always for the realization of the highest ideals, Mrs. Leah Lavinia Strickland left her many earthly friends to join others gone before into the land of redeemed souls. For seventy years she lived her beautiful life of love and faith, and the impression she made upon others during those years shall ever be among their happiest recollections. While friends and loved ones grieve over her passing, they rejoice in that she lived well and died triumphantly."—E. C. Few.

Rev. W. E. White, who is a senior in the University of North Carolina, and who was licensed to preach at the last session of the Durham district conference, preached his first sermon in our church at Chapel Hill recently. Those who heard him say that it was an unusually strong sermon for a beginner. Brother White is working his way through the University. He will receive his diploma in June.

Dr. R. C. Beaman, pastor of Chestnut Street Methodist church, left this morning for Conway, Northampton county, where he will assist Rev. J. B. Thompson in a revival. Dr. Beaman announced yesterday that the regular mid-week prayer meeting will be conducted this week by Mr. W. H. Humphrey, charge lay leader, and that Rev. J. A. Hornaday of Maxton will preach at this church next Sunday morning and evening. He referred to Mr. Hornaday as the "pinch-hitter of the Rockingham district, a good preacher and a delightful Christian gentleman."—The Robesonian.

Rev. L. D. Hayman sends us this interesting news item: "Weldon is in the midst of one of the greatest revivals ever held in the Methodist church in that good little city. Dr. Fred Chenault of Broad Street church, Richmond, is doing the preaching, and Mr. A. N. Fisher of Norfolk is director of the music. The revival began on the second of September and is going on with continued interest daily. The largest crowds in the history of the church are attending. Conversions at every service. The church is greatly stirred, and the power of the meeting is being felt in the nearby towns and country. Dr. Chenault is a preacher of great power, and is by far the strongest visiting preacher this town has had in many years. Mr. Fisher is doing great work as singer and leader. The revival will close the second Sunday in this month."

Rev. D. R. Proffitt is closing a wonderfully successful quadrennium on the East Greensboro charge. New floors and wainscoting has been put into the Mt. Pleasant church, the church has been painted inside and outside, cement walks and steps built and other improvements made, all of which serves to put this in the front ranks of attractive country churches. The pastor as a parting gift to the people who have treated him so royally, gave the Mt. Pleasant church an individual communion service and Holt's Chapel a new pulpit Bible. A revival is on this week at Holt's Chapel with Rev. L. B. Hayes of Park Place doing the preaching. Rev. D. R. Proffitt will at conference be appointed to some other charge and some pastor will get a most delightful charge of two strong churches and an elegant parsonage situated on the hard surface boulevard that connects the two churches. All the elders should not speak at once, but if wise they will get Proffitt if they can. With this man in charge of a work all is well.

In an interview appearing in the Atlanta Constitution September 6 we print a paragraph from Rev. Walt Holcomb, general evangelist: "Perhaps because of the fact that I had expected so soon to be in Japan—probably not later than October 15—news of this overwhelming disaster has particularly affected me," said Mr. Holcomb. "Bishop H. A. Boaz of the Methodist Church, South, has been writing me frequently about coming to Japan in order to conduct evangelistic meetings there and in Korea. A few days ago I received a cable message from him, urging me to come soon, and I had about decided to leave for the Orient upon the completion of my series of meetings in Atlanta at the Wesley Memorial church, beginning next Sunday and lasting for three weeks. Of course, all plans relating to Japan have been abruptly changed throughout the world."

There was a unique funeral held in the church at Chapel Hill Sunday afternoon, September 2nd. Aunt Augusta Evans, the last of the colored members of the ones who through the years have declined to unite with the negro churches, was buried from the church by Dr. N. H. D. Wilson, her former pastor, in the absence of Pastor Patten. "Aunt Augusta" was ninety-three years old, joined the church under Dr. J. A. Cunningham while pastor there, probably in 1862. Until she became too feeble through age, she washed for the pastor there fifty or more years. A sincere and faithful Christian, she was held in the highest esteem by all who knew her. The church was full, her white friends and the colored joining in doing her honor.

A revival that resulted in 40 accessions to the church closed September 2 at Norwood. Rev. F. O. Dryman is pastor and Rev. A. C. Gibbs did the preaching.

Lost, at district conference last spring, quarterly conference record for Weddington charge. Please mail to Rev. T. J. Huggins, Matthews, Rt. 18, and postage will be sent.

Rev. J. Frank Armstrong and family, who have been spending the summer in a cottage near Chimney Rock, have returned to their home in Concord, and report that they had a most delightful vacation in the mountains of Western North Carolina.

Mrs. J. F. Stover is at the Wesley Long hospital, this city, where she Wednesday of this week underwent an operation for the removal of a diseased kidney. She is expected to be able to return to her home at Rutherford College in a few weeks. Brother Stover is here with her.

The Methodists of Crouse circuit and especially of Antioch are looking forward to the 16th of September with great pleasure. That occasion will be the dedication of Antioch church by Rev. H. H. Jordan, presiding elder of the Shelby district, on the morning of the 16th at 11 o'clock. All former pastors are cordially invited to be present on that occasion.

Rev. J. Frank Armstrong of Forest Hill, Concord, crossed the border last week to assist Rev. O. I. Hinson in a revival meeting at Siler City. He expresses himself as immensely pleased with the enterprising metropolis of Chatham. Brother Armstrong could not give but five days to this meeting. However, the results were most gratifying. Brother Hinson took the names of 25 people for church membership and quite a number will join the Baptist and Methodist Protestant churches. Great crowds attended every night service and the afternoon services attracted from 115 to 300 people.

The Daily Gazette has among other things the following to say about West End church, Gastonia: "Under Mr. Brown's pastorate of two years this church has grown wonderfully. An addition housing 12 Sunday school rooms was completed in June, 1922. The present addition also contains 12 Sunday school rooms, giving a plant of 24 classrooms, together with a large auditorium, Boy Scout rooms, etc. This addition cost approximately $4,000. It will be equipped with new furniture throughout. As soon as this arrives it is planned to have an opening day and celebrate the event. As an indication of the growth of this church under Mr. Brown's pastorate it is noted that the Sunday school enrollment has grown from 150 to 608 and the church membership from 185 to 425. Hardly a Sunday passes that does not witness the reception of one or more persons. R. H. Plyler is the efficient superintendent. Prof. E. J. Abernethy is teacher of a large men's Bible class. There are three Epworth Leagues with a membership of one hundred."

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE, WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

The Conference Board of Church Extension will receive applications for aid, including applications to be made to the Duke Commission, between now and the time for the meeting of the annual conference. Requests for application blanks should be sent to the secretary of the board and when completed they should be returned to him.

J. H. Barnhardt, President.

Fred C. Odell, Secretary,
P. O. Box 137, Greensboro, N. C.

SHOP TALK

Please do not forget the Advocate during the closing days of the conference year.

A large number of the subscribers to the Advocate are behind with their subscriptions. We earnestly beg that every subscriber see his pastor and pay up before he leaves for conference.

Pastors, please call attention to the Advocate before you leave for conference.

OPENING OF RUTHERFORD COLLEGE

President M. T. Hinshaw reports the largest and best opening of any year during his administration. On the first day 23 more students than last year had matriculated and about 20 more were on hand to matriculate. Among the number is a large per cent of ministerial students.

This was followed by the return of the men in gray, many of them maimed and crippled, and poverty and suffering on every hand. It was not a cheerful atmosphere for a sensitive boy to grow up in. His father was impoverished; their farms had been ravaged and their livestock taken. It was a doleful outlook for everybody—but his wonderful mother kept cheerful through it all.

"Wat Page," as his friends loved to call him, was a tall, rangy, awkward, curly-headed boy, with brown hair and brown eyes, fond of fishing and hunting, not especially robust, but remarkably alert and vital. He was fond of reading and talk, and his hearty laughter was contagious. He was accustomed to take long walks in the woods with the companionship of a book. His efficient family thought of him as a dreamer, and often wondered where he would fit into the practical affairs of this busy world. He got a little start in a rude primary school of that neighborhood, but his thoughtful mother taught him to read and write. At that time they had no public school system in the Carolinas. Walter was so swift in learning that his mother indulged the fond hope that he would become a Methodist preacher, as one of his uncles was. His middle name—Hines—was given him in honor of her favorite preacher of that name.

At the age of twelve he was transferred to the Bingham School, then located at Mebane. This was the Eton of North Carolina, from both a social and educational standpoint. It was a military school and the boys wore Confederate gray uniforms. Robert E. Lee was held up to them as an ideal. The discipline was rigid and the standard of honor was high. Nobody could cheat in the classroom and remain at Bingham. For this offense no second chance was given. It mattered not whose son the offender was. The son of a Confederate general had a higher social rank than the son of a colonel. The sons of a judge or governor were about on a level. The sons of preachers ranked about like this: First, Episcopal, then Presbyterian. Page was at a disadvantage as his father was a Methodist. That was bad enough—but he had no military title. If it were known that he was a "Union man" it would have lowered him more still.

After Bingham, Page hied him into the backwoods of North Carolina and knocked at the doors of Trinity College, a Methodist institution. Later this school became a flourishing institution, but at that time it was having "rough sledding." A famous Methodist divine and journalist describes it as "a college with a few buildings that looked like tobacco barns and a few teachers that looked like they should be worming tobacco." He spent one short-unhappy year here. He wrote home—"I do not care a horseapple for Trinity's distinction." After Christmas, 1872, we find him at Randolph-Macon College. He writes his mother: "We have a preacher president, a preacher secretary, a preacher chaplain, and a dozen preacher students, and three or four preachers are living here, and twenty-five or thirty yet-to-be-preachers in college!" There was no lack of religious impulse in this atmosphere. At this time Page was eighteen and he had definitely decided to be a Methodist preacher, and enter the ministry for life. He and Wilbur Fiske Tillet had about decided to apply for license to preach at the approaching Methodist quarterly conference. Of course this decision of her favorite son delighted his affectionate mother. His intense activity is still remembered in this sleepy little village, and he read every book in the sparse college library. He talked with his collegemates and the professors on every conceivable subject, and was a leader in the Franklin Debating Society. He wrote prose and verse at an astonishing rate.

When Johns Hopkins was established Page was among the first group of twenty-one students selected for admission. Nearly all of these boys became distinguished men. Some of his friends were shocked when he began to study the teachings of Darwin and Huxley. From 1878 to 1883 Page spent in various places much of the time in journalistic work. Like many Americans he spent a brief period in the work of a country pedagogue.

A new journal, "The Age," had been founded in Louisville, Ky. Here Page went to work and wrote many articles on literary and political subjects and soon became its editor. They hoped that this paper would be to the South what The Nation was to the North. The young editor later invested in the paper. But the South did not respond and soon Page was out of a job. At last he secured a place on a paper in St. Joe, Missouri. He worked from cub reporter up to editor and learned a lot about journalism. While here in 1889 he was happily married to Miss Willia Alice Wilson, daughter of a Scotch physician, Dr. William Wilson, who had settled near Detroit in 1832.

Then for a time he served as special correspondent of the New York World. He was profoundly interested in the educational and material development of his native state, and came very near devoting his life to this work. For the better part of two years he worked on the Evening Post.

Along in 1885 a few gentlemen of means began the publication of The Forum, hoping that it would do for this country what The Fortnightly and The Contemporary did for Great Britain. The first two years it dragged heavily, and they lost a large sum in their new enterprise. At last Page was induced to take the editorship. Soon it gained in circulation by leaps and bounds, and in a short time reached 30,000. Page had thought of buying it, and the owners at first seemed eager to sell out. But when they saw it gaining in circulation each month they backed out. Then Page resigned and The Forum soon dropped back to its former figures.

In 1898 Page was made the editor of The Atlantic Monthly, following that choice line of notables—Lowell, Fields, Howells and Aldrich. No American publication had such a rare record as this old magazine. There were elements in it that appealed powerfully to Page's fine sense of humor. Here was the son of a Southern slaveholder sitting in a chair sacred to a race of strenuous abolitionists. The grim face of William Lloyd Garrison glared at him from a steel engraving on the wall; and one of Garrison's sons was a colleague. For a time his vigor and breeziness jarred his sedate associates. Soon the change was noticeable and the circulation began to grow. When Page wanted writers he did not send them a courteous note of invitation. He went after them. At one time he went clear to Birmingham Ala., to see Miss Mary Johnston about a story. He published her "To Have and to Hold," which nearly doubled the circulation of The Atlantic.

It looked as though he had found his place for life, but he wasn't quite suited. He craved a larger freedom. Soon—in 1900—he was joining forces with Frank N. Doubleday and editing World's Work. Here he found a congenial field and the new magazine flourished finely. While in this chair he spent a good deal of his time with Mr. Robert C. Ogden and others in building up the educational system of his beloved home state. And yet he was much misunderstood by his own people and called a "Southern Yankee" and a "renegade." But he only smiled and worked right ahead.

He was a staunch admirer of Woodrow Wilson and supported him most heartily for the presidency. After his election Mr. Wilson consulted him freely in regard to the personnel of his cabinet, and finally offered him the portfolio of the Ambassador to Great Britain. After some hesitation Page accepted this most important and responsible post. He had all sorts of difficulties in getting started in his new work. There was no home for the embassy and the salary was altogether too small to support the dignity of this high office, and Page was a poor man. But he went at it bravely and soon he began to get hold of the lines of service.

From now on the life of our great ambassador is familiar to all intelligent American readers. I desire to touch only a few of the tall points in his official life. He gathered around him a congenial and efficient staff of helpers and the work went smoothly. Soon he came to understand the English people and he learned to greatly admire and love them for their sterling qualities, their firmness, stability, integrity and reliability. He understood them a great deal better than his President ever did. He deeply regretted that Mr. Wilson misunderstood these sturdy Britons in so many ways. He was so frank and open in his reports to the Secretary of State—Mr. Bryan—that he could not at all understand this secretary's failure to be open with him and reply to his frequent letters. This was a source of deep annoyance to him all through his official life over there.

He saw much more clearly than did the President the coming of the World War, and did all that lay in his power to prevent it. His service to his country during this terrible war was simply inestimable. He and Sir Edward Grey became fast friends and transacted harmoniously the important business of these two great countries. Mr. Page's fine sense of humor and his deep knowledge of human nature stood him in excellent stead. During those dreadful years his toil was herculean—far beyond his strength. He had the embassies of Germany, Austria and Turkey to manage as well as our own. He worked an immense force of volunteer assistants in a half dozen buildings day and night.

The President and Mr. Bryan seemed determined to mediate in the interest of peace; and Page's tact and wisdom saved the situation a number of times. How vivid are his descriptions of the sufferings and heroism of the British people. What a brilliant letter-writer he was. Those letters to Col. House, President Wilson and his own loved ones are literary gems and will live forever. But this awful burden was far too heavy for his slender frame. He broke under it at last and had to be brought to his own dear America. It was a joy to sail up New York harbor, to look upon this old city that he loved, and to greet a few friends. He continued to grow weaker. The frail tenement was breaking. He longed to see the pine trees of his beloved Carolina. He reached home at last—was barely able to smile and say: "Well, I've come back." He failed rapidly and soon found a resting place under his dear old pines.

RECOLLECTIONS OF MY EARLY YEARS IN THE CONFERENCE

By a Son of an Itinerant.

Admission to the Conference.

I entered the Western North Carolina conference in 1895, but a strict scrutiny of the Minutes of that year will fail to disclose my name either among those admitted on trial or among the transfers from other conferences. Indeed, it is quite possible that the bishop himself was unaware of my advent. A most extraordinary thing, you say. The explanation is very simple, however, for like the majority of folks who reside in parsonages, I was born into the conference and was raised in—or perhaps across—the lap of the ministry.

According to custom, I should have been named for a bishop, or for the presiding elder, at least. In this matter all parsonage traditions were shattered; perhaps even at that early age I showed unmistakable symptoms which precluded all thoughts of a clerical career for me. This custom has not been disregarded elsewhere; one may go to one of our denominational schools and line up a whole battalion of John Wesleys, flank them on one side with a full conference cabinet and on the other with fair-sized college of bishops. Such is the honor paid to these great men, and who wouldn't be named Frances Asbury rather than David Jonathan or John Wesley rather than Napoleon Bonaparte?

Early Recollections of the P. E.

The presiding elder is the first real hero that enters into the life of the child of the parsonage. He is the man from the big outside world who directs and controls the fate of men and nations. His coming is comparable to the visits of royalty, and is looked forward to with great eagerness on the part of the younger members of the family. A true son of the parsonage would rather sit in the "front room" and listen to the presiding elder talk than to do any of the things that usually appeal to childhood. And when this great man pays him the honor of addressing him personally the cup of joy runs over.

A conversation that I had with my first presiding elder is still fresh in my mind. I had been left in the room with him for just a few minutes, but during that brief space of time I declared to him my ambition—a confession that my father had not been able to wring from me. In answer to the elder's rather hackneyed question, "Well, my little man, what do you expect to do when you grow up?" I startled and somewhat shocked that dignitary by promptly replying, "Work in a liver stable."

"What," said he, "do you mean to tell me that you are not going to be a preacher but expect to own a livery stable?"

"I'm not goin' to own a liver stable," I replied,

"I'm goin' to be a horse-harnesser."

That good gentleman still lives and might possibly be interested in knowing that I did finally realize my ambition, for while in the service I was assigned to a light-horse artillery outfit wherein I became a horse-harnesser indeed.

My next presiding elder has since become a dignified college president, but he gained my respect and admiration in the early days by the inimitable way in which he would relate a certain frog story, the most attractive feature of which was a frequent repetition in a deep bass voice of the words, "Knee-deep, knee-deep." Every quarter I grew more and more fond of this story.

So great did my attachment for this story and its raconteur become, that the next P. E. had to use rather strenuous methods to win me over. His first diplomatic advance was to call me a smart boy and cross my palm with a nickel. I felt myself weaken under this treatment, but I didn't really and truly warm to him until the night he sat up until eleven o'clock reading to me from a volume of "Father Goose." This great man, who has some time since gone to his reward, was our presiding elder with some intermissions for perhaps a dozen years. During this time he was in the parsonage a great deal, but no event or association—save his reception of me into the church—will stand out in my memory like that long evening I spent in his lap while he read to me in his customary pulpit tones, The Philosophy of Father Goose.

Poundings.

Every week one reads in the Advocate that some pastor has been "subjected to a very severe pounding." The pounding, I believe, is a typical American custom. I have never heard of the English ever giving their Wesleyan pastor "a severe stonking." I trust, however, that after we come to our senses and adopt the metric system, I will be able to pick up a current number of the Advocate and read somewhat as follows: "The congregation kilogrammed us unmercifully a few nights ago."

One of the most memorable poundings in our history occurred when I was about nine years of age. We had just moved to a new charge and the people literally brought in cartloads of staple and fancy groceries, chickens, a turkey, etc. But for these my interest was lost when I discovered, hidden away in the mass of goods, a small package bearing the superscription, "For the preacher's boy." The gift, a small carton of gingersnaps, was of very little intrinsic value, but for me it meant a great deal; never before had I been so singly honored. Even at this late date I have a peculiar fondness for that charge.

Appointments.

That being the son of a Methodist preacher has its drawbacks, everybody will admit. For instance, what a tragedy it is that one has to wear clothes made out of father's old pants—pants that have already gained a wide circle of respectful admirers and which are readily recognizable, in spite of their altered condition, not only by your own congregation but by the Presbyterians as well.

There is one joy, however, that is the peculiar property of the preacher's boy; the pampered son of the multi-millionaire will never be able to enjoy the indescribable thrill that the son of the parsonage gets out of the appointments and the resultant moves. Even when it was generally understood that there would be no change, I have anxiously awaited the appointments, always hoping against hope that maybe we would have to move after all. At the end of a quadrennium my excitement would often reach such bounds as to actually interfere with my eating and sleeping. I am certain that if the change of the four year rule had been put to a popular vote, all children of the parsonage under the age of fifteen would have voted solidly against the proposition.

THE MOUNT OF VISION

Such was Junaluska during the recent Summer School of Missions and Missionary Conference. This was the testimony of a large number of those who attended. There they saw the vision of the whole world's needs; our own church's obligations and opportunities concerning those needs and especially a vision of Him who alone is able to meet the world's needs as great and numerous as they are even at this hour. Along with vision came consecration and resolution to do to the uttermost all that each one could to help Him speedily bring His social order upon the earth.

The attendance this year was most gratifying, being an increase of more than sixty per cent over that of last year notwithstanding the school at Mount Sequoyah. Seventeen states and the District of Columbia were represented in the home land, and nine out of our eleven foreign mission fields. It was a choice and representative group of mission leaders and workers. All came for study and counsel as to how to serve best and to make Christ real and vital in the affairs of the world today.

There were one hundred and seventy-three enrolled in the twelve courses offered in the field of Bible study: Methods, philosophy, history and social aspects of missions, and the several phases of missionary work and problems. The purpose of these courses were two—to give an opportunity for vital study of missionary conditions and problems and training for missionary leadership in our church. This is one factor in the Home Cultivation Section of the Board of Missions' plan for creating a missionary consciousness on the part of our constituency necessary for our church to do its part in world evangelization and Christianization. A large and well trained leadership is necessary for such a task. Such a leadership can only be had by pursuing a thorough course of training.

The morning meeting for conference and prayer was a new feature of the school and one of the most valuable ones. Each morning before the classroom work began thirty minutes were given over to conference and prayer regarding the imminent and vital needs of our several mission fields at home and abroad. Fortunately representatives from each field were present and spoke at first hand regarding the conditions and needs of their respective fields. It gave opportunity for all the missionaries to know the workers in other fields, and to understand their problems. It also gave others in attendance acquaintance with all our fields and their needs. These meetings became spiritually dynamic. The Holy Spirit was evident and gave vision, resolution and courage to the large number who attended these meetings.

Another good feature was the conference with the missionaries themselves conducted by the two foreign secretaries, General Work. This conference was not only attended by foreign missionaries, but also by those working in the home field. At this meeting vital matters were discussed. The missionaries were given opportunity to speak and they did so freely. All sorts of problems were considered relative to the home church and the church in the foreign field. The whole gamut was run. While utmost frankness characterized the discussions, the finest spirit of concord prevailed and all expressed their appreciation and helpfulness of these conferences. All understood the work of others better. All recognized that missions are one—home field, foreign field, city work, rural—all are a part of missions, world evangelization and Christianization.

The missionaries added much to the interest of the school. They made a valuable contribution to it as well as being greatly helped by it. A reception was given in their honor at the Mission building which was one of the most delightful of all the meetings during the school. It gave the people at the Lake an opportunity to get personally acquainted with and express their interest in their representatives at home and abroad—around the world.

The platform addresses each evening were unusually good. Home and foreign secretaries spoke concerning work in their respective mission fields. Dr. John W. Laird, president of Albion College, Michigan, and Bishop Edwin H. Hughes each delivered a series of inspirational addresses of the highest order. The closing service was the most impressive of all. After the presentation of the certificates of credit the pageant, "The Striking of America's Hour," was presented. It presented in a striking way the failure of all the great nations of history to meet the world's needs for brotherhood herself and giving it to the world. If she failed in this she would pass as the other nations had. Missionaries and nationals from many of our fields had a prominent part in the pageant. It left a profound impression upon the audience.

The surprising thing about the school and conference was the unanimity of opinion that world evangelization and Christianization rested primarily with America at this time. This was expressed in the meetings for conference and prayer, in the missionary conferences and in the platform addresses. Moreover, there was the same unanimity of opinion that the most important and first step in world evangelization and Christianization was the evangelization and Christianization of America. The program of the school had not been planned in advance to that end. It seemed to be the result of the Holy Spirit's leadership. Those present accepted it as the revelation of the way out of the present world situation into the one Jesus came to establish. With this profound impression those who attended the school and conference returned to their respective fields of labor around the world with firm resolution to "prove themselves workmen who need not be ashamed" to labor together with Him to establish His kingdom.

"THE SLEEPY SUNDAY CHRISTIANS"

By Harry Daniels.

I wonder if the day of awakening shall ever come to those Christians that sleep the Sabbath Day away and who do not realize they are under obligation to God to openly observe His Sabbath Day by attending Sunday school and both the morning and evening church services. If such persons really and truly believed in God and His holy church they would retire at a reasonable hour on Saturday nights so they may arise on Sunday mornings and attend church and be filled with the spirit of alacrity and activeness in transacting God's work. If those indolent persons who do not find time to work for God on Sundays, it is a fact that they will not find time to do so during the week.

I firmly believe that God brings those indifferent persons to Him in time by sending upon them premature sorrow and adversity. We are commanded by the Third Commandment to keep holy the Sabbath Day. A good many Christian folks think that if they attend the evening church service they have observed fully the Sabbath Day. If those persons do not attend the morning service they do not observe the Sabbath Day as God would have them observe His day.

Jesus, the Son of God, commanded His disciples to go forth and teach all nations. He did not stop there, but He further added by saying that "He that will not hear you will not hear me."

Therefore our ministers have the law of God in their favor and have the right to command us to attend church on Sunday mornings, as they, our ministers, preach and teach the very same doctrine as taught by the chosen disciples of God, and if we will not hear our ministers we would not hear God himself.

The Son of God, in past eternity, was appointed to his place on the Throne with his Father. Gradually this fact was announced to the world. The curtain of time was raised upon a sovereign Christ, Jehovah, the sovereign Administrator of the ancient covenants, was the Son of God. He declared his everlasting kingship over the world, and ruled with wisdom, power, justice, mercy, and love.—Religious Telescope.

DOING DUTY

Rev. E. C. Sell.

Why do I live? Why am I here?
I know—yes, yes, 'tis true,
That Jesus has for me a sphere
To fill—a work to do.

No time to linger, or repine,
So much to do. Let me,
At once, go into duty's line,
God to serve—faithful be.

I must not—cannot hesitate,
And leave my work undone;
My time will pass; my strength abate;
Day will end; night will come.

With faith in God, with faith in man,
I'll go, and do my best;
Without dismay, do all I can,
So I can stand the test.

And then, when God, all nations meet,
The final word to hear;
I'll be clear, and can freely greet
Every man without fear.

FIELD NEWS

REVIVALS ON MARS HILL CIRCUIT

We have just closed successful revivals at Bright Hope and Beech Glen.

Rev. J. L. Rayle, a student of Rutherford College, did the preaching at Bright Hope. The results were very gratifying. There were seventeen conversions and the whole church was blessed by the gospel messages of Brother Rayle.

The meeting at Beech Glen closed August 31st. Rev. Edgar H. Neese, a graduate of Rutherford College, did the preaching. According to statements of those who have lived here for years there hasn't been such a meeting here before in a number of years.

My last revival before conference is to begin at Laurel Sunday, September 2nd. Rev. L. H. Griffith of Paw Creek will do the preaching.

J. R. Spainhour, P. C.

HICKORY GROVE CHARGE AND REVIVALS

Our first revival meeting was at Derita. Brother A. Burgess of Walnut Street charge, Greensboro, did the preaching and did it well. He also conducted the singing to the delight of the good congregations which attended these meetings.

Our last meeting was at Hickory Grove. The meeting began Friday night before the fourth Sunday in August and continued through the first Sunday in September. Bro. A. G. Canada was with us and conducted all the services and did some of the best preaching we have heard at all.

The charge is moving along in a quiet way. We expect to raise all our finances and close the work up in good shape. We have had three good years with these people and expect nothing but a good closing for this year. E. Myers.

EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION

We, the members of the quarterly conference of Uwharrie circuit, Greensboro district of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in parting with our pastor, Rev. W. B. Thompson, who has served this charge for four years, do adopt the following resolutions:-

Resolved, That we appreciate the earnest and faithful work that he has done on the circuit during the whole time of his stay, believing that he has conscientiously given of his best to every church on the charge.

Resolved, That we especially recognize and thank him for the efforts he has put forth in the care and improvement of the churches and their grounds as well as the parsonage.

Resolved, That as he has stood while among us for community uplift and civic improvement, as well as for Christianity, we regret his leaving, and we commend him to the churches that he may serve next year and bid him God-speed in his work wherever it may be.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be given to him, and that they be published in the Christian Advocate and be placed on the minutes of this conference.

Signed on behalf of the quarterly conference.

A GOOD REVIVAL AT SOUTH HENDERSON

It is a glorious thing to work in a revival when the Spirit of God prevails. Such was the revival at South Henderson on August 6th. Bro. R. L. Pittman of La Grange, N. C., arrived to assist the pastor in a revival.

Brother Pittman preached very effective sermons and had good results. The revival reached its climax on Sunday morning when a sermon was preached to the old people. There was scarcely a dry eye in the church and about twenty or more people were converted.

When the revival closed on Tuesday night, the 14th, fifty persons had been converted and fifteen had been added to the church. The Spirit of God worked quietly throughout the entire revival.

Brother Pittman is an excellent worker in a revival and he won the love and confidence of all the people who knew him.

Our church at South Henderson has made great progress this year in every respect. A new piano has been placed in the church, the pulpit enlarged, the roof reshingled, a new Sunday school room added, two coats of white paint put on the outside of the church, and we are now making plans for further improvements.

REVIVALS ON NEWTON GROVE CIRCUIT

We have held six revival meetings on the Newton Grove circuit this year with wonderful results.

The pastor, S. W. Phillips, has held four meetings with good success. both in accessions to church membership and in renewals of faith, and in the hearty support of the membership and the large congregations that greeted him and stuck to him. The last meeting was held at Maple Grove, the youngest church on the work, but not the weakest by any means. Never has the pastor preached to such crowds anywhere. We had over five hundred present on the fifth night of the meeting, and every night after that the house was packed to its capacity with from one to two hundred standing around the windows. We do not know how many were saved and reclaimed. Twenty-four of the number joined the church; the most of them were men and women from twenty to seventy years old.

The membership of the church has been doubled within the last two years. I praise God for a full and free salvation that saves from sin and preserves us, spirit, soul and body blameless! The members of Maple Grove church were so wonderfully blessed in spiritual things that they wanted to bless others in temporal things, so they got together and prepared themselves with such things as they needed to fortify themselves with and stormed the parsonage with all sorts of good things. May God bless these good and generous people.

Brother M. W. Hester was with us for one meeting this summer, and I think it can be just as truthfully said of him as of Barnabas of old that he is "a good man full of the Holy Ghost and faith." God gave us some wonderful messages through him, and we had a real revival. He will preach for us again next week at Newton Grove. We are expecting God to sanctify believers, reclaim backsliders and save sinners. Pray for the meeting.

S. W. Phillips.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR ON SHOAL CREEK CHARGE

I feel that I would like to tell the Advocate readers what the Lord has been doing for us on the Shoal Creek charge this week. We have had a very successful year with many conversions and additions to the church. We have just closed a very gracious revival here at Shoal Creek church. It was one of the best revivals we ever witnessed. The meeting continued through seventeen days and nights, with something like fifty professions of religion and there were several Christians who came to the altar seeking the experience of entire sanctification and some prayed through to victory.

I don't know whether the people are tired of us and trying to get rid of us or what caused it, but anyway the people of Ravensford gave us the largest pounding I think we ever received. I thought that poundings were out of season, but it certainly did feel good when it quit hurting. We appreciate so much the kindness that our people have shown us.

We started another meeting at Olive Sunday night and expect Brother Joe Green to do the preaching for us. Pray for us that we may have victory in the Lord.

I enjoy the Advocate very much and speak a good word for it every opportunity that I have.

MINIATURE SOUTHERN TRAIN SHOWS ELECTRIC SIGNALS

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 10.—Visitors to the Cincinnati Fall Festival and Industrial Exposition have been greatly interested by the exhibit of the Southern Railway System, consisting of a miniature passenger train, which shows how Southern trains are protected by electrically operated automatic block signals.

The exhibit shows the train in operation on an oval track, equipped with electric signals working just as in actual practice on the road. The train consists of three coaches, and is driven by electricity, taken from a third rail, though the locomotive is a model of the regular steam type.

Every day during the exposition the Southern's booth has been surrounded by a crowd of interested spectators who were getting from it their first demonstration of how electricity is employed for the operation of signals and of the great degree of safety for trains which is afforded by this system.

FRANKLIN AVENUE, GASTONIA

On Tuesday evening, August 24th, Dr. J. E. Abernethy, pastor of Trinity Methodist church, Charlotte, delivered a lecture on the Yellowstone Park in West Gastonia. Dr. Abernethy is an able and interesting speaker. Combined with his oratorical ability, Dr. Abernethy possess unusual observational and interpretative powers. It was indeed a rare treat to hear a man with such a fortunate combination of traits give his impressions of Yellowstone Park. The subject of Dr. Abernethy's address was Pictures and Parables of Yellowstone Park. After Dr. Abernethy had given very vivid and wonderful word pictures of the park he brought out spiritual lessons which this place of wonder and mystery teaches. Those who heard the lecture spent an evening of pleasure and profit, for the lecture was at the same time entertaining, educational and spiritually profitable.

Dr. Abernethy came to Gastonia at the invitation of Franklin Avenue Methodist church. The lecture was under the auspices of the Friendly class, an organized class of young people of that church. The class sold tickets to the lectures and a neat sum was realized. The proceeds were turned over to the church. This is only one of several activities in which the Friendly class has been engaged in the last several months. The other classes of Franklin Avenue Sunday school are up and doing and the whole school is growing. The church work is progressing at a rapid pace. Interest in church activities is growing. Many new members have been added during the summer.

Miss Beulah McKenzie.

FIVE REVIVALS, CHURCH DEDICATED BY BISHOP DENNY

On the last day of August we closed the last of five revival meetings held on the Durham circuit this year. In all of them there was the note of victory. Fifty-four new members have been added so far, forty-four of which were on profession of faith. The church as a whole is quickened and religious life is a living reality. We are glad in the Lord. Of the last three of these meetings you have not heard. Rev. J. W. Bradley, West Durham pastor, was our helper. His sermons and exhortations were plain, pointed and appealing to children, young people and all. The Spirit of God was with him and with the people.

Our congregation at Duke's seemed somewhat disheartened to begin with for some reason. But they proved themselves ready for a season of refreshing. The meeting there was a mountain top experience. Every service was a forward step and an inspiration. The cup of joy was full. On the closing day a score of eager, happy converts stood around the altar ready to take the yoke of Christ. They were bright school boys and girls, young people and adults. It put new hope, new life and new purpose in the church. We believe we are ready now to go about our needed new house of worship.

The meeting at Pleasant Green was happy in that it was a blessing to the present church membership.

The church at McMannen, like most of life, is beset with snares on every hand, yet they are fighting a winning fight. Our meeting which began on Sunday night and ended on Friday night was a victory. The good gospel messages found an active response, and at the close when the door was opened fourteen bright boys and girls made new by faith in Christ entered into the fellowship of the church.

Last Sunday was a great day with us. It was dedication day at Fletcher's Chapel. Bishop Denny came and saw and conquered. He more than met the high expectations of the throng who came to see and hear. The man and his message were so impressed upon them as that they will not be forgotten in a lifetime. The opening service and prayer were led by our presiding elder, Rev. M. T. Plyler. The men and women had worked so wisely and successfully together in this congregation, in providing themselves with this beautiful plant, that no debt was left to halt or hinder in the happy formal dedication following the bishop's great sermon.

The abundant dinner served on the ground was a feast thoroughly enjoyed. The day was ideal.

At two-thirty in the afternoon a pageant, "The Modern Prodigal," was presented by the Epworth League of this church in which many of the Sunday school took part, interspersed with appropriate songs and music. This was also a great lesson and an impressive hour. The people filled the house and doors and windows to overflowing.

A large number of young people in this church are consecrated workers in the various departments of the kingdom, and their readiness and efficiency is a delight. A good number of them are scattered now to their posts in school and college, either graduated and now teaching or entering our various schools and colleges for training. We shall miss them while away and gladly hail their return.

W. F. Craven.

GOOD WORK IN REVIVALS

During the week following August 12th it was my privilege to be with the Rev. W. G. Lowe, of the Plymouth charge, and his good people at Jamesville, N. C. Staid with the meeting only one week and do not have final results to report. However, interest there was fine and the congregation and interest increased all the way. Brother L. L. Smith came into the meeting the day I left and continued the next week. The foundation for a fine meeting was laid. Brother Lowe is a great fellow to work with. He takes care of his help and lives in the hearts of his people. He is doing a great work on the Pymouth charge.

Our second week was with Rev. W. P. Constable and his people in the Sladesville church, Hyde county, and it would be difficult indeed to describe this meeting. I never saw so many young people in a village community as are around Sladesville, and all of them were interested in the services and did great work in the meeting. Thursday night of the meeting was given over entirely to these young people. Seven of them volunteered for life work recruits, and among them were college graduates, a member of the class of '24 U. N. C., and two graduates of the high school of Sladesville. When I left the meeting on Friday night several had united with the church, and Brother Constable carried the meeting on through Sunday.

Our fall work in Edenton is opening up fine in spite of heavy losses to the work caused by some of our very best workers moving to other towns and cities. These moves hit the board of stewards and the church choir, and is greatly felt. Our meeting is scheduled for September 16-30, with Bro. W. B. Johnson, the blind musician, assisting.

J. Vincent Knight.

JUST BACK FROM VACATION

We are just back from three weeks' visit in New York City. Our congregation gave us a three weeks' vacation with a purse to defray our expenses while away. We had a delightful vacation, spending all the time in New York City and Long Island Sound. In short, we did New York and thereabouts.

Our people have just spent around $1400 on our parsonage at Madison, having put in water, added an additional room and also painted the outside of the parsonage. We now have a splendid parsonage.

Madison-Stoneville expects to come to conference with everything paid in full this year.

J. P. Morris.

THE Christian Education Movement

Has the Right - of - Way

August                      September
October                      November

The Committee authorized by the General Conference to harmonize and correlate the forward movements of the Church has given the CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT from August to November, inclusive, for cultivation and collection of pledges. During this period all the general organizations and public agencies of the Church will be mobilized in the interest of Christian Education.

THE BISHOPS

have issued a strong address to the Church and are leading in the work.

THE PRESIDING ELDERS

will co-operate and direct the work in the districts. A live Presiding Elder brings things to pass.

THE PASTORS

will give the message to the people and guide the efforts in the local churches. The wise pastor believes in Christian Education and shows his faith by his works.

THE CHURCH COLLECTOR

has a place of great opportunity and responsibility. It is harvest time. He thrusts in the sickle and gathers the golden grain.

THE SUBSCRIBER

is the most important of all. Money talks and he has the last word. If he fails the efforts of all others are futile. But a true Methodist will not fail. His word is out. He has promised. He will pay.

"AFTER CENTENARY"

Pledges

Many subscribers made their pledges payable "after the Centenary." This means the payments will begin November 1st, 1923, since the last payment on the Centenary was due January 1, 1923.

"AFTER THE CENTENARY" MEANS NOV. 1, 1923

JAPAN METHODISM

Fourteen years ago, according to Rev. W. J. Callahan, the Japan Methodist church was organized by bringing together the Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Canadian Methodists. A Japanese was elected bishop and they were made an independent church, the mother churches agreeing to turn over all their self-supporting and near-self supporting churches to the administration of the Japanese church. In order that they might carry churches not entirely self-supporting it was agreed to give a lump sum, as a subsidy, gradually decreasing every year, to be used in supplementing the salaries and rent of the preachers. A great many felt a doubt as to whether it was wise before these churches were nearer self support to give them to the administration of the Japanese church, but the step has been gradually justified in the quickened church consciousness and the development of personality of their native leaders.—Voice.

Our General Board of Missions has 56 missionaries in Japan, five of whom with their wives are from W. N. C. conference as follows: Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Wilson (1890), Rev. and Mrs. S. A. Stewart (1906), Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Frank (1912), Rev. and Mrs. N. S. Ogburn (1912), Rev. and Mrs. I. L. Shaver (1919).

The Woman's Council has four stations (1922 Report) with twelve missionaries on the field.

None of the above named missionaries are stationed within the calamity stricken district, and we trust by the time this reaches our readers all fears for the safety of all missionaries will have been dispelled.

A musician taking his first lessons in horseback riding one day mounted, and the horse, having no sign given to go, stood still. The musician said, "Start!" The horse stood still. "Begin!" The horse did not move. "Commence!" The horse stood still. A much aroused boy standing by said: "Say, Mister, maybe if you'd say 'come up' he'd go."

September is the month to "come up" with all the various departments of your missionary societies, and October 1st is the time to "come up" with every report to your conference officers.

So now start to begin, to commence to be ready, to surprise your officers with a shower of reports October 1st. Plenty of time—but you get busy.

"THE LADIES' AID WILL DO THE REST"

We've put a fine addition on the good old church at home,
It's just the latest kilter, with a gallery and dome;
It seats a thousand people—the finest in all the town,
And when 'twas dedicated, why, we planked ten thousand down;
That is, we paid five thousand—every deacon did his best—
And the Ladies' Aid Society, it promised to do the rest.

We've got an organ in the church—very finest in the land,
It's got a thousand pipes or more, it's melody is grand;
And when we sit on cushioned pews and hear the master play,
It carries us to realms of bliss unnumbered miles away,
It cost a cool three thousand, and it's stood the hardest test;
We'll pay a thousand on it—the Ladies' Aid the rest.

They'll give a hundred sociables, cantatas, too, and teas;
They'll bake a thousand angel cakes, and tons of cream they'll freeze,
They'll beg and scrape and toil and sweat, for seven years or more,
And then they'll start all o'er again, for a carpet for the floor.
No, it isn't just like digging out the money from your vest,
When the Ladies' Aid gets busy and says, "We'll pay the rest."

Of course we're proud of our big church from pulpit up to spire;
It is the darling of our eyes, the crown of our desires,
But when I see the sisters work to raise the cash that lacks,
I somehow feel the church is built on women's tired backs;
And sometimes I can't help thinking when we reach the regions blest,
That men will get the toil and sweat, and the Ladies' Aid the rest.

It is difficult to be always true to ourselves, to be always what we wish to be, what we feel we out to be. As long as we feel that, as long as we do not surrender the ideal of our life, all is right. Our aspirations represent the true nature of our soul much more than our everyday life.—Muller.

AROUND THE BEND

Dead? No, don't speak of him that way!
Don't think of him as dead!
He's only just gone on a piece,
A little way ahead.

He's traveling still the same highway
That he with us has trod;
Merely outdistanced us a bit
Upon the road to God.

Dead? Never with a thought like that
The smallest moment spend.
He's simply gone beyond our sight;
He's just around the bend.
—Ida M. Thomas, in Christian Guardian.

With real distress we read of the passing of the lovely little daughter of our editor, Rev. A. W. Plyler. With those who knew and loved her, we hoped that our Father in His tenderness and goodness might spare her to them, but as He knows what is best for His children and leads them in the paths that are safe and blest if we trust Him, this sorrow has somewhere its own sweetness and sacredness. May the parents who love and treasure her be comforted and sustained in their grief by their heavenly Father who loves and treasures them, His own children.

MISSION STUDY FOR 1923-24

October is the month set aside by Council and our conference for the mission and Bible study campaign.

The goal—a mission study class, and a Bible class in every auxiliary—can be reached of every auxiliary feels its responsibility individually, every woman being missionary-minded and every woman an evangel. Let the superintendents make their plans at once for an organization meeting, arranging a program for it that will arouse the interest in the subject to be studied, explain the course, and assign the first lesson.

1. A statement should be made about the text-book and author (see article below). If possible have books for sale. If not, exhibit one and immediately after the meeting order a supply.

2. The importance and significance of the subject to be studied should be clearly pointed out. Whet the appetite.

3. Emphasis should be given to the importance of promptness, of regularity, of the taking of notes. Members should be made to feel the great value which the course will have for anyone who will take it seriously and prepare faithfully a value out of all proportion to the time and effort that will be required.

4. Make assignments for the first lesson.

5. Reserve ample time for prayer. There is a blessing of God for this work which prayer alone will command.

Use the new books. Order books from Lamar and Barton, Nashville, Tenn., or Richmond, Va.

Report your study classes to your conference superintendent, and by enrollment card to Mrs. Hume R. Steele, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn. Just to remind you.

FOREIGN MISSION STUDY BOOKS

It has been many years since a thorough study of Japan has been undertaken in the American churches and most of the previous study books on Japan have been long out of print. The new books of this year are, therefore, especially welcome and the interdenominational literature on this theme represents the joint planning of the central committee on the United Study of Foreign Missions and the Missionary Education Movement.

"Creative Forces in Japan" by Galen M. Fisher will not only be useful for study and discussion groups of adults, but it will take its place in the current literature on Japan for general readers as an authoritative and balanced book on that country. Mr. Fisher's experience has brought him into very close touch with many phases of Japanese life and has given him a wide acquaintance that makes him well equipped to serve as an interpreter of the Japanese to Americans. For twenty years he was senior secretary of the international committee of the Y. M. C. A. in Japan. In that period he served at different times as president of the Federated Missions of Japan, as secretary of the Japan Continuation Committee, and as editor of the Japan Evangelist.

For use in women's program meetings and in classes desiring a book treating especially of the life of girls and women in Japan, central committee has published "The Woman and the Leaven in Japan," by Miss Charlotte De Forest, the daughter of one of the distinguished pioneer missionaries of the American Board. Her opportunities for intimate acquaintance with the life and spirit of the people have been unusual and her book shows a deep insight into significant movements and trends of thought among the Japanese. As president of Kobe College she is one of the leaders in Christian education in the empire—a subject treated with thoroughness in her book. At the same time she gives many interesting pictures of the life of those classes of women in Japan, not touched by the educational work of Christian agencies, and makes a strong appeal for the strengthening of the Christian witness to them.

"Japan on the Upward Trail" by William Axling, published by the Missionary Education Movement, is planned especially for the use of middle and upper teen-age readers. In simple and graphic form it presents the facts regarding the history of the Christian Movement in Japan and its present problems; but its chapters are mainly devoted to a series of sketches of outstanding Japanese Christians and missionaries. Mr. Axling has been, for about twenty years, a missionary of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society and is in charge of the Misaki Tabernacle in Tokyo, a great institutional church that is outstanding among the Christian agencies that are pioneering in the extension of the Christian message among the industrial classes in the new Japan.

For leaders of boys and girls of intermediate age there is provided a new course of lessons entitled "Young Japan: A Handbook for Leaders of Intermediate Groups," by Mabel Gardner Kerschner, formerly on the staff of the Department of Religious Education at Teachers College, Columbia University, and well known as a leader of classes in methods of missionary education in summer conferences. The handbook contains stories, suggestions for worship, instruction, dramatization, class or group projects, service activities, etc. It may form the basis of a series of lessons on Japan with a minimum of additional material. It also includes references to other publications for groups that wish to expand the course.

The Missionary Education Movement has also prepared a new series of maps of Japan, one of which, showing the mission stations, appears in the study books and has been enlarged for wall use. There are also outline maps for class use; one for the wall and one for individual use. There is a variety of books, stories, pictures, and handwork for children of junior and primary grade, described elsewhere in this issue.—The Missionary Review of the World.

DO OR DODGE?

Our Sunday school leaders are going to have in October an unusual opportunity to do or dodge a most constructive undertaking in the promotion of the observance of Children's Week. This week in the Western North Carolina conference ought to be observed between the dates of October 7-14 since the suggested week of October 14-21 will come during the session of the annual conference. The important thing, however, is not the time of the observance but the doing of the observance.

The first thing to be done in any Sunday school is for the superintendent, after consultation with the pastor, to appoint some splendid woman who teaches or supervises the teaching of children under twelve years of age as the "key woman" of that Sunday school. This key woman will have direct supervision, under the general supervision of the superintendent and pastor, of promoting Children's Week. It will be remembered that Children's Week emphasizes three important features: The visitation on the part of the elementary teachers of the homes of their children and conferring with the parents as to the best ways of teaching religion to their children, the presenting of an urgent invitation to the parents to attend a general church-wide meeting called the "Parents' Meeting," and at this meeting the adoption of certain definite "forward steps" on the part of the church for better taking care of the needs of its childhood. Most excellent programs are suggested for this "Parents' Meeting" which ought to be held some time during the last Sunday of the observance week. Let's not dodge, let's do. Miss Virginia Jenkins, Lexington, N. C., will be delighted to serve anyone in the promotion of the observance of Children's Week.

LISTING TIME

Every Sunday school that observes Children's Week puts on a "Parents' Meeting" and takes some "some forward steps" will be listed in the Advocate provided a definite report is made. Arrangements will be carefully provided for the making of this report. There is no more important thing to be done during the year than the work of putting across a real Children's Week.

FINK & COMPANY

Rev. G. W. Fink, pastor of Broad Street Tabernacle, Mooresville, is doing a wonderful piece of work with his congregation. They have no church building as yet but meeting in an improvised tabernacle built out in the broiling hot sun, but they do business, lots of it. The tabernacle is open with some sort of a service any day most all of the time. A midnight prayer meeting is held for the night operatives of a nearby mill. Five young men from this tabernacle are now at Rutherford College preparing for the ministry. Of course such a man and such a congregation are liberally patronizing our Mooresville Standard Training School this week. Brother Fink is not only bringing a good group of his workers to the school each night but is taking the work for credit himself, he being the only minister in the school doing this. There is a big place in the world for a company of Christian workers like Fink & Company.

FAIRVIEW

One of the distinctively pleasing things attendant to the Mooresville training school is the regular attendance of Supt. W. C. Thompson and seven of his teachers upon the sessions of the school. One night a terrific electrical rainstorm played havoc with our attendance, but the band of Fairviewites traveled the twelve miles necessary to attend the school. It is no wonder that the Fairview school grows and glows and goes. It is being led by people who are earnest in their work, diligent in their service and loyal to their cause.

STATESVILLE

A hurried call on Broad Street and Race Street Sunday schools at Statesville last Sunday found both these institutions flourishing. Arriving at Broad Street just at the beginning of Sunday school I found Rev. J. W. Moore, the pastor, and R. C. Bunch, the superintendent, both right on the job with a great host of Sunday school workers ready to begin their service. It was truly gratifying to note the work of the large Sunday school at Broad Street. A little pop call on the noted men's Bible class at Broad Street showed the usual one hundred or more men present. In the absence of Brother Dorman Thompson, the teacher, who is ill, Gov. W. D. Turner was leading the class discussion.

Hurrying from the Broad Street Sunday school I arrived at Race Street while the classes were in session and after speaking to two men's classes presented the Mooresville training school to the whole Sunday school in session. Brother Gates Lester superintends this growing Sunday school at Race Street. Rev. E. W. Fox, the pastor, was not in attendance upon the session of the school, but he said when I got to talking so loud he hurried from the nearby beautiful and commodious parsonage over to the church to see what was the matter. Brother Lovable Earnest taught me to read years ago and used "to get after" me when I did not get to school on time. Now I have a chance to get after him.

LITTLEJOHNS

"Littlejohns Sunday school is gaining in momentum. We mean to be a 'C' standard school in the near future. Please come and check up on us. Our superintendent, Bro. H. M. Courtney, thinks we can meet most of the requirements of this standard now. Please send me application blanks for Wesley Bible classes."

So writes Mrs. G. A. Tuttle, assistant superintendent of Littlejohns. It will be remembered that a delegation from Littlejohns Sunday school attended each night of our Hickory training school, twenty-eight miles away, when it was held last April. Rev. F. H. Price is the pastor of these fine workers.

WESLEY FEDERATION

The dates selected by President George L. Hackney and the other officers of the Western North Carolina Conference Wesley Bible Class Federation to be held next year at Lake Junaluska are July 7-10. The Federation will begin on Monday night and close on Thursday morning. A bigger and better program than ever is in the making. Mr. J. Dale Stentz, manager of the Southern Assembly Grounds at Lake Junaluska, says:

"Looking forward to 1924, we anticipate a still greater season, longer conference season, more Chautauqua and music, improved roads, new water supply, improved auditorium, more hotels, many new homes, eighteen-hole golf course, concrete tennis courts, and many other improvements to help make the "Summer Capital of Southern Methodism" what it should be for our whole Southland."

Put these dates on your calendar and plan to meet with us in our sixth annual Federation. You are going to miss a great a time if you don't meet with us.

IN WASHINGTON DISTRICT

Sunday school workers of that section of the Washington district within a radius of twenty or thirty miles of Rocky Mount will have an opportunity September 23-28 to get a week of intensive training in modern principles and methods of Sunday school work. At the First Methodist church, Rocky Mount, that week the second annual Standard Training School will be held, six courses will be offered, and we have every reason to expect an even bigger and better school than we had last year.

The school will begin Sunday evening, September 23, at 7:30 o'clock, and run through Friday evening, with two class periods in each course each evening. The courses and instructors will be as follows:

1. The Sunday School, Mr. O. V. Woosley, instructor.
2. Principles of Teaching, Mr. C. T. Carr, instructor.
3. Pupil Study, Rev. F. S. Love, instructor.
4. Beginner Organization and Administration, Mrs. C. B. Culbreth, instructor.
5. Primary Lesson Materials and Teaching, Miss Keene, instructor.
6. Junior Organization and Administration, Miss Virginia Jenkins, instructor.

This is to be a co-operative school, the Presbyterians of the section joining with us in this big training enterprise. Rev. H. M. North is chairman of the board of managers; Mr. L. L. Gobbel, director of the school.

THEY SAY THEY'RE COMING

From Rocky Mount, where we attended a meeting of workers in the interest of the Rocky Mount Standard Training School, the writer went to Elm City and Wilson. At Elm City we saw Rev. G. W. Fisher, the lovable pastor of our congregation there, and at Wilson, Rev. F. S. Love, pastor of First church, and all down the line we found encouraging interest in the training school. Both these pastors expect splendid representations from their congregations to attend regularly. In fact, seventeen Sunday schools were represented in the enrollment at Rocky Mount last year. They came from Nashville, Tarboro, Wilson, Elm City, Battleboro, Whitakers, Spring Hope and other places. They say they are coming September 23-28 and, we believe, in greater numbers.

FAYETTEVILLE OCTOBER 7-12

We found ourselves right out of the Rocky Mount meeting into one at Fayetteville, there planning for the Standard Training School to be held in Hay Street church October 7-12 for the eastern half of the Fayetteville district. This was an enthusiastic meeting with Rev. R. H. Willis, the presiding elder, Rev. H. A. Humble, chairman of the board of managers,

Rev. W. L. Maness, pastor of Fayetteville circuit, Mr. Albert Stewart, superintendent of Hay Street Sunday school, and several other members of the board and interested workers in attendance. In this school last October between 25 and 30 Sunday schools were represented, and no one is expecting a shrinkage but an increase. Class work will begin Sunday evening, October 7, and end Friday evening. To take care of the various details the following committees were named:

Publicity—A. E. Ritch, chairman; Rev. R. H. Willis, Albert Stewart, and R. W. Herring.

Entertainment—Mrs. T. H. Sutton, chairman; Dr. J. M. Lilly, and Mrs. B. C. Gorham.

Finance—G. C. Trice, chairman; Rev. R. H. Willis, Rev. W. L. Maness, D. U. Sandlin, and Albert Stewart.

Arrangements—Hunter G. Smith, chairman; J. J. Powers, and A. L. Thompson.

ON FAYETTEVILLE CIRCUIT

The meeting referred to above, held Sunday night at 9:15, followed a full day on the Fayetteville circuit. At the invitation of the pastor Rev. W. L. Maness, who, by the way, is enjoying one of the most fruitful years of his ministry, we visited three points on the charge—Camp Grounds in the morning, Salem in the afternoon, and Cumberland in the evening, and never have we talked to such attentive listeners nor received better responses.

We were at Camp Grounds in time to see Supt. N. K. Graham conduct his worship service and to say a few words to the school. Then at 11 o'clock we had a house full of people to speak to, and following this service we met with the workers of the Sunday school and presented the official Program of Work, which was enthusiastically adopted by the workers.

At 3 o'clock we were at Salem for Sunday school, speaking to another house full of attentive listeners at four. Following this service we met with the workers of this school, who adopted the Program of Work just as enthusiastically as did those at Camp Ground in the morning.

We went to Cumberland and talked Sunday school to the good people there at 7:30 o'clock and met with the workers of the Sunday school at the close of the service. Supt. L. M. Culbreth asked for the Program of Work to be placed in his school, and he has the unanimous support of his fellow-workers in this step.

The pastor was with us at Salem and Cumberland and would have been at Camp Ground but for the fact that he was closing a glorious protracted meeting on a neighboring charge.

WILSON MEANS BUSINESS

First church, Wilson, means business in this matter of 'he religious training and development of its boys and girls, men and women. Witness the fact that on or about October 15 its Sunday school will move into a new and thoroughly modern building. This building, approved by the Joint Commission on Church Architecture representing the General Sunday School Board and the Board of Church Extension, is an "A" type structure, thoroughly departmental. Witness also the fact that its Sunday school workers, backed by their pastor, Rev. F. S. Love, who is keenly alive to the situation and thoroughly in sympathy with modern improvements in Sunday school work, are taking positive steps to make the best use of their splendid equipment. General Superintendent A. E. Bishop and Mrs. R. P. Dew, superintendent of the Beginners' department, spent Sunday, August 26, in Richmond seeing how Broad Street Sunday school is doing business. Then Thursday evening, the departmental superintendents met and went over the situation looking to the recogni-

LISTEN TO "ONE OF THE GANG!"

My, but you who did not get over to Junaluska missed so much. There were quite a bunch over from W. N. C. this year and we raised a racket, as did all the leaguers, so our good friends, the erstwhile Sunday school folks, would know we were around. With our good friend, E. O. Harbin, at the helm to steer us across the way we rode high. Having for our teachers such people as Dr. H. B. Thimble, Garfield Evans and Ida Mallary Cobb, all from Nashville, Tenn.; our own Mrs. G. G. Adams, better known as Gertrude Falls; Rev. J. Marvin Culbreth from Fayette, Mo.; Mrs. Charlotte B. Chorpensing, Chicago, and many others just as good, we were very studious in the mornings. But in the afternoons when you heard E. O. Harbin call "How! How! play time!" there was a yell of joy ringing over the lake—for then was the time of merrymaking. Tennis, horseback riding, swimming, fishing, hiking, canoeing, games, dramatic practice, the trips to Eagle's Nest, and our good times with the "Bushes," our returned missionaries from Africa, good sports, all round pals, always ready to do anything for we leaguers—and we learned much from their talks and curios—about our "Missionary Special." At night—well, it is almost too good to tell. Why? You want to know, because when we start the nights at Junaluska we get to dreaming and forget where we are. First, the addresses given by Dr. Charles E. Guthrie, the general secretary of the Northern Epworth League Board. His outstanding address was "Beads of Friendship," a story which all Epworth leaguers want to hear. Then consecration night was great. Our good friend, Dr. C. G. Hounshell gave the address, for no one could have filled the place better. We had a great time. Last but not least, the fun nights, such as stunt night. And old N. C. ranked third in stunts. Community sing night, the Indian party, the moonlight, ferry ride, dramatic evening and such, with spooning galore. Oh, boy! could anyone help going to Junaluska? I'll say not. Come on, leaguers, be with us next year. One of the Gang.

WAXHAW LEAGUERS IN THE MOONLIGHT

Miss Willie Lew Crowder delightfully entertained the Senior Epworth League at the parsonage Friday, July 19th. There were about 25 present. Lawn benches were placed over the lawn in the beautiful moonlight. The guests were met at the door and directed to all parts of the lawn, house and porch. Music, heart dice and contests were enjoyed throughout the evening. A lovely box of candy was awarded the winner in the contest. After many games were played everyone enjoyed strawberry, lemon and chocolate ice cream.

North Carolina Conference WAYNE COUNTY EPWORTH LEAGUE UNION

Sunday night, August 5th, all the leaguers of Wayne county met with the Pine Forest Epworth League at Pine Forest church for the purpose of organizing a Wayne County Epworth League Union. A very interesting devotional service, conducted by Miss Emma Davis, president of the Pine Forest League, was enjoyed by all who attended. After the devotional service Miss Davis asked Mr. Robert Jerome, temporary president, to take charge of the meeting. Miss Emma Davis was elected temporary secretary. The officers for the union were then elected, namely, Miss Emma Davis, Pine Forest, president; Mr. A. T. Griffin, Jr., Goldsboro (St. Paul's League), vice president; Miss Nannie Summerlin, Goldsboro (St. John's League), recording secretary; Miss Ruth Herring, Daniels' Chapel, corresponding secretary, and Mr. Leonard Scott, Salem League, treasurer. Miss Davis then took charge of the remainder of the meeting.

After much discussion as to a definite date of meeting, it was finally decided to meet the first Sunday night in every month with the different leaguers of the county.

A committee to draw up a policy for plans of work was then appointed, namely, Mrs. Mary L. Daniels, chairman, Mr. Glen Borden, Mr. Milton Howell, Mr. R. L. Thompson and Mrs. David Collier. This committee was to report at the next meeting.

As there was no further business we were dismissed by the League Benediction, deciding to meet again September 2nd with the Daniels' Chapel League. Ruth Herring, Cor. Sec.

NEW LEAGUE AT INDIAN SPRINGS

August 19th about fifteen of our Daniels' Chapel Epworth Leaguers went to Indian Springs for the purpose of organizing an Epworth League there. Mrs. Mary Daniels conducted a short devotional exercise, after which she called on the following: Miss Eleanor Daniels, to explain the duties of president and secretary; Miss Gladys Harrell, to explain duties of vice president and second department superintendent; Miss Ruth Herring, to explain duties of first superintendent and corresponding secretary; Mr. William Daniels, to explain duties of third superintendent; Mrs. S. C. Casey, to explain purpose of fourth department; Mr. Wesley Brock, to explain duties of treasurer.

After this, as the Indian Springs people were ready for organization, Miss Eleanor Daniels, president of Daniels' Chapel League, took the chair and officers were elected by the regular formal procedure. After the officers were elected and a list of members taken, Miss Gladys Harrell explained the meaning of the Epworth League colors, flowers and symbol. Miss Ruth Herring explained the purpose of the Wayne County Union, which has recently been organized, and invited the Indian Springs League to the first meeting of the union held on Sunday night, September 2nd, at Daniels' Chapel. The meeting was closed with the League benediction, and after many handshakings we departed, hoping and believing that Indian Springs will soon be one of the best leagues in Wayne county. W. F. Parker, Cor. Sec.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LAY ACTIVITIES

God's ideal church is the church where every member has something definite to do for the advancement of God's kingdom in the hearts of the men and women with whom they come in contact.

It is a true saying that "An idle brain is the devil's workshop," and the same proposition will apply to the soul that is "spiritually idle."

Spiritual activity is essential to spiritual growth; therefore every child of God should be assigned something definite to do in his Father's household.

The duty of the pastor to his congregation is correlated upon and bound up with the duty of the congregation to the pastor, and no pastor should be hindered in providing spiritual food for his congregation by reason of the necessity of providing for the physical needs of his own household.

Every Christian owes to God one-tenth of the proceeds of his labor, the increase of his flocks and herds, the crops of his fields, or the results of his skill and his professional activities, and no Christian can be accounted liberal or generous to God until that which is justly owing is paid. Until that is done we are all "unprofitable servants."

The official board of every congregation should at the outset of each conference year provide a sufficient budget to meet all the requirements of the church for the conference year. Each and every member of the church should be assessed with his or her proper part of the budget and the board should see that assessments are promptly paid in weekly or monthly installments as may be agreed upon, and that the pastor should not be called upon to "leave the word of God and serve tables."

The pastor should be made to realize at the outset that his time is to be devoted entirely to "ministering in spiritual things" and that his official board will take care of all the "temporal interests" of his charge.

Charge leaders should keep in close touch with the official board, and also assist the pastor in advancing the spiritual interests of the church.

The official board should so manage the financial affairs of the church that "deficits" will be unknown and that every charge would be able to report a "clean balance sheet" at the end of the conference year; and the charge leaders should so labor and cooperate with the pastor as to enable him to carry up a one hundred per cent report on the spiritual condition of his charge.

These things cannot be accomplished until every member of the official boards fully realize the measure of their responsibilities, and humbly relying upon the help of the Captain of our salvation bend every effort to the accomplishment of the duties they have solemnly pledged themselves to perform.

Faternally submitted,
 Frank D. Hockett,
 J. D. Moore,
 T. J. Carson,
 Committee.
 Adenda: We, the committee, recommend and nominate Hockett for district lay leader. G. L. Park, J. D. Moore.

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Springs,
 Box 4B, Shelton, S. C.
 Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

Martha M. Wood.

The Home received a valuable gift recently—a linotype machine for the print shop. The giver, a member of Centenary church, our city, wished not to be thanked in print. But we feel sure that the improved capacity for good printing in the print shop will be a continued evidence of value and appreciation of the gift.

The linotype has been ordered and we hope to have it in place and in use in a few weeks.

* * * *

The fall season of our school began Tuesday. Those of us who went up to the school building to the opening exercises found things in beautiful order. The windows were polished to a shining clearness, and the floors newly gone over with an oil finish.

Presently at the ringing of the bell the rows of marching children arrived from the different cottages, some of them coming to school for the first time.

They collected in their different rooms and marched into the auditorium to the sound of music.

After singing a favorite hymn we listened to Mr. Bradshaw read a chapter from Proverbs concerning the value of getting wisdom and knowledge, and he added a few words of encouragement to study diligently and do our best in all tasks that we might obtain the rewards of application and industry.

Then Mr. Wood added a thought on the value of learning to think and to develop the manly and womanly qualities and, as Tennyson suggests, to "Let the ape and tiger die."

Miss Whittington, who has charge of the first grade, was delighted with the primary room with its double rows of low tables and small chairs.

When we went in there to get a glimpse of the littlest folks in school, we found the teacher taking from the tables some of the chairs that were not needed and placing them against the wall, giving wider spaces between chairs and tables.

But I observed several chairs with little girls in them begin to slide together again. Evidently very little girls beginning school have no natural prejudices against sitting very close together. Crowding offers such convenient opportunities for whispering and giggling amusements.

The teachers this year are: Mr. Robert Bradshaw, who is principal of the school; Miss Clara Henley, of Morganton, who has part of the high school work; Miss Kate Conley, of Taylorsville, has the fifth and sixth grades; Miss Ione McClure, one of The Home young ladies and a graduate of Trinity, teaches the third and fourth grades; Miss Whittington, of Pfafftown, teaches the first and second grades; and Miss Martha Calvert of Raleigh teaches music.

Mr. Bradshaw's office in the school building is near the entrance—a front room on the left hand going in. It has one side of the wall fitted up with nice bookcases which Mr. Binkley has just finished. The long shelves of new school books awaiting distribution make one almost feel like starting to school again.

At last the library room in the school building is finished and nicely fitted up with suitable shelves for the library books.

I was mistaken in thinking, as I wrote sometime ago, that the library that Mr. Ralph Hanes had so generously given The Home had been shipped at that time. But they were waiting to be ordered when The Home was ready for them, and are now coming in in large packages from the various publishing houses. These books will fill a large part of the new shelves in the library room.

The Home already had a few hundred volumes of some very nice books; and when Centenary church of our city started to remodel their building in the spring the Sunday school gave us their library—several hundred volumes of good literature—which we have immensely enjoying reading this summer.

And now the new books of Mr. Hanes' gift that are piling in are going to make us feel proud of our library.

Opening packages of new books is a delightful process. And when the books are of such attractive bindings and fresh pages, with even an uncut leaf here and there, to testify to their recent arrival from the book shops, there is nothing nicer—unless it is unlimited time to read them.

Here are whole stacks of fairy stories that children love. Who would believe that so many smart folks spend so much time writing and illustrating lovely fairy stories! I think all of the fairy stories must be here. There are The Blue Fairy Book, The Green Fairy Book, Violet Fairy Book and all the other colors, and every kind of fairy book, from Grim's to Oscar Wilde and Ruskin.

Then there are all kinds of other nice books—history stories, poetry, romance, natural history, popular science books, craft books, carpentry, radio, bird books, moth book, butterfly book, charmingly bound volumes of classical distinction. Nothing too heavy—just the cream of the feast of knowledge, artistically dressed and assorted.

Among such an assortment of lovely bindings and fascinating illustrations, one can scarcely decide where to begin. There is such a range of choice—from Mother Goose to Stars for Beginners.

Mother Goose is certainly a gem in the collection—a large, handsome volume in a box with full-page color plates by a real artist.

One never gets too old to enjoy such a Mother Goose with lovely pictures of Little Bo-Peep, Little Miss Muffet, See-Saw, Margery Daw, Curly Locks! Curly Locks! Wilt Thou Be Mine? Polly, Put the Kettle On; Ring Around a Rosie; The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe, surrounded by her numerous family of cunning infants—and the rest of Mother Goose's remarkable folks.

"THE LABORER IS WORTHY OF HIS HIRE"

(Editorial from the Literary Digest.)

In every crisis of national life the clergymen of America have stood in the forefront of patriotic endeavor; in every human crisis they have brought support and guidance and comfort to souls to desperate need. Now it is time to measure the work and the needs of the preachers, as men in other departments of work today are being measured, that their value may be rightly appraised and their needs fairly met.

The Preachers Deserve Better Pay.—The cost of living has greatly increased. Clothing, food, fuel, and all the daily incidentals that go to make up American life have gone up from thirty to a hundred per cent. And the loans and taxes for freedom's war are ever making deeper drives into the purse. Wage earners in every department of the nation's work have been demanding more income, and their demands have been recognized as just and necessary. Railroad men and miners, lumberjacks and shipbuilders, telegraph operators, automobile makers, and all the multitudes of skilled and unskilled laborers have been counted "worthy of their hire" and of higher hire. The United States government raised the wages of two million railroad workers alone, giving the poorest paid men an increase of forty-three per cent. Corporations and individual employers without number throughout the United States have taken similar action. Trade unions are standing back of their men and using pressure when necessary to gain for them the means to live their lives and do their work as Americans should.

Who stands back of the clergymen of America in these days of pressure? What great organization or compelling authority, what generous heart or spirit of fair play is winning for your minister or pastor or priest or rabbi the salary increase that will give him strength, courage, efficiency, and success in his vital and exalted work for the welfare of the nation and the kingdom of God?

Your pastor is not a cheap man nor an unskilled laborer. He has brought long, careful training to his task. He was chosen with scrutinizing care as to his qualifications, and he is being measured today by high and exacting requirements in the performance of his work. Carry that measurement to its just conclusion. What salary would you expect to pay to the trained man in business of whom such important work and expert ability were required? Set down on paper some of the qualities and duties you demand of your pastor and then judge their value.

Preacher's Task Is Most Difficult.—He must be a man among men, a man of force, tact, and agreeable personality, a good mixer, a man of knowledge, wisdom and authority, whose presence commands respect and whose word carries conviction. He must be able to influence men and women, win their confidence, kindle their enthusiasm, direct their energies and organize their working powers. He must be full of sympathy, ready for consolation, a strength in weakness, a bright light in times of darkness, and a never-failing source of inspiration to the soul of his people. You expect all this of him.

Your pastor also must be the successful head and center of your organized church activities, business, social, and spiritual. On occasion or as a regular part of his work he must be an expert money raiser. You engage him as your chief and leader, the general manager of your church, if not its actual creator or savior from its difficulties. You put upon him a burden and a responsibility you would never dream of intrusting to any cheap man in business.

Nor are these his greatest tasks. He must read and study and meditate and commune with the Infinite. He must understand men and know their work, their trials, their problems, their temptations, their deep inner feelings and aspirations, and the avenues of helpful approach to their sympathies and convictions. He must know something of history, science, and literature. He must be familiar with all social needs and institutions and methods. He must be able to interpret the Word of God with true spiritual insight and practical human application. He must stand before you in the pulpit on the Sabbath and deliver messages that search the soul, feed the mind, bring courage to the heart, make plain the path of daily life, and lift you nearer to heaven or bring heaven nearer to earth.

In these days also your preacher must proclaim the ideals and principles of America. He must stir the patriotism of his young men and send them with strong hearts and noble vision into the service of their country. He must pastor them in the camps and follow them with his letters and prayers as they go to fight. The government values him so highly that it has called thousands of American clergymen into active service to shepherd the fighting men and help them to win wars. At home the government calls him to be its mouthpiece in its appeals to its citizens for every form of patriotic service or economy prescribed as needful for victory. You expect your pastor to be equal to such demands and to do your church credit when called upon for public addresses or community action.

Face the Facts and Be Square.—When you have listed all the qualities and services you ask of your pastor, make out the bill for the amount your church ought to pay for such a man and then move things to see that the church pays that bill. Never mind what has been done in the past nor what long habit has accustomed the church to believe can be done. The standing record of clergymen's salaries throughout this great rich nation is a pitiful shame and belies the real heart and fairness of the American people. The average salary of clergymen in ten of the largest denominations is only $793 a year. What trade or business would tolerate such conditions?

The minister of your church is a human being like the rest of us, and he is feeling the pressure of increased cost of living just as we do. But no government decree has raised his salary. No corporation or trade union stands back of him. He does not go on strike. He simply trusts his people and works faithfully for them seven days a week and many nights and struggles to look respectable and pay his bills and perform the miracles expected of him often for less than the salary of the young girl stenographer who teaches a class in his Sunday school or the wages of the man who lays the sidewalk in front of his church.

Among the more than two million readers of the Literary Digest are active and substantial members of thousands of churches throughout the United States. To them this frank appeal is made in keeping with the urgent needs of the day and the American spirit of justice and generosity. Give your minister a lift. Take the initiative now and have his salary increased to an amount which will come nearer to the real value of the services and enable him to meet the increased cost of living. He is not demanding it, but he needs it none the less, and your own sense of right demands it for him. If his salary is $800, it ought to be made at once $1200. If it is $1000, it ought to be raised to $1500. There is scarcely a church, large or small, anywhere in America that cannot increase its pastor's salary at least fifty per cent. Money never was so plentiful. More actual cash—gold, silver, and paper currency—is in circulation today than at any time in the nation's history, and there is a bigger share for every man, woman, and child. See that your pastor gets his fair share of your profits and those of every member in your church.

Back up the soldiers of America who follow the flag to France! Billions for them! Nothing is too much nor good for our soldiers of liberty. But now remember that your minister is one of the bravest, worthiest soldiers of all. He is fighting for America, for the righteousness that "exalteth a nation." He is fighting for America as he puts his clean, valiant, patriotic spirit into the youth and into the men and women of his community and sends them out into the tasks of the week better fitted for the kingdom of heaven than earth to help win its victories over the archenemy of the human race, the destroyer of bodies and souls. He is the soldier of mercy to those in distress, the ever-ready soldier of service to those who need help. Back him up with whole-hearted support and a quick, generous increase in salary.

We have taken this page to speak for the clergymen of America in this supreme crisis of the nation's readjustment, because we know that they are the one great, devoted, indispensable body of faithful workers who have no spokesman. Only in this way has it seemed possible to reach the individual consciences and hearts of millions of men and women who in all our experience have never failed to respond to any just call.

Editor Literary Digest.

Southern Methodists, Give Attention!—The editorial quoted in the foregoing is the gospel of ministerial support. Whoever wrote it was truly inspired. It deals with a matter that is absolutely vital to the peace and prosperity of the nation. I am giving it place on this page in the hope that thousands of charges throughout our connection will increase the salaries of their pastors for the ensuing conference year.

Also the ringing words of this editorial have a very definite appeal to the church to support the special effort for superannuate endowment. Not only should the preachers be paid adequate salaries while they are active in the service, but also provision should be made for their comfortable support when they are old and no longer able to serve in the active relation. The soul of Southern Methodism cannot be unspotted as long as she permits her worn-out preachers to exist almost as wretches begging bread.

LAMENT OF A LITTLE GIRL

By Walter C. Culp.

My brother Will, he used to be
The nicest kind of girl;
He wore a little dress like me
And had his hair in curl.
We played with dolls and tea then,
And every kind of toy;
But all these good old times are gone,
Will turned into a boy.

Mamma has made him little suits,
With pockets in the pants,
And cut off his yellow curls
And sent them to my aunts.
And Will, he was so pleased, I believe,
He almost jumped with joy;
But I must own, I didn't like
Will turned into a boy.

And now he plays with horrid tops
I don't know how to spin,
And marbles that I try to shoot,
But never hit nor win;
And leapfrog—I can't give a "back"
Like Charlie, Frank or Roy.
Oh, no one knows how bad I feel
Since Will has turned a boy.

I have to wear frocks just the same,
And now they're mostly white;
I have to sit and just be good,
While Will can climb and fight,
But I must keep my dresses nice
And wear my hair in curl;
And worse—oh, worstest thing of all—
I have to stay a girl.

WHEN LITTLE BEAR VISITED SCHOOL

Once in midsummer—when wild roses were blooming along the river bank behind the Three Bears' house in the forest and wild birds were singing from every thicket, Father Bear built a raft and took his family floating downstream. The raft was made of logs firmly fastened together. It was big and strong, and had three rustic chairs on it—a big, big chair for the big Father Bear, a middle-sized chair for middle-sized Mother Bear, and a wee, wee chair for wee Little Bear. There were also poles to keep the raft from bumping against the river bank: a rather heavy pole made just for huge Father Bear, a middle-sized pole for middle-sized Mother Bear, and a long, light pole for Little Bear.

Soon they were far from home, but it was afternoon that day before anything special happened. There was a bend in the river, and when the raft came swishing and tumbling round that bend the Three Bears saw a little log house on a hillside and many children playing outside the door.

At that moment, bump! went the raft into the bank, and there it stuck among the willows!

"Oh, please do not push the raft into the stream for a few minutes!" whispered Little Bear. "Let us watch the children!"

"Yes, let us watch the children," added Mother Bear.

So Father Bear, being willing to please his family, seated himself in his huge chair, and Mother Bear seated herself in her middle-sized chair; but Little Bear stood on his tippytoes in his little chair, so that he could see better.

"Oh, I wish those children would let me play with them!" cried Little Bear, as the youngsters joined hands and danced round and round in a circle.

Plainly, the log building was a schoolhouse, for a moment later out stepped the schoolmaster and began to ring a bell.

The children straightway formed in line, boys first, girls behind. Then they all marched into the schoolroom, saying, "Left foot, right foot, left foot, right foot," and their feet made a merry stamping.

After the children were all in the schoolhouse and the door was closed, a song came floating through the open windows.

When the singing was over, and the only sounds that the bears heard were the songs of birds, the lapping of the water, and the humming of bees, Little Bear said to his father and mother, "I see a little path leading from the river to the schoolhouse, and I see bushes beside one of the windows. If I will go softly, softly, and climb softly into the bushes, may I go and peep into the schoolhouse and see the children?"

"Oh, I do not know about that!" began Mother Bear; but Father Bear said, "Oh, let him go! Only, Son Bear," he added, "if one of the children should happen to see you, and should say 'Bear,' you run straight down to the raft, and we shall be ready to push into the stream and get away!"

So Little Bear crept softly up the path on the hillside, climbed softly into the bushes, and peeped into the schoolroom. All the children were in their seats with their heads bent over books and slates, until the teacher said sternly, "Primer class! Come forward!"

Then two little girls and one little boy, with blue-coated books in their hands, went to a spot in front of the teacher's desk and stood with their toes on a crack in the floor. The little girls edged away from the boy as far as they could while the master looked at them. Little Bear was so much interested that he climbed closer to the window.

"Open your books," said the schoolmaster.

The three opened their blue-covered books.

"Joan, you may read the lesson first, if you please."

So Joan read, "I—see—a—cat."

"Good!" said the master. "Mary, you may read."

"I—see—a—cat," read Mary; she knew every word of that lesson.

"Now, Simon," spoke the master to the boy, "let us hear you read."

Little Bear was sure that Simon did not know his lesson; he was sure of it because Simon acted so foolish and looked so unhappy. He stood on one foot and then on the other and twisted and squirmed until the girls giggled.

"Come, Simon," urged the master, "we are waiting."

It happened that Little Bear felt so sorry for Simon that he forgot all about himself, and leaned forward until his paws rested on the window-sill. No one noticed him then, because bushes clustered close round that window and he had made no sound.

"Simon," the master commanded at last, "read the lesson!"

"I—ee," began Simon, "I—see—a"—

Then he looked up; but instead of saying "cat," as the primer said, Simon, with eyes as large and round as saucers, dropped his book and cried, "Bear! I see a bear!"

Sure enough, he did; so did all the children; so did the master; because Little Bear was right up in the window, trying to tell Simon the word "cat!"

Down the hill ran Little Bear as fast as he could go, and scrambled on board the raft. Father Bear and Mother Bear used their poles and quickly pushed the raft into the middle of the stream, and away went all three of them, laughing. But Little Bear did not wish to visit school again that day—or that summer.—Frances Margaret Fox, in The Youth's Companion.

THE JEWELERS

They were playing jewelry store, Edith and Corinne, when Mrs. Barr called from the back door. Edith ran up at once.

"Hadn't you better invite Mrs. Mills's grand-daughter over to play with you?" her mother asked.

Edith scowled. "We don't either of us know her," she said.

"It won't take long to get acquainted. She looks lonesome."

"Well," yielded Edith.

The two little girls talked together in whispers for a moment; then Edith slowly crawled through the place in the fence where the pickets were off, and walked toward the little girl in the big, old-fashioned garden.

"Would you like to come and play with us?" she asked. "We're going to have a jewelry store; we're making the jewelry store now."

"Oh, thank you! I'd love to!" cried the other. "I'll run right in and ask grandma. You will have to teach me how to play it; I never did," she said.

"Oh, we're stringing snowberries for pearl necklaces and making pins out of asters, and doing things like that. When we get enough we'll ask the other children to come and buy."

"It must be fun!" and Laura Mill's face glowed with pleasure.

The bench, which was now a counter for the display of jewelry, showed several necklaces.

"How pretty!" cried Laura. "Oh, I know what I'll make!" and she ran back into her grandmother's garden.

"I don't think that's very polite—to go off first thing!" said Edith, as the visitor did not return.

"Let's tell her she can have a store by herself," suggested Corinne. "Probably she won't make anything nice."

So Edith called through the fence: "If you want to you can have your things on your side!"

"All right!" came back to them from behind the flowerbeds; but it did not have a joyful sound.

For a long time the three worked quietly. Finally Edith and Corinne were ready for customers. "We'll have to go and tell her," whispered Edith.

Together they approached the fence. "Oh, what a lot!" exclaimed Corinne.

"Why, it's just like a real jewelry store!" cried Edith.

"Aren't they pretty?" said Laura, smiling.

There was a large wooden box close by the "gate," and on it, in small paper boxes, lying on white and pink cotton, were the articles she had made. The blossoms of scarlet sage strung together looked almost like a coral necklace, red, rosy lips made a pretty bracelet, yellow baby roses put together with wire answered for pins and belt buckles, while fuchsias were pretty earrings.

"Nobody will want to buy ours after seeing yours," declared Corinne.

"Oh, I think they will!" returned Laura. "But why not put them all together? I'd rather."

"Would you, really?" asked Corinne, her face growing hot, as she remembered that she had been the one to propose separate "stores."

So more shallow boxes were obtained and the whole stock was soon in readiness for the real play to begin. Business was brisk, and Laura soon had to leave her place behind the counter in order to fashion more jewelry.

By dinner-time all the children were wearing pretty ornaments, and both Corinne and Edith thought there could not be a pleasanter playmate than Laura Mills.—Montreal Star.

SUNDAY WAS A GOOD DAY AT GIBSONVILLE

The church at Gibsonville had arranged for a special Cradle Roll service at the 11 o'clock service. We have 39 babies on the roll and 19 were present. We had 175 at Sunday school and a church about full for preaching. Eight were promoted to the beginner department.

Ten children were used in the service as illustrations, which meant lots to them and to the service.

Three persons were received into the church on profession of faith.

Our collections for all purposes was over $100.

Pray for us that we may make every Sunday what it ought to be.

tion of the school. Following are the names of these superintendents:

Cradle Roll—Miss Cleora Reid.

Beginner—Mrs. R. P. Dew.

Primary—Miss Cleo Winstead.

Junior—Mrs. K. G. Winstead.

Intermediate—Mrs. C. L. Coon.

Senior—Mr. J. Shep Bryan.

Young People's—Mrs. W. M. Wells.

Adult—Mr. A. E. Bishop.

Home—Mrs. J. L. Bryan.

And one of the fine things about these superintendents is the fact that practically every one is a trained worker, and one of the finer things still is the fact that they will continue their training. Many of them we are expecting to attend the Standard Training School at Rocky Mount September 23-28, and training work will be carried on in the local school.

We are anticipating great things for First church, Wilson, because it has the vision, the equipment, the workers and the people.

WHOLE CLASS TO COLLEGE

This is the season for members of our senior and young people's classes to leave for college. Not many of these classes will not have one or more of their members to go off to institutions of higher education. First church, Wilson, is sending an entire senior class. Eighteen boys and girls composing one of its classes go to college. And how fine that is! Another fine thing, and one to be expected, will be for these fine young people to join the Sunday school classes in their college town.

charges of the conference and the capabilities of the preachers to fill the charges. The conference is fortunate in having such a man in the cabinet. In solving the delicate and difficult problems that come up in the cabinet such a man is indispensable.

The Orphanage has greatly missed Brothers Joseph G. Brown and Joseph Daniels for the past two or three months. Both of these ardent friends of our cause have been out of the city. It seemed strange to have meetings of the executive committee of the board of trustees without their presence and counsel. There is no task that gives them more real joy than doing something for our beloved Methodist Orphanage.

With enlarged housing facilities for a hundred more children come other problems that are giving me no little concern. Our school facilities are taxed now to the utmost. What are we to do with the hundred additional children? We have no room for them and the building program does not call for additional school accommodations. As I see it a serious situation confronts us. The urgency of the case demands that we face the facts and undertake to solve the problem.

The Club positively insures satisfaction—with the quality and tone of the instrument—the price—and the terms. If not, the instrument is returnable and your money refunded—every cent you've paid in. You have nothing to do with organizing a club—the management does this—but you get the advantage of being a member of the club, comprising 100 members. And, it is through the organization of such a Club that makes it possible for you to secure a standard grade piano at a reasonable price, on a safe and convenient plan of payments. This is not the installment plan—it is better, safer and easier—it is the ideal way to secure your piano.

A Saving In Price

This is one of the attractive features of the Club Plan of buying a piano. And, how is it done? The explanation is simple. A Club of 100 Buyers, securing 100 pianos can, most naturally, buy them for much less money than the individual who only buys one at a time. This plan gives the Factory an enormous volume, and by turning out a big volume they recognize the big saving, which they, in turn, give to the Club Members. Thus, you get the lowest possible price ever paid for a high grade instrument. You are responsible only for your own purchase—we assume the responsibility for securing the 99 other Club Members. You should join this Club today!

Our Guarantee

In joining this Piano Club you take absolutely no risk whatever. Each and every member is fully protected in every respect. The Club provides a permanent guarantee against all imperfections of workmanship and materials, made by one of the oldest and strongest piano houses in America. If you could read the hundreds of letters we daily receive from enthusiastic Club Members, you would not hesitate to join the Club. You, too, will be just as greatly pleased.

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.—“The Piano is a treasure, and everyone remarks on the sweetness of tone, and it has been so much pleasure to the family. The Club Plan places the Piano in so many homes that otherwise would have to wait an indefinite time to buy. Accept my sincere thanks for your courteous treatment.” MRS. D. A. SPINKS.

College Grove, Tenn.

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.—“In regard to the Piano. I am perfectly delighted with it, and everyone that has heard it, or played on it says they never heard a finer toned one, and I can observe such a vast difference in this one and others that are in this community, that have been placed by agents. Too, every one, even those that know nothing about music, can tell the superiority of my piano over others. Wishing you much success, I am,” MRS. JORDAN RIGGS.

Columbia, S. C.

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.—“I have had one of your pianos in my home for several months and I find that it comes up to your representation in every particular. Your Club Plan for the payment of same strikes me as being very lenient and I think that every home can afford a Piano on this basis. Trusting that you have a very prosperous business along this line, I am,” MRS. AVA JACKSON.

With the opening of the school and the approach of fall, our young people are devoting their spare time to athletics. This is as it should be. No normal boy or girl is unconcerned about play and recreation. It would be a difficult task to tell all the good advantages of athletics when fair play is drilled into those that participate in the games. We insist upon Christian principles being the dominant thing in all games. That is a great lesson that few in this day ever learn.

Less than three years ago the Methodist Orphanage stood third in point of numbers among the orphanages of the state. Today she stands fourth; the Presbyterian Orphanage has moved up in her place. Today they have three hundred and twenty children under their care—sixty more than we have. We have about twice as many Methodists in our conference as there are Presbyterians in the entire state. Yet they have sixty more children than we. I rejoice at this growth, but regret that we have been so conservative when the need has been so overwhelming. During Thanksgiving season we can recover our former position and render a real service to the orphan children of our conference if we will place seventy-five thousand dollars on the altars of the church for the fatherless among us. Shall we do it? Surely we can if we make the effort.

Let's get ready for the biggest Thanksgiving season that the Orphanage has ever enjoyed. To carry out our building program and to meet our current expenses we shall have to raise at least seventy-five thousand dollars during that happy season. This cannot be done unless all get solidly and enthusiastically behind the movement. We must not—we cannot leave this amount to be raised among the town and city churches. Every country church, as well as every town church, must come to our relief. Let plans be made now and carried out at the proper time with a whoop. Our Baptist and Presbyterian friends out distance us in their Thanksgiving offerings for their respective orphanages. We will rise to the occasion this year and not send a collection to the Orphanage, but a real, sure enough offering, commensurate with our financial ability and church loyalty.

To plow and sow and toil and save,
To eke out strength for bread and things
A livelihood to gain. No more?
This is but the drudgery of the slave.
Soul was not born to be in bondage to the clod.
It is its bent to rise with all that thrills and sings;
To fill the world with love and peace and flowers,
A paradise to God. —Unknown.

IN MEMORIAM

FAIRCLOTH—J. J. Faircloth died December 31, 1922, aged 74 years. He became a Christian in young manhood life. His membership was held with Live Oak, Bladen circuit. His loving wife passed away before him only a few short weeks. He was left sad and lonely, but his sadness was but for a day, so to speak, for God same soon and called him, too. He is now at rest while loved ones are left to mourn. May God comfort them all.

G. H. Biggs, Pastor.

GRICE—Sallie McDuffie Grice died December 21, 1922, aged 42 years. She became a Christian and joined Live Oak Methodist church at 14 years of age. She loved the church and was always faithful and true. She leaves a husband and children behind her to mourn over her going. May God comfort them. And while these mourn her friends too will be sad. May God help them all to meet her in heaven.

S. H. Biggs.

McDUFFIE—William J. McDuffie died May 1, 1923, aged 82 years. He became a Christian and joined the Methodist church in early life. His membership was at Deems Chapel, Bladen circuit, and was ever true there. He loved "her sweet communion, solemn vows, her hymns of love and praise." Though a shut-in and sufferer for years he was bright, cheerful and happy, ever living on the sunny side of life. He sleeps now in the home burying ground, leaving a devoted wife, seven children, other loved ones and a host of friends to mourn. May God comfort them all in this sad hour.

G. H. Biggs, Pastor.

SHOALER—Manley Shoaler, son of R. L. and Nora Estelle Shoaler, was born 1909 and died June 22, 1923, aged 14 years. He professed faith in Christ and joined Windsor church at 11 years of age. Manley was a good boy. He was always bright and cheerful, kind to everybody and obedient and loving in the home. He was always at his church on Sunday and loved its work. He was smart and studious in day school, and when from school took delight in work with his father on the farm. He died in triumph, shouting, though so young. He sleeps peacefully in the cemetery at Windsor. May God comfort the sorrowing.

G. H. Biggs, Pastor.

FAIRCLOTH—Sister Maranda Faircloth died September 4, 1922, at the age of 73 years. She became a Christian early in life and was a member of Live Oak Methodist church, Bladen circuit. She was a good woman and loved by all who knew her. We prayed by her bedside in her last hours. She was happy. She went to meet the Lord she loved. We laid her mortal remains to rest and turned from the grave with the husband, children, grandchildren and a host of loved ones and friends, whose hearts had been made sad by her going. May God comfort the sorrowing.

G. H. Biggs, Pastor.

GRANT—Mrs. Pearl Grant, wife of H. V. Grant of Sneed's Ferry, was born September 25, 1876, died August 20, 1923. Mrs. Grant had been in poor health for several years but was patient through all her suffering. She leaves behind to mourn her loss her husband, five sons, H. V., Jr., of High Point, Clarence of Chapel Hill, Perry, Carlton and Paul, who were at home, and one daughter, Pearl Elizabeth. She also leaves several brothers and sisters.

Mrs. Grant had a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, being the wife of H. V. Grant, who represented Onslow county in the state legislature several times.

She had been a faithful member of the Methodist church at Sneed's Ferry for years, and in her passing the church loses a fine spirit, the community a good neighbor, and the home a faithful wife and loving mother.

May God comfort the bereaved ones.

E. W. Downum, P. C.

TYSOR—Mrs. Sarah Ann (Vestal) Tysor, one of the oldest members of Whitsett M. E. Church, South, was called home to God August 16, 1923. She was nearly eighty-seven years old and had served God from childhood. She is survived by Charlie D. Tysor, with whom she made her home, his wife and six grandchildren. Mrs. Tysor was faithful to her church to the last. Her last public pledge was to the Centenary and that pledge was paid in full. May God bless her influence for good and console the bereaved ones. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, the writer, assisted by Rev. G. L. Whitely of the Presbyterian church, and her body was laid to rest in Bethel cemetery.

Geo. W. Clay.

WEAVER—Eli Weaver was born September 7, 1841, and died April 22, 1923, age 82 years, seven months and 15 days. He was the father of nine children, three of which are dead and six living. He was outstripped in this lane of life by his companion about five or six years ago.

In early life he gave his life to Christ and became a new creature in Christ. No one ever doubted that fact for his life was an evidence of his surrender. Eli was one of the leading members of Helton church and was always faithful to it. His influence in this part of the kingdom was great. For the last few years He could not attend church on account of ill health, but he was always interested in church work. As a result of his godly life three of his sons are preachers and one of his daughters the wife of a preacher. His life will be greatly missed here, but his reward is in a better country, and he has gone to claim it. And while He goes to claim his reward his influence will still be living and leading men in the better way of life.

W. E. Moretz, P. C.

BRETT—On July 12th Bro. J. Paul Brett was unexpectedly and suddenly called to his eternal home. Brother Brett was about 62 years old and had been a faithful member of the Methodist church since very young, and he always showed the deepest interest in the welfare of the church, and was one of the few who are always ready to do and work for its upbuilding. He will be greatly missed by the church and community. His health had not been good for two years, but he showed no lessening of his love for and interest in the things that have to do with Christ's kingdom.

He leaves a wife, Mrs. Norma May Deans Brett, and six children, Hayes, Agnes, Kate, Deans, Norma May and Louise Brett to mourn their loss. He was loved by a large host of friends.

We buried his remains in the family cemetery near his home. We expect to meet him in heaven.

S. T. Barber.

LAWS—William Rufus Laws passed from earth to his reward in his heavenly home on August 23, 1923.

He entered the life of flesh on October 9, 1846. He was happily married to Miss Mary Jane Gray. To them were born five children, Mrs. J. T. Bowen, Mrs. John Woods, Mrs. William Roberts, Mrs. Robert Andrews and Mrs. H. F. Parker.

For some years Brother Laws had been one of our substantial members of New Bethel Methodist church, in his quiet, calm way meeting all his duties and obligations of trust put upon him. He always was in his regular place at church services, when health would permit, ready for every emergency and doing his part.

As one of the community he was fortunate in having a host of friends who loved and appreciated him. Brother Laws bore his suffering to the end without a murmur.

The funeral service was conducted at Little River church by Rev. J. C. Williams, assisted by Rev. Mr. Henry Light, a Presbyterian minister of Caldwell. We sang with touching tenderness some of the old favorite hymns.

May our heavenly Father bless and comfort those who feel the stroke most keenly, and may we all meet him in our Father's home above. Asleep in Jesus, far from thee Thy kindred and their groans may be, But thine is still a blessed sleep For which none ever wake to weep.

J. C. Williams, P. C.

The Lasting Memorial

Of all monumental material, there is none more perfectly fitted for a lasting memorial than

Winnsboro Blue Granite
"The Silk of the Trade"

It holds fast each memory and each hope entrusted to its great strength and durability.

It possesses greater density than other monumental stone, has better weather resisting qualities and will not crack, chip or smut.

It is capable of the most artistic treatment.

Inscriptions on this permanent granite are more plainly legible at greater distances, because of the perfect uniformity of color and the brilliancy of its crystals.

A comparison with other standard monumental granites will show the superiority of Winnsboro Blue.

Insist upon your monument dealer using Winnsboro Blue Granite in filling your order.

Monuments Maintain Memories

GIBSON—After a long and painful illness of several months duration Miss Allie Belle Bibson quietly and peacefully fell on sleep at the home of her mother, Mrs. Alice Gibson, in Rockingham, August 26, 1923.

She was born at Ledbetters, Richmond county, November 16, 1902. In the year 1914 she professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist church at Steele Mills during the ministry of Rev. J. J. Barber.

Belle was a quiet, pure, good girl and a Christian young lady that everyone loved. She was always true to the church and Sunday school and a faithful member of the choir. But now she has joined the heavenly choir and will forever sing the praises of God with the angels around the throne.

The funeral services were at Green Lake church, conducted by her pastor and assisted by the writer. She sleeps beside her baby sister, Ruby, who died last January, and her father. One by one the family circle is broken, but we look for the happy reunion by and by. May God bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

R. E. Stanfield.

HESTER—George C. Hester was born December 23, 1853; died at his home in Person county, near Salem church, on May 31, 1923. Had he lived seven months and twenty-two days longer he would have lived out his three score and ten years. For more than forty years he had directed a Christian home. On the order of that of Joshua. On February 23, 1881, he married to Miss Ella Thompson, daughter of Dr. J. A. Thompson. To this happy union were born the following children: Hugh Hester of Danville, Va.; Howard of Leesburg; Mrs. J. C. Cates of Hurdle Mills; Arthur, Eva and Pauline, who live at the old home.

For many years Brother Hester had been a consecrated member of Salem church and had the joy and privilege of seeing all of his children dedicate their lives to the cause of Christ and unite with the old home church. George Hester was well known throughout his county and was one of its best citizens. He was a good neighbor and had a host of friends.

He had been afflicted for more than a year and his death was not unexpected to himself or his people. He had often spoken of the end being near and was ready and prepared for his summons. The interment took place at the family burying ground near his home. As evidence of his many friends an unusual large crowd was present and a beautiful and abundant floral offering covered the little mound that marks his last resting place. Yes, we miss him, but the beautiful life he lived and good influence he had set in motion will be felt for generations to come.

S. F. Nicks, P. C.

HAYES—February 13, 1846, John Julius Hayes was born in Bertie county near Colerain and passed to his eternal reward August 3, 1923, after suffering for several years as almost an invalid. We laid his body in the family burying ground at his country home to await the resurrection.

He joined the Methodist church in early manhood and was ever faithful to its vows and filled every office—Sunday school superintendent, lay leader, trustee, steward, teacher, recording and district steward, and was faithful everywhere, always at church and at conferences when able, and could tell more what the church was doing and needed than most any other.

He was married nearly fifty years ago to Miss Mollie Jenkins, who still survives him together with their only child, Lewis R. Hayes. He was a good husband and father, a splendid neighbor, a valuable citizen and a faithful and consistent church worker.

He was faithful as a soldier in the Confederate army and took much interest in the old soldiers.

His home was indeed the preacher's home and in his last months it was a benediction to any preacher to see how faithfully his companion and grand-daughter nursed him.

We all feel a great loss in his death, but we expect to meet him in a better world.

S. T. Barber.

There is a life that remains ever young
All thro' the day, all thro' the day;
Singing at evening the song it has sung
All thro' the length of the day;
Love is the glory that never grows old,
Telling the story a hundreds times told,
Keeping the light where the shadows have rolled,
All thro' the length of the day.

—Matheson.

"Stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage." That was true of Paul and Silas. That was true of John Bunyan. It is true of all who enjoy mental and spiritual freedom. But prisons may be made without stone walls and cages without iron bars. A mind closed to the truth is in prison, prejudices are iron bars that become soul cages. Only those whom the truth makes free are free indeed. Sin is a state of bondage from which only Jesus can set the prisoner free.

"Life" tells how the teacher asked, "What is a geyser?" and the pupil answered, "A geyser is a waterfall going up." This suggests another question, What is a pessimist and what is an optimist? A pessimist is a man going down and an optimist is a man going up. Speaking of pessimists and optimists reminds us of the pessimist who said, "I really believe that I could make a better world than this myself." "Sure," replied the optimist, "that is what we are here for. Now let's go to work and do it."

The North Carolina Department of the American Legion in annual assembly at Rocky Mount came out strong against the Ku Klux Klan. Good for these young Americans who are Americans indeed! These khaki-clad men who like heroes which they are answered their country's call in time of war do not need to put on a hood in time of peace. Hoods are the head-dress of cowards with which the American Legion has no fellowship. Our hand and heart to the Legion and to all other men who live and fight in the open.

To recite with accuracy a system of dogma, whether simple or elaborate, is no guarantee of personal acceptance with God. But he who is accepted of God will according to his capacity and opportunity accept the doctrines of the Bible as he understands them. Not as some one else interprets the Bible. That is Roman Catholicism. We as Protestant must hold with zeal and unflinching tenacity to the Protestant doctrine of the private interpretation of the Scriptures. Otherwise we shall put on the yoke of Roman Catholicism, though it bear another name.

Tender and abiding was the interest of our Lord and Master in the birds of the air. God's care for the smallest of His creatures, for instance, is emphasized by the following: "Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings and not one of them is forgotten before God?" When warning men of the folly of an undue anxiety about the morrow, Jesus exclaims: "Behold the fowls of the air! for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns, yet your heavenly Father feedeth them." Jesus as a reformer in the temple overturned the tables of the money changers and with whip drove out cattle and sheep and ordered those who sold doves to take them out. But He who overturned money tables did not upset a single bird cage. Birds and women were at all times the objects of His tenderest care.

Those parts of the Bible—the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule, for example—which are easy to understand give some people little concern, while the same folks make a lot of loud noise about those sections of the Bible which are a bit obscure. Why not study and practice those portions of the Holy Scriptures which are perfectly clear until knowledge should be given to fathom the mysteries of Revelation. A study of the Bible instead of research about the Bible is our immediate and urgent need. Preach the Word, rather than defend the Word.

Two battered old wrecks of humanity were sitting together on a bench in a city park when one informed his neighbor, "I am a man who never took advice from anybody." "Shake, old fellow," said the other, "I am a man who followed everybody's advice." This may be a parable and not actual history, but whether parable or history the lesson is the same. It is this: The man who takes advice from nobody is as big a fool as he who accepts advice from everybody. A man must not only have some opinions of his own but must also know how to weigh the opinions of other people.

How could we get on without the poets who call us from a "low vaulted past" and set before us the "vision splendid?" Thank God for the gift of poetry as well as for the gift of prophecy. The prophet is one who speaks for God. The true poet no less utters the voice of God. Here is an example in Holmes:

"Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll;
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!"

Listen to these words of wisdom from a great preacher: "The preacher for this age must be a spiritual preacher. Most men and women go to church because they are religious, or they want to be. They want light on daily duty, and they go to church to get inspiration and impulse to do it. And when they come to church and hear a preacher lecturing on Higher Criticism, or The Documentary Hypothesis of the Pentateuch, or The Two Isaiahs, or some problem in science or philosophy, they go away disappointed. That does not mean that the preacher must discard these results of scholarship. The real preacher uses them all, seeks for material everywhere, science, philosophy, literature, history—the whole realm of knowledge—but he has one great objective in view, that he may bring God to the people, and he uses these things only as the carrier of his message. It is the business of the preacher to give the people the bread of life, and not spend most of the time in telling them how the bread is made."

THE LIQUOR GANG OF NEW YORK

The cloven hoof of the liquor demon never fails to show itself when the wet gang of New York, or of any other place, for that matter, gets in action.

The indictment of W. H. Anderson, the leader of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, is a case in point.

The New York Christian Advocate does not mince words in denouncing that rum-soaked government of New York City, which is seeking to railroad Anderson to the penitentiary in order to help on the anti-Volstead fight. This champion of right says:

What more dastardly act can ambitious politicians commit than to sacrifice an individual or the welfare of the people in order to cover their own immoral acts? Those who have followed the prosecution of the action against William H. Anderson, the people's champion for a sober, happier and more prosperous state, are convinced that it is not justice but corruption which motivates the interests which are back of this effort. The unjustified and undemocratic repeal of the Mullan-Gage Law—a nullification act—and the ambitions of a wet Tammany governor stand out so prominently in the mind of the decent people of the nation, that it seems necessary to the logic of scheming politicians to find a victim as a smoke screen to cover their deeds.

To all intelligent, respectable citizens of New York state of whatever party, the name Tammany recalls more in the line of political corruption than a long string of adjectives could picture. From all that has been published to date on this present issue it would seem that certain elements in both the old line parties, a group in which citizenship and public morality register very low, are back of this effort for their own designs. This journal is not a political sheet, but when the very fundamentals of ordered society are attacked and there are apparent attempts to debase the means of justice for personal ambitions, this spokesman of a great body of Christian people can no more keep silent than can any other organ or organization which stands for true Americanism.

That a leader of an organization having such high idea's as does this agency of the Christian church, the Anti-Saloon League, should be prosecuted in the manner in which this case has been handled, while embezzlers, notorious crooks and thugs wander the streets, is beyond the comprehension of honest people, except there be sinister motives back of it. The directors of the Anti-Saloon League declare they are satisfied that William H. Anderson is innocent of any crime and have so repeated whenever any opportunity is given, yet upon the charges of a disgruntled ex-employee, who is also a confessed perjurer, a district attorney's office turns its heaviest guns against him in an attack. Such forces as attempt to make a corrupt use of the legal machinery should be made to understand that the moral convictions and love of justice of the overwhelming majority of Americans of all parties, far outweigh any ties of party loyalty.

EVANGELISTS AND PHYSICAL TRAINERS

Some evangelists in these modern days publish the fact of their employing a high priced physical trainer to keep them "fit" for the task of saving souls. The Bible covers a long period of spiritual history and gives us to understand the secret of power in the lives of God's most illustrious servants, but there is no record of God's prophets having received their anointing from a physical trainer. Jacob got his "new name" by wrestling with an angel and not with a physical trainer. Think of Elijah, Amos, Hosea, Micah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, John the Baptist or St. Paul with paid physical trainers. Imagine John Wesley, who preached five times a day, wrote volume after volume and traveled thousands of miles keeping in trim under the directions of a physical expert. Bishop Asbury, the father of American Methodism and the "Prophet of the Long Road," got along somehow without this physical necessity of some modern preachers who are strong with that class of American people of whom Barnum talked.

ST. PAUL'S CHALLENGE

At this date Jesus with the added emphasis of nineteen centuries of Christian history can say, "Believe me, or else believe me for the very work's sake." For unquestionably the most compelling word at present in behalf of the Christian religion is its history, even though Christianity has in most instances very poorly represented the spirit and purposes of its Divine Founder. With all its faults and defects and at times attendant error and even corruption, the Christian religion has proven its superiority as a builder of nations and of individual character and as a solace to the human heart in that it has "the promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come."

But this was not true in the days of St. Paul. The Christian religion was then new to the world. It was practically without a history. There were not millions, as now, to testify to its worth. Christian history is now resonant with songs of triumph which have been by the saints of the bygone centuries. Truly, we are surrounded by a cloud of witnesses. But Paul was a pioneer with the attendant loneliness of the pioneer. He had a new truth to proclaim and the world has at all times been slow to accept new religious doctrines. For in religion humanity is tremendously conservative.

What did Paul do in the midst of this trying situation? He did not rely upon philosophy. He did not trust in superior ethics. He did not say "I must see Rome, also, because I have the Ten Commandments in one hand and the Golden Rule in the other."

He was not ashamed of the cross of Christ and became the world's greatest interpreter of its significance. But this was not the single challenge that he threw out to the world and upon which he staked the faith which he preached.

Paul staked everything upon the resurrection of Jesus Christ and the consequent resurrection of the dead. Hear him: "And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and our faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; ye are yet in your sins. But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept."

This was a daring challenge to the world of that day and to the subsequent ages. But Paul won. Our emphasis must in like manner be placed right here, if we win. The Christian religion is of another world. Its foundation is a stupendous miracle. The deity of our Lord and redemption by the cross all harmonize with St. Paul's notion of the resurrection.

"FACTS AND FICTION ABOUT EVOLUTION"

Rev. R. L. Foster, Davidson, N. C., is the author of this attractive and interesting volume of 74 pages with the foregoing title.

The method of dealing with the evolutionary hypothesis employed in this book is unlike that of other authors who oppose the doctrine of evolution. Mr. Foster meets the evolutionary champions in their own field and shows that their conclusions are unwarranted.

The basic arguments of evolutionists are considered in such a way as to give a clear understanding of the entire subject. Technical expressions have been eliminated as far as possible and the entire work has been so condensed that students as well as laymen will not find it difficult to go over practically the whole field by the aid of the book.

Those interested in the subject will do well to read this little volume which bears the impress of the author's vigorous and logical mind. The Stratford Company, Boston, Mass., Publishers. Price $1.00.

Trinity College opened yesterday with a thousand students—two hundred women and eight hundred men. Thirteen new instructors have been added to the faculty for the coming year. The gymnasium building is nearing completion and will probably be formally opened October 15. The last two of the old Trinity Park School buildings have been put in first class shape to care for new incoming students.

PUTTING THE BLAME ON THE BEANS

Dr. Chas. R. Brown in his Yale lectures to young preachers on preaching says in one paragraph:

The minister may well order his eating with reference to the delivery of his sermon. . . . Much of the religious apathy in country places in the commonwealth of Massachusetts has been attributed to the prevalent habit of serving baked beans for supper Saturday night. There are homes where the beans are served up again for Sunday breakfast. It is a well-nigh impossible task for a preacher filled to the throat with baked beans to preach to a congregation similarly filled and accomplish the full and appropriate measure of spiritual result.

We have no doubt that Dean Brown is right in his diagnosis of the case in the bean eating commonwealth of Massachusetts. But there is "religious apathy" in North Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee, Pennsylvania and numerous other places where the preachers and people are not bean eaters.

But there is ham and eggs, hot waffles and numerous other things Sunday morning to tempt the appetite. The dean blames the beans, but he can just as truly put the blame on many other staple articles of diet.

Fasting or abstinence has come to be looked upon as out of date. The feast has taken the place of the fast. The kitchen and dining room has a prominent place in the modern, well ordered church, which is all right, if they do not become a substitute for prayer and fasting. The Bible enjoins fasting, Jesus practiced fasting, and the disciple need not expect to get ahead of his Lord. A good preparation for effectual preaching is a full head, a full heart and an empty stomach.

THE ANNUAL COMPLAINT

We are beginning to hear the groanings that can be uttered. The occasion of this moaning is the approach of annual conference with the churches striving to make their collections. Some Methodists will hold on to their dimes and dollars to the last minute. Others will not pay at all. The officials in some instances have been negligent. These and kindred things have put the churches as usual in a bad hole.

"Shall we ever live at this poor dying rate!" It appears so. Why not rally with some genuine enthusiasm and make things go as they ought. A whole lot of churches haven't as much "go" in them as a little Ford car.

Let's do better. Let's everybody rally to the task. Get into this final tug of the year with such dash and "pep" that you will surprise even yourself. Some folks would surprise themselves if they were to get stirred up the least bit. Other people would be surprised also. See if you can surprise somebody between this and the annual conference.

CENTRAL CHURCH, ASHEVILLE

Central church, Asheville, at its last board meeting put on a director of religious education and a secretary of finance. This gives that great church a paid working force of six people. With a company of six to lead the membership, Central should be a wonderful power for good in the metropolis of the mountains.

Dr. Ashley Chappell, who for a while in the early part of the summer suffered the effects of overwork, is now back at his tasks in good physical trim and is looking forward not only to the closing of a great year, but to an even greater in the year that is just ahead.

PAY THE EDUCATIONAL PLEDGES

August, September, October and November have been set apart for the collection of pledges made to the Educational Movement. Those who pledged to this sacred fund should see that the amount due on such pledges be paid. It will be a good idea in paying up church dues for the conference year to include the amount due on educational pledges. The majority of people who made pledges are able to do this if they only plan to include these with other church dues. Let us have a great rally in these collections between this and the assembling of the two annual conferences.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Western North Carolina Conference, Winston-Salem, October 17.

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

Rev. J. B. Hurley, pastor at Roxboro, last Sunday began a meeting to continue ten days or two weeks. Rev. J. H. Barnhardt of Greensboro will do the preaching.

Miss Daisy Davies sailed for Europe on the Mauretania September 3. Miss Davies will give several months to special evangelistic work in Poland and Belgium.

Trinity church, Charlotte, has purchased a new ten-room parsonage in Dilworth. This congregation some weeks ago sold the old parsonage. The new building will meet every demand of a pastor's family.

Spring Garden Street church, Greensboro, will on next Sunday begin revival services to continue two weeks. The pastor will do the preaching. A leader of song has been secured to direct this part of the services.

Rev. A. C. Gibbs in this his first year as pastor at Main Street, Thomasville, has received more than one hundred new members into the church. The Thomasville Methodists are closing a most successful year.

Rev. G. T. Bond of Greensboro, who in his khaki uniform looks every inch a soldier, was last week at Rocky Mount chosen chaplain of the North Carolina Division of the American Legion. Brother Bond is also a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

Rev. H. G. Allen, who has just closed a very successful revival at Cooleemee, has been for the past week in revival services at Brevard Street church, Charlotte, where Rev. T. F. Higgins is pastor. Few pastors of the conference has this year done more successful revival work than has Brother Allen.

Rev. W. B. Thompson is closing four successful years on the Uwharrie circuit. The people would be glad to have him back for another year, but he will probably be assigned to another field of labor. The charge that secures him for pastor will if right minded appreciate both him and his family.

Mr. J. B. Woosley, who is pursuing post graduate studies for a doctor's degree at the University of Chicago, has been spending a few days here with his brother, Mr. O. V. Woosley. He will return to Chicago September 27 for his final year's work.—The Dispatch.

Rev. W. W. Peele last Saturday began revival services at Edenton Street church, Raleigh. The Wisdom Sisters of Missouri will sing. With Edenton Street's gifted pastor preaching and the Wisdom Sisters singing the people of Raleigh are offered a rare treat in spiritual things.

The pastor, Robert E. Hunt, has recently united in marriage at the parsonage, Cabarrus, N. C., Miss Hildah Howell and Boise Kiser, both of Cabarrus, and Miss Sadie Black and Henry Flowe, of the same community. On September 5 he officiated at the marriage of Miss Fannie McLeod, of Granite Quarry, and Charles J. Hunt, of Pleasant Garden, N. C.

Rev. C. M. Pickens, according to the Albemarle papers, has been doing some great preaching in his church in Albemarle. This is not news to people who know Pickens, neither does it take the inspiration of a revival meeting to put him at the top as a preacher. But these recent sermons at Albemarle was in a revival.

"We have seized about seven car loads of various brands of body rubs, hair tonics and other preparations, nearly all of which proved to be nothing more than special denatured alcohol which was intended for redistillation and later to find its way back on the market in the form of potable liquor," says Divisional Chief H. L. Duncan of Minneapolis in a report to Federal Commissioner R. A. Haynes.

Dr. E. L. Pell of Richmond, Va., is spending this week with his daughter, Mrs. A. M. Scales, in Greensboro, before starting on a lecture trip in Indiana and Ohio. Dr. Pell will before returning hold a meeting in Columbus, Ohio, also in Knoxville, Tenn., where Church Street Methodist church and the First and Second Presbyterian churches of that city join in union services.

Bob Self of West Asheville began a meeting Monday night of this week at Walnut Street church, this city. Rev. A. Burgess is the pastor.

Mr. L. T. Cates of Burlington is open for some engagements as an evangelistic singer. He has fine recommendations and will doubtless render good service to any pastor or church who may need him.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Cranford of Trinity, N. C., on September 16 celebrated the 43rd anniversary of their marriage. These good people have through all these years been taking the Advocate and expect to continue as long as they live.

Rev. L. D. Thompson, pastor of Hawthorne Lane church, Charlotte, has had Rev. A. D. Wilcox of Durham with him in a revival meeting. The Observer reports great preaching by Brother Wilcox and large congregations at all the services. The revival is now in its second week. The results are fine.

Mr. James Alley, author of "Hambone's Meditations" and cartoonist on the Memphis Commercial Appeal, is a member of one of our suburban churches in Memphis. He is making considerable reputation, the Commercial Appeal recently having an editorial of high commendation. Thousands of people are reading the quaint humor and fine philosophy of Hambone.—Methodist Advocate.

Rev. J. T. Mangum and his people at Lincolnton will enjoy a great day Sunday when Bishop Denny dedicates their new church. The Lincolnton church since April 1 has raised $25,000 to pay off the indebtedness on the church. We congratulate them upon the good success which has attended their efforts and wish them great spiritual prosperity in the years to come.

The special revival services at Glenwood church, Greensboro, of which W. A. Barber is pastor, have been in progress for ten days and the pastor reports that things are coming to pass. Rev. S. B. Williams of Whitmell, Va., is doing the preaching, and the people are filling and over-filling the church to hear him. The greatest in the history of the church is the verdict of one of the oldest members.

With the approach of autumn comes the pastime on the part of many of shooting bullbats of an evening when they circle low over the fields catching insects of sundry sorts. To kill a bat is a crime. The state law imposes a severe penalty and the federal law imposes a fine of $50. Keep this in mind and when the reader sees some one killing these the greatest of insect destroyers, report him to some game warden or state solicitor. A few fines will stop the practice.

Tuesday, September 4th, at Taylorsville, Miss Evelyn Henley was united in matrimony to Mr. Thomas C. Barber, the ceremony being performed by Rev. A. R. Bell, the bride's pastor, in the Methodist church. The ring ceremony was used. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the music, by Misses Rosa Watts and Clara Henley, was beautiful. Mr. Barber is from Winston-Salem and holds a position with the Southern Railway. After the ceremony the happy couple left for Washington, New York, Buffalo and other points north.

Dr. Paul H. Linn, president of Central College, Fayette, will deliver the annual lecture before the Michigan conference, Methodist Episcopal church, in session at Grand Rapids, Mich., this week. He will also, by special invitation of the laymen, address the conference on the subject of unification. The invitation to Dr. Linn to deliver this lecture and address is indicative of a cordial spirit on the part of our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal church and a desire to know the mind of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with reference to unification. Dr. Linn is a member of the Commission on Unification and the Michigan conference and laymen may expect to hear great messages.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

THE CONFERENCE HISTORICAL SOCIETY

We are glad to announce that Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe will address the Conference Historical Society Tuesday evening, October 16th, on "Reminiscences of an Itinerant" in Centenary church, Winston-Salem. John W. Moore, President.

NOTICE OF DEDICATION

Bishop Collins Denny will dedicate the First Methodist church of Lincolnton Sunday, September 23. All former pastors are cordially invited to be present. J. T. Mangum, P. C.

Brother L. P. Byrd of Mt. Gilead writes us that the farmer furnishes 75 per cent of our business men an equally large per cent of our preachers and is the foundation of all our industries. Then he asks, "Can't you publish something for this class of people?" In answer we take pleasure in referring our brother to the article with the caption, "The Farmer Feeds Us All." It is on page 16 of this issue of the Advocate.

"We have just closed a very successful revival meeting. Bro. M. A. Osborne of Epworth church, Concord, did the preaching for us. There were 60 or 70 conversions and reclamations. I received 20 into the church Sunday morning on profession of faith as a result of the meeting. Brother Osborne did excellent preaching while here. He is a hard worker, a man of strong faith and power. Our people fell very much in love with him." So writes Bro. W. B. Davis from Belmont, Charlotte.

RELIEF FOR QUAKE SUFFERERS

Ten thousand dollars has been cabled by the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the immediate relief of the earthquake sufferers of Japan. This action was taken at a meeting of all the secretaries and treasurers and as many members of the executive committee and members of the board as could be assembled at the time. After a careful consideration of the desperate situation of our Oriental neighbor it was decided to send out a church-wide call for help. Three hundred telegrams were immediately dispatched to presiding elders and bishops, urging that a collection be taken in all the churches of Southern Methodism on September 9th for this cause.

We may well be proud of the response to this call. The total amount received up to September 14th has reached the sum of $18,749.38. Those churches which have not observed "Japan Day" may do so at any time, though an early date is urged because of the need for immediate relief. Funds will continue to be received by the Board of Missions and may be sent to Mr. W. M. Cassety, Jr., Acting Treasurer, Box 510, Nashville, Tenn. As soon as they are received they will be sent to the treasurer of our Japan Mission in Kobe and will be used in co-operation with other relief agencies now on the field.

CONFERENCE BOOK EXCHANGE

This notice is just to remind the brethren to bring a package of books to conference this year and place them on the table of the Book Exchange. The prospect is that we will have a very large assortment this year, so bring yours and sell them and buy others.

Remember the terms: Ten per cent on sales; no sale, no charge. Put your name and price in each book in pencil so that none will be lost.

I think that last conference the Exchange was more help to the brethren than ever. We sell books, or exchange them, take care of packages, cash checks, etc. The Exchange is run with the idea of helping our brethren. Bring some books.

A. R. Bell.

PASTOR'S REPORT BLANKS

On account of changes in report blanks ordered by the last General Conference it will be necessary for all pastors to have a new set of blanks this year. Reports made out on one of the old blanks will of necessity be incomplete. I have ordered from the publishing house a supply of the new blanks for the North Carolina conference, and have placed in the hands of each presiding elder a sufficient number for the preachers in his district. The price of the book of blanks is 15 cents, and each pastor is asked to hand this amount to his presiding elder. R. H. Willis, Sec. N. C. Conference.

OPENING OF CAROLINA COLLEGE

Rev. Julian L. Rumley writes as follows of our younger junior college at Maxton where he is pastor: "President Green believes in the college and has brought the people to the same viewpoint. The attendance at the opening of the fall term is most gratifying. Quite a large increase over the former attendance, money has been subscribed and partly paid in for the erection of a dormitory, and the future of the institution looks bright."

The Lamp of the Soul

A Sermon by REV. J. H. JOWETT, D. D.

Text—Luke 11:33. "The lamp of body is the eye; when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light; but when it is evil, thy body also is full of darkness."

The eye provides one of the most familiar figures in the Scriptures. It is used by psalmists, moralists, and by prophets. The eye is the organ of discernment, the minister of vision. Even when there is healthy sight, there are varying degrees and qualities of vision.

I am sometimes amazed when I have walked through some rich and beautiful country how little I have really seen. On the other hand, how intense and inquisitive was the vision of Dickens. Here is what Bagehot said about it: "We have heard that he could go down a crowded street and tell you all that was in it, what each shop was, the grocer's name, how many scraps of orange peel there were on the pavement. His works give you exactly the same idea. The amount of detail in them is something amazing, and to an ordinary writer, something incredible. There are pages containing telling minutiae which other people would have thought enough for a volume." "The lamp of the body is the eye," and Dickens' lamp seems to have been like a fierce searchlight, discovering the details in the faces of things and exposing the very atoms and fibers of his surroundings.

This gradation in capacity of discernment is also evident in the matter of the historic imagination, when the eye is turned not upon the things that are near, but on the things that are far; not upon the characteristics of the present, but on the characteristics of the past. The majority of people have no realizing vision of the life of the past. We see history as in a photograph, not as in a cinematograph. It is a picture, but it does not live; there are groups but no movement. Our vision of history is a Pompeii, a city of the dead, not like Pompeii when it was filled with glamour, and music, and gaiety, and dance, abounding in feverish and tumultuous life. Thomas Carlyle has historic imagination in a superlative degree. He hears! He tastes! He touches! He is sensitive to the realities of things, sees them alive, and just as they are.

And now take this figure of the bodily eye, or the eye of the historic imagination, and use it as the Master does to interpret the deeper and loftier life of the soul. He teaches us to use the lamp of the body to find the significance of the lamp of the soul. He turns our thoughts away from the eye that scans the furniture of existence, to that which looks upon life itself. What is this lamp of the soul that finds its analogy in the lamp of the body? We may give it what name we please; we may call it conscience, or moral sense, or the instrument by which we discern moral values, or the organ of spiritual discernment. I am not troubled about the name. It is the capacity of the soul for apprehending moral and spiritual issues. This capacity can be impaired; it can be healthy or diseased.

The Master teaches us that when the lamp of the soul is healthy it is "single," and that the single eye fills the body with light. What are some of the characteristics of healthy moral vision? First of all, it has a certain simplicity. The lens is simplex and not complex. The glass is perfectly true. There is no disturbing ridge, no perverting convolution. The conscience is not deflected by prejudice; it is not damaged by double-mindedness. It is perfectly simple. And in the second place the healthy vision is distinguished by a certain catholicity or breadth of vision. It is not local or partial in its range. It is not so much microscopic as telescopic. It has breadth and width in its outlook; it takes in the whole situation.

And, thirdly, it is always marked by a certain serenity. Wordsworth spoke of "an eye made quiet by the joy of things." In another place he sings of "the harvest of a quiet eye." The words convey the very suggestion I am seeking to give. The judgment is calm and cool. There is no feverishness, giving rise to exaggerations; there is no fussiness, giving rise to delusions. I suppose this serenity of judgment would find noble examples in Whittier and John Woolman. And, lastly, the healthy moral vision is characterized by a certain penetration. The light from the "single" eye is like the X-ray; before its shining the inwardness of things stands revealed. The single eye does not "judge after appearances," but judges righteous judgments, and thus comes to know the truth. Such is the single eye.

But our Master gives us the contrast in the eye which He describes as "evil." This is the perverted organ of vision; it is diseased and untrue. The lens has been tampered with and the moral issues are confused. "Things are not what they seem." Let me mention two or three of the injurious ministries by which simplicity is twisted into duplicity, and the purposed agent of light becomes a servant of darkness.

Jealousy is a destructive presence which perverts the lamp of the soul. We have a fierce example of this perversion in the Old Testament. David was returning from his encounter with Goliath. A body of women had gone out from the city to meet him, and they accompanied his return with songs of triumph. And this was their song: "Saul hath slain his thousands and David his ten thousands." And Saul heard the song and he marked the contrast, and his soul was inflamed with the unclean fires of jealousy. "And Saul eyed David from that day forward," and that eye was an untrue one, and never saw David truly. It transformed the innocent into a monster and filled the vision with an entirely false and crooked world. And we have a milder example in the New Testament. Was there not just a touch of perverting jealousy in the mind of Simon Peter when he turned to the Lord and asked, concerning John, "And what shall this man do?" There is nothing fierce about it; yet one feels instinctively that something was rising in the soul which would interfere with the accuracy of the sight.

And greed is a perverting presence that destroys the lamp of the soul. We can see quite clearly how it maimed the vision of Judas and destroyed the fairness of his judgments. He looked upon a beautiful deed, the love expression of a passionately grateful heart, and he called it "waste"! He had lost the power to see the beauty of the sacrificial, and the love of money had changed the face of the spiritual world. In the long run, thirty pieces of silver were more alluring than his Lord. The man with the muckrake saw nothing of the angel presence, or of the shining crown; he only saw the tinsel and the gewgaws of a transient world.

And egotism is another enemy of the soul, and can destroy the lens of moral judgment. The Pharisee who in his prayer could say: "I thank Thee that I am not as other men," had lost his capacity to truly see the publican. Self can be so obtrusive that the real brother is altogether hid. I know no more terrible portrayal of the terrific destructiveness of egotism than in King Lear. One can watch the blinding ministry at work, until Lear's whole world is filled with night.

There are other perverting presences that might be named, but these will suffice. They all create the evil eye. The lamp gives no true light. "Those who look out of the windows are darkened." And how great is the darkness!

Our Master also teaches us the inward influence of the eye upon the entire personality. The condition and quality of every power is affected and determined by the state of the soul lamp, the condition of the moral sense. If there be a good eye, everything is enriched, "thy whole body is full of light." If there be an evil eye, everything is impaired, "thy whole body is full of darkness." Let a man test the Master's statement. Let him take an inventory of his powers, and study the effects upon the powers of the single and the evil eye.

Take affection. How is affection influenced by the single eye? Endow a man with a fine discernment of moral values and a serene love of rectitude. Give him a jealous concern for the rights of others, and a fairness which recoils from all unscrupulousness. What effect will that have upon his love? It will make it pure and bright and sweet as sunshine. Later generations have given us no man more royally upright than Charles Kingsley. Above everything else he was distinguished by the single eye. Nay, he was even more distinguished by the wealth and volume of his affections. But endow a man with an evil eye. Take from him the power to see truly. Let his moral vision be a minister of the crooked way, an organ of duplicity, and everybody can see that that man's love is defiled. It becomes a night-shade rather than a lily, and his whole body is full of darkness.

Or take veneration. What is the effect upon veneration of the single eye? Let a man's vision be simple and serene. Let him stand before something venerable and august, and he will have a sense of glorious worship, and of the freedom and expansion which are the gifts of the sublime. But let a man be possessed with an evil eye, let him be insidious and deceptive, and the effect is this: veneration becomes the disposition of a slave. Worship is degraded into a talisman for avoiding the lash. His very homage is ignoble servitude, and his whole body is full of darkness.

Or, lastly, take the power of friendship. Give a man a single eye. Let him see things as God sees them. Let him apprehend the true and the pure and the beautiful, and the effect will be a friendship as sweet as the love of Jonathan for David, and pure as the love of John for his Lord. But give a man the evil eye; let him be a lover of mischief; let him spend his strength in evil devices and subtle deceptions, and everybody can see that holy friendships will be degraded and exploited, and he will eventually sell his Lord.

And so it is with all the varied powers of our richly dowered personality. Nothing can be vigorous where the moral lamp is broken. Everything suffers when the eye of the soul is impaired. "If thine eye be evil, thy whole body is full of darkness."

But men with damaged vision can recover their sight. It was one of the gracious purposes for which our Saviour came and died. "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, to give recovery of sight to the blind." Every man can find his missing piece in the Lord. Blind eyes can be opened. Untrue eyes can be made to see the King in His beauty, and to behold the land that is very far off. Honest communion with the Lord Jesus recovers our lost estate.

"Lord, that I might receive my sight."

"According to thy faith be it done unto thee."

GAS MASKS AND SCHOOL BOOKS

Walking down the street during these opening days of school one notices many of the children using as book-satchels the bags which the soldiers used during the war for carrying their gas masks. This morning I noticed two boys in front of me carrying these bags and it was this incident that set me to thinking and to writing.

The first thing that I thought of was the pathetically small amount spent for national education as compared with the seventy or eighty per cent of all taxes for wars past, present and future. The recent report of the Illiteracy Commission, stating that illiteracy is far from abolished in our county, adds to the significance of that fact. Miss Grace Abbot, reporting for the Federal Child Labor Bureau informs us that we have at the present time more than a million children between the ages of ten and fifteen engaged in gainful toil.

Nearly everyone who has given any thought to the question agrees that war is the one greatest sin of the race. Will the ministers in our pulpits continue to spend their strength in fighting petty things when there are so many great outstanding collective and entrenched evils in the world to fight? Have we any reason to believe that the rising generation will have any different attitude toward war than the present one? If it does not how are we ever to have a peaceful world?

The dead, the wounded, the property losses, the plagues and the famines have been held up to us as the scourge of war. We all know that this is bad enough. But are these the greatest? What about the spiritual losses? Hear a nation-wide religious editorial:

"The aftermath of the war is a soul-blight. It puts all the spiritualities awry. It exalts hate and debases love. It hands over culture to the Pharisee and the propagandist and turns the truth-seeker out of doors. It crowns the demagogue and makes government a bone of contention between the red-handed radical and the white-livered reactionary. All of its conceivable goodness is swallowed up in a flood of badness."

Hear another testimony: The father of one of our young men, back from France, finding that his son, like many others, would not talk, rebuked him for his silence. "Just one thing I will tell you," the son answered. "One night I was on patrol in No Man's Land, and suddenly I came face to face with a German about my own age. It was a question of his life or mine. We fought like wild beasts. When I came back that night I was covered with the blood and brains of that German. We had nothing personally against each other. He did not want to kill me any more than I wanted to kill him. That is war. I did my duty in it, but for God's sake do not ask me to talk about it. I want to forget it."

With the horror of Reconstruction days in the South still in the minds of many yet living, with our children growing up in this atmosphere of chaotic hysteria due to the late war, should not those who have been commissioned ministers of the Prince of Peace throw all their weight into the scales against war? The American Legion is now waging a campaign for a Conference for the Limitation of Air Armaments. And it is needed with France building 1500 planes this year and 2000 next year and with Great Britain and our own country struggling to keep up. Shall the preachers be less concerned than the ex-soldiers?

A Veteran Who Was There.

LITERATURE AND MARRIAGE

Wm. Thornton Whitsett.

Much of the literature of all the ages hinges upon the fact as stated in Genesis 1:27, "Male and female created He them." From earliest days the relationships of man and woman have claimed the largest thought of writers in every land. The moral and spiritual condition of any land can almost be known with certainty by a study of its literary output, for we find reflected upon the written page the moving causes of the day.

"Marriage rightly understood,
Gives to the tender and the good
A paradise below."
—Cowper, The Fireside.

"She is mine own;
And I as rich in having such a jewel
As twenty seas, if all their sands were pearl,
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold."
—Shakespeare.

In American fiction, and in American poetry, for the past decade we find a reflection of the jazz spirit of the day, no less than in the riotous and nerve-racking chase after pleasure that besets the present generation. The scenes of our divorce courts are but reflections of the ideas that reek upon many pages of the fiction of our time. The marriage vows rest loosely, and pretexts abound for their severing. Day by day writers are coming forward who are glad to pander to the sensual for the sake of a lurid day in the public eye. Our states with their diversity of marriage laws, and their greater diversity of divorce laws, afford every opportunity to those who wish to get as far as possible away from the ideas of constancy and eternal fidelity. The dazzle of money, the lure of dress, and the promises of self-styled social arbiters, prove the undoing of many of those who are beautiful and attractive, but nevertheless, thoughtless. Refined vice finds a large place in this twentieth century, but it is vice despite all the gloss with which it is covered. The style of a master word painter may enchain us with its many charms, but it can never sweeten the immorality that too often creeps like a poisonous stream through pages that tell of ways that open on death. The school of realists of our time who turn out such a large bulk of our fiction find ready made on every hand the living actors in the mad drama of unholy desire. Too often in halls of wealth we find high ideals of marriage and home life looked upon as out-of-date and old-fashioned, and prohibitive of the possibilities that come for those possessed of a store of dollars. Writers constantly seize upon these tendencies of the times, and transforming them to the printed page, give them widest circulation. Censors in literature have never amounted to anything, and hence every age will be fed upon what it seeks, and every time will reflect in its literature the purity or the grossness of its thought. If we are to judge by what we are reading in these later years here in America we must conclude that the home is becoming weakened, and that never since time began have the courts afforded a wider sweep to ungoverned passion and unbridled and unholy desires.

It may be interesting, then, to give some consideration to the topic of marriage, and make some application to literary development in various ages, as it reflects itself as a mirror of the morals of a given time. Disregard of marriage means a disregard of morals, and hence, a large output of writings breathing a spirit of weakened and ignored marriage vows gathers its heat from satanic fires that would burn to ashes the dreams of the ages as to happy homes, virtuous womanhood, and manhood true to vows of chaste living.

During the ages marriage as an institution has usually been regarded as possessing three stages. 1. The Physical stage. 2. The Legal stage. 3. The Moral stage. In the first stage the relations of the sexes had but little regulation, and there was but little of permanence; in the second stage the husband acquired a property right in his wife, and in the third stage she became his comrade with rights before the law approximating her husband's. As a modern fact, it is almost always true that marriage begins with the moral, moves on to the legal, and is completed in the physical union. The discussion has never been fully closed as to just what sense marriage is a contract; certainly it is unlike most contracts in many particulars. Lawyers invariably recognize its isolation from all other classes of contracts. "It is doubtless true, as anthropologists have pointed out, that in the history of the race 'marriage is rooted in the family, rather than the family in marriage.'"

Under primitive Roman law the woman by marriage came under the "power" of her husband. The restrictions in the main were those that have continued to prevail in modern Europe. The church early recognized the validity of the Roman law, modified by the teachings of Christ, and the dictum of the fathers of the church, and further defined by popes and councils. The indissolubility of marriage proclaimed by Christ was the one great addition made by him. St. Paul's interpretation of marriage was that it was only a concession to fleshly weakness, but this found but little favor. His other idea of marriage as a sacrament was eagerly seized upon to stamp the union of souls and bodies with a mystic meaning. The early church regarded disparity of faith as a bar to union.

Exclusive control over marriage was held by the Roman Catholic church, and at the council of Trent the opinion of Luther and other Reformers was ridiculed that marriage was a question for the civil courts.

England regulates marriage largely by statutory legislation, the chief bills controlling same being the ones of 1823, 1836, 1886 and 1898. Scotland goes further than England in recognizing irregular marriages. In the United States the chief points of the law of England are recognized with certain difference. The various states of the Union have different laws, but it is commonly agreed that a "marriage at common law is good" unless in the cases where some special local state law has a particular law of nullity. When then state legislation requires some particular form to be used, the want of that particular form only invalidates when so expressly stated in the statute. In the physical point of view the entire United States is moving rapidly forward upon the question in dealing with feeble-minded, epileptic, drunken, narcotic-using, and other classes of persons.

Divorce laws vary in the various states of the Union. This diversity of laws, and regulations, has been the means of affording unbounded opportunities for abuse and injustice. Legal skill and money have wrought havoc in many cases with all that pertains to right and justice in the cases of many marriages. With many states with different laws of residence, and cause, in easy touch by rapid means of communication it has been very easy to secure legal approbation for much that was plainly wrong and vile.

There has been much said for years about the sex-novels, and yet they flourish as never before. Their wide circulation leads to the further spread of such ideas, and the wide prevalence of indifferent views upon morality leads to the writing of such fiction. They are an outgrowth of the day and the times, and the day and the times at the same time foster them.

The sensational always attracts attention beyond its merit, and we can only hope in this case that our people who read are not so deeply interested as they sometimes seem to be in the sex-problem novel of the hour. It would, however, be much more comforting to know that we had a demand for pure books always, that were widely read in happy homes, that were based upon marriage vows that had the highest approbation of man's deepest thought, and God's fullest revelation.

PEACE REJECTED

By C. B. Houck.

It is amazing how the world today is rejecting peace. "Gentlemen cry Peace! Peace! when there is no peace." The world is laboring under the most terrible strain since the beginning of time. We only have to glance on the face of the map to know this is true. Who will see it? And who does not see it? But the war clouds are gathering thick and fast throughout the greater part of Europe. Past history tells us what happens when European countries begin to grab at each other's throats. The writer is no prophet, neither is he a son of a prophet, but there is much room for prophecy, if we only will open our eyes and take a good look at the world. He who has studied history and reads the daily papers can easily draw his own conclusions.

Peace did not come with the treaty of Versailles, neither has it come since. The reason peace has not come to the world is the fact that the world has rejected the principles upon which a permanent peace can be founded. The only peace that can come to the world is a peace which is founded upon principles of the Prince of Peace. He left us instructions how to build a world peace, but the world has forgotten these instructions. We are going blindly on toward our own destruction and none of us believe it. No. We did not believe that the little quarrel in 1914, between Austria and Serbia, would set the world in a blaze of war. Even we in peaceful America had no idea that millions of us would cross the seas to play our part in the bloody struggle which had engulfed all Europe. But we had to go. Thousands gave their precious lives, and millions suffered. Shall we witness another world deluge of hell and war? What will come out of the trouble between Italy and Greece; between France and Germany?

Rejecting the principles of the Prince of Peace caused the World War; and rejecting these same principles will cause the next one. Christ has become too common, even to us people in Protestant America. The world is rejecting Him; the fact is noticeable everywhere. Men discountenance the great messages of Christ, and reject the peace which He came to give. Ah, but we shall reap what we sow. That is God's own condemnation for the people who reject His great Son. The war clouds are rising, and the only thing that will abate them is for the nations of earth to accept the instructions for right living, as recorded in our Master's messages.

A BRIEF SURVEY OF THE METHODIST MISSION IN THE CONGO

Ansil Lynn.

Four regular stations are in operation at present. By stations I mean the centers where white missionaries are located and directing the mission affairs. The distances between Wembo Nyama and the other three stations ranges from forty to sixty miles. Minga, Tunda and Kabengele are all newly established, but Minga is only three hours from the site of the old Lubefu concession, and of course will serve practically the same territory. The change was made because of unfavorable location of Lubefu.

The work of the white missionaries at these several points is the supervision of the different departments. The evangelistic work at Wembo Nyama and Minga is of vast importance and deserves much time from the missionaries in charge, but the inadequate force on the field at present makes this impossible. The Bible Training School at Wembo Nyama is an essential factor and is directed by Supt. H. P. Anker. This is the mill which we hope will turn out many efficient evangelists. Some of its products are already making good. The native evangelistic staff of the four stations numbers about forty-five. The total active native membership probably goes beyond seven hundred.

The average daily school attendance, including the workmen, who are given thirty minutes each day, is probably four hundred.

DEEP RIVER CHARGE

We have just closed a ten days' campaign for God at West Bend. Brother Lucas was with us and brought to us the plain old gospel. There were several conversions and reclamations and at the close of the meeting three came into the church on profession of faith and the church has been generally revived, for which we feel like exclaiming, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Mrs. J. A. Howell.

PLYMOUTH

Special revival services running through nine days in Jonesville came to a close two weeks ago. Rev. J. V. Knight of Edenton did the preaching. His sermons were of a high order.

Brother Knight preached a special message to the Odd Fellows of Plymouth the first Sunday in September. The message was considered the best ever delivered here.

Bro. E. L. Hill of Roper is with the pastor in a meeting at Siloam this week.

Rev. E. G. Caldwell one of the leading evangelists of America, and his party from Dillon, S. C., will begin a union meeting in Plymouth November 4th.

W. G. Lowe.

HOME COMING DAY AT ROCK SPRINGS

Rocky Springs will observe Home Coming Day on the fifth Sunday in September. All of the former pastors are especially invited to be present. Prof. A. T. Allen, state superintendent of education, Raleigh; Prof. R. L. Flowers, secretary to the Corporation of Trinity College, Durham, and Mr. James Anderson, Statesville, are expected to be there and deliver addresses. There will also be numerous other speakers, as a time will be set apart for reminiscences.

Rocky Springs is the old camp ground of Alexander county. Dinner on the ground. Will you come?

A. R. Bell, P. C.

BROTHER BETTS' POSTAL CARD TO REV. P. A. HOYLE IN 1903

"My Very Dear Brother: You touched my heart in the Advocate.

"What memories! God bless you. Polkton! Have not seen it in many years. When did you see it? I loved Col. Polk.

"Tell me of your good wife and children—the one I baptized. Three of mine, Henry, Marvin and Lillie, have gone to heaven since I saw you. Willie is in the South Carolina conference, Jimmie is a druggist in Salisbury, Sallie teaches in Littleton Female College, Joe a dentist in Greensboro, Tempie is a farmer's wife in Virginia, Marie the wife of Rev. R. L. Davis of the N. C. conference.

"I will soon be in heaven—seventy last August. Pray for me. I long to see you. We have a fine field for work in Harnett and Cumberland for 1903.

Yours forever, A. D. Betts."

"CLIFTON CLAY" FOR SALE

I have about 200 copies of my books—a little history of my life and church work in North Carolina. The name of the book is "Clifton Clay." The price, 50 cents postpaid. I am not able to work and have no income and need what they will bring me. I will mail you one. There are many of the readers of the good old Advocate that I have preached to still living. Can I mail you one? It would be a good book for the Sunday school. It has 179 pages.

A. L. Coburn.

AN URGENT APPEAL

The South Rocky Mount Methodist church is weak but worthy. In trying to build a much needed church and Sunday school rooms they were caught in the financial slump of a few years ago. Then last year the railroad strike came and just about put us out of business. Ours is a railroad people; they lost out in the strike and are scattered and gone.

The building we have—50x50, two stories of brick—is finished on the outside. But not a thing finished on the inside. We have spent about $11,000 to get what we have. This shows what a poor, working congregation has done.

But funds are completely exhausted and we must have help or give up the fight. Therefore we are asking five thousand people to give us one dollar each, and do it soon, so we can get ready for the winter.

This appeal is made reluctantly but of absolute necessity. It has the approval of our conference church extension board and eighty of the leading business men of Rocky Mount.

Send donations to E. C. Glenn, Treas., Rocky Mount, N. C. Thank you so much.

E. C. Glenn, Pastor.

G. F. Snell, Chm. Bod. Stewards.
R. M. Saunders, Sec.-Treas.

Because the needs are so urgent, the opportunity so great, the laborers so few and their resources so limited, South Rocky Mount presents a most unusual appeal and should enlist the sympathy of every one who loves the cause of Christ.

S. A. Cotton,
P. E. Washington District.

My knowledge of South Rocky Mount Methodist church leads me to say that it is a case of unusual merit and worthy of your sympathy and financial support.

T. T. Thorn, Mayor.

I know of no community which offers a larger opportunity to a well equipped church than South Rocky Mount. I know of no people whose loyal effort to help themselves gives them greater right to the sympathy and help of others than the South Rocky Mount Methodist church.

N. H. D. Wilson,

P. E. Washington District, 1918-21.

REVIVAL MEETING AT KANAPOLIS

The Caldwell evangelistic party came to me on August 12th and conducted a revival that lasted for four weeks. Miss Bracy of LaCrosse, Va., is the consecrated, efficient pianist. J. C. Coston of Hendersonville, one of our own Methodist boys of the W. N. C. conference, is the choir leader and soloist of the party. It was my privilege to get well acquainted with J. C. and I found that to know him is to love him. Coston can sing and he does it not just for the salary he receives but for the glory of God and the salvation of the lost. Brethren of the ministry, when you need a singer for your revival services, get in touch with this talented man of God. Rev. E. G. Caldwell of Dillon, S. C., does the preaching. He doesn't look like he can do the work, but he can. He is a young man of unusual talent and ability, and a great gospel preacher, and one of the most pleasant and agreeable men that it has been my privilege to labor with.

The results of the meeting were gratifying. Twenty-five have already joined the Methodist church, and as many more have given their names to join. Thirty-five have given their names to join the Baptist church, and several are to join the other churches of the town. The other churches of the town co-operated with us in helping to make the meeting a success. Especially are we under obligations to the Baptists, who supported the meeting by their presence in large numbers, by their means, their personal work and prayers. It is a grand thing to see all of God's people working together to save a community, but it should not be an unusual thing. However, when we see it good will be accomplished. Scores of souls reconsecrated their lives and hundreds professed to be reclaimed. To God be the glory.

R. A. Swaringen.

APPEAL BRINGS RESULTS

Some time ago I made an appeal to the organized Bible classes of the Western North Carolina conference, through the columns of the Advocate and a few private letters, for Richard Thompson, an Armenian in a sanitarium in Asheville. I am pleased to now report that sufficient funds have been received to pay all expenses for a full treatment.

The doctor in charge of the case reports that he will be able to dismiss Thompson from his sanitarium in October apparently an entirely well man.

About twenty classes in our conference and one class, presided over by a North Carolinian in St. Petersburg, Florida, have contributed to this fund, and I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the loyal way in which the classes responded to this call. A splendid piece of work has been done. A valuable life has been saved. A high-toned Christian, a member of the Methodist church, has been restored to society. God only knows how far-reaching it all will be. Those who have had a part in this bit of work will receive their reward.

Rev. J. S. Williams, chaplain of the Mission of the Good Samaritan, of Asheville, gave us the opportunity. He is doing a great work for the needy in the mountain metropolis. May God bless him as he richly deserves.

Geo. L. Hackney,

Pres. W. B. C. Federation.

WELDON REVIVAL

A part of the visible results of the great revival which came to a close a week ago were demonstrated at the morning service last Sunday, when 30 persons took the vows of the church. There are others to come yet, who for reasons could not be present at this service. Of the thirty who joined all were grown people except seven. This small number of children received is due to the fact that 25 young people and children were received into the church on Easter Sunday last spring.

There are three things which made for the success of this revival. First, it was well planned and well advertised. No revival in Weldon had so much of this before. The entire community was absorbed with the idea of a great revival. The second thing was the co-operation of the members of the church, and the good will and assistance of all churches in the town, and the pastors. The third thing was the preacher and music director. Dr. Fred Chenault of Richmond, pastor of Broad Street Methodist church, and Mr. A. N. Fisher of Norfolk, Va., made up the visiting team in the revival. Prayer meetings, cottage meetings, noon hour services, prayer and dependence upon God were the outstanding features during these days. Great crowds came to hear Dr. Chenault preach. He is one of the greatest preachers in revival that has come to Weldon in fifty years, so those say who are qualified to speak. There was not a dull service during the two weeks, and not one that some one did not come forward to dedicate his life either afresh or for the first time. Sinners and backsliding church members

TAKES THE GUESS OUT OF PIANO BUYING

Advocate Piano Club Insures Perfect Satisfaction, Lowest Prices and Most Convenient Terms

There are thousands of Club Members throughout the South who are glad that they found the best way to purchase their instruments. Their letters have been made into booklet form, and we will be glad to send them to you upon request. The Club members are pleased because they have procured instruments of the highest quality and durability at a big saving in price and on terms which make the payments so easy that the money is hardly missed.

The Club protects your every interest. By clubbing your order with ninety-nine other Advocate readers, you are only responsible for your own purchase but you gain the advantage of buying at wholesale prices instead of retail prices. The terms are made to suit you, and every instrument that is sold is backed by a strict guarantee that covers the life of the piano or player-piano. The Club also protects you in the case of the death of the purchaser. If the terms of the club have been complied with and the purchaser dies before the instrument is paid for your family receives a receipt in full. This feature alone makes it important that you investigate this Club plan of piano-buying.

could not resist the power of the gospel as unfolded through this servant of God.

Mr. Fisher was fine in his work as song leader. His good face, fervent prayers and sympathetic appeals through music stirred the people and moved them to take Jesus as Saviour. He will be remembered long for his great service. His good wife was with us the last days of the revival and did fine service also.

Weldon church is going forward as never before, because these men of God came our way. The church here can never do a small thing again and get by with it. It has caught a vision of itself, and with this vision the sense of responsibility has been aroused. God has blessed us greatly, and we are pledged to a greater service in His kingdom.

THE PRESENT STATUS OF EVOLUTION IN SCIENTIFIC CIRCLES

By R. L. Foster.

"Our little systems have their day, They have their day and cease to be, They are but broken lights of Thee, And Thou, O Lord, are more than they."

Even a superficial glance over the field of speculation both ancient and modern will clearly reveal the truth of the above stanza. All the isms, sciences, philosophies and theories have been advanced only to be repudiated by the succeeding generations. Theologians have been the most dangerous antagonists of theology, philosophers have been the most dangerous opponents of philosophy and scientists have been the most formidable enemies of science.

It is the purpose of this paper to show the complete confusion in the ranks of evolutionists and the total destruction of their theory at the hands of its champions. Of course, all anti-evolutionists, by virtue of their opposition to evolution, are simply too antiquated to receive consideration at the hands of these modern Solomons. Dr. Vernon L. Kellogg, of Leland Stanford Jr. University very accurately expresses the attitude of this modern school in abruptly dismissing the idea of creation with the assertion, "If such a summary disposal of the theories of spontaneous generation and divine creation is too repugnant to my readers to meet with toleration, then—my book, and such readers had better immediately part company; we do not speak the same language."

I suppose that the average reader of this book would not be seriously disturbed if he discovered that his language was different from the language of the author. But what of these evolution authorities who have been so busily engaged defeating each other? I wonder if they are as some of our evolutionists say of Mr. Bryan, only layman, uninitiated into the mysteries of science. If so all evolutionists of note must also be laymen in the eyes of their evolutionary opponents. Granting that they know all about their subject or at any rate as much as they think they know we shall see how little they leave of evolution.

In order to a proper valuation of the destructive arguments of evolutionists it is necessary to see clearly the facts which are fundamental to the theory. A basic assumption of evolution, and one without which it cannot be maintained, is the doctrine of the transmutation of species. This means that all species grew out of one original form of life and that the man, the monkey, the cricket and the wart-hog are all kin. If species are not evolved from entirely different species then evolution is false. Have evolutionists proved that one species may by gradual process or by sudden mutation be produced? We shall see.

The Lamarckians and Neo-Lamarckians are united in the argument that acquired characters may be transmitted to one's offspring. For example, the giraffe has a long neck because its ancestors by continually stretching their necks developed long necks which transmitted to their offspring. Organs are supposed by this theory to atrophy from disuse and such atrophy is transmitted to the offspring. This is the usual explanation of the appendix in the human body. A man works and develops strong biceps which are transmitted to posterity, or he continually works in the sun until his skin becomes brown or black and his children inherit brown or black skin.

This doctrine is held by the Neo-Lamarckians as fundamental. Haeckel, one of the most aggressive champions of this school, asserted that "Belief in the inheritance of acquired characters in a necessary axiom of the monistic creed," and that "It would be better to accept a mysterious creation of all the species as described in the Mosaic account" rather than deny the inheritance of acquired characters. Spencer, than whom there are no stronger evolutionary champions, asserted: "Close contemplation of the facts impresses me more strongly than ever two alternatives, either there has been inheritance of acquired characters, or there has been no evolution." The value of this doctrine of Lamarck to the theory of evolution is clearly shown in a statement by Dr. Kellogg that "Just at the present time do biologists recognize more keenly than ever the need and relief the actuality of such inheritance would give them in their attempts to solve the great problems of adaptation and species forming? I cannot undertake to say whether more reputable biologists disbelieve in than believe in the existence of such inheritance, but it is obvious that the disbelievers have the present prestige of apparent victory: They call for convincing evidence of such inheritance and it is not produced. On the other hand, there are many reputable, thoughtful, honest, actively working biologists and paleontologists who say, although not loudly and even a bit shamefacedly, perhaps, that they must believe in the possibility and the actuality of this inheritance; there is no getting forward without it."

Now it goes without saying that most of the writing about evolution today assumes this doctrine of the inheritance of acquired characters. But to the utter chagrin of our Lamarckian friends, Weismann and Galton, two of the greatest authorities on the laws of heredity, completely overthrew the doctrine of the inheritance of acquired characters. The controversy between Weismann and Spencer in the Contemporary Review of 1893 over this question is a matter of common knowledge to biologists. The analysis of Lamarckian arguments by Weismann has convinced the vast majority of biologists that acquired characters are not transmissible. In fact those who are the strongest believers in the Lamarckian theory admit that evidence is lacking. Dr. Kellogg states in this connection that "It is one of Weismann's positive contributions to biology to have analyzed case after case of alleged inheritance of acquired characters, and shown its falseness or at least uncertainty." Seeing this ground taken from under them these Neo-Lamarckians now admit their inability to prove their doctrine, but contend that evidence will later be found to support them. If Lamarckians can prove the inheritance of acquired characters by hoping that evidence will be found later, why can't we prove that Tom Thumb was the great-grandfather of King Tut by hoping that later evidence will arrive to substantiate our claim?

But if evolutionists have discredited the doctrine of the inheritance of acquired characters and shown that it has no foundation so far as scientific knowledge goes, the Neo-Darwinians, those who hold to the doctrine of natural selection and sexual selection are, by their Neo-Lamarckian opponents, discredited.

KEEPING HISTORY STRAIGHT

I read with real entertainment the two page history of the life of Walter Hines Page in last issue of your paper, but there was one error in information contained therein that ought to be corrected. I refer to the quotation ascribed to Trinity College—"a college with a few buildings that looked like tobacco barns and a few teachers that looked like they should be worming tobacco." That was never said about Trinity at all, but was said, something like it, about Rutherford College, then under the head of the late Dr. R. L. Abernethy, a man that did more for poor boys in North and South Carolina than any man ever conducting a school in this state, and certainly one of the master minds of his day. I was a boy in my teens, but the incident is fresh in my mind, and there are many people living now that will recall it as I am about to relate:

Dr. Abernethy and his wonderful wife were running Rutherford College and was often in print in the then Raleigh Christian Advocate under the editorship of the late Frank L. Reid or J. B. Bobbitt. At one of the commencements the degree of doctor of divinity was conferred on a citizen of Raleigh, who had been in the Methodist ministry of the North Carolina conference, but who had located and gone into the insurance business—life insurance. (I cannot recall his name, but could, if I had a roster of that conference before me.) It seems that either his wit got the better of his judgment or else the late Dr. Lafferty of the Richmond Advocate had a dislike for Rutherford College, and ran an editorial paragraph as follows, as near as I can now recall: "A college in North Carolina, whose buildings look like tobacco barns, and whose teachers should be worming tobacco, has conferred the degree of doctor of divinity on a village insurance agent." Whatever the animus behind Dr. Lafferty, the reply of Dr. Abernethy was such as to cut to the core and bring the "amende honorable."

This is meant as no reflection on Mr. George Wilding, for he handled his subject well, but to keep history straight. The reflection of the Richmond Advocate was very nearly wicked; to say the least, thoughtless, for it is well known that North Carolina never produced a greater man than Braxton Craven, the head of Trinity then, and I have already told you who Dr. Abernethy was. C. W. Hunt.

FOREST HILL, CONCORD, WILL OPEN NEW CHURCH

Many people in different sections of North Carolina will be interested to know that our new church here at Forest Hill, Concord, will be formally opened on Sunday morning, September 30. Bishop Collins Denny of Richmond, Va., will preach at 11 a. m., and on the night of the same day Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe of Nashville, Tenn., will begin revival services to continue ten days. This building when finished and furnished will be worth at least $75,000, and experts who have gone over it declare that for Sunday school work it is not excelled anywhere in this part of the state. A part of the old walls and roof have been retained, but the building will be so completely changed without and within that one will never think of its being a remodeled structure. Two large auditoriums with side wings have been lighted in most pleasing manner. Likewise the decorating and carpeting have been done with great care. The handsome pipe organ, given by Bro. W. R. Odell in memory of his first wife will be installed within a few weeks.

Thirty large well lighted and well ventilated Sunday school rooms will give fine opportunity to do departmental work.

The editor of the Advocate and all former pastors are invited to come and rejoice with us. It is expected that it will be made the occasion for a "great home coming."

J. Frank Armstrong.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE BOARD OF STEWARDS OF ST. PAUL M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH, GOLDSBORO

Resolved, that we reaffirm our faith in the Bible as the inspired word of God, that we accept it as a sure and sufficient rule of faith and practice, and that we resent any criticism of its teachings as accepted by our church as to its inspiration and its teaching as to the creation—origin of man, the miracles, the Virgin birth, and the death and resurrection of Christ.

That we call upon the officials of the church from the highest to the lowest to defend the Book in its entirety or in common honesty to refuse to accept office and emolument from the church when they cannot do this.

That we request the North Carolina Christian Advocate to publish these resolutions.

EXHIBITS AT HAVANA FAIR ARE URGED BY TRADE EXPERT

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 17.—American manufacturers are urged to make exhibits at the Cuban International Fair to be held in Havana during February, 1924, by R. L. McKellar, of Louisville, foreign freight traffic manager of the Southern Railway System, who announces that he will be glad to assist manufacturers in arranging for exhibits at the fair and to give them any additional information in regard to it that may be desired.

"The primary object of the fair," said Mr. McKellar, "will be to place producers and sellers of all classes of commodities in contact with buyers. Exhibits by American manufacturers will be especially welcomed and it is hoped that many of our manufacturers will take advantage of this opportunity to display their products before Cuban buyers as it seems assured that their European rivals will be largely represented."

Mr. McKellar has recently made an extended visit to Cuba and is enthusiastic over the prospects for increased business with the island republic. In view of the prosperous conditions now prevailing in Cuba, he considers the present an auspicious time for American business concerns to increase their trade with the island. Because of their favorable geographical location, Mr. McKellar believes that Southern manufacturers should have first call on a great share of this attractive business.

KNOWING GOD THROUGH PRAYER

Prayer is the key to power. It is the secret of efficiency in the kingdom of God.—Walter R. Lambuth, Lambuth Bennett Book of Remembrance.

NOTICE, ELIZABETH CITY DISTRICT!

The district meeting of the Elizabeth City district will be held in City Road church, Elizabeth City, beginning the evening of September 26th, and continuing through the following day.

It is very important that every auxiliary be represented. Send your own delegates and carry delegates from the unorganized churches. A splendid program has been arranged. There will be addresses made which will be full of the information needed to help in carrying forward the different departments of our work. We want a full delegation from the district.

Mrs. George Hawkins, Dis. Sec.

A STANDARD MISSION STUDY CLASS

A standard mission study class may be defined as follows: A small group, with a leader, making a systematic study of a book or problem holding daily or weekly meetings until the study is finished. A standard class is a discussion group and not a lecture.

The leader and the members of the class should be in close personal touch so that the discussion may be informal and each individual may feel free to express her impressions and opinions and to discuss the questions and problems which have arisen in her mind.

The most successful classes number from ten to fifteen members.

The class should meet daily or weekly for a course of from six to ten sessions, each session an hour to an hour and a half in length. The meeting should begin and close on time.

There should be one leader in charge throughout the entire course. Viewing the course as a whole, she is in position to develop a plan and lead to a definite objective, thus giving unity and a sense of progress to the work.

Each member of the class should have a textbook. The book should be carefully studied. The facts presented in the book afford a basis or starting point for discussion. There should be free use of reference books, articles in the current press, missionary periodicals, and other magazines. Maps, charts, pictures, and curios add to the interest of a study class. A blackboard is almost a necessity.

Each member should have a notebook. The leader may cultivate the habit of note taking by calling for summaries which require a review of the contents of the notebooks.

The standard class is a discussion group and not a lecture. Give time for informal discussion. Skillful use of questions is essential to the proper guidance of discussion. Strive to get the members of the class to ask questions. Keep the discussion to the point.

The best leader is the one who says least and makes the class do most.

Suggestions for Mission Study Classes.
A mission study class must fit its environment. Women with several years of experience in mission study should endeavor to form standard classes.

If it is not practicable for each woman to buy a book, the books should be passed to the different women, so they may be studied by each member of the class.

Plan, if possible, to finish the book in a short period. It is far easier to sustain the interest in the book if the study covers a week or six or eight week than if it covers so many months.

Each small group with a leader may be counted as a class and reported to the conference superintendent and to the cultivation secretary in charge of missionary education. Only five points for mission study may be counted on the honor roll.—Council Leaflet.

A BRIGHT JEWEL'S GIFT

The first gift from a Bright Jewel for the Belle Bennett Memorial has been sent to Mrs. Wilson by Eunice Boney, daughter of our conference corresponding secretary, Mrs. Harvey Boney. The gift is three precious gold dollars which have been in the family of Eunice for many years. What a beautiful gift!

We all thank dear Eunice, and trust the gift will cause others to give to this great cause also. Other Jewels may have some offering which they would like to give. Mrs. Wilson will be delighted to have gifts from the children for the Bennett Memorial—they must have a part in the great work.
Mrs. N. H. D. Wilson.

MISS MCKINNON SAILS

It was my privilege to be with our dear Sallie Lou McKinnon those last few days that she was at home before starting on her long journey for her second term on the China mission field. Six years ago I was with them when she left the first time. That was hard, but this time it was harder. Her heart was torn between her beloved work and the tender feeling for the beloved mother so recently widowed, and for the feeble grandmother who felt that this separation was the last on earth. God only knows what this going is costing her and her loved ones. Every woman and child in our great conference should remember them in our daily prayers.

But the "shower" we gave our conference daughter as she was going away was such a wonderful expression of love and appreciation it warmed her heart and the hearts of all that love her and her work. She asked me to tell the dear women of the conference that she wanted to write to each one, but if she could not her heart was full of love and gratitude for all they had given her for her own comfort and the comfort of the others in her home in China. I wish every one of you could have seen the beautiful and useful things that were sent—blankets, spreads, sheets, pillow cases, towels by the dozen, tablecloths and napkins, aluminum ware, electric fixtures and beautiful silver. I just can't begin to tell you of everything. But through me as well as in other ways "Sallie Lou" sends love and thanks to every one that had a part in this wonderful love shower.

At the time I am writing this she is on the great ocean, her heart turning back to the homeland and her loved ones and friends, her eyes gazing toward the land where Christ is calling her to serve. As she goes He goes with her. He will never leave her nor forsake her. May His blessings be on her and on all of our conference daughters on the firing line.

Mrs. N. H. D. Wilson.

(Note, September 12. Yesterday's papers carried the news that the "Empress of Canada," the steamer on which Miss McKinnon sailed, had reached Shanghai safely, carrying several hundred Japanese refugees. We noted with pleasure that our Board of Missions had appropriated $10,000 to Japanese relief, and that a day had been set for collections to be taken in all our churches to be so directed. We are sure our people responded generously.)

EACH IN HIS OWN TONGUE

A fire mist and a planet,
A crystal and a cell,
A jelly fish and a saurian,
And a cave where the cavemen dwell,
Then a sense of law and beauty
And a face turned from the clod;
Some call it Evolution
And others call it God.

A haze on the far horizon,
The infinite tender sky,
The ripe rich tints of the cornfield,
The wild geese sailing high,
And all over upland and lowland
The charm of the goldenrod;
Some of us call it Autumn
And others call it God.

Like the tide of the crescent beach
When the moon is new and thin,
Into hearts high yearnings
Come welling and surging in,
Come from the mystic ocean
Whose rim no foot hath trod;
Some of us call it longing
And others call it God.

A picket frozen on duty,
A mother starved for her brood,
Socrates drinking the hemlock,
And Jesus on the Rood,
And millions who humble and nameless

The straight hard pathway trod;
Some call it consecration
And others call it God.

—William H. Carruth, University of Kansas.

THEIR FAVORITE HYMNS

The Etude, a Philadelphia musical journal, published in its April number the results of a poll of its readers on their favorite hymn. Over 32,000 votes were cast, and the ten at the head of the list were:

Abide With Me .....	7,301
Nearer, My God, to Thee .....	5,490
Lead, Kindly Light .....	4,161
Rock of Ages .....	3,432
Jesus, Lover of My Soul .....	2,709
Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty .....	1,444
Just As I Am, Without One Plea	875
Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me .....	487
My Faith Looks Up to Thee ....	236
All Hail the Power of Jesus'
Name .....	220

The same journal prints a number of interesting letters in which well-known men and women write at some length with regard to their own favorites. Thus Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Harvard, Unitarian, mentions Doddridge's "Hark, the glad sound, the Saviour comes!" as one of his favorites, though he is inclined to think that the one he loves best of all is Addison's "The spacious firmament on high," which, he says, "I learned at my father's suggestion when I was a little boy." What a suggestion this from a ninety-year-old sage to fathers of other little boys!

William Jennings Bryan loves "One sweetly solemn thought," but it must be "sung to the tune with the slowest measure." Otherwise he prefers "I'll go where you want me to go."

The following list of favorite hymns is given:

George Ade—Onward, Christian Soldiers.

Irving Bacheller—Dear Lord and Father of Mankind.

Henry Ward Beecher—Jesus, Lover of My Soul.

Nicholas Murray Butler—Lead, Kindly Light.

S. Parkes Cadman—Rock of Ages.

George W. Chadwick—Now the Day Is Over.

Frank Crane—Abide With Me.

Cyrus H. K. Curtis—(Too many to enumerate).

Bishop Warren A. Candler—Sun of My Soul.

Dr. Russell H. Conwell—Rock of Ages.

Hon. Chauncey M. Depew—Rock of Ages.

Charles W. Eliot—The Spacious Firmament on High.

John Drew—Lead, Kindly Light.
William E. Gladstone—Rock of Ages.

Amelita Galli-Curci—Abide With Me.

Gen. Robert E. Lee—How Firm a Foundation.

Abraham Lincoln—When I Can Read My Title Clear.

Judge Ben. B. Lindsey—Lead, Kindly Light.

William McKinley—Nearer, My God, to Thee.

Edwin Markham—Dies Irae.
Provost J. H. Penniman—Hark, Hark, My Soul.

Mary Roberts Rinehart—Lead, Kindly Light.

Theodore Roosevelt—How Firm a Foundation.

John Philip Sousa—Nearer, My God, to Thee, in four-quarter measure, for congregational singing and Gounod's

There is a Green Hill Far Away, for a sacred solo.

Rev. Thomas Spurgeon—There Is a Fountain Filled With Blood.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke—O Jesus, I Have Promised.

Owen Wister—Lead, Kindly Light.

Dr. Eugene A. Noble, director of the Juillard Foundation, makes a thoughtful observation on the personal grounds of choice in such matters, when he says:

"Favorite hymns are related to intense moods, such as recollection of childhood, bereavement, religious awakening, etc. They are rarely selected on the basis of either literary or musical worth. It is agreeable to learn that most people prefer a quiet hymn, such as "Abide with Me," rather than some of the sentimental vapidities which are overworked for gain.

In most churches hymns of service are being used rather than hymns of passive sentiment."

The Etude also prints for the first time an arrangement of Abide With Me, as sung by Mme. Amelita Galli-Curci in her concert programs. The arrangement was made by her husband, Mr. Homer Samuels, and is based upon W. H. Monk's familiar tune.

One thing which must impress the readers of the Etude's article is that so many people of such diverse types and occupations, soldiers, statesmen, humorists, educators, actors, opera singers, and musicians, are found to have at heart a love for the great forms of religious expressions which are sometimes looked upon by churchly people as their own private possession.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

THE GENERAL RULES OF METH-ODISM

Funny old things, aren't they, lying imbedded in the unread Methodist Discipline! Very few of us really know them, and those of who do, think of them as the archaic expression of an outgrown religious technique. I can remember when a certain preacher took the instructions of the heads of the church so seriously that he read those rules in the public congregation once every year. And the particular service at which this was done became a sort of adventure, for the "reactions" of the members of the congregation were varied and exceedingly interesting. The looks of blank astonishment, of imperfectly expressed amusement, of bored disdain and of deep satisfaction would have delighted the student of human nature. And the subsequent remarks were actually impressive. "We never had but one other pastor who did that," remarked one member naively, "and he always picked out a rainy Sunday morning."

Brushing aside the temptation to enlarge upon that ministerial brother's exceeding tact in summoning meteorology to his assistance in the performance of a disagreeable duty, I

North Carolina Conference

MANY WILL OBSERVE WEEK

Some time in October, preferably 14-21, a large number of the Sunday schools of our conference are planning to observe Children's Week. The officers and teachers of these schools feel that the home and the Sunday school must be more closely allied in the great work of the development of the religious life of the boys and girls. They are planning for a week of home visitation. Every teacher will visit the homes and become personally acquainted with the parents of the boys and girls in her Sunday school class. A parents' meeting will be held. Here the mothers and fathers and Sunday school officers and teachers will consider together certain religious needs of the children and determine ways of meeting these needs.

The following Sunday schools have indicated their purpose to put on the Children's Week program, and we feel sure that others will want to have a part in so great a movement:

Burlington, Front Street and East Burlington; Elizabeth City, First church and City Road; Dunn; Siler City; Queen Street, Kinston; Smithfield; Raeford; Rockingham; St. Pauls; Baker's and Regan, St. Pauls circuit; Nashville; First church, Rocky Mount; Sharon, Rocky Mount circuit; Tarboro; First church, Wilson; Laurinburg; Whiteville.

For information about Children's Week observance write to your conference elementary superintendent, Miss Georgia Keene, College Station, Durham, N. C.

ALL SET FOR ROCKY MOUNT

Everything is lined up for a great Standard Training School at Rocky Mount, September 23-28. A strong faculty of six instructors has been secured. Rev. Harry M. North, chairman of the board of managers, and his committees are busy with the publicity and other details. Members of the board of managers of this school, in which the Presbyterians are co-operating, are:

Rev. Harry M. North, chairman; Dr. L. R. Graham, Rev. Willard Conger, Mr. R. T. Fountain, Rev. L. F. Singleton, Mr. R. F. Lane, Rev. E. C. Glynn, Mr. L. L. Parrish, Rev. N. B. Strickland, Mr. W. E. Moore.

The instructors will be Mr. O. V. Woosley, Rev. F. S. Love, Mr. Claude T. Carr, Miss Virginia Jenkins, Mrs. M. J. McArdle, and Miss Georgia Keene. Your conference superintendent of Sunday school work is director of the school.

ST. PAULS IS PROGRESSING

Miss Keene spent Sunday with the workers of St. Pauls Sunday school, of which Mr. J. C. Lentz is superintendent. She reports that it is an inspirational treat to meet with people who are so thoroughly awake to the religious needs of the boys and girls and are anxious to know just how their Sunday school can meet these needs. She met with the whole congregation at the 11 o'clock hour and with the officers and teachers for a round table discussion in the afternoon.

Here are some of the ways that we can tell that St. Pauls Sunday school is going to grow: 1. This school has a superintendent and a pastor who want their Sunday school to be the very best one possible and are doing all they can to realize this aim. 2. Graded Lessons are to be begun in the Beginner and Primary departments the first Sunday in October. 3. Beginner and Primary departments are both to be organized and have their separate rooms for worship beginning with the first Sunday in October. 4. Children's Week is to be observed the second week in October. 5. The officers and teachers are willing to take training and some are planning to go over to Fayetteville (20 miles away) and attend the training school October 7-12. 6. The official Program of Work has been adopted and the school is working by this program.

TIME FOR PROMOTION DAY

Many Sunday schools are preparing to observe Promotion Day the last Sunday in this month. The new Sunday school year begins the first Sunday in October, and the last Sunday in September is the logical time to send to the higher classes those deserving promotion. Let us hope that every school will observe this day; it is important that the school once properly graded should be kept so.

CIRCUIT WORKERS' COUNCIL

The officers and teachers of Creedmoor circuit will meet at Banks Friday evening, September 21, in the first session of the Workers' Council for the circuit. There are matters of Sunday school improvement which the workers think can best be handled in such a conference. For years this circuit has been holding quarterly circuit institutes. This, of course, will be continued. You can count on Supt. N. J. Boddie and the other progressive workers of Creedmoor circuit.

CARY CIRCUIT INSTITUTE

Mr. R. E. Prince, our Raleigh district secretary, is placing special emphasis of the organization of circuit institutes. He has already organized some of the charges and hopes, eventually, to get all the circuits in the district so organized. Cary is the last circuit organized by Mr. Prince, and this organization was effected the fourth Sunday in August at Holly Springs. The attendance at this organization meeting was so great that not all could find seats. In addition to the work of forming the organization, the official Program of Work was discussed with much emphasis, and Holly Springs School adopted it. Fuquay Springs and Apex have promised to do likewise. Some idea of what a fine meeting it was may be had from the following paragraph from Mr. Prince:

"Not only did we have open discussion of various subjects but had songs from each of the schools represented, which seemed to create much interest. In the afternoon session, which followed one of the best dinners I ever saw spread, we had reports from the schools and discussed the needs of the different schools in an open discussion that certainly was full of interest all the time and was really difficult to stop when the time came to adjourn. Officers were elected for the circuit, and they meet next the third Sunday in November at Apex."

A FULL DAY IN THE FIELD

The writer spent Sunday, September 9, at Hamilton, in the Weldon district, and at Ayden, Washington district. At Hamilton he found an enthusiastic little band of Sunday school officers, teachers and pupils, and it seemed that almost every one was fired with a righteous dissatisfaction—a desire to make the school bigger and better. It was not difficult, therefore, for your conference superintendent of Sunday school to talk when he stood before these people and a number of their friends of the other churches at the 11 o'clock hour. Rev. M. R. Chambers, the pastor, who was unusually busy that day, marrying and burying folks and holding revivals, was present, as was also the superintendent, Mr. J. L. Pritchard. Following the public service a meeting of the workers was held, at which there was a free-for-all discussion and the adoption of the official Program of Work.

From Hamilton the writer went to Ayden, where at 7:30 o'clock he talked Sunday school to Rev. J. M. Wright's fine congregation. At the close of this service we had also a meeting of the workers and others interested, with the result that the school adopted the Program of Work, we came to know each other better, and, we believe, much good was accomplished. Already the Ayden school has the earmarks of progress and is doing splendid work. Although we did not check the school officially, it will measure high by the official standard of efficiency. Mr. J. R. Turnage is the superintendent.

OUR JULY CROP OF CREDITS

A total of three hundred and twenty-four certificates and diplomas were awarded in the North Carolina conference in July, according to the report of the Department of Leadership Training of the General Sunday School Board. Three hundred and nine certificates and two diplomas were issued to Trinity College students. The diplomas went to Mr. Dewey L. Maness, Rowland, and Rev. S. J. Starnes, pastor of East Roxboro and Longhurst charge. The other certificates and diplomas we issued as follows:

Training school at Washington, taught by Mr. D. B. Donaldson: Mrs. Guy Small, E. F. Rubell, and Miss Ruby Reynolds of Washington, Miss Maude Cutter of Bath, Miss Myrtle Lewis of Bethel, Miss Mary V. Hill of Smithfield, and Miss Jessie Thelma Eubanks of Scott's Hill.

Rev. Ivey T. Poole, of St. Pauls, one certificate.

Rev. J. A. Martin, Mt. Gilead, one diploma.

Miss Stella Etheredge, Mt. Gilead, two certificates.

Miss Mary T. Harris, Fayetteville, one certificate.

Miss Annie W. Newman, Leasburg, one diploma.

MORE NEW WESLEY CLASSES

Since our last report the following new Wesley classes have been organized in our conference:

"Character Builders," Benson, 12 young women; Miss Chelly Mae Royal, president; Miss Nora Creech, secretary; Miss Vallie Hill, teacher.

"Adult Wesley," Winton, 10 men and six women; Lloyd Williams, president; Joshua Rhodes, secretary; Miss Mary Williams, teacher.

"Ladies' Wesley," Murfreesboro, 12 women; Miss Jennie Brown Wynn, president; Mrs. L. J. Lawrence, secretary; Mrs. E. N. Nicholson, teacher.

"Men's Wesley," Murfreesboro, 17 men; Dr. R. H. Gary, president; Carl Lawrence, secretary; Thomas Wynn, teacher.

"Progressive Workers," Pamlico, seven men and seven women; R. D. Delamar, president; Mrs. B. L. Harris, secretary; Mrs. J. T. Gooding, teacher.

CHILDREN'S WEEK

Prospects for successful observances of Children's Week any week during the month of October are growing brighter each day. Miss Virginia Jenkins, our elementary superintendent, who is giving her entire time to field work for promoting this worthy cause, reports increased interest and co-operation from a continually growing number of our leading congregations. Every live Sunday school organization ought to observe Children's Week. It will be remembered that the observance of this week calls for three important steps. First, a visitation of the homes on the part of the teachers of children under twelve years of age; second, the holding of a parents' meeting for the entire church, the program for which is definitely outlined; third, the adoption of certain needed forward steps.

If it should be found impossible to observe Children's Week in a given church during October it is hoped that this church will observe it early in November. The important thing is not so much when the observance is held but that it is properly held. All friends of little children are earnestly urged to give them this one special week in the year for their religious needs.

LENOIR-DAVENPORT

Beginning Sunday afternoon, September 30, at three o'clock the first Standard Training School for Lenoir and for our Sunday school workers within a convenient radius will start operation. The school will be held in Davenport College and promises a most successful week of information, inspiration and consecration. The following courses and faculty members are offered:

Sunday School Organization and Administration—Mr. O. V. Woosley.

Principles of Religious Teaching—Prof. C. T. Carr.

The Church and Its Work—Rev. C. S. Kirkpatrick.

Intermediate-Senior Agencies—Mrs. J. F. Spruill.

Junior Organization and Administration—Miss Virginia Jenkins.

Primary Organization and Administration—Miss Georgia Keene.

The board of managers of this school is composed of the following fine fellows: J. E. Shell, chairman, C. L. Hornaday, E. F. Allen, L. H. Wall, L. B. Huntley, Joe Kjellander, A. H. Martin. In addition to a large delegation from our church at Lenoir and from Davenport College good delegations are expected from Morganton, Rutherford College, Hickory, Granite Falls, Taylorsville, Hudson and from the Lenoir, South Lenoir and Dudley Shoals circuits.

MORGANTON

Sunday, September 9, was spent with our fine folks at First church, Morganton. It is always a distinct pleasure to meet with Brother Joe Kjellander and his good workers there. He and Rev. W. R. Ware, the pastor, are constantly pulling on the traces. They make a good team. At the 11 o'clock service, before preaching a preparatory sermon for the approaching revival, the pastor asked for a given amount for stricken Japan and before the offering could be called off twice the amount was raised. This church has just sent Miss Miriam Goodwin to Japan as a missionary and consequently is keenly interested in the welfare of God's people in the Orient.

My particular business at Morganton was to call attention to the Lenoir-Davenport Standard Training School to be held sixteen miles away. Quite a delegation from Morganton will attend this school regularly. It is always true that the people who know the most want to know more.

HAS YOURS?

Many of our Sunday schools have a relapse during the hot days of August. But they begin to recuperate with the cooling breezes of September and with the general awakening brought about by renewed vigor gained from restful vacations. Shall we not press ahead first to reach our people and then to teach them in the most effective way through our church school, the Sunday school and its allied agencies? Many schools have greatly increased their enrollment during this year. Has yours?

NEW BERN DISTRICT HOLDS A SPLENDID INSTITUTE AT GOLDSBORO

The New Bern District Epworth League Institute met at Goldsboro September 3, 1923. The first session opened Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Devotional service was conducted by the district secretary, R. W. Brothers. The address of welcome was given by Chauncey Barcliff of the Epworth leagues of Goldsboro. The speaker of the evening was then introduced by Rev. C. L. Reed, pastor of St. Pauls church. The address was given by Rev. T. M. Grant, president of the North Carolina Epworth League conference. After the address we were invited in the Sunday school room by Mrs. Armantrout, chairman of the entertainment committee, where we enjoyed a very delightful social hour. The social hour closed with the league benediction.

Tuesday morning, September 4th, the institute opened at 9 o'clock. The devotional service was conducted by Rev. J. W. Potter, pastor of St. Johns church. Election of secretary, appointments of committees on policy and resolutions were elected and are as follows: Policy, Mrs. J. K. Rea, Howell; on resolutions are Rev. K. S. Mrs. E. A. Stephens, Jr., and Milton L. Cook, Miss Ethel Brothers and Miss Margaret Kehoe. Enrollment of delegates, chapters represented were as follows: Senior leagues, Centenary, Queen Street, Oriental, St. Johns, Hookerton, Daniels Chapel, Salem, Pikesville, St. Pauls, Falling Creek, Providence, Indian Springs, and Alliance; intermediate leagues, Queen Street; junior leagues, St. Johns. Junior and intermediate work discussed by Miss Edna Wilkins. First department work discussed by Rev. W. N. Vaughan, district secretary of Washington district. Standard of efficiency discussed by C. Gehrman Cobb.

Immediately after intermission we listened to a very inspiring address by Rev. C. K. Proctor, pastor of Queen Street church, Kinston, N. C., after which we were invited in the Sunday school rooms again and had a very enjoyable lunch given and served by the Wayne County Epworth League Union.

The afternoon session opened at 1:30 o'clock. The devotional service was conducted by Miss Ethel Brothers, assistant district secretary. The second department was discussed by Mrs. J. K. Rea of St. Johns league. The fourth department was discussed by Rev. O. P. Fitzgerald, of Oriental. A boost for the loving cup was given by the district secretary. The report from the chairman on policy was as follows:

We, the committee on policy wish to present for adoption to the New Bern district institute the following: First, as Epworth leaguers it shall be our aim to uphold our grand and glorious motto, "All for Christ," thereby doing all in our power to win more souls to Christ who die on Calvary. We shall endeavor to keep Christ at the head of our leagues and remember that it is for Him that we are working. Second, it shall be our aim to attain the Standard of Efficiency in all its points. We shall strive to keep the covenants as laid down in the handbook. Third, We shall endeavor to make our leagues stronger in every way, to increase our membership, and do all in our power to help some league in the New Bern district win back the loving cup. Fourth, We intend to constantly remember and keep before our membership the summer assembly. We will do what we can to make the next assembly the largest, best and brightest we have ever had, believing that all who attend will be greatly helped in a spiritual way, and by growing spiritually better we will be able to exemplify our motto, "All for Christ."

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. J. K. Rea, Chmn.
Mrs. E. A. Stephens, Jr.,
Milton Howell.

The report was voted on and accepted. The report on resolutions were read and are as follows: "In consideration of the great treat, which we have enjoyed through the inspiring lectures of the institute, and the splendid fellowship of our fellow leaguers, the superb hospitality of our hosts and hostesses of Goldsboro, also in gratitude of the league union of Wayne county. Therefore be it resolved:

We do hereby truly and gratefully express our highest appreciation both to the people of Goldsboro and the Wayne County Epworth League Union for all these good things. We would also assure them of a place of warm friendship in our memory and trust that these times of refreshing, recreation and inspiration together with the fellowship that has been ours may be to the glory of God in the strengthening of our present leagues and in the enlarging of the scope of influence of the league throughout the New Bern district. Respectfully submitted,

Rev. K. S. L. Cook, Chm.,
Miss Ethel Brothers,
Miss Margaret Kehoe.

Announcements and adjournment.
Ruth Haskins, Sec.

JONESBORO EPWORTH LEAGUE

We wish to say through the columns of the Advocate to the leaguers of the North Carolina conference that we are not dead, even though we have not been heard for our much speaking.

We have a live working league that is trying to carry out the teaching and ideas of the league work. Last year we paid our African Special, held monthly prayer meetings at the county home, a number of cottage prayer meetings for the sick and infirm, sent cards of welcome to strangers and visitors when they came to town, and flowers to the hospital and sick, and did other work along different lines.

We have had our regular election and installation of officers for this year. The following are the officers: President—Miss Bertha Avent.
Vice President—Miss Bess Barnes.
Secretary—Miss Margaret Malloy.
Treasurer—Miss Edna McIver.
Supt. First Dept.—Miss Vivian Avent.

Supt. Second Dept.—Miss Jessie Godfrey.

Supt. Third Dept.—Miss Minnie Maud Harris.

Supt. Fourth Dept.—Miss Margaret McLean.

Era Agent—Mr. Floyd O'Connell.
We sent two delegates to the Epworth League Assembly at Morehead City, and they brought back good reports and ideas which have helped our league very much.

The superintendent of the fourth department has made post card albums and has asked each member to fill them with cards. We hope to send about fifty albums in a few days to the Africans.

At our last council meeting we decided to make arrangements to form a county union.

Last but not least our young people have gone to two other churches and organized leagues which are doing splendid work.

Wishing all leaguers much success in their work,

Margaret Malloy, Sec.

WOODINGTON LEAGUE

The Epworth League members of Woodington met at the M. E. church Sunday night, September 9th, and a very interesting program was given.

Opening song, Give Me Thy Heart. Roll call. Twenty-five members were present, seven absent, two new members, and several visitors.

Hymn, Blessed Assurance.

Devotional service was conducted by Miss Mary Koonce.

Scripture lessons, Romans xii 9-15, and Matt. vii. 12.

Sentence prayers, closed by Robert Johnson.

Hymn, Look and Live.

Good Manners and Religion, by Miss Reba Loftin.

Recitation, Which Is Your Way? by Thelma Rouse.

Story of Joe Bunker, by Paul Lanier.

Solo, Does Jesus Care? by Miss Nina Brickhouse.

Recitation, Your Share, by Miss Cora Lanier.

Reading, The Scrub Horse That Had the Go in Him, by Miss Nina Brickhouse.

Closing song, We're Marching to Zion.

League benediction.

All the league members are looking forward with pleasure to do a good year's work for th Lord.

Reporter.

NEW OFFICERS OF EAST DURHAM LEAGUE

The new officers of the Carr Church League, East Durham, are as follows: President—Miss Gladys Rollins.
Vice President—Miss Annie Hudnell.

Secretary—Miss Norma Williams.
Cor. Sec.—Miss Addie Mae Lea.

Treasurer—Miss Ruby Holder.
First Dept. Supt.—Miss Lois Buffaloe.

Second Dept. Supt.—Miss Blanche Petty.

Third Dept. Supt.—Miss Ester Ladd.

Fourth Dept. Supt.—Mrs. C. E. Buckner.

Epworth Era Agent—Miss Doris Goodwin.

These were installed in office a few Sundays ago and we are expecting big things from Carr League.

Western North Carolina Conference

SALISBURY DISTRICT INSTITUTE

This body of Epworthians assembled in First church, Salisbury, Friday night, September 14. A short devotional exercise was led by Miss Johnsie Hobson. Mrs. G. G. Adams then supervised the entertainment feature which closed with dainty refreshments provided by the Salisbury leaguers.

The meeting was called to order at 9:40 Saturday morning by Miss Johnsie Hobson, district secretary. Miss Hobson read a Scripture lesson and asked Rev. J. F. Armstrong to lead in prayer.

J. F. Armstrong was elected secretary and the roll call showed the following representatives from the various charges: First church, Salisbury, eight; Woodleaf circuit, one; Norwood, five; Norwood circuit, two; Concord circuit, two; Forest Hill, five; total present at the opening hour, Kerr Street, 23; South Main, four; First church, three; Second Spencer, three; total 34.

Miss Hobson introduced Mr. E. M. Hoffman of the Salisbury Y. M. C. A., made an interesting and helpful address on social service.

Following this address Miss Eleanor Plonk spoke on variety in devotional meetings.

At the suggestion of the chairman a recess of ten minutes was taken.

The chairman appointed a committee on policy consisting of M. B. Woosley, F. O. Dryman and Mrs. G. G. Adams. Miss Hobson was included as a member officio.

The institute then was favored with an address by Miss Billy Webster of Greensboro on dramatization in the church.

Following this the editor of the League page of the Christian Advocate, spoke on th work of the corresponding secretary of the local chapter.

At this time lunch was announced. An unbounded enthusiasm and a beautiful devotion to duty marked this hour.

The afternoon session was opened with devotions led by Rev. F. O. Dryman.

Miss Billy Webster spoke on "The Requirements of a Good Social."

The committee on policy submitted a report. After discussion the paper was adopted.

Miss Johnsie Hobson spoke on district problems.

After this Mrs. G. G. Adams spoke on fourth department work with special reference to the finding of leaders, and the organization of a mission study class.

Also Mrs. Adams stressed intermediate league.

Mr. Dewey Webster, conference treasurer, spoke on finance.

On motion of J. F. Armstrong the institute by a rising vote expressed its appreciation of the many courtesies extended by the Salisbury leaguers, including the refreshments at the social on Friday night and the excellent luncheon on Saturday.

The meeting adjourned at 5:30 to reassemble at 7:30 to hear an address by Rev. M. B. Woosley.

Final adjournment then.

Miss Johnsie Hobson, Chm.
J. Frank Armstrong, Sec.

SALISBURY DISTRICT ADOPTS A POLICY

1. We agree that each league keep an aggregate record of number of members and an aggregate record of attendance, which is to be sent to the district secretary with regular quarterly reports, in order that a standard record of attendance may be had for the district.

2. Every chapter send in on time to district secretary accurately kept quarterly reports.

3. When joining the Epworth League that each member be pledged to a 60 per cent attendance.

4. Each chapter in district make pledge to conference and district expense fund.

5. Each chapter in district make pledge to African Special pledge.

6. That we organize an Epworth League union for each county in Salisbury district, namely, Rowan, Cabarrus and Stanly.

7. That we maintain and strengthen the leagues already established and organize twelve new ones before our annual Epworth League conference.

8. That we have an accredited district institute before our annual conference.

9. That each league send its quota of delegates to annual Epworth League conference and at least one to annual assembly at Lake Junaluska.

M. B. Woosley,
J. F. Armstrong,
J. F. Kirk,
Mrs. F. O. Dryman,

Committee.

MEMBERSHIP MONTH

Make September Membership Month. Secure names of all women who are members of the church, but not members of the Missionary Society.

Divide the list among the members of the auxiliary, asking each to visit and solicit certain ones for membership.

Arrange a get-together meeting and let each member of the society give a personal invitation to the women she is seeking to interest. Secure their membership if possible at this meeting.

Be sure to write the secretary about your success.—September Bulletin.

Our Orphanage school opened September the 4th. Here and there I find Methodists who do not know that the Orphanage maintains its own school. It is no small undertaking to provide school facilities to accommodate two hundred and fifty children. Our grade run all the way from the first through the eleventh. It costs us thousands upon thousands to run such a school. Our school stands high among the grammar and high schools of the state. We have been most fortunate in securing and retaining the best type of Christian teachers. The first qualification of a teacher is that he or she must be a sincere Christian. While we put a great deal of emphasis upon scholarship, we put the most on the religious side. Christian scholarship is absolutely necessary upon the part of the teacher if the child is to be taught in the right way. Because the life tells more powerfully on the character of the pupil than expert knowledge. It is our chief purpose and endeavor to enthrone Christ in the life and heart of every boy and girl that finds a home in the Methodist Orphanage. Without Christian teachers and workers such purposes can never be realized.

From all directions people are saying so many complimentary things about our children and campus. Of course this makes glad the heart of every Methodist among us. In reference to the beauty of the campus, I want to say that we have worked hard to make it a thing of beauty and therefore a joy forever. The beginning of making the campus the most beautiful in Raleigh is due to one of the fine young business men in the state. Having a beautiful home and lovely surroundings for himself and family, it came into his heart to make a large contribution toward beautifying the grounds for the comfort and inspiration of that large number who have been denied the pleasure and comfort of a home of their own. I hardly ever look over the campus without thinking of the one who made possible such attractive surroundings for our two hundred and fifty children. Bro. A. H. Vann, like his devoted father, has taken the Methodist Orphanage close to his great heart.

Thornwell is a Presbyterian orphanage located in Clinton, S. V. It is not only one of the oldest and largest orphanages in the South, but one of the best conducted. Recently a good woman died and left this worthy institution fifty thousand dollars. People are learning everywhere how to dispose of money as well as to make it. No other cause appeals so strongly to all right-thinking people as an orphanage. Everywhere there are those who realize that money left to an orphanage will be wisely and economically spent. The time is not far distant when our Methodist Orphanage is going to be largely endowed. This will put it in a position where it can minister to a much larger number of orphan children than it is now doing. I wish to commend this method of leaving property and money to the friends of the Methodist Orphanage. May I sound just one note of warning? Do not postpone the matter longer, but attend to it while all the faculties are properly functioning.

Presiding elders, preachers, church officials, laymen and laywomen, without a single exception as far as I know, are a unit in their support of the Methodist Orphanage. No one ever knocks or criticises it. Dr. T. N. Ivey said through the columns of the Nashville Christian Advocate that the Methodist Orphanage was the "pet" of the North Carolina conference. Our people are not only proud of the Methodist Orphanage, but are determined to make it the greatest in American Methodism, in spirit, in attainment and in ideals. It is their ambition to build here on this beautiful campus a home for the fatherless that will be the wonder and admiration of all who come hither. By so doing they will not only confer the greatest possible favor upon orphan children, but will at the same time demonstrate to the world their own greatness and nobility of character. Unless some great misfortune befalls our people the prophecy this paragraph contains will within a few years be gloriously fulfilled.

That was a great act upon the part of the Rockingham district conference to pledge twenty-five thousand ($25,000) dollars with which to erect a dormitory at the Methodist Orphanage. While I was visiting at Lake Junaluska this summer I had an interview with Bro. J. H. Shore in reference to this building. It is his plan to ask every church within the bounds of the Rockingham district to make a liberal contribution toward this building. Preachers and laymen throughout the district are enthusiastic over this great undertaking. Hon. R. M. Page, president of our board of trustees, is counting upon every charge to do its full duty in reference to this important enterprise. From all I have gathered there has never been any cause that has come before the people of this district that has been received with such unanimity as this one. That great speech, warm from the heart of one of North Carolina's most distinguished citizens, touched the heart of every preacher and delegate at the conference. When conference assembles I hope it can be announced that every dollar of that pledge has been paid. It will not only gladden my heart, but it will be a distinction of which any district would feel justly proud.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT OUR PRESIDENTS

Of the twenty-nine men who have been President of the United States, nineteen have been "college bred."

Washington, Jackson, Van Buren, Taylor, Fillmore, Lincoln, Johnson, Cleveland, McKinley, and Harding never suffered from what Bismarck, in speaking of Paul Kruger, once characterized "the debilitating influence of a college education."

Though not a college graduate, Mr. Harding was for a brief period a student at a now defunct college in Ohio.

Grant, who was a graduate of the United States Military Academy, is assigned to the group of Presidents who were "formally educated."

If a list of the country's greatest seven Presidents should be made, it would likely consist of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Cleveland, Roosevelt, and Wilson.

Of these seven, only three were college-bred or "university-bred" men. Jefferson, like Monroe and Tyler, was graduated at William and Mary College; Roosevelt, like the Adamases, father and son, was a graduate of Harvard; Wilson, like Madison, was a son of "Old Nassau."

Mr. Coolidge is one of "the nineteen," a graduate of Amherst College.

The average age of Presidents when taking the oath of office for the first time is fifty-four years.

Above sixty years were John Adams and Andrew Jackson, each sixty-one; Taylor (sixty-four), Buchanan (sixty-five), and William Henry Harrison (sixty-eight).

Both Harrison and Taylor died while in office.

Of the men above sixty only two, John Adams and Andrew Jackson, were successful Presidents.

Below sixty and above fifty-four years were Washington (fifty-seven), Jefferson (fifty-seven), Madison (fifty-seven), John Quincy Adams (fifty-seven), Johnson (fifty-six), Harrison (fifty-five), Wilson (fifty-six), and Harding (fifty-six).

Above fifty but below fifty-four were Tyler (fifty-one), Lincoln (fifty-two), Fillmore (fifty), Arthur (fifty), Taft (fifty-one), and Coolidge (fifty-two.)

Below fifty and above forty-five were Pierce (forty-nine), Grant (forty-six), Garfield (forty-nine), and Cleveland (forty-seven).

Only one man under forty-five years of age has become President. Theodore Roosevelt was only forty-two when he succeeded McKinley.

Van Buren and Hayes were fifty-four—the average Presidential age—when sworn in.

President Coolidge takes up the gravest responsibilities at an age two years under "the Presidential average."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"Smell anything, grandmother?" asked the youngster, who was lying on the floor drawing.

Grandmother assured him she did not.

The young artist gave a few finishing touches and repeated his question. Grandmother sniffed the air and again declared she smelled nothing.

"Well," said the boy, "you ought to—I have just drawn a skunk."—Selected.

THE HELPING HAND

Cora M. V. Preble.

Don't fail to greet the folks you meet,

Unworthy though they seem;

They may have lost, at greatest cost,

Than you may ever dream;

A kindly smile some soul worth while

With courage may renew;

So friend, be kind, and you will find

It all returned to you.

For some today may lose the way

Who need a helping hand,

While you and I may pass them by

And fail to understand;

So lest one grope, bereft of hope,

For cheer that we might lend,

Let's smile on all and heed the call

To prove we're true, my friend.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

Insure in The Methodist Mutual—owned and controlled by the two North Carolina Conferences.

RUTHERFORD COLLEGE RUTHERFORD COLLEGE, N. C.

NEXT TERM OPENS SEPTEMBER 4TH

Rutherford College offers four years accredited High School work, and two years of College work.

These are some of the interesting considerations:

1. Modern equipment.
2. An efficient faculty.
3. The breezy and healthful location.
4. Modest expenses (from $150 to $250).

5. The unusually purposeful and religious students in attendance—fifty-five of whom last year were ministerial students, twenty-two volunteer workers, twenty-two members of the evangelistic singing class.

6. The very earnest disposition on the part of the management of the school to raise the standard of scholarship to the highest possible attainment.

Other information will be gladly furnished on request.

THE BEGINNING OF THE SPECIAL EFFORT FOR ADEQUATE SUPER-ANNUATE ENDOWMENT

We're off! For five years we have been publishing on this page that a time would come when our great church would give serious attention to the needs of her worn-out preachers. Many have read these promises only to smile and doubt their fulfillment. But now the wonderful movement has actually begun. It would require volumes to tell of the years of anxious waiting, the soul longings, the pleadings for justice, the unyielding faith, and the patient, persistent toil through which we have passed to enter this day of beginning. But, thanks be unto the God of the "forgotten man," our church has at last quit merely singing psalms over the hungry and broken bodies of her retired servants and has cleared her mighty track for the superannuate endowment special. Sixteen trained and gifted dispatchers (bishops) are in their places giving orders; three hundred busy yard foremen (presiding elders) are setting to work with determined will, looking to have night and day shifts if necessary; sixty-five hundred clear-eyed engineers (pastors) have their hands upon the throttle and their eyes upon the rail; and thousands of firemen (lay members) have started shoveling coal. Come on, everybody, and make reservations on this wonderful train. Notice: Free list suspended!

Illinois Conference.—The little town of Odin, Ill., had the honor of entertaining the Illinois conference, where on Thursday, August 23, 1923, the plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment was first presented. It was very fitting for Bishop Darlington, the warm-hearted and sympathetic friend of the old boys, to be in the chair. His emphatic statements concerning the movement left no doubt in my mind about its complete success in the episcopal district under his superintendency. Rev. W. E. Brown, of the St. Louis conference, made an inspirational address that aroused in those present a will to work. Among the many pointed statements made by Brown, there was one with power like a two-edged sword—namely: "If the church fails to raise the $10,000,000 for superannuate endowment it will not be because she is stingy but because she is selfish. Most everybody has money today, as is evidenced in the amount being spent. But this expenditure is chiefly for selfish ends."

The preachers of this conference promised faithfully to do their best for the cause. I believe they meant it, too. The Illinois conference was the first to get the plan, and I believe she will be the first to get her quota. Several of her preachers who toil on the hardest circuits said to me: "It must be done, and we will do it." One preacher said: "It will be a hard task in my charge on account of difficult local conditions, but I will find a way to do it." Another preacher said: "I believe I can raise every dollar of my charge's quota from friends of the superannuates who are not members of the church." God be with the boys in Illinois, give them grace and grit to carry on, and let them be greatly blessed while they are helping others.

Denver Conference.—Rev. R. R. Langston, transferred from the Tennessee conference to Colorado, met me at Pueblo and gave me a wild thirty-mile ride in his Ford to the Rocky Mountain Assembly Ground, Beulah, Colo., the seat of the Denver Conference. We busted into the side of a street car, knocked a lot of things off the auto; but the Ford went on to Beulah, and as long as I was able to see the street car had not moved. We had a blow out and some other things, but nothing could stop us. Langston said that the go of that Ford was typical of the spirit of the preachers in the Denver conference toward the special effort for superannuate endowment.

The conference was holding a Saturday afternoon session, and I had an appointment to speak at three o'clock. Bishop W. F. McMurry was in the chair, as alert and hefy as ever. Langston told me that the bishop had spent the whole month of August in the bounds of the Denver conference and that he had visited and preached on both sides of the Great Range until he had reached practically every charge. I heard Rev. H. D. Thompson, pastor at Pueblo, say to the bishop: "Your itinerary in this conference this month reminds us of the strenuous traveling of Bishop Asbury." The bishop replied: "Well, I have wanted to give personal attention to the work in this mission conference and took the month of August for it, so that I might be able to respond to the request of the secretary of the Board of Finance in assisting to present the plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment to the annual conferences this fall." I said nothing, but could have told how Bishop McMurry had worked almost day and night during the year in his seventh episcopal district in an effort to get his work well in hand in time to serve the Board of Finance in doing this work.

The Denver conference preachers and lay members were a unit in their hearty appreciation of the plan for the special effort. Without exception they promised that the quota of the conference would be raised and paid as called for under the plan. This conference has but one district, and Rev. C. W. Hall is the lone presiding elder. His territory embraces all of the state of Colorado and part of New Mexico. How would you like to go around with him? Brother Hall told me that he intended at the first quarterly conference of every charge in his district to give one dollar cash to the charge as the first contribution on its quota on the special effort. Other presiding elders might learn something out of Colorado. If Brother Hall thinks enough of this movement to make it cost him not only hard work but money, he is a fine man for presiding elder for such a time as this. Hats off to him.

You all know Bishop McMurry, don't you? Well, get a mental picture of him in a Ford coupe with two big grips and a sizable chauffeur, all driving down one of those seeming straight up-and-down foothills of the Rockies on a hundred-mile trip. I am sure you will agree with me that a bishop with such a persistence for doing difficult things is sure to prove a valuable asset in the special effort for superannuate endowment. And his preachers of the Denver conference, who ride these bucking Fords under similar conditions twelve months of the year over the winding and ever-rising-and-falling roads of this great mountain country, are just the boys this heroi: bishop needs in such a field to do justice to the cause of the "forgotten man."

Western Virginia Conference.—From Beulah, Colo., where the Denver conference was held, to Barboursville, W. Va., seat of the Western Virginia conference, is a journey of two days and two nights—and a little more. Of course the constant traveling wearied me, but I forgot all about it when I reached Barboursville and experienced such a warm welcome at the hands of the Western Virginia conference. Bishop Darlington had the stage all set for the presentation of the special effort for superannuate endowment. When he announced the time of beginning for the program, the preachers did not start going out to get a drink of water. They kept their places with an air of earnest expectancy. Other preachers who had before been out of the room came in and took their places with their brothers. I cannot tell you how much this pleased me. It is much easier to work with a will to succeed when those who are expected to help with the task join heartily in co-operation. Somehow it inspires a confidence where otherwise doubt and misgiving would prevail.

The bishop, after a few pointed statements, introduced Dr. Frank L. Wells, of the Virginia conference, for the inspirational address. Whew! That man has something besides a bald head. For forty minutes he held that splendid body of men in rapt attention as he delivered one of the best addresses concerning the superannuate causes that I ever heard. When my time came to explain the plan, Wells had the pot boiling. Bishop Darlington poked the grate some more and then called for me.

It was an inspiration to see that splendid group of preachers and lay members so eager to get the specific directions for projecting the movement in behalf of the "forgotten man." Invariably it is a difficult task to explain the details of a program for raising money, because the average listener becomes impatient under a process of mere analysis. But if the Western Virginia conference felt that the consideration of the plan for special effort was tedious, the brethren were surely adept in concealing their feelings. I am sure that the character of the cause for which a plan of special effort is now being presented is such that one can suffer even the tedium of explanation for the sake of a movement so sacred.

One preacher handed me a check for $25, saying: "This is the first contribution on my charge's quota for superannuate endowment. I believe we will be able to raise every dollar of our part and more." This is an example of the attitude of the preachers generally on this subject; and not only do the preachers feel this way about it, but the laymen are even more enthusiastic and hopeful. A prominent layman of our Johnson Memorial church in Huntington, W. Va., said to me: "Our charge has done its part in every financial movement that has been presented to us during the past five years, and you can be assured that we will respond to the special effort for superannuate endowment in a manner that will be to your entire satisfaction." I told him he was putting it pretty strong, for my satisfaction concerning the movement for our worn-out preachers is not so easy to reach. However, the brother was not inclined to change his statement, and I believe that the great church for which he testified will do a magnificent thing for the sacred cause.

I left Barboursville fully convinced that there is no need to worry about the Western Virginia conference in the great special effort. For five years these brethren have been encouraging me with positive promises and assurances that they would do their part in the chance so given. About three years ago the members of a little chapel of a circuit located in the mountains of this conference subscribed $3,600 to superannuate endowment. A conference that has in it even a little chapel of a circuit willing to do this thing in such abundance can certainly with all confidence be expected to do a noble part when the organized movement is on in earnest.

THE OLD GINGHAM DRESS TELLS ITS STORY

"If you were in my place I expect you would be very sad," said an old gingham dress to a little bird one day. "But I am not, for as I hang here I recall many experiences through my life and am happy to think that though I am old and weather beaten I am still here. I was placed here in this tree when its fruit began to ripen and as the little birds would come to devour the fruit the wind would blow me about and scare them till they would fly away without any fruit. Now the fruit has all been taken from the tree and I am glad to say that I saved much of it from being destroyed.

"The history of my early life and up till now is full of adventures and interesting experiences. I was once many soft white bolls with small black things called seeds all among me and was held in little bolls. I had many brothers and sisters and we all grew in a large field together. We didn't live together long, for the group of which I was a member was soon picked from the bolls and taken to a place where we were separated from the many seeds that were among us. It hurt very much to be torn from the seeds, but this was nothing compared to what came next, for I was packed, squeezed and bound very tightly with the other members of my group. We were taken from there to a large building containing many queer objects called machinery. I was removed from the tight place and was being dipped into a large basin of some kind of liquid. I thought my life was ended for the dye was miserably hot, but I was soon taken out and dried and I found that my color had been changed from white to other colors. Then I was torn into pieces by a machine, from here I passed on to another machine that contained thousands of little needles, and as I passed through this the agony was so great that I could hardly bear it, but after I was taken from this machine I found that I was much softer and whiter than I had been. I was then taken through machinery and made into many fine threads. The last machine I was taken through was called a loom. On this I was woven into a beautiful piece of cloth of many colors. I was then moved to a large building and placed upon a shelf with other pieces of cloth. I lay there a few days and rested.

"I didn't rest long, for one day the merchant sold me to a little girl. She proudly took me to her home and I was soon made into a dress by her mother. It hurt me to be cut and sewed, but after it was all done I was very proud of myself, for I was very pretty. The little girl could hardly wait to wear me, but the day came soon and she proudly put me on and wore me during that day. When the day was over she took me off and placed me away carefully. Here I stayed for it seemed nearly a month, but it was only a week. She did this for a long time, then she began to wear me every day. I was treated very roughly and often became tired and dirty. I soon became so thin and torn that she could wear me no longer. Then I was thrown back to myself and lay there along time. I often became very lonesome and sad, but one day someone picked me up and carried me out into the warm sunshine once more. I was indeed very happy. I had no idea whatever of what was going to happen to me next, but I soon found that I was being fastened here in the top of this tree and here I have lived since then. I am very happy to live in the beautiful sunshine again and talk to little birds as they fly about me."

"Your story is very interesting," said the little bird. "I only hope that the story of my life will be as interesting." Then it flew away, leaving the old gingham dress alone once more. Lucia Galliher.

JOHN'S REWARD

A long time ago in the days when there were fairies there lived a widow and her three little boys. She was poor, and so she had to work hard to earn enough money to keep them from starving.

Now it happened that in the yard of the cottage where they lived there grew a rosebush, and one day a beautiful rose blossomed upon it. The children were proud of the rose, and as they stood admiring it and talking about it an idea suddenly occurred to John, who was the oldest.

"I shall pick that rose and take it to market and see if I can sell it," he said to his brothers. "I'm sure mother would be pleased to have the money, and it is so beautiful that I ought to get a great price for it."

So he picked the rose and started for town with it.

When he was almost there he heard some one say, "Oh, how I should like to have a rose like that!"

He looked to see who was speaking and found that it was a little hunchbacked girl who sat in the window of the tenement house that he was passing. She looked lonesome. There was not a flower in sight to cheer her, and John, who had a kind heart, thought to himself, "Perhaps I should not get much for just one rose anyway." He called to the little girl, "Here, catch it."

In another moment the rose was in her hand and she was smiling happily and clapping her hands in delight.

John turned to go home, but the little girl called to him. "I should like to give you something too," she said. "Hold out your cap."

John held out his cap and she threw a handful of hazelnuts into it.

"The children will be pleased with these," John said as he put them into his pocket and went on his way.

But he had gone only a little farther when he saw a little boy no bigger than himself with a thin, sad face and a ragged coat.

"What's the matter with you, little boy?" asked John kindly. "You look sad."

"I'm hungry," answered the little boy. "I wish I had something to eat, but I haven't any money to buy food."

John put his hand into his pocket and brought out the hazelnuts. "This isn't much," he said, "but it will help a little." And he gave them to the boy.

"That is good of you," said the little fellow, "and since you are so kind, you may have my only plaything." He took from his pocket a rubber ball.

"No, no. You keep it. I don't want to take it away from you."

"Please take it. I want you to have it," replied the little boy, and he was so much in earnest that John took it.

"We can have lots of fun with it at home," he said to himself as he continued on his way.

While he was bouncing it on the pavement and catching it as he walked along he heard the rumble of wheels behind him. A farmer was returning home from town where he had been to sell his produce. When he caught sight of John bouncing the ball, he said eagerly, "My boy, I'll give you the nicest red apple I have left if you'll give me that ball. Today is my little boy's birthday, and he wanted me to bring him a ball, but I forgot all about it until I saw yours. He will be so disappointed!"

"It would be a pity to disappoint him," said John. So he gave the farmer the ball and took the red apple in exchange.

"I shall give it to mother when she comes from work," thought John. "In a way it will be better than the rose, because she can eat the apple, and she couldn't eat the rose."

Pretty soon he came to a little cottage in front of which grew a large cherry tree. An old woman stood under the tree.

When she saw John she called out to him, "Little boy, do you happen to know where I can get a nice red apple? I'm so hungry for an apple dumpling that I don't know what to do. I have many cherries, but I can't make an apple dumpling of them."

"Why, I have the very thing you want," said John, and he took from his pocket the apple that the farmer had given him.

"Oh, thank you," said the old woman joyfully as she took it from him. "But you shall not part with it for nothing." She quickly filled a paper bag with cherries and gave it to John.

"Well," he said to himself, "this is even better than the apple, for now we can all have some."

"Don't throw away the seeds," called the old woman as he left. "Save them and plant them and you will have some cherry trees of your own in a few years."

Pretty soon John came to his own house, and when he went inside he found that his mother had already come home from work. A scanty supper was ready and waiting for him. You may be sure that his mother was glad to see John, for he was just a little boy and had never before been far from home by himself. She had begun to fear that something had happened to him. The cherries made a great difference in their simple meal. After all of them had been eaten John gathered the seeds and put them into a dish until the next day when he could plant them.

But in the morning when he went to the dish he found no cherry pits at all, but only little lump of shining gold. He called his mother and his little brothers, and while they were gazing in astonishment at what was in the dish they heard a gentle tap at the door. When the door was opened, there stood the most beautiful fairy that ever was seen or that probably ever will be seen till the end of time. When John looked at her he thought that he had seen her somewhere before, but he could not remember. Her lovely smile seemed to light up the whole room.

"This," said the fairy, pointing to the dish of gold pieces, "is a just reward for John's kindness of heart in helping so many people. I was the lonely little hunchbacked girl; I was the poor little hungry boy; disguised as a farmer, I begged from him his ball; I was also the old woman to whom he gave the apple. May he and his be happy the rest of their lives!"

With those words she vanished, but just as she was disappearing she touched the poor cottage with her wand, and it became a pretty cottage with comfortable furniture. John and his mother and his little brothers lived happily on the money that they received for the lumps of gold until the boys grew up and were able to earn a good living for their mother and themselves.—Bessie Best, in Youth's Companion.

A Massachusetts boy told the teacher that his sister had the measles. The teacher sent him home and told him to stay there till his sister got well. After he skipped joyfully away another boy held up his hand and said, "Teacher, Jimmy Dolan's sister, what's got the measles, lives in California."—Kind Words.

Rheumatism and Indigestion

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

If you suffer from Rheumatism, Indigestion, or from any curable disease accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to Shivar Springs,

Box 4D, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons (two five gallon demijohns) of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give the water a fair trial in accordance with instructions which you will send, and if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

would raise the question as to whether Methodism has not suffered greatly from ignorance and misconception of those same old rules. Their relation to the so-called "amusement question" and their unfortunate likeness to the blue laws of early New England have distorted their meaning and destroyed their influence. And I wonder if a sane study of them in their historical and spiritual relationships would not be one of the most profitable tasks to which our people could give themselves today. Do we need anything more than we need a new evaluation of the basic principles of true spiritual living?—N. Y. Advocate.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS ARE SAYING

Some Limitation.

The board of education of an Ohio township decreed that its teachers should not dance or play cards or use tobacco. Some wonder what the poor creatures will do for pastime! Others say that it is no one's business what a teacher does in off hours. But it makes a difference what a preacher does when out of his pulpit, and whether a bank teller gambles after he leaves his window, and what a wife does when she is away from home. Some more boards of education ought to discover what they really are for.—Religious Telescope.

Place Seeking.

When a preacher gets his mind more on his place than upon his service, when he thinks more of what a place can do for him than of what he can do for the place, it is time for him to go back and re-examine his call to the ministry. Possibly he was mistaken in his call; possibly his commission has run out. Sure it is that, when the living is of more importance than the life, when the salary looms larger than the service we render, something is wrong somewhere.—Central Methodist.

No "Best" Sermons.

There can be humanly no "best" or "greatest" sermons which will satisfy any universal standard. In any church there remains the possibility that for any given hearer any preacher may next Sunday preach the greatest sermon that man ever heard or will hear. The study of other men's sermons ought to help each man in preaching his own "best" sermon; if it should hinder or discourage him, he has missed the meaning in greatness in sermons. Any editor has the right to list great sermons but never to imply that there might not be for other men greater ones. He knows that in the only sight which is final the greatest and best sermon on any Sunday may be preached by some simple-hearted minister in an obscure pulpit, a sermon that sets the bells of heaven ringing.—Continent.

God's Purposes.

God's preparations in men are long and dim. In the disciplines to which He submits His sons and daughters there is usually no visible sign of the purpose to which the divine providence is treading. Nobody would have foreseen the historic Moses in either the jeweled prince or the ragged shepherd. Yet each was he—as God foresaw. And so God alone knows what is in any Christian. The Christian's trust can only be that God sees something that justifies every present experience, pleasant or repellant.—The Continent.

The Virgin Birth.

The virgin birth of Jesus is altogether a different question from the immaculate conception of Mary. If there is the slightest Scriptural authority for the latter, we do not know where to find it. The former is clearly stated in Matthew i. 18 and in Luke i. 27, 35. The Apostles' Creed also states the doctrine explicitly when it says "conceived by the Holy Ghost." The Christian world has accepted it down through the ages. If there is a leader in our denomination who calls it in question, we do not know who he is.—Methodist Advocate.

Not a Question of Author.

Rev. Dr. Pentecost tells of an argument he had with an atheist who did not believe the Bible because he did not now the author. The great preacher said:

"Well, my friend, is the multiplication table a work of authority with mathematicians?"

"Most certainly."

"Do you happen to know who the author of that table is?"

In a moment he frankly confessed his ignorance, upon which Dr. Pentecost added: "Then, I suppose, as a matter of fact, being a scientific man, and a conscientious skeptic, you never use the multiplication table?"

"Oh, yes," he replied, "it proves itself to be true by its work."

"Then, my friend," said the great preacher, "leaving on one side all those hair-splitting questions of academic science and criticism, shall we not be allowed to say that the Bible is a work of absolute authority in religion and morals—whether we know its human authors or not—because it works well here in its own sphere, just as the multiplication table works in its sphere?—Baltimore Southern Methodist.

The Riches of Life.

Life is a strange, topsy-turvy kind of thing. Who may understand or explain it? We toil and struggle for the things that we think would give us happiness and then find most of our real happiness and enjoyment in the incidental things for which we have not toiled or struggled at all. We keep on believing that the possession of certain things will give us the completest satisfaction, while all the time we see people who have the most of them are frequently the most dissatisfied, and we at the same time have actually got much of our satisfaction in learning to do without them. It seems so difficult to get possession of a considerable amount of the things that are generally supposed to make men happy without in the process losing something whose want makes real happiness quite impossible. If we get a little money or social position we often begin to feel sorry for the people who have not much of either, while all the time they are more rich and content and happy than we. It wasn't the money or the social position that spoiled things, but somehow when these came it was so hard to hold on to some of the things that really make life. Whenever I see a man who looks as if he seems sorry for me that I am poor I feel like shouting out to him with a great joy and gladness how many and rich and satisfying are the things I have.—The Christian Guardian.

Poor Adam.

At times we are sorry for Adam. He had the honor of being the first man and he had that beautiful garden and no neighborhood chickens to scratch up his flowers. But he never was a boy and he had no mamma to love him and spank him and hug him when he hurt himself and tuck him to sleep and tell him stories. And he had no grandma to come to see him and tell him about when she was a little girl and cook him cookies and pies and everything. And he had no grandpa to go walking with and dreaming with and he had no sister and brother and not but one sweet-heart and no mother-in-law.

And he never rode on a one-man car nor sailed on a boat. He had no neighbors to talk to and couldn't gossip with any one but the devil. He had no one but Eve to whom he could express his opinion and she wouldn't listen. He couldn't sit on the front porch and watch the crowd go by. There was nothing to see but animals and he soon got tired of that. He had to name all the animals and this was a hard task. But we all admit he did well at the task. That is if they still have the names he handed them. What suits a hog better than hog and what else would you call a flea?

But he had his blessings—Father Adam had. He didn't have a bad pedigree like many of his children. He was not embarrassed by his kin folks. He had no bad blood in his veins. Many are cursed by parents and bad kin folks. Adam escaped this disgrace. He was clean, pure, strong.

He was God's child. God walked and talked with him. He was closer to God than any man since the fall. Being pure and innocent, he could come nearer to the Holy Father. He had no worries and troubles, yet poor Adam fell.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

The Globe-Democrat holds that the language of the Bible is still the well of English undefiled. Fundamentally it is the best English of today. Setting aside archaic words and grammatical forms it is yet the supreme model of vigorous, forceful, eloquent and poetic English. Every attempt at revision has shown a lamentable deterioration in literary qualities. Every attempt to make it more understandable has made it less so through failure to maintain its simplicity. And every such attempt has destroyed much of the poetry which runs like a golden thread through all of it, eliminating in large part that rhythmic quality which has so much to do with impressing its teachings on the human mind and heart.—Charlotte Observer.

The Difference.

A wayfarer, says the World Tomorrow, passing along the highway came upon three stone masons cutting stone in a great quarry.

"What are you doing, friend?" he asked one of the masons.

"Trimming the stone, can't you see?" was the answer.

Turning to the second mason, the wayfarer said: "What are you doing, my friend?"

"Working for my wages," replied the mason.

"And you," the wayfarer asked the third mason, "What are you doing?"

"I am helping to build a cathedral." Even so. There is a difference between men.

Moses—We give little Ikey two quarters every veek for pocket money.

Cohen—Dat vos a lot of money every veek, Moses.

Moses—Ah, vell, it pleases 'im. Ve let 'im put de money in de slot gas meter; he things it's a money box.—Pathfinder.

IN MEMORIAM

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

At her home near Oxford, June 4, 1923, Mrs. Hamlin Cheatham passed to her eternal reward. In her death the Philathea class lost one of its most faithful and untiring members; therefore be it resolved:

First, Her place is vacant but her influence liveth.

Second, That we cherish her memory and extend to those who remain our love and sympathy.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy sent to the Christian Advocate and a copy recorded in the minutes of our class.

Miss Hettie Lyon, Mrs. D. G. Brummitt, Mrs. W. R. Kimball, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, our heavenly Father in His infinite love and wisdom has called one of our beloved members, Mrs. Tempe B. Dameron, to Himself; therefore be it resolved:

First, That in her death the Warrenton Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. church has lost a faithful member.

Second, That we extend to her devoted children our tenderest sympathy and pray they may feel the precious comfort of our heavenly Father's love.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, and a copy to the Warrenton Record.

Mrs. W. J. Davis, Mrs. M. P. Burwell, Mrs. R. B. Boyd, Committee.

CANADY—Late in the afternoon on September 6th God sent the death angel and claimed the soul of Mrs. Julia A. Canady. The Lord had seen fit to let her stay in this life for upwards of 78 years. Mrs. Canady was one of the oldest members of Scott's Hill church, and next to her son, she loved and stood by her church. She had spent practically her whole life at Scott's Hill, but at the time of her death she was with her daughter in Wilmington. Five daughters and one son survive her—Mrs. Ida Gooding, Mrs. Lora Smith, Mrs. Mary Dell Sidbury, Mrs. Rena Woodville, Mrs. Julia Wanamaker, all of Wilmington, and W. T. Canady of Scott's Hill.

An evidence of how she was esteemed by all who knew her was shown by the host of friends who gathered to pay their last respects as she was laid beside her husband in the family plot in Scott's Hill cemetery.

Rev. H. C. Smith of Trinity church, Wilmington, assisted her pastor in the service. E. W. Downum, P. C.

PERRY—On August 22nd at 2:30 o'clock Mrs. M. R. Perry died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. T. Belk, in Marshville after months of suffering. For several years she had been a sufferer from rheumatism, then in the early summer she fell and broke her hip and was confined to her bed from then to the day of her death. She was patient with her sufferings, but wearying at length of her inactivity she expressed a desire to listen on to the brighter land where she might walk again. In the hearing of her loved ones left behind there is sweet comfort in the knowledge that today she walks in glory with her King.

Mrs. Perry was Miss Mary Arrana Davis, and was born in Burnsville township 77 years ago. At the age of ten she joined the Methodist church, and she loved and worked for her church throughout the abundant years of her life. She was married to Rev. M. R. Perry, and in her husband's ministry she was a great help and inspiration. Her home was ever the home of preachers, and many a weary circuit rider has found renewed spiritual strength beneath her hospitable roof. Her faith was strong and simple—the kind that falters not—and her passing was the going forth of one of God's faithful ones to receive her just reward.

The home of her last years was with her daughter, Mrs. Belk, and her hours of affliction were soothed by unsurpassed tenderness of daughterly care and devotion. The funeral was conducted from Mrs. Belk's home by Rev. C. H. Martin of Polkton, and the burial was in the Marshville cemetery. Mrs. Perry is survived by her husband, her daughter, Mrs. J. T. Belk of Marshville, and one son, Mr. J. H. Perry of Charlotte.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

The death angel has again entered our ranks and removed from our circle our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Fannie Williams, wife of Mr. G. G. Williams, August 20, 1923, we, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Clarksburg church, Cool Spring circuit, resolve:

First, That in the death of Mrs. Williams our society has lost a faithful and willing worker, always in a quiet way doing what she could.

Second, We realize that the keynote of her every day life was service, coupled with love and kindness, and her cheerful presence will alike be missed at home, at church and Sunday school and at our semi-monthly meetings, and while we cherish her memory we bow in humble submission to our Father's will, knowing that some day we will understand.

Third, That we extend to the bereaved ones our love and sympathy and trust that her example will lead them on to that bright shore where they will meet to part no more.

Fourth, That we pray especially for her four little children, and endeavor to lend a helping hand to them whenever we can aid in any way.

Fifth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our church paper, a copy be sent to her husband and aged father and mother, and a copy be filed on the record of our society.

Mrs. Lacy Gaither, President, Mrs. Hattie Stroud, Sec.-Treas., Mrs. Lou Godbey, Cor. Sec., Committee.

In loving remembrance of our much loved member and co-worker, Mrs. Fannie Williams, born September 21, 1891, died August 20, 1923:

In the graveyard sweetly sleeping, Where the flowers gently wave, Lies the one we loved so dearly In a cold and silent grave.

But we hope some day to meet her, When the toils of life are o'er, On the shores of Life's fair river, With our loved ones gone before.

Yes, we know for us she's waiting, Where all tears are wiped away; Where the ransomed meet each other, In that blest eternal day.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On August 8th death again entered the ranks of the board of stewards of Harrison Methodist church and removed from our midst one of our most loyal and faithful members, W. E. Cunningham.

The outstanding characteristics of his life were his love for his home, his church and his community. He was pre-eminently a man, quiet and unassuming in manner, and noted for his purity of language.

During his last illness he bore up with great patience, forgetting the trials of this life as he looked forward to the home with many mansions.

He was faithful in his official life as chairman of the board of stewards and other church duties. In his home everyone felt the touch of his genial nature.

We bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father and resolve:

First, That the church and community has suffered a great loss.

Second, That we extend to the bereaved wife and companion our tender sympathy in her deep loss.

Third, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the church, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate.

J. P. Ardrey, H. W. McGinn, E. W. Russell, W. S. Robinson.

GASKINS—Josephus Gaskins died at his home in Ayden, N. C., the night of July 14, 1923, after several days' intense illness. For some years he was not in robust health, but kept up and going and attended to his farming and other business interests most of the time.

Brother Gaskins was born on January 27, 1853, in Craven county, near Maple Cypress, thus at the time of his death being in his 71st year. He was buried Sunday following his death in the family plot in Ayden cemetery by the writer. A large concourse of friends and sorrowing loved ones were present at the burial.

Surviving Brother Gaskins are his devoted wife, one sister, one brother, two daughters and numerous other relatives.

He bore his sufferings bravely and died in the triumph of the Christian faith. For many years he was a useful and honored resident of Ayden. His pew in church was rarely vacant except when he was kept at home on account of sickness. He loved his church and was a helpful friend to his pastor. He will be greatly missed by not only his family but the church and community.

May God's abiding grace and strength be the portion of his faithful and sorrowing wife and all others who are bereaved and sorrowful.

Jno. M. Wright, Pastor.

THE FARMER FEEDS US ALL

You may talk of the nobles of the earth,

Of the kings who hold the nation in their thrall;

Yet in this we all agree, if we only look and see;

That the farmer is the man that feeds us all.

CHORUS

Then take him by the hand, all ye people of the land,

Stand by him whatever trouble may befall,

We may say what e'r we can, yet the farmer is the man;

Yes, the farmer is the man that feeds them all.

There's the President who occupies the chair,

Of the nation in the mighty congress hall,

And the members too are great, who are sent from every state,

But the farmer is the man that feeds them all.

There's the governors and legislators too,

Who have pledged themselves to heed the people's call, Yet it seems they all agree, and can raise each member's fee, While the farmer is the man that feeds them all.

There are speculators all about, you know,

Who are sure to help each other roll the ball,

As the people they can fleece, and then take so much apiece,

While the farmer is the man that feeds them all.

There's the preacher who can preach his sermons long,

And the lawyer and the doctor—servants all,

There's the tailor and the smith, and I tell you 'tis no mith,

That the farmer is the man that feeds them all.

Now the people true are coming to the fight,

And their armies too, are not the weak and small,

God bless them while we sing, that the farmer is the king,

For the farmer is the man that feeds them all.

From the rising to the setting of the sun,

Great monopolies are sure for to fall,

Then onward for the fight and battle for the right,

While the farmer is the man that feeds them all.

—Thornton's Monitor.

Christ's eternal kingship was frequently announced by the Father to his Son. "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever," was an assurance from the Father to the Son. So also were the words, "Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee." These words, which originally had a sequent assurance of universal dominion, were thrice quoted in the New Testament: once, to prove the existence of the Son of God before his birth in Bethlehem; again, to show Christ's appointment in past eternity to the office of Mediator between God and man; and a third time, to prove that the eternal Son of God, through his birth, had fulfilled the ancient covenant of everlasting kingship in the House of David.—John W. Good, in "The Jesus of Our Fathers."

EDITORIAL ~ PARAGRAPHS

You cannot either work or pay your way to heaven. For salvation is by faith and not by sweat or the yellow metal. But you can by putting down the coin and by putting your hand to the plough prove right conclusively that you are on the road to the skies. In this as most other things deeds speak louder than words. According to the rule of evidence, shouting may be good but cash is better.

* * * *

The oxcart and the covered wagon, as a means of travel, has been exchanged for the express train and the auto. But the faster we go the less time we have for the things that are truly worth while. We are in a rush to get there, wherever that is, and then without capacity for enjoyment after reaching our destination. The streets and highways are becoming trails of slaughter. Yet we are more and more limited for time to keep pace with the ongoing rush of money-mad and pleasure-mad humanity. The faster we go the more pressed we are for time. Why not slow down a bit?

The North Carolina bride is worthy of all praise, but since the Wilson Mirror ceased its caroling there is none to tell of her enchantments as the following paragraph sings the praises of a Kansas bride:

"The bride is a woman of wonderful fascination and remarkable attractiveness, for with a manner as enchanting as the wand of a siren and a disposition as sweet as the caroling of birds, and a mind as brilliant as the glittering tresses that adorn the brow of winter, and with a heart as pure as dewdrops trembling in the coronet of violets, she will make the home of her husband a paradise of enchantment, where the heaven-tuned harp of marriage shall send forth those strains of felicity that thrill the senses with the rhythmic pulsing of ecstatic rapture."

The world in its thinking divides itself into two great classes, the conservatives and the progressives. The one is content with present attainments, the other is ever in search of something new. This is not a modern state of affairs. It has been so from the beginning. With too great frequency these two classes establish themselves in hostile camps ready to fly at each other's throats. The favorite battle ground of these hostile classes is in the field of religion. History tells no story quite so dark and bloody as the tale of religious wars. Jesus offered the remedy for all this when asked "Which is the greatest commandment?" Jesus replied that the greatest commandment is this: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and mind, and soul and strength. And the second is like this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandments greater than these." Jesus never gave orders to burn "heretics." He did not eject even Thomas from among the apostles because this poor disciple was slow to believe some things. But He did with great emphasis command whole-hearted love of God and man. Get the spirit and viewpoint of the Master and this contemptible strife that threatens great hurt to the church will all cease.

The editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, traveler and explorer that he is, has made the following discovery: "Elijah fought 450 priests of Baal like a man and ran from Jezebel like a rabbit. That was not cowardice, it was sense."

To discount the ability and attainments of others appears to have become a habit with quite a few people. Back of such a habit lies an effort to exalt one's self in his own estimation and in the estimation of others. The man or woman guilty of such folly succeeds admirably in the first and fails ignominiously in the second. For self-deception is the easiest thing at all, but such apparent folly does not get far with other people. The gallows that Haman prepares for another becomes the instrument of his own execution. Rather than gloat over habitual disparagements of one's neighbors, learn to speak kindly of him. As far as the truth will allow speak pleasant rather than unpleasant words. In it all lean to virtue's side.

Baptist people are in some things very much like Methodist people, if the following description of how Baptist folks treat the new preacher and then a little later on conduct themselves be an accurate account of their behaviour. Here is what Dr. A. T. Robertson, a big Baptist teacher of Louisville Seminary, says of his folks:

"When the church is trying to get a pastor to accept a call, the attractions of the field are painted in vivid colors. He is told that charming people are in the church. His magnetic eloquence is to draw crowded houses. The young people are going to flock to his support. After the first year his salary will be increased. The offerings are sure to be doubled. The Sunday school will grow by magic. There will be a great rush of new members. He will catch the floating population. The trunk Baptists will all get out their letters and join. Some of the rich members stand ready to double their subscriptions. All the factions in the church have united in extending a unanimous call. He is the only man who has been able to get them all together. It is a fascinating picture that dazzles the eyes of the new pastor who has grown weary of the race in the former pastorate. But after some months the new broom no longer sweeps clean. The crowds begin to grow smaller. The new members do not join. Deacon Skinflint is still hoarding his money. The trunk Baptists are still supporting the church back home by not sending them any money. The Sunday school pupils still slip off home or down town instead of remaining to morning worship. The young people in the B. Y. P. U. still go home instead of staying to the evening service. Prayer meetings are still slimly attended. The collections for missions do not increase. The pastor's eloquence begins to grow monotonous to some who whisper their preference for the old pastor, whom they helped drive away by sharp criticism of his preaching. The new pastor soon begins to feel at home because he has settled down to the same old atmosphere of indifference or criticism that he left behind him. The new church turns out to be like the old one if not a bit worse."

AN EDITOR IN TROUBLE

Our good friend, Mr. Archibald Johnson, editor of Charity and Children, and in North Carolina circles known as the "blockade preacher" because he preaches without license is in trouble, as most editors are these days. The head and front of this veteran newspaper man's offending is that he does not publish all the diatribes that reach his office upon the hackneyed subject of evolution.

When the "blockade preacher" unlimbers his batteries there is something going on. Listen to the crack of his machine guns and the crash of his cannonade:

"The word evolution has been hurled at our devoted heads time and again, but none of these things move us. We stand pat on the Bible and believe that, not a part of it, but every word of it was divinely inspired and was given to us as our guide from earth to heaven.

"Having said this much we proceed to say that many of our brethren who write on the subject are intolerant, bigoted and unbrotherly. With no more knowledge of the subject on which they write than a goat, they proceed to consign to the devil everybody who does not agree with them in their interpretation of the Scriptures. They are violently concerned about where they came from; they would much better seriously consider where they are going to.

We have before us as we write a communication from a brother who professes to be a follower of the gentle Jesus who uses the word "damnable" many times with reference to men whose lives are very much sweeter than his. This writer would be judge and jury himself and hand over to the devil men who may be wrong on the doctrine of evolution, but who show forth in their daily walk and conversation the spirit of the Lord Jesus.

This agitation of a question about which nobody knows anything has got us nowhere. Not a single ray of light has been shed on the subject though thousands of pages of white paper have been spoiled in the effort to expose what the Lord has seen fit to hide from our eyes.

This has been done, however; hard and ugly words have been spoken and written and the devil has danced to see Christian men hurling epithets at each other and showing a spirit more like cannibals than Christians.

Suppose we decide to let the matter drop since we cannot discuss it without a snarl. If a man will not accept the whole Bible as we do, we have no right to curse or kill him. Let us quit judging our brother. If we ourselves were without sin, there might be more excuse for our harsh judgments, but there are some things that are quite as bad as claiming kin with a baboon! Let us take a look into our own hearts."

JESUS AND THE CHURCH AT WORK

Jesus Christ was the world's most daring idealist. He dared to dream of universal conquest, not the conquest that Alexander accomplished, and that William Hohenzollern expected to accomplish—that is, world dominion by armed force.

Neither was it to be a political conquest, like the mastery which the Jew of his day hoped for in the arena of world politics.

His world conquest was to be distinctly spiritual; and in this he was to penetrate to the heart of things. For the heart of the universe is not mountain and plain, shining star and blazing sun. These are but the products of the great creative universal spirit.

The heart and center of the family, for example, is not in houses, though hallowed with memories, or in hearthstones upon which burn domestic fires day and night. The home had its birth in Eden and through the millenniums has set its altar fires ablaze in every human habitation. Love makes the home.

So Jesus went to the center of things and wrought with the spirit. Hence, he could assert that His kingdom was both universal and eternal.

And in all this Jesus was not a mere dreamer up in the mist and clouds. But He was distinctly practical, ever in touch with the earth, and tremendously concerned with the world both as it is and as it ought to be.

To appease the hungry, to heal the sick, to alleviate suffering, to comfort the sorrowing became His daily task. Wherever He went that place became a better place in which to live.

But in all this He did not for a single moment forget His primary task which was, and is, to seek and to save the lost. In other words, to make true disciples of His.

And the mission of Jesus among men is the mission of His church in every age and every place.

The church must have a vision. It must be a vision of world conquest. Not conquest by force of arms. The very first move in this direction was condemned by Jesus in the command to Peter, "Put up thy sword." It is not to be a political conquest. Every attempt at this in the past has proven an ignominious failure.

'Tis to be a spiritual conquest, which goes to the heart of things and guarantees permanent victory.

With all this vision of conquest the church must be practical. Alleviate suffering, appease hunger, comfort the sorrowing, heal the sick. But in this forget not the primary task, which is to disciple the nations.

MAIN STREET, GASTONIA, MEETS EDUCATIONAL OBLIGATION

Gastonia Main Street church, of which the Rev. William A. Lambeth is the popular pastor, has collected more than its full quota to date on its pledge to the Christian Education Movement. Rev. W. O. Goode, secretary-treasurer of the Board of Education, was present at the Sunday morning service of September 23rd, at which time Bishop Collins Denny preached a sermon to a great congregation of eager listeners. Before the bishop preached the pastor made some startling financial announcements, one of which was that his congregation this year had paid off the entire indebtedness on their splendid church property amounting to $110,000. Then he called to the platform Mr. T. R. Cash, the church educational treasurer, who made his report, showing that he had collected from subscribers to the Christian Education Movement nearly $1000 in excess of that which is due to date. This announcement greatly pleased all who were present and brought a thrill of joy to the heart of the secretary-treasurer of the Board of Education, who was present and who in grateful acknowledgement grasped the hand of Mr. Cash. What a magnificent example Main Street church, Gastonia, has set for the entire conference.

GOD'S GREAT DAYS IN HISTORY

In the holy book are many bugle calls to action. Not a few of these are the clear, clarion calls of the morning, directed frequently to the individual, as when the apostle cries, "Awake, awake, thou that sleepest"; at other times they summon the church of God to battle as when the prophet of old shouts, "Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion!"

New and eventful days that called for vision and daring appear along the march of the world's events. Such was the time when the remnant of Israel was to return from exile to the tasks that God in former ages had set for His people, the task of preparing for the world's Redeemer. Such was the days of Wickliffe, "the reformer before the Reformation," who in English history dared to blaze the trail along which in subsequent generations should march civil and religious liberty. Such was the time of Martin Luther when the sound of his tack hammer at Wittenburg not only sounded round the world, but has become the ponderous trip-hammer of modern life that heralds the ultimate overthrow of all forms of civil and religious autoeracy. Another new day for the world was ushered in when John Wesley from his strangely warmed heart set flowing the currents of spiritual life into a dying Christianity. It may be that we now are in some such day.

THE PLACE OF THE SPIRIT

It will be well to keep in mind that the spiritual is supreme in all human affairs. This truth finds illustration in what we call the "spirit of the age." Of the present age there are two spirits that stand out most prominently. One is the scientific, which would drag all things, no matter how sacred, into the laboratory. It would bring the Bible into the crucible the same as the sand of the street. The other is the commercial spirit that drives men in the mad rush for money. This would stamp everything with the dollar mark.

The spirit of the latter part of the eighteenth century was the spirit of revolution. It gave to us freedom from British tyranny, to Europe the French revolution.

The first century, the religious spirit in the early church was supreme. It made the lame to walk and sent evangelists who planted churches in every part of civilization.

It is the spirit that counts most. A little more than a hundred years ago William Cary got up and asked if the command "Go ye into all the world" was not still binding. "Sit down, young man," said the moderator, "when God wants to save the world He will do it without your help." But while the young cobbler pegged away at the shoes, he kept his eye on the great dark map of the heathen world while his spirit burned within. History puts this man in the forefront of Christian missions.

William Booth, returning home from among the outcasts of East London, said to his wife: "O Kate, I have found my destiny at last. I have offered myself and you and the children up to this great work. These people shall be my people and our God shall be their God." The Salvation Army is the outcome of that vow.

BISHOP DENNY A BUSY MAN

Last Sunday morning Bishop Collins Denny dedicated the big new church at Lincolnton, preached Sunday evening at Main Street church, Gastonia, and spent Monday in that growing city looking after the interests of the church.

Next Sunday morning he will preach at the formal opening of the greatly enlarged church at Forest Hill, Concord, and in the afternoon will dedicate the new $30,000 church at Salem, in Stanley county. This is perhaps the best country church in North Carolina.

On the First Sunday in October Bishop Denny will dedicate the handsome and commodious new church at Four Oaks. These are only some of his special engagements and takes no account whatever of that mass of correspondence which reaches a bishop during those weeks immediately preceding an annual conference, when some pastors and many laymen are informing him of their particular needs just at this season.

CHRISTIANITY AND SOCIAL SCIENCE

"All who have read 'The Reconstruction of Religion' to which many authorities gave first place among religious books of importance during the past twelve months will be interested in this sequel which shows more specifically how the positions and principles of the former book work out when applied unflinchingly to the present situation in our social life.

"Colleges and others who have read it in manuscript are convinced that 'Christianity and Social Science' is an even simpler and clearer exposition of its author's social and religious ideals. Among the striking chapters are those on Christianity and Social Evolution; The Principle of Service; The Principle of Love; The Principle of Reconciliation; The Problem of Religious Education and The Problem of Religious Leadership."

By Professor Charles A. Allwood, Department of Sociology, University of Missouri, author of "The Reconstruction of Religion," etc. The MacMillan Company, New York.

"Ye were as sheep going astray, but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls."

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Western North Carolina Conference, Winston-Salem, October 17.

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Merritt announce the birth of a son, Benjamin Owsley, Jr., on September 20, 1923, at 4 p. m. Weight, seven pounds.

Dr. E. K. McLarty began a meeting at Wesley Memorial church last Sunday. He is doing the preaching but has a singer to lead the music.

Rev. Norman Vaughan writes: "A successful revival at which six fine young people were added to our church at Simms, N. C., has just come to a close. Rev. E. C. Few did the preaching."

"Our people at Oak Forest on the Morganton circuit," says Brother J. M. Price, "have recently raised money enough to have electric lights put in their little church and will soon have good lights installed."

Mrs. Jas. H. Green, who recently underwent an operation in a Charlotte hospital, stood the operation quite well and is now on the road to recovery. James, the son of Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Green, and who is also in the hospital improves slowly.

"Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Moore announce the marriage of their daughter, Irene Brevard, to Mr. Vance Martin Ford on Saturday, the fifteenth day of September, nineteen hundred and twenty-three, Louisville, Kentucky. At home, Anaheim, Cal."

Rev. E. J. Harbison will begin a meeting in his church next Sunday, East End, High Point. This has been a successful year for that church with about fifty new members added to the roll. Brother Harbison will do the preaching in the approaching services.

Rev. J. J. Boone has just closed a revival at Pittsboro that resulted in twelve baptisms and additions to the church. The people at the close of the services made up a special purse of $100 for their pastor. Those Pittsboro people evidently appreciate their pastor.

Rev. George R. Stuart and wife, of Birmingham, Ala., had a narrow escape from death in Constantinople recently, when a floor gave way where they were shopping. Mrs. Stuart was knocked unconscious, while her husband got a cut on his head and a strained back.—Methodist Advocate.

"Money continues to pour into headquarters in response to the appeal for the earthquake sufferers in Japan by our board of missions, $33,075.14 having been received to date, with some churches still unheard from. The observance of 'Japan Day' is still in order, the sooner the better because of the urgent need. Mail checks to Mr. W. M. Cassetty, Jr., Box 510, Nashville, Tenn."

The special revival services at Glenwood church, Greensboro, came to a close last Sunday, and resulted in a greatly revived church and twenty-seven new members, with others to follow. The pastor, Rev. W. A. Barber, was assisted by Rev. S. B. Williams, of Whitmell, Va. Glenwood church is ending a good year, and the pastor deems it a very great pleasure and privilege to serve the fine people of this church.

Little Frank Debard Holden died September 13, 1923, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Holden, Jacksonville, Fla. He was almost nine years of age, having been born in Jacksonville October 11, 1914. The parents were greatly devoted to the child, whom they expected would become a minister of the gospel. These sorrowing parents in this dark hour have our deepest sympathy. Mrs. Mary R. Holden of Greensboro is the grandmother of little Frank.

The Chatham Record praises Rev. J. J. Boone. That paper says: "We had occasion recently to state that Rev. J. J. Boone, pastor of the Pittsboro circuit, was an able preacher, a good man and a true Christian, preaching a plain gospel and living it just as he preached it. The fact that he is a free thinker, a plain, open and fearless preacher, has awarded him a few adverse critics, but everyone who has any religion at all, those who are sincere in their Christian beliefs, realize that Mr. Boone is a powerful man and will respect and honor him after the best opportunity has passed for doing so."

Rev. W. H. Willis of Asheboro will be with Brother Rumley in a meeting at Maxton beginning September 30.

The total value last year of poultry products reached the startling sum of $884,000,000, an amount equal to the total value of the wheat crop. Yet the laying hens never crow.

The revival at Spring Garden Street church, Greensboro, is in progress with encouraging results. Rev. G. T. Bond, the pastor, is doing the preaching and Mr. H. A. Duncan leads the singing.

Prof. Frank M. Church gave an organ recital last Monday evening at Greensboro College. This was the initial recital of the year. There will be a students' recital the first Monday evening of each month.

The meeting at Walnut Street church, Greensboro, conducted by Rev. Bob Self of Asheville is proving quite successful. He will next week help Rev. J. W. Kennedy at White Oak and the week following will be back with Rev. A. Burgess in a meeting at Grace. His time till the meeting of the annual conference is to be given to those two pastoral charges in Greensboro.

Call the Holston death roll slowly and solemnly: W. W. Hicks, Mrs. W. W. Hicks, Mrs. W. R. Snider, Mrs. J. N. Hobbs, Bishop R. G. Waterhouse, J. W. Rader, J. C. Bays, Dr. R. N. Price, E. W. Mort, Mrs. Josephus Henley, Jacob L. Griffiths, Lyle M. Neel, Mrs. S. S. Catron, S. K. Byrd, A. D. Stewart—fifteen in all. If we have overlooked any one who has died since our last conference, we should like to be notified.—Methodist Advocate.

"The 'scenting out of heresy by the church' is growing out of date; it never was in date in Methodism (Wesley called opinions 'feathers, trifles, not worth the naming'), and it is to be hoped in the interest of that broad liberality that has always characterized us, and in the interest of the spirit of Christianity, that it may never have a place among us; that the first indication of its rise in Methodism may be the hour of its timely death."—Bishop Collins Denny.

Brother W. M. Boring is closing his fourth year on the South-Fork circuit and has received 104 new members into the church with others to come between this and conference. Brother Boring joined the Holston conference in 1878. Rev. J. A. Cook joined at the same time. Rev. D. Atkins is the only active man who has seen longer service in the conference. Dr. Atkins joined in 1868. Brother Boring is a four and five year man. He stayed five years on the charge before the last.

Rev. J. A. Sharpe of Albemarle was in the Advocate office Monday afternoon and reports the greatest revival in Albemarle in the history of that town. Rev. A. A. Haggard of Gaffney, S. C., is the evangelist who is doing the preaching. The meeting is now in its fourth week. There has been 863 conversions, 320 have given their names for church membership and of that number 62 are for Brother Sharpe's church. After this week the tent which has been in North Albemarle will be moved up town and the evangelist will continue the meeting at this new location. Sharpe is taking steps to build a new Sunday school building at First Street church.

Since several countries in Europe quote their paper money circulation in trillions it may be interesting to try to grasp what a trillion is. Some experts in the treasury at Washington can count four thousand dollars an hour. Such an expert working eight hours a day would need a hundred years to count a billion dollars. A thousand experts would need one hundred years to count a trillion.—Youth's Companion.

MRS. J. J. BARKER PASSES

"Mrs. J. J. Barker died Monday evening at 7:30" was the message that reached this office Tuesday afternoon from Rev. S. T. Barker, pastor at Ahsokie, N. C. The message contained no additional facts about Sister Barker's illness, the cause of her death or the time and place of the funeral and burial.

Mrs. Barker was the wife of Rev. J. J. Barker, a superannuated member of the North Carolina conference who was making his home at Ahsokie, where he had at one time served as pastor.

To Brother Barker and other bereaved kindred and friends we extend our deepest sympathy.

Rev. Sam Maxwell has an open date October 2 to give some pastor. Wire him at 111 North Slocomb Street, Goldsboro, N. C.

DAVENPORT COLLEGE

Two weeks of the sixty-eighth session of Davenport College have elapsed and the work of classification and organization has been completed. With a very bright outlook and an attendance about fifteen per cent above that of last year both Davenport College and Davenport Fitting School enter upon the new scholastic year with every indication for a good useful year of exceptional work.

Several changes have been made in the faculty. Miss Mamie Boykin comes from Mississippi as lady principal. With several years of experience and intelligent sympathetic attitude toward young women she has entered upon her work here with earnestness and marked energy. Miss Lora Lee Robertson, B. S. University of Kentucky and M. S. University of Iowa, and formerly an assistant in the latter University, is at the head of the Science department. Miss Edna Constable with a wide experience both as a student and a teacher of music will this year teach piano and violin and is quite a valuable addition to the music department. Miss Pantha V. Harrelson, who has completed work for the Ph. D. degree, comes to the department of Education and Psychology, and Miss Lucy Howard, B. A. Mississippi State College for Women, M. A. Columbia University, is teacher of Spanish and Latin. Mr. W. R. Bourne, a strong and well equipped teacher, is head of the department of English. These with Misses Edith Radford, Maude Nicholson, Mrs. J. L. Cross, Mrs. Lula Hickerson, Mr. F. W. Kraft, Mrs. S. C. Hebron and Miss Katherine Weed, all of the former faculty, will make a strong and very satisfactory teaching force this year.

Arrangements and final plans for the Davenport Lenoir Standard Training School for Sunday School Leaders have been perfected. This school will open at Davenport College Sunday, September 30, and continue for five days. A strong corps of teachers will be present and it is expected that this will be a large and successful session and that the Sunday school workers of this section will attend in large numbers.

SIX WOMAN WORDS

By Mr. S. D. Gordon.

Woman is the index of civilization. Her status tells the story of any civilization.

A low standard of appreciation of woman means a low stage of civilization, and so on. This is true through the calendared ages, and around the planet.

Broadly, the religions of the race fall into two groups, the cultural and the Christian. By the cultural religions I mean those built up by man's ideas and practices.

The Christian religion is characteristically a divine revelation, given through a Book and a Man. It includes the rarest broadest culture, but begins farther back, with something different.

It is very striking that woman's position characteristically under these two stands in sharpest contrast. Where Christ has full sway her place is highest. Where he has least sway or none, lowest.

A prolonged errand of service in non-Christian lands brought vividly to me the sharp contrast in the meanings of six words dear to woman's heart. These words are windows into two distinct civilizations. You look through the window and see woman's sharply contrasted position.

In the non-Christian meaning of the word a "woman" is a mere thing, to be bought and sold like any other chattel.

Sometimes she is a plaything, sometimes a mere vent for passionate lust, and all times at men's beck and whim, as having no choice or soul of her own.

This, be it keenly marked, was the common meaning everywhere when Christ appeared. And it is still the common meaning where Christ's influence has not made a change.

In the Christian meaning woman is the complement of man in making up the human unit. She is distinct from man, and he from her.

Neither is complete without the other. Each grows more like to the other in constant companionship, she stronger, he gentler. So each grows into the full human being.

The second word is "wife." In the meaning of the cultural religions, uninfluenced by Christian touch, a wife is the husband's personal property. She is the particular bit of womankind that has become his by due bargaining and legal transfer. She is bargained for, bought and sold, hired out, sometimes for unmentionable purposes, or otherwise used, as he may choose.

In the typical Christian meaning a wife is the man's closest friend, his constant companion. She walks and lives at his side.

The third word is "mother." The old meaning—shall I give it? The common profaned meaning among most of the race today?

Let the brevity of utterance make the naked ugliness of truth stand baldly out. A mother is the breeding machine of the human kind. The meaning is as lacking in every feeling of sacred tender humanness as that.

The Christian definition of mother? A fellow-creator with man and with God, in the most sacred and most potent task done by human hands.

The fourth word is "babe." The non-Christian meaning: an indispensable link in the family line. In the old civilization the family is the unit. Everything centers in the family. So the babe is essential. But it is notorious that non-Christian civilization has not appreciated the child, and loved it for its own sake.

Notice the meaning where the Christ touch has come. A babe is a fresh act of God. His creative breath has been given direct at birth.

The babe is tenderly loved for its own sake, even when its lengthened out life is a question. Child culture is characteristically a thing of Christian civilization.

The fifth word is one fraught with more depth of meaning to more human hearts than any other, the word "love." The pre-Christ meaning, the non-Christian meaning today—please listen quietly, for it is difficult to tell the story, yet it is true.

Love yonder is most commonly spelled with the initial l indeed, but then a u and an s and a t.

The Christian meaning? Love is the purest and most purifying, the strongest and most tender, and most impelling emotion that can fill the human heart and shape and dominate human lives.

The sixth word is one peculiarly dear to our own

English language. Its exact English equivalent is rarely found elsewhere. It is the word "home." In the cheapened meaning it's the place where a man keeps his personal goods and chattels, where his special woman-slaves, and breeds family perpetuation links.

The true Christian home? It is that sweet, sacred spot where love reigns and trains. There tenderest memories linger and cling, and send fragrance out into life. There a man goes to refresh himself, and knit up his strength anew for the battle in the world.

These are the meanings found today in those parts of the world where the two sorts of religion are found in the most characteristic stage.

Yet there is more to be said. It is impossible to build walls around any sort of civilization. Today the whole earth is in touch as never before.

And happily some of the incidentals of Christianity are being copied and enjoyed in parts of the world distinctly non-Christian.

Yet it is clearly as true that the winds are blowing the other way, too. Through every crevice, and where there seem to be no crevices, and through wide open doors and windows, the characteristic traits of a non-Christian civilization are coming into our Christian lands.

Today some of the blessedly sacred meanings of these six words are being tainted and spoiled. They are having a desperate fight for life against the subtle incoming sweep. This is particularly true of two—love, and home.

Those among us today who would take away Christianity's distinctly supernatural meaning may well stop and weigh the influence of merely cultural religion, as seen in this most sensitive thermometer.

ARE YOU GETTING ANYWHERE?

You are rushing, you are straining, with a grim look on your face;

You are turning from all pleasures; in your breast peace has not place;

You have ceased to find contentment in the nooks you used to know;

You have ceased to care for others whom you cling to long ago;

You are straining, you are striving through the dark days and the fair,

But, O mirthless, eager brother, are you getting anywhere?

In your haste you have forgotten how to linger or to smile

When a child looks up and greets you or would claim your care a while;

Though the wild rose sheds its petals in the lonely pasture still

And glad breezes sway the blossoms in the orchard on the hill,

You are too much in a hurry and too occupied to care,

But with all your grim endeavors are you getting anywhere?

You have fled from sweet contentment; trouble haunts you in your dreams;

It is long since you have loitered on the banks of shaded streams

That go singing to the pebbles they have made so clear and white,

And have polished at their leisure and their pleasure day and night;

You no longer know the solace that is in a sweet old air,

But with all your ceaseless moiling are you getting anywhere?

You have given up old fancies; you have left old friends behind;

You are getting rich in pocket, but are poor in heart and mind,

You have lost your sense of beauty in your haste to push ahead,

And along the ways you travel bitterness and grief are spread.

You have ceased to care how others bend beneath the woes they bear,

But with all your cruel striving are you getting anywhere?

—S. E. Kiser, in Good Cheer Book.

BACK IN JAPAN

It was good to look on the green hills of Japan again as we sighted land early on the morning of August 30. We did not get into Yokohama till about noon, and now, September 1, we are sailing along the coast approaching Kobe. There is considerable sea on, but we shall probably dock about noon. The joy of getting back to one's work is as great as the joy of getting back to one's own country after a long absence. One is impressed again with the beauty of these hills that rise right up out of the sea, and are everywhere covered with green. The low, scraggy pine trees, the green underbrush, and in places the thick bamboo grass make a soft coating for the rugged mountains. Nature's dress is never displeasing or unharmonious to the eye.

It was a pleasant and profitable year we had at home. Though it was not the privilege of our family to spend a great deal of time in North Carolina, owing to the demands of our work, yet we were there enough to get some pretty definite ideas of conditions. It was quite a disappointment not to be able to visit more of the churches and break in more of our good parsonages. But just to prove to you that I was not entirely oblivious to the opportunities the situation afforded, I may say that I ate enough fried chicken and other good things to put on some twenty pounds of flesh while at home. But I fear I lost about five pounds of it by exorbitant perspiring in Yokohama yesterday.

"What were some of your impressions," do you ask? Well, of course, no one could sojourn in North Carolina, even for a few weeks, and not feel the general spirit of progress and prosperity that is abroad. While the word "prosperity" is the chief word in the Republican platform, yet we all know that the thing itself is a super-party entity. The thrift and energy of the people of North Carolina combined with the lavish gifts of a good Providence duly account for the prosperity that is so manifest. I find that North Carolina's good roads and her good schools are spoken of far and wide, and for what could a people more wisely tax themselves? What is there that makes more for the uplift and happiness of all the people? Of course there are croakers who constantly cry high taxes. I suppose those conservative folks have their place. It is Mr. Fosdick, is it not, who says a man must have two legs in order to walk—a conservative and a progressive, if you please—one on which to stand and conserve the gains of the past, and the other with which to move forward. Well, I am very thankful that North Carolina is moving forward in these two most important lines.

I was impressed also with the sanity of the thinking of our people. We are not inclined to go to extremes. Our reason for this is that we have had such wise leadership in our splendid press and in our able pulpits. I was highly pleased with the sanity of the editorials I read in our daily papers. And of our own Advocate I did not speak. We all recognize in our good editor a capable leader, who is giving our people some mighty good things to cogitate upon. Consequently extreme views and hazardous movements like Fundamentalism and Ku Kluxism find little favor with us Tar Heels.

I was glad also to find that religion is still a serious matter with us. The churches I attended were full and the Sunday schools were running over. Everywhere they were having to tear down and build bigger—not barns—but Sunday schools. What could be more significant for the future! The big Bible classes of adults were a thing unknown in my youth. I told Dr. Rowe, that scholarly and prophetic editor we gave the Review from North Carolina, that we really have an opportunity to produce a Bible reading and a Bible understanding people now, such as we have never had before—and this work of religious education is being intelligently pursued in our colleges and in our churches.

There comes to me just this closing thought. America's great test is going to be her use of her enormous wealth. Will she let the ambition to be the controlling money power of the world turn her head? The world will no more stand for an economic imperialism than it will for a political imperialism. Or will her heart continue to master her head, and America following the teachings of the Master recognize her wealth as a stewardship for the nations? What shall it profit a nation if she gain the whole world economically and lose her soul?

THE REMOVAL OF SCARRITT TO NASHVILLE

Rev. Jesse L. Cupinggin, President Scarritt Bible and Training School.

In view of the decision of the Board of Missions to move Scarritt Bible and Training School to Nashville, Tennessee, a few facts regarding the matter will doubtless be of interest to the church. Space will allow but a very brief statement.

The joint program of missionary training drawn up last winter by a committee representing the Board of Missions, the Woman's Missionary Council, the two schools of Theology at Atlanta and at Dallas, and the Scarritt Bible and Training School, was adopted by the Woman's Missionary Council at its meeting in April. It was brought, along with the action of the Woman's Missionary Council, to the Board of Missions at its annual meeting in May. With a few minor changes the board adopted both papers and empowered its executive committee to act in connection with the executive committee of the Woman's Missionary Council and the Board of Managers of the Scarritt Bible and Training School in locating and organizing the proposed institution in keeping with the provisions of the program of training adopted, provided that these committees report their plans for relocation, both as to place and relation to other institutions of learning, to the Board of Missions at its next meeting for final action.

This joint committee, with Bishop E. D. Mouzon as chairman, began its work immediately following the meeting of the Mission Board, and gave careful study to the provisions of the program of training, the various locations proposed, and the type of institution that was suggested. The results of the committee's work were laid before the board at its meeting on September the twelfth with the following recommendations: "(1) That the proposition from the citizens of Nashville be accepted and that the Scarritt Bible and Training School be located at Nashville, Tennessee; (2) That the institution may be affiliated with the George Peabody College for Teachers, with the understanding that it shall have its own separate identity, free from any organic alliance with or control by any other institution. Affiliation shall mean only the privilege of securing at a minimum cost such educational advantages as may be particularly desired and as would be approved by the general sentiment of the church." After a discussion lasting throughout the day, the board, by a vote of thirty-seven to eighteen, adopted the recommendation of the committee.

Following the meeting of the Board of Missions, the joint committee took steps to secure a suitable site for the school and to work out for it a proper organization in line with the instructions of the Board of Missions. As soon as definite conclusions can be reached the results will be fully given to the church. Meantime, the committee feels deeply the responsibility resting upon it to carry forward this splendid piece of work, and it sincerely desires the earnest prayers of the entire church that the task may be accomplished to the satisfaction of the church and for the best interests of the Kingdom of God.

LETTER FROM CZECHO-SLOVAKIA

You will no doubt be glad to know that Methodism continues to move forward in a most gratifying way in Czecho-Slovakia. The evangelistic work this season has been even better than last year. Europe's only hope lies in the early acceptance of Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour from all forms of sin, most especially rationalism, racial prejudices, national hatreds and unadulterated selfishness. While I am a firm believer in a League of Nations I am fully convinced that no league of nations can be created without a spiritual basis, otherwise it is only a "scrap of paper." The greatest task in Europe today is not in the economic, political or educational, but in the spiritual field. Christ and Christ alone—the Divine Christ—can lead Europe away from self-destruction. Let me assure you that your workers here are doing all within their power to stay this downward rush, and best of all God is wonderfully blessing this effort.

We reached the point last winter when a church paper became a real necessity, but we didn't have the funds to start. We hoped and prayed and still no funds; but we had to have the paper and so on May 1, 1923, the first issue came from the press. It is a monthly and so far we have been able to issue it each month. We sell it for one crown per copy (about three cents). If we are able to make it self-supporting it will surely be a miracle. We are sending you the first five copies under separate cover. Read it, if you can, and then write a good editorial telling your people what you think of this the youngest organ of Southern Methodism. As a starter towards reading it I will translate for you the title, "Khestansky Buditel," which, being interpreted, means "Christian Awakener." Under the word "Krestansky" is Ephesians 5:14, "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall shine upon thee," while under "Buditel" is a quotation from John Huss, "Czech Nation, return to Christ!"

The entire mission force heartily appreciates the weekly visits of the Advocate and in return we are putting you on our mailing list for the Buditel. We hope to have at least two pictures in each issue which we trust will be of interest even though you may be unable to read all the contents.

TO THE PASTORS AND LAY LEADERS OF THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

The time that is fixed for the annual conference approaches rapidly. It is the earnest desire of all the pastors to close the books of all the churches on October 1st.

Will you, the lay leaders, therefore volunteer to act with the pastors in order to collect up the balance of the finances for the year 1923?

I wish particularly to call your attention to a matter that I believe is of very great importance, namely, that before starting out on your final collecting effort that you get together and make your budget. Assign the amount that you expect your membership to pay for the coming year. Take your cards around and get your members to agree to pay that for the new year. You will thus kill two birds with one stone—you will collect the amount that is due for this year and secure your pledges for the coming year.

It is very important that this should be done now before the preacher leaves for conference. The preacher can give his assistance to this work because he doesn't know whether he will be back at that same church or not for another year. He may come back or some other man may come. Therefore he need have no delicacy in having the budget raised for the incoming preacher for the next year.

Please co-operate with the board of stewards. Let the pastors use the stewards and the lay leaders to get this work done before the annual conference. In this way you can get these matters behind you and be better prepared to take up the work of the new year. We are very solicitous to have this work done before the annual conference, believing that if we get this out of the way it will enable us to get a start on the new year's work and we can accomplish more in 1924 than we have in any year of our past history.

Will every lay leader in the conference give his active co-operation to the preacher to enable this work to be accomplished? Very truly yours,

Chas. H. Ireland, Conf. Lay Leader.

ATTENTION, PARENTS AND PASTORS

All parents having sons attending Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Maryland, will kindly communicate with the undersigned, pastor of the Alpheus W. Wilson Memorial church, as this church has made special provision to look after the moral and religious welfare of our boys.

If pastors having members who have moved to Baltimore or contemplate moving to this city, or have young people attending any of our schools or taking training in any of our hospitals, will also notify the undersigned, he will see that they are properly cared for and saved to Southern Methodism. Prompt compliance with this request will not only be a great service to the people themselves, but will help to stop a leakage to Southern Methodism in Baltimore.

AT THE HOME OF EDMUND THICKSTUN

Step into my car, in fancy, and take a little spin over a mountain road in Alabama. This is the old Danville-Trinity road. Let us turn into this byway across the field. Here we go jouncing down into a deeply shaded dell which deserves its sobriquet of "Lover's Lane." Out we come and making a little rise are in the field again. Before us are two houses; the farther bungalow to the southeast is the home of Edmund Thickstun, the author of "Adventures in Evangelism."

We drive right up to the front door, which is only a dozen feet or so from the road, truly a house by the side of the road. Yonder in the garden is Brother Thickstun. His good wife keeps him literally fit by making him practice athletics with a hoe; she says that it is superior to golf. He sees us and comes tearing through the house to welcome us in true Southern style. He was born in Hoosier, but when he is back there his friends say, "Ed, you talk like a nigger." His mother was a Blue Grass woman nourished at the breast of old black Aunt Aggie. He has been in the South so long that he has nearly forgotten the place of his nativity. Three of his children were born right back there in that field the other side of "Lover's Lane."

We enter the four-room-and-an-attic house which Brother and Sister Thickstun have mostly built with their own hands since September 30, 1916, when he was horribly maimed with a fall from his buggy while on a pastoral visit in Nebraska. This room is the library and those aboriginal objects on the walls are souvenirs of a strenuous six missionary years on an Indian reservation. Christ pictures and photographs of his children are everywhere. His first-born, Col. Dorsey W. Thickstun, who was the adjutant-general of the 91st division, is pictured two-thirds life size, hanging younder surrounded with the uniform he wore in the Argonne. On another wall hangs the portrait of the baby, Sergeant Andrew J. Thickstun, who gave a good account of the family in the 13th Aero Squadron in France. There is Harrison, Gaines, Rousseau, Manning, Pendleton blood in this family. It has furnished fighters for every war of the Republic. In the war between the states it was about equally divided between the Union and the Confederacy.

Right over there by that old-fashioned writing desk is where Brother Thickstun was sitting reading the Christian Advocate of May 6, 1921, when he ran right into a story that he had written in 1896. It galvanized him. Ever since he had come South the second time, in 1916, he had been wanting to accomplish another evangelical task. But he is quite deaf and pulpit exercises seem more difficult than formerly, so he had relinquished hope but this little thing, (Chaper 11, "Here I Am, Mother," of the book) showing such vitality gave him fresh courage. He said to his wife: "I have a dozen or twenty stories as good as that in the back of my head. I'm going to write a book of evangelical stories. I've wanted to do it for years and now I shall go ahead with it."

The dictionary over by the window is not the one that he tells about in "A Game of Casion Spoilt." The old book of that story is carefully packed away upstairs. Books everywhere! Thickstun is a lover of Christian biography and would rather read how a man got religion than of how he found a wife or made a fortune. He has many sermon books, but his work is done with his Bible, its Concordance, his dictionary and Roget's Thesaurus.

How Thickstun does talk! Poor fellow, he doesn't see many visitors and his children are in the Canadian Rockies, Casper, Wyoming; Los Angeles; New Orleans; Deadwood. But he says cheerily, "I'm pretty good company for myself, thank you, sir." His seventy-four years sit lightly notwithstanding thirteen broken bones and his deafness. No spectacles. He says that this is the best place in the world to write and that he expects to be carried from here to his last home on old Trinity Mountain.

There, my dear brother, is the author of "Adventures in Evangelism." He is as much a product of the South as of anywhere. He is a man who has preached a thousand sermons without remuneration, a tither, broken in the Christian warfare—literally fell on the firing line. Read his book.

Pat Beard.

FIELD NEWS

GLEN ALPINE

The pastor and his family returned last week from a two weeks' vacation, most of which was spent in Atlanta visiting relatives and friends.

We had a very enjoyable and good year's work at Glen Alpine. A number of things have been done, but our work here is in its infancy and there is much yet that needs to be done.

The Scouts and Camp Fire girls have been enjoying its log huts erected near the church for meetings and Sunday school purposes. Both these organizations were taken again this summer on a camping trip in the mountains.

We had this summer the best revival meeting Glen Alpine has had in years. Brother Ware of Morganton did the preaching. The results of the meeting were good. Not only was the spiritual life of the church toned up, but ten were received into the church. All of them grown, ranging from 18 to 54 years. The children were already in the church. R. C. Goforth.

GOOD YEAR ON MAGNOLIA CIRCUIT

Since we last reported we have held good revivals on the Magnolia circuit. The first was held at Centenary church and resulted in five additions on profession of faith, and the church revived and stimulated to greater service.

Our next was at Trinity church, which resulted in sixteen additions on profession of faith, and a good revival among the members. One of the oldest stewards told me on the last night of the meeting that it was the best revival that had ever been held in that church. This meeting lasted only six days, but the results were good. We have two more meetings yet to hold. This has been the METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, FOUR OAKS, N. C.

Rev. J. A. Russell, pastor. This church will be dedicated by Bishop Collins Denny Sunday, October 7, 1923. Work began on the building last September and was completed in March. It is furnished with steam heat, the very best of furniture and all modern equipments at a cost of about $30,000. A most cordial invitation is extended to all former pastors and presiding elders to be present on that date.

The program of the day's services is as follows:

- 9:45 a. m.—Sunday School.
- 11:00 a. m.—Dedication Sermon, by Bishop Collins Denny, Richmond, Va.
- 3:30 p. m.—Sermon, by Rev. A. W. Plyler, Editor North Carolina Christian Advocate, Greensboro, N. C.
- 7:30 p. m.—Sermon, by Rev. J. C. Wooten, Presiding Elder Raleigh District, Raleigh, N. C.

best year I ever had. Three months before last conference I prayed daily that God would send me where I could do good, and as I draw near the close I can say that by His help I have been able to accomplish more for His glory than any other year of my ministry. It has also been a year of peace and joy. So far as I know not a word of criticism has been uttered against me by saint or sinner. So I am a firm believer in praying God to send you where you ought to be, and then let the matter rest there. Try it, young preachers. W. E. Hocutt.

ATTENTION, WESLEYAN ALUMNAE

Wesleyan College wishes to get in touch with as many of her graduates and former students as possible at once. Won't you feel in this important work of getting in touch with this band of 3,000 women scattered as they are in every corner of the globe, a personal interest and responsibility, in behalf of your alma mater?

If you have not recently reported any change of name, occupation, or address, please do so at once, as we are keeping accurate records—up to date, of all the girls who have ever attended Wesleyan, whether graduates or special students.

We are—for this purpose—issuing quarterly bulletins, giving in addition much information as to what we are doing here. We have recently begun an "Alumnae Scrap Book," and will be glad to have you contribute to this; so please watch your daily papers, and send us any clippings possible with regard to the "old girls." We have news items in this "memory book," dating back as far as July 16, 1840, when Admiral Benson's mother (Miss Catherine Brewer) received from Wesleyan the first diploma ever granted to any woman. The forty women who have gone out as missionaries to the foreign fields, as well as scores of others of our number who have made brilliant records in various walks of life since leaving Wesleyan's historic walls—down through the years—to the recent "sweet girl graduates" of 1923, many of whom, by the way, are holding very responsible positions, not a few being connected with leading schools and colleges and some already gracing the homes of prominent men, fortunate indeed in the possession of such commendable discrimination. All these, we hope, will have a place on the pages of this new history of our worthy alumnae.

Our girls are getting out a weekly paper, "The Wesleyan Watch Tower," and our alumnae department is to be accorded generous space in its columns for news as to our work.

If you wish, therefore, to keep in touch with the plans of the "Greater Wesleyan," which are materializing every day, send me your name and address, and we will gladly place your name on our permanent mailing list.

Address all communications to this department of the college to

Mrs. Julia Allen McCain,
Executive Alumnae Secretary.

A VIVID ACCOUNT OF EARTH-QUAKE SUFFERERS IN JAPAN

The following vivid word picture of conditions on board of the Empress of Canada as the refugees from Yokohama came aboard that ship is from the pen of Miss Miriam Goodwin of Morganton, N. C., who was out on her first trip to begin work as a missionary. Miss Goodwin is a daughter of Prof. and Mrs. E. McK. Goodwin, Morganton, N. C. Her story is one of unusual interest and gives a glimpse of the horrors attending that terrible earthquake in Japan.—Ed.

"Dear People at Home:—I have thought of you hourly since the awful catastrophe. We were so afraid you would worry after you read the papers. We tried for hours to get a cable to you, but everything around Tokio and Yokohama was down. We were 400 miles from shore Sunday morning when we got the word from the Empress of Australia that was in the harbor at Yokohama. All that day we practically "walked" along because the captain was afraid there would be danger in the harbor. We first began to feel it when the captain sent out a call for fresh water to be used as sparingly as possible. Half of the water was cut off all over the vessel and we were asked not to wash any clothes. But the horror came to us in full force yesterday morning just after daylight when we came in sight of land. The air had been full of smoke the whole day before and the heat had been almost unbearably intense. But we saw the central naval base of Japan burn, the oil tanks had exploded, and several of the ships had sunk.

"The harbor had been full of war-ships, merchantment, etc., of every nation. When the big "shock" came the "Australia" hurried out of harbor and in doing so ran into a cable and broke her rudder; so now she is helpless with no food supply!

People Naked, Horror-Stricken.

"About 9 o'clock yesterday I began to realize what the word "retugee" means. Our life boats began bringing loads from the Australia shortly after breakfast. (She had taken on 3,000 people the night before). You

THE CHURCH AND PARSONAGE AT SALEM IN STANLEY COUNTY

Bishop Collins Denny will dedicate this church next Sunday, September 30, at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Salem church is 101 years old. The present church building has been erected at a cost of $30,000, all of which has been raised in the last three years, and in the meanwhile increased the salary from $1,000 to $2,500. Rev. R. O. Eller is the pastor.

won't believe half I tell you. I would not either if I hadn't seen it. But if you could have seen those boat loads of wounded, naked people with death and horror in their eyes, you could not forget it.

"About 12 it began to rain, but our Chinese coolies and our English officers kept up and down those rope ladders in a ceaseless stream. One officer came up the ladder with a tiny baby on his back. Another came up on his hands and knees with a wounded woman on his back. A young woman came up on her hands and knees with an old man on her back, who had a broken leg. And those people—you can't imagine those people. Splendid looking American business men in nightshirts—absolutely nothing else, not even socks!—one boy in a raincoat, his worldly goods—women in men's underwear, kimonos, bathing suits, a night gown, and very sparse attire. Very few of them had on stockings, their hair all down, bloody, dirty, sick and hungry.

One Girl's Thrilling Escape.

"During the day we took on 1,400 people—Americans, Russians, Hindus, Japanese, Chinese, English, and from every country—even one American negro, who is badly wounded. In 20 minutes relief work was well under way. The ship was a perfect hospital. Our ten missionary doctors worked like Trojans along with the two ship doctors. Immediately the captain sent out a call for clothes. Everybody on board plunged in and worked until we were exhausted. Trunks were unpacked, the baggage room was raided. Every passenger took a refugee to see what he could do for him. The one I got was a lovely girl, the wife of an American naval officer. She was in the Imperial hotel, and the horrors she tells! She fled to the canal, got into a boat with 20 Japanese coolies—the only woman in the boat. The boat capsized. She swam ashore and spent the night in a creek up to her waist in mud. The next day she got into another boat, but it burned and she was the only person on it who was saved. You should have seen her when I took her into my room. The sparse clothing she escaped in was caked with mud. After she had a bath and had put on some of my clothes (she was too small for my clothes!) she looked like she was of a different nationality. I gave her a tooth brush, a comb, and a box of powder. You would have given your own last cent almost.

Baby Born Amid the Horror.

"One of the Japanese missionaries has one of my night dresses. She is old. Had not had off her clothes in four days. Another missionary had her arm broken on Saturday morning when her house fell in. She lay on the mountain side until noon Monday, her arm still unset; then her husband carried her on his back down the mountain to the boat. She, too, had an outfit from my trunk.

"A baby was born this morning on board. You may not believe it but I practically made a dress for it. It was a Chinese boy. About 20 women passengers were sewing furiously for it and the mother. Another baby that was brought on board unconscious strapped to a plank, died soon after and was buried at sea today. The Spanish consul and the British vice consul are on board. The British vice consul was horribly cut and bruised, and was brought in on a stretcher. There were about 20 stretcher cases. An old man about 75 years of age had both legs broken. But I cannot go on. The condition cannot be exaggerated. Our own men look almost as bad and as motley as the refugees do. They have given so generously. We see everything on deck—from overalls to bathing suits and evening suits. I couldn't help but laugh at one thing yesterday boy about 21 came on board up the rope ladder in the rain with nothing on but his underclothing and

THE NEW METHODIST PARSONAGE AT MURFREESBORO

The parsonage and building lot are worth $4,600. This is the first parsonage ever owned by the charge as it stands today, comprised of three churches, Union, Winton and Murfreesboro. This home is modern and up-to-date in every respect and finished up beautifully inside and out. There are eight rooms and a bath. A private water system has been installed providing hot and cold running water. Rev. L. C. Larkin is the pastor.

one of those gorgeous Chinese opera coats. I worked on deck all day yesterday until ether, blood and iodine made me afraid they'd have another patient.

"I'm sending this down to Shanghai to be mailed.

"A young Japanese refugee on board, who has studied in America, has lost ten members of his family."

AT SANDY CROSS AND STANHOPE

I want to tell the reader of our good meetings at Sandy Cross and Stanhope.

The Lord has been greatly blessing our efforts, good classes have been added to the church at both places and the church members revived. Large congregations have attended in each place even through rain and storm.

Bro. W. H. Winstead is still with me leading the singing and conducting some of the afternoon services. He has splendid gifts in song and prayer, and my people are greatly pleased with him. I feel very fortunate in securing him, and if any preacher needs a good singer and worker they will make no mistake in employing him. He is working his own way through college. His address for the present will be Spring Hope, N. C.

We are now in our fourth meeting together and it bids to be a good one. Souls are being saved and backsliders reclaimed. Pray for us.

W. E. Trotman.

A GOOD PLACE FOR ANY METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC

Sunday school picnic days are over, insofar as this summer goes, but as we plan our work for the next conference year it would be well to consider what is to be done in the way of a real out-of-the-ordinary picnic for the children of the Sunday school. Glenwood Sunday school, Greensboro, of which Mr. W. C. Lambert is superintendent, enjoyed the best outing and picnic in the history of their school, when they all packed themselves into automobiles and went over to our Children's Home at Winston-Salem a few weeks ago. Many of the children and older folks, too, had never seen the Home, and it was a real treat to them. All of the children and officers of the Home were invited to be the guests of this Sunday school at the picnic dinner, and in turn the Sunday school folks became the guests of the Home for the remainder of the day, and a real day it was. They were carried over the entire Home, and learned that the Methodist church in Western North Carolina conference has a great Children's Home, and one of which we should be proud, and to which we should give our best support. In the afternoon the boys of the Home challenged the boys and men from Glenwood to a game of baseball, and a remarkable exhibition it was (on the part of the boys of the Home). After the game a picture was taken of the victorious boys, who had on regular baseball suits. It was the baseball suits that accounted for the victory by the boys of the Home, according to several Glenwood folks. After the ball game all assembled on the spacious and shady lawn and Brother Wood made a short talk and conducted a prayer service, which was greatly enjoyed. It was an ideal picnic, and one that every Sunday school in the Western North Carolina conference should take, where it is possible for them to do so.

W. A. Barber.

A SAD ACCIDENT

On Friday morning, September 14, 1923, a sorrowful and lamentable accident occurred. Mr. H. M. Page and his daughter, Miss Kittie, had started to Wilmington in their car, and a short distance from the house a pine tree had fallen across the road which they were to travel. The tree did not break off at the ground, but some ten or twelve feet above the ground. The tree fell diagonally across the road. Miss Kittie was driving the car, thus receiving the hardest blow from the impact of the car with the fallen tree. Brother Page thought she lived possibly three minutes. Brother Page was caught by the impact and could not extricate himself until help could be obtained.

The funeral of Miss Kittie took place Saturday at 3:30 p. m., conducted by the writer, being assisted by Rev. J. M. Daniels, P. E. of the Wilmington district.

A large gathering of people were present to sympathize with the family and pay this tribute of respect to one whose life had been cut short so suddenly and unexpectedly.

Miss Kittie was a member of Herring's Chapel church. She made a profession and joined the church early in life. She was also our organist.

Brother Page seems to be doing well at this writing.

Blessings upon the family and peace to her ashes.

C. H. Caviness, Pastor.

THY VOICE AS A TRUMPET

Do not be afraid to get a little enthusiastic about things. It will not hurt at all to say a few extravagant things once in a while! The fact of the matter is, there are still quite a few things left in this old world that you cannot at all adequately talk about some in somewhat extravagant terms. Did you ever notice how often Jesus said extreme and extravagant things, that is, as a good many matter-of-fact and unimaginative people judged them. He talked about faith plucking up mountains; about a man saving his life by losing it; about it being much more blessed to give than to get! It surely cannot be out of the way for us to follow His example once in a while, and in our own way say such things as He said. Do not be afraid, either, of praising people once in a while, and of doing it with some abandon and whole-heartedness. It will not likely do them much harm; indeed they are much more likely to be spoiled for want of it! Call the world good! Say that the sky is very blue; that friendship is a beautiful and very wonderful thing; that a summer day must have been made by the hand of God! Break out into song over the goodness and the joy of life; talk in unmeasured terms about the love of God and the kindness of man; shout some anthem of praise and do not care who hears you! It will do you no end of good, and it may make life richer and happier for hundreds of people around you.—Christian Guardsman.

"CAN WE ELIMINATE PROVIDENCE?"

The Congregationalist thinks it was inevitable that a challenge would be forthcoming to President Coolidge's reference to the late President Harding as having been removed by an "inscrutable providence." The Christian Century has voiced the challenge, saying, "Puritanism has its cant as well as its insincerities" and that President Coolidge was true to the former rather than the latter. After expressing its judgment that the secular press has been nearer the truth in attributing Mr. Harding's death to sheer overwork and the utter inability of his physical system to stand the "grilling and grueling" of his extensive tour, the Century says bluntly, "It was not an inscrutable providence which robbed the nation of its chief executive."

The Congregationalist's comment on the foregoing view is as follows: "This may be a wholesome corrective of a view of providence that has taken too little account of common sense and of the reign of law. But is the matter all as simple as the secular press and our contemporary suggest? The Puritan's idea of providence may have been artificial and inadequate, but was he wrong in the thought of something inscrutable, which he called providence, in the backgrounds of the mystery of life and death? It may be that the ways of providence are still underlying the operations of complex law upon complex human experience in a complex world. Certainly law alone does not seem to offer any very adequate explanation of death, for we see the weak and sickly who by all appearances ought to have been dead long ago, living on, while the young and vigorous are suddenly stricken. Have soldiers been entirely astray, or guilty of cant, in sensing crudely a sort of providence, in the fatalistic notions expressed in such approximations as 'every bullet has its billet'? Was it not rugged honesty, rather than cant, that led the Puritan to a calm faith and trust in providence? Would he have ventured or endured quite so much if he had been convinced that his times were in his own hand rather than in God's?"—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

FAITH

It is the easiest thing in the world to obey God when he commands us to do what we like, and to trust Him when the path is all sunshine.

The real victory of faith is to trust God in the dark and through the dark. Let us be assured of this, that if the lesson and the rod are of His appointing, and His all-wise love has engineered the tunnels of trial on the heavenward road, He will never desert us during the discipline. The vital thing for us is not to deny and desert Him.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

OCTOBER 1ST IS THE TIME

Your conference superintendent of supplies wants a report of everything your society has done in the way of supplies this quarter. Do not disappoint Mrs. Hauss, the faithful.

Mrs. Wyche Says So.

Your superintendent of social service says: "I want something October 1st from every social service superintendent in the conference, if it is only a card with their name on it." Surely Mrs. Wyche will be showered with reports. They will find her at 149 W. Morehead Street, Charlotte.

Mrs. Courtney Soys:

"If as many study classes will report their work for 1923 as did in 1921 we will be able to report the increase we so covet. I am convinced that we must not cease urging that reports be made regularly." From a total of 210 study classes 75 did not report last year. Wonder why?

Miss Hackney Encouraged.

"Better reporting has been done (1922) than I have known in my six years of service with you." Now, sister, you who has charge of the children in your church, get busy and hold this good record, then watch Miss Hackney's irresistible smile

Mrs. Weaver.

Mrs. C. C. Weaver is in her "freshman year" in the young people's work, but one would think she was a post-graduate, judging by the fine work she is doing. She is exceedingly anxious to have a full report from every Y. P. society.

Mrs. Peacock.

Our treasurer is the great wheel around which, in a sense, revolve all our activities. Surely if you have any money, you will not deny her the joy of counting it. Mrs. Peacock loves the "jingle of the guinea." There's a big reason—so be prompt and sure with your financial report.

The district secretaries must have reports from the corresponding secretaries in order that Mrs. Dunham has her share of reports.

"A wheel within a wheel" is this business of reporting, but easy to do, and an indispensable part of the work under our present system.

RESOLUTION OF BOARD OF MISSIONS OF M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH

Whereas, Belle H. Bennett of Richmond, Kentucky, by her last will and testament, devised to the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the use and benefit of the Woman's Work of said church, the sum of $10,000, said will further providing that said sum should be equally divided between the Home and Foreign departments of the Woman's Missionary Council.

Now be it resolved by the Board of Missions that we accept said devise upon the terms and conditions above set forth, and agree to hold, administer and apply same as above directed, and the treasurer of the Board of Missions is hereby authorized, upon receipt of said sum, to execute a receipt to the administrator of Belle H. Bennett, binding the board to carry out the terms of said bequest."

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has called to her eternal rest our friend and co-worker, Miss Delia Lazenby; we, the Woman's Missionary Society, the Local Workers and the Woman's Bible Class of Broad Street Methodist church, Statesville, N. C., feeling most keenly the loss of her sweet presence, resolve:

First, That we are grateful to God for the influence of her quiet, gentle life, characterized as it was by service for others and loyalty to the Master's cause.

Second, That we strive to emulate the perfection of her faith and patience, knowing that the spirit of her beautiful life will linger like sweet incense among us, helping us to attain to what she has already won.

Third, That we sympathize with the loved ones left behind, who have cherished her so faithfully and who will miss her presence at their bedside.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the above named organizations, a copy be sent to the family, the Statesville papers and the North Carolina Christian Advocate.

KNOWING GOD THROUGH PRAYER

The church does not need prestige, she has that; she does not need numbers, her rolls are long and full; she does not need machinery, she is over-organized; she does not need money, she has more wealth than consecration. She DOES need the spirit of prayer, which is the key to power.—Walter R. Lambuth, Lambuth-Bennett Book of Remembrance.

MISS MCKINNON WRITES

R. M. S. Empress of Canada,
August 23, 1923.

Dear Friends of the North Carolina Conference:

We sailed from Vancouver at noon today, and at four o'clock we shall stop at Victoria. I have unpacked my trunk, so that if I should be overtaken by seasickness that much will be done. Now before I do any other thing I want to write to you, for after we leave Victoria there will not be another chance to mail letters until we reach Japan.

How can I ever thank you for all that you in your love and kindness have done for me? Here on the boat with me are the many, many gifts that you have sent to me for myself personally and for the work we all love. Those last weeks at home were such exciting ones! Almost every mail brought surprises from you, and there was the joy of visits from some of you who were near Maxton. I am sure that all this excitement kept away a lot of sad thoughts of leaving home. Then think of the joy there will be in unpacking in China! And always when we use these gifts I shall rejoice not only in their usefulness, but also in your interest and love that prompted such gifts.

I wanted to write every auxiliary a personal note of thanks, but the last two weeks at home were just so full that I did not get all of this done. I am even afraid that a few cards were lost, and that I will not know to whom to write. I am sure you will understand and will know that my appreciation is no less deep.

I wish you might see the lovely big boat on which we are sailing. I have not taken time to go all over it yet, but I understand from others that there is a gymnasium and a swimming pool, as well as a library, writing room, numbers of parlors and social rooms. My cabin is big and roomy, an outside one. I am rooming with a very dear friend who is a Y. W. C. A. secretary in Szechuen, China's most western Province. I think from looking around a bit that quite a large majority of the passengers are missionaries. This will mean delightful fellowship.

Our own Council missionaries on board are going to Korea and Manchuria. I am especially glad of the opportunity I shall have to become acquainted with them. Miss Hauser, Miss Cherry and Miss Goodwin are all from North Carolina, from the Western conference.

It is almost four o'clock and I must write a letter to my family. I want to write often for Our Missionary News, and I hope you will know that these letters are really personal ones to you. My China address is Virginia School, Huchow, Chekiang Province, China. How glad I shall be for letters from you.

I am hoping and praying that this year and all that are to come may be filled for you and me with joy in the fellowship and service of our Master.

Lovingly yours,
Sallie Lou McKinnon.

SCARRITT RE-LOCATED

Doubtless you have already seen that on September 12 the Board of Missions voted to locate Greater Scarritt at Nashville. Wherever it is, it is still our Scarritt, ours to love, to pray for, to work for, to support by our liberal contributions. Now that it is all settled let's get to work seriously on raising our pledge for this year to the Belle Bennett Memorial Fund. The only way to do that is for every individual member of every auxiliary to assume her own responsibility and contribute her part, making it as liberal as possible, but her part anyway, much or little, and do it at once. The amount for the year is $8,333.33 1-3. Each auxiliary has been notified of its part of that amount, and the plan for collecting it has been given us, so let's get busy.

MISSIONGRAMS FROM THE ROCKINGHAM DISTRICT

A new society was organized at Barker's church July 29, 1923, with the following officers:

Miss Katie Russ, president.
Miss Lillian M. White, vice president.

Mrs. Raeford Smith, corresponding secretary.

Miss Ruth M. White, secretary and treasurer.

Addresses—Route 1, Lumberton, N. C.

Mrs. Shelton M. White, Voice agent.
Address—Route 7, Lumberton, N. C.

We give this new auxiliary with fifteen members a most hearty welcome in our ranks and hope it will grow in numbers and in interest.

Our new auxiliary at Lumberton—the Mary Ella McCall—has started off well with sixteen members and report $15 for second quarter. With such a president as this society has we are expecting great things from them.

The new auxiliary at Barker's was organized by the Saint Paul's auxiliary, and we are hoping that many more strong auxiliaries will go and do likewise.

It is impossible for the district secretary to visit all the churches in the district, but there is a band of faithful women near enough to every church to organize and nurture a new auxiliary, and if every one would do this the doubling campaign would be easy. And what better missionary work could any of us do?

It will be pleasant reading to Mrs. Wilson as well as other lovers of children to know that a Bright Jewel Band has been organized at Lemon Springs with the following officers:

Virginia Watson, president.
Jasper Kimbal, vice president.
Gwen Cox, secretary.
Thelma Cox, pianist.

Miss Sadie Matthews of Sanford is leader of this new band, and it goes without saying that these children will increase in wisdom with such a leader.

The auxiliary at Troy reports more new members for second quarter than any other in the district with Hamlet as a close second.

The report from West End was the first to reach the secretary, and though it is necessarily a small society in a small town, there is great promise in an auxiliary that makes such prompt reports. We wish there were more like West End.

There were five societies in the district that failed to send in any report for second quarter.

Lanrinburg and Lumberton were the only societies in this district reporting anything on the Bennett Memorial fund for Greater Scarritt. It is hoped that every society will send in their quota if possible in the third quarter and let the fourth quarter be free to wind up the year's work in good shape.

Our prayers have been answered and the Rockingham district has a volunteer for life service—Miss Euline Smith of Hamlet has definitely decided and wants to go to Scarritt in September. Miss Smith is a splendidly furnished young woman, being a graduate of the N. C. College for Women, and has taken a business course.

The love and prayers of every woman in the conference, and especially in the Rockingham district, will go with and abide with our own dear Sallie Lou McKinnon as she returns to her beloved work in China.

Her cheering presence has been a benediction to so many conferences, district and group meetings. The memory of them will linger with us.

Mrs. W. R. Royall,
District Secretary.

SUICIDE TOLL

W. S. Surratt.

Suicide has reached such a deplorable state that it is becoming annually more and more a question of national importance.

There are many direct reasons for the increase, such as mental diseases, lack of self-confidence, a wrong conception of life, an unhappy vocation, but the origin is much deeper; in fact, its inception is in the moral nature.

Who is responsible for this crime? It is the duty of parents, teachers, ministers, in fact all who are interested in the future life of society to re-establish moderation and a reasonable discipline. It is not our desire to establish the rigid discipline of the Pilgrim fathers, but a sound moral nature should be inculcated in each individual. We talk about discipline, but we don't practice it. We over eat, over smoke, over drink, stay out late and live irregularly.

Parents take their children out one night to a play, and instead of being at home preparing to go to bed at a reasonable hour and building up healthy nervous systems, they are in many cases living on reserve force.

When we consider the fact that we are rushing like wild men to get the dollar, is it any wonder many are sick of life?

The motto seemingly is "to get the money." Get it any way, just so we get it.

It is obvious that such a philosophy cannot help to erect a solid and substantial social order for the reason that such teaching robs us of true brotherhood which is essential to a healthy social life.

Remove the brotherhood and the world perishes.

Salvation requires a good all-round development founded on poise, industry, self-denial, moderation, love and discipline.

A well ordered life such as this is in our opinion a cure for suicide.

How Aggravating!

"Beware," whispered the fortune teller impressively at the church lawn fete, "beware of a dark man who will cross your path."

"Oh, dear," cried the flapper, as she drew on her motor gauntlets preparatory to leaving, "don't tell me I'm going to run down another pedestrian." —American Legion Weekly.

GROWING

Interest in Children's Week is growing. There will be more congregations willing to assume the important work of visiting the homes of their children, the holding of a parents' meeting and the adoption of some definite forward step than ever before in the history of our conference. Miss Virginia Jenkins, our elementary superintendent, who has this work in hand, reports that wherever she has been much interest was shown in giving the children the attention they deserve. This is to be done through the parents during that week in October that best suits the convenience of the local congregation. To date the following congregations have through their pastor and superintendent appointed a key-woman and are arranging to observe Children's Week:

Asheville District.

PARENTS' MEETING

If the Sunday school teachers in the elementary grades take time in their busy lives to visit the homes of their pupils the pastor and Sunday school superintendent should certainly see that the elementary key-woman has all the needed help in the putting across of a worth-while parents' meeting. Some churches will give the 11 o'clock hour Sunday morning to this important meeting. This hour is none too good for the cause to be presented. It is earnestly hoped that each church will give a good hour for a parents' meeting, where the needs of childhood will be presented. Remember that a parents' meeting is to be featured with parents, not with children. Programs can be obtained free from your conference office.

RAMBLING

Miss Virginia Jenkins, the conference elementary superintendent, is just back in the office after a very satisfactory field trip during which time she visited the elementary workers in Winston-Salem, Greensboro, High Point, Thomasville, Salisbury, Statesville, Charlotte, Gastonia, Shelby, Asheville and Hendersonville. She reports that special interest was shown in the High Point, Charlotte, Gastonia, Shelby, Asheville and Hendersonville meetings, if one were to judge by the number of those participating.

DINERS

When Miss Jenkins reached Shelby last Monday evening to meet with the elementary teachers she was surprised to find that Supt. William Lineberger had arranged to have his entire Sunday school faculty to dine with him at Cleveland Springs Hotel in the Workers' Council meeting. Every available teacher was present and Children's Week and general Sunday school promotion received a good boost. Lineberger and his folks know how to eat and how to work. They have a good time doing both.

SHELBY

Rev. A. L. Stanford, the good natured old bachelor that he is, has just completed another fine parsonage and has moved into it, though he is still in the singular number. The Shelby parsonage is certainly a jim dandy. Ground has been broken for the erection of Shelby's $100,000 new church. Great things are happening at Shelby.

BREVARD STREET

I had the satisfaction last Sunday of worshipping with the Brevard Street Sunday school in Charlotte, where Supt. M. W. Evans and Pastor T. F. Higgins are laboring together in the closest harmony for the promotion of religious education. Brevard Street is growing. A renovated church and a rejuvenated people are helping to make Brother Higgins feel encouraged in this his first pastorate in our conference. It was a distinct pleasure to sit in the young ladies' Wesley Bible class and enjoy the discussion of their teacher, Mr. C. W. Ramsey, one of the most loyal supporters of our Western North Carolina Wesley Bible Class work.

BISHOP DENNY

The following letter has just been received from Bishop Denny in answer to my request that he be present on the evening of our Sunday School Anniversary at the approaching annual conference and present special certi-ificates of award to those pastors who have completed one or more units of credit in our Sunday School Standard Leadership Training Course.

"So far as I can now tell I can give you some time on the night of October 17 for the presentation of the certificates of which you speak, but you and I must keep in mind that an annual conference is a great strain and I must not be looked to for too much work, especially night work."

We are indeed delighted to have Bishop Denny with us on the evening of our anniversary, even though he may not be able to remain through the entire session with us.

NOVEMBER SCHOOLS

The Charlotte, Winston-Salem and Greensboro Standard Training Schools will be held in November. The Charlotte school begins November 4 and closes with the Friday night session November 9. The Winston-Salem school will begin Sunday afternoon, November 11, and closing on the 16th. The Greensboro school will open its first session Sunday afternoon, November 18, and close on the 23rd of November. Three great schools are being planned.

North Carolina Conference

MURFREESBORO IS SECOND

Murfreesboro Sunday school is the second school in the North Carolina conference to attain the "Standard" rank on Program of Work "C," Sharon school of the North Rocky Mount circuit being the first to earn this coveted distinction. Murfreesboro school was checked up by your conference superintendent of Sunday school work on his visit to Murfreesboro August 13, and at that time it was entitled to credit for nine of the ten points required by the standard. Since that time the one or two items lacking for credit on the tenth point have been attended to, with the result that all ten seals have been placed on the wall chart, and the big gold "Standard" seal will be sent right away from the Nashville office.

This school adopted the official Program of Work when presented to it in May by District Secretary E. S. Yarbrough, and under the fine leadership of the pastor, Rev. L. C. Larkin, and the superintendent, Mr. E. W. Whitley, it has been working steadily since then in a consistent, conscientious effort to build up all phases of its organization, equipment, and teaching force, with the fine success previously mentioned. To attain this worthy distinction meant hard work, but the results in increased efficiency of the school, the workers feel, have more than compensated them. Rev. Mr. Larkin, the pastor, says:

"I will follow up all that has been done with an earnest desire to follow not only the letter of the requirements but the spirit of the program outlined."

And you can count on Larkin and his co-workers! Congratulations to them, and may their splendid example be an inspiration to others.

GOOD WORK AT STUMPY POINT

The recent non-standard training school held at Stumpy Point was well attended, and quite a creditable number of those in attendance showed that they meant business and did good work. Twenty-six enrolled for the course, and, in addition to these, there were perhaps two or three times as many attending as auditors. Thirteen handed in their examination papers for credit. Rev. E. L. Stack, of Elizabeth City, was the instructor and "The Organization and Administration of the Sunday School" the course offered. Writing to your conference superintendent of Sunday school work about this school, Rev. Mr. Stack said:

"The people of the community seemed to take a great interest in the work, and we had a large crowd all the time taking advantage of what they could get out of the work. I thoroughly enjoyed the work myself, and I think it was enjoyed by all, and I am sure that they turned in some of as fine papers as you will find coming in from any school."

CHILDREN'S WEEK ACTIVITY

Splendid interest in the observance of Children's Week is being taken by many schools in the conference. To Miss Keene is coming almost daily requests for information and helps, and indications now are that over twice as many schools will observe the week this year as last. If you are interested in this observance for your school, write to Miss Georgia Keene, conference elementary superintendent, Durham, N. C. She is in a position to give you all the help you need.

BURLINGTON WILL DO IT

Miss Keene met with the Children's Week committees of Front Street and Webb Avenue Sunday schools, Burlington, on Friday evening, September 14. Both committees are very enthusiastic and are planning to put on the program just as it should be done. Mrs. John A. Robertson, of Front Street, and Mr. C. D. Hargrave, of Webb Avenue, are the chairmen of these committees. Dr. W. B. North was at the meeting and spoke in favorable terms of the project. He is going to lend his whole-hearted support to the observance in Burlington.

MISS KEENE VISITS BETHEL

Our elementary superintendent spent Sunday with the workers of Bethel Sunday school on the Yanceyville circuit, visiting the Sunday school and making a short talk in the morning and leading in a round table discussion in the afternoon. The workers from the Presbyterian Sunday school met with their Methodist friends, and both groups entered enthusiastically into the discussion of the Sunday school work. Mr. J. A. Cobb, superintendent of Bethel Sunday school, says, "We need trained workers, and we want a training school just as soon as we can get it." They will get a school, too, just as soon as we can plan it.

OXFORD TO OBSERVE WEEK

Mr. C. G. Credle, superintendent of the Oxford Sunday school, wrote: "I realize the importance of the Children's Week movement and we are willing to try to make it one of the best things we ever had in our church. I want you to send our chairman, Mrs. D. G. Brummitt, all the information possible, and I want you to meet with our committee. You may name the date for the meeting, and I will get the members of the committee together." Of course Miss Keene met with the committee. They met Monday afternoon at 3:30. Rev. E. M. Snipes and the superintendent were both at this meeting. They are going to have a splendid Children's Week program. The pastor is planning to give the 11 o'clock hour for the parents' meeting, and the teachers are going to visit every home of the boys and girls of the Sunday school during the week.

After the Children's Week discussion the elementary programs of work for the Beginner and Primary departments were presented. It was found that each of these departments had already attained eight of the ten points on these standards, and they are going to work on the others right away. We predict that they will be among the first to report standard elementary departments.

CHILDREN'S WEEK AT CENTRAL

Central church, Raleigh, is going to observe Children's Week. Miss Keene met with their committee Tuesday evening. Rev. H. I. Glass, the pastor,

THE REQUIREMENTS OF A GOOD SOCIAL

Wonder how many third department superintendents have trouble with their socials? I know we third department folks don't put as much time on our socials as we should, and as I have some notes on third department work that have helped me wonderfully will pass them on. Now, department superintendents, let's pass our good ideas on and help some one else. It doesn't do us any good to keep good things to ourselves. First, let us ask the question, What kind of socials are most of the Epworth League socials? So many times we hear the leagues saying, "I don't have a good time at the Epworth League socials—always the same old thing," and many other such remarks. Why do the leaguers talk thus? Because it is true, and it is up to us third department folks to make the socials better. We must plan our socials, having at least three working committees. Three, you say? To be sure—the decorating, entertainment and refreshment committees—and have them all working. Be sure to use the decorating committee at every social, for good decorating is half the social. None of us enjoy a social in a plain old room with the chairs all around the wall. Have snappy games and something different every time. A different social every time, you say. It can't be done. Oh, yes it can. Make a social calendar for the whole year. Plan every social, and every one different this way:

January—Epworth Era social, season social, New Year party, calendar social.

February—Valentine party, Washington birthday.

March—St. Patrick's party, Japanese party.

April—April fool party, a rainbow party, an Easter party.

May—Indoor lawn party, indoor picnic, May Day party, annual banquet.

June—A flower social, mid-summer's night masquerade, a group social.

July—A patriotic party, picnics, swimming parties.

August—Gypsy party, hobo party, watermelon party, moonlight picnic, a parden party.

September—An old time school party, hikes, weine and marshmallow roasts.

October—Hallowe'en frolic, black cat party, nut party, anything "Hallowe'eny."

November—Indian pow wow, Thanksgiving party.

December—Snow frolic, Christmas party.

Now you see we know what social we are going to give this year. By all means have a group social, and more than one if possible.

How many department superintendents know personally every member in her or his department? That is one thing we must know and do if we want co-operation in our departments. Then have your annual banquet. At the banquets we learn better all our leaguers, and it helps us to invite our pastors and learn to know them better as we eat chicken together. Now how are we going about our socials?

Well, let's see what makes a good social:

1. Cordiality;
2. Preparation;
3. Participation;
4. Activity;
5. Pep;
6. Theme;
7. Variety;
8. Eats;
9. Surprise;
10. Attractive Surroundings.

If it takes all this to make a good social what do our socials give us? Recreation. What do we find in recreation:

- R Resourcefulness.
- E Executive ability.
- C Cheerful personality.
- R Ready wit.
- E Enthusiasm that is contagious.
- A Ability to work with others.
- T Tactfulness.
- I Ingenuity.
- O Optimism.
- N Never quit learning.

So you see there's more in recreation than we thought. Next comes the leader. A good leader is necessary for good socials. Let's see what we find in leaders:

- L Loyalty.
- E Enjoys playing.
- A Artistic taste.
- D Discovers talent.
- E Energetic.
- R Right objectives.

All of that in a leader of the third department! Why not? And now a few whys—why we want good socials:

1. To bring young people into happy fellowship with Christ.
2. To satisfy the normal hunger for a good time.
3. To develop the spirit of fellowship.
4. To increase, enlarge and enrich the interest of life by an adequate program.
5. To dissipate the notion that church young people cannot have a good time.
6. To build strong character by developing right attitude in life.
7. To save our young people from harmful recreation by satisfying their normal demands and by raising their play standards.
8. To develop a keen appreciation of God's beautiful out of doors.
9. To build healthy bodies.
10. To tend to develop mental alertness and to increase, enlarge and enrich the points of contact with the minds of the world.

In our socials we have the greatest opportunity of any department in the Epworth League to give mental, physical and spiritual recreation to our young people. Third department superintendents, are we doing our duty? We must meet the requirements of a good social. A Third Dept. Supt.

HERE'S ANOTHER LIVE NEW LEAGUE

A letter from Bro. D. A. Petty says that they have organized a league at Roberdel about a month and a half ago and that new league is doing fine. They are rendering some excellent programs each week.

On the third Sunday in this month the following officers were installed at the Roberdel Methodist church:

- President—Walter Hasty.
- Vice President—Lee Allen.
- Recording Secretary—Miss Annie Hill.
- Cor. Sec.—Miss Mary Allen.
- Treasurer—Barnie McLean.
- Supt. 1st Dept.—Charlie Martin.
- Supt. 2nd Dept.—L. E. Brown.
- Supt. 3rd Dept.—Miss Ester Riddle.
- Supt. 4th Dept.—Miss Ethel McCaskill.
- Epworth Era Agent—Miss Stella Hill.
- Pianist—Miss Inez Bullard.

This league already has more than thirty members and is growing fast. We are sure that these young folks will be splendid leaguers, and with this league as a nucleus we shall expect to hear soon of some more new leagues on the charge. Brother Petty is very much interested in the work of the young folks and he is expecting great things of his new league. He says it is a "promising" crowd of leaguers, and we're betting that there will be some promises carried out, too.

THE GOAL ATTAINED

(A Parable of Saged the Sage.)

Once upon a time there was a man who said, I am poor, but I shall yet be rich; for I have Youth and Strength and Ability. And when I am rich, then will I have a Fine Stable, and also a Vast Wine-cellar.

And he went to work with Great Zeal, and he gathered in Coin; and each passing year found him trying a little harder to discover ways of not paying taxes on all his Wealth; for his Wealth had increased so large that it made him feel Poor to contemplate the Amount of his Taxes.

And it came to pass, when he had grown rich, that he moved from the humble home where he had dwelt, and he builded himself a Great House. And beneath the House was a Vast Wine-cellar. And in the Wine-cellar were many choice Vintages, for which he paid a Great Price.

And in the rear of the House did he build a Large Stable. And he filled it with Fine Horses and Expensive Carriages. And he had Grooms and Coachmen in Livery.

Now it came to pass when all these things had been accomplished that he dropped one day in his tracks. And when the Doctor came and Listened at his Heart-action with a Stethoscope and measured his Blood-pressure with something else, that the man looked into the face of the Doctor and asked a number of Troubled Questions.

And the Doctor answered and said unto him—

If thou wilt live many days, thou hast a straight and narrow path to tread. Otherwise may we as well get in our order with the Undertaker and do it early.

And the man inquired of the Doctor, saying, Tell me what I must do, and I will do it, and I will sign my name on the Dotted Line.

And the Doctor said, Thou must Walk Moderately; and thou must drink nothing but Water.

And the man said, All my life I have labored for this end, that I might own a Wine-cellar, and now thou sayest unto me, Drink only water.

And the Doctor said, It is even so. And he spake yet again unto the Doctor, saying—

I have always loved Good Horses, and I have worked myself to death for this only, that I might be rich, and own a Good Stable.

And the Doctor said, That is about the size of it. And the man said, I could walk when I had no stable. I could drink water when I had no Wine-cellar.

And he faced the future, a sadder and a not very much wiser man.

And about this time the Automobile smote his Stable upon the one cheek, and the Eighteenth Amendment hit his Wine-cellar on the other. And he then began to feel better about his Stable and his Cellar.

Now I look about me, and I see men not a few who are laboring for something in the future, and I have fear for some of them that by the time they get it they will have lost the capacity to enjoy it. And to them I say:

Labor not for the things which can yield thee no Solid Satisfaction; but labor for the things that are Good and Fine, and get a part of thy Fun as thou goest along.—Selected.

That was a noble impulse on the part of Mr. Angier Duke to remember so many institutions in his will. It may be a couple of years before the estate is settled and the bequests turned into the different institutions named in the will. The Methodist Orphanage is very happy that it is one of the beneficiaries of the will. We will receive ten thousand dollars which will be added to our endowment fund. All such gifts are never used for current expenses. It is sincerely hoped that many more friends will write the Methodist Orphanage in their wills and by so doing perpetuate themselves through the centuries.

We have twenty-two boys and girls in college this year. About half of the above number are at Trinity College. The Orphanage feels justly proud of this record. We had fourteen to graduate from our Orphanage high school last summer and nearly all of them are in college. Through the generosity of several of our organized classes and the benefaction of Brother S. C. Vann such a course has been made possible for this large number of our promising young people. Blessings upon the heads of their benefactors!

The board of trustees ordered the erection of the following buildings: Industrial building, kitchen and dining hall, baby cottage and two dormitories. It was our earnest hope that this building program would be under way by now, but so far we have not let a single contract. This does not mean that we have been idle. There were important things to be done before the architect could finish his plans. The board of trustees secured, in the spring, one of the best landscape architects that could be found and employed him to do our landscape work. The topographical survey has just been completed and the landscape architect has had this survey in his possession for just a short while. Then it will require several weeks for the construction architect to complete his plans. Indications are that it will be the first of March before the actual work begins. Those who have never projected a great building program have no idea what such an undertaking means.

The failure to secure a good seven-passenger automobile has just about put our singing class out of commission. During the fall, spring and summer we could reach so many of our churches on Sundays within a radius of one hundred miles if we just had another car. Both the orphanage and the churches are the poorer by this failure. I have hinted, appealed and even begged for one, but no response. Its possession is an absolute necessity if we are to minister to the churches through sacred concerts. I am anxious to keep our Organage close to the great heart of our church by coming into contact with them through our singing class. If a few more churches like Centenary, Smithfield, would come across we could secure another car right away. The Smithfield saints have given me two hundred dollars as a nest egg. How I do wish several other churches would follow this example! Possibly some individual is waiting for just such an opportunity. If so I shall be glad for such to write me.

He who puts service before self has learned the secret of happiness. The trouble with so many is that self is put first. Such a course in life must inevitably bring disappointment and ultimately disaster. If Christian service were the keynote in all of our thinking and acting, many of the social and moral ills of the world would soon be healed. "Bear ye one another's burdens" should be heeded more today than ever before because the old world is staggering under a tremendous load of suffering and sin. The beauty and glory about bearing the burdens of others is that we not only render the highest service to the world, but we lift the burden from our own shoulders. The happiest people that I know are those who are struggling to support their own families and at the same time are sharing their gifts with those that have no one to support them. I wonder sometimes why so many people, blessed with abundance, do not share their means with those who have been denied a home and loved ones. Our Methodist Orphanage furnishes a fine opportunity for all who really want to make their life worth while. To all who have not taken our Orphanage close to their hearts, let me prevail upon you to make this experiment and learn the real secret of happiness.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

By Martha M. Wood.

There are several dates that stand out conspicuously on the calendar of the Children's Home. One of the most important is the time that calls together the meeting of the board of trustees.

These gentlemen, nineteen in number, meet and examine the financial affairs, business interests and general condition and future prospects of their responsible charge and valuable property.

August 31st closes up the business year of The Home, and for several days before the meeting the office force have been busily occupied settling up odds and ends of business to bring the bookkeeping down to date.

And then Mr. J. J. Norman, who is an expert auditor, comes out and examines the books and takes an inventory of the property and supplies on hand, so that everybody concerned may know just what is what and how everything stands.

There were thirteen trustees present at the meeting. The first session was held Monday night at the Robert E. Lee hotel and the discussions continued at The Home office next morning.

After the business was over and the gentlemen had walked around and visited points of interest on The Home grounds, they went with the superintendent over to dine with the Rotarians at the Robert E. Lee.

Mr. James A. Gray, who was treasurer of the board, resigned as treasurer and was elected a trustee, and Mr. C. A. Wood was elected treasurer.

Mr. Wood says in his report for the year: "I am glad to report that we have kept within the total set aside for our budget at your last meeting. Some items ran over very largely, but other items were enough under to bring the total well within the estimates. However, I am asking that the estimates this year be increased in order that I may not live under such uneasiness next year as I have this year, with the understanding that I will hold expenditures down as well as I can in justice to the work."

We had hoped to have some new cottages started by this time. The superintendent says in his report, in regard to the building program: "On account of excessive building costs it was deemed best not to begin any building till late fall or winter. We propose letting the contract for the hospital this winter. We hope also to get one or two cottages for children under way before spring.

"It is well to bear in mind that any large increase in the number of children will necessitate enlargement of our dining room and kitchen. In fact, the kitchen is too small even now and ought to be enlarged before we begin on a larger dining room. But all this can wait there are more cottages for children.

"With the assurances of help we have had in this line, I think we may safely plan to enter upon an extensive building program."

* * * *

The present capacity of The Home is room for one hundred and fifty children, sixty-six boys and eighty-four girls.

Sometimes a few large boys and girls leave to find places to work in the large world outside, or return to live with relatives.

For every vacant place there is careful consideration of the waiting list, and the places are soon filled.

Before deciding about receiving a child, the superintendent, when possible goes to see the child and its friends, to learn as much as he can about the real conditions and prospects of the applicant.

He is planning to start tomorrow on a trip to investigate some very appealing cases.

A few days ago Mr. Wood asked me at the dinner table if I did not want to take a long ride that afternoon up into a neighboring county to visit some children that a loyal Methodist gentleman had written him about.

It was a perfect afternoon for a drive and we were soon ready to start.

There isn't much enjoyment riding in town these days of multi-many machines, rolling around and gliding hither on every side; but to take the open road into the country, when the air is fine and the landscape pleasing is a pleasant experience. Just now the goldenrod is opening out and black-eyed susans crowd the wayside in company with countless clumps of pink and purple asters. And here and there among the trees a sourwood and scraggly dogwood are beginning to color up red and bronze.

Between the stretches of woods were several little towns and many nice farms. After a while we turned off into less frequented roads, inquired the way at several places and finally arrived at a brother preacher's farm home. He kindly came with us and we turned off again into a road that was not built for automobiles, but the Westcott with John M. at the wheel can get most anywhere that wheels have been.

Down the road we found the gentleman who had been corresponding about the children. He likewise came along to guide the way, and after splashing through a little creek and going a mile or two, we came to the home of the grandmother of the little boys we were looking for.

The farm was a very nice looking farm, but the grandmother was getting old and evidently not very capable of taking care of small boys.

The little fellows were with her in the field picking dried beans, and you can imagine that they all looked very intently at the superintendent when he got out of the machine to talk to them. Doubtless a tall man who may take little boys away from a familiar home to live in a far distant place with lots of other little boys naturally has an ominous look at first sight.

The little boys were about seven and eight years old. Their father and mother were both dead. The father dying after a long illness and the mother dying soon after.

There were two younger boys also. So we went on still further through a little traveled road till the machine had to stop and we walked a little way to a lonely looking, unpainted house, surrounded by a low rail fence that had no gate, but letting down a few rails we easily stepped over.

Before the house door was a huge rock for a step that took my fancy, and inside the furniture was quaint and old—not fine but evidently very old and worn—turned bed posts and homemade spreads, splint bottom chairs, a wide fireplace, and in one corner a stair that went up into the attic.

Two great-aunts of the children, old and feeble, lived here. One held the baby boy on her lap, and the other little fellow stood behind the chair of the other old lady. This was little George, and he had evidently heard of the Children's Home, for his eyes filled with tears when he learned who the visitor was. The idea of leaving his kind aunts for scenes and experiences unknown filled his heart with sadness and alarm.

The Children's Home is certainly a very different place from that quiet and secluded spot, but in the course of a week or two, after some more letters and papers had passed back and forth, three of the little boys were at The Home infirmary waiting to be assigned places at the small boys' dormitory, and now they have become part of the lively family at Tise Number Two.

Little George sticks very close to his matron's skirts, for the noisy, tumultuous crowd of playful boys seems to him rather a fearful hazard, but soon he will be an active part of it all and the quiet of his country home like a strange dream.

Birds are singing round my window,
Tunes the sweetest ever heard,
And I hang my cage there daily,
But I never catch a bird.

ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB SAVES YOU MONEY

Club Also Offers Convenient Payment Plan

The fact that the best business men, including bankers, merchants, farmers, and professional men are most enthusiastic members of the Advocate Piano Club is conclusive evidence that the Club is founded upon sound business principles, and is conducted in a business-like manner. Every business man knows the difference between retail and wholesale prices. He can therefore appreciate the big saving in price which results from clubbing his order with those of ninety-nine other Club Members in a big wholesale order for pianos and player pianos.

The Club finances the deal and gives each member his share of the saving. Each member is responsible only for his own purchase and the terms of payment are arranged to suit his convenience. You are thus relieved of the details and responsibilities of forming the Club, and yet you receive your share of the benefits.

If you are thinking of purchasing a good piano or player-piano, you will be delighted with the big saving in price, the convenient terms and the protective guarantees afforded you by the Club. You are cordially invited to join the Club.

GOOD TIDINGS FROM OTHER FIELDS

Last week I gave the readers of this page a few items of encouraging news gathered at the Illinois, Denver and Western Virginia conferences. In every instance the "forgotten man" was at the bat and giving a creditable account of himself. And now I have some other things to relate that serve to make every friend of the old veterans rejoice in the realization that our great church is at last clearing for action in behalf of her now infirm and aged servants who contributed so much to make her great.

Missouri Conference.—It was held at St. Joseph, Mo., beginning September 5. As my train ran through the outlying district of the city, cautiously making its way to the Union Station, my thoughts went back twenty-four years when I landed at this same station to take up my first work as a pastor of one of our churches in St. Joseph. At that time I was a mere boy, and my chief thought was: "How can I make good?" Of course the "forgotten man" was present in the church even in that day, but I could not see him, for I was chiefly conscious of myself alone. Young preachers ordinarily think but little about the deprivations of aged and worn-out preachers. If I had then realized the facts about my church's veterans as I know them today, the years which followed would have been used in a manner more to save my church from the reproach for neglecting her own.

It was very satisfying to mingle again with the preachers among whom I had worked in my youth. And yet it was saddening to realize that many of them who were so vigorous and strong twenty-four years ago are now either languishing in the great silence of superannuation or else entirely removed from the group by death. Heads that I recalled as crowned with thick hair, cheeks without wrinkles, and eyes undimmed now have a few white hairs drawn across the top in camouflage or else entirely bald, cheeks cut by care lines running every way, and eyes, though still having the same kindly light, yet apparently turned toward some scene not reassuring. This is a good place to record again what I have repeatedly stated hitherto—namely: "Every active pastor in the church is a 'forgotten man' in the making."

The plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment was presented to the conference according to schedule. Bishop W. F. McMurry guided the program of presentation very effectively. Bishop James Dickey delivered an inspirational address for the moment that stirred those present to work with a will to win. Throughout the entire program, which lasted one and a half hours, the preachers and lay members kept their places in eagerness to hear every word of instruction on the method of procedure. I was told that not a member of the conference was loitering outside the conference room while the "forgotten man's" cause was being considered. This good news was gratifying. I do not mind the killing work now necessary for the success of the special effort if the preachers and lay members co-operate.

At the conclusion of the service a young preacher called me aside and said: "One of my laymen came to this conference for the sole purpose of having me returned as his pastor. After hearing this morning about the movement looking to secure a minimum of $10,000,000 for superannuate endowment he told me that this cause appealed to him with such conviction that he desired at once to subscribe $50 00n the quota of the charge that he represented. He also said that he wanted to be placed on the committee in his charge that would have in hand the matter of raising the money for its quota." Many lay members throughout the church are expressing themselves in similar manner. If they could know how such expressions encourage their pastors, they would be surprised. The preacher in this case was bubbling over with joy and expectancy. Every preacher in the church would respond in like manner if given the assurance by some lay member that his charge's quota will be raised.

Another good layman sought me out at the hotel and said: "I contributed liberally to all the other financial campaigns. Since that time I have lost a lot of money. However, I am not quite broke yet, and I want you to know that I mean to do something very substantial for the superannuate cause." I wanted to hug him. Bless his dear, good soul! His words were like a tonic to me. I believe we have thousands of such men in the church. When the call for the "forgotten man" comes to them, they will find a way to make a worthy response.

At the night service Dr. R. H. Cooper, fifty-one years in active service, and Dr. S. P. Cresap delivered telling addresses on the great movement to an audience which filled the auditorium, gallery, and overflowed into the Sunday school room. After them, Bishop W. F. McMurry, though weary from a summer of very strenuous work in his episcopal district and the labor of holding two annual conferences, concluded the program with remarks that not only deepened the convictions of the brethren on the subject but inspired in them the determination to have the Missouri conference at the head of the list when the returns are all in. God bless the boys on the border and give them the desire of their hearts.

Kentucky Conference.—A few hurried clasps of hand, a few pats on the shoulder while passing by, a snatching of a grip and a hurry-up ride in a taxi, a night and a day and half another night, and I found myself in Winchester, Ky., where the Kentucky conference had transacted most of its business except that pertaining to the "forgotten man," which was reserved for Saturday. At 10:30 a. m. Rev. Frank L. Wells was introduced to deliver the inspirational address. I thought his work at the Western Virginia conference was extra fine, but now he was even better. He was complete master of the situation, as was plainly manifested by the hearty responses which issued from the great audience throughout the time he was speaking.

Bishop Darlington, fagged from the strain of holding three annual conferences in as many weeks, rallied perceptibly when he realized that he was guiding a program having a decent support for the "forgotten man" as its objective. No man in the church is more considerate of the church's superannuates than this good bishop. He impresses me as actually feeling in his sympathetic soul the deprivations which these old veterans endure. With him in charge of the Kentucky conference I feel confident that the blue grass preachers will respond to his leadership in a manner to obtain a notable victory in the special effort for superannuate endowment.

It required forty minutes for me to explain the plan. All the preachers appeared to be in their places, and, like all true Kentuckians, they seemed determined to master all the details of the movement. Afterwards dozens of them gave me a hearty handshake and with an interest that could not be doubted promised faithfully to do their part. They realized fully that the success of the plan depended chiefly on them and their lay members, and they assumed the responsibility in a manner that was very reassuring. What a joy it is to work for preachers when they give such evidence of a definite purpose to assist with the task!

There were many lay members present, and many of them came to me with very encouraging words. Not one said the thing should be put off or complained about the movements of the church for special funds. They were all of one mind on the subject of the special effort, and all promised to work faithfully for its perfect realization. One good layman said he had already prepared a speech on the subject and expected to deliver it wherever he had an opportunity. If laymen generally get the "call of the 'forgotten man'" into their plans as this brother has it, nothing on earth can stop the raising of the $10,000,000. This brother has a heavy law practice and ordinarily has but little time to give to anything else, but he says he means to take time to work for this sacred cause. One man like him can so arouse the laymen of a community that the raising of its quota for this work will be accomplished with ease.

Many good women of the Kentucky conference assured me of their determination to see this thing through. They will do it. When a woman sets her head to something, there is no stopping her this side of realization. She can find so many ways of doing a difficult thing that she lands on her goal, notwithstanding all obstacles. One of them said to me: "I am going to do a lot of work with your 'forgotten man' pageants. The young people will be delighted to put them on, and wherever one is presented the people are sure to get fully instructed concerning the cause. When the people know the facts, they will give all the money that is needed." God bless these women and make their plans to prosper, and bless the entire Kentucky conference in her work for the "forgotten man."

PANCAKES FOR SUPPER

Since Mother Fox had to go to town, Sally Fox, who was aching to use the cookstove, promised to get supper.

"Are you sure you can do it?" asked Mother Fox just as she went through the kitchen door.

"Quite sure," answered Sally Fox, all in a flutter to begin. Then to the little foxes she said, "Now what would you like for supper?"

"Pancakes!" answered all the little foxes.

"Then pancakes it shall be," answered Sally Fox, and she bustled about importantly. First she hunted in Mother Fox's old receipt book for a good receipt for pancakes. Then she went to the cupboard for flour, salt and sugar and to the ice chest for milk and eggs. That done, she began to put everything together just as the receipt book said. Oh, how she did beat that pancake batter!

All the little foxes looked on in admiration, especially when she lifted a big spoonful high above the bowl and let it slip back, plop, plop, all smooth and shiny and without any lumps. There never had been such pancakes as those that Sally Fox was making.

But she had forgotten one thing. You must have a very hot stove to cook pancakes on, and alas! the fire had not even been lighted.

"Oh, well," said Sally Fox, "I'll soon have that going. Now all you little foxes keep away while I light the fire."

Sally bunched up some newspaper the way Mother Fox did and put it into the stove. She put some dry pine cones on top of the paper and then some fine split kindling wood on top of the cones. "That should make a roaring fire to cook the pancakes with!"

All the little foxes cried, "Let me light it."

But Sally Fox only answered, "No, indeed! You keep away. I will light the fire."

So the little foxes sighed a longing sigh while Sally Fox struck a match. "There!" she said. "You'll soon hear it crackle."

The little foxes opened their eyes very wide and cocked their ears very cocky, but the fire didn't crackle at all. Meanwhile Sally Fox had brought out the big pancake griddle and set it on the stove to heat.

"Why, what is the matter with that fire?" said Sally Fox, impatient to grease her griddle and set the pancakes to frying. She lifted the lid and saw that only a part of the paper had burned. With the poker she poked up a little flame.

"Perhaps it will be all right now," she said, and replaced the lid.

The little foxes kept their eyes open and their ears cocked, but nothing startling happened to the fire.

"Why doesn't that fire burn?" asked Sally Fox, almost ready to cry. "What shall I do?"

"Perhaps," suggested one of the little foxes timidly, "perhaps, if you open the drafts it would burn better."

"Of course," answered Sally Fox. "How foolish of me not to think of it before!"

So she turned on all the drafts, and the grate began to crackle.

"At last," said Sally Fox, "we shall have a fire to cook our pancakes," and she gave the batter a whisk with the wooden spoon.

The little foxes saw a bright light through the crack of the lid and heard the crackle with their attentive ears. With a flourish Sally Fox took the greaser and greased the griddle. But the grease did not sizzle at all.

"O dear," sighed Sally Fox. "Will that pancake griddle ever get hot? Why doesn't the fire burn faster?"

That time a tear stole out of one of Sally Fox's eyes and ran down her cheek, but she was too much ashamed to wipe it off.

"Perhaps," whispered another little fox, giving a pull at Sally Fox's apron, "perhaps the ashes need to be raked out."

"Well, of all the wise little heads!" said Sally. "Why didn't I think of that before?"

Then such a raking and shaking as Sally Fox gave the grate of that stove! Heaps and heaps of ashes poured down into the ash pan, and then at last the fire began to rattle and roar. Oh, how it did shout up the old chimney!

The grease began to sizzle and spit at Sally Fox hastily lifted big spoonfuls of yellow batter and poured them on the hot griddle. The little foxes' eyes danced as they saw tiny holes appear in each round cake. Their noses twitched as they smelled the delicious odor of frying.

When at last a whole big platter was filled with big brown pancakes and the maple-syrup jug was put on the table and the shining eyes of all the little foxes were fastened upon her Sally Fox felt very happy and well paid for all her trouble. And every little fox declared that even Mother Fox could not make better pancakes than those.—Youth's Companion.

BACK-DOOR RECOMMENDATIONS

"Which boy will you have?" asked Mr. Ames.

He was going away for a week, and he wanted to invite one of the neighbor boys to stay with Mrs. Ames and be ready to run errands. Of course he meant to pay well the boy who was selected.

"I think I'll have Jimmie White," said Mrs. Ames.

Mr. Ames looked surprised. Jimmie was the poorest boy in the neighborhood. There were others older and better looking and cleverer.

"You're wondering why," said Mrs. Ames. "I'll tell you. When Jimmie goes out in the back yard to cut wood for his mother, the cat comes and rubs against his legs, the dog jumps all over him, the little neighbor girl comes to the fence to show her dolly, and Jimmie's own small brother comes running to help. Those are his recommendations. I know he has a kind heart, and I like that better than almost anything else. There was another boy I thought of, but I saw him kick his dog yesterday, and he torments the younger children on the way to school. He slaps his little sister and whines when his mother asks him to do an errand. He takes off his hat and speaks to me very politely when I am calling on his mother; and if he tried, he could be a splendid boy. But I've been looking up back-door recommendations, and he doesn't stand the test."

Mr. Ames then understood. "If boys and girls could only know that some one is often taking their measures when they are off guard!" he said. Then he went over to ask Jimmie's mother if she could spare him for a week.

"Two dollars, mother, for just helping after school!" cried Jimmie. "I'd have thought it was pay enough to stay over there and take care of the pony and get a chance to look at the books and pictures in the evening. I wonder how they came to choose me!" —Journal and Messenger.

TEN LITTLE FAIRIES

There was once a very foolish little girl who spent a great deal of her time wishing that the fairies would come and do her work for her. If she had the dishes to dry or the table to set, she didn't go at once to her task but sat around, hating to begin and wishing aloud that the fairies or the brownies would come and do her tasks for her.

"I have to work, and I don't like to stay at home," she grumbled to herself one day. "There's always so much work to do here at home, and no fairies will come to help me. I almost don't believe in fairies."

"That's because you don't understand about fairies," laughed her gay little grandmother, coming into the room just then and sitting down beside the unhappy little girl. "Why, you have ten little private fairies all your very own, with no other task in the whole world except to do your work for you."

"I'd just like to see them once," said the discontented little one.

"Very well, my dear," said the gay little grandmother, lifting the little girl's two hands and holding them up so that the fingers all spread before her. "Here they are—ten little fairies just waiting for you to tell them what to do and how to do it." Then, waving the two little hands back and forth, she sang to a soft little tune:

"Here are two little Thumbs
That are steady and strong,
With eight Fairy Fingers
To help them along."

Then the little girl began to laugh, and, jumping up quickly she went to work, singing the little finger song:

"Here are two little Thumbs
That are steady and strong,
With eight Fairy Fingers
To help them along."

Then almost before she knew it the ten little fairies had dried the dishes and set the table and dusted the room, so that the little girl had plenty of time left to dress up her dolly in the new hat and coat that mother had made and go out for a walk.

"I really didn't know that there were fairies, grandmother," said the little girl when she found gay grandmother again. "Thank you, grandmother, for introducing me to them," said the little girl, who was now very happy and contented.—The Child's Gem.

WORD PLAY

"Rob," said Tom, "which is the most dangerous word to pronounce in the English language?"

"It's stumblе," said Tom, because you are sure to get a tumble between the first and last letters."

"Good!" said Rob. "Which is the longest English word?"

"Valetudinarianism," said Tom promptly.

"No; it's smiles, because there's a whole mile between the first and last letters."

"O, that's nothing," said Tom. "I know a word that has over three miles between its beginning and ending."

"What's that?" asked Rob. "Beleaguered," said Tom.—Busy Bee.

MODERN EDUCATION

Preacher: "Do you go to school, Elsie, dear?"

Elsie: "Yes, and I like my teacher."

"What do you learn there, dear?"

"Reading, writing, and gozintas."

"Gozintas? What are they?"

"Don't you know? Why, three gozinta twelve four times, five gozinta fifteen three times, like that."—Christian Herald.

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Springs,
Box 4B, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

Mr. R. E. Prince, the superintendent, and a large number of the workers of the school were at the meeting, are strong supporters of the movement, and are going to put on the program the last week in October. Probably we are going a little too fast, for the Workers' Council of Central Sunday school have not passed on this yet, but we feel sure they will. With the pastor and superintendent and elementary workers behind a thing, it is bound to go.

STANDARD DEPARTMENTS?

Speaking of standard elementary departments, you may have one or two in your Sunday school. Have they been checked yet? If not write to Miss Keene and tell her that you would like to know about these programs and have them presented to your elementary workers. She will be glad to see that this is done.

FAYETTEVILLE-JONESBORO

Sunday school workers of the Fayetteville district these days are having their attention directed to the two big training opportunities which are being provided for them, and indications are that October 7-12 will find those of the eastern half of the district at Hay Street, Fayetteville, and October 14-19 those of the western half at Jonesboro. Two big standard training schools will be held in the district, the first at Hay Street October 7-12 and the other at Jonesboro the following week, and it is expected that every pastor, superintendent, secretary, teacher, assistant teacher, and prospective Sunday school worker who possibly can do so will attend one of these schools—the one most convenient. Others interested will also find a welcome. Classes will be held each evening from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock, beginning, in each instance, on Sunday evening and running through Friday, this schedule permitting workers to attend regularly without interfering with their daily business or household duties. Last year some came to the Fayetteville school between 35 and 40 miles distance, traveling 70 or 80 miles through the country each evening. Roads are even better, perhaps, this year than last, more people own automobiles, gas is a little cheaper, the need for trained Sunday school and church workers was never greater, and we are expecting great training schools at Fayetteville and Jonesboro. Rev. H. H. Willis, the presiding elder, is devoting a great deal of his time these days to the promotion of these two schools, as are also Rev. H. A. Humble, chairman of the board of managers of the Fayetteville school, and Rev. B. E. Stanfield, chairman of the board of managers of the Jonesboro school, and the various committees. If you live within reach of Fayetteville or Jonesboro and do not attend, you and your school will be the loser.

RUTHERFORD COLLEGE

RUTHERFORD COLLEGE, N. C.

NEXT TERM OPENS SEPTEMBER 4TH

Rutherford College offers four years accredited High School work, and two years of College work.

These are some of the interesting considerations:

1. Modern equipment.
2. An efficient faculty.
3. The breezy and healthful location.
4. Modest expenses (from $150 to $200).
5. The unusually purposeful and religious students in attendance—fifty-five of whom last year were ministerial students, twenty-two volunteer workers, twenty-two members of the evangelistic singing class.
6. The very earnest disposition on the part of the management of the school to raise the standard of scholarship to the highest possible attainment.

Other information will be gladly furnished on request.

IN MEMORIAM

ELKINS—Joel A. Elkins, after an illness of about two weeks, died at his home near Goldston, N. C., September 5, 1923, aged 71 years, eight months and eight days.

Early in life he professed faith in Christ, united with the Methodist church, and remained a consistent member till death claimed him. He was a good citizen and was held in high esteem by all who were acquainted with him. Surviving are a widow, three sons and two daughters. We all miss him here, but are looking forward to the day when a happy reunion will be held in the home eternal.

May God comfort the bereaved family.
E. C. Sell.

CHRISTY—Walter Scott Christy was born February 23, 1858, at Athens, Ga. He attended the University of Georgia and published the Athens Chronicle until he moved to Balsam some 20 years ago. In 1888 he was happily married to Miss Christy, to whom were born ten children, eight of whom together with the widow survive him. He was converted in boyhood and joined the M. E. Church, South, of which he remained a consistent member till his death September 8, 1923. Not many hours before the summons came he exhorted a young man to seek the salvation of his soul. He breathed his last on his knees in prayer. He has left a good record behind him, his entire family being active members of the church. May God comfort them in their sorrow.
O. J. J.

SHIELDS—Though we had been acquainted from childhood, and assisted together up to young man and womanhood and esteemed each other highly, yet it had not occurred to us that we were to be life partners till in the beautiful springtime of 1881, while on our way to church on Easter Sunday, strolling along a by-path which led through a peach orchard in full bloom, we became sweethearts forever. Though she is in heaven now, yet we are no less sweethearts now than we were then.

We were wedded February 4, 1883, and lived happily together 40 years, two months and one day. There were born to us three noble sons and three lovely daughters, whose devotion to their parents is grand and beautiful.

On May 5, 1923, God in His wisdom saw fit to call my beloved Bobbie Shields home to rest from her labors. She gave testimony that all was well with her soul and passed into eternity in hope of that immortality and felicity that shall never end, where "Hope turns to glad fruition, faith to sight and prayer to praise."

She was kind and true to her friends and considerate with those whom she thought to be her enemies. She abhorred hypocrisy and deceit and was ever ready to confess her own faults, ever standing for the highest ideals in all things. She lived the beautiful in all things as evidenced in her earthly home on a hill where she spent her earthly existence, toiling all the while to beautify and adorn as few ever do. She is gone to her heavenly home and no doubt is making ready for the coming of her loved ones. No man can boast of a truer and more sacrificing helpmate and no son or daughter a more tender, loving mother. Her life in the home was especially sweet and beautiful. She is absent from this earthly home and dwelleth in the mansion prepared by her Saviour, thereby being the connecting link between the earthly and heavenly home from which she is anxiously waiting and watching for the coming of her loved ones, and doubtless will meet us at the dark river and accompany us to that home where sickness, sorrow, pain and death can never come.

Surviving are her husband, B. C. Hicks, Mrs. J. R. Packard and E. Worth Hicks, all of Lawndale, N. C.; Dr. R. C. Hicks of Shelby, N. C.; Mrs. C. L. Self of Marion, N. C.; Mrs. J. A. Martin, Jr., Fayetteville, N. C., and Frank F. Hicks, student, Atlanta Southern Dental College, Atlanta, Ga. The funeral was held at Palmtree

M. E. church, of which she had been a faithful member since early girlhood. The services were conducted by her pastor and presiding elder, Revs. D. H. Reinhardt and H. H. Jordan, Sunday, May 6, 1923, and her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery amid an unusually large congregation to await a glorious resurrection. The floral offering was extremely profuse and beautiful.

Our darling wife and mother is gone, but not forever;
It is not God's will us to sever,
But in the future we shall again live together
And praise to our Saviour render.

We miss her lovely form, but her spirit hovers o'er us,
To comfort and console, as of old,
Lighting our pathway to that Goal,
About which "the half has never been told."

Yes, if true to our Saviour, we'll again live together;
She will meet us at death's river to accompany us home,
To live with Him forever.
Her Husband.

CLEMMER — Lemuel Lafayette Clemmer was born June 28, 1837, in Gaston county, N. C., and died September 14, 1923, aged 86 years, two months and 17 days. He was the son of the late Levi Clemmer and Emaranda F. Clemmer and was the oldest of a family of eight children and the last one to pass away. He was married to Miss Caroline McArthur June 23, 1857, to whom were born three children, Mrs. Julia Melvina (Clemmer) Pasour, of Bessemer City, R. 1, N. C., and Mrs. Elizabeth Amanda (Clemmer) Dixon Quinn, who died February 11, 1922, at Dalas, Gaston county, N. C., and little sweet Victoria Clemmer, who lived only three months and died three miles west of Dallas.

He leaves to mourn his death a devoted wife, his companion for sixty-five years, and a devoted daughter, Mrs. Julia Melvina (Clemmer) Pasour, and a devoted son-in-law, C. Rosamel B. Pasour of Bessemer City, R. 1, N. C., and two grandchildren, Mrs. Mabel Dixon Rhyne and Miss Carrie Maude Dixon of Dallas.

He was a Confederate veteran and served his country four years, and was honorably discharged from the army and received a "cross of honor" from the Daughters of the Confederacy about seventeen years ago. He enlisted under Col. Wm. G. Morris of Dallas, N. C., in 1861, in company H, 38th regiment. He was wounded at Fredericksburg, Va., three months before the war ended, and served during all the war with Jacob Huffstetter and Ambrose Rhyne.

"For we are the same that our fathers have been;
We have seen the same sights that our fathers have seen;
We drink the same stream, and we feel the same sun,
And we run the same course that our fathers have run.

"Yea, hope and despondence, and pleasure and pain,
Are mingled together like sunshine and rain;
And the smile and the tear, and the song and the dirge,
Still follow each other like surge upon surge.

"The wink of an eye, 'tis the draught of a breath,
From the blossom of health, to the paleness of death,
From the gilded solon, to the bier and the shroud—
Oh, why should the spirit of man be proud?"

TYSOR—Mrs. Sarah A. Tysor, aged eighty-six years and ten months, died at her home here August 15, 1923, and was buried in Bethel cemetery. She was the oldest person in the community, and for some years had been unable to leave her room except at rare intervals on account of the infirmities of old age.

She was a native of Chatham county, and made her home there in early life, moving to Guilford county about fifteen years ago. For the past three years she had made her home here. Her husband, the late Henry Tysor, died some years ago, and she has since that time made her home with her only son, Charles D. Tysor, with whom she lived at the time of her death.

Mrs. Tysor in early life connected herself with the M. E. Church, South, and remained for fifty years a faithful member of that church which she loved dearly. When able to do so she was always delighted to attend church services, and was liberal in her support of the work of the church. She was a quiet, faithful woman, and much loved by all who knew her. At the time of her death she was the oldest member of the Whitsett M. E. church of this place, and her funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. George W. Clay, assisted by Rev. G. L. Whiteley of the Springwood church, and she was laid to rest at 4 p. m. by the side of her deceased husband.

The large gathering of friends and church workers, and the beautiful floral offerings attested the esteem in which she was held. "She doth rest from her labors, but her works do follow her."

JOHNSON—Belle Johnson was reared near White Oak, Bladen county.

While attending summer school for teachers at Greenville she contracted typhoid fever, being brought homeward was forced to stop with her sister, Mrs. Addie West, at Fayetteville, where she died August 26, aged 26 years.

She became a Christian in childhood and joined Bethlehem Methodist church. She taught several terms of school and was greatly loved. A beautiful life, triumphant death and wonderful passing was hers. She said she was ready, told all goodbye, waved back signal victory, and smiled at loved ones till the eyes gently closed and the sweet spirit went to be forever with its God.

She sleeps peacefully in the cemetery near the old home. O, Spirit Divine, comfort the bereaved.

G. H. Bibbs, P. C.

CARTER — Elizabeth M. Carter, youngest daughter of T. D. and Emma Carter, was born June 18, 1914, and died June 14, 1923. She lacked only four days of being nine years old. She had enjoyed fairly good health till she had influenza a year and a half ago, after which her health began to fail, and finally culminated in Bright's disease, which ended her earthly pilgrimage. While her stay upon earth was short, yet during this brief period she won many friends, not only among children and playmates, but all the older people who knew her and loved her for the sweetness of her disposition, and charming manners. Like many of the sweetest flowers, yet first to fade. She was a lover of the church, though not a member, and could sing like a nightingale. Now that her tongue lies silent in the grave, perhaps in a nobler, sweeter voice she still sings praises to him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me."

To the bereaved loved ones, may I say, though your grief may be severe, the night of your sorrow may seem long and dreary, but all of earth's sorrows and disappointments will one day be forgotten when you meet in the beautiful city where there are no graves and God wipes away all tears.

W. E. Hocutt.

DAILY THOUGHTS

A little more kindness, a little less greed;

A little more giving, a little less greed;
A little more smile, a little less frown;
At little less kicking a man when he's down.

A little more WE, a little less I;
A little more laugh, and a little less cry;

A little more flowers on the pathway of life,
And fewer on graves at the end of the strife.

—Selected.

"A disciplined mind in a weak body is hampered. How much better to be in a spiritual body and be able to do what is worth the doing. We work toilsomely here; there exertion is so sweet that it is called rest; there the spirit breathes through us and we are satisfied."

Under the guidance of the inward illuminator, a fresh meaning will be given to texts that you have listened to a hundred times before. . . . The Bible will seem more and more not so much a formal treatise on religion as a letter of love sent from an unseen and infinite friend to your soul.—J. M. Bell.

Robert Louis Stevenson said: "When I see a man who does not think pretty well of himself I always suspect him of being in the right." That sage observation ought to give some folks a much needed jolt. But it will not jar them the least bit. The big "I" is clearly out of reach of thunderbolts and earthquakes.

"Clouds and darkness are round about Him: Righteousness and Judgment are the habitation of His throne." So declared the Psalmist of old as he meditated upon the mysteries of Providence, and the words of the ancient singer have become the language of great multitudes in every generation. Over against the inscrutable mysteries of the ways of God is set an unflinching faith in the goodness of God.

Down in Georgia the committee on Christian liberality in one of the Baptist associations submitted the following rather startling report that certainly contains food for thought:

"Neither by experience, nor observation, nor hearsay does your committee know anything about Christian liberality. We have never seen any, nor heard of any, nor seen anyone who has seen any or heard of any. There is a record of a man, nicknamed Barnabas, who sold his lands and gave all the money to the church, and of a nameless widow who gave two mites, all her living. But these died nearly two thousand years ago and left no descendants. Their tribes have died out."

Elijah's undoing, heroic old prophet of God that he was, came not from his foes but from his friends. Elijah among all his foes had only one that he feared and she was a woman—Jezebel, the notorious. And his fear of her seemed to arise out of the neglect of his friends. They left him in loneliness, instead of giving him to know that he had 7,000 allies when there appeared to be none. Secret sympathizers and helpers may be of some little value, but how much better when they are out in the open battling by one's side. If the 7,000, who bowed not the knee to Baal, had only told Elijah, there would have been a different story to relate. The lesson is for every generation. A man's friends may save him from a nervous breakdown, such as Elijah suffered on that occasion.

"Whatever the Bible may be to others, to me it is the Word of God, through which He speaks to my heart. In the darkest hours I turn to it for light, in depression for encouragement and comfort, and it never fails me. What a great Saviour it reveals in our Lord, and then when we turn to Him in prayer and faith, we find Him greater still." Such is the personal testimony of our good Brother H. L. Atkins, who for almost twenty years has been out in the great Southwest battling with poverty and physical affliction. If ever a man had his faith put to the test and was given an opportunity to try out the Word of God, H. L. Atkins is that man. His are not words of speculations or the chatter of one in the sunshine. For he has walked life's pathway of thorns and held intimate fellowship with sorrow.

The first 200 delegates elected to the next general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at Springfield, Mass., show a much larger per cent of pastors than in former conferences and not so many district superintendents. It appears that an agitation in the Middle West for the election of a larger per cent of pastors has resulted in the increased ratio of pastors in the delegations elected thus far. What the other four-fifths of the delegates to be elected will show in this respect remains to be seen. About the usual per cent of new delegates have been elected up to this time. The new material amounts to about 75 per cent.

Is there any enchantment for you, dear reader, about the old familiar footpaths of childhood? You may in life have ventured across continents and seas and have pitched your tent under strange stars, but the memories of the long road and of the vessel's wake have long since passed away. Not so with those earliest recollections of the pathway across the meadow bedecked with wild flowers, and the footpath into the old orchard where the June apples grew. Those paths enlarged and glorified by the imaginations of childhood and about which cluster the earliest affections, tender and abiding, are the first and finest roads of life.

The grand road from the mountain goes shining to the sea,
And there is traffic on it, and many a horse and cart,
But the little roads of Cloonagh are dearer far to me,
And the little roads of Cloonagh go rambling through my heart.

Whether man be immaculate or vile the breezes blow soft over Ceylon's isle. The evil and the good receive alike the sunshine and the rain. Earthquakes destroy without respect to morals. Tides and tornadoes are not students of ethics. The church steeple, pointed as it is, becomes a favorite target for the lightning from the clouds. The deadly diseases which afflict mankind are both deaf and dumb to all the finer sensibilities of the human heart. In a word, we live under the dominion of what we are accustomed to call natural laws. Will the drought then be broken in response to prayer, or will prayer bring rain? That depends upon God's direct intervention with the laws of nature. It would require what we are accustomed to call a miracle. Did God with the recent earthquake punish Japan for sin? The question has been asked again and again. But there is no reason why men should ask it, unless they wish to study it as a miraculous intervention. The orderly working of the forces of nature generally explain all such things. Flames, for instance, can best be handled by hydrant and well trained fire fighters. A good, careful driver at the steering wheel of an auto is better for safety than a pious reader of "The Saint's Everlasting Rest" on the rear seat. For the laws of physics are neither poets nor saints. Why God made such a world is the age long question that has received a multitude of answers, none of which we attempt to rehearse just here.

REV. I. L. SHAVER'S ACCOUNT OF THE EARTHQUAKE

Rev. I. L. Shaver and his young wife went out several years ago from the Western North Carolina conference to Japan and are now stationed at Hiroshima. His account of the earthquake at Gotemba, where he and his family were at the time, will be of such interest to our readers that we give it the best position that we can command. His story follows:

"As you will have heard long before this letter reaches your office, all the missionaries of the M. E. Church, South, residing in Japan are safe. Many of us who had not yet returned from the mountains were badly shaken up, and had our nerves somewhat strained, but escaped with minor bruises.

"After the smoke has cleared, I think we will find that the terrible reports are not much exaggerated. I think we will find that at least half a million people have been killed, or have died from the effects of the earthquake. This, one of the world's most awful cataclysms, is too appalling to describe. May it be a means of leading this nation to God.

"About noon on September first, while everything was quiet except the patter of rain on the outside, the earth suddenly heaved, rocked, plunged, split, and the house which we were in together with the other houses in the community bounced on their foundations like a rubber ball upon the floor. When I reached the second floor for our little girl the bed was jumping across the floor, and she was being thrown from one side of the bed to the other. We slid down the steps as best we could, all the time being thrown from one side to the other. We escaped, however, unhurt except a minor bruise on my right arm caused by being thrown against a post. We could literally see the earth bouncing, and not just once; for it continued for three days. We counted about 100 quakes the first day, and they continued about the same for three days. We camped out of doors for three nights, leaving for Kobe the first day that there was any way out. Houses were shattered, trains were overturned, and everything was in a dilapidated condition. Eleven were killed in the village of Gotemba, the station village near where we were staying. We arrived safely in Kobe yesterday morning, and are staying at our Mission House for a few days resting. Last night was the first time that we had been in a bed since last week.

"Refugees from Yokohama and Tokyo are landing in Kobe now by the hundreds, and the foreign residents are doing their best to cope with the situation."

OPENING OF FOREST HILL CHURCH, CONCORD

It was my privilege last Sunday morning to attend the formal opening of the enlarged and otherwise improved Forest Hill church, Concord. At a cost of $40,000 this congregation has added 30 Sunday school rooms, renovated and refurnished the entire church, and are now installing a large pipe organ, the gift of Hon. W. R. Odell, who was for thirty-seven years superintendent of the Sunday school and through all the church's history has been a trusted leader in every good work. Few congregations have a more beautiful church auditorium or more commodious Sunday school equipment than the Forest Hill people now enjoy.

Rev. J. F. Armstrong, the pastor, who is now finishing his fourth year, has done a monumental work in pushing along this big enterprise, was a happy man last Sunday, alert to every demand of the occasion and several of his brethren of the ministry were there to rejoice with him and his good people. Among the number were Dr. T. F. Marr, the presiding elder, M. A. Osborne of Epworth and J. C. Umberger of Westford.

Bishop Denny's sermon, delivered to a congregation that packed the church and the annexes on either side of the pulpit, was both eloquent and illuminating. From almost any viewpoint it was a great sermon.

Just before the sermon Mr. W. R. Odell read an interesting history of the church, and the pastor announced the following special gifts to the church.

An elegant pipe organ by Mr. W. R. Odell as a memorial to his deceased wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Sergeant Odell, and other valuable benefactions.

A gift of $5,000 by the Locke Cotton Mills. A gift of $1,000 by the Kerr Bleachery.

Light fixtures for the entire church by Mr. and Mrs. J. D. H. Isenhour.

Pulpit set consisting of pulpit, communion table, three chairs and two pedestals as a memorial to the two score soldiers and sailors who served in the World War from the congregation, the money for which was solicited by two women of the church.

Pulpit Bible, a memorial to Mrs. M. J. Barnaby, given by her daughter, Mrs. Hattie Lily.

Pulpit Hymnal, a memorial to Mrs. Charles A. Simpson by Mr. Robert F. Simpson, Sr.

Wiring and light fixtures for a cross to be placed upon the steeple of church by J. M. Simpson.

Sunday night a revival meeting began in the church to continue ten days. Dr. G. T. Rowe of Nashville, Tenn., and a former pastor of the church, arrived Sunday and will do all the preaching. Both pastor and people were looking forward with great interest to these services.

MR. J. J. FARRISS

On the evening of September 27, 1923, the citizens of High Point crowned with laurels the man who for more than thirty years had given his best energies to the upbuilding of a city which he loved with the same tender affection that the ancient Jew loved Jerusalem. The Rotarians on the evening before his fifty-eighth birthday gave a banquet in his honor, when selected spokesmen voiced a city's appreciation of his long, unselfish service for the community and toward the close of the evening presented to him a parchment upon which in impressive phrase they had in permanent form expressed their love for the man who had so effectually led in the building of their city.

That very night while talking with a friend in front of the hotel where his fellow townsmen had gathered in his honor, the big heart of this good man suddenly stood still and he went home to his God with the plaudits of his friends echoing in his soul. Could any man desire better circumstances for his death? Nevertheless, we with hundreds and hundreds of friends all over North Carolina mourn his early departure, and only wish that he might have remained many years yet with his family—that dear, good wife and those three manly boys whom he loved so devotedly—and with his friends whom he so appreciated.

GREENSBORO COLLEGE OFFERS EXTENSION LECTURE COURSE TO TEACHERS

President S. B. Turrentine of Greensboro College and Superintendent Archer of the city schools of Greensboro have perfected a plan whereby the two hundred resident teachers in Greensboro may have the benefit of lecture courses to be offered by the faculty of the college and a faculty chosen from the city high school. These lecture courses are to be given Saturday mornings in the college and the State Department of Education will give due credit for all courses completed.

This is a fine opportunity offered the teachers of Greensboro who wish to do such work as the summer schools for teachers offer. Two courses will equal the work of a regular accredited summer school.

The plan in detail is presented on another page under the caption, "Extension Lecture Course for Teachers by Greensboro College."

All notices that relate to the business of the Western North Carolina conference should be in time for next week's Advocate. We have a number of such notices already on file. They will go in next week.

MR. DORMAN THOMPSON PASSES SUD- DENLY

Dorman Thompson, leading attorney of Statesville, former state senator, and prominent in the affairs of both church and state, died suddenly at 10 o'clock last Tuesday morning at his home in Statesville. Heart trouble with complications was the cause of his death. He had been ill for several weeks, but appeared for some days to be better.

Not yet 45 years of age, Mr. Thompson had attained to eminence in his profession, had represented his county several times in the state senate, had been a member of three general conferences of his church, was a trustee of the University of North Carolina, president of the board of trustees of Davenport College, a leader of his local church, teacher of a men's Bible class of 200 members, and besides these occupied many other places of trust and honor. His going away leaves a great vacancy, his friends all over the state have been shocked by the announcement of his sudden death and mourn what seems to be his untimely departure.

Dorman Thompson was the son of Prof. D. Matt Thompson, a leading educator of the state who for many years was the superintendent of the Statesville city schools. He was a brother of Walter Thompson, the superintendent of the Children's Home, Winston-Salem, who died several years ago. Dr. Holland Thompson of New York City is also a brother of his. One son and two daughters survive him. His wife died about two years ago.

Few men in so short a time have occupied so large a place in his profession, in his community, in the affairs of his church and his state, as did Dorman Thompson. He will be greatly missed in every department of life. But the record he leaves is one that any man might covet.

His going is a great personal loss to us who had been intimately associated with him for a number of years. We mourn his departure and extend to the sorrowing family our deepest sympathy.

BEWARE OF CARNIVALS

Carnivals are one of the most effective agents of the devil to work mischief in any community touched by these instruments of evil under the name of amusement. They should not be allowed in any community either civilized or savage. The time for their appearing is now at hand and they should be shunned as one would plague or pestilence.

The Arkansas Methodist with force truthfully says:

"There may be clean, decent carnivals, but they are few. Sometimes these carnivals are found in connection with county or state fairs and sometimes allied with a circus. That they are evil is evident when Mr. Charles Ringling, head of a great amusement organization, is quoted as asking that the International Association of Fairs and Expositions banish the objectionable side show and carnival features and ban all the crooked games and immoral and questionable attractions.

"If the good men in each community where a carnival exhibits will investigate they will usually find all kinds of gambling and games of chance and a company of the vilest women who not only debauch the morals of youth but communicate the foulest disease. Let all who value the moral and physical health of the community beware of these street fairs and carnivals. They should be driven out even if the civil authorities have been so unwise as to permit them to exhibit. It will be found that they are violating the law and can be handled in the courts."

The Oklahoma situation seems to be considerably muddled. Yet it appears clear that Oklahoma has a bullet headed governor and that the people by an overwhelming majority have repudiated him.

"The person who does not have time to pray is like a workman who does not have time to sharpen his tools."

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Western North Carolina Conference, Winston-Salem, October 17.

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

Rev. A. L. Coburn, the author of "Clifton Clay," lives at Granite Quarry, N. C. Those desiring the book will address him there.

"Things are moving along very well on the Catawba charge. We have had good meetings in all of the churches. Many have united themselves with the churches during the year. Everything paid in full is the watchword of the charge." So writes Rev. A. C. Kennedy, the pastor.

Little Daisy Gregory Atkinson, the eleven-year-old daughter of Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Atkinson, of Mt. Olive, N. C., is a patient at the James Walker Memorial Hospital, Wilmington. She was operated on Monday night, September 24, for appendicitis, but is fast improving.

Dr. John W. Frazer has accepted the appointment as general secretary of Federated Methodist Men's Clubs. All applications for club charters and other information should be addressed to the general secretary, Dr. John W. Frazer, 100 West Cervantes Street, Pensacola, Florida.

The revival in our church at Ramseur is reported to be one of unusual success. Rev. W. L. Scott, the pastor, has conducted the meeting. He is a good preacher and that church never fails to stand by its pastor. Success attends all the efforts of that elect company of Methodists.

Rev. C. B. Culbreth announces that Rev. M. T. Plyler, presiding elder of the Durham district, N. C. conference, has been selected by the committee on arrangements to represent the N. C. conference at the Trinity banquet of the Western North Carolina conference in Winston-Salem.

Mrs. S. A. Stewart in a personal note to Mrs. W. S. Stewart, Charlotte, N. C., writes on September 8: "We were on the boat in Kobe harbor at the time of the earthquake and knew nothing of it. It was felt very slightly in Kobe and not at all in Hiroshima. All our people are safe, but the Shavers, Towsons, Franks, Miss Worth, Miss Newcomb and Mrs. Henderson were in danger. We think Dr. Wainright's house in Tokyo was burned, but news comes slowly. Much destitution in neighborhood of Tokyo. Yokohama totally destroyed. We were there just 24 hours before the earthquake."

"We have just closed the greatest revival, so the people of that town say, ever held in Bolton. It was a great victory for Christ. Souls were saved at nearly every service after the first. We had the old time power. There must have been at least 75 conversions and reclamations. We received 15 on profession of faith and seven by certificate. The entire town and community received a great spiritual uplift. Rev. C. Rowland, a preacher of the "old Methodist type," did the preaching. We thank God and take courage." This is the cheering message from Rev. J. L. Smith.

Bethel church, Littleton charge, was opened for worship Sunday, September 16th. At the last annual conference this church was taken from the old Roanoke circuit and placed with Littleton. Old Bethel church was burned two or three years ago, and this new Bethel church, located in a choice community, has just been completed. Rev. S. E. Mercer, presiding elder of Weldon district, was present and held the fourth quarterly conference in connection with the program of the Sunday services. He preached the opening sermon at eleven o'clock, after which a bountiful dinner was served on the church grounds, then followed the quarterly conference (after which another service was held. Sunday's services marked the beginning of a revival which continued through Thursday. The presiding elder did the preaching through the meeting. At the close of the meeting eighteen united with the church on profession of faith. Bro. G. F. Smith, the pastor, is in high favor with his people and is closing up a highly successful year on this charge. He has received into the church during the year fifty-five on profession of faith, besides a goodly number by certificate.

Improvements to the amount of $8,000 have just been completed in the Kannapolis church. A new steam heating plant has been installed, the auditorium enlarged, class rooms rearranged and sundry other changes and improvements made.

Fish at the Pratt, Kanas, state fish hatchery are being fed by electricity. Large light bulbs are placed at the edge of the fish ponds and moths, millers and other insects are attracted by the light. The water beneath the lights is soon covered with the insects which the fish devour eagerly.—The Dearborn Independent.

The revival at Spring Garden church, Greensboro, continued for twelve days with gratifying success. Last Sunday night the congregation packed the lower floor and the balconies of the big church. The attendance was large at all the services. Rev. G. T. Bond, the pastor, did the preaching. He is one of the most attractive preachers we know. He is doing a very fine work at Spring Garden.

Rev. L. C. Larkin, pastor at Murfreesboro and Winton, called at this office Friday. He and Mrs. Larkin were returning from their vacation, which was spent in Rhode Island, New York and other eastern states. The trip was made in Brother Larkin's trusty Buick. He was not forced to change a tire or have any work done on his car on the trip. "The best trip of his life" is the way Brother Larkin expressed it.

Rev. J. W. Fitzgerald, who has been in charge of our school at Santiago de Cuba and also pastor of the Methodist church in Santiago, will on account of the broken health of Mrs. Fitzgerald return to the Western North Carolina conference this fall and expects to receive an appointment from Bishop Denny. Brother and Sister Fitzgerald are now in Durham, N. C., Mrs. Fitzgerald's former home. Brother Fitzgerald has been in Cuba three years.

Rev. T. F. Higgins, the pastor, sends us this news item: "We have just closed a very effective meeting at Brevard Street church. Brother H. G. Allen helped in the meeting and the good accomplished caused both of us and all the people who attended regularly to feel greatly revived for Christian work. We had a great number of reclamations. We had about 35 professions of faith, and 30 of these joined the church. We got 11 by letter. In all 41 have joined this church in the last two weeks. But the greatest part of the revival was the stand that 37 of the young people took when they volunteered for life service. The church was revived and we started off Sunday by making a good offering through the Sunday school to the orphanage. The people feel like Brevard Street church has brighter days ahead."

The response of Southern Methodism to the appeal made for the quake sufferers of Japan has been generous and beyond what might have been reasonably expected. "Japan Day" has been widely observed throughout the church since September 9th, the day on which it was inaugurated and funds continue to pour into the treasurer's office, $39,629.46 having been received to date. From press dispatches we learn that the American public has pledged between six and seven millions to this cause through the Red Cross, exclusive of the amounts being contributed through the Y. M. C. A., Salvation Army and various church boards. This open-hearted response to the call of a suffering nation across the world has touched the heart of Japan as nothing else could and has made her a friend and ally for at least a generation. War between the Sunrise Kingdom and the United States is now an unthinkable thing.

REV. W. A. WILSON WRITES OF THE EARTHQUAKE

Rev. W. A. Wilson, our missionary who has spent many years in Japan, in writing September 5th to his wife who is now in Durham, N. C., gives quite an extended and interesting account of the recent earthquake. Mrs. Wilson kindly sends us a copy of that part of his letter which relates to the earthquake. From this letter we quote the following:

"Today, a week after its occurrence, we are just beginning to realize the extent of this unparalleled disaster. About twelve when the people of Tokyo, Yokohama and the surrounding cities were at lunch a shock that was felt four hundred miles in every direction startled the millions in this, one of the greatest centers of population on the globe. Only the oldest inhabitants who remembered the havoc caused by the great Edo (Tokyo) earthquake seventy years ago could realize the impending ruin. But crumbling walls and collapsing buildings instantly gave warning that all must face the greatest calamity to man living in crowded cities, namely, the earthquake and fire that immediately follows.

"While a considerable part of both Tokyo and Yokohama are on the hills the densely populated parts are only a few feet above tide level. To add to the danger and distress of the people fleeing for safety immense tidal waves swept the waterfront. Bridges spanning the rivers and canals had fallen and people had to take circuitous routes to find safety from the flames and at times vast crowds crushed into each other going in opposite directions, each having different objectives.

"At noon, September 1st, the houses standing in Tokyo numbered 414,549; on the 5th the official report gives only 98,962 remaining standing. The same report tells us that out of a total population of 2,301,391 no less than 1,356,740 are homeless. The sufferings of the past week have been such that words are powerless to describe and what these stricken ones have to face in the future is most disheartening. Transients and newcomers in the captial have fled to places of safety, but people born in Tokyo and those who have taken up their abode there permanently will stay there and struggle for existence.

"The world-famed port of Yokohama has fared even worse than Tokyo. The population of that city is 450,000 and 110,000 were killed or suffered injuries. The number of deaths and the number injured in Tokyo is not expected to be so large. All the cities, towns and villages in the zone of the earthquake suffered as much or more in proportion as these two great cities. Yokosuka, the naval station, was practically destroyed."

DEAR PASTOR AND EDUCATIONAL COLLECTOR

We are nearing the end of the conference year and there is much yet to be done. Recently we sent you from our office, for collection, a statement of all due and past due pledges. Those lists did not include names of persons who had paid in full to date, or who had deferred payments beyond this date. Please allow me to suggest that you organize your education committee for this work, by calling a meeting and dividing up the lists among members of the committee, and hold each one responsible for the collection of his list. Will you not do this at once, so you may report the Education pledge paid in full at the approaching session of our conference which convenes October 17th at Winston-Salem?

Will you not see to it that your church shall join the honor roll of churches in our conference that have paid in full to date? By districts they are as follows:

Asheville .....	6
Charlotte .....	2
Greensboro .....	3
Marion .....	4
Mt. Airy .....	5
North Wilkesboro .....	3
Salisbury .....	2
Shelby .....	5
Statesville .....	3
Waynesville .....	5
Wihston-Salem .....	2

For of course no pastor will be able to report all collections in full for his charge unless the Christian Education pledges now due shall have been paid to date. Most sincerely yours,

W. O. Goode.

OUR SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT FUND

The conference committee of the Western North Carolina conference begs to get the attention of all subscribers to this fund, and to urge them to put their pledge in good shape before the close of this conference year. Please see that your Building and Loan is paid to date, and if your pledge is by annual payment, please send check for the current payment to J. B. Ivey, Treasurer, Charlotte, N. C. Jas. A. Bell, Chm. Com.

The true test of friendship is to be able to sit or walk with a friend for an hour in perfect silence without wearying of one's company.—Dinah Maria Mulock.

BISHOP CANNON IN EUROPE

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., sailed for Europe on August 4th. While in Europe Bishop Cannon's headquarters are at 69 Fleet Street, London. He is chairman of the executive committee of the World League Against Alcoholism, which has as its principal offices—Westerville, Ohio; Fleet Street, London; and Lausanne, Switzerland. As chairman of the executive committee Bishop Cannon has been making yearly visits to the London and Lausanne offices where he confers with the leading temperance workers of Great Britain and of the Continent. From London he went to Copenhagen as a delegate from the Commission on Temperance and Social Service of our church and from the World League Against Alcoholism to the 17th session of the International Congress Against Alcoholism. During the session of the congress he preached at the large Jerusalem church of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and addressed one of the night mass meetings. On the Sunday following the conference, in company with Bishop Bast of the Methodist Episcopal church, he went to Holbeck and spoke on Prohibition in America to an open air meeting of over 4000 persons. Several meetings of the executive committee of the World League Against Alcoholism were held at Copenhagen, and although the International Congress is, by its constitution, forbidden to pass resolutions, the World League committee passed strong resolutions protesting against liquor smuggling into the United States from foreign nations; insisting that the mandatory powers give full effect to the prohibition of the liquor traffic as prescribed in Article 22 in the Covenant of the League of Nations; and protesting strongly against the economic pressure put by wine-producing countries upon the small prohibition countries, notably by Spain, Portugal and France upon Iceland, Norway and Finland.

From Copenhagen he returned to London for important conferences, and from there to Brussels to confer with Dr. Lewis and Brother Ware, our new missionaries from Mississippi to the Congo. He reports that these two missionaries and their wives are going out full of hope and faith and love to reinforce our gallant band already on the field. From Brussels he went to Amsterdam to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the Universal Conference on Life and Work, which conference it is now planned to hold in Stockholm, Sweden, in August, 1925. From Amsterdam he went to Paris for a conference with the French Anti-Alcoholic and Blue Cross temperance workers, and while there was entertained by Bishop Blake of the M. E. church and shown the work of our sister church in Paris. From Paris he went to Geneva to attend the conference of the International Near East Relief Association which was in session for four days, and which considered very thoroughly the present conditions and needs of the refugees and orphans in Greece, Palestine and Syria. From Geneva he returned to The Hague by the way of Brussels, where, as chairman of the Commission on Relations with Religious Bodies in Europe of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, he presented to Queen Wilhelmina the congratulations and good wishes of American Protestantism upon the completion of the 25th year of her reign. From Holland he went to Scotland to deliver six addresses in the Scottish prohibition campaign, and from Scotland he returned to London to attend the meeting of the Continuation committee of the Ecumenical Methodist conference. From that meeting he goes to Athens by the way of Paris and Geneva to make a personal inspection of the work which is being carried on by the Near East Relief in Greece and in Syria. Owing to the difficulty in securing passport visa to Italy and Greece and Serbia, it may be necessary to go by aeroplane from Paris to Belgrade. He expects to reach home in time to attend the great Citizenship Conference to be held in Washington October 15th, 15th and 16th, to which conference he signed the original call.

The statement made by Bishop Cannon in presenting the official action of the Federal Council and of the Huguenot-Walloon Commission to Queen Wilhelmina follows:
To Her Majesty Wilhelmina, Queen of the Netherlands—Your Majesty:

As chairman of the Commission on Relations with Religious Bodies in Europe of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the high honor and great privilege has been assigned me to present to Your Majesty the felicitations of the Federal Council and of the Huguenot-Walloon Commission on the completion of the twenty-fifth year of Your Majesty's wise and beneficent reign, and also to assure Your Majesty of our best wishes and our sincere prayer that Your Majesty may long continue as the beloved Queen of a prosperous, contented, ever aspiring, ever developing, God fearing people.

Outside of your own Holland and of your colonies it is probably true that there is no other group of people as large from whom such greetings are as fitting as from the group which I have the honor to represent today. The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and the Huguenot-Walloon Commission represent nearly twenty-five million professing communicants in the Protestant churches of our country, and over sixty million adherents, who admire and honor the people of Holland and her rulers for their steadfast adherence for over three centuries to the great fundamental principles of both civil and religious liberty.

When the Puritans were persecuted in England, when the Walloons were fleeing from Spanish oppression, and when the Huguenots were practically banished from France, all these afflicted ones turned their eyes to Holland and sought asylum there, for in that land at the very time when intolerance and persecution characterized the neighboring countries, William the Silent proclaimed the right of all men to worship God in accordance with the dictates of their own consciences, and from that time 350 years ago Holland has been the champion and the exponent of liberty.

In 1620 the Pilgrim Fathers who had spent in Leyden their days of exile from England landed in Massachusetts. In 1624 the first company of the Huguenot-Walloons to cross the Atlantic landed in New Netherlands in the neighborhood of Hudson River, and in later years as the first colony was followed by many thousands, these earnest home-seekers and builders were scattered along the Atlantic seaboard from Connecticut to South Carolina. These men and women who had enjoyed for a time the protection of Holland carried with them to their new homes a burning love of freedom and they did not forget what they owed to Holland. Benjamin Franklin, one of the greatest of American statesmen and philosophers, when he declared in the early days of our national life: "In love of liberty and bravery in defense of it, Holland has been our great example," represented the thought of the American people.

The motto at the very top of the coat of arms of William the Silent is "Without the Lord all is vain." The motto on the coins of the United States of America is "In God We Trust." While there are doubtless many individuals in both countries who do not accept these mottoes as the governing principles of their personal conduct, yet it is true that both Holland and the United States of America have been pre-eminently nations whose God is the Lord, and whose rulers have ever accepted the teachings of the Christian religion as the inescapable standard by which not only personal but national conduct must be estimated and final judgment given.

During Your Majesty's reign there has been a decade of the most epoch-making character in all history. The noise of battle, the horrors of war were all around you, indeed at your very doors; of all the neutral nations none was more severely tested. Partisans on both sides were naturally intensely critical. But when the history of Your Majesty's reign is finally written, no page will be brighter than that which records the earnest, steady, patient, persistent and successful effort to maintain unimpaired the splendid Dutch traditions of fearless independence, impartial justice and love of peace, and at the same time to save the country from being submerged by the ever swelling tide of destruction and death which swept over so great a part of Europe.

The Christian people of America whom I represent today rejoice that during your reign Holland has not only grown steadily in population and wealth, but that the influence of Holland has been steadily exerted with ever increasing power in favor of those things which make for the relief of suffering and for the uplift and betterment of the world. It is not an accident that the palace of Peace and the Court of International Justice are located in Your Majesty's dominion. It is in accordance with the fitness of things, and is a thoroughly deserved tribute to your country's devotion to the principles of liberty and peace. It must be indeed a source not only of joy but of strength to Your Majesty that God has enabled you to lead your people "in ways of pleasantness and into paths of peace" during these exceedingly troublous times.

That His grace, mercy, and peace may continue to abide with you and your people is the hope and the prayer of the Churches of Christ in the United States of America, in testimony of which I have the honor to present to you these written testimonials, duly signed by the secretary of the Federal Council and of the Huguenot-Walloon Commission.

TOO MUCH MOVING AMONG METHODIST PREACHERS—ITS CAUSE AND ITS CURE

"There is entirely too much moving among our Methodist preachers." Thus speaks the Oklahoma Methodist. The Christian Advocate endorses the utterance as follows: "These are timely and true words." In fact, nearly everybody will endorse them. Some time ago the Florida Christian Advocate asked the reason for so much moving among our preachers, but said nothing as to the cause and of course suggested no remedy. Diagnosis must precede prescription.

Moving works a hardship on the preacher and his family; it is expensive; it may be hurtful to a church to have the preacher move; it may be very hurtful to the preacher to move; it may have a baneful effect upon the church at large and upon the ministry also. Yet some moving is not only beneficial to both preacher and people, but may be necessary on account of the preacher's health, length of service in that field, etc. But with all our moving the length of our pastorates compare favorably with other denominations. Still there are moves that not only seem to be but are unnecessary and unwise. In other words, why do so many preachers move at the end of the first or second year in the Methodist church? It is with this class of moving that I am dealing in this article, attempting to show its cause and trying to suggest a remedy.

Let us look at the moral and spiritual condition of the church. Whether that condition is as it has always been or is better or worse I am not here to say. But certainly the present condition of the church is appalling to anybody, preacher or layman, who will take the trouble to examine it carefully. Sin and selfishness and worldliness abound on every hand. The church is largely a social club and a financial institution rather than a soul-saving station and a spiritual brotherhood. People chosen for their social prominence and financial ability rather than their spiritual attainments control the work of the church. Neither society nor wealth is brought with ease into subjection to the teachings of the Man of Galilee. They are inclined to be "heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." So much for the church.

Now let us look at the ministry, remembering the very close relation between the ministry. Here we find the alternation of generations. The preacher produces the church; the church in turn produces preachers. But the preacher comes first in order. When a layman complained about the quality of the ministry, Bishop Candler replied: "Give us better laymen out of which to make preachers." But it remains that God starts with the preacher and would develop a leader rather than a following first. We have to acknowledge that the condition of the ministry is no better than it ought to be. A great revival among the preachers would help a great deal. Aren't the preachers responsible for the condition of the church? In an editorial entitled "To Arms! To Arms!" The Pathfinder of August 4th, 1923, says: "The country is going through an unusual period of lawlessness. Passing more laws will not help the situation. Religion after all is the backbone of the country and it is up to the clergy to doff their coats and fight as they never fought before. Red-blooded ministers are needed to correct conditions the country is facing today?" Now if red-blooded preachers can cure the ills of the country, then it follows that the absence of red-blooded preachers in the past has brought about the conditions which so sorely need correcting. Evidently all preachers are not redhooded. If so then the number has been too small for the task.

Now I think we are ready to answer the question, Why is there so much apparently unnecessary moving among the preachers? How can two walk except they be agreed? Thoroughbreds work all right together; the same is true of donkeys. But a thoroughbred and a donkey do not make a good team. So a worldly "mixer" and a sinful, worldly church may get on well together, but they will never disturb the forces of evil. The red-blooded preacher who is the pastor of a spiritual people where his church is his force rather than his field, may rejoice as he leads his people from one height to another in experience and grace, from one victory to another in moral conquests and gracious revivals with the ingathering of converted men and women. Either of these men is likely to remain. But the "mixer" who is usually lacking in spirituality may grow tired of "doing nothing" and want to move when there seems to be no reason for it as he is thoroughly acceptable to his people, which was declared some time ago by one of our church leaders to be the measure of a preacher's worth. The prophets, our Lord Himself, the great apostle, Luther and Wesley would fare badly by that standard. They were not popular men.

Now an unspiritual man may become the pastor of a spiritual church. Then he may want to leave because the atmosphere is too warm for his constitution; or the people may want to go because his spiritual temperature is below theirs. This is likely to happen unless they take the better course of praying for him as did the people of Northampton, Mass., for their pastor, Rev. Solomon Stoddard. They lifted him to their spiritual level and kept him for nearly half a century.

A red-blooded preacher may become the pastor of a worldly church, where sin abounds as it does in the average church of today. By the way, complaint is frequently made that strong young men turn to other things rather than the ministry as their life work. What inducement is there to a red-blooded man to spend four years at college and three years at a theological seminary and then go out to "pastor" the average church of today if he has to please them? The preacher who pleases the average church of today ought to be ashamed of himself and doubt whether the Lord ever called him to preach.

Now something is going to happen. The preacher may come down to the level of the church, which shows that his red-blood was rather pale, and ruin for the church and the preacher is the result. Or they may come to his level which shows that they are sensible. If this does not happen then the preacher is going to move. He is willing for his church to have a nursery department and a hospital, but no red-blooded preacher is going to have his church turned into a home for incurables, and merely stand by ready to read the burial service when the end comes. He wants and is going to have an army of good soldiers of Jesus Christ to lead against the foe. When he finds that he cannot get that he is going to move and who can blame him.

But most likely the people will want him to move. For they cannot stand to hear the whole counsel of God, but will insist on having the truth diluted to suit their taste. They want to lie down in their sins and have no son of thunder disturbing their slumber. So that preacher is going to move, unless the presiding elder and the bishop stand behind him and nerve him for the conflict and help him gain the great victory for the Lord. That is the cure for much of the unnecessary moving among our preachers, and through that offers a cure for the conditions which confront the nation today. This task can be accomplished only by red-blooded men and by keeping them where the need is greatest and hacking them up. Have I put my finger on a tender spot? Only today I mentioned this matter to a brother preacher and he replied to my urging for "red-blooded, fighting men" in the ministry: "Where are you going to find the elder and the bishop who will back you up?" (Since this article was finished I have had a presiding elder tell me that this was the great difficulty. He said: "I do not know where you will find a bishop that will back up a man like that, and but very few presiding elders. It is a lamentable situation, but you have diagnosed it correctly.") I believe that he voices the feeling of large numbers of our preachers today. It is time for the elders and the bishops to know how hundreds of preachers feel about this matter. Let them be red-blooded, and lead the way and there will be multitudes of preachers who will not count their lives dear unto themselves, but will storm the strongholds of sin. If they do not lead, then they might at least back up the preacher who fights. Can any man preach the Bible and not offend somebody in the church today? Can any man declare the whole counsel of God and not stir up opposition? The man who does not meet with opposition must be firing blank cartridges or his aim is poor. This opposition is usually found among the social set and the wealthy, who to a very large extent control the affairs of the church.

All denominations face this problem of keeping the red-blooded man from moving, because he meets with opposition within his own church, but the Scriptural method used by Methodism for supplying churches with preachers offers the finest opportunity for curbing and curing this evil, provided the system is used properly. Otherwise other denominations have the advantage. With them there are vacant churches and unplaced preachers; with us there are neither. With them a majority calls the kind of preacher they want; we are supposed to send the kind that the charge needs. With them a majority can ask for the preacher's resignation and from that there is no appeal, though that majority may be altogether wrong. But with us a minority, however small, may move a preacher, provided the presiding elder and bishop listen to that minority. In other denominations a minority cannot do this. I call to mind a case where (so it was reported) a letter from a prominent man came to the bishop at the last cabinet meeting stating that if the pastor was returned then he would withhold his support from the church. That preacher moved. Others have been moved likewise at the behest of a few at the last hour. Their methods are as unholly as their manner of living. Now in our church the presiding elder cannot only rout a minority that is wrong, but he can withstand a majority that is wrong and make out of them a majority that is right, thus reforming the church and bringing it to high standards of living, and at the same time save the preacher from moving.

How is he going to do this? Let him enquire diligently when it is proposed by anyone to move the preacher. If there is anything against the preacher's conduct that should be handled according to law. But many a time he will find that the complainant has, or his or her friends have collided with the truth which has been preached. Now truth is the only thing which can save the world. If a preacher cannot preach the truth what can he preach? Is he to be moved merely because he has preached the truth? But so many do not like it. That is all the more reason for preaching the whole truth, because it shows that many of the people are wrong. Changing the preaching and moving the preacher does not so much as touch the trouble. The people need changing.

The presiding elder can render aid, both preventive and remedial, by his preaching. Many times the preacher has to bear the burden alone. For instance, I reported on one occasion in the preachers' meeting that a Baptist evangelist had preached a remarkably strong sermon in my neighborhood the day before on The Sins of Society, on which he dwelt upon divorce, cards, the dance and the theater. The pastors of the two largest churches had not come in. The presiding elder said: "Brethren, how long will it be before Dr. A. and Dr. B. will preach a sermon like that?" I could not refrain from asking: "How long will it be before the presiding elder preaches one like that?" For I remembered that I had asked him to preach on worldliness when I had occasion to deal with that subject. I had preached on it, and as is usually the case some were disgruntled. When he ascertained who they were, he said he would think it over. But when he came a week later, he never touched upon it. When I was in the thick of a temperance campaign, with a large part of my members wet, I asked the elder to help me with the burden, but he didn't. One of the wets congratulated him on his "gospel sermon." One can put a thousand and two can put ten thousand to flight. So the elder can divide opposition. Very likely it will melt away without his sympathy. The preacher will not move and the church will be saved from a low standard of living. If necessary, and it is possible, the bishop might visit that church and preach some himself. The influence of it would be highly beneficial and far-reaching. But if the preacher moves anyhow because he was true to God and his conscience, refusing to compromise with sin in order to be popular, he certainly should not be demoted for his fidelity. By the way, fidelity is the test of a minister's worth, rather than his acceptability to the people he serves.

If he is demoted then some less faithful preacher is promoted and men see that the way of preference is not by heroic fighting for holy living, but by "soft-pedaling." The "time-server" gets into the big appointments. Is that what is the matter with the church today? That was the inevitable logic of a sermon by one of our bishops a few years ago. But that is not all. The church rejoices in its victory, apparently a double one, and is emboldened in its wickedness and determination to say what shall and shall not be preached and done. That gets further and further away from the reformation which is so sorely needed. But that is not all yet. It tends to break the spirit of the preacher and thus destroys the race of red-blooded preachers, which is the hope of the world to reform the unwholesome conditions which abound.

So, here's to the red-blooded preacher, may his tribe increase! May he move every year rather than to bow the knee to wickedness in high places. Here's to the red-blooded bishop and the red-blooded elder who stand squarely behind the red-blooded preacher and purify the church and save the world!

THREE MYSTIFYING TRICKS

The famous rope trick, an account of which was published in these columns some months ago, has utterly bewildered hard-headed persons who have seen it performed. The Indian conjurer is too clever for Westerners. And there are many other tricks, among which are three that Mr. M. E. McGregor describes in Chambers' Journal, that are quite as mystifying as the rope trick. How does the juggler himself explain them? Ah, sahib, and up go his lean shoulders.

The performer, says Mr. McGregor, was an elderly Brahman who was working to raise money for a new temple roof. He appeared at the veranda of the house of a friend with whom I was visiting in Lucknow and, after stating his purpose, asked in a casual way if we should like him to sit lifeless for two days. When we told him that a quarter of an hour would be long enough he instantly closed his eyes and relaxed his muscles. I got a mirror and held it close to his face. I felt his pulse. There was no sign of life; the mirror remained absolutely unclouded; the pulse was quiet; the eyes were dull. At the end of fifteen minutes I spoke to him and said we were quite satisfied. He woke as from a sleep. We said we thought his demonstration was very wonderful and asked how he did it. He answered in an apathetic manner, "I was not here. It is quite easy."

Then he asked if we had a strong, heavy iron chain, and we brought him one that was used as a trace on an oxcart. He put it across his chest, under his arms and said, "As it is too large, lash it securely with a rope or knot it so that it cannot open."

When we had done as he bid he merely expanded his chest, and the chain snapped like a bit of cotton—a clean break just over his chest!

But his last trick was still more wonderful. After astonishing us by casually pulling a ring through a cane on which it dangled he said, "Let one of your women servants give me one of her metal anklets, one without a joint and very heavy."

A young girl at once began to remove one from her foot. It took considerable time and some oiling to get it off, but at last it came free. He pushed it up his arm till it stuck. Then as if he were measuring a span he put his thumb on one side of it and his little finger on the other side and lightly pulled it through his arm!—Youth's Companion.

THE CONFERENCE ORGAN

By means of the budget plan, or in some other practical way, let each church put the conference organ into every Methodist home. Let the circulation of church periodicals be diligently and faithfully promoted by the pastor and official members.—Book of Discipline.

COMPREHENSIVE AND PROGRES- SIVE GOSPEL

This was the theme of a very great sermon preached at West Market Street church last Sunday morning by Rev. J. H. Barnhardt, the pastor. I feel incompetent to give even an outline of that excellent discourse, but I would "hat it or one like it could be preached from the pulpits of all our great churches. Christ preached such a gospel, Paul preached it, Wesley preached it, and Barnhardt preached it. But we should make no mistake—it is a gospel the foundation of which is repentance, faith, and a holy life; differing from that of the modern modernists who, while they claim to be the embodiment of progressive Christianity, begin and carry on by rejecting the divinity of Christ, personal salvation except by works, and would substitute science and Shakespeare for the revealed and inspired word of God. May we be delivered from any such! Let's be progressive, claiming with Wesley that the world is our parish, but let's do it in the right way, not as radicals, but as Methodists, earnestly contending "for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." H. L. Stamey.

REVIVAL ON MARS HILL CHARGE

About two weeks ago we closed our last revival for this conference year. Rev. L. H. Griffith, of Thrift-Moores charge, near Charlotte, did the preaching in time about for the first few days with Rev. Mr. Mitchell, of Tennessee. Unfortunately Brother Mitchell was with us only a few days, and after his departure Brother Griffith, being so deeply burdened with the responsibility that was upon him, entered into the work wholeheartedly and did some wonderful preaching. The results were very gratifying. There were about twenty or more conversions and the whole church was blessed by the gospel messages of these men of God.

Brothers Griffith and Mitchell used to serve the Mars Hill charge as pastor and because of their wonderful character, their wide reputation drew people from far and near. It was said that no larger crowd ever attended this church as did during the revival. Let us believe that the revival fire that was so gloriously kindled will long burn in the hearts of men and women around Laurel and bring forth fruit in years to come.

J. R. Spainhour, P. C.

SILER CITY GOING GOOD

We are on the home stretch now, and we are expecting to make a touchdown before Bishop Denny pounds on his desk with the gavel at Elizabeth City. Presiding Elder R. H. Willis has just been and gone and left a good taste in the mouths of both preacher and people by his gentlemanly, Christian bearing in the pulpit, in the chair and in the home circle.

The stewards assure the pastor that he is going to have a clean sheet to present to conference, and he believes they will make the assurance good.

The Sunday schools will be able to report nearly one hundred per cent gain in enrollment for the year. Two teacher training classes have been held and a general awakening in the Sunday school work is to be seen.

So far 129 names have been added to the rolls of the different churches—87 of that number on profession of faith.

An Epworth League was organized at First church early in the year and it has enrolled 70 members, and it has done a splendid work throughout the year.

Rev. J. Frank Armstrong was with us in our meeting at First church the first week in September and greatly endeared himself to the entire church and community. As a result of the meeting 20 have joined the church, making 60 new members to First church this year. And yet the white harvest fields still call for earnest workers. O. I. Hinson.

ANOTHER UNIQUE POUNDING

Readers of the Advocate may recall the fact that I furnished for publication in the columns of that excellent paper an account of a pounding consisting entirely of money, sent to me by the good people of the Weldon Methodist church, of which charge I was pastor for five years. I do not forget such acts of kindness. But the congregation of that church know how to do splendid things.

But at this time I wish to write of another money pounding, this time administered by the St. Paul's congregation of Maxton. It was my good fortune to be pastor of this charge eight years, two full terms, the first and last I served as pastor. Here is a brief statement of this last pounding. The 17th of September is my birthday. The St. Paul's congregation learned this fact, but did not know how young I would be on the 17th of this September. Several of our friends asked me how old I would be on the 17th, and thinking the inquiry was based on mere curiosity, I humorously said I would be forty-eight. Of course I did not say I would not be older than that. They knew I would be older than that and insisted I should tell them. But their anxiety only served to encourage me in keeping up the fun. Well, Monday night, the 17th, quite a number of men and women of the St. Paul's congregation called at the home of the ex-pastor, all laughing, but seemingly empty-handed. Frankly, wife and I did not know just what to do or say. But finally Bro. D. A. Pierce, better known as "Uncle Dave," stepped out and delivered a brief talk on the esteem in which the congregation held me, and concluded by handing me a box, securely tied up. I very promptly untied it and found it full of one dollar bills. I then found out that the inquiries of the congregation as to my age were based on the desire to give to me one dollar for every year I had lived in the world. As I look so young and frisky they fell slightly under the mark, but not very much. O, if I could have known what was involved in it I would have been certain to place it high enough. I now fully believe is always best to tell the truth. Heaven's blessings upon the dear people of St. Paul's church. J. A. Hornaday.

GOOD YEAR ON NORTH McDOW- ELL CIRCUIT

We have held two meetings. Bro. H. E. Stimson did the preaching at Concord. He delivered some very able sermons. I never saw the Spirit more manifest. About fifty conversions and reclamations with the whole church in general revived, and twenty were added to the church. At the close of the meeting fourteen pledged themselves to erect family altars. A mid-week prayer meeting has been organized and the new converts are taking an active part in these services.

We also had a good revival at North Catawba. Bro. J. W. Groce was my able helper. The Spirit of the Lord was with us during this meeting. We had twenty-five conversions and reclamations with nine additions to the church. At this church twelve pledged themselves to erect family altars. A prayer meeting was also organized and is being carried on with great success.

The Lord has wonderfully blessed us during the year, but I have not accomplished what I might have had I been near my work.

This charge at present has no parsonage, but plans are being made to build one. As a result of no parsonage I live fifty miles from my work. I am praying that the Lord will continue to pour out His blessings on this work for I love these people.

E. A. Blanton, P. C.

EXTENSION LECTURE COURSE FOR TEACHERS BY GREENS- BORO COLLEGE

The Greensboro College will issue shortly a folder announcing a series of extension courses to be offered by the college for the express purpose of aiding teachers now in service in improving their certificates. Opportunity will also be given to a limited number of the college advanced students preparing for teaching. These courses will cover the field of Public School Music, Primary School Methods, Elementary School Methods, and High School Methods. Other departments, including Industrial Art and Physical Education, are expected to be added in the near future. There are resident in the city of Greensboro approximately two hundred teachers, many of whom will doubtless welcome the opportunity offered by such an announcement from the Greensboro College.

For the past six years the relation between the Greensboro College and the Greensboro public schools has been of a most cordial nature. Many of the students in the school of Education in the college have taken advantage of the fact that adjacent to the college campus are the city high school and an elementary school. The students have had free access to observe in both of these buildings and have availed themselves of this opportunity. Many of them have volunteered to coach small groups of the high school students who seemed on the point of falling behind in their work, and in doing this have rendered a valuable service.

President Turrentine and Superintendent Archer have perfected a plan by means of which the faculties of Greensboro College and the Greensboro public schools will be available for this extension work. The following members of the Greensboro public school faculty have been elected as members of the extension faculty of the college: Mr. Glenn Gildersleeve, Miss Florence Pannill, Mrs. Maie Pittman Hartsell, and Mr. G. B. Phillips. Other members will be added to the extension faculty as the demands justify. The courses offered by each of these instructors will meet all the regulations, both of the college and the State Department of Education, and the work in each course will receive due college credit and due credit at the State Department.

These courses will very probably be offered on Saturday morning in the college itself and will meet for a total of seventeen periods for each semester. Each period will last an hour and forty minutes. Such students in the course as pass successfully and do the required parallel reading will be given two semester hours of credit. A student who passes successfully on two courses will have accomplished as much toward raising her certificate as could have been accomplished had she attended a regularly accredited summer school.

The authorities of the Greensboro College and of the city public schools feel that this is an unusual opportunity for instruction in some fundamentals of Education under the leadership of a group, each of which is not only well-trained, but is actually engaged during the week days in putting into practice the theories advocated in the course. Former Superintendent Brooks, who was consulted early in the summer with regard to the details of this extension course, expressed himself as being more than gratified that the Greensboro College and the Greensboro public schools were planning such a move, stating that there was no greater need at present in North Carolina than there is for some workable plan by means of which a teacher could pursue work at a college thus fitting herself for a higher type of school work and at the same time continue her work in the school room. This plan is a solution of the problem. The Extension department offers to teachers in the city of Greensboro the opportunity to take college courses and receive college credits while engaged in school work. Mr. A. T. Allen, state superintendent of public instruction, also endorses this plan of co-operative extension work, and expresses pleasure in such movement for the common cause of education.

THANKS BROTHER HUNT

I am grateful to Bro. C. W. Hunt for his correction of that statement in my article on Walter Hines Page in regard to Trinity College. I quoted word for word as it is in that remarkable book by Burton J. Hendrick. Evidently the author got his original information slightly tangled. It is but just that Trinity College should be freed from that "tobacco barn" slander. But after all it is not the type of building or the dress of the teachers that does the work of education. It is the brain and character of the teachers. I thank you, Brother Hunt.

George C. Wilding.

MY DEAR OLD SADDLEBAGS

Well, my dear old Saddlebags,
I have come to say, Good-by!
We have journeyed long together,
In all weathers, wet and dry.

And we've slumbered oft together
On the cold and virgin sod,
Caring nought for such hardships—
Only for the man of God.

Our bed was not as soft as down,
Our covering was not warm,
But God looked down upon our night,
And kept us from all harm.

The vigils of our nights were stars,
Their company was good,
The morning brought us rest and joy,
The consciousness of God.

Your wardrobe and your larder,
Your presence and your store,
Have been prized by me more highly
Than dukes and lords galore.

And I'd gladly take you with me,
But we're told that flesh and skin
In the place where I am going
Can never enter in.

As in the days of strength and prime,
We followed crowd and hearse,
Together at the grave we wept,
With kindred, friends and nurse.

To each other we've been faithful
As the coming Judgment Day,
In toiling for our God and Christ,
Too oft with meager pay.

But we must part to meet no more!
Old Saddlebags! Good-by!
The story of your service here
Can be better told on high.

There angel band will take their stand,
In that bright and happy clime,
And chant your praise through endless days

For your service to mankind.
—S. R. Reno, Northwestern Advocate.

A MESSAGE FROM OLD TRAP

I came to the above address on the 30th of August to finish the unexpired year of Brother Carroll on the South Camden circuit. I came a week ahead of my family and made my home with Bro. J. M. Burgess until the family arrived, and may I say just here that I have not gone into a home anywhere in which they were more of one heart and one soul than at Brother Jim's.

They have here a beautiful new parsonage, real well furnished, though not entirely finished upstairs. It is located just in sight of the Old Trap high school, where they have an excellent faculty of Methodists under the wise leadership of Prof. W. G. Johnston.

I have not seen a folk anywhere more devoted to their pastor than here at Old Trap. They have not been unmindful of us a single day since we have been here. They have as many as four times driven up with mule and cart and sought an entrance to the pantry, bringing all manner of good things to eat, which really makes one thankful on going to the table.

They had planned to have Brother Stack help in the meeting, which arrangement had been made before I came here, also which was more than satisfactory to me. Brother Stack came the 17th inst., and we did our best in the name of Jesus until the 26th, Brother Stack doing all the preaching, which was the old fashion gospel in the old fashion way. At the close of the meeting we took in fifteen members on profession of faith and one by letter. We will not know the exact results until we hear the roll called over on the other side.

Brother, in revising your prayer list, please put South Camden circuit on it, and especially do not forget the pastor. This is one of the most tremendous responsibilities that I have ever seen—scores of unconverted young people and old ones not a few.

And do please send me the Advocate. I have not had a copy of it for a few weeks; but that is not your fault. It is just that I am so hard to keep up with.

S. Salyer.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF FOREST HILL CHURCH, CONCORD

(Read by Hon. W. R. Odell at the opening of the church, Sunday, September 30, 1923.)

Far back in the last century, about the year 1835, the Methodist pioneers began their work in Cabarrus county. Near this very spot was converted one of the first followers of Wesley in this section. His name was William Baringer, who afterwards entered the itineracy and died an honored member of the North Carolina conference.

In 1871 a great revival led by Bishop George F. Pierce, swept over the town and attracted wide attention. For ten years Methodism flourished and grew in Concord till on the first Sunday afternoon in October, 1882, under the pastorate of Rev. W. S. Creasy, who had charge of Central church, a Methodist Sunday school was organized in the western part of town, known as Forest Hill. Rev. Jacob Simpson, a local preacher of our church, offered the opening prayer and for more than forty years following this he built into the life of the church and the community and died a few months ago at the age of 86 years. Mr. W. R. Odell was elected superintendent of this Sunday school which opened in a small wooden chapel with an enrollment of nearly 200, and for thirty-seven consecutive years Mr. Odell was the superintendent of the Forest Hill Methodist Sunday school.

Some notable revivals were held in the little chapel led by Rev. W. S. Creasy, Rev. Joseph Wheeler and Rev. R. F. Bumpas. Six years of growth in the chapel brought this congregation to ask that they be set off as a pastoral charge. This was done and at the conference of 1888 Rev. R. M.

Hoyle was appointed to Forest Hill charge. The church was formally organized within a few weeks after the pastor arrived and in less than twelve months a new house of worship, a part of the present structure, was occupied. This church was referred to by writers of those days as "one of the most beautiful and commodious in the conference."

The second pastor was Rev. H. M. Blair. He found the present parsonage in course of erection. In a short while it was completed and occupied. The first Sunday of April, 1890, will always stand out as another great day in the history of this congregation. At this time all debt was lifted and Bishop Wallace W. Duncan formally dedicated the church to the worship of Almighty God. After three years of faithful work H. M. Blair was succeeded by M. A. Smith, who served four years, and since then the following men in their order served this pastorate: J. D. Arnold, three years; R. M. Hoyle, one year (second appointment); J. N. Huggins, three years; Gilbert T. Rowe, two years; J. C. Wooten, two years; M. M. Long, one year; W. L. Hutchins, three years; W. M. Robbins, two years; M. T. Smathers, two years; C. M. Short, two years; R. M. Taylor, two years, and J. F. Armstrong, four years.

The present house of worship, now nearing completion, gives us one of the best equipped churches for Sunday school in the entire conference, but in the future as in the past, we must recognize that Methodism's progress is marked by a succession of revivals. We will "Neither turn to estimating numbers nor admiring ourselves." Rather let us now say, "Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we will remember the name of the Lord our God."

AN INTERESTING GIFT TO THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION

About the year 1876 Mrs. Marmaduke Morton, the stepmother of Dr. David Morton, first secretary of the Board of Church Extension, presented to him an interesting picture entitled, "Eminent Methodist Divines." This picture was the first one to adorn the first office of the Board of Church Extension and hung over the mantel of the single room which constituted the space then occupied by the board and was a prominent feature of every office occupied by the Board of Church Extension during the lifetime of its first secretary, Dr. David Morton.

On September 11, 1923, Mrs. H. W. Morton, the wife of Dr. David Morton, now living with her son, Dr. Daniel Morton, at St. Joseph, Missouri, presented this picture to the Board of Church Extension. In sending the picture for his mother, Dr. Daniel Morton wrote us as follows:

"We believe that it is peculiarly fitting that this picture should have its final resting place in the office of the Board of Church Extension. It was made many years ago, about the year 1876, for my father, David Morton, by his stepmother, Mrs. Marmaduke Morton, who was in every way a true mother to him, David Morton's own mother having died when he was only a few months old. The picture was made by cutting out of the religious periodicals of the day the steel engravings of noted Methodist men and preachers. The idea of grouping them in one picture was original with Mrs. Morton and she carried it out after having spent several years collecting the necessary likenesses. The picture contains some likenesses that cannot now be found and for that reason is especially valuable. All of the faces are not known. In the book entitled, "David Morton, A Biography," there will be found a reproduction of this picture, together with an index as far as known of all the likenesses which it contains. This index will serve a very interesting purpose if it could be placed conveniently near the picture for use by those who want to know the names of each face there reproduced."

At a meeting of the executive committee held September 15, 1923, the picture was formally accepted and the secretary requested to express to Mrs. Morton our sincere thanks for this valued souvenir of the days that are gone, and that it be given a conspicuous place in the office of the board. A miniature of this picture together with the key to it are found in "David Morton, A Biography," by Bishop Hoss. We have had the key framed and placed beside the picture.

The Board of Church Extension is gathering together an interesting number of pictures of eminent Methodists and other relics of early Methodism. We have life-size pictures of Bishop Francis Asbury, Bishop Joshua Soule, Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh, Bishop H. B. Bascom; the Ordination of Francis Asbury. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 1858, and the Deacon Orders of Drury Flowers, signed by Bishop Francis Asbury January 21, 1816; a table that was used by Bishop Francis Asbury and Bishop William McKendree in presiding over the Tennessee conference at Kennerly's Chapel, Logan county, Kentucky, September 29-October 6, 1814, and placed in the office of the Board of Church Extension by the courtesy of the Lewisburg Congregation which is the successor of the old Kennerly's Chapel.

T. D. Ellis, Secretary.

BREVARD INSTITUTE

It has occurred to me that possibly the friends of the Brevard Institute would be glad to hear a word concerning this institution.

Of course there was grave fear when it was known that Prof. Trowbridge was to sever his connection with the school that a calamity had befallen the institution—and it was a great blow; but very fortunate was the institution in securing Prof. Oliver Orr, who had served as principal for the past several years, for the place of superintendent. This fortunate stroke saved the day. Also very fortunate was the school in getting a number of the original members of the faculty to remain. So we are happy to report that a student body of nearly 180 are now engaged in work here, and as fine a student body as can be found in any school.

The new members of the faculty are fitting in nicely, and we are all delighted with the future prospects. The contract has been let, and work is to begin within a few days for another dormitory for girls, which will increase the facilities for a student body of 300—and this number will crowd these walls just so soon as they are ready for them. No change has been made in the way the school has been conducted, and all of us are happy over this fact—this insures the future usefulness of the school. Prof. Trowbridge has erected a monument here, and succeeding generations will continue to reap the benefits of his labors. Prof. Orr was trained here for this work, and will carry forward the well laid plans. None who know him are surprised in hearing such excellent reports from Weaver College now under Prof. Trowbridge's cultured hand, head and heart.

Brevard church has enjoyed a good year. The loyal members are now busy building twelve Sunday school class rooms, the foundation laid with cement is completed, the brick work will begin at once, and soon this church will be well equipped for Sunday school work. Also the present auditorium will be increased fifty per cent in size by bolting the present Sunday school auditorium, making it fit into the present auditorium.

No more worthy cause was ever presented to the boards of missions, and church extension, but they turned us down every time. Something had to be done, so "we're up and at it," and somehow we are going to get the capstone laid. Seems like these boards cannot be convinced of the worth of the cause here. We have no "pull" hence no "come." This charge really demands all the while one of our strongest pastors, and I could wish there were some inducements to bring them to Brevard in the way of financial support, but anyway we are battling along, doing what we can and waiting for the "powers" to see the situation. The possibilities of future good to be accomplished in being pastor of this school, besides the other duties here, is enough to make the angles covet this opportunity. Maybe after a while the church will wake up to its privilege. Lee A. Falls.

CAROLINA COLLEGE

And with the fall comes the return of school days. The streets are made bright again with the laughter and prattle of childhood. Trains filled with the glad joy of boys and girls on their way to the higher seats of learning, and with the coming of the season Carolina College has opened her doors to the largest body of students for some years. A great student body. Girls fine in their simplicity, splendid in the ideals leading them on to the fulfillment of their lovely young womanhood. Judged by 'his standard, the real test, Carolina ranks at the top.

The new year has brought only a few changes in faculty. Miss Ruth Merritt has gone to Scarritt, preparing for the mission field. Miss Sue Sprott is wintering in Florida. Mrs. Stanton is at home in Bennettsville. Mrs. Pruett has changed her name and is at home in Alabama. Miss Kate Goodman Unstead, head of the Latin department, has been made dean. Miss Kate Bigham, A.B. and M.A. of Atlanta, Ga., will teach Bible and serve as hostess matron. Miss Cora Sydenstricker, A.B., West Virginia, is in charge of Math. and Science. Miss Helen Tolson, A.B., of Washington, D. C., is head of the English department and will teach Expression. Miss Annie Terrell will serve as dietitian for the dining room as well as instructor of Home Economics. Miss Eleanor Haywood is secretary to the president. Miss Alda Sasser, steward. Miss Pearle Jackson, librarian and manager of the book room. Miss Viola Hurley, accompanist. Miss Mary Garrett, head assistant to the dietitian. Misses Jack Smith, Bertha Sith, Viola Hurley, Valaria Dowless, Lydia Isley, Ruth McWhite, assistants.

Mr. Green this year serves as director of physical culture and has charge of the Department of Education. Miss Crane, Miss Hyatt, Miss Lawrence, Miss Price and Miss Knauth have their same work.

The organization of the college is being worked out in every detail for the highest degree of efficiency, and a year of the highest grade of work has already begun. One of the best features of the new year is the Junior class with an enrollment of over twenty-five already, which means another year the largest graduating class in the history of the school. And then—

The Dormitory.

The dream of the fine people of Maxton is taking shape now and several cars of brick have been hauled to the north wing of the campus, where soon will go up the new home of the girls who will come here in ever larger numbers for training.

A Sunbeam.

If I were a sunbeam
I know what I'd do:
I would seek white lilies
Rainy woodlands through;
I would steal among them,
Softest light I'd shed,
Until every lily
Raised its drooping head.

PLANS FOR SCARRITT

At special meeting of the Board of Missions on September 12th the sole item of consideration, in keeping with the statement of the call, was Scarritt Bible and Training School. A joint committee, composed of the executive committee of the Board of Missions, the executive committee of the Woman's Missionary Council, and the Board of managers of Scarritt Bible and Training School, had been created for the purpose of gathering information and acting upon the question of "locating and reorganizing the proposed institution." This committee had been instructed to report its "plans for relocation both as to place and relation to other institutions of learning to the Board of Missions at its next meeting for final action." The Board of Missions had previously adopted provisions for the reorganization and relocation of the school in the following language: "We are further convinced that in addition to the missionary training to be provided for in connection with our two schools of theology there is a great need for a separate school, centrally located, designed and adapted to the religious training of lay workers and should be open to both men and women. Since the managers of Scarritt Bible and Training School have definitely decided to move the school to some more desirable location and the Woman's Missionary Council has expressed the desire to see the school identified with the unified program of missionary training of the church, it is our conviction that Scarritt should be removed to some central location and reorganized so as to provide adequate training for lay workers, men and women, but in such way as to preserve the name, school traditions, and spiritual character of the school."

The joint committee submitted its report. Besides the provisions formerly adopted, the report recommended that the name of the school be changed to "Scarritt College for Missionaries and Other Christian Workers," and also the following #### Courses of Study.

The standards of preparation for missionary workers adopted by both the Woman's Missionary Council and the Board of Missions in 1922 calls for three general grades or classes of students: (1) Graduates who have also postgraduate courses in missionary training; (2) undergraduates who have also two years of missionary training; and (3) specialists who have at least one year of missionary training. In addition to these three classes of students, there are also those who are deficient in academic training, but who, because of special qualifications, are well fitted for certain phases of religious work, and who may profit by such courses as are suited to their needs. Representatives of all four classes of students are in attendance at Scarritt Bible and Training School, but their varying needs cannot be adequately met by the present organization. To provide for these several groups the religious training required by the standards already adopted by the Woman's Missionary Council and the Board of Missions, it would be necessary for the new Scarritt to furnish the following advantages: (1) Graduate courses for those who have completed a standard college course and who wish to specialize in some form of religious work at home or abroad; (2) a senior college course consisting of two years of religious training similar to the diploma course now offered at Scarritt Bible and Training School (this course would require for admission two years of standard college work just as is now required at Scarritt, and would lead to a baccalaureate degree); (3) irregular students under the direction of faculty advisors would be allowed to select courses specially suited to their needs. Under specific conditions certificates would be awarded for such work.

Departments of Instruction.

The departments of instruction which would constitute the heart of the new Scarritt are the following: (1) English Bible, including the history, literature and teachings of the Old and New Testaments; (2) the Christian church, including the history, doctrine and organization of the church with particular reference to Methodism; (3) Foreign Missions, including the history, conditions and methods of missionary work in the foreign mission fields; (4) Home Missions, including the principles and methods of home mission work, with special reference to the problems of the foreign groups in America, the negro, Indians, industrial groups, rural communities, crowded city conditions, etc.; (5) Religious Education, including the history, theory, organization, and methods of religious education; (6) Religious Music and Pageantry, including hymnology, voice culture, chorus training and directing, etc.

Relation to Other Institutions.

One of the controlling reasons for the removal of Scarritt Bible and Training School is that it may be so located as to give its students the benefit of educational advantages that cannot be provided in its own organization. It should of course be entirely free from any organic alliance with or any control by such an institution. Affiliation with another institution should mean only the privilege of securing at a minimum cost such educational advantages as may be particularly desired and approved, and such a relationship should be had only with institutions that have a friendly attitude to the church, and are approved by the general sentiment of the church. Through such relationship with a neighboring institution or institutions departments of instruction not provided in the new Scarritt organization itself but involved in the enlarged program of religious training should be available. Among such departments mention may be made of the Language Study, Sociology, Primary Education, Secondary Education, School Management, Home Economics, Manual Arts, Physical Training, Health and Hygiene, Public Speaking, Agriculture, Art Education, Textiles and Clothing, Journalism, etc.

Physical Equipment.

It is impossible to forecast what the future needs in the way of building and equipment may be. One can only suggest what ought to be available at the beginning or in the very near future: (1) An administration building, containing ample facilities for the various offices (as president, bursar, registrar, librarian, etc.), six or eight recitation rooms, an assembly hall, a library and museum, social rooms, rooms for student organizations, facilities for physical training, and the like; (2) a hall for women, including dormitories for 150 to 200 young women, with all other facilities necessary to make an attractive Christian home for the women students; (3) a residence for the president of the institution; (4) such facilities as may be necessary for men and married students who may wish to attend the school. . . .

The joint committee stated that the George Peabody College for teachers offered many superior advantages for the courses of study needed by the enlarged Scarritt and that such advantages could not be obtained elsewhere in the South; also "In the light of all the facts assembled the joint committee recommended to the Board of Missions; (1) That the proposition from the citizens of Nashville $25,000 from Chamber of Commerce and $25,000 from Nashville Methodists) be accepted and that the Scarritt Bible and Training School be located at Nashville, Tenn.; (2) that the institution be affiliated with George Peabody College for Teachers with the understanding that it shall have its own separate identity, free from any organic alliance with, or control by any other institution. Affiliation shall mean only the privilege of securing at a minimum cost such educational advantages as may be particularly desired and would be approved by the general sentiment of the church."

Of the eighty-two members of the Board of Missions, fifty-five were present. The vote on the adoption of the report of the joint committee was: 37 ays, 18 no. By this action Scarritt is to be enlarged and reorganized, located in Nashville, Tenn., and affiliated with George Peabody College.—Extract from article in Nashville Advocate.

Western North Carolina Conference

THE GREATER SCARRITT

At a called meeting of the Board of Missions in Nashville September 12th, it was voted to locate the Greater Scarritt in Nashville in affiliation with the eGorge Peabody College for Teachers. This decision will bring satisfaction to the women throughout the church who have had the matter of the Training School at heart for many months past. The Woman's Missionary Council at its meeting in Mobile in April, 1923, voted unanimously (except for the vote of one Kansas City member) to change the location of the school to a central place, to enlarge it and reorganize it so as to increase its usefulness. All the women members of the Board of Missions who were present at the meeting of the board voted for Nashville as the new location, with affiliation with Peabody. These members represent conferences in Alabama, Louisiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, Texas, Arkansas, Georgia, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, and Missouri.

There were the best of reasons for the solidarity of the vote. Nashville is in the center of the Southern Methodist constituency. A suitable charter may be secured in the state of Tennessee. Above all else, as an important reason, affiliation with Peabody College will provide those courses in teacher training and other subjects which many of the missionary candidates need along with or in addition to the Scarritt courses. All courses in Bible, Church History, Evangelism, Applied Sociology, Foreign Missions, Home Missions, Religious Education, and kindred topics needed for strictly missionary training will be taught in the Scarritt class rooms and by the faculty of the Training School itself. This provision applies to both graduate and undergraduate courses.

Eight other cities within the Southern states made overtures to the school; some with most generous offers of money and land as well as educational affiliations. The Council will always hold in grateful remembrance these invitations, and the friends who interested themselves in the welfare and future of the school. Friendship for the Training School is friendship for the womanhood of the church, for Scarritt as the heart of the woman's work is undoubtedly the best loved of the Council enterprises.

The task of carrying out the details of removal and organization has been committed to a joint committee composed of the executive committee of the Woman's Missionary Council, the executive committee of the Board of Missions, and the Board of Managers of the Scarritt Bible and Training School. This joint committee held a meeting the day following the meeting of the Board of Missions and took steps toward accomplishing their purpose. The school will remain in Kansas City for the current year, but it is intended that work on the new plans shall be commenced at once.

The Belle H. Bennett Memorial Fund, which is now being collected by auxiliaries and conference societies, will be used in connection with the Greater Scarritt, possibly to establish a School of English Bible. The decision as to the exact form the memorial will take will be made by the Council in its next annual session. It was voted at the last session that the minimum goal should be a half million dollars, and a considerable part of this sum has already been subscribed. Collections will be made during the remainder of the period of the Christian Education Movement. Now that the school has been located in the place so desired by Miss Bennett for it, we shall all take courage and go forward joyously to the completion of the Memorial.

Mrs. F. F. Stephens.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

The Junior Missionary Society of West Market Street church feels keenly its loss in the passing of the pure spirit of Mary Plyler. We loved Mary, and Mary loved the society. This was constantly manifested in her faithful devotion to its every call to service. God has called His own. Her work here is finished, but she has left with us a memory which we shall ever cherish. May her sweet influence abide with us, and inspire us to more vigilant service for the Master.

Resolved First, That while we will miss her presence, we will bow in humble submission to God's will, realizing that all things work together for good to them who love Him.

Second, That we extend to the bereaved parents our sincerest sympathy, praying that our heavenly Father in His infinite goodness will pour the healing balm into their bleeding hearts.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, and also be spread upon the minutes of our society.

Eugenia Isler,
Katherine Clements,
Committee.

MISSION STUDY CLASS AT LONG'S CHAPEL MOVES FORWARD

On the evening of September 18 our mission study class finished the second part of the plan for our fall mission study.

Beginning September 10, we had, with a few of our members, an intensive study of "The Child and America's Future"—Stowell. The women met with the superintendent for one hour each day for five days; then an invitation was extended to all members and to their husbands to meet with us in a "parents' party" on September 18. Quite a good number accepted and entered heartily into the contest to see which of the six groups formed could get the most points from the mission study book, as presented by our four women.

One of the husbands, who is our popular depot agent at Lake Junaluska, contributed much to the program by explaining why "Heathland" should be visited first—enlarging a bird's-eye-view map that is sent out by the American Child Health Association.

Each group did well, one scoring seventy points and none lower than thirty-five, I think.

After the contest refreshing ice cream and cake were served.

Several bought copies of our mission study book, and we plan after

NEW BERN BOOSTERS MEET

At a supper served in Centenary Methodist church basement Tuesday evening of last week and sponsored by the Centenary and First Presbyterian Sundays schools and churches, an organization was perfected for the purpose of preparing the ground work for the annual Standard Training School for Sunday school and church leaders of New Bern and vicinity, which will be held in Centenary church the week of October 28 to November 2.

The following paragraphs from The New Bernian gives, in an accurate and concise manner, an account of the meeting, with the names of the board of managers and committees, who are working for an enrollment of 200:

"In addition to Sunday school and church workers of the sponsoring churches, many workers from other local churches were present and heard the addresses by Mr. L. L. Gobbel, conference superintendent of Sunday school work of the North Carolin Methodist conference of Durham, and took part in the organization of the board of managers.

"The motive that prompted the meeting was to arouse and increase interest in the coming training school. And at a delicious supper served by the ladies of the Methodist auxiliaries, talks by many church leaders served to stimulate interest and lay promising foundation for another successful school.

"Among those who spoke, in addition to Mr. Gobbel, were Mr. C. L. Coons, secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; Dr. W. L. Hand, Rev. F. M. Shamburger, presiding elder; Rev. W. V. McRae, pastor of Centenary Methodist church; Rev. W. C. Ormond, pastor of Riverside Methodist church, and Mr. R. N. Scott, of the Tabernacle Baptist church.

"Following the business session, Mr. B. M. Potter, superintendent of Centenary Methodist Sunday school, called for a meeting to organize the board of managers. Those elected were Rev. W. V. McRae, chairman; Dr. W. L. Hand, treasurer; R. N. Scott, secretary, and Mrs. L. C. Lawrence, Mrs. C. S. Hollister, Messrs R. L. Stallings, W. B. Rouse, W. C. Ormond and B. M. Potter.

"From the board of managers the following committees were named: Entertainment, Mesdames C. S. Hollister and L. C. Lawrence and Mr. W. B. Rouse; Publicity, Messrs. W. B. Rouse, J. B. Dawson, W. L. Hand, R. N. Scott and W. C. Ormond; Arrangements, Mr. W. W. Gaskins; Finance, Dr. Hand and Messrs. W. W. Gaskins, W. T. Smith and R. L. Stallings; and Bookman, Mr. W. W. Gaskins."

OUR ROCKY MOUNT SCHOOL

Sunday school workers of Rocky Mount, Nashville, Tarboro, Wilson, and other neighboring points attended the training school held last week at the First Methodist church, Rocky Mount, and at this writing (two days before the close of the school) indications are that considerably more certificates of credit will be earned this year than last. The enrollment, although no larger if quite as large as last year, contains a higher percentage of earnest workers. That is to say, those in the classes came to work and went about it as though they meant business. The names of those earning the certificates and other details concerning the school will be given in these columns next week.

PASTORS STICKING BY IT

A significant feature of the Rocky Mount training school is the fine way the pastors are sticking by it. Revs. H. M. North, of First church, Rev. N. B. Strickland, of Rocky Mount, Rev. L. T. Singleton, of Clark Street, Rev. E. C. Few, of Nashville, and Rev. B. B. Slaughter, of Tarboro, have been present regularly and are making the courses in Sunday school work. The superintendents and teachers have been faithful in their attendance, too. The list of names next week will indicate who earned the certificates of credit.

HILLBILLIES HELP US

Contributing not a little to the success of our Rocky Mount training school is the fact that we have as members of our faculty our good friends and co-workers, Mr. O. V. Woosley, conference superintendent, and Miss Virginia Jenkins, elementary superintendent, of the Western North Carolina conference. These talented and experienced leaders, who are doing such great work for the Sunday schools of their own conference, came down to help us, and we appreciated their work among us and are enjoying their fine fellowship. We expect to have them have them in "sandfiddledom" again, for we have worked out a system of co-operation which will take us into some of the schools of "hillbilliedom" in exchange for their services in some of our schools. It is just a bit of practical co-operation, which seems to be working to the mutual advantage of both conferences.

GREENVILLE AND KINSTON

Your conference superintendent of Sunday school work slipped off from our Rocky Mount training school long enough to attend the boosters' meeting at New Bern and, incidentally, to spend two or three very pleasant hours at Greenville and Kinston. In company with Rev. H. M. North and Mr. O. V. Woosley he went to Greenville, where Mr. North had an engagement to preach a missionary sermon at a meeting of the Pitt county woman's missionary organization in Jarvis-Memorial church. At this meeting the good women gave Mr. Woosley and the writer an opportunity to bring greetings from the Sunday schools of the two conferences in the state, they served everybody a splendid dinner, we had a minute with the pastor, Rev. V. P. Scoville, and the writer was off on the one o'clock train to Kinston.

He spent two hours in Kinston, during which time he had a most satisfactory conference with Rev. C. K. Proctor, the pastor, and Mr. B. B. Jones, superintendent, concerning matters relating to the Sunday school there. These good leaders have in mind bigger things for their school—better things for their boys and girls, men and women, of the Sunday school.

RALLY DAY, OCTOBER 14

Sunday, October 14, will be observed in many Sunday schools at Rally Day, an annual occasion when the entire school leadership and membership should rally together all their forces and stir up enthusiasm and interest for the coming months. The program should include whatever of the spectacular is to be used during the year. Printed programs may be secured from Lamar & Barton. Some schools may find it more convenient to use some other Sunday than October 14. If so, the most convenient Sunday as near thereto as possible should be selected.

RECOGNITION OF PREACHERS

It is in our minds to give, in some suitable manner at the approaching session of our annual conference, some appropriate recognition to the pastors of the conference who, between last conference and this, have taken for credit at least one certificate of credit on the standard training course. Quite a large number have already earned one or more certificates this year, and we expect many more to take credit in the three remaining standard training schools to be held between now and November 15. Still others, we hope, will get credit for correspondence work. We are hoping a large number will put themselves in line to receive this well-deserved recognition.

Western North Carolina Conference

CONGRATULATIONS

Just a line or two to congratulate the childhood of those Sunday schools where those splendid groups of Elementary Sunday school workers have agreed to observe Children's Week some time during October. You will remember that these workers have agreed to visit the homes of their pupils and urge their parents to attend a "Parents' Meeting" to be held at some convenient time in their church, at which meeting some one good forward step for the better promotion of religious education in their midst will be agreed upon. The number of Sunday schools agreeing to observe Children's Week is constantly increasing.

REPORTING TIME

It shall be the duty of the preacher in charge to make a written report annually to the annual conference on the following items:

1. Number of Sunday schools.
2. Number of officers and teachers.
3. Number on the Cradle Roll.
4. Number in Home Department.
5. Number of members not included in 2, 3 and 4.
6. Total enrollment including 2, 3, 4 and 5.
7. Average weekly attendance.
8. Number of pupils uniting with the church during the year.
9. Number of persons taking our training course.
10. Number of Wesley classes.
11. Amount raised on Sunday School Day.
12. Amount raised for missions during the year.
13. Amount raised for all other purposes during the year.
14. Total amount raised during the year.

So reads paragraph 399 of the Discipline. It will be noted that in the foregoing items for reporting upon two are different from previous reports. Heretofore the average weekly attendance has not been asked for, and the other change is the asking for the number of persons taking training rather than the number of training classes.

BE SURE

It is earnestly hoped that our Sunday school leaders will aid our pastors in getting the correct number of persons in his Sunday schools taking our training course during the year. This is a very important item. Just those taking the course for credit should be reported. Others have neither "taken" the course nor has the course "taken" them. Let's be sure to correctly report the number of those who "Study to show themselves approved of God."

AVERAGE ATTENDANCE

As has been stated this is the first year for reporting average weekly attendance. Do not confuse this item with total enrollment. The average attendance will be smaller by a good deal than the total enrollment, which includes the Cradle Roll and the Home Department, those who do not attend the sessions of the Sunday school. An average attendance in a "C" type school, one room church school, of fifty per cent of the enrollment will entitle that school to become a standard school. An average attendance of seventy per cent of the enrollment in "B" type schools, class room church, is regarded as a good average attendance and will entitle the school to be regarded as a standard school. These figures are based on the active enrollment and not the enrollment that includes the Cradle Roll and the Home Department.

INCREASED ENROLLMENT

Is your Sunday school reaching more people than it did last year? It ought to. Unreached people are all around us and so near us that we do not have to go far after them. Only one in three in North Carolina is even enrolled in the Sunday school. Your school ought to be reaching more and more of these people. Each one of our districts has set a goal for new scholars this year. In each district there are from 60 to 80 Sunday schools, some of them large schools. Each goal ought to be easily attained. Note your district's increased enrollment goal.

JONESVILLE

"You just see if this is not fine. I have two more Sunday schools than the circuit had last year, 110 more pupils, and 30 more in the Sunday school than on the church register. Good luck to you."

This good news comes on a postal card from Rev. J. J. Eads, who never tires of getting results. He is that type of fellow who is so busy doing things that he finds no time for complaining. To make this record all the more noteworthy it will be remembered that only a few years ago the Jonesville circuit was the "tailender" of the Mount Airy district when it came to percentage of Sunday school enrollment on church membership. Hurrah for Brother Eads and his Jonesvilleites! May his kind increase!

HAVING A GOOD TIME

"The lines have fallen to me in pleasant places." I am this week at Rocky Mount with my good friend Gobbel in his Standard Training School which is being held in Brother Lovable North's church. It is fine to be here and to note the good work being done by our good Methodists in the "Eastern Conference." Brother Gobbel is doing exceedingly well in heading the Sunday school work in his conference and his folks are rallying to his leadership with increasing pleasure and confidence. It has been a distinct pleasure to work with our good friends across the line.

SIX REASONS

As instructor in the Rocky Mount school in "Sunday School Organization and Administration" I gave as a written assignment for last night's session the following: "Give six reasons for attending Sunday school you would advance to a church member who does not attend his Sunday school." Without his permission I am here presenting the paper handed in by Rev. H. M. North, pastor of our First church at Rocky Mount:

My Dear Sir:
In this letter I am setting forth certain reasons why you should attend our Sunday school, and I shall be glad for

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

WHAT ARE YOU DOING?

Say, folks, haven't you done anything since you elected those new officers? We haven't heard anything about it if you have. I have received lots of lists of officers who have been recently installed; that's fine, but rarely any write-up of the program of the installation service comes in. This should be a special service.

By the way, you don't need to wait till you elect officers again to send any more news. All kinds of league news is interesting and helpful to other leagues, and you owe it to the leagues in the conference to publish any good programs or any helpful service which you might hold. This page ought to be "chock" full of interesting league news, and it could easily be so if a few more of you leaguers would take it upon yourselves to see to it that the news of your league is sent in for publication.

To make this League page worth while we absolutely must have the co-operation and assistance of the local chapters, and especially of the corresponding secretaries, for it's their duty to mail the news out and then watch to see if it's published. It's your page. Why not use it? L. D.

WHERE WILL OUR NEXT LEAGUE ASSEMBLY BE HELD?

Yes, where will it be held? Well, it will probably be held at Morehead City and possibly somewhere else. We don't know yet, but anyway we want to be there and we want to be there in large numbers. Oh, you say, why, that's way next June sometime. That's too far off to talk about. Well, maybe it is too far off to talk about, but it's certainly not too far off to work for. If you wait till next June to begin to try to send some delegates and to get together your report to be made at the assembly, you certainly won't be proud of your delegation and your report. It makes no difference where the assembly is held, your league wants to be represented there. Your league can't afford to miss the splendid instruction and inspiration that the delegates carry back to their leagues.

Why this advance statement? Well it's just to remind you that you have a report to make at the assembly and you don't want to come empty handed. Then above all, some day we'll have a report to make to the Master at that final assembly and we certainly don't want to be such ingrates that we'll go empty handed to report to our Saviour.

Then, too, I might add that this page might serve as an open forum for any discussion of the best place for our next assembly or any other matter of interest to leaguers. L. D.

EDENTON STREET GIVES PAGEANT OF "VISION HEIGHTS"

The Epworth League of Edenton Street church, Raleigh, presented the pageant "Vision Heights" or "Task Valley" on Sunday night, September 16th, in the main auditorium of the Sunday school. A large and appreciative crowd was present to see the pageant and was deeply impressed by it.

The pageant presented a young man in search of "Vision Heights" who had lost his way and was inquiring of those who passed to direct him. The young man was called "Pilgrim." The persons who passed by, but for some reason or another could not show "Pilgrim" the way to "Vision Heights" were "Selfish Ambition," "Provincialism," "Sloth," "Pleasure" and "Love,"

"Prayer," "Knowledge," "Inspiration" and "Consecration."

The characters were well chosen. Each one showed a large degree of skill in mastering his part. Caswell Riddle, as the "Pilgrim," had the leading part. His manner and expression was very impressive. Evelyn Waite, representing "Selfish Ambition," wore a purple robe, Grecian style, and a gold band about her head. She was typical in her part, which was difficult. "Provincialism," as played by Mr. Timbee, was well portrayed. It was really amusing to note how real Alex Davis represented "Sloth." It was very clearly understood how "Pleasure" can allure us after Henrietta Owen had represented it so effectively. "Love," "Prayer," "Knowledge," "Inspiration" and "Consecration" made a marked impression on the audience by the parts they played in showing "Pilgrim" the way to "Vision Heights." These parts were taken by Misses Eunice Blair, Lillian Waite, Grace Wilder, Marjorie Waite, and Alice Best. These were also dressed in long Grecian robes.

The second scene was laid in the "Pilgrim's" home. He as the president of the league was having a cabinet meeting, the purpose of which was to impart to his cabinet members the temptations that one might meet on a trip to "Vision Heights" and what a blessing it had been to him to overcome these obstacles and finally to get the real vision of the needs of the world and his part in supplying them. It was interesting to hear him tell of his experiences there. It was in this scene that the purpose of the pageant was revealed. The cabinet members, and seemingly the whole audience, caught the spirit and seemed to exist in the atmosphere of the real need and value of waking up and seeing what our lot is in our own community. #### HEAR THE JUNIOR SUPERINTENDENT

I wonder if the Junior superintendents realize it is getting almost report time again. Let's see if we can't get our reports in on time; it is easily done if we get busy. Will you assistant district secretary write your Junior superintendents and insist on getting their reports to you so that I may get them by the 10th and make my report by the 15th? I feel sure all the assistant secretaries are doing all they can to organize Junior leagues in every church where it can be done. Let's put our whole heart and service into the work and make this the banner year for Junior work. Our City Union League Efficiency League will be held here in Charlotte November 19 to 23, and I earnestly hope we have a goodly number of Intermediate and Junior superintendents from the district to attend. Intermediate and Junior work is very important if we expect to have real live, wide-awake Senior leagues. We are planning to have the best lot of teachers in our institute we have ever had and are sure if we attend we will go away better informed and more enthusiastic leaguers than before.

Remember I am at your service and count it a pleasure to help you in any way I can. Mrs. Jennie M. James, Conf. Junior Supt.

THAT SILVER LINING

I found the silver lining
To the cloud they talk about,
And I stepped up very boldly
And ripped the lining out.

"You cloud," I said quite firmly,
"You now may go your way;
Your lining is the only part
Of you I wish to stay."

And from that silver lining
I made two wondrous cloaks—
One to wear myself and one
To lend to other folks.

CHURCH BUILDING IN THE DURHAM DISTRICT

The Advocate carried an account in a recent number of the dedication of Fletcher's Chapel, Durham circuit, by Bishop Collins Denny. Mention was made also of the great satisfaction the people felt in having the bishop with them, and how they enjoyed that truly great utterance of his on Sunday morning.

I have thought it well to make mention of other building operations in the district and of the new ones entered. This work has gone steadily on during the past four years.

The new church at Helena, Mt. Tirzah circuit, was dedicated July 29 by the presiding elder. The pastor followed the dedication with a meeting that did much good and won a number to the church. The dedication and the revival marked a new day for the work in and around Helena. Bro. J. C. Williams had another revival at New Bethel of far-reaching consequences. He expects to be in the new church at this point before conference. New Bethel has a most promising field, with this new equipment. Williams is doing a monumental work in this field. One man like him is worth about every ten evangelists that go roaming over the country. He is doing a fine piece of constructive work that will abide, instead of kicking up a lot of dust and picking up shekels.

The beautiful new church at Samora is complete, and the pews are being installed. The next quarterly conference will be held here. This will be ready for dedication at an early day. This is a commodious country church and adequate for the needs. Once a small debt is paid, the brick church at Bethel, Yanceyville circuit, with green tile roof and Corinthian columns in front, will be ready for dedication. It is hoped that this may be done before Rev. J. T. Stanford closes his quadrennium. This church, begun by Rev. S. F. Nicks, is a most attractive and substantial building; a most needed one.

Mt. Sylva, Rougemont circuit, has a new lot, and timber is going on the ground for the new church located on the concrete road between Durham and Roxboro. This will be a most attractive structure.

The parsonage has been made new at Hillsboro, and an entirely new parsonage is in the building at Cedar Grove, on this same charge. Rev. J. E. Blalock has been looking after both these enterprises. The purpose is to divide the Hillsboro charge at conference. The more than eleven hundred members cannot be cared for by one man.

Money is being secured for a new church at Orange Chapel on the Carrboro work. This is one of the old Methodist societies near Chapel Hill, and has long needed a more commodious and attractive church. Bro. J. W. Autry has this in hand.

Previous mention has been made of the new Oak Grove church, Person circuit, built while Bro. J. A. Daily was pastor, and of Brooksdale's $18,000 church, Brooksdale circuit, during the incumbency of Bro. J. A. Russell. This reference is to make note of them in connection with this account of building operations affecting the country work, during the past quadrennium in the Durham district.

Carrboro has practically made new their church and have a new parsonage secured by a most profitable exchange made during the year. They are well fixed for years to come.

Webb Avenue, Burlington, is at work on plans and have something like ten thousand dollars pledged for a much needed church in this section of the town. They have a site the like of which one would have to go a long way to find a superior; and they are hopeful of pressing this work to a finish.

Plans have been approved, and funds are being secured by a canvass of the state made by Rev. Walter Paten in an effort to secure the needed amount for the great plant at Chapel Hill. Every old University man has a fine opportunity now to aid in building a beautiful church at his alma mater. This is a great and much needed enterprise.

Rev. H. C. Ewing and his people at Branson are going ahead in their new fifty-five thousand dollar church, into which they went a few months ago. This has been a most notable achievement. The tug is on in getting the finances in shape, and renewed efforts have been put forth for the building up of a better church organization. This church has a fine future.

Lakewood has bought an adjoining lot to prevent encroachments of buildings too near their church. They also have plans, and some of the funds in hand, for a Sunday school annex. Work on this should begin in the near future. It is most urgent.

Plans for the two hundred and fifty thousand dollar plant, to be built in two sections, for the Trinity church have been approved, and it is expected that bids for construction will be called for before many weeks. The committee has worked patiently in the effort to secure plans that will meet all demands. This will be one of the best churches in the state.

Memorial church has secured a fifteen thousand dollar lot that separated the parsonage from the church. This purchase gives this congregation almost the entire block and makes possible the finest church grounds and buildings to be found. This church equipment has not been realized and used to the extent of its possibilities. This is a wonderful foundation for building in the future.

No space could be taken to describe the above mentioned church enterprises. They mean much for the future, and a dozen more churches are needed in the district. These can be built in the next few years, provided a little vision, effort and determination can be had.

The outlook is for the finest closing ever known in the Durham district. Most of the preachers have been in the district for a full quadrennium, or more, and they have done well. Let every man stand at his post until the roll call at Elizabeth City.

M. T. Plyler.

BRISBANE BACKS FIGHT AGAINST BOXING

Arthur Brisbane has found something to praise in the Methodist Episcopal church. Ordinarily, Mr. Brisbane sees little good in churches or their activities, although he was at one time a youngster in a Methodist Sunday school. But now, at the very time when certain newspapers are boosting the prize fighting game, Mr. Brisbane says editorially to several million readers:

"The Methodist Episcopal church has started a war on prize fighting, attacking especially brutal exhibitions given under sanction of the highest officials in the army and navy.

"You are told that boxing develops courage. But you didn't notice it in the war. The percentage of boxers that did NOT go to war was higher than in any other line of effort.

"Fighting with fists develops courage," they say. In these days when men must face the sharp end of a bayonet, keep their nerves when bombs explode and shrapnel flies, to call boxing a preparation for real war is preposterous.

"In old days of fighting with fists, men used to bite off each other's ears and noses.

"Why not start, in the army and navy, ear and nose biting contests under the superintendence of admirals and generals, to make our boys 'brave'?"

"The Methodists are to be congratulated on a fight that a dozen churches should have started long ago."—Central Christian Advocate.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

Automobiles.—When passing through Goldsboro last week I saw a solid train load of automobiles. I think there were five autos on each freight car. With so many cars being used by our people, it does seem that one might find its way to the Methodist Orphanage for the benefit of the singing class. I hear of individuals and congregations giving their pastors cars. How I do wish such good work would continue until the Methodist Orphanage singing class could be numbered with the fortunate pastors. Smithfield church has just sent me two hundred dollars more toward purchasing a car for the singing class. Isn't that fine?

* * * *

Insurance.—Several insurance men have suggested that we could materially increase our endowment if a number of our orphanage friends would take out policies in favor of the Methodist Orphanage. Bro. N. E. Edgerton, a few years before he passed away, took out a five thousand dollar policy in our behalf. I wonder if there are not others who will follow his fine example? I trust that our preachers will call attention of the people to this method of helping the orphanage.

* * * *

"Work Day."—In a number of states "Work Day" is observed for the benefit of various orphanages. The plan has worked admirably in many sections. To devote one day's wages or income to so worthy a cause commends itself to all who believe in giving orphan children a square deal. Our Methodist folks of the N. C. conference have not adopted the plan as generally as the Baptists and Presbyterians. It is sincerely desired that every Methodist give not less than one day's earnings to our beloved Methodist Orphanage. Thanksgiving is the best time to make the donation.

* * * *

Crops.—Cotton and tobacco are being rapidly marketed. Money is flowing freely throughout the bounds of the conference. I feel confident that our people are not going to overlook us in our needs. We are wanting money now with which to pay big bills. Our people have never failed us in the past. They are going to respond to our pressing need and put us on our feet within the near future. To this end I want to request all the charges to pay up the orphanage assessment by conference, and in addition give us a large special. The assessment does not begin to meet our needs. Therefore it is urged that the assessment be paid in full with as large surplus as possible.

Hospital.—There is a real need of a great Methodist hospital for the North Carolina conference. This need is felt by thousands of our Methodists. Many have expressed themselves to me very freely on the subject and are anxiously awaiting our great church to take some concerted action in the matter. Several years ago the board of trustees of the Methodist Orphanage went on record to the effect that they would furnish a commanding site on the Orphanage campus for such an institution. When the landscape gardener laid off drives and located future buildings, a place was designated for that great Methodist hospital which ought to materialize at an early date. I trust that we will make it a subject of constant prayer. The church that heals the sick, shelters the orphan, preaches the gospel to the poor and undertakes to carry out the great commission, will prove its divine credentials. I covet for Methodism the right to claim its Apostolic succession by ministering to the three-fold nature of mankind.

* * * *

Annuity.—At the last meeting of the board of trustees a resolution was passed to the effect that the Methodist Orphanage establish the Annuity plan. Such a policy has been under consideration for some time and it was definitely decided to adopt the plan last June. Doubtless there are scores of Methodists throughout the conference who have money out on interest who would turn it over to our board of trustees if they knew we would pay them annuity. It was understood at the meeting of the board that we would not accept money on the annuity plan from young people. We prefer those who are ripe in years. The wisdom of such a plan can be easily seen. Those who turn over money on the annuity plan to us will get a good rate of interest and have no taxes to pay on their money in our hands. Neither will the Orphanage have to pay tax on it. At the death of the party who turns his or her money over to us, the Methodist Orphanage will come into permanent possession of same. That this plan will prove a blessing to the individual and to the orphanage cannot be doubted. As to the security, I wish to say that the Methodist Orphanage is a chartered institution, governed by a board of trustees, and has assets to the amount of three-quarters of a million dollars and has the backing of one hundred thousand Methodists. Could anyone wish for better security? I shall be glad to correspond with all interested parties. I trust that our pastors and leading laymen will call the attention of our people to the fact that we receive money on the annuity plan. When this plan becomes generally known and pushed by our pastors, it ought to be an easy matter to add two or three hundred thousand dollars to our endowment. Let us publish this fact throughout the conference and place our orphanage in a commanding position where it can render the largest possible service.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

AWAY CAN BE FOUND TO DO THAT WHICH OUGHT TO BE DONE

At this writing six annual conferences of the fall of 1923 have been held. The plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment was duly presented at each one, and in every instance the great movement has been unanimously welcomed. I have yet to hear a single serious complaint against what is being projected in the interest of the "forgotten man." All are agreed that this thing should be done and have committed themselves unreservedly to the task of doing it. Of course it is expected that in some places serious difficulties will have to be overcome, but that part of the church so far visited apparently has determined not to allow any obstacle to shunt the movement aside.

You Cannot Fail If You Believe You Can Do It.—Success is the fruit of confidence. He can who thinks he can. All obstacles get out of the way of the man who grips his task with a determination to win. Whoever sits down and ponders the number of things arising in the path of something that ought to be done is soundly licked before he begins. Such a one is usually rated as a failure by all who observe his methods, and none are willing to trust themselves in his hands. It has been well said: "When a man loses confidence in himself, he makes the vote unanimous." I do not know of anything that will so quickly bring fame and fortune to an individual as to find something that doubters say cannot be done and then do it. The special effort for superannuate endowment offers such an opportunity. Happy indeed should be the pastors of the church having such a chance to have their names writ big on the immortal roll of those who do this thing.

A Teacup and Superannuate Endowment.—Very few things are impossible in themselves. It is usually for want of application that men fail of success. If one strives intelligently, faithfully, and with singleness of devotion toward an object, one is sure to attain it in some measure. We are all inspired by the heroic efforts of Palissy to discover how to make the beautiful chinaware which adorns our tables of today. He burned under his oven the props that supported the trees in his little garden, the floor in his humble cottage, and the rude table and chairs; his children tugged at his frock and begged for food; for days he did not eat or sleep; and his neighbors laughed at him and pronounced him crazy. One hour more of firing was needed, and into the furnace went the last remaining piece of furniture, the bed on which his family slept. Hours later, when the oven had sufficiently cooled, trembling with emotion, he opened the door and cried: "Victory!" He had won.

If it is worth while to show such force and dogged perseverance to make a worth-while teacup, is it not also worth while to have such a spirit to win when providing a sustenance for the worn-out preachers of the Lord Jesus Christ? I will admit that the snow-white dishes and cups and saucers on the dinner table are pleasing to the eye, and I am glad that Palissy spent himself in such a manner to make it all possible. But I am also interested in an expression on the faces of our worn-out preachers indicative of the fact that they are not forgotten and neglected by the church which they have served. A preacher of the gospel, even though he is worn out and unfit for any kind of work, should never bear in his body marks indicating that he is underfed and insufficiently clothed. Such a preacher having given his life for tohers should from others receive those things that will make him happy and comfortable all the days of his life. As for me, I will work as hard for this as Palissy worked making a decent teacup. Will you?

A Snap Switch in Our Thinking.—It is very natural in these times of numerous financial campaigns in the church that pessimistic thoughts should seek control in the heads of those who are trying to think a way through to ten million dollars for superannuate endowment. It is a good plan to snap off pessimistic thoughts on this subject and snap on "peptimistic" thinking. At least let us be open-minded on the subject. By the way, it is well to remember the saying: "The open-minded man is young, no matter what year he was born." So if we keep out the thoughts that discourage us and let in the thoughts that encourage, we will suddenly find ourselves at the place of beginning with a determination to win. I was greatly impressed recently by a line which caught my eye in a secular newspaper, as follows: "The best angle from which to approach any problem is the try-angle." This is exactly what I am endeavoring to establish in the thinking of those who will have in hand the accomplishment of the special effort for superannuate endowment. Let us remember that "to improve the golden moment of opportunity and catch the good that is in our reach is the great art of life."

To Fail Now Would Be a Real Tragedy.—The opportunity to go ahead with a real effort to secure adequate superannuate endowment has not come by mere chance. The friends of the superannuates have been planning and working for this day over a period of more than twenty-five years. Several fitful efforts have been made during this period, each one failing in its turn on account of a lack of proper organization. But now it is different, for the Board of Finance has worked patiently and industriously for five years making the necessary preparation to project the special effort for endowment in a manner to save it from the failure that has characterized other spasmodic efforts for this purpose. If the church does not now fit herself snugly into the harness provided by the Board of Finance and apply herself diligently to pull the load, she will forever bear upon her banner a stain of reproach which cannot be removed. The fact that the church may be able successfully to do other things and do them well will not be sufficient to cover her ignominy for failing to do this one thing. The days are now upon us when the call for service to others is most pronounced. Never in the history of mankind has there been such a turning of the people toward a square deal for those who do the world's work. If secular corporations now admit that they cannot longer fail to give attention to the needs of their aged employees and keep the good opinion of mankind, how will it be possible for a church, having the welfare of men and women as her chief reason for being, expect to hold up her head while her worn-out servants are bowed in the dust of pitiful deprivations?

Yes, a call for justice is ringing in our ears. The General Conference has cleared the field for action. A plan of effort has been carefully prepared and is being given to the preachers and lay members of every annual conference. If in the face of all this the response is not quick and powerful, we will go on staining the pages of history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with words concerning her neglect of the old preachers that will shame succeeding generations. Such a tragedy can be avoided provided that every man, woman, and child of the whole connection will now do a worthy part in behalf of the special effort for superannuate endowment.

Something Preachers Should Not Forget.—A preacher should not try to remember harsh words that are spoken about him. He should forget his failures of yesterday. He should not cling to feelings of resentment against anybody in this wide world. But there are some things that a preacher should forever hold in mind, and one of them is this: "Every preacher in active service for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South is a 'forgotten man' in the making."

Roy Simpson, a negro laborer, was putting in his first day with a construction gang whose foreman was known for getting the maximum amount of labor out of his men. Simpson was helping in the task of moving the right-of-way, and all day long he carried heavy timbers and ties until at the close of the day he was completely tired out. Came quitting time. Before he went he approached the boss and said:

"Mister, you sure you got me down on the payroll?"

The foreman looked over the list of names he held. "Yes," he said, finally, "here you are—Simpson—Roy Simpson. That's right, isn't it?"

"Yaas, suh, boss," said the negro, "dass right. I thought maybe you had me down as Samson."

MY HORSE

By Minerva Hunter

I have a horse that's all my own;
And though I'm only three,
I ride upon him all alone
As bravely as can be.

I mount him and then cry: "Come up!"

And he begins to go.
Sometimes he gallops very fast,
And sometimes he is slow.

Sometimes he bucks and throws me off

Upon the nursery floor;
But I get up and mount again,
So I can ride some more.

Now, if you want a horse like mine,
Don't try a 'locipede,
Don't bother with a kitty car—
It's your dad's foot you need.

IT COULDN'T BE CLIMBED

By Dorothy Arno Baldwin.

There was a great to-do in the Kingdom of Neverwas. The King had lost his Golden Bird. He had looked for him almost everywhere. He had whistled for him, and everyone else had whistled, but it was of no use. The golden cage that hung in the King's bedchamber was empty, and the Golden Bird could not be found.

At last the King had a bright idea. He sent for the Court Astrologer. Now the Court Astrologer was a clever man and could see everything that other people see, and a good many other things.

"Will you kindly look through your glass," said the King, "and tell me where you see my Golden Bird? He has flown from me."

The Astrologer obligingly lifted his glass. "Your Majesty," he said after peering for a moment, "your Golden Bird is sitting on the very tiptop of the Mountain That Cannot Be Climbed."

"Dear me, how unfortunate!" said the King. "Do you think he intends to stay there?"

"I rather think he does," answered the Astrologer. "He seems to be having a very good time."

"That will never do," said the King. "I shall oversleep every morning if the Golden Bird is not here to sing me awake. He must come home at once."

That was easily said, but how to get him home was a difficult matter. In all the days of the kingdom no one had ever climbed that mountain. Everyone said that it couldn't be done. It was very steep and very high, so high that the clouds rested like a crown upon its head. No one had ever wanted to climb it before. But now that the Golden Bird was up there and the King wanted him, everything was different.

The King thought until his head ached, but could think of no way of getting his bird. Then he sent for his Wise Men.

"Will you kindly tell me," he said, "how I am to recover my Golden Bird? The Astrologer says that he is sitting on the very tiptop of the Mountain That Cannot Be Climbed, and of course he cannot hear me when I whistle."

The Wise Men talked it over among themselves.

"This is a serious matter, Your Majesty," they said, when they had duly considered for an hour or so. "We see no way of recovering the Golden Bird, unless—it is barely possible, Your Majesty, that, if some of us had wings, we might fly to the top of the mountain and capture him."

"Excellent!" declared the King. "We'll do it!"

The King ordered a hundred pairs of wings to be made at once, each pair large enough to bear the weight of a man. He then issued a proclamation calling upon one hundred of his subjects to learn to use the wings so that they could fly to the top of the mountain.

"Half a kingdom to him who shall bring back the Golden Bird," read the proclamation.

The wings were large enough to carry a man, and six times a hundred subjects came to try them; but not one could learn to use them. After practicing eleven and a half hours a day for thirty-nine days all that the most skillful subject could do was to fly to the palace roof, and then only when there was a good wind behind him.

Meanwhile the Golden Bird sat happily on the mountain top—the Astrologer could see him all the time—and the King slept later every morning.

When the King himself had fastened on a pair of wings and had found that even he couldn't fly very well he sent for the Wise Men again. He also sent for the Councilors, the Royal Tutors, the Cook, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and everyone else who had ever had occasion to think and commanded them to put their heads together.

"There must be some way of reaching my Golden Bird," he said. "I want you to think what it is."

After they had thought almost all night the eldest Councillor timidly raised his hand. "It may be," said he, "that, if all the people in the kingdom worked together, they might shovel the mountain out from under him. But it would take a long time."

"Never mind that," said the King.

So the King had each of his subjects provided with a shovel and put to work shoveling away the mountain. By the end of the first six months they had succeeded in digging a ditch round the base of it.

The King was in despair. "At this rate," he said, "it will be at least two thousand years before I can get back my Golden Bird, and it may be that I shall not want him then."

It was about that time that the King slept so late one morning that he didn't wake up till the morning after. When his subjects heard about it they were plunged into the deepest gloom. Everyone could see that that sort of thing could not go on. The King might get into the habit of not waking up at all.

It was on the morning after the morning on which the King had waked up a whole day late that a Young Person presented himself at court and asked to see His Majesty.

"King," said the Young Person when he was ushered into the royal presence, "I am planning to bring down your Golden Bird from the top of the mountain."

The King stared at him in astonishment. "You don't mean it!" he cried. "How are you going to get him?"

"I am going to climb the mountain," said the Young Person.

"You can't. That's just the trouble. No one can!" exclaimed the King.

"Did anyone ever try it?" asked the Young Person, who spoke in a very polite manner.

"Certainly not!" said the King indignantly.

The Young Person bowed very low. "I beg pardon, Your Majesty," he said, "but may I ask why not?"

"Why not?" roared the King, much exasperated. "Don't you know that that is the Mountain That Cannot Be Climbed? Now what would be the use of trying to climb a mountain that cannot be climbed?"

"With your kind permission," said the Young Person, "I shall try."

At this the King fussed and fumed and said that it couldn't be done. Then he sent for the Wise Men and told them all about it.

"H'm!" said the Wise Men. "Of course it can't be done. However, he can do no harm by trying."

So it was settled. The Young Person took with him the golden cage in which to bring hom the Golden Bird and started for the mountain. The whole court turned out to watch him. He scrambled through the ditch and took a step up the mountain. Then he took another step and another and he kept on taking one step after another. The subjects gasped. He was climbing the Mountain That Couldn't Be Climbed!

The Young Person kept right on climbing and climbing and after a long time, for the mountain was really very steep and very high, he reached the top. The Golden Bird was delighted to see him, for he was getting tired of his own company. He flew into the golden cage immediately, hopped to the perch and sang all the way back to the King.

"I am very grateful," said the King when the Young Person handed him the cage. "I thought you couldn't do it. Which half of my kingdom will you have?"

"You are most kind, Your Majesty," said the Young Person, "but I beg you to keep both halves. As for me, I do not need half a kingdom, for I am the king of myself."

The Young Person made a low bow and then departed from the Kingdom of Neverwas. No one knows exactly what became of him or where he went, for in that land they never saw or heard of him again.—Youth's Companion.

Rheumatism and Indigestion

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

If you suffer from Rheumatism, Indigestion, or from any curable disease accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to Shivar Springs,

Box 4D, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons (two five gallon demijohns) of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give the water a fair trial in accordance with instructions which you will send, and if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

you to give them your earnest consideration.

First, you will do well to come for the sake of developing the spiritual side of your nature. You will find the atmosphere and setting conducive to worship and meditation.

Second, you should come in order to get a better knowledge of the Scriptures so that you may be the better able to apply their teachings to everyday life.

Third, we think it would be worth coming for the fellowship you would have with the other members of the school and especially with the men who gather here every Sunday.

Fourth, we would have you help us train and care for the young people who are in attendance. They are looking to us older folks for their guidance. You will find this quite a fascinating work.

Fifth, your presence at Sunday school will mean that you are identifying yourself with the constructive, religious forces of this community, and in this manner you will exert a wholesome influence over your acquaintances.

Sixth, we would also offer you a part in our program of work outside the school itself. We frequently undertake charitable and benevolent enterprises among needy people. In such directions you will find most inviting fields for your gifts and service.

So then, for these and for other good and sufficient reasons, we would invite you to enroll with us.

Hoping to see you at the church at half-past nine o'clock next Sunday morning, I am, with every kind wish,
 Sincerely yours,

HELP US HELP

The summer months are always trying on subscription lists of church papers, as most subscriptions are received during other seasons. For many reasons we are anxious to make this summer unique by breaking this rule and rolling up a large list of new readers for the beginning of the fall and winter season.

We sometimes wonder if Methodists know the worth of The Missionary Voice. We know many of them do, of course, and being the best informed these are the most dependable members of our church. Then many who are not Methodists read and appreciate our missionary magazine. Just the other day a member of the Lutheran church wrote the office that a copy of The Voice came to him by mistake and that he read it and found it full of interesting missionary news.

The Missionary Voice is the official organ of the Board of Missions. The board is working out a plan of cultivation that will be equal to that of any church in the world. In this plan The Missionary Voice will be an important factor. That it may best serve its purpose we are seeking to improve it. We want it to be as good as any denominational missionary periodical in the world. That we may carry out our plans it will be necessary that we greatly extend the circulation of The Voice. This can be done with the co-operation of pastors, and lay workers.

Great things are transpiring in the

Even Dad Can Play!

It doesn't matter a bit whether you've ever played a note in your life or not. All you need is the love of music and one of the beautiful Weaver player pianos.

These wonderful instruments are so constructed that you can reproduce any piece you like without a bit of the methodical, mechanical sound usual with player pianos. You can play them to please yourself—slow and soft where you want, swelling out into full, rich triumphant tones as may befit the music you are playing. The tone of the Weaver is round and sweet, its action quick and easy, its mechanism perfect. And in just a minute or two—player can be changed into piano, ready to respond to the lightest touch of your fingers.

There's no music in the world like that of a piano. There's no pleasure in music to compare with singing yourself. And with a Weaver player piano it's just as easy to sing as it is to play. For the music rolls to-day are made with words—words that you can follow note by note just as easily as with sheet music!

Only a small outlay is necessary and the Weaver is yours, to enjoy the whole time you're paying for it. The terms are purposely made easy. These terms will buy the Weaver upright, grand or player piano. Write us to-day for further information about this piano of happiness.

mission fields of the world. No intelligent Christian can afford to be uninformed about these happenings. We are going to furnish this information in The Voice and we appeal to all Methodists to help us put The Voice with the information in the hands of our people.—The Voice.

The above article appearing in the September number of The Voice speaks adequately for the cause presented, but speaks necessarily only to those who read. It is difficult to understand how a Methodist can be a Methodist "in good stand"—a four square, all round interested Methodist, and not read The Voice. Personally—well, the Voice is a necessity to the churchly self-respect of many women, and some men, and many there are who feel with the reading of each single number that each one is worth the price, and more, of the year's subscription. Yet there is a large group who do not realize this value because they persist in remaining uninformed as to its value. There are others who subscribe for it but do not read it. One lady said: "I have all my numbers of The Voice on file, but I never read it." I took a second look at that sister to see if the trouble was discernable. It wasn't. Now, friends, we trust you will betir yourselves on this matter of your own Christian education and let us double the subscription list in our conference by December 25. Order through your society, or send one dollar direct to The Missionary Voice, Box 509, Nashville, Tenn.

IN MEMORIAM

PROCTOR—Bro. O. K. Proctor, born April 19, 1859, passed to his reward September 8, 1923, after a lingering illness. He was the son of O. K. Proctor, Sr., and Mary Ellen Barbee. He married Sarah Jane Barbee, now living. He was the brother of J. S. H. Proctor of East Durham, and W. W. H. Proctor of Varena, N. C.

He served as county commissioner twice. He was a true friend of the orphanages and his church; was forty years steward in the M. E. Church, South, and teacher in the Sunday school several years; a subscriber to the Advocate all its years. Gone but not forgotten. We greatly miss him. J. H. Buffalo.

BARDIN—On the 6th of September, 1923, the spirit of Bro. T. E. Bardin returned to God. For several months he had been in declining health, so the end was not unexpected.

In middle life he was converted and joined the Methodist church, of which he remained a faithful member until his death. He was a loyal citizen, a faithful husband and a sincere Christian.

He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, several brothers and sisters, and a host of friends. May the God of comfort be very near the bereaved ones in this dark hour.

B. O. Merritt, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His love and wisdom removed from us on the 10th of May, 1923, Miss Julia B. Hall, one of the most loyal and faithful members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Red Springs M. E. Church, South, of which she served so well as president for a number of years. Therefore, be it resolved:

First, That we cherish her memory in the coming years and try as best we can to emulate her good example.

Second, That while our hearts are grieved at her going, yet we realize it is her Father's will and know that all is well.

Third, That we wish to extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to the Advocate and a copy be spread on the minutes of our society.

Mrs. J. F. McLean, Mrs. H. B. Ashley, Jr., Mrs. T. C. Rogers.

IN MEMORIAM

The sweetest type of heaven is home. Here is the heart's garden, full of sunshine and flowers. There is music in the very word "home." To the old it brings a bewitching strain from the harp of memory; to the middle-aged it brings up happy thoughts; while to the young it is a reminder of all that is near and dear to them.

From such a home the spirit of Mrs. J. L. Whitmore was wafted away by the angel of death, leaving behind those who loved her with hearts of devotion.

The hour glass is truly emblematical of the world, as its sands run out at the termination of a given period. It shows all things must have an end. It is only when on the border of eternity that the fleeting period of life is comprehended. Death, when viewed from the right spirit, is found to be but the happy transition stage to a more glorious and perfect life.

There was a no more active Christian worker in all the activities of Trinity church than our friend, Mrs. Whitmore. As a member of our Woman's Missionary Society she gave liberally of her time and means; always optimistic, often bringing to pass things which seemed impossible.

As a society we will miss her, but—"When fadeth the day, and dark shadows draw nigh,

With Christ close at hand, it is not Death to die.

He will wipe away every tear, will roll away every care;

We'll say 'Good night' here, but 'Good morning' up there."

Mrs. C. B. Green, Mrs. W. H. Linthicum, Mrs. J. C. Rose, Committee.

TART—On the third of July Bro. E. M. Hart went to his eternal reward. He had been in declining health only a few months before his death, but the end did not come unexpected.

In early life he was converted and joined the Methodist church, of which he remained a faithful member until his death. He was a consecrated Christian, and was always faithful to his church and his God. He was indeed and in truth one of those Christians that is the salt of the earth.

He leaves a wife, one son, one daughter and a host of friends to mourn their loss. May God comfort them in this dark hour.

B. O. Merritt, P. C.

HOPPER—Mrs. Theresa Jones Hopper of Leaksville died on the 13th of September, 1923, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. R. Pratt, in Madison and the body was brought to Leaksville and buried there on September 15th.

Mrs. Hopper was a daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth Lyle Jones and was born in Patrick county, Va.,

November 4, 1839. She was married to Mr. M. J. Hampton of Leaksville in her seventeenth year, and after his death married to the late Mr. A. T. Hopper, also of Leaksville.

She possessed a clear mind, fine judgment and superior business capacity, and withal was true to every relation as wife, neighbor and Christian. Her friends attended the funeral of the many beautiful floral offerings testified the high esteem in which she was held. When the body was laid to rest the grave was covered with flowers. She had suffered much in her latter days, but endured affliction with patience and when the end came she had no fear. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. William L. Sherrill.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

The following resolutions of respect were adopted by the Woman's Missionary Society of Wesley Memorial church at a recent meeting:

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has taken from us our oldest and greatly beloved sister, Mrs. Sallie Drake Twitty, we resolve that, while we bow in submission to His divine will, we realize that in the passing of this good woman our society sustains a irreparable loss.

She was ever faithful, diligent in every phase of His work, contributing cheerfully and liberally of her time, talents and means as long as she lived.

We shall miss her presence among us, but the influence of such as she must outlive her generation.

We thank Thee, dear Father, for the life of this sweet and lovely Christian and with grateful hearts commend her to Thee and thy saints to live forevermore.

"Sleep on, beloved sleep, and take thy rest;

Lay down thy head upon thy Saviour's breast;

We loved thee well, but Jesus loved thee best."

Mrs. Frank Allen, Mrs. N. M. Palmer, Mrs. Jere Draper.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Keeping pace with the South

The first American locomotive to enter actual service was the "Best Friend" of 1830. Built in a New York foundry, shipped by sea to Charleston, it hauled the first passenger train on what is now the Southern Railway System.

Twenty-two hundred locomotives, some of them fifty times as heavy as this famous pioneer engine, and 70,000 cars, operating on 8,300 miles of Southern Railway System lines, are now doing the work that was begun by the "Best Friend."

From the Ohio and the Potomac to the Gulf, from the Atlantic to the Mississippi, the far-flung rails of the Southern reach across twelve states with 40,000,000 inhabitants.

The Southern serves the South—from the northern gateways at Washington, Cincinnati and Louisville—and the western gateways at St. Louis and Memphis—to the ocean ports of Norfolk, Charleston, Savannah, Brunswick and Jacksonville—and the Gulf ports of Mobile and New Orleans.

Operated by men of the South, who have been bred in its traditions to understand its problems and its needs, the Southern keeps pace with the South. The investment in its properties is now more than $710,000,000, of which $285,000,000 has been expended in the past two decades.

With the continued cooperation of the people of the South, we will be enabled to command the capital for the greater transportation facilities that Southern development will inevitably demand.

Southern Railway System last year spent in the South $20,000,000 more than it received from the South.

To haul a man's body to the church for the funeral when he persistently refused to attend church while living appears to be taking undue advantage of the dead. Furthermore, consistency looks good and is good in all the relations of life.

How to be rich without money is a lesson hard for some people to learn just as it is difficult for people with money oftentimes to know how poor they really are. Riches are not held in the hands, but are stored away in the heart. Wealth is not without but within. The bales in the warehouse and the gold in the till cannot make a man wealthy any more than they can make him wise.

Recently at an annual conference in Kansas the presiding bishop in his Sunday morning sermon related how delegation after delegation of laymen had visited him and urged that he send young men to their respective churches. Then the bishop pointedly and with pertinency asked, "What are we going to do with the old men, shoot them? For the church now when they are no longer acceptable turns them out uncared for to die of starvation." Right here another question demands an answer. It is this. How long will the church continue to treat its aged minister in such a criminal fashion? We ought everyone of us to be ashamed of ourselves and do better.

What is the matter up in Michigan? Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, pastor of Central church, Detroit, and well known in Methodist circles the world over, was elected to the second place in the delegation of the Detroit conference to the general conference, but declined the honor and asked to be excused. His request was granted. Dr. A. W. Walker of Ann Arbor, after a vote on the first ballot that indicated his election, right early in the voting withdrew his name because of his work in the pastorate. Such conduct on the part of Methodist preachers is almost as rare as for one to put away the offer of a place in the College of Bishops.

"An Oriental despot ordered his sages to compress all their wisdom into one encyclopedia. They labored for ten years, and returned with a caravan of a hundred camels carrying a hundred thousand volumes

"The angry king ordered the wise men to compress their library. They returned in ten years with a caravan of ten camels carrying ten thousand volumes. The king was now too old to read ten thousand volumes. He ordered them to compress them into one.

"In ten years a tottering vasant returned with one huge volume strapped to a weary camel's back. But the king was dying. He expired as the Book of Wisdom was laid at his feet."

Ye prolix writers and speakers and wordy wranglers over questions both great and small, is there a lesson for you in this parable of the Orient. How happy would we all be if the Occident could learn from the Orient and write in haste the Book of Wisdom?

Platitudes in the sermon, attitudes in the preacher and "holy" tones in the voice are generally associated with a long coat and a long face. In the minds of some all these are marks of superior piety. But we have not so learned Christ. The outward marks of piety that Jesus saw in the Pharisees of his day were almost as distasteful to him as the hypocrisy that filled their hearts.

Listen to Professor Robert William Rogers, Ph.D. (Leipzig), S.T.D. Litt. D., LL. D., F.R.G.S. for 30 years a teacher of Hebrew and Old Testament Exegesis, Drew Theological Seminary:

"The Bible is still our only basis. I say it boldly, for there is no alternative offered that deserves a moment's consideration. The great preachers have all been preachers whose message was squarely founded on or sprang from Holy Writ. Where is there an exception? I have yet to hear his name. It is true that sciolists appear from time to time and gather a following for a season, but their influence is weak, their endurance brief, and to predicate greatness of them were laughable. From Chrysostom to Cadman the great preachers have thundered Sinai and pleaded Calvary. It is absurd as well as silly to seek another way, and they who do are goats and not sheep, not feeding in sweet meadows on lush grass, but picking at wild hedges or poisoned cacti. The Bible has the story, the whole satisfying story of God's revelations to men, and they who know it and preach it shall not want for hearers, or their hearers comfort in their sorrows and guidance in their doubtings. But the Bible is a very big book and they who have really begun to know it have spent a long life time upon its riches."

"To be a witness with us of his resurrection" was the reason for the disciples' choosing a successor to Judas Iscariot. At Pentecost Peter's theme was the resurrection and he explicitly declared that the risen Christ alone made possible that day with its power. The early disciples when ordered to speak no more in the name of Jesus gave as the reason why they should obey God rather than men that God had raised Jesus from the dead. The climax as well as central theme of Paul's preaching on Mars Hill was the resurrection of Christ. Paul before Felix declared, "Touching the resurrection of the dead, I am called in question by you this day." Paul with all the passion of his great heart was speaking of the resurrection when Festus cried, "Paul, thou art beside thyself, much learning hath made thee mad." This same man on another occasion wrote, "I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not?" Paul went even further than all this. He staked the whole cause of Christ and Christianity upon the one fact, namely, the resurrection of Jesus Christ. It has been said that the Christian religion is the religion of a Person. To be a bit more specific, as far as Paul was concerned, it was the religion of a fact. Not the cross but the empty tomb is the one central object of the Christian religion. Not a dying Christ but an ever risen Lord is the center of the world's hope.

AN APPRECIATION OF DORMAN THOMPSON

By Rev. J. F. Kirk.

The news of the death of Dorman Thompson came as a shock to the greater part of the reading public of the state of North Carolina. He was well and favorably known to a large number of the people of our commonwealth. He had been desperately ill for about a month, but the fact was not generally known. He had seemed to improve, and had planned a trip to Richmond to visit friends and to place himself under expert treatment, but his heart suddenly failed, and he passed out peacefully Tuesday morning, October 2, at his home in Statesville.

He came of a family distinguished for service to the church and to the state. His father, Prof. D. Matt Thompson, has had a distinguished career in public education. He taught at Denver, in Lincoln county, and at Lincolnton for a number of years. He came to Statesville about thirty years ago, where he established one of the first city graded schools in the state and was superintendent for more than a quarter of a century. He has also been one of the leading laymen of the Western North Carolina conference for a like period of years. The late Walter Thompson, a brother, was also an educator and public servant. He began his career in the public schools of Concord, was later promoted to the superintendency of these schools, and afterward became one of the founders and the superintendent of the Jackson Training School. It was while he was here that the church called him to head its recently established Children's Home at Winston-Salem, where he died greatly honored and beloved. Holland Thompson, another brother, was at one time superintendent of the Concord city schools, and is now professor in the municipally owned College of New York City.

Dorman Thompson was the youngest child of this interesting family. He graduated at a rather early age from the Statesville high school, to enter the State University at Chapel Hill. He took his degree at the end of his fourth year, but returned for the completion of his law course, which he completed a year later, took his examination before the supreme court, was licensed and began the practice of law at Statesville.

Shortly after entering upon the practice of his profession he was married to Miss Luda Morrison, whose home was Statesville, but who at the time of their marriage had been on the music faculty of Salem College for two years. His wife died more than two years ago. They leave three children, a son and two little girls.

He soon took rank as one of the leading lawyers of his home town, and it was but a few years until the people sought him out and began to thrust honors and responsibilities upon him. He held, among others, the following positions: City attorney, attorney to the various county officers, and for three terms was the representative of his district in the state senate, at the end of which time he refused longer to be a candidate. At the time of his death he was president of the local Rotary Club, and a member of the board of trustees of the University of North Carolina.

In the church he has held almost every position to which he was eligible. He was elected a steward in Broad Street Methodist church very early in his career. About twelve years ago he was elected chairman of the board of stewards of his local church, in which position he remained for four years, when he was again re-elected, but declined to serve on the grounds that he did not believe that a man should serve continuously in this position. It was in January, 1914, that he was elected teacher of the Men's Bible class of Broad Street church. He gathered about him each Sunday morning for nearly ten years an increasingly large number of the men of the congregation, in recent years, from 100 to 125 of the mature men of Statesville, who gave affectionate attention to the weekly talks, that probably did more to stamp his personality for good upon the town of Statesville than any other public service he ever rendered.

He nearly always served his district, and the annual conference, by being chosen a delegate to these bodies. He was first elected a member of the general conference that met in Oklahoma City, May 6, 1914. He has been elected to each general conference since that time, and has served the church as a member of the General Board of Church Extension since 1918, when he was elected a member of that body. At the time of his death he was also a member of the board of trustees of Davenport College, and the president of the board, a member of the board of directors of the Methodist Mutual Fire Insurance Company, chairman of the conference entertainment committee, chairman of the conference Budget Commission, and had been up to a year ago lay leader for the Statesville district and member of the Board of Lay Activities of the conference.

It was said of him by a prominent member of the conference, just two weeks before his death, that Dorman Thompson gave fully half his time to public service, for which he received no financial compensation and for which he expected no personal reward or advantage. Such a spirit was characteristic of the man. He literally lived to serve mankind. He did not accumulate an estate of any proportions. He died a poor man, in so far as earthly standards go. But he was rich. He was rich in the regard of friends, and rich in the love of those whom he had helped. He has, too, bequeathed a rich heritage to those of us who are left behind. The town in which he lived is much the richer for his life. He has aided many a man in forming more lofty ideals, he aided many in keeping an outlook of faith on life. He has enabled many of us to believe more fully in the reality of religion, because he lived it. He has taught many a man the worth of friendship and the value of truth and honesty and high and noble living. He has exemplified to many the beauty of unselfish service. These things will abide. It were better to live as he has lived than to have become the possessor of millions of dollars without the high qualities he possessed. I wonder how we can doubt it?

It was a rare privilege to witness the tribute paid to his worth in the great throng that crowded every available inch of space at the funeral held in Broad Street church last Thursday morning. It was one of those perfect autumn days. When the service was read, it seemed that literally every eye was suffused with tears; when we laid him away at the cemetery and the last words of the benediction were said, the crowd seemed to wait for a last personal word of farewell to him whom they had loved so well in life. Peace to his ashes.

BISHOP DENNY TO PRESIDE

Bishop Collins Denny, whose presidency gave unusual satisfaction last year at Monroe, will this year preside over the Western North Carolina conference in Winston-Salem.

Our bishop has during the past year given a due portion of his services to this conference. He has presided over six out of the eleven district conferences, dedicated quite a number of churches, preached repeatedly upon other occasions and besides all this has traveled extensively throughout the conference. Hence he will at Winston-Salem be in the midst of his fellow workers. Our presiding officer will be distinctly one of us.

We take especial pleasure in announcing that Mrs. Denny will accompany the bishop and will remain to the close of the conference. The presence of this cultured and elect lady adds greatly to the charm of any circle. Western North Carolina gladly welcomes her.

Dr. J. A. Burrow, editor of the Methodist Advocate, put on his best wisdom cap a little while ago and wrote the following, which is "like apples of gold in pictures of silver":

"Quarreling never gets anybody anywhere, except into trouble. Quarreling with a congregation is about the poorest sort of preaching. Generally it hardens folk and makes them more inclined to go on and do the things the preacher is trying to keep them from doing. Quarreling with official members is in the same category. An employer who quarrels with his employees is missing the mark. A lawyer who quarrels with a court or with a jury is doing his client a great injustice. The housekeeper who quarrels with a servant does not help matters except in the rarest cases. But a quarreling preacher in the pulpit is the limit. He is expected to be a man of grace. He is expected to be religious—that is, sweet spirited and under restraint. This does not mean that he is to submit to everything; but quarreling is the poorest possible way to accomplish the thing he wants to accomplish."

ATWATER FAMILY TO ERECT DORMITORY AT THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE, RALEIGH

The third reunion of the Atwater family was held at Trinity College last Thursday. There was a good attendance and the animating spirit of the occasion was fine. Hon. J. B. Atwater of Bynum presided over the morning session. Rev. W. F. Womble conducted the opening exercises. Prof. R. L. Flowers made an address of welcome. Mr. W. B. Atwater of Greensboro responded to the words of welcome. Hon. J. B. Atwater spoke briefly of the purpose of the reunion. Hon. Francis Atwater of New Haven, Connecticut, read an interesting and constructive paper concerning additional history to the three volumes of the history of the Atwater family which he compiled. After miscellaneous talks were made the following officers were elected: President, J. P. Atwater; vice president, Paul Barringer; secretary, J. P. Cole; treasurer, Mrs. Mattie Atwater Jenkins of the Methodist Orphanage.

Hon. Francis Atwater, historian of the Atwater family, announced that he would donate $5,000 if the rest of the Atwaters would raise a like sum on the Atwater memorial to be erected at the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh, which is to be a dormitory, costing about $30,000. Of this amount about $15,000 has been paid and about $3,000 additional has been secured on unpaid pledges. The purpose was expressed to complete the enterprise without delay.

Dinner was served on the campus grounds, the toastmaster of which was Dr. S. B. Turrentine, president of Greensboro College, who set forth the principles of the reunion and its significance. He exhorted his listeners to honor the Atwater forefathers by living a noble and constructive life. Francis Atwater replied with a toast, "Echoes from a New England Explorer in the South," in reply to which J. B. Atwater gave "Retaliation of a Tar Heel Discoverer in the North." The benediction was pronounced by Prof. F. S. Aldridge.

SCHOOL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION AT TRINITY COLLEGE

Revised figures show that the enrollment for Trinity College this year is 1028, an increase of over 100 over last year. That department of the college which has shown perhaps the greatest growth in recent years is the Department of Religious Training, which is now manned by three full professors giving full time to this work, two other professors giving part time, and three assistants. The department is headed by H. E. Spence, '08, who is assisted in full time by James Cannon III, '14, and J. M. Ormond, '00. Part-time instructors are Drs. W. I. Cranford and C. W. Peppeler. Two more full-time instructors will be added during the near future, and the Kilgo Memorial Building will be built to house the department's activities.

In the courses offered 567 students are enrolled this year, 337 of whom are taking work required for the A. B. degree, while 230 students are enrolled in advanced elective courses in Religious Education, Biblical Literature, Rural Life, etc. There are 70 young men preparing for the ministry and 30 volunteers for home and foreign missions, social service and other forms of Christian work.

After observing the operations of the League of Nations during two visits to Geneva, one in June as visitor to the Council, the other in September to the Assembly of the League, Dr. Henry A. Atkinson, executive secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship, has just returned from Europe with the firm conviction that the League actually prevented another world war by its handling of the Italian-Greek situation. "The stand taken by the League served its purpose," said Dr. Atkinson, "by giving immediate and world-wide publicity to the acts of Italy thereby causing the Italian government to pause and 'cool off.'" "It is amazing to me," continued Dr. Atkinson, "to find that the people here at home who are now condemning the League because it did not use Article Ten against Italy are the very same ones who formerly would have nothing to do with the League because of Article Ten. It looks to me like a case of 'Any stick to beat a dog.'"

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Western North Carolina Conference, Winston-Salem, October 17.

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

Married, in Tabernacle church on the Straits circuit, at one o'clock October 2, Mr. Walker Grogan to Miss Elsie Stewart, H. M. Jackson officiating.

Bishop Denny has released Rev. A. J. Hobbs, Jr., from his work in Wilmington in order that he may attend the Yale Divinity School. He has already entered upon his work at Yale.

The pastor of the Methodist church at Hertford, Rev. Thos. McM. Grant, as the guest of Mr. Geo. E. Major enjoyed a trip to Ocean Grove, Asbury Park, New York City, and other points of interest in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware. The trip was chiefly made by automobile.

Mesdames R. C. Stevens and W. A. Webb, while in attendance this week upon the U. D. C. Convention favored us with a call and reported that the convention with an attendance of more than 300 was in every respect a great success. They in harmony with the rest of the convention had only expressions of appreciation for Greensboro and its reception of the U. D. C.s.

Rev. J. E. Holden, pastor of the Kenly Methodist church, was taken quite by surprise Sunday morning when at the close of his service his congregation presented him with a liberal cash collection, a nice suit of clothes and a hat. Mr. Holding closed a series of revival meetings Sunday, having done the preaching himself. There were four additions to the church.—Smithfield Herald.

Rev. E. M. Hall, who has enjoyed five successful years at Benson, his first charge in the conference, will in all probability be appointed to another field of labor at the approaching conference. The people at Benson would be glad to have him and his good wife another year and the Baptists of Benson think so well of him that they have given him an expression of their appreciation inscribed upon a medal of gold.

The Graham Bulletin says: "This is Brother Plyler's fourth year on the Durham district. His going seems to occasion everywhere deep-seated regret. By his wise counsel and steady, unfaltering leadership he has wonderfully set forward the kingdom's interest among us. Some of the brethren are saying that they would like to gladden his heart by bringing up a 'clean sheet' on November 4. A fine thing to do—but wouldn't the shock be too great?"

A church out of debt before the cornerstone is laid has no place among the usual order of events. But this actually occurred at South Gastonia, where Rev. W. M. Heckard is the popular and successful under shepherd of the flock. The cornerstone was laid last Sunday at 3 o'clock, Rev. W. A. Lambeth preaching the sermon, which was a good one, according to reports coming this way. The treasurer of the church reported that the building and furnishings cost $12,781.53, all of which has been paid, the church completed and furnished. Rev. H. H. Jordan, the presiding elder, conducted the exercises of laying the cornerstone immediately following the sermon by Mr. Lambeth.

From Rev. W. R. Ware: "The meeting at First Methodist church, Morganton, September 16-26, was of much spiritual benefit to the membership and congregation. A large number reconsecrated their lives and services to God. Ten were received on profession of faith. The attendance was uniformly large at both the afternoon and evening services. Brother John W. Moore was with us from Monday night, the 17th, till the meeting closed. He preached with great unction and power. His exposition of the Scriptures was most helpful. His denunciation of sin and unrighteousness reminded us of the earlier days of our Methodism. His gentleness and sweetness of spirit was also manifest. Such strong and faithful presentation of Bible truth can but do good. Brother R. L. Milam, Atlanta, Ga., led the service of song. He impressed us as an humble, sweet spirited, Christian gentleman. Sixty-two members have been received this year, sixteen of these on profession of faith."

Rev. G. F. Smith was in the Advocate office Tuesday bragging about what an excellent presiding elder he nas. His talk was about Rev. S. E. Mercer, elder of the Weldon district.

A beautiful individual silver communion set was presented to the Methodist church in Jamesville by Edward Evans, of Wilmington, in honor of his grandfather, the late Dr. N. S. Hassett. The gift was purchased out of Edward's titling fund. Edward is attending school at Oak Ridge.

The trustees of Greensboro College met last Tuesday afternoon at the college. The work was mainly the transaction of routine business. The college is full with more than 300 students in attendance. The year is one of great promise. The following trustees attended the meeting of the board: Charles S. Wallace, W. A. Lambeth, G. T. Adams, Miss Annie Lee Smith, Dred Peacock, J. A. Young, G. F. Smith, M. D. Stockton, C. A. Bray, Charles H. Ireland, M. T. Plyler.

"Just closed a campaign at Carrboro, N. C., with Brother Autry, in which we had 54 conversions and reclamations and received a class of 21 into the Methodist church. We are now at Gates, N. C., holding a campaign in the tobacco warehouse. According to actual count we had over 800 in the congregation. We are expecting a great time. We close the season for this year at Scranton, South Carolina, and then return to Yale for further study." This interesting note is from the Rev. Sam Maxwell.

Rev. J. Frank Armstrong, pastor of our church at Forest Hill, Concord, writes that he is in the midst of a fine revival. Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, of Nashville, Tenn., is doing some great preaching to congregations that tax the capacity of the church, which is now the largest in Concord. On Friday night of last week "young people's night" was observed, and at the close of the service one hundred and twenty young people crowded the altar pledging themselves to a better life. Sunday four services of remarkable interest and power were held. Fifteen members were received at the morning hour. The meeting was scheduled to close Wednesday night of this week.

THE MOTHER OF MRS. C. M. PICKENS ANSWERS THE FINAL CALL

Mrs. Cella Elizabeth Watts died last Friday night, October 7th, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. M. Pickens, Albemarle, N. C. The remains accompanied by Mrs. Pickens and her son, Mr. Miller Pickens, were carried Saturday to Cartersville, Ga., where the interment took place Monday of this week.

For the past eighteen years it had been the custom for Mrs. Watts to spend the summer with Rev. and Mrs. C. M. Pickens. This summer she came to Albemarle July 4.

Her health was impaired at that time, and her condition had steadily grown worse, until on Friday night about 8:30 o'clock she quietly answered the final call.

Mrs. Watts was born December 27, 1847. She was a true daughter of Methodism, and as a mother contributed a well known son, the late Rev. J. Q. Watts, of the North Georgia conference.

We join with her many friends in extending to Mrs. Pickens and all the bereaved family our deepest sympathy in this hour of sorrow.

THE FIRST DAYS OF RUTHERFORD COLLEGE EXCEEDS LAST YEAR BY FIFTY-ONE

Rutherford College is starting off the new year with bright prospects for a record breaker. The first day's enrollment exceeds last year's by fifty-one students. The enrollment is not only large, but of fine quality. There is an unusual purposefulness pervading the school. Sixty-three have enrolled as ministerial students, about twenty have enlisted in the Volunter Band, and a large number have joined the evangelistic singing class.

The teachers have returned from their places of summer school studies full of enthusiasm and in good trim for the year. These eight men who are taking post graduate work in addition to their baccalaureate, and some with their master's degree, make an unusually strong faculty.

The college department is especially growing in scope and interest. No effort is being spared to make the work of the highest quality and to meet every requirement of the strictest standards.

M. T. Hinshaw.

Bishop Collins Denny preached last Sunday evening for Rev. G. T. Adams at Dunn. The church at Dunn has just finished paying off its indebtedness of $4,500. The church and grounds and furnishings are valued at $75,000. It is one of the beautiful churches of North Carolina.

NEW CHURCH DEDICATED AT FOUR OAKS

Sunday was a joyous day for the Methodist congregation at Four Oaks. Bishop Collins Denny at 11 o'clock preached the sermon and then conducted the simple ceremonials of dedication. The church has been erected at a cost of $30,000. It is a beautiful church and is handsomely furnished.

Mr. B. B. Adams, that loyal and big hearted layman who is so well known throughout the North Carolina conference, contributed largely to the building of this up-to-date house of worship. Rev. J. A. Russell is the pastor and Brother Adams stood squarely with him in all the work of this enterprise which has been brought to such a happy completion.

At the conclusion of the morning services the ladies served dinner in the big dining room of the church and tried out its capacity to accommodate the great company that enjoyed the bountiful dinner.

Rev. J. C. Wooten, who is now completing his four years on the Raleigh district, preached his last sermon of the quadrennium at Four Oaks Sunday night. This level-headed presiding elder is very popular on the district and the people regret his departure to some other field of service. We had delightful fellowship with him at the parsonage, where Mr. and Mrs. Russell and the two dear little girls left nothing undone for the happiness of the elder and the editor.

CONFERENCE JOURNALS FOR GREENSBORO COLLEGE LIBRARY

Mrs. R. R. Alley, librarian of Greensboro College, desires to complete the files of the journals of the North Carolina conference and in order to do so is in need of the following:

All copies of journal before 1875, and for the years 1877, 1878, 1879, 1880, 1898, 1900, 1901, 1909, 1922.

Any person who can assist Mrs. Alley in this should send the journals desired to Greensboro College.

STATESVILLE DISTRICT NOTICE

Under the present methods the only report of a pastor's work reaching the ear of the conference is that included in the presiding elder's report. The pastors will please meet me in the Board of Education room on Tuesday night at 7 o'clock. If unable to attend, mail abstract of report to me at General Delivery, Winston-Salem, in time.

D. M. Litaker.

AN OMISSION LAST WEEK

By some unfortunate mishap the name of Rev. C. T. Thrift failed to appear as the author of the communication headed "Too Much Moving Among Methodist Preachers—Its Cause and Cure." We hasten to make the correction and to give Brother Swift due credit for what belongs unto him. We regret the omission, it was not intended.

SHOP TALK

Please do not forget the Advocate during the closing days of the conference year.

A large number of the subscribers to the Advocate are behind with their subscriptions. We earnestly beg that every subscriber see his pastor and pay up before he leaves for conference.

Pastors, please call attention to the Advocate before you leave for conference.

CLASS FOR EXAMINATION

The class for examination for admission on trial will meet in place designated in Centenary church, Winston-Salem, on Tuesday at 2 p. m.

Robt. G. Tuttle, Chm. Com.

CLASS OF FIRST YEAR

The class of the first year will please meet the committee of examination at the place designated Tuesday, October 16, at 3 p. m.

C. M. Short, Chairman.

The Assurance of Immortality

By HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK

One of the most noticeable contrasts between this generation and those immediately preceding it, is the relative unimportance of the future life in the thought of the present age. When our forefathers were at all religious, and often they were not, they not only took for granted the fact of continued existence beyond the grave, but they regarded it as a matter of supreme concern. When in the eighteenth century Butler constructed his impressive argument for revealed religion, he used the soul's deathlessness, not as a conclusion to be established, but as a premise to be assumed. Even with radical thinkers outside the churches, faith in the future life could then be presupposed as a common point of agreement, while within the churches men's hopes and fears of immortality dominated their religious thought, and made this present life significant largely because it was preparatory to the glories or the terrors of the life to come.

Our fathers, therefore, hardly could have understood the present generation's scepticism about the truth of immortality; much less could they have comprehended that modern nonchalance which speaks and acts as though it made but little difference whether or not men live beyond the grave. A recent writer tells us that in our unwillingness to die and have that the end of us, "We have not passed far beyond the attitude of peevish children who refuse to come in at nightfall after they have played outdoors all day." This cavalier belittling of the significance of life to come is prevalent today even among religious men. They do not so much disbelieve in immortality; their scepticism lies deeper; they do not care. With some such phrase as "One world at a time," they commonly dismiss consideration of the future life, regarding immortality as indeed a possibility, but a possibility whose import is postponed until they die. To insist, therefore, that the persistence of personality beyond the grave involves tremendous issues for our present life, is today not by any means superfluous.

The reasons for this decline of emphasis upon the importance of the world to come are easily discernible. For one thing, the impact of new scientific information concerning the evolutionary origin of man and the intricate relationship between the mind and brain has shattered confidence in the certainty of life to come. The manifold causes which in our day have unsettled old religious beliefs, and have cast doubt upon or utterly discredited supposed bases of faith that had gone unquestioned for two thousand years, have made unstable the hopes of immortality. With that admirable power of adaptation, therefore, which is one of the noblest elements in human character, men, finding their confidence in a future life vanishing, have set themselves to make the best of the new situation, and have stoutly asserted that the change makes little difference. Even a Robinson Crusoe looks for compensations in his condition, when he finds himself upon a solitary island, and men, at their best, believing that this life is all they have, will resolutely make the most of that, and as an armor against the malice of their fate, will courageously affirm that they do not care, that one life is enough, and that the difference is inconsiderable after all.

In addition to this initial cause for the decline of emphasis upon the importance of immortality, is an even nobler reason. Men have gathered new hopes of racial progress in our day, and, at their best, are increasingly inclined to sink their individual prospects in their expectations for humanity. The social passion finds voice in pulpits as well as on secular platforms, and proclaims there what our fathers would not have thought of saying, that our mission is not to get men into heaven, but somehow to bring heaven to earth. What Narodny said of Russia, "I am nothing; personal success, happiness, they are nothing; exile, Siberia, the Czar's bullet, they are nothing; there is just one thing, that Russia must be free," men in a larger sense are saying of the human race. Hope of a future life, with its rewards and possibilities, has a mean look in the light of such self-forgetful passion, and as new discoveries open new hopes of progress for mankind, one hears scores of men wish that they could see America a hundred years from now, for one man who, after the old fashion, longs for heaven. What difference does it make whether another life awaits us after death, so long as here we play our part like men, and hand down the heritage of the past, so purified and furthered by our thought and sacrifice that our children will rise up and call us blessed?

Another reason for the decline of emphasis upon the importance of the life to come is not so creditable as the other two. In the present age, this life has been made vivid and interesting in an unexampled way. Old isolations have been overcome, so that the whole world is now the province of any mind that chooses to be cosmopolitan, and rapidity of communication has made possible world-wide enterprises on such a scale as no previous age has ever known. New knowledge has consumed the thoughts of men, and new avenues of wealth have engaged their ambitions, until the contemplation of eternal destiny has paled before the immediate brilliance of this present world. For men are like auditoriums; they can hold so many occupants and no more; and when the seats are filled and even the "Standing Room Only" sign has been removed, the next comer, though he be a prince, must cool his heels upon the curb. The minds of men have been pre-empted by the immediate and fascinating interests of this vigorous, exciting age. The fact is not so much that they through reasoned disbelief have discarded faith in immortality, as that through preoccupation they have lost interest in anything beyond the grave.

Even a deeper reason, in the realm of serious thought, helps to explain the modern depreciation of immortality. Eternal life is a matter of quality and not of time, men say. Justice and goodness, beauty and truth exist eternally in God and may be incarnate in our transient human lives. Let the individual die; the value of his spiritual quality, which alone is worth preserving, is perpetuated in the life of God. From God came all the worth of our characters, to him it shall return and in him it shall never die. Not in our small individualities, but in his persistent Being, "All we have willed or hoped or dreamed of good shall exist."

The only Eternal is God; of him we are but broken lights; and our flickering lives, luminous with his quality, may be eternal in this sense only, that we can mean what he means, we can incarnate in time the spiritual values that in him are absolute and timeless. Must every little candle burn forever, that so light may persist? Must each separate breeze be perpetual in order that the air may still enswathe the earth? Shall the special waves insist or perpetuity when they but represent the ocean that abides behind them, and in them and millions like them is expressed?

These are four outstanding reasons for the modern doubt, not only of the fact, but of the importance of personal immortality. There are other reasons operative in all generations—the pessimistic mood that does not want to live again, the worldling's hatred of the hopes and fears that would deprive him of comfort in self-indulgence—but these four causes, not by any means dishonorable, lead even the best of men today to wonder how much difference it makes whether belief in immortality be accepted or denied.

To be sure, one value for our present life which faith in immortality possesses is evident to all. It comforts men in the hour when bereavement comes, when human hearts discover that by as much as love is great, by so much must grief be deep. But men are not assured that they have any right to expect comfort from the universe. They do not propose to find solace in a lie. They do not want the opium of a dream to ease them of their heart's distress. If the only value for life which faith in immortality possesses is the value of comfort, folk for that very reason will mistrust their right to it, will fear lest their desire for consolation may drive them to seek it in a hope that is not true. Even though a man has cried with Tennyson:

"Ah, Christ! if it were possible

For one short hour to see

The souls we loved, that they might tell us

Where and what they be,"

he has not drawn appreciably nearer to confidence about the future, nor has he even dimly seen the deepest issues which are implied in the acceptance or denial of immortality.

Evidences of Immortality.

Whether one starts from the scientific affirmation that the universe is reasonable or from the religious faith that the universe is friendly, he comes inevitably to the conviction that death does not end all. The assurance of immortality is grounded on great foundations. The reasonableness and beneficence of creation are pledged against the annihilation of man.

No other reasons for faith in immortality compare in fundamental importance with those which have been mentioned, but there are at least two further considerations which tend greatly to confirm belief in everlasting life. That the universe is reasonable and beneficent and so will certainly preserve its moral gains, is a judgment of value, in making which the single individual, unsupported by his fellows, might well feel insecure. The main facts of Beethoven's life may be so clearly ascertained by one investigator that, whether any one agrees with him or not, he is convinced; but that Beethoven's music is beautiful would be exceedingly difficult for a single critic to maintain, if all those most competent to judge in the aesthetic realm insisted that the sonates were miserable music. If one inquires the nature of the proof demanded when we seek to demonstrate that the Sistine Madonna is glorious, or that the Prize Song in "Die Meistersinger" is superb, he sees that it depends in no small degree upon the consensus of opinion among those most competent to judge. If, therefore, a man, feeling that the reasonableness and friendliness of the cosmic order are worthy foundations for faith in a future life, should find himself alone in such an estimate, while ranged against him the seers of the race marshalled their contrary judgment, it would require an almost unattainable heroic obstinacy of opinion to insist that he is right. Who, upon the other hand, can calculate the confirming influence on our faith, if the judgment which we have reached is not withstood, but with astonishing unanimity is supported by the authority of those spiritual seers who have seen most deeply the significance of life?

This use of authority is not by any means irrational. Even science, from whose realm authority in the old sense of dictatorial dogmatism has been banished, welcomes authority in the opinions of able and disinterested experts. Few men of all the millions who believe the facts have ever measured the 92,000,000 miles to the sun, or for themselves have fathomed the secrets of the scientific theories which, taken for granted on expert authority, are used in daily business. If a man refused to make use of any knowledge save that which he personally had proved, he would live in a universe painfully meagre and desiccated. When a man believes Mr. Edison's assertions in the realm of electricity, it is generally not because he himself has demonstrated them, but because he trusts Mr. Edison's ability and honesty, finds what he himself knows of electricity not negated, but illustrated and completed by the opinions of the specialist, and is confirmed in his faith by the practical results which Mr. Edison manifestly attains on the basis of his truths. Even in science one cannot easily exaggerate the practical importance of the expert's authority.

This use of authority in science, however, is insignificant in comparison with its use in those higher ranges of man's life where judgments of worth are necessary. There, as Browning says, "One wise man's verdict outweighs all the fools!" In the establishment of some scientific theory all Asia and Africa count for nothing, and the masses of unqualified men protest and disbelieve in vain, because the specialists who really know have seen the truth and spoken it, how much more in the rating of beautiful music, painting and architecture, do men of dull eyes shrug their shoulders to no effect, and insensitive minds seek in vain to turn appreciation into cynicism! The seers are the demonstrators of the value-judgments of the world. Not in religious truth alone, but in all spiritual concerns of beauty and goodness, we ordinary men stand upon the slope and cry to those upon the summit, that with their wider vision they must interpret to us the real truth of life.

VERY IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT FROM THE CONFERENCE HOST

Please permit me to say a few words to the Methodist hosts of North Carolina on the eve of our approaching conference. We want them to know that we are ready for them in Winston-Salem. The homes have all been secured and we are preparing to take care of every delegate. The new Sunday school building has been completed and will be ready for service. The two best hotels in the state have opened wide their doors, equipped special dining rooms and prepared to furnish meals to the entire conference. We want every delegate to come to the first session and remain till the conference closes.

We request that all delegates, upon arrival in Winston-Salem, come directly to Centenary church, where they will be given their meal tickets and their assignments, and from which place they will be shown to their homes. We insist that all delegates, who have not returned their postal cards in compliance with our request, give this matter immediate attention, as this information is important to us.

The conference program, as finally arranged by the committee, is as follows:

Tuesday, October 16, 7:30 p. m.—Meeting of Conference Historical Society. Address by Dr. G. T. Rowe.

Wednesday, October 17, 9:00 a. m.—Opening of conference with sacrament of the Lord's Supper; 3:00 p. m., Anniversary of Board of Social Service and Temperance; 7:30 p. m., Anniversary of Sunday School Board.

Thursday, October 18, 3:00 p. m.—Anniversary of Epworth League Board; 7:30 p. m., Anniversary of Board of Missions.

Friday, October 19, 3:00 p. m.—Meeting of Conference Brotherhood; 7:30 p. m., Anniversary of Board of Education.

Saturday, October 20, 2:00 p. m.—Drive to Children's Home; 4:00 p. m., Concert at Salem College; 7:30 p. m., Anniversary of Church Extension Board.

Sunday, October 21, 11:00 a. m.—Sermon by Bishop Collins Denny; 7:30 p. m., sermon by Dr. E. K. McLarty. Sincerely, Z. E. Barnhardt.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF DAVENPORT COLLEGE

The board will meet Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock in the room of the Board of Education. J. F. Kirk, Secretary.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS

The Board of Missions will be glad to meet with the presiding elders on Tuesday afternoon at 3:30, October 16, 1923, in Centenary church, Winston-Salem, N. C. E. K. McLarty, Chm. Board of Missions, W. N. C. Conf.

CLASS OF THE SECOND YEAR

The class of the second year is called to meet the committee in Centenary church, Winston-Salem, at 3:30 p. m. Tuesday, October 16. C. S. Kirkpatrick, Chm.

CLASS OF THE THIRD YEAR

The class of the third year is hereby called to meet at conference in the room designated for its use Wednesday, October 17, at 2:00 p. m. Every member of the class is expected to be present. Chairman of Committee.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE, WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

The Conference Board of Church Extension will receive applications for aid, including applications to be made to the Duke Commission, between now and the time for the meeting of the annual conference. Requests for application blanks should be sent to the secretary of the board and when completed they should be returned to him.

J. H. Barnhardt, President.

Fred C. Odell, Secretary,

P. O. Box 137, Greensboro, N. C.

MEETING OF PRESIDING ELDERS

Bishop Denny requests that the presiding elders of the Western North Carolina conference meet him in Winston-Salem at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, October 16.

REV. Z. E. BARNHARDT
Pastor of Centenary Church, Winston-Salem, and Conference Host.

METHODIST PASTORS IN WINSTON-SALEM
Rev. Z. E. Barnhardt.

All who see the picture which adorns this page of the Advocate will be able next week in the annual conference crowds at Winston-Salem to pick out the conference host. His name is Z. E. Barnhardt and he is pastor of Centenary church, the seat of the conference.

Only three conferences—the North Georgia, the Virginia and the North Alabama—have a larger membership than the Western North Carolina conference. Its official membership is approximately five hundred. And in these later years with the auto and the good roads hundreds of visitors attend the annual gatherings of these Methodists of Western North Carolina.

The conference host, therefore, no matter how competent may be those allied with him in the work, has a big job on his hands. But there is no question that Z. E. Barnhardt will measure up to every demand of the occasion. Those who do not see what they want will ask the host of the conference for the smile on his face will not rub off.

Rev. R. H. Daugherty.

West End church, not yet fifteen years old, with a large and loyal membership and a church building among the best is one of the great churches of the conference. For five years Rev. R. H. Daugherty has been pastor of this intelligent and cultured congregation, and those West End Methodists claim to have the best preacher in the conference. Other congregations in distant parts of the earth make the same claims for their pastors. All of which goes to prove that when an alert and up-to-date preacher and a loyal congregation meet the relations are cordial and pleasant.

Rev. J. S. Hiatt.

Rev. J. S. Hiatt joined the Western North Carolina conference seventeen years ago and practically all of these years have been spent in and around Winston-Salem, the last five as pastor of Burkhead church. Rev. Mr. Hiatt is an itinerant Methodist preacher who does not itinerate. His father is frequently on the county ticket of Davidson and generally leads all the rest of the candidates. So for popularity that is duly merited J. S. Hiatt, like his father, leads all the rest where he is known. Some day the episcopal wheel is going to roll him to another section of the conference and the people will wonder why they had waited so long to avail themselves of his superior services. Only a man with the right sort of stuff in him can carve out such a record for himself as this man has done.

Rev. E. E. Williamson.

Vigorous in body and mind, a Bachelor of Divinity of Vanderbilt University, experienced as a pastor, Rev. E. E. Williamson is now in the second year of a very successful pastorate at Grace. He has not been in that hustling town as long as some of the other pastors but at an early date after his arrival he struck the stride of Methodism in the Twin-City.

Rev. J. A. B. Farrington.

A generation or more ago when Senator Voorhees of Indiana was a conspicuous member of that august body, he was known far and wide as "The Tall Sycamore of the Wabash." We dub J. A. B. Farrington "the tall ecclesiastical oak of the Twin-City." He is now leader, and a good one, of the Southside flock. Three years has he rendered effective service in that important field and he has larger plans for the future.

Rev. G. A. Stamper.

From the viewpoint of time Rev. G. A. Stamper is the baby among the Winston-Salem Methodist pastors. He is in his first year at Green Street. But a lusty youngster is he. All the gaits of that hustling burg are his already. He has already done big things in his charge and is now girding himself for larger tasks. Stamper fits to a nicety the metropolis of North Carolina, where "the natural gait is running away."

REV. W. A. NEWELL

Upon another page of this issue of the Advocate appears the face of Rev. W. A. Newell, the presiding elder of the Winston-Salem district. Be sure to take a look at him. He is an elder who has become the pride of Cabarrus, his native county. So much so that Col. J. P. Cook, editor of the Uplift, expects at an early date by cuts and life featured stories to give this hustling, militant Methodist preacher a lift in the Uplift.

Newell is as democratic as Andrew Jackson was, and like him would smoke a corn cob pipe in the White House if by chance he should ever be allowed to cross that threshold. He is a country presiding elder, says so himself. But he makes things happen in town as well as in the country. His leadership on the Winston-Salem district has been marked by progress in every part of that metropolitan district. Here is to W. A. Newell, the inimitable, whose speed in hastening from one end of the district to the other is the full limit of the law and then a "leettle."

THE BOARD OF TEMPERANCE AND SOCIAL SERVICE

The Board of Temperance and Social Service of the Western North Carolina Conference will hold its first anniversary in Centenary church Wednesday afternoon, October 17th.

The program will consist of devotional services, greetings from the North Carolina Board of Public Welfare and other social organizations, brief messages from our own prominent churchmen, after which Rev. Plato T. Durham, D. D., of Emory University, will address the conference on "The Social Gospel of Jesus and Its Message for Today."

We feel that this department of our church work has received new life and impetus since the splendid Social Service Conference at Lake Junaluska last July. At that conference plans were formulated and set forward which we believe will eventually make of our local church social service committees and of our annual conference boards of social service vital forces for social righteousness.

In these days when clubs, fraternities and state governments are striving in friendly rivalry and active co-operation for a better social order our great church must continue in the very forefront of active endeavor to accomplish this magnificent work of our Master. May we not only be zealous in good works but properly jealous for the leadership of those who fight for social welfare under the banner of our Lord as His pledged disciples.

We count upon the inspiration of your presence, counsel and prayers.

Mrs. W. A. Newell.

Secretary.

FIELD NEWS

REV. W. A. NEWELL

Presiding Elder of the Winston-Salem District.

SHELBY AND MARION DISTRICTS

The hope is that Bishop Denny keep
P. E. harness on both Jordan and Paris. After four years of fine triumphant work the popular P. E. has Shelby district safely over the Jordan.
And the very busy P. E. has prosperity and peace of the Methodist type in our beloved city.

This suffering and hoping superannate has a good home in each of the Marion and Shelby districts, watching our victorious Methodist army go by.
The army and the Advocate are now stronger than ever in all our history.

S. M. Davis.

SEVENTY-FIVE ADDITIONS ON SPRING HOPE CHARGE

We have just closed another splendid meeting at Bethlehem church on the Spring Hope charge, and am now in the sixth successive meeting.

We received 23 into the church at the last named place, making a total of about 75 additions during the series of meetings. We pray for at least a hundred before we close. Most of these have been young men and young women in the bloom and prime of youth, some children and many grown people. The churches have been greatly blessed and built up. God has been mightily with us.

Brother Winstead, who has been with us in all my meetings and leading the singing, has endeared himself to all my people and been of great help.

Best wishes for the Advocate and its many readers. We desire the prayers of all. W. E. Trotman.

REVIVAL AT ROXBORO

On the 27th of September we closed a most stimulating and helpful revival meeting at Edgar Long Memorial of Roxboro, N. C. This we began on the third Sunday and were assisted by Rev. J. H. Barnhardt of West
Market Street church of Greensboro.
For twelve days, twice each day, rare-

CENTENARY METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH

WINSTON-SALEM CORNER SIXTH
NORTH CAROLINA. AND LIBERTY STS.

This church with an addition recently completed at the cost of $130,000 will be the meeting place for the Western North Carolina Conference in its approaching annual sessions.

ly has our community heard a finer series of gospel sermons.

When I asked Dr. Barnhardt to do the preaching in this meeting I told him what I desired above everything else was a genuine revival in the church, and this we had. The congregation of Edgar Long Memorial is made up largely of well-to-do, refined, cultured folk who love the church and are deeply religious people—people who are fitted by nature and education to enjoy the services we had. At almost every service the congregation was deeply moved, coming forward in large numbers in response to some clear cut, intelligent proposition, seeking a deeper consecration and pledging themselves to walk more circumspectly in the old paths.

The day services were held at 8 o'clock in the morning and the house was well filled every morning. The sermons delivered at these early services seemed so divinely conceived and directed that young and old went away refreshed and fitted for the work the day before them.

We all devoutly thank God for the meeting. Eternity alone can measure the good accomplished. Especially are we grateful to our good brother for the lofty altitudes of divine fellowship into which he led us.

I. B. Hurley.

IN ERROR ON DURHAM DISTRICT

In my report of certain building operations on the Durham district no mention was made of some work that ought not to have been passed over, even though the list was long. I note some of these.

The Graham people have bought a lot and built a hut on it to enlarge their facilities, as well as take care of the debt on their parsonage.

Haw River will have six or eight classrooms and practically a new church at a cost of five or six thousand dollars. This work will soon be completed.

Front Street, Burlington, has bought a lot to greatly enlarge and increase the value of their church lot.

New Salem on the Burlington circuit has been worked over within.

Eno has added two rooms and painted the church.

Clover Garden, South Alamance circuit, has made their church new within.

West Durham is raising a fund for a Sunday school building; and debt-paying and minor improvements have gone on at other places. But the list is too long to specify. M. T. Plyler.

LIBERTY CHARGE

Liberty charge is on the "upgrade along every line. The Sunday schools will be able to report nearly fifty per cent gain in enrollment for the year.
A general awakening can be seen in the Sunday school work.

So far 51 names have been added to the rolls of the churches, 37 of that number on profession of faith.

An Epworth League was organized at Staley early in the year and it has done a splendid work. Our league at Liberty is doing a great work.

We have a clean sheet to carry to Winston-Salem. A. L. Lucas, P. C.

TO THE BRETHREN OF THE WES- TERN N. C. CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren:

It hardly seems possible that nearly a year has passed since I left our conference in session at Monroe, N.
C., to come to the conference of the Western Mexican Mission at Phoenix, Arizona. At the close of that conference I was appointed evangelist for this mission, and given the East El Paso Mexican church to look after when not out in evangelistic work. As you will soon be listening again to the annual report of the preachers, I thought you might not mind a word from your member in this western field.

During this conference year I have held meetings at the following places:
East El Paso, November 2 to 12,
1922; February 19 to 28 in Miami,
Arizona; March 2 to 14 in Los Angeles, Cal; March 16 to April 1, "El Mes-sias" church, El Paso, Texas; April 7 to 16 at Marfa, Texas; April 24 to May 1 in Sonora, Arizona; May 2 to 6 in Hayden, Arizona; May 7 to 14 in Tempe, Arizona; June 9 to 17 in Magdalena, Mexico; June 18 to 20 in Pitipuito, Mexico; June 22 to July 1 in Nogales, Arizona; July 9 to 18 in Juarez, Mexico; July 22 to August 2 in East El Paso, Texas; August 6 to July 13 in Tucumcari, New Mexico.

As a result of these meetings 299 Mexican people have professed to accept Jesus Christ as their personal, present and only saviour from sin.

I have tried to preach 234 times, besides making a number of missionary talks and leading cottage meetings, etc. This with pastoral visiting, a very necessary part of this work, has kept me quite busy.

About the last of July, due to the fact that our preacher at "El Mesias" church returned to Mexico, I was appointed pastor of that church until conference, and promised a helper for East El Paso, which promise materialized about the first of September in the form of a student in our Lydia Patterson Institute, and a very fine young fellow. Since the opening of the institute I have been trying to help out there by teaching one Bible class a day. This extra work has about put an end to the evangelistic work for the present. I am, however, leaving Thursday night of this week for a meeting in Cananea, Mexico, and expect on my return to begin one in our schools here and in "El Mesias" church, which serves the two schools.

The need for consecrated workers in this mission is very great. If I were three men I could keep busy all the time in the work that has been given to me this year. I can only do my best and leave the rest for some one else to do, and in this connection
I wish to say that they have been unstinted in their help. But the task is great and I hope you will join us in asking the Lord of the harvest to thrust forth laborers into this needy field. There are many more places that we could occupy if we only had the workers. Then, too, it is a great pity not to have an evangelist constantly in the field.

I thank every one who has prayed for me this year, and has thus had a part in what little I have been enabled to accomplish, but brethren, please let the good work go on. Our greatest need is a sweeping revival of old-time religion throughout this mission.
Please by earnest prayer help us to bring it about.

We are deeply grateful to God for all that has been accomplished in this field, but the immensity of the task yet before us causes what has already been accomplished to seem very small at times. And as the conference year rolls into the irrevocable past one can but think with the greatest solemnity of "what might have been," and utter a prayer to God that we may, by the indwelling of His Holy Spirit, be better fitted to "redeem the time" in the future.

May God bless the Western North

TO REMODEL AT GIBSON

Word comes from Gibson that plans are being worked out to remodel the church and build more Sunday school rooms. Our Gibson people are thoroughly interested in their Sunday school, and the announcement concerning this building project comes to us not at all as a surprise.

THE VOICE OF THE MOUNTAINS

By Rebecca B. Lines.

High, high, in the beautiful mountains,
 Away from the heat and the dine,
 From the rush of the crowded city,
 From the haunts that lure men to sin,

There comes to our souls a message
 In accents so sweet and strong,
 From the towering peaks in graduer,
 Through faith it is borne along.

The heights and the depths re-echo
 This marvelous message to men;
 The valleys so quiet and peaceful
 Quite modestly tell it again.

Be strong, and be true to the highest,
 The noblest that within you lies;
 Have faith in the heavenly Father,
 Who fashioned the earth and the skies.

AN URGENT APPEAL

The South Rocky Mount Methodist church is weak but worthy. In trying to build a much needed church and Sunday school rooms they were caught in the financial slump of a few years ago. Then last year the railroad strike came and just about put us out of business. Ours is a railroad people; they lost out in the strike and are scattered and gone.

The building we have—50x50, two stories in brick—is finished on the outside. But not a thing finished on the inside. We have spent about $11,000 to get what we have. This shows what a poor, working congregation has done.

But funds are completely exhausted and we must have help or give up the fight. Therefore we are asking five thousand people to give us one dollar each, and do it soon, so we can get ready for the winter.

This appeal is made reluctantly but of absolute necessity. It has the approval of our conference church extension board and eighty of the leading business men of Rocky Mount.

Send donations to E. C. Glenn, Treas., Rocky Mount, N. C. Thank you so much.

E. C. Glenn, Pastor.

G. F. Snell, Chm. Brd. Stewards.

R. M. Saunders, Sec. Treas.

Because the needs are so urgent, the opportunity so great, the laborers so few and their resources so limited, South Rocky Mount presents a most unusual appeal and should enlist the sympathy of every one who loves the cause of Christ.

S. A. Cotton,

P. E. Washington District.

My knowledge of South Rocky Mount Methodist church leads me to say that it is a case of unusual merit and worthy of your sympathy and financial support.

T. T. Thorn, Mayor.

I know of no community which offers a larger opportunity to a well equipped church than South Rocky Mount. I know of no people whose loyal effort to help themselves gives them greater right to the sympathy and help of others than the South Rocky Mount Methodist church.

N. H. D. Wilson,

P. E. Washington District, 1918-21.

BIG DAY AT EAST SPENCER

Sunday, October 7th, was a big day for the Sunday schools of East Spencer. All the Sunday schools met at the Methodist Tabernacle for a union rally or institute.

The following parties delivered addresses: At 11 a. m., Rev. W. E. Holcomb, pastor of East Spencer Baptist church. His topic was Promotion. Miss Beulah Lyerly of Granite Quarry followed Rev. Mr. Holcomb with an inspiring address on Teacher Training.

At 12:30 a table 90 feet long was loaded down with the very best of eatables. Everybody was well filled and several baskets were filled with fragments.

In the afternoon Rev. John F. Kirk of First church, Salisbury, favored us with a very fine address on "The Influence of the Sunday School in the Community." Miss Ruth of First Baptist church, Salisbury, made an excellent address on "Graded Literature." Mr. Will Cooper, superintendent of the Spencer Terminal, Southern Railway, made the concluding address on "Doing Things."

At the close of these exercises the large crowd went to the Long Street church, East Spencer, (which is now under course of construction) and attended the laying of the cornerstone. Rev. John F. Kirk led the prayer, R. C. Kirk, the pastor, read the Scripture selections as given in the Discipline. This was followed with an address by Rev. John F. Kirk. The folks all went home feeling that they had been well paid for the day's work.

R. C. Kirk, P. C.

GOLD HILL CIRCUIT

The pastor of Gold Hill circuit and his family enjoyed the most wonderful pounding ever experienced recently. The good people of the circuit supplied them with a pantry full of all kinds of good eats. It was an expression that cannot be misunderstood and it came as such a surprise just previous to conference.

Rev. W. J. Bryson has been with the pastor for several weeks in revival meetings. The meetings have been a great success and many have been added to the church. We are now in a meeting in Gold Hill and are having a great time. Have had many conversions and a wonderfully good meeting thus far, and we still hope for great things before the meeting closes.

D. P. Grant, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT TO DORMAN THOMPSON

(By Trustees of Davenport College.)

The past decade has been a period of transition for Davenport College. At the beginning of this period the college was seriously embarrassed by debt, was without resources, except the income from students' fees and a limited appropriation from the educational funds raised by assessments on the conference. Within this period it passed from a condition of insecurity to one in which the income of the college, from endowment and all other sources, is greater per student enrolled than in any except the very strongest colleges of the South.

It was during this period that Dorman Thompson was president of the board of trustees of the college. For more than ten years he gave unstintingly of his time and talent to the service of the college. When the legacy of the late J. B. Cornelius was turned over to the college the board of trustees made Dorman Thompson its trustee to convert the estate into cash, and to handle for it the income of the endowment. This trust imposed a great responsibility and required a great deal of work and much time. To say that he was faithful to the trust does not do full justice to the wonderful service that he rendered to the college in this important juncture in its history. Through a period of years he set himself patiently to the task of so administering these equities that they might yield the largest possible endowment to the college. He had nearly completed this task when death called him. The result is that the present estimated value of the endowment, the greater part of which has been converted into cash, is more than twice the value set upon the properties when turned over to the board.

For this magnificent result much credit is due to the wise handling of these assets by Dorman Thompson. Members of the board have frequently given due credit for these achievements in the regular meetings of the board to its faithful chairman and trustees, and certain formal resolutions of appreciation are already a matter of record in the minutes of the board. But it was deemed but proper that at this time, when the minds of all friends of the college have been turned to these achievements by the death of our beloved chairman, that suitable acknowledgement should be made of his services by formal resolution. The following resolutions are ordered by the board:

First, That in the death of its chairman, the board of trustees of Davenport College feels that it has suffered irreparable loss, that the college has lost a valiant champion and an enduring friend, that the Western North Carolina conference has been bereft of one of its most loyal and faithful servants.

Second, That a page be set apart in our minutes to his memory, that a copy of the resolutions be sent to the president of the college to be read to the student of the college, that a copy be furnished to the family, and that a copy be furnished to the North Carolina Advocate for publication.

 Committee.

Andy Gump's View of Women.

Nowadays you can't tell a thing about women—see them from the back—bobbed hair and short skirts—and you think they're on their way to school—then they turn around and they look like they're on the way to the old people's home.—Sidney Smith.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

REVIVAL AT ZION, GATES CHARGE

On Friday, August 24, our pastor, Rev. E. K. Clegg, began his revival at Zion with Rev. J. O. Long of the North Gates charge doing the preaching. The services continued through the following week and closed on Friday night, August 31. There were only three additions to the church, but we feel that the church was greatly revived and that the splendid messages that Brother Long brought to us will long ring in the hearts and lives of our people. He worked hard during the meetings, helping with the singing as well as doing all the preaching. People came from far and near to these services. Many times the church could not seat the crowds. The people of Zion community wish to express their heartfelt thanks to Brother Long for his untiring efforts while among us. A Member.

REVEREND SMITH

By the Rev. C. M. Wilson.

There is a certain title
 Goes in and out with me;
 Some people always greet me:
 "Howdy, Reverend Smith."

As just a common "Mister"
 I'd acknowledge kin and kith;
 But I'd like to hit the man that says:
 "This is Reverend Smith."

If four things are distasteful,
 I'll offer you the fifth:
 Just fancy some one told you
 Your name was Reverend Smith.

I don't object to "Doctor,"
 (Though my degree may be a myth),
 But God forgive the thoughts I think
 When hailed as "Reverend Smith."

Do You Want A Good Piano?

If you have hesitated to provide a good piano, or player-piano, for your home, church or school, the Advocate Piano Club plan, which makes piano buying economical, safe and convenient, will enable you to own a high-grade, fully guaranteed instrument, at a big saving in price and in such a way that you will never miss the money you put into it.

By placing your order through the Club, with the orders of ninety-nine other members, you obtain the very lowest price at which a thoroughly satisfactory instrument can be marketed. You have a wide variety of the newest and most attractive styles from which to make your selection. Your instrument is guaranteed by one of the oldest and most reliable piano houses in America. The plan of payment is so easy and fair that every one who has looked into it is surprised at its liberality and delighted with its practical operation.

As a member of the Club you are offered a piano-buying opportunity which cannot be equaled. How is it done? The answer is simple. The Club has one hundred members and by purchasing in lots of one hundred instruments, we have a tremendous buying power, which the factory recognizes by giving us the benefit of the very lowest factory prices.

You are cordially invited to join the Advocate Piano Club. Write for copy of the Club's catalogue, showing the many beautiful designs from which you may choose, and which also gives particulars as to prices, terms, guarantees and their special insurance feature which fully protects the family in case of the death of the purchaser. MY PRAYER
Wm. M. A., Jr.

That God will open every day
With consciousness of Him;
And through its hours permit not one
To see my love grow dim;
To save from sin,
Speak peace within,
To free from tempter's snare—
This is my prayer.

That every day may, at its close,
A fuller spirit find;
A heart more yielding unto Him,
Deep in His love entwined;
A life of love,
Turned from above,
To give, to serve, to share—
This is my prayer.

—The Christian Observer.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER, NOVEMBER 4-10

The Program.

Many of the auxiliaries have found one all-day meeting the most practical way to observe the Week of Prayer. In view of this the literature committee of the Woman's Missionary Council has prepared one program. The plan of this program includes a morning session of adults and a joint afternoon session of adults, young people, and juniors. Leaflets containing splendid features for each have been provided. Auxiliaries desiring to meet three days will find ample material, which may be distributed to suit their needs.

The Week of Prayer Calendar.

No auxiliary should fail to understand that the real object of this week is prayer and intercession. With this object in mind, a prayer calendar has been prepared. This calendar is intended to guide the seasons of prayer in the auxiliary meeting and is also for the use of individuals for private intercession during the entire week.

A Committee.

Each auxiliary should appoint a special committee two or three weeks in advance. This committee should include representatives from the adult auxiliary, the superintendents of young people and juniors, and possibly a second representative for the young people's society. It should be the duty of this committee to make careful plans for the observance of the week; they should plan the program or programs and should seek to promote the spirit of prayer throughout the entire week. Every auxiliary should be enlisted in some way, also as many women who are not members as it is possible to reach. Many who cannot attend the meetings may be interested in observing this special season in their own homes. For the use of these extra copies of the "Prayer Calendar" and special envelopes for the Week of Prayer offering may be secured by ordering from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

The Objects.

While our intercession during this week should include within its scope the whole cause of missions, yet our special prayers and our special gifts are to be devoted to two specific objects: the Bethlehem Center at Nashville, Tenn., and the Laura Haygood Demonstration School at Soochow, China. Each of these institutions is far-reaching in its influence, for they are helping to train a leadership for the two races which they serve. The needs of each of these institutions is great. Pray that our gifts may be large and sacrificial.—Council Bulletin.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Adult auxiliaries in which organized mission study classes have used one of the home mission textbooks on child welfare recommended for this year, "The Debt Eternal" or "The Child and America's Future," and that have had full presentation of the social service program and committee reports, as called for in the adult "Yearbook," will be entitled to five credits on the Standard of Excellence in addition to those already offered separately for mission study and social service.

SAVE AMERICA

The National Committee of One Hundred for Law Enforcement (women) has issued an attractive and valuable book of 128 pages, in which is included an astonishing amount of verified material pertaining to the present breaking down of law, especially along the line of prohibition. Elizabeth Tilton, legislative chairman of the Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Association, is the editor. Perhaps no woman in America is better qualified to prepare such a book. She is well known through her articles in the Survey and her national service in charities and corrections.

In addition to the department on Law Enforcement and Ammunition, Mrs. Tilton has secured articles by the following writers: Kathleen Norris; Ida Tarbell; Honorable Mabel Willebrandt; Mary Anderson, of the Woman's Bureau of Labor; Lady Astor; Prof. Henry Farnam, of Yale; Mrs. Pennybacker; Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart; and we must not omit the most valuable articles of all by Mrs. Tilton herself on the Battle for Race Survival, America's Natural Faults, Depths and Shallows, and Personal Liberty.

Part IV of "Save America" presents methods for using the book and gives a series of programs including debates and a pageant which may be used in any church, club, educational, or patriotic group.

We urge women this year to concentrate upon this effort and distribute copies of this book, securing its study everywhere in meetings and lecture courses throughout the country. Price, 25 cents per copy, including postage. The book may be secured from the temporary headquarters of the Committee, 302 Ford Building, Boston, Mass.—Council Bulletin.

North Carolina Conference

COUNCIL MINUTES

A limited number of Council Minutes can be secured for twenty-five cents each. Order at once from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

INTIMATE GLIMPSES

A little book under the caption "Intimate Glimpses" has just come from the press. It contains a short personality sketch of Miss Belle H. Bennett by Miss Emily Olmstead. For those who knew Miss Bennett personally, this little book breathes, through its pages the very aroma of her charming personality. As one reads, she seems once more to move among us, guiding again in the affairs of the kingdom, and shedding about her a radiant love which ever urged us on to higher achievements.

Therefore, it is hoped that those who did not have the privilege of being co-workers with her may come to appreciate her great personality through these love inspired words. It is not in any sense a biography, and is not intended to take the place of the biography which is to appear later. It is intended rather to give to many of our missionary women a real and sympathetic glimpse into the life of the woman who has been the master architect of the great work we all love.

Every member of the missionary societies throughout Southern Methodism should possess a copy of "Intimate Glimpses."

Order from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.

CALL ALL HANDS!

In the handling of ships at sea occasions frequently arise when the services of every man on board are demanded. The captain comes on deck in a hurry, sizes up the condition of things at a glance, and gives the sharp order, "Call all hands!" Then, no matter what hour of the night it may be, all hands tumble out. In the old days of square-riggers it was often a squall that struck the ship, turning into a hurricane, when part of the crew sprang aloft to furl what was left of the sails, and part manned the pumps.

We are thinking that with the coming of the autumn opportunities for religious work there is reason to sound the exhortation, "Call all hands!" It is time for every church member to report for duty. Nobody can be spared from church activities. This seems to hold with more than ordinary force of certain weaker or poorer churches. When "all hands" consists of two or three men on a Cape Cod "cat," or of just a few more on some coasting schooner, there is extraordinary need that each individual should be "able-bodied," and present for duty. Some ships are short-handed, ill provided, and not so well navigated. So there are many churches with scant muster-rolls, poor material equipment, and needing better religious leadership. Yet, as the great sea stretches off on every side of even ill-found ships, so the area of spiritual opportunity surrounds even small or weak congregations—since that field is all the world.

Then, too, there are special seasons, in local or national history, calling for more than ordinary efforts to achieve moral results. At sea all hands are called, not in a dead calm, but when emergencies arise, either of danger, or of special opportunity to make sail and reel off the leagues. Perhaps this fall is such a season of peril and possibility for the churches of Christ in America. It is a time when no Christian patriot can go to sleep, decline service, or put his share of responsibility off on his fellow church members. Everybody must be on duty, though that does not mean the same duty. To every man his station, work, and responsibility are appointed. There is no telling what may happen if, at some crucial point of service, a particular "hand" fails to do his part. Then more than a spar or a staysail may be lost, for perhaps the whole craft may founder. What if the ship's carpenter fails to report a leak, the helmsman puts the wheel over the wrong way, or nobody has command of the deck? Similar conditions have occurred on shore, where, through the dereliction in duty of particular agents, dire loss has come to precious interests, social or religious.

Soon the tide of travel will be turning back from the seashore and mountains to the home communities. Then church work ought again to be taken up with redoubled enthusiasm, vigor, and co-operative planning. What is my part in the autumn campaign for the cause of Christ? Let us each think this over, get our "station" assigned, and be prompt to respond when the call comes for "all hands" to work the gospel ship safely and expeditiously on her heavenward course! —Zion's Herald.

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Springs,
Box 4B, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

THE BURDEN BEARER

I lift the ever-present burden of widowhood orphanage, disability, sickness and advanced age of the itinerancy and of the laity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by providing "a home of their own," or its equivalent, to comfort and support them during all the years of life thereafter.

"Safety first" is my guiding star in all business matters and "brother love" in all manner of service. My premium rates are adequate to give insurance at cost (30 per cent lower than commercial companies require.) Expense of management is reduced to the minimum, being the lowest amount permissible while insuring efficiency. Personal profit, investment methods, and employed paid agents are not allowed. This is saved for the Certificate holders.

Benefit certificates are issued for insurance protection in amounts of $3,000 or less per application on following attractive plans: Whole life; twenty-premium life; endowment at age sixty and seventy; term to age fifty, sixty, and seventy; annuity, and combination of plans.

The itinerant preachers of the past has had no chance. Shall they of the future fare no better?

By their own institution, ingenuity, thrift, and divine Providence they are solving their financial problems. The sting of superannuation is removed.

Western North Carolina Conference

OUR ANNIVERSARY

Another year has rolled around and another annual conference is almost here. As is the custom the first evening after the convening of conference will be used as the "Sunday School Anniversary," at which time a brief review of the year's work will be made by the conference Sunday school workers and plans outlined for the ensuing year's work. Rev. W. A. Lambeth, chairman of the Sunday School Board and presiding officer of the evening, has arranged for special music and announces that the principal address of the evening will be delivered by Dr. J. W. Shackford, general Sunday school executive in the Southern Methodist church. Another very important feature of the evening will be the presenting of special certificates of awards to seventy of our leading ministers for having taken one or more units of credit in the Sunday school training course during the year. Bishop Denny has kindly consented to present these certificates. He will be the first bishop to attend a Sunday School Anniversary in our conference in many years. Plan to attend the Sunday School Anniversary. It will pay you to do so.

LENOIR-DAVENPORT

The Lenoir-Davenport Standard Training School now in session at Davenport College is one of the best I have ever seen. A greater percentage of the enrollment is doing the work of the school than in any school yet held in our bounds. Out of a bona fide enrollment of 140 there will be around 110 credit students. Splendid delegations are coming to the school from Morganton, sixteen miles away; Granite Falls, twelve miles away; Hudson, seven miles away; and Littlejohns, six miles away. Of course the Lenoir people are liberally supporting the school. Quite a number of the Davenport College students are also enrolled in the school and of course are doing good work. The Lenoir people have been lovely to the faculty. A sincere spirit of co-operation and mutual helpfulness seems to pervade the whole atmosphere.

The following courses and instructors are being offered in our school:

The Sunday School—Mr. O. V. Woosley.

Principles of Religious Training—Prof. C. T. Carr.

The Church at Work—Rev. C. S. Kirkpatrick.

Intermediate-Senior Agencies—Mrs. J. F. Spruill.

Junior Organization and Administration—Miss Virginia Jenkins.

Primary Organization and Administration—Miss Georgia Keene.

LITTLEJOHNS

Littlejohns is a country church on the North Lenoir circuit. It is the home church of the Tuttle, the Courtneys and the Clays, each family being represented by one or more ministers in our conference. This country church has sent every one of its officers and teachers to the Lenoir school every night this week. The Littlejohns school is qualified to be ranked as a standard school, the first one thus qualified in the Western North Carolina conference.

GOING TO SCHOOL

Eighty certificates of credit were earned this year by our Western North Carolina conference leaders in the Trinity College and Lake Junaluska Leadership Training Schools, thirty by the ministry and fifty by the laity. Those earning one credit each at Trinity College are: Revs. H. G. Allen, E. D. Ballard, J. W. Bennett, John Cline, G. R. Jordan, E. Myers, W. E. Poovey, W. L. Scott, R. A. Smith, J. C. Umberger, O. P. Ader, J. E. Woosley, M. B. Woosley, W. T. Albright, W. F. Elliott, J. W. Ingle, F. T. Stough and Mrs. R. O. Eller.

The following earned two credits at Lake Junaluska: Revs. G. T. Bond, L. B. Hayes, J. F. Kirk, E. J. Harbison, O. J. Jones, C. M. Pickens, W. A. Jenkins and Miss Grace Anthony, Miss May Devlin, Joe A. Elliott, Jr., Mrs. E. J. Harbison, Mrs. Theo. McCracken, Mrs. B. N. Mann, Miss Sara Murray, Mrs. R. M. Stafford, Mr. and Mrs. O. V. Woosley, Miss Louise Avett, Clarence Burns, Mrs. P. W. Flagge, George C. Osborne, Miss Lucy Pell, Mrs. J. F. Spruill, Mrs. C. S. Stone, Mrs. J. C. Watson.

Rev. W. A. Jenkins has during the year received his Blue Seal Diploma and Mrs. B. N. Mann her Gold Seal Diploma.

DORMAN THOMPSON

Inasmuch as our all-wise and loving heavenly Father has seen fit to remove from time to eternity our friend and co-worker, Dorman Thompson, a faithful and true friend to his state, to his church and to its interests;

Therefore, be it resolved by the Lenoir-Davenport Standard Training School for Sunday School Workers now in session at Davenport College:

That in humble submission we bow to the will of God the Father, who now takes to a wider field and a more glorious life the friend whom we love and who served with marked fidelity every interest that tended to uplift mankind and make the world brighter.

That our church and its agencies have lost an untiring worker, a wise counselor and a devoted servant, who was unselfish in his aims, lofty in his purposes and always safe in his leadership, as he himself followed the all-wise Leader. We have for a time lost the companionship of a genuine man whose helpful influence will abide through the years.

That this simple expression of our love and appreciation be sent to his bereaved ones and to the North Carolina Christian Advocate and be placed upon our records.

J. E. Shell,
C. L. Hornaday,
P. W. Tucker.

REACHING FOLKS

I wrote Rev. A. C. Kennedy, pastor of the Catawba circuit, to know if his charge could reach a given number of new Sunday school scholars this year. Read what he says in reply:

"Catawba charge is willing to undertake most anything within reason asked of them, but we found you made the mistake of your life when you only asked for 140 increased Sunday school enrollment on this charge. We went to work with this goal in view and when we checked up we found that we had gone beyond that number by 120. We have enrolled 260 new scholars in the Sunday schools of the Catawba charge this year. You may say what you please about it for it is done, it can't be helped. Of course we are glad of it."

The Catawba circuit, with Supt. Alva Martin at its head, holds regularly a fifth Sunday circuit Sunday school institute and through this clearing house gets right in after its aims. Sunday school work is really an important business on the Catawba charge. Everybody is doing it over there. They are not only reaching the people, but they are teaching the people. Through this work the spiritual state of the church is being toned up all the while.

HONOR ROLL

As has been previously stated in these columns a complete and correct Sunday School Day Honor Roll, made out according to presiding elder's districts will be placed on exhibit during the sessions of the approaching annual conference. This honor roll will give the name and the amount of each Sunday school making a contribution to our conference Sunday school work. One-fourth of the money raised in each district will be set apart for use in that district. You will be interested in seeing your school's name on this honor roll. It means a great deal to our cause and to your school to be thus placed.

North Carolina Conference

SIXTY PER CENT GET CREDIT

When fifty per cent of the enrollment of a standard training school earn certificates of credit on the standard training course, the school is considered as having made a good record. In our Rocky Mount Standard Training School, held in the First Methodist church, September 23-28, sixty per cent of those actually enrolled did all the required reading and writing, attended regularly, and received, at the close of the school, the certificates. Twelve Sunday schools, seven Methodists and five Presbyterian, were represented in the enrollment, which numbered 104, not counting a considerable number who came only as visitors, attending one or two class periods. Counted as enrolled were only those who were present at least two of the six evenings of class work.

There were 64 who earned the certificates, 51 Methodists and 13 Presbyterians. The Methodist certificates were divided among the churches as follows: Nashville 18, First, Rocky Mount 16, Sharon 6, Clark Street 5, Tarboro 2, First, Wilson 1, Marvin 1, Griffin's 1, and North Rocky Mount circuit 1. Following are the names of those who earned certificates, by classes:

Beginner Organization and Administration, Mrs. M. J. McArdle, instructor—Mrs. J. B. Boddie, Jr., Mrs. Colena Brothers, Mrs. C. C. Cockrell, Mrs. A. R. Corinth, and Mrs. Haywood Strickland.

Primary Lesson Materials and Teaching, Miss Georgia Keene, instructor—Mrs. T. B. Dameron, Mrs. J. W. Denson, Mrs. G. D. Lambeth, Mrs. J. C. Lindsey, Mrs. J. W. Martin, Mrs. J. N. Sills, Mrs. A. S. Vick.

Junior Lesson Materials and Teaching, Miss Virginia Jenkins, instructor—Mrs. J. W. Arnold, Miss Sallie Benson, Mrs. E. A. Burton, Miss Sadie Jenkins, Mrs. H. L. Denson, Mrs. R. C. Carlton, Mrs. E. C. Few, L. F. Lane, Mrs. J. M. Ricks, Mrs. Wilson Ricks, Miss Ethel Smith, and Miss Tempe D. Williams.

Sunday School Organization and Administration, O. V. Woosley, instructor—Mrs. J. W. Aycock, J. K. Bridgers, Miss Mae Beck, Rev. H. M. North, Mrs. J. T. Smith, Rev. N. B. Strickland.

The Pupil, Rev. F. S. Love, instructor—H. B. Simpson, Rev. E. C. Few, Paul C. Moore, Miss Ruby Vase, Rev. B. B. Slaughter, T. B. Dameron, Roy Denson, and Raymond Moore.

Principles of Religious Teaching, Claude T. Carr, instructor—Miss Mabel Bovsworth, George T. Burnette, Earle D. Spruill, Mrs. Earle D. Spruill, Miss Myrtle Vick, Mrs. L. N. Stephenson, Mrs. P. P. Baker, Mrs. J. R. Fowlkes, Mrs. L. C. Green, J. Shepard Bryan, Mrs. N. B. Dozier, Miss Louise Sills, and Mrs. Jake W. Batchelor.

PASTORS-SUPERINTENDENTS

Pastors and superintendents worked in the training school at Rocky Mount, and seven of them earned the certificates of credit. Below we list the names of these good leaders who are studying to keep abreast of things:

Rev. H. M. North.
Rev. E. C. Few.
Rev. B. B. Slaughter.
Rev. N. B. Strickland.
T. B. Dameron.
L. F. Lane.
Paul C. Moore.

NASHVILLE LEADS THE WAY

Nashville Sunday school workers, headed by Rev. E. C. Few, pastor, and T. B. Dameron, superintendent, had eighteen workers to take credit in the Rocky Mount training school, thus winning the distinction of leading all other schools in the number of certificates earned. Take a look at this band of Nashvillians:

Rev. E. C. Few.
T. B. Dameron.
Mrs. N. B. Dozier.
Miss Louise Sills.
Mrs. Jake W. Batchelor.
J. K. Bridgers.
Mrs. J. B. Boddie, Jr.
Mrs. C. C. Cockrell.
Mrs. Haywood Strickland.
Mrs. T. B. Dameron.
Mrs. J. C. Lindsey.
Mrs. J. N. Sills.
Mrs. A. S. Vick.
Mrs. E. A. Burton.
Miss Sallie Benson.
Mrs. R. C. Calton.
Mrs. E. C. Few.
Miss Sadie Jenkins.

CERTIFICATES AT JUNALUSKA

Thirty-nine certificates were issued to Sunday school workers of the North Carolina conference by the Junaluska Leadership School this summer. Those earning these certificates were Miss Elizabeth Aldridge, Miss Georgia Keene, Mrs. H. E. Spence, and L. L. Gobbel, Durham; Miss Eunice Blair, Miss Vara Herring, Mrs. W. W. Peele, and Mrs. J. B. Mann, Raleigh; Mrs. C. N. Bruton, Miss Helen Bruton, Miss Sara Bruton, and Miss Arlene Safritt, Mt. Gilead; Miss Stella Etheridge, Selma; D. J. H. Judd, Mrs. T. H. Sutton, and Fred W. Cunningham, Fayetteville; Miss Floy Martin, Aberdeen; Mrs. John A. Robertson, Burlington; Miss Bettie Lee Sanders and Mrs. J. D. Spiers, Smithfield; Mrs. Jesse Fussell, Rose Hill; Miss Emma Harris, Rosemary; Miss Edna Wilkins and Miss Rosa Belle Kirkman, Wilmington; and B. M. Potter, New Bern.

FOUR DIPLOMAS ISSUED

Four diplomas, two incomplete and two blue seal, were issued to workers in the North Carolina conference in August. Earning the incomplete diplomas were Prof. I. B. McKay and Miss Bertha Mae Poe; the blue seal, Rev. H. M. Wellman and L. J. Rainey. It is a distinction worthy of mention to earn one of these diplomas, for back of every one issued lies a lot of good, conscientious hard work and faithful study. To be entitled to an incomplete diploma one has to have four certificates, and to be entitled to a blue seal diploma, eight certificates.

FAYETTEVILLE THIS WEEK

This week we are holding the second annual Standard Training School at Fayetteville for the Sunday school workers of the eastern half of the Fayetteville district. The school is being held in Hay Street church, and five courses are being offered.

AT JONESBORO NEXT WEEK

Next week, October 14-19, we will be at Jonesboro in a standard training school for the western half of the Fayetteville district. Rev. B. E. Stanfield, chairman of the board of managers, says everything is in readiness for a great school.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

Lee Davis, Raleigh, N. C.
Rev. J. F. Armstrong, Concord, N. C.

Western North Carolina Conference

ATTENTION, DISTRICT SECRETARIES

Our annual church conference will be held in Winston-Salem the week of October 16. The Epworth League will hold an Anniversary Day program on Thursday afternoon, October 18. The president of the Epworth League Board of our church has asked me to make a report on the work in our conference. I want you to send me the following facts by October 15:

1. Number of senior chapters in your district.
2. Total membership.
3. Number of junior chapters in your district.
4. Total membership.
5. Number of intermediate chapters in your district.
6. Total membership.
7. Number of chapters organized since the annual conference at Charlotte.

W. W. Edwards,

President.

NORTH WILKESBORO DISTRICT INSTITUTE

The first district institute for North Wilkesboro district convened at Jefferson Friday night, September 21. Entertainment for the hour was in the hands of the Jefferson leaguers. At the close of the "Pollyanna" social delicious refreshments were served.

The first session Saturday morning was opened with devotional exercises led by Mr. Lee Barnett, student of Jefferson school.

Miss Ernestine Webster was appointed secretary and the roll call showed the following chapters represented: Boone, four delegates; Jefferson, ten; Wilkesboro, seven; North Wilkesboro, seven. (Helton later appeared with seven, and another came from Wilkesboro). Total 36.

The following program was used: Devotional meeting, Mr. J. T. Ruland, North Wilkesboro.

Social Service, Ruth Colvard, North Wilkesboro.

Missions in the League, Prof. Roy C. Sampley, North Wilkesboro.

Tar Heel Leaguer, District secretary.

Dinner.

The afternoon session was opened by Mrs. J. T. Ruland in charge of the devotional exercise.

Miss Ernestine Webster spoke on junior and intermediate work in the district.

Mrs. W. S. Wellborn spoke on the work of the third department. When Mrs. Wellhorn had finished her talk she asked the delegates from each chapter to assemble together. She then gave each group a sheet of paper and asked one in each group to write the questions she asked: What is a pessimist? An optimist? How old is the Epworth League? How old is the Methodist church? Tell the funniest joke you know. The answers to these questions produced quite a bit of merriment.

After this Prof. E. M. Jones spoke on "Advantages of a Rural League."

As the pastor, Rev. J. L. Reynolds, was in a revival meeting elsewhere, and there was to be no church service on Sunday morning, we arranged an impromptu debate for Saturday night and saved the address by Mr. Worth for Sunday morning. Mr. Worth spoke on the "Epworth League," giving as the main thought, "Shaking Up or Rattling Down." He used as an illustration a jar of pebbles. The large ones would shake to the top and the small ones would rattle down.

The committee on resolutions gave the following report:

In behalf of the delegates of this, the first Epworth League Institute of the North Wilkesboro district, we, the committee, wish to express our deep appreciation for your kind hospitality; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we extend our thanks to Miss Colvard for the helpful and inspiring program she arranged for our benefit and pleasure.

Second, That we express our thanks to the Jefferson League for their delightful entertainment and cordial welcome to the church and town.

Third, That we express our appreciation to the people of the town for their hearty welcome.

Fourth, That we most sincerely thank the people of the town who have so graciously and cordially received us into their homes and who have made our stay so pleasant.

Mrs. Ray C. Sampley,
Mrs. W. S. Wellborn,
Frank Winkler.

We were very much disappointed in not having any of our conference officers with us. We were especially sorry that Miss Bradley was sick and could not come. Mr. Plyler sent a telegram at the last minute that it would be impossible for him to come. The joke of the institute was that the district secretary said she was reminded of the story in the Bible of the man who had prepared a feast and invited the guests, and they all gave some excuse and he went out in the highways and hedges to find those who would come.

However, we feel that we had a real good institute.

Ruth Colvard, Chm.
Ernestine Webster, Sec.

SALISBURY DISTRICT "SPECIAL"

The October number of the Tar Heel Leaguer is in the form of a "Special," the copy for which was furnished by the leaguers of the Salisbury district.

Mr. P. L. Plyler, the editor, after having had the matter submitted by Miss Johnsie Hobson, the district secretary, pronounced it "splendid."

NEW INTERMEDIATE CHAPTER

South Main, Salisbury, has just organized a new Intermediate Epworth League. Miss Johnsie Brawley is the superintendent. Of course this group of young folks will make for themselves a name! Let us have more intermediate and junior chapters.

North Carolina Conference

EDENTON STREET HAS A LIVELY SOCIAL

The Epworth League of Edenton Street church, Raleigh, spent a very enjoyable evening in the basement of the Sunday school last Friday. The league's regular monthly social was held then and was attended by about eighty-five young folks.

The main feature of the evening was a mock court. There were about fourteen cases on docket. None of the defendants knew, however, that they were to be summoned to take the stand and speak for their defense or admit their guilt and plead for the mercy of the court. The majority of the delegates plead not guilty, but most of them were found guilty by the court. Some took their sentence; others too an appeal. As usual, though, the docket was not cleared and several cases were bound over when some unruly member of the court moved to adjourn to eat. Amidst the excitement the judge forgot to state a time when the court should reconvene, and the sheriff overlooked the criminals in the courtroom, consequently no one knows what the outcome of this session of court will be. The criminals all escaped among the crowd after enjoying a delicious salad course.

Several musical "strains" (some of the boys strained) were enjoyed by some and permitted by others before the court was called to order and also during the lunch—"two hours" of the judge and the prosecuting attorney.

The following held their respective places in the courtroom:

Judge, Mr. Timby; clerk of court, Lee Davis; prosecuting attorney, Philip Schwartz; sheriff, George Crawford; court reporter, Miss Alice Best; the jury was taken from the audience. The defendants could not afford any attorney for the defense. Thus endeth the first session of court.

A PROSPEROUS LEAGUE AT PINE FOREST

Our league was organized eighteen months ago with 49 members. We now have 110 members.

Since the organization of our league we have organized one at Tabernacle church on the Snow Hill circuit, of which Rev. C. T. Rogers is pastor.

Our social service department, under the supervision of Miss Mittie E. Sutton, is doing fine work in caring for the sick and needy of our community. We also are proud to be able to say that we have a pastor who is deeply interested in the work of our young people. He is Rev. Chas. A. Jones.

We ask the prayers of all our fellow Epworth Leaguers as we forward that we may live up to our motto, "All for Christ."

Our officers are:

President—Miss Emma J. Davis.
Vice President—Samuel Alexander.
Recording Secretary—Miss Sarah Gurley.

Corresponding Secretary—Miss Julia Davis.

Treasurer—Mr. Walton Sutton.
Era Agent—Mr. Leslie Hin s.

Supt. First Dept.—Herman Woodard.

Supt. Second Dept.—Miss Mittie E. Sutton.

Supt. Third Dept.—Miss Annie E. Edwards.

Supt. Fourth Dept.—Miss Lois Cox.
Julia Davis, Cor. Sec.

WATCH OUT ON THE COAST—MANN'S HARBOR WAKES UP

We have reorganized our Epworth League at Mt. Carmel church.

For some time our league was asleep, but since district conference we are beginning to wake up, and realize that we can do something too that is worth while. We do not want to be asleep while others are awake. We have a small territory but splendid material with which to work.

We put on the "Modern Prodigal" and it proved to be a success. We are hoping to do good work in the future.

The officers are:

President—Mrs. Rena Jolly.
Vice President—Miss Ruth Craddock.

Rec. Sec.—Treasure.—Clarence Holms.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. R. N. Fitts.

Supt. First Dept.—Preston Twiford.
Supt. Second Dept.—Ira Speacer.

Supt. Third Dept.—Mrs. R. N. Fitts.
Supt. Fourth Dept.—Miss Erma Tillet.

Era Agent—Rev. R. N. Fitts.
Organist—Miss Syble Midgett.

COOPER LEAGUE TRIES IT AGAIN—THAT'S THE SPIRIT

On the second Sunday in September a few of the young folks of Wesley's Chapel church, Cooper N. C., met and reorganized the "Florintine Epworth League."

This league last year did some very splendid work, but it seemed that when cold weather came on that the spirit with which they first began froze. But this time we are intending to face the cold and have a fine league during the winter months.

The officers for the following year are as follows:

President—Lena Jackson.
Vice President—Esther Lee.

Rec. Sec.—Lelon Jackson.
Treasurer—Esther Lee.

Cor. Sec.—Leroy Pope.
Supt. First Dept.—L. H. Pope.

Supt. Second Dept.—Nevada Warren.

Supt. Third Dept.—Rochelle Jackson.

Supt. Fourth Dept.—Velna Jackson.
Era Agent—Leroy Pope.

We are hoping for a very prosperous year. Leroy Pope, Cor. Sec.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

When our missionary chain was severed on September 11, 1923, and the spirit of Mrs. Lula Webb Kiser, wife of Mr. M. L. Kiser, secretary and treasurer of the board of stewards of Central church, Spencer, N. C., was called beyond the river this society lost one of its most loyal and consecrated members. We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Central church, resolve:

First, That we are grateful to our heavenly Father for the influence of this gentle, sweet spirited, Christian woman, who served her Master with such radiant joy as to ever be an inspiration to others.

Second, That while our hearts are deeply saddened that she has gone from us and we realize that we shall miss her sweet presence and cheerful service, we bow in submission to God's will.

Third, That we extend to her faithful husband, aged mother and other relatives our warmest sympathy in their great sorrow.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent her relatives, a copy be sent the N. C. Christian Advocate and a copy be spread upon our minutes.

Mrs. Jessie M. Eagle,
Mrs. Pauline Bobbitt,
Committee.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

Rev. C. A. Wood.....Superintendent

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

By Martha M. Wood.

The morning train stopped at the Home siding one morning last week and two little girls arrived to become part of the Home family.

They were met, and with their friends who came with them, were taken to the High Point building, where new children are received and stay a few days before going to live at the different cottages.

The High Point building has the infirmary rooms on the second floor, the nurse's room, a sleeping porch, and two extra rooms where some of the teachers room at present. On the first floor are Mrs. Thompson's rooms, and two of the teachers have the large room that was used for a school room last year, and Mrs. Hartman, who does the mending, also has a room on the first floor.

Mrs. Hartman's little boy, James, stays with his mother. The superintendent thought, at the end of vacation last summer, that James was getting big enough to go to live with the little boys in Tise Number Two, but there was another little boy somewhere in the world outside who needed a home very much; so James, to his great joy, went back to the High Point building to stay again with his mother and his little bed in the dormitory was given to the little stranger.

The two little girls that came on the same train were from different towns and strangers to each other, but were very nearly the same size and age, eight years, I believe; and it was a happy circumstance that they arrived at the same time to be companions while the strangeness of the new surroundings wore off. One little girl feels very lonely in such new experiences, while two little girls can have a real good time in a new place together.

They have started to school now, and I suppose that they do not feel new any longer.

Besides there has been a later arrival—a pretty little dimpled darling of a girl, that created a sensation among the children because she was the smallest of all the children. You could hear them calling across the grounds the evening her aunt brought her, "The baby has come! The baby's come! Have you seen the baby?" And such rubbering of necks when the baby went to supper!

The "baby" is big enough to wear rompers. Miss Huitt brought her over to see me this morning, and Dorothy and Mary Catherine, the two other little girls who are under school age, came along too.

Margaret took some pictures of them on the front walk with the shrubbery for a background.

Polly, the next in age to Dorothy, has been going to school and came running to show her matron her first report card the other day. Her grade, as might be expected for first few days in school, did not contain an A or a B, but to Polly one letter of the alphabet is as honorable as another, and a report to take home is a great distinction. And Polly is learning to read right along—assisted by the pictures in the book.

"Carl's bed" has been sent from the attic over to Miss Huitt, and Mrs. Hartman made a nice mattress for it. Mrs. Huitt decided to keep "the baby" in her room for the present.

Our latest little boy received is small, too, but he is about the liveliest little boy that ever arrived anywhere.

This little fellow had some relatives but they were unable to take care of him—his father was gone, his mother scarcely able to make a living for herself, and there were other children. The relative who was giving him temporary shelter lived on a populous row on a narrow city street that was an automobile thoroughfare, besides having a street car track running through it. While we talked with his friends little C amused himself with the automobiles and the street cars. Though only five and a half years old, he played freely in the street and knew how to alarn the auto drivers by running almost in front of their cars to scare them with the danger of running over him. Doubtless he enjoyed their growls when they had to throw on the brakes to slow down, but it was a habardous pastime for an infant in his first pants.

After the superintendent made a place for him in the Home everybody concerned seemed to want no delay in getting him settled in a safe place. He followed his committence papers very promptly. Doubtless he enjoyed the jitney ride to Winston, but at every change of vehicle he demonstrated an active resistance to adult interference. His stay at the receiving building was amusingly short. "Speeding the little guest" seemed the most pleasant arrangement all the way around, and Tise Number Two soon received him under its kin and efficient wings.

To Tise Number Two liveliness in little boys is a familiar affair and has harmless opportunities of expressing itself.

The new little boy is really a sweet, bright little fellow. He evidently has not had the firm control that such an active little boy needs, but it does not take a little boy long to learn good behavior in a group of well trained little boys.

The farm workers were so busy getting the silo filled and cutting hay that the superintendent hesitated whether or not to take time to get an exhibit over to the county fair, but the fair management phoned over and urged us to do so.

So Monday Mr. Hill, who has charge of the farm work, and Mr. Dilworth, the gardener, got busy and collected a load of vegetables for an exhibit in the farm products building, and the sewing room sent over a few things.

And the Home table in the display made a very good show indeed, and won the fifty dollar prize for the best truck farm and garden products, and six other vegetables took special prizes in another display.

The Home sewing room got several blue and red ribbons, too; one for the best pair of cross-stitch towels, best dress with decoration stitches, also the second best; one for best made worsted dress and remodled worsted dress, first and second prizes, and a first on pine needle work basket.

The prizes in all amounted to seventy odd dollars, besides the two prizes that the Home troop Boy Scouts won. The boys were very proud of winning the prize for the best collection of trees and wood from Forsyth county, and also first on insects and butterflies. They had taken much interest in getting up the collection of native woods and had found ninety-five kinds in the Home woods and grounds.

Lives of master crooks remind us
We may do a bit of time,
And, departing, leave behind us
Thumb-prints in the charts of crime.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

Sweet Potatoes.—Our friends remember us each year by sending us such nice sweet potatoes. They will be more acceptable this year than ever before.

* * * *

Orphanage Association.—We were happy to have the North Carolina Orphanage Association to meet at the Methodist Orphanage on September 19. It has been our privilege to entertain this association on several occasions.

* * * *

Sunday School.—It is highly gratifying that so many Sunday schools and classes are beginning to send us contributions. It is sincerely hoped that all who have fallen behind or lost out may give us their enthusiastic support now that money is circulating more freely.

* * * *

Money.—We are borrowing money with which to pay our large bills. Unless all the Sunday schools, organized classes and many individuals come to our relief, we shall be forced to borrow a larger amount this month than in September. Let me appeal to our friends to deal generously with us when our need is so great and urgent!

* * * *

It is both a pleasure and privilege to have as our guests recently Bro. C. A. Wood, Mrs. Wood and daughter. They spent a night and part of a day with us. Brother Wood is doing a fine piece of real constructive work as superintendent of the Children's Home in Winston-Salem. He and his family are welcome at our Home at all times.

* * * *

Football.—Our team has started out on a victorious march. The last week in September we played the Raleigh high school team and licked them by the score of twenty-three to nothing—23-0. Of course our boys feel very hilarious over such a sweeping victory. So far we have never had a single boy hurt in playing football; neither have our boys injured any on the opposing teams. The objectionable features of football have been eliminated. Wholesome sports are a necessity in training boys and girls if we want to accomplish the most good in their lives.

* * * *

Bailey-Zebulon.—The singing class spent the fifth Sunday in Bailey and Zebulon. At each of the places there were overflow congregations. Revs. L. C. Brothers and W. L. Loy were exceedingly cordial in their welcome to the class. Mrs. Nellie Rives is diligently training the new class so as to bring it up to the standard of former classes. Judging from the way Bailey and Zebulon received the sacred concert one would conclude that she is succeeding very nicely with the undertaking. We are certainly under renewed obligation to Brothers Loy and Brothers and the churches at Bailey and Zebulon for their interest in us and for the liberal contributions made to our beloved orphanage.

* * * *

Atwaters.—The Atwaters and relatives and connections held a reunion at Trinity College October 4th. This was the third reunion of this remarkable family. One was held at Chapel Hill, one at the Methodist Orphanage and the last one at Trinity College. Mr. Francis Atwater, of New Haven, Conn., who is a retired capitalist, was the first promoter of the reunions. One of the tangible results that has grown out of the coming together of such a large connection is the proposed memorial which will be known as the Atwater Building. Mrs. Mattie A. Jenkins, who was an Atwater, has her whole heart set on securing the necessary funds for the memorial building. She has secured about fifteen thousand dollars and needs at least ten or twelve thousand more in order to make possible such a building. All the connections will join hands with her in securing the desired amount.

SHIPS FOR SEVEN SEAS SAIL FROM DIXIE PORTS

Extent of foreign trade through Gulf and South Atlantic ports is shown by the fact that during October there will be an aggregate of 586 sailings to foreign ports from the seven seaport cities served by the Southern Railway System: New Orleans, Mobile, Jacksonville, Brunswick, Savannah, Charleston and Norfolk, according to information contained in the first number of the Directory of Steamship Sailings which will be issued monthly by the Southern's Foreign Freight Department. Ships for all the seven seas are listed in the directory, the sailings for October being divided by countries as follows: Continental Europe 182, Cuba 93, United Kingdom 75, Far East 62, South America 39, Mexico 36, West Indies other than Cuba 33, Central America 31, Mediterranean 22, Pacific Coast 13. The date on which steamer will sail and the name of the steamship company or steamship agent in whose care freight should be forwarded is also shown.

The directory will be distributed monthly to a large list of exporters throughout the country and should prove a valuable advertisement for the Southern ports. It contains much information which will be of advantage to exporters shipping through the ports and to those using the all-rail routes to Cuba and Mexico.

NEW LAMP HAS NO WICK OR CHIMNEY

Most Brilliant Home Light Known—Costs One Cent a Night.

A new lamp which has no wick or chimney, yet, according to experts, gives the most powerful home light in the world, is the latest achievement of W. C. Fowler, 421 Factory Building, Kansas City, Mo. This remarkable new lamp beats gas or electricity—gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights, and costs only one cent a night. A blessing to every home, especially on farm or in small town. It is absolutely safe, and gives universal satisfaction. No dirt, no smoke, no odor. A child can carry it. It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light, and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial to any reader of the North Carolina Christian Advocate who writes him. He wants one person to whom he can refer new customers. Take advantage of his free offer. Agents wanted. Write him today.—Adv't.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

— Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary —

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

A DAY AND A NIGHT AT THE SOUTHWEST MISSOURI CONFERENCE

Returning from the Kentucky conference, I arrived at St. Louis on September 10 and was very glad to have a few days in the office to look after important matters which had accumulated during my almost continued absence for three weeks, visiting five annual conferences. The close application both day and night enabled me to get everything in good shape in time to take the Katy Flier for Nevada, Mo., which landed me safely early Thursday morning, September 20, in Nevada, where I found the Southwest Missouri conference in full swing.

The Veterans Make Report. — The conference opened its second day's session on Thursday with hard-working Bishop W. F. McMurry in the chair. After an uplifting devotional address by Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, the names of the superannuates were called one by one, and each of those present was given an opportunity to speak a few words. As I sat there watching them rise in turn out of their physical infirmities to speak, heard their words brokenly expressed concerning their love and loyalty to the church, and felt the tug of their abiding faith, notwithstanding the deprivations that were upon them, my very soul went out to them in tenderness, and I girded myself anew for even greater abandon to the task of providing for them a comfortable support. Not one uttered a word of complaint or criticised the church even by implication for her neglect of him. If any referred indirectly to the hardships of superannuation, the situation of distress was quickly screened from view by additional glowing words of faith and confidence that the Lord would provide. These grand old men can never know the full measure of my love for them and my devotion to the work which looks to give them relief, and my soul yearns daily for a similar devotion expressed in their behalf by every preacher in active service throughout the whole church.

A Picture Worthy of an Artist's Skill.—Seated there on the platform close to the right hand of the presiding bishop was the grand old veteran, Rev. Dr. C. C. Woods. His eyes were a little more dim and his body a little more bent than when I saw him last. He leaned upon his cane and seemed to be straining all the faculties of his being to catch every word uttered by any speaker. His face, though furrowed by wrinkles of many hard years of service, reflected the light of heaven. My mind went back through the years to catch up again in memory the voice of silver-tongued Woods which thrilled and inspired the people in so many churches where he served and to feel the lift of his facile pen which led the preachers of Missouri through sunshine and storm while he was editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate. He is superannuated now and is quietly and sweetly awaiting the last summons. I thought what a pity it was that a man like this, having given to the church fifty-five years of active service, should in the days of his old age and physical infirmities receive from the church from all sources the pitiful annual allowance of $273.67. Such an amount is not even enough to pay the rent for a humble cottage to protect him against the heat and cold. If by chance he can stretch this sum to pay the rent, pray tell me how is the dear man to purchase food and raiment for himself and wife? His case is not an isolated one or an exception, but it is similar to hundreds of others that could be selected from our nearly one thousand superannuated preachers. Will the church continue to neglect such men? Can she fail to support the special effort for superannuate endowment when said effort has as its objective a comfortable old-age support for men like this veteran of the Lord?

Bearers of Good Tidings.—Promptly at 10:30 Bishop McMurry announced that in five minutes the representatives of the Board of Finance would present to the conference the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment. He requested that all preachers and members of the conference who were outside of the conference room be advised of this fact and urged to be in their places to hear what was to be spoken on the subject. My heart went pitapat with joy and appreciation as I saw the outside members in ones and twos coming through the several doors of the auditorium in response to the announcement. Bishop U. V. W. Darlington delivered the inspirational address, and it was most pleasing to see how thoroughly he captured the conference with his wit and pathos as he spoke most appealingly concerning the call of the "forgotten man." The preachers all love Bishop Darlington, and they should, for he is their friend. When he had concluded his splendid address, I was introduced to present the plan of the special effort. It is not to be expected that ordinary human mortals, especially preachers, having listened to a wonderful address such as Bishop Darlington's, would find it possible to sit patiently for another forty minutes to listen to the likes of me, but they did. I watched the rascals closely, and I was unable to observe a single one of them with body bent low, head hanging lower, and stepping as if walking on eggs sneakin' out. They stayed with me while I gave them the analytical details of the method of procedure. Thus for fully an hour and a half those preachers and lay members sat there listening intently to our presentation. In the light of this fact I am sure that determined resolutions were made by every one present to do a faithful and honest part by the program for the benefit of the "forgotten man." Bishop McMurry concluded the program of presentation with a few pointed remarks on matters that had not been referred to by the other speakers. His confident attitude toward the great movement and his contagious expectancy for its outcome proved him a most worthy president of the great board which has the leadership of this special effort.

A Chat With a Benefactor.—After lunch at the hotel, I sat down by that princely layman, Mr. E. T. Webb, of Webb City, Mo. Last February this brother gave $13,000 to the Southwest Missouri Conference Superannuate Endowment Fund and placed it in trust with the Board of Finance. It is yielding six per cent annually, and at this rate it will supplement the annual support of the claimants of said conference in the amount of $780. I told Brother Webb that he never would be able to realize the full significance of this splendid gift until he got home to heaven and was surrounded by hundreds of sainted superannuated preachers and widows of preachers telling him about it. He replied that he had never made a gift to anything in his life that gave him more pleasure. As I watched the movements of his dear, good face while he was speaking the evident satisfaction playing there fully confirmed his words. God bless you, Brother Webb, and make his face to shine upon you in all of your ways and give you peace, and may the same spirit which moved you to do this generous act in behalf of a cause so sacred be caught up by many others throughout the whole church in such measure that they too will be led to do likewise!

A Presiding Elder's Testimony.—It is funny but true that the best-dispositioned presiding elder in the whole church is likely to appear prepossessed, nervous, worried, and unapproachable while the annual conference is in session. We should not criticise the poor dears too much for this and for the reason that this state of them at annual conference time is due to the fact that they are overburdened with anxiety for the welfare of the church and the preachers whom they represent. I sidled around by one of these boys and asked him to give me his honest opinion about the outlook for the special effort movement in his district and in the other districts of his conference. As I recall, this is what he said: "Todd, we are struggling with many unpaid obligations of one sort and another, but I give you my word that there is but one thought on the part of the presiding elders—namely, to make a heroic effort to pay the conference quota for superannuate endowment in full. I sincerely believe we will succeed. You can absolutely count on me in whatever relation I may be situated to do my level best." I slapped him on the shoulder. Then I said: "Bully for you, Tom. I knew you would do it, and I believe what you believe about all the other preachers in the Southwest Missouri conference. The truth is, I believe that all the preachers of the whole church feel this way about it. They know that this opportunity has come just this one time in the whole history of our church, and they realize that it will not come again to this generation. Under the circumstances they cannot be true to themselves or to their aged brothers if they fail to do their dead level best."

The Flash of a Two-Edged Sword.—At the night service I stood for an hour and a half with others crowding in to hear the inimitable Dr. M. N. Waldrip deliver in behalf of the worn-out preachers of the church a powerful address was a fitting climax to a Sacred Star." The flaming words of the speaker went home. The lack of space forbids further comment, except to state that Waldrip's wonderful address was a fitting climax to a day in the Southwest Missouri conference spent almost entirely in the interest of the "forgotten man."

IN THE PINE TREE

By Blanche Elizabeth Wade.

There was once upon a time a little Japanese owl in a pine tree on a far-away Japanese mountain. He was in the pine tree most of the time, for by day he slept in a hollow of the trunk and by night he came out to sit upon its branches and see what was going on.

"Why do you never go off to see the rest of the world?" asked a bat.

"Because this piece of the world is so lovely that I am content," said the owl.

"You will never get anywhere or be anything worth while if you stay here all your life," said the bat. "Now I find this place lovely, as you know, for I often come here; but I also go off to see other things. Come with me. There are other pine trees as fine as this."

"I am content," said the owl, and the bat thought him a stupid fellow and flapped away.

"Who-oo, who-oo-o, whoo-oo is so happy s I?" sang the little owl and then gave a chuckle at the end of his call.

By and by there was a light swish of wings in the pine-tree branches, and there sat one of the sweet night singers—the Japanese nightingale, we may call him, though they give him another name there. "Why do you stay in one place all the time?" he asked. "I met the honorable bat, and he said you never would go away from this spot. There are many beautiful things to be seen across the rice fields and over the mountains." Then the nightingale sang one of his loveliest songs, which told of the sweet-scented groves he had seen and the far-away temples and market places.

"That is all very well," said the owl. "I am glad you like them, but here am I content. Who-oo-oo, whooo-oo-o, whooo-oo-o is so happy as I?" And again he chuckled.

Away went the sweet singer in disgust. There was no use wasting songs on a stupid owl!

Down upon the ground the night insects were having a merry time of it. One of them called in his loudest tones, "O honorable owl of the shadows, why do you stay at home all the time? We have just come from the far-away fields beyond the mountains to give you some music, for we met the bat and the bird that sings by night, and they told us that you never leave this place. You will be lonesome and unhappy unless you go out into the world. Come with us and see for yourself that what we say is true. There are other places more beautiful than this."

The owl listened patiently to their merry music in the gayest rhythms and then told them to hear his song, and they heard, "Who-oo, who-oo-ooo, who-oo is so happy as I?" and the little chuckle at the end. "That is my answer," said he. So it was plain to be seen there was no use in their having anything more to do with him, and off went the night insects as far as they could go.

Then came a wild duck that could see very well to fly by night. He was making a long flight to another part of the country and stopped near the owl for a little rest.

"I just met the bat, the bird that sings by night and the night insects," said he, "and they tell me you are such a hermit that you will not leave the pine tree. You will starve and lose the use of your wings if you do not see something of the world."

"Oh, but I have plenty of exercise for my wings," answered the owl. "I use them when I fly to the places where I search for food, but the pine tree is good enough for me, and I have no wish to go out of sight of it."

"Oh, but you should see just once the wild stretches over which I pass, the marshes by moonlight and the many pines and other trees much finer than your pine here. Then you will change your mind. Come with me for one short flight just to try it. In a short space of time I can take you to a spot so lovely that you will think it a dream of delight."

"Graciously be pleased to say no more, O honorable wild duck," replied the little owl. "It is vain to ask me, for whoo-oo-oo, whoo-oo-ooo, whoo-oo-oo is so happy as I?" And then came that happy little chuckle at the end.

The wild duck could see that it would be a waste of breath to say anything more; so he made a strong, sudden motion, and his sturdy wings carried him off where he willed to go. He made a pretty picture against the background of the full moon as he flew out of sight.

The fireflies were the last to speak to the owl about the matter. They were dancing here and there in the grasses below and in the bushes and willows not far away from the pine tree. One of the fireflies let the rest and took a longer and higher flight than usual to have a little talk with the owl.

"You look lonely in the pine tree all by yourself," said he as he lighted upon the branch near the little owl. "Why not come down to the sedges with us when we go back? There the wind whispers and little boats from far away sail upon the river. There is much to be learned that you miss by staying here. Come with us and let us show you these wonders. We shall guide you by our fitting lights."

"You are most kind," said the owl, "but nothing can tempt me to go with you. This is the one place in the world for me. Oh, who-oo-o, who-oo-oo, whooo-oo-o is so happy as I?"

The little firefly said no more but flitted down to his companions, and after a bit more twinkling of their lights to show they were friendly anyhow they sparkled away to the sedges that they loved.

But can you believe it? After their little lights were gone the firefly that had spoken to the owl all at once came back. "O honorable owl," said he, "on our way back to our sedges we met the bat, the bird that sings by night, the night insects and the wild duck. They all say that they never heard of such a thing as any creature's long being happy alone away from the world. So I have come back to see if you have changed your mind since we left you. It is not too late, and I shall be glad to guide you to our playground."

The owl was so touched by this great kindness that he said, "I thank you for your goodness and for the goodness of the other creatures that have tried to take me away from what they call my loneliness. I must tell you my secret, so that you can tell the others. It will show why I cannot be coaxed to leave my home. I have listened to the song of the pine tree all my life. The tree has stood many years. From the wind it has heard all the tales of the far-away places. When I am snuggled within the hollow of the trunk by day the tree lulls me to sleep, and when the night comes the branches rock me and the long needles whisper to me of all the things that the wise tree knows that are worth remembering. One piece of advice the old tree has given me that I am finding true. It is this: 'Happiness,' says the old tree, 'is being content where you are.' And the old tree has stood here in this one spot for many years. Storms have not harmed it or discouraged it. It lifts its head bravely. Besides, it has promised me a safe home so long as it lives, and not only that but the gift of its wisdom, too. Tell this to the others and they will see that I am right in living here."

"You are indeed wise," answered the fire-fly. "I will do as you say." And he flitted away alone to join the others in the sedges. And do you know that every year they say that the bat, the bird that sings by night, the night insects, the wild duck and the fireflies all come back to the old pine tree to see the little owl and to hear his "Who-oo-oo, who-oo-o, whooo-oo-o is so happy as I?" with the contented chuckle at the end?—Youth's Companion.

Round Numbers Will Do.

The unprepossessing lady of uncertain age was calling on the small boy's mother and the child was doing his best to answer her numerous questions politely.

"And how old are you?" she asked him.

"Almost six," was the reply. "How old are you?"

"O," said the lady, in an embarrassed manner, "I don't remember the year I was born."

"Never mind," answered the small boy, politely; "tell me the century."

IN MEMORIAM

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On the evening of Wednesday, May 9, 1923, God in His infinite love, wisdom and mercy called to Himself one of our beloved members, Miss Mary Summers Ford.

All that human love and skill could do to keep her was done, but the Master called her, and surrounded by her family her gentle spirit went home to God. She died as she lived, strong in the faith. Mourning her loss so deeply, we resolve:

First, That the Woman's Missionary Society of the Lowell M. E. Church, South, bow in perfect submission to the will of God as she did.

Second, That we strive to follow her Christian example with cheerfulness of spirit which she always showed by her loving words and smiles.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be spread on our minutes, and a copy be sent to the North Carolina Advocate.

Mrs. C. B. Jenkins,
Mrs. T. P. Rankin,
Mrs. A. R. Leonhardt.

LEWIS—At twenty-five minutes past 11 o'clock on the night of the 22d of September, 1923, the spirit of Bro. John W. Lewis went back to God, whom he had served for forty years.

"Uncle Jack," as he was called by almost everyone who spoke to him, lacked a few days of being 78 years old. He joined the Methodist church at Sealevel, N. C., October 22, 1883, and had lived a consistent member ever since.

He leaves a wife and three sons, Weinstein of Beaufort, N. C., Earl of New Bern, N. C., and Daniel of Sealevel; also two daughters, Mrs. Roxie Taylor and Mrs. Nettie Salter of Sealevel, and one sister and one brother.

Brother Lewis was always found at the services of the church when possible for him to attend, and few loved the church better than he.

For the three years that I had known him he had faithfully attended, and was faithful to every interest of the church and the welfare of his pastor.

He was in usual health and had finished the day's work, even the evening chores, and was resting on the porch of his home. The sun had just set when he was stricken with paralysis, and went home to God before midnight.

He died as he had lived, in intimate fellowship with God. We laid his body away on Monday at noon, October 24, to await the resurrection.

May God comfort all that sorrow.
E. J. Lewis, Pastor.

HOLLOWELL—The gentle angel of death made its appearance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hollowell on the night of September 12th and ushered the soul of W. G. Hollowell to his heavenly home. He was not afraid. He had been longing for the time to come when he would be called upon to offer up his soul to the One who gave it. Brother Hollowell was an old Confederate soldier and lost a leg in battle. At the beginning of the war he was not old enough to enlist, but his father was in the war and he was left at home with his mother to take care of things; but being young and brave, and seeing the necessity of father being at home, he went and took his father's place at the front, and was said by those who fought beside him to be one of the bravest of the brave, and in the last year of the war lost his leg and was sent home maimed for life but not disheartened. He took up the reins of fate and pushed onward, and while he had a fair education he was never able to attend college, but by making the very best use of what learning he did have he came to be regarded as one of the best and safest advisers, and he became a newspaper man of some fame by adhering to the old adage of hewing to the line, let the chips fall where they may. He also became interested in politics and was clerk of the court for some time, and also register of deeds. He was also agent for the North Carolina Railroad at Goldsboro at one time. He was never idle, and when old age came on and he became unable to handle these active positions he moved to the farm, and while he could not plow he could always be found tilling the soil with his hoe. In early life Brother Hollowell saw the need of living a life that would prepare him for the world to come, and so he became a devout Christian and joined the M. E. church, and no man can say aught of his life. In early manhood he was married to Miss Carolina Bryant of New Bern, and to them were born twelve children, but some of them died when quite young, leaving two boys and three girls who survive him. They are: Mrs. Sophia Adams of Four Oaks, N. C., Mrs. J. B. Lee of Wilson, N. C., Mrs. W. D. Singleton of near Goldsboro, N. C., Mr. John W. Hollowell of Rocky Mount, N. C., and W. C. Hollowell of near Goldsboro. His first wife preceded him to the grave some 25 years ago and he was married the second time to Miss Mollie Smith of Smithfield, N. C., and to them was born son, Mr. Frank Hollowell, who also survives him. Brother Hollowell never amassed much of this world's goods to leave behind, but he left a good, clean, Christian life that will stand always as a monument to his memory that his friends can point to with pride. May God comfort those that are bereaved and may they live a life here on earth that will enable them to go and be with their departed one when the death angel calls them. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord.

By one who knew Brother Hollowell best.

BARKER—Mrs. J. J. Barker, nee Bettie West, was born February 25, 1868; was married to Rev. J. J. Barker December 23, 1890; died September 24, 1923. There were seven children born to her, six of whom with the husband still survive. They are J. J. Barker, Jr., Jack, Estella, Annie Sue and Elizabeth Barker and Mrs. Mary Brown. Also four brothers and one sister, Dr. R. M. and A. S. West of Salisbury, N. C., and J. C. and C. B. West of Greenville, N. C., and Mrs. W. E. Mowery of Kkron, Ohio, survive.

Mrs. Barker's parents were not Methodists, but early in her life she fell in love with the Methodist church, and when she was in her teens she joined this church and was a devoted member till her death. Her love for and devotion to the church led to her marriage to Rev. J. J. Barker an itinerant Methodist preacher. During their married life of nearly thirty-three years she learned what the real life of the parsonage is. They served charges from the extreme east to the extreme west and from the northern border to the southern border of North Carolina, and whether in the flat country or the mountains or hills she was always the greatest stay to her husband. Her interest in the church was great and to the very last she seemed anxious for its welfare. She was greatly loved by all who knew her, and nowhere was this shown more than in the town of Ahoskie where she spent her last six years. The love of the whole town was shown in many ways beautifully. The people here had seen the worth of this good woman in the way she stood up under affliction of her husband. No one will ever be more honored and loved than she. She will be greatly missed in the home and as a neighbor and in the church. In early life she felt called to mission work, and as the wife of a preacher she showed the missionary spirit and was a great help in every way, and especially in the work of the Woman's Missionary Society. She was a true wife, a devoted mother, a real friend and neighbor and consecrated Christian.

Mrs. Barker's health had never been robust and she had been a great sufferer for a long time. A year or more before her last serious illness she had a fall from which she received a fracture of her shoulder, and from that time she was always a sufferer. For the last six months she had not felt she would recover. She spent a long time in a hospital last spring without getting more than temporary relief. She finally came home to spend her last days and to await her call to heaven. The end came Monday evening at 7:30, September 24, while she was surrounded by all the members of her family and some other friends. We feel sure that she was fully ready to go. The writer never has doubted her preparation.

After funeral services conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. M. F. Hodges and Rev. E. J. Isehower, and attended by a very large concourse of friends her remains were laid in the town cemetery of Ahoskie to await the resurrection morn.

Special mention should be made of the devotion of her children and especially of Miss Estella, who gave all her time for nearly six months to nursing her mother; and also of Brother Barker, who needs all our sympathy and help we can render in this sad hour.

PINNEL—Providence church, on the Warren circuit, and the entire community was shocked on Tuesday, September 11, when a message came from St. Luke's Hospital in Richmond stating that Mrs. J. K. Pinnel, who had been taken to that institution just two days before for treatment, died that afternoon at one o'clock.

The sadness this message brought to our hearts is inexpressable. None of us had expected it. Brother Pinnel accompanied her to the hospital and was at her bedside when the end came. Her parting words to her devoted and grief-stricken husband were "Come to me, I know you will." Her death was triumphant.

Sister Pinnel was born June 13, 1888, just a little more than 35 years ago. She was converted in early life and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and at the time of her death was a consistent member at Providence.

On December 9, 1908, she was happily married to J. King Pinnell. Three children were born to them—Addie, twelve, Marie, nine, and Ella Currin, almost three years old. Her devotion to her husband and children was beautiful. Theirs was a delightful home. It was a great pleasure to sit with that sweet family circle. No preacher ever had truer friends than King Pinnell and his wife.

She was untiring in her kindness to her friends and neighbors, and especially to the sick and poor in her community. Giving not only sympathy and service but her means as well. In her sad going her husband and children have lost a devoted wife and mother, and the community a kind and loving friend.

The funeral service was conducted at Providence church by the Rev. J. T. Draper and the Rev. H. B. Porter of Warrenton amid a great concourse of loved ones and friends. We laid her body to rest beside that of her mother's to await the resurrection morn.

May the kind Father, who doeth all things well, abide with her loved ones, and give grace to sustain in these dark hours of bereavement.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Morehead City Methodist church, wish to express our sorrow in the loss of one of our oldest and best love dmembers, Mrs. Katherine Lewis.

She died as she lived, strong in faith. Through all her suffering she manifested a beautiful Christian spirit and the light of that life is still shining and will shine through all eternity. Mourning her loss so deeply, resolved:

First, That we bow in perfect submission to the will of the Father as she did.

Second, That we extend to her family our tenderest sympathy and pray that God may be with them and sustain them.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, the Coaster and to the family, also that same be recorded in the minutes of our society.

We Cashed Our Wishes At The Bank

4,000 Miles Stood Between Us and Our Hopes—With No Money to Make the Trip—Then Came Our Lucky Day

BY ANNA HUSSEL

WE were living in Camden, N. J.—and almost hated the place. Luck seemed to turn against us from the day we moved there. Sickness came—with big doctor bills that took all our savings and left us in debt. William (my husband) didn't like his work—and the pay hadn't come up to expectations. Yet try as he would, he couldn't find anything better.

Instead of getting ahead, every month was putting us further behind. It was terribly discouraging. We could see only one way out—that was to go to a new place and start over again.

We had our hearts set on Vancouver, B. C. Ever since friends of ours had settled there a year or so before, Vancouver had been to us like a Promised Land. For through these friends we knew a fine position was waiting there for William.

The letters from our friends were full of how well they were doing, and of what a fine place Vancouver is to live, the town's prosperity, the splendid opportunities.

Every letter made us wish anew that we could pull up stakes and join them.

But it seemed an empty and impossible hope. Vancouver is a long 4,000 miles from Camden. Railroad ticket: cost over 3c a mile—to say nothing of meals and other expenses. We have two children. We didn't have carfare even for a hundred miles. So how in the world were we to get from the Atlantic Coast to the Pacific?

When we faced the grim realities it seemed that in thinking about Vancouver we were simply building air castles.

The plain truth is that our bad luck had left us poor. We owned a little furniture, a Ford car, and the clothes on our back. But that was about all. It was taking every cent just to live. If we had sold everything we owned in the world, we couldn't have raised enough cash to pay our expenses half way to Vancouver. Unless wishes could be cashed at the bank, we decided we might as well quit thinking about it.

"Hooray!" He Shouted, I've Found It

One Sunday William was reading the paper. I'll never forget it—that was our Lucky Day.

"Hooray!" he shouted. "I've found it. Anna! Look here!" He showed me what he had been reading. It told how people all over the country were earning extra money in their spare time—at simple, easy and pleasant work done in the privacy of their own homes. How one woman averaged over $11.00 a week. Another $15.00. How a husband and wife together earned over $35.00 in a single week—mostly in spare time. It was a work that any one, anywhere, can do—knitting socks on the Home Profit Knitter, with good pay guaranteed.

"Anna," William said, "there's our chance. There's the way to get to Vancouver and make a fresh start in life. I've got it all figured out. Let's send for information about this Home

The Home Profit Knitter has a portable stand, and can be carried from room to room. It is the Master Machine of all knitters.

Profit Knitter and then I'll tell you." After mailing his letter, William told me about his big idea. We would make the trip to Vancouver in our fiivver—take our time, see the country as we went. It would be cheaper than by train, and a lot more fun. We could soon earn enough extra money with the Home Profit Knitter to buy our food and gasoline and pay all our expenses on the way. We were so excited that we could hardly wait for the answer to our inquiry.

$14.76 The First Check!

It didn't take us long to decide after reading the facts about the Home Profit spare time home work plan. We sent for a Home Profit Knitter—and soon found that William had been right. The instruction book that came with our machine made everything perfectly plain and clear. After practice both of us could knit as fine socks as any one ever saw. It was so easy and interesting that I wanted to knit all the time.

We decided the best way was for me to leave the housework until toward evening, and to give every minute I could manage during the day to knitting. Then, as soon as William got home and finished his supper, he would sit down at the machine and knit until bedtime. Between us we earned $14.76 the first week. We were a mighty happy family when the postman brought us that first check from the Home Profit Hosiery Company.

When some of our neighbors saw the fine socks we were knitting, they wanted to buy from us. So we sold quite a few hose around Camden—at a nice profit to us, yet at a price people were glad to pay. With our own sales and our checks from the Home Profit Hosiery Company for the hose we sent them, it took us just fourteen weeks to earn the money for our coast-to-coast trip.

A Wonderful Trip—And a New Start In Life

It was a wonderful trip—a delightful vacation, for all of us. We crossed thirteen states and part of Canada. Saw both Yellowstone Park and the Rocky Mountains. Every minute and every mile was full of interest.

And now here we are in Vancouver — our Promised Land. William has started in his new job. We like the place and the people. We know we are going to "live happy ever afterward."

If it hadn't been for the money we so easily earned with the Home Profit Knitter, we could never have gotten this new start. It has done so much for us that, naturally, we brought our Home Profit Knitter with us. And with William's new salary and the extra money we will earn by knitting, we'll soon be on "easy street."

Mrs. W. E. Hussel,

It Is Helping Fill Hundreds of Pocketbooks

Except for the way they used the money, Mr. and Mrs. Hussel's experience with the Home Profit spare time home work plan can be yours—anybody's! The Home Profit plan is putting extra money into the pockets of people all over America—helping them pay for homes, helping them put money in the bank, helping them pay debts, helping them buy furniture and automobiles, helping them dress better, helping them in all the ways that money can be used for.

Some earn $5, $10 or $15 extra per week; or, when the family takes turns, as high as $25 to $30 or more—just in their spare time, in the privacy of their own home, and without interference with their other duties.

How much one can earn in this way depends on how much spare time you have. You are always your own boss—can start and stop knitting whenever you like—any time of the day or evening. You can knit as many or as few socks each day or each week as you choose. Whether few or many, the Home Profit Hosiery Company guarantees to take every pair of standard socks you can knit for them, in accordance with their simple specifications, and to give you good pay for every pair you send them.

They also supply free yarn for all the socks you send them. But if you prefer, you can buy your yarn at wholesale price from them and sell the finished hose at your own price to local stores, neighbors, etc. You can also knit sweaters and many other articles on the Home Profit Knitter, either for your own use or to sell—with their latest attachments.

You might as well be one of the thousands who are cashing in on the enormous demand for the simple and clear Home Profit Knitter, and the Home Profit Hosiery Company is ready to make special arrangements with you if you need them.

You don't need to know anything whatever about knitting—the simple and clear instruction book quickly shows you how. All you need is a Home Profit Knitter, a little spare time, and the willingness to use it. No matter what you need money for, it will pay you to send for free information about the Home Profit guaranteed plan. Simply tear out and mail the coupon—NOW, while it is in your mind. That takes only a minute, but it may make a difference of hundreds of dollars a year to you.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS

"Thou shalt believe my set of doctrines" is the first and great commandment, according to the doctrinal debater. Jesus, however, knew there was another commandment; yes, two commandments, which come ahead of a mere creed. He said the great commandment is to LOVE. We must love God with all our hearts, and the second commandment is to love, also, this time our neighbor as ourselves. Upon these two hangs everything religiously. Jesus did not order Thomas expelled because he didn't have the full faith of a John, but Jesus tried to keep Thomas and win him to belief. Christ's love for Judas kept that man lined up until the sin in the heart of the betrayer led to sudden and complete moral disaster.—Western Advocate.

According to John Burroughs, "What is true in Christianity is not new, and what is new is not true." Who said to the contrary? As a clever bon mot, the above generalization will pass. But it need not hurt the feelings of any disciple of Jesus. The credulity of the gospel rests not in its novelty but in its essential and invincible truth. It may be said that all truth is old—older than the hills; as old as God. There was nothing new in the multiplication table when man first used it. Kepler's laws were not new when he discovered and gave his name to them. The principles of conservation of energy and correlation of forces are not modern: merely tardily hit upon. Jesus did not base upon the originality of His utterance His right to be heard and obeyed. All that He taught and enjoined was in the Old Testament, explicit or implicit, or in the very structure, and rationale of life itself. "Before Abraham was I am," He said of Himself. So might He have said of the truths He proclaimed. They are better than new; they are eternal.—George Clarke Peck.

"A cyclone of power, a dynamo of scintillations, a book on logic and a complete master of assemblies," is how Dr. J. A. Burrows, editor of the Methodist Advocate, characterizes W. A. Lambeth who spoke upon the superannuate endowment fund at the Holston conference. Hear the whole story: "At night Rev. W. A. Lambeth, of the Western North Carolina conference, continued the discussion of the subject and completely captured the great congregation with his wit, humor, pathos, argument and forceful summing up of the opportunity now before us. My, but Lambeth is a cyclone of power, a dynamo of scintillations, a book on logic, and a complete master of assemblies! The General Board of Finance would do well to send him all over the church. He would wake the woods! I have not heard an address its equal in many years."

What heaven is like, I do not know, but I long have dreamed of its purple hills and fields of light, blossoming with immortal beauty; of its brooks of laughter and its rivers of song and its palaces of eternal love. I long have dreamed that every bird with its life here may sing forever there in the tree of life, and every consecrated soul that suffers here may rest among its flowers and live and love forever. I long have dreamed of opal towers and burnished golden domes, but what care I for gates of pearl or streets of gold if I can meet the loved ones who have blessed me here, and see the glorified faces of father and mother and the boy brother who died among the bursting buds of hope, and take again in my arms my baby who fell asleep when her little tongue had learned to lisp, "Our Father who art in heaven?" What care I for crowns of stars or harps of gold if I can love and laugh and sing with them forever in the smile of my Saviour and my God?—Bob Taylor.

BISHOP DARLINGTON TO VISIT THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, for four years in charge of this episcopal district, will be a visitor to the approaching session of the North Carolina conference at Elizabeth City. He comes to speak in behalf of the Superannuate Endowment fund. The campaign to secure $10,000,000 for that fund will be put on with the meeting of each annual conference this year. The North Carolina conference is fortunate in having Bishop Darlington to plead the cause of the worn-out preacher and of the widows and orphans of deceased ministers. Our former bishop will receive a warm welcome.

THE BENEDICTIONS OF THE MAN OF GOD

Across a beautiful valley from Mount Gilboa and about fifty miles north of Jerusalem stood an almost ideal home upon a hillside of that ancient, and to both Jew and Christian, sacred land. It was the dwelling place of a Shunamite farmer. It was, also, a place where hospitality abounded. The guests came and went after the best fashion of that Eastern country where an unstinted hospitality was regarded akin to a sacrament. Nothing of this modern folly of preparing a whole week for a guest before he comes and after he arrives makes the stay stilted and uncomfortable by scores and scores of needless attentions, had a place in the Shunamite home. That is entertainment, and let us pray to be delivered from entertaining or being entertained. But hospitality, that natural good fellowship unencumbered by vulgar and pretentious display, becomes one of the highest joys of life.

Among the guests who were accustomed to stop with this Shunamite was the prophet Elisha, that plain old preacher whom bad boys in derision called "old bald head" and many proud spirits doubtless scorned, but the nation as a whole came to trust as its greatest benefactor. And the people's judgment of him was correct. For after the departure of his illustrious teacher and predecessor who had gone to heaven in brilliantly lighted chariot, Elisha was without a single exception the most useful man of his generation.

One day, perhaps at evening time, there was a colloquy between wife and husband that, I imagine, ran something like this:

"Husband," says the wife, "that man Elisha who stops with us so often seems to me to be a mighty good man. His presence is a benediction, and his stay makes it easier for one to believe in God and in the goodness of man. I think that it would be a fine thing to build a special room for him that he could have as his very own, to which he could come at any and all times he chose, without even announcing his presence. Such an arrangement would give him so much better an opportunity to rest." Then I hear the husband say. "We already have a big house and there are only two of us; I do not see why you want any more house room. But if you want it, I guess you will have it, for you are accustomed to get what you want. But if you are going to fix up a room for the comfort of this good man, why don't you put something more in it than a couch, a stool, a candlestick and a table? If we are going to build let's do the thing right. I will send up to the forests of Lebanon and get cedar like Solomon used in the temple. Let's finish it in some of our finest native woods. Then you furnish it to match. Get some of the best Persian rugs for the floor. Make it an attractive place."

Then the wife answers, "Don't you know that Elisha would never feel at home in a room of such luxurious furnishings? He is a man of extremely simple tastes." And she was right. Elisha was a sort of religious Tolstoi of his day. Naaman brought him silver and gold not a little, and nine suits of clothes, but he would have none of them.

That was Elisha: not caring for the things of this world, but always anxious to help somebody—a man chopping wood who had lost his axe, a poor woman whose sons were about to be sold for debt, or a proud general who was afflicted with the leprosy. To help people was the purpose of his life.

As this man of God was a blessing, so has been the ministry in every generation. What a class are ministers of the gospel in American life! As a class they are second to none.

The blessings of God upon that hospitable home were more than could even be discerned at the present. The stretch of years in that Shunamite household was needed to reveal what good things God had in store for them. Read the story to the end as recorded in chapter five of II Kings and see.

So it ever is: God cannot crowd his favors into a handsbreadth; you must stretch out the years and sometimes only the centuries can encompass the works of God.

A FINE BIT OF SENTIMENT

There are lots of people with the shadows falling eastward and quite a few of these parents are nearing the sunset who from experience can appreciate the following lines of Edgar A. Guest:

"Once the house was lovely, but it's lonely here today,
For time has come an' stained its walls an' called the young away;
An' all that's left for mother an' for me till life is through
Is to sit an' tell each other what the children used to do.

We couldn't keep 'em always an' we knew it from the start;
We knew when they were babies that some day we'd have to part.
But the years go by so swiftly, an' the littlest one has flown,
An' there's only me an' mother now left here to live alone.

Oh, there's just one consolation, as we're sittin' here at night—
They've grown to men an' women, an' we've brought 'em up all right;
We've watched 'em as we've loved 'em an' they're splendid, every one,
An' we feel the Lord won't blame us for the way our work was done.

They're clean an' kind an' honest, an' the world respects 'em too;
That's the dream of parents always, an' our dreams have all come true.
So although the house is lonely an' sometimes our eyes grow wet,
We are proud of them an' happy an' we've nothing to regret.

MASONRY AND PROTESTANTISM

By John J. Lanier.

This book shows from authoritative sources of the Roman Catholic Church its unceasing attacks upon the democracies of the world, and the venomous slanders it pours upon Masons and Protestants because they uphold religious freedom, political liberty, and the public schools of the nation.

It also shows the vicious attack of the Vatican to drive the Methodists out of Rome, which has become known all over the world as the "Battle of Monte Mario," in which the Methodists on behalf of all Protestants are valiantly fighting the Battle of the Reformation of the Sixteenth Century over again.

This attack of Rome will force Masons and Protestants to unite in order to preserve their hard-won liberty or surrender it to the despotism of the Roman hierarchy.

THE DISCOVERY OF GOD

By Basil King.

This book by Basil King is unquestionably the most noteworthy addition to contemporary Biblical comment. Friends and foes of religion will find that it portrays a story fascinating in dramatic fervor, absolutely untinged by denominational bias.

Few people have read the Bible with a mind open to its marvelous story value. Our reverence for it has blinded us to the wonderful color and romance of those early shepherd kings who found great revelations waiting for them in the desert. This book by Basil King will set your reading the Bible with a new enthusiasm and a new insight.

The Story of the Bible does not need to be retold. What it needs is explanation. That is why Basil King has written The Discovery of God.

MERRY O

Merry O is Mary Martha's most appropriate nickname. When she suddenly finds herself out of a job, with the cottage in New Paris, Iowa, sold over her head, with two sisters and a minister father on her hands, things have simply got to happen. Mary Martha's eclectic Philosophy gleaned from New Thoughts, Christian Science, Theosophy, Psychoanalysis, Mysticism, and Coue, might not alone set things right, but she is practical and has courage. She takes to the open road with the family in a Ford as a traveling book department. Adventures come thick and fast, and when she reaches Uncle Ben's household out in Colorado and encounters the Flesh and Bloods—you must meet them—it is Merry O's humor, vivacity and faith in the good that dominate a mysterious situation.

TOMORROW ABOUT THIS TIME

By Grace Livingston Hill.

Mrs. Hill has long been popular as a writer of novels which appeal to all members of the family. Her latest is no exception to this, yet also possesses a special appeal for fathers. It is the story of a man who sought to escape the responsibilities of fatherhood, and how he was made to realize how much of that glory which is every father's due he had sacrificed in self-seeking.

Patterson Greeves, a rising bacteriologist, returns from reconstruction work abroad to learn that his now nearly-grown daughters, Alice and Athalie, are about to come to live with him. The girls are both strangers to him and to each other, for Alice is the daughter of his first wife, who died shortly after the child was born, while Athalie is the daughter of his second wife who proved herself unworthy and from whom Greeves obtained a divorce. Alice returns to her father after having been raised by her mother's parents, while Athalie is returned to him by a decree of the court. The girls prove entirely different characters, Athalie a typical "flapper" who tries to manage everything including Greeves, while Alice is sweet and unselfish and anxious to win her father's love. Athalie hates her half-sister and takes every opportunity to humiliate her. Affairs go from bad to worse until Greeves is almost driven to distraction though deriving comfort in the companionship of Alice. The time comes, however, when Alice believes that she can best help her father by going away. In this there is precipitated a crisis, which, though apparently tragic, is the means of bringing happiness to all, and Greeves finds the romance which he had been seeking, in the romance of his children.

This novel, in many ways, particularly in its study of human relationships, will be considered one of the finest from Mrs. Hill's pen. J. B. Lippincott, Philadelphia, Pa. Price $2.

"We scarcely can hope to have a second-mile church with a half-mile pastor. And it is pretty difficult for any pastor to go the second mile, if he has to pull a half-mile church after him."

PEOPLE AND THINGS

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

Three members of an Oklahoma flogging party have been caught, convicted and incarcerated.—New York Evening Post.

Thurston B. Price and John E. Thomas, soloist, will begin a series of meetings at Steele Street M. E. church, Sanford, N. C., October 21st.

Kannapolis, N. C., with its 8,000 inhabitants is said to be the largest unincorporated town in the world. It has, also, the distinction of the largest towel factory on the planet.

Rev. M. T. Haw, who has completed a quadrennium on the St. Louis district, has been transferred to the Missouri conference. For 28 years he has been assistant secretary of the conference that he leaves to take an appointment elsewhere.

Rev. Frank L. Wells, pastor of Washington Street church, Petersburg, Va., has been transferred to the St. Louis conference and appointed presiding elder of the St. Louis district. Before going to Petersburg Dr. Wells was pastor at Ghent, Norfolk.

"Reverend and Mrs. Edwin Lyell Bain request the pleasure of your company at the marriage of their daughter, Esther Lyell, to Mr. James Stark White, on Tuesday evening, October the thirtieth, at half after six o'clock, thirteen hundred and six Holland Avenue, Norfolk, Virginia."

Dr. John S. Chadwick, formerly associated with Dr. T. N. Ivey in editing the Christian Advocate, but now a presiding elder in the North Carolina conference, will by agreement with all concerned continue the publication of the Methodist Handbook. This will be good news to all those familiar with the Handbook.

The one hundredth session of the Holston conference met at Bluefield, W. Va., October 4. Rev. J. A. Burrows has been secretary 30 years and was elected for the 31st time. Yet he is not an old man. A class of 15 was admitted on trial. Bishop Mouson told the brethren of the conference who thought the world is growing worse to take calomel.

Rev. Dr. Geo. D. Herman will preach his last sermon Sunday before leaving for the Western N. C. annual conference at Winston-Salem. He has served well the local church for four years and under the rules will not likely remain longer. He has at least seen the brick walls completed and the roof put on the handsome new church building now under construction.—Courier.

Last Sunday at Carraway Memorial, Greensboro, Rev. J. W. Kennedy received 51 new members on profession of faith. The Sunday school now has enrolled over 600 and more than 400 were present last Sunday. When Brother Kennedy went to that charge two years ago there was no Epworth League or Woman's Missionary Society. Now there are three active leagues and a very prosperous missionary society.

October 7 was rally day at the Faison church of which Rev. C. M. Lance is pastor. The house was filled both morning and evening. Subject of morning sermon by the pastor was "The Wooing Lover and the Lover Wooing," John 13:1. At the evening service ten minute addresses were made by J. J. Gibbons, superintendent of the Sunday school, and A. W. Oakes, charge lay leader. The services were quite successful.

Rev. S. T. Barber, pastor of the local Methodist church, is in Lewiston this week, assisting Rev. M. F. Hodges, of Aulander circuit, in a series of revival meetings. Rev. Mr. Barber delivered what many of his pastorate here think his best sermon last Sunday night, the subject being "Things We Will Do in Eternity." He will preach at the Ahsokie church next Sunday night at 7:30, this being his last sermon here before attending the annual conference at Winston-Salem.—Herald.

The men's Bible class of Park Place church, Greensboro, makes the following offering for October: October 7, "Abraham, the First World Citizen," "Dean" (D. W.) Bagley; October 14, "Israel, the Cradle of Great Religions," G. S. Ferguson, Jr.; October 21, "Israel, or Palestine—Then and Now, the Cross Roads of the World," Richard C. Kelly; October 28, "Jerusalem—the Original Radiating City," Charles A. Hines.

It was at Cooperstown, N. Y., that Abner Doubleday about 1845 originated the American game of baseball. Mr. Doubleday had little idea, I suppose, that this game would become one of the most scientific and exciting of the world's sports. The original "diamond" is still in use. A game was to be played on the ground in the afternoon of the day we were there. Not far from Cooperstown is Roxbury, the birthplace of John Burroughs.—R. S. Satterfield, in Christian Advocate.

"Use of a spanking machine equipment with broad paddles so arranged and geared as to administer varying degrees of punishment, according to the needs of the offender, was advocated at a conference of the Canadian Association of Child Protection officers. The spanker is to be used in place of jail sentences for first offenders." This is a new use for machinery even in this age of machine-made products. Why not extend the use of the machinery and have a kicking machine to use on "grown-ups."

From the Marion Mills charge: "Forty per cent increase in membership or enrollment in Sunday schools, 53 additions, mostly by vows to the church, and four missionary societies, with a membership of 61, whereas last year there were no such activities. This good work was organized by Mrs. Spinks, our pastor's wife. Two brand new beautiful churches with six Sunday school class rooms with a nice, large ladies' parlor at the Clinchfield church, each one heated by furnace and beautifully lighted. Valuation of these churches about $21,000, whereas last year we had nothing. We would be pleased to have our pastor returned, but our loyalty shall leave the matter entirely in the hands of the powers that be."

The well known story about Bishop Candler being accosted by a stranger on the railroad train who asked him whether he was a Christian or not, and having received from the bishop an affirmative reply proceeded to inquire further if he had received the second blessing, has reached Chicago and takes this form in the Northwestern Advocate: "Some one who was solicitous about Bishop Candler's religious experience addressed him once with the question: "My dear bishop, have you had the second blessing yet?" To which the bishop replied, with feigned seriousness, "I've had the first, the third, the fourth, the fifth and the four hundredth, but when I saw how it affected some who claimed to have it I skipped the second."

IN THE ABSENCE OF CLERGY

Some time ago a dinner was given in New York at which a well-known actor, who is something of a freethinker along theological lines, sat at the guest table. When the hour for starting the feast arrived the toastmaster, a very religious man, discovered that no minister of the gospel was present, though several had been invited. In this emergency he turned to the actor and asked him to say grace.

The actor rose, bowed his head, and in the midst of a deep hush said fervently:

"There being no clergyman present, let us thank God!"—Saturday Evening Post.

THE FOOT-PATH TO PEACE

Henry Van Dyke.

To be glad of life, because it gives you the chance to work and to play and to look up at the stars, to be satisfied with your possessions, but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them; to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness, and to fear nothing except cowardice; to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts; to covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners; to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ; and to spend as much time as you can, with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors—these are little guideposts on the footpath to peace.

THE CONFERENCE ORGAN

By means of the budget plan, or in some other practical way, let each church put the conference organ into every Methodist home. Let the circulation of church periodicals be diligently and faithfully promoted by the pastor and official members.—Book of Discipline.

TWELFTH ANNIVERSARY OF CHINA REPUBLIC CELEBRATED IN NASHVILLE

October 10th ushered in the twelfth anniversary of the Chinese Republic, which was celebrated in a fitting manner in Nashville by the Chinese students attending school in the city. Under the leadership of J. L. Huang, of Shanghai, they sponsored a patriotic program and pageant at historic McKendree on the evening of the 11th, which was witnessed by as many people as could find room in the auditorium.

Austin Peay, governor of Tennessee, delivered an address of welcome; Dr. E. H. Rawlings spoke for the Methodist Board of Missions, Chancellor Kirkland for Vanderbilt University and a representative of the foreign students for the various foreign groups studying in the city. Foreign students acted as ushers. The cosmopolitan audience included nationals from China, Japan, Korea, Brazil and Cuba.

Miss Lelia Judson Tuttle, one of the teachers of McTyeire at home on furlough, assisted the students in staging the pageant which followed the speeches of the evening. In a graphic and dramatic way this portrayed three stages of development of China. First, the China of the past, when footbinding, opium smoking and the old-style queues of the Manchu dynasty prevailed. The inequality of women with men, the binding superstitions, ancestral worship and beliefs of the olden days were effectively shown. Second, the epochal year of 1911, when Sun Yet Sen and his followers overthrew the Manchu dynasty. In this scene China discards her age-old standard of the dragon and adopts the rainbow flag of today—the one which she calls "The Return of Light," showing the lateral stripes by which she now represents her five provinces. Third, the China of today. The president in the "White House"; the adoption of a constitution and suitable laws; the prohibition of footbinding, the suppression of the traffic in opium, the emancipation of women and passing of polygamy was pictured in this scene. Western dress and the coming of Western ways was also featured.

NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE, INFORMATION WANTED

Elizabeth City will wish to provide comfortable entertainment for the conference, but it will facilitate our work and save some of our people from disappointment if we can know beforehand the expected guests who will not attend. I shall therefore count it a favor if all preachers, delegates and members of boards who find that they will be unable to attend will notify me of that fact as soon as they themselves know it.

I shall also be glad to know those who expect to bring their automobiles with them.

N. H. D. Wilson,
Elizabeth City, N. C.

DEDICATION OF CHURCH AT NASHVILLE

On Sunday, October 28th, at eleven o'clock a. m. the handsome and commodious church building in Nashville, N. C., is to be dedicated. The sermon of the hour will be delivered by Dr. Asheley Chappell of Asheville. This is to be a big day with Nashville Methodists who during this conference year have raised an indebtedness of eighty-five hundred dollars. All former pastors of the Nashville charge are cordially invited to be present for the dedication ceremonies.

E. C. Few.

WIRELESS FROM JAPAN

You will be interested in the wireless received this morning from Bishop H. A. Boaz, Seoul, Korea, which reads as follows:

W. W. Pinson: Methodist Episcopal Church earthquake damage as far as can be ascertained amounts to about 1,000,000 gold dollars. We strongly recommend that Methodist Episcopal Church, South, give 100,000 American gold dollars so as to afford some relief. Letter posted today.

H. A. Boaz.

"Yes, I was raised with the Advocate; it attended me as an infant in the cradle; during my childhood days it fostered and developed and helped to guide my steps through from youth to maturity, and now since I have established my own family connection and standards the Advocate continues to blaze and lighten my pathway to the better things of life."

Our Monthly Sermon: Some Lessons From an Eagle

By George Cleaton Wilding

What picture book is our Bible! No wonder, for it came into being in a land where the people had pictured minds—vivid fancies and florid imaginations. Like our American Indians, they thought and talked in pictures. Some day somebody with a glorious imagination and the spirit of an artist, and a big bank account to back him, will get out an ideal edition of this old Book. It will be issued in a large number of volumes, with plain, clear type, so as to be attractive and easy and inviting to read. Every mental picture in the book—and there are thousands of them, especially in the Psalms and Proverbs—will be caught up by the artist's mind and stamped in a physical picture upon the pages of these glowing volumes. What a Bible this would be for children. I should love to live to see it.

For instance, turn to that interesting book of Deuteronomy, and in the thirty-second chapter at the eleventh verse look at that open air picture—"As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings: So the Lord alone did lead him." Isn't that vivid? Can't you see it all?

One summer morning as Sir Humphrey Davy, that famous English scientist, and inventor of the miner's safety-lamp, was out walking near the foot of old Mount Ben Nevis, in Scotland, he witnessed leisurely this entire interesting and unique process.

The mother bird carefully examined her brood of little fledglings. Being satisfied, evidently, with their growth and attainments, she ruthlessly tumbled them all out of the nest. Then she tore to pieces the crude nest, made of bits of sticks and weeds, and deliberately pushed these fragments out over the edge of the precipice. The nest was on the very peak of a wild, desolate crag, beyond the reach of man and beast. She herself could manage to guard it against any attack of an enemy on wings.

Now came the critical moment. This mother, who had hitherto had seemed to be a miracle of kindness, now appeared to have lost all of her maternal affection. Without any show of mercy she shoved each of those helpless little birds over the edge of the cliff. Frightened almost out of their wits, they instinctively spread their wings to check their fall, moved these tender little wings for the first time, and made the interesting discovery that they could fly. Affrighted and tumbling, they climbed back on the cliff.

The experienced mother suffered them to rest for a few moments, then she pushed them all off again. This time she flew off with them, and gave them a lesson in flying. She would fly around in a great spiral, widening the circles as she ascended, and the little eagles followed her. As they grew weary she darted beneath them, took them on her broad back and rested them as she floated around. When rested she shook them off, and they followed her in another circling circle until all of them disappeared in the blue sky. On another morning Sir Humphrey made a new discovery. If any man or beast, or bird of prey drew near, this noble mother would see the danger in an instant, dart beneath the little birds, get them on her back, and dash away to a place of safety.

What a wonderful bird! What a marvellous endowment! Her matchless care for her young is here used to typify our Lord's love for and care for His people. Could we have a more beautiful and winsome picture of the Divine love and care? May we glean a few of the simple lessons that lie on the surface here for our benefit?

The Lord weans His people from improper resting places by means and methods which seem to us hard and severe. He in His kindness is constantly trying to teach us that this world is not our abiding or permanent home. We act if the Lord were mistaken in this, and that we are here to stay for all time to come. If a stranger from another world were to spend a few days with us his idea would be that we lived as if we were to abide here permanently. The Lord found Israel in Goshen, prosperous and happy as well as wealthy. They were perfectly content to remain there. But God had greater and better things in store for them, Joseph died. "A king arose who knew not Joseph." The children of Israel were put to work, burdened and tyrannized over with persecution. In desperation at last they were content and willing, yes, eager to escape from Egypt and march out to Cacaan.

If we had everything we want down here we would scarcely be willing to exchange this world for heaven. As a company of ministers were riding through a lovely suburb and admiring the beautiful and comfortable homes, one minister expressed his wish that he might spend his days of retirement in such a home. A white-haired veteran promptly spoke up, "I'm content to live in my little cottage. When I leave that for heaven the contrast will be greater."

A great bird, flying over a valley on a cold winter day, beheld a carcass upon a huge cake of ice floating down the river. He descended and settled down to feed to the full. It took a long time to satisfy his hunger. When at last he was ready to rise he found that the tips of his wings were frozen fast to the ice-cake. He was a prisoner. He had the carcass but had lost his liberty. When the good Lord finds us freezing fast to this world, in His great mercy, He sends something to thaw us loose and set us at liberty.

If we are in wealth and luxury losing our spiritual vitality and love for the things of His kingdom, He has a way of breaking down these fences which hem us in, and setting us free. The riches may take unto themselves wings and fly away, but in so doing they leave us by far the richer for this loss.

It may be that our business is of such a character as not to honor God. At such times there comes a break up and a change, and the nest is broken up that we may have something better.

Sometimes our social surroundings are crippling us, and we can scarcely tell what led to the smashing of our cosy, social nest. But we are sure to find later on that it was good for us.

The Lord encourages us in our weakness and inexperience to put forth an effort to rise. Breaking up the nest was only the first lesson. The good Lord means not to leave us homeless, out in the cold world. But, like the eagle-mother He encourages us to put forth our feeble effort and learn to fly. As we discover our young wings we must use them to learn their value. Hitherto we have walked, plodding along the weary way as best we could. Henceforth we exchange our feet for wings. "Be like the bird who, pausing in her flight awhile on boughs too slight, feels them give way beneath her, and yet sings, knowing that she hath wings." We enter upon the larger, freer life of faith and trust, rather than that of form and ceremony. We are to assume responsibility and bear our share of the burdens for His glory. We are to shrink at nothing if thereby we can honor His name. We are to use our newly discovered wings freely and gladly. The fresh atmosphere of these higher altitudes is bracing and strengthening.

We are stimulated to these new exertions by the examples of the noble men and women all around us; by the exhibition of the divine perfections. "Be ye holy for I am holy." And by the spotless, tireless life of the Divine Son of God, "who went about doing good," and who "worked while it was yet day, for the night comes when no man can work."

When our strength fails us, the kind Lord bears us up on His strong wings. There come times in the life of every Christian when all seems dark and gloomy around us. Our courage appears to forsake us. We feel weak and weary. To all appearances we are at the end of our strength. We can do nothing more. We feel that we must stumble and fall. In this alarming and dreadful emergency He comes to our help. Like the mother eagle, the Lord's broad wings sweep beneath us and bear us aloft.

He takes us at such times on the wings of His promises: "My grace is sufficient for thee." "I will never leave you nor forsake you." "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world." "Come unto me and I will give you rest." How downy and safe and warm and strong are these blessed wings of His assurance.

Then in such seasons of despondency we are supported on the wings of Christian sympathy. Good men and women realize our emergency and assure us of this love and confidence. How sweet and comforting at such hours is this kindred sympathy, and how strongly are we supported by it. It is as comforting wings beneath us.

And in these times of discouragement we often are borne up on the wings of devotion in the services of the house of the Lord. Some sentence of prayer, the verse of some dear, familiar old hymn, a few words of Christian testimony from the lips of one of God's faithful followers, a thrilling sentiment or noble thought in the sermon of the pastor; any one of these are as wings beneath our fainting form and we are lifted up.

When all else appears to fail His Holy Spirit, with wings of tenderness and strength, bears us up. How many of us could testify to these expressions of divine thoughtfulness and care? When we seemed to be sinking, and there was nothing in sight to cling to, there came upon us a sweet and satisfying sense of the Divine presence. Beyond the power to express it there swept into our being a wonderful supply of strength and marvellous sense of security. We floated upward on invisible wings. We were safe beyond all harm and danger.

We are frequently thrown upon our own strength and resources in order to develop our powers. This mother bird shook the little birds off of her back as soon as they were rested. They were not riding simply for the sake of the ride; but the rest was simply to fit them for greater flights. So the Lord does not pamper and unduly shelter His children. That would spoil them. Figuratively speaking, when the danger is over and we are rested, He turns us loose to "fight the good fight of faith."

The large purpose of the Christian life is not ease and comfort, nor enjoyment and happiness; and yet, in a large measure we are to possess these blessings. But God's plan is our growth and development as a means to an end. And that end is the largest possible usefulness among our fellowmen, that in the ultimate end we may glorify Him—"whom we are and whom we serve." And this growth is also the key to the broadest Christian enjoyment.

It is exercise that leads to development. The use of our powers makes them flexible, usable and powerful. Those young eaglets could never attain to large liberty in flight save by breasting the stiff breezes of the highlands and mastering the strongest currents. So with the fish as it dashes up the swiftest ripple in the mountain stream.

One summer day I was out for a jaunt amid the mountains of that young state of Washington. I crossed a rustic bridge over a rushing stream just below an old mill. My attention was caught by a good big salmon trying to swim up the steep mill-race—a long wooden through, some two feet broad and a foot deep. Several times the swift current tossed him back. But he tried it by zigzagging from wall to wall, and made it into the stream above. I shouted, "Good for you, old fellow. Never say fail!" It was such feats as that which developed fine power.

The tall pine on the mountain peak, wrestling with the wildest storm, sends its roots down deeper into the loosened, yielding soil, and is better fitted to grapple with future storms. The athlete in all manner of contests and conflicts is steadily developing additional power for future feats of strength. The healthy, growing child, in all its play, racing, romping, climbing and straining, is steadily laying up supplies of strength and power for the coming days of maturity, just around the bend.

Without the discipline that comes from temptations, trials, losses, disappointments, and even occasional failures, we should never attain to the glory and perfection of Christian manhood and womanhood in the kingdom of Christ. But for these we should remain to the last but babes in Christ. There are by far too many of these in all our churches.

Nothing in this world is more attractive and interesting than a baby—while it is a baby. But if a boy child keeps playing with blocks till his beard is grown, and a girl baby keeps tugging a rag doll around after she is in long dresses, then they cease to be interesting and become objects of pity or contempt. Some of these overgrown babes in the church are little better.

It is not too much to say that we should be brave enough to thank the Lord, reverently and sincerely, for everything that tries and tests us, because of the increased supply of strength, courage and confidence that they lead to. For out of all of this comes our larger usefulness in life, and the greater honor we add to His name.

If any real danger threatens us the Lord comes swiftly to our rescue. As this eagle mother had her eye open to scan the horizon for any sign of danger, so our heavenly Father "encampeth about them that fear Him." Nothing escapes His vision. At the appearance of real danger this mother bird swept under her little fledglings, settled them on her broad back, and swept away to a place of safety. The Lord loves His children more tenderly than any mother bird loves her little ones. When we are exposed to danger or peril of any sort from any source whatever He is near us. His almighty arm is bared for our protection and deliverance. Always He is "mighty to save and strong to deliver." "He that is for us is more than all that can come against us." "No evil can befall those who put their trust in Him." With swelling hearts we can freely and jubilantly sing:

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in His excellent word;
What more can He say than to you He hath said,
To you who for refuge to Jesus have fled.

"Fear not, I am with thee. O, be not dismayed,
For I am thy God and will still give thee aid;
I'll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand,
Upheld by my righteous, omnipotent hand.

"The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose,
I will not, I will not desert to his foes;
That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake,
I'll never, no never, no never forsake!"

AN ADDRESS ON RELIGION

By President Robert H. Wright.

(The following is a stenographic report of a chapel talk delivered to the college students by President Wright on the first Saturday of the college year. It is published without revision. His remarks were entirely extemporaneous.)

I want to talk to you just a little bit this morning on the subject of religion. I want you to understand the position of this college with reference to the churches, and with reference to your religious life. Let me preface all I am going to say by telling you that this a state institution, and in no sense of the word is it denominational. The state of North Carolina has every denomination in it, and it makes no difference to the state what church you belong to. It makes a great deal of difference to you as an individual, but it doesn't make any difference to the state.

We do not require church attendance. You know you cannot make a person a Christian; you can't force Christianity on people any way. We do not require it, we cannot require it, and we don't want to require it, but the state of North Carolina does want you and all the citizens of North Carolina to be the type of citizen that Christians are, that members of the churches are, because they make the best type of citizens.

Now you do not have to go to church, you do not have to join the Y. W. C. A., and you do not have to go to Sunday school, but with all of the energy that we can put into it we do urge you, very greatly do we urge you, to attend one of the Sunday schools, and attend the religious services of the churches regularly. It will make you a finer type of woman. Make a church home for yourself while you are here; go to Sunday school and stay through the church services. The college, through the Y. W. C. A., provides a religious service here each Sunday evening at 7:30 for the development of the religious life of the student body of the college. "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth" and don't forget that everything you do will be brought into judgment, whether it is something right, or whether it is something wrong. A human being is a physical animal, and I have seen a few in this world that seem to me to be practically nothing but physical animals. They are unfortunates. A normal human being is more than just a physical animal. A normal being has a mental life that directs what the physical man does, and unless that mental life does direct the physical, then the human being ceases to be normal and becomes purely animal.

This college is organized in a large measure to help you develop the mental side of your life, and to take care of and properly safeguard that physical body of yours. The physical man is simply the home for the mental man. But that isn't all. Over and above both physical and mental is the spiritual man, and unless you properly develop that spiritual side of your life you cannot be a well rounded human being.

The Y. W. C. A., the church, the Sunday school, and the church services are the chief organizations for the proper development of that spirit life of yours, but not the only ones. Don't misinterpret me, because the spirit of the man enters into everything that he does. I said it was over and above the physical and the mental, and it is. On the other hand it is under the mental and the physical as the main spring from which the impulses come that give you your ambition and desire. In that subconscious soul of yours in a sense is found the seat of the spirit life. It is the spirit with which we go into a thing that determines the way we look at it. It gives the coloring matter to it; it gives the viewpoints that we hold. That spirit that you cannot afford to neglect—your spiritual life.

There may be someone here who will say "I am not religious." Yes, you are. "No, I am not a bit religious." But you are; you are just ignorant. You don't know what religion is. Every normal being is spiritual, because that is a part of us. The real life of a human being is the spirit life. We came out from God and we live here for a while in this physical body, directed by this mental part of our lives, and we pass off the scene of action and go back into the Great Spirit. We are a part of it. The Bible tells us that "ye are God's"—that we are a part of this great scheme, and if you say you have no spirit life you just simply do not know. It is there, and the essential part of every human being. A well rounded man is a man who is properly cared for and properly developed physically, properly cared for and developed mentally, and the same with reference to his spirit life.

I wouldn't give two cents for the boy or girl who doesn't try to fix himself up and look the best he can without putting too much drug store on. You know the buzzard will plume his feathers. It is all right to make clothes that look attractive. It is all right to fix your hair in the most attractive way possible. It is all right so to dress and so to carry yourselves to be attractive. You ought to do it. You are not doing your full duty by yourself unless you do. But to make your whole life that is to make yourself one-sided.

Plume your feathers all you can, make yourself just as attractive as you can physically, and then make yourself just as attractive as you can mentally, then make yourself just as attractive as you can spiritually. Then you will be what God wants you to be, the most perfect human being that you can make of yourself. I am taking this time this first Saturday morning because we are all interested in you. We want every student who enters this college to go away from here very much improved physically, mentally and spiritually. We want you to go back to your homes with nine months of service to yourself in the college that makes of you a better and higher type of citizen, and we can't do it if you neglect the spiritual side of your life.

It doesn't make any difference at all which church you go to, but it does make a great deal of difference whether you go to any at all. We do want you to go to one, and I am very anxious for you to go to a particular one, and that particular one is the church of your choice or the choice of your family. Not my church; no, I don't want you to go to mine unless you are a member of it. Go to your church, that is the one we want you to go to.

The way to develop yourself is to go to your church if your church is here. If not, then select another church you want to go to and go to that one. But if you find in the town of Greenville the church of your choice we all want you to go to that church; whatever church it is, make it your church home, and let me tell you they will be just as glad to see you as they can be. They will meet you there tomorrow morning with a glad hand of welcome. The churches of this town will be delighted to see you, and to see you as members of the Sunday school. Join the Sunday school tomorrow, don't put it off. Join it tomorrow and go there regularly.

I do hope that from the standpoint of your spiritual life that this will be the best year in your life up to this time, because we all want you young women to grow and develop while you are here.

Write a long letter home tomorrow and give them all the news, and make it cheerful. Don't write that letter and send it that will make the homefolks sad. If you can't help it, if you just must write that letter, I don't care if you send it to your homefolks, but your homefolks will care and you will regret it later.

Get control of yourself, you know that is the biggest thing in all education—self-mastery—the ability to control yourself, and until you get that you can't control any one else, and your spirit life will help you to get that. It is a great safety valve.

"GOD CREATED SIN"

I am fearful that the average Christian would never conceive that the infinite perfect God created sin; He did, however.

When God made man He did not limit man's mind to think and do only that which is good, but He gave to man a free will with which to choose between good and evil, thereby giving man entire latitude to do the alternative.

It was necessary for God to create sin along with good, for without sin God would not know His faithful servants from the unfaithful ones.

God himself created sin in the Garden of Eden, when He designated to our first parents the trees of good and evil fruits.

However, God did not create each and every individual sin in the world today, but God did make the element by which sin could grow.

Good is not known to man until he has been told of that which is good and neither is sin known to man until that which is sin has been made known to him.

Without sin it would be necessary for us to be good, for the reason that we would not know otherwise; and God saw the need of giving man a free will and establishing His law and also that which affronts Him, at the beginning of time.

Compulsory good is worthless; but mutual good is worth all.
Harry Daniels.

I have forgotten the name of the wit who said that "In the beginning God created man in His own likeness, and man has been returning the compliment ever since." Beneath the crust of sarcasm lies a truth which warrants no jesting. Man is the profoundest revelation of God. The typical Man shrank not from affirming, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father." "Even imagination roots in experience. Except upon the basis of things felt or seen or dreamed—or their contrasts—none can visualize God at all." Man at his highest expresses what God is. Else it means nothing that we are His children. I should not pick a faithless son to declare a human father; but a noble son would amply do it. The danger is that we may not image God at our own best; that we limit Him by our pettiness; narrow Him because we are provincial. As a Yankee preacher once put it: "We New Englanders think that, because we wear cowhide boots, God does too; and if ours are number ten, we don't want His to vary more than half a size."—George Clarke Peck.

KEEP GOING

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
And the road you're treading seems all uphill,
When the funds are low and the debts are high,
And you want to smile, but you have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest if you must—but don't you quit.

Often the goal is nearer than
It seems to a faint and faltering man.
Often the struggler has given up,
When he might have captured the victor's cup;
And he learned too late, when night slipped down,
How close he was to the laureled crown.

Success is failure turned inside out—
The silver tint of the clouds of doubt—
And you never can tell how close you are,
It may be near when it seems afar;
So stick to the fight when you're hardest hit—
It's when things seem worst that you must not quit.

FIELD NEWS

APPRECIATION OF REV. SEYMOUR TAPLOR

The following resolution was unanimously adopted at the fourth quarterly conference of the Morven circuit: Inasmuch as Rev. Seymour Taylor has served this charge four years and will be assigned a new work at the approaching conference, therefore be it resolved:

First, That both as a preacher and pastor Brother Taylor has served the charge faithfully and efficiently.

Second, All of the churches on the charge have made good progress and have been strengthened both materially and spiritually and we feel that much and lasting good has been accomplished.

Third, We pray God's blessing upon him and his family in his new field and assure him that he will ever hold a warm place in our affections.

LETTER FROM REV. GEO. T. SIMMONS

There are many things in the North Carolina Christian Advocate worthy of commendation, but I wish to specially commend the communication on "Too Much Moving Among Methodist Preachers." I might give you some experiences that would open the eyes of some loyal laymen with regard to some of their brethren on other charges and maybe among themselves, but I desist. I am happy to say that as a layman I never had a pastor I didn't love, and during my ministerial career I've never had a presiding elder that I didn't love. If one of them ever did me an injustice he was skillful enough to keep me from knowing it. One who was my presiding elder oftener and longer than any other, had opportunities to show his love and sympathy that no other had, and to him I shall ever have a warm place in my heart for personal favors. That one is R. B. John.

I am in the Infirmary of Catawba Sanatorium, trying to write as I lie flat on my back, but no special T. B. trouble. My wife is on the lower floor, a bed patient. One of my nurses takes me down to see her about twice a week.

God bless you and yours, and the Advocate and the Advocate staff.

Geo. T. Simmons.

APPROVED LIST OF PREACHERS' INSTITUTE

By R. H. Bennett.

The General Conference directs that undergraduate preachers shall take their conference studies either through one of the correspondence schools at Emory University and at Southern Methodist University, or at a preachers' institute which is approved by the General Conference Board of Education. In accordance with this ruling, the preachers' institutes have reported their work to the Board of Education and acting through the executive committee, the board has authorized me to publish the following as the list of institutes approved by the Board of Education, and whose work

NEW PARSONAGE IN THE PIEDMONT CHARGE

A united effort on the part of the members and friends of the churches of the charge has made it possible for the pastor and family to occupy one of the neatest, most complete and convenient parsonages in the Rockingham district. It is not the most expensive, neither is it the largest. It is just a conservative, common sense building put together by honest, skilled workmen out of the best materials obtainable. Much credit is due the building committee for both the high quality of the workmanship and materials. Fortunately, the committee chose Mr. J. R. Ephland as chairman, and it finally devolved upon him to supervise the work.

The house consists of six large rooms, a linen closet, pantry, closet in one bed room, and one in the study, three porches and a hall. It is built upon a solid brick foundation, with a door and window in the foundation wall. Since the lower side of the foundation wall is six feet high, two or three rooms could be provided for by digging out two feet of earth.

The parsonage was painted ivory and trimmed in white. The outside sash and screens are finished in black enamel. The doors, picture moulding and two cabinet mantles are finished in mahogany. The most of the furnishings have been purchased to match the doors. Porches and steps were painted light gray. The interior floors were dressed and finished in a light linoleum.

The house is electrically lighted throughout, and fitted with neat, attractive, but modest fixtures.

Well fitted plumbing fixtures in both kitchen and bath add a hundred per cent to the convenience of the home. The ladies of the furnishing committee made this convenience complete by installing a range which is connected with the boiler, furnishing hot water throughout the system.

D. A. Petty, P. C.

is therefore to be accepted by the annual conference examining committees:

Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi conferences — Seashore Divinity School, Biloxi, Miss.

Central Texas, Texas — Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas.

North Texas, West Texas — Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex.

Florida — Southern College, Lakeland, Fla.

East and West Oklahoma — Oklahoma City, Okla.

Holston — Emory and Henry College, Emory, Va.

Missouri, Southwest Missouri, and St. Louis — Central College, Fayette, Mo.

North Carolina, Western North Carolina — Trinity College, Durham, N. C.

Tennessee and Memphis — Clarksville, Tenn.

South Carolina, Upper South Carolina — Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C.

Western Virginia — Barboursville, W. Va.

We are informed by those in charge that no record was kept of the work of the institute held at Birmingham-Southern College. The board is therefore unable to make any report on this institute, as no statement of this work has been received.

It is a source of gratification to announce that most of the institutes have done good work. A small number of the institutes did not come up to requirements on all points. In view of the newness of the situation and in order to give the new regulations time for adjustment, the board has decided to announce the above list as the list of approved institutes. This does not mean, however, that the board approved all the work of all the institutes, but that for the present year this list stands as announced, with the understanding that those few imperfect institutes are all to be brought up to the standard next year.

IN MEMORY OF OTHER DAYS

Allow me space to express my hearty appreciation of the admirable and discriminating sketch of our late ascended ambassador to the Court of St. James, Walter Hines Page, in your issue of September 13, written con amore by Dr. George Wilding.

During my student life at the University of North Carolina I knew of his daring career as journalist and man of letters—a Tar Heel of distinct promise and of whom Carolinians were justly proud. Also at Chapel Hill I knew and loved the family of Joseph B. Martin, a heroic herald of the cross, who baptized me in infancy. One of the charming daughters of that household became the wife of Hon. Frank Page of Aberdeen.

It was on the suggestion of my college room-mate, Horace Williams, that I nominated and secured the appointment of the Rev. Frank C. Woodward, a rising young Methodist minister of Virginia, for delivering the commencement address before the Young Men's Christian Association of the university. Walter Page saw the announcement and wrote for the Chapel Hill Ledger a facetious note of commendation of his warm personal friend, "Gig" Woodward. Mr. Woodward delivered a superb discourse on Shakespeare and the Bible, which made a strong impression on the student body and the visitors. His address and presence on that occasion became a providential link in a chain of circumstances that led to his election to the chair of English in Wofford College and subsequently to the presidency of the University of South Carolina.

Dr. Wilding's excellent portrayal of one of the noblemen of the good Old North State should by all means be published in a booklet and distributed widely among the youth for their admiration and emulation.

FORWARD STRIDES ON THE IN-GOLD CHARGE

Ingold charge has made splendid forward strides this conference year, for which we are humbly thankful to God. These splendid people have cooperated with this pastor from the beginning of his pastorate here to the present day.

During the year we have erected a splendid little church plant at Garland, having five Sunday school rooms, which is paid for.

We have secured a building lot and sufficient subscriptions at Atkinson, N. C., that will enable us to commence work on a creditable church plant there early in the coming church year.

Revival services have been held at Epworth church, where the pastor did the preaching. Rev. J. A. Tharpe of Roseboro, N. C., did some splendid work for us at Johnson's Chapel. I should like to make special mention of the meeting at Antioch church in Bladen county. The following very earnest and consecrated laymen from Fayetteville conducted these services from time to time: Messrs. R. S. Sherrill, C. J. Cooper, J. F. Parker, A. E. Martin, B. F. Kisler, Oscar Breece, T. S. Tolar, W. B. Malloy, W. B. Webb, W. T. Saunders, O. N. Goff, R. H. Upton, J. P. Lee, Curle, Sanders, Boone, McAllister and Kelly, Drs. J. D. McNeill, J. H. Judd and H. G. Sanderford, and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Blount. Among these are bankers, business men, farmers and doctors who, after a hard day's work, are going out from ten to six miles from home in the effort to lead men to Christ, and they are having splendid success. They will accept no financial reward for their services, even bearing the expense of these trips themselves. A splendid reward awaits them in heaven. Our charge has been helped during the revival season in every phase of church life. We have seen many come to Christ, and quite a number have been added to the church. The pastor is now conducting a series of children's services in the Garland church, preparatory to a meeting which we expect to hold there next week. Brother J. A. Tharpe is to assist us. Edwin W. Hurst, Jr.,

Pastor.

THANKS TO THE ROBERT E. LEE HOTEL

At a regular meeting of Centenary Baraca Class held in the ball room of the Robert E. Lee Hotel Sunday, October 7, 1923, being probably our last meeting to be held here, the following resolution was unanimously adopted by the 80 members present:

Whereas, during the period of remodeling of Centenary Methodist Sunday school building, which work has been under way for a period of, approximately, ten months, now happily nearing completion; and

Whereas, during this entire time we have, through the courtesy of the management of the Robert E. Lee Hotel, used this ball room as our meeting place to the great delight and comfort of class officers, members and numerous visitors, now therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the unanimous desire of the members of Centenary Baraca class that their heartfelt thanks and appreciation be conveyed to the management of the Robert E. Lee Hotel for their great kindness in affording us, without charge, such splendid quarters for our meetings, as well as for unfailing courtesy of Manager Tenille and his able and efficient staff, for the free and unstinted use of piano and other furnishings, and that we appreciate the frequent meetings with us of Manager Tenille, and express the hope that he may find it convenient to continue his visits in our new home.

Resolved further, That this resolution be transmitted to Manager Tenille of the Robert E. Lee Hotel, and that copies be given our city newspapers for publication, with the concurrence of the hotel management, also to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, the official organ of the North Carolina conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

WANTED

To know what has become of the good old fashioned quarterly meeting, when we did not have to rush through in one day, and the communion of our Lord's Supper was always administered. We are rushing, rushing—but are we getting anywhere?

Anxious Inquirer.

A TRIBUTE TO MR. PROFFITT

Now our hearts are filled with sorrow,
As we think the time so near
When our much beloved pastor
Will have other churches next year.

In our hearts we feel a sadness,
Just because he is to go;
But some other church will have him
And that church is sure to grow.

And no matter where he goes to,
In our memory still he'll be,
And we never can forget him—
No, not such a man as he.

For we have enjoyed his presence
During these four years of work;
May we follow his example
And our duty never shirk.

Ever ready at the calling
Of any who are in need;
And his lips have spoken comfort,
If we would only take heed.

And his sermons are a lamplight
Guiding us from day to day,
And they make us better Christians
As we travel on our way.

Not a man for worldly pleasures,
But a man for God alone;
As a good and tender shepherd,
He will care for all his own.

And he loves and serves his Master,
And to Him he's ever true;
Always busy in His service,
Finding some good thing to do.

And we want to deeply thank him
For the nice communion set
Which he gave our congregation—
This kind deed we can't forget.

And our prayers and our good wishes
Follow him on land and sea;
And may Jesus ever bless him
Anywhere that he may be.

And we want to recommend him
To his people of next year;
And may he prove to them a blessing,
As he has done to us here.

And may Jesus ever guide him
And hold him by the hand,
And lead him on into the city,
In that happy, promised land.

LIFE AND ACTIVITIES OF DR. COLUMBUS FEW

Dr. Columbus Few was born at O'Neal, Greenville county, South Carolina, February 12, 1848, and died at his home in Hendersonville, N. C., at 5:15 p. m., October 3, 1923, aged 75 years, seven months and 21 days.

He was the youngest and only surviving child of four born to Benjamin and Mary Bramlet Few.

He came of a long lived family, his father living to be 78 years of age. His grandfather, William Few, was a soldier in the war of 1812. His great-grandfather, William Few, came to South Carolina from Georgia and founded the Few family in South Carolina. James Few was his father and was one of the first to shed blood in the war of the Revolution.

William Few, father of James Few, was a colonel and descended from Richard Few, who came to this country from Wales with William Penn. Like Penn, the aboriginal Fews were Quakers, but early were associated with Wesley, Asbury and Fletcher.

Ignatius Few, founder of Emory College, Oxford, Georgia, was a collateral ancestor of Dr. C. Few. Dr. William Preston Few, president of Trinity College, a son of the late Dr. Benjamin Franklin Few, is Dr. C. Few's cousin.

War Record.

Dr. Few when 17 years old left home and came to Asheville and joined the Confederate army, serving six months, and was in some of the skirmishes in and around Battery Hill, now Battery Park, Asheville, N. C. After the surrender he returned home to find employment on the farm of his father, who was a cotton planter.

Studied Medicine.

He set himself in early manhood to the study of medicine, graduating from the University of Maryland in 1875.

He practiced four years in South Carolina. It was at the end of two years of this period that he was married to Miss Floried Justus of Hendersonville, October 22, 1878. To them were born five children, Vernon, deceased, Mrs. Harry Ewbank, Mrs. Michael Schenck, both of Hendersonville, N. C., Benjamin Few, of Charleston, S. C., and Columbus Few, Jr., of Hendersonville, N. C.

He came to Hendersonville in 1881 and after establishing what is now the oldest drug store in Henderson county, the Justus Pharmacy, and operating it for a time entered actively the practice of medicine in Hendersonville and the surrounding country. He continued to practice for nearly 25 years.

Generous.

He was generous to a fault. He did much charity work as a physician. He never turned down a call for lack of ability to compensate. He took his profession too seriously and sacredly to allow it to degenerate into a commercial proposition. The world can never repay the debt due those physicians of another generation when hospitals were few and inaccessible, who gave of their time and substance to the relief of human suffering. Dr. Few's name will live always in the affection of this section of the state where his greatest life work was wrought. He contributed generously out of his pocket to people of every class and condition who were in misfortune and always without ostentation. Many men with such a practice would have amassed a fortune.

He was one of the prime movers in the erection of the church in Hendersonville now being removed to make way for a new one. He with Dr. Dan Atkins and others built the present Methodist parsonage. He studied the interests of the church and looked with fidelity to the keeping of the church records.

Having been a steward of the church in Hendersonville since his connection with it he was by his associates elected steward emeritus for life a year ago. He organized the Susannah Wesley Bible class and was its first teacher.

Resigning his office as trustee on account of failing health, an office he held as he treated all things sacred with great diligence, never willing to do anything half-heartedly, he was a year ago reluctantly released and his son bearing his name appointed to the place.

Hospitality.

Dr. Few's home has been for a generation the home of Methodist preachers. Presiding elders seldom visited the charge without the comfort of his home with its culture and refinement, made so by one who has so nobly shared with him all the joys and sorrows which go with public service, and who with him has the distinction of that reputation which belongs to those who are everyone's friend.

Friend.

Loyal to his own church and profession he was a friend to all. Love was his favorite theme. He was truly the St. John the Beloved of Hendersonville as well as the beloved physician. He is among the last of the members of the "Old Guard," his close fellow-worker, Dr. Waldrop, having preceded him by but a few brief years.

A Great Sufferer.

For twenty years he has been a great sufferer. His face though bearing the marks of pain, never ceased to beam with love and kindness. He clung to his friends and members of his family as his dearest earthly possession to the last.

The end came with the calm of an autumn sunset. The only cloud was that in which Jesus came to receive him unto Himself. His dream of one standing on the brink and saying: "There is no other Way" was verified. The tender physician who had helped so many back to this life found in Christ Jesus the Lord one able to admit him to the land whose inhabitants shall not say I am sick.

Funeral.

The funeral service as he had wished and in keeping with the request of the family consisted of the simple ritual for the burial of the dead according to the Methodist church without comments with the statement from the pastor, Rev. Frank Siler, who had charge, that Dr. Few's life was its own best message. Dr. Siler was assisted by Dr. E. E. Bomar in conducting the service, which was held in the First Baptist church. Frank Siler.

STRAITS CIRCUIT

Just a word or two to those who would like to hear from our Sunday school at Sumerfield church. We are moving on very nicely; our good superintendent, R. E. L. Davis, is always at his post through sunshine and rain. Prof. Banks and his wife and several other high school teachers here at Smyrna are taking much interest in our Sunday school and we do give them a hearty welcome indeed.

Pray for us that we may all be faithful to the end and some day change the old rugged cross for a crown.

Carrie L. Whitehurst, Sec.

RESOLUTIONS

In view of the fact that the laws of our church are such that four years service in a district is all the time a presiding elder can serve,

Therefore, be it resolved, That we regret the time has come for our beloved presiding elder, Rev. H. H. Jordan, to be removed from us to some other field.

We wish here to express our high appreciation for his most earnest and faithful performance of his duties and commend his loyalty to the church and to the charges to which he has been sent. Especially his work on the Shelby district, in the bounds of the Dallas-High Shoals charge.

We regret his going and here commend him to the charge to which he may be sent.

Let a copy be sent him and a copy to the Gastonia Gazette and North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication. S. A. Wilkins, Dallas. D. A. Medlin, High Shoals.

FACING THE FACTS

By W. W. Pinson.

If you do not like to face facts do not read this. If you do, or want to learn that art, read it twice.

1. One of the main planks in the Centenary platform was that we should "double the regular income." It was clearly foreseen that unless this was done, embarrassment would be inevitable.

2. Instead of doing this, the regular income for the Foreign Department, General Work, has been reduced from $654,517 in 1918 to $464,089 in 1922.

3. The foreign was the one assessment which was not increased in 1922, notwithstanding the vast increase in the budget.

4. One and a half million dollars on which we had been relying for our European work, was voted by the General Conference for the building of churches in university centres.

5. There were some $11,000,000 beyond the bareaskings pladged in the Centenary. The General Conference voted sixty per cent of whatever surplus may be realized on this extra sum pledged to strengthening the work on the border, thus leaving scant hope of any margin from that quarter.

6. The regular income for 1918 was $654,517 and the appropriation $403,304, thus leaving a margin of $251,213 to the good. The regular income in 1922 was $464,089, while the regular budget was $1,450,104, with a margin of $986,015 to the bad.

These figures are slightly relieved by the fact that $165,000 of specials from our budget are now carried in the Centenary, which we may reasonably count on as being continued as an annual asset.

7. To keep out of debt, we are using all available Centenary income to carry this excess on our regular budget for 1923, while legitimate Centenary askings wait.

8. We have added four new missions, 149 new missionaries and many new enterprises to our foreign general work while the purchasing power of the dollar has been reduced by soaring prices.

9. When the Centenary comes to an end, if something is not done and done soon, we will be left with an income at least $850,000 short of our budget for bare maintenance, without any allowance for new missionaries or any other item of advance.

10. This inevitably demands that we increase the assessment 200 per cent, raise $1,000,000 annually by specials, or sound a tragic retreat. In other words, having doubled our budget, we must now set about realizing that other Centenary goal, "double the income."

11. The case with the home department is similar. The budget for maintenance in that department has gone from $133,975 to $365,000, while the income has been but little increased. Every argument made above for the foreign department applies to the home department.

12. We have been saved from debt by two wise provisions—the standard year, which provided that the Centenary Commission should guarantee out of its gross receipts that the income to each department should be kept up to that of 1918; and, in addition to this, the maintenance budget was made first charge on the Centenary receipts of each department. These safeguards, we hope, will carry us safely through 1924, although it will be at the sad expense of specific Centenary objects.

13. There are ten thousand Centenary specials now carried by individuals, churches, Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues, aggregating $2,000,000 a year. It is one of our sources of encouragement that most of these may be continued, either in whole or in part, and every dollar of that amount will be sorely needed, if we are to keep going and growing.

14. Between now and 1925, we are faced with the solemn responsibility of finding a way to increase our annual income $1,250,000 a year for home and foreign missions. The completion of the Centenary campaign is the beginning of the long siege. Success is costly and sometimes embarrassing—to those who lack the courage and constancy to carry on.

15. We face these facts at the hour of the world's sorest need, of the church's greatest opportunity, and in the flush of our greatest triumph, when success is crowning our efforts on every hand. It is a most awkward hour in which to halt or even hesitate. We stand at the bar of the future, to be judged by the high standards we, ourselves, have set. It is still more to the point that the judge of all the earth will hold us to account in the light of that marvelous providence in whose splendor we have so bravely and so proudly come to this hour.

THE BELLE H. BENNETT PRAYER LEAGUE

Ye that are Jehovah's remembrancers, take ye no rest, and give him no rest till he establish and till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth.

Put me in remembrance; let us plead together, set forth the cause.

Membership—The Bennett Prayer League is composed of those persons who desire to help promote the Belle Bennett Memorial but whose physical limitations prevent active work in the campaign. This inability to join personally in the campaign is a special call to the larger field of intercession. Invalids, "shut-ins," blind, deaf and infirm people and those who are inactive because of age or remoteness from an auxiliary who will pledge to give themselves at set times each day in special prayer for this work are called to become members and enlist as the Lord's "Remembrancers."

Object—The league has for its object special and continuous prayer for the establishment of the Belle Bennett Memorial Fund to be used for the training of missionaries, deaconesses and other Christian workers of the church. Its members will make continuous supplication for guidance and blessing on the Council, conference and auxiliary campaign committees; for the presence and power of the Holy Spirit in every meeting in the interest of the Memorial, and for large gifts of money for the prosecution of the work. Its members are to become "Watchmen, that shall never hold their peace day nor night, and will take no rest and give Jehovah no rest till He make this Memorial 'a praise in the earth.'"

Organization—Names and addresses of those seeking membership will be listed with the leader of the Prayer League. Auxiliaries will endeavor to interest persons in their communities who are eligible for membership. In those conference societies where there are organizations for utilizing such groups for the ministry of intercession the work will function through the conference officer in charge. All members are urged to list the period of the day which they set for intercession, with the leader of the league, that there may be assurance that the work of the Memorial is kept before the Lord twenty-four hours of the day.

Program of Work—The Council Memorial committee and other persons seeking to promote the work of the Memorial will notify the leader of the Prayer League when special effort is to be made or when special intercession is needed, giving time for her to transmit requests to the members.

The leader will keep a record of all members to whom she will send notices of special requests for prayer, suggesting passages of scripture or verses of promise upon which supplication will be based, that there may be unity throughout the church as they "strive together in prayer."

It is suggested, for encouragement, that members of the league keep a register for listing special prayers, with date of same and verse furnishing foundation of faith. Space after each entry should be left for recording the date when answer is given.

Love in the heart, consciousness of personal impotency, faith in the power of prayer, courage to persevere and assurance of abundant reward are the marks of a true intercessor.

Address—Leader of Prayer League, Mrs. R. W. MacDonell, 406 Surrey St.,

MEETING OF THE PITT COUNTY FEDERATION OF METHODIST WOMEN

On September 25th the Pitt County Federation of Methodist Women of the M. E. Church, South, convened in Jarvis Memorial church, Greenville for its initial meeting since organization in June.

The president, Mrs. J. W. Lovelace, of Farmville, called the meeting to order, and Rev. V. P. Scoville, pastor of the Greenville church, conducted the devotional exercises, after which he, on behalf of the church, the Woman's Missionary Society and the city, extended to the federation a most cordial welcome, which was beautifully responded to by Mrs. O. C. Stroud of Ayden. Then Mrs. Lovelace, in a most interesting way stated the object of the federation, which is to organize mission societies in every church in the county. A business session followed, and as the secretary, Mrs. J. W. Parker, of Farmville, called the roll of the churches of the county representatives responded from eight towns. Reports made showed many efforts had been put forth, but Farmville had perfected the only organization, that being at Arthur. A little boy of only a few months, Master Walter Lee Stroud, of Ayden, was presented to the federation, and made a life member of the "Bright Jewels" of the body. Mrs. C. E. Blount of Wilson, secretary of the Washington district, was present and thanked the women for what they had done for Betty Bass, who is now in training at Johns Hopkins Hospital preparing to be a missionary nurse. Mrs. Blount also congratulated the federation on the perfection it had attained along many lines.

Rev. H. M. North, pastor of the First church, Rocky Mount, addressed the federation, his subject being "Woman's Work." He gave a most interesting and instructive survey of the work done by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Southern Methodist church, showing how far-reaching are the activities of the women, their work touching four continents. He emphasized the unselfishness of their labors, most of their efforts being away from home among those whom they will never see. It is gratifying to know that the North Carolina conference stands so well among the thirty-nine conferences of Southern Methodism; yet there is still much to be accomplished as there are five hundred churches within its bounds which do not have mission societies. The women heard Mr. North with the keenest interest and appreciation, realizing that the federation was indeed fortunate to secure him as its speaker.

L. L. Gobbel and O. V. Woosley, superintendents of the Sunday School work of the two North Carolina conferences, were present, and each spoke in behalf of their work.

The meeting then adjourned for lunch, which was served in the basement of the church.

At 1:30 the afternoon session was held. Mrs. C. E. Blount led the devotional, using as her subject, "The Power of Service." She emphasized that the same channels were opened to us of today as were to God's children of other ages. Mrs. S. H. Scott of New Bern, vice president of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary conference, then conducted a consecration service, and the federation was dismissed on bended knees. The next meeting will be held at Farmville. The musical part of the program was greatly enjoyed, especially the beautiful anthem by the Ayden choir, accompanied by Mrs. O. C. Stroud of Ayden; and the solos by Mesdames Robert Jo3nes and Helen Higgs of Greenville, and Mr. J. C. Costen, an evangelistic singer. There were beautifully accompanied by Mrs. G. B. W. Hadley of Greenville.

The meeting was quite a success, and the federation feels greatly indebted to the women of the Greenville auxiliary and its efficient president, Mrs. W. C. Vincent, for a most pleasant and profitable day.

Mrs. J. W. Parker, Sec.

TURN OF THE ROAD

The sorrow will seem like the wrath of a dream,

The winter will bloom like the May,
And the beautiful stars in the heavens will beam

At the turn o' the road some day.

An answer sweet to our lifelong prayers,

And we'll hear what the angels say;
A song for a sigh! Light'll shine through our tears

At the turn o' the road some day.

In a flowery land we shall hold love's hand,

Where the storms kneel down to pray;

After the night we shall see the light
At the turn o' the road some day.

—Frank L. Stanton.

TOO GOOD TO KEEP

Cooleemee, N. C., Oct. 4, 1923.

Dear Mrs. Boyer:

On Sunday, September 23rd, we organized a Woman's Missionary Society. We organized with fifteen charter members. Eight of our new members subscribed to the Missionary Voice.

We consider our beginning very satisfactory. We are expecting a rapid growth in membership.

The following officers were elected: President—Mrs. P. L. Shore. Vice President—Mrs. G. L. Murr. Secretary—Mrs. C. L. Isley. Treasurer—Mrs. J. W. Zachary. Supt. Mission Study—Mrs. O. C. Wall.

This is the first Woman's Missionary Society ever organized in our church. I am sure you will be interested in knowing what we have done. We would be delighted to have you with us some time.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely, Mrs. P. L. Shore.

Indeed I am interested in knowing what you have done, and congratulate you and your Cooleemee ladies on this splendid piece of work. Next.—Editor.

COLD OR HOT

We detest negative characters — those silent figures in a restless, bustling world. We despise the sort that is content with the mummy life. Somehow we like the fellow who does something, and does it wrong, far more than we do the fellow who does nothing for fear he will do that something wrong. Start something! There's tonic in a dare. Scare somebody—antagonize something. Only the dead keep quiet. They are very quiet.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Morbus Sabbaticus is a Sunday sickness, peculiar to church members. The symptoms vary, but here are four: (1) It never interferes with the appetite. (2) It never lasts more than twenty-four hours. (3) No physician is ever called. (4) It always proves fatal in the end—to the soul. The attack comes on suddenly every Sunday; the patient sleeps well and wakes feeling well; eats a heavy breakfast, but about church time the attack comes on and continues until services are over for the morning.

The patient then feels easy and eats a hearty dinner. In the afternoon he feels much better, and is able to take a walk, or auto ride, and read the Sunday papers; he eats a hearty supper. He wakes up Monday morning refreshed and able to go to work, and does not have any symptoms of the disease until the following Sunday. The remedy: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked."—G. C. Hedgpeth.

MUST WE STUMBLE?

Must we keep on falling till this life is over? Is the best earthly prospect that anyone can have an up-and-down experience in which one picks himself up after every fresh failure and hopefully pushes on, only to fall again, and recover again? Most persons, whether Christians or not, believe that is the best that one can have in the present life. A bit of verse by a much loved and worthy writer, published in "The New Success," is entitled "They Kept On!"

"They on the heights are not the souls
Who never erred nor went astray;
Who trod unswerving toward their goals

Along a smooth, rose-bordered way.
Nay—those who stand where first comes dawn

Are those who stumbled but went on.

"When on the silvered clouds you see
A name engraven, as the one
Who has transcended you and me
In that which he has sought and won,
Know this: O'er stony ways he's gone;
But when he stumbled, he went on."

It is true, of course, that no human life but One has ever been lived without stumblings, failures, and sins. But it is not true, as this verse suggests and as most people seem to think, that we must continue to have stumblings and failures until this life is over. The Christ-covenanted message of the New Testament to believers is just the opposite. "Thanks be unto God," exclaims the inspired apostle, "who always leadeth us in triumph in Christ." Many passages throughout the New Testament declare the same wonderful provision and safe-keeping that God offers his children in Christ; and the radiant benediction which closes the last Epistle of the New Testament commits us "unto him that is able to guard you from stumbling, and to set you before the presence of his glory without blemish in exceeding joy." God in his merciful love tells us that "if a man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." But in the same verse he writes, "My little children, these things write I unto you that ye may not sin."—S. S. Times.

A HEART THAT SINGS

To mar is such an easy thing,
But to unmar—that takes
Of endless agony, the sting;
Of endless grief, the aches.

The life that thinks to live for self
Is putting shadows on the shelf,
Is storing something dark and drear
To fall upon him year by year.
It can't be done, it is not true
That there's a right belongs to you.
To live your own life as you would—
It is not wise, it is not good,
And fate soon shows the fool who tries
The hollow frailness and the lies.

The stair to beauty is not built
Of gold so much as wings;
Take thou no sword with jeweled hilt,
BUT JUST A HEART THAT SINGS.
—Folger McKinsey, in Baltimore Sun.

Don't eat stale cucumbers, they are likely to w up.

Likewise: Refrain from drinking very much unfermented apple juice. It would probably cause a pain in cider you.—Judge.

FINE FAYETTEVILLE SCHOOL

Sunday school workers from all over the eastern half of the Fayetteville district attended the second annual session of the Standard Training School in Hay Street church, Fayetteville, last week. Charges for twenty-five or thirty miles around were represented in the enrollment, which reached approximately 200, with about 85 earning certificates of credit on the Sunday standard training course.

It was an interested, earnest, serious-minded group of men and women who gathered for the week's work. They threw themselves into the work, and they went away feeling that they had gained a great deal from it. The weather was splendid, except for a little unexpected frigidty, so that the attendants came and went without very much inconvenience. Busy men and women traveled considerable distances, spent two hours in school each evening, and read books and wrote papers. It meant that many had to rise early and go to be late, but they did it, and cheerfully.

The instructors were Prof. J. M. Ormond, Mrs. C. L. VanNoppen, Miss Virginia Jenkins, and Mr. L. L. Gobbel. The names of those earning certificates and other interesting facts concerning this school and plans for next year will be given next week.

AT JONESBORO THIS WEEK

The Fayetteville district has twin training schools this year. To serve the western half of the district as the Fayetteville school served the eastern the West Fayetteville Standard Training School is being conducted this week at Jonesboro, with the following courses and instructors: "Beginner Organization and Administration," Mrs. C. L. VanNoppen; "Primary Organization and Administration," Miss Georgia Keene; "Junior Organization and Administration," Mrs. E. R. Michaux; "Principles of Religious Teaching," Prof. I. B. McKay; and "Sunday School Organization and Administration," Mr. L. L. Gobbel.

AT NEW BERN OCTOBER 28

The last Standard Training School of this conference year will be held at New Bern October 28-November 2 for the Sunday school and church leaders of New Bern and that part of the New Bern district accessible to New Bern. Six courses in various departments will be offered. Rev. W. V. McRae, chairman of the board of managers, and his committees are busy at work in preparation for the school.

ELIZABETH CIRCUIT MEETING

Representatives of the Sunday schools of Elizabeth circuit, together with Bladenboro school of Robeson circuit, held their annual Sunday school meeting at Wesley's Chapel Saturday, October 6. Talks were made by Rev. R. H. Willis, the presiding elder, Rev. H. E. Lance, the pastor, and others. Singing was a feature of the program, the schools contesting, with Elizabethtown winning the unanimous decision of the judges. Your conference superintendent of Sunday school work was present and discussed, with the superintendents, the official Program of Work for one-room Sunday schools. Every school on the circuit has adopted the program, and the checking of these programs will be a feature of the regular semi-annual gathering of the workers. Mr. K. R. Craven, superintendent of the Clarkton school, was elected president of the organization, which voted to hold its next meeting at Clarkton in April.

OUR MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

The annual membership campaign in the Sunday schools, under the auspices of the General Sunday School Board, is now on and will be prosecuted more or less actively throughout Southern Methodism during the months of October, November and December. Considerable quantities of material are being sent out from headquarters every day, and lasting good is expected to come of this systematic effort to reach the constituency that should be in our Sunday schools. We are hoping that in the North Carolina conference serious and thoughtful consideration be given this matter and that great gains will be registered by our schools. Material for carrying on this campaign is all furnished free of cost. Write Mr. A. L. Dietrich, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., for some for your school.

THIS IS CHILDREN'S WEEK

This is Children's Week. Elementary teachers of many schools in the conference and throughout the entire connection, as well as in other denominations, are this week visiting the homes of their pupils, forming closer contacts and gaining first-hand information concerning their home life, and are leading up to a big parents' meeting to be held next Sunday, at which the interests of the child will be considered and definite forward steps taken. Some schools who find it inconvenient to observe the week now, will use another week. We are expecting great good to be accomplished.

WHAT ARE YOU AIMING AT?

It means a great deal to know what you want and how you hope to get it. Writing on the subject of "My Aim As an Assistant Superintendent," a member of the class on "Sunday School Organization" in our Fayetteville training school made the following clear-cut statement, which we pass along for the benefit of other superintendents, and which will doubtless prove stimulating to some who may not be superintendents:

"My aim is to have a thorough knowledge of the organization and operation of my Sunday school; to study to improve its methods and its equipment; and to increase its standards and its efficiency. By studying these problems, by exchanging ideas and experiences with other workers and teachers, I hope to administer the office in such a way as to encourage my co-workers to adopt new and better methods, to raise the ideals and standards of every teacher and class, and to give them a clearer conception of our real purpose as an organization, which is to give the pupils a knowledge of God's will, bring them to an acceptance of Jesus Christ, develop their Christian character through proper worship, right living, and efficient service. I also hope to have my Sunday school look out, after a careful survey of the field, some definite work in the community, such as mission schools, playgrounds, and other activities."

NEVER GREATER CONTRAST

"On my charge the question of superintendents is an interesting one," writes a wide-awake pastor. "There are two legally constituted leaders in this capacity, and there was never greater contrast seen between men of any field of labor.

"The one had not only capacity for leading, but has a trained mind as well. But with all this he is a failure. He will accept no information for improvement from quarters high or low. His present attitude will soon dethrone him, and if he doesn't soon change, that will be the proper procedure. So much for him.

"The other man has capacity minus preparation. But with this there is an overwhelming desire to learn. He is applying himself to the task. Both he and school are growing along together. His Sunday school work has become a delight, and it is a pleasure to see him so wholly given to the work.

"He is grading the school and organizing every department properly, officers, teachers, and training work. He holds workers' council and urges upon the teachers the necessity for studying if they would do efficient work. He is planning for better equipment and ever lifts a high ideal before the school."

TRAINING SCHOOLS

During the present conference year there have been held within the bounds of the Western North Carolina conference eleven Standard Training Schools. In addition to hundreds of visitors there have been enrolled in these schools 1,633 pupils of which number 947 did all the work and took credit. This means that nearly one-fourth of our Sunday school leadership has actually been to school during the year. With a constantly enlarging leadership training program it is evident that our Sunday school work is going to become more effective.

The following schools with their enrollment and credit students have been held during the year. First figures for enrollment, second for credit students:

Salisbury-Spencer	136	64
Greensboro	184	118
Winston-Salem	201	108
Charlotte	274	143
Gastonia	190	123
Asheville	154	80
Hickory	142	90
Shelby	100	51
Marion	58	36
Mooreville	50	14
Lenoir-Davenport	144	120

SUPERINTENDENTS

The following general superintendents have taken one or more units of credit in our leadership course during the year. May their kind increase.

- D. W. Alexander, Connelly Springs.
- E. R. Bucher, Charlotte.
- L. J. Brookshire, Asheville.
- S. P. Burton, Asheville.
- Marvin Blanton, Shelby.
- R. E. Bundy, Jamestown.

- C. W. Snyder, Winston-Salem.
- J. H. Separk, Gastonia.
- R. G. Stockton, Winston-Salem.
- W. C. Tompson, Mooreville, R. 3.
- S. R. Wolfe, King's Mountain, R. 1.
- M. L. White, Shelby, R. 5.
- T. S. Womble, Winston-Salem.

LEARNING LEADERS

The Sunday School Board is one of the most important of our annual conference boards. Its opportunity for service and responsibility for results are constantly enlarging. Of the twenty-two members of this board, eleven of whom are ministers and eleven laymen, the following have taken one or more units of credit in our Leadership Training Course this year: Revs. D. W. #### MEETING OF WAYNE COUNTY EPWORTH LEAGUE UNION

The Wayne County Epworth League Union met with the Fallen Creek League Sunday night, October 7, for the regular monthly meeting. The attendance was fine. The church was full and some could not get seats. A very interesting devotional meeting, conducted by Mrs. Sallie Bell Stevens, was enjoyed by all who attended.

The meeting was then turned over to Miss Emma Davis, president of the union. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Miss Minnie Summerlin in the absence of Miss Nannie Summerlin, secretary, and approved. Several business matters were discussed. We decided to meet with the St. Johns League in Goldsboro the first Sunday night in November.

Ruth Herring, Cor. Sec.

DANIELS' CHAPEL LEAGUE ON THE JOB

We are getting along just fine with our Epworth League work, although several of our best leaders have gone away to school. These of course we miss very much, but we are determined to keep the good work going, so that when they return they will find our chapter in the same good condition as when they left. Let me say here that we mean to do what we can to get that loving cup back to New Bern district.

We have work outlined as follows:

To have a business meeting, a council meeting, and a social each month, and also to visit and hold a prayer and song service at the Wayne county home each month.

To conduct at least one devotional meeting each week, and to visit and care for all the sick and shut-ins of our community. This we have been doing since our league was first organized.

We are now organizing an Epworth League library and have several donations of real good books.

Our annual mission study class will also begin in a few days. Any information or help from anyone in this line will be appreciated, and we will be glad to help you or any league in any way possible.

Enclosed you will find some verses, "The Way We Spell Our Name."

Assuring you that you have our heartiest support in this great work, we are,

W. F. Parker, Cor. Sec.

THE WAY WE SPELL OUR NAME

Daniels Chapel is our name,
All for Christ is our aim.
Never shirk whatever the task,
In every way to do our best.
Every member, large and small,
Let's go forward one and all—
Send the message far and near.

Christ is King everywhere.
Heaven's our goal, so don't delay;
All ye Leaguers, this is the day.
Put your shoulder to the wheel,
Every one his place must fill;
Look ahead what we have to do.

Every member this means you—
Push the load with all your might;
Work for Christ from morn 'til night.
Over the top now we must go,
Right in the fight, and don't be slow;
This is the time, also the test,
Hold to God and do your best.

Let's pull together—this we must do;
Each one must work 'til all are through.

Angels will watch us, do not fear;
God protect us is our prayer.

United we stand, divided we fall,
Epworth League, we love you, one and all.

"What's in a name?" Well, read this again thoughtfully and see if it doesn't mean something to you. Daniels' Chapel League is wide-awake and is doing things. They're going to make somebody hustle if their district doesn't get the cup.—L. D.

THE MEBANE EPWORTH LEAGUE

The Mebane Epworth League met Sunday, October 7th, and reorganized. It is our ambition to be able to meet the needs of the young people in our church, and place our league on an equal footing with the best in our conference.

Our new officers are:

President—Miss Effie Miles.
Vice President—James Yearby.
Sec.-Treas.—Mrs. Lee Hooks.
Cor. Sec.—Musette Bradsher.
First Supt.—J. M. McIntyre.
Second Supt.—Miss Blanche McDade.

Third Supt.—Miss Lucile Hunt.
Fourth Supt.—Mrs. E. A. Crawford.
Epworth Era Agent—Mrs. J. M. McIntyre.

We have had one meeting since the new officers were elected, and we are expecting to increase the interest in our league each Sunday.

Musette Bradsher, Cor. Sec.

INTERMEDIATE LEAGUERS, ATTENTION

October is the month we are to see about our membership. If you have not already had a cabinet meeting have one right away and plan for this membership campaign. Possibly you will want to put on a membership contest or maybe you are planning in a quiet, determined way to get every boy and girl who ought to be in your league.

Whatever you are doing at the close of this month let your assistant district secretary know what you have done. He will let me know, then the results by districts will be published in the Advocate and in The Tar Heel Leaguer.

Every one of you get busy and make your district lead in gaining members per capita.

Mrs. G. G. Adams, Supt.

A LEAGUE "ROAST"

I hear somebody say interestedly, "Beef roast?" No! "Lamb?" No! "Pig?" Try again. "Chicken roast?" (Half the preachers in the state smack their lips and straightway have a vision!) Pshaw! You're all wrong! I was asked to write a word on a MAN roast (or better still) a woman roast.

This article is meant first of all for that goodly, good-looking but almost "good-for-nothing" group of leaguers all over our conference who have been duly elected corresponding secretary for their local chapter but who have neglectfully, habitually, invariably and persistently refused to "correspond." Of course it is meant, too, for everybody in any way connected with the league, from the pastor on down. I include this last and larger group because when your corresponding secretaries fail to send us the news from your local chapters it becomes the business of somebody to see that it is done. If you are a loyal, enthusiastic, hundred per cent Epworthian you are that somebody.

Now there are almost endless reasons why the corresponding secretary should keep the editors informed about all the doings of the chapter which they represent. It is just as unfortunate and inexcusable for him or her to fall down as it would be for any other officer. This office is regarded not only as necessary but as indispensable to the best work.

To begin with, your corresponding secretaries should write frequently of your work because of the good it will do the editor of the League page and the editors of the Tar Heel Leaguer! "If you only knew"—well, what anxiety we feel and how earnestly we long and wait for good, live, readable copy! Enough of perfectly glorious news is happening every week in North Carolina Leaguedom to drive every advertisement off the League page of the Advocate and fill every available inch of space in The Tar Heel Leaguer if we could only get it. We think we would look better (dwell here), feel better, live better, live longer and love the world more if you good secretaries would only wake up! For our sakes send us the news.

Then, too, I would say, please send us the news because of the very great good it will do you and your local chapter. After the grace of God has done the very most for us that it can do, there is still left in a majority of us enough of the humor to want to have ourselves talked about! There are a few people left in the world yet who really like to see their name in print. Some of these are Epworth Leaguers who despite their faults and follies are the finest young folk beneath the sun!

It will help your chapter wonderfully if you will tell us regularly what you are doing. The entire chapter will try harder to excel themselves because they will know that the church is expecting them to outdo their former effort. So for your sakes send us the news!

Finally, I would say for the good it will do Epworth Leaguers and the church of God everywhere send us the news!

Jesus has something very pointed and emphatic to say about hiding one's light under a bushel. The League chapter that is doing some excellent work in holding and training the young people of the community and is giving to the Christians at large no information of their doings is surely putting itself in the class of which he speaks. If you have done one single little thing that has been a blessing to the young and an inspiration to the old, don't withhold the good news. Pass it on! So for the help it will bring to leaguers in all parts of the land, send us the news!

Falling in this as a corresponding secretary you will show that the church cannot depend upon you to tackle a big job and put it across.

But knowing Epworth Leaguers as we do we know you are not going to fail! You are going to meet the highest expectation of your friends and a large helpfulness will come to you on this account.

This is our "roast." Not so palatable as chicken or turkey, perhaps, but probably a bit more necessary for your spiritual health. All ready? One, two, three, write!

But you say, "Hold a minute! To whom shall I write?" Sure! A very pertinent question. Answer, P. L. Plyler, Morganton, N. C., if intended for the Tar Heel Leaguer, or Rev. J. Frank Armstrong, Concord, N. C., if intended for the League page of the North Carolina Christian Advocate (mail a copy to each). One little girl wrote me a fine letter the other day (heaven bless her heart) and closed by saying, "Please send this to the 'Biblical Recorder.'" Well, send the letter to us. We'll do the rest.

J. F. Armstrong.

The heads of a big manufacturing plant had this notice posted at the beginning of the summer season:

New Rules for Our Employees.

All requests for leave of absence on account of toothache, severe colds, and minor physical ailments, and on account of church picnics, weddings and funerals and the like, must be handed to the foreman in charge of your department before 10 a. m. on the morning of the game.—Houston.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Mrs. Mary Williams Bost was born October 27, 1879, and died July 5, 1923. She was married to Mr. Luke Bost January 14, 1904. To this union were born seven children, three daughters and four sons; one son died in infancy.

She was a woman of great usefulness, full of energy and always of a cheerful and happy disposition. She was an active member of the church, Sunday school and missionary society. She had been recording secretary of the missionary society since its organization about a year ago. In her life and character were round all the elements of Christian womanhood.

We, as members of the Missionary Society of Matthews M. E. church, feel that the church and society have sustained a great loss in the death of Mrs. Bost, one of our most faithful and loyal members. Therefore, be it resolved:

First, That while we shall miss her cheerful presence we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

Second, That we extend to her family our warmest sympathy and pray God to comfort and strengthen them in this their hour of great need.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to the N. C. Christian Advocate for publication and a copy recorded in the minutes of our society.

Hon. R. N. Page ..... President
A. S. Barnes ..... Superintendent
Mrs. Mattie Jenkins ..... Matron
Owned and maintained by the North Carolina Conference.

FORM OF BEQUEST

I do hereby will and bequeath to The Methodist Orphanage, Raleigh, N. C., contemplated by the charter under the Act of the General Assembly of North Carolina ..... (here designate the bequest) .....

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

Rev. C. A. Wood.....Superintendent

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

Thanksgiving.—I want the pastors, Sunday school superintendents and teachers to make great preparation for Thanksgiving offering. Our Baptist friends raised seventy-five thousand dollars for the Thomasville Baptist Orphanage last Thanksgiving. Our Methodists will have to bestir themselves to keep step with our Baptist friends. We need the money and I am counting on all to do their level best.

* * * *

Baby Cottage.—We have the plans and specifications for the Baby Cottage, but not all the money. In addition to the subscriptions and cash on hand, we need ten thousand dollars with which to complete the building. I never expect to ask our host of friends to contribute to a more worthy cause. Now is a good time for new subscriptions and the collection of all old pledges. We are ready to let contract just as soon as we get the desired amount.

* * * *

Sweet Potatoes.—This is sweet potato digging time. Our crop was a complete failure. If several of our farmer friends will send us a few bushels each, we can supply our table for some time to come. Let's not wait for someone else to start the ball going, but send us a few bushels now before the weather gets too cold. By sending them later most of them will get cold-hurt before reaching us.

* * * *

A Suggestion.—I know a gentleman who has turned into a certain orphanage between twenty-five thousand and thirty thousand dollars by just mentioning to his friends the importance of such a course. Lawyers and others who are versed in legal matters have a great opportunity to suggest to parties the importance of remembering the Methodist Orphanage when they are called on to write wills. If our preachers will suggest from the pulpits and when making pastoral visits the need of remembering our fatherless by writing the Methodist Orphanage in their wills, they will render an enduring service. I trust that our many friends will bestir themselves along the line suggested that they may greatly increase our endowment fund which ought to be multiplied several times. If there are friends who have means and should happen to read what I have said on the subject, I trust that they will look up a competent lawyer and have their wills written at the earliest possible date. Many have intended to do so, but put it off just one day too long. I trust that none who read this will make that great mistake.

* * * *

The Future.—The Methodist Orphanage is destined to become a much greater institution than most people realize. It is my ambition to see it become the greatest home in American Methodism. There are only two other Methodist orphanages in Southern Methodism that are larger than ours. Within a few years we shall surpass them, and continue to grow until we shall rang the greatest in this country. More and more our people are going to give to the support of our cause until our every need is amply supplied. Hundreds are going to write the Methodist Orphanage in their wills so that we shall not be embarrassed by adverse conditions in the financial world. Many memorial buildings will some day dot our campus when our people come to realize that such a monument is more appropriate and enduring than marble or bronze. But it is not greatness in size that appeals to me most strongly. It is the finished product that we shall send out into the world. Our supreme endeavor shall be to send forth young men and women who feel that they have a real mission in life. They are to become Christian leaders, molding and shaping public sentiment. To render this service, they must be carried through a long and tedious process of discipline. By sending out such a stream of pure, consecrated young life into the world, we shall attain to the goal of our highest ambition.

AN APPRECIATION—DORMAN THOMPSON

A great epoch in the history of the men's Bible class of the Broad Street Methodist church ended on the 2nd day of October, 1923, when our teacher for the last ten years, Dorman Thompson, passed over the valley and crossed the great divide between earth and heaven.

In life he exemplified by precept and example the essential qualities of a good citizen, who loved his country. With him the gospel of fellowship was a reality, finding joy and pleasure in his association with his fellowman. In civil life, he kept sacred his obligation and walked in the paths of justice, mercy and righteousness.

He was recognized as a lawyer of ability and distinction, in whom his brethren and the courts had the utmost confidence. As a faithful teacher of this class, he filled this position with signal ability, teaching that religion was practical, lifting mankind on a higher plane in all the varied walks and activities of life. He believed in the inspiration of the Scriptures and the fundamental truths therein recorded; and emphasized in his teachings from Sabbath to Sabbath, that the spiritual life eternal can only come through the Cross.

His filial and brotherly devotion was beautiful; as a father he was loving, kind and generous. His conduct in life was noble and inspiring. His faith in God the Father, and Christ the Saviour, was supreme. He was loyal to the church of his faith, constant in attendance upon its ordinances, true and helpful to his pastor, and responsive to every duty and demand in church and state. He died as he lived, in the joy of his Lord, age 45 years. We extend to his children and family our sympathy.

Men's Bible Class, Broad St. Church.

A Wonderful Horse!

"O horse, you are a wonderful thing; no buttons to push, no horn to honk; you start yourself, no clutch to slip; no spark to miss, no gears to strip; no license-buying every year, with plates to screw on front and rear; no gas bills climbing up each day, stealing the joy of life away; no speed cops chugging in your rear, yelling summons in your ear. Your inner tubes are all O. K., and, thank the Lord, they stay that way; your spark plugs never miss and fuss; your motor never makes us cuss. Your frame is good for many a mile; your body never changes style. Your wants are few and easy met; you're something on the auto yet."—Ranger H. R. Elliott, of the Malheur, in American Forestry (Washington).

A celebrated vocalist was in a motor car accident one day. The newspaper recording the accident added: "will appear in tomorrow's concert in three pieces."

YOUR Christian Education Pledge

Why did you make it?

BECAUSE—

Christian Education is essential to our civilization and national safety.

BECAUSE—

American education is in grave danger of becoming materialistic and Godless.

BECAUSE—

It is the Church's responsibility to make education positively Christian and Southern Methodism should do her share.

BECAUSE—

you wanted to help save our schools and colleges from disaster and ruin.

BECAUSE—

These schools furnish practically all of our preachers, missionaries and Christian workers.

BECAUSE—

The world needs Christian leaders in all walks of life.

BECAUSE—

Your beloved church called and as a loyal Methodist you responded.

For these and other reasons you made your pledge. Have you paid it? Surely you will not let it become just "a scrap of paper." On the prompt payment of these pledges depends the success and future of our schools. By every consideration of honor and urgent need you should pay your pledge promptly.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

— Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary —

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Louisville Conference.—When I arrived on Thursday morning, Bishop Darlington, presiding, informed me that everything was in readiness for the presentation of the plan of special effort at eleven o'clock. This was Bishop Darlington's fourth and last conference, and I regretted the fact that my teamwork with him this fall in behalf of the superannuate movement should end so suddenly. He has been so kind and considerate, so efficient in his co-operation that I know I shall miss him terribly. However, it is comforting to know that other bishops are in their places along the way, and each of them, I am sure, will be just as responsive and helpful.

Bishop McMurry was scheduled to attend the Louisville conference and assist in presenting our program, but he was prevented from doing so on account of being busily engaged entertaining an ugly carbuncle on the back of his neck. So the work was left to Bishop Darlington and myself, and we did our best to make the conference thoroughly understand the program for the ensuing year in behalf of the superannuate cause. The preachers were very attentive, listening closely to every word that was spoken and doing so in an attitude of acceptance and determination to carry on. One brother made my heart sink when he told me that he thought a number of the preachers remained on the outside while the program was being presented inside. But later I learned that this brother was surely mistaken, for one well acquainted with the conference who was on the outside told me positively that he did not see but two or three preachers outside during our program, and they expressed the intention to go within if they were able to find seats. All of this indicates the feeling of the preachers toward this movement. Surely they are interested in it; and if their willingness to hear and understand the plan may be taken as an index, they will do their best to raise their respective quotas.

I was especially pleased with the reaction of the presiding elders when I spoke to them concerning certain service expected at their hands during the meeting of the conference. Every one of them responded heartily, giving me to understand without doubt that they would do everything requested in full measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over. Since they are blue-blooded Kentuckians, it can be expected that they will keep their word.

One brother said to me: "Well, I thought at the general conference that the special effort for superannuate endowment should be postponed for a while; but now that it is on, you can depend upon it that I will spend myself to the utmost to make it successful." I know he meant what he said, for his actions at the conference and elsewhere prove his sincerity.

It was especially pleasing to strike hands with a group of very young preachers who were talking together in front of the church. One of them said: "We are enthusiastically in favor of the movement for our worn-out preachers. We have just been agreeing among ourselves that we cannot permit anything this year to hinder us from reaching whatever is expected from our charges." How delightful it was to have these dear boys give such assurance of a willingness to do their part!

After explaining the plan, meeting with the bishop and his cabinet, meeting with the Conference Board of Finance, and holding two or three conferences on important matters with individuals, I left for our busy offices in St. Louis, feeling that the Louisville conference would not fail to do a worthy part by the special effort for superannuate endowment.

Not for Himself, But in Behalf of Another.

—At an annual conference held recently I met with the Conference Board of Finance in the midst of its work to determine the amount to be paid for the claimants for the year just closed. As I walked into the room a dear old brother was making a speech to the board. The sight of a bent and feeble superannuate presenting his need to such a board, was not unusual, for frequently my heart is pained and my head bowed in shame as I witness such scenes. But this brother was not pleading his own case; he was there pleading the case of another claimant and urging the board to do its best for the one represented. As he finished his remarks and was carefully feeling his way from the room he was asked by a member of the board this question: "Brother —, you have been urging us to do our best for another. What about yourself? How goes it with you? Have you had a comfortable year?" Further similar questions by members of the board and much urging by all finally induced the superannuate to tell what had happened to him during the year. He had been faithful to his charge and had not neglected any duty devolving upon him. He said they were not able to pay him anything, but they "nearly loved him to death." Then he told of an incident early in the year when he was thrown from a vehicle and had, as I recall, both arms broken, one leg broken, and was terribly bruised in all of his body, barely escaping with his life. The doctors bandaged and patched him up, and, according to other witnesses, he kept right on riding that circuit, which paid him nothing but nearly loved him to death. This dear man would rise from his bed of affliction and have himself taken to his pulpit in a far-away country church and would sit there, unable to stand, preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ when he knew that he was receiving practically nothing in the way of remuneration for his services. Long before he could hold the lines in his hand to drive his horse he would drop them over one of his injured arms and manage in some way to guide the horse along the path he was itinerating.

I would like to go on telling other things in connection with this case, but I have given enough for my readers to complete the picture. This is the spirit of the average preacher, whether he is active or superannuated. In the name of all that is pure and good I maintain that the church of the living God cannot neglect these prophets of the Lord and stand guiltless at the judgment seat. The great movement now setting in, looking to provide comfortable support for worn-out preachers, is one that should stir us to the depths of our beings. We should rise in determination to surmount every obstacle and with a mighty effort do the thing that calls to us out of such pitiful deprivations.

Interesting News Items.—Our Second church in Maysville, Ky., has the honor of being the very first to report the amount of its quota agreed to, the names of the members of the charge Special Effort committee, and the plan to be used in raising the quota. All hats off to this church, and let us give them the grand honors.

The presiding elders, without exception, are co-operating with the directing committee in a manner to make us all very happy. These men are not only doing what they are requested, but they are responding in a spirit of enthusiasm and great interest. If this thing becomes a habit with the three hundred presiding elders of the church we will soon have to take "forgotten" out of the "forgotten man."

It is very gratifying to find that many of the first quarterly conferences thus far reporting on quotas agreed upon are voluntarily adding to the minimum amount expected from them. This is as it should be. Certainly no church in the connection should fail to reach its minimum quota, and most of them should go beyond the minimum expected.

REPORT OF R. A. TAYLOR

As the conference year is now nearing the close, I feel that I should make a brief report to the Advocate, as I have not given any account of my work during the year. This has been the greatest year of my ministry. I have conducted 16 meetings during the year. These meetings, with two or three exceptions, were held on the weaker charges. Notwithstanding this, the Lord has been present and people of all classes, old and young have been profoundly convicted of sin, and cried out, as in the days of old, "What must I do to be saved!" In these meetings 1245 were converted at the altar in the old fashioned way, 536 pledged themselves to tithe and 208 family altars were erected.

In these meetings I feel that I have been associated with some of the most congenial pastors in the conference. May the Lord bless them and their good people.

R. A. Taylor.

THE WITCH

By Virginia Stanard.

Dot was a witch on Halloween;
Her cap was high and pointed;
She was so supple and so swift
She seemed quite double-jointed.

Oh, wild and witchy, grim and bold,
She rode her broom and gamboled;
She flew by windows flappingly
And over fences scrambled.

Until a curious goose came up
And sniffed, above her bending.
"O dear, I'm not a witch!" cried Dot,
"I only was pretending!"

WHEN POLLY WENT NUTTING

By Daisy D. Stephenson.

With sad and solemn eyes Polly watched the older children out of sight. Sister Joan and Brother Will had been invited to a class nutting party, and the whole truckload of laughing little girls, noisy boys and lunch baskets had driven by to get them.

"Big children have the best times," sighed Polly to herself as the party vanished round a turn. She picked up Doodle, the black cat, and in her longing for sympathy hugged him too tight. He scratched her on the wrist, jumped out of her arms and ran away to the barn, leaving Polly more lonely than ever. The little girl went to her mother.

"Polly, dear, do you want to make some thimble tarts?" asked mother. Polly liked to make thimble tarts, and so she took her small piece of dough and began patting it delightedly. Soon she had fairy tarts all cut out for a tea party.

"When we get our rolls and pies done," mother was saying, "you can ask Jessie to a picnic in the arbor this afternoon."

The tarts came out perfect—golden brown and crisp, with a speck of ruby jelly in the centre. Polly hop-skipped over to give the invitation to her neighbor. But she walked back slowly.

"Jessie's sick mother," she said. "O dear! This is a horrid old day!" Then she had an idea. "May I have a picnic by myself? May I go nutting, mother?"

"Why, Polly! Little girls can't go off to the woods alone." Then her eyes danced, and she tilted Polly's dimpled chin. "Once upon a time there was a little girl about your size named Goldilocks," she said gravely.

Polly smiled. "But there are no bears in the maple grove," she declared.

Nuts in the maple grove! How mother did laugh! But Polly liked to play make-believe; the grove was not far away, and mother said that she might pack some sandwiches and tarts in her round covered basket and go.

"Maybe I shall bring back a basketful of nuts. Maybe I shall get more than Joan and Will," Polly said, and she skipped away so fast that her bonnet and her basket bobbed gayly.

It was not a long walk to the grove that the children of the town used as a park for picnics. Polly played about and clapped her hands with delight at the antics of a jolly red squirrel. She was sure that he had been nutting and was planning to spend the winter in a snug hole up the biggest tree.

"Woof! Woof!" A friendly fox terrier appeared from nowhere just in time to help Polly eat her lunch. Then they ran races, and Polly stopped breathless at the far end of the grove where an old farmhouse stood. It had been empty for a long time. She chased the terrier through the gate up a weed-choked path to the porch. He had caught sight of a white kitten.

"You naughty dog! Come here this minute!" scolded Polly, glad to see the kitten flash up the trellis to a safe place. The dog, feeling that he was in disgrace and that the kitten was beyond him, trotted round the house as if to get even with Polly. She ran down the steps, intending to return to the grove. But she stopped short. Her heart went "Pity-Polly" very fast, for she heard a strange sound. There was a rapping at a window overhead and a voice was calling, "Little girl! Little Girl!"

That coming from the empty old house was enough to startle a person older than Polly. She started to scurry off, but at the gate she cast one fearful look back. The rapping grew louder, and at a small window upstairs she saw a face framed in snowy hair.

"Why," thought Polly in relief, "she looks like somebody's grandmother. I'm not afraid of her." She ran back at once and turned her bright little face up to listen.

The voice said, "Please run round to the back door. I'm locked in the attic. Come right up and I will tell you what to do."

For just one second Polly's courage wavered. Who was the stranger, and what was she doing there? She might be an old witch disguised as a grandmother. But if she was really a grandmother and needed help, Polly felt that she must not fail her. The little girl nodded and was indoors in a moment. One look explained matters. The old lady had just moved in. Thing were piled up everywhere, waiting to be put into their proper places.

Polly eagerly hurried upstairs to the attic door. The door had a broken latch, which the new owner had not noticed when she hurried in. She had wanted to get something from the boxes that the men had carried up there.

"I was a prisoner," smiled the pleasant old lady as Polly managed to open the door. "It seemed as if nobody would ever come near enough to hear me call. I might have spent the night up there if you hadn't come."

Polly was very glad that she had come and she felt still gladder when Granny Joy started her off later with several different kinds of thank-yous, one in the form of a fat ginger cookie.

The sun was setting as Polly trotted home, flushed and smiling. Joan and Will were already there.

"The old truck broke down, and the man spent the day tinkering with it," grumbled Will. "We never got near a walnut tree."

"And the barbed wire caught me when I crawled under the fence into the field," sighed Joan and showed her mother an ugly tear in her bloomers.

"Of course we played games and made the best of it, but not a nut did we get!" said Will. Then he grinned mischievously at his little sister. "Well, Polly-wog, how many nuts did you get in the maple grove?"

Polly gave him just one look. Then she plumped her basket down on the table and smiled a triumphant smile.

"Why, Polly, where have you been?" cried her mother.

Will whistled and ran his hand through satiny brown chestnuts. Joan could hardly believe her eyes when she saw the hickory nuts. Then Polly told her story.

"She brought a lot with her, and I'm to go and visit her often and take Doodle to get acquainted with Snow White."

"I'm glad you went," said mother, and she gave Polly a big hug. "You were a real friend in need."

"You are a first-class person to send nutting all right!" cried Will with a laugh. "Did you say that I might sample your line of goods?"—Youth's Companion.

THE RED LEAF'S MESSAGE

"Now we art all through; we are of no more use," rustled the autumn leaves. They had dressed themselves in gold and scarlet and russet brown because the fall days had come. They liked the October sunshine and the crisp air, but they heard the wind.

And as soon as the leaves had put on their autumn colors, puff, whirr, along came the wind and pulled them free from the branches where they had fluttered and grown all summer.

"We are of no use to anyone now," they said to each other as they floated like a bright cloud through the air.

"O, yes, you are," sighed the new leafbuds, hard little brown knobs on the twigs where the leaves had grown. "If you hadn't gone we should have been uncomfortable all winter with your stems pushing so hard on our heads. Now we shall be able to sleep comfortably until spring."

But still the autumn leaves rustled to each other. "No one wants us down here in the road," they said.

"What beautiful red and yellow leaves; we have been waiting for you!" the children said, as they reached out their hands and caught as many of the leaves as they could. "We will make them into wreaths to wear when we play, and carry some of you to school for the teacher to put on the wall over the blackboard," they said.

But the autumn leaves that were left blew to and fro as they went down the road and across the field, still mourning, "We are not needed here in the field."

"Here are the leaves," said the farmer, "just what my seeds and roots need to keep them warm until spring comes!"

Then he gathered as many leaves as he could and spread them over the bare ground to keep the frost from going deep down into the earth.

"These leaves will help my field to grow another year," the farmer said.

Now there were only a few of the autumn leaves and they flew through the air in the woods. They were the last of all, left from the others, and they wanted to hide themselves in the woods where no one could see them.

"We are of no use. No one needs us," they rustled sadly to one another.

But as soon as the bright leaves covered the ground in the woods they found that they had been expected. The wild violet wanted a covering of leaves to keep her warm until winter was over. The hare needed some leaves with which to line her shelter in the hollow oak tree. The squirrel gathered as many leaves as he could to carpet his nest high up in the oak's branches.

Listen! You can hear this autumn message of the little red leaf today, and every other fall day.—Carolyn Sherwin Bailey, in "The Outdoor Story Book."

Good News for Creditors.

The following story appeared in a recent bulletin of the Rochester Credit Men's Association:

"The doctor coughed gravely, 'I am sorry to tell you,' he said, looking down at the man in the bed, 'that there is no doubt you are suffering from smallpox.'

"The patient turned on his pillow and looked up at his wife.

"Julia, he said in a faint voice, 'if any of my creditors call, tell them that at last I am in a position to give them something.'"

AGAINST HIS INCLINATION

By Wallace Dunbar Vincent.

Dad tried his best, when I was young,
To fix it in my mind,
That "as the tiny twig is bent
So is the tree inclined";
And when he'd lay me 'cross his knee
On punishment intent,
I used to cry, "Say, Dad, look out,
Or I'll grow up all bent!"

And when he'd say, "Come on, young man,
And weed this onion bed!"
Just when I'd planned a fishing trip
With Jimmy Jones instead,
I used to scowl until my face
Was black as black could be,
And mutter, "When I do grow up
I'll be humpbacked—you'll see!"

But years have come and years have gone,
With many a care and trouble,
With many a load that for a time
Has bent me nearly double;
But always I've sprung back again
Before it was too late—
For, though he made me bend a bit,
'Twas Dad who made me straight!

BROTHER BARNES AND ORPHAN-AGE CLASS PLEASE WANCHESE

I have just read in the Advocate of August 16th, Orphanage page, where Brother Barnes states that his singing class has been on the go during the past few weeks, and he also states that he can only visit a few of the churches, as much as he would like to visit all, as he has not the time to go the rounds as he would like to do and give every church in the conference a taste of just what his fine class has for us.

Now, this being the fact that he is limited to only a few visits each summer with his class, we want to especially thank him and his class for coming way down here on the coast across rough water and suffering many inconveniences, no doubt, to get to us and give us a fine program excellently rendered at Wanchese, N. C. Yes, it was good for him to be here, and while the results as to finances might not appear to be all that could be desired, yet it will be the means of tying us stronger together in the future, and our people will have a higher appreciation of what our orphanage is doing, and will stand in greater readiness to help at all times.

It was good to see these dear children and look on their faces and see the glad smiles and hear them recite and give us such fine entertainment. Yes, we love you children and hope to be able to do more for the great institution you represent in the future.

Brother Barnes also gave us some good enlightenment on the standing of our orphanage as compared with other institutions of its kind, and of the great work it is already doing and its hope for future progress. We repeat, we were glad that Brother Barnes came our way. We consider that he honored us more than we deserve and we heartily appreciate it and thank him for coming, as we fully realize the sacrifice he and the children made to come to us; but it would sadden us to think that this was the last time, and we hope that some time in the not distant future that he can make arrangements to come again. The latchstring hangs on the outside, Brother Barnes, and always a welcome within for you and the dear children. Please come again some time; our prayers and hopes for a greater orphanage will be given, and our finances as to the best of our ability will be there to help. The good seed that you are sowing will spring up forever hereafter to prove the greatness of your work. With much love to you and the orphanage.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Building Southern Railway engines at Richmond, Va.

$30,000,000
for new equipment

- 14,275 new freight cars
- 105 new passenger train cars
- 100 new locomotives

Our expenditures in one year for new locomotives and cars aggregated $30,000,000.

This new equipment greatly increases the capacity of the Southern Railway System to handle the growing freight and passenger traffic on our 8,300 miles of lines.

The greater part of these orders has been given to Southern manufacturers, thus providing employment to many men and promoting Southern industry.

These new locomotives, passenger and freight cars have been placed in service as rapidly as they have come from the builders. They are of the highest types of American manufacture, embodying the most advanced engineering improvements.

The development of Southern industry enables the Southern Railway System largely to provide for its needs from the manufacturing resources of its own territory. This great railway system is an institution of the South, contributing to Southern prosperity, and efficiently serving the South through an organization bred in its traditions to understand its problems.

The SOUTHERN SERVES THE SOUTH

Southern Railway System deposits in Southern banks an average of $150,500 each banking hour.

Gastonia and one at Trinity College. Was on my way to take further work at Junaluska when recalled by the serious illness of one of my members. I want to take the entire course because it is the thing to do. I am convinced the Sunday school is the coming institution of our church, and the wise thing for us to do is to qualify to lead in this field of service. You are right and we are right on your trail. Our year at Mount Holly is ending the finest ever.

O. P. Ader.

MATTHEWS

It was a pleasure to be with Rev. R. E. Hinshaw and his good people at Matthews last Sunday, at which time the Sunday school work received quite a boost in the all day service rendered in its behalf. Our congregation at Matthews is growing in interest and efficiency. Brother Hinshaw is very popular with his people and is leading constructively. In all probability Matthews will be made a station at our approaching annual conference. Superintendent Fred N. Hall tells me that additional building will be constructed to better house his Sunday school. It was a distinct pleasure to be again with our good people at Matthews.

RESOLUTION

Whereas, Brother E. P. Billips has served West Market Street Methodist church of Greensboro, N. C., faithfully and well in the capacity of assistant pastor during the past two years; and whereas, he desires to be relieved of his present work and to be assigned to an independent charge for another year; and whereas, his services have been highly satisfactory to this church in that he has done a very fine work among the young people.

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that the board of stewards of West Market Street Methodist church highly commend the work which Brother Billips has done in the church during the past two years; that we regret his departure from among us; that our love and good wishes and prayers will follow him to his new appointment;

Be it resolved further, that the board commends Brother Billips in love and good works to the approaching Western North Carolina conference, to the bishop and his cabinet.

"You're under arrest," exclaimed the seedy individual with the shiny badge and chin whiskers.

IN MEMORIAM

JACKS—J. L. Jacks was born August 7, 1851, died July 6, 1923. His funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Mr. Rathburn, assisted by Rev. J. A. Scott and Rev. S. A. Stikleather. He was a faithful member of Macedonia church. He left to mourn his loss a wife, a sister, five sons and two daughters. He was preceded to heaven by a son, who died at the age of twenty-one, and two grandsons, who died in infancy. May we meet him over yonder. His grandson, Ralph Jacks.

GILLESPIE—September 24, 1923, John Luther Gillespie died at his home near Rosman, N. C. He was in his 69th year. Rev. L. A. Falls of Brevard conducted the funeral services. The remains were laid to rest beneath a flower-covered mound in the East Fork cemetery, near the East Fork M. E. church, of which he had been a faithful member for a number of years. He is survived by his widow, Martha Gillespie; two daughters, Mrs. Towns of Pickens, S. C., Mrs. Victoria Gillespie of Greenville, S. C.; one son, Ralph, of Rosman. One daughter, Pearl, died twelve years ago. This good man will be sadly missed in his church, home and community.
Mrs. Chas. Gravely.

GLASS—Mrs. Henrietta Johnson-Glass was born in Burke county April 1, 1838; died at her home in Rutherford College on May 5, 1923. She had therefore attained unto the ripe old age of 85 years. All of her long, useful life was spent in and near the village of Rutherford College, where she reared a large family of children and gathered about her a large circle of devoted friends. Funeral services were conducted at the home by her pastor, assisted by Rev. J. R. Walker, and her body laid to rest under banks of lovely flowers.

Sister Glass was a life-long member of the Methodist church and active in its service till later in life when failing health confined her to her home. She loved the Lord and His church and spent much time reading her Bible and church paper. Though afflicted and confined to her room for many years, yet she remained gentle, kind and cheerful. She was ready when the summons came to go. May God comfort those who sorrow.
W. F. Elliott, Pastor.

GARDNER—Gaston Ellis Gardner, youngest son of William and Nancy Gardner, was born March 23, 1858, and died July 15, 1923, aged 65 years, three months and 23 days. He was married to Mollie C. Williams of Milligan, Tenn., March 1, 1882. Of this union four children were born, two of whom survive, Mr. W. S. Gardner of Columbia, S. C., and Miss Mattie Gardner of Burnsville, N. C. These with his wife, one sister, Mrs. W. G. McDowell, of Asheville, N. C., twenty-three nephews and nieces and three grandchildren are left to mourn their loss. During his early life and up to 1897 he taught in the public and private schools of Yancy county. He has been practicing law since 1898. He served as assistant district attorney for the government in Alaska for 18 months. He represented his county in the general assembly in 1917 and 1921. He was elector for the ninth congressional district in 1908 and elector for the state at large in 1912.

Brother Gardner joined the Methodist church at Burnsville when but a boy. At the time of his death he was serving as steward and trustee of Burnsville church. He had been in failing health for several years and for the past twelve months had been confined to his home most of the time. During the past few weeks of his life he suffered intensely, but when the end came he passed away peacefully like a child falling asleep. He expressed to his pastor and close friends a readiness to depart and to be with Christ. He made a brave fight to live, but was not afraid to die.

Brother Gardner was loyal to his friends, a liberal supporter of his church, charitable to the poor and unfortunate, hospitable in his home, devoted to his family. He will be miss-

SCIATICA, NEURALGIA AND URIC ACID

Out of Your System With Shivar Spring Mineral Water.

The Guarantee.

Think of it! A mineral water of such wonderful blood-cleansing power that it is actually shipped to every state in the Union and even to foreign lands under a positive guarantee that the price will be refunded, should the user report no benefit.

Shivar Mineral Water is unquestionably the greatest of all American mineral spring waters and there are thousands who contend that it is the best mineral water in all the world.

In Rheumatism and in other forms of auto-intoxication such as Sciatica, Neuralgia, Chronic Headache and Uric Acid Diathesis, Shivar Mineral Water has succeeded where every known medicine had failed. Physicians attribute this to its peculiar power of dissolving and completely washing out of the system the leucomaines, or body poisons that cause these diseases.

Delightful to drink, wonderful in its blood-cleansing power, Shivar Spring Water may be shipped any distance, at any season, without losing its virtues in the slightest.

Though a thousand miles away, you may use it in your home with identically the same results, as if you drank it at the Spring.

The Results.

Read the following letters which are fair samples of tens of thousands that are received at the Spring, then accept our guarantee offer. It gives you the equivalent of a three-weeks' visit to this celebrated Spring, with no charge for the water if you report no benefit. Sign your acceptance on the coupon below.

Florence, South Carolina.
I suffered with indigestion and kidney trouble and a year ago was stricken with acute articular rheumatism; was helpless for months, and since using your spring water I am walking without any crutch and improving daily. Indigestion much relieved. I wish I could write Shivar Spring Water in the sky so that the world could become acquainted with it.
Mrs. T. K.

Atlanta, Georgia.
In the interest of the afflicted I cheerfully state, seeing your advertisement in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, I decided to try Shivar Spring Water in the case of my daughter, who had been a sufferer from a malignant type of sciatica, and could get no permanent relief from medicine. After using the Water a few weeks she has almost entirely gotten relief from pain. In this case it has been a great blessing.

by us all, but especially by his wife and children, who stood by him and ministered to every need with a devotion never excelled.

The funeral services were held at the Methodist church in Burnsville Tuesday morning at ten o'clock, conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. J. H. Gruver of the Presbyterian church and Rev. J. H. Bennett of the Baptist church. A large concourse of friends were present to pay their last respects to the memory of the deceased. The floral offerings were beautiful. The interment was in Burnsville cemetery.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On Wednesday, August 15, 1923, the spirit of our sister, Mrs. J. W. Scarborough, left the body and returned to God who gave it, leaving the family in the agony of grief; therefore be it resolved:

First, That the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Llesville Methodist church, of which she was a member from the time she came to make her home among us until she answered the call, "Come up higher." While deeply feeling this bereavement and loss, we bow in humble submission to the dispensation of a wise Providence, knowing that our loss is her gain.

Second, That we assure the bereaved family of our deepest sympathy, directing them anew to the source of all sustaining grace, to the giver of life, and who can sustain in tribulation and suffering a richer life of Christian service.

Third, That these resolutions be recorded in our minutes, a copy sent to the sorrowing family, and a copy to the Christian Advocate.

Mrs. J. D. McGregar,
Mrs. D. F. Carver,
Mrs. J. D. Morton.

IN MEMORIAM

The older members of Trinity church and Woman's Missionary Society are fast passing away. In the death of Mrs. George Burch we realize that our loss is her gain, that her faith was strong, and her loyalty as a member of both church and society was true to the end.

While disease debarred her of its privileges for many months yet she was a liberal supporter of both.

Her presence was always an inspiration. Nobility of character was stamped on her face, which showed a reverential spirit, the possession of which marks the perfect type of true womanhood, and is indispensable to the happiness of the home, the individual and the nation, for without it there can be no trust, no faith, no confidence in God or man.

Her example as a Christian is a rich legacy left her two daughters, Misses Lizzie and Carrie. Heaven is brought nearer and sweeter to them by the separation, for we all believe she met her Pilot face to face and crossed the bar safely into the Haven of the Good.

Mrs. C. B. Green,
Mrs. J. S. Mesley,
Mrs. P. W. Vaughan,
Committee.

Western North Carolina Conference

WINSTON-SALEM, the twin-city! Winston with its strong churches and Children's Home is a Methodist center. Salem with its churches and historic college is the Moravian stronghold of the South. Methodism harks back to John Wesley and the Moravians to Peter Bohler, from whom Wesley "learned the ways of the Lord more perfectly."

Where the converging streams of Methodist and Moravian history meet in the twin-city was the seat of the Western North Carolina Conference. Thrice before had the conference met in Centenary church, Winston—in 1892, with Bishop Hendrix presiding, in 1898 when Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald directed affairs of the conference, and in 1910 with Bishop Hendrix in the chair. Before the formation of the two conferences for Tar Heel Methodism in 1889 the old North Carolina conference had held its sessions in Winston, and in early history of the church Bishop Asbury had gathered his pioneer circuit riders in annual conference a few miles west of Winston-Salem. The local setting of the conference, therefore, from a historic viewpoint was favorable indeed.

Bishop Denny, assisted by Revs. M. T. Smathers, C. S. Kirkpatrick, H. H. Jordan, Z. E. Barnhardt and C. M. Campbell, conducted the communion service, after which Rev. W. L. Sherrill called the roll, and the greater part of the clerical members with a goodly number of lay delegates answered to their names.

Rev. W. L. Sherrill was for the thirtieth consecutive time elected secretary and named as his assistants J. P. Morris, E. P. Billups, W. G. McFarland, J. J. Gray, W. M. Wall, E. J. Harbison, C. M. Short and W. F. Sanford.

The hours for meeting and adjourning were fixed at 9 a. m. and 12:30 p. m. D. M. Litaker for the presiding elders, who constitute the nominating committee of the conference, named the committees and announced several changes in boards, all of which was approved by the conference, after which, the organization having been completed, the presiding bishop referred numerous papers and communications to the several boards and committees.

Announce Transfers.

The bishop announced that during the year he had made the following transfers to and from this conference: A. C. Chappell, from the East Oklahoma conference; Oscar L. Simpson to the Virginia conference and then received him back by transfer; C. R. Ross from the North Carolina conference; H. M. Wellman to the North Carolina conference; Joseph W. Fitzgerald to and from the Cuban conference and J. A. Snow to the North Carolina conference.

Calls Roll of the Superannuates.

One of the impressive features of every annual conference is the call of the roll of the superannuates of the conference. Usually a few of these men generally feeble in body respond and others send messages to their comrades who are assembled in the great annual gathering. These retired men, no longer able for active service, frequently have a hard time of it because of enforced poverty. A blot on Methodist history with its long story of heroic achievement has been the treatment accorded its wornout ministers. And thrice over will be the church's shame if it does not hasten to remove this blot from its escucheon.

The first man called was H. L. Atkins, who more than twenty years ago broke down utterly and went to Bandera, Texas, to battle for life. He has through the years made a brave though losing fight. As is the custom, he sent a letter to be read by the secretary of the conference. The message from this godly man was welcomed by his brethren who do not cease to make mention of him in their prayers.

H. M. Blair, for twenty years editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, and the man who above all others deserves credit for the valuable plant in Greensboro where the Advocate is published, spoke briefly and expressed his appreciation of the fine treatment accorded him by his brethren notwithstanding his having been editor twelve years. Brother Blair's health is not very good at this time. Other names called were as follows: J. J. Brooks, J. B. Carpenter, S. M. Davis, S. S. Higgins, A. W. Jacobs, J. C. Mock, D. C. Price, J. B. Reynolds, N. R. Richardson, J. H. Robertson, R. D. Sherrill, L. E. Stacy, H. G. Stamey, N. T. Steele, J. T. Stover, J. L. Teague, F. L. Townsend, M. H. Vestal and B. A. York.

Names Referred.

C. F. Sherrill and J. A. Bowles, of the Greensboro district, were referred for the superannuate relation, their names being presented by Presiding Elder W. F. Womble.

Dr. T. F. Marr, of the Salisbury district, presented the name of B. F. Fincher for the superannuate relation.

The name of Rev. N. M. Modlin was presented for the superannuate relation by his presiding elder, Rev. R. S. Howie, of the Waynesville district.

The following ministers, holding the supernumerary relation, were called and their characters passed: J. P. Lanning, J. W. Long and W. L. Nicholson.

Dr. Sherman Speaks.

Rev. H. H. Sherman, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn., one of the secretaries of the general board of education of the Southern church, was presented to the conference, and in a short address told of the work of this board. He urged the church to co-operate with the general board in seeing that the young men of the church attend the denomination schools.

Speaking of collections thruout the various conferences on the pledges taken in the educational campaign two years ago, he said at that time approximately $18,000,000 were pledged, of which about $4,000,000 has been collected, $6,000,000 being due at this time.

The Christian Education movement now has the right of way and liberal response is expected in the "Pay-Up" campaign which closes the last of November, said Dr. Sherman.

Dr. Ellis Tells of Church Work.

Dr. T. D. Ellis, of Nashville, Tenn., secretary of the board of church extension, was next introduced to the conference by Bishop Denny. Dr. Ellis sounded a note of progress in church building throughout the Southern church. Many prominent men of the denomination are placing in the hands of the board large sums of money, he said.

The church is doing a great work in assisting in establishing churches in state school centers, he said. One church and parsonage is being built each day in Southern Methodism through the assistance of the board, it was stated.

A great work is being done in assisting in the building of churches in the cotton manufacturing districts by donations, and by helping wealthier communities in the erection of houses of worship through the making loans, said Dr. Ellis. Much is also being done in the mission fields of this country.

Mention was made of one presiding elder's district in which there are only four churches, not one of which cost over $5,000. Aid is being extended this district in the erection of a number of houses of worship.

Dr. Ellis called attention to the fact that the board of church extension has never lost a dollar of its capital. While the money is loaned at four per cent interest, very rigid rules are followed in making loans, it was stated.

Report of Board of Publication.

A. W. Plyler presented the report of the board of publication, which was referred to the board of Christian literature.

Report of Greensboro College.

C. H. Ireland presented the report of the board of trustees of Greensboro College, and the Trinity College report was filed by R. L. Flowers. Both reports were referred to the board of education.

Report by Presiding Elders.

The names of the presiding elders were called, their characters passed and reports of their work made.

Rev. H. C. Sprinkle, of the Asheville district, told of much progress in church building and other matters during the year. He reported that Rev. T. A. Groce, who has had charge of the Methodists' interests at Oteen, is doing a noble work. The conference will be asked to finance this work for another year.

Rev. J. B. Craven, of the Charlotte district, made an encouraging report, features of which were the building of several new churches, increasing salaries and conference collections.

Rev. W. F. Womble, of the Greensboro district, reported a net increase of nearly 800 in church membership. Much has been done in the way of improving church house facilities and in building parsonages.

Rev. Z. Paris, of the Marion district, made an encouraging report, in which he told of church building activities throughout the district. His work has been very encouraging during the year.

Rev. J. H. West, of the Mt. Airy district, brought an encouraging report of the work under his direction, a feature of which was an increase of $2,400 in pastors' salaries and $2,500 in conference collections.

CONFERENCE SIDELIGHTS

The conference with enthusiasm and by a standing vote adopted unanimously the report of the Sunday School Board, as it appears on page five of this issue of the Advocate. Be sure to read that report, for it shows conclusively that the Western North Carolina conference on all questions of doctrine is in perfect accord with the standards of Methodism. The report also makes clear that the Western North Carolina conference is able to think and act for itself without any self constituted assistance from without.

On Monday morning Bishop Denny gave the hour from 11:30 to 12:30 to a discussion of the proposed plan of unification that is to be considered next May by the northern general conference, and if adopted will result in an extra session of our general conference. Bishop Denny is opposed to the plan. He with two other commissioners of the Southern church voted against its adoption by the two commissions. All other members of the Southern delegation and the entire northern delegation voted for the plan. The "Plan" was carried in the Advocate a few months ago and we expect to give it to our readers a second time as soon as space will permit.

The next conference comes to Greensboro. The conference met in the "Gate City" four years ago. There are few things that Greensboro Methodists enjoy more than entertaining an annual conference. All things will be ready next October.

* * * *

Mr. A. W. Cline "covered" the conference for the Sentinel and our enforced absence at times from the conference room has led us to draw freely upon him for reports that appear in this issue of the Advocate. The conference in all its history has never been featured in the daily press as was done by the Sentinel and Journal of Winston-Salem. Column after column was given daily to the proceedings of the conference and to sketches of the personnel of the body. This friendly enterprise on the part of these local papers was highly appreciated by the conference.

Rev. C. S. Kirkpatrick was made an elder. He has been a successful pastor, a builder of churches, continually in demand for revival meetings, one of the popular instructors in the teacher training schools of the Sunday school department, but with all this and much more he has never been a presiding elder. In physical stature he is builded like Napoleon Bonaparte and it remains to be seen whether he is such a leader of campaigns on a big Methodist district. And he has a big job. The Shelby district to which this new elder has been sent is one of the biggest opportunities as well as exacting tasks in Southern Methodism. We expect Kirkpatrick to give a good account of himself.

Mr. J. A. Odell, the treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance from the organization of the conference in 1890 till a few years ago when he retired on account of age, was introduced to the conference and it gave him an ovation. No man within the bounds of the conference commands greater love and honor than J. A. Odell. His health is better than for several years.

* * * *

Winston-Salem gave the conference great entertainment. There were homes for all and to spare. Revs. Z. E. Barnhardt and R. H. Daugherty stayed on the job both day and night and no one lacked for anything. A thief, or thieves, entered the church and carried away eight overcoats in one day. Mr. Hugh Chatham gave the conference to know that the raiment of these preachers was insured when they came to Centenary church and for them to go to the treasurer and get pay for the stolen coats. Three of the eight coats had when conference adjourned been recovered, and these three preachers had to take home their old coats rather than a good big check from Centenary church. The Robert E. Lee and Zinzendorf hotels were especially good to the conference. The people of Winston-Salem are a great folk. They never do things by halves.

* * * *

An unusually large number of men this year took the superannuate relation. Among those to retire were W. M. Boring, who has been in the active work 45 years and who this year had more than 100 additions on profession of faith. J. A. Bowles with an unusually effective ministry behind him stops on account of the loss of his voice and only rest can cure him. Others to retire from the active work were C. F. Sherrill, B. F. Fincher, N. M. Modlin and C. M. Carpenter. The conference is going to feel the loss of these men from the effective ranks, for all of them have wrought well. Blessings upon these and all others of our superannuates.

Dr. Theodore Copeland writes that he is in a wonderful revival in Lexington, Ky.

Rev. T. W. Siler, who has been serving the Swansboro charge in the Wilmington district, has surrendered his credentials to his presiding elder, and Rev. W. J. Underwood has been appointed to finish out the year at Swansboro.

Wanted—A young unmarried man for a charge that will pay about $700, in North Wilkesboro district. Address J. W. Williams, Jefferson, N. C.

Rev. W. A. Betts, Cherokee, Texas, says: "I desire to secure several copies of my father's booklet entitled, 'Experience of a Confederate Chaplain.' If any of your readers shall mail same to me I will gladly pay for it, else in some substantial way show my appreciation."

H. E. Lance reports two good meetings recently held, one at Elizabethtown, assisted by Dr. Beaman, the other at Wesley's Chapel, preaching by Rev. C. Rowland of Texas. Twenty-four additions to the church have been made as a result of these meetings, and the latter not yet closed.

Bro. T. L. Rawley of Winston-Salem, a veteran Sunday school teacher who taught a successful class of men long before the day of men's classes and who still teaches a large class in Centenary church, Winston-Salem, was converted, joined the church, and subscribed for his church paper in 1856. He has read the paper continuously from that date to this except the four years he served in the Confederate army. That is a remarkable record, and he refuses to grow old or lose interest in the present. Says that he enjoys the paper now more than ever. He can say with Browning, "Come and grow old with me; the best is yet to be."

Every Day: This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it.—Psalm 118:24.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

Rev. J. W. Williams, of the North Wilkesboro district, reported for the first time something paid by all churches on conference collections. Good progress has also been made in church building.

Just before adjournment this morning the following visitors were introduced: J. M. Daniel and J. M. Lowder, of the North Carolina conference, and R. L. Flowers, of Trinity College.

SECOND DAY

The second day's session of the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Western North Carolina conference convened this morning at 9 o'clock, with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. M. T. Smathers of North Wilkesboro. The church was filled with preachers and delegates at the opening hour, and quite a large number of local visitors were present.

The first item of business was the calling of the roll of pastors, lay delegates and other officers, who were not present when the conference convened Wednesday morning.

The attendance at this morning's session was unusually large for this early in the conference. The majority of the preachers and delegates have arrived. Very few pastors are detained at home this year on account of illness. The attendance today is approximately five hundred.

Routine Business Taken Up.

After the reading of the minutes of the first session, matters of a routine nature were taken up. Bishop Denny recommended to the members of the conference a list of books that will be profitable to read during the year.

Continuing the call of minute-question twenty-one, the remaining presiding elders were called and their characters passed.

More Reports Are Made.

Rev. H. H. Jordan, of the Shelby district, gave a very fine report of his work, telling of some of the accomplishments of the four years he has spent on the district. Twelve new churches and the same number of parsonages were built in the four years. A number of other churches were remodeled. There has been a big gain in membership and finances.

Rev. D. M. Litaker, of the Statesville district, reported that he will not have to move a single pastor because of a request from the people. He reported a loyal spirit existing among the people. Fifteen out of the thirty charges have building operations under way. Good revivals have been held and collections came up well.

Rev. R. S. Howie, of the Waynesville district, brought a message of progress from the extreme western district of the conference. A number of churches have been built and there has been a substantial increase in finances and membership.

Rev. W. A. Newell, of the Winston-Salem district, reported an increase of $7,000 in pastors' salaries and $5,000 on benevolences. A big church building program has been on for several years, and a number of new churches have been built. Mr. Newell spoke of the fine spirit of unity that exists in Winston-Salem and other parts of the district.

Dr. T. F. Marr, of the Salisbury district, reported substantial progress in the territory under his charge. New churches have been built, pastors' salaries increased and good collections on benevolences were reported. Methodism is going forward with rapid strides in the Salisbury district.

The name of Rev. C. M. Carpenter, of Marshall, in the Asheville district, was referred by his presiding elder, H. C. Sprinkle, for the superannuate relation.

Introduced to Conference.

J. A. Odell, of Greensboro, conference treasurer for many years, was introduced at the morning's session.

Dr. I. P. Martin, of the Holston conference, was introduced by the bishop, and briefly he brought to his friends of the Western North Carolina conference a request to join in the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of his conference next year. This celebration will continue through the year, closing with the session of that conference in Knoxville in October, 1924, at which time a special session will be held. Dr. Martin requested that the Western North Carolina conference name a man to represent this body of Methodism at the centennial meeting.

Dr. J. W. Perry, secretary of the home department of the board of missions, was next introduced. He spoke of the great work being done throughout the Southern church for the cause of home missions. He also brought a call from the West for the building of churches in what is yet virgin territory for Methodism.

The entire program of the Centenary movement has not been completed, said Dr. Perry, because of delayed payment of pledges, and in this connection he urged the prompt payment of all money due, as it is badly needed in the home and foreign fields.

The Epworth League has already paid out on its Centenary pledge, this being the first of the separate church organizations to do this. The league is now planning some other special work in connection with the Africa Special, said Dr. Perry.

Dr. Perry outlined plans for a six weeks school of missions in every Southern Methodist church, and urged that this matter be taken up as soon as the literature is prepared.

The remarks of Dr. Perry were concluded with an urgent appeal for a return of the old-time piety of the early days of Methodism. This one thing will solve all the problems of the church, including those of the mission board.

Superannuate Fund Presented.

Dr. Luther E. Todd, secretary of the board of finance of the Southern church, was introduced to the conference by Bishop Denny and given time to present the question of the Superannuate Endowment Fund of $10,000,000 which is to be raised throughout Southern Methodism early next year. Each charge will be asked to assume a certain quota, which may be raised at once, or pledges may cover a period of five years. Several different ways of raising this money were presented. Committees are to be appointed at the first quarterly conference in each charge.

This Superannuate Endowment Fund is to be raised for the purpose of better caring for the superannuated preachers, the widows and orphans of Southern Methodism.

As soon as the charge committee is appointed an organization should be formed, selecting the most competent persons for the various places.

This committee will begin active work February 1, 1924, and from then until March 16 an intensive campaign of publicity will be conducted, stated Dr. Todd.

Subscription day in this movement will be Sunday, March 16, 1924. Pledges are to be taken at morning and evening services, and during "follow-up week" all members who have not subscribed are to be visited by the charge committee.

The amount to be raised by the conference for the Superannuate Endowment Fund will be approximately a half a million dollars. The quota for each charge will be the total amount of the pastor's and presiding elder's salaries for the year just closing.

The quota fixed above is to be the minimum. This will be divided pro rata, fifty per cent to the general endowment fund, and fifty per cent to the conference endowment fund. Every dollar raised in excess of the minimum will be credited to the conference fund, explained Dr. Todd.

Dr. C. W. Tadlock, pastor of Centenary church, St. Louis, Mo., was next introduced to the conference, and in an inspirational address impressed upon the members of the conference the importance of rallying to the endowment fund being raised for the retired ministers and their dependents. There are in the Southern church today approximately 400 of these men who are invalids. There are now 2,538 claimants in the entire Southern church, including superannuates, widows and orphans. The average amount being paid to these claimants is as follows: Superannuates, $294; widows $198, and orphans $50.

Dr. Tadlock paid a fitting compliment to the heroic superannuate, who would now be preaching the gospel if they were physically able. Although they may not stand in the pulpit Sunday after Sunday, they continue to preach until called to their reward, said Dr. Tadlock. These are the men who have helped to lay the foundation of present day civilization, he said, and in conclusion appealed to the conference to rally to this great cause.

The morning session closed with a brief appeal from Bishop Denny in behalf of the matter presented by Dr. Todd and Dr. Tadlock. He said that he anticipated a liberal response to the call for aid for the superannuates in the coming campaign. Many people will doubtless respond to this appeal who would not contribute to other causes, he said, because it is a movement that touches the hearts of everybody. Many people have been waiting for an opportunity to contribute to a fund for worn-out preachers, and now the time has come, said the bishop.

THIRD DAY

The third day's session of the Western North Carolina conference, M. E. Church, began this morning with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. J. P. Hippy, of Andrews. After the reading of the minutes by Secretary Sherrill, A. W. Plyler presented the following resolution, referring to the Holston conference centennial celebration:

Whereas, Dr. I. P. Martin, a duly accredited messenger from the Holston conference, appeared before this conference with an invitation to all members of the body who could arrange to do so, to attend the centennial ceremonies of the Holston conference at the annual meeting next year in Church Street church, Knoxville, Tenn.;

Therefore, be it resolved, that we with deep appreciation accept the invitation and instruct the Historical Society of the Western North Carolina conference to appoint a representative of this conference, as requested by Dr. Martin, to represent us in said ceremonials. We also pledge the conference to render all possible service in the due celebration of the first hundred years of Holston's conference history, which is a heroic chapter in Methodist annals.

A. W. Plyler, L. B. Rodgers, W. E. Poovey, W. O. Goode, Fred N. Tate, F. S. Lambeth, Sam L. Rodgers, F. M. Weaver, committee.

Question No. 1 Called.

Question No. 1 as follows, was called as the first item of business this morning: "Who are admitted on trial?" Greensboro district, Aaron Watson Lynch; Mt. Airy district, Marcus Quarles Tuttle; Shelby district, Henry Ray Cornelius and George Blaine Clemmer; Statesville district, Robert McKinley Stafford, and North Wilkesboro district, Ezra Maurice Jones.

"Is he in harmony with the doctrine and polity of the church?" was a question asked by Bishop Denny when the name of each young minister applying for admission was called. The bishop took this occasion to make some remarks on Methodist doctrine in which he said that the church need not be surprised at the attacks that are being made from time to time on the Bible and the fundamental doctrines of Christianity. "These things have been arising at intervals through past ages, and the church must provide scholars to meet these attacks," said the bishop, who continued by saying that "two men can make more noise than two thousand can quiet."

Question No. 3.

Question No. 3, "Who remain on trial?" was called, and the following preachers answered, all being advanced to the class of the second year: John Robert Church, Henry Clinton Freeman, Robert Elzie Hinshaw, Marcus Edward Leftwich, William Emory Moretz, Daniel Allen Oakley, John North Randall, Walter Moore Rathburn, Fred Lee Setzer, Isaac L. Shaver, Raymond Alexander Smith, Frank Jackson Stough, Allen Archie Angel, J. O. Cox, Walter Luther Dawson, Jr., Walter James Miller and James Russell Warren.

Rufus Melvin Hauss and Harry William Howard were continued in the class of the first year. It was announced that Paul Decatur Anthony had died during the year.

Good reports were made by the pastors who were advanced to the class of the second year. The conference heard with much interest the report of Rev. John R. Church, who is serving the only Indian charge in the conference. This work is located in the extreme western section of the state.

Question No. 6

"Who are admitted into full connection?" Question No. 6 was called and the following of the class of the third year answered and their characters were passed: Glibbreath Gilderoy Adams, Adrian Alfred Godfrey, James Archibald Howell, Gerald Ray Jordan, Joseph Letcher Reynolds, Guy Lattimore Wilkinson and Thomas L. Higgins.

The foregoing pastors gave good reports of their work as their names were called by the bishop.

Those of the above class, who were not elders, were elected to this relation.

The following were continued in the class of the second year: Carl Fred Tate, Raymond Browning and Dorland Philip Grant.

The name of Rev. D. V. Howell, of the Mt. Airy district, was referred for the superannuate relation.

Resolutions Come Up Saturday.

The resolutions concerning the Divinity of Christ and other matters of a doctrinal nature, which were referred to the Sunday School Board Thursday, will be considered Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, the hour set for this board to make its report. This decision was reached when a motion was made to take the resolutions out of the hands of the Sunday School Board and turn them over to a special committee to be named by the conference.

There was considerable discussion on the floor of the conference when the move to reconsider was made. Several laymen insisted that it was time for the conference to take a definite stand on the question referred to in the resolution.

Hospital Work.

Rev. L. B. Colson, of Asheville, secretary of the Conference Hospital Board, reported two hospitals already built, two under construction and two others enterprised within the bounds of the Southern church.

The general board is planning to build two tubercular hospitals, one east and one west of the Mississippi river. The Methodists and other citizens of Asheville are asking for one of these hospitals.

J. B. Ivey, of Charlotte, spoke in the interest of the hospital work in the Southern church, urging the church to go forward in this great work.

Mr. Ivey urged the conference to stand back of Asheville's request for the establishment of one of the tubercular hospitals there. He spoke of the favorable climatic conditions in the Mountain City.

Mr. Ivey also explained the plan of organization of the Golden Cross and urged that the matter be taken up in the conference this year. This movement fosters the hospital work of the church.

Frank Weaver, of Asheville, was elected to succeed the late Dorman Thompson on the entertainment committee of the conference.

Report of the Sunday School Board.

The adoption by a standing vote, which was unanimous, report No. 1 of the Sunday School Board marked the moment of greatest interest in Saturday morning's session. This action of the conference shows conclusively that the Western North Carolina conference is of one mind when it comes to a question of loyalty to the doctrines of the Methodist church. Here is the report. Be sure to read every word of it.

Your Sunday School Board has given careful consideration to the resolutions and other papers sent in with reference to certain teachings within our conference bounds that have caused comment and disquietude in the minds of many of our people during the past few months. We recognize the gravity of the situation and deem it fitting to restate the time-honored position of our church.

We think this cannot be done better than by quoting and endorsing the action of our General Conference at its last session when a similar situation was presented, which is as follows:

"We, your representatives in General Conference assembled, in view of the fact that there have come to us various memorials and petitions which indicate that in parts of the church and among some of our people there is a degree of alarm lest the time-honored and universally accepted doctrines of our Methodism are not being presented in their purity by certain of our preachers and teachers, send you our greetings and beg to assure you that we, and we believe, the great body of our people, still adhere unwaveringly to the faith once delivered to the saints.

"It may be that some, using that liberty which Methodism has always allowed to its representatives, have gone too far in questionable speculations. We would not have our people, our young people in particular, to accept beliefs contrary to our recognized standards of doctrine. Those standards are amply set forth in our Articles of Religion and in the Apostles Creed.

"We therefore call upon annual conferences, boards of trustees of our institutions of learning, and other responsible officers of our church, to take all necessary steps to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's word.

"No article of our faith has been from the beginning more precious or more vital in our history than the divine inspiration and sufficient authority of the Bible. We recall to you once more those emphatic and comprehensive words of our Fifth Article of Religion: Holy Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation; so that whatsoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man, that it should be believed as an article of the faith, or be thought requisite or necessary to salvation.

"Such is the faith which we have inherited from our fathers and by which we unflinchingly hold. God has wonderfully rewarded our loyalty. The past quadrennium, the last year especially, has been for our Zion one of unexampled prosperity. Our people have been moved to pour vast sums of money into the treasury of the Lord. Multitudes of souls have been harvest of our ministry. Our increase of membership last year (91,315) was the greatest we have ever had in one year, and greater than that reached the same year by any other branch of Methodism.

"Meantime, the young people of our church societies and institutions of learning are offering themselves by the thousands for lives of sacrificial service.

"As enforcing the sentiments for which we would have our people stand, we bring to their attention and commend to their consideration the following weighty paragraph from the pastoral address of our honored and beloved bishop:

"Heretofore our church has been remarkably exempt from destructive influences and revolutionary tendencies. Our preachers (with few, if any, exceptions) have been characterized by purity of doctrine and elevation of life, and the spirit of our people has been marked by the most admirable conservatism of evangelical Christianity.

"We do not disparage devout scholarship, nor discourage efforts to reach sound learning in all departments of thought and promote investigation along all lines of useful research. From the first Methodism has fostered education and walked unafraid along all the paths of intellectual culture. From its founders and fathers, who came forth from the halls of famous seats of learning, we have inherited courage in pursuit of truth and confidence in following its light. We have received also from them the disposition to maintain the faith once for all delivered to the saints. They were not, and we must not be unstable children, tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine. Modish rationalism must not be permitted to affect our devotion to the established tenets of ancient and abiding Christianity.

"In these times of doubt and distress the message of the enduring gospel of the Son of God, with apostolic ascent and authority must speak tranquility and order to a perturbed and distressed world. The demands of the hour exclude the propagation of novelties and notions.

"The learned and devout men in whose labors we have entered did not follow cunningly devised fables when they made known to our fathers the way to salvation. Mists arising from astral myths and ethic legends did not cloud their judgment nor dim their faith; and to the sure word of prophecy in which they trust we shall do well to take heed in these troubled times as unto a light that shineth in a dark place. The present is not the age for discovering the gospel, so long revealed, but for declaring it as a body of saving truth which even an angel might not seek to displace for another gospel without incurring the just anathemas of all holy and faithful souls. Our office is not to produce a new Christianity, but to preach with the power of the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, 'the old, old story of Jesus and His love.'

"It is our deep conviction that the one evil out of which springs all of the uncertainty and distress of the present time is sin, which lies so deep in the human heart. We believe, therefore, that throughout all our borders, in our schools as well as in our churches, the evangelical note should sound out loud and clear, excluding all doubtful disputations. The one sure way to keep our faith sound is to keep our Christian experience fresh and vital and growing. And the best defense against all the forms of incendiary rationalism on the one hand, and of the fanaticism of ignorance on the other, is a great offensive movement against all the forces of iniquity.

"Therefore, we do 'speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward.' We call for an advance along all the lines of evangelistic activity. As during the quadrennium just past we have laid stress on the missionary and educational work of the church, so during the coming quadrennium let the forces of the church be organized in a mighty effort to bring lost men and women to the Son of God. To this end, let the spirit of brotherly love prevail in all our borders; let us put away all worldliness out of our hearts and life; and let increasing prayer be made to the God of our fathers for the outpouring of His Holy Spirit upon all our people."

In harmony with the above statement of our General Conference, your Sunday School Board of the Western North Carolina Conference desires, while expressing its entire confidence in the good intentions of those in authority in connection with religious training in our church, to disapprove emphatically of the selection of teachers or lecturers whose utterances are calculated to disturb the faith of our people.

W. A. Lambeth, Chairman.

Geo. L. Hackney, Secretary.

Among the other items of business transacted Saturday morning was the reception of the class of the second year into the membership of the conference, at which time Bishop Denny delivered an address of unusual force in which he placed special emphasis upon the deity of Jesus Christ.

The conference tabled a resolution offered by M. T. Smathers the purpose of which was to instruct the delegates to the General Conference to vote against the present proposed plan of unification with the Methodist Episcopal church.

C. M. Pickens was named as the representative of this conference to the centennial celebration of the Holston conference next year in Knoxville, Tenn.

FORWARD MOVEMENT IN CHURCH FINANCE

By W. B. North.

The very serious question, What are we going to do when the money for the Centenary and Christian education that we have raised by special effort gives out? has been asked by many that love the Lord so often that it puts us to searching for the best answer. It stands to reason that we could not afford to do less than to assess our church for the cost of running expenses, growth, opening and cultivation of both home and foreign mission fields, as the Lord in His good providence opens them up to us and leads the way. Anything less than this would be to lose much of the valuable ground we have gained, and to prove unworthy of the sacred trust committed to our hands.

God forbid that any member of the great Methodist family should ever see the day when she would permit another denomination of the church of Christ to pass her in the onward march to evangelize the world and do our work and win and wear our crowns.

A great general, with repulsed and scattered forces, while the enemy celebrated the victory, was asked, What are you going to do now? quickly replied, "Why, re-enforce and reorganize my whole army and attack the enemy at five o'clock tomorrow morning." The reader is too familiar with modern history to have to be told what was the great result.

We should act with equal wisdom in discharging our duty to the church we love. After a long experience and observation followed by a careful consideration of this vital question, I most respectfully and earnestly suggest the following plan for the adoption and use of all of our local churches as a forward movement in church finance:

Let the officials of every local church organization secure and keep an absolutely accurate roll of all the living members of their church, and their places of residence. At the beginning of each year assess every church member that is able to pay anything as much as he can be persuaded to pay in the next twelve months.

Divide all the members of the church into sections and number them 1, 2, 3, 4, etc.

With the exception of the treasurer, put every member of the board of stewards in charge of a section of assessed church members. Let every steward keep a book (not a paper written with lead pencil soon to be soiled and lost) containing all the names, places of residence and assessments of all the church members in his section, also amounts paid on their assessments with the dates of payment.

Let every steward find the places of residence of all the members of his section, form their acquaintance and visit them not less than twice a year, furnishing such advice, information and encouragement as each case may require, and invite and urge every member to attend the mid-week services, Sunday school, and the preaching of the gospel regularly, and pay some portion of his assessment in person, or by proxy, every Sabbath.

Let the steward call together all the members of his section of assessed church members once every quarter of the year either on Sunday (for it is the Lord's work) or at some suitable time in the week, that they may get acquainted, and cultivate the friendship of each other, talk over the business of the church, receive reports, dues, make up the financial report of their section to the next regular stewards' meeting, receive helpful information, and offer special prayers that the whole church may be more liberal and guided by the Spirit of God and graciously revived in all of its departments—in view of the fact that without Him we can do nothing, but with His help we can do all things that are necessary. The steward might greatly facilitate his work by inviting some strong financial speaker to talk to the members of his section on these important occasions.

Make it a part of the order of business of every regular stewards' meeting for the chairman to call for, and require, a well prepared report from every steward of his section of members, so that every member of the church may know that the Lord's money is needed, called for and required every month in the year, and that it is just as important for him to pay a part of his assessment early in the conference year as it is for him to pay it all in "a lump sum" the hour the preacher leaves the charge for the annual conference. Would that by the divine power we might fix the fact as deep in the minds and hearts of all the supporters of our church as their bones are in their bodies that our church assessments are not annual but monthly. Those that are dependent upon these contributions need their money in January as well as November.

Is it a small matter if the funds in the treasury run short, and the Board of Missions is forced to borrow money and pay $5,000 or $10,000 interest on the loan as the case may demand, simply because one or two hundred thousand uninterested and untrained members of our great church think that it will answer the purpose as well to pay their assessments the last week in the conference year as every week in the year?

Is it right, after a board of stewards has fixed a pastor's salary, upon which the support of himself and family depends, as small as they can possibly figure it, to pay him the next to nothing scarcely until the crop is planted, cultivated and gathered?

No person among us that has assumed the solemn obligation of church membership can afford to decline to pay or do his part to support the church, and no person of solid piety who both knows and loves the Methodist doctrine and discipline, and of good natural and acquired abilities to transact the temporal business of the church (and no other is eligible to the high and sacred office of steward) can afford to accept the office of steward and neglect or decline to devote the proper time and personal attention necessary to faithfully perform the sacred duties of his high office.

If we want officers and members after the pattern given on the moment we must "train them up in the way they should go."

How far would I miss it if I were to say there are 100,000 members in the M. E. Church, South, that pay practically nothing to the support of their church?

It eliminates the training for the parent to pay for the children. It would be tenfold better for the children to earn the money, or the parent to give the child the money and see that he pays it into his Lord's treasury. If children pay nothing before they reach their majority you need not expect them to pay much after that.

A man's obligation to the church begins no later than the day he joins. If for any reason he does not contribute to its support until one, two or three years have expired it is not probable that he will pay anything thereafter.

The sad fact that as a church we are losing hundreds of thousands of dollars every year, and it is probable that in the future we are liable to lose millions more, unless we use better plans for the collection of the Lord's money, is only a part of the great loss we are liable to sustain, for those under our direction and influence need to be taught the beautiful grace of liberality and trained to support and lead the hosts of Methodism in the ages to come.

I therefore move the adoption of the financial plan herein presented by every board of stewards throughout our church.

"Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward."

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE DUKE FUND

1. What is the Duke Fund?

This is an annual contribution of $25,000, which now for several years Mr. James B. Duke has been giving to the North Carolina and Western North Carolina conferences to be administered through Trinity College by President Few. This has been divided equally between the two conferences—$7,500 for building churches in each conference, and $5,000 for aiding preachers on country charges in each conference. This money is all to be used for the benefit of the work in country churches. Mr. Duke is a great friend of the country church; he believes that money spent here will result in a real upbuilding of the people.

2. What Use is to be Made of This Fund?

A better type of church, fully sufficient to meet the needs of the church in the open country, is to be provided by the aid given. Effort is to be made, also, to aid in supporting men who love the work of the country and are able to make most of the opportunities that belong to this needy and promising field. Along with better buildings must go men fully qualified for making full use of these. This calls for money to make the compensation for work done in the country equal to that for work done in the towns. To this end must be the fullest co-operation of all the elements involved.

3. How is This Fund Administered?

Associated with Dr. W. P. Few is a commission, known as "The Duke Fund Commission," composed of three representatives from each conference, appointed upon nomination, one by the cabinet, one by the Board of Missions and one by the Board of Church Extension of each conference. The commission works with these boards in the distribution of this Duke Fund, the commission holding its regular meetings at Trinity College soon after the conferences have adjourned. All applicants for aid should apply for blanks and secure these from the secretaries of the boards involved just as though the applications were going into the boards for aid.

4. What are the Efforts of the Commission?

The commission desires to accomplish the most possible with the money expended, both in the way of building churches and in the use of these in the country places. Not one dollar should be wasted; the most should be accomplished. To this end, the commission requires that plans of all churches to receive aid shall be submitted before the money becomes available. In this there is no disposition to dictate, but a desire to aid in getting plans and specifications that will guarantee the building of churches fully sufficient to meet the needs of the communities. The commission is not interested in poorly constructed and inadequate churches; but it is most anxious to join with all who are willing to do their part in supplying all needed equipment for the work in the country.

5. How Can Aid be Secured?

Get a blank from the secretary of your Board of Church Extension, if help is wanted in building a church; from the secretary of your Board of Missions, if help is wanted on salary; then fill out with the utmost care with regard to the exact facts, and send in to the secretary concerned, or in the case of emergencies to W. P. Few, Trinity College, Durham, N. C. Dr. Few keeps all the records of the commission at the college. Avoid approximations as far as possible. Please do not come with a "poor mouth" and the spirit of surrender. The commission believes that the spirit of self-sacrifice, represented by the Cross, goes beyond the spirit of the pauper in making the kingdom come. Requests for aid may be sent in any time through the year for aid in church building, and help will be guaranteed if any funds are in hand.

6. What Does the Commission Crave?

The co-operation of presiding elders, pastors and official boards in the effort to promote the work in the country places of North Carolina. We should lead the entire church in this important field. We can and we will with a united effort in training men and in building churches.

THE GREENSBORO DAILY NEWS AND THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

Our Methodist brethren having fixed securely the faith at Winston-Salem, that great denomination should enjoy a long and blessed immunity from both foes and friends.

Our Methodist brothers doubtless are familiar with Kaubach's famous cartoon of the Reformation with Luther holding aloft an open Bible and about him grouped the inventors, the discoverers, the thinkers, the writers of genius who were nurtured in the cradle of that great Reform. An open Bible in that day may have been all right. Wherever the Book went then darkness seemed to step back. The open Word, the free page and the well-read one seemed to illumine the earth. We have gone so far as to talk about Twentieth Century light and knowledge. But manifestly we have been wrong. Of course we know there is no twentieth century in China, in Turkey, in Africa, in Siberia, in Russia. What boots it that all China without the Book is dark, all India dark, all Africa in inky blackness, and Russia, Spain and Italy gray with their half-open Bibles, their partial light? What this poor old United States needs is not the open Bible, the freedom of speech and thought, but the unquestioning faith. And they have it fixed up for them in Winston-Salem.

This is a part of the second editorial that our neighbor across the street has written within a week in criticism of the action of the Western North Carolina conference in adopting a report from the Sunday School Board which expresses the attitude of the conference to questions of doctrine. Evidently, our friend of the Daily News is hunting for a controversy or else for a guardianship over the affairs of the conference.

It is clear to us that our friend either has not read the report which is the ground of his dissatisfaction or else he is unable to understand what he reads. For said report does not contain what he seems to think it does.

The editor of the News has in fact set up a man of straw which is a right accurate representation of Roman Catholicism in the Middle Ages, then hastens to say that it is the Western North Carolina conference.

The implication that the Western North Carolina conference has become an organization akin to the Romish church with which Martin Luther contended is not only without foundation in fact, but is an open insult to the conference, for which if he is the man we take him to be he will make due apology.

The fact is that the Methodist church has from the beginning and still stands squarely for the great Protestant principle of the right of the private interpretation of the Bible, which is the "sufficient rule of faith and practice" and the guarantee of civil and religious liberty.

The Methodist church also denies "priestly intervention," or, in other words, accepts the "priesthood of believers," which Protestant principle liberates from the shackles of the Roman Hierarchy that would bind the souls of men here and hereafter.

Methodism is not Roman Catholicism, as the editor seems to imply.

Methodism does not put the shackles on anybody. There has never been, so far as we recall, a heresy trial in the Methodist church. "To think and let think" was the well known saying of John Wesley, and his followers have been true to him in this. Methodism allows and always has allowed the largest liberty and will continue so to do. The Methodist church is an on-going institution. It not only builds new churches every day in the year, but occupies new territory and has as its one ambition to accept new truth when discovered and "to spread scriptural holiness over the land."

But all this is not out of harmony with a protest against the church's employing lecturers or speakers who utter conclusions that weaken the public confidence in the Holy Scriptures. The Methodist church expects to stand for and preach the Bible. That is a dearly bought Protestant right and Methodist practice that will not be surrendered on account of a little editorial ridicule.

We wish to add this one word. The action of the Winston-Salem conference was, as implied already in this writing, in perfect accord with the entire church. For the paper adopted was the one formulated and adopted last May one year ago by the General conference at Hot Springs. The vote was then unanimous just as it was at Winston-Salem.

The writer had the honor to be one of the committee at Hot Springs that prepared the report. He knows with what care the report was prepared, and with what unanimity it was adopted by the General Conference, and with uniform approval it was accepted by more than two million Methodists. The first public protest we have heard comes now from our neighbor across the street. We suggest that he learn what the Western North Carolina conference actually did before he criticises its action.

SPIRITUAL STATE OF THE CHURCH

The committee on the Spiritual State of the Church has tried to see in the various achievements of the church signs indicative of spiritual development. We are very grateful to note that a number of new churches have been built, and others are in process of construction. We are glad to note that our Sunday schools have grown in number and importance as a result of better equipment, wise direction and more efficient leadership. We have seen good revivals in many of our charges, and are comforted in the thought that through the preached Word many souls have been saved.

In the financial statistics of the year we are proud to say that our people seem to be growing in the grace of liberality. Along all lines of material development we see growth and expansion, and if we should judge the spirituality of the church from that viewpoint alone we should have great cause for general rejoicing. We should pronounce the spiritual health of the church good.

We cannot close our eyes, however, to some very dangerous conditions that threaten to deprive the church of much of her spiritual power. There is not enough of the "old time religion" in our homes. We do not believe that there are as many family altars in our homes in proportion as there were in the days of our fathers. The altar fires of the church cannot glow with the fire from off the altar of God while the altars in our homes are sadden heaps of cold cinders of ashes. The home and the church of the living God are in competition with the cheap sensationalous of the amusement halls found in practically every community throughout the length and breadth of this great nation. Jazz and the spirit of jazz are deadly foes to spirituality. Some church members are permeated with the spirit of worldliness, and though their names are on our church registers, in spirit they walk with us no more.

There is a dangerous idea in the minds of many to give just as little time possible to the church on Sunday. Many leave the church at the close of Sunday school and take joy rides during the preaching hour, and often picnic in the country on God's holy Sabbath day. We know such actions are not in keeping with the spirit of worship, and we deplore the fact that many pews are vacant in God's house as a result. We need a revival of the "old time religion." We believe there is spiritual power in the church of God to bring it to pass. We believe our preachers are preaching a pure gospel of Jesus Christ and Him crucified. We believe in that gospel and in its power to save us from all the mighty material forces that threaten the spirituality of the church. That gospel has power to aid and help us in our social, our domestic, our civic, our commercial and our industrial problems, but in order to do its perfect work in those lines, it must first save you and me from the destructive power of sin. It must put Christ with our beings—"Christ whither is the hope of glory."

H. K. Boyer,
E. E. Williamson, Secretary.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Dr. Dan Atkins presided at the memorial service Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at which time tribute was paid to the lives of the ministers and ministers' wives who died during the year. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. John W. Moore.

Minute question No. 14, "What preachers have died during the year?" was called, and it was announced that W. S. Hales, E. S. Richardson, T. J.

Ogburn, preachers in full connection, and Paul D. Anthony, a preacher on trial, had died. The names of Mrs. W. C. Wilson, Mrs. J. J. Gray and Mrs. J. R. Warren, preachers' wives, who died during the year, were announced. It was also announced that Dorman Thompson of Statesville, a leading layman and official of the conference had died.

J. F. Kirk read the memoir of W. S. Hales; T. F. Marr that of S. E. Richardson; J. H. Barnhardt that of T. J. Ogburn; B. Wilson that of P. D. Anthony; J. F. Armstrong read a sketch of Mrs. J. J. Gray, and A. C. Swafford was requested to prepare a sketch of Mrs. Wilson. C. A. Wood read a sketch of Mrs. J. R. Warren.

A motion was carried that a memoir of the late Dorman Thompson be prepared and printed in the minutes and J. F. Kirk was requested to furnish brief sketch of Mr. Thompson. After words of eulogy by several members of the conference, the meeting adjourned at 4 o'clock.

REPORT OF BOARD OF LAY ACTIVITIES

We recommend:

First, That the goal of the conference be the payment in full of all assessments and salaries for 1924, and to this end we urge the elders, pastors, and lay leaders to see that the board of lay activities shall be organized in every charge and in every church.

Second, That a thorough every member canvass be put on in every church as early as possible after adjournment of this conference.

Third, That we affirm our devotion to the Centenary campaign and to the educational program of our church and accept the suggestion that it shall be the major task of the board of lay activities to bring these great undertakings to a successful conclusion and ask the pastor to see that an educational committee be appointed in every church.

Fourth, That the county be the unit as far as possible in carrying out the work of the lay activities and urge the elders and district leaders to see that associate district leaders be appointed for each county or similar unit.

Fifth, That Charles H. Ireland be elected conference lay leader.

Sixth, That pastors and boards of stewards be urged to use membership cards prepared by our conference lay leader, which cards when properly filled out by every church member will not only constitute a complete record of members but a guide to the kind of work in the church that each member is willing to undertake.

Seventh, That a ministerial loan fund for the purpose of being loaned to worthy young men seeking to prepare themselves for the ministry shall be established in each district, along the lines adopted by the Greensboro district conference.

Eighth, That the training of our laymen being one of the crying needs of the church, we recommend that the pastors see that all the committees provided for in our discipline shall be organized and put to work in every board of lay activities, giving special pains to see that the evangelistic and social service committee shall be largely used in their respective fields.

Ninth, That we recommend a constant study, teaching and preaching of the scriptural plan of financing the church, especially emphasizing the great doctrines of tithing and stewardship.

Tenth, That the second Sunday in June be set apart as laymen's day and that arrangements shall be made to have laymen to hold services of worship in every church during the absence of the pastors attending the ministerial training school at Trinity College.

Eleventh, That every church be urged to use the weekly payment plan as the basis of assessment or pledges and to use the envelope system of making contributions. We also recommend that a detailed financial report be made to the congregation of every church monthly on stations and at least quarterly on circuits. Also that early in the year full explanation be made to each congregation of every item composing the conference collections.

NOTICE FROM REV. W. F. ELLIOTT

Since I have been transferred to the N. C. conference I will have some leisure time till that conference meets, and I would like to employ this time in helping some one in revival meeting as preacher or leader of song.

W. F. Elliott,
Rutherford College, N. C.

BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION

At the approaching conference in Elizabeth City the Board of Church Extension of the conference will receive any applications to be passed upon, either by the conference board or the general board. The general board will not consider any applications which have not been passed upon favorably by the conference board.

Any blank applications which are to be addressed to either board may be obtained from Rev. J. E. Holden, Secretary, Kenly, N. C.

The blanks must be properly filled out and returned to the secretary on or before the first day of conference.

The brethren will delay their cause by writing to the undersigned for blank applications, as he does not keep them. They will be procured from the secretary.

Euclid McWhorter.

SOUTH ATLANTIC MONTHLY

What should be done to prevent the depletion of forests in the Southern States? What is the alternative of government ownership of the railroads? These pertinent questions receive definite answers in the October issue of the South Atlantic Quarterly which also completes its twenty-second volume. By every citizen interested in the welfare of this region and in the national public policy these articles should be read. Two other articles of the same issue deserve mention the illustrious Dr. Keen's conclusions regarding the Value of Medical Research to Mankind and Ewart W. Hobbs' Plea for Church Union Through a Common Membership in All Churches. Science and religion go hand in hand in the periodical. But to those interested in literature and art Mr. Beatty's discussion of the English Lake District Before Wordsworth and L. W. Smith's review of Naturalism in contemporary letters will make as deep an appeal. Long may the Quarterly continue its usefulness.

MANY, MANY THANKS

The job department of the Advocate has recently turned out a very beautiful cook book for the Woman's Club of Mt. Airy. Listen to what they say about the quality of the work they got:

"Our committee and club women as a whole, also our advertisers, are delighted with the book. It is certainly beautifully done; your house should certainly feel proud of it.

Let me thank you here for your patience in dealing with us who were absolutely green about this kind of work. We thank you for your consideration and co-operation in every respect.

Yours very truly,

Mrs. C. C. Hale."

Any one wishing to secure a copy of this book can do so by writing Mrs. Hale.

Despite continued effort there are some sixty of the more than two thousand chaplains who served in the World War who were entitled to receive the Chaplain's medal to whom it has not yet been formally presented on account of inability to secure address. Any chaplain of the Protestant churches who served under commission during the World War and who has not received the Chaplain's medal should apply to Rev. E. O. Watson, Secretary General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains, 937 Woodward Building, Washington, D. C.

"At the fourth quarterly conference for Northampton circuit, Weldon district, held at Lasker, October 20, 1923, every church on the charge, five in number, paid in full the balance due on the pastor's salary. The circuit will also present the pastor with a new suit of clothes. Both Brother Robinson and Presiding Elder Mercer are in high favor with the people."

Time No Object: But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.—2 Peter 3:8.

A Benediction: Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you.—2 Corinthians 13:11.

GLEANINGS FROM MINUTES OF NORTH WILKESBORO DISTRICT MEETING

The district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Wilkesboro district, Western North Carolina conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened in annual session with the Methodist church of Boone on Thursday evening, October 4, 1923, with the district secretary, Mrs. Will Winkler presiding.

After a song service by the local choir the pastor, Rev. G. C. Brinkman, conducted the devotional exercises. An address of welcome by Mrs. McG. Anders was responded to by Mrs. L. D. Lowe of Banner Elk in words of appreciation, followed by an appropriate solo given by Mrs. O. L. Hardin.

These things being done, the speaker of the evening, Mrs. C. C. Weaver, of Monroe, conference superintendent of young people's work, was introduced. She delivered a ringing challenge for service and for intercessory prayer, thus sounding the keynote which gave tone to the entire conference.

Friday, the real day of the session, was crowded with work. Every minute of the day was filled with good things for these missionary workers. All present manifested great interest by their strict attention. Mrs. Weaver's address on this day, with her frequent helpful talks, constituted the crowning feature of the meeting—spiritual and inspiring, she proved a benediction to all her hearers. The work of the young people received especial emphasis. The advantage and the importance of early training for the Master's work made a lasting impression.

The devotional exercises, conducted respectively by Mrs. A. V. Bennett, Mrs. C. C. Weaver, and Mrs. Turner Smathers, were messages with deep spiritual truth.

One of the gratifying things about the meeting was the fine representation—Jefferson, Valle Crucis, North Wilkesboro, Banner Elk, Creston, Helton and Sutherland all being in attendance. Reports were encouraging, round table talks purposeful and helpful, and the spirit in every way suggestive of advancement for the coming year.

The final session closed with a consecration service. All joined in singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," and separated with a purpose to make an even better report at Sparta next year. Mrs. J. L. Winkler, Secretary.

MY PRAYER

Let me not die before I've done for thee
My earthly work, whatever it may be;
Call me not hence with mission unfulfilled;
Let me not leave my space of ground untilled.
Impress this truth upon me—that not one
Can do my portion that I leave undone;
For each one in thy vineyard hath a spot
To labor on for life, and weary not.
Then give me strength all faithfully to toll
Converting barren earth to fruitful soil.
I long to be an instrument of thine,
To gather worshipers unto thy shrine;
To be the means one human soul to save

From the dark terrors of a hopeless grave.

Yet most I want a spirit of content
To work where'er thou'lt wish my labor spent;
Whether at home, or in a stranger clime,
In days of joy or sorrow's sterner time.

I want a spirit passive—to lie still,
And by thy power to do thy holy will;
And when the prayer unto my lips doth rise,

"Before a new home doth my soul surprise,

Let me accomplish some great work for thee,"

Subdue it, Lord. Let my petition be,
"O make me useful in this world of thine,

In ways according to thy will—not mine."

Let me not leave my space of ground untilled;

Call me not hence with mission unfulfilled;

Let me not die before I've done for thee

My earthly work whatever it may be.

WHY GOD SEEKS THE BEST MAN

God is intently looking for the best men. The eyes of the Lord are running to and fro throughout the whole earth, for the definite purpose of showing himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him (2 Chron. 16:9). He found at least one man who pleased him. "There is none like him in the earth," God said to Satan about Job. He was the best man God had! And yet! He put him in Satan's sieve, just as he did Peter centuries later. There was "something more beyond" for Job, and God wanted to give it to him. In the mystery of his "permissive will," God wished to show Satan that a man, afflicted and misunderstood, could be true to Him in adversity as well as in prosperity. Are any of us in the furnace of affliction? Our "comforters," like Job's, may be telling us that we are being punished for some reason or other, but very likely they are not saying the thing that is right. "Ye have not spoken to me the thing that is right," said Jehovah to Job's friends. The sufferings of God's children are purifying, and in them we get a new vision of God.—S. S. Times.

MISSION INCIDENTS

It is hard for those of Christian upbringing to realize the psychological misery of heathenism. An aged Korean woman was asked:

"What benefits have you received from faith in Jesus?"

"Many," came the reply. "I will tell you of one, though you may not think it important as I do. Before I was a Christian I never slept through a night without starting up and lying awake, sweating with fear lest the evil spirits were bringing some disaster on our family or property. Now, when the sun sets I commit family and possessions all to God, lie down, and sleep clear through till morning."

"Do you not regret sometimes having given up your little shrine and incense-burning?" was asked of a converted Chinese woman. "Regret!" she exclaimed. "You know little of the torment of it. Every freak of the burning incense betokens some shortcoming and demands more kneeling, more chanting, more incense."

"And now?" I said.
"Now Jesus has taken all my sins away."

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Enough to know that through the winter's frost and summer's heat,
No seed of truth is lost,
And duty pays at last its cost.

Western North Carolina Conference

RE-ELECTED

At the annual meeting of the Western North Carolina Conference Sunday School Board held in the Intermediate-Senior department room of the Sunday school building of Centenary Methodist church, Winston-Salem, Winston-Salem, Wednesday afternoon, October 17, at three o'clock the three whole-time workers employed last year by the board were re-elected. Miss Virginia Jenkins will therefore continue for another year to be our conference elementary superintendent, Miss Mabel Grimes will for another year be our office secretary and your humble servant will try for his seventh year in the work to be your conference superintendent of Sunday school work. You can count on your three workers doing their very best to promote religious education in our bounds.

WELL ATTENDED

The recent meeting of our Sunday School Board was the best attended of any in the history of our conference. Eighteen of the twenty-two members were present, as follows: Clerical members: W. A. Lambeth, chairman, D. W. Brown, M. B. Clegg, M. W. Heckard, C. S. Kirkpatrick, J. T. Ratledge, B. C. Reavis, C. C. Weaver and M. B. Woosley; lay members, D. E. Henderson, vice chairman, G. L. Hackney, secretary, H. A. Dunham, treasurer, R. C. Bunch, I. F. Craven, H. R. Dwire, Herbert Gibson, E. H. Kochtitzky, W. M. Lineberger.

The board decided to promote many valuable things, among them being the unanimous adoption of a resolution urging each member of the board to take at least one unit of credit in our Standard Training Course during the year.

SWEET SIXTEEN

During the past year eleven Standard Training Schools with a total enrollment of 1,633 and a total number of credit students of 947 were held as follows:

School	Enr'lmt.	Credits
Salisbury-Spencer	136	64
Greensboro	184	118
Winston-Salem	201	108
Charlotte	274	143
Gastonia	190	123
Asheville	154	80
Hickory	142	90
Shelby	100	51
Marion	58	36
Mooresville	50	14
Lenoir-Davenport	144	120

The above enrollment does not include hundreds of visitors who attended our schools from time to time.

Next year sixteen schools will be held at such centers in our conference that no one should be denied the privilege of attending one or more of them.

A PARAGRAPH

One paragraph of your humble servant's report to the Sunday School Board read as follows: more interested in the results obtained than in the efforts put forth to obtain these results, but permit me to give a brief summary of the outstanding instances of service rendered by your conference superintendent during the year:

Twenty all-day charge Sunday school institutes have been conducted. Sixty-five public addresses have been delivered.

Thirty-five Sunday schools were visited in which talks were made and classes were taught.

Twenty-six conferences have been held with building committees.

Forty-one workers' councils were attended with attending collaboration.

Nine district conferences were visited, in each of which the Sunday school cause was presented.

Eleven Standard Training Schools were conducted, in seven of which I served as an accredited instructor.

One non-standard school was conducted.

Two county-wide Sunday school conferences were held.

One conference-wide council meeting of presiding elders and district superintendents was held.

One conference-wide council of Wesley Bible class workers was held.

One conference-wide Wesley Bible Class Federation was held.

Two or more columns of Sunday school news-matter have been furnished the North Carolina Christian Advocate each week.

One hundred and twenty-four "Programs of Work" of the "C" and "B" types have been placed during the year in our Sunday schools.

A FEATURE

One of the distinct features of the annual conference was the calling to the chancel before a crowded house, on the evening of the Sunday School Anniversary, of seventy of our leading pastors who had taken one or more units of credit in our Standard Training Course during the year to receive the plaudit "Well done thou good and faithful servant" by Bishop Denny. The pastors who received these credits are hereby listed. The figure opposite their name stands for the number of credits earned during the year:

PROFITABLE

Our Sunday School Anniversary proved to be a very profitable meeting. With Chairman Lambeth presiding it also proved to be a very interesting meeting. In addition to the splendid music rendered by the Centenary choir Rev. H. G. Hardin led in a very fervent prayer. Then Bishop Denny very forcibly congratulated the ministers before him for their disposition to keep on learning. Prof. H. E. Spence, dean of the Religious Education Department of Trinity College, and chairman of the Sunday School Board of the North Carolina conference, then told about the great work that Trinity College is doing for religious education in North Carolina Methodism. Next came a few remarks from Miss Jenkins and your humble servant. Dr. J. W. Shackford then made the principal address of the evening, in which he emphasized the importance of keeping religious education alongside secular education. Dr. Shackford made a very effective address.

BIG DOINGS AT JONESBORO

The West Fayetteville Standard Training School got off to a great start at Jonesboro Sunday evening, October 14, with 213 representatives of eight charges of the western section of the Fayetteville district and one or two charges outside the district, with a few Presbyterians, Baptists and Christians in attendance. From points ranging up to 20 or 30 miles distant came superintendents, secretaries, treasurers, teachers, prospective teachers and others interested in Sunday schools and in the religious training and development of boys and girls. And the fine thing about this story is the fact that they came back Monday, and Tuesday, and the other evenings—most of them—and brought others with them. With eagerness and enthusiasm and a real desire to learn did they come. They entered into the work with genuine zeal. In all the training schools we have held perhaps never has there been a more marked interest in reading. A remarkably fine percentage of those attending enrolled for credit, and most of the others bought books and are studying the principles and programs set forth. Just how many will receive the certificates of credit will be announced in these columns next week, along with other interesting facts concerning this training school.

Five courses by as many instructors were offered, as follows: "Beginner Organization and Administration," Mrs. Charles Van Noppen; "Primary Organization and Administration," Miss Georgia Keene; "Junior Organization and Administration," Mrs. E. R. Michaux; "Principles of Religious Teaching," Prof. I. B. McKay; and "Sunday School Organization and Administration," Mr. L. L. Gobbel. Rev. B. E. Stanfield, the tireless pastor of the Jonesboro charge, was chairman of the board of managers, and to him and Rev. R. H. Willis, the presiding elder, goes a great share of the credit for the splendid attendance and the favorable conditions under which the school was able to operate.

FAYETTEVILLE CERTIFICATES

The second Standard Training School for the eastern half of the Fayetteville district, held at Hay Street church, Fayetteville, October 7-12, was even bigger and better than the fine one held there a year ago. Actually enrolled in this school were workers from 27 Sunday schools, not counting perhaps 75 or 100 who came for one or two periods as visitors. And an even finer thing about this school is the fact that 20 schools were represented in the list of credit pupils. A total of 84 certificates were earned by the 20 pupils, as follows:

Hay Street 23, Person Street 8, Steadman 6, Cumberland 5, Gardners 2, Camp Ground 2, Roseboro 2, Parkers Grove 2, Marvin 2, Calvary 1, Duke 1, Black's Chapel 1, Parkton 1, Hope Mills 1, First Presbyterian 16, Highland Presbyterian 7, Sunnyside Presbyterian 1, Episcopal 1, First Baptist 1, and Steadman Baptist 1.

Names of those earning certificates of credit by classes are as follows:

Beginner Organization and Administration—Mrs. Charles Van Noppen, instructor—Miss Ellen Lamb, Mrs. Floyd Scuders, Mrs. M. L. Smoot, and Miss Lizzie Dell Sutton, Hay Street; Mrs. Wm. D. Farrior and Mrs. Colin McLaurin, Highland Presbyterian; and Miss Annie E. Rose, First Presbyterian.

Primary Lesson Materials and Teaching, Miss Georgia Keene, instructor—Mrs. C. G. Carter, Mrs. Jas. C. Gilkey, Miss Mary Gorham, Mrs. L. C. McDuffie, Miss Marion McLean, and Mrs. R. H. Willis, Hay Street; Miss Mary Kate Covington and Miss Flora Graham, Marvin; Mrs. J. C. Davis, Cumberland; Mrs. J. E. Fussell and Mrs. J. F. Vinson, Cokesbury; Mrs. W. L. Maness, Camp Ground; Miss Polly Black and Mrs. Chas. V. Sharpe, Highland Presbyterian.

Junior Organization and Administration, Miss Virginia Jenkins, instructor—Miss Berline Beard and Mrs. C. S. Beard, Steadman; Miss Leila Bristow, Mrs. Etta Henderson, and Mrs. I. H. Riddle, Person Street; Miss Edna Dellinger, Roseboro; Mrs. J. J. Hall, Gardners; Mrs. J. A. Hair, Calvary; Miss Lelia Humble, Miss Eva Johnson, Miss Pat Lamb, and Miss Ruth Powers, Hay Street; Robert S. Williams, Parkers Grove; Miss Emmie Black, Highland Presbyterian; Mrs. J. R. Boyd, Mrs. W. R. Clayton, Mrs. A. S. Cromartie, F. L. Halcombe, Mrs. Hilda Kite, Mrs. J. G. McRae, Miss Kathrine Robinson, Mrs. C. G. Rose, Miss Kate Sutton, and Ernest Welton, First Presbyterian; Mrs. C. J. Wiggs, First Baptist; and Mrs. J. W. Jernigan, Episcopal.

Sunday School Organization and Administration, Mr. L. L. Gobbel, instructor—Joseph B. Biggs, B. A. McKinnon, and Mrs. Albert Wade, Cumberland; Mrs. C. M. Brett, Hay Street; J. M. Cole and P. E. Farrell, Person Street; W. H. Herring, Bethel; Geo. N. McCall, Steadman; Mrs. Harper Jones, Black's Chapel; W. R. Robinson, Gardners; Mrs. A. A. McEachern, and J. B. Wilson, First Presbyterian; and H. M. Pinkston, Highland Presbyterian.

The Church and Its Work, Prof. J. M. Ormond, instructor—C. H. Graham, Highland Presbyterian; Miss Annie Walker, Steadman Baptist; Rev. W. L. Maness, Camp Ground; Mrs. H. C. Butler, Cumberland; Mrs. L. F. Martin, Cokesbury; J. T. Bynum, Hope Mills; Miss Lizzie Talbot, First Presbyterian; Rev. R. F. Munns, Parkton; J. W. Williams, Parker's Grove; Rev. H. L. Davis, Duke; Miss Zula Rankin, Miss Maggie R. Rose, and Miss Annie McArthur, First Presbyterian; Dr. W. S. Jordan, Rev. E. C. Maness, and Mrs. Mair Farrell, Person Street; Mrs. T. H. Sutton, Jerome Melvin, Mrs. Jerome Melvin, Miss Isabel Lamb, Dr. J. M. Lilly, Albert Stewart, A. E. Ritch, Hay Street; and Mrs. A. P. Kutz, First Baptist.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

ROCKINGHAM LEAGUE DOING NICELY

The Rockingham Epworth League being a new organization, I am afraid we have nothing of any value to send you for the Advocate. I will tell you of one or two of our plans, however, and if you think them worthy please use them.

First, I will give you a list of our new officers:

President—Miss Lucille Shore.
Vice President—Miss Kathleen Hicks.
Secretary—Miss Marie Covington.
Treasurer—Miss Mary Leak Scales.
Cor. Sec.—Miss Pearl Currie.
First Supt.—Alex. Bethune.
Second Supt.—Miss Kathleen Hicks.
Third Supt.—Miss Dell Gibson.
Fourth Supt.—Caroline Covington.

We are having some very interesting programs now. One of the best we have had was a musical program. This was used as a change from the usual Era program. It seemed to draw to the league people who had shown no interest before, so we feel that it was a success.

This fall and winter we are planning to have some kind of musical program or song service for twenty or thirty minutes each Sunday night before preaching service. Music has a strong appeal for our people and our pastor thinks this an excellent plan to get people interested in our league and perhaps church service.

The second department holds services at the county chain gang one Sunday afternoon each month and makes visits to the county home real often, besides the usual visits to the sick and help for the poor. We have placed a small box in the church, into which we have asked leaguers and others who will to drop the names of any needy or sick ones; also money to help if they so desire. This seems to be a good plan (although it may be old to other leagues) to get a list of people that we especially wish or need to visit.

What I have written will be of very little value for the Advocate or other leagues, I am afraid, but we wish you to know that we are trying to make our league a success and we will, of course, appreciate any help from other leagues.

Pearl Currie,
Cor. Sec.

THE WANCHESE LEAGUE CHALLENGES ALL TRUE CHRISTIANS —OLD AND YOUNG

Our league met in regular business session September 18 and revised the officer list. As some of the young people are leaving for school it was necessary to put new ones in their places. The list of officers now reads as follows:

President—Tom Daniels.
Vice President—Miss Rola Melson.
First Dept. Supt.—Leslie Gallop.
Second Dept. Supt.—Mrs. C. M. Daniels.
Third Dept. Supt.—Miss Rena Baum.
Fourth Dept. Supt.—Mrs. James Gaskill.
Secretary—Mrs. Lucy Midgett.
Treasurer—Mrs. Gertie Simpson.
Era Agent—Miss Arizona Johnson.
Organist—Miss Violet Gaskill.
Asst. Organist—Miss Eda Simpson.
Cor. Sec.—T. H. Baum.

After the above matter of importance was attended to several very important problems were discussed and some very good decisions were made as to the greatest needs of what the league ought to do during the remainder of the year, our superintendent of second department rendered a very interesting and helpful written report. It included many visits to the sick and financial aid rendered on several occasions to the needy in our community. This Christ-like spirit is commendable and it ought to be more generally carried out by all of us professing Christians.

There were some other good reports given which we have not space to mention, but suffice it to say that we believe our leaguers, at least the majority, are desirous of doing the very best they can. A kind word and some encouragement on the part of our elder ones would act as a stimulant to the fine young people. It is not criticism that they need or censure, but the arm of friendship and brotherly love and encouragement. A great responsibility rests on us older ones as to how we try to help the babes in Christ. Ah, yes, it seems to me but very few leading church people of this time give the encouragement to our leaguers that they really ought to, and it's time to wake up and give the helping hand. Pastor and people, sometime, somewhere you and I will be held to strict accountability for just how we help our leaguers. I never fail when possible to attend a league service. It is a God-send to me to be with the young people and partake of the essence of youth again. It helps me to do better. I did not anticipate being used again as their corresponding secretary, as I had been set aside at my own request in the hope to get a younger one to serve; but they said you must take it, so I told them if I had to do the thing I would do it the best I could. This makes 12 or 15 years, I suppose, I have served one way or another in the league, and I am not tired yet, although I had rather see some younger member in my stead.

T. H. Baum, Cor. Sec.

Look, leaguers and older Christians, here's something for you to think about. Now don't you think this secretary, a veteran leaguer, on Roanoke Island has struck a keynote to the grown folks' part in helping the young people to succeed in their Christian Endeavors?

So, leaguers, if the older people don't back up the league, ask them why they don't. Ask your pastor to let the league give a service some Sunday night on The Older People's Part in Young Life Today. L. D.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

At a meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, held at T. J. Folger's in the town of Dobson, on the night of October 16, 1923, the society was unanimous in extending thanks to the pastor, C. C. Tothrow, for his untiring work for the circuit the year just closed, and especially for the interest he has manifested in the work for a new church at this place, and sincerely hope he will be returned to this charge by the conference which is now in convention at Winston-Salem, as we are of the opinion it is essential that he be returned in order to carry out successfully the plan for the church at this place, which he himself inaugurated, and we pledge ourselves to aid him in this undertaking, and hope to succeed in constructing the church so long needed in this town.

Mrs. R. C. Freeman,
Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS BY TRINITY STUDENTS' BIBLE CLASS

Greetings to General Carr on his 78th birthday from the Trinity Students' Bible Class of Trinity Church Sunday School.

Dear General Carr:

Please accept our most hearty congratulations, love and best wishes for many happy returns of the day on this your seventy-eighth birthday. Since this class was organized by your efforts you have been our friend, our teacher, and our guide in the study of God's word as written in the Book of Life, and we have also read the story of your faith in Him through the many helpful lessons and friendly acts with which you have aided us. May you be spared to us through many more years of service as our teacher and our friend.

REV. W. B. SHINN FOR ANOTHER YEAR

Realizing what a difficult matter it is to have a first class preacher returned to a charge, where financial obligations of the church have not been met in full, and also realizing at the same time that cause of this deficit here in the Newton Methodist church is entirely a matter in which neither the pastor, Rev. W. B. Shinn, nor the stewards of the church are in the least at fault, and the causes of this deficit is apparent to all, namely: The scarcity of money, business depression, and the closing down for several months of four of the largest mills of our town—the old Newton mill, the Clyde cotton mill, the City cotton mill, and the Newton wollen mills, in which mills at least 40 per cent of the membership of our church were operatives; therefore be it resolved:

That from the foregoing facts we, the members of the First Methodist church in Newton, here assembled for divine worship this morning, after listening to another splendid gospel sermon from our pastor, do show our appreciation by a rising vote; and at the same time and in the same manner we do earnestly and sincerely petition and request our beloved presiding elder, Rev. D. M. Litaker, (as he shall form a part of the bishop's cabinet) and Brother L. H. Phillips, our delegate to the annual conference, that they use their influence with the bishop, putting forth every plausible effort possible, to have our beloved pastor, Rev. W. B. Shinn, returned to us for another year at the approaching annual conference, which meets in Winston-Salem Wednesday, October 17, 1923.

The above paper was unanimously adopted by the entire congregation at the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning, October 14, 1923.

Rev. G. P. Drum.

ORMOND'S CHAPEL

We had a splendid meeting in Ormond's Chapel, ending the third Sunday in September. The meeting was not outstanding in the number who joined the church, but was outstanding in the goodly number of reclamations and the general spiritual atmosphere that pervaded the meeting from first to last. Bro. J. M. Wright of Ayden did the preaching and his sermons were very helpful and uplifting to us all. Wright is a good preacher.

Our meeting at Rainbow began the fourth Sunday in September and ran through the fifth Sunday. Brother Proctor of Kinston did the preaching for us at Rainbow and did it to the delight and satisfaction of all who heard him. Proctor is making good at Kinston and I am looking for him to make good anywhere he may be placed. Our meeting at Rainbow was a good one. There were numbers of reclamations and fourteen accessions to the church. There are more still to join.

R. R. Grant.

MAXTON CHARGE

Our protracted meeting recently held in St. Paul's church, Maxton, has resulted in great good to the church and the entire community. Between forty and fifty people made some definite stand for Christ under the different propositions submitted by the preacher. The Holy Spirit was present at the services and evidenced by bursts of emotion in some instances and in others by quietly working into conviction for sin and salvation therefrom. One of the most beautiful sights occurring was when an honored Christian citizen led to the altar the head of one of the choice Christian families to take his stand for Christ, thus making an undivided Christian family. The preaching in this meeting was strong and convincing and was done by a college and conference classmate of the writer, Rev. W. H. Willis of the W. N. C. conference, now stationed at Asheboro. Willis is indeed one of the most resourceful evangelistic preachers this writer has ever known. After his graduation from Trinity thirty-one years ago, he came to Maxton to supply till the meeting of the annual conference. He therefore came to us with an interest enhanced by memories of the past years and threw himself unsparingly into the work. His aptness and blackboard illustrations enabled him to reach the mind and heart through the medium of the eye.

A special service for the children held on Saturday afternoon resulted in twenty boys and girls giving themselves to Christ. This beautiful service made so impressive by object lessons was one of the very best it has been our privilege to attend.

There was also a special service for men on Sunday afternoon which was largely attended. The meeting came over through Sunday with unabated interest, the following Monday night being made Sunday school night. At this service the teachers sat with their pupils, and the testimonies they gave of their religious standing were most encouraging. The president of Carolina College with his faculty and students supported the meeting by their attendance and interest. On two occasions just previous to the early morning services at the church special services were held at the college, and at the last one held towards the close of the meeting those girls who had not fully surrendered to Christ yielded themselves to Him.

A week previous to the beginning of the meeting prayer services were held in four different neighborhoods of the town each afternoon. Thus there was brought to the meetings at its very beginning a preparation of interest thoroughly saturated with prayer. As one of the results of the meeting a class of ten children was received into the church. Several more together with those of the adult class will be received later.

Brother Hornaday, one of our worthy superannuates who resides here, rendered valuable aid before and during the meetings by conducting prayer services and in working with those at the altar. This beloved man of God is highly esteemed and honored for his influence for righteousness in the community and is still active as he has opportunity in the work of the Master.

The good people of St. Paul's church abound in their thoughtfulness of the pastor and his family. Just previous to the meetings we were the recipients of a pounding that severely taxed the capacity of the parsonage pantry.

We shall now turn our thoughts to the closing of our work for conference and we shall see to it that our Advocate list will be in good shape.

J. L. Rumley.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

MORPHINE and WHISKY HABITS successfully treated. Write for information. Correspondence confidential. 12th successful yr. WILLIAMS PRIVATE SANITARIUM, Greensboro, N. C.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

Advocate Special.—Next week the North Carolina Christian Advocate will be an Orphanage Special for the orphanages of the two conferences. Brother C. A. Wood and I are very grateful to the editors for giving our orphanages that right of way. There is no interest in our two conferences that appeals to the churches more than our orphanages. We expect to have very interesting articles from some of the leading preachers and laymen of the two conferences. I trust that every subscriber of the Advocate will read all the orphanage news that comes out in this special edition. We want to focus the attention of all our people on this all important work in which our two conferences are engaged.

* * * *

Radio.—Wouldn't it be a fine thing if some friend would donate a radio to our Methodist orphanage children? While in the home of my good friend, K. M. Barnes, Lumberton, recently, I had the privilege of hearing messages from far away cities. Last week I was at the Thompson electric store here in Raleigh and saw a wireless instrument that is big enough for all of our children to hear messages at one time by installing it in the chapel. The complete outfit can be secured for two hundred and twenty-five ($225) dollars. Who wants to do a generous deed that will be profitable and entertaining to our children? Who can estimate the pleasure such an instrument would afford our children through the long winter evenings?

* * * *

Baptist Orphanages.—Our Baptist friends are doing great things for the Thomasville Orphanage and the Kennedy Home. These two Baptist institutions care for nearly six hundred children. Last year the Baptists of the state made a Thanksgiving offering for their orphanages amounting to seventy-five thousand dollars. That was some offering! Shall we Methodists be content to raise less for our two orphanages? There is only one way to do our full duty and that is to secure a real Thanksgiving offering from every church and Sunday school in the conference. The importance of the cause justifies us in asking that all pastors, Sunday school superintendents and teachers do their full duty for our fatherless children. I am counting on one and all to rally to our beloved Methodist Orphanage either the Sunday preceding or following Thanksgiving Day.

* * * *

Hillsboro, New Sharon.—A cordial invitation from Brother J. E. Blalock, the beloved pastor of the Hillsboro circuit, to visit his charge with the singing class was cheerfully accepted. It was our happy privilege to be his guests on the second Sunday in this month. We visited the Hillsboro church and New Sharon. At each of these large and responsive congregations gathered to welcome our class and to show their interest in our orphanage. Doubtless seed were sown that day in fertile soil and a harvest of good will result. Brother Blalock was cordial in welcoming us to his churches. He is closing his fourth year in the old historic town of Hillsboro where he has wrought well. Some charge will get a good preacher and fine pastor next year. He has a most interesting little family that will grace any parsonage. I wish to congratulate in the Advocate the charge that is so fortunate as to secure the service of Brother Blalock and his family.

BOOKS WANTED

The Mackey's Sunday school, Mackey's N. C., is trying to establish a much needed library, and I wish to ask the ministers and readers of the Advocate to kindly, as they see fit, contribute a volume or its equivalent toward this. Our Sunday school is small but making a marked progress and I assure you of our deepest appreciation for any and all help you may give. W. S. Davenport, Supt.

MY MESSAGE TO MY BISHOP AND CONFERENCE

By Rev. S. M. Davis.

Dear Bishop Denny, and Brethren:

Because of deep affliction I cannot sit with you today in conference session as on other days; and the privation can only be known to the Head of the church. How greatly I desire to hear the wise and helpful address of our beloved bishop, and have a little part in your conference proceedings—surpassing in importance, value and wisdom the proceedings of any other body of men on earth.

I find my name second on our conference roll, which means that at 19 years in 1867 I joined conference. At that time this part of our state belonged to the South Carolina conference. Bishop Doggett asked me to go to the Darlington circuit as junior preacher with Rev. Simpson Jones, one of the strong preachers of his day. We found and served 15 churches on the circuit. As a Methodist marvel these new times, there were in the Darlington circuit, 1867-8, eight local preachers, all better preachers than myself.

I mention no other details of my experience and early Methodism in South and North Carolina. All the way from the sea to Mt. Airy I served on circuit and stations until my health gave way on the Washington station. One thing that I desire to say is that our noble bishops never gave me a sorry appointment. We have no such things in Methodism as sorry pastoral charges. And Bishop Denny will have no sorry charges to hand out.

During my long time ministry I served three charges, each of the three having fifteen churches; and from each of the three I received as salary less than $150, yet all good charges because Christ presided over the fields.

One fact in my experience gives me comfort today is that I have known and loved our noble bishops all the shining way from Bishop Paine, 1868-9, to our Bishop Denny today.

Bishop, and brethren, preachers and laymen, pray for us and love us and we will never be "forgotten" men.

Rev. S. M. Davis.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONFERENCE BROTHERHOOD CONSTITUTION

At the meeting of the Conference Brotherhood during the session of our last annual conference an amendment to the constitution was proposed that would permit supplies to beneficiary membership. A committee was appointed to draw up a satisfactory amendment and publish it in our conference paper at least two weeks before the approaching session of our conference. Your committee has agreed upon the following amendment, or rearrangement of Article 4:

Original reading of Art. 4: "Any clerical member of the North Carolina conference, either on trial or in full connection, may become beneficiary of the Brotherhood by the payment of an initiation fee of fifty (50) cents and, within sixty (60) days from date of entrance, a mortuary assessment of three ($3.00) dollars. Any person may become a non-beneficiary member upon promise to pay one ($1.00) dollar on the death of each beneficiary member."

Reading of amended form of Art. 4: "Any clerical member of the North Carolina conference, either on trial or in full connection, or any one doing supply work in the conference, may become a beneficiary member of the Brotherhood by the payment of an initiation fee of fifty (50) cents and within sixty (60) days from date of entrance, a mortuary assessment of three ($3.00) dollars. Supplies who have served at least ten (10) years and who cease to travel because of physical disability, may continue as beneficiary members. Any person may become a non-beneficiary member upon promise to pay one ($1.00) dollar on the death of each beneficiary member." (Words of amendment in black face.)

DEEP RIVER CHARGE

Yesterday I was just making ready to do house cleaning when I heard a knock at the door. I went to the door and whom should I meet but angels in disguise. They were Mrs. Wrenn, Mrs. Bryles, Mrs. Luther, Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. Luck, of Cedar Falls Methodist church. They gave me a shower of nice linen presented by the good women of that church, and they brought refreshments and we spent a delightful afternoon. I just could not find words to express my thanks for the many nice gifts they made us, and I pray God's blessings upon every one of them, and if it is not our work to serve this good people another year that I will say to our successor, I do not think you could serve a better people than Cedar Falls.

Mrs. J. A. Howell.

REV. J. H. ARMBRUST APPRECIATED

We, the undersigned members of the official board of Spencer Memorial church of North Charlotte, N. C., earnestly desire the return of our pastor, the Rev. Joseph Armbrust, who has been the efficient means of bringing many blessings to our church and the city at large; and we sincerely believe that Mr. Armbrust is the appointed, able and humble instrument in the hands of God to best further the kingdom of Christ in our church and the entire community.

On account of the complex character of our community, both individually and collectively, we believe that there is no other men that is better fitted to do the work of the church in this place.

Therefore we humbly beg the official board of our annual conference to return him to us for an indefinite period of time, or until they, by the direction of divine providence, see fit to do otherwise.

Leaving this prayerful request in the hands of Him who doeth all things well, and to your kind and prayerful consideration, and with the love of our church at heart, we are,

Respectfully yours,

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On September 4, 1923, Mrs. Adeline McCain, the oldest and one of the best loved members of our Ladies' Aid Society of New port church, was suddenly called from this life of service to that greater life above.

Resolved first, That we, the members of the society, bow in humble submission to the plan of our God.

Second, That we extend to her devoted husband and children our tenderest sympathy and pray they may feel the precious comfort of our heavenly Father's love.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy spread upon our minutes and a copy sent to the Advocate.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

Holston Conference.—On Tuesday morning, October 2, I stepped from the N. & W. train to find myself in Bluefield, W. Va., the seat of the Holston conference. Immediately a kindly hand grasped mine and a friendly voice spoke words of welcome. It was that loyal layman, J. R. Laird, who had come to the station to greet me. Mr. Laird has three obsessions, ranking in order named: his lovely family, his city, and the "forgotten man." After visiting his home and seeing his town, I felt that he should be pardoned for thinking of them as well as of the cause which lies close to my heart.

Bluefield lies in the arms of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Its streets follow the valleys, its buildings back up to the hills, its business thrives, and its people are the finest of the fine. The scenery around this hustling little city is enchanting. I have seen nothing more beautiful in all of my travels throughout the church.

The conference was called to order on Wednesday morning by Bishop E. D. Mouzon. After appropriate devotions, organization, and a few reports from the presiding elders, the bishop called for me to explain the plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment. I think practically all of the preachers were in the room to hear what was to be said on the subject. They listened attentively and evidently with the intention to understand the method for doing a thing which they had already decided must be done. If any preacher had any fault to find with the plan, he did not make it known to me. Dozens of them said that they considered the plan ideal and that they would surely raise their quotas by using it. Bishop Mouzon followed me with an earnest and most helpful exhortation. He said that he found it difficult to speak on the subject for the reason that its truth was so apparent. He said it was like stating that two plus two equals four and then making a speech to prove it. I liked that statement immensely, and, coupled with the manner of the speaker's utterance, it was unique and powerful. However, I have thought since that there must be some reason for so much writing and speaking concerning the importance of superannuate endowment. I think it is due to the fact that the people concerning this matter are like children before they learn that two plus two equals four. It takes a lot of talking to make the little tots understand that; but once they get it, my, how they make the chalk fly! And so it will be when by much writing and speaking the people understand the plight of the "forgotten man." Watch them meet the situation.

Bishop Mouzon heartily committed the Holston conference to the movement and said it would be far up the list of conferences when the returns were in. Many amens were heard as the preachers agreed to their leader's whole-hearted committal of them to the task. Rev. T. S. Hamilton said to me as we were seated at his hospitable table that he did not have the least doubt about the complete success of the superannuate special effort in the Holston conference. Hamilton knows whereof he speaks, and his statement can be accepted as founded on facts to justify it.

One of our hustling publishing agents, Mr. John W. Barton, spoke briefly to the conference. He looked so big and fine and handsome that he made us all very proud of him. He announced that the publishing house is this year distributing $30,000 to the church's claimants, that the present outlook for business justified the expectancy of $50,000 annually for this purpose for the next two years, and that plans are being laid which ought to return $100,000 annually for the claimants during the next quadrennium. O, how his words thrilled me! I wanted to hug him. He will make good his statement too if our people will patronize our house as they should.

The night service on Wednesday was given to the Conference Board of Finance. As my train left at 8:20 and I had to take it in order to reach my own conference, I had just fifteen minutes to speak to a crowd which taxed every available space where one could sit or stand. When I hurried out through that mighty host of people, something told me that truly the day of the veteran preachers had come. At the door I looked back to see Rev. W. A. Lambeth, of the Western North Carolina conference, rising to begin the inspirational address. How I regretted having to miss it! Lambeth is one of the most interesting speakers in the church, and this talent, coupled with his passion for the superannuate cause, would make him irresistible on such an occasion.

As my train pulled out of Bluefield I felt that the day spent there had been one that would guarantee to the superannuate cause the heartfelt cooperation of the preachers and lay members in the special effort. Many of the church's most powerful leaders have issued from the Holston conference, a prince among them being the sainted Bishop Hoss. If this Trojan of the cross were living among us today, how his facile pen and urgent speech would champion the cause of the "forgotten man!" In memory of him and others like him the Holston conference will come through.

St. Louis Conference.—"A prophet is not without honor save within his own country." At 3:45 Friday morning, October 5, after thirty hours' unbroken travel from Bluefield, I reached Sikeston, Mo., where my own conference had been grinding away for two days. I have served the church in this conference for twenty years, long enough for the boys not to get excited when I am announced to speak. Therefore I did not expect from them more than a brotherly disposition to be courteous to one of their own number.

Bishop McMurry called me to the platform about eleven o'clock and announced that I would explain the plan for raising the $10,000,000 for superannuate endowment. The brethren seemed suddenly to forget that I was only Todd and gave undivided attention to my message as the exponent of a greatly beloved cause. They sat there for forty minutes, eager not to miss a word of the explanation of the plan and in an attitude of those waiting for detail instructions on how to go forward with a task to which they were already whole-heartedly committed.

Bishop Ainsworth followed with a powerful inspirational address on the subject. He stirred the hearts of all present and created an enthusiasm for the work that left not the least doubt concerning the outcome. He was able to speak with authority, as his experience as a member of the Board of Finance had given him full information on the subject. The power of his burning words was proved by the unanimous testimony of the brethren, wherein they stated that they could not be indifferent to the call after hearing him. Bishop Ainsworth has been a great help to me in this work. He loves and believes in the cause with all of his great soul, and never once has he failed in his devotion to it. When the victory is fully won, and it will be, I shall forever be mindful of the debt of gratitude due to this hard-working and much beloved bishop.

Bishop McMurry closed the presentation with one of his characteristic exhortations. Like the great leader that he is, he touched upon those things which had been overlooked by the preceding speakers or those which needed special emphasis. This was the fourth annual conference held by him this fall, and at all of them he gave himself with abandon to the work of properly starting the special effort for superannuate endowment in his episcopal district. Having finished his own conferences, he will now put in two months in helping to explain the movement to other conferences.

The St. Louis conference this year spent three days listening to speeches on various subjects. Thus the routine work was crowded out until Saturday. Of course this meant that all of us had to work very hard in order to finish in the usual time. However, it was very gratifying to note that the vast amount of other work which occupied our special attention did not break the spell of Friday, on which day we were led to acknowledge our unpaid debt to the "forgotten man."

Another week has passed. Two more annual conferences personally visited by me have unreservedly committed themselves to do their whole part in raising the $10,000,000 for superannuate endowment. Thus far the eight conferences I have visited have been of one mind on the subject. And two others, the Northwest and the New Mexico, have expressed themselves in like manner to representatives. Surely there is reason to give thanks and take courage. The enthusiasm everywhere being manifested proves that the "forgotten man" will yet become the most remembered man of all. A tide of interest in him and loving appreciation for him is setting in. May it go on in a mighty sweep until it flushes every heart and mind of our great church with a spirit to do right by the veteran preachers.

Please Remember.—A way can be found to do anything which ought to be done.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

A RIDDLE

I have a head, a little head,
That you can scarcely see;
But I have a mouth much bigger Than my head could ever be.

That seems impossible, you say.
You think 'twould be a bother?
Why, no! My head is at one end;
My mouth's way at the other.

I have no feet, yet I can run
And pretty fast, 'tis said;
The funny thing about me is
I run when I'm in bed.

I've not a cent in all the world;
I seek no fortune's ranks;
And yet it's true that, though so poor,
I own two splendid banks.

I've lots of "sand," yet run away;
I'm weak, yet "furnish power";
No hands or arms, yet my embrace
Would kill in half an hour.

You think I am some fearful thing.
Ah! you begin to shiver.
Pray don't, for after all, you know
I'm only just a river.

—St. Nicholas.

HOW BETTIE LEARNED TO COOK

Bettie had learned to spread her little bed very nicely indeed, and mamma was praising her to papa one day, saying how much she helped her. So Bettie determined to learn to cook, too.

"Mamma," said Bettie one day, while standing on a little stool by the kitchen table, stirring very briskly on a little cake for her doll party. "Mamma, I'm going to learn to cook so I can help you some more. If you'd give me one lesson a day, I'd learn a whole lot in a year, wouldn't I?" asked Bettie.

"That would be a lot of lessons; ought to learn something," said Sidney, who was always counting and adding up things. "Didn't you know there were forty-eight weeks in a year?" Bettie made no reply, which was proof to Sidney that she didn't know. "Bettie, you don't even know how many months there are in a year and a half."

"Yes, I do, too," said Bettie. "There's twelve and five more, ain't there, Mamma?"

"Why do you ask mamma if you know? Girls never know whether they know anything or not."

"I do know," insisted Bettie, "and I'm going to know more'n you do when mamma teaches me to make pies and cakes, and if you don't stop teasing me I won't give you any either. So there!"

"You'd better learn the multiplication table first," said Sidney, "and find out how many months in a year and weeks and days, so you'll know how many lessons it will take. But if it takes as long to learn the table as it does to make cake, you'll be a mighty long time learning. You're always stirring up something, but I never see any cake."

"Mamma, please make him leave me alone; I'll forget to put in something directly," cried Bettie.

"Leave little sister alone, Sidney," said Mamma, "don't be such a tease. She will soon be mamma's assistant and surprise you one of these days."

"What is a 'sistant, Mamma?" asked Bettie.

"Some one who helps you with your work, a sort of partner, you know."

Bettie told her little friend, Marie, the next day that she was taking cooking lessons, and was going to be mamma's 'sistant.

"What is a 'sistant, mamma?" asked Marie. "Bettie says she is going to be one, and I want to be one, too."

"It is not a play, dear, to be in; Bettie means that her mother is teaching her to make nice things, like cakes, and desserts, and all."

"Couldn't you teach me, too, mamma?"

"Yes, dear, I'd like to."

"Really?" and Marie clapped her hands with delight. So when she met Bettie again she told her she was going to learn to make cakes and pies, too. Only three weeks had gone by when Bettie, all dressed in her pink dress, ran over to Marie's.

"Mamma said I could ask you over to tea. Please say 'yes,'" begged Bettie; "and guess what we're going to have."

"Ice cream," said Marie.

"Yes—well, I don't know, but that's not it."

"Oh, I know, some of your cake."

"Yes," said Bettie proudly; "mamma said it's as nice as hers."

"What do you think of my assistant?" asked mamma, when tea was over.

"She is a grand little cook," said papa. "That cake was fine."

"It will do to eat," said Sidney, teasingly.—Sunshine.

THE AIRSHIP LADY

Jimmie didn't like to do it. He said he'd rather do almost anything than get up in a street car and give his seat to a lady. But his father said that was perfectly ridiculous and that no gentleman ought to feel that way, for ladies were ladies, whether they were young or old, black or white. They did a great many tiresome, difficult tasks in somebody's home all day long—picking up things dropped by careless men, taking care of boys who might (but of course one hoped not) or might not grow up into rude boys, but who were a whole armful of trouble for at least three long, weary years, keeping mothers indoors to watch them. O, you'd love the things Jimmie's father said about the work that ladies did and the heavy burdens they carried for all of us which made it quite in order for any boy to be polite to them in public.

"Just so," said Jimmie, who always said that when he was convinced about anything.

Well, he could hardly wait for his next street car ride, and how he did hope that the car would be full and that he would have a seat which he could offer to somebody! It was! And he had! And he did!

She was the little bit of an old, old lady. A big puff of wind would have blown her quite away. Jimmie rather liked giving her his seat. She was dreadfully cheerful about it, too. She didn't just take it. Neither did she gush. But she squeezed herself over in it and said: "There's room for you, too."

Jimmie simply had to share half of his own seat. No sooner had he sat down than she said: "It's very windy today."

Jimmie said indeed it was—very. "When I was a little girl," said the old lady "I waited a whole week for a windy day just like this. You'll never guess what I wanted the wind to do. Give it up?"

Jimmie gave it up.

She beamed at him over the tops of her spectacles: "I wanted to fly away."

"Goodness!" said Jimmie.

"Exactly!" beamed the old lady. "Goodness! And the nice part of it was that my brother waited a whole week for the same windy day, for we had quite made up our minds to blow away together."

Jimmie moved closer to her. He wasn't afraid any more. "Was your brother as little as you?"

"Not exactly," she smiled. "He was really as little as you. And that's quite big, isn't it?"

"Indeed it is," boasted Jimmie; "and when your windy day came, did you really blow away?"

The little old lady chuckled. It was a perfectly darling sound. "I'd better begin at the beginning," she said. "You see, he'd heard a wonderful thing. He heard that if you jumped off a high place with an open umbrella in your hand the wind would blow you miles and miles. Well, he was so small and I was so small and the umbrella was so big that we thought it would be more fun to blow away together. We decided that the first time we'd start from the roof of the stable shed. It was high enough but not too high. We waited and waited for the windy day, and finally it came; so we kissed my mother, we kissed my father, and we kissed our baby sister and our nurse. Then we climbed to the roof of the shed and opened the umbrella. We both clung tightly to the handle with both hands. We jumped off into space and fully expected to be carried miles and miles from home."

"Were you?" asked Jimmie breathlessly.

"What do you suppose?" asked the old lady with a perfectly comical grin on her face.

"I'm sure I don't know," Jimmie said. "Half a mile, maybe."

"Not an inch did we blow, my dear boy; but the two of us went falling down, down, crashingly, sickeningly, right down into the pig pen, where the astonished pig was wallowing around in nice rich black, wet mud. He didn't know what to make of an umbrella and two such muddly aviators. He grunted in circles all around us."

"Were you hurt?" asked Jimmie spellbound.

"My pride was awfully hurt," the old lady chuckled, "and I broke my arm and my collar bone. As for my poor brother, he broke his ankle. And the pig broke the umbrella. So whenever I see a high wind like the wind today I think of the day I tried to be an airship."

Jimmie sat and looked at her. "You know," he said timidly, "I'm afraid maybe you might blow away today; it's so dreadfully windy and you're so very little. When you get off the car, maybe I could come along too and hold your elbow on the street."

"Aren't you the politest boy that ever was? I think that would be very nice. I'm going to see my brother."

"The one you blew away with?"

"The very same. He's an invalid now. He lives at 910 Ardmore Court; it's an apartment house."

Jimmie gulped and gasped and gurgled. "I live there too," he said. "Your brother's the man who whittled me a boat, isn't he?"

"No doubt of it," said the little old lady as arm in arm they left the street car. Jimmie has solemnly told me again and again that it pays to be pleasant to street car ladies because you never can tell who they are. You never can tell.—The Baptist.

Little Willie fell seriously ill, but refused to take the medicine that the doctor had prescribed. His mother, before his repeated refusals, lost all hope. "Oh," she wailed, "my boy will die! My darling boy will die!"

But from his sick bed, little Willie spoke gently. "Don't worry, mother," he said. "Father will be home soon and he'll make me take it."

Charlie—That horse knows as much as I do.

Matty—Well, don't tell anybody. You might want to sell him some day.

MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE

The opportunity is now open to young men and women throughout the country who would like to take advantage of free training for Christian service offered by the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, to enter the institute's evening classes while pursuing some regular employment during the day. The employment bureau of the institute is prepared to co-operate in securing employment for any who would like to follow this plan.

The evening classes give a training equivalent to that of the day classes, without extra charge for tuition. The director is Rev. P. B. Fitzwater, D. D., whose expositions of the International Sunday School Lessons are familiar to millions of newspaper readers throughout the country.

Seven hundred and forty-five students, 315 man and 430 women, are now enrolled in the evening classes.

CHRISTIAN VIEWPOINT

Yet gloomy thinking is never Christian thinking. In the midst of the change, in the ferment of new ideals and situations, the creative activity of God is powerfully at work in the world today. The cautious, timorous soul which looks out on the world without faith may see only the forces of destruction, but the eye of faith sees in the ferment abroad in the world the liberating and creative forces of God. In the midst of all diplomatic and political maneuvers today the greatest thing in the world is the development of the Church of Christ in non-Christian lands, for there is the force which God is creating to transform the life of great nations and civilizations. —New York Advocate.

THE BURDEN BEARER

I lift the ever-present burden of widowhood, orphanage, disability, sickness and advanced age of the itinerancy and of the laity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by providing "a home of their own," or its equivalent, to comfort and support them during all the years of life thereafter.

"Safety first" is my guiding star in all business matters and "brotherly love" in all manner of service. My premium rates are adequate to give insurance at cost (30 per cent lower than commercial companies require). Expense of management is reduced to the minimum, being the lowest amount permissible while insuring efficiency. Personal profit, investment methods, and employed paid agents are not allowed. This is saved for the Certificate holders.

Benefit certificates are issued for insurance protection in amounts of $3,000 or less per application on following attractive plans: Whole life; twenty-premium life; endowment at age sixty and seventy; term to age fifty, sixty, and seventy; annuity, and combination of plans.

The itinerant preacher of the past has had no chance. Shall they of the future fare no better?

By their own institution, ingenuity, thrift, and divine Providence they are solving their financial problems. The sting of superannuation is removed.

For information and application blanks write to the Methodist Benevolent Association, Dept. 8, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

"What will your hubby give you for Christmas?"

Rheumatism and Indigestion

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

If you suffer from Rheumatism, Indigestion, or from any curable disease accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to Shivar Springs, Box 4D, Shelton, S. C. Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons (two five gallon demijohns) of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give the water a fair trial in accordance with instructions which you will send, and if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

NEW BERN SCHOOL NEXT

The last standard training school of this conference year will be held at New Bern next week. In Centenary Methodist church October 28-November 2 will be held a school for all the churches of New Bern and vicinity, and we are hoping and believing it is going to be the biggest and best ever held there. The other denominations are taking interest in it, the Presbyterians in a special way, and the Sunday school forces of the community are looking forward to a great week of training, instruction, and inspiration. Six courses will be offered, as follows:

Beginner Organization and Administration, Mrs. Culbreth.
Primary Organization and Administration, Miss Keene.

Junior Organization and Administration, Miss Jenkins.
Christian Service for Adults, Dr. Hightower or Mrs. Court.
Principles of Teaching, Mr. Carr.
The Sunday School, Prof. Ormond.
Classes begin Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

PASTORS DO CREDIT WORK

The following pastors did credit work in the Fayetteville Standard Training School and received certificates on the Standard Training course:

Rev. W. L. Maness, Fayetteville circuit.
Rev. H. L. Davis, Duke circuit.
Rev. R. F. Munns, Parkton circuit.
Rev. E. C. Maness, Person Street and Calvary.

A few other pastors attended some of the sessions of the school. Rev. H. A. Humble, chairman of the board of managers, was kept busy making everything comfortable for others and was therefore unable to take credit, but expects to do so in the next school, someone else relieving him of the detail work.

ANOTHER SCHOOL NEXT YEAR

The board of managers and the workers attending the Fayetteville training school expressed, at the closing session of the school, their great satisfaction with the school just held and went on record as desiring a similar school next year.

MISS KEENE AT LIVE OAK

Miss Keene went from Fayetteville Saturday, October 13, to Live Oak church on the White Oak circuit to have part in an annual Sunday school conference. A large crowd was present, representing all the churches on the charge. Rev. R. H. Willis, the presiding elder, emphasized the work of the Sunday school, and Miss Keene talked on the work with the children, showing its importance and some of the ways in which the small Sunday school can give the child a better opportunity for religious development.

Live Oak school has adopted the official Program of Work, type "C," and this means it is planning to grow.

PROF. SPENCE AT SANFORD

Prof. H. E. Spence, of Trinity College, chairman of our Sunday School Board, preached a powerful sermon at Steele Street church, Sanford, Sunday, October 14. His was a striking appeal for more emphasis upon the work of religious education, and he made a profound impression on the large audience that heard him. Steele Street is one of Prof. Spence's former pastorates, and this congregation is always delighted to hear him.

AT JONESBORO AND OSGOOD

Your conference superintendent of Sunday school work attended Sunday school at Jonesboro Sunday morning, speaking in the interest of the training school. In the afternoon he accompanied Rev. L. B. Jones to Osgood and there spoke again in the interest of the training school and of better training and equipment for the work of the Sunday school. Prof. I. B. McKay, of Trinity College, one of the instructors in the training school, also spoke at Osgood, and was heard with much interest.

BEGIN SCHOOL AT CASWELL

A non-standard training school began at Bethel church, Yanceyville circuit, Monday, with Miss Keene and Rev. G. M. Daniel, of Graham, as instructors. This school is for the four Sunday schools of the circuit, together with such other denominations as may wish to take advantage of it. Mr. J. A. Cobb, superintendent at Bethel, and Rev. J. T. Stanford, the pastor, have been giving publicity to the school.

Don't Lose Sight of the Food Value of Your Bakings

Plain flour has a large amount of food value but it must be combined with good baking powder in order to retain this value.

Most self rising flours are not successful because they do not and cannot raise the bakings to the proper lightness. This means a certain loss of nutrition because they are heavy and hard to digest.

Every time you eat food that does not properly digest you do not get the full nutritional value—you are over-taxing your stomach. Nourishing and perfect bakings are what good health demands. The one sure way is—use pure flour and good baking powder.

If you want to find what thousands of housewives have learned—make some biscuits with self-rising flour—then make some with good plain flour and Calumet Baking Powder—notice the great difference. One trial will satisfy you. Your health demands that you make the experiment.

Those who know—millions of housewives, domestic science teachers, big hotels, restaurants, bakeries and railroads will not use anything but Calumet, the Economy Baking Powder.

Play safe—use Calumet and plain flour. It is the most economical and satisfactory, where light, wholesome and pure foods are desired.

IN MEMORIAM

LANE—Mrs. Benj. F. Lane died near Franklinton September 12, 1923, and was laid to rest by her late husband, B. F. Lane, in the family plot at Banks Chapel, which church she joined early in life and was a consecrated member. Seven children survive. Her sons-in-law acted as pallbearers and the grandchildren carried flowers.

McAFEE—Brother John Cromwell McAfee was born in Chester county, South Carolina, September 27, 1851. He departed this life September 30, 1923. His death was a great shock to us, as he had just attended Sunday school and church and before he reached home the summons came. He was a goodman. He was outstanding for his piety, and we have every evidence to believe that his house was in order. He was married November 27, 1878, to Miss Janie Wylie. To this union were born five children, three of whom are still living, Mrs. Anice McAfee Stone, of Chester, S. C., and Miss Mamie and Lois McAfee, of Granite Falls, N. C. His wife and two children preceded him to the eternal world.

The church and community has sustained a great loss, but the church triumphant has gained and increased. May God bless his family and all those who mourn his departure.

Neill C. Williams.

MATTHEWS—Our town was saddened and hearts grieved at the sudden going of our beloved friend and sister, Mrs. Geneva Matthews, who after a very brief illness departed this life on September 21st.

Sister Matthews was a faithful and loyal member of the M. E. Church, South, in Spring Hope, N. C. Her husband, J. E. Matthews, having died some years before, she kept her faith in God and reared her five children to be splendid examples of a Christian mother's efforts—Misses Minnie, Pauline, Velna, Essie Gray and Charlie, four daughters and one son, with one step-son, Mr. J. C. Matthews of Spring Hope, N. C., with a host of relatives, friends and loved ones. All mourn their loss, which is her eternal gain. Her life was worthy of the emulation of others in faith, frugality and friendliness. The community, church and individuals have lost a true friend. May God bless and keep the loved ones till we all meet again.

W. E. Trotman, P. C.

DAWSON—N. B. Dawson, son of Thomas and Huldah Dawson, was born in Lenoir county, near the town of LaGrange, April 12, 1851, and died at his home in Conetoe September 19, 1923. When seventeen years of age he went to Tarboro and entered the store of R. C. Brown as a clerk. His business ability was soon recognized and in a short time he was made a member of the firm. He remained with this firm a few years and then moved to the town of Conetoe, where he established a business for himself. He employed the same diligence and faithfulness in his own work and succeeded in building up for himself a large business. Through the earnings of his business he bought a large farm at Conetoe, and became quite an extensive farmer. Brother Dawson not only achieved great success as a business man and farmer, but he was also highly successful in promoting the interests of the town and community. He was interested in the general welfare of the community and gave himself untiringly to promoting its interests. He was a promoter of the bank and oil mill, and was instrumental in getting them established. He also promoted other interests of the town.

Brother Dawson was first married to Miss Roland Jenkins of Conetoe September 25, 1878. Two children survive them, E. L. Dawson and N. B. Dawson, Jr. On August 7, 1897, he married Miss Mary Charles, who lived happily with him to the end of his life, and was a great comfort and strength to him in his last illness. In 1898 he joined the Conetoe Methodist church, where he remained a consist-of the

5 BIG FEATURES

Advocate Piano Club

Here are a few of the attractive features which have made the Club the most popular and successful piano buyer's opportunity that has ever been offered. The plan was originated and perfected by the Advertising Manager of The Advocate and Ludden & Bates, one of the oldest, largest and most reliable piano houses in the country. Its central idea is to absolutely insure perfect and permanent satisfaction and delight to every subscriber who orders his Piano or Player-Piano through the Club. Read these features, then write for a copy of the handsomely illustrated catalogue and special Club prices.

1 Big Saving in Price

The Club offers you wholesale prices on high-grade Pianos and Player-Pianos. By uniting your orders in a Club of one hundred buyers, each gets the benefit of the big Factory discount. You are responsible only for your own purchase; we assume all responsibility for securing the ninety-nine other Club members.

2 Safe and Convenient Terms

In providing easy terms of payment the Club has carefully avoided all the unpleasant and unfair features of the installment plan and has retained all of its conveniences. You get the full benefit of the spot cash price and pay only a legitimate rate of interest on the deferred payments; instead of having to pay the extortionate price commonly demanded of installment buyers.

3 Protection to Your Family

The chief objection to the old installment plan of payment is that it works a hardship on the family in the event of the death of the breadwinner. We have absolutely avoided this by providing a splendid insurance feature which costs you nothing, yet protects your family against debt or loss of the instrument.

4 Guarantee of Instruments

Most guarantees are of little value for the reason that the guarantor may die, move away or go out of business so that you are unable to find him when you need him. The Club provides a permanent guarantee against all imperfections of workmanship and materials, made by one of the oldest and strongest piano houses in America. If any defect ever develops you know exactly where to find the guarantor, and your interests will be perfectly protected.

5 Exchange Privileges

The Club gives you the most perfect plan ever devised by which you can exchange your old Piano for a new one, or a Player-Piano. You receive the full and actual value of your old instrument, applied on the net cash Club price of the new. The customary deception is thereby entirely avoided.

But the greatest feature of the Club is the superior quality of the Pianos and Player-Pianos. In beauty of design and finish, exquisiteness of tone and responsiveness of action, in the permanent durability of construction—they are superb.

The Club affords you many other attractive features. Write for your copy of the Club catalogue today. It pictures the beautiful styles, describes their construction, gives the net Club prices and tells all about the greatest piano opportunity ever presented. Old Club members express themselves as "delighted". It is your time next.

ent member until his death. The end did not come unexpectedly. For a long time he has been a great sufferer. On April 15, 1923, he was taken to his bed with an insurable disease—cancer of the throat. The doctors said it was a matter of just a short time before he would go. But he made a great fight for his life, and held out against it for over five months. But on September 19, 1923, disease conquered, and he went away from us to be forever out of his suffering. He bore his affliction with patience and cheerfulness. He never murmured nor complained, but looked forward to a better day. And we believe it has come to him. Owing to the absence of the pastor, the funeral services were conducted by Rev. L. L. Smith, a former pastor, and he was laid to rest in the family cemetery at Conetoe. The church and community suffer a distinct loss in his going. May God comfort the sorrowing wife and children. J. Herbert Miller, Pastor.

GILLELAND—At her home in Catawba county, N. C., early on the morning of September 6, 1923, God sent His angel to claim the soul of Mrs. Sarah Gilleland, aged 84 years, 10 months and 28 days. She joined the Methodist church very young. Her membership in the church was more than having her name registered on the class book—she had a changed nature, a pure heart, an exemplary life. No one could say aught against her religious character and life. The Bible was her constant companion and her mind was well filled with its truths. As she approached the valley of the shadow of death she expressed the fullest confidence in her Saviour. Her life was that of an humble, faithful Christian; her death a triumphant entrance into the rest that remaineth to the people of God. She leaves a step-daughter, Mrs. Alice Roney, one daughter, Mrs. A. P. Little, and many relatives and friends with sad hearts. M. A. L.

CULBRETH—Susan Royal White Culbreth was born May 26, 1844, and died August 22, 1922, at her home in Roseboro. The Lord had seen fit to let her continue in this life for over 79 years. Sister Culbreth's life was filled with those things that go to make a kind woman, a good neighbor and a dear mother. She joined the church in her early years and remained faithful and loyal to its cause throughout her abundant years. She was one of Old Bethel's early members. On July 10, 1864, Sister Culbreth was married to James White, Jr., to which union two girls and two boys were born. Mr. White died June 26, 1882. In 1887 she was married to Tommy Neil Culbreth, to which union one child was born. The large congregation present at her funeral and many flowers bespoke her earthly popularity. She was laid to rest in the Roseboro cemetery. Children, weep not for mother, for our loss is her eternal gain. J. A. Tharpe, P. C.

The Orphanage of Today and a Larger Orphanage

By Hon. Josephus Daniels

"Show me the most beautiful place in Raleigh," said a recent visitor to our capital city.

The visitor thought to stump the Raleigh citizen; believing he would not find it easy from among the beautiful things to decide which held first place. He was wrong. It did not require a second to decide. He was driven at once to the Methodist Orphanage on Glenwood avenue.

An Ideal Place.

My visitor was enthusiastic when his eye fell on the rolling greensward that first greeted the eye as we drove out Glenwood avenue, and he was vocal with joy when his gaze was chained by the beautiful grove of young oaks carpeted with green grass, just beyond, and the commanding eminence beyond, sloping off to the little stream that makes the northern boundary of the orphanage property. There is no spot in any city more ideal for a college and high class school than the Methodists own here, and hardly anything approaching it except the equally well located grounds in the heart of Winston-Salem occupied by the Children's Home for Orphans.

Nothing Happens in God's World.

Not many months ago an Episcopalian visiting Raleigh after a stay in Winston-Salem: "How did it happen that you Methodists happened to pick up the choicest and most central pieces of property in these two cities for the orphanages?"

"It did not happen," I told him. "Nothing happens in God's world. Children, and children without parents, are God's greatest possessions on this earth. They are entitled to the best place to live, the best surroundings and the best environment. I have a hunch that sometimes men and women, seeking to bless little children, are led by a higher hand if their hearts are truly set upon putting the child in the center.

No Tampering With Nature.

Nature did much to make the grounds of the Methodist Orphanage beautiful and the management has put in much work and has been wise enough not to tamper with nature. It is only in recent years that landscape gardeners have learned not to make grounds look artificial. Now they find perfection if the observer sees no work of man. They conceal their planting in imitation of nature. Not very much has been planted, but green grass is growing under all the trees and the place looks like God did it all. We are learning in the landscaping as in living we do good only when trying to follow Him, even though we follow far off and most imperfectly.

Expansion the Crying Need.

The trustees have had the ample grounds surveyed by competent experts, the places selected for the new buildings to be erected in 1924, and have enterprised such enlargements as will enable twice as many orphans to be cared for. The money given is to be employed for expansion, to accept all the qualified children for whom application is made, and not to try to secure money for either endowment or support. Money for buildings, money for equipment, money for facilities, money for education, instruction and play, money for improvement of the grounds is needed, but no emphasis is laid upon securing a large endowment. More churches and religious institutions have been injured than helped by endowments. The people can be relied upon month by month to raise every dollar needed to feed and clothe as many orphans as the well-to-do people will provide places to eat, sleep and be taught.

Qualified Children.

What do the trustees mean by "qualified children?" That term means those who most sorely need the home and school training of the orphanage. That is, first, those who have no parents living and no near relatives to afford a real home. These are all taken before admission is given to a child with either father or mother living. After these have been accepted, each case is considered on its merits, and those taken first whose need is greatest. The trustees have heart-breaking times in deciding between those who apply, and because of lack of room are compelled to say "No" to deserving orphan children for whom application is made. It is a reflection upon North Carolina Methodists that there is not room for every orphan who needs its sheltering and educating care.

Today and Now.

A greater orphanage is imperatively needed now. Some people of means have given generously and some nobly. But the call is to others if adequate buildings to meet the need are provided. It will not do to say: "I will remember the orphans in my will." That is fine and the proper way for those who need the income for self and family while they are living, but those who have been blessed with ample means beyond daily needs will secure a larger return from their investment in God's little ones than from any other investment that can be made. Besides, the child of today cannot wait until tomorrow. If Methodists of means will provide enough buildings in 1924 to accept all who should be accepted, they will keep scores of children from growing up in neglect and without education.

The Spirit of the Orphanage.

But, beloved, the beautiful grounds at Raleigh and the comfortable buildings, all too few, do not constitute the glory and the challenge. It is the spirit of the children trained at the orphanage. Never have children been uniformed there, or ticketed or docketed. They are never even "orphan children" who feel their dependence. They are just God's children, received with human and Christian love into the hearts and homes of those charged with their training. They are not dependents. They are told they are the jewels of the church and are being brought up to be a light and blessing in His church and in His world.

They Live on the High Road.

For ages orphanages have too often been hid away in some out-of-the-way place and orphans made to feel that they are supported by charity and not like other children. All this is changed at Raleigh. They live on Glenwood avenue, coming to be a chief thoroughfare where citizens of worth are glad to reside. When we began to build a new house in Raleigh in 1922, we selected the site next to the Orphanage. Why? Because my family wished healthy and beautiful conditions and we wished to be in good society.

Not Wards of Charity.

Every orphan feels that he or she is as good as any other child. They have no attitude of genueflections or imperiosity. They stand up as real sons and daughters of a great church belatedly following the command to put the child in the first place. Every year a score go to college. In fact every child who qualifies for college entrance finds a way to go to college.

The Spirit and Elon.

The orphans who go out in the world come back to attend the Association of the orphanage. They are as proud of their alma mater as any graduate of the University and Trinity College. They return to the yearly reunions. Some bring back happy children. All bring back love and loyalty and tell modestly how they have wrought worthily in the big outside world for which they were fitted at the Methodist Orphanage in Raleigh. This is the spirit which gives grace and glory and strength. It is because of that spirit the orphanage is sending out upstanding men and women to serve the church and state. It is because of this spirit that men and women who have been blessed with means love to invest their money in the institution. There is need of enlarging the opportunities for the training of these now denied admission. Every dollar helps to send out self-respecting and useful men and women. Do Not Slam the Door of Hope in Their Faces.

The demand is imperative for a larger orphanage to accept those knocking at the door for admission. May we confidently look to see this Thanksgiving made notable by large gifts to the enlargement that is essential if God's little ones are not to be told "There is no room?"

Let not the door of hope and opportunity be closed to any child!

APPEAL FROM THE SUPERINTENDENT To the Pastors.

It has been a custom of long standing that offerings be taken in all the churches during the Thanksgiving season. At the glad harvest time all of our people should express their gratitude to the Giver of every good and perfect gift by remembering the fatherless. It is earnestly hoped that pastors will observe a special Thanksgiving service in all their churches throughout the North Carolina conference, either the Sunday preceding or following Thanksgiving Day. I am asking that offerings be taken on one of these Sundays because only a few people attend service Thursday, Thanksgiving Day. Since we are in need of funds, let me urge every pastor to come to our relief with a liberal offering from his church or churches. Our preachers are as much interested in the Methodist Orphanage as Baptist preachers are in the Thomasville Orphanage.

To Sunday School Teachers.

May I make a few suggestions as to how you may help to swell the Thanksgiving offering from your class? The biggest thing that you can do is to make great preparation before hand by informing the class of the pressing needs of the Methodist Orphanage. Have someone on the Sunday before Thanksgiving to make a short speech, telling the class of our two hundred and fifty children, and the splendid opportunity the class has of really doing something worth while. If our teachers and presidents of classes will prepare the way, there is no telling what a great offering our Sunday school classes will make for the benefit of our beloved Methodist Orphanage.

VIEW OF THE GROUNDS OF THE CHILDREN'S HOME, WINSTON-SALEM

MOTHERS' AID

For eighteen years, as general manager of the Thomasville Orphanage, I have been at the receipt of appeals from dependent children. For several years I have been convinced that the widowed mother, in good health, worthy in character and capable of handling her own household, should never be separated from her children if only a few dollars a month would save the little family circle unbroken. If she is completely and permanently broken in health, or is mentally incapable of caring for her children, or is morally unfit to do so, nothing remains but to break up the home. But the strong and capable mother, without means, is about as helpless to take care of her little flock as the one broken in health. She cannot go out to work and leave her children alone. If she employs some one else to keep house and train the children, it would take all her earnings to pay this woman's salary and leave nothing for living. If this woman is not as capable as the mother the children are not getting a square deal. In fact, it is never a square deal to take children from a good and capable mother. In this case the mother has a full woman's job in taking care of the household without also being the bread winner.

In many cases relatives will see that help is given systematically so that the mother will be saved embarrassment and suspense. But in many other cases there are no relatives who will do this. The community will not let her starve, but the uncertainty of such relief would soon drive a becomingly sensitive woman into nervous prostration. In the past we have been advising this mother to send her children to the orphanage. This seemed to be the only thing to do. We have had a growing conviction that it is wrong to break up a home like this. This mother should not be relieved of her responsibility, but should be helped in bearing it.

The Thomasville Orphanage has undertaken to do some of the Mothers' Aid work. We are now aiding 235 children with their mothers. We have a good woman as field worker who gives all of her time to this work. Each case must be thoroughly investigated and after it is accepted there must be careful supervision. The plan is to do the work in connection with the local church, the church appointing a committee to look after the case, receive the monthly check sent by the orphanage, see that the money is properly used, and report monthly to the church and to the orphanage. This committee looks after the case in advising the mother and helping her in various ways to self-support and independence as early as possible. If this is not being done she is being pauperized and not helped.

The mother and her children can be guided and helped to raise poultry, have a garden, a pig and a cow, or do some little work that can be brought into the home. All of which, in addition to helping in the support, tends to develop industry and a feeling of self-respect. The mother who is not willing to do this is not worthy of help.

It is also required that the children attend church and Sunday school, as well as the public school.

One great thing to be gained is to link up the local churches with this, the simplest and most direct form of social service.

The only definition of religion attempted in the scriptures is "To visit the fatherless and the widows." We have been neglecting the widows. "Child welfare" has been stressed. We should go on to emphasize "family welfare."

The state is beginning this work. Shall the great religious bodies stand idly by and lose a great opportunity?

What I have said must not be construed into a reflection on the orphanages. It is a partial definition of the bounds of their work, and at the same time an extension of their work.

Many mothers who apply for aid cannot be helped in their homes for the simple reason that they are totally unfit to raise their children. The well conducted orphanage is not going to be displaced, or put out of business, by some agencies that have been drawing invidious comparisons. This, however, is not the case in North Carolina. There exists the most beautiful harmony among the different agencies in our state, which in a large measure, accounts for the gratifying progress we have made.

REPORT OF THE TRUSTEES OF THE CHILDREN'S HOME

The most important work of the church is to save the children. All children are precious in the sight of the heavenly Father, and none of them are dearer to Him than those helpless ones who have no natural protectors and teachers. No form of Christian activity more nearly expresses the spirit of Jesus than the work of caring for these dependent little ones. Therefore, the effort to gather up and bring up helpless and homeless children for God and the kingdom must have the devoted, loyal support of all God's people.

The growth of the Children's Home discloses the deep interest of our people in the task of saving the children. Since this institution was opened in 1909 the Western North Carolina conference has made, perhaps, its largest investment of money at the Children's Home. We invite all the members of the conference and all the members of the church to visit the Home and see for yourselves the extent and condition of your splendid property. It speaks loudly of the place of influence our work has in the thoughts of the Methodist people.

Our entire endowment and five of our eight buildings are the gifts of individuals, and one other building is the gift of the High Point church. This money was given us for specified purposes and was, of course, used as directed by the donors. As a result our dormitory space is not as large as it should be to match the rest of our equipment. But this is a temporary defect which we have reason to believe will be overcome in the near future. We are glad to believe that the outlook for future growth is bright. We must have some more dormitories that we may take more children. It is a shame that with such equipment as we have that there are so few children.

In the main the health of our children has been and is now good. There have been quite a number of ailments and accidents, some of them severe, but none dangerous. And it is with gratitude to God that we remind you that in the fourteen years the Home has been open there has been only one death among our children.

Since our last report our school has occupied the long needed school house, to the great benefit of pupils and teachers. This year for the first time two of our girls completed the work of the eleventh grade, preparing them for college. And through the kindness of generous friends both of them are now in college. Our school library has received during the year gifts of 1300 books. Five hundred of these are the gift of Mr. Ralph Hanes, and consist of a splendid selection of children's books exactly suited to our needs. The other 800 volumes were formerly the Sunday school library of Centenary church of Winston-Salem.

The most notable gift of the year is a new model linotype for the printshop. This is a memorial to the late Mr. Joe H. Glenn of this city, and was presented by his wife, Mrs. Joe Glenn and his friend, Mr. James K. Norfleet. This gift will have inestimable value in training boys to be self-dependent and self-supporting men. Among other special gifts was a canning outfit by Mr. P. H. Hanes, Jr.

There are now 152 children in the Home. Eleven were dismissed during the year, some to relatives, some found jobs, some to college. In their places we have taken in fifteen, increasing our total number four. We have had 180 applications for home for needy children—and we have taken in 15. While we may well be thankful that so much has been accomplished, the time has not come to be satisfied with what we have done. It would seem that we must do almost ten times as much before we are even with our task.

Our people need a great awakening to the magnitude of this task. Some of our preachers do not yet realize how inseparably this work is bound up with the work of the ministry; many of our official members have yet to learn that pure and undefiled religion is to visit the fatherless in their affliction; while none of us have fully weighed the responsibility that the necessities of these children have laid upon us, nor have we glimpsed the measureless opportunity for good which their young souls have placed in our hands.

We cannot escape this responsibility. We dare not close our hearts to the cry of these children. We must arrange to care for them, we must help them now in the day of their youth. If we cannot build houses to shelter them we may at least, like Pharaoh's daughter, hire the mothers to keep their own children. And we can create an agency to find safe safe homes for some of them or face the displeasure of our Master.

We recommend that James A. Gray be elected a trustee of The Children's Home in place of S. L. Rogers, and that Rev. T. F. Marr, Rev. N. R. Richardson, G. F. Ivey, J. K. Norfleet, J. P. Lucas and H. B. Chatham be re-elected for a term of six years.

(Signed) T. F. Marr, President.

WHAT WE DO AT THE CHILDREN'S HOME

We have at the Children's Home a big family of eighty-five girls and sixty-seven boys, 152 in all, ranging from four years to eighteen years of age. And we have twenty-three grown people to teach and train, look after and help these boys and girls.

These are all normal, healthy boys and girls. They have the same likes and dislikes as other girls and boys; they have the same hopes and ambitions; the same capacities for both good and evil are found here as are found wherever boys and girls are found; they need the same teaching and training that others require, and they respond just as the others do. They make the same mistakes as other children, and the best of them sometimes get tired of being good just as your good boys and girls sometimes do. At the Children's Home we have the problems, the same discouragements and the same hopes and joys as any other family.

But we are not only a big family, we are also a school. We do our school work here at home, having eleven grades. Mr. Robert Bradshaw, assisted by five accomplished young women, teach these eleven grades together with some music and other things. In our school the day is divided between books and work. Each teacher has one grade in the morning and another in the afternoon; each grade goes to school one-half the day and work with their hands the other half.

The management of the Home has always believed that the complete plan of education provides for the training of both mind and hands. School and work supplement each other if the best results are to be secured. Real character begins to be formed when one has learned to accept and meet responsibility; but responsibility of character is achieved only by having duties and by performing them. For this reason it is our aim to provide every boy and girl with a task which shall occupy a proper portion of his time, and if possible call out his interest and arouse his sense of duty at the same time he is acquiring habits of industry.

For the girls there are the household duties—making beds, sweeping floors, tidying rooms, setting the tables, washing dishes, cooking, mending, sewing in the laundry and the infirmary. The practical side of domestic arts are learned by practice. Each one has her daily task as well as her play time and her school time. These tasks are changed at more or less frequent intervals, in order that in time every one may learn to do all there is to be done about the house. There are so many kinds of work for girls and so many houses needing their care, they are divided into small groups and all get a great deal of the personal attention of the matrons. As a consequence the girls seem to profit more by their training than the boys.

The boys work on the farm, the garden, the grounds, the dairy, the printshop, and one or two in the woodshop part of the time. The bulk of the boys are shifted from the farm to the garden and the grounds as the needs of the work require, too frequently for the best results upon either the boys or the work.

Some one has said, "One boy makes a hand, two boys make half a hand, while three boys make no hand at all." This saying calls attention to the difficulty Mr. Dilworth has in teaching thirty or forty boys to work—there are just forty incentives to play and the same number of opportunities to evade responsibility. It is too easy to pass the buck.

Mr. Dilworth, the gardener, has accomplished the impossible. He takes all the surplus boys and undertakes to find employment for them, and to keep them employed. Although it seems sometimes that these boys do nothing but play and get into mischief, nevertheless under Mr. Dilworth's exhortations they have made one of the finest gardens this year you ever saw. They have stored away bags of white potatoes, piles of onions, and bins of sweet potatoes. And in the garden there are even now long rows of turnips, mustard, collards, cabbage, celery, lettuce, kale, spinach, and onions. Our garden is a real asset.

In the dairy we have a very good school. We are milking 20 cows and get for the dining room about 40 gallons of milk a day and nearly fifty pounds of butter a week. You see our children get about the quart of milk a day which the doctors say each growing child ought to have, enough to show in the rosy cheeks of the children. This milk and butter is good enough for anybody. We are trying (and we believe we are succeeding) to run an up-to-date dairy, clean and economical for the sake of the product and our finances. And we are not insensible to the value of giving the boys who help in the dairy the chance to learn what a good dairy is like and to know how to run one. For dairying is a good business, and one which is destined to become of more importance.

In our printshop we have our best opportunity for teaching a trade. It is not a large shop but it is fairly complete. In addition to several cases where type is set by hand, there are two linotypes, two hand presses, a cylinder press, and other equipment. We are prepared to do good work. Mr. Whitlow is a good printer and he turns out good work, work good enough for anybody.

The chief difficulty with our printshop is to keep busy. We need more business. If all our preachers and our Methodist churches and Sunday schools would give us their work it would go a long way toward making our printshop self-supporting—if those would let us have their printing who have no printers in their own congregations it would help. Why not? You could help in a good work without cost to yourselves. No, we will not do your printing for nothing; and we will not do it cheaper than it is now costing you. You would not have an orphanage to give you anything, would you? You would rather give to us. It would cost you nothing to help us in this way because our work is as good as you are getting and it will cost you no more than you are paying. You are as well off when you patronize your own printshop as when you give your profitable custom to strangers. We will make a little money and our boys will be learning a good trade, and you will have the happy consciousness that by taking a little trouble you have added dollars to the gifts you have been making to the Home.

We have some machinery for a woodshop, and we have in Mr. Binkley a good workman. But Mr. Binkley is kept so busy making repairs, and additions here and there for the comfort and convenience of the matron and children that he has too little time to teach.

A part of our woodshop equipment is an unused Nedman moulder which we do not need and probably never will. It is for sale at a bargain.

We do some other things at the Children's Home and are planning yet others, but we cannot tell all about ourselves. The rest of it you must learn by coming to see us, for you know there are many things you can learn better by seeing than by hearing.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT—PAY-UP WEEK

Beginning with November 1st the third year's subscriptions on the Educational Movement will be due. There are four classes of people who are especially concerned in this matter. They are as follows:

1st. The collectors. I am urging each one of them to do his utmost to see each subscriber on his list, asking him to pay up all subscriptions to date. This includes those made for the first, second and third years. Nobody can do this quite so well as the collector, and we are depending upon him.

2nd. The pastor is asked to bring this matter before his congregation, especially on the two Sundays between this and the annual conference. His interest and appeal will count for much in making these collections.

3rd. The Educational committee is in a position to render fine assistance to the collector and they are earnestly asked to give him all possible help in distributing literature, and in seeing personally those who have subscribed.

4th. Finally everything depends upon the subscriber himself. The subscriptions made were in most cases not very large, and the vast majority of them might be met with a little sacrifice. Let me beg each one who made a subscription to do his utmost to bring all payments up to date. I am anxious to make as good showing as possible at the session of the conference at Elizabeth City November 14th.

REV. H. E. TRIPP DIES AT HIS HOME IN CLINTON

Rev. E. H. Davis writes:

"Rev. H. E. Tripp, one of our superannuates, a godly man and in the days of his effectiveness a widely useful member of our conference, died at his home here Saturday, October 29. His body was taken to Trenton and buried there Sunday afternoon, October 31. His wife survives him. I will supply a fuller sketch later."

Brother Tripp was seventy-three years of age at the time of his death. He was a native of Beaufort, N. C., and joined the North Carolina conference at Goldsboro in 1892. Since retiring from the effective ranks several years ago he has lived in Clinton, where he served as pastor about twenty years ago.

ASHEVILLE DISTRICT NOTICE

The district stewards of the Asheville district are called to meet at Central church, Asheville, at 10 a. m. on Monday, November 12th. All pastors of the district, all charge lay leaders, and all church lay leaders are requested to meet with them that we may plan together for the work of the year.

The first round of quarterly conferences we are stringing in thick and fast, in order that every charge on the district may organize early for the year's work, and attention will be given, largely, on this round to the matter of organization.

Let there be a full attendance at the district stewards' meeting, upon the part of those who have been asked to be there, and let pastors and leaders strain a point to have 100 per cent attendance at the first quarterly conference.

H. C. Sprinkle, P. E.

MEETING OF MARION DISTRICT WORKERS

The presiding elder of Marion district calls the district stewards, pastors, lay leaders, Sunday school superintendents, Epworth League presidents and Woman's Missionary Society representatives to meet in First church, Marion, N. C., November 21, at ten a. m.

Program.

10:00 a. m.—District stewards' meeting.

11:00 a. m.—Pastors' conference.

2:00 p. m.—Lay leaders' conference. Address by Charles H. Ireland.

3:30 p. m.—Sunday school workers' conference. Address by O. V. Woosley.

4:30 p. m.—Epworth League conference. Address by W. W. Edwards.

7:30 p. m.—Woman's Missionary Society conference. Address by Mrs. H. A. Dunham and R. M. Courtney.

Let all the above take notice thereof and govern themselves accordingly.

HIGH POINT AND HANES BUILDINGS, CHILDREN'S HOME, WINSTON-SALEM

THE OFFICERS AND CHILDREN OF THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE,

OUR FINANCIAL STATUS AS TO MAINTENANCE

By Joseph G. Brown.

On Thursday, December 29, 1898, at Edenton Street Sunday school, Raleigh, was held the first formal meeting of the committee appointed by the North Carolina conference at Elizabeth City to consider, and, in its discretion, to make plans for the establishment of a Methodist Orphanage. There were present at the meeting only four members of the committee—Rev. J. W. Jenkins, Rev. John N. Cole, E. J. Parrish and Jos. G. Brown. The pastor of Edenton Street church, Rev. W. C. Norman, sat with the committee. After prayer by Rev. J. N. Cole, the acting chairman, Rev. J. W. Jenkins explained the purpose of the committee, and there was done the initial work that led to the establishment of the Methodist Orphanage. But this was not its real beginning. It was born in the heart of J. W. Jenkins. For years he had thought about it—he had talked and written and prayed for it. Little encouragement was given him, but finally conference was induced to appoint a committee. There was so little interest in the movement, however, that when the presiding elder announced the names of the committee he turned to one of the lay members and said, "We have put you on it, we will let the old man down easy." But "the old man" had had a vision. He would not be let down. After the announcement he arose with a radiant face and requested the committee to meet immediately in one of the class rooms.

They met, and "the old man" said to them: "Brethren, the Lord wants this Orphanage and He is going to have it. My wife has $800 which she wants to put in it, and I have $50 to go with hers." Then the date was fixed for the meeting in Raleigh, mentioned above. This meeting adjourned to meet again in February—and to the February meeting a number of leading ministers and laymen were invited, so that in conference with them, the real attitude of the church might be ascertained, and definite plans be made. The response indicates the interest in the movement at that time. There appeared at the meeting only two members of the committee, the chairman and the secretary and Rev. W. C. Norman, as visitor. Nothing was done other than recording three other subscriptions, which ran the amount up to $1,050. One of these subscriptions was from a Baptist, the well remembered and much loved John T. Pullen.

But the chairman was not discouraged. His faith never wavered. Several meetings were held later resulting in securing a charter and in a meeting of the trustees named therein for formal organization on 22nd of June, 1899. At that meeting Rev. J. W. Jenkins was elected superintendent and Joseph G. Brown secretary and treasurer. Thus was born a child of the faith of one man, and through the ages the Methodist Orphanage must ever stand as a monument to J. W. Jenkins, to his wonderful faith in God and his love for humanity.

It would be interesting, if time and space permitted, to trace the steady growth of this institution, now so dear to the great, loving heart of North Carolina Methodism; to tell of the first pupil, little Cassie Bright; the purchase of the first tract of land, 46 acres, paid for by the citizens of Raleigh; the addition of other tracts later, about fifty-five acres; the erection of building after building until 250 children are comfortably domiciled; the enhancement of value of the property until a well informed real estate man appraises it at a half million dollars; the sometimes precarious living from hand to mouth, until the conference provided a regular income by levying an assessment on the churches. It would be pleasing to tell of the growing love of the church for the orphanage and their increasing interest in it, of their cheerful offerings and numerous legacies, until the endowment fund exceeds $200,000—and funds available for expansion amount to $150,000. But all these things must be kept for another story. My purpose now is to stress just one point—the necessity of liberal offerings for maintenance. Years ago when we numbered less than half as many orphans as we have now, the 10 per cent assessment provided by conference was ample for our needs. But conditions have changed very materially since then. At that time $60 per annum was thought to be ample to support one child. Now the average in North Carolina institutions approximates $200 for each orphan, and we have more than twice as many and there are yet many other children in the church that need our sheltering care. Of course, with the advancing pastors' salaries, the amount of our income has increased, but it is entirely inadequate to support the present population of the Orphanage. Every dollar of the income from investments, and much more is needed for the buildings that we must have—and are planning to begin soon.

Before long a larger assessment must be levied. But now, it is urgent that our voluntary offerings for maintenance should be more liberal than ever. The impression must not be had that because of the occasional large gifts, and the legacies that have come to us, the Orphanage has plenty of money. Such is not the case. Large gifts are usually for special purposes, and only the income of endowment funds can be used for support.

The one particular thing I would now call attention to is the approaching Thanksgiving Day which gives our churches a wonderful opportunity to supplement our maintenance fund. God has blessed our people bountifully. We are debtor to Him, but, as Bishop Denny so well said in his splendid dedicatory sermon at Four Oaks, we are debtor, too, to the ones to whom we may carry a share of the blessings that have come to us. Particularly are we debtors to these orphan children. It is a great opportunity for us. Let us make it for them a Thanksgiving Day long to be remembered!

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

A SPIRITUAL FORCE IN THE LIFE OF OUR NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

By Prof. J. M. Ormond.

There is no institution in the North Carolina conference which is more sure of a permanent moral and financial support from the Methodist people than the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh. The Orphanage could use very wisely much larger sums than have been available, but the time has come when the actual needs of the institution cannot long remain unsatisfied. This guarantee of interest has been strengthened year by year from the very beginning of its history until now there are thousands of people who regard the Orphanage as an object of regular and systematic support. Increasing numbers of people are making provision in their wills for the needed endowment of the Orphanage so that this splendid institution may be able to extend its usefulness.

But while there is rejoicing at the prosperity of the Orphanage through the generosity of the church, there is also cause for rejoicing at the contribution which the Orphanage is making to the welfare of the church. It is by no means a one-sided service. The dividends which the church is receiving from this institution are sufficient to justify donations larger than have thus far been made. (By training boys and girls who are to take their positions of service to the state and church the Orphanage is materially contributing to the high type of citizenship which is the goal also of other worthy institutions in society.) It furnishes its quota of producers and distributors of the world's wealth and becomes therefore a great economic factor in the state. (No less is it to receive credit for the educational work which is being done, for although it does not call upon the state for taxes to carry on its work of education, it is nevertheless training men and women who are passed on up to the higher institutions of learning and so on to the world's work. It is also to have a place among the social institutions of the state, by reason of its contribution to the building of individual character with social obligations and social conscience.)

Whatever else the Methodist Orphanage may be doing to advance the causes of mankind it should be recognized also as a spiritual force in the church and state. Thousands of interested friends during the past years have visited the institution and received from the developing youth there much that has stimulated their spiritual lives and induced them to a fuller consecration in the service of God and man. It is a blessing and spiritual benediction to any local church community for the Orphanage classes to visit it and carry its message of hope and Christian cheer. Spiritual helpfulness comes also through the contributions which individuals may be able to make to this worthy endeavor.

(One of the striking spiritual influences of the Orphanage may be felt in the peculiar type of education which the young people receive. Its peculiarity lies in the fact that the teachers of the boys and girls are also their paternal and maternal guides. It is a combination of home and school under one management and with one purpose.) It is to be granted that the usual home of parent and child when properly functioning may be considered one of the most important educational institutions. But it must be admitted that the average home is not thus functioning, hence the religious training which should be offered by the home is only in rare instances received. It is also to be admitted that the public schools are not supplying the religious training necessary for complete development of the youth. (It is to be expected that the Orphanage by reason of its superior advantages at this point should turn out a product better equipped for the tasks of life than may be usually found elsewhere.) (Another notable factor in the production of spiritual life at the Orphanage is the influence of the church. This home and school is also a local church. It is a combination of three institutions in one. And along with the other opportunities of the local church there comes also the regular evangelistic series of meetings each year, which is a mighty factor in creating spiritual power among the children. Under the personal guidance of the officers and teachers together with a regular pastor and some invited preacher, whose duty is to preach a series of sermons upon the questions of personal salvation and surrender to Christ, practically all of the children are led to the Christian faith. The children are not coerced but led to see the importance of such a step, for Christian nurture have been paving the way for such decision, and then cultivates the life which has taken the step.)

(It is to be observed, then, as a natural consequence from this combination of forces extending through the life of the child past the high school age, that a large per cent of them offer themselves for definite Christian service. The final months at this institution constitute the period when careers are planned and aspirations run high.) There is no excuse here for failure to hear the call of service to God and man. (The guides of these young people are so intimately related to them that they can give assistance in their seeking a best place to work in the world, and while it is not the function of the management or teachers to call any of them into any particular field of service, yet they do direct them in making their own choice under the inspiration of Divine light.)

These are some of the more evident spiritual influences of the Methodist Orphanage. The church should greatly rejoice in the fruitfulness of this worthy institution and continue to support and enlarge it that even greater things may be realized.

MY TWENTY-TWO YEARS AT THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

By Mrs. M. A. Jenkins.

I have crowded a few happenings into this space, but there are many others left out that might be of deep interest to our friends who love the orphanage. Among them are the nights of long watch by the bedside of the sick ones—and the death of some—and the beautiful marriages of some of our girls who wanted to come back to the home of their childhood that this important step in life might be taken.

More than twenty-two years ago a man had a vision of a home where children who were parentless might be happy and free—that it be a home for the homeless, shelter with strong arm to guide the fatherless, and a haven of sweetness for the motherless child. That man was Rev. J. W. Jenkins, the founder of this our beautiful Methodist orphanage at Raleigh. It was his day dream for a number of years and when he talked with friends about it they thought it a wild idea. The conference turned him down a time or two, but finally a committee was given him. This committee had been informed by some friends that it was a useless undertaking and that it was best not to encourage him. He met his committee in Raleigh December 29, 1898. They saw at once his determination and his faith. His was one of those souls so in tune with God and His plans that he quickened others to the same idea. One dollar was all that he had in hand when he met this committee, but his faith in God carried him far above the clouds of hindrances into the sunlight of heaven and assurances. The little verse below (somewhat transposed) seems fitting right here with his life:

"I know Thee, Saviour, who Thou art—
Jesus, the little children's friend;
Nor wilt Thou with the night depart,
But stay and love them to the end.
Thy mercies never shall remove,
Thy nature and Thy name is Love."

In 1900 the first cottage was built and ready for occupancy on Thanksgiving Day of that year. January 1, 1901, the first child, Cassie Bright, was admitted. The 19th of that month I came into the home and found six children (three girls and three boys) waiting for me. At first sight of the home and the children I felt that I must fly from it all and hide myself forever. But as soon as I touched the children another feeling came over me—that of thankfulness to God that He had brought me into the work. (I had not sought the place, but was elected at conference of 1900. I had declined the position, and reconsidered and then felt that I must come). The children gave me a hearty welcome and we began at once to plan the home life. We were in the woods and far out from town. No street cars then and no automobiles and no way of getting to us except by horse and buggy; but our friends found us and we always knew when they came that some good was in store for us. Our conveniences were very crude. The kitchen was then in the backyard, and a large wash-pot was in the yard nearby. One use of this was to heat water for bathing the children. A good friend had said to the boys that if their hands were kept clean she would bring them cakes, but if not the girls would get the cakes. One Saturday a buggy drawn by a gray horse was seen coming through the woods. Every boy knew it was the cake-friend. It was funny to see them flying in every direction to wash hands. Two little fellows ran to the wash-pot and soused their hands into the hot water. It is useless to say that the boys got the cakes. As summer came on the children and I were often left alone, sometimes for a whole week, and we had our evening meal together on the lawn. The children had a pet goat that would always make his appearance at this time, so one of the boys would have to keep the goat away while the rest of us at supper. New children began coming in in September, and for the winter we had 26 in the family. One little boy needed a coat and must have it at once, but there was no money with which to buy coats. I found a piece of cloth that had been sent in, so I cut a pattern by the outgrown, worn-out coat and soon had a warm coat for the little boy which served him two winters. In 1902 our first teacher, Miss Lucy Reeks, came. We felt by now, with our 32 children in our own school, our own horse and buggy, two cows, some chickens, a few pigs and a good garden we were getting pretty well established. In fact, Mr. Jenkins said to me: "The orphanage will now launch out. It will never be in want again, because the people love it and have taken it into their hearts." The good women of the missionary and aid societies had now turned their attention to us, and their love and good works for us have grown and strengthened as the years have gone by. Thanksgiving of 1905 was a day of very great rejoicing. Our new administration building was ready for occupancy. How had it been done? Where did the money come from? A four-story building (with every dollar paid) at the cost of $40,000 stood towering above the trees. The building was to give accommodation for school rooms, offices, dormitories for 50 girls, a chapel, storage rooms, and kitchen and dining room. Our dear good friends from Edenton Street church had come out every Thanksgiving Day and served a bountiful dinner for us—and at this time the long work-benches that had been left in our basement were made ready for them as dining tables. They came and took possession of our dining room again and with glad hearts the whole orphanage family feasted. Children of a king could not have been happier. The ladies left with a promise that they would furnish the dining room, and no time was lost in supplying the then needed equipment. The next Thanksgiving they gave the three-oven range which is still in use. Our first winter was spent in this building without heat from the furnace. We made ourselves comfortable by crowding around a wood heater, and also by the use of some oil stoves which were moved from room to room.

Monday morning, July 2, 1906, our orphanage physician, Dr. McGee, was called to the bedside of the superintendent, who had had a stroke of paralysis. The doctor stated that the end was very near. Mr. Jenkins knew his condition, but said to me and his daughters, "Let us all be happy today because God is good." He called Cassie Bright (the first child) to him, praying a blessing on her and thanking God that the home had been built for such children. Early on the morning of July 4th his spirit slipped away to God. We felt our loss. The church grieved, and the little children's hearts were broken. How could we get along without the head of the home? The executive committee asked me to hold things together until a suitable man could be found. I consented with the strengthening thought that I could help to carry on the great work that Mr. Jenkins had planned and laid down. We now had about 64 children. No woman ever had more congenial help than I had in the three workers—Miss Olivia Breeze, the sewing room matron, and Misses Lucy Reeks and Laura Breeze, teachers—who were with me in spirit, and untiring in their work for the children. Whenever and wherever needed they were ready for the job. We had rented some land and had a small crop of corn and some cotton. We had no man to run the farm, so it dawned on me that I must be farmer as well as mother and kitchen matron. The boys were proud to have me go with them to the field. We gathered the corn and had a real country corn-shucking, and had the corn-shucking supper which followed, topped off with sweet potato custard. We made three bales of cotton that year, and picked some cotton for a farmer whose cotton field was near ours. At conference of this year (1906) our new superintendent was elected. The mantle of Mr. Jenkins had fallen on Rev. J. N. Cole, a much beloved man in the conference. His heart was intensely interested in the work from the very first. He began planning at once a big building program. The superintendent's cottage, a new barn and two cottages for children and our laundry were built. We were prepared to take more children, enlarge the schools and employ a farmer. Friends began to be interested in sending our children to college. Three of the girls were sent to a junior college.

One friend sent for Mr. Cole to come to her and hear her plan. It was that she he allowed to put up a hulling here and that she be given the privilege of living here. That friend was Mrs. Mary Jackson, who is still with us. We all love her, the little children are devoted to her and are always ready to go into her room for a little prayer meeting. She is a sweet benediction in the home. It was soon discovered that Mr. Cole's health was failing, but he was still enthusiastic and untiring in the work he loved so devotedly. The first of January, 1914, the orphanage family was again called upon to bow in submission to God's call. The superintendent, Rev. J. N. Cole, had laid down his loved work to answer the call. Again we were left without a head, but the trustees lost no time in getting together to select a man for the place. Rev. A. S. Barnes was the chosen man. On February 1, 1914, he was elected superintendent of the orphanage. He with his great fatherly heart and deep love for the children wins their hearts and holds their love. Under his administration the orphanage seems to have taken deeper hold on the hearts of the people. They are praying for it, working for it and remembering it in their wills. The endowment fund grows, and may it continue to grow so that the great ideals for it may be accomplished—but above everything else and beyond all let the church pray that our orphanage send out young manhood and young womanhood filled with purity, and with the Christ-life, that they may go out into the world to bless the world.

WHAT THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE STANDS FOR

By J. C. Wooten.

The Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh is a life-saving station for numbers of helpless children. What that healthy, well kept crowd of children would have been without it, no one can imagine. But even a visitor is impressed with the appearance of the children and the buildings and grounds. It is conserving life and developing Christian character in a fine way.

Many times more children could have been received if it had been open to those who could pay their way. But this class are not admitted. Only the homeless and helpless find refuge here. Their helplessness is the key that unlocks the doors and admits them into this home. Too many of these have been turned away because of the lack of room. It is a home, as nearly perfect as it is possible for any institution to be. The institutional idea is avoided as much as possible. Ineed I have never discovered any rule in force. And yet the perfect order and movement through the day shows the skill of management without any revelation of power. There is power there, but I believe it is the power of love, as shown in the superintendent, matron and their associates.

I used to think that I would not like to visit an orphanage because of the feeling of sadness it produced on me. But it is a great joy to see them at play, school and work. It is marvelous what Daddy Barnes and Mother Jenkins have done in making a home for these children.

Not only is it a home, but it is a school, beginning with the lower grades on up to the high school. The graduates enter any of our colleges. Many of them are going to college and finishing the course. Through the wisdom and kindness of Mr. S. C. Vance at Franklinton money is furnished. So the orphanage has students in trades schools, hospital training, business colleges, dental colleges, missionary training school and several boys studying for the ministry.

It is a most inspiring place to know, and the best folks you can find in days of journeying.

MEETING OF APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE OF BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION

The Appropriations committee of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will meet in the office of the board, 1115 South Fourth Street, Louisville, Kentucky, December 11th, 9 a. m.

All applications must be approved by the Conference Board of Church Extension and in the hands of the General Board on or before December 1st.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

Rev. R. F. Mock preached an interesting sermon in Forest Hill Methodist church, Concord, last Sunday night. Brother Mock moved to his new charge at Cherryville about the middle of this week.

Drs. T. A. Smoot returns to Dañville and E. L. Bain has been appointed to Court Street, Lynchburg. V. L. Marsh goes back to Princess Anne charge. These are effective workmen whom we have loaned Virginia.

Rev. W. C. Benson reports a fine meeting at Aurora, N. C. Probably the greatest ever held in that town, closing Sunday night, October 21st. Rev. Thurston B. Price and his soloist, John T. Thomas, assisted the pastor.

Rev. W. B. Ricks, a member of the Tennessee conference who is widely known in North Carolina and who last year was associated with Dr. Cram in the work of the Centenary, has been appointed presiding elder of the Murfreesboro district, Tennessee conference.

The Epworth church, Concord, decided a few days ago to paint and put in first class condition their parsonage. This congregation served supper to a large per cent of their membership Wednesday night of this week. The occasion took the form of a reception to the new pastor, Rev. L. A. Falls.

The late Dr. Thomas Neal Ivey is the subject of a discriminating and keenly sympathetic sketch by the Rev. Marion T. Plyler in the October number of the Methodist Review, Nashville. It is a life-like likeness of a representative Methodist minister who put his religion into every day's work.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

There are just two more Sundays before the meeting of the North Carolina conference in Elizabeth City. We earnestly ask the preachers of that conference to call attention to the Advocate and ask the subscribers to send their renewals to conference, and also give an opportunity for others to subscribe.

Says the St. Louis Advocate: "The total number of members in the three Missouri conferences is 131,274, an increase of 3,249; 4,970 adults and 1,326 infants were baptized. The amount raised for the support of the presiding elders was $58,315 and for preachers in charge $565,897. The total amount raised for all purposes by the three conferences was $2,055,412." A comparison of these figures with the report of the Western North Carolina conference shows that they run surprisingly close together.

Rev. B. F. Fincher and six-year-old son, Hillis, narrowly escaped death at Concord last Friday afternoon when a big truck struck the lad and barely missed Brother Fincher. A serious cut in the head and a broken leg forced the boy to the Concord hospital, where he is thought to have a good chance to recover. Brother Fincher was granted the superannuate relation at our recent conference in Winston-Salem and was preparing to move his family to Derita.

A big, enthusiastic crowd greeted Rev. J. Frank Armstrong at Forest Hill, Concord, last Sunday morning as he began his fifth year's work with them. Reading a resume of the past four years Brother Armstrong stated among other things that two hundred and thirty-five new members had been added to the church and that the average amount of money collected each of the four years had increased more than 400 per cent over the amount that was being paid at the beginning of his pastorate. More than $26,000 was paid for all purposes the past year alone.

Charles Hart Litaker and John Moore, Jr., each seventeen years of age, sons of Statesville Methodist preachers, were recently licensed as official Red Cross Life Savers in America after prolonged and severe tests under Commodore Longfellow in life saving work. The tests were made in swimming pools in Greensboro, where only five of the seventy-five entrants were successful. Their pictures in swimming suits decorated with the insignias awarded them appear in the current number of the Red Cross Courier, the national organ. These are additional sons of the parsonage who are making good. We congratulate them and their parents.

W. A. Lambeth writes of H. H. Jordan: "Every inch a man! Four years as pastor of this church and four years as presiding elder of our district! He has become a necessary factor in the religious and civic life of our city. How we hate to give him up to Hickory! How we regret to lose Mrs. Jordan, too, from our church and city! Both of them kind and considerate and obliging. Parents, too, of a noble family of children."

Bishop William Newman Ainsworth, who is the anniversary preacher at the one hundred and fifty-seventh anniversary of Old John Street church, this city, on Sunday, October 28, is a Georgian, and graduate of Emory College, who has been a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, since 1891, and a bishop since 1918. He was a member of the Unification Commission, and is an eloquent preacher. His sermon is at 11 a. m., and he will be one of the speakers at the platform meeting in the afternoon at 3:30. In the following week he will preach at one p. m., on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

One of the General Conference delegates from a German conference sent us his photograph the other day, putting on the wrapper 2,225,000 marks in stamps. The other day Bishop Nuelson addressed the Chicago Methodist ministers on Russia. At the close of the address he presented Bishop Nicholson with a 500,000,000 ruble note, which the recipient gracefully and gratefully acknowledged. Over in Germany they do not use collection plates in the churches. The bishop told of a collection in a certain church where a half dozen men went down the aisles with great baskets, filling them to overflowing with notes of all denominations, and it took all the collectors three hours to count the money.—Northwestern Advocate.

On Friday evening, October 26, the first of the series of students' recitals to be given this year at Louishurg College was enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. The program, which included numbers from the piano, voice, violin and expression departments, was well rendered and was a credit to both student and instructor. The following ladies took part: Mary Malone Best, Louishurg; Marion Hawkes, Louishurg; Mary Lella Honiker, Potsdam, N. Y.; Lois Crawley, Littleton; Mildred Barrow, Farmville; Sallie McCullers, Garner; Goldie Morrisette, Franklinton; Margaret Ogburn, Louishurg; Mildred Waters, Washington; Sarah Johnson, Stantonshurg; Susie Crowell, Thomasville; Julia Daniels, Elm City; Bettie Holden, Youngsville; Vera Campbell, Siler City; Pauline Eason, Snow Hill; Louise Taylor, Louishurg.

Rev. H. C. Ewing says: "We are winding up our second year at Branson with marked success for the charge. They have been very strenuous years, but the success has greatly lightened the burden. We have a choice location in this section of the city, with one of the most beautiful and modern buildings in the city. Our Sunday school is becoming adjusted to its new departments, and with Gilmer Ward Bryant in the lead it is making fine progress. Dr. Wilcox rendered us valuable service in our revival meeting in September. Also we enjoyed a very helpful and inspiring sermon from Bishop Denny during the revival. We have had more than a hundred net increase to the membership of the church. The Lord has been indeed good to us, and it is our purpose to be true to "the faith which was once delivered unto the saints" and to be faithful unto the end.

TO THE SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS

I am requesting every Sunday school superintendent to send the Methodist Orphanage a Thanksgiving offering from his Sunday school either the Sunday before or the Sunday following Thanksgiving Day. Each year many of our consecrated superintendents send us liberal offerings at Thanksgiving. Such kindly consideration is sincerely appreciated. I am asking that they endeavor to surpass the offerings of former years.

This year I am counting on all the superintendents who have not hitherto remembered us at Thanksgiving. It makes no difference how small or weak the school may be, Brother Superintendent, let me beg you to give it a chance to contribute, if the Sunday school does not give but fifty cents or a dollar. This is one year that I am insisting that each school in our conference do its level best for our Methodist Orphanage.

A. D. Barnes.

"OLD PASQUOTANK"

I guess you think it was time to hear something from the "Old Pasquotank." We are finishing our quadrennium among these good people; these have been very busy and pleasant years, and have slipped quickly by. The people have been so kind and courteous and have given us the heartiest co-operation in all the tasks that came before the church during these years. We have received one hundred and eighty-seven on profession of faith during the quadrennium; have three fine young men who are preparing themselves for the ministry or mission work. The attendance at public worship is one hundred per cent better than it was at the beginning, so we must feel that our people are living on a higher spiritual plane. By the aid of my wife, we have organized three fine woman's missionary societies, also three fine Bright Jewel bands, something that had never been done on the charge before. We have rebuilt Newbegun church, and instead of a one-room building we have a fine plant, prepared especially with a view of taking care of the educational program of the church. This charge has increased the salaries more than fifty per cent during the quadrennium, and they are preparing for improvements at two more of the churches; in fact, they have imbibed the spirit of progress. So, with their young and progressive presiding elder, C. B. Culbreth, we are sure that our successor will be able to accomplish still greater things during the next quadrennium. May God's richest blessings rest upon these good folks, and may success crown their every effort to build themselves up; and may God's kingdom be set up in every home and every heart is my prayer.

E. L. Stack.

MT. GILEAD CIRCUIT

This, our fourth year on Mt. Gilead circuit, has been a pleasant and, we trust, a reasonably profitable one.

In our meetings this year we were assisted at Hebron and Sadis by Rev. W. C. Ellerbe, at Wadeville by Rev. F. B. Peele, and at Zion by Rev. W. F. Trawick. These brethren did good preaching and faithful work, and our people will be glad to have them come again. At Little River the pastor had to do the preaching himself. While the visible results of these meetings were small, we trust great good was accomplished. Have received into the church sixteen on profession of faith.

Three years ago our people at Zion re-seated their church at a cost of several hundred dollars, and have as comfortable seats as can be found in any church. This year they graded a road from the highway to the church at a cost of $150. Our people at Sardis have put in new windows and seats this year and are going to paint, these improvements costing several hundred dollars. The god women there are putting carpet on the floor—organized three years ago. Our Woman's Missionary Society at Hebron have been doing splendid work. They are now having the church painted. The Epworth League there is doing fine work among the young people. These are good people to serve. They have been good and kind to us during these four years, not only meeting all their financial obligations but doing much besides this in providing for their preacher and his family. It is with genuine regret we are leaving them.

The development in roads and schools here in the last three years has been almost wonderful. My first two years here I had to use a horse and buggy during the winter and spring. Now I can leave the parsonage and go to each church on high gear. In the last three years there has been five large splendidly equipped consolidated school buildings erected within the bounds of this charge, one of these a brick building costing $35,000, and another one of them a brick venerated building.

The people of Mt. Gilead have been very good to us. We have as good neighbors as one could wish.

A. J. Groves.

FROM OLD TRAP

We have just closed another meeting on the South Camden circuit, and I feel that I should, in a few words, tell you about it. We did not secure any outside help. You know it is hard to get help just at this time in the conference year, as most every one is busy in the annual tug. There was no ingathering of souls from without the church, but there was "a going in the mulberry trees." Ten adult church members made a public confession that they were sinners in the sight of God, and renewed their covenant with their heavenly Father. They declared that they had a new grip on eternal life and that prayer should become the habit of their souls. At the beginning of the last service, which was Sunday evening, the 21st inst., as I stood up to read a brother came forward and becomed to me. I stepped to the chancel rail and he handed me a roll of money of no meager amount, which was a substantial expression of their appreciation of my efforts during the week. I am praying that God will help me to in some measure prove myself worthy of His manifold blessings.

S. Salyer.

CONFERENCE EVANGELIST R. A. TAYLOR

As the brethren know, I have been appointed conference evangelist for another year. I shall be glad to help any of the brethren in meetings this year who desire me to do so. Those who desire my help please write me at your earliest convenience, as I am beginning to make my plans for the year. My address is Rutherford College, N. C.

R. A. Taylor.

GOD NOT THE AUTHOR OF SIN

I am provoked to write a line in reply to Bro. Harry Daniels' statement in the Advocate of 18th inst. that God created sin. I don't recall when I was so shocked as I was by that statement. It is easy now for him to prove that sin is good—very good. Gen. 1:31, "And God saw everything that he had made, and behold, it was very good." I may write again and continue this protest.

D. L. Earnhardt.

DAVIDSON LEAGUERS PICK COTTON

Something entirely novel has happened. By mere accident we have just learned that the senior league of Davidson hiked three miles into the country and hired themselves to a "citizen" to pick cotton. One of the party declared they had fully a million dollars worth of fun and incidentally replenished the league treasury to the extent of several dollars. Using the favorite expression of the Ohio people, the editor would say "That's good stuff."

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

We, the members of the quarterly conference of the Norlina circuit, Weldon district, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in parting with our pastor, Rev. Marvin Self, who has served this charge so faithfully for the past four years, do adopt the following resolutions:

Resolved first, That we appreciate the earnest and faithful work that he has done on the circuit during the whole time of his stay, believing that he has conscientiously given of his best labor to every church on the charge.

Second, That as he has stood at all times for community uplift, civic improvement, law enforcement, and above all else for higher and better Christianity, we regret deeply his leaving, and we commend him to the work he may be sent to serve for the coming year and bid him God-speed in his work wherever he may be.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be given Brother Self and that they be published in the Christian Advocate, the Norlina Headlight, and placed on the minutes of this conference.

Signed on behalf of the quarterly conference, this October 16th, 1923.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER, NOVEMBER 4-10

While our intercession during this week should include within its scope the whole cause of missions, yet our special prayers and our special gifts are to be devoted to two specific objects—the Bethlehem Center at Nashville, Tenn., and the Laura Haygood Demonstration School at Soochow, China. Each of these institutions is far-reaching in its influence, for they are helping to train a leadership for the two races which they serve. The need of each of these institutions is great. Pray that our gifts may be large and sacrificial.—Council Bulletin.

SCARRITT COLLEGE FOR MISSIONARIES AND OTHER CHRISTIAN WORKERS

It has been decided to move the Scarritt Bible and Training School from Kansas City, Mo., to Nashville, Tenn. Among the many reasons for the change we note the following:

1. To locate nearer the center of the membership of our church.
2. To be near enough to affiliate with a first class normal school.

It is necessary that all missionaries working in schools—from kindergarten to university—shall have the best training in methods of teaching and in school management in all its details. The people to whom they are sent expect the best that American schools can produce. And we can not well afford to send less than the best.

We know that George Peabody College for Teachers will not grant diplomas to any except well prepared teachers. Women in our mission schools will rejoice to know that the Greater Scarritt will be affiliated with George Peabody. Our work in foreign countries is three-fold, Evangelistic, Medical and Educational. No matter how fine a Christian a woman may be, if she is not a trained, successful teacher, she will be badly handicapped and the burdens of the other workers increased if she is sent to teach in one of our mission schools. Change of climate, food, environment and language study are sufficient without having to learn to teach. At Peabody missionary candidates will receive training for educational work that Scarritt does not furnish. But, as Mrs. Stephens so clearly states in a letter published in the North Carolina Christian Advocate October 4, 1923, "All courses in Bible, Church History, Evangelism, Applied Sociology, Foreign Missions, Religious Education and kindred topics needed for strictly missionary training will be taught in the Scarritt class rooms and by the faculty of the training school itself. This provision applies to both graduate and undergraduate courses."

The Council agreed to pay $500,000 within three years in order to move and enlarge the training school so that existing conditions may be successfully met.

Our North Carolina conference promised $25,000 to be paid within three years. In December, 1921, we had 6,933 adult members. If every member gives three dollars—one dollar a year for three years—we can quickly and easily pay our part and be ready to help some of the smaller conferences. Many of our women have planned to invest more than three dollars, and surely all who can do so will consider it a rare privilege. Suppose we have to make real sacrifices, four years from now we will have forgotten the need, and after our work on earth is finished our gifts will be helping to train workers for our Father's harvest fields at home and in other countries. Can any sacrifice compare with such a privilege?

Ambassadors of Jesus Christ must be empowered by the Holy Ghost, taught and guided by Him, therefore we must pray daily for teachers and students that God's will shall be worked in and through them.

If we pray daily and give all we possibly can every month to our Greater Scarritt, and get as many others to help as we can, we shall have a great thanksgiving at Goldsboro next year.

Council will decide next year what form the Belle Bennett Memorial will take. Whatever will best continue the work she loved so much.

Let's each have the largest possible share in our Greater Scarritt, both by prayer and by gifts.

Elizabeth Lamb.

CONFERENCE JOTTINGS

The meeting called in Raleigh October 17th for the purpose of hearing the plans for the Centenary Pay-Out campaign for December and January was attended by Mrs. Early, Mrs. Bone, Miss Pulliam, Miss Herring, Mrs. Royall and Mrs. Lee. The meeting seems to have been rather suddenly called, otherwise there would have been, doubtless, a full attendance. The plan as outlined to us contains a demonstration or program to be put on in every church in our conference in December, to be followed in January by observing a week of prayer and an all-day missionary day and the Pay-Out campaign the last week in January, in all of which our women are expected to co-operate. The plans for our co-operation will be submitted to us by our respective district secretaries.

Mrs. L. R. Royall of Laurinburg, secretary of the Rockingham district, has called all her auxiliary presidents to meet her in Laurinburg November 2nd at ten o'clock, for the purpose of hearing the plans for the Centenary Pay-Out campaign. It is urged that every president attend or send some member to represent her.

Every woman member of our church at Severn is a member of the Woman's Missionary Society, and an active member. Their auxiliary is one hundred per cent organized, and the different departments doing good work.

Under the wise and untiring leadership of Mrs. Lee Johnson of Weldon the social service work of our conference is growing steadily, surely and rapidly. She is attending district and county federation meetings, and everywhere explaining the work so thoroughly that, from one of the least understood phases of our work, it is rapidly becoming one of the most clearly defined and popular departments.

Too much can not be said in commendation of the County Federation of Methodist Women's Missionary Societies. The county meetings are developing our leadership resources in the most gratifying manner, revealing and cultivating talents and gifts that have lain dormant for years for lack of just this means of revelation. The scattered auxiliaries are being drawn closed together by frequent meetings, and by enjoying the privilege of an interchange of ideas and successful methods of work of hearing and seeing the conference leaders oftener, gaining inspiration from the information they carry, are developing into something more than merely money-raising machines—they are becoming well and more the united parts of a well planned whole, composed of intelligent women, well informed, capable of doing fine work in a business which they understand and are familiar with, and to which they are glad of the privilege of contributing of their means more generously every year. And the county federation is successfully organizing the unorganized churches and fostering the new auxiliaries until they are able to stand alone. The departmental work of the auxiliary also is receiving the especial attention of the federation. We predict a marked improvement in our conference along all lines as a result of the County Federation of Methodist Women's Missionary Societies.

SO MANY WAYS

So many ways in the world, ah me!
That a man may follow, a woman travel;

So many paths, whatever they be,
Wherever they go, that none unravel;
So many roads where we win or lose;
So many ways, so hard to choose;
So much that's hidden, so little light.
The only thing, whatever we do,
Is to follow the voice of the soul that's true,
The still small voice that leads us right. —Selected.

WHY APPOINT A WEEK OF PRAYER?

This pertinent question comes home to the busy woman—the wife, the mother, the teacher. Why set aside these first days of November, when there are a thousand things to do, and ask 257,000 of these busy homemakers to assemble themselves together one hour a day for three days in the week, or even for one whole day out of the working six? What is the program which calls for this specializing in time, effort and money?

Taking up the items of the program in their order of importance let us each one establish in her own mind that this first week of November, 4-10, in the year 1923, is primarily for specific, definite prayer. It is supposed that our women are women of prayer, that they know the way to the Throne of Grace, that their fellowship with the Master is close and precious, that it is easy to find God and to lay before Him the things we so desire. For ourselves, our families and friends, our church, our mission fields, and for many things dear to our hearts, we talk with the Father, believing that He hears and answers.

But many, perhaps, out of these almost three thousand members of the Woman's Missionary Council remember daily, for even three days in any one week, some specific field, or institution or workers. We sum them up together and say, "Lord, you know them and love them, and we trust your love and care." Thus we fail to get ourselves familiar with the conditions under which the various places and departments of work are carried on, the names of the workers, the needs and opportunities, and miss the reflex blessing that always comes to the intercessor in personal, definite prayer.

Adult auxiliaries are asked to pray together this year for the Nashville Bethlehem House Center, and for the Laura Haygood Demonstration School in Soochow, China. This means that we acquaint ourselves with their history, how and why they came into being, what kind of community they serve, why they need enlargement, what will be the results of such enlargement. We will learn the names of the missionaries at work in these fields and will come into closer sympathy and a greater desire to become, ourselves, helpers in their labors. And ever after we will be more a part of the Nashville Bethlehem Center and the Laura Haygood Demonstration School. Please make the application to the Scarritt Bible and Training School for Young People and Juniors, then remember that we are all parts of the whole, and vital factors in its progress.

If you ask this writer for an opinion concerning the best method for conducting the Week of Prayer, the reply would have to be—make it what its name implies—a Week of Prayer. Memory calls back many such weeks, when saintly women, some of whom have passed over the river, leaders in their respective auxiliaries, made careful and prayerful preparation for the entire week, a sermon on Sunday preceding it. The attendance was often larger than at the monthly meeting, and offerings were large. Blessed seasons they were, full of strength and inspiration.

If you must curtail the benefits and results of a full week of public meetings, do not be content with less than a full Week of Prayer for those institutions named as beneficiaries. Study and pray some certain part of each day, and the week will become to anyone who thus enters into such an agreement with herself and her God, a blessed Week of Prayer.—Voice.

LETTER FROM MRS. WEAVER

My Dear Young People:

Our books for the third quarter's report have just been closed and while the report is not what I had hoped for nor what it should have been, yet it is better than the last quarter's report, for which I am thankful.

The records show that just after the books were closed for last year, a number of our societies disbanded, and since that time some have gone into league work and some promoted to adult auxiliaries, and so it is very necessary that we redouble our energetic sand forces in order to meet our goal for this year.

To my mind the work of you young people is one of the most interesting and important works of our church, that of training the young life for service in the Master's vineyard.

It is to you, the young people of today that the church is looking for its leadership. You hold the possibilities of the coming years in your hands, and the needs of the church are great, so let me appeal to you to do all in your power to interest and enlist others in this great missionary work.

With love for each of you and hoping that your last report for the year will be your best report,

Sincerely, Mrs. C. C. Weaver,
Supt. Y. P. Work.

NEW LAMP HAS NO WICK OR CHIMNEY

Most Brilliant Home Light Known—Costs One Cent a Night.

A new lamp which has no wick or chimney, yet, according to experts, gives the most powerful home light in the world, is the latest achievement of W. C. Fowler, 221 Factory Building, Kansas City, Mo. This remarkable new lamp beats gas or electricity—gives more light than 300 candles, 18 ordinary lamps or 10 brilliant electric lights, and costs only one cent a night. A blessing to every home, especially on farm or in small town. It is absolutely safe, and gives universal satisfaction. No dirt, no smoke, no odor. A child can carry it. It is the ambition of Mr. Fowler to have every home, store, hall or church enjoy the increased comfort of this powerful, pleasing, brilliant white light, and he will send one of his new lamps on free trial to any reader of the North Carolina Christian Advocate who writes him. He wants one person to whom he can refer new customers. Take advantage of his free offer. Agents wanted. Write him today.—Advt.

FAYETTEVILLE LEADS WAY

Fayetteville district, through the two standard training schools held at Fayetteville October 7-12 and at Jonesboro October 14-19, has hung up a record of leadership training not yet quite equalled by any other district in the conference. In these two training schools were enrolled 310 Sunday school workers representing 51 Sunday schools, and of those enrolled 157, representing 38 Sunday schools, earned certificates of credit on the standard training course.

Durham district, with its standard training schools at Graham and Durham held in April, made a record almost identical to that of Fayetteville district, having enrolled in its two schools 310 workers representing 39 Sunday schools and issuing 155 certificates of credit.

In the enrollment figures mentioned above were not included a large number of workers who visited the training schools. To be counted as enrolled one had to attend at least four of the twelve class periods. In the number of certificates issued as indicated above, moreover, are not included any except those earned in the standard training schools. In both districts quite a number of training classes were held and courses taken by correspondence, and many earned the certificates of credit through these methods.

In all but one or two districts in the conference standard training schools have been held this year, and all of them with marked success.

THESE WORKERS DID WORK

Our West Fayetteville Standard Training School, conducted at Jonesboro October 14-19, issued 73 certificates of credit to representatives of 18 Sunday schools of the western half of the district. Enrolled in this school were 161 Sunday school workers representing 24 Sunday schools. Notwithstanding the fact that it was a very busy season with most of those enrolled, picking cotton, ginning cotton, and so forth, these workers worked in the training school with the result that 73 earned the certificates and all who attended gained information and inspiration and a determination to do greater work in their respective schools.

The certificates were divided among the schools as follows: Jonesboro 13, Spring Hill 13, Steele Street 12, Broadway 6, Morris Chapel 5, Center 4, Goldston 3, Pittsboro 3, Lemon Springs 3, Poplar Springs 2, Carthage 2, Apex 1, Cool Springs 1, Mangers circuit 1, Osgood 1, Albemarle Central 1, Jones Chapel 1, and Rock Branch Presbyterian 1.

Persons earning the certificates, by classes, are as follows:

Sunday School Organization and Administration, Mr. L. L. Gobbel, instructor—D. E. Coffey, Guy Cox, Rev. L. R. Gaines, J. W. Gilliam, J. R. High, W. H. Holder, B. P. Ingram, Rev. L. B. Jones, Wade Jones, S. F. Kelly, Miss Annie F. McLeod, Evander Morrison, J. A. Rosser, S. H. Rosser, W. L. Seawell, D. A. Stewart, J. K. Stewart, R. B. Watson, C. W. Womble, and O. M. Yarborough.

Principles of Religious Teaching, Prof. I. B. McKay, instructor—L. F. Beard, Mrs. D. B. Buchanan, Mrs. L. J. Campbell, Miss Emma Cox, Miss Emmie B. Craven, Miss Alta Dewar, Katie Richardson graduated from Methodist Orphanage last June. Now a student at Louisburg College. Expects to be an evangelistic singer.

Bertha Smith, who graduated from Methodist Orphanage in June, is now at Columbia University and expects to go to China as a missionary.

Mrs. J. G. Downing, Mrs. D. D. Hinson, L. H. Jackson, J. W. Mason, Miss Pearl Mason, Miss Grace Mason, Miss Florie Matthews, Mrs. J. P. McDavid, Miss Jessie Parham, W. R. Thompson, Mrs. I. H. Underwood, Miss Valesta M. Wicker, Jas. H. Worthy, C. F. Fawcett, and Miss Sallie Stephens.

Beginner Organization and Administration, Mrs. Charles Van Noppen, instructor—Miss Virginia Cameron, Miss Myrtel Holder, Mrs. A. W. Teague, Miss Bess Stewart, Mrs. W. E. Campbell, Miss Bertha Cox, and Mrs. Tom Dearin.

Primary Organization and Administration, Miss Georgia Keene, instructor—Mrs. J. G. Allen, Miss Bertha Arent, Miss Melva Cox, Miss Lethie Cox, Miss Effie Griffin, Miss Edna Marley, Mrs. J. M. Martin, Miss Margaret Malloy, Miss Ida Mason, Mrs. F. C. Olive, Walter Stewart, and Miss Pauline Thomas.

Junior Organization and Administration, Mrs. E. R. Michaux, instructor—Miss Bessie Barnes, Miss Carrie Butler, Mrs. W. F. Beard, Mrs. J. W. Gilliam, Mrs. A. M. Hubbard, Mrs. J. David Hill, Miss Evelyn Harrington, Mrs. W. M. Kelly, Miss Addie Matthews, Miss Minnie Morrison, Mrs. J. M. Sanders, Mrs. W. L. Seawell, Miss Florie Wood, and Mrs. Gus Womble.

SUPERINTENDENT STICK BY

One of the features of the West Fayetteville training school was the enthusiastic way in which the superintendents stuck by it. The names of 14 superintendents appear on the roll in the class in Sunday School Organization and Administration, and eight of these received credit for the course, as follows:

Guy Cox, Morris Chapel.
B. P. Ingram, Mangers.
S. F. Kelly, Broadway.
Evander Morrison, Spring Hill.
J. K. Stewart, Spring Hill.
R. B. Watson, Lemon Springs.
C. W. Womble, Goldston.
O. M. Yarborough, Osgood.

Two pastors did credit work in this course and received certificates, as follows:

Rev. L. B. Jones, Sanford.
Rev. L. R. Gaines, Mangers.

CIRCUIT WORKERS' COUNCIL

As a means of intimate exchange of ideas and study of problems relating to all the Sunday schools of the circuit, the Creedmoor Circuit Workers' Council was organized at Grove Hill church Thursday night, October 25, with the following officers: N. J. Boddie, chairman, Frank Parrott, vice chairman, Miss Allie L. Jenkins, secretary-treasurer and librarian. To serve with these officers as an executive committee of the council were lectured S. T. Green and Prof. J. A. Pitts. One of the first projects to be promoted is a workers' library for the circuit, and $25 is being raised as an initial amount for the purchase of books.

This organization was perfected following a meeting of the workers of the circuit, with Prof. I. B. McKay of Trinity College and your conference superintendent of Sunday school work in attendance and assisting. "The Teen-Age Problem" was the subject for special consideration. The next meeting will be held at Bullocks Friday night, December 14.

RECOGNITION AT CONFERENCE

In recognition of those pastors who have, since last conference, earned one or more certificates of credit on the Sunday School Standard Training Course, Bishop Denny will present to these pastors Wednesday evening, November 14, at Elizabeth City, handsome certificates of award. Between 60 and 70 pastors are already in line to receive these awards, and we expect others to qualify between now and November 14.

"THE WORKING PREACHER"

Rev. L. R. Gaines, pastor of Mangers charge, has fallen heir to the title of "the working preacher," and a visit to his charge prepares the writer to believe that the title is deserved. Coming to the circuit two years ago when the circuit was first formed from the Lillington, he right soon interested himself and his people in an effort to convert old churches into more modern and adequate structures and to build new ones, with the result that today there is now at Mangers a $6,000 building with five Sunday school rooms, all neat and attractive, at Cool Springs there is in the process of construction a five-room Sunday school and church building, at Spring Hill a remodelled building with seven class rooms, and at Mt. Ariel a new building being built with five class rooms.

At Mangers there is to be no cemetery on the church lot, this pastor saying he believes in things being lively about this place.

Another indication that this pastor has been working is the fact that whereas when he came to the charge there were two churches and two Advocates, now there are four churches and 45 Advocates.

And, incidentally, it should be added that 15 Sunday school workers from his charge earned certificates of credit on the standard training course in the training school at Jonesboro.

Western North Carolina Conference

EIGHT FIFTY-ONE

Instead of there being just 806 Sunday schools in the Western North Carolina conference, the figures given to Bishop Denny on the last day of the conference session, it is found that there are 851 Sunday schools in our eleven districts. The mistake occurred when one of the statistical secretaries listed the Mount Airy district with 38 Sunday schools instead of the 83 that the district reported. The figures were reversed, making a loss of 45 schools. With this correction registered the Western North Carolina conference shows a gain in Sunday schools of seven over last year and still has more Sunday schools within its bounds than any other conference in Southern Methodism.

TOO BAD

Our next Conference Journal will show that we have 933 organized societies in our conference, which of course means preaching places. We have only 851 Sunday schools, leaving 82 societies where no Sunday schools are being run. This looks bad. But it is not as bad as it looks. In a number of these societies union Sunday schools are either held in our churches to which other denominations come or are held in churches of other denominations to which our people go. Fully half of the 82 societies reported as having no Sunday schools have them, but they cannot be reported as Methodist Sunday schools. With this understanding it is yet bad enough to have forty or fifty preaching points where no Sunday schools are held. An effort will be made this year to investigate each such instance.

NOT ENOUGH

Our Sunday school growth last year was not enough. It was only 6,050. Every district showed some gain except the Mount Airy and the Winston-Salem districts. The loss in the Mount Airy district was 368 in spite of the addition of a new charge to the district. The loss in the Winston-Salem district was 497. This lossage is about offset by the transference of two charges from the district to other districts last year. The Salisbury district with a gain of 1,208 leads in total increase in enrollment, but the little North Wilkesboro district with a gain of 672 leads the procession in percentage of growth. The Waynesville district also showed well with a growth of 745. We have nothing to brag about in our increased Sunday school enrollment this year. We will beat this next year.

QUALITY

While we have not grown a great deal in quantity we have grown considerably in quality. The type of Sunday school work being done now in most of our leading Sunday schools is much more satisfactory than done a few years ago. Rapidly our larger Sunday schools are departmentalizing themselves and are therefore enabling the boys and girls and men and women to not only have religious instruction in line with their needs, but are giving them an opportunity to worship in line with their needs. This phase of our work shows advancement.

Another phase of our work that shows gratifying growth is that our leaders are showing a disposition to learn better how to do their work. Last year fully 2,000 of our officers and teachers attended one or more of our leadership training schools. This means that one out of every four of our officers and teachers went to school some last year to learn how to better give religious education to our people. We will have even a greater growth in this respect this year.

THANK YOU

As promised an honor roll was on display during the sessions of the recent annual conference, showing those Sunday schools that observed Sunday School Day and gave an offering to our work. Only those schools that sent in their offering before the annual conference were listed and

North Carolina Conference

HERE AND THERE

The first one will be "there" because it's from Wilmington, and that's the "thitherest" place one can go on a Ford. A note from Harry Daniels, Wilmington, N. C., says we may expect co-operation from the Wilmington leaguers on getting league news for this space, so we're looking for an article of Wilmington news real soon.

Now here's another message. It's from Mrs. F. N. Bardin, Magnolia, N. C. She says they have a new league down there and they are beginning to do some things, but she wants some information about what a new league ought to do. Never mind what information she got—if she didn't get what she wanted, she was told of some one who knew. You'd be surprised, too, some of your older leaguers, how easily you would be run up a tree by some fundamental questions about league work that these new leaguers are asking. We hope they were answered to some advantage. If not, we'll try again. The Magnolia leaguers had their first business meeting Friday night, October 26, and we are told that we will get a report soon.

Look what's happened on Spring Hope circuit. A new league has been organized at Stanhope with Miss Waite as president. We "hope" it will "Stand(d)." If you doubt it, just "Wait(e)" and see. Then, too, since it's on such a good circuit, we think it will "Spring" forward and give new "Hope" to other leagues. A letter from down there asks some questions, too, and we attempted an answer. The new leaguers also were kind enough to invite the writer to meet with them on Sunday, October 28. We are sorry, however, that this pleasure must be foregone.

All leaguers of the New Bern district, and especially of the Wayne County Union, will be very sorry to hear of Frank Parker's accident a short time ago. Frank had started to drive a nail when at a glance blow the nail flew back and put out his left eye. I'm sure that Frank has the sympathy of every leaguer and their sincere hope that he will soon be able to be out again. Frank is the corresponding secretary of the Daniels Chapel League and one of the old standbys. I was glad to be in Goldsboro Sunday, October 21, and could see Frank. He seems to be getting along nicely and is in the best of spirits. We are wishing the best for you, Frank, old man.

Just a hint to the district secretaries: Don't you think that these columns could be well used for a message to your district and at the same time give some helpful ideas to the rest of us? L. D.

NEW LEAGUE AT RONES CHAPEL

A letter from Bro. R. E. Atkinson, Mount Olive circuit, says that the young folks at Rones Chapel have recently organized an Epworth League. They have only a few members to begin with, but they are all fine young people and there are lots of others who will be in the Rones Chapel League soon.

This is a great work and a splendid opportunity for the new leaguers to serve the Master. We are glad that the young folks on Mount Olive circuit are organizing for Christ, and we feel sure that great good will result from this "league of leaguers."

We also hope to see more news of the progress of this league on this page soon.

The officers so far are as follows:
President—Patrick Farmer.

Vice President—Carl Southerland.
Secretary—Frank Wells.
Treasurer—Miss Lola Wells.
Supt. First Dept.—Miss Carrie Williams.

Supt. Second Dept.—Miss Eliza Wells.

Strength to your arms, courage to your hearts, and wisdom to your heads. L. D.

WHAT ARE WE HERE FOR?

What are we here for? That is a question that every man has asked himself at some time or another in his life. As well as individuals we may well ask the question as leaguers. What will the answer be? Well, there have been almost as many answers as there were inquirers. There is this one thing that we may be certain of—that is, God has put us here for something, and we have not a life to waste for our own pleasure and profit, unless that pleasure be in service for Him. Where are we to serve and how? One good place is in the Epworth League. And how many of us there are in the league who are not really serving! Leaguers who have the true league spirit, and strive to carry out the league motto, "All for Christ," are making others happy and are happy themselves because they have the consciousness of knowing that they are doing what they are here for.

Read what this writer has to say in verse on the subject of "What Are We Here For?":

What are we here for, you and I,
As the long and wonderful days go by?
Each one stretching to us a hand
Filled with privilege high and grand;
Born of a meaning our lives must be,
God has His purpose in you and me.

We are here to sing of hope and cheer
When the skies are dark and the way seems drear;

We are here to be faithful and strong and true

To the work that lies to our hands to do;

To make for all that is noble and good,

And be true to the bonds of our brotherhood.

This are we here for, you and I,
As the long and wonderful days go by;
Welcome them gladly, for each one brings

The duty and beauty of common things;

And, as they unfold, shall unfolded be God's sown purpose in you and me.

ASHEVILLE UNION MEETING

The second Friday night in October was a most ideal night for an automobile ride. The night was clear and a beautiful new moon was shining so bright in the heavens. Although the air was cold it was invigorating.

One of the nicest places to go and one of the best things to go to was to Brevard to an Epworth League Union meeting. So off went cars from Asheville, West Asheville and Bltmore, carrying leaguers to Brevard. Arriving there at eight o'clock the travelers were given a real treat, a good lunch and plenty of hot coffee, which was greatly appreciated, especially by the ones that had come direct from their work, having to leave Asheville by six o'clock in order to reach Brevard by eight o'clock.

At eight-thirty the business meeting was taken up. Rev. Mr. Falls of Brevard conducted the devotional, but owing to the limited time the minutes of the September meeting were omitted. Reports of the chapter followed and it was very gratifying to see each chapter hand in a written report. The nominating committee's report was postponed until the November meet-

A total count of those present showed that one hundred and fifteen attended. This was considered very good, since the meeting was held forty-four miles from the chapters that comprise the union, and also owing to the fact that all leaguers did not have cars.

After the league benediction a very enjoyable social program was presented by the Brevard League, consisting of readings, piano and vocal solos. By nine-thirty all leaguers had started home with the conviction that they had had a very entertaining and profitable evening.

J. F. MOSER APPRECIATED

It is with reluctance that Cherryville charge yields to the mandate of our conference in giving up our beloved pastor, Rev. J. F. Moser. Six years of heroic service and success to crown his efforts have so endeared this saintly pastor to his congregations that his removal to another charge leaves all our hearts sore.

We extend thanks to Brother Moser with hearts overflowing with gratitude. Six years of his life clipped from the prime of his manhood he leaves with us; years of toil, hardship, self-denial, but fruitful years. We treasure these years as a precious jewel and look forward to a richer harvest as a result of these labors.

To his new congregation we commend him as one of the choice vessels God has chosen for usefulness in His kingdom. We congratulate you. You are receiving one of the great souls endowed with power from on high. Welcome him to your very heart.

CONFERENCE WEEK AT THE HOME

Martha M. Wood.

When conference comes to our town it has a peculiar interest to the Children's Home.

The Home is conference property—a beautiful and valuable property—and the children and their activities, their past experiences and future prospects, combine to make the most interesting possession that the church owns.

And The Home is now at a most interesting point of its development. The days of its struggling beginning—days of meager equipment, small support and makeshift buildings and few workers, are passing into brighter times of larger affairs and more adequate possessions.

Looking back on the past, we can not be too grateful to those of our predecessors who, with scant outfit and heavy anxieties, spent their best energies and most strenuous stunts of intellect to make one dollar do the work of two—or maybe five.

A citizen of Winston said once, in speaking of Mr. Walter Thompson, that when he saw Mr. Thompson skidding down the street on his way down town that he knew that he was on his way to hunt for bargains in supplies for the Children's Home.

Yes, somebody has to sweat, and sweat steadily, when one has assumed the responsibility for dependent children that have to be fed and clothed on limited resources.

Then, when bought, The Home grounds were mostly rough country fields—and oh, how heavy is dirt and rocks and stumps that have to be moved shovelful by shovelful, and load by load! There is many a spade stroke and pick lick under the smooth green lawns and gravel driveways.

John M. said that when he was a little boy working around the place, the grounds had little grass and that there were long borders of flower beds by the walks, and that it was one of his jobs to keep them free from weeds. And to this day John never sees a bed of flowers without a haunting memory of backache.

And the old cottages that were bought with the place were small and unsuitable for dormitories and were soon over full; for it is very difficult to shut the door in the face of a child that needs a home if he can be crowded in. The church had not learned to deal out abundant cash on fifth Sundays and ten per cent collections, and I imagine that when bare necessities were bought there was not only no unspent money in the cash drawer but also often a debt in the bank.

Bare necessities! Some folks would be shocked to get first hand experience in the real bareness of "bare necessities."

A matron of a cottage of small girls in the earliest days of The Home said that her cottage had only one comb. Of course most of us can remember when the average family spoke of a comb as "the comb," and were unsuspecting, in the use of it, of any exchange of germs; but I imagine that the one comb of a dormitory was inconveniently busy at primping time!

But matrons were too busy in The Home's pioneer days to pause and worry over any one deficiency. With a lengthy towel securely hung on its roller a powerful bar of soap in the wash-room and the cottage comb circulating competently, they did wonders in the way of faces clean and hair smooth.

Walter Biggs, Methodist Orphanage graduate, now a freshman at Trinity College. Has dedicated his life to the ministry.

And, as Mr. Efrd said once when he came to fix a leaking faucet, luxuries sometimes multiply a man's bothers.

We are still living "the simple life" in many ways, but The Home had attained the luxuries of individual toilet necessities long before my day, and soap, brushes and combs for each and Mrs. Thompson is generous in issuing all—so many bath and hand towels a week.

How everybody keeps his separate on his hook is probably an expert accomplishment for the little fellows—perhaps not absolutely without inaccuracies.

But I started to write about conference week, and have made a long digression.

Conference in town means to us mostly conference visitors out at The Home. Only the high school boys and girls got to attend a session of conference; but many visitors came out as opportunity offered, to see the children and the buildings and the grounds. Automobiles could be seen driving around the driveways most any time. Sunday afternoon was a very popular hour. Over at our house numerous old friends and acquaintances dropped in to pass a few words and exchange greetings.

Saturday afternoon The Home gave a short program of music and other numbers in the school auditorium to the conference.

By the opening hour the ball ground in front of the building was filled with automobiles and the arriving visitors, and the seating space inside the house was soon all filled and most of the standing room also. Some of us stood in the library room facing the platform and had an excellent view of the children.

The children marched in, all of them in line, the little ones in front, and passed across the stage and down to their class rooms on the side, and thence back and forth as they had to perform.

The little children, of course, attracted the most attention. Grouped for the songs, little Juanita, the smallest, stood in the center of the front row, with Dorothy, Polly, Mary Katherine, Eloise, Ruby Lee, and the rest of the littlest girls and boys—Lazell, Charles, George and the others scattered down the row. And they made a pretty sight, in their pretty dresses and suits and smiling faces. And my, how they did sing!

Little Juanita was too small to march, so when the line filed off Mr. Bradshaw lifted her down. She looked so sweet and cunning that several wanted to get her for keeps. But as her mother is very ill and gave her to The Home on that account, it would not be exactly kind to give her away under present circumstances.

The larger children looked exceedingly nice, too, and did their parts excellently. The boys are learning to sing as well as the girls, and what is more, they are learning to enjoy taking part in things.

Week before last a number of the larger boys gave an entertainment to the rest of us, and did some very fine stunts of gymnastic feats. Along with the other graceful performers of the occasion, a young clown in droll imitation of the others, added a note of amusement that highly delighted the small boys and girls on the front row.

Richard Haddock, Methodist Orphanage boy, now a senior at Trinity College. Will enter ministry.

The trick that pleased me best was a line of boys jumping skillfully and gracefully through a ring—a rubber tire held waist high by Eben.

At the close of the exhibition, Mr. Matthews, Scout director of our town, went up on the platform and presented the boys with the awards that they had won at the County Fair for the best collections of native woods and trees, and moths and insects.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Tennessee Annual Conference.—After personally visiting nine other annual conferences, it was with pleasure and anticipation that I turned toward the "Old Jerusalem," which convened at Clarksville, Tenn., on October 11. By previous arrangement, Thursday was appointed as the day on which the cause of the "forgotten man" would be presented, and Bishop McMurray and I arrived that morning in good time for the program.

At 11:20 Bishop Mouzon requested the conference to stand and sing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Immediately following the hymn he announced that the time had come for the presentation of the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment. He called me to the platform and gave me full liberty to explain the plan. I think practically all of the preachers were in their places, quite a number coming in just as our program started. As I moved along through the analysis of the movement there was not a single indication of weariness or any lack of attention. This fact was very pleasing and indicated, I think, a heartfelt interest in the cause. I finished the explanation of the plan in about thirty minutes and sat down with the conviction that the method of procedure had been graciously received and fully approved by those present.

Bishop McMurry followed with an inspirational address of thirty minutes. In well chosen words he reviewed the development of the Board of Finance from the time of its creation at the General Conference held at Atlanta in May, 1918, and revealed the remarkable progress that had been made since that time in the work of the board. The conference responded heartily to his statement of this progress, and there was abundant evidence of appreciation.

In the course of his remarks Bishop McMurry emphasized the fact that the total minimum quota requested for superannuate endowment in this movement is approximately the same amount that the whole church is now assessed for the presiding elders and the pastors for one year. He said that we should respond with enthusiasm to an effort which looks to raise in five years for the benefit of the church's worn-out ministry the amount that is assessed for one year for the support of the church's active ministry. He also stated that his observations of the progress of the movement in his annual conferences led him to believe that a really great thing was about to be accomplished for the superannuates. He said he had just received a letter from one of his presiding elders stating as follows: "Bishop, you would be amazed to see how enthusiastically the twelve first quarterly conferences I have held to date have accepted their quotas and pledged themselves to raise them. I believe the movement for superannuate endowment is destined not only to meet with glorious success but also to thrill the church with a holy joy as she does the work."

Bishop McMurry rendered very valuable assistance at this conference, as he has been doing for several weeks at his own annual conferences. The "forgotten man" owes him a real debt for his willingness to serve their welfare at any cost to his personal comfort.

Bishop Mouzon, president of the conference, closed our program with a few words very much to the point. He told the brethren that he had said the Holston conference would be second to none in the returns on this movement and now stated that the same was true of the Tennessee conference. He stirred my blood when he told how these two conferences had outdistanced the St. Louis conference in other movements of the church and challenged the St. Louis conference to a contest for position in the matter of returns for superannuate endowment. I am a member of the St. Louis conference, and I have never been able to feel comfortable while being licked doing anything. Bishop Mouzon put the case squarely up to Bishop McMurry, president of the St. Louis conference, and to me, and we must meet the issue or take a lickin'. Come on, boys of the St. Louis, the "Old Jerusalem" is after us! Let us make them know that we have iron in our blood.

After the completion of our program, I spent several hours in Clarksville, talking with the brethren on the subject that lies so near to my heart. My meeting with the conference Board of Finance was a benediction to me. The brethren were exceedingly cordial, and every one expressed a confidence in the success of our movement which was heartening. In the hotel rotunda I talked with numerous connectional officers, and they without exception spoke encouragingly of the work in behalf of the "forgotten man." I said to one of them, "We are going to get a lot of money," and he replied: "You are going to get that ten million dollars and more." It was very pleasing to have such statements from men whose minds are so thoroughly centered on other financial movements, and I wish in every way possible to reciprocate their broad-mindedness by assisting the program which they have for doing the things committed to them.

A great many preachers of the Tennessee conference sought me out personally and stated emphatically that they would do everything in their power to have their respective charges pay their quotas. A number of laymen expressed themselves to me as being heartily in favor of the movement to take care of our superannuates and said they would see to it that the charges which they represent would not fail to do their part.

I left Clarksville with the same positive conviction that has been mine when leaving nine other annual conferences personally visited by me this fall—namely, that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is rallying to the cause of the "forgotten man" with a fixed purpose to meet the issue squarely and fully.

The Last Thought of Bishop Francis Asbury.—According to the Adult Student, issue of September, 1923, the last annual conference held by Bishop Asbury was the Tennessee conference, which convened at Bethlehem church, near Lebanon, Tenn., in October, 1815. That was one hundred and eight years ago. The bishop was so feeble that it was necessary for him to call on Bishop McKendree to preside in his stead; but Bishop Asbury did participate in the ordination of deacons and preached to the conference on Sunday morning. At the close of the conference he made this pathetic record in his journal: "My eyes fail; I resign the stations to Bishop McKendree; I will take away my feet."

It was the purpose of Bishop Asbury to be at the General Conference which met at Baltimore in May, 1816, and he left the Tennessee conference with this in mind. The weather was stormy, the bishop was feeble and progress was exceedingly slow. It took more than three months to reach Richmond, Va., where he arrived on March 18, 1816. He immediately announced that he would preach on the following Sabbath at the old First Methodist church, now Trinity. His friends endeavored to dissuade him, but he refused to listen to them, saying he had a special call to give testimony in that place. He was so feeble in body that it was necessary to carry him to the church, and he remained seated while speaking, but his voice was sustained while he spoke for nearly one hour. The bishop's condition and his message so impressed his hearers that many times the audience was brought to tears. This message, delivered on March 24, 1816, was his last sermon and was from the text in Romans ix. 28: "For he will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness, because a short work the Lord will make upon the earth."

On Tuesday morning, March 26, the bishop continued his journey toward Baltimore, traveling with his companion, John Wesley Bond. They moved in stages in a coach, making slow progress. On Friday they reached the home of George Arnold, a few miles southwest of Fredericksburg. The bishop was so weak and so ill that they were compelled to stop. Everything possible was done for him, but the brave old soldier was fighting his last battle. At four o'clock on Sunday afternoon, March 31, 1816, he claimed the victory and went forth to receive his crown.

Just as the last thoughts of our Lord on the cross were for others, so were the last thoughts of Bishop Asbury not for himself. He had started sometime before an offering for the

THE ELEPHANT'S KEEPER

"Now is it time for the train?" demanded Paul. It was the tenth time that he had asked the question.

"In a few minutes now," answered his mother.

"Then I can go," Paul shouted.

"Now you may go," agreed his mother. "Don't get in daddy's way or in the animals' way either, will you?"

"I'll try not to," Paul promised. "But you can't tell when it's animals: I love animals. When I'm as big as daddy I'm going to be an elephant trainer just like him. I guess I could most manage an elephant now."

His mother laughed and kissed him. "Better leave it to daddy yet awhile. But I hope that you will grow into as brave and good a man as daddy."

"How can I learn to do that?" Paul asked.

"By being a brave, good boy. There's the whistle. Run!"

Without waiting for his hat, Paul dashed out of the house and down the street to the station to meet the train that was bringing the circus animals back to Bridgeport to their winter home. It was always to Paul the most exciting day of the year, not only because of the bears and camels and elephants, but because it brought his father back to him.

The train came in and the animal cars were shunted down the track into the circus yard. No one was allowed in the yard except those that had the care of the animals, but everyone knew Paul and he skipped in without any trouble.

"Where's my daddy?" he asked of the first man he met. It happened to be old Mike, who loved to tease.

"Sure, your daddy decided not to come back," he said.

"Isn't he ever coming back?" Paul asked.

"You ask him the next time you see him," Mike laughed. He was only teasing, for Paul's father had come on the train and was busy just now with an elephant that needed his attention.

Mike went his way and Paul loitered through the yard. If his father had not come, there wasn't much fun in the animals.

One after another the beasts found their places in their homes, but there was no father for Paul. He had a queer, disappointed feeling in his throat as he turned to go home. He wanted very much to cry, but he remembered what his mother had said. If he wanted to be a brave man he must be a brave boy, and brave boys never cried. He tried to whistle but did not get on very well, and then as he turned a corner he stopped.

There, close to a flat car, all alone, lay Japhet, the biggest elephant, the one his father had the most trouble with. Japhet looked as if he could trouble now, for his trunk was moving in a cross sort of way.

Paul ran back and called, but no one came. Every one was in another part of the yard.

Back to Japhet came Paul, his heart beating fast. Japhet was moving now, he was going to get up, and once on his feet without any one to control him, he would be on the rampage. He might hurt somebody.

"O daddy, daddy! where are you?" cried Paul. "It's your elephant. They'll blame you if he hurts any one. Lie down, Japhet!"

Japhet recognized Paul, for he had often seen him before, but he wasn't going to lie down for a word from a boy. If any one wanted him to lie down, let him give the proper signal by tapping his right ear. He made another move to get up.

Paul knew the signal for lying down but Japhet's big ear was far out of his reach. There was no long stick about that would reach so far; only a tiny twig that Paul picked up.

"What can I do?" he cried. "It's daddy's elephant and daddy isn't here so I've got to keep Japhet from going on the rampage."

Then as Paul saw how close Japhet lay to the flat car he had a sudden thought. Still holding his twig, he scrambled up on the car and with a running jump landed on the big elephant's back. Japhet paused in astonishment at this unexpected visitor, and Paul ran up the broad back as if it were a hill and came down flat astride the elephant's neck.

Then Japhet began to rise and Paul thought that he was going to have a horse-back ride on a rampaging elephant. He looked out anxiously for help, but no one was near. Paul leaned forward and with his switch gently tapped the old elephant's right ear.

Old Japhet stood stock still a moment on his knees, and then obeying the order that he knew from his master's son, he sank slowly down again. He was not going to rampage this time.

Paul sat on his high perch until some one came running. It was his father, who had just found out that no one had looked after Japhet, and who came expecting to find the old elephant doing his worst. When he saw Japhet lying like a meek lamb with Paul on his back he gave a shout of joy and held out his arms to his son. Paul gladly slid down into them.

"How did you get up there?" he asked Paul.

"From the car," Paul said. "He was going to rampage and you weren't here, and I had to reach his ear. He minded me, didn't he? But I'm glad you came, daddy, for he's awful high up."

His father held him very close. "You're your father's son," he said. "It's the pluckiest thing I ever heard of a kid doing."

Japhet was put in his own safe place then, and Paul and his father raced home to his mother.

"Here's the new elephant keeper," his father told her, "and I tell you what, he's the bravest man in the whole bunch of us."—The China Christian Advocate.

An Eye to Business.

The little daughter of a congressman was sitting one evening on her father's knee. She had a new little brother whom she regarded with wonder, as children do regard the latest usurper before they have learned to love him.

"Today," said the father, "a man offered to give me a whole roomful of gold for little brother. Shall I sell him?"

The child shook her head. "But," said the father, "think how many nice things a roomful of gold would buy! Don't you think I better let the man have him?"

"No," answered the girl, thoughtfully, "let's keep him till he's older; he'll be worth more then."—Harper's Magazine.

She was new, as a driver. She just missed the fire hydrant, ran over the curb and brought her electric finally to a stop in front of a sidewalk filling station.

"Bring out your scales, please," she said.

"Scales?" queried the tank tender, puzzled.

"Yes," she replied. "See how many pounds of air I need in my tires."—Automotive Merchandising.

"GOD CREATED SIN"

The article of Mr. Harry Daniels in your issue of October 18th, asserting that God created sin, is news to the world. Students of theological systems will be astounded at such an assertion. If his assertion is true then we must reconstruct our theology and adjust ourselves to a situation that involves the character of the God of the Bible.

Will you allow me space to deny the allegation and assert that it is illogical, also contrary to the teachings of the Bible and the Arminian system of theology that is received by the Methodist church and contrary to common sense.

The Devil is the author of sin. God had nothing to do with its origin. He has ever been the constant and persistent enemy of sin. Sin is the act of a free moral being. God created angels as free moral beings. The Devil was once a holy angel. An act of rebellion on his part made the Devil the first sinner and the enemy of his Maker.

Adam and Eve, the first human pair, were created holy, free moral beings. Under temptation they disobeyed God and became the first sinners of the human family. Sin on this planet originated in the Garden of Eden from the disobedient acts of two created free moral beings.

The logic of Mr. Daniels is exposed to ridicule when he asserts that God created sin, in the fact that sin is the act of a moral being and not something that God has created. Really, it was impossible for God to create sin. He can create angels and men, but He cannot create sin. Angels and men can disobey God by voluntary acts of disobedience and thus cause sin.

In the creation of free moral beings there was the possibility of these beings going wrong and thus cause sin to become a fact, but God cannot be connected with the acts of these creatures in bringing about sin.

Mr. Daniels must be a theologian in embryo, whose illogical deductions are contrary to truth, contrary to logic, contrary to the theology, contrary to the Bible, and inconsistent with common sense. Pro Veritatis, W. O. Butler.

CONFERENCE CLAIMANTS

worn-out preachers and their dependents. From place to place he solicited contributions to this fund. The last request he made was that this sum might be counted. He then raised his feeble arms and gave expression to his feeling of triumph and victory.

Out of the difficult beginnings of a hundred years ago, in which Bishop Asbury had such a prominent part, Methodism has come to her present potency of many millions of members, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has 2,500,000 of them. It is unthinkable that Southern Methodists, remembering the power and persistence of one so great as Bishop Asbury and under the thrill of his concern for the superannuated preachers expressed almost with his dying words, will not fail to do her whole duty for the cause of the "forgotten man."

A correspondent who has recently returned from Florida writes that he witnessed this amusing incident on the train. A huge, red-faced conductor asked a little dried-up passenger for his ticket. The little man couldn't find it and at last the conductor said, "Now, look-a-heah, you've just got one of three things to do. You can pay your fare, produce your ticket, or get off the train."

Just then the embarrassed little man found the missing pasteboard. Presenting it to his florid opponent, he grinned, threw back his shoulders and said, mockingly, "Now look-a-heah, you've just one of three things to do. You can exercise more, eat less, or bust."—Boston Transcript.

Letter from Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, to the children of the Methodist Orphanage, Raleigh, N. C.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

December 23, 1913

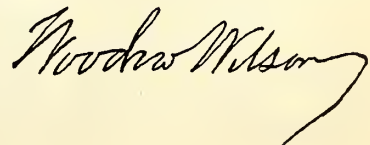

My dear Little Friends:

I wish with all my heart that I could send you your good friend Secretary Daniels to be with you on Christmas Day, but, unhappily, he is obliged in conscience to be here on that day. He will, however, be free to come after Christmas and expects, I believe, to be in Raleigh on Saturday, I cannot help hoping that this arrangement instead of depriving you of your usual Christmas pleasures will really give you two Christmases, Thursday and Saturday. We have learned to have as warm an affection for Secretary Daniels as evidently you have and I am going to take the liberty of sending you all my love through him.

With wishes for a very merry double Christmas,

Faithfully yours,

Children of M. E. Orphanage,

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Springs,
Box 4B, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

During the session of the annual conference Mr. G. L. Hackney, president of the Western North Carolina Conference Wesley Bible Class Federation, called together a meeting of the federation officers in executive session. At this meeting Mrs. E. O. Chandley, recording secretary, presented a resolution in honor of the memory of Mr. Dorman Thompson, who was our vice president. The gist of this resolution read, "That we, the members of the executive committee of the Wesley Bible Class Federation of the Western North Carolina Conference, assembled in executive session, take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of the life of Dorman Thompson. It was rich in achievements in both church and state. His dominant characteristic was the helpfulness to his fellowmen. In his associations for a quarter of a century with the church and the business life of his state his towering character and high Christian purpose endeared him to thousands of our people. He was rich in the love and loyalty of his friends. We miss him."

In place of our fallen vice president, Hon. Clyde R. Hoey, teacher of the Men's Wesley Bible Class in Central Methodist church, Shelby, was elected. It will be remembered that Mr. Hoey was one of the features of our Wesley Bible Class Federation at Lake Junaluska last July when he delivered a masterful address on the opening session of our meeting. We are glad to claim Clyde Hoey.

A GOOD SECRETARY

Mr. Ralph D. Moffitt of the First Methodist Sunday school of Lexington is one of the most efficient secretaries I know. He not only keeps the records true and clear, but keeps them before the six departments of his school. At the close of the recent conference year he presented the following year's summary. First percentage attendance:

Junior Department	.....78
Cradle Roll	.....63
Beginners' Department	.....60
Primary Department	.....55
Young People-Adult Dept.	.....53
Intermediate-Senior Dept.	.....52

The following average offering per person per Sunday for the entire year was listed:

Intermediate-Senior Dept.,	11 cents.
Young People-Adult Dept.,	9 cents.
Junior Dept.,	5 1-2 cents.
Beginners' Dept.,	5 cents.
Cradle Roll,	3 1-2 cents.
Primary Dept.,	3 cents.
Total offering per Sunday,	$27.43.
Total offering for the year,	$1,426.47.
Average offering per person per Sunday,	7 cents.

CHARLOTTE

Beginning Sunday afternoon, November 4, at three o'clock, the Methodists and Presbyterians of Charlotte and vicinity will come together in their first Co-operative Standard Training School. The school will be held in the Second Presbyterian church and will offer the following courses and instructors:

Sunday School Organization and Administration—Dr. Gilbert Glass.
Principles of Teaching—Prof. C. T. Carr.
Pupil Study—Dr. W. H. Fraser.
Program of Christian Religion—Dr. C. C. Weaver.

Intermediate - Senior Organization and Administration—Mrs. B. H. Bunch.
Junior Organization and Administration—Miss Virginia Jenkins.

Primary Organization and Administration—Mrs. W. B. Ferguson.

Beginner Organization and Administration—Mrs. Charles Van Noppen.

Story Telling—Mrs. G. W. Green.

Mr. J. B. Ivey is president of the board of managers of this school and your humble servant will act as educational director. It is expected that an attendance of 600 will be recorded.

Send us your order for Christmas cards.

Your children's food

The foods your children eat today, determine their strength and health in later years.

Remember this; they must have well balanced meals. Their food should contain the right amount of mineral salts. These salts act as bone building material. They furnish the different fluids and juices that help keep the tissues young—the body strong and active.

Bakings that are made of good plain white flour and baking powder contain a large amount of mineral salts. Allow your children to eat hardy of these bakings together with fruits and dairy products. This forms an ideal food balance.

When making quick rising breads and pastries such as: biscuits, muffins, cakes, waffles, etc., don't fail to use Calumet—the economy Baking Powder. It contains more than the ordinary leavening strength—it's the purest and surest leavener made. That's why it helps make your flour foods light and easily digested.

Millions of mothers use Calumet daily because they are interested in their children's welfare—their present and future health.

IN MEMORIAM

HARRELL—Sister Susan Harrell born July 23, 1854, passed to her reward September 30, 1923, after a lingering illness. She joined the church when only a child and lived a faithful Christian life to the end. She married Everett Harrell in early womanhood and to this union were born 13 children, 11 of whom are now living. She was spoken of very kindly by all who knew her. She is gone but not forgotten.
T. W.

BYRD—M. T. Byrd died July 4, 1923, at the age of seventy-seven years. On January 22, 1871, he was happily married to Miss Angelina Gardner. To them were born seven children, all of whom are living except one son. He joined the Methodist church in early manhood and was ever a faithful member. For several years he served faithfully as a steward. He will be greatly missed by the church and community. He had been afflicted for some time, but he bore his suffering faithfully to the end. He is now at rest while loved ones are left to mourn. May our heavenly Father bless and comfort them all.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His love and wisdom removed from us on the 4th of October, 1923, Mrs. Eula Cole Riddle, one of the most loved and devoted members of the young woman's Wesley Bible class of the Sanford Methodist church; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we cherish her memory in the coming years and try as best we can to follow the example of her who in all Christian work was ever faithful and diligent and contributed cheerfully and liberally of her time and means to His cause.

Second, We thank our heavenly Father for her noble Christian life and, while we grieve at her going, we bow in submission to His will.

Third That we extend to her family and loved ones our heartfelt sympathy in the time of their bereavement.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread on the minutes of our class record and a copy sent to the Advocate.

Mrs. S. T. Ingram,
Miss Margaret Tabor,
Miss Effie Crabtree,
Miss Judith Ross,
Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Mrs. A. L. Klutz was born December 23, 1838, died April 6, 1923. She was the oldest member of the missionary society of which she had been a member for years. On account of ill health she had not been able to attend in body, but her thoughts and best wish for her society were always present. She loved her church and was a faithful member, of which she had belonged since a young girl. She was a quiet, faithful woman, a devoted mother and loved by all who knew her.

Whereas, God in His wisdom and love saw fit to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Klutz, be it resolved:

That the Woman's Missionary Society of Matthews M. E. church extend our sympathies to the children and friends. While we miss her we feel that what is our loss is her gain. Also that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, and a copy be spread in the minutes of our society.

Mrs. T. L. Funderburk,
Miss Mattie McLaughlin,
Mrs. M. H. Lemmond,
Committee.

PRESSLEY—Mrs. Zena McElrath Pressley was born September 22, 1902. She departed this life July 6, 1923. She was married to Mr. Ernest Pressley July 16, 1921. She is survived by her husband and infant son, Howard, and her father and mother, Travis and Emma McElrath; also by three brothers and sisters.

She was converted at the early age of 12 years and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Panther Creek. She lived in a way that no one ever doubted her Christianity.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Making new capital work for the South

The margin between the cost of producing transportation and the price received for it is so small that it requires the utmost efficiency of management, and the most carefully directed expenditure of new capital, to safeguard even a small return on the investment.

In no other large business enterprise is so great an amount of capital risked for so small a return as in railroad transportation.

The $285,000,000 of new money that has been put into the Southern Railway System in the past twenty years has been largely devoted to increasing capacity and promoting operating efficiency.

We receive many requests for the elimination of grade crossings, the construction of monumental passenger stations, and other non-revenue-producing improvements. The communities we serve naturally desire to have as much of this work done as can be safely financed, but they have recognized that their interests will best be served by expenditures which produce more and better transportation.

It is only because new capital has been expended on productive improvements that the Southern Railway System today is an efficient transportation machine and an asset to the South.

New $3,500,000 bridge, crossing the Ohio River into Cincinnati, one of the northern gateways of the Southern Railway System.

Southern Railway System deposits in Southern banks an average of $150,500 each banking hour.

The SOUTHERN SERVES THE SOUTH

She was a very efficient school teacher in the public schools of Haywood county. Many of her students showed the high esteem they had for her by standing around the casket weeping.

She loved her church, home and preacher. She worked in the church in various ways. She was a good daughter and a good wife and mother. May God ever bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

Her former pastor,
J. M. Green.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Harrison church, Pineville charge, has for the third time during the year 1923 been called upon to mourn the passing into the great beyond of three of its most loyal officers and most beloved and faithful members. It is with hearts filled with grief that we must chronicle the death of Mr. William T. Robinson, a man in deed and in truth loved by all; a great, generous heart that provided for widows and orphans—whose heart and life always kept youthful, feeling the most devoted interest in the young manhood of our country, and greatly loved by the little children. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we, the members of Harrison church, are filled with sorrow over the empty seat that was always occupied.

Second, That we endeavor to emulate his great, generous heart, his genial smile, his cordial handshake, and his daily effort to do service for others.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy be sent to the North Carolina Advocate and a copy sent to the bereaved companion with whom we greatly sympathize.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, our heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom has removed from our midst on August 6, 1923, our much loved friend and co-worker, Thomas Neal McConnell; therefore be it resolved:

First, That the Junior Epworth League of Triplett church of which he was a member, wish to record our sincere love and appreciation of the devotion and loyalty of this earnest young member.

Second, That we will ever cherish the memory of his noble young life and strive to bring into our own lives the beautiful traits of character that was his, and that made his life so sweet and beautiful.

Third, That we extend to the bereaved family our love and sympathy, and commend them to the loving care of our heavenly Father.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, the N. C. Christian Advocate, the Mooresville Enterprise for publication and a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Epworth League.

FIRST CHURCH, ELIZABETH CITY, N. C., WHERE THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE WILL HOLD ITS ANNUAL MEETING NOVEMBER 14-19. THE CHURCH WITH ITS FURNISHINGS IS VALUED AT $175,000. REV. N. H. D. WILSON, D. D., IS THE PASTOR

"THE ALBEMARLE COUNTRY"

That section of North Carolina which lies beyond the Albemarle Sound is to the average man of the middle and western parts of the state a land veiled in romance and enchantments not a few. He forgets, if he ever knew of the flat woods which have been the habitat of goats and "pinerooter" hogs, and lets his imagination run riot at "Kill Devil Hill," where the Wright Bros. a little more than twenty years ago flew the first heavier-than-air machine, or he remembers Hatteras, where the storm king has builded his throne and established the "graveyard of the sea."

Or it may be that he remembers the distant years. Then the poem of Sir Thomas Moore comes to mind, a stanza of which runs like this:

They made her a grave too cold and damp,
For a heart so warm and true.
She has gone to the lake of the Dismal Swamp,
Where by the light of a firefly lamp
She paddles her white canoe.

Or one with the soul of a poet can enter into the finer musing of T. N. Ivey who wrote:

I listened to the sobbing of the surf on the white sand, and heard the muffled booming of the breakers at Nag's Head. I gazed upon the marsh and sand sleeping under the blue sky, unflecked by a single cloud. I looked upon the ancient trees festooned by the tangled vines, and breathed the delicious odor of thousands of wild roses. But in the midst of all this beauty I almost found myself looking for a lost child named Virginia Dare.

In the early morning hours I first saw the island; in the early morning hours I left it. The dew was still on the grass and the sheen of sunlight was upon the water. With the northeast wind filling the sails, we ploughed through the blue waters of Albemarle Sound; and when we came over against Kitty Hawk, I turned my eyes southward to where Roanoke Island lay like a line of blue mist against the horizon, and my heart said an affectionate adieu to the land of Virginia Dare.

Elizabeth City is the metropolis of this enchanted land. The city with a history that runs far back bears few marks of age. Even the Pasquotank river which lies lazily along the eastern border of the town gives no evidences of the milleniums that have passed over its placid waters. This chief city of the Albemarle country is a hustling, up-to-date commercial city with a social life rooted in a refined and splendid past.

The conference has been a frequent and delighted visitor to Elizabeth City. It met there in 1895, the first year after the transfer of that territory to the North Carolina conference, again in 1898, then in 1910. Now after an interval of thirteen years the conference returns for the fourth time within eighteen years. Bishop Wilson presided in 1895, Bishop Fitzgerald in 1898, Bishop Hendrix in 1910, and now Bishop Collins Denny will be the presiding bishop.

It is a long leap across the years from the "Albemarle Country" as it is today to December 18, 1782, when Jesse Lee wrote in his journal as follows:

E. Dromgoole preached at Yoepim church to a large congregation of attentive hearers. We then rode home with the Reverend Mr. Pettigrew, near Edenton, and spent the night with him. Our journey in the lowlands from Edenton to Norfolk county in Virginia and back again has taken sixteen days, in which time we had nineteen meetings; chiefly among people who were not acquainted with Methodists; but the general wish was that we should return again; and we so far succeeded in our plans as to form a circuit which was called Camden.

THOMAS NEAL IVEY

"Lineage, surroundings, temperament and training contributed to the making of Thomas Neal Ivey, teacher, preacher, editor and gentleman. Deeply rooted in a notable past, well environed in the home and without, wonderfully sensitive to the delicate intimations in the sight and sounds of nature, and finely trained in the schools and in the discipline of after years, each passing decade found him passing into ever enlarging circles of influence and usefulness."

So writes M. T. Plyler in a sympathetic and discriminating article in the October number of "The Methodist Quarterly Review." This eminent member of the North Carolina conference, so dearly loved by his brethren, will be sorely missed at Elizabeth City.

Vividly do we recall now in front of Edenton Street church Sunday afternoon just before the memorial service of the last conference this "golden hearted" man said to the writer: "My plan is to buy a home in Raleigh and when this quadrennium is out to come here and rest." But his plans were not fulfilled. Our plans seldom are. God did not let him rest, but called him fresh from the grind of the editorial tasks. His rest was deferred till he joined the General Assembly of the Church of the Firstborn.

His brethren with tender and bowed hearts will in memorial session on Sunday afternoon of conference pay tribute to his memory, and as a strange coincidence it will be hard by the land of Virginia Dare.

Follow thou me; "I am the way, the truth, and the life." Without the way there is no going; without truth there is no knowing; without the life there is no living.—Thomas A. Kempis.

ATTENTION, PREACHERS AND DELEGATES, NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

The committee on entertainment at Elizabeth City sent to each preacher, delegate, board member and others who are expected in any capacity to attend the North Carolina conference sessions at the place from the bounds of the conference a return postal card asking information about when and how you would come. All who have not yet replied will please write me at once the day and hour of arrival and mode of travel. We are going to open our homes wide to all who are authorized to attend and wish we could go beyond and open them to all who want to attend and would if it were feasible. But those who are authorized to attend in any capacity will be given our hearty welcome.

When you arrive in our city we will meet you if we know when you are coming. If we fail to meet you go first to the church. Even if you are met by personal friends who are expecting to entertain you, go first to the church; so that you may be registered and we may know that you have arrived. No directory will be printed and it is possible that you may not be informed until your arrival who will entertain you, but have faith. If you have notified us of your intended arrival, we will be waiting for you with as satisfactory an assignment as in the nature of the case we can provide. If you come without notifying us, and are authorized to expect entertainment in any capacity or for any reason, we will provide for you the best we can even if you have failed to return our card. I shall be grateful if all official visitors, candidates for admission, secretaries and so forth, who are authorized to expect entertainment, but whose names I do not have, who see this, will write me at once of their intention to come and the hour and method of their coming.

Automobiles from up state can reach Elizabeth City by two or three routes, all of which are somewhat round about ways. I will not try to outline them. Enquiry will have to be made in each case to ascertain the best way. So I will leave it there.

The Norfolk Southern Railway has shown zeal for the comfort of the travelers and we have promise of extra cars and extra sleepers to assure you as comfortable a trip as may be. At this end of the line we are trying to think up ways in which we can make your stay comfortable and happy. If you think of anything, write to me and I will thank you for your idea even if we do not incorporate it in our plans.

But be sure to notify us of the time and method of your arrival.

Faternally, N. H. D. Wilson.

MURDER, ROBBERY, DARING ESCAPES

A dare devil early last Saturday morning entered the store of Mr. A. W. Kaplan on South Elm street, Greensboro, and because he refused a desired loan of cash shot and clubbed the proprietor of the store so that he died Sunday night. Immediately following the crime this desperado leaped into an automobile and compelled the driver at the point of a pistol to take him in all haste out of town.

This man is just one of a class and a constantly growing class of criminals. Murders, robberies, daring hold-ups at the point of the pistol followed by escape in a waiting automobile, or by compelling some man under threat of death to carry the culprit to a place where he can effect his escape, occur with alarming frequency in all parts of the country.

Why have we fallen upon these evil days unknown to our fathers? Of course the automobile has become a means for rapid escape, but the automobile did not train the criminal for these crimes. But for more than fifteen years we have had in every town and hamlet of this nation a school in gun play, daring robberies, hairbreadth escapes and pretty much every sort of crime that is commonly practiced today. This school is the moving picture house which has been guilty of showing such pictures. We are just now reaping the harvest of these years of sowing. The vicious boys are putting into practice what they saw or got the inspiration for in the "movies." "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

BISHOP COLLINS DENNY, WHO WILL PRESIDE OVER THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE AT ELIZABETH CITY

THE GRAND OLD MAN OF GREENSBORO

Mr. J. A. Odell, pioneer merchant of Greensboro, the founder and builder of the "House of Odell," an outstanding hardware concern of the South, and for half a century a leader of his community and in his church, was eighty-two years of age last Sunday. Notwithstanding the rain he was at his accustomed place in church. His health is better now that it has been for several years.

We are inclined to link this sterling character and generous benefactor, whose pathway through the eventful years is a trail of glory, with Caleb of old who when 85 said: "As yet I am as strong this day as I was when Moses sent me: as my strength was then, even so is my strength now, both to go out and to come in."

Our congratulations are hereby extended to this great layman whose life through all the decades has been crowned with good deeds and who now at evening time enjoys all the lingering radiance and beauty of a golden day.

The Advocate has received its supply of Christmas cards. Order now and get first selections.

WHEN WILL THE SLAUGHTER CEASE ON THE HIGHWAYS OF NORTH CAROLINA?

A drunken negro last Saturday ran into a company of people on the public highway near Haw River, killed a little golden-haired girl, injured five other children and two women and did not even halt his deadly car.

If there is no law to send such a demon of the road to the electric chair, a statute should be enacted at the earliest possible date, or else the public will be compelled by some other method to protect itself from such criminal monsters.

A man, whether white or black, who deliberately kills little children with an automobile deserves to die.

Then there is the speed maniac. Daily, twice and thrice daily fatalities occur as a result of reckless and careless driving.

And these accidents of the road which result from careless or reckless driving are constantly on the increase. The people have reason to become alarmed on account of the present state of affairs. For no one, it matters not how careful he or she may be, is safe where there is an utter disregard of the rules of the road and of every law of safety as maintains at the present time on the public highways.

A constant patrol of the roads by "speed cops" may serve to reduce the number of these fatalities, but if eliminated entirely the man at the wheel must at all times keep his car within the limits of safety. It is a strange anomaly that a sane man should need an officer of the law to protect him from his own folly. But such appears to be the case.

Something must be done to remedy present conditions or else there will be mourning in every house as it was in Egypt amid the plagues. The automobile is a greater engine of death than were all the tanks on all the battlefields of Europe.

A good place to begin the reform is for every driver of a car to commence with himself. Then see that others adopt the same rule of careful driving. Let the courts be severe in the punishment of the lawbreakers. But let it be done according to law and not by a process of collecting fines by mail, a method that smells to heaven because of the graft connected therewith.

The October number of "The Methodist Quarterly Review," edited by Gilbert T. Rowe, is one of unusual merit. The contributed articles are:

"The Most Fundamental Fact of the Christian Faith," Wilbur F. Tillett.

"The Atonement: Its Rationale," Bishop H. M. Du Bose.

"The League of Nations Nonpartisan and Inevitable," Clough A. Waterfield.

"David Lloyd George," O. E. Brown.

"Belief in Miracles," N. H. Williams.

"The Miracles of Jesus," Chas. L. Brooks.

"Thomas Neal Ivey: Teacher, Preacher, Editor, Gentleman," Marion T. Plyler.

"Belle H. Bennett—Leader Among Women," Mrs. R. W. MacDonell.

"Mars Hill and Calvary; or, Paul's Answer to the Appeal of European Problems," Charles R. Foster.

"Blood; The Cult of the Dead," A. H. Godbey.

Good people who are unduly alarmed about Biblical criticism might do well to read Dr. Tillett's contribution in this number. "Like Precious Faith," by the editor, rings clear as a bell and "carries" like the blast of a bugle. The number is worth many times 50 cents, the price of a copy.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

First church, Shelby, this week broke dirt for their new $100,000 church. Rev. A. L. Stanford is the popular pastor.

Rev. H. M. Jackson is closing up a great year on the Straits circuit. Success has attended the labors of this zealous pastor.

The Greensboro College Glee Club began its annual tour Tuesday evening, November 6, at the University of North Carolina.

The Virginia conference at its recent session voted to appropriate $7,000 annually for four years for the Richmond Christian Advocate. This is what we call standing by the church paper in a way that spells the largest success.

Rev. H. B. Porter has had Rev. P. B. Robinson of the Northampton charge assisting him in a meeting at Warrenton. The revival was largely attended and the people greatly pleased with the preaching of Brother Robinson.

Rev. G. M. Daniels writes: "Some of us have just turned over to 'M. T.' a purse with which to get himself a 'conference outfit'—a gift from the preachers of the district, expressing in a very inadequate way our appreciation of him as a presiding elder, and as a man among us, a fellow-laborer."

The death list in Holston begins early. Rev. George D. French died at his home in Morristown, Tenn., last week aged eighty years. He was on the superannuate list. The funeral service was conducted by Revs. E. E. Wiley, N. W. Watson, W. E. Browning and J. H. Parrott.—Methodist Advocate.

We deeply sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. Scott E. Shuping, Greensboro, in the loss of Rose Irene, their 18-months-old daughter, who died last Monday from an attack of colitis. The little girl had been ill one week. The funeral services were conducted Tuesday morning by Rev. L. B. Hayes, pastor of Park Place church.

That was a tragic and deplorable occurrence on the York road below Charlotte, N. C., when Spencer Tanner was instantly killed as the automobile in which he was riding and which was driven by his companion, W. C. Dowd, Jr., left the track and rolled down a high embankment. He was a son of Mr. S. B. Tanner, 22 years of age, and a young man of promise. The father and other members of the stricken family have the sympathy of a host of friends.

Out of New Bern comes the following interesting news item: "Rev. W. V. McRae, pastor of Centenary Methodist church, will leave the local pastorate immediately after the annual conference to take up special student work in Boston, he stated recently, adding that it would be the fulfillment of a plan he had decided on several years ago. In Boston he expects to secure a pastorate that will enable him to give a large portion of his time to his studies. Mrs. McRae and their little daughter will accompany him."

We are happy to have Rev. C. F. Sherrill and his splendid wife locate in our town and become affiliated with Central church. No finer family ever came to Shelby and none ever received a more whole-hearted welcome. No braver, true and more royal souls ever walked our earth than our superannuated preachers and their wives; we should hear them, love them and pray for them. Let it never be said again that the man who has given his life to the service of God and His church is a "forgotten man." Great will be their reward when He shall come to make up His jewels.—Bulletin of Central Methodist Church, Shelby.

Walt Holcomb, who expected to leave this month for an evangelistic tour of the Orient, has had his engagements in Japan and Korea cancelled on account of the earthquake. Bishop H. A. Boaz had arranged for a six months' campaign in his episcopal district, but cabled Dr. W. W. Pinson of the home board to cancel the engagement with Mr. Holcomb. The change of plans in the Orient will leave some dates open in Mr. Holcomb's slate, as he had planned to be away for the next six months. The evangelist has just closed a successful revival at Newman, Georgia. Brother Holcomb is now conducting evangelistic services in Goldsboro at St. Paul's M. E. Church, South, Rev. C. L. Read, pastor.

"Mr. and Mrs. Michael Bradshaw announce the marriage of their daughter, Margaret, to Mr. William Donald Linto, Jr., on Saturday, the third of November, nineteen hundred and twenty-three, Durham, North Carolina. At home after the tenth of November, Durham, North Carolina." Our best wishes and congratulations are hereby extended this happy young couple.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT, WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

Dear Pastors and Educational Collectors of the Western North Carolina Conference:

November 25th to December 2nd is the time set by the Board of Education and the conference for "Pay-Up Week" of all pledges now unpaid and due the Christian Education Movement in the Western North Carolina conference. Complete lists of the pledges made to the Christian Education Movement by your church are now being carefully made and mailed out to you. We believe our people are ready to respond to your call. May I offer the following suggestions:

1. Begin work on the list at once.
2. See or send a notice to every person on the list, who is due any amount. We will furnish you with blank subscription notices if desired.
3. Collector call on your pastor. Pastor announce from the pulpit that the third payment is due, and urge the people to pay their pledges promptly, since November 25th to December 2nd is the date which has been set by the Board of Education and the conference for "Pay-Up Week."
4. If you need help in collecting, appoint persons to aid you. Use the education committee of your church freely.
5. Urge each subscriber to make some payment, all that is due if possible, if not possible to pay all, then as much as he can.
6. If any subscriber has died, or any name is wrong on the list, please notify me at once.

The local church collector and the pastor are now the most important factors in the Christian Education Movement. If we fail to collect the pledges, then all of our efforts are in vain. Only the collector and pastor can do this. With splendid loyalty our pastors and collectors have stood by the Christian Education Movement up to this time. You will NOT fail us NOW.

W. O. Goode, Secretary-Treasurer,
Christian Education Movement, W. N. C. Conf.

CONFERENCE HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The North Carolina Conference Historical Society will meet in First church, Elizabeth City, on the evening of November 13th, at 8 o'clock. Dr. R. F. Bumpas will be the speaker of the evening. Something good is in store for us.

Program.

- Hymn 700.

MRS. JULIA ROSS, WADESBORO, DIES AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Julia V. Ross, the wife of Dr. R. D. Ross, a well known physician of Wadesboro, died last Sunday evening in the hospital at Wadesboro after an extended illness. The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon in the Ross home, Wadesboro, and the interment was in East View cemetery. Mrs. Ross was an admirable character, sincere and true in all the relations of life. A wide circle of friends esteemed her most highly. Her going away is a great loss to Wadesboro and to her large circle of loved ones.

She is survived by her husband, three daughters and one son, Misses Louise, Virginia and Jennings Ross and George Ross of this city. She is also survived by the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. L. D. Robinson, Mrs. L. G. Atkinson, Mrs. J. M. Covington, Mrs. Fred J. Coxe, Miss Johnnie Dunlap of this city and Fred Dunlap and J. J. Dunlap of Anson county.

To the bereaved family we extend our deepest sympathies. As a pastor in Wadesboro we came to know and appreciate the genuine worth of Mrs. Ross and of her entire household.

DAVENPORT COLLEGE

With the middle of the first term only a few days off work is going forward thoroughly and steadily. The latest acquisition to the faculty is Miss Pearl V. Willoughby, Ph. D., who comes to meet an increased demand in the English department. The freshman class is the largest it has been in several years and the classes in English have to meet in sections. In the science department several new microscopes and other apparatus have been added during the past two months.

The first of the lyceum attractions came last Wednesday evening. This was a three-act play by Edward Locke entitled "The Bubble." A full house greeted the inauguration of the lyceum course and all were highly pleased. The college and the town of Lenoir are managing the Davenport-Lenoir lyceum course and the general public as well as the Davenport students look forward with pleasure to these events. The next number will be the Marion Male Quartette, appearing November 22.

MR. AND MRS. J. A. BELL OF CHARLOTTE ESTABLISH A PRIZE AT TRINITY COLLEGE

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bell of Charlotte has established at Trinity College the Robert Bell Prize to be awarded annually to one among those students who make their own way through college. The prize will be a memorial to young Robert Bell, a favorite son of his parents and a lad with rare musical gifts. His untimely death occurred last summer at Lake Junaluska on his return home from a concert in which he had an important part. Another car collided with the car in which Robert was riding and inflicted injuries from which he died. His death has brought unspeakable sorrow to the parents who had great expectations for their gifted son.

To The Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South

Greetings: Grace, mercy and peace from God our Father and Jesus Christ our Lord.

Your commissioners on Unification, appointed by the General conferences of the two churches, believe that the present is an opportune time for the two great Episcopal Methodisms to give serious thought and prayer to the question of Unification. Much of the trouble of our present day world grows out of the spirit of divisiveness. The solidarity of the human family and the oneness of human interests and welfare are not sufficiently emphasized. A saner spirit of co-operation and fellowship will assist in making a better world. World conditions impose upon Christian groups of men and women who are one in the essential moral and spiritual phases of their life the obligation of closer unity for the general welfare.

As Episcopal Methodists, certainly we have reason for devout thanksgiving to Almighty God. God has honored us in a very peculiar manner. That was an eventful day in Aldergate Street, London, when John Wesley felt his heart strangely warmed. The result has been the kindling of a fire which has changed the religious climate of Christendom. There can be no question, however, that the full strength of Methodism would be greatly augmented if these two great branches of the church were one in fact as we are one by inheritance. The united effort of Christian forces seems to us to be the only offset to the spirit of divisiveness and hatred which has wrought such ruin in our generation. As representatives of the forces of righteousness in the world who pray every day for the coming of the Kingdom, surely there is an obligation upon us to set that example of Christian unity and co-operation which will contribute to the well being of mankind.

"Therefore, we, the commission on Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, holding that these two churches are essentially one church, one in origin, in belief, in spirit, in purpose and in polity and desiring that this essential unity may be made actual in organization and administration throughout the world," wish to commend the plan adopted by the Joint Commission on Unification for careful study to the ministers and members of both churches.

The salient features of the plan seems to us to be the following:

I.

The plan which our commission recommends safeguards all local interests and traditions which are held dear in the two jurisdictions. "Every vote in the General Conference shall be by jurisdictions, and shall require the accepted majority vote of each jurisdiction to be effective." Which is to say that we are to enter upon an arrangement in which no measure can be passed touching the work within the bounds of either jurisdiction without the accepted majority vote of the jurisdiction concerned.

II.

This plan gives due regard to the rights and preferences of church members living on the border where the two jurisdictions work side by side. Church membership is a sacred thing, and we recognize it as such. Arrangements are to be made for the transfer of members, preachers, churches, pastoral charges, districts, annual conferences, mission conferences, and missions from one jurisdiction to the other; but "no transfer shall be made without the consent of the member, preacher, church, pastoral charge, district, annual conference, mission conference, or mission that it is proposed to transfer." It is understood that in case of such transfer, the initiative movement shall be made by the party or parties chiefly concerned. That is to say, we do not believe that union can be forced. We, therefore, give our people and our organizations time and opportunity to grow together, and we believe that under this plan such growing together will immediately begin to take place. This provision amply protects minorities in each jurisdiction and is an example of that trust in each other without which real union cannot exist and increase.

III.

It removes at once the cause of competition and overlapping on the border, and it does this for the following reasons:

1. While we enter upon this plan of co-operation and union with the two jurisdictions standing just as they are in the United States of America, nevertheless the two churches are "united in one church" having one name, one General Conference, and one connectional "organization and administration throughout the world." This fact alone will silently work in the minds of our people taking away the impulse and desire for the continuation of churches which overlap, and the establishing of new organizations which conflict one with the other.

2. The proposed plan gives to the General Conference the power "to govern any and all enterprises and activities which may be agreed upon as being of a connectional character." While the determination of what enterprises and activities are, as a matter of fact, of a connectional character is left to the decision of the General Conference, it will be immediately evident that the evangelization of needy fields here in America, both in our cities and in our rural districts, does constitute an enterprise which is connectional in character. The suggested plan, then, will give to each jurisdiction the opportunity of studying in association with the other the entire field. Together the two jurisdictions will address themselves to the one task of giving the gospel to the lost in the home field.

3. The plan which we recommend associates together for council and co-operation the administrative officers of the two jurisdictions. "Immediately after the union shall have been consummated, the bishops shall meet and organize as one body and shall arrange for the superintendence of the work of the church." And not only so, but the plan draws together all other administrative officers for counsel and co-operation.

IV.

One of the most important features of our plan of unification is that it looks to the immediate organization of the work of the united church outside the United States, so as to consummate the unity of Episcopal Methodism in foreign lands. Nothing is more to be desired than that a united Methodism, without competition the one jurisdiction with the other, and without waste of men and money, should be able to deliver its full strength upon the world in the interest of human salvation. This important aspect of our proposed plan must immediately commend it to all who love our Lord Jesus Christ and pray daily for the coming of His Kingdom.

And now we wish to add a few words of suggestion touching the wisest course of action pending the consummation of these negotiations.

We advise that the work of the two churches go on just as usual. It would be unwise for either church to change its general policy of procedure in any important particular. We recommend that while we pray constantly each for the other, the two Methodisms continue with unabated zeal in the development of plans upon which they have already entered. So shall the two churches be larger and stronger when they do come together as one. And we suggest also that it would be a capital blunder for local churches in any particular conference or community to endeavor to hasten union by precipitate action. We advise, therefore, that everywhere the work of the church go forward in normal channels, and that conferences and communities take no action looking to union until the constituted authorities advise that the time for such action has come.

Meanwhile, let us be much in prayer. If we continue steadfastly in prayer to the God of our Fathers, we shall make no serious blunder. Wisdom and brotherly love and quiet confidence come to those who pray in self-surrender and faith. We, therefore, beseech you "That ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long suffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of us all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." "For this cause we bow our knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named; that He would grant you, according to the riches of His Glory, to be strengthened with might by His Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints, what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled with all the fullness of God."

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING IN ORPHANAGES

Dear Brother Wood:

Your request for an article on "Industrial Training in Our Orphanages" strikes a responsive chord in my heart; for I consider it one of the very best opportunities our orphanages have to elevate the children under our care from a state of dependence to one of independent, self-sustaining, and self-respecting citizenship.

For some years I have been impressed with the advantages which come to the boy or girl who has been able, while they are going through the primary and high school, to acquire a working knowledge of some trade or lucrative occupation.

When I was going to school it was not thought possible, or hardly desirable, for a boy to attempt to learn a trade; and so all the years of school life were given over to attending the sessions of the school. It was so when the high school had been successfully passed, and the diploma received, the graduate either sent to college or started to work without a practical knowledge of any trade or business; so it was with the graduate from the college.

I fear that the position of the college graduate was often very embarrassing and discouraging. After having finished college and receiving his sheepskin, to realize he or she had no knowledge of any useful art by which they might make a living; that they were compelled to start down at the foot of the ladder where they might have started four or five years before. It was enough to take all the poetry out of life for them, until they could adjust themselves in their minds to the practical realities of life.

Now I am not trying to belittle the value of an education; for I am a firm believer in it. It is one of the very great pleasures I get in working with, and for our boys and girls, to see that no boy or girl who wants to go to college, fails to have the opportunity. But the point I am trying to make is, that it is not necessary for the boys or girls, when they are going to school, to be occupied all the hours of the school day with studying and reciting their lessons. That part of that time can and should be spent, learning some useful art by which they will be able to make a living when they have left school.

Especially is this true of all orphanage boys and girls while they are in our orphanages. Now this is not a theoretical opinion, but formed after an intimate connection with a large orphanage for about fifteen years, in which this policy has been carried out with increasing scope as the years have taught us how.

I believe three hours is sufficient time in one day for the children to have their minds riveted on their studies, in order to get their best and most undivided attention; and for them to get into their minds the kernel of what they are studying. The hours they spend in school rooms more than these three could be used more profitably in some useful art, whereby the mind is diverted and the body may relax from the school desk, text books, pencil and tablets.

Of course it would not be well to confine this manual training to one or two channels. There should be several opportunities in order that the children might have the privilege of choosing the one they are most interested in. All have not the same talent. If possible the child ought to be allowed to occupy him or herself in that kind of work they seem to like best.

Dr. N. H. D. Wilson, pastor of First church, Elizabeth City, N. C., and conference host at the approaching session of the North Carolina Conference.

There are many forms of manual or industrial training which could be introduced into the orphanage. Several of them require comparatively little capital to introduce. It is not much trouble for any orphanage, however, to get the money necessary to equip the various departments of manual training. People with money are glad to encourage an effort to do something practical in the training the orphanage gives its children.

Turning from this side of the subject to the other, I would like to relate a history of an orphanage which came under my observation some years ago, in order that I may emphasize the importance of this idea of introducing manual training into orphanages.

This orphanage was located in a Southern city. It was started with a view to charity, for need of dependent children, by giving them food, clothing, and sending them to the public school. After a few years a wealthy gentleman gave his city home with the understanding it should be used as an orphanage. This city home was located in the town, with only a small front and back yard. There was no room for the children to play when they were not at work or school, and no effort was made to provide anything like manual training for the children. Consequently about the only place the children had to play was on the street. I visited this orphanage, and it made my heart sick. Of course it was poor; there was no inducement for the public to take much interest in it. The management did not grasp the idea of their opportunity, and so did not receive much support. It lived a few years and died a natural death.

You can imagine the difference between the children sent out in life from this orphanage, and one located near a town, with a farm attached, where the children will have plenty of good fresh country air; associate with God's creation in nature; drink plenty of milk, and learn some useful occupation, whereby they may be better prepared to make an independent living after they have completed the course of study in the orphanage. An education and a trade should be the slogan of all our orphanages for every child they assume responsibility for.

It is a great work the orphanages of our state are doing; but they are not doing as much as they should, or would do if they had the means. It surprises me that men of wealth do not seem to appreciate what a golden opportunity they have in giving their money to support the orphanages.

The colleges give an education to young men and women who are old enough to make a living, and who have been raised under good moral surroundings, and it is well. But the orphanages take the child from poverty and want, folds the loving arms of sympathy about it, and then place it beyond the power of want. Feeds, clothes, educates and trains it from the ways of sin and degradation, and places its feet in the paths of righteousness—starting it out in life with an equal chance to compete with any other boys or girls.

Truly it does seem this cause should attract more attention than it does—the attention of those whom God has blessed with an abundance of this world's goods. Instead of making them work out a meager existence, having to exercise the most rigid economy, they should be given money enough to branch out into that larger life of usefulness which will enable them to fit their children in the best possible manner to go out and take their places in lives of honor and usefulness.

I'M GO'N TO STAY A COUNTRY PREACHER

By E. C. Durham.

In spite uv all the city charms an' what the circuit pays,
I'm go'n to be a circuit man throughout my preachin' days;
For after all the pay is good, for there they pound an' give,
An' practice, an' praise, an' pray—out where the Lord's folks live.

I like to ride a dozen miles on Sunday mornin' soon,
An' then a dozen miles back home, late in the afternoon—

When I have preached, shook hands with folks, had country pie an' ham:
I'm go'n to stay a country preacher, zackly what I am.

The city church is nice an' fine, an' has its big, high steeple,
But oftentimes it's filled with pews instead uv many people;
But in the country is the car, the buggy, an' the mule,
An' he who sneers at those good folks is jest a city fool.

What is the matter with the country, that it has no charm?
For town is made uv country folks, supported by the farm;
There's jest a sight uv intellect in country's each square mile,
An' nothin' can be sweeter than a country baby's smile.

What's purer than the dew-drop hanging on the farm-yard rose?
What's more attractive than those fields uv corn an' cotton rows?
What's greater than the still small voice heard by the farmer's son,
A-callin' an' a-shapin' him fer work that must be done?

The country road is now as good as any city street;
Consolidated schools are thick, an' churches are complete:
An' I have yet to travel far, o'er many cities t' roam,
To find a better thing than jest a good old country home.

I'm go'n to stay a country preacher, zackly what I am,
An' 'tain't because I find out there the cak an' pie an' ham—
It's mainly 'cause God's folks are there, an' hospitality,
An' cheer, an' love, an' reverence, an' all that makes one free.

THE PARABLE OF INSTRUCTING THE CONDUCTOR

From the days of my youth I have beheld with admiration the Engineer of the Train, and that admiration groweth no less as I have come to understand somewhat better what his Responsibilities may be. But I have come to know that, important as is the Engineer, the Conductor is the man behind him, and he is the man who telleth the Engineer what to do.

But this I have learned, that the Conductor can not be at one time at both ends of the Train. And Trains are long.

Now there was a Long Train that stopped at a Division Terminal. And they cut out one car and set in another. And they Iced the Coolers and Oiled the Wheels, and Filled the Tanks with Water. And I saw and beheld how many men were at work at the same time beside the Cars, and Inside the Cars and on Top of the Cars and Under the Cars and Between the Cars.

And there appeared to be a Master Mechanick who Directed them all. And he it was who knew when the Tanks were filled with Water and the Coolers filled with Ice and the Journals Greased with Oil, and everything Swept and Garnished. And the Conductor waited beside the Train, Two-Thirds of the way to the Locomotive, waiting for the Signal from the Master Mechanick that the Train might go.

And then I went to where the Master Mechanick was standing beside the Train. And he was looking at a man who squatted between the cars, and was working with a Monkey Wrench at something which I did not very well understand. And as nearly as I could discover, everything else about the Train was ready, but this bolt or nut or whatever it was had been the last thing to be adjusted before the Train could move. And the Master Mechanick said unto the man between the cars, Is she all right now, Bill? And the man between the cars answered, Yea. And he cast out his Wrench and his Other Tools, and he made haste to creep out from between the cars. And he spake unto the Master Mechanick, and said, Lettergo.

And the Master Mechanick held up his hand and waved it. And the Conductor held up his hand and waved it. Divers Persons shouted All Aboard. And the Engineer pulled out the throttle. And the Man who had been between the cars said unto the Master Mechanick, It was an Hard Place to get at, but we got it. And they went their way and the Train went its way, and I went with the Train.

And I said unto myself, The Conductor weareth an Uniform with Brass Buttons, but he taketh his instructions from the Master Mechanick. And the Master Mechanick weareth a Gray Business Suit, but he taketh his information from the man between the cars. And the man between the cars weareth Overalls, that are very badly spotted with the places where there is no Grease. Yet he is the man who first telleth when the Train may go.

But the Passengers knew not of the Master Mechanick, much less did they know of the man between the cars. Howbeit, they saw the Conductor in his Uniform.—The Christian Index.

FIELD NEWS

FAITHFUL AND EFFICIENT MINISTER APPRECIATED

Whereas, Brother F. M. Shamburger is closing his four years work as presiding elder of the New Bern district; and, whereas, he must be sent to another field of labor for the next conference year; now, therefore be it Resolved, That the fourth quarterly conference of the Morehead City charge commend the faithful and efficient ministry of Brother Shamburger. His cheerful, loving fellowship has been an inspiration to all of our people, and we desire to go on record in appreciation of his devotion and fidelity to the cause of the Master; that our love and best wishes and prayers will follow him to his new field of labor.

Be it resolved further, that a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes, a copy be sent to the Advocate, and a copy to the bishop of our annual conference.

FOUR YEARS IN YANCEYVILLE

The Yanceyville charge in the past four years has made rapid progress in material and spiritual development. The charge is situated in the western part of Caswell county, joining both the Virginia and Western North Carolina conferences. It embraces one of the most beautiful sections of this state. The scenery along many of the highways is very picturesque.

Here in this section, just before the Civil War, was seen North Carolina's greatest prosperity, but owing to certain economic conditions, it has lost much of its prestige; but since the coming of good roads, revival in education and church development, it is making rapid strides, and will soon take its place in the very front rank of rural communities.

Four years ago not a foot of sand clay road was to be found in the county; now we have nearly two hundred miles, which has cost more than a million dollars. In the bounds of this charge in the past four years three handsome brick school buildings have been erected at a cost of more than seventy thousand dollars. The value of the church property in dollars on the charge has been multiplied by five. One twelve thousand dollar brick church has been completed and another church was repaired and painted, and also some new furniture put in. Two new pianos have been installed in two of the churches.

A parsonage at a cost of ten thousand dollars has been purchased. The real cost of the parsonage is fifteen thousand dollars. It would cost that much to replace the parsonage as it now stands.

We have held some very fine revival meetings and we were very ably assisted by Revs. S. E. Mercer, M. T. Plyler and D. E. Earnhardt. During the four years we have received more than two hundred into the church.

We have spent four very pleasant years on the charge and many generous gifts have been received by the pastor in poundings and other ways. I will soon turn my footsteps eastward (I am on the western border), leaving behind me many dear friends, and, like Lot's wife, I will be found looking back, salt or no salt.

The preacher who comes this way will find a kind and generous people and more beautiful rural homes than are found on any charge in the North Carolina conference.

J. T. Standford.

FROM MACON TO YADKIN

We arrived in Yadkinville Thursday night after traveling all day in our Ford. We left a host of good friends in Macon county. We hated to leave them. The Lord graciously blessed us while on the Franklin circuit. One hundred and fifty persons were added to our church on profession of faith during the three and one-half years we were there.

We found the nice new parsonage in good condition when we arrived here. Members from different churches had spent the whole day preparing for our need and comforts. They gave us a good pounding. There are enough provisions in the pantry to last us till Christmas. We also found a real good meal on the dining table. For all this we are very grateful.

We are pleased with our appointment. We are glad to serve such generous people. We are expecting a good year.

R. E. Ward.

ADDED TO ENTHUSIASM FOR UNION

I had been conservative on this question till I heard a speech from a great man against the union of the two Methodist churches. Of course he gave all the big reasons he knew on his side. He had had a fine chance to know both sides. He is one of the committee. When he got through his speech I was surprised to know that a man of his ability and standing could make a speech like that. It has added to my long desire, enthusiasm for union.

As I remember them these are his strong arguments. He said: "We want union for three things—to prevent friction, stop overlapping and save expenses." With the cunningness of a debater, he said, "The plan does not promise to do either one of these." He tried to show us or tell us that it should. Why should it say those things? The very fact of union itself carries all those with it. If you make two into one you cannot rub the one against itself and make friction. And who ever heard of one church overlapping itself? And of course there are many places where we could save money, and can by serving the people with one pastor instead of two.

The next argument of importance for his side was that we would be swallowed up if we united. That sounds scary. But the sainted Dr. Brunner in his book on union told us the same thing over thirty years ago would happen if we did not unite right then, or very soon. Can one snake swallow itself? The plain truth is that when we unite there will be no North, South, East or West. We will be one in Christ Jesus—one Methodism. Christ lost Judeism but gave us Christianity.

Jesus' last words to us on this question were, "Be ye one as the Father and I are one." I am as old, perhaps, as the bishop, and I know some of the things that were done after the Civil War; but why should we put on the shoulders of our children all the wrongs of the past? Had we not better obey Christ and try to save the world?

A house divided against itself cannot stand. United we stand. We will go on very much as we have, except we can do very much more good and set a good example to other Protestant Christian churches.

"Where there is division there is schism," and schism is sin.

J. H. Brendall.

ALL IS WELL

Just a few lines from our little church, if you please.

Central, East Laurinburg, Sunday school numbers about 385. We have averaged close to 300 for the year.

The Caldeonia charge is coming up easy this year with pastor's salary and conference claims.

We have a good presiding elder. He knows what to do. We all love our pastor, Rev. Frank Culbreth. We expect him back for the year 1924, and would be happy to have him longer.

Success to your paper and the North Carolina conference.

H. L. Calson.

WHY?

Why will the leaders of our church forbid our young preachers to use tobacco, then (without seeming remorse of conscience) smoke and chew before these same young preachers. "Do not offend one of these little ones." A young preacher stood a fine examination and was licensed to preach at the D. C. last summer. I told him he ought to go to annual conference and take work (which he had planned to do). But said he, "I saw the bishop smoking." And what could I say, for I had seen the same myself and turned away with a sinking heart. This young man thought it a sin to use tobacco and so failed to go to conference. Can't the preachers and teachers see that when they use tobacco before the rising generation that they are knocking all the props from under the perfection that they should be preaching and teaching? Imagine a preacher making a sermon on "Christian Perfection," or 1st Cor. 3:16-17, or James 1:21, or "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth from all sin," with a cigar or chew of tobacco in his mouth. I knew a preacher who tried to make a sermon on Christian Perfection, but never was able to do so until he gave up tobacco, which he did, and was convinced it was wrong to use it and remained strong in this belief the remainder of his life. Some of us do our best by prayer, example and admonition to keep our boys from forming this filthy, evil habit; then when they get out they see many of the leaders of church and state indulging in the habit, they discover there's a wrong somewhere. Can anyone with an unbiased mind fail to see the wrong? "Brethren, these things ought not to be." Let us call a halt! I am a Methodist and love my church and believe in Christian Perfection as taught by John Wesley (and the Bible). But, the impelling Voice within my mind and heart, which I dare not disobey, is the foundation reason for these lines having been written.

Mrs. J. K. Terrell.

A FORWARD STEP IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IN TRYON STREET CHURCH, CHARLOTTE

Under the leadership of the director of religious education, Miss Maud McKinnon, a splendid program on missions was carried out October 29-31. The meetings were announced as "Three Evenings in Japan." The pastor, Rev. H. C. Hardin, presided over all general sessions and conducted the devotionals each evening. The program was as follows:

Monday, 6:30-7:00 p. m.—Supper served (cafeteria).

7:00-7:30—General session. All assembled in the Sunday school room, the pastor leading the devotional service, after which a short play was presented, "The Rip Van Winkle of Japan."

7:30-8:15—Group meetings.

Tuesday, 6:30-7:00—Supper.

7:00-7:30—General session. Devotionals. Program (entertainment given by the men of the church).

7:30-8:15—Group meetings.

Wednesday, 6:30-7:30—Supper.

7:00-8:15—General session. Devotionals. Japan on Trial Before the World Court.

The lower floor of the church building was most beautifully decorated in wisteria and bamboo vines, the festoons lending themselves to the creation of an atmosphere and artistic background, appropriate to the study of Japan. Suspended here and there among the wisteria blooms were Japanese umbrellas and lanterns of varied hues. Hand-made posters, real works of art, giving information, and also a number of scenes and prints from Japan added greatly to the interest of the occasion.

This effort to put on a missionary program by the whole church is the first undertaking of the kind. Much planning and preliminary work necessarily had to be done. The large numbers attending the sessions attested the fact that there is real interest and that such a consecutive program of study can be arranged and carried out by the local church.

The most important feature of the program was the group meetings. These were:

Children from 6-8 years—Leaders, Mrs. Pierce Wyche and Mrs. Lloyd Ranson.

Children from 9-11 years—Leaders, Mrs. D. E. Henderson and Mrs. C. G. Ruark.

Boys and girls from 12-14 years—Leaders, Mrs. J. C. Watson and Mrs. R. G. Auten.

Women and girls from 16 years up—Leader, Miss Maud McKinnon.

Men and boys from 16 years up—Leader Monday, Rev. J. E. Abernethy; leader Tuesday, Rev. J. H. Armbrust.

Children who were too young to go into a class were cared for by Mrs. W. B. Pickens and Mrs. B. J. Overcash.

The books used for the basis of the courses of instruction were the accepted mission study books on Japan.

An item of unique and distinct interest to the people of Tryon Street church was the fact that the play, "The Rip Van Winkle of Japan," was written by Miss Gertrude Dickinson, a member of the church. The characters of the play were:

Open Sea—Miss Gertrude Dickinson.
Rip Van Winkle (Urashima)—Dr. Edward White.

Honorable Inside-of-the-House—Mrs. Edward White.

Little Bo Chan—Nan Walker Hardin.

The Grandfather—Mr. F. L. Crowell.
The Visitor—Miss Mary Blair.

The program concluded on Wednesday evening with a World Court Scene, in which Japan was on trial in defense of herself regarding her actions toward other nations. Those taking part were:

Judge—Judge W. F. Harding.

Sheriff—Joseph McLaughlin.

Japan—Mrs. J. J. Akers.

China—Mrs. G. H. Elder.

Korea—Miss May Bunting.

United States—Mrs. J. P. Waggoner.

Prosecuting Attorney—W. H. Bobbitt.

Defendant's Attorney—D. E. Hender.

Spirit of Christianity—Miss Mary VanDerburg.

The success of the undertaking was due to the hearty co-operation of the men, women, boys and girls of the entire church. This spirit of co-operation was manifested in the making of posters, sending out announcements, serving suppers, decorating, and in all the necessary work. This was truly a church enterprise and was not confined to any organization within the church. The results were most gratifying to the pastor and to the members of the church.

Send us your order for Christmas cards.

DISTRICT, CHURCH, CHARGE LAY LEADERS AND OTHER LAYMEN

This is to advise that at a meeting of our Western North Carolina conference, held at Winston-Salem, N. C., a little change was made in the Board of Lay Activities. In order to make this work as efficient as possible and because of the largeness of our territory it is almost impossible for one man to attend to all of this work. Consequently it has been thought the part of wisdom to divide the conference up into groups and to have a man to look after each one of these groups to be known as the associate lay leader of the conference. These groups are as follows:

Group No 1 consists of Greensboro, Mt. Airy, Salisbury and Winston districts with Mr. H. R. Dwire as associate lay leader in charge of this group.

Group No. 2 consists of Charlotte, North Wilkesboro, Shelby and Statesville districts with Mr. E. A. Cole as associate lay leader in charge of this group.

Group No. 3 consists of Asheville, Marion and Waynesville districts with Mr. Edwin Brown as associate lay leader in charge of this group.

C. H. Ireland was again elected conference lay leader.

We are perfectly aware that there is no legal measure which provides for this, but in order that we may make our work more efficient we have decided to divide up this work in this way so as to produce the best results. We want to assist in every way that we possibly can and we feel sure that the elders will be glad to give their assistance in every way.

Let's all get to work at once—the conference lay leader, the associate conference lay leaders, the district lay leaders, the charge leaders and the church lay leaders. We want to organize the work as best we can so as to aid in the best manner.

Please bear in mind that the elders will assist in any way that they possibly can. We are co-operating in the work of the church for the honor and glory of Christ and we are doing this simply that we may make our beloved church accomplish its work in the territory that God has committed to us to attend to.

Chas. H. Ireland,
Conference Lay Leader.

ROSEBORO CIRCUIT

We were glad to be returned to this work for this our second year, and while we have had our disappointments we have also had our joys.

We have some of the fine people of the state to serve and our united labors have borne some fruit. We have added to the church some 130, most of them on profession of faith, and we hope to add more yet, for we are in the midst of our meeting at Andrews Chapel, which is being conducted by the Evangelistic Federation of Laymen of Fayetteville. The interest is very gratifying, and these good laymen are doing a noble work and through them is flowing a great channel of blessing both to the church and lost men.

We have also in a material way gone forward, having purchased a lot for a new church in Roseboro at a cost of $2,000, and have some $3500 in cash with other thousands in sight. These are a people that do not only look to the present, but also wish to build in the new church something that may serve the coming generations in building character here as a foundation for eternity.

Also at Salemburg a very splendid village in which is located a good high school, also Pineland school for girls. We have a lot with a few hundred dollars subscribed for the purpose of building a Methodist church there. We feel sure this is the thing to do, as we have some thirty or more Methodists in the community and the good schools a drawing card for others.

CITY ROAD CHURCH, ELIZABETH CITY, N. C.

We have made other advancement and hope to go to conference with a clean sheet. J. A. Tharpe, P. C.

OUR NEW INSTITUTE IN HARBIN

George F. Erwin.

The Chinese plow in use on the truck farm just across the street would be interesting to you if you could sit in my window and watch it as I do. It is a crude, hand-made affair which two men hold in the ground while three others pull it. Man power is much cheaper in this country than machinery. I can hire as many Chinese workmen as I want for any occasion for fifteen to thirty cents a day. They can live on five to ten cents a day and most of them live in little mud huts. Many of the children go without clothes during the hot weather and frequently I meet them on the streets in this state of nature, without a garment of any kind to hide their bodies.

About the only thing that brings light and encouragement to the lives of the Chinese is the gospel of Christ. Nearly all of them who count for anything here have come in contact with Christianity. Last Sunday I visited a church carried on by the Lutheran mission. Their house seats five hundred and it was filled to overflowing. Many were standing in the aisles and in the back of the building for the long service. They are building a new house now which will seat over fifteen hundred people. I noticed there was not a man in the room who wore a queue nor a woman with little feet (hat is, bound feet). They were all neat and clean. I met one man who is a leading member of the church and a great merchant, whose business is worth more than a half million dollars. He, as do many leading business men, holds a Bible class and prayer meeting in his place of business every Sunday. Do you not think it pays to bring hope to these poor souls drifting in darkness? They are reaching out and crying for help. Will you respond or will you let them die without a knowledge of our Christ?

Let me tell you something about my individual missionary work. On the first day of May this year we opened the Methodist Institute in Harbin for Russians, and have registered to date over four hundred pupils. We find the Russian people desire a knowledge of the English language more than anything else. We are teaching English, bookkeeping, typewriting, shorthand and Bible, and our pupils take a lively interest in all these studies.

Our scholars range in age from ten years to fifty-five and nearly all trades and professions are represented. We have one general, one judge, several professors, doctors, lawyers, engineers, good musicians and others. Many different faiths may be found among them—Greek Orthodox (the state church of Russia), Roman Catholic Americans, Jews, Lutherans, Seventh Day Adventists, Baptists and Methodists. Nationals from widely separated lands study together in the institute—Russians, Germans, French, Finnish, Swedes, Armenians, Hungarians, Letts, Estonians, Poles and English. No more cosmopolitan school could be found in the whole world.

Mine is a full day from six o'clock in the morning until ten at night. The first thing in the morning is my lesson in the Russian language. Four classes in English covering more than five hours and a class in theology for one and a half hours fills the balance of the time. Each Saturday I teach Bible to a class averaging more than fifty students and visitors. On Sunday morning we visit some neighboring church and in the evening I preach for the public.

Much interest is being shown in the religious side of our work. Our mission has a preaching service at two different points at the same time, and for the past two Sundays many have been turned away for lack of room. I have the finest choir that I have heard sing anywhere. The Russians are great musicians and it would do you good to hear them sing the old Methodist hymns.

Many of these people are hungering for a spiritual religion. They have a form of Christianity, but the spirit of Christ is neither manifested in their religion of their lives. A teacher of the Polytechnic Institute recently said to me that he was thankful for the Methodists because they had encouraged him to study the Bible and it was now bringing hope to his soul.

We are progressing nicely. We are happy and striving each day to point men and women to the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." Pray for us that we may do all the good possible.

HERE IS A GOOD PRESENT!

What shall I give for a present? is always knotty question. Try "Travels in the Old World," by Rev. J. M. Rowland, editor Richmond Christian Advocate. A good book is always appropriate and this one is full of laughs and information and inspiration. One dollar will bring it. Your friend will like it; 430 pages with rare illustrations. #### WEEK OF PRAYER SPECIALS

Dear Auxiliary Friends: That our Laura Haygood Demonstration School should be a Week of Prayer Special brings a feeling of gratitude and of responsibility to us. We know that it is a time when you give great thought and care to the needs presented. We are happy to have our demonstration school built with money given at this time, for we feel that you will always have a very personal interest in it and in us. This we are assured of anyway, but we know it will be intensified during this week. Alice Alsop.

To the Women of the Auxiliary:

That the Methodist women throughout our Southland have included Bethlehem Center in their every remembrance during the Week of Prayer this year fills our hearts with gratitude, and we would be recreant to the trust that is ours if we did not express to you our deep appreciation at this time. We are grateful because you will adequately do your part, and as you make your offering how we do covet your prayers that we may in very truth meet a great community need. May we ask, too, your special prayers for these splendid Southern colored college girls who are this year beginning their training for Christian service? These, we trust, are the future leaders of the spiritual forces so long neglected.

Gratefully and sincerely,
Martha Nutt,
Supervisor Bethlehem Center.

THE GUESTS OF GUESTS

It is a great thing to have esteemed guests in our homes. The more we esteem them, the more delight there is in entertaining them. Think, then, of the inestimable privilege of having the Son of Man tarrying in our homes! He will tarry, if we, like the two on the way to Emmaus, constrain him. Too often we give perfunctory invitations. A merchant asks a town visitor if he "won't go to dinner." The visitor hesitates, then accepts. The merchant, on arrival at home, goes back to pacify the wife, who is horrified at company on wash day when the baby is sick and the cook is gone! The confused man tries to explain to her that he only asked the company for politeness' sake, not expecting an acceptance. We smile, but that is exactly what we often do in prayer: we ask the Master to go home with us when we do not expect him to do so. If he should accept, we would be embarrassed. He makes as if he would go further, and often he does pass on because we do not put out constraining hands. A church prays for a revival, but in such a perfunctory way that the Master passes on to some who really want it.

The picture of Jesus in the home is one of the most beautiful in recorded history. "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." (Rev. iii. 20.) Was there ever such fellowship? Is he in your home, sitting at your table? If not, why not? If the ark in the house of Obededom brought its blessings, how much more should the presence of the Master bring untold benedictions? He asks the Father's favor on the home! The prayers of good people are worth much, but think of the prayers of Jesus registered in our behalf! In breaking bread, he breaks the very bread of life. In communing with his Father he brings us into communion with his Father.

The warm glow of the heart may not always instantly reveal his presence, but, by and by, we see him, and know him, and understand the glow back there, and the warmth and the gladness of soul. It is a wonderful thing to have Jesus walk with us, and alk with us, and go home with us, and sit at our tables, and tell us of himself and of the deep things of God, and reveal himself unto us as the conqueror of death. Resurrection is gloriously true. He mastered winds and waves and cast out diseases and devils, but the crowning work of his majesty was mastering the "last enemy." He became the first fruits of them that slept. Pass the word along that we are following and worshiping and serving a living Christ. In his strength we, too, shall break the bands of death.—Methodist Advocate.

When I asked the shoe manufacturer if he had ever tried prayer, he said that he went to church occasionally. It was years, however, since he had prayed except with a church congregation. I asked him if he could explain how it was that the Mohammedan says his prayers several times a day, even in the market place if he happens to be there. He did not know. So I explained that the habit of prayer is both consoling and strengthening. It dissolves many of the irritations of everyday life. As part of his new mode of living the manufacturer agreed to spend a few minutes in prayer once in the morning and once in the afternoon, no matter where he happened to be nor how pressing his business affairs. His obedience to this advice has been, I believe, one of the most vital factors in helping him to get a new hold on himself.

Prayer in the sense of communion with the infinite is a universal need. The question of whether or not you are a firm believer in some particular creed is not involved in this. One might hope you are a professing Christian, and that you can pray with the Christian faith; but, whether or not this be so, I must tell you that both the man with strong nerves and the man with weak ones finds new resources and strength in prayer. If you are not an orthodox Christian, you should at least retreat into yourself, contemplate the wonder of life, humble yourself before the idea of God and the vastness of nature, commune with God that is within you not only in the solitude of your home, but during the day's work.—Dr. Foster Kennedy in American Magazine.

SHOULD CENTENARY PLEDGES BE PAID?

You doubtless read Dr. Pinson's article, "Facing the Facts," in a recent number of the Advocate. It should have been read often enough by us all to impress these facts indelibly upon our minds and hearts.

The Centenary pledges were free will offerings, made by each individual, organization and church after months of prayer and preparation. These pledges were not made under any compulsion, other than that of stimulated pride in our loved church and her achievements, and the earnest desire to see it go forward in its business of saving the world for Christ and to have our place in the partnership for this purpose between God and His church, of "spiritual exaltation from continued prayer for blessing upon the movement, and of an intense feeling of love and gratitude to God for His merciful goodness to us as individuals, church and nation.

We were asked for $35,000,000, and in our enthusiasm we pledged $52,000,000. Knowing the loyalty of the "people called Methodists" to their church and its leaders, those who were at the head of the Centenary movement had such confidence in us to keep our words—many of us priding ourselves upon "our words being as good as our bonds"—and pay our pledges when the time should come for the payment, that they felt justified in adventuring upon an inspired program of entering new mission fields, and greatly enlarging and more fully developing our work already begun, a program so big, so splendid, so founded on limitless faith in God's power and His children's sacrificial love for Him to carry it out, that the world stopped to wonder at its magnitude and to praise its spirit, and the rather big denominations, one after another, adopted practically the same plan.

In little more than another month the five year period of the Centenary will have come to a close, and while many of these pledges have been paid in full, many have not been paid, and our leaders are handicapped in their work by lack of the money which we voluntarily promised to the Lord for the carrying out of His plan for the salvation of the world, and embarrassed by facing a shameful retrenchment, when they realize so keenly, because they see so plainly, that the work should instead be expanding. God has done and is doing His part in the partnership, for "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life," and also as in Christ He said with promise, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." We know that He is with those who obey this command, because He blesses their efforts with success.

Then should we not pay these pledges, made in the flush of sacred stimulation, enthusiasm, and inspiration? Can we afford, with good conscience, not paying them, when our not doing so will handicap and embarrass our chosen leaders, hold our church up to the shameful position of not meeting its obligations, and throttle the Lord's work begun at His divine command? Have we the moral right not to pay our pledges? We are not obliged to pay make such pledges, man can not compel us to do so, and God does not. Deuteronomy 23:22, "But if thou shalt forbear to vow, it shall be no sin in thee." Listen, too, to Peter, as he rebukes Ananias for his duplicity: Acts 5:4, "Whilest it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God."

But we have made our vows and made them vountarily. We are under no legal contract to pay them. Nobody can exact payment from us. We may not approve all the policies of those responsible for their expenditure; possibly we imagine we might have done better ourselves! We may not like certain existing conditions in some sections of our fields. But—we have vowed our vows unto the Lord our God; we have made certain pledges to Him. Now hear the inspired writers on the subject: Numbers 30:2, "If a man shall vow a vow unto the Lord, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond, he shall not break his word, he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth." Numbers 27:28, "Notwithstanding, no devoted thing that a man shall devote unto the Lord of all that he hath, both of man and of beast, and of all the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed; every devoted thing is most holy unto the Lord." Proverbs 20:25, "It is a snare to the man who devoureth that which is honly, and after vows to make enquiry." Deuteronomy 23:21-23, "When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the Lord thy God wilt surely require it of thee. That which is gone out of thy lips thou shalt keep and perform, even a free will offering, according as thou hast vowed unto the Lord thy God, which thou hast promised with thy mouth." Ecclesiastes 5:45, "When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it; for he hath no pleasure in fools: pay that which thou hast vowed. Better is it that thou shouldst not vow, than that thou shouldst vow and not pay."

Does He expect us to bring gifts to Him? Psalm 76:11, "Vow, and pay unto the Lord your God; let all that be around about him bring presents unto him that ought to be feared." Deuteronomy 16:10, "And thou shalt keep the feasts of weeks unto the Lord thy God with a tribute of a free will offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the Lord thy God according as the Lord thy God hath blessed thee." Proverbs 3:9, "Honour the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase." The first sanctuary was built of the free will offerings of the people as God directed Moses: "Of every man that giveth willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering." And all through the history of the Israelites there were special free will offerings from time to time for specific purposes of the Lord's work among them. The Psalms say again, 30:14: "Offer unto God thanksgiving, and pay thy vows to the Most High"; 66:3-14, "I will go into thy house with burnt offerings: I will pay my vows, which by lips have uttered, and my mouth hath spoken when I was in trouble." Christ commended the widow for the sacrificing generosity of her free will offering. In the person of Peter He tells us if we love Him to feed His lambs, saying in another place, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." There are instances in the early church of its members bringing gifts to Him by "ministering saints."

We see then from God's word itself that, while we are not compelled to make gifts to Him, He expects us, to do so if we love Him, and most surely He expects us to pay our vows or pledges after they are made, and commends us for doing so.

Do we receive any reward? Malachi 3:8-12, "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed; for ye shall be a delightful land, saith the Lord of hosts."

LEADERS

First church, Lenoir, stands at the head of the Western North Carolina Conference Leadership Training School class. During the past conference year this congregation earned one hundred and six credits in Standard Training schools, sixty-three credits having been earned by the actual membership of the church and forty-three by students of Davenport College who attend our church at Lenoir. To make this record all the more remarkable it should be stated that twenty-seven people representing twenty-seven units of credit earned their credits by going to the Hickory school, twenty-one miles away. This means that these people, after a day's work in the duties of making a living, traveled forty-two miles each night and did the required work of a week's standard training school. It is doubted that this record can be equaled by any church in Southern Methodism. Our congregation at Lenoir numbers just four hundred and forty-seven members. Our heads are bared and our hearts are warm as we congratulate this loyal band of Christian workers.

CHILDREN'S WEEK

During the Sunday of the annual conference your Shelby Sunday school workers were busy promoting Children's Week. Miss Jenkins addressed a parents' meeting at West Market Street, Greensboro, and your humble servant attended Sunday school and addressed a parents' meeting at Central, Spencer. The elementary work in our Sunday school at Spencer showed up particularly well and the parents' meeting was considered quite successful. Newspaper reports tend to make one feel that the West Market Street parents' meeting was also quite successful. A summarized report of the many other observances of Children's Week will be made at some near date. All the reports are not yet in. It is thought that quite a number of our schools have done the splendid work of visitation, the holding of a parents' meeting and the adoption of a forward step.

WINSTON-SALEM CHARGE

Our Charlotte school will be doing business next week. It will be remembered that this school will offer nine courses. Following the Charlotte school the one at Winston-Salem has right of way. This school will be held in the new Sunday school building of Centenary Methodist church and will draw attendance, in addition to the splendid patronage from the city of Winston-Salem, from many points in the surrounding territory. The following courses and instructors will be offered:

- Sunday School Organization and Administration—Mr. O. V. Woosley.
- Pupil Study—Dr. L. W. Crawford.
- Principles of Teaching—Prof. C. T. Carr.
- Intermediate-Senior Agencies—Mrs. J. F. Spruill.
- Junior Organization and Administration—Miss Virginia Jenkins.
- Primary Organization and Administration—Mrs. W. B. Ferguson.
- Beginner Organization and Administration—Mrs. W. B. Ferguson.
- Beginner Organization and Administration—Mrs. C. L. Van Noppen.

Story Telling—Mrs. G. W. Green.
Mr. C. W. Snyder is chairman of a board of managers composed of the pastors and superintendents of the city. Every one is heartily supporting the school.

TWO OTHERS

Following the Winston-Salem school will come the ones at Greensboro and Albemarle. Plans have been laid and arrangements made for splendid schools at these two points. The school at Greensboro will open Sunday afternoon, November 18, and the one at Albemarle will begin Sunday afternoon, December 2. More will be said of these schools next week.

HUNDRED PERCENTERS

The following Sunday schools with amounts opposite their names have completed their payments to the Centenary and are therefore declared to be a hundred per cent Centenary Sunday schools. They have led. It is hoped that many others will follow.

NEW BERN TRAINING SCHOOL

Our Sunday school workers of Centenary and RIVERSIDE, New Bern; BRIDGETON, Vanceboro, Bayboro and Beach Grove, together with a few of their Presbyterian, Baptist and Episcopal co-workers, joined together at Centenary church each evening of the week of October 28-November 2, in the third annual standard training school to be held in New Bern. Six courses in various departments of Sunday school work were offered, as follows:
Sunday School Organization and Administration—Prof. J. M. Ormond.
Principles of Religious Teaching—Mr. Claude T. Carr.

Young People's Agencies — Miss Lucy Foreman.

Junior Organization and Administration—Miss Virginia Jenkins.

Primary Organization and Administration—Miss Georgia Keene.

Beginner Organization and Administration—Mrs. C. B. Culbreth.

This school was sponsored by the Methodist and Presbyterian churches and thrown open to everybody interested in Sunday schools and their improvement. It was a fine week of fellowship, inspiration and instruction.

Rev. W. V. McRae served as chairman of the board of managers, R. N. Scott as secretary, and Dr. W. L. Hand as treasurer.

VANCEBORO WORKERS ADVANCE

Under the leadership of Rev. E. C. Durham, their pastor, a number of our Sunday school workers of Vanceboro attended the training school at New Bern regularly and made advancement in their purpose to become more effective workers in their school. Six were present for the opening Sunday evening, and a few others joined the party later in the week. Vanceboro is between 15 and 20 miles from New Bern, which means that these faithful workers traveled 30 or 40 miles each evening.

SEPTEMBER CROP OF CREDITS

Twenty-four certificates of credit on the Standard Training course were issued in September to workers in the North Carolina conference for correspondence and training class work, according to the monthly report of the Department of Leadership Training at Nashville. This report, of course, does not include the certificates issued by the Standard Training School held at Rocky Mount September 23-28. Following are the names of those included in the report:

- Rev. O. I. Hinson, Siler City (2).
- Mrs. J. H. Boyce, Rich Square.
- Mrs. L. C. Bolton, Rich Square.
- Miss Jessie Splvey, Rich Square.
- Miss Stella Etheridge, Mt. Gilead.
- Mrs. W. M. Hooper, Stumpy Point.
- Miss Edith Meekins, Stumpy Point.
- Miss Beatrice Meekins, Stumpy Point.
- Mrs. R. D. Wise, Stumpy Point.
- Miss Blanche Hooper, Stumpy Point.
- Mrs. L. D. Hooper, Stumpy Point.
- Miss Myrtle E. Wise, Stumpy Point.
- Alfred B. Hooper, Stumpy Point.
- Mrs. C. E. Payne, Stumpy Point.
- L. R. Tyndall, Snow Hill.
- Mrs. E. L. Hillman, Scotland Neck.
- Cecil McRae, Roberdel.
- Nelson P. Edens, Roberdel (3).
- Miss Lila Gale, Rockingham.
- Mrs. Ed C. Thomas, Rockingham.
- Audrey Alphin, Mt. Olive.
- Mrs. Maria Wise, Stumpy Point.
- Mrs. Ruth Hooper, Stumpy Point.

MT. OLIVE MEN ORGANIZE

Certificate of registration No. 10,756 has been issued to a class of men in our Mt. Olive Sunday school who have recently organized a Wesley Bible class. The class is composed of 65 men, with the following officers: E. C. Casey, president; J. R. Southerland, secretary; Allen N. Cox, teacher. The certificate was secured upon the application of J. F. Marquette, of Trenton, New Bern district Wesley class superintendent.

Splendid success attended the efforts of the workers of First church, Elizabeth City, with reference to Children's Week October 14-21. The workers in the elementary departments were busy all the week visiting the homes of their pupils and paving the way for the parents' meeting which was held at 11 a. m. Sunday, October 21, with the following program: (1) Hymn; (2) prayer, Dr. N. H. D. Wilson; (3) "America the Beautiful," choir; (4) talk, "The Child a Citizen," Mr. G. R. Sherrill; (5) solo, Mrs. J. W. Foreman; (6) talk, "Home Training and the Problem of Authority," Mrs. C. B. Culbreth.

Mr. J. H. Hooper, the superintendent, presented the "forward steps," which were adopted by each group by rising vote. They were co-operation by parents and better equipment and training on the part of the teachers. The reports of the visiting which had been done by the workers were made by the department superintendents. The Cradle Roll and Beginner department superintendents reported 100 per cent visitation on the part of their workers. Five primary teachers and four junior had visited all the homes represented in their classes.

As to training of teachers, the school is looking toward a training school at the earliest date possible.

TRAINING AT CITY ROADS

City Roads, Elizabeth City, had a non-standard training school the week of October 21-26, meeting at 6:30 p. m. each evening during this period. The class periods in each of the three courses offered were conducted each evening, with a supper served in between the class periods, adding a very pleasant social feature. Rev. H. E. Myers, the pastor, taught a class in "The Organization and Administration of the Sunday School"; Mr. Holmes one in "The Pupil," and Mrs. C. B. Culbreth one in "Beginner and Primary Methods." The attendance ranged between 25 and 35 each evening.

SPLENDID CHILDREN'S WEEK IN RE SCHOOL AT JONESBORO

Those attending the West Fayetteville Standard Training School at Jonesboro October 14-19 were so pleased with it that they went on record unaimously requesting that a similar school be held for the western half of the Fayetteville district next year. The following resolution, offered at the close of the school by Mr. J. W. Gilliam, and adopted by a rising vote, expresses appreciation for the school just held and a desire for another:

"Whereas, we, the pastors, Sunday school officers, teachers and pupils of the West Fayetteville Standard Training School who have attended the sessions at Jonesboro October 14 to 19, inclusive, feel so deeply indebted to Director L. L. Gobbel and his competent corps of instructors for their untiring efforts, instructive lectures, splendid examples, and wise counsel, that we do hereby tender to the said L. L. Gobbel and associated instructors our most grateful appreciation.

"Therefore, we, the Jonesboro Training School as above described, do commend them to the other churches and communities of the North Carolina conference who have not been favored by their training courses; and do furthermore recommend and urge the churches participating in this school to procure their services for a similar school next year."

Instructors in this school were Mrs. Charles Van Noppen, Miss Georgia Keene, Mrs. E. R. Michaux, Prof. I. B. McKay, and L. L. Gobbel.

SECRETARY WILSON TO LEAVE

Prof. R. N. Wilson, of Trinity College, who has been rendering the Durham district splendid service as district secretary, is doing research work at the University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., and will be there for several months. The district, as well as the college, is missing him and the fine service it has been accustomed to receive at his hands and will be delighted when he shall have completed his work in Illinois and returned home again.

IT'S NOW REPORTING TIME

It is now the season when pastors are making up their reports to take to the meeting of the annual conference in Elizabeth City, and not the least important of these reports will be those relating to the Sunday school. Every pastor is required, under paragraph 399 of the Discipline to report on (1) the number of Sunday schools; (2) number of officers and teachers; (3) number on Cradle Roll; (4) number in Home Department; (5) number of members not included on (2), (3) and (4); (6) total enrollment, including (2), (3), (4) and (5); (7) average weekly attendance; (8) number of pupils uniting with the church during the year; (9) number of persons taking our training course; (10) number of Wesley classes; (11) amount raised on Sunday School Day; (12) amount raised for missions during the year; (13) amount raised for all other purposes; and (14) total amount raised during the year.

It is, of course, to be expected that these reports will be very carefully prepared, for the whole church constituency is dependent upon them for an indication of the progress being made. We believe marked progress has been made during the year throughout the conference, and all of us interested in what our Sunday schools are doing will read the reports of the pastors with extreme interest.

AN INVITATION FOR VISITORS AND NEW MEMBERS

The Spruce Pine League stands firm and strong,

Its branches reaching far and wide,
And waispers to the old and young—
"We want you by our side."

Come sit among our shady boughs
Each Sabbath evening just at seven,
And we will do our very best
To help you on to heaven.

We love the "Son" that makes us grow,
We love the Father, too;
But there's another one we love—
Dear Epworth Leaguer, it is you.

They smile from behind the darkest cloud,
As over the hill they trod,
Hovering beneath an angel's shroud
And protected by a living God.

FOREST HILL LEAGUERS OBSERVE HALLOWE'EN

The leaguers of Forest Hill, Concord, enjoyed a great Halloween social last Wednesday night. The big, jolly crowd had fun and wholesome entertainment in abundance. Refreshments were served at the close. This chapter is taking on new life and a program of constructive work is being planned for the winter.

SPRUCE PINE LEAGUE HAS A POET

Our Epworth League is growing and doing fine. At our last meeting, October 28, we had quite a number of visitors and several new members enrolled. Plans were made to visit the Penland League next Sunday evening, November 4th. We are busy making plans to help raise funds for our new church. We need your prayers.

I enclose a short poem, composed by one of our Epworth Leaguers.

Say, we enjoyed that "roast." It was fine. Send another. We are getting hungry

Mrs. Nellie Bartlet, Cor. Sec.

THINK OF IT!

The Epworth League of First church, Salisbury, gave a gypsy supper Friday night, October 19, 1923, at 6:30 o'clock. We left the high school building at that time and arrived at our destination about seven o'clock. We soon had a fire and everything rolling fast. Then we squatted around the fire and told jokes, sang songs, gave yells and had our fortunes told. About 8:30 we had supper, having delicious sandwiches and cafe noir. Every one left soon after supper declaring they had spent a wonderful time there. About twenty leaguers were present and those absent certainly did miss a good time.

Inez Winecoff, Cor. Sec.

HAGER HAS BIG PLANS

Dear Leaguers:

Now that our annual conference is over and we are beginning a new year, let's begin it by making our leagues bigger and better. We have a district, but let's make it greater; let's make our new presiding elder and new preachers feel like they are glad to be a part of our great district. Leaguers, wake up to your responsibilities. Do you know that a good part of the church's success depends on what you do now, and nine-tenths of what is done in the future is with you? For statistics show that nine-tenths of the church leaders and missionaries come through the leagues. May I ask what you are going to do in your league? And what are we going to do in our district? Our presiding elder's reports show a good increase in the W. N. C. conference, and that is something to be proud of, but let's not forget that fields are ripe and the harvesters are few. When the call comes for the superannuate endowment drive let's be in the thick of the fight and make it a great success in the Shelby district.

May I say a word about our district meetings? They have been fine and the attendance has been good, but we hope to have the biggest and best that has ever been in the district at West End church, Gastonia, the first Friday night of December, or the 7th of December, at 7:30 o'clock. Don't forget the time, date and place. All together for a bigger, better Shelby district. May we expect you? Don't be negligent, but be part of the crowd.

I am yours for bigger and better leagues.

C. L. Hager,

President.

MT. OLIVET LEAGUE ROUNDS OUT 28 YEARS OF ACTIVE SERVICE

Twenty-eight years of continuous activity and faithful service is the record that is justly credited to Mt. Olivet Epworth League, of Concord circuit. None can estimate the influence and wonderful experience of those of this church, to whom the organization and uninterrupted service of our league is due. On the third Sunday afternoon in May, 1895, this league was organized during the pastorate of Rev. W. H. L. McLaurin.

For ten or fifteen years prior to that time the church had enjoyed what was called a missionary society on the fourth Sunday, at which time this church was not entitled to preaching service. On the second Sunday a prayer meeting and song service was held. From this service eventually grew the organized league. While two separate rolls were kept for these meetings, each organization presented good programs and especially did many young people participate in the Rally Day and Missionary service. Select Bible verses, recitations, clippings, songs, etc., were used. Occasionally an extra missionary program was presented and young and old alike were included in the roll call. The free will offerings, collected at different times, aided largely in Mt. Olivet's reputation for having always met in full our assessments at the close of the conference year.

The workings of the departments of the early league were not unlike those of the present day, but were hardly known by the same names. The devotional part of the league was held. The literary department which I am told was so long and faithfully and ably filled by Mr. John A. Fink, included the assigning and handling of the subjects and main programs. The social service department should be a feature no overlooked. Its duty was clearly specified as looking after sick and needy, in the words of the early minutes, "the charity help department."

Our early records show some forty members, though the charter members are said to have been considered fewer. Perhaps shining highest among these early members are three men of sainted memory, Messrs. M. Henderson Winecoff, John A. Fink, and Jesse H. Earnhardt. Brother Fink served for a long while as first president of the league.

These three men, serving in some capacity on the greater number of programs, as shown in the minutes, their godly exhortations are recalled, and we may well say, "Their works do follow them." Special mention should be made of the essays furnished by Mrs. Minnie Winecoff Scarborough and Mrs. Lillie Goodman Scott.

Another striking feature is the number of years which Mrs. Scarborough served as secretary to the league in its infancy.

There is much joy in pursuing these old minutes and records of meetings and the rolls of the faithful young and old, who have labored in our church, many of them today having, we feel, gained their crowns of victory in a greater league of saints.

It is related that at least three of the early pastors took an interesting way to obtain money for the league and Sunday school treasury. At various times a nickel was distributed to as many as cared to invest it and turn the proceeds over to the Lord's treasury. One excellent mother of today recalled having bought a calf from her father for five cents and having sold it for one dollar in a short while. The nickel had increased largely. Some planted peanuts, some bought one-half dozen eggs for five cents, and raised chickens that way, and others planted cotton. Some $250 was realized in the procedure.

During the pastorate of Rev. Mr. Honeycutt a nickel's worth of cotton seed was planted by Wilton Barnhardt, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Barnhardt. The cotton sold amounted to $13.50. For this most excellent return a Bible was presented to this lad, who today cherishes it for the incident connected with it, and for the story of salvation it contains.

During the years the charter of 1895 was misplaced, and largely through the efforts of our brother, Arthur Winecoff, then league president, the present charter was obtained, some six or eight years ago.

Today our league ranks wonderfully well in trained young people consecrated to service. Well planned programs are rendered twice a month, and our contributions aid materially the substantial financial situation. With a membership of one hundred and two, our officers have a very encouraging outlook.

Our present officers, elected February 11, 1923, are as follows:

President—Roxie Fink.
First vice president—H. H. Winecoff.

Second vice president—Annetta Umberger.

Third vice president—Mrs. S. W. Cook.

Fourth vice president, corresponding secretary and Epworth Era agent—Annie Cline Barnhardt.

Recording secretary—Frank Litaker.

Treasurer—Gladys Goodman.

Department superintendents are as follows:

First, E. J. Winecoff; second, Margaret Litaker and Maribelle Umberger; third, Mesdames R. D. Goodman and H. A. Scott; fourth, J. W. Penninger. K. Lee Steele Scott.

North Carolina Conference

HOW ABOUT OUR WHOLE TIME SECRETARY?

Do we need one? Well, answer me this: Are there leagues in every church in the N. C. conference? Are the chapters that are already chartered functioning properly? Are all the leagues co-operating to the best advantage to win souls for Christ? Are there league unions in every town and community and city? You must answer No, no, no, to all these. Then I answer Yes, yes, we need a whole time executive secretary—and we need one badly. The Western N. C. conference has had one for several years and they have prospered greatly thereby. The N. C. Conference League Assembly at Morehead City last June advocated such an official and the conference policy, which included this point, was unanimously passed by the assembly.

Now it's up to the leagues of the conference to pledge their moral, mental and financial support to this issue. Don't say you're not able and can't pay any more. You know everything worth while is worth paying for. Furthermore, anything that will enable us to do more for Christ should have whole-hearted support. Remember—"All for Christ."

POLICY FOR CONETOE LEAGUE, 1923-1924

In order to make our league more effective and of more benefit to the church and the community we shall endeavor to carry out the following policy:

1. We shall hold a league meeting every Thursday evening during the year, twelve of which shall be business meetings, twelve missionary, and the remaining devotional.

2. We shall support the league by attending all meetings, striving to have a 60 per cent attendance of our membership.

3. A council meeting will be held each month. The officers will be required to submit accurate reports at our business meetings. A quarterly report will be sent regularly and on time to our district secretary.

4. This chapter will try to enroll all the non-Christian young people of this community and bring them to Jesus.

5. Visits will be made to the sick and special attention paid to the old people of the community. The leaguers shall be encouraged to maintain the three league covenants.

6. We shall conduct a mission study class this year and pay our mission pledge of $40 on time.

7. The third department will conduct monthly socials and encourage wholesome games and amusements.

8. We herewith offer our services to our pastor, that he may use them as he sees fit. We want him to know that Conetoe Epworth League stands wholeheartedly behind him in all his undertakings.

Hurrah for Conetoe League! Here's one league on the job and one time. Congrats to Conetoe on being up-to-date and on having such a splendid policy. A league with a purpose as set forth in this policy is bound to accomplish great things for the Master. We note especially the fourth point in this policy—"to try to enroll all the non-Christian young people in the community and bring them to Jesus." This is a glorious undertaking. May the Holy Spirit be with them. L. D.

NEW LEAGUE AT MT. ZION

The young people of Mt. Zion church have recently organized an Epworth League. We have on roll twenty-one members. We hope that all of the young people will be members of our Irving Williams League soon.

This is a great work and a splendid opportunity for the young people to serve the Lord. We hope that our league will be a success.

We also want to thank our pastor, Rev. J. C. Williams, for the help he has been to us in our league.

The officers are as follows:
President—Miss Alma Moore.
Vice President—Mrs. Claude Moore.
Secretary—Miss Maude Foushee.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

Potatoes.—So far only a few friends have remembered us by sending us sweet potatoes. We can consume several bushels any day. Who will be the next to donate a few bushels to our Orphanage?

* * * *

Specials.—A few years ago our pastors brought to conference big Specials for the Methodist Orphanage. For the past year or so there has been a marked falling off at conference. I trust that I shall be able to report large Specials at Elizabeth City next week.

* * * *

Assessment.—The way things are fixed now the Orphanage will not get its full assessment unless all the conference claims are paid in full. Since we are borrowing money now to meet our bills, I sincerely trust that our devoted pastors can get all our Orphanage assessment.

* * * *

Next Week is Conference Week.—I sincerely hope that all our pastors can carry up to conference their collections in full as the Orphanage needs its full assessment. If only seventy-five per cent of the conference collections are paid, then the Orphanage will be short twenty-five per cent of its assessment. Since our current expenses are so high, I do not see how we can afford to lose a dollar of the assessment. It may not be generally known that the Orphanage assessment only provides for less than half of our needs. In view of this fact, I wish to urge every charge in the conference to pay one hundred cents on the dollar, so that our Orphanage will not be short of funds.

* * * *

Board of Trustees.—The board of trustees was called to meet in special session October 29th. Some matters of great importance were considered and passed upon. A modern school and administration building is to be erected in the place of the Jenkins building, which is inadequate to meet our growing needs. Brothers J. G. Brown and A. H. Vann are trustees of a fund given by Bro. S. C. Vann a few years ago. It now amounts to something like one hundred and thirty thousand dollars. We hope that this amount will be sufficient to erect such a building as will meet our needs. The entire board of trustees and the whole conference feel very grateful to our noble benefactor for such an expression of interest and love for a cause that lies to his big, loving heart.

* * * *

Mount Olive and Selma.—Our singing class gave sacred concerns at the places mentioned on the fourth Sunday in October. Mrs. Nellie Rives, the cultured choir leader, was in charge of the class. She and the class tell in glowing terms of the gracious hospitality that was extended them by Brothers G. B. Starling and G. B. Perry, pastors of these two churches. The members of the churches threw open their doors to the children and Mrs. Rives and gave them the best they had. Mount Olive and Selma are deeply interested in the orphanage and count it one of the highest privileges to make sacrifice for the object of their prayers and love—the Methodist Orphanage. We feel deeply grateful for such generous and loyal friends. Because of their devotion to so worthy a cause, I wish to commend them without reservation.

WINTER NIGHTS—HOW TO USE THEM

For four months now our nights will be long and will furnish us a fine opportunity for some good solid reading. There are many good books that can be secured for a little cash, and there is a lot of the finest reading that comes to us every month with no extra cost. The Adult Student Monthly, and The Sunday School Magazine which of course comes to every Sunday school in our great church. I have been wondering lately if many of us know really what we have in these splendid periodicals. I have just been looking over the November numbers of these two magazines. They are not especially above former issues of the same periodicals, but take these and look over them. First, an article, "Thanksgiving Day." Just brim full of the finest suggestions and information. Another, "Do You Know What Your Children Read?" And "The Growth of Our Missionary Work," "Pastor and Spiritual Leadership," "The Country Church and the Family," and numerous other contributed articles. These articles are written by strong, clear thinking Sunday school workers and written out of their own experiences. And the plans and suggestions for improvement in the conduct of the Sunday schools and what other schools are actually doing with accompanying photographs. My, what a veritable gold mine of information and inspiration is found in these periodicals month after month.

Now if we can get the habit of reading these. Why not read them aloud around the fireside these long nights and then discuss them, and let all the family take part in the discussions? What a wonderful pleasure and what a wonderful help would come to our families and the school we belong to. Get this picture in your mind. Nine or more families in your church keeping up with the best thought in the Sunday school world. Can you imagine what would take place in your home and your Sunday school and then your church? Try it. The nights are long, and the books don't cost a cent extra.

As a result of this habit it would be a fine idea when you feel the impulse of a new idea for your family and school to try it out and then in your own way. Write a few lines about it to your church paper, the Advocate. Some other family may be helped by it and you will be helping in this great and much needed work.

It would be a splendid idea for our teachers and superintendents to call attention to these articles and suggest that they be read. Let's not waste our literature given us by these splendid co-workers, and let's not waste the long winter nights.

Jas. H. Frizelle.

CONCORD UNION HAS A FINE MEETING

The league union of Concord and vicinity held its monthly meeting last Friday night at Mt. Olivet church on Kannapolis road. The auditorium was practically filled with live, enthusiastic young people. The music was inspiring and the program most interesting. A pleasing feature was the presence of four new pastors, whose work this year will be with the Epworthians of this union. The pastors presented were Revs. Seymour Taylor, L. A. Falls, C. R. Allison and J. F. Moser. Ebenezer Myers and A. R. Tippet, other new pastors, could not be present. The next meeting is to be held at Forest Hill.

Health is Wealth

Health is one of the greatest things your family can possess. It brings happiness and success. But health must be safe-guarded by good wholesome foods that are prepared from the purest ingredients. This is especially true of bakings. If they are not properly raised, we all know that they are not easily digested. Many times when self-rising flour is used in place of good plain flour and dependable baking powder—the results are flat, soggy and heavy foods.

Don't take chances! Use a reliable brand of baking powder and plain flour. Then you will be sure of healthful bakings that are easily digested.

Remember, science has never found anything to take the place of the tried and tested method of using plain flour and good baking powder in preparing bakings. Millions of housewives now know by actual experience that many preparations that are claimed to take their place are worthless and dangerous to health. There is no comparison.

Calumet, the Economy Baking Powder, is known to be one sure and positive aid to successful bakings that are always pure, sweet and wholesome.

That's the reason its sales are 2½ times as much as any other brand.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

"HOW BEAUTIFUL UPON THE MOUNTAINS ARE THE FEET OF HIM THAT BRINGETH GOOD TIDINGS!"

Homeward bound after seven days of hard travel visiting two of the greatest annual conferences in the church to tell them about the special effort for superannuate endowment. I have written so much concerning the hopeful prospect for the movement in every conference personally visited that I determined on this trip to dig up the things not encouraging. But with all my effort I must now confess that not a single unfavorable expression could be drawn from any man or woman. The consensus of opinion everywhere and expressed with enthusiasm is that the time has come for the church to make ample provision for the needs of her worn-out preachers and the widows of preachers.

Western North Carolina Conference.—It was held at Winston-Salem, N. C., the land of pure water, clear skies, and everlasting hills. In this thriving business center of a great state everybody works. There are no drones. The one thing that they are willing to consider worth a pause in their activities is hospitality. How beautifully kind and courteous are the North Carolinians to strangers in their midst! They will love one a plenty as long as one is lovable, but they have a righteous contempt for shams. When deceived they are just as quick to fight as they are to be kind and brotherly when treated on the square.

When I entered the conference room on Thursday morning, Bishop Collins Denny was busily engaged disposing of several pressing matters, so that the superannuate cause could have right of way according to schedule. In due time he called for me to explain the plan for raising the $10,000,000 for superannuate endowment. The same fixed attention was given by all present to the analysis of the movement that has been given to it in every conference. This eagerness to hear the details of the plan, so manifest everywhere, caused a prominent connectional secretary to say this to me: "Todd, I have watched the attitude of the annual conferences when other financial programs were being presented to them, and I am sure nothing has ever gripped them more thoroughly than the plan for adequate superannuate endowment." How it warmed my heart to hear such words! Surely underlying all else in the church's busy life of today there is a mighty tide of passion setting in which has for its objective the payment of an honest debt to the Lord's disabled prophets.

Dr. C. W. Tadlock, of Centenary church, St. Louis, delivered the inspirational address. The doctor was at his best, which explains the pressing crowd around him afterwards, all eager to grasp his hand and express their determination to do the work. Dr. Tadlock had opportunity to discuss the outlook for the cause with many individuals at the church and in the hotel, and he told me that every word spoken to him on the subject was glowing with optimism. He said that one of the presiding elders told him there was not the slightest doubt about the Western North Carolina conference raising its quota. Blessings on the elder! How I love to hear them talk when they speak like that! By the way, the size of the success of the effort for superannuate endowment can be measured by the dimensions of the presiding elders multiplied by the size of the pastors.

At the hotel many pastors talked with me about the work, and all of them made use of these words: "This is going to be the easiest thing we ever had to do." I hope they are right, but we should not be overconfident. Games are usually lost when there is overconfidence before they are played. Furthermore, people never fall over each other crowding to the place to give away money. It is not an easy task to raise $10,000,000, and the quicker we realize it the better off the superannuates will be. It will take patient, painstaking work to do this thing. Therefore may I urge the pastors to prepare for a persistent struggle in which every resource they have will be needed?

Several laymen expressed an eagerness to get at it. One of them told me that I could go away assured that the charge he represented would pay every dollar of its quota and much more. All of them were heartily in favor of the movement.

When Bishop Denny addressed the conference concerning the special effort, he used a figure that deeply impressed everybody. He said a grand old ship would soon stop at the port, that she would not tarry long, and that whoever had freight to put on her should not fail to be timely in the act of loading. He referred to the opportunity about to be given to the church for making contributions to superannuate endowment. The bishop is deeply interested in the cause, and the church can expect his episcopal district to support it loyally.

Virginia Conference.—After a very pleasant and profitable day at Winston-Salem, Dr. Tadlock and I entrained for Richmond. We arrived early Friday, the day on which the great Virginia conference had agreed to hear the representatives of the special effort for superannuate endowment. The hotels were crowded with preachers, and many groups of them were talking about the wonderful address on the "forgotten man" delivered to an overflowing crowd the night before by Dr. Clovis Chappell, of Washington, D. C. Everywhere they were saying: "It was great! It hit the spot! It will get results!" Well done, Clovis. The old boys will not forget.

The inimitable Bishop Candler was in the chair. He played on the emotions of the brethren as Ole Bull on his sweet-toned violin. Part of the time the boys laughed and part of it they cried, but every moment they listened. Into such an atmosphere the superannuate program was projected. The plan was explained, Dr. Tadlock followed with his inspiring address, and Bishop Candler exhorted as only he can do. The response was all that could be desired. It is useless to try to stampede Virginians, for they are not susceptible to that sort of thing. They are, however, open to conviction; and when any speaker can convince them, there is no need to worry about their actions. Undoubtedly they have decided that the superannuate cause is worthy. That is enough. The end of the story will be told in the returns from the special effort.

It was inspiring to hear Bishop Candler's ringing words to the laymen. He told them that they could not transact any sort of business with safety except by virtue of the work done by preachers of the gospel. How true! Take away the influence and work of the preachers for the past hundred years in this country, and where would be the opportunity for dependable business operations today? The preachers more than any other class have created the conditions for successful business. Generation after generation of them have spent all of soul and body for the sake of the outcommon good. Eventually they wore out, and then in feebleness and age they were put aside to spend their last days in abject poverty. And all over the land business men live in palatial residences, having great fortunes, all of which was made possible by preachers who were willing to be the mudsills of such success. What a time is this for business men everywhere to remember the men who served them so well!

At 5:30 Friday evening I was given the opportunity to have dinner with the Pastors' Association and to address them in behalf of the superannuates. This organization each year selects some cause prominent before the church at the time and gives it careful study and diligent support. Very naturally they have selected the superannuate movement for the ensuing conference year. The dinner was at the Y. W. C. A. building. I expected to find twenty-five or thirty preachers in attendance. Imagine my surprise when entering the dining room to find one hundred and thirty of them seated at the tables. It was a rare opportunity to boost the effort for the "forgotten man," and my readers can be assured that I did my best to meet the situation. And yet it almost seemed a waste of time to stand there for thirty minutes urging those splendid fellows to support a cause to which they have been heartily committed for months. There was not a single one of them lukewarm on the subject. By a unanimous standing vote and with much enthusiasm they assured me: "It shall be done." As I looked into their faces and felt the warmth of their sympathetic hearts I thought: What a splendid thing it would be if preachers all over the church would solemnly covenant together to make the special effort for superannuate endowment successful in abundant measure! If this were done, I verily believe that nothing on earth could prevent our grand old veterans from realizing the thing that all of us are so devoutly wishing for them.

Before leaving Richmond I had the opportunity to discuss with Bishop James Cannon, Jr., how best to project the special effort for superannuate endowment in the mission conferences which he has charge of, the same being the Texas Mexican Mission, the Western Mexican Mission, the Mexican conference, and the Cuba conference. The bishop was greatly interested, and he readily consented to carry on the movement according to a plan which we agreed was practical. The Board of Finance is wholly dependent on the bishops in charge of foreign annual conferences and mission conferences to do whatever can be done in these situations for superannuate endowment. The readers of this page will be pleased to know that even in these fields, so difficult to reach with such a program, the special effort for superannuate endowment will be made by whatever method seems best.

Thus endeth another week of hard work for the great cause. May the God of the worn-out preachers give me strength to carry on during the next week, which is even now about to begin! And may I urge all my readers whose souls yearn for the success of the movement to be daily in earnest prayer for the blessings of heaven upon this work which appeals so forcefully to every loving heart.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR
To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

THE BURDEN BEARER
I lift the ever-present burden of widowhood, orphanage, disability, sickness and advanced age of the itinerancy and of the laity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by providing "a home of their own," or its equivalent, to comfort and support them during all the years of life thereafter.
"Safety first" is my guiding star in all business matters and "brotherly love" in all manner of service. My premium rates are adequate to give insurance at cost (30 per cent lower than commercial companies require). Expense of management is reduced to the minimum, being the lowest amount permissible while insuring efficiency. Personal profit, investment methods, and employed paid agents are not allowed. This is saved for the Certificate holders.
Benefit certificates are issued for insurance protection in amounts of $3,000 or less per application on following attractive plans: Whole life; twenty-premium life; endowment at age sixty and seventy; term to age fifty, sixty, and seventy; annuity, and combination of plans.
The itinerant preacher of the past has had no chance. Shall they of the future fare no better?
By their own institution, ingenuity, thrift, and divine Providence they are solving their financial problems. The sting of superannuation is removed.

BIG BUSHY SQUIRREL GOES A-HUNTING

By Charlotte E. Wilder.

Big Bushy Squirrel liked nuts better than you like candy. So when he looked into his private storeroom and saw that his big pile of hazelnuts was gone he felt the anger begin in his throat and run all the way down to the tip of his big bushy tail.

There were only two tiny shriveled nuts that had rolled down into a corner of the hole. He took both of them with him and hobbled out to his front porch to think it over. The front porch was a branch that ran along before his door; from it he could see the world, and the world, as it went by, could see him. There he sat, nibbling on one nut, and thinking, thinking and nibbling. Along came Scamperring Squirrel.

"Good morning, Scamperry," said he. "Have a nut?"

"No, thank you, Bushy," was the answer. "It isn't my custom to refuse the offer of a nut, but my cheeks are bursting with some I've just picked up." And he pattered on his way with his round cheeks bulging.

All the while Skinny Squirrel was resting on a fence post nearby, trying to look hungry. It was hard for him because he had just packed away a whole pile of Bushy's nuts in his own skinny house and had tried a few of them with great satisfaction. Of course the little thief was foolish to stay there at all, but Skinny was very, very curious.

Bushy had been watching him out of the corner of his eye. "Good morning, Skinny," he called. "Have a nut?"

"Oh, thank you, indeed," said sly little Skinny and came sidling up. "Are you sure that you can spare one?"

"Spare one?" asked Bushy and he laughed a great ha-ha. "I can spare one hundred. My tree is brimming full. Would you like to see it?"

Skinny wanted to see it very much; he knew perfectly well that Bushy had no nuts at all left in his hole, but he was a curious squirrel. "Why, yes," said he.

"Come right in," replied Bushy and stood aside to let the visitor enter first. "Walk to the right, please, and be careful of the step."

Skinny went down into the hole and Bushy pattered close behind. They came out into the big empty place where the nuts had been.

"This used to be my storeroom," said Bushy carelessly, "but I have my best ones stacked behind. Step through that little hole you see, please. Mind the low door."

Skinny stepped in, wondering what it was all about. He had no sooner got his body through than the door, which was a big stone, rolled up behind him and caught him fast by the tip of his tail.

"Good morning, Skinny," called Bushy in a mocking voice. "I'm going off on an errand now. I hope you'll be comfortable there. Eat any nuts you find."

As there was no sign of a nut, Skinny had to sit, with his tail caught in the door, and wait—hours, it seemed. Sometimes he heard the pattering of quick squirrel steps in the next room; sometimes for a long while there were no sounds at all, and sometimes he could hear rolling and bumping noises.

Suddenly the door rolled open and as his tail came free he fell forward on his nose. Then, turning, he saw the outer room was filled with nuts, piled clear to the ceiling like a snow bank. There was a little lane down the middle and Bushy stood at the other end of it.

"I've enjoyed your call, Skinny," said big Bushy Squirrel. "I have never accomplished so much in a morning before. I found a wonderful place for nuts. There was a whole mountain of them. Come again, and with a polite bow he showed Skinny to the front door.

"And, Skinny," he said as he held the door open, "the next time you carry any nuts from my house to your house I advise you not to crack them and drop the shells all along the way; it tells so very plainly where they went." Big Bushy Squirrel smiled.

And he shut the front door—slam! —Youth's Companion.

ANOTHER NICODEMUS

Mrs. Roy Smith.

I want to tell you about the baptism of a principal under whom I have been teaching now for two years. His case is a good illustration of the truth that "My word shall not return unto Me void." Twenty-four years ago, while still a high-school boy, this man was taught by a Presbyterian missionary. During all the years since he has been favorable to Christianity, but his Buddhist mother made him promise that as long as she lived he would not be a Christian. Because of his promise and since it took much courage to stand out as a Christian teacher some years ago, he has been content to keep his belief hidden.

Even as a boy, though, he exhibited the marks of Christian teaching. Once he was struck very rudely by a farmer as he was walking along the road. This farmer was a friend of the family and had become so angry with him for attending a Bible class that he could not control himself when he saw the boy, but hit him with the spade he was carrying. When he was taken to the police station, the boy refused to prosecute him and quoted the Bible to the amazement of all.

Not long ago the daughter of this man was taken to the hospital. A few visits to a neighborhood Sunday school had taught her all she knew of the Saviour, yet three hours before she died she commenced to pray. At her request the father sent for a Christian preacher and the child died in all the triumphs of faith. The father was so greatly touched that he defied the old grandmother and had a Christian funeral.

The next day I had a long talk with him and urged him, since he had taken this great step, to go still further and be baptized himself. He paused and thought earnestly, but at last said, "Yes, I will." Then it was that he told me of his experience twenty-four years ago in the Bible class, and of his desire even then to become a Christian. Gratefully he remembered the old missionary who had given him his first vision of the Christ. When Dr. McAlpine visited Kobe shortly afterward he was baptized.

How many different missionaries have watered the gospel seed planted a quarter of a century ago, I do not know, but it was our happy privilege to see it bloom in our own home. He says he will tell his teachers why he has taken this step and will stand for Christ before the thousands of girls he comes in contact with. He has even promised to go to the country to do some evangelistic speaking.

The Advocate carries in stock baptismal, marriage and church membership certificates. Order your supply from this office.

RED CROSS BUSY

The West and Southwest can no longer boast a monopoly on tornadoes, floods and the many other little practical jokes Mother Nature is prone to play on poor mortals. In spite of the boll weevil, shortage of rain in some sections and too much in others, the year's crop of serious disasters in the South compares favorably with those of the most devastated areas of the country.

Figures gleaned from the annual report of disaster work of the Red Cross just received, which covers activities from June 1922 to June 1923, show that in the twelve months' period there have been fifteen serious disasters resulting from terrific storms, floods and fires in the South, which destroyed millions of dollars in property.

The year has been one of almost unprecedented natural calamities for this section of the country, the report states, and has necessitated the expenditure by the organization of over $163,500 in extending relief to the thousands of people deprived of food and shelter, and left destitute without warning by a freak trick of nature. Relief given, it is stated, was administered in accordance with the policy of the American Red Cross, and was in every instance based on the actual needs of the individual.

Mentioned among the more severe disasters in which the Red Cross has extended relief in the last year are the destructive fire at New Bern, N. C., December 1, which destroyed over $2,500,000 worth of property and left 3,500 people homeless; the hail storm of August 3, 1922, which left 173 families of Anderson, S. C., in need of immediate relief; the More Haven, La., flood which inundated over 150 homes; the little town of Hamlet, Miss., which was visited by two terrific cyclones in as many months, wiping out practically the whole town; and the tornado which swept through Pinson, Tenn., devastating a large section of the city, killing twenty people and injuring 100 others.

Rheumatism and Indigestion

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

If you suffer from Rheumatism, Indigestion, or from any curable disease accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to Shivar Springs, Box 4D, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons (two five gallon demijohns) of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give the water a fair trial in accordance with instructions which you will send, and if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

A BRAND NEW IDEA

Helps Mothers - Pleases Children

Fall and winter is the time of the year when mothers are pressed with the necessity of entertaining the children with parties in their homes. Heretofore mothers have oftimes been at a loss about arranging these parties. "The Children's Party Book" by Marion Jane Parker, just off the press, will save mothers any further worry about planning children's parties.

The plan, like the book, is a worthy one, and should receive the consideration of our church women, as a ready means of raising funds.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Hayesville Methodist church, wish to express our sorrow in the loss of one of our oldest and best-loved members, Mrs. Josephine Ketrone Anderson.

She died as she lived, strong in her faith. Through all her suffering she manifested a beautiful Christian spirit, and the light of her life will continue to shine through all eternity.

We miss her greatly, but as we know "He doeth all things well, we resolve:

First, That we bow in humble submission to the will of the Father who cares for us here below.

Second, That remembering her life while here with us shall strengthen us to greater endeavor in His cause.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, the Scout and to the bereaved family, also that same be recorded in the minutes of our society.

Mrs. G. B. Thompson, Mrs. B. N. Haigler, Mrs. W. B. Pass.

"MY PIANO IS GRAND, THE PLAN IS GOOD"

"I think my piano is just grand, and I feel more thankful every day that I have it. The Advocate Club Plan is equally as good as the piano. I do not believe any one can get up a better plan, or a more satisfactory one, that will enable persons who want a piano to get it so easy. The piano has been much admired for its beauty as well as the sweet tone it has. I never expect to regret the price of it." Thus says Mrs. M. A. Morris, one of the Club members, and others are writing practically the same thing every day.

No wonder they are pleased with the Advocate Piano Club. When you have investigated their money saving plan, when you have learned how easy it is to buy a Piano or Player-Piano through the Club; how the Club protects you in every way by its guarantees and insurance feature, you, too, will be as delighted as Mrs. Morris.

Don't let your family starve for music any longer. It is not necessary. If you have been putting off the buying of a Piano or Player-Piano for them, don't wait longer, but write today to the Club and have them send you full particulars, together with their Catalogue which shows the many different designs from which you may choose. ### GREENSBORO COLLEGE STUDENTS' RECITAL, MONDAY, 8 P. M., NOVEMBER 5

Frank M. Church, Director.

Those who observe and note the appearance of new students were particularly impressed with the first appearance as pianists of Misses Martha Cameron, of Kinston; Elsie Thompson, of Graham; Lucy Mast, of Valle Crucis; Gwendolyn Mitchell, of Clayton, who sang delightfully, and Nellie Earp of Lynchburg, Va.

Other pianists who have greatly improved since last appearance were Misses Elizabeth Wilson, Mildred Michaux and Cecile Lindau, all of Greensboro; Murtis Maynard, of Salisbury; Virginia Lowrance, of Catawba; Agnes Edwards, of Seaboard; Olive Mae Fentriss, of Franklinville; Rachel Glover, of Salisbury; Mildred Godfrey, of Spencer, and Sara Bell, of Charlotte.

CHINA GROVE FEEDS ITS HAUS

The night was Friday—dark, with the sky overcast with clouds, the time it is supposed when goblins stir. The hour was exactly eight. The door bell rang. The preacher opened the parsonage door, and lo, he thought the month was December, the night Tuesday, and the date the 25th, for St. Nicholas Dayvault and Santa Bass with forty-seven others of their ilk rushed in and past. They would not be stopped until to the dining room they came. Fifty-seven packages containing fifty-seven varieties of eatables loaded down the table and its environs. A pounding? I reckon, too. Only those pastors who have served here can understand just what I mean. And, besides, this is the second offense within the past four months. Along with the packages came a sum of dollars which the preacher is to use in helping to buy a new suit and a hand bag, since he let some one steal his while at conference. God's richest blessings on each of the givers.

This little town on North Carolina's main street, nine miles from Salisbury, is known not only for its groves of China berries, but also for its loyal people. When we get our new church you will hear some big noise in China town. W. E. Hauss, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

Whereas, Rev. S. T. Barber is soon leaving us for a pastorate in his conference, the Western North Carolina, we feel that we want to put on record an expression of our appreciation of his faithful and very efficient service; therefore be it Resolved, That we, in quarterly conference session, want to say we appreciate most highly his splendid work among us. His preaching has been of the best—we never had better; his pastoral work the most excellent, and his wisdom in handling difficult problems has been outstanding. We have thoroughly enjoyed him as preacher, as pastor and as a real friend and Christian gentleman. He is pure and chaste in his speech, in his thoughts and in his conduct. It has been a benediction to have Brother Barber with us. Our church is on a higher plane and in greater harmony because of his services. He has pointed us to higher ideals and inspired us to nobler purposes.

We regret deeply that we cannot have him with us longer. It will be hard to fill his place. We commend him most highly to those who are fortunate enough to have him as pastor. Our love and prayers will ever follow him. We have heard only words of praise for him since he has been with us, and we thank his conference for loaning him to us. And he carries our hearts' love with him as he goes.

Rev. J. W. Williams, presiding elder of the North Wilkesboro district, is anxious to secure a preacher for the Laurel Springs charge, which will pay about $700.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

IN MEMORIAM

PATTISHALL-RIDDLE—The tragic destruction of two lives at Colon Monday afternoon, October 8th, sent a wave of sorrow over the entire community. Max Pattishall and May Belle Riddle, about five and a half years of age, were playing in a small barn, which in some way caught fire and burned to the ground. Exit being obstructed by the flames the children were burned beyond recognition. Their charred remains, found in the ashes, were put into the same casket and buried in the same grave. The grief of the parents is inexpressible. Sympathy flows from every heart. Sad, sad indeed. May God's grace comfort the bereaved ones.

E. C. Sell.

FRAISER—The subject of this sketch, Mrs. Geneva Haskett Fraiser, was born January 22, 1888; died October 1, 1923. She had been confined to her bed for about three months. During her illness she was never heard to murmur or complain. Her life was somewhat a sad one. Her husband was drowned about two years ago, leaving her to care for her children. Afflictions though severe oftentimes are in mercy sent. Her aged mother cared for her during her illness and everything that loving hands could do was done for her comfort until the spirit took its eternal flight to the God who gave it. May the sustaining grace of Him who doeth all things well ever abide with her mother and children. Her pastor,

J. C. Whedbee.

JACKSON—The gentle angel of death made his appearance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Jackson on the night of September 24, 1923, and ushered the soul of Jerry Jackson to his heavenly home. He was born April 22, 1850. He was converted and joined the Baptist church in 1865. He lived a Christian and was ever ready to do his part in any work of the church or community in which he lived. His funeral was conducted from Lebanon Methodist church by Rev. H. C. Freeman, assisted by Rev. E. P. White, after which his body was tenderly laid to rest in the church cemetery.

On December 8, 1878, he was married to Miss Eliza Womack, who survives. To this union was born one daughter, Mrs. V. B. Hyder.

W. W. Womack.

McMILLAN—John Archie McMillan was born June 28, 1888, and died September 16, 1923, after a long period of patient suffering. All who knew John liked him, for he was so kind and cheerful—always had a smile for everyone. He spent three weeks in a hospital in Lumberton, but all for no benefit. He often said while there he was growing weaker and he wanted to come home to die. So he came home and his stay was only a week, when the death angel came and took him away. He leaves three sweet little girls and a sad and lonely wife, father and mother, two brothers and three sisters, and a host of friends. We are all looking to that great day that is so near at hand, when we can see the sweet smile on dear John's face again and be with him to never say goodbye.

One of his last requests was to a good old friend of his was "Goodbye, meet me at the pearly gates." He was so cheerful up to the very last he called his oldest little girl just before he died and caught her by the hand as if to tell her goodbye, but was too near those pearly gates to bid the farewell.

Will all the good people of the Advocate please ask God to send His blessings upon this family; that we may all meet dear John in that bright land of peace and love, where our tears will never flow?

John was a member of Sandy Grove church and his remains were laid to rest in the family burying grounds near Arabia. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. R. F. Munns, and the floral offerings were most beautiful. John was a bud of love, but now has gone to bloom with God above. Oh, how sad and lonely we are without him. But I hope to meet him some sweet day.

His Wife.

COGGINS—On August 29, 1923, the death angel visited one of our Methodist homes, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Coggins, and claimed their little infant daughter, Nannie Ernestine, who was ten months and five days of age. She was a bright, lovable child, full of sunshine and gladness, and was the joy of that home. May the God above who gave her be with her parents to comfort them in their sad and lonely bereavement, and may she be a beacon light on the other shore calling them home above when life is done in this world.

A Friend.

HERRING—On July 10th Miss Isabella Francis Herring passed from her earthly home to her eternal reward. She was born April 8, 1941, died July 10, 1923.

For nearly eight years she had been confined to a bed of suffering, the result of a fall. All these years she was patient, cheerful and resigned. She enjoyed the companionship and appreciated the delicate ministrations of the loved ones around her, but she was willing to go when God called her.

Miss Herring is survived by a brother, Mr. John B. Herring, of Cypress Creek, Bladen county. In his home she was tenderly nursed and cared for by Mrs. Herring and two daughters, Miss Eulee and Miss Mary Herring. She was a most lovable, Christian woman, consecrated to her Master, devoted to her friends, deeply interested in the Sabbath school, in missions, in education and all agencies of church work. The pastor always found a welcome in her home.

She was fond of young people, and nephews and nieces and other kindred were fond of her. Her life was an inspiration and a benediction to all who knew her. Her ideals were high and it was her earnest purpose to bring sunshine and happiness into the lives of others.

Miss Herring had been for many years a devoted and faithful member of Antioch Methodist church.

The funeral services were conducted by a former pastor, Rev. J. A. Sharpe, assisted by Rev. E. W. Huske. Her body was tenderly laid to rest in the family cemetery in the presence of sorrowing friends and loved ones.

J. A. McArthur.

MOIR—I presume that there will be a detailed obituary from Brother Allen, but I have a few things I would like to say about Mrs. Melvina Vanhoy Moir of Walkertown, who departed this life at high noon September 26, 1923, at the ripe old age of three score years and ten and eight, eight months and twenty days. Mrs. Moir lived in this community all of this time and has the coveted distinction of having belonged to Love's Methodist church for about three score years and ten, and the whole community is in mourning and stricken with grief because of her going away.

I was for two years Mrs. Moir's pastor, and I loved her. She in return was my friend. In fact, she was the friend of every preacher who ever went to Walkertown. She loved vehemently her church and was faithful to the end of life. I remember her devotion, how she came to the services, listened with enrapt attention to every word the preacher would say and responded in the most beautiful way to every call. I shall never be able to get away from how she impressed me on communion Sundays. I would speak of how His blood was shed and His body broken for us and then when the invitation was given to gather around His table, Mrs. Moir would arise first and in tears almost run to the altar.

Unselfishness was the leading characteristic of her life. She forgot herself in thinking of others. She denied herself to do for others. One could scarcely enter the home till he had set before him the most tempting things to eat. She was known far and near for her hospitality. She was generous and gracious in all she undertook to do.

I sat by her bedside when she was not expected to live and across the hall lay her only living daughter at death's door. She would say to me, "Brother Mann, don't forget to pray for Lillie, and then remember me, too." Miss Lillie passed to the great beyond, but the aged mother never lost faith, but smiled and prayed, until they both now sit beside "that peaceful shore where neither hearts nor

Legibility of Inscription

Probably the most important factor in the erection of a memorial aside from beauty and durability, is whether the inscription can be read easily at a reasonable distance. Inscriptions on Winnsboro Blue Granite memorials are more plainly legible at greater distances because of the perfect uniformity of color and the brilliancy of its crystals.

No wonder this harmonious reflex gray granite, with slight bluish tinge, greater in density and durability than other monumental granites, and known as "The Silk of the Trade," is specified by discriminating buyers whose memorials must be built of lasting stone without blemish or flaw.

Ask your dealer to use only Winnsboro Blue Granite on your order. If he can't supply you, write us, and we will put you in touch with a dealer who can.

waves can break." We know where to find them. The husband and three children had gone on. Only two children remain, but we will meet her one day. It will not be long. Only a few more tears and a few more years at the most and we will all sit together and sing, and there will be no weeping. We will shout, but there will be no lamentation.

May her Christ sustain her loved ones till we shall meet again.

A Former Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Just as the evening shadows were drawing nigh on the 3rd of October, 1923, the soul of our beloved sister, Mrs. Lela P. Ormond, was wafted into eternity.

This good woman was born in the year 1866, and spent three years serving her Lord in many happy ways. To know her sweet, sunny nature was to love her.

Her married life with Bro. W. W. Ormond was a singularly happy one. God never blessed their union with any children, but as she thus expressed it, "If we never had any of our own we have reared quite a number."

She loved her church and all its institutions, and fully enjoyed attending church services, prayer meetings, Sunday school, missionary society, and her study class.

She possessed such a remarkably pleasant personality it has been said often of her, "I am sure she never had an enemy."

Just four years from the day she was buried her husband "went on before." What a happy reunion for such wonderful spirits!

Since it has been the will of divine Father to call from a life on vice our sister, Mrs. Lela P. Ormond, be it resolved:

First, That a vacant space in the ranks of our Woman's Missionary Society of Hookerton, N. C., and in the study class, reminds us of the loss of a faithful and interested attendant.

Second, That our hearts are grieved at her going, yet we realize it is her Father's will and know that all is well.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, The Missionary News, and a copy be spread on the minutes of our Missionary Society.

Mrs. W. F. Taylor,
Mrs. E. C. Sugg,
Mrs. J. E. Albritton.

WARREN—Mrs. J. R. Warren died Saturday night, July 14, in a Charlotte hospital, where she had been taken for treatment. After arriving at the hospital it was at once decided that she should undergo an operation, and this being the first of the week and her condition seemed to be for the better until Saturday morning, when it became known that she was very desperately ill. The news arrived at Monroe and a large crowd hastened to the bedside to learn on their arrival that the sweet life of a great woman had passed away. Her body was brought to Monroe at once and prepared for burial by the undertaking department of T. P. Dillon and Son, and all during Sunday the home was visited by hundreds of friends who went to offer words of sympathy and consoling words to the heart-stricken husband.

Rev. and Mrs. Warren have made their home in Monroe the past seven years, as Mr. Warren has been pastor in charge of North Monroe, M. E. church and also the M. E. church at Ice morlee. The Warren family have made many friends here and in Union county, who will learn of the death of this good woman with great sorrow. Sister Warren was a good, kind and loving wife and was loved by everyone. We thank our heavenly Father for her devotion and loyalty to the Saviour. She served daily and to the church of which she was a member, and we rejoice in blessed joy that is her's as she is now called to a higher service in the presence of her King.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at five o'clock at the Warren home in Benton Heights, and was conducted by Rev. C. C. Weaver of Central M. E. church, Dr. W. R. Burrell of the First Baptist church and Rev. J. B. Craven, presiding elder of the Charlotte district, and Rev. Mr. Chandler of the First Presbyterian church, all of Monroe. A large crowd attended the funeral and the floral offerings were large and beautiful. The remains were carried early Monday morning to Winston-Salem, where they were laid to rest in the family plot to peacefully sleep until the resurrection morning. We as close friends of Rev. Mr. Warren do extend to him our heartfelt sympathy in this great and trying hour of trouble.

W. M. Rose.

EDITORIAL ~ PARAGRAPHS

A young aspirant asked a certain literary character of note how to learn to write. The wise old man gave his youthful inquirer this recipe: "Take a quart or more of life-blood, mix it with a bottle of ink and a spoonful of tears and ask God to forgive the blots." This recipe for the making of books might be used to advantage in the making of sermons. Blood and ink and tears accompanied by the mercies of God will surely get results.

In the coming months Methodist people will be called upon to think about and discuss the proposed plan for the unification of Episcopal Methodism. Let us hope that there will be no digging up of the diseased rags of a distant and evil past with the hope of infecting the people with prejudices and passions which ought to be allowed to sleep in the grave of forgetfulness. To spread the germs of such diseases in these days of a better understanding and a larger fellowship partakes of the nature of a crime against the finer virtues of our religion.

To the poets November is a month with no butterflies, no bees, no birds, but a time of "surly blasts that make the fields and forests bare." But the practical man finds November a month of fatness. The corn is in the shock and the frost is on the pumpkin. 'Possums, persimmons and potatoes are all ripe and what a trio are these? The haystacks are in the meadows and the barns are bursting, while the cotton fields are giving up their fleecy staple and "all the darkies' hearts am singin'." Even the forests are not yet bare. They still hang out their banners of crimson and gold and russet brown, for the pageant of the autumnal woodland continues till late in November. Truly it is fitting that this should be the month for the day of national Thanksgiving.

The blackest chapters in human annals record not the sins of youth against age but of age against youth. In this catalogue of crime are the tyrants who in cowardice and cruelty slew the innocents of Bethlehem, the fanatics who slaughtered children by the millions in foolish and fruitless efforts to rescue a shrine from an entrenched enemy, and the monsters of greed who will grind the flesh and bone of little children in the mills in order to fill their own coffers with gain. But these are not by any means all the sinners with gray hairs upon their heads. The young are open-minded and eager for the truth. Then along comes age guided by prejudice and slams the door of knowledge in the face of youth. The graves of all the battle fields of earth have been filled by young men. But the young men were not responsible for the wars. Older men than they and old men did it. If the men who start the wars had to fight the battles there would be no wars. The generation that goes before is in each and every instance responsible for the sins of its successor. The race has been damned by the very people that were old enough to know better. Gray hairs which ought to be a crown of glory may, and too often do, become a symbol of shame.

When the boys filled the camps over here and were two million strong on the battle fields of Europe a little child was accustomed to offer this prayer daily at eventide:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord by soul to keep.
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.

God bless daddy, God bless mother, God bless Uncle John and all the soldiers."

The four million soldiers have become civilians again, "Uncle John" is back from France and the little girl has gone from us to be with the "lover of little children," but amid all these changes there comes across the years the music of that childish voice in her evening prayer, for it was there and then that God and heaven and earth had come together.

Why destroy the "groves, God's first temples," or slaughter the trees which are among the best and finest handiwork of the Almighty? "Woodman, spare that tree," is not the chatter of some busybody, but comes as a command from God who "saw everything that he had made and behold it was good."

"I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts its arms to pray.
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in its hair.
Upon whose bosom snow has lain,
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree."

* * * *

"Whatever happens is for the best" has become an oft used expression which many people believe to be true. But such a doctrine is rank heresy. If that be true why strive to make this a different world in which we live? Death from an assassin's bullet, a character poisoned by the tongue of slander, a life damned at the dictates of lust are by no means for the best. On the contrary, many things that occur in this world seem to be about as bad as possible. The church has been accustomed to put its ministers at the open grave to read, "Whereas, God in His all wise providence has taken out of the world the soul of our deceased brother, etc." That is another heresy. We Methodists have very properly cut that expression out of our ritual. It ought never to have gone in. The bloody Turk, for instance, may have been an instrument in the hands of the devil, but he has not been in his age-long atrocities an agent in the hands of an all wise, loving Father. If God were guilty of all that has thoughtlessly, and even in terms of piety been attributed to him, he would be the most cruel monster in the history of the human race. A God that will slaughter little children, mock at the tenderest ties of love and subject innocence to cruelties unspeakable has not been revealed to us in the person of Jesus Christ. Such a deity belongs to the pagan but not to the Christian.

BISHOP COKE, NORTH CAROLINA PIG MEAT, SHAD FISH AND PIES

Bishop Warren A. Candler has brought from the Cokesbury Press the "Life of Thomas Coke." It is an attractive volume of 400 pages and full of interest from cover to cover. We are quoting a paragraph just to let our readers see that it is a book which appeals to the natural man as well as to the spiritual. Note the following paragraph picked out at random:

"It is interesting to notice some allusions in Coke's journal with reference to the food he found in the Methodist homes of North Carolina. He says: 'Their animal food is almost entirely pig meat, with sometimes shad fish. I have hardly eat anything these ten weeks of the flesh kind except swine's flesh and shad fish. Blessed be God, I have been enabled to set apart Friday as a day of fasting or abstinence ever since Christmas, except one day when I forgot and one day when I traveled fifty-two miles. In the morning I eat a little bread and drink some milk and in the afternoon eat some greens (the only garden stuff they have got in this part of the country) and some fruit pie. They have a great variety of fruit pies—peach, apple, pear and cranberry—and puddings very often. I esteem it one great blessing that I prefer the Indian corn to the wheat. Besides they generally do not manage their wheat properly in the South so that the wheat bread is very indifferent.' With shad, pies and good corn bread he was faring very well, but evidently was pining for British flesh-pots—mutton, roast beef, and plum pudding. We forgive his want of relish for some things, seeing he liked corn bread which seldom pleases the palate of a Britisher."

Furthermore, good Bishop Coke never got a taste of a Saturday dinner at quarterly meeting or he might have become a presiding elder in North Carolina instead of "The Foreign Minister of Methodism" to be buried at last in the waters of a far off sea.

This is no review of Bishop Candler's book, but an effort to get it into the heads of our readers that here is a volume which they cannot afford to pass over. Order of Lamar and Barton, price $1.50, and learn about the man of whom Isaac Taylor said: "Obsolute devotion to his one object, a devotion which spared nothing of personal welfare or ease or fortitude or worldly repute was Dr. Coke's distinction. As to the entireness of this devotedness he was not inferior to Wesley, or to Whitefield or to Fletcher, and the sanctuaries he thus willingly offered to God included more than had been surrendered by any other of the founders of Methodism."

BOREHAM AND HERESY

F. W. Boreham, that interesting and charming writer who lives in far away Australia, but whose books are read in every part of the Christian world, combines all heresies into two. And these two are the very ones that have never been given chase by the heresy hunters. Here they are according to Boreham:

"In the development of church history there have been scores of heresy hunts; but there have only been two heresies. Adam started the first, and Cain inaugurated the second. The first was the heresy of There-ness: the second was the heresy of Here-ness. Adam believed that God was there, but not here; so he hid. Cain believed that God was here, but not there; so he went out from the presence of the Lord and dwelt in the land of Nod. The heresies of the Old Testament were all of them enslaved by one or other of these twin fallacies. Jacob, for example, thought of God as a poor little tribal deity who could lend Himself to trickery and cunning, and who dwelt in the little slice of land in which his father happened to reside. It came upon him as a bewildering surprise that, in his fugitive flight, he had not evaded the vigilant care of the Most High. From his stony pillow in the wilderness there was a ladder that led to heaven, and, wherever he fled, God's angels were! Naaman's pitiful conception of God led him to carry home with him two mules' burden of the soil of Canaan that he might enjoy the superstitious satisfaction of praying to Jehovah on the very soil that His Spirit pervaded. Jonah cherished the thought of a God who could readily be evaded by the simple expedient of crossing the sea. From the deck of a gallant vessel of Tarshish he waved a confident good-bye to the God whom he was leaving behind. The heresies of Here-ness the There-ness have blighted ten thousand lives, and they may easily blight ours."

HEARTS HUNGRY FOR THE FATHER'S PRESENCE

"Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us," cried Phillip when face to face with a speedy separation from his Master and when assured that treachery existed even within the ranks of the twelve apostles. The Father's fellowship, in Phillip's judgment would be enough, even when Jesus had gone away and the perfidy of Judas Iscariot had been discovered.

This heart hunger for the father's presence has been tenderly portrayed by Sir Hall Caine in his "Scapegoat." Little Naomi is a child deaf, dumb and blind. Human speech, earthy voices and visions of earth and sky are all unknown to her. Little Naomi's mother is dead and she lives with her father who is an alien in a strange land without companions and friends. The motherless child oftentimes arose from her couch at night and the little white robed figure, silent as a statue, would be found standing by the bed of her father. It was night, but darkness and light were alike to her. She couldn't tell why she had in silence sought out his bedside. But the fact was she just wanted to be near her father. "So with a sigh he would arise and light his lamp and lead her back to bed, and more scalding than the tears that would be standing in Naomi's eyes, would be the hot drops that would gush from his own."

"I need thy presence every passing hour;
What but thy grace can foil the tempter's power?"

Who, like thyself, my guide and stay can be?
Through cloud and sunshine, Lord, abide with me!"

NEGLECTING GOD'S POOR

"What is the use of living in an empire which boasts that the sun never sets upon it, if you live in a slum like this where the sun never rises?" Such complaint is attributed to a poor woman who lived in a miserable tenement in East London. The query cuts like a sword with two edges and applies more widely than to British rule which in its pride of empire allows squalor and wretchedness within the borders of its capital city.

Here is a lesson for the church of God. In its vision of world conquest and its persistent plea for the nations of earth there should be no oversight of God's poor which may be at one's door. To have a zeal for missions in Africa and at the same time neglect the negro in one's kitchen or to mistreat the colored laborer who is one's near neighbor, to say the least, is not Christian. To speak the whole truth such conduct is contemptible and devilish.

The Christian order is first at Jerusalem and then to the uttermost parts of the earth. Let not Jerusalem be forgotten while one fixes his gaze upon the uttermost parts of the earth. Neither let the "regions beyond" be neglected with the spurious plea that the duties at home are so exacting. "The world is my parish" was Wesley's law of services. It should be the rule for all his followers.

Mr. B. N. Duke has done a gracious act in presenting the Methodist Orphanage, Raleigh, with a new Packard car to be used by the singing class in its visits to churches to give sacred concerts. This gift of Mr. Duke will be greatly appreciated by the Orphanage. The superintendent has over and over told the public of this urgent need.

MRS. S. C. VANN OF FRANKLINTON GONE TO HER REWARD

After three weeks' illness Mrs. S. C. Vann died at her home in Franklinton, N. C., last Saturday, November 10. She was 65 years of age. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at four o'clock in the Methodist church, of which Mrs. Vann was a devoted member. Three of her former pastors, Rev. R. F. Bumpas of Raleigh, Rev. N. H. D. Wilson of Elizabeth City, Rev. J. H. Shore of Rockingham, and her friend, Rev. W. W. Staley, pastor of the Christian church, came to the funeral. Her pastor, Rev. O. W. Dowd, had direction of the simple service, which was in accordance with her taste and desire. Only one song, "How Firm a Foundation," was sung. Rev. N. H. D. Wilson offered prayer and Rev. J. H. Shore read a scripture lesson, after which the interment was in the family burying ground in the cemetery.

Mrs. Vann was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Henley of Franklinton. She leaves her husband, Mr. S. C. Vann, one son, Mr. A. H. Vann, and two daughters, Mrs. J. A. Moore of Rosemary and Miss Eleanor Vann of Franklinton.

Mrs. Vann was a quiet, unpretentious woman whose life was filled with good deeds. It is said that for more than 25 years she had been superintendent of the primary department of the Sunday school, kept a record of birth, baptism and reception into the church of all the children of her department. Whenever any of her Sunday school children joined the church she presented them with a Bible. This is mentioned as an instance of her interest and care in all the affairs of the church.

"When her husband became rich," says one, "the only difference it made in her life was that it enabled her to be more generous in her ministry and gifts to those who were sick or in need. She did not wait for calls upon her heart and purse. She sought out those to whom she could minister. In her last days she left requests to her husband and children to carry on help to certain of her former friends to whom she had been almoner. In life she gave her gentle sympathy with her gifts and the love of all was because of grace and loving spirit rather than because of her abundant generosity."

NORTH CAROLINA FARMERS PROSPEROUS

According to the State Department of Agriculture, the North Carolina cotton crop this year amounts to $174,960,000, the tobacco crop $74,970,000 and the corn crop is worth $59,108,400, which makes the total for these three leading crops $309,638,400.

To this can be added some millions of dollars worth of wheat, peanuts, apples, peaches, cantaloupes, lettuce, strawberries, potatoes, chickens, hogs and the like, the exact market value of which cannot be accurately determined.

North Carolina will still retain the fourth place among the states of the Union in the value of its agricultural products. The Tar Heel state stands second in the output of its textile manufactures.

This material prosperity is an occasion for thanksgiving and at the same time should carry with it a sense of responsibility for the moral and spiritual interests of our people. It is still true that "man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." A full barn and a starved soul has upon it the stamp of a fool, Jesus Christ himself being judge.

Lamar and Barton have accepted for publication a manuscript from Rev. M. T. Plyler. This will be a book of about two hundred and fifty pages, entitled "Bethel Among the Oaks." In this, we understand, the place and contribution of the church of the open country to the life of the nation will be dealt with by incident, character portrayal and story. The theme is one enlisting the best thought of the day and this new book should make wide appeal. It is expected to come from the press during the winter or early spring.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

North Carolina Conference, Elizabeth City, November 14.

Rev. E. K. McLarty will assist the pastor, Rev. W. R. Shelton, in a meeting at Wadesboro beginning November 18.

Mrs. J. S. Stanbury, of Boone, N. C., mother of Rev. W. A. Stanbury, pastor of Grace church, Wilmington, passed through Greensboro last Tuesday to visit her daughter, Mrs. W. L. Scott, in Ramseur, N. C.

With Mel Trotter in a meeting at Kannapolis, Cyclone Mack at Monroe and Billy Sunday to be in Charlotte after Christmas that part of the state is being well cared for as far as the service of evangelists goes.

Rev. J. T. Mangum, the preacher at the Methodist church, was well received Sunday when he preached his first sermon at the school auditorium. He had a large and well pleased congregation. The Baptist pastor and his congregation called in the night service and joined in to welcome the new pastor Sunday night. All were highly pleased and think Waynesville fortunate in securing Mr. Mangum.—Courler.

The Marlon Methodists with Rev. W. E. Poovey as their pastor and leader has employed an architect to draw plans for a double-unit church plant to cost over $100,000. The unit to be known as the educational building will be erected first at a cost of approximately $40,000. The style of architecture will be classic and will harmonize with the main church building to be erected later. The construction of the first building will not interfere with the present church which will continue in use.

Rev. J. C. Postelle writes: "I want to thank the kind friends of Henrietta and Caroleen and all who contributed for the nice suit of clothes I received from them since conference. May God richly bless them. Also the splendid crowd at our new home in Gilkey, who came Tuesday night after the kind ladies had prepared a warm supper. They took possession of the dining room and more than filled it with good things to eat."

Dr. R. F. Bumpass in closing up a successful year at Jenkins Memorial church, Raleigh, where there has been a ten per cent increase in members and plans perfected for a new building, reports that he has made 1100 pastoral visits. How is that for the man who stands at the chronological head of his conference and is now completing 52 years in the conference? Some of the younger men might learn a lesson from him.

Rev. M. T. Plyler, presiding elder of the Durham district, has undergone a most unusual and pleasing experience. The preachers of the district have presented him with a purse with which to clothe himself anew for conference. These preachers, nine of whom have been with him the entire four years, take this method of expressing their appreciation of the work done by this elder the quadrennium closing. Noble band of itinerant Methodist preachers! One would have to go far to find another such lucky presiding elder! So thinks the elder himself.

Bishop Bristol, who was in Lexington last week presiding over the North Carolina conference of colored Methodists, last Friday night addressed the Men's Club of the First Methodist church and Sunday night preached for Rev. W. L. Hutchins, the pastor. The bishop while in Lexington

A beautiful farewell service was held at the Methodist church Sunday night in honor of Rev. J. F. Moser, who leaves this week for his new field at Kannapolis after a pastorate of six years here. The church building was filled 30 minutes before the hour for the service and all space was finally filled including the balcony and all aisles and some left standing and even some seated in the entrance to the auditorium. No church meeting was ever held in Cherryville having a larger attendance from every denomination.—Eagle.

The sudden death last Monday night of Mr. E. L. Sides of Greensboro has brought sorrow to an extended circle of friends. His death was unexpected even to his immediate family. He had been at home for a day or so as he did not feel able to take up his work at the bank, but no one regarded him seriously ill. His heart failed Monday night toward midnight and his departure was sudden as well as unexpected. Brother Sides was a good man, active in religious work and his going away marks the close on earth of a useful life. The woman who has through the years walked by his side has the sympathy of all who know her.

Rev. and Mrs. Frank Siler are looking forward with joyful anticipation to the arrival in this country of their daughter, Annice, who is now Mrs. Howard, and her little son from Japan. Mrs. Howard and her son sailed November 13. Mr. Howard has been compelled to defer his coming for a little while. Mrs. Howard has been away seven and a half years. Not only will her parents hail with joy the return of their daughter after these years, but the numerous friends of Mrs. Howard will extend a whole-hearted welcome to this gifted young woman who returns for a visit to her native land.

The two weeks' meeting conducted by Evangelist Thurston B. Price and his musical director, John E. Thomas, of Asheville, closed at Steele Street Methodist church Sunday night. Much interest was manifested in the services from day to day and a large number of people were converted under the powerful preaching of Evangelist Price. From day to day many of the shops, factories and places of business closed and many of the business and professional men of the place attended the meetings. The people of the town showed their appreciation of the work of Messrs. Price and Thomas by presenting them with a purse of $1200.

A Sampson county preacher proposed to organize a lodge of the Ku Klux and collected $10 initiation fee from a number of folks. No lodge was formed and when those separated from ten spots began complaint all the money was returned except $90, which the preacher said he had spent. For this he was indicted, but the prosecution was considerate enough, at the parson's request, to postpone the trial until he could conduct a meeting. The klan seems to have a bad effect on the preachers. Numbers of the cloth who have mixed in the invisible empire have become besmirched in one way or another. Remarkable, too, considering the high moral purposes of the order.—Statesville Landmark.

PATRIARCHS

Those who diligently read church papers occasionally find reference made to some superannuated brother as the oldest living Methodist preacher. It is the desire of the writer to publish in the forthcoming number of the combined General Minutes and Yearbook of the Church as complete and accurate a list of the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who are eighty or more years old as it is possible to obtain. I will, therefore, be greatly obliged if such veterans, their relatives or friends, will assist me in this matter by forwarding at once the full names of any ministers born during or before the year 1844, giving additional information as follows: Date and place of birth and present address. Curtis B. Haley, Nashville, Tenn.

MOUNT AIRY DISTRICT NOTICE

The district stewards, the district lay leader and associate lay leaders, the charge lay leaders and all pastors of the district will please meet in Walnut Cove on Thursday, November 22, at 10:30 a. m. Matters of vital importance are to be considered. Let all of those mentioned above be present.

We are expecting C. H. Ireland, conference lay leader, and H. R. Dwire of the Winston-Salem Sentinel and one of the conference associate lay leaders to be with us for addresses. J. H. West.

THE ACTIVITIES OF A GREAT CHURCH

The following interesting statistics were presented by Rev. W. W. Peele, pastor of Edenton Street church, Raleigh, N. C., to his mid-week prayer meeting group the night of November 7th:

New church members joining during the conference year—216.

In the past five years more people have joined Edenton Street church than were members at the time Brother Peele came to the charge.

Fifty per cent of the present membership which now totals 1459 have joined during the past five years.

Those who joined on profession of faith came mostly through the Sunday school.

Removals during the past year, 66. With the addition of 216 new members this makes a net gain during the year of 150.

Baptisms during the year but 20. This number rather unusual for such a large congregation. Ten adults were baptized during the year.

There was an average of one marriage a week, making a total of 52 during the year.

The five-year Centenary pledge was $38,000 with a total paid to date of $28,000, leaving a balance due of $10,000.

Educational fund pledge $30,000. Paid to date $10,000.

Ninety-four certificates of credit have been issued to members of the Sunday school teacher training work.

Brother Peele then offered the following suggestions for a possible program for the coming conference year of 1924:

1. A teachers' training course to be held in February.
2. A teachers' training department meeting every Sunday.
3. A teachers' training class meeting during the week with a final examination for credit.

The possible employment of an educational director.

The need of an enlarged Sunday school building, using space in basement and adding to rear of present building.

A course of lectures to be held similar to those made by Dr. Campbell Morgan two years ago.

Church extension work, assisting Central and helping Epworth church to build a modern equipped building in Person Street direction.

With the closing of the Centenary comes the time for taking on a definite missionary special. Not less than two pastors in the foreign field should be supported by Edenton Street church.

The possibilities of this church have never been fully realized and Edenton Street's membership will meet this challenge.

A MARRIAGE OF WIDE INTEREST TO EPWORTH LEAGUERS

"Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Bradley, of Cornelius, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Grace Gertrude, to Rev. James Samuel Gibbs, the wedding to take place November 22 at Mt. Zion Methodist church, Cornelius."

Miss Bradley has for several years been field secretary for the Epworth Leagues of the Western North Carolina conference and the efficiency of this alert and zealous official has contributed largely to the growth of existing leagues and has been effective in the organization of new leagues. The leaguers will give her up with reluctance.

Rev. J. S. Gibbs is a member of the Western North Carolina conference, pastor at Morven, and a successful young minister of great promise.

To these young people we extend in advance of November 22 our good wishes and heartiest congratulations.

SHELBY DISTRICT NOTICE

"Pastors, lay leaders, and district stewards for Shelby district will meet in Main Street church, Gastonia, at 10 o'clock November 20." Such is the wire that comes into this office from Rev. C. S. Kirkpatrick, the presiding elder of the district. We are sure that the presiding elder is anxious for all to attend the meeting next Tuesday.

"FOURTEEN YEARS AGO"

G. M. Daniel.

Every annual conference lingers in memory as a high and holy privilege. It is here that we can best recognize and name the impelling power which has helped us over the hard places, and steadied us in the trying ones—"the love of Christ constraineth us." Here we see afresh that ours is a common task, singularly uniform in its demands in its compensations. Here are bound tighter the bonds of brotherhood, and through days of Christ-blessed fellowship we get our faith and courage renewed. Such to the true itinerant is every annual gathering. And yet with us all there must be some particular year that marks high tide in holy memories and experience. Nineteen hundred and nine is the year outstanding in the recollection of this writer, he was admitted on trial. Conference was held in the city of Raleigh, Bishop Wilson presiding.

And that was fourteen years ago—1909-1923. Listen to the Apostle: "I know a man in Christ fourteen years ago . . . how that he was caught up into Paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter. On behalf of such a one will I glory; but on mine own behalf I will not glory, save in my weakness" (2 Cor. 12). I wonder if there is not in the experience of every man who gives himself willingly and unreservedly to the ministry much that is akin to what the Apostle knew? He experiences the same exaltation of acceptance; and through the years becomes conscious in an increasing degree, with shame, of his manifold shortcomings.

Fourteen years ago—the number doesn't matter—certain ambitions in themselves worthy were put aside for the greater opportunity and service, we caught the stride of the itinerant hosts and came up for admission. "Admitted on trial"—how full those words were of meaning. To be given a chance in the ministry of mother's church; to be given a chance to prove a good "servant of the Lord Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle." Admitted on trial, the Great Taskmaster always in the foreground of consciousness and bishops and presiding elders and appointments in the background; anxious first of all to win His approval, to make good with Him. Isn't that something like our experience? And, honestly, have we held our thinking and our ambitions always to that order?

"Then draw we nearer, day by day,
Each to his brethren, all to God;
Let the world take us as she may,
We must not change our road."

A great many things can happen in fourteen years. Nobody dreamed of a world war, for instance, or the great Centenary and Christian Education movements which have aroused us so. We had been thinking for some time that it might be well to remove the time limit; to lay out episcopal districts; to grant the women laity rights. But these things have all been attended to quite recently. In fact, with the proceedings of the 1909 conference before us, we are impressed that while it is true indeed that "Time driveth onward fast" we as a church, and as a conference, have been pressing on with quite a stride also. Here are a few items in proof taken here and there from the minutes.

A resolution is offered, signed by two of our strongest and most forward-looking men:

"In view of the fact that the Holston and Western North Carolina conferences have each appointed a committee of five to confer with like committees from the North Carolina and South Carolina conferences, for the purpose of establishing at Weaverville College a summer school where our people may gather for instruction and recreation, Resolved, That a committee of five," etc.

This movement, as I understand it, had no connection whatever with the beginning of Junaluska. But the need was felt—and we have now our summer school for preachers at Trinity, and the incomparable Junaluska, both permanent institutions.

Football was in disrepute at Trinity. So far as the game was concerned, certain great spirits saw to it that the student body was kept absolutely pure in heart. It was a serious offense to own a pair of padded breeches. Five of the brethren could well get their hearts and heads together, therefore, to do some missionary work along this line. The result was this offering, which was adopted:

"Resolved, That we earnestly beg that the game be reformed or discontinued in all the schools of our country. Ended or mended."

The game has been greatly "mended," in which fact many of us rejoice.

A committee is appointed following the adoption of a resolution bearing the signatures of J. F. Bruton and R. B. John "to take into consideration the founding of a high-grade college for women." Just what became of this movement? It may be that later we decided to concentrate our interest and resources at Greensboro. Whether we did or not, we certainly have in Greensboro College for Women all that the resolution was seeking, an A-grade college with "standards equal to our colleges for our sons."

Concerning Vanderbilt University, the Board of Education reported:

"In all of its departments we commend this our one great university to the patronage and support of our people."

We deeply deplore our loss, and in the same breath give hearty thanks for our two young universities, and for a great, and yet-to-be-greater, Trinity.

In the report of the committee on temperance is this paragraph:

"We believe that our experience as a prohibition state this year has proven that the near-beer saloon is an evil and a cover for the violation of law, and we desire to protest against it."

And here we are taking prohibition so matter-of-factly that many have actually forgot how we came by it—local option, dispensary, near-beer saloon and all. And just a little farther back still, a student at Trinity could have had acquaintance with twenty-three local "bar-keeps," including the well-known and genial "Happy Patty."

The preachers are faring much better in the matter of salary. In 1909 the average was $843.66. In 1922 it was $1818.43. Pastors have enjoyed a higher per cent of increase than presiding elders. The average for presiding elders in 1909 was $1950, against $3,368 in 1922. Our presiding elders have used their influence and opportunity in the quarterly conference most unselfishly to look after the interests of their preachers. Through years and seasons of depression they have resolutely fought back, on behalf of their men, retrenchment which would have been manifestly unfair to the preacher and bad for the church.

Nineteen hundred and nine was the year preceding General Conference. It is sad to note that four of the five clerical delegates elected have received a transfer to the great beyond, as have two of the lay. Memorials sent up from this session are very interesting. Only two can be mentioned here. M. T. Plyler offered a resolution which would give the church conference the right to nominate stewards. It will be remembered that this matter received a great deal of attention in 1922, and in a modified form barely missed becoming a law.

Another resolution offered at this time called for the election by ballot, without nomination, of "a required number of men, from which number the presiding bishop shall select the presiding elders." The author's name is not published—out of regard for his welfare, no doubt!

The old mother conference made a heavy draft on her daughter at this time, bringing down the state J. C. Wooten, W. W. Peele, M. Y. Self, and F. S. Love. If these four should some day wander back, what a gap it would leave!

Looking back through these fourteen years there is much to make us humble, and cultivate patience. Time gets by so fast, and so little is accomplished by fretting and chafing. Thirty-three men fallen out of the ranks, besides some two more superannuates who, having filled up a measure of usefulness, went aside to rest. A number of our ablest have fallen, and left. Their unfinished tasks are ours. In the while we will be getting our marching orders

"My time is short enough at best,
I push right onward while I may;
I open to the winds my breast,
And walk the way."

John Williams, of Erromanga, speaking in burgh, once thrilled a missionary meeting on account of his wonderful work in the islands sea. After him a meek, trembling fellow m ary had to speak, and this is how he began: "My friends, I have no remarkable success to relate like Mr. Williams. I have labored for Christ in a far-off sphere for years, and have seen but small result of my toil. But this is my comfort, when the Master comes to reckon with His servants, He will not say 'Well done, thou good and successful servant,' but 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant.' I have tried to be faithful."

Isn't that the mark?

ROTATION AMONG STEWARDS

If this gets the blue pencil I may try it again. As a member of our great Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and as member of a board of stewards for a while, I sometimes yearn for an opportunity to speak a word for the Master along lines seemingly so pertinent at this time, hence I am offering just a few words in this.

We have read much about the condition of the country churches, and so-called problems of the country churches, yet I do not believe many are being deceived about this matter. I am bold to suggest that the great trouble with the country church is not with the church at all, but with the boards of stewards and church officials.

Stewards should be changed every four years just like the preachers, and I pray for this to become law some day, as the good preachers will not take the responsibility to put Brother "Smith" out and put someone in his place for fear he will make Brother "Smith" mad, when no one knows any better than the preacher that Brother "Smith" does not possess the smallest qualification as a steward. I heard a man nominated and elected as a steward at the last fourth quarterly conference I attended who has never attended a quarterly conference in his life, who has not attended his own church more than once in four years and who has not paid a cent on his pastor's salary or any other collection in four years—and yet we have some good folks who will tell you they do not know what the trouble is with the country church.

Another thing, Brother Editor, if the stewards were changed every four years, I am confident we could at least reduce that terrible malady, or whatever it is that becomes so prevalent among the stewards along in October and November, along about the time for the fourth quarterly conference; I will call it stewardjetis. It is a pretty bad thing to have—the writer knows because he has had it—and it is a little contagious, too, but never dangerous for the fellow who has it, as he convelesces just as son as the fourth quarterly conference is over or the preacher leaves for conference.

I believe in the adoption of a policy that will relieve the preacher of every financial proposition of whatever nature, that he may preach the Word and do the other multitudinous things so necessary to be done. I know of some churches whose stewards do this now, and oh, what is the result? Always the same, namely, the development of a higher standard of Christian stewardship, Christian fellowship and all the other blessed things His Spirit engenders—and then what happens? Why, the first thing you know you will be able to love—yes, actually love your preacher; and as you know, love hides a multitude of faults. So you at once have a better and bigger preacher, and all the problems of church finance will be solved.

Some of our good folks will call this visionary, and in a sense it is, but when our boards of stewards get a vision of the wonderful opportunities presenting themselves, RIGHT NOW things are

A LETTER FROM THE FLORENCE CRITTENDEN HOME

My Dear Helen:

You have asked me so many times to tell you about my work here at the Florence Crittenden Home for unfortunate girls, but I have not had the time till now to tell you of this glorious work for the dear Lord and Savior.

I think every one in North Carolina should know about these dear unfortunate girls. Oh, if we could bestir the good men to aid us more—first in demanding the same purity of their associates that women demand of their sisters and not recognizing a double standard of morals and purity.

I have been in this work for almost four years and how my heart has gone out to them. Our spiritual life and the close study of the Book of Books is our first incentive by which we hope to purify their thoughts to such a degree that their whole viewpoint will be changed. I hope I may be able to write you at least once a month and tell you of the wonderful things we have been enabled to do for them through God's love and care.

These poor misguided children will have to wear the scarlet letter all their lives, while the men who are responsible for their misfortunes will go unpunished by law and unslighted by society. Can this be justice? "God save the mark."

Fathers are guilty of the great and terrible sin of bringing children into the world through the ruin of their own daughters, beginning their illicit relations with them when they were mere children. Brothers ruin their own young sisters. Brothers-in-law ruin their wives' sisters and all go unpunished. Married men frequently bring ruin and disgrace to them, knowing full well that in order to protect their families they will not suffer exposure.

We have had in our home within the last year three girls 15 and 16 years old who have borne children for their own fathers. One of them has had two children for her father. She was entirely alone. No doctor, no nurse, no woman near at the time. She a child, 15 years old, to bear the awful pangs of child birth with no one near but the cruel, heartless father. Only imagine a condition like that. How we shudder to think of the ordeal when we have the kind and tender care of our good husbands, physicians and nurses—and even then we feel that we can bear no more. Poor dear children, how I pity them!

We have had two 13 and 14 years old girls who have been made mothers by their own brothers; four whose brothers-in-law are the fathers of their children four whose own uncle caused them to become mothers. Two sweet little sisters, whose babies were born within three weeks of each other, by the same father, their uncle, the brother of their dead father.

One poor little feeble-minded girl 16 years old whose mother's brother, a man 38 years old, who is married and has two children of his own, caused her unfortunate condition. She is the only child and the idol of her broken-hearted parents. They said they had the most implicit confidence in him and allowed him to take her in his automobile to see her grandmother any time he wished to, and these rides caused her ruin. We have two other feeble-minded girls who both have feeble-minded babies. But what shall we do in cases like this? We cannot cast them off. Someone must care for them and try to comfort and help them as much as possible.

We have had four trained nurses, who as a class should be above reproach—and they fell. Two of them through internes in the hospitals where they were taking training. One through her brother-in-law while on a visit to her sister. Another was having her eyes treated by a specialist and she fell through his blandishments and perfidy, notwithstanding he had a young and attractive wife and five children, the youngest a baby four months old when he ruined this girl. Not one thing would he do to help her in her great distress, but told her it was as much her fault as his and thus it stands. He has made shipwreck of her life, but still carries on his profession—and God alone knows whose daughters he is besmirching, while this poor girl must "tread the wine press alone."

Two stenographers who are orphans came direct from two of our orphanages in different parts of the state. They both met their Waterloo at the hands of men who were doing office work with them.

In my next letter, dear Helen, I will tell you some of the real tragedies of their lives and how they struggle to be bright and happy in the face of their great misfortune.

Yours for the Master, Cousin Kate.

A WORD ABOUT MINISTERIAL COURTESY

Simple though this subject may seem, yet it is of vital importance, to both the ministry and laymen. And yet disregarded many times by both.

Ministers are supposed to be sent by the Holy Spirit, and men who have accepted the greatest calling on earth, and therefore called to fill the most honorable, respectable and important calling among men. And, until he proves himself otherwise, he is entitled to the respect and courtesy that is due him by both minister and people.

I was very fortunate in the early days of my ministry to be the junior preacher with Rev. D. R. Bruton as my senior and Rev. G. A. Oglesby for my P. E., both of sacred memory, from whom I learned many things about how to treat my brother in the ministry.

What I am going to say, some critic may think I am trying to act the part of a Solomon. If such should be the case, let me relieve your minds at once, for I am neither the son of Solomon, nor was my father named for him.

One thing I was taught to treat my successor was, when I left a charge to leave it, and not be hanging around throwing taffy at the people, apparently trying to get the people to believe that you were a Solomon by the side of your successor. Which you know is not so, even if you succeed in getting him to believe it.

As I understand it, I do not regard it proper courtesy for the former preacher to try to persuade the people on his former charge to call on him to officiate at marriages and funerals and visiting continually among his successor's flock and neglecting his own, for the purpose of getting them to say complimentary things about him and thereby embarrass their own pastor and cripple him in his work.

I believe one of our bishops was about right when he said some years ago at our conference: "When you leave a work, for God's sake leave it."

Sometimes laymen and lay women will take special pains to tell their pastor how they loved their former preacher, and what a great man he was, which might be true largely, but their own pastor might know all that without being told. And yet they did the same thing by their former pastor when he was on the field.

The truth is no former pastor or preacher of the same denomination has a right to officiate in another's pastorate without his knowledge or consent. And he won't do it if he has any sense of ministerial courtesy and refinement; especially when the pastor is his senior in the ministry.

I am now serving a mission charge and trying to encourage the people to make it self-sustaining, but some of such conduct as above mentioned has had a tendency to prevent our people from doing so. The charge has the ability to become self-sustaining, but the sentiment is against it.

A certain pastor wrote the former pastor a plain letter and told him to please stay away from his work and stop interfering with him and his people. He paid no attention to it, not even answering his letter.

If he was so fond of the people and his work, why did he not keep it when he had it, for his presiding elder tried to get him to keep it when he was there.

If every Methodist preacher will look faithfully after his own flock and fulfill his obligations to them, he will have about all he can do all the time.

Stick to your own bush, do your duty like a man, and when you have accomplished this, if your brother minister calls on you for assistance, be courteous and manly enough to go to his rescue in the spirit of Christ.

I am not the only preacher that has suffered from these ecclesiastical pests; if I had been, I would not have written this letter. I am writing for the protection of others as well as for myself.

In love to God, for His great church, and for my fellow man, without any prejudice or malice toward any one I am writing this.

The Steadman charge is in good shape and improving some all the time. The spiritual condition has improved wonderfully; many of our young people officiate publicly when called on. We have a splendid Epworth League, and Woman's Missionary Society organized last year and this that is doing splendid work.

Our church here at Steadman has recently put on a fresh coat of paint which adds very much to its attractiveness.

We are expecting to have a good report at conference down at the Betsy City. R. F. Taylor.

TWINKLE, TWINKLE LITTLE STAR

The huge star Betelgeuse, the diameter of which is two hundred and forty-two million miles, no longer holds first place in the heavens in respect to size. Antares, the brightest member of the constellation Scorpio, has recently been studied with the interferometer, Professor Michaelson's instrument for measuring stars, and its diameter has been found to be four hundred and twenty million miles! Startling as the result is, says the Scientific American, astronomers had anticipated it.

Though Antares looks fainter than Betelgeuse, it is twice as far away and is in reality three times as bright; moreover, it is fully as red as Betelgeuse and so probably gives out rather less light to the square mile. It is not astonishing to find it the bigger of the two stars. Its actual luminosity is approximately three thousand times that of the sun; its diameter is about five hundred times that of the sun, and its superficial area is perhaps two hundred and forty thousand times as great. The figures show that to the square mile Antares gives out only one eightieth as much light as the sun gives; that is, the surface of the star is much less luminous and probably is cooler than the darkest parts of any sun spot. Again the fact is not astonishing, for the spectrum of Antares marks it decisively as one of the least intensely heated of the stars.—Youth's Companion.

SPECIAL PRIZE CONTEST CONTINUED

The close of the contest for the special prize of five hundred dollars ($500) offered by the Junaluska Woman's Club, through the generosity of two business men, for the best long story or novel, has been extended from December 1, 1923, to July 1, 1924.

Many recent inquiries concerning the contest have made it seem wise to heed the request for longer time. For detailed information as to requirements, persons interested are referred to page 38 of the Souvenir Number of "The Junaluskan," which can be had for fifty cents (50c) from the office of the Southern Assembly, Lake Junaluska, N. C. No other contest will be put on for 1924 by the club.

LIFE'S CENTER

Every life has its center. It does not take a long conversation with a man to find out what that center is. If it is wealth, he talks of money; if fame, he enthuses over its glories; if pleasure, he is always suggesting some new form of amusement. His whole thought revolves around these self-chosen selfish centers, and just as the spirit of Raphael entered into his pupils, so the spirit of the sordid things of life will enter the life of a man or woman who might otherwise live, as Raphael did, gloriously and forever. O that some mandate from on high might be issued that would forever brand these false centers of life! But is there not one? "Seek those things which are above." "Set your affections on things above." Seek first to be one of the learners in Christ's inner circle, for it is He alone who can teach you how to be the greatest blessing to others and get the greatest happiness for yourself.—Ida Q. Moulton.

FIELD NEWS

ELDORADO, NEW HOPE CIRCUIT

On the second day of November we said goodbye to the Deep River charge. We left the parsonage about two o'clock and arrived here between one and two p. m. We found carpenters doing some work on the parsonage, and in a short while the good women began to come in offering their services in any way, and one good brother brought us a load of wood before night. And on Saturday night the good people of the community took us by surprise and filed into the kitchen, and the many nice things they left on the table we will enjoy many days hence. About the time they were saying goodnight a crowd of young people came around and serenaded us. We certainly appreciate the hearty welcome with which this people have received us. And we pray God that we may indeed be a blessing to them and the entire charge.

Mrs. J. A. Howell.

PASTOR AND WIFE OVERWHELMED WITH JOY

On Thursday, November 1st, the good people of the High Shoals Methodist Episcopal Church, South, sent through their representatives, Bros. J. L. Clark and Harry Robinson, a most gracious pounding, consisting of an abundance of very delicious and appetizing provisions which were a very great addition to the pastor's culinary department.

There was flour, ham, sugar, coffee, syrup, rice, canned goods of many kinds, other meats, lard potatoes, honey and tooth picks, and so many other good things that I will not now enumerate.

The pastor was away from home at the time and Mrs. Raper received the good things, and when the pastor arrived on the scene she was so overwhelmed with joy that the pastor soon became as happy as a lark and joined in the hilarity.

This band of Christian workers at High Shoals are a very loyal band and know just how to make the parson happy.

Long will we remember this kind act.

We hereby express our most hearty thanks to each and every one who had any part in this gracious pounding. May God add His blessings to them and help us to feed them in their souls. Rev. and Mrs. A. S. Raper.

PASTOR RUNS TO PROTECT HIS WIFE

I suppose we are all together. Last Saturday night I had taken my oldest boy to the Y. M. C. A., and right in the midst of all the fun I received a distress call over the telephone from the lady of the parsonage requesting my return at once. Like a good husband I immediately responded. I found practically my whole congregation besieging the parsonage, and they were everlastingly pounding my wife and all the children, but on investigation I discovered that they were all love-licks. You can imagine my complete surprise. Such a pounding you never saw. I can assure you that both Mrs. Bowling and myself were deeply touched by this splendid manifestation of loyal interest on the part of the whole church.

God never made a finer or more loyal set of folk than the people of Spray, and particularly the Methodists of Spray. Our people have shown both Mrs. Bowling and myself many kindnesses since we came to Spray, and we deeply love and appreciate every one of them.

They have particularly seen to it that the parsonage should not lack the necessary equipment to make it comfortable. I venture the assertion that there are few, if any, better furnished parsonages in North Carolina than the parsonage at Spray.

The ladies have recently placed a splendid stove, namely, "The Estate Hetrola," in the parsonage at a cost of $165.

The church paid out everything in full last year, and we have already put our heads together for another 100 per cent year.

Spray has the name of being a difficult field to cover, and it is, but it is worth all the effort and more than any man can put into it.

BETHEL-NEW HOPE CIRCUIT

At present we are located in the home of Mrs. Pusey, of Morven, N. C., that good woman whom most of our preachers know. I hope to soon be able to get on the territory of my part of this very large circuit. It is a wonder it has not been divided before. I have four churches, one beautiful brick building, a good frame building, and two ordinary churches.

There are some excellent people all over the work and I do not see anything to hinder Bethel-New Hope circuit coming to be one of the best in the conference.

During this week some of our people have been in and left many things pleasing to the inner man.

We have two subscriptions for the Advocate and will pick up others as we can. J. C. Umberger.

KANNAPOLIS AND ALBEMARLE

I remained in Kannapolis the Sunday following conference and preached to large congregations both at the morning and evening services. At the evening service Bro. A. H. Sides announced that since it was their custom to give a visiting pastor the "loose" offering, and since I was not their pastor the usual custom would be followed with me, and that those present would be given an opportunity to give me a small farewell offering. This amounted to $35 and it came as an agreeable surprise. The following day the women of the church presented Mrs. Swaringen with $50. Another agreeable shock! On Monday evening the Senior Epworth League presented me with a fountain pen that cost $8.75. This was a most appropriate and much appreciated gift. I can prove it by Brother Moser that those people in Kannapolis are great folks.

On Monday, while we were receiving local shocks, there came a "long distance shock" from First Street church at Albemarle saying that they were sending two trucks after my "goods" on Tuesday morning. Everything was in our favor "coming and going." On arriving in Albemarle we found one of the best, most commodious, well located parsonages that we have seen in the conference. And we found the parsonage fairly well furnished. But Brother Sharp, the former pastor, had anticipated that we would need just a few other furnishings, and at his suggestion and probably at the suggestion of others, the "Ladies' Aiders" met at the parsonage and decided to purchase all that was needed to complete the furnishings. Their purchase amounted to $150, and we are "fixed" now.

Considering the weather, we had large congregations at church Sunday, November the 4th. With a church membership of 400, or a little more, we had 229 in Sunday school on a very rainy day. The greatest surprise I have received since coming here was when I found 111 at prayer meeting last Wednesday evening. The Haggard meetings had just closed here, which probably had something to do with the attendance. And then it may be that these people enjoy prayer meetings. We are delighted with our reception here, and we are pleased with the outlook for First Street church. By the help of God we are going to do our best.

R. A. Swaringen.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY M. E. CHURCH, MOREHEAD CITY

Whereas, this service closes our conference year, and our faithful, true and much loved pastor, Bro. W. A. Cade, will leave us for conference on Tuesday morning, November 13; and

Whereas, under the polity of our great church all appointments have to be made at the annual conference each year, now therefore be it resolved:

That we, representing the M. E. Church, South, of Morehead City, do earnestly petition the presiding bishop and his cabinet to return Brother Cade to us; realizing the splendid work he and his good wife have done, and the grasp they have of the future situation here, we feel it will be a great mistake if they are not returned. In asking this we are not unmindful of the demand in the conference for Brother Cade by charges that are considered in a higher class than the Morehead City charge, but even with this situation we believe the Master's work can be better accomplished here at this time through our present pastor. The present condition in our church demands immediate and energetic effort and we believe Brother Cade has the ability and the disposition to consummate the end to be attained.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent the presiding bishop, a copy to Brother Shamburger and copies furnished the N. C. Christian Advocate and The Coaster for publication.

RESOLUTION OF APPRECIATION

Whereas, our beloved Brother J. T. Mangum, preacher in charge of the First Methodist Church, South, Lincolnton, North Carolina, during the last three years, and the men's Wesley Bible class teacher during the past conference year 1922-1923, was at the last annual conference of the Western North Carolina conference, which convened at Winston-Salem, N. C., October 17, 1923, in the wisdom of the bishop assigned to the Waynesville charge at Waynesville, N. C.; and, whereas, he so earnestly and ably lectured to our class every Sunday morning, resolved:

First, That we inexpressibly appreciate his earnest, helpful and able lectures.

Second, That we earnestly recommend him to the congregation of the Waynesville charge.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to him as a slight mark of our esteem, and that they be published in the North Carolina Christian Advocate.

HAS ENTERED EVANGELISTIC FIELD

Bishop Collins Denny has released me from my appointment at Bryson City, Mrs. Sharp's health being such that her physicians will not allow her to go to the mountains to live. I have decided to devote myself to the work of an evangelist and am now ready to help the brethren. I have with me one of the best choristers in the South, Mr. L. G. Sumner, who was formerly with the Haggood evangelistic party. We will specialize on small towns and mill work. My permanent address will be Box 572, Albemarle, N. C. I am now engaged in a two weeks' campaign at Polkton. We go from here to Rockwell on the 19th.

J. A. Sharp.

EPWORTH LEAGUE, CHAPTER NO. 6100

After reading our western brother's roast (Rev. J. F. Armstrong), I take it for granted that we corresponding secretaries better be on our guard. Although you have been very lenient with us so far, it is best to be on time in anything we have to do; so I thought best to let you know how we are moving along in league work at Wanchese.

I am glad to state that our league is doing better now than it has for some time. It is more active to all the different interests of our church than it has been for quite a while.

This does not mean that it is doing even one-half of what it ought to do. We do not believe in flowering things up just to look good on paper, and this we will not do as long as we are reporter; but it is our purpose to write up just what our league is doing and no more, so if our leaguers want us to send in good reports for them they will simply have to give us something to write about, otherwise we cannot make good reports.

We do not want it thought that we are not appreciative of every effort that our young people are making to forward the work of the league in our community, for we do believe we have some very good and earnest officers and leaguers now in charge of the work, and we also believe they are making strong and commendable efforts to get our league on a higher plane, and we have noted some progress along all lines for the last few months.

Our first department is holding some good meetings. The second department has done some very good work in the community among the needy and destitute. The third department is taking on new life and its superintendent told me she intends to "make things hum" during the remainder of this year.

We have a fine secretary, a good treasurer, and last but not least we have a fine young man for our president, Mr. Tom Daniels. We all just call him Tom and everybody knows and likes Tom. I have yet to hear my first bad thing said about him. Tom is a good boy. He wants to do the right thing, and he will do it if the leaguers will hold up his hands and help. Let us give Tom, our president, the encouragement he deserves, and he will lead our league to a nobler life.

Leaguers, just because everything don't go to suit you don't get grouchy. Every fellow can't have his own way even in the Lord's work; so hold and help turn the wheel that will carry forward the league chariot. Don't pull back like a baulky mule. We need forward looking and pressing people in this world today, and not kickers and baulkers. Get some of that mule out of you and go to work in earnest.

Yes, I believe we are now asking an important turn on the league road, and it is, I am sure, a turn in the right direction.

T. H. Baum,
Cor. Sec.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite love and wisdom called to Himself on September 1st one of our beloved members and esteemed co-workers, Mrs. J. W. Stewart, be it resolved:

First, That we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Hebron Methodist church, bow in humble submission to the will of God.

Second, That we bear testimony to her faithfulness and devotion to her home, her church and missionary auxiliary.

Third, That we extend our love and sympathy to the bereaved family—a son, one brother and two sisters.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to the bereaved family and copies sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate and the Christian Advocate for publication.

Mrs. W. H. Palmer,
Mrs. H. J. Ellis,
Mrs. Walter Smiley.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

In the death of Mrs. Eula Cole Riddle the Alice Green Missionary Society has lost a loyal and devoted member. For ten years she was the society's organist, and at the time of her death chairman of social welfare work. We will miss her, for she was of a sunny disposition, and helped to make the work of the society effective. Therefore be it resolved:

First, our society has a vacancy that cannot be filled, and her unselfish life will be an inspiration to others in rendering service to God and man.

Second, That we express our heartfelt sympathy to the husband, father, sisters and relatives.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, placed on the minutes of the society, sent to the Sanford Express, the Carolina Banner, the Christian Advocate and the Missionary News for publication in each.

Mrs. D. L. St. Clair,
Miss Retha Moffitt,
Mrs. J. W. Gilliam,
Mrs. J. D. Hill,

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

It is with deep sorrow that the Ladies' Aid Society of Amity M. E. Church, South, Hyde county, have to chronicle the removal by death on September 2, 1923, of Mrs. Hannah Boomer; therefore be it resolved:

First, That in the passing of our co-laborer we lose a member of sterling worth. In all the walks of life she was faithful to every trust.

Second, she was a woman of quiet demeanor and always carried sunshine and good cheer wherever she went. The sick room and death chamber found in her a valuable friend, for she was always ready to help alleviate suffering and sorrow.

Third, That we bow submissively to the divine will and commend the loved ones left behind to the tender Shepherd's care.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, one to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, and one recorded in the minutes of our society.

Mrs. B. B. Saunderson,
Mrs. S. M. Fisher.

ODOM—Mrs. Nancy Odom, the wife of the late Philip E. Odom, of St. Pauls, N. C., was suddenly called from earth to glory October 23, 1923, in the 75th year of her age.

A year ago she was stricken with paralysis and since then has made her home with her son, P. D. Odom, of Fayetteville, N. C. She was converted and joined the Methodist church at the age of ten years, and remained a cheerful and faithful member through life. Her influence still lives and will live on in the coming years in the lives of those she touched.

Sister Odom is survived by one brother, Henry C. Newton of Baxley, Ga., and six children, P. D. Odom of Fayetteville, J. F. Odom of St. Pauls, H. J. Odom of McCall, S. C., Mrs. J. J. Peele of Hamlet, Mrs. L. McDuffie of St. Pauls, and Mrs. L. E. Stubbs of Liberty. These with a host of other relatives and friends mourn their earthly loss, but realize that is her eternal gain.

HARVEST DAY

You will recall that the Woman's Council, several years ago, instituted the Harvest Day service to be held some time early in December each year, for the purpose of bringing to a satisfactory close the financial part of the year's work. Every auxiliary is urged to observe this day and to use the program material prepared for this service. If your auxiliary did not use "The Missionary Society Listens In" last December, it would be well to use it this year; for those who have used it, new program material set forth in a little demonstration, "The Missionary Auxiliary That Couldn't Pay Out," is available for use. By using one of these attractive programs at your Harvest Day service, it will be an easy matter to wipe out any deficit in your collections, and come to the close of the year with all pledges paid in full.

SOCIAL SERVICE AND CHILD LABOR

Child labor is not dead. The 1920 census showed that 1,060,358 children between the ages of ten and fifteen were at work in the United States. This does not include those engaged in farm work. As soon as the supreme court decision set aside the Federal Child Labor Law that had been in force since 1919 there was a rush for working permits for children.

Twenty-eight states have child labor laws that are lower in standard than this law declared unconstitutional. They do not prevent the evil. Child labor is wasteful of the spiritual as well as the economic resources of our nation. Children who spend the major part of their time during their growing years in toil of any monotonous kind are stunted in mind and body. It has been shown by physicians, teachers and business men that these children lack mental and moral vigor, initiative, and resourcefulness. They swell the class that have to be carried by the stronger elements in any community in which they live. They need their school life and their play life if they are to grow into effective citizens.

What shall the church women do about it?

Shall we leave it to the secular press to carry on a movement to support the pending Child Labor Amendment?

Let those who wish to lift the burdens from small shoulders speak where it will do the most good. Put this matter before your auxiliary:

1. Will you pass a suitable resolution indorsing the Federal Amendment given below?
2. Will you send signed copies of the indorsement to your congressmen and senators?

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein) that the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the constitution.

"The Congress shall have power, concurrent with that of the several states, to limit or prohibit the labor of persons under the age of eighteen years."

If mothers, Christians, do not defend the rights of children, who will? Now is the time for us as Christian citizenship to fulfill our responsibilities.

PALMORA COLLEGE INAUGURATES ITS NEW BUILDING

One of the most interesting happenings in the city of Chihuahua, Mexico, was the inauguration of our new school building at Colegio Palmora on September 15. This building was erected at a cost of $90,000, made possible by Centenary funds, and it represents one of the biggest efforts ever put forth for the education of the Mexican youth of that city.

Among the speakers at the inauguration were Gen. Ignacio Enriquez, the governor of the state; Prof. S. Y. Esquivel, of El Paso, Texas, and Sr. J. T. Vereo Guzman, editor of the Chihuahua of the city. Professor Esquivel was a teacher in Palmora College during the pre-revolutionary days. He possesses unusual ability as an orator and is a splendid representative of the highest ideals of his country. Many of his students were glad to give him an "abrazo." The presence of Miss Harper was the occasion also of much joy to the ex-Palmora students. Miss Harper has been teaching over fifty years, giving most of her life to the youth of Mexico, proving a real mother and friend to hundreds of boys who passed through the institution.

Palmora College, with its new building and new equipment, looks out upon a bright future of service to the young manhood and womanhood of the state. More than 370 students were enrolled in the fall term, and more are expected. There are twenty teachers connected with the institution, and in some of the Spanish classes students are turned away for lack of room.—Bulletin.

HEBRON CHURCH FOLKS

May I use a little of your valuable space to say a word about the Woman's Missionary Society of Hebron church near Mangum?

This society was organized on March 11th, 1921, with four members and now has fourteen. While small in number it is large in interest, energy and good work. Oftentimes the attendance is 100 per cent and the programs are always interesting. Under the efficient leadership of Mrs. G. W. Andrews this society has not only paid all of its dues and pledges regularly, but has raised $18 for a mantle for the parsonage and has raised money to paint Hebron church.

These good women decided to hold their regular meeting last week at the parsonage, but failing to notify the preacher they took possession of the parsonage, held their meeting, and when the preacher and his family returned they invited them into the dining room. The table was loaded down with all kinds of good things to eat and all enjoyed a bountiful supper together. Besides this they brought a linen shower for the pastor's wife. The preacher was almost like the man without the wedding garment—speechless. But we are grateful for this, and all other kind acts of these good women, and we are glad, too, that we have had the privilege of working with such good people.

A. J. Groves.

THE MEMORIAL MESSENGER

At a meeting of the Bennett Memorial committee which was held in the Lambuth Building September 13th it was voted that a special bulletin be issued on the Bennett Memorial whenever the occasion demanded, this issue being the first.—Messenger.

This bulletin is one of the latest achievements of our council, and is attractively made up of everything one could wish to know relative to the memorial. Our page this week is devoted to extracts from it.—Editor.

The Belle H. Bennett Memorial fund, which is now being collected by auxiliaries and conference societies, will be used in connection with the Greater Scarritt, possibly to establish a School of English Bible. The decision as to the exact form the Memorial will take will be made by the Council in its next annual session. It was voted at the last session that the minimum goal should be a half million dollars, and a considerable part of this sum has already been subscribed. Collections will be made during the remainder of the period of the Christian Education Movement. Now that the school has been located in the place so desired by Miss Bennett for it, we shall all take courage and go forward joyously to the completion of the memorial. Mrs. F. F. Stephens.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEMONSTRATION

A beautiful and touching demonstration setting forth in a graphic way the life and work of Miss Bennett has just come from the pen of a gifted writer, Mrs. George Nunn, of Perry, Ga. Mrs. Nunn was formerly Miss Bessie Houser, one of our missionaries to the Orient, and because of the inspirational touch of Miss Bennett upon her life, she gives this demonstration as her tribute to our peerless leader. It is truly a work of love, and in sending it forth, Mrs. Nunn says: "Thankful for every smile from her gracious lips, for every look from the depths of her expressive eyes, for every word of love, encouragement, and exhortation, for every impulse to enthusiasm and zeal that blazed within through contact with her personality, thankful indeed for every touch of her life upon mine, I gladly render this little mite of service, to call others to the precious privilege of having a part in this ideal memorial to her life and work among us."

This demonstration can be secured from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn., free.

CONFERENCES CO-OPERATING IN THE PRAYER LEAGUE

Eight conference societies are promoting the intercessory band by organizing prayer leagues or by adding the work of the league to that undertaken through the cultivation of spiritual resources. A number have delegated the work to the conference vice presidents. The Baltimore conference has utilized its handicapped members for many years through its "scattered members" organization.

A unique plan for the prayer league is being inaugurated in the South Georgia conference. Mrs. Hal Lawson is preventing it through what is termed "the auxiliary at large." The membership consists of the shut-ins and people living in the rural districts who have no local auxiliary to join. There are eighty-five on the mailing list with whom Mrs. Lawson keeps in touch, and she is giving those members of the auxiliary at large an opportunity to become remembrancers.

A UNIQUE METHOD

In a recent letter from Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, superintendent of publicity for the Louisiana conference, she says: "In our auxiliary of fifty members I divided the membership into ten groups and gave the leader of each group a little round ten-cent bank holding five dollars in dimes. The leader in each of the ten groups had all of her group to sign the pledge cards, and in October they will turn in the ten banks containing fifty dollars. Of course each group will be given the banks for the next two years' collection. I find that our women like new plans for doing things, and they do them cheerfully."

THE LOVE GIFT OF A CHILD

Little Eunice Boney, twelve-year-old daughter of Mrs. Harvey Boney, of the North Carolina conference, had in her possession three gold dollars which she prized above everything. However, when she heard her mother discuss the Bennett Memorial she asked that her three gold dollars, each of which is worth $2.50, be made her love gift to the memorial. It was truly a sacrificial gift. One is reminded of the one-dollar love gift made by the little girl in Little Rock some thirty-four years ago when she heard Miss Bennett telling of a training school to be established for missionaries. Surely the Master who stands over against the treasury sees and understands the hearts of his little ones.

THE MEMORIAL IN THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The executive committee of the Mississippi conference has sent to every auxiliary throughout the conference a three-page typewritten letter setting forth the plans of the Bennett Memorial campaign and giving details as to how it should be carried forward. A beautiful feature is their prayer league, of which Mrs. Sam Ewing, of Jackson, Miss., is the leader. A loose-leaf prayer book is to be made, a page of which is sent to each auxiliary. The auxiliary is to appoint a prayer league committee, who shall visit the shut-ins and those who cannot take an active part in the campaign, asking them to sign their names on the auxiliary page and to give as their pledge an offering of prayer, thus becoming God's remembrancers. The Conference Prayer Book will then be sent to Mrs. MacDonell.

The letter closes with the following strong appeal to the auxiliaries: "We, dear friends, want our conference to give a generous love gift, one worthy of our beloved conference. We want each to do her best to bring the Mississippi conference over the top in this wonderful service. Surely we cannot show our love and appreciation of such awondrous leader in a finer, nobler way. If Scarritt, with so little money, could give the world so great a return in Christian leadership, how much more do you suppose she will mean to the advancement of God's kingdom when the dream Scarritt is a reality and we have completed our Bennett Memorial? Friends, catch the vision and pray more about this wonderful opportunity for service with our gifts of prayer and money. Work for the success of the campaign. See that every woman and child of the church has had the opportunity to procure a share in this great love gift."

NEW BERN SCHOOL CREDITS

Fifty-four certificates were issued to Sunday school workers attending our Standard Training School held in Centenary church, New Bern, October 28-November 2, and were awarded the following Sunday morning in the various churches and Sunday schools of the community. These certificates were divided among the churches as follows: Centenary 19, Riverside 11, Vanceboro 3, Presbyterian 11, Tabernacle Baptist 6, First Baptist 3, and Episcopal 1. Bridgeton, Beach Grove and Bayboro also were represented in the school.

Following are the names of those to whom certificates were issued, excepting the Presbyterians, to whom went certificates of the Presbyterian Sunday School Board:

Sunday School Organization and Administration, Prof. J. M. Ormond, instructor—Rev. E. C. Durham, J. B. Lovelace, Mrs. Lillian B. Lane, F. R. Sutton, B. M. Potter, W. W. Gaskins, and C. E. Griffin.

Principles of Religious Teaching, Mr. Claude T. Carr, instructor—Rev. M. V. McRae, Mrs. Julia E. Hill, Mrs. J. C. Thomas, Mrs. L. C. Lawrence, Miss Mollie Swinson, Mrs. R. N. Scott.

Beginner Organization and Administration, Mrs. C. B. Culbreth, instructor—Miss Margaret Bunting, Mrs. D. T. Gaskins, Mrs. J. Neal Smith, and Mrs. Frank Sutton.

Primary Organization and Administration, Miss Georgia Keene, instructor—Mrs. N. G. Gooding, and Mrs. G. M. Oglesby.

Junior Organization and Administration, Miss Virginia Jenkins, instructor—Miss Anna Houff, Miss Kathleen Harris, Mrs. J. W. Hammond, Mrs. L. E. Lancaster, Mrs. Ella S. Meadows, Mrs. Gertie Matthews, Miss Helen Nicholson, Mrs. Fred M. Scott, W. H. Truman, Mrs. J. E. Witherington, Mrs. C. C. Hooker, Miss Louise Brooks, Mrs. J. J. Howerin, Mrs. G. D. Lankford, Mrs. J. M. Miller, and Mrs. Z. V. Parker.

Young People's Agencies, Miss Lucy Foreman, instructor—Mrs. W. L. Hinnant, Mrs. G. W. Howard, Rev. W. C. Ormond, Mrs. R. H. Perry, Miss Evelyn Perkins, Mrs. T. W. Smith, Miss Lena Mae Taylor, H. D. Waldrop, and L. L. Rose.

REPEAT SCHOOL NEXT YEAR

Those attending the New Bern training school this year voted unanimously for a similar school next year and went on record as determined to make the one in prospect serve an even larger number of workers than any heretofore has done. It was the opinion of Rev. W. V. McRae, chairman of the board of managers, Rev. E. C. Durham of Vanceboro, W. W. Gaskins, B. M. Potter, R. N. Scott, Dr. W. L. Hand, the writer, and others that the school at New Bern ought to serve Sunday school workers within a radius of twenty-five or thirty miles, and it is with this broader constituency in view that the next school will be planned. There was evidenced, also, a determination to acquaint an even larger number of parents and church officials with the nature and scope of the courses offered, with the feeling that greater numbers will take the training work when they are fully aware of the advantages coming from these studies.

OCTOBER CROP OF CREDITS

Credits for Sunday school training work done by correspondence and in non-standard training schools, issued during the month of October, were earned by the following persons:

- Mrs. E. B. Ward, Rowland.
- Miss Fay Jones, Roxboro.
- Miss Nancy E. Newman, Leasburg.
- Miss Annie Newman, Leasburg.
- Prof. V. A. Moore, Fayetteville.
- Miss Pearl Bullard, Fayetteville.
- Miss Katy Geddie, Fayetteville.
- Miss Berline Bullock, Fayetteville.
- Miss Eva Bullock, Fayetteville.
- Mrs. H. C. Butler, Culberland.
- Rev. O. I. Hinson, Siler City.

To Rev. Mr. Hinson went five certificates, bringing the total number for Mr. Hinson this year up to eight, entitling him to a Blue Seal diploma of the General Sunday School Board. And he says he expects to take the other four units of the course and earn the Gold Seal diploma.

THAT SILER CITY CHARGE

Rev. O. I. Hinson, who is completing his first year on the Siler City charge, has brought things to pass in the Sunday schools. He has conducted training classes at Hickory Mountain and at Siler City, teaching the unit on "The Pupil," and he himself has completed eight units of the standard course. But what of all this? What does it all amount to? A partial answer is that the enrollment in the schools of the charge has gone from 400 to 800, with two home departments and three cradle roll departments. Things do happen when the leaders become thoroughly aroused and in dead earnest about this business!

NEW DEPARTMENT AT OXFORD

A Junior department has recently been organized at Oxford. There are thirty boys and girls 9-12 years of age in this department with Mrs. N. C. Remsen as superintendent. She has five assistants working with her. Oxford Sunday school is giving these junior boys and girls the best opportunity it can to develop in Christian character and service.

RIVERSIDE ADOPTS PROGRAM

The Beginner department of Riverside Sunday school, New Bern, has adopted the Program of Work "B" for that department. Already they have attained eight of the ten points on this standard and are planning in a short time to reach all points and have a standard department. Mrs. Frank Sutton is superintendent of this department and Mrs. D. T. Gaskins her assistant. Both of these workers took the course in Beginner work in the New Bern training school and received credit.

ROWLAND LEADS THE WAY

Rowland Sunday school, Rockingham district, is the first one in our conference to report all elementary departments reaching standard. The Cradle Roll, Beginner, Primary and Junior departments of this school are all "C" standard. This is indeed a fine record for the superintendent, Dr. R. F. Graham, and his elementary workers. This school has adopted the official Program of Work, and we predict that it will soon have reached this, and then go a step higher to the "B" standard. This school is in the district of which Mrs. E. B. Ward is elementary superintendent.

"B" STANDARD DEPARTMENT

Mrs. J. E. Worrell, Central Sunday school, Caledonia circuit, Laurinburg, is a wide-awake Cradle Roll superintendent and has a fine corps of workers. Their department is the first elementary department in our conference to have reached "B" standard. They have attained all the points on this standard and have been awarded a certificate. They have a right to be proud of their work, and we are proud of them and their department.

WRITE FOR THE STANDARDS

There are probably other elementary departments that may have reached standard, but have not been checked. Write to your conference elementary superintendent for these standards. Ask her to visit your elementary workers and present these standards. She will be delighted to do this.

APPOINT YOUR KEY WOMAN

Some time ago Miss Keene sent out a letter to Sunday school superintendents asking that they appoint elementary key women for their schools and send their names just as early as possible. Thirty-two superintendents have responded to this call and have reported key women for their schools. About five hundred have not responded yet. Let's have a response from them and an elementary key woman in every Sunday school.

Western North Carolina Conference

DO YOU KNOW?

Do you know that there were nearly 2,500 Western North Carolina conference Sunday school officers and teachers and prospective officers and teachers who went to school last year to better fit themselves for the work they are doing? Do you know that out of this number 1,446 went at the work earnestly enough to receive certificates of credit? Well, if you do not know it you have not waked up.

We had last year 947 credits earned in Standard Training Schools, sixty-two credits earned at Lake Junaluska and eighteen at Trinity College Summer School, two hundred and ninety credits earned in the department of religious education at Trinity College and one hundred and twenty-nine credits were earned by correspondence with our Nashville headquarters. One hundred and forty-one of the above credits were earned by seventy of our Western North Carolina conference pastors.

ONCE UPON A TIME

At one of our training schools last year one of our pastors helped us to open up our school. In his opening remarks he said that since the public school was not and could not teach religion, and since not one in fifty homes was doing much religious teaching to their children it was left to the Sunday school workers to do it. Going further he said that the Sunday schools held the destiny of our civilization in their control. Then after saying all that he left our school and never returned to it. Needless to say most of his congregation did the same way.

Once upon a time there was a boy who heard his father preach and in his sermon make some startling statements. At the dinner table following the sermon the boy said, "Daddy, was that what you said true or were you just a-preaching?"

BACKING IT UP

The following pastors have during the past year not only taken time to study and pass one or more units of credits for themselves but have taught classes to do likewise:

- Rev. Z. E. Barnhardt, Winston-Salem.
- Rev. M. W. Heckard, Gastonia.
- Rev. J. F. Kirk, Salisbury.
- Rev. W. C. Jones, Jamestown.
- Rev. E. Myers, Hickory Grove.
- Rev. A. P. Ratledge, Elkin.
- Rev. J. M. Varner, Advance.

NEW SUPERINTENDENTS

It is said that the teachers in the public schools change every four years. This is also probably true of our Sunday school teachers. In all probability the turnover in Sunday school work is heavier than in the public school work. This of course does not mean that all teachers change every four years, but does mean that there have been enough new teachers introduced into the work during the four years to have been assigned to every class.

But be that as it may it has been a matter of interest to note the number of new superintendents elected for the ensuing year. Out of the eight hundred and fifty-one superintendents who will head our schools during the year 1923-24 two hundred and sixteen of them are new, nearly one-fourth the total number. Our new superintendents are located in districts as follows:

- Asheville district .....24
- Charlotte district .....14
- Greensboro district .....19
- Marion district .....18
- Mt. Airy district .....22
- North Wilkesboro district .....20
- Salisbury district .....15
- Shelby district .....20
- Statesville district .....34
- Waynesville district .....18
- Winston-Salem district .....12

To these new superintendents we have extended our hearty greetings and earnest desire to be of service.

MOUNT OLIVET

Mount Olivet is a progressive country church on the Davidson circuit. It is my father's home church where I used to go from time to time to attend the class meeting conducted by my grandfather. It was therefore a genuine pleasure to go to Mount Olivet last Sunday in company with my youngest brother, Rev. M. B. Woosley, and conduct an all-day circuit Sunday school institute. Rev. R. F. Honeycutt, the pastor, and Prof. Paul Evans, the superintendent, had arranged things well and our day was well spent.

The first thing on the program was the Sunday school in actual session. Following this came the inspirational addresses. After a very fine dinner on a long table arranged for the purpose a large crowd reassembled in the church for a general discussion of the best ways and means of promoting religious education. During the afternoon session Rev. W. A. Newell, presiding elder of the Winston-Salem district, came in and added his usual good contribution to the cause.

Our Sunday school work at Mount Olivet under the leadership of Prof. Evans, who is also principal of the consolidated high school located just across the way, is growing in quantity and quality. Bro. R. F. Honeycutt and his good wife are in high favor with their people and the work is prospering on Davidson charge. It was voted to continue the charge institutes. Prof. Paul Evans was elected president and Miss Ida Perryman secretary of the undertaking.

GREENSBORO TRAINING SCHOOL

Beginning Sunday, November 18, at three o'clock at the First Presbyterian church, Greensboro, the Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school workers of Greensboro, High Point and contiguous territory will assemble for their fourth annual Standard Training School. It is thought that the usual good attendance will prevail. The school will offer eight courses with eight good instructors as follows:

- Principles of Teaching—Prof. C. T. Carr.
- Pupil Study—Mrs. E. R. Michaux.
- The Christian Religion—Dr. C. C. Weaver.
- Intermediate-Senior Agencies—Mrs. J. F. Spruill.
- Junior Organization and Administration—Miss Virginia Jenkins.
- Primary Organization and Administration—Mrs. W. B. Ferguson.
- Beginner Organization and Administration—Mrs. C. L. Van Noppen.
- Story Telling—Mrs. G. W. Green.

A local board of managers consisting of the Sunday school superintendents and pastors will aid your humble servant in promoting the school.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

Lee Davis, Raleigh, N. C.
Rev. J. F. Armstrong, Concord, N. C.

North Carolina Conference HERE AND THERE

Did you read the letter from the Commissioner of Missions? Well, he's telling us what we must do in order to continue to be good leaguers. You know the league field enlarges and the league work advances as the days pass and we want to be more active. The world progresses rapidly. The church ought to lead the way; so it's up to us to stand solidly behind our league officers and help them to lead. Read Gehrman's letter on this page and get busy.

What has your league done about pledging its support to a whole time executive secretary? You know we can't have one if the leagues won't support that one by pledging a definite amount to help finance this office. The Epworth League Board has promised to pay part if the leagues will pay the other part. So we see it's up to us. Let's do our part. If your league has not pledged yet, see that it does immediately, and write Miss Fannie E. Vann, conference secretary, Clinton, N. C., about the amount.

We have a letter from Mildred Willis, secretary Morehead City League, which tells us they are progressing nicely. The intermediate league has been promoted to a senior league. That's progress, isn't it? Now for another intermediate league too, Morehead.

Your League Page editor was glad to be in Goldsboro last Sunday night, November 4th, and attend a meeting of the Wayne County League Union. That organization is doing a great work under the leadership of Miss Emma Davis. The meeting was at St. John's church. They had a splendid program. L. D.

WAYNE COUNTY LEAGUE UNION MEETS AT ST. JOHNS CHURCH

The Wayne County Epworth League Union met with the St. Johns League Sunday night, November 4th, at 7:30 with a large attendance. A very interesting devotional meeting conducted by Miss Nannie Summerlin, first department superintendent of St. Johns League, was enjoyed by all who attended. A number of our beautiful hymns were studied. We learned the author of the hymns and why they were written. Different leaguers read and told the stories of the songs. Then they were sung or played by other leaguers as a special number.

The meeting was then turned over to Miss Emma Davis, president of the union. The roll was called and the following leagues were represented: St. Pauls, St. Johns, Pine Forest, Daniels Chapel, Elm Street, Salem and Providence. A committee was then appointed to visit the leagues that haven't been attending the union. We decided to hold a combined business and social meeting November 16 at St. Pauls church. Several other business matters were discussed. Mr. Lee Davis was in the audience and talked to us a few minutes. Several others made short talks. We decided to meet with the Elm Street League the first Sunday night in December. We were then dismissed by the league benediction. Ruth Herring, Cor. Sec.

ROXBORO HAS A "SPOOKY" TIME

A delightful Hallowe'en party was enjoyed by the members of the Epworth League of Long Memorial church and a few others in the basement of the church on last Tuesday evening from 8 till 11 o'clock.

The room was very beautifully decorated with autumn foliage, holiday colors and black cats. The lights were dimmed with Hallowe'en shades.

As the guests entered they were greeted by a toothless witch with her broomstick, and then by Miss Ruth Newton, superintendent of the third department of the league, who had charge of the entertainment for the evening.

In this very spooky atmosphere many games suggestive of the occasion were enjoyed by about forty young folks, after which they were served with cream and cake.

QUEEN STREET HALLOWE'EN PARTY "HOWLING SUCCESS"

The Senior Epworth League of Queen Street Methodist church delightfully entertained at a Hallowe'en party on Friday evening, October 29, in the Methodist cottage.

Upon arrival, the leaguers and guests were directed by ghosts over various detours until they were at last allowed to enter the rear door. Here they were again taken in hand by a ghost, who directed them through dark passages dimly lighted by small jack-o-lanterns and up the narrow stairway to the attic, where, amid weird groans and hair-raising howls, they were bade by still another ghost to inscribe their names in his directory.

Descending from the attic, they were ushered into the reception room, where the shaded lights, together with the black cats, witches and bats placed about the walls contributed largely to the spirit of Hallowe'en which pervaded the occasion.

Much amusement was caused by the bobbing of apples, eating of peanuts, telling fortunes, playing of games and drinking of the "witch's brew" (consisting of punch with frozen frappe.)

Kate Herndon.

A MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF OUR LEAGUE BOARD

Dear Brother Davis:

As chairman of the Conference Epworth League Board I wish to write you, and through you, to all of the leaguers of the North Carolina conference and commend you for the splendid work you are doing.

As editor of the League Page in the Advocate you are rendering a very real service to our young people's work. Having served years in this place, I know that yours is not an easy task. You cannot do the best service and give to the leaguers the news if the chapters do not send it to you. May I ask that our leaguers write you often telling what they are doing. This news will be of great interest and will serve to promote our work everywhere.

We have reason to be encouraged. The Epworth League has grown in favor the last few years. It was noticeable at the last annual conference how the pastors reported with pride the fact that they had good Epworth Leagues. No doubt the same will be true this conference. It is to be hoped that our work will show a large growth.

It is gratifying to watch the monthly report sent out by the central office, showing the contributions to missions by the Epworth League. I note that the North Carolina conference is usually well at the head of the list. This is the time of year when our young people engage in mission study. It would be a fine thing for all of our chapters to have one or more mission study classes. Missions is the great work of the church. The church needs more missionaries and larger contributions. This is a good way to get both. We cannot hope to have interest without information.

The Epworth League Board of the conference wished the conference officers and all the leaguers to know that we are ready and anxious to promote the work. Let us all, the pastors, the chapter organizations, and all the young people stand together and work hard to push forward our great work. W. A. Cade.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

Rev. C. A. Wood.....Superintendent

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

Sunday afternoon after conference the Dred Peacock Bible class from Wesley Memorial church came over from High Point with a large number of friends that almost filled our auditorium, and the children repeated for them the program they gave to conference visitors.

The whole line of children marching across the platform and down and back again in groups is a pleasing sight, and when an appreciative audience, like our High Point friends, looks into the faces of such a crowd of smiling, well-cared for children and realizes that their happiness and well being is the fruit of the love and generous provision of Western North Carolina Methodists, the sight is one to touch every thoughtful heart present.

When the program was concluded the speaker for the class asked for permission to say a few words and expressed appreciation for the pleasure of a visit to the Home and the program rendered for them, and proposed that they be allowed to conduct an old fashion cash collection.

So a table was cleared of its vase of flowers, and presently a pile of bills and silver took the place of the bouquet.

A gentleman rose and said that he would like to add to the gift a Liberty bond that had belonged to his little boy who had died four years ago, and who he was sure could wish his bond put to no better use than to go to provide for the needs of growing children.

* * * *

Several of the children of The Home have been sick in the infirmary with various symptoms of influenza. Miss Anderson is sick, too, so Dr. Gray sent us a nurse from over in town. None of the children are very sick, but it keeps the infirmary force busy looking after the comfort of the patients.

And the doctor decided that the small children would better not run the danger of catching the measles, diphtheria and scarlet fever. Children's ailments are so easily passed around in city crowds in the winter.

So we have had Sunday school at The Home school house for two Sundays. It is a very good place for Sunday school—nice class rooms and an auditorium. The opening hour is nine, and that gives time after Sunday school for the larger children and the grown folks to get to West End to church.

Instead of "quiet hour" last Sunday we had a vesper service at four o'clock. A short song service which the children seemed to enjoy.

* * * *

There were several Hallowe'en parties on The Hill. One at the small boys' dormitory, one in the primary room of the school building, and the larger boys and girls had a bonfire frolic in the evening.

From the sounds of merriment attending these they must have been gay occasions. I only looked in for a minute, and then fled to quieter regions.

A few evenings later the larger little girls of the Smith cottage invited us over to their party and we spent a pleasant hour playing games with them and doing Hallowe'en stunts.

* * * *

The children enjoyed a moving picture at the school auditorium Thursday night. Mr. Bradshaw and John M. worked the picture machine and victrola music accompaniment. And though it was their first exhibition they succeeded in getting the picture moving along in fine style. (And there is considerable lively movement in moving pictures these days.) Dewit C., who has considerable mechanical talent, was chief assistant operator and doubtlessly very much enjoyed learning how a picture machine worked.

The picture was "Grandma's Boy." Grandma's boy was a youth who was a timid, easily imposed on chap, lacking sufficient courage to meet creditably the daily experiences of school days, the impositions of his rival and other rough affairs of village life requiring manliness.

Just how grandma worked a scheme to inspire him with courage and manly conduct were scenes entertaining and thrilling, interspersed of course with many incidents and accidents amusing, that set the little folks giggling and clapping.

* * * *

Many nice things come to The Home by mail, express and freight—many things that I never hear about over here at my cottage. Someone came in with a beautiful delicious apple the other day. They said the little girls had received a box of apples at their dormitory and some chestnuts too, and I know they have had numerous packages of nice new clothes over there, from adopted friends, circles, S. S. classes and missionary societies.

However, whether I happen to hear of it or not, Miss Ollie records it in a special book, sends a card of thanks and the little folks enjoy whatever nice that comes, as you can well imagine.

Speaking of chestnuts. During conference an automobile came buzzing up our driveway. The short stretch of road from the public highway to the superintendent's cottage is up-grade, and most machines proclaim their coming when they turn up the hill. The machine stopped at the side porch and the gentleman knocked at the door and made known the fact that he came bearing a gift to the children of the Children's Home. We looked around and there sat two tall white sacks of chestnuts. Three bushelfuls of them! He said that the young folks of Jefferson High School had picked them up on their school campus—gathered them for a gift to The Home children.

Several days ago John M. brought up from the station ten bags of fine flour—a hundred pounds each, freight marked from Concord.

And yesterday Mr. T. H. Redmond, who has a flour mill over in Farmington, wrote that he wanted to send flour for a day's supply of bread to The Home and is sending over two hundred pounds.

Early one Sunday morning recently a loud, prolonged ringing of the phone got Myrtle's prompt attention. It was the agent at the express office, and the call seemed to be the joint effort of the agent and a young calf. It was difficult to catch the message, as the calf kept bleating in. However, she made out that the calf wanted to come out to the Children's Home.

It was a fine little calf of good stock, a gift from Mrs. W. A. Robinson of Old Fort.

We have eight calves now that will make good Jersey cows if they continue to thrive.

The Advocate has received its supply of Christmas cards. Order now, and get first selections.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

Teachers.—For a long time I have been thinking about what our teachers could do for the Methodist Orphanage if they all would bestir themselves during the Thanksgiving season. I am going to urge each one of them to present the claims of our orphan children to their classes on the Sunday before Thanksgiving. If that Sunday should be a bad day, then I want them to do their level best the Sunday following Thanksgiving Day.

* * * *

Organized Classes.—The organized classes have never realized fully what they can do for our Orphanage. If I could enlist the hearty co-operation and generous support of all the classes within our conference, the success of our beloved Methodist Orphanage would be assured. During the Thanksgiving season I am appealing to every organized class to do its best for us on the Sunday before Thanksgiving Day. If, for any reason, that Sunday is not suitable, then I want them to do their best for us the last Sunday in November.

* * * *

Sunday School Superintendents.—I have written every Sunday school superintendent within the bounds of our conference to call upon his school for a great Thanksgiving offering for our beloved Orphanage. Let's make great preparation for this all important occasion. I would suggest that the entire school be called together on the third Sunday, which is the 18th, and that the superintendents, or one appointed by him, make a stirring speech of about five minutes in behalf of the Orphanage. By following this plan everybody would go to Sunday school on the fourth Sunday prepared to make a contribution worthy of the great cause that lies so close to the heart of our Christ.

* * * *

Congregations.—All the pastors are going to endeavor to hold Thanksgiving service this year. There is a movement throughout the state to ask every church member to give at least one day's income or wages. Of course we are asking that as the minimum and not the maximum amount. Our orphanage is in need of money. Since the middle of September we have had to borrow money to settle our accounts. We have borrowed several thousand dollars from the bank, and this must be paid back by the first of December. In view of our shortage of funds, and the erection of buildings for the accommodation of our children, I am appealing to every church member to come to ur relief by giving us a liberal Thanksgiving offering. If there are those who cannot go to church on that happy occasion, I would urge them to send their offering direct to the Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage, Raleigh, N. C.

* * * *

Pastors.—The fourth and first Sundays will be observed throughout the North Carolina conference as Orphanage days. It is sincerely desired by the superintendent that as many churches on circuits and stations will take advantage of the Sunday before Thanksgiving to take their offerings as possible. The Sunday after conference may be a bad, disagreeable day which would cause the Orphanage the loss of thousands of dollars. On circuits it may take four Sundays to reach all the churches. To meet that situation, I would suggest that each church be asked to give a special offering as the pastor makes his rounds. By beginning on the Sunday after conference they could present the needs of the Orphanage to all their churches and get through by the second Sunday in December. Of course some of the churches will observe Thanksgiving Day and take offerings for us on that occasion. As a rule only a very few people attend a regular Thanksgiving service in mid-week, consequently the offerings are small on such occasions. The Sunday before or following Thanksgiving is a better time.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets That Are Nauseless, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bed time, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.

A BRAND NEW IDEA

Helps Mothers - Pleases Children

Fall and winter is the time of the year when mothers are pressed with the necessity of entertaining the children with parties in their homes.

Heretofore mothers have oftentimes been at a loss about arranging these parties.

"The Children's Party Book" by Marion Jane Parker, just off the press, will save mothers any further worry about planning children's parties. The book is a 40 page affair, 4 pages devoted to each occasion, with 10 full color pages of illustrations by Frances Tipton Hunter, telling just how to plan the party, from sending out the invitations, clear through - what games to play, how to play them, what cakes to bake, what refreshments to serve, and everything necessary to relieve mothers of the usual attendant worries.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a special offer to those interested in church activities, to help distribute the book.

The plan, like the book, is a worthy one, and should receive the consideration of our church women, as a ready means of raising funds.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

— Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary —

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

ON THE EVE OF BEGINNING ANOTHER LONG JOURNEY

Returning from a ten days' trip, during which time the Western North Carolina and Virginia conferences were visited, I have spent three very busy days in the St. Louis office. By hard work it has been possible to arrange things at the home base so that I can leave for another journey of two weeks. This time I shall attend the West Texas, the Upper South Carolina, and the North Alabama conferences before my return. My readers shall have the privilege of reading on this page concerning the fortunes of the "forgotten man" at these conferences as soon as the facts are available.

North Texas Conference.—It was not possible for me personally to attend the North Texas conference, because one cannot be in two places at the same time when they are 1,500 miles apart. However, the special effort for superannuate endowment was ably represented at Gainesville, Tex., by Bishop W. F. McMurry, president of the board, Dr. C. C. Selecman, and Bishop John M. Moore, president of the conference. Bishop McMurry was very enthusiastic in his report concerning the response of the brethren in Texas to the movement. He told me that he had not found any conference more interested in the cause or more determined to give themselves wholeheartedly to it. He said that the attitude of Bishop Moore in dealing with this matter on the day when the plan was presented was such that guaranteed the success of the movement in this conference. He said that Bishop Moore had at the appointed time turned aside from everything else and with emphatic words directed the attention of the conference to this one thing.

I also have a letter from Dr. Selecman giving his observations, in which he is just as enthusiastic in his report of what happened at Gainesville in behalf of superannuate endowment as Bishop McMurry. He writes that a number of preachers of that great conference expressed themselves as convinced beyond doubt of the success of this movement. Dr. Selecman has done considerable work for the Board of Finance during the last two or three years, and he invariably expresses himself after every service rendered as believing that the preachers and lay members whom he addresses are wholly committed to this sacred work.

The North Texas conference is the first one of the Lone Star State to consider the special effort for superannuate endowment. If the reports coming from it can be taken as an index of the Texas safely stated that this very important section of the church will not lag in the work before us.

European Missions.—I have just received a letter from Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, who has charge of our missions in Europe. He writes that the Czecho-Slovak Mission recently passed the following resolutions:

"Whereas, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in America has recognized the necessity of raising a sum sufficient to give adequate support to our ministers who are forced because of ill health, old age, or other disabilities to retire from the active ministry; therefore be it

"Resolved first, That we pledge ourselves in hearty accord with this effort.

"Second, That an offering for this fund will be taken in all of our congregations every year for the next five years."

gations every year for the next five years."

Bishop Beauchamp states further that this same plan will be followed in all three of the missions under his superintendency. He says that we must not expect a large sum from these fields, but that it is most desirable to have co-operation in the work to secure adequate superannuate endowment wherever our church operates.

Surely it should be pleasing to our people in the United States to know that the effort in behalf of the "forgotten man" is not only being projected throughout the church at home but that we are also reaching out our hands across the seas and into every point of the world where the flag of Southern Methodism waves, looking to give everybody everywhere a real opportunity to help the movement for the relief of God's worn-out preachers and the widows of the preachers. I do not know of anything that has thrilled me quite so much as the letter from Bishop Beauchamp on this subject. I believe this good news will affect others as it has me.

It may be added that Bishop Beauchamp, being an expert in movements of the character now projected, is an authority worth considering. Out of his rich experience as the director general of the Centenary he now tells us that these missions of our church, brought into being as a result of the Centenary, shall be encouraged to take part in a movement which proposes to make provision for the worn-out preachers. Here is something good enough for our pastors to take as a text in preaching on the power of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

It Is Raining Pinks Now.—Under the plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment the first quarterly conference of the year 1923-24 is requested to approve the quota and apportion it to the churches of the charge, decide upon the plan to be used by the charge in raising its quota, appoint the charge committee which will direct the movement locally, and to report what is done concerning all these matters as quickly as possible to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo. For making this report a pink leaf having blanks to be filled in is provided in the Workers' Guide, which is placed in the hands of the first quarterly conference.

To date fifteen of the annual conferences have been held. Therefore it is not surprising that the pink reports are daily being received by the office. While the number of these reports coming in is very gratifying, yet it is noticeable that some first quarterly conferences which have now been held have not made the report. I trust that any presiding elder or pastor who has been derelict in his duty with reference to this matter may be moved to prompt action by these words. It should be remembered that in the plan being followed for superannuate endowment the Board of Finance is utterly dependent upon the regular forces of the church. Our slogan is: "Every man in his place and every man doing his bit." Please remember, my dear brethren, if you do not promptly send in the report blank, which is pink, your failure will be very depressing to the secretary of the Board of Finance, who is blue on account of your neglect. Furthermore, your failure at this point will jeopardize the success of the movement for the benefit of the superannuates.

Bear in mind that these grand old men in their physical weakness are leaning heavily on you. To fail them in this emergency is like snatching a crutch from the armpit of a cripple.

Did you ever go up, up, up many steps at night until you came to the highest floor of the house? And did you lie down there to sleep? Do you remember the pattering of rain upon the roof? Can you imagine anything more delightfully pleasing to one utterly weary from the day's busy toil? Well, my brethren, this is exactly the feeling I have when I return from long journeys over the church, tired from the heavy going, and enter the office and behold the pink reports falling from their places in envelopes that have been sent from every section of our great church. Keep the pinks a-comin', boys; I like to see them; I like to read them; I like to feel them; I like to know they are in.

Sleep on This Every Night.—Yes, and work with it in mind every day. What do I mean? Just this: If the special effort for superannuate endowment succeeds, it will be because the bishops, presiding elders, pastors, and lay members shall pay the price in service for its success. If this movement fails, those of us to whom has been committed its leadership, as stated in the foregoing, will have no one to blame for its failure but ourselves.

You can get the most food value out of wheat by eating bakings that are made from good plain flour. A dependable baking powder must be employed or you do not get the full nutritious value of the wheat—nor will your bakings be as palatable and easily digested.

The same results cannot be had if you use Self Rising Flours, or any so called ready-to-use substitute for plain flour and good baking powder. Food authorities and physicians agree that bakings that do not raise properly are bad for the health. Such foods are hard to digest and in time cause stomach trouble.

Mothers who are interested in the proper growth and health of their children (and all mothers are) should never use anything but a good brand of plain flour and a time-tested leavener such as Calumet—the economy Baking Powder.

Calumet has more than the ordinary leavening strength. It raises every baking to its height of nutritious value. It is pure and dependable—do not look for a substitute—there is none.

Use Calumet and be positive of wholesome nutritious and economical foods.

WHEN LITTLE BEAR WOULD BE RICH

The summer that Little Bear played with the red squirrels from morning until night he learned at least one of their ways. He began playing with them when they begged him to run races in his own sun-bright clearing. He might have beat them at the game if they had played fair, but that they would not do. The minute after the race started all the young squirrels except the lame one left the ground and went leaping from bush to bush and from tree to tree until they reached the goal far ahead of Little Bear.

They were so funny about it and so full of jokes and tricks that Little Bear could never help laughing, no matter how cross he felt. If he scolded them about it, they scolded back; and they beat him at that too. Every little squirrel had learned to scold at his mother's knee; they did it for fun.

When the squirrel children were mere youngsters, their fathers and mothers were glad to have them play with Little Bear because he kept them out of mischief and out from underfoot. Those were the summer days when the old squirrels worked busily at cutting off the cones of the pine needles for use in winter. They explained to Little Bear that in the winter and early spring they would dig up the seeds and eat them.

Mother Bear didn't like to have Little Bear play so much with the red squirrels, but Father Bear only laughed; he said he didn't believe that Little Bear would copy red squirrel ways.

But for once Father Bear made a mistake. It is true that Little Bear did not learn to say bad words or to tell lies or to steal, but he did learn at least one of the habits of red squirrels. It came about in this way: When nuts and acorns began to ripen and sour wild apples turned red in the sun the old squirrels told their children that the time had come to stop playing and go to work. They scolded Little Bear because he still wished to play hide and seek and games like that in harvest time.

Little Bear asked Mother Bear to tell him the meaning of harvest time because he didn't understand what the squirrels were talking about. Mother Bear explained that the time when farmers plant seeds of grain in the spring is called seedtime. When the seeds have grown into fields of waving grain, corn or wheat or oats or whatever it may be, and the grain is ripe and ready to be cut and stored away in barns for use in the winter, it is called the harvest, and the time of the year is harvest time.

"Autumn is harvest time for squirrels as well as for farmers," Mother Bear told Little Bear. "Now is the time when squirrels lay up their stores of acorns and nuts for the winter."

At dawn the next morning Little Bear was up and in the forest watching the squirrels at work. He heard the old squirrels tell the little ones exactly how to reach their own hollow trees in the quickest way and how to carry nuts in their mouths. They scolded Little Bear and tried to make him go home; they said that their children had to work. Besides that, they liked to work; it was fun.

Finally the gentle lame squirrel said to Little Bear, "Why aren't you thrifty like us? Why don't you collect nuts?"

"What for?" inquired Little Bear. "Our folks sleep all winter in a snug cave. We do not need any nuts for the winter."

"You could collect nuts and get rich even if you don't need them," said the lame squirrel. "My mother is the richest squirrel in the forest, I guess. She has five storehouses full of nuts that we shall never need, all in secret places. Did you ever hear how I happen to be lame? It was on account of my mother's being so rich. I was poking round when I was little and a whole storehouse of nuts fell on me, and it was a long time before my mother could get me out from under the nuts, legs and all."

"I shouldn't think that you would have to work if your mother is so rich," argued Little Bear.

"Every squirrel has to take care of himself when he is as big as I am," was the reply. "There are no lazy squirrels. I shall never be rich because I am lame and I can't work fast enough, but you could easily get rich, Little Bear. It is a thrifty thing to do."

Straightway Little Bear decided to get rich. He found a hollow tree in his own sun-bright clearing where he had always played so merrily, and in the hollow he began piling hickory nuts, walnuts, butternuts, hazelnuts and acorns. At first he had a jolly time working with the squirrels; he tried to carry nuts in his mouth the way they did, but it made him laugh, and every time he laughed his mouth opened wide and out rolled the nuts. Every time that happened the little squirrels stopped their work to laugh too, which made the old squirrels scold like regular scolding machines. Finally the lame squirrel told Little Bear that he would never get rich if he laughed while he worked. After that Little Bear worked and worked and worked and didn't laugh any more than he had to.

By night he had a good-sized pile of nuts in his hollow tree. But the next morning there was not a nut left in his collection. The squirrels had stolen every one and thought that it was a joke; they said that they needed the nuts and that he didn't.

In the middle of that forenoon Mother Bear looked out of the window and rubbed her eyes hard because she couldn't believe what her eyes told her. In the front yard beside the garden gate Little Bear was at work bringing nuts from the forest and storing them in great heaps.

"Little Bear, what are you doing?" asked Mother Bear in squirrel tones.

"Getting rich," he answered.

"But we do not eat nuts in the winter," she told him.

"I know it," he answered cheerfully. "I am working to get rich. I am drying blackberries in that corner and drying mushrooms in here, going to make a haystack over there, and down in under—"

"Suppose we have blackberry pie supper," interrupted Mother Bear. "Those blackberries look delicious."

Little Bear shook his head. "If you please and if you don't mind," said he, "the lame squirrels says that if I am going to be thrifty and get rich I can't give away anything and that I must watch my stores and not let things be stolen."

Mother Bear was going out into the yard then to tell Little Bear what she thought about such selfishness, but Father Bear was hanging to both her apron strings and whispering in loud whispers, "Let him alone! Let him get rich! He will get sick of it if you give him plenty of chance."

Soon after that three young brown bears leande over the gate and begged Little Bear to come and play rough-and-tumble games with them, but he wouldn't; he said he had to work.

As days passed Little Bear acquired great possessions. Father Bear and Mother Bear were astonished at his riches. It made Mother Bear feel sad to look into her own front yard, but Father Bear only laughed and advised her to wait.

About noon he saw his old friend the lame squirrel limping along as if he were tired and discouraged.

"Good morning, Squirrelly," he called. "Please come over so that I can tell you something I have learned before I get any crosser."

The lame squirrel came; he put both hands over his heart when he saw Little Bear's store of nuts.

"I see that you are rich," said the lame squirrel. "You are richer than any squirrel I ever knew. I suppose you are the richest bear in the world."

"Yes, but I have learned that being rich doesn't make me happy. I never even feel like laughing now. What makes you look so sad, Squirrelly; are you rich too?"

"No, I shall probably starve this winter. A lot of boys stole all my nuts, and they robbed my rich mother and all the neighbors, so that we shall all starve before spring."

Up jumped Little Bear. He felt happy for the first time since he had begun getting rich. "Look here, old fellow," he said, "you just help yourself! You may have every nut that I have gathered. I am sick and tired of owning things. I shall never want to be rich again as long as I live! You call your people and come and help yourselves while I take a birch-basket full of lily roots to Grandfather Beaver and beg him to come and help himself to anything he wants. You tell all the folk you see, Squirrelly, that they are to come and help themselves to anything they need. Tell 'em it is my party."

"O Little Bear, you are good. I shall call everyone who needs food," answered the lame squirrel. He was so happy he forgot that he was lame and went leaping nimbly toward his winter home in the hollow tree with all the nuts he could carry.

CARRAWAY MEMORIAL

From October 28 to November 4 was observed as Children's Week by Carraway Memorial Sunday school, and was termed as a very successful Children's Week. From October 28 to November 4, 120 homes were visited by the Sunday school teachers of the Beginners, Primary and Junior departments. The number of homes visited by each teacher are as follows: Misses Irene Wyrick 15, Bertha Waldon 16, Martha Smith 17, Rebecca Roten 19, J. A. Hughes 24, Mrs. Pearl Tyson 29.

The Sunday school was very successful in securing Misses Maggie Marsh, Lois Hackney and Geraldine Smith from the Greensboro for Women to tell stories to the children Sunday evening, November 4. Although the weather conditions were unfavorable for a large attendance there were 60 children present from four to 12 years of age for the story telling hour.

The parents also enjoyed a good talk Sunday evening at 7:30 by our pastor on the Relationship of Parents and Children.

There were 120 invitation cards sent out by Miss Lena Loman to the parents to attend the special service for the parents. Posters were made by Miss Loman and Carl Neese advertising these events.

Mrs. Pearl Tyson was "key woman" for the Children's Week. The committees assisting in carrying out the program for the week consist of the following: Publicity committee, Lena Loman, Carl Neese; home visitation committee, Mrs. A. Baumbarnar, Misses Irene Wyrick, Rebecca Roten, Bertha Waldon, Lena Loman, Eula Beal, Martha Smith, Sadie Tyson, Mrs. Pearl Tyson, Mr. J. A. Hughes; program committee, J. A. Lowdermilk, Misses Martha Smith, Rebecca Ro'ten.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH—Alice Elizabeth Smith died October 17, 1923, after she had lived a life devoted to her home, friends, church and God. Truly a beautiful life was hers. As a Sunday school teacher she had few superiors and her class of girls was greatly devoted to her. Her church meant much to her and she to it. Her husband and five children can only remember a life that was consecrated to them, and they have the assurance that it is well with the loved one gone. Mrs. Smith always dispersed sorrow and gloom and brought sunshine and happiness. May God abundantly bless the bereaved, and comfort them as only a loving Father can.
J. W. Cotton.

McCAIN—Adline McCain, wife of E. L. McCain, was born June 3, 1855, and was called home to live with God and His angels September 4, 1923. We were married October 15, 1879; lived together until day of death. She was a good wife and good mother. She was dutiful to her church, attending service whenever her health would permit. We miss her very much. She has left her husband, one sister and one brother, seven daughters and one son, all married, and 33 grandchildren, and a host of friends. She was loved by everyone that knew her. But "the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord." But we all hope to meet her in the better land, where parting is no more.
Her beloved husband,
E. L. McCain.

FREEMAN—Andrew Jackson Freeman was born May 3, 1862, age 61 years, five months and 22 days. Professed faith in Christ at the age of 15; was a member of the M. E. Church, South. He was loyal to his church and always kept the N. C. Advocate in his home. He was married to Miss Sarah E. McHargue in 1879. To this happy union were born 13 children, ten of whom lived to maturity and were present at his funeral. He was the father of Rev. H. C. Freeman of our conference. Only a short while before his death he spoke of his firm faith in God and his hope of a home in heaven. Funeral services were conducted by Revs. J. K. Church, B. S. West and T. F. Deitz. His remains were laid to rest in the cemetery near Shoal Creek church.
Mrs. J. K. Terrell.

HANES—On September 20 Mrs. Matthew Hanes passed from time into eternity. Sister Hanes had been sick with cancer for ten months, but she bore her suffering with patience. Surely a good woman has gone from among us.

On September 20, 1883, she was married to Matthew Hanes, who is left to mourn her going away. To this union were born eight children, six living and two dead, four boys and four girls. Those living are C. S. Hanes and R. A. Hanes, both married and living in Thomasville. Those single are Jackson Hanes of Jacksonville, Fla., Minnie Sue Hanes of Thomasville, Lizzie and John Wesley, at home. She also leaves a mother who is 82 years old, and three brothers and two sisters, namely, P. A. Jones and Mrs. R. K. Marshall, both of High Point, C. J. Jones of Winston-Salem, G. E. Jones and Mrs. C. H. B. Leonard, both of Midway community.

Sister Hanes was converted and joined the Methodist church at Midway some years ago; she remained a member of the same until death. She was a kind wife and a dear, loving mother and sister, also a good neighbor. We shall all miss her in her home, in the community and in the church. An evidence of how she was esteemed by her many friends was shown by the host of friends who gathered to pay her respects to her as we laid her in the tomb.

On September 21 at three o'clock the funeral service was conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. Mr. Cox of Thomasville, after which we laid her body to rest in Midway cemetery to wait the call of Christ in the resurrection morning to come forth.
May the Lord bless all who are near Equipment of the Southern Railway System includes 2,200 locomotives and 70,000 cars operating on 8,300 miles of lines.

A Builder of Prosperity

The Southern Railway System spent last year in the South $20,000,000 more than it received from the South.

Our total payments to individuals, municipalities and industries in the South were $136,636,000, while our receipts from the South were $116,790,000.

For every dollar collected from the South we gave back $1.17.

ANGEL—Margaret Elizabeth Anne Angel was born September 6, 1850, and died August 22, 1923. She joined the Methodist church in Franklin, N. C., in her eighteenth year, and was married to Andrew P. Angel March 15, 1870. Seven children were born to them, all of whom are living—Joe D., Andrews, N. C., Fred M. and Ben O., of Oklahoma, Mrs. Frank H. Shupe, Canton, Ohio, and Miss Margaret and Andrew P. Angel, Franklin, N. C. She also leaves one brother, W. B. Dobson, Franklin, N. C., besides grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends.

As the above dates indicate, she was a member of the church for more than half a century. She was very quiet in manner, but her consistency and fidelity in the various relationships of her life were such that she gained an enviable place in the esteem and confidence of all who knew her. She has left the savor of a good name, and an inheritance to her family and the community that is above price. It is a pleasure and a blessing to have known her. J. L. Teague.

ORMOND—Mrs. Lela Ormond, the widow of the late W. W. Ormond of Green county, was born in Hookerton, N. C., and after a life of about fifty-eight years of beautiful living died October 3, 1923.

Sister Ormond was married to W. W. Ormond some thirty years ago and they lived a most happy life together till he was taken four years ago and left her for his heavenly home. They had no children, but their hearts were touched by the needs of helpless children, and out of the bounty with which God blessed them they provided liberally for the orphans. Bro. Ormond made his gift, and when the will of Sister Ormond was read it was found that she, too, had made a substantial gift to the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh.

Sister Ormond was often in our home—the parsonage—and we feel that we knew her and the real spirit of her life. She was gentle and kind towards all—the high, the low, the rich and the poor. She was deeply religious and loved her church. One of the last pictures of her bright face that lingers with me is one answering questions in a Sunday school class just a short time before her death.

Her death came as shock to us all, but when we think of her as being out yonder in the cemetery beside Will (her devoted husband whom she loved so much) we become reconciled because we believe she is happy.

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Springs, Box 4B, Shelton, S. C. Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, the angel of death has come into our midst since last we met and on September 1, 1923, removed from our number a much loved and ever faithful co-worker, Mrs. Bettie Linville Vestal, and the Young People's Missionary Society of Burkhead M. E. church, Winston-Salem, N. C., does hereby adopt the following resolutions of respect as a last sad tribute to this noble character.

First, That we may submit to the will of our heavenly Father, realizing that He doeth all things wisely and discreetly.

Second, That although young in years she had blazed a trail for her Master that every member would do well to follow and continue in until a like summons is answered by each individual.

Third, That our deepest sympathy goes out to the bereaved ones—to the young husband, father, mother, brother and sisters.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of the society, a copy be sent to the family and a copy to our church paper, the Christian Advocate.

Mrs. J. G. Sterling,
Miss Ruth Grubbs,
Mrs. Aubrey Flynt.

"Who is that poor fellow with the guards watching him?" asked the visitor to the penitentiary.

"Oh, he's a desperate criminal," replied the warden. "He is doing twenty years. He wrecked a train."

"And who is that trusty who seems to have so many privileges?" asked the visitor.

"Oh, he's a financier," replied the warden. "He is doing two years. He wrecked a railroad."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH—Mrs. Mary E. Smith, a faithful member of Memorial Methodist church, died at her home in Durham, October 1, 1923. Surviving her are a daughter, Miss Lillian Smith of Durham, and a sister, Mrs. D. K. Kincaid of South Carolina. A son, Mr. T. V. Smith of Dunn, N. C., died a few days after the death of his mother. Mrs. Smith lived among us a life of rare beauty. She was a kind, sweet spirited, unselfish, uncomplaining Christian. The community in which she lived is richer because she tabernacled for a while in our midst. She has left a noble record, a good example. Blessings on the lonely ones.
M. B.

HERRING—Mrs. Icabod Herring, nee Miss Clara Sugg, was born August 3, 1862. Sister Herring joined the church when 23 years of age at Thompson's Chapel, Wayne county, and until her death she remained a devoted member. Not only was she a devoted member and an active member, but an active member, serving as superintendent of Sunday school for a long time; was president of the Woman's Missionary Society for several years. As long as her health would permit she found it a pleasant thing to work in her Master's vineyard. For several years Sister Herring had been in feeble health. Everything that could be done for her comfort was done. We feel she was ready and willing when the death angel came for her. She leaves a loving husband, a number of nieces and nephews to mourn their loss.

May God comfort them.
Her pastor, C. T. Rogers.

PYATT—Mrs. Mary Limy Pyatt was born February 7, 1846, at Nebo, N. C., in McDowell county; died October 21, 1923, aged 77 years old. She died at the home of her youngest son, Mr. W. M. Pyatt. She was the mother of nine children, eight boys and one girl. Five are still living, Mr. W. M. Pyatt, Nebo, N. C.; Mr. J. T. Pyatt, East Morion, N. C.; Mr. Dave Pyatt, West Pittsburgh, Penn.; Mrs. Willie Gibbs, Hendersonville, N. C. Mr. Ben Pyatt left ten years ago and it is not known if he is living or not.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. Mr. Stoney of Madison, N. C. The pastor, Rev. P. H. Brittain, was absent on account of the W. N. C. conference. She had been a member of the M. E. church for 45 or 50 years.

She was laid to rest in the cemetery. The grave was covered with flowers. A host of friends and relatives mourn her going. Let all be ready to meet her over there in a better land.

Her grandchild, Mabel.

WHITEHURST — Leslie Whitehurst, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Whitehurst, of Straits, N. C., fell asleep in death in the Marine Hospital, Norfolk, Va., on Monday, October 15, 1923, aged 21 years. His illness was short but severe, and his death was a great shock to all.

His father and mother are both living. Brothers and sisters living are: Misses Ethel, Ella and Elva Whitehurst, and Mrs. Henry Chadwick; Messrs. Lesland, Lonnie, Gerald and Rev. Guion Whitehurst. These with many other relatives and friends are in sorrow because of his absence from their circle. He was converted and joined the Methodist church when 16 years of age, and from that sacred hour seemed to realize that deep, spiritual meaning of the vows he had taken, and that he must give them clear and conscientious definition in daily life. His was a most attractive personality, with a gentleness and thoughtfulness for others which was especially noticeable. He made friends wherever he went. "A life though short in its span that imparts such lessons is well worth living." The funeral services were conducted at the home of his pastor, Rev. H. M. Jackson. His body was laid to rest in the family burying ground. The floral offerings were most beautiful and showed the affections of his many friends. But God makes no mistakes and some day we hope to meet again on that beautiful shore.
His friend,
Sadie M. Whitehurst.

Make This a Joyous Thanksgiving

By Joining The N.C. Christian Advocate Piano Club

What a wonderful thing it would be to give your family a beautiful piano or player-piano for Thanksgiving. Wouldn't it be the happiest Thanksgiving you and yours have ever had? Or, if you have an instrument that has seen its best days, wouldn't it be fine to trade it in for a new one that will be a pride and joy to your family for a life-time?

You can give this joy to your family now. You don't know just how easy you can buy a high-quality instrument through The Advocate Piano Club until you let them give you full particulars. This club plan of buying a piano is the safest and most economical plan ever devised. It takes all the guess out of piano-buying, saves you money and allows you to pay on such convenient terms that you will hardly miss the money.

By writing the Club now you can make all arrangements and have your instrument in your home on Thanksgiving Day. Wouldn't it be a Thanksgiving to remember for a long, long time?

What The Advocate Piano Club Means to You

- 1st. The Club insures its members absolute satisfaction by enabling them to procure their instruments from one of the oldest and best known Piano Houses in America. Arrangements have been perfected by the Advertising Managers of The Advocate with Ludden and Bates, Southern Music House, which makes piano buying economical, safe and easy. Ludden and Bates have been selling Pianos and Player-Pianos throughout the South for over 50 years. It is a reliable house whose guarantee means exactly what it says. They are not in business today and out tomorrow, but are ever ready and willing to make good on every promise they make.
- 2nd. It means that you are buying at wholesale prices instead of retail prices. WAGON STORE consists of 100 members who by buying together gain a much better price than any one purchaser can procure. You are responsible only for your own purchase, but by buying through the Club you are helping the other 99 members to get wholesale prices and they are helping you.
- 3rd. You are guaranteed perfect satisfaction by a reliable music house, a guarantee that covers the life of your instrument against defective labor and material.
- 4th. By joining the Club you are extended the most convenient terms of monthly, quarterly or yearly payments based on the lowest net cash price. This represents a tremendous saving as compared with the customary installment prices which are usually much higher than cash prices.
- 5th. The family of a Club Member is fully protected in case of the death of the purchaser. If the regulations of the Club have been complied with, the unpaid balance is cancelled and the family is given a receipt in full.
- 6th. You have the privilege of trading in your old piano at its real valuation, for a new piano or player-piano.

Write today for beautifully illustrated catalog, which pictures and describes the superb Ludden & Bates instruments, and explains more fully the many attractive features of the Club. It is helping others by the hundreds. It will help you, too. Address

GREEN—On July 30, 1923, God called Mrs. Dora Elizabeth Tate Green from toil and care to life eternal. She was united in marriage to Mr. J. C. Green a little more than thirty years ago. To them was born ten children, the eldest son having preceded her, leaving behind seven sons, two daughters and one grandchild. She was born in Rutherford county near Henrietta-Caroleen, spending her girlhood days on the farm. Her parents, H. G. and Caroline Webb Tate, were staunch Christian Methodists. They later located in Forest City, where Mrs. Green and her husband partly reared their children before locating in Thomasville. She was converted and joined the M. E. church when quite young, and remained a loyal and faithful member till God called her home. The funeral services were conducted from Thomasville Main Street church by her pastor, Rev. C. A.

Gibbs, assisted by Revs. R. S. Troxler, T. B. Johnston and T. J. Rodgers, the latter having been her pastor during her early married life. Her chief concern was for the happiness and comfort of others, and no sacrifice was too great for her to make for her children. The large concourse of friends who attended her funeral and expressed the esteem in which she was held by her mother was held in high regard by her. We know not why God took her and question not His goodness, but wait and say: "Not now, but in the coming years; It may be in the better land; We'll read the meaning of our tears; But then, up there, we'll understand." Loved Ones.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT
Whereas, the Lord in His wisdom has removed from the Wesley Brotherhood class Mr. John C. McAfee, who was a very faithful member; be it resolved:

First, That our class has suffered great loss and each member has lost a true friend and brother.
Second, That the Sunday school has lost a man whose place will be hard to fill.
Third, That he was always faithful to every trust committed to his care.
Fourth, That we will strive to emulate his good qualities and Christian character.
Fifth, That his daughter have our deepest sympathy in this sad bereavement, consoling them with the thought that God will be a Father to the fatherless.
Sixth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family one one to the Christian Advocate.

Voulme LXVIII

GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1923

No. 47

The North Carolina Conference

THE first session of the North Carolina conference with Bishop Collins Denny at the steering wheel ran "in high" for three and one-half hours and covered a large part of the road that leads from roll call to the reading of the appointments. In these first hours of the eighty-seventh annual session of the conference the nine presiding elders submitted their reports, Bishop DuBose spoke concerning his work in the Far West, the characters of the supernumerary and the superannuate ministers were passed, and the class for admission on trial was received by the conference.

The most impressive moments of the morning session were toward the close when Dr. J. T. Gibbs asked to be granted the superannuated relation. His presiding elder, J. C. Wooten, announced that Dr. Gibbs desired to retire from the active ministry and requested that he say a few words to the conference.

Amid the silence of his expectant auditors, this knightly itinerant arose and began by saying that he had been preaching fifty-three years. Four of these were spent as a supply and the other forty-nine as a member of the North Carolina conference. For thirty consecutive years he had been a presiding elder.

"I was seventy-five years of age September 10, 1922, and as I am not able to do the full work of a Methodist preacher I have come to the conclusion that the thing for me to do is to retire. The conference and the bishops have been good to me and I am in love with all men. This action is entirely on my part and I give up the work with the best of feeling for everybody."

Dr. Gibbs retires from the active ranks of the conference with that grace and dignity which has characterized his entire ministry of more than fifty years. His has been a record that any man might covet, but the manner in which he laid aside his sword marked him as one of the knightliest spirits that has been permitted to sit at the Roundtable of the King.

A Little More in Detail.

The conference met promptly at 9 o'clock, November 14, in the First Methodist church, an edifice of rare beauty. The communion service was conducted by Bishop H. M. DuBose, assisted by Revs. L. E. Thompson, R. H. Brown, L. T. Singleton and J. W. Potter.

At the close of the communion service, which was largely attended, Bishop Denny asked Rev. R. H. Willis to call the roll.

After roll call and on motion of J. T. Gibbs, R. H. Willis was elected secretary. The secretary nominated for his assistants T. M. Grant and W. H. Brown. Rufus Bradley was nominated for statistical secretary. All these were elected.

The hours for meeting and adjourning were fixed at 9:00 and 12:30.

Bishop Denny at this juncture formally presented his colleague, Bishop H. M. DuBose, to the conference.

Rev. J. C. Hunter, of the Virginia conference and a representative of the Publishing House at Richmond, was presented and made a statement about his work.

Transfers from other conferences were announced as follows: H. C. Hendrix from the North Georgia; M. G. Ervin, J. A. Snow, W. L. Dawson, Jr., and W. F. Elliott from the Western North Carolina conference.

Presiding Elders Report.

M. T. Plyler, Durham district, reported ten churches in course of construction. Two big building enterprises now under way are at Trinity church, Durham, and at Chapel Hill. Five other churches expect to begin building next year. Nine pastors complete their four years' service on their respective charges.

Elizabeth City District.

C. B. Culbreth reported five churches practically made over, one new church built and five planned for next year. Evangelistic pastors are serving the district in a very fine way outside of their own charges.

Fayetteville District.

R. H. Willis reported that his district led in the Advocate campaign and that the Advocate was more strongly entrenched now than ever, that there had been 924 accessions on profession of faith and a net increase of 950. There are seven building enterprises and others to begin early in the year.

New Bern District.

F. M. Shamburger said that 600 had been received on profession of faith; new church buildings; salaries nearly all in full and most of the collections paid in full.

Raleigh District.

J. C. Wooten stated that he had joined the conference here twenty-five years ago, was born fifty-five years ago and was closing eight years in the presiding eldership, and that this is a great time to live and work in the kingdom of God. For his district he reported a prosperous and successful year.

Rockingham District.

"Substantial growth both morally and spiritually," was the way J. H. Shore began his report; $75,000 has been spent in church building; the Sunday school and Epworth League work has prospered; salaries and collections practically all paid. Pastors the most successful evangelists.

Washington District.

S. A. Cotton told of successful meetings held by the pastors, really great ingatherings at several points, new church buildings are being erected, two preachers have a deficit in salaries, Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues are prosperous.

Weldon District.

Of the twenty-three charges nineteen report 400 received on profession of faith. The pastors are evangelistic, salaries practically all paid in full. Two parsonages have been built this year. Nine new missionary societies; leagues and Sunday schools growing.

Wilmington District.

J. M. Daniel says that two new churches have been organized in the district and that the pastors have been looking after unoccupied territory. Children baptized, 174. Two new churches built. Good work by Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues.

High Priced Evangelists.

The presiding elders in the reports gave little encouragement to the money grabbing evangelists. One elder reported that a pastor in his district on a little cotton mill charge received more members into the church than all the pastors in another place received from a $10,000 evangelistic campaign. Like expressions were reported by others of the presiding elders. According to the presiding elders these high priced campaigns by professional evangelists have proved colossal failures.

Superannuates.

J. O. Guthrie, P. Greening, C. C. Brothers, M. D. Giles, T. J. Dailey, B. C. Allred, J. A. Lee, W. F. Galloway, A. McCullen, G. T. Simmons, J. M. Lowder, T. H. Sutton, J. E. Underwood, R. W. Bailey, D. L. Earnhardt, J. J. Parker, M. D. Hix, J. F. Usry, R. B. John, J. H. Hall, J. A. Hornaday, S. A. Nettles, N. E. Coltrane, J. T. Gibbs, F. B. McCall, N. E. Coltrane.

Supernumerary.

R. W. Townsend, W. H. Townsend, J. M. Rhodes, E. C. Glenn.

Admitted on Trial.

Henry Lee Whitten, Frederick Webster Selser, Michel Crawford Ellerbe, Lawrence Adams Watts, McDaniel McLamb, Sherley Judge Starnes.

SECOND DAY

A feature of the second day's session of the conference was the adoption of resolutions presented by J. D. Bundy and that were unanimously adopted by a standing vote. The resolutions were as follows:

Resolutions Regarding the Junaluska Incident.

Whereas there appears a growing tendency to depart from the faith upon which our beloved Methodism has builded and grown to its present proportions in breadth, power and usefulness.

And whereas among the evidences of this tendency are found the teachings of Rev. Dr. S. G. Bland at the last summer Junaluska Training School for Sunday School workers, not only without any protest, but with seeming endorsement by those responsible for his presence therefore, be it resolved:

First, That as an annual conference, we deplore this exceedingly unfortunate and hurtful incident to the church and future of the school.

Resolved second, That we ask our parent Sunday School Board to exercise unsparing vigilance in an effort to hinder its repetition.

Resolved third, That we hereby as individuals and as a body, reaffirm our faith in a whole Christ, the divinely conceived and virgin born Son of God, and in a whole Word, divinely inspired for a whole world.

Superannuate Endowment.

Another feature of the morning session was the presentation at 10:30 o'clock of the method the coming year for securing the superannuate endowment fund.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Rev. J. H. Ball, a North Carolina product, has been made presiding elder of the McAlester district, East Oklahoma conference. He has been out of the eldership only two years.

Dr. C. C. Weaver, pastor of Central church, Monroe, is teaching in the Sunday school teacher training school this week in Greensboro. He has been a delightful visitor at the Advocate office during his stay in the Gate City.

Rev. A. L. Latham writes: "We have arrived on the Leicester charge and received the usual pounding, for which we are very thankful. We are hoping for a good year in the Master's work and shall work and pray to that end."

Rev. R. E. L. Morgan, who has been at Chickasha, Okla., goes as presiding elder of Ardmore district and his address is now 620 Third St., S. W. Ardmore, Okla. This Kentucky boy has done well in the West. We congratulate the Ardmore district.—Central Methodist.

The Marion Progress in its story of the memorial services held in honor of the American soldiers who fell in the World War says: "Rev. W. E. Poovey preached the sermon of the occasion which has been pronounced one of the ablest sermons ever delivered from a Marion pulpit."

"Rev. C. C. Barnhardt had a great year at Frederick. Received 146 into the church, 58 on profession of faith and 560 enrolled in Sunday school. His Sunday school raised $1,409 and earned 98 units in teacher training work. His charge will pay him a salary of $3,000 this year." So writes the Oklahoma Methodist of a North Carolina Barnhardt who went west a number of years ago.

Dr. Ashley Chappell, pastor of Central church, Asheville, will conduct the annual revival at Trinity College beginning December 10. There will be two services a day and the meeting will close December 16. The Trinity College students will be thrilled by this interesting and inspiring preacher. There is not a dull moment when he is on the platform, and he knows how to bat home runs for God and religion.

The editor of the Danville Methodist says: "We allowed a visitor to our office to look over our exchanges and after reading the North Carolina Christian Advocate he subscribed on the spot. We inclose herewith a check for $2.00" That is just like a Virginian who knows so well how to do a gracious deed. Show the paper to your neighbor and the North Carolina Christian Advocate will sell itself. The Danville Methodist has set our readers a good example.

Rev. J. A. Bowles, who on account of throat trouble took a superannuate relation at the Winston-Salem conference, went soon after conference to consult physicians in Richmond, Va., who pronounced the trouble malignant and advised him to go to Philadelphia for treatment. Acting upon their advice he went to the Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, where he underwent an operation Friday of last week. The delicate and difficult operation was pronounced successful, but he will be compelled to remain at the hospital several weeks. Brother Bowles will be glad to hear from his friends. He and his family will make their home since his retirement from the active work at Pomona, Greensboro.

"Dr. E. D. W. Jones is one man in the A. M. E. Zion church," says the Index-Herald, "that deserves all the honors that his church can bestow upon him. He is one of the great men of his church, and of the race. He studied his church from every angle; knows it from start to finish, loves it like a mother loves her child; speaks out when others hold their peace lest they offend some one and lose a vote. He shakes the plum tree, winter and summer. We are not dictating to our sister church, but we have the right to speak of her sons if we desire. He would fit well in any church, because he has a big heart and good heart. You can strike him, but unless it is below the belt, he never calls a foul nor looks back. For years he has been shaking the Plum Tree in Zion and we hope that the church in the next General Conference will elevate him to the bishopric and let him rest from his Plum Tree shaking."

The Pioneer Library of Lenoir, N. C., is perhaps the oldest public library in the state. This collection, numbering approximately two thousand volumes, was recently given to Davenport College, and the books moved to the college library.

Rev. E. M. Avett, pastor of the Polkville charge, had the carrying power of his auto recently tested. Hear him tell about it: "The Rehobeth people tested the pastor's automobile Sunday by loading it down with a pounding. The Maxwell can carry a big load."

We have been requested to say that Brother Junius Wrenn of Siler City, the treasurer of the Board of Finance of the North Carolina conference, will not be able to mail out checks to the superannuates and other beneficiaries of the board till about December 1.

Dr. T. A. Smoot of Danville, Va., is this week preaching in the annual revival at Greensboro College. The students appreciate his fine gospel messages and the people of Greensboro are delighted to have this choice spirit in their midst once more. He always receives a warm welcome in North Carolina and nowhere more than in Greensboro.

Rev. W. P. Constable, pastor of Swann Quarter circuit, who was taken ill the second day of conference at Elizabeth City, is better now and went Tuesday of this week to the Watts Hospital, Durham, for treatment. He expects in a few weeks to be able to return home. This will be good news to his many friends.

Dr. Luther Bridges is busy these days as the following indicates: "I am speaking at N. W. Texas, E. Oklahoma, Central Texas, East Texas and Little Rock conferences for the Centenary. The N. W. Texas conference by vote asked me to publish my speech. God is using it, I believe. I preach for Forney Hutchinson at First church here tonight, also speak at S. W. University at Georgetown, Texas, next week."

After serving the people here for four years as pastor of the Methodist church, Rev. H. M. Eure left for the annual conference which is being held in Elizabeth City this week. During the four years that Mr. Eure has lived and labored here he has made friends of all who came in contact with him regardless of denomination, and it is with genuine regret that our people see him leave. Under the rules and laws of the Methodist church a pastor can serve the same charge but four years in succession. Mr. Eure is a very able preacher and of a most lovable disposition.—The Times.

Rev. J. A. J. Farrington of South Side, Winston-Salem, last Tuesday afternoon graced the editorial sanctum with his presence. He had not been in Greensboro for more than a year. His plan, like that of many other of his fellow townsmen, had been for a long time to come over and take a look at the Jefferson Standard building, since there is nothing of the sort in the twin-city. As Paul had said, "I must see Rome also," so had Farrington planned to see Greensboro. But he had been hindered hitherto because of the care of the church at home and on account of his making preparations for the big new church which is to be erected at South Side next summer.

In a private letter to the editor Rev. D. R. Profit among other things says: "After some days of travel over good and bad roads we landed in the beautiful little town of Andrews October 31 at 6:30 p. m. The journey was hard but the landing easy. We found a beautiful church, a splendid parsonage (the most convenient one we have ever lived in—made so because a lady planned it and the Ladies' Missionary Society paid for it, or have almost paid for it—they hope within a few months to be able to burn the notes.) We have been here three Sundays. The people have been kind to us. The first Sunday I preached at 11 the best I could. The stewards met at 3 o'clock and fixed the salary at one hundred dollars more than the presiding elder had told they would pay. Then at the evening service the Baptist pastor brought his congregation down and worshiped with us. So, though we had more than a three hundred mile move, I hope the good Lord had something to do with it. 'Our beloveds sometimes shake us out in a better place than they think.' I miss the fellowship of the brethren, especially on the Monday mornings at old West Market. I will try to look after the interest of the Advocate as soon as I get straight in the collar. I am looking for you to stop over and see me when you go over to Murphy to the district conference."

Rev. R. H. Daugherty, pastor of West End, Winston-Salem, last Saturday was called to Franklin to assist in the funeral of his former parishioner, Mr. L. F. Johnston.

Mrs. Mary J. Holden, a devout member of Park Place church, is quite ill at her home on Bishop street. Her friends will remember this good woman at the throne of heavenly grace.

THE TRINITY COLLEGE DINNER

Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock 300 graduates, former students and friends of the college, entered the big dining room of First church, which the skill and taste of cultured women by the free use of evergreens, potted plants and cut flowers had converted into a banqueting room of rare beauty. Pink and yellow was the color scheme. Great vases of carnations occupied the center of each table.

The dinner served by the ladies of First church was in every respect equal to the skill displayed in the decorations of the banqueting chamber. Mortals are not permitted to enjoy a better dinner. Mythology tells us about the food of the gods, a good hit of which we have thought was imagination. But there was nothing imaginary about the Trinity College dinner at Elizabeth City. It was just about the last word in the fine art of cooking.

Under the inspiration of the beauty without and the stimulating influence of what had gone within, the speakers excelled all past records of theirs. They kicked field goals with consummate ease and made touchdowns at will. The Trinity team won one victory without "interference."

Col. J. F. Bruton, the toastmaster, was both witty and eloquent. President Few launched out into the use of metaphors, something unusual for this man accustomed to talk right on like one of Shakespeare's eminent characters, and spoke of the light-house and of Trinity College being a great beacon amid "life's storm. Hon. Josephus Daniels delivered the best address, some said, that they had ever heard from him. Dr. Storewall Anderson came all the way from Arkansas to tell us that the influence of Trinity College was manifest everywhere he went as Secretary of the General Board of Education. Joseph G. Brown was introduced as the best loved man in North Carolina, and he spoke as one worthy of that great distinction.

Ladies Capture Crowd.

The ladies' quartette of City Road Methodist church was called upon for a selection and sang "When Cupid Made Love to the Moon," and captured the crowd, which called them back. As an encore they sang "My Old Kentucky Home." The quartette is composed of Mrs. George Bell, Miss Nellie Chesson, Mrs. C. R. Pugh and Mrs. U. G. Davis.

After the great men had spoken and the quartette had sung, the toastmaster called on some of the Trinity "kids" to give a sample of their wisdom, wit and ready made eloquence. This speaking quartette consisted of H. E. Myers, W. A. Stanbury, H. M. North and S. W. Marr. Myers and Stanbury measured up to every expectation of a big city preacher and North and Marr showed that they are headed toward the platform of the comedian.

PROMINENT ATTORNEY AND METHODIST LAYMAN PASSES ON

The news of the going of F. S. Johnston of Franklin, N. C., to the eternal habitations has brought a note of deep regret to an unusually wide circle of friends. For thirty consecutive years he has been the active and efficient Sunday school superintendent in the Franklin church and an officer on the board of stewards for an almost equally long time.

No man was ever a truer lover of his friends and fewer have been more loyal to the church. His genial nature blessed the world for more than half a century and no meeting was allowed to be dull or devoid of wit and grace when he presided. With it all he was a devout Christian with great ideals for his church and Master. He will be long remembered among many business associates as a fair and scrupulously honorable lawyer who might have had greater honors in his profession had he cared greatly for political positions. His modesty ranks high as one of shining virtues.

We would welcome a more complete account of his life and service.

NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

Rev. W. A. Lambeth of the Western North Carolina conference explained the method of campaign to be adopted.

He began by saying that he was only a substitute and the substitute is never equal to the principal. But he proved himself equal to the best. With great clearness and in a remarkably interesting manner he explained all the details of the plan. The conference and a great number of visitors listened with breathless interest to all that he had to say. Evidently he made a fine impression upon those who heard him and this conference will undoubtedly give a good account of itself in taking care of the worn-out preachers and the widows and orphans of deceased ministers.

The minimum amount apportioned the conference is $415,831 or the total assessed last year for the salaries of pastors and presiding elders.

This is to be raised in five years, or in less time if the individual churches choose to do so. It should be the easiest money that the church has ever tried to collect.

Mr. Lambeth was followed by Bishop Denny, who urged that these aged and dependent soldiers of the Cross be taken care of in a manner that is creditable to a great church.

Other Items of Business.

J. M. Daniel, presiding elder of the Wilmington district, announced that Rev. T. W. Siler, against whom had been preferred charges of immorality, had surrendered his credentials as a minister of the gospel and had withdrawn from the ministry and from the membership of the church.

Rev. Dr. Rosser, principal of a colored school at South Boston, Va., and a presiding elder in the A. M. E. church, addressed the conference in the interest of his school and took a collection for that work.

The conference instructed the secretary to have 3,000 copies of the Journal published and to distribute these copies to the several pastoral charges on the ratio of membership.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson, the General Secretary of Education, was introduced to the conference.

James Marion Jolliff was received for admission on trial in the conference.

FRIDAY—THIRD DAY

The feature of the third day's session of the North Carolina conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was the address of Bishop Collins Denny to the class of young men who were received on trial.

Many items of business were transacted by the conference.

Five old ministers have been superannuated during this session of conference, and it was ordered this morning that a special offering be made for the assistance of these brethren at the Methodist churches on Sunday morning.

Bishop Collins Denny was requested by a vote of conference to explain the plan of union with the Methodist Episcopal Church at his convenience during the present session of conference.

The class of four young men was received into full connection.

Bishop Denny tells the conference that the budget system means that every interest of the church shares on a percentage basis. "The laymen should not force," said the bishop, "the preachers to attend to the business matters of the church, but if they will not do it, then the preachers must do it."

Conference was called to order at nine o'clock by Bishop Denny with Rev. J. L. Smith leading in the devotional exercises.

On motion of Rev. J. T. Gibbs, Bishop Denny was directed to draw on the Board of Conference Trustees for $882.63, same to be turned over to the Board of Finance to be used for the superannuate preachers.

The resolution of Rev. J. C. Wooten, which was on yesterday referred to the Conference Board of Trustees relative to using funds in the hands of the trustees for an emergency relief for the superannuate preachers, was reported back to the conference with the statement that the board of trustees could not legally use the funds which they held in trust for any other purpose than that which had been directed by the donors of the fund. The report was adopted by the conference.

Rev. F. A. Lupton was received as a transfer from the South Carolina conference.

The class of the second year was called and John Cleveland Cummings, Lindsay Frazier, Kenneth St. Leon Cook, and Martin Reed Chambers made their reports. Their characters were passed and they were advanced to the class of the third year.

When the name of Rev. K. S. L. Cook was called, in making his report, stated that the pastor's salary was paid in full, but that some of the benevolent collections were not in full. It was ascertained that his people used the budget system. Bishop Denny addressed the conference, stating that the salary of the presiding elders and preacher in charge stood on the same footing of all the other collections, and that there must be a division on the percentage basis.

One interesting feature of this session of conference is the fact that a detail of boy scouts serves the conference in the capacity of pages. The stand ready to do the bidding of the conference or any member of it at any time. This morning the bishop introduced the boy scouts, who were to serve today, and stated that he was always for the scouts, that his son was the first Eagle Scout in the state of Virginia.

Bishop Addresses the Class.

At 9:30 Bishop Denny called the class of young men around the altar who were to be received into full connection, and delivered to them a very strong and helpful address. He said to them that "there can hardly be a more solemn hour to you and to us than this. We sometimes think that we live in a great age in the history of the world, and that we know a great deal and achieve much, but I do not know of a generation which made a more complete failure than we have. It is a solemn hour to us when we look back and realize how little we have done. It is a solemn hour to you—you are standing in a most critical moment. You are not to be the same any more. The world will not understand you. When a political question is before the public, a merchant, banker, lawyer or anybody else except a preacher may enter into the discussion of that question, but the world will not allow you to do so. If you enter that realm you will be misunderstood. Somehow or other the preacher is a man of one purpose, and of one work. You cannot expect an easy course. If your idea is to make money, you had better stop right now. The world might excuse a preacher for running off with another man's wife, but it will not excuse him from not paying his debts. You are going to meet prejudices. If you are starting out believing that you are committing yourselves to mere man, you are mistaken. You are committing yourself to the Lord. Put your trust in Him though it may seem hard at times, the things you will be called upon to endure. It may not have been pleasant for Paul to be in jail at Philippi, but he was forced to endure it."

The bishop propounded the disciplinary questions to the class. The first one being "Have you faith in Christ?" "There are jarring voices today in the world. So many things calling you to doubt, but there has never been a rift in the doctrines of the Methodist church, but it seems that there is one on the horizon. We hope there will be no fight, but if one comes we must meet it. When it comes it will cluster around the personality of Jesus Christ. We may as well close our doors unless we have a Christ who is the Son of God. My faith in the virgin birth of Christ and the miracle of the resurrection is unshaken. If you brethren are not in accord with what we term Methodism, stop where you are. There is no place for you in the Methodist church unless you are in accord with it. God has set a very high aim for us; a man with a low aim does not get very far. Let your faith be fixed in Jesus Christ as the Saviour of the world, and allow nothing to shake that faith at any time."

Another question asked was, "Are you groaning after perfection?" The bishop said that he believes in sanctification—not the kind that some fanatics teach. Some of them say that they cannot repeat the Lord's prayer because they have no trespasses to be forgiven. I need all the help of God and man to assist me in entering into a saved relationship with God. If men loved one another a great many of us would achieve to higher experiences and the results of our efforts would be more resultful.

Rev. Dr. E. H. Rawlins, one of the general missionary secretaries of Nashville, Tenn., was introduced to conference and spoke in the interest of the great missionary enterprises of the Southern Methodist church.

SATURDAY—FOURTH DAY

Bishop Denny called the conference to order promptly at 9 o'clock and asked Rev. Thomas McM. Grant, of Hertford, to lead the opening devotional exercises.

Two Preachers Located.

On motion of Rev. J. C. Wooten, presiding elder of the Raleigh district, Rev. W. L. Loy, who served the Zebulon charge last year, was located at his own request. Mr. Loy is at the present time a student at Vanderbilt University, and proposes to prosecute his studies there during the next year. Rev. Marvin Hester, who served Columbia circuit in Elizabeth City district during the past year, on motion of Rev. C. B. Culbreth, presiding elder, was also granted a location. It is understood that Mr. Hester has connected himself with another denomination and is now pastor of a Christian and Missionary Alliance church in Durham.

Bishop Denny called question No. 15, "Who are deacons of one year?" and called the names of John Oglesby Long, Andrew Jarvis Hobbs, Jr., Ernest Ray Clegg, Lafayette Hillman, Daniel Monroe Sharp, Robert M. Price, John W. Harrell. Their characters were passed and they were advanced to the class of the fourth year.

The class of the third year was called and L. C. Brothers and Walter G. Farrar made their reports, their characters were passed and they were elected to the office of an elder, and will be ordained by Bishop Denny at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow.

Bible Class Presented.

Dr. W. W. Rowe, of the Virginia conference, and representative of the American Bible Society, was introduced to the conference by Bishop Denny and spoke in the interest of the cause he represents.

Earlier in the session a resolution was passed and referred to the budget committee, imposing an assessment of one per cent of the salary of the presiding elders and preachers in charge to take care of emergency superannuate cases. This morning Rev. W. A. Cade of the budget mission moved a reconsideration of this paper, as it seemed that it was not feasible at this time to impose this assessment. The church is just entering upon a campaign to raise a large endowment for the superannuate preachers, and it was felt that it is not wise at this time to take any steps that would likely impair that movement.

Plan University Church.

Rev. R. H. Willis, conference secretary, read the report of the joint commission on the Chapel Hill representative church. The report asked that a campaign be waged during the next few months to secure a donation from as many of the old students of the University as possible for the erection of this representative church.

Rev. T. M. Grant read the report of the Sunday School Board. This report indicates that much progress has been made during the past year along all Sunday school lines of endeavor, and plans are being matured for even larger things than during the past year. L. L. Gobble, who has so efficiently led the Sunday school work during the past three years, was re-elected conference Sunday school superintendent at an advance of $500 in his salary.

Report of Commission on Budget.

Rev. F. S. Aldridge reported for the Commission on Budget. According to this report apportionments laid upon the conference by the general conference were $87,571 divided among the several districts as follows: Durham district, $10,757; Elizabeth City district, $7,360; Fayetteville district, $8,634; New Bern, $10,290; Raleigh, $9,779; Rockingham, $11,127; Weldon, $9,541; Washington, $11,221; Wilmington, $8,942. Report says that after due consideration of the askings from the conference boards it recommended the following assessment: To conference missions, $18,000; education, $24,400; conference claimants, $15,000; Sunday school funds, $10,500; church extension, $8,000; conference entertainment, $2,500; Epworth Leagues, $2,000; conference expense and lay activities, $10,000; conference treasurer, $4,000, making a total of $81,000.

Report on Orphanage.

Rev. W. C. Benson read the report of the Orphanage Board. At the Methodist Orphanage, Raleigh, during the year a great revival of religion was held among the children of that institution.

At the present time every child there is a member of the church. The management of the Orphanage has laid out a pretentious building program for the coming year. Six new buildings are to be erected. The hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars in the S. C. Vann fund is to be used to construct a new administration building to take the place of the old Main building. B. N. Duke has recently given to the Orphanage for its use a seven passenger Packard automobile.

The conference secretary read the report of the Board of Church Extension. This report earnestly urges that more care be taken in planning new church buildings, and that they be erected with special reference to Sunday school work.

The committee on church property reporting through Rev. E. C. Maness, recommends that our people insure all church property, and that as far as possible they use in the Methodist Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of Statesville, N. C.

At 11 o'clock, it being the special order of the day for the selection of a place to hold the next session of the conference, Rev. W. A. Stanbury, pastor of Grace church, Wilmington, gave a cordial invitation to the conference to go there next year. Rev. H. G. Smith, pastor of Trinity church, that city, joined Mr. Stanbury in the invitation, as did also M. C. Cowell, a layman from the district.

On motion of Rev. M. T. Plyler, a special session of conference was ordered to be held at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, that due respect may be paid to the members of conference who died during the past year.

At 11:30 this morning, according to a resolution which had passed yesterday, Bishop Denny addressed the conference explaining the plan of the proposed union of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Bishop Denny is on the commission for unification.

He is one of three on the commission who opposed the plan adopted by the joint commission, and he is using his good office in enlightening the people as to the plans as well as giving his own views concerning the matter. He was heard this morning with great interest.

SUNDAY AT CONFERENCE

Impressive memorial services were held Sunday afternoon at the First Methodist church in honor of the memory of the North Carolina conference who have died during the year. Those to whom tributes were paid were Rev. Thomas Neal Ivey, late editor of The Christian Advocate, who died May 22 at the age of 63; Geo. Dallas Langston, who died at his home in West Durham on April 27, at the age of 77; and Henry Ellison Tripp, who died at his home at Clinton October 20.

Memoirs of these Methodist leaders were read, following which came spontaneous tributes from the floor. Among those paying tribute to Dr. Ivey from the floor were D. H. Tuttle and G. B. Perry; while Dr. W. H. Few paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Langston.

With seats for one thousand in the auditorium of the First Methodist church many stood throughout the Sunday morning service and many more were turned away from the doors for lack of room, so great was the number who wished to hear Bishop Collins Denny's Sunday sermon. Besides, every other church auditorium in the city was practically filled by those who went out to hear other members of the conference who occupied various pulpits in the city. Those preaching in other churches today and tonight were Revs. H. M. North, W. A. Stanbury, C. K. Proctor, J. C. Whedbee, J. W. Bradley, E. C. Few, E. B. Slaughter, G. T. Adams, F. R. Love, A. D. Wilcox, Walter Patten, L. T. Singleton, L. D. Hayman, Daniel Lane, B. H. Robinson, H. C. Smith, T. G. Vickers, J. V. Knight, W. C. Martin, V. H. Scoville and J. A. Bailey. The last three speaking at Mount Lebanon A. M. E. Zion church.

Again at night the First Methodist church was filled to overflowing when Rev. Marvin Ormond, under whose ministry the First Methodist building was erected, preached to a great congregation.

IS THE MODERN MAN TOO BUSY TO THINK ABOUT HIS SINS?

By Oscar L. Simpson, S. T. M.

Professor Josiah Royce in his definition of the modern man says "he is one who does not believe in hell, and who is too busy to think about his sins." The description can be only partially true. References to hell are to the average person doubtless only vivid figures of speech. One seldom hears the hell fire and brimstone sermons that were so in vogue twenty-five years ago. This may not be interpreted as meaning that fear no longer operates as an impelling force to drive men to God. Professor Royce pictures quite accurately, however, the popular method of dealing with sin, viz., forget it, do not think about it at all.

Sin, briefly defined, is failure to conform to the will of God. The failure may be that of an individual or of society. There are individual sins and social sins. "Nothing more hopeless can be said of an individual or a society than that it has lost its sense of sin" (William Adams Brown, Christian Theology in Outline, page 268).

But Professor Royce says the modern man is too busy to think about his sins. Is moral and spiritual growth possible if a person is too busy to think about his sins? "Busy about what?" replied a friend whose opinions I respect highly. "If his time is well employed he is the gainer rather than the loser." The reply has the marks of the Twentieth Century way of looking at things. The "hardened sinner" doubtless spends very little, if any, time reflecting on the error of his way. So, too, the man who desires positive virtue. Why waste time thinking about one's sins when forgetfulness lies in doing positive good? Repentance is implicit in the act of going ahead. Self-expression takes the place of self-abnegation. Instead of a monk sworn to penitential seclusion we have a man bent on doing good. Well, either (the man or the monk) may be in dead earnest. The one thinks to win acceptance through some positive contribution, the other through being a mope.

Excellent things can be said of the man who goes out and gets what he wants, who sees a good thing to be done and does it. His philosophy has been preached incessantly for a generation, and most of us have capitulated. Few words need be spoken in his praise: attitudes are more eloquent than words. To the disciple of utilitarianism the worst of all failings is inanity.

But there are exceedingly important individual and social problems that cannot be solved by merely doing things. An examination of the means usually employed to secure progress reveals this clearly. Legislation, commercial agencies, philanthropy and co-operation are commonly accepted as the principal factors in social advance. These factors are all useful, but one doubts seriously if they are adequate.

1. Legislation is extremely important in establishing high minimum standards to which the group must conform. But legislation has its limitations, not the least of which is that it is dependent to a greater or less degree upon a favorable public sentiment. Moreover, there are subtle human ills which no legislation can correct.

2. Commercial agencies are concerned primarily with declaring dividends. It is still true that the corporation tends to soullessness.

3. Philanthropy is the great initiator; but there is always the danger of an unnatural relationship between donor and recipient which, if continued too long, may interfere with the self-respect of the latter. Some day it will become axiomatic that he who aspires to serve his fellows constructively must inspire them to serve themselves and each other constructively. Mutual self-service on a voluntary basis seems to be the only road one may point to as leading to the actual realization of democracy. Too much paternalism encourages apathy of the worst sort; and it is a fact that legarthic individuals are the first to say "I told you so" when things do not pan out right. Browning's Patriot always arouses pity, just as Browning intended he should do. But one cannot escape the reflection that had the patriot inspired his flock to discover for themselves the art of living his dismal march in the rain might never have taken place.

Alack, it was I who leaped at the sun
To give it my loving friends to keep!
Nought man could do, have I left undone
And you see my harvest, what I reap
This very day, now a year is run.

4. Those who join the co-operative movement must yet determine what their ultimate goal is. From the writings of most of the advocates of co-operation one gains the impression that the supreme object is the equalizing of material conditions. Now, conceding the impurtance of the object, co-operation to that end would defeat itself ultimately. A man may be comfortable and clothed and fed, with money in the bank, and still be morally weak. There is a vast difference between feeding and clothing men and inspiring them to achieve Christian character. The two may support each other, but not of necessity. If a choice must be made between material benefits and the growth of a spiritual idea, the latter is the more important.

James Russell Lowell, describing his age said, "Things are in the saddle and ride mankind." That is even more true today than in Lowell's time. A modern writer suggests that our progress in mechanical efficiency would be brought into dramatic relief if Ruth's sickle were placed by the side of a McCormick reaper in a world's fair. But, he goes on to ask, how about Ruth herself? If she appeared among the women of the fair, would our superiority in that branch of manufacture be apparent? It is worth noting in this connection that with all our labor saving devices the average person finds no more time to stop and think than formerly. It seems to be fairly characteristic of men and women, rich and poor alike, that their lives are not directed anywhere. Preoccupied with the daily routine, life becomes absorbed with petty rounds. The obvious thing is chosen instead of the carefully prepared thing. "We don't know where we are going, but we are on the way." Very little conscious attention is given to higher things. We spend perhaps one hour and a half each week at church, unless it is a beautiful day. The sanctions that are commonly thought of as operating to control moral conduct are losing their hold. The small boy who used to make an occasional raid on the farmer's orchard has been supplanted by respectable city folk riding in automobiles. The "crime" consists in getting caught.

If the primary emphasis is upon things rather than persons, sooner or later there must come a shift of emphasis from material to spiritual values.

In the first half of the twelfth century Saint Bernard urged Pope Eugenius III to devote more time to consideration. "I am afraid," wrote Bernard, "lest, surrounded by occupations so numerous . . . you may harden your forehead and thus gradually in a measure strip yourself of the feeling of a just and profitable sorrow (De Consideratione, Book 1, chapter 2). The book closes with a rousing exhortation to Eugenius to turn reformer. "If you are a disciple of Christ, let your zeal kindle, let your authority arise. . . ." One need read only certain sections of the remarkable collection to see the entire reasonableness of Bernard's proposals.

The old fashioned class meeting used to be the Protestant confessional. With its discontinuance, the decay of the family altar and the blighting effect of a too much secularized experience, Protestantism is in grave danger of having no confessional. Now if the spirit departs it is good sense to put the remains away. In other words, do not insist upon the reinstallation of family heirlooms to solve present day problems. The deification and consequent permanence of the Roman Catholic confessional have served merely to encourage casuistry on the part of her priests. It is the spirit that maketh alive!

John the Herald, preaching in the desert of Judea, cried, "Repent ye, the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

It is widely believed that contemplation inhibits action. The church, far from being a sacrament, is an organization whose object is to do things. No one denies that there are things to be done. But it is better to leave some things undone, if need be, than forsake the genius of quiet reflection.

Reflection is not symptomatic of lassitude. Truth forces itself upon the alert mind to provoke thought. Reflection may mean strenuous mental activity in the field of science, literature, art, business. Likewise, it may mean worship. And worshipful reflection, carried into the realm of individual or corporate conduct, leads almost inevitably to the conviction of sin: go and sin no more. To be conscious of one's shortcomings, so long as they are not moped over, is a good sign, for then genuine progress is possible. A healthy discontent is a good thing. It makes room both for an expanding program and the steady growth of the tissues of the soul.

Orders are being filled for Christmas cards. We have a large assortment to select from. If desired we will make selection for you.

W. A. LAMBETH AND THE SUPERANNUATE

"Who is the little man with a twinkle in his eye seated in the pulpit beside Bishop Denny," asked an inquisitive occupant of one of the front pews in the big First church.

"That is W. A. Lambeth, the speaker of the evening," answered the writer of this account of the top notch attraction of the Elizabeth City conference.

"And who is W. A. Lambeth?"

It was our time to ask a question or two. "You are not a Methodist, are you?"

"Yes, I am," he replied.

"Do you read your church paper?"

"I do not," replied the talkative gentleman who had already expressed a doubt as to the ability of the little man to take command of the great audience that filled the church both upstairs and down.

But when Dr. Lambeth got in action all doubts were chased away from Methodists who are ignorant of church leaders because they do not read their church papers, and from all others who may have looked with uncertainty upon the results of the evening.

Lambeth did not bore for water, but he got the tears all the same. His palpable hits were greeted with laughter, and with the rapidity and the sharp crack of a machine gun he sent home the truths about the old worn-out preacher.

Mr. Lambeth told of the days when these old heroes were pioneers in blazing out new fields of labor on small salaries and then did not receive the full amounts that had been promised them. He declared that if their back salaries were paid each one of them would have in their pockets at that time $3,300. When the preacher joined conference he was set apart for one work—the gospel ministry, and the church, and his obligation which he assumed at the altar of the church would not permit him to supplement his pittance at any other task.

The speaker told of the many churches erected under the administration of Methodist ministers who are now on the retired list, the millions of dollars raised by them, the thousands of souls saved under their persuasive preaching, and declared that this alone entitled them to sit at the banquet table of the Methodist church, but instead of a banquet they had been fed on the crumbs and that their middle name is "Lazarus."

The General Conference at its last session said it must stop. A support must be provided for them. Not less than $10,000 must be raised during the next five years, the interest on which would give every superannuate preacher $700 and every widow of a preacher $500 per year.

Speaking by comparison Mr. Lambeth said that the negro Pullman porters who made down beds and swept the floors of the cars after he had been in service for 20 years was retired on a pension of $30 per month. All big business concerns pension their old men as a matter of business, the speaker declared, and it is nothing but elemental justice for the church to pension its old men. "It is justice and not charity that I am pleading for," said he.

He advanced four great reasons to prove that it is a good investment to pension old age. First, business men say that old age pension is a lucrative business because the old man cannot do the same amount of work as efficiently as the active, alert young man, hence it pays in dollars and cents for him to retire on a pension and allow the young men to take his place. Second, an old age pension system prevents leakage from the service. It keeps men from going to a new position when they know they will be taken care of when old. Third, it promotes efficiency and morale among those who are left in the service. Fourth, an old age pension replenishes the ranks with recruits. Many would enter the ministry had they any assurance of an adequate support.

The speaker told a story of the Sunday school class of boys whose teacher asked all who wanted to go to heaven to hold up their hands. All hands went up except one. The teacher said, "Why, Willie, don't you want to go to heaven?" The little fellow replied, "Not yet." The preacher admonished the wealthy business man not to go to heaven yet—not till you do something for the worn-out preachers of Southern Methodism. He said most folks had four kinds of bones—the wish bone, jaw bone, funny bone and backbone. "I love the chiropractic," said he, "because he works on the backbone."

In closing his address Mt. Lambeth made a most earnest appeal to the preachers and laymen to go out during the next few months and do something worth while and raise the last penny of the $10,000,000.

ELIZABETH CITY METHODISTS ENTERTAIN TO THE QUEEN'S TASTE

Perhaps the conference never received better entertainment than that so cordially given by the Methodists on the Pasquotank. The ladies had instituted in the First church dining rooms a cafeteria with the very best home cooking, and served with a dispatch and ease that was truly marvellous. The organization was perfect and each individual seemed to enjoy doing her particular part of the work assigned.

Dr. N. H. D. Wilson, the pastor, literally worked himself to a frazzle in his effort to serve the conference and he succeeded admirably. He had in H. E. Myers of City Road a good second. The laymen of Elizabeth City left nothing undone in the care of their guests.

RECITAL AT LOUISBURG COLLEGE

Students of the piano, voice, violin and expression departments of Louisburg College were greeted by an immense audience when they gave their second students' recital in the college auditorium Friday evening, November 16th.

The following took part in the delightful program of the evening: Margaret Lee Gillett, Goldsboro; Margaret Holden, Louisburg; Olive Clarke, Grimesland; Glennie Keith, Vass; Elizabeth Grant, Garysburg; Gladys Taylor, Louisburg; Richard Wyandt Mohn, Louisburg; Frances Bacon, Stem; Margaret Michiner, Franklinton; Elizabeth Sanderford, Raleigh; Margaret Ogburn, Louisburg; Mary Lee Starling, Garner; Olivia McKinne, Louisburg; Frances Carter, Stedman; Hattie Mae Parker, Lasker; Etta Beale Grant, Hookerton; Inez Hooker, Boardman; Susie Crowell, Thomasville; Julia Daniels, Elm City.

RESOLUTION OF THANKS

Resolved, That the members and delegates of the North Carolina conference extend to the pastor and members of the First church of Elizabeth City their thanks for their generous and gracious hospitality. The beautiful and commodious church and the excellent arrangement for the entertainment of the conference has made this a memorable session. To the pastor and members of City Road church and to the citizens of the different denominations in the city, and the Boy Scouts, the thanks of the conference are gratefully extended. To those who have furnished the inspiring music and to the women who have given unstintedly and unselfishly their services in caring for the members of the conference, the thanks of this body are hereby extended.

To all who have contributed in manifold ways to the success and pleasure of this session of the conference the genuine and sincere thanks are hereby gratefully tendered.

R. L. Flowers,
H. M. North,
J. T. Gibbs.

GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY

Sunday, January 27, 1924, will be Good Literature Sunday in Southern Methodism. The College of Bishops has given this its endorsement.

The purpose of observing this day to promote the circulation of your conference organ and the general organ, the (Nashville) Christian Advocate.

The committee appointed by the Southern Methodist Press Association will mail to pastors, through the Circulation Department, Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., certain materials and supplies during the first week of January, for use on Good Literature Sunday.

We solicit the hearty support of our preachers in making this day a success.

Rev. T. F. Higgins, pastor of Broad Street, Charlotte, who has been critically ill in a Charlotte hospital, is reported to be improving rapidly and the chances for his recovery are very encouraging. He was taken to the hospital a week ago last Monday and three operations have been performed for some acute internal trouble. We trust that this capable young minister may have a speedy recovery.

MRS. J. J. GRAY

Mrs. Gertrude Buchannon Gray was born in Webster, N. C., August 23, 1872, and died in Spindale, N. C., June 10, 1923, and was therefore nearly fifty-one years of age.

On November 15, 1896, she was married to Rev. J. J. Gray. To them was born one child, a daughter, Alice, who with the husband survives. Mrs. Gray was in many respects an extraordinary woman. First, it may be said of her that she was extraordinary in her Christian faith. At the early age of fourteen years she was soundly and happily converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, immediately devoting her child mind and impulsive energies to its work. At no time in her after life did she waver. Of her faith it may be said in truth, it shone more bright and clear when tempests raged without. Here was a faith which in danger knew no fear, in darkness felt no doubt.

Again she was extraordinary in the manner in which she fitted herself into the life of an itinerant Methodist preacher. Never physically strong she gave herself almost prodigally to the task of helping her husband in this work. As year after year these faithful kingdom builders were sent to the hard fields she never once embarrassed or discouraged him by complaining, but with that fine Christly optimism so necessary under such circumstances, she mightily heartened him and helped him to cultivate with invariable success these difficult fields.

Again may it be said, she was extraordinary in the superb manner in which she built her life and faith into the life of the daughter. The writer at the very beginning of his ministry had the rare privilege of receiving this little child into the church in Gaston county, at the almost unprecedented age of five years. How her fathers' health, then rapidly failing, soon completely gave way, and for many years was compelled to take the relation of a superannuate; how the wonderful wife and mother summoned all her queenly qualities of mind and heart, and bravely determined not only to hold the little family together, but give to Alice the very best preparation for an honored and useful life; how the daughter at last graduated from Randolph Macon College and was sent to New York to spend a year at a conservatory of music; how that at last God in His marvelous way brought the father back to physical health, and enabled him once more to take his place in the ranks of the active preachers, constitutes a story almost unmatched in the history of our generation, and marks Mrs. Gray as a great heroine of faith, devotion and self-sacrifice.

Finally, it must be said that she was extraordinary in the fine way in which she bore her afflictions for six long years as an invalid. Carried from one hospital to another and to able physicians in several towns, it at last became clear that medical science was failing and that God was preparing to take her to himself. In all the trying months and years of terrible suffering Mrs. Gray was unafraid, calm and beautifully resigned. With George McDonald she could say in solemn truth, "Affliction for me is but the shadow of God's wing." Suffering was to her a guide to reflection, a teacher of humility, a nurse of faith, a strengthener of patience and a promoter of charity. Her tears were a sort of eyewash which the Father gave to her in order that using it she might see the more clearly to read his providence and behold "the land of far distances" beyond the grave.

At last on the 10th of June, when the king of day had pushed aside the curtain of night, she looked and beheld a pale horse and his name that sat on him was Death! She looked at him for a moment, then sustained and soothed by that unfaltering trust which had characterized the whole of her life with Bryant, she approached the grave like one who draws the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams.

J. Frank Armstrong.

Dr. C. C. Weaver spoke at the fathers' and sons' banquet held Wednesday evening under the direction of the Men's Club of Park Place church, Greensboro. The address was adapted to the occasion, interspersed with humor and full of sound advice to the fathers and sons who were fortunate to hear him.

Many a person has bitterly regretted a bad investment of money; but how many regret a bad investment of time or talent?

FIELD NEWS

PASTOR KINDLY RECEIVED

Just a word to say that the Bessemer City charge has kindly received for the second year. As an expression of this fact our congregation from Concord church gave us a very fine pounding last Thursday evening at seven o'clock. The crowd was large, and the many kinds of good things to eat were in abundance. We thank each one who took part and especially those who led the way.

Also at the same hour at the parsonage Mr. Andrew J. Mauney and Miss Ferra Kiser, both members of Concord church, were united in matrimony by the pastor. The groom is cashier of the bank at Cherryville, N. C.

Concord was about the first country church to have been built at a cost of more than $10,000. This was done during the pastorate of Rev. W. B. Shinn, when material and labor were still cheap. E. B. Stabler, Pastor.

M. F. LASSITER DEAD

Mr. Millard F. Lassiter, aged 71 years, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. L. E. Teague, Friday morning, November 16, after an illness extending over a period of several weeks. Mr. Lassiter was stricken with nervous trouble some years ago which affected his left arm, causing an involuntary trembling of that limb. His health was otherwise impaired and the nerve trouble with complications caused his death. In his younger years he was engaged in farming in the community near Handy and was considered a successful farmer. Later he moved to Farmer in Randolph, near his boyhood home, where he lived for some time, he and Mrs. Lassiter later moving to Thomasville to make their home with their daughter. In 1875, May 27, Mr. Lassiter was married to Miss May Skeen. To this union were born three children, one son, Sherrill, and twin daughters, Dora and Flora, the latter dying at the age of ten years, the former now Mrs. L. E. Teague, and Prof. Sherrill Lassiter of Georgia, with Mrs. Lassiter and an only brother, Whit Lassiter of Marion, survive.

Mr. Lassiter had been a life long member of the M. E. church, a Sunday school worker, a superintendent, a noted singer and his presence at any gathering meant inspiration in singing the old revival hymns that the great congregations who assembled at Siloam, Mount Ebel, Chapel Hill and other churches in that section of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Lassiter's home was a place where ministers of the gospel delighted to go, always finding that home a place of refinement and Christian fellowship so much prized by the care worn preachers, and the news of Mr. Lassiter's passing will bring grief to many readers of this paper who knew him so well. He was upright in his dealings with his fellowmen, a model citizen in the best sense of the word and his death removes from the scene of action one of the most highly esteemed Christian citizens of the community.

Funeral services were conducted Saturday afternoon from the Teague home on Fisher Ferry street, Thomasville, by Dr. Gibbs, pastor of Main Street Methodist church, and Dr. Trueblood, pastor of the First Baptist church, interment in the local cemetery following the funeral. X.

Internal cleanliness protects against disease

IT is but a step from those immediate results of constipation—headache, heaviness, loss of appetite—to serious disease. Such minor ailments are a warning that poisons from food waste are flooding your body. Keep clean internally.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Your Bath Goes
Only Skin-Deep

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a laxative and cannot gripe. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

Don't give disease a start. Adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

Whereas, the end of our conference year has come, and

Whereas, it has become our sad duty to say good-bye to our most lovable pastor, Rev. T. McM. Grant, who has labored so faithfully for the cause of the Master in our midst during the past four years, and

Whereas, we are deeply impressed by his zeal and efficient effort in behalf of the church, and by his great courage in fighting for everything that makes for the uplift of the community; therefore be it resolved by the board of stewards of the Hertford M. E. church:

That Brother Grant has won the love, both of the membership of the church and the people of the entire community.

That the deep appreciation and sincere thanks be extended Brother Grant from the board of stewards and the church for his fine example of Christian citizenship among us.

That, while the board of stewards and the church will gladly abide by any appointment that may be made, it would also welcome the news of Brother Grant's return to Hertford.

That copies of this resolution be mailed to the North Carolina Christian Advocate and the local paper for publication, and copies sent to Presiding Elder Rev. C. B. Culbreth and to our bishop, Dr. Collins Denny, and a copy be spread upon our minutes.

Read and adopted Nov. 7, 1923.

A CHILD GOES TO CHURCH

By Mazie V. Caruthers.

First, all the people sing and then—they say
"Our Father," just as I do every day;
It makes me feel so proud, because I,
too,
Know how to pray the words that Grown-Ups do.
Right after that, four men march down the aisles—
(My Uncle Joe is one; he always smiles
On week-days—but on Sundays, what a change!
Church seems to make him look so stern and strange.)
They all pass silver plates, and each one there
Must put in money, like you pay a fare.
I carry my own purse, and when it's time
For me to pay, put in a brand new dime.
I like this part of church, but later,
when
The man in robes begins to talk, why then
My thoughts, like birds, go flying anywhere—(But God, who lives here in this house, won't care
So long as I sit still.) The sun shines through Three stained glass windows just above our pew;
One of them shows a Shepherd with a lamb Cuddled close to his shoulder. Oh, I am
So fond of him! Within that kind, strong arm
No little lamb could ever come to harm.
A lovely Lady in a queer blue gown
From out the second window frame smiles down,
Holding her Baby—'twould be great if He Should climb down from her lap and play with me!
The middle picture is the best of all;
A bearded Man, tall as my father's tall—
Stands underneath a great, big spreading tree,
And little children gather 'round His knee—
They seem to talk together like dear friends—
His face is beautiful.
When service ends,
The organ plays a lively tune, as though
It meant to tell us "hurry up and go."
So everybody crowds to reach the door.
But I turn back to look at them once more—
The Shepherd and the Lady and the Man—
And say good-bye as often as I can!
Their eyes all follow—they can not speak
But church will be locked up a whole long week,
And they'll be lonely till next Sunday,
when
They know I'll come to see them again!

"THE REVIVAL HAS ALREADY BEGUN IN MY FAMILY"

Rev. W. E. Towson, Kyoto, Japan, sends among many others, this story:
"Only last night, October 7th, I was told this story, as related by one of Japan's most earnest and successful
Christian workers. He and his family had planned to be in Tokyo on the day the disastrous earthquake occurred, but were providentially hindered.

Their escape from harm, and probable death, so impressed the older daughter of the family, who had mapped out a musical career for herself and was already at work on it, that she announced, at family prayers, that she had given her preserved life to God for any field of service for which He wished her. Thereupon, the younger sister said, 'If sister does that, I will do so also.' In telling the story, the father said, 'The revival has already begun in my family.' Many are praying that through the earthquake and the fire the people will hear the call to repentance and consecration of life and service to our Lord. The people have been greatly sobered by this terrible experience and they surely needed to be, for extravagance, luxuriousness, profligacy and immorality have been very rampant since the days of the war. Some of the non-Christian leaders are calling the nation to repentance."

SOUTHERN METHODIST BOARD FIRST TO SEND AID

Our Japanese Christians say there has never been such an opportunity for Christian work in Japan as at present. The people are full of gratitude for the sympathy of the world, in this great calamity; their hearts are especially tender, and old superstitions are passing away. They need a new faith to enter the empty rooms that have been garnered and swept.
America was the first of the countries, through her President, to send condolence. Our Southern Methodist Board was the first to send aid to the suffering. When I see the opportunities for service and look at our little force of missionaries, in evangelistic work, outside of schools, it makes my heart sad. Only three young men preparing for this work, while the older missionaries must give much of their time to committees, and to superintending buildings, etc. It is little short of a crime to let this opportunity pass. The millions in Tokyo and other stricken districts are starving for spiritual food as much as for physical help. Poor, dazed, stricken things, they see their old gods thrown down, their old superstitions, which have been dying as education advanced, wiped out, yet in their bewilderment they know not which way to turn. Their hearts are tender towards America, because of her ready help and sympathy.

Dear Mrs. Boyer:

Please let me try to express my thanks to the W. M. S. and my dear
S. S. class of young people at Henrietta for their kind remembrance of me as I was leaving. May God's richest blessings always abide with them.

Mrs. J. C. Postelle.

AN APPRECIATION

Resolved, That in appreciation of the faithful, untiring leadership and self-sacrificing contribution of Mrs. G.
C. Brinkman to the work of the Woman's Missionary Society during her three years with us, we as a society spread on our minutes this, a record of thanks.

For decades to come the beautifully furnished ladies' parlor will bear testimony to her liberality.

Our best wishes attend her where-ever she goes.

EVERYBODY IN

It is not left with a handful of missionaries or with the missionary societies alone to give the gospel to the world. This all-important object is for the whole Christian church. Every department of it should work together like Trojans for God for the purpose of carrying out the Great Commission.
The pastor is called for that purpose;
the members edified to that end; the whole church exists for that purpose.
We are all responsible. The person who stays at home is just as responsible and should work just as hard for the salvation of the heathen as the person who goes to the front. We are all called to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature.

The purpose is as comprehensive in its territorial sweep as the area of the inhabited earth—"to every creature."
It has to do with all nations irrespective of location, color, or degree of civilization. The fact that you have told the people in your own little town does not at all mean that you have completed your task. Jerusalem was only the starting point. On out into all Judea were they to go, and then across the border line into Samaria.
Their efforts were not to cease until they had gone into the uttermost parts of the earth, faithfully endeavoring in every place to carry out the purpose of the church. Our joy should be to seek the enthronement of our Saviour into the hearts of all men everywhere.
It calls for the united effort on the part of all to help save the world.—

WORLD NEWS

There is double need in these days for red hot loyalty to Jesus, in season and out of season, a quickness to bear witness for Him, a loyalty to His Holy Word, and a purity and wholeness of life and consecration, if we are to have real spiritual power, such as will bring souls to a new birth and into vital union with our Lord.—Wightman T. Reid, Songdo, Korea.

Latest Figures on Earthquake Losses.

On September 29 Rev. W. E. Towson wrote from Kyoto: "The Home department of the government has issued the following total figures as a result of the latest investigations:
'Afflicted population, 2,385,500; houses burned, 350,186; houses collapsed, 59,
843; houses partially collapsed, 69,
223; killed, 77,831; injured, 103,100; missing, 42,545.' Terrible as is the total of the dead, it will probably be considerably increased in the final report. The 'missing' ones include those who were buried under houses that fell and were afterwards burned. Then, too, many of the 'injured' will die and thus help to swell the total. Today's paper states that the railway system of the country, which is only about 10,000 miles in length, has suffered to the extent of $50,000,000, while the Communications department, consisting of the postal, telegraph and telephone systems, reports its total losses as one hundred and twenty million dollars. The total destruction of property by the earthquake and the fires caused by it will aggregate, the newspapers report, somewhere near the staggering total of fifty billion dollars.

"Let Christ's Golden Rule Rule the World."

The following paragraphs were taken from a letter written by Mr. Peter Shih, returning Chinese student from Nashville, Tenn., to Sochoow, China:
"We have been going westward since we left San Francisco, in order to reach the Far East. After all, why should there be an East and a West, standing as if opposed to each other?
Tell me exactly where is East and where is West? These positions are but relative. But, how futile it is to convince people of the folly of attaching so much importance to these illu-sionary differences. Ours is the job to bridge. Ours is the task to break.
Ours is the duty to tolerate. We must reach deeper. We must be broader.
Christ needs to be preached more than ever, not only to the so-called heathens and pagans, but to the so-called Christians. The world is ripe for a revival, following a re-interpretation of Christ. A two-by-four Christ is not enough for this day. We must let Christ shine, not Calvin, nor Wesley. The world is crying for Christ, not for somebody else. Pulpits must preach Christ. Teachers must teach Christ. We must live the life of Christ. We should not wonder why the world is not as Christian as it ought to be, when we are certain of the fact that Christ has not been lifted up to the uttermost eminence. Let Christ's golden rule rule the world."

50,000 Indians Without a Sign of Civilization.

And these Indians are on the heart of the Mexican presiding elder, Rev.
E. B. Vargas, who asks you to pray for them, and his effort to open up work among them. We have just closed our Summer Bible School and district conference. We had an average attendance of 115 in the school.
The church here is stronger than ever in its history. Our conference was a most harmonious body. The mission to the Indians is very much on our hearts. I believe that I have already secured two workers who can start the mission for us immediately.
Please make this mission the special subject of your prayers. There was not a dry eye when the subject was presented, and the Spirit seemed to sway the audience. Ever since I can remember we have had in the state of Chihuahua close to 50,000 Indians who live a life deprived of every vestige of civilization. My heart aches when I see the condition of these people, and at the same time the inactivity of our church and her apparent indifference to do anything in their behalf. We have had 250 conversions and accessions in the district during the year.
One hundred and fifty of these have taken place in Chihuahua. We are hoping that before the year is over many more will be added to the church.

Bishop Boaz Preaches in Harbin.

Writing on September 18, he says:
"I am just back from Harbin, where I had a most interesting time. We organized a church with 28 members and about 60 in a class of instruction.
School was opened on the day that I left with four hundred and eighty
(480) pupils enrolled on the first day.
What do you think of that? Others were to come of course. They will be crowded to the limit, I am sure. The city council has promised to give us the block of land just in front of the Mission Home, if we will build on it our industrial school. We must not fail to take this wonderful opportunity.
It is a great field. I preached to crowded houses five times while there and to people who are very much interested in our work. I have not seen a field whiter unto the harvest. We must work while the sun shines."

Government Recognition.

Prof. J. Ernest Fisher of Chosen
Christian College speaks of the distinction and advantages of such recognition in following letter: "One of the facts for which we have most reason to be thankful is that the Chosen Christian College and Severance Medical College have both been given government recognition during this past quarter. This means that the graduates from the college are qualified to teach in registered high schools anywhere in Korea, that they are eligible for government positions, and that they can enter the Japanese Imperial University on the same basis as graduates from government colleges of the same grade as ours. In the case of Severance graduates it means that they can begin to practice as soon as they graduate without having to take the government medical examinations.
In other words, they are on the same basis exactly as the graduates of the Government Medical College. The fact that we have not had this government recognition has been a serious drawback to us in the past, and would have been increasingly so in the future.
Many students will come to us now who would have gone to the government institutions if we did not have this recognition. Another fact that we have reason to be thankful for is the increased interest and financial support and co-operation that the Ko-

CHARLOTTE CREDITS

The Charlotte Co-operative Standard Training School for Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school workers held last week was quite successful. This was the fourth annual school for our Charlotte Methodist Sunday school workers and the second for the Presbyterian Sunday school workers. In addition to many auditors and visitors who attended from time to time one hundred and seventy-five students attended the school regularly, stood the tests and received credit. One hundred and fourteen of these were Methodists and sixty-one Presbyterians. The Methodist credits were listed by churches as follows: Trinity 29, Hawthorne Lane 26, Tryon Street 22, Brevard Street 13, Belmont Park 7, Dilworth 4, Central, Monroe 4, Snencer Memorial 3, Calvary 2, Chadwick 1, Seversville 1, Hickory Grove 1.

By courses the credit students are listed as follows:

The Sunday school, Dr. Gilbert Glass, instructor—J. H. Armbrust, L. M. Smith, Chas. S. Stone, Mrs. Chas. S. Stone, Mrs. J. P. Waggoner, Mrs. Robert G. Auton.

Principles of Teaching, Prof. C. T. Carr, instructor—Mrs. C. C. Weaver, Mrs. Atha Stevens, Miss Cora Lee Montgomery, Miss Addie Pierce, Mrs. E. B. Meachom, Mrs. H. F. Smith, F. Davis, Flora J. Boone, Elizabeth Woodward, Blanche Gluck, Mrs. H. G. Hardin, Fred E. Langerholm.

Pupil Study, Dr. W. H. Fraser, instructor—Mrs. J. H. Armbrust, G. C. Chalker, W. N. Harper, Lois Nixon, Winnie White, Mrs. L. J. Carter, R. A. Beard, Mrs. J. A. Elliott, Mrs. W. N. Hagood, Lottie Nichols, Mrs. C. A. Hamilton.

The Program of the Christian Religion, Dr. C. C. Weaver, instructor—E. R. Bucher, C. D. Campbell, Mrs. W. J. Hannon, D. E. Henderson, Thos. F. Higgins, W. C. McCullum, C. W. Ramsey, Mrs. C. B. Reeves, W. M. Robbins, Mrs. C. R. Scott, C. M. Short, Mrs. Jas. Wardin, Mrs. J. C. Watson, A. H. Wearn.

Intermediate-Senior Organization and Administration, Mrs. B. H. Bunch, instructor—Mrs. W. B. Given, Mrs. J. B. Ivey, Mrs. T. D. Kemp, Miss Loma Squires, Fred R. Webber, Mrs. Fred R. Webber.

Junior Organization and Administration, Miss Virginia Jenkins, instructor—Miss Reba Blanton, Miss Fannie Bame, Arthur Beatty, Mrs. A. F. Campbell, Bessie Connelly, Mrs. T. T. Capehart, Mrs. Annie Elliott, Lucile Gillis, Mrs. S. A. Hunter, Kate Green, Ella M. Ivey, S. S. Kelly, Mrs. Plummer Mauney, Peale Roberts, Kate Squires, Mrs. C. M. Short, Helen Smith, Philip Smith, May G. Weatherly, Ben Clendenin.

Primary Organization and Administration, Mrs. W. B. Ferguson, instructor—Mrs. E. R. Bucher, Miss Daisy Cuthbertson, Miss Annie M. Hayes, Mrs. Thos. F. Higgins, Mrs. Jennie M. James, Mrs. E. B. Laird, Mrs. Jos. McLaughlin, Miss Pearl Putnam, Mrs. C. H. A. Rupp.

Beginner Organization and Administration, Mrs. C. L. Van Noppen, instructor—Mrs. Julia Squires Martin, Miss Erleen Mitchell, Mrs. Thos. N. Owen, Mrs. W. H. Palmer, Mrs. Chas. C. Ray, Miss Bertha Reeves, Miss Fay Roberts, Mrs. Thos. S. Tredewick, Miss Maude Tucker, Mrs. C. C. Deaton.

Story Telling, Mrs. G. W. Green, instructor—Mrs. W. A. Anthony, Mrs. W. H. Bass, Mrs. Frank Crowell, Mrs. L. G. Cruse, Miss Gertrude Dickenson, Miss Ella Dowd, Mrs. Carrie Eason, Miss Estelle Hamilton, Mrs. T. L. Honeycutt, Miss Helen Hoyle, Mrs. Chas. S. Myers, Miss Inez McLaurin, Mrs. O. N. Norman, Mrs. W. B. Pickens, Mrs. A. A. Pichon, Miss Beulah Price, Miss Elizabeth Ramsey, Mrs. Lloyd Ranson, Mrs. H. F. Ray, Mrs. C. G. Ruark, Mrs. A. C. Sheridan, Miss Lucy Sullivan, Mrs. W. R. Trexler, Mrs. A. H. Wearn, Mrs. Marvin Wilkinson, Miss Lula B. Williams.

NEW WESLEY CLASSES

Since last report the following additions have been made to the Western North Carolina Conference Federation of Wesley Bible Classes. These classes have secured their charter from the Wesley Bible Class Movement in the Southern Methodist Church and are therefore full fledged members of our Conference Federation. We are glad to have them in our company. If there are others at home like them we would be glad to welcome them into our federation also.

The Vanguard, Littlejohns, Lenoir circuit.

The Stewart Bible Class, Duncan Memorial, Charlotte.

The Grace Wesley, Brevard Street, Charlotte.

The Win One, First Church, Lenoir.

The Woman's Wesley Bible Class, Broad Street, Statesville.

The Richardson Wesley Bible Class, China Grove.

The Wesley Adult Class, Littlejohns, Lenoir circuit.

Woman's Bible Class, Park Place, Greensboro.

The Wheeler Class, West Market Street, Greensboro.

The Senior Wesley Class, Littlejohns, Lenoir circuit.

WESLEY FEDERATION

One of the evidences tending to prove that our Western North Carolina Conference Wesley Bible Class Federation is considered a worth while institution is the type of people who are becoming interested in it. At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Federation Mr. Clyde R. Hoey was selected as first vice president in place of Mr. Dorman Thompson, deceased, and a recent letter from Mrs. E. O. Chandley, secretary of the Federation, states that Mr. Hoey has expressed his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him and will do his part in the promotion of our work. Anything Clyde Hoey lines up with is worth while.

REAL COURSES

The courses that go to make up the curriculum of our Sunday School Standard Training Courses constitute real worth while work. Another instance proving this is that during last year the following A and B grade colleges of the Southern Methodist church placed these courses in their religious educational curriculum and in conjunction with the Leadership Training department at Nashville, Tenn., issued the following credits: Andrew College, Cuthbert, Ga. . . . . 80 Bell-Haven College, Jackson, Miss. 52 Central College, Fayette, Mo. . . . . 135 Galloway College, Searcy, Ark. . . . . 191 Granada College, Grenada, Miss. . . . . 208 Henderson-Brown College, Arkadelphia, Ark. . . . . 54 Kentucky Wesleyan College, Winchester, Ky. . . . . 79 Louisville Col., Louisville, N. C. . . . . 116 Martha Washington College, Abingdon, Va. . . . . 251 Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss. . . . . 217 Morris-Harvey College, Barboursville, Va. . . . . 6 Randolph-Macon Col., Ashland, Va. 75 Southern College, Lakeland, Fla. . . . . 42 Trinity College, Durham, N. C. . . . . 97 Wesley Col., Greenville, Texas. . . . . 125 Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga. . . . . 128 Woman's College of Alabama, Montgomery, Ala. . . . . 645

PLANS

Your humble servant is now in the midst of a series of four Standard Training Schools and does not hardly have time to keep acquainted with his home. When these schools shall have passed definite plans for another year will be in the making. The first thing to be done will be a meeting of all the district officers and presiding elders, at which time the year's work will be outlined. Following this annual meeting it is hoped to hold in each presiding elder's district a conference extending through one day of all the pastors and superintendents in the district where the district work will be outlined and organized. In some districts it will be necessary to have county or sub-district conferences. It is hoped that every circuit that has not yet been visited with a charge Sunday school institute may have the benefit of such an all-day meeting this year. It is proposed that no time be lost in the causing of our Sunday school work to continue to grow and glow and go. Many of our people are willing to help to make it so.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY

Marking the close of a year of rather remarkable advancement in the work of the Sunday school and the beginning of what promises to be an even better year, the eighty-seventh session of the North Carolina annual conference, in session at Elizabeth City last week, gave its undivided attention Wednesday evening to the interests of the religious training and development of the boys and girls, men and women of the church. The occasion was the usual Sunday School Anniversary, but in many respects it was unusual.

For one thing, it was unusual in that two Methodist bishops took part in it. Bishop Collins Denny and Bishop H. M. DuBose were on the platform with Dr. John W. Shackford, general secretary of the General Sunday School Board, Prof. H. E. Spence, chairman of the Conference Sunday School Board, Miss Keene, elementary superintendent, and the writer, your conference superintendent of Sunday school work. It was, as Chairman Spence remarked, a fine setting for a splendid service—with splendid music by the choir of First church, a great audience, and all meeting in one of the most modern and serviceable church and Sunday school buildings in the state if not the entire connection.

Bishop DuBose led the prayer, and Bishop Denny presented to a group of 59 pastors certificates of award in recognition of the fact that these had completed during the year at least one unit of the Standard Training Course. Short talks were made by your conference workers, giving in brief outline a statement of some of the accomplishments of the past year, thanking the conference for the co-operation extended in the past, and asking the continuance of this co-operation in the months ahead.

The principal address was delivered by Dr. Shackford, and in his characteristic masterful manner he presented the challenge of the child and of the Christ to the church of today in the work of conserving and growing not only a great and glorious church of tomorrow but of building up a type of character and citizenship fit for the kingdom of God.

Lack of space forbids a full account of all the good things that were said and done. Perhaps next week other details may be presented. Suffice it to say that many were the expressions of satisfaction with the character of the program.

ANNUAL MEETING OF BOARD

The Sunday School Anniversary Wednesday evening followed an equally satisfactory meeting of the Sunday School Board that afternoon. Every one of the clerical members of the board and all but four of the lay members were present at the board meeting, heard the reports of its workers, passed upon recommendations concerning work for the coming year, and attended to various routine matters. Board members in attendance were Chairman H. E. Spence, Secretary Thomas McM. Grant, Revs. Rufus Bradley, D. N. Caviness, W. L. Maness, J. A. Martin, J. H. McCracken, B. O. Merritt, and C. T. Rogers, and Messrs. J. B. Atwater, M. J. Cowell, W. C. Sawyer, C. S. Wallace, and E. S. Yarbrough. The absent members, having sent in good reasons for their absence, were excused for their non-attendance. The board expressed its very great satisfaction with the results of the year's work and mapped out a bigger and better program of action for the coming twelve months. Details will be furnished readers of this column later.

PASTORS GET CERTIFICATES

Not the least impressive part of the Sunday School Anniversary program was the presentation of certificates of award to pastors completing one or more units of credit on the Standard Training Course during the year. Fifty-nine, earning from one to 11, faced Bishop Denny, who made an excellent presentation speech. The good bishop was glad these pastors had not come to the point in their "crystallization," as he said, as to think they could quit studying, and he hoped next year there would be more to receive these awards. Following are the pastors receiving them:

H. M. Wellman, O. I. Hinson, D. M. Sharpe, M. G. Ervin, J. A. Martin, W. W. Peele, L. T. Singleton, H. C. Smith, W. C. Ball, S. J. Starnes, J. W. Autry, J. W. Bradley, G. M. Daniel, W. L. Maness, H. M. North, A. J. Parker, B. B. Slaughter, W. H. Brown, J. H. Buffaloe, D. A. Clark, T. S. Coble, W. F. Craven, Frank Culbreth, H. L. Davis, E. C. Durham, D. E. Earnhardt, J. R. Edwards, R. G. L. Edwards, M. C. Ellerbe, W. G. Farrar, E. C. Few, Lindsay Frazier, J. H. Frizelle, H. I. Glass, A. J. Groves, W. R. Hardesty, E. L. Hillman, L. R. Gaines, W. B. Humble, L. B. Jones, C. M. Lance, W. C. #### BOARD MEMBERS WILL STUDY

One of the actions of the Sunday School Board of no little significance is the fact that they pledged themselves to enroll as students in the Standard Training Course and take annually for credit at least one unit of the course. They also decided to ask every presiding elder, pastor and superintendent to join them in this fine work.

GET STANDARD! CHECK UP!

Every Cradle Roll, Beginner, Primary and Junior department in our conference should adopt and work toward the Program of Work for their department. We believe that there are a number of elementary departments which have already reached standard, but have not checked up on themselves and reported. Write to Miss Georgia S. Keene, your conference elementary superintendent, Durham, N. C., for these standards. Ask her to visit your workers and present them.

WANTED—An Elementary Key Woman in every Sunday school in the North Carolina conference. Appoint yours and send her name to your conference elementary superintendent.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

Lee Davis, Raleigh, N. C.

Rev. J. F. Armstrong, Concord, N. C.

Western North Carolina Conference

THE RATHBURN LEAGUE

This league is still climbing the league ladder, and of course every round gets higher and higher. Our league is just a few months old, but it is a live wire. We have grown from nineteen members to sixty and have done it in a few months, and remember that this is a small country village. We attribute our success to our good president and his co-workers. Every Sunday night our league meets and renders a very interesting and helpful program. We are expecting to do greater things in the coming months than we have done in the past. So look out for the Rathburn League.

Cor. Sec.

MAIN STREET, HIGH POINT

The Epworth League of Main Street M. E. church of High Point is growing. Our growth is not only in number, but in many other ways. We are striving at the present time to raise about $200 for a library for the league. Our president, Mr. Plummer, has offered a prize to the person turning in the most money in a certain length of time, and several of the leaguers are working hard. We are sure this will be a great asset to the league, especially in the work of the third department.

Another phase worthy of mention is the development in the league choir. We did not know we had such a group of good singers until they got into the contest of the union district meetings. Our choir has won in the contest at the last three union meetings of the Greensboro district — Bethlehem, Pleasant Garden and Spring Garden Street, Greensboro. They will sing against Carraway Memorial next month. Our league has been taking the attendance banner at the last three district meetings. At Spring Garden this month there were 47 present. Also a few from our church who attended as visitors.

The weekly devotional meeting on last Sunday night was a very effective one. "The Courage of Faith" was the main topic. "A Tribute to Our Soldiers" was given by a number of boys and girls. Our pastor, Mr. Rogers, also made a splendid short talk.

WOODINGTON LEAGUE

A very interesting program was given Sunday night, November 11, led by Miss Nina Brickhouse.

Opening song, "Stand Up for Jesus." Instead of reading a scriptural lesson Bible verses were quoted. Subject, "Courage of Faith." The program was divided in several different sub-heads, the first being "Courage," which was discussed in full by Rev. R. W. Barfield, our much beloved pastor; the second, "Physical Courage," discussed by Conrad Rouse; the third, "Moral Courage," by Sam Parker. The fourth and last, "Faith as a Basis of Courage," was discussed by Mildred Harper. After the discussion the afternoon lesson was summarized by the leader. At the close of the program Paul Lanier and Reebby Harper paid a tribute to our dead soldiers by a few words of memory and placing carefully arranged flowers at the foot of a grave, adorned with the American flag, after which "America" was sung and the league benediction pronounced.

SOUTH POINT HAS A POLICY AND A POET

My Dear Mt. Armstrong:
I am enclosing a list of the new officers of the South Point Epworth League and also a copy of the League policy.

I think the outlook for our league this year is much better than ever before. There has been very much enthusiasm shown in our league for the past while.

We are now planning a mission study class which I hope will prove very beneficial to us.

We are planning and working very hard at present to raise the efficiency of our league up to the standard. At present we are very far below the standard, but with hard work and the prayers of all the leaguers I think we can reach that goal.

Our league observed Hallowe'en. It seems as if this social has given us new life, higher ambitions and more enthusiasm.

Remember us in your prayers.
Edna Armstrong.

OFFICERS SOUTH POINT LEAGUE

President—Irving Ellington.
Vice President—Miss Hazel Ellington.
Sec.-Treas.—Miss Edna Armstrong.
First Dept. Supt.—Yates Neagle.
Second Dept. Supt.—Miss Esther Neagle.
Third Dept. Supt.—Miss Elsie Ellington.
Fourth Dept. Supt.—Miss Edna Armstrong.

Policy.

It is the aim of this chapter:

1. To conduct fifty-two interesting and helpful meetings during the year.
2. To maintain the Quiet Hour covenant.
3. To conduct a handbook study class.
4. To interest every leaguer in all work in behalf of the community welfare.
5. To conduct a mission study class.
6. To hold at least four socials during the year.
7. To promote wholesome recreation.
8. To give every possible assistance when called upon in any other work of the church, and aid the pastor in every way possible.
9. To hold council meetings monthly and business meetings quarterly.

SOUTH MAIN LEAGUERS RATHER RESTLESS

The leaguers of South Main Street, Salisbury, enjoyed a great Hallowe'en social last Tuesday night, October 30, in the hut. We had a jolly crowd—lots of fun followed. Everything was carried out as much like Hallowe'en as could be. Witches, ghosts and all kinds of costumes were worn. Everyone had their fortune told. Games of all kinds were played, contests of all kinds and prizes were awarded. About 60 leaguers were present. Visitors from other churches were present. We like to see the visitors come out. Rev. M. B. Woosley was in town and was out. We are always glad to see him come. The leaguers who were absent certainly missed a good time.

Just a word to Rev. M. B. Woosley and wife. We miss them lots in our league and wish to thank them for the great work which they did to bring out our league. They get the credit for the good league and leaguers we have at South Main. But we sure are going to work hard not to let it die.

Our present officers, elected May 6, are as follows:

President—Bill Kirk.
Vice President—Earl Leonard.
Secretary—Gledon Gantt.
Cor. Secretary—J. A. Jones.
Treasurer—Charles Jordan.
First Dept. Supt.—Jess Austin.
Second Dept. Supt.—Marvin Murph.
Third Dept. Supt.—Pauline Gardner.
Fourth Dept. Supt.—Johnsie Brawley.

EDENTON STREET LEAGUE SOCIAL

The Epworth League of Edenton Street church, Raleigh, gave a Hallowe'en party in the basement of the church on the evening of the 30th of October. The place was fittingly decorated for the occasion. The wide-awake and curious group assembled with an aimful view for fun. Several very effective stunts were given by volunteers. A number of relay races were put on which brought every one to a point of thrill and excitement.

The lights were dimmed as the group sat down upon the floor in the center of the room. After listening to some weird stories the leaguers had a real feast, eating apples, popcorn and candy.

POLICY OF FOUR OAKS SENIOR EPWORTH LEAGUE

It is the aim of this chapter:

1. To conduct fifty-two interesting and helpful devotional meetings during the year.
2. To maintain a Quiet Hour covenant.
3. To maintain the highest standard of efficiency possible as outlined in the standard of efficiency prescribed by the Epworth League Board.
4. To co-operate with our district secretary and Advocate editor.
5. To have a business meeting each first Sunday night and a council meeting each month.
6. To visit and help the poor and sick, showing them that the league is interested in their welfare and salvation.
7. To have our league represented at the district conference and conference assembly.

On account of the division of our league into a junior and senior league, we elected the following officers for the next year:

President—Ronald Keene.
Vice President—B. I. Tart.
Secretary—Luna M. Lewis.
Treasurer—Sidney Adams.
First Dept. Supt.—Mrs. R. B. Strickland.
Second Dept. Supt.—Mrs. W. R. Keene.
Third Dept. Supt.—Luna M. Lewis.
Fourth Dept. Supt.—Mrs. C. E. Parish.
Era Agent—Mrs. Sidney Adams.
Supt. Junior Dept.—Mrs. Will Oliver.
Cor. Sec.—Luna M. Lewis.

Our league is very young, but is doing fairly good work, and with the co-operation and prayers of each leaguer we can soon have a real league here doing good work.

Luna M. Lewis.

THE CONFERENCE BOOK EXCHANGE

The Exchange is filling ever increasingly a larger place of usefulness. At the 1923 conference we were able to dispose of a great number of sets of books for preachers' widows and feel that we were also a help to the young preachers in the selection of suitable books.

In spite of our care some mistakes were made, because some one failed to put their name in the book. Because of this I would like to know who owned "Pastor His Own Evangelist," "English Grammar," "Friendship the Master Passion," "Life of Christ," "Theological Compend."

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

Dear Brother:

Thanksgiving, the time when we call to mind the abundance and the prosperity of the year, is also the time to seek out unfortunate ones whose blessings have not been so abundant. Surely God is not pleased with us if we do not divide our good things with those who lack. There are yet many of our people who need to learn that the good gifts of God may best be multiplied by being divided.

We are glad and grateful that the churches remember the Children's Home more and more each Thanksgiving time. Since both those who give and those who receive are made happier thereby, we hope the custom will spread till all the members of all the churches use Thanksgiving Day to remember the orphans.

It is better to use your Thanksgiving offering to pay the ten per cent assessment than not to take it at all. But since the ten per cent will not support the Children's Home, do you not believe it would be better for Thanksgiving to be a time for permitting our people to make a free will offering for the unfortunate children of the church? Do you not believe your people will feel so much better for making such a free will offering that they will cheerfully pay the ten per cent assessment later in the year? Many churches find this to be the fact and we are sure that if you will have faith to try it you also will find it true.

Very truly,

The Children's Home, Inc.,
Charles A. Wood, Supt.

ONE DAY'S WAGE OR INCOME FOR STATE'S ORPHAN CHILDREN

Thousands of men and women, boys and girls, mark the harvest season with gifts for the fatherless and motherless and homeless children in our state. Our Thanksgiving season has long been notable for the outpouring of money to maintain the orphan homes that serve our people—that serve them so worthily.

Again we come, as the year draws to its close, not simply to remind these givers that another harvest season is at hand, but hoping, also, to establish this beautiful custom with thousands of others who may not have realized the joys of having a worthy part in this commendable work.

Men may debate as to the objects of their charity; they will not debate the call of the helpless child. They may raise questions as to this or that institution; there is no debate concerning the blessed work that our institutions are doing for orphaned children in North Carolina. To every human heart this appeal comes—the appeal of the homeless and helpless child. It has been ever thus since the great heart of the Lord and Master rebuked those who would hinder the little ones from approaching His loving embrace.

The only possible debate is that touching the amount you will give to this worthy cause. The object of this message is to lay that before you, with this suggestion: The income of one day would be reasonable. By all means let your contribution be of such proportion as to obtain the joy of feeling that you have done something worthy of your heart. It is not the amount that measures the value of the gift; it is the relation of the gift to the heart of the giver. Let conscience dictate, and joy will inevitably follow.

A gift for the care and education of helpless children will measure the circumference and also the depth of the heart of the donor himself—not others. Do not suffer your better impulses to be belittled; make no compromise with your heart, lest you do yourself an injury, not in the eyes of others, but in your own estimation. Men grow from within, not from without. Men make themselves big or little by their thoughts and deeds. Take the full measure of your heart in responding to the call of the orphan child this year, and you will be glad; restrict that measure and you will find no joy. It is not what others think, or say, or do, that counts. Hearken to the promptings of your own heart!

The object of this appeal is quite enough in itself to enlist the sympathy of a considerate public without an attempt to excite the emotions of anyone. Each one is asked to consider the case for himself, remembering always that "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

What if your children should some day become orphans? How would you have others consider them in their misfortune? "To others do as you would that they should do unto you." The fatherless and motherless children are all around you. They will always be here, and if you do not see them it is because others have come and gathered them into one of the homes listed below, and because others are sparing you the pain of their personal appeals.

We come to you in behalf of the most pitifully helpless of all our people—the fatherless and motherless children. We come to ask you to look upon these little ones, and, measuring the circumstance and depth of your heart, to pour out a gift for them that will be worthy of you; one that will bring to you a sense of duty well done; one that will leave in the place of your money a great wealth of joy.

Make your offering on, or near, Thanksgiving Day direct to the orphanage of your choice. The gift may be sent through your church, or your lodge. You are asked to do this in His name, and "the measure ye mete will be measured to you again." Just now the great and growing army, marching to the inspiring strains of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," anticipating with joy the opportunity which the event of another Thanksgiving Day affords to renew their offerings and good cheer to all engaged in the noblest of undertakings carried on through these homes and educational institutions for the help of the helpless, bid you join the happy throng.

The income of a day for helpless children is a fair exchange—joy for dollars; life for money. But, remember, joy is not to be purchased; life is not for sale. They come freely to all who meet worthily the demands of their own hearts; and they come in no other way—in no other terms.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

Thanksgiving.—Next Thursday is Thanksgiving Day. Every pastor, Sunday school superintendent and Sunday school teacher is urged to take an offering for our beloved Methodist Orphanage. If any fail to take a collection the Sunday before Thanksgiving Day, they are earnestly urged to do so the Sunday following Thanksgiving Day. The success of the Orphanage depends largely upon the outcome of the Thanksgiving season. Since the Giver of all blessings has so abundantly blessed us as a people, it is fitting that we should express our gratitude to Him in a real offering for the fatherless in our Methodist Orphanage. Let us make a great sacrifice that this noble work may have the proper support and encouragement.

For more than a year I have been soliciting a seven-passenger automobile for the benefit of our singing class. Up till now the class has been seriously handicapped in making visits to the churches. At times I became just a little discouraged over the prospects of ever getting a car. Much to my surprise and joy I received a letter several days ago from the secretary of Brother B. N. Duke, of New York City, stating that Brother Duke had heard of our need and would donate the Orphanage a car in the near future. Several days ago Mr. Sands, his private secretary, called me over the phone and told me that he was in the city with a seven-passenger Packard, a gift from Mr. Duke. It would be difficult for me to express my appreciation of such a valuable gift. It is possible for us to reach many churches now on Sundays and give sacred concerts and return the same day. Our opportunities for doing good have been greatly enlarged by such a great gift. We are happy now that we can touch the great heart of our North Carolina conference through the ministry of sacred song and readings.

In the death of Sister S. C. Vann, of Franklinton, the Methodist Orphanage has sustained a great loss. She manifested her interest in our orphan children in many ways. Her words of good cheer and her faith in the children called out the best that was within them. She did many things for them that the public never knew anything about. The Bettie Henley Vann Educational Loan Fund, which bears her name, has proven to be the greatest inspiration that has ever come to the children of our Home. Only eternity can reveal the good that this fund has accomplished in making it possible for our children to receive the blessing of a liberal education. On several occasions she expressed her great joy over the fine product that the Methodist Orphanage was sending forth into the world to enrich and enoble all life. Fourteen of our boys and girls attended her funeral. The whole orphanage family feels that they have not only lost a friend, but one whose great mother-heart beat in tenderest love for them.

There are no words that can adequately express the meaning of her beautiful life. All the graces and virtues of our holy religion blossomed and fruited in her Christ-like character. Her crown will be bedecked with many jewels for she literally gave herself in devoted, consecrated service to her Lord. In the great beyond thousands will rise up and call her blessed. Could anyone desire a higher reward than the consciousness of having lived a life of altruistic service? Like the Master she went about doing good. Wherever there was poverty or sorrow she went with a lavish hand and a great sympathizing heart. It could be truthfully said of her for her to live was Christ and to die was gain.

A MUSICAL HOME IS A HAPPY HOME

A Home That is Barren of Music is Not and Cannot Be as Joyous, Happy and Contented as the Home That is Filled With Music.

What can you do today that will bring more joy and happiness into your home than to give to your wife or daughter a beautiful Piano or Player-Piano? Wouldn't your home be a different place; wouldn't there be a different atmosphere; wouldn't there be more laughter and song; more gladness, more contentment? Indeed, there would be all these things, and more.

If there is not music in your home, why not today investigate the Advocate Piano Club Plan of piano buying? You will be surprised how easy you can give this joy to your family. The Club plan protects your every interest. You place your order with 99 other Advocate readers, thus getting a much better price. You are only responsible for your own purchase, but you can easily see how much cheaper pianos can be bought in wholesale lots than in single orders. The Club has arranged the terms of payment so that you can purchase your piano now and it will be so easy to make the payments that you will hardly miss the money. Every piano sold through the club is guaranteed by one of the oldest and most substantial Piano houses in the South. If you have an old piano that has about outlived its usefulness you can arrange to exchange it through the Club on terms that will please you in every way. The Club has an insurance feature that protects the family in the case of the death of the purchaser.

Write today for the Club's catalogue and full particulars. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

— Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary —

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

IS THE CHURCH REALLY SQUARING HERSELF TO PAY AN HONEST DEBT?

Off again! I hear the old boys calling me, and everything I possess responds to the call. My Katy train runs west along the north bank of the Missouri River for two hundred miles to the place of my birth, then turns south for what seems an endless journey. After forty-two hours of travel I reach a place called Gonzales, Tex. They say it is one of the oldest towns in the state, but it does not look it. There is very interesting history here, but I must forego relating it in order to tell you about something which happened at the Methodist church.

West Texas Conference.—My, what a company of connectionals had been on the ground, each trying to say his piece and get away before the "forgotten man" program which was scheduled for Saturday! Bishop McMurry was to be my teammate at Gonzales, but he was prevented from making the trip on account of unexpected business and some physical indisposition. Bishop Dickey had everything in order for the presentation of the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment, and promptly at the hour agreed upon he called for me. It was the thirteenth conference I have visited this fall, and that hoodoo number made faces at me. But I think the occasion turned out to be one of the very best. The brethren received the plan with high enthusiasm and gave every assurance that they were ready to do the work.

Bishop Dickey followed me with an earnest exhortation that gripped the conference like magic. That man is a power when he turns loose, and he invariably lets himself go when he discusses superannuate endowment. He urged the impelling necessity of providing for the church's worn-out preachers and on the basis of paying an honest debt long past due. He loathed the placing of this obligation on the heart of the church as a charity. If all of us will really consider the subject in this light, we shall be convinced that we cannot shamelessly hold up our heads until the account is paid in full.

Rev. Arthur Moore, the wonderfully successful pastor of Travis Park church, San Antonio, could hardly wait until Bishop Dickey had concluded his address to put his conference on record. He moved that the West Texas conference by standing vote assure the Board of Finance that they cheerfully accepted their part of the program for superannuate endowment and would apply themselves diligently to carry it out in the fullest measure. So far as I could see, the vote was absolutely unanimous. This was the first time that any conference had voted on the subject, but I am confident that every conference would have voted the same way if the vote had been called for.

Dr. Sam Burgin took me for a walk. I said to him: "Sam, tell me frankly, do you think the special effort for superannuate endowment has a chance for success?" He replied: "Todd, if this thing had come before the other financial campaigns, the church would have raised double the amount you are asking. But even now, and notwithstanding the drives for other causes, she will surely raise that $10,000,000. It will mean hard work, but this is something for which all of us are willing to spend ourselves to the limit."

I met the bishop and his cabinet for a few minutes. They received me cordially and gave assurance that every request for service concerning the special effort would be responded to with enthusiasm. My old friend, Dr. Casper Wright, of the San Antonio district, sat there grinning. He whispered: "Don't you worry, old man, we are going to do it." And Rev. H. E. Draper, of the Beeville district and a member of the Board of Finance, was there. Afterwards he said to me: "Understand, the presiding elders and every preacher in the Beeville district are heartily committed to the plan for raising adequate superannuate endowment, and we will do more than our share." The other presiding elders were just as positive in their words of committal to the task.

I had a delightful stay at Gonzales, and I wish that space would permit dozens of other testimonials favorable to the outlook of the movement to be recorded. As I departed there was something kept saying: "Write, Blessed are the superannuates who put their faith in the West Texas conference; they shall not be disappointed."

Upper South Carolina Conference.—It was held at Newberry, S. C., and the distance from Gonzales, Texas, is a journey of three nights and nearly three days of almost constant traveling. These long hours shut up in a railway train are conducive to the blues, for one has so much time to entertain doubts and fears. But the West Texas conference started me on the long trip with such confidence and high spirits that I landed in Newberry on Tuesday afternoon happy as a lark and eager to feel the pulse of the Upper South Carolina brethren concerning the superannuate cause.

At the communion service and the organization of the conference on Wednesday I was called upon to explain the plan of the movement in behalf of the superannuates. Rev. W. A. Lambeth, of the Western North Carolina conference, came next with a stirring inspirational address. Lambeth is a sight. Rarely have I known a speaker of such magnetism. From the first word to the end of his address he had everything his own way. We all sat there like children under a magic spell, eager not to miss a word of the speaker's lightning speech. He gripped our reasoning faculties, warmed our hearts, and stirred us to attempt to do our best for the sacred cause. Long before he concluded everybody was fully committed to the program. In his final pressure of exhortation, wherein he pleaded with soul aflame that every person would hold fast in loyalty to the great movement, he exclaimed out of his matchless humor: "Stick to this thing, men; stick to it like a cocklebur to a cow's tail." That finished us. When the uproar of laughter and good humor had subsided, there was every evidence on the faces of those South Carolinians that they would stick to it.

Bishop Denny followed with earnest statements that aroused the conference all over again. He always says something good when he speaks, but this time he was especially helpful. It is very gratifying to see this good bishop giving such whole-hearted cooperation to the movement for superannuate endowment. He has not failed once to respond to any request for service at his hands. Furthermore, he seeks opportunities to assist the work.

While at Newberry I talked with numerous presiding elders, pastors, lay members, connectional men, an editor, etc., and without exception they expressed the conviction that the special effort for superannuate endowment is sure to win. One brother did express himself as regretting that he had to go through another financial agony, but he changed his mind on the subject, thus making the conference unanimous in its attitude. The doubts of this dear brother could not stand up under one of Lambeth's witticisms—namely: "If you think this movement puts you in a tight place, there is a way out. Behold a pig in a pen. He cannot get out by squealing; he has to root. Root, brother, root!" The Upper South Carolina boys will come through.

North Alabama Conference.—This beautiful first day of November I am speeding through Georgia en route to Ensley, Ala., where the great North Alabama conference is grinding away. The swiftly passing fields give evidence of "a good year, bishop." The chickens, ducks and turkeys hold carnival in yards flitting by; the cattle, satisfied, stand here and there working their mouths as if chewing gum; and the negroes, with broad grins on their faces, contentedly ride the laden cotton wagons going to market. My, but it's fine to be way down in Dixie when they have had a year like this! Really it seems that the good Lord is smiling on his people of Southern Methodism just now so that they in turn may be able to smile upon his aged and worn-out preachers.

Friday morning the church was packed to its capacity with preachers and others who were on hand early to hear Bishop Candler's devotional address. It was truly rich in wit and wisdom. Promptly at 10:30 a. m. he called for the speakers who were to present the plan for superannuate endowment. It was my duty to explain the details of the movement. The vast throng listened with an eagerness to understand every step to be taken. I shall never be able to express my appreciation of the close and patient attention of all the conferences visited to the plan analysis of the work contemplated.

Bishop Ainsworth followed with a stirring address on the debt we owe the grand old veterans of our ministry. He was at his best, which means that the great cause had a mighty champion at court. His wonderful voice rang like the clear tones of a bell, and there was not one in the multitude of listeners who was unable to hear every word he spoke. As I sat there on the platform near enough to touch him by extending my arm I saw the perspiration rolling from his face and could feel within me the vibrations of his impassioned soul. How I wished that all the twenty-three hundred claimants of the church could see this noble bishop pleading so vehemently in their behalf.

Bishop Candler closed the morning's program with an exhortation on the subject. Just think, this man had come under an emergency call Tuesday night to hold the conference, which began Wednesday morning. On this Friday morning he delivered a powerful devotional address of forty-five minutes, addressed the class for deacon's orders for thirty minutes, and was still as fresh as a daisy and as wholesome as ever when he closed our program with a speech of fifteen minutes. He has not failed once in doing most efficiently everything requested of him by the Board of Finance. The Lord bless him and give unto him the abiding consciousness of a loving and grateful church.

I was compelled to hurry away to take a train that would land me in St. Louis Saturday morning. However, the superannuate program was announced to continue Friday night. Dr. George R. Stuart was to speak and after him Senator J. T. Heflin, of Alabama. These two men are heralded as the most popular speakers in that great state. What a joy it is to know that they readily consented to do their best for the cause of the "forgotten

TALENTS

By Mrs. E. M. Anderson.

There was once a little sparrow
That heard a mocking bird sing,
And straightway said, "I'll sing no
more,"
And tucked his head 'neath his wing.

And then, in the early morning,
His cheerful twitter was gone;
And although the grass shone with dew drops,
The day seemed still and lone.

And once a little white daisy
Saw a lily tall and fair,
And said, "I'll never bloom again,
No one for me will care."

And the butterflies flew here and there,
The children sought in vain;
They found no daisy in the field
To gladden them again.

I cannot sing as some do,
In strains that rise and fall,
Then shall I sing, at eventide,
No lullaby at all?

I cannot speak with gifted tongue
In words of eloquence;
Shall I not go to sorrowing homes
And take some comfort thence?

I cannot write as some do,
But shall I not make glad
Some absent ones with letters kind,
And cheer them when they're sad?

O little browncoat sparrow,
O little daisy white,
To use the best gifts God hath given,
I know is always right!

And if I have one talent,
Then let me use it, pray,
Until the Master cometh,
And not hide it away.

SAMMIE

Mother and daddy and Billy Boy had gone to California for the winter, so Betty Lou had come to grandfather's farm for a long visit. One morning she was standing on the back porch looking off over the fields when down in the south meadow she saw some little white objects frisking about in the sun.

"Grandfather," she cried, "do come and see what these funny little white things are down in the meadow."

Grandfather came out on the porch, put on what Betty Lou called his long-distance glasses, and looked down in the meadow. "Why, those are my lambs," he laughed. "Thirty-nine of the finest merinos in the county. Want to go down tonight and help me salt them?"

"I'd love to," cried Betty Lou.

"All right. Be ready about five o'clock."

Such a bleating as there was as they came to the meadow, and the little creatures came crowding up to the fence!

"Aren't they dear?" exclaimed Betty Lou. "So soft and woolly. O grandfather, look at that little fellow over there! Isn't he cunning?"

"He does seem friendly," said grandfather. "Here, see if he'll eat the salt out of your hand."

"O, he does, he does!" cried Betty Lou. "May I have him for my very own?"

"Remember he won't be a lamb always," grandfather warned her.

"When he gets to be a big sheep, I'll give him back," promised Betty Lou. "What shall I call him, grandfather?"

"Let me see," said grandfather, looking very wise.

"I know!" cried Betty Lou. "I'll call him Sammie. Then every one will know he's an American."

"All right, Sammie it is," agreed grandfather. "I suppose you'll have to mark him to tell him from the others."

"Yes, with red, white and blue ribbon around his neck."

Sammie was petted and coaxed and made a regular little playfellow, but at night he always went back to his companions, where, huddled close together in the sheepfold, they all kept nice and warm.

At Christmas time Sammie had a beautiful new ribbon and a little bell with a clear, musical tinkle.

And then came a big blizzard. It began New Year's eve and was so terrible that no one could venture outdoors. When Betty Lou looked out in the morning it seemed like a different world. A great white blanket was over everything, and no sign of lambs.

"I wonder where Sammie is!" thought Betty Lou.

Just then she saw grandfather with Jim and Ben, the hired men, coming from the barn through what looked like a deep trench, with the snow piled on each side.

Betty Lou ran out on the porch. "Grandfather," she called, "where are the lambs?"

"That's just what we're going to find out," answered grandfather as they went into the tool house.

They came out with shovels and pitchforks and started off down the trench again. Betty Lou watched them as they climbed out of the trench and waded across the fields in the deep snow. Pretty soon she saw them coming back, each holding a funny-looking bundle which they carried into the summer kitchen.

"Grandmother," she called, "do you s'pose they've found the lambs?"

"Yes, dear. The blizzard came on so suddenly that the little things couldn't find their way back to the sheepfold and were all buried in the snow, which really kept them warm. So grandfather has built a big fire in the summer kitchen and hopes that he can save them."

The men, with some of the neighbors, kept bringing in the little white bundles until grandfather counted thirty-eight, but Sammie was not among them.

"Do let me go and look for him," begged Betty Lou. "I know all the nice sunny places where he loved to lie. I'm sure I can find him."

But grandfather said no. It was hard enough for the men to wade through the deep snow. It was getting late, and the men were all tired.

Betty Lou could hardly keep from crying, but she knew crying would do no good. Then kind-hearted Ben said: "You bundle her up good and warm, Mrs. Mason, and I'll carry her. It won't hurt her a bit, and maybe she can find Sammie."

So grandmother put on Betty Lou's sweater and coat and leggings and cap. Ben swung her up on his broad shoulders, and they started off. Grandmother could see the cap bobbing up and down as they went along the trench, then out in the fields. They went around the sheepfold, and Ben poked and peeked into every nook and corner where he thought Sammie might be.

Just as he said, "I'm afraid we'll have to give it up, Betty Lou," Betty Lou gave a little scream, for peeping through a little crack in the snow was the end of a red, white and blue ribbon. As Ben carefully lifted the snowy bundle Sammie's bell gave out its musical tinkle.

So Betty Lou with a loving pat now and then for the precious bundle under Ben's arm rode proudly home, where Sammie was finally thawed out and soon was bleating loudly for something to eat.—Mayflower.

The teacher had asked: "Why did David say he would rather be a door-keeper in the house of the Lord?"

"Because," answered the boy, "he could then walk outside while the sermon was being preached."—Boston Transcript.

Substitutes are generally more expensive in the end than genuine articles. Housewives have learned—they KNOW this is true where bakings are concerned.

Self rising flours are classed as substitutes for plain flour and good baking powder. The use of these special mixtures is very liable to result in false economy, failures and waste on bake day.

Remember there is a big difference, in many ways, between biscuits and other bakings made from these so-called self-rising flours and those made from good plain flour and a dependable leavener. Try the experiment—make a baking from each—convince yourself.

You will find the baking made from flour and baking powder far more attractive in appearance. It will raise higher—retain its full food value and taste better.

For best results, do not fail to use Calumet, the Economy Baking Powder, and a reliable brand of plain flour.

Just think of it—the sale of Calumet is 2½ times as much as that of any other brand. It contains only such ingredients as have been officially approved by the United States Food Authorities. It is pure and sure.

You save when you buy it—you save when you use it.

Life of Thomas Coke

By WARREN AKIN CANDLER, D. D.

Great achievements, whether they be of individuals or of the masses, are usually the result of the uncommon devotion of some great man. The establishment of the Methodist Church and the promulgation of its doctrines during the early years centered upon the lives of a few devout leaders, among whom was Thomas Coke. In the propagation of Methodism he was second only to John Wesley, and in some respects he was superior to that great man. Layman or preacher will profit by a close study and application of the life of this illustrious character.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets That Are Nauseless, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bed time, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.

Investment in Personality.

I so often think about something Bishop Lambuth told me once. He was propped up on some pillows in the room he was occupying in the home of Dr. Cram at Songdo. He was suffering intensely. Yet he dictated a long letter to me, to somebody in Frisco, asking them to pay especial attention to Miss Kate Cooper, who was on her way home. Miss Cooper had just recovered from typhus and was critically ill. When he finished this letter he said: "Brother Taylor, never allow yourself to do all your work for things and institutions. There is nothing that counts quite so much as your work for personality. Get you an address book and list names there. Work for personality is what counts.—J. O. J. Taylor.

OXFORD PARENTS MEET

Following is the newspaper report of the Parents' Meeting held at Oxford during Children's Week. Mrs. D. G. Brummitt was chairman of the Children's Week committee:

"An impressive service, which was the culmination of Children's Week, was observed at the Oxford Methodist church on Sunday morning. It was known as a Parents' Meeting, at which time Prof. C. G. Credle, superintendent of the Sunday school, presided. He made an excellent talk in which he showed the progressive, forward-moving spirit now being observed in the Sunday school. Prof. Guy B. Phillips, principal of the Greensboro high school, spoke on "The Child—A Citizen." Mr. Phillips was for several years a resident of Oxford, being superintendent of the city schools and also in the Bank of Granville, where he has a host of friends, who regretted when he moved his interesting family to Greensboro. His talk was eagerly listened to by the large congregation present. Judge W. A. Devin spoke on "The Power of Adult Example," giving many helpful suggestions and making a profound impression on his hearers. It is customary during this Children's Week each year to put forth some forward movement in the work of the Sunday school. This year it was decided to organize a Junior department, with Mrs. N. C. Remsen as superintendent. Mrs. Remsen made an interesting talk, in which she gave out many plans for the work of this newly organized department."

YOUR POSTGRADUATE READING

A great bishop once said that the development and growth of the ministry will always be in proportion to the hours it spends in study.

What is true of the ministry at large is also true of the individual. Congregations watch closely and recognize the preacher who strives for self-improvement. They know that your value to them and to the cause you preach cannot grow without study.

THE FIFTH POSTGRADUATE READING COURSE

EARLY CHURCH HISTORY. By H. M. Gwatkin, Professor of Ecclesiastical History, Cambridge. In two volumes, handsomely bound and hoxed. Price, $5.00.

Selected by leaders of our Church as the most comprehensive and most valuable history of the early Church that can be had. Although the author has not attempted to make this an exhaustive study, he has presented all of the important details in a way that leaves nothing to be desired. The two volumes are uniformly bound and hoxed and are not sold separately. The present price of $5.00 for the set will hold only as long as our stock lasts. A worthy addition to your library and a real bargain in every sense of the word.

ORIGINALITY OF THE CHRISTIAN MESSAGE. By H. R. McIntosh, Professor of Systematic Theology, New College, Edinburgh. Price, $1.75.

The connection of the author's name with any work of Christian literature is sufficient recommendation in itself. His reputation is that of being one of the foremost Christian writers whose work we study.

PERSONALITY, HUMAN AND DIVINE. The Bampton Lectures of 1894, delivered at Oxford University by J. R. Illingworth, M.A. Price, $1.00.

These eight lectures delivered by a scholar of high rank in educational attainments and spiritual reflections have withstood the tests of time and are known to-day as one of the most beautiful and most useful expositions of a subject that should be a subject for constant study by every preacher of the gospel.

THE GLORY OF THE MINISTRY. By Prof. A. T. Robertson, A.M., D.D., LL.D. Price, $1.50.

This revelation of the real magnitude of the minister's work has brought forth the hearty approval and commendation of great preachers all over the land. It will do incalculable good wherever read.

THE BURDEN BEARER

I lift the ever-present burden of widowhood, orphanage, disability, sickness and advanced age of the itinerancy and of the laity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by providing "a home of their own," or its equivalent, to comfort and support them during all the years of life thereafter.

"Safety first" is my guiding star in all business matters and "brotherly love" in all manner of service. My premium rates are adequate to give insurance at cost (30 per cent lower than commercial companies require). Expense of management is reduced to the minimum, being the lowest amount permissible while insuring efficiency. Personal profit, investment methods, and employed paid agents are not allowed. This is saved for the Certificate holders.

Benefit certificates are issued for insurance protection in amounts of $3,000 or less per application on following attractive plans: Whole life; twenty-premium life; endowment at age sixty and seventy; term to age fifty, sixty, and seventy; annuity, and combination of plans.

The itinerant preacher of the past has had no chance. Shall they of the future fare no better?

REMAKING THE ORIENT

PURPOSE
The earthquake in Japan has made large areas of the Far East practically Bibleless. Thousands of Bible printing plates in 25 languages and dialects used in Yokohama have been totally destroyed. They must be replaced at once or the whole missionary program will be seriously handicapped.

NEED
The American Bible Society needs immediately $289,000 with which to make good the actual losses, to say nothing of the enlarged opportunities.

RESPONSIBILITY
is definitely upon the churches of America, whose agency for Bible work in the Far East is the American Bible Society.

OPPORTUNITY
is one of unusual significance and every Pastor, Sunday School Superintendent and Young People's leader should utilize Bible Sunday on December 9th (or nearest convenient date) for the promotion of interest in the distribution of the Scriptures in Japan and the Far East.

Rheumatism and Indigestion

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sclatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

If you suffer from Rheumatism, Indigestion, or from any curable disease accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to Shivar Springs,

Box 4D, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:
I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons (two five gallon demijohns) of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give the water a fair trial in accordance with instructions which you will send, and if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

IN MEMORIAM

HUDSON—On October 17, 1923, Mrs. Sabra Hudson passed to her reward. She was more than fourscore years and had been very zealous for her Lord. For some years she had been a member of Center Hill M. E. Church, South. She was a woman of prayer and faith and was loyal to her pastor. She leaves three sons and one daughter. Two sons are ministers, members of the Maryland Conference, Methodist Episcopal church.

"Her children rise up and call her blessed."
N. M. Wright.

TYSON—Mrs. Ann Elizabeth Tyson was born July 22, 1858, and died September 28, 1923. She had been sick all summer and suffered much the last two weeks of her life. Death was a relief to her. She is survived by her husband and five children. When she was a girl she professed faith in Christ and joined Red Hill Baptist church. When she was married she lived near Mt. Vernon Methodist church and joined that church and was a member of this church most of her married life. All believed in the piety of Mrs. Tyson and are confident she has gone home to heaven.

A Friend.

JORDAN—Mrs. Lillie Eagle Jordan was called suddenly to leave her home and family and go to God on Friday morning, November 2, 1923. She leaves her husband, nine children, father, two brothers, two sisters, and a host of friends to mourn her departure. She was born May 26, 1887. At the age of fourteen she was converted and joined the Harris Chapel Methodist church, of which she remained a member to her death. She became the wife of Mr. George Jordan on March 6, 1904. In the prime of life, being in her thirty-sixth year, she was called to go, and went without a murmur. May God bless and comfort the husband and motherless children.

W. E. Hauss, Pastor.

SMITH—Mrs. Alice Smith, in her early life, joined Riverview Methodist church and remained a faithful member until October 17, 1923, when she was called away.

Although we shall miss her, we realize she has been called to a higher and greater service. She was a kind and loving friend and loved her church and Sunday school, and was always with her class. I stayed with her five months just before her death, and I always found her loving and kind. She did everything she could to please her family and friends. She was a blessing to me. We had many happy hours together. I extend to the bereaved husband and family my sincere sympathy in their great loss and trouble.

Mrs. R. A. Maney.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Wanchese Methodist church, wish to express our sorrow in the loss of our oldest and one of our best loved members, Mrs. Sabra Daniels. She was also a life member. Aunt Sabe, as she was lovingly called, died August 15 after an illness of a few weeks. Her health had been failing for years, yet her devotion and zeal for her Master's work was so great that she attended not only our society but church and Sunday school whenever she was able to be carried. Such devotion is an inspiration to us who follow. We shall miss her greatly, but in humble submission we bow to "Him who doeth all things well," and resolve:

First, That we as a society perpetuate her memory by following in her steps of faithfulness and devotion.

Second, That while we shall miss her we rejoice in hope of the reward God has promised to the faithful.

Third, That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved children and try to comfort them in their sorrow.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, a copy to the Missionary News and North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy be spread upon our minutes.

Mrs. Eliza Meekins,
Mrs. Mattie Midgett,
Mrs. Cleopatra Daniels.

WOMBLE — Margaret Catherine Womble, daughter of Harris Tysor, born September 21, 1843, died October 3, 1923, aged 80 years, one month and 18 days.

She was twice married and the mother of twelve children, eight of whom still live. Converted in early life she joined Fair Promise Methodist church, of which she remained a faithful member till death.

We preached her funeral to a large concourse of sympathizing friends and laid her to rest by the side of loved ones in the church cemetery.

She was faithful in all relations of life, died in triumph and is at rest with her Lord. May all the loved ones meet her in the "sweet by and by."
A. B. Crumpler, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

We, the senior class of Brown's Chapel Sunday school, join in deep sorrow and sympathy with Bro. J. H. Dark over the loss of his companion and our Sunday school scholar and classmate, Sister Fannie A. Dark, who was one of our oldest and most faithful members. We shall miss her presence and pleasant smiles, but we submit to our heavenly Father's will and pray that all of our class may be as faithful as she was to attend Sunday school until her last sickness, and be ready when our time comes to depart this life and Sunday school and join the great Sunday school of God, Christ and all of the good and faithful Sunday school and Christian workers that have preceded us in to the sweet haven of rest, where God has prepared a heavenly mansion for us all, and for all who will trust and obey Him.

I. W. Durham.

MARION—On the 25th of September, 1923, just as the world was waking to a new day the spirit of R. N. Marion took its flight. God took him at the time he loved best. He always got up early and was ready to greet the new day—never tired of saying life's sweetest joys come to us at dawn.

Mr. Marion was 62 years old, retired farmer and business man, one of the most popular citizens of this community. For many years he was prominently identified with business, social and religious life of this section and in all movements designed for the betterment of the community he played an active part.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Elwell Marion and was married in 1884 to Miss Mollie Marion, and is survived by her and one daughter, Miss Ola Marion, also four sisters and two brothers and many friends and relatives.

The funeral was held at Siloam M. E. Church, South, the following day by Rev. T. V. Crouse of Stokesdale and his pastor, Rev. C. C. Totherow. The large congregation present at the funeral and many flowers bespoke his earthly popularity.

RHEW—Mrs. Margaret F. Rhew died at her home near Rougemont October 16, 1923. She was the wife of the late John W. Rhew, who preceded her to the grave 21 months ago. She was the daughter of Washington and Rebecca Dixon of Durham county. She was the mother of eleven children, nine of whom survive. She made a profession of religion in early life and joined the Methodist church at Mt. Tabor and remained a faithful member as long as she lived. For the last six months she was confined to her room and bed with fast failing health, and for three weeks she was in Watts Hospital. While there and at home everything was done for her that medical skill and close attention and nursing that could be done to save her, but her heavenly Father called her home. Through her long spell of sickness and suffering she bore it all patiently and felt resigned to her Master's will. Her home was the preacher's home. She was always glad to have her pastor come and to visit her and her good family.

She will be sadly missed by her sons and daughters and a host of friends that she leaves behind.

Her body lies in the cemetery at Mt. Bethel church, there to await the general resurrection of the redeemed. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."
J. F. Starnes, Pastor.

Permanently Beautiful Memorials

Regardless of how attractive the design or how skillful the sculptor, a memorial cannot be superbly beautiful and elegant unless the stone used possesses beauty and durability.

Winnsboro Blue Granite

"The Silk of the Trade"

is capable of being cut into the most highly artistic memorials and has a permanent beauty, and natural durability unequalled by that of other monumental granites.

Inscriptions on Winnsboro Blue Granite are more plainly legible at greater distances because of the remarkably brilliant crystal formation of this permanent stone, known as "The Silk of the Trade."

Ask your dealer to use only Winnsboro Blue Granite on your order. If he cannot supply you, write us, and we will put you in touch with a dealer who can.

HOBBS—Thomas Judson Hobbs was called from this life July 25, 1923, having lived 51 years.

He married Miss Bettie J. Owens, October 22, 1903, and to this union were born four boys and three girls, all of whom survive him except little Bettie Era, who was a very sweet child and had preceded him in April. Brother Hobbs was in very poor health for a long while, and in his last sickness was taken to the Pittman Hospital at Fayetteville but without avail, as his suffering became more and more intense until the Great Physician relieved him.

In his last days he expressed a desire to get well if the Lord's will, but if not he was resigned to the will of the Father, and in his departure found glory in the presence of the Lord.

He leaves a wife, six children, mother, brothers and sisters with a host of friends to mourn his loss.

J. A. Tharp, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

During the dawn on Wednesday, August 29, 1923, the soul of Mary, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Plyler, was translated to the larger life beyond.

For more than eight years this affectionate, talented child had rendered happy the hearts of her parents and a host of admiring friends.

Resolved, That the Board of Publication of the North Carolina Christian Advocate extend deep and sincere sympathy to the parents in their bereavement, and pray that they may be sustained by grace throughout the way in which "a little child shall lead them."

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Rev. and Mrs. Plyler, and that the resolutions be recorded on the minutes of the Board of Publication and published in the North Carolina Christian Advocate.

M. Bradshaw,
S. B. Tupper,
Committee.

EDWARDS—Recently Mrs. Monrova Frances Houch Edwards finished her work on earth and went home to dwell with her heavenly Father.

She was born April 23, 1889, died October 24, 1923. She was married to William C. Edwards on September 27, 1906. To this union were born six children, four girls and two boys, all of whom survive.

She professed faith in Christ when only about eight years of age and joined M. E. Church, South, at Mill Creek, Jefferson circuit. After her marriage she moved her membership to Bethany, in which she lived a consistent member until her death. She was a kind and loving companion and mother, patient in sickness, and had an unshaken faith in God. She left a rich testimony to her family and exhorted them in her last hours to meet her in heaven. Her presence will be greatly missed in her home, in the church and neighborhood, yet her influence and life still lives in the hearts of those who knew her.

J. L. Reynolds, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, Dr. I. H. McKaughan, a loyal and devoted member of Wesley Bible class of Main Street Methodist church of Gastonia, N. C., has departed this life, leaving a host of personal friends and class members who sorrow at his untimely death; and

Whereas, the members of this class desire to express their admiration for his life as a Christian gentleman, and extend their sympathy to his young wife and relatives in their time of sorrow.

Now, therefore, be it resolved by Wesley Bible church of Main Street Methodist church of Gastonia, N. C., in regular meeting assembled that we as a class deeply mourn the loss of our friend and classmate, but that we rejoice in the memory of the fine example of sterling manhood exemplified in his life on earth; and Further, that a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our class, a copy sent to the wife of our deceased classmate, a copy to the Gastonia Gazette and North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. A drugist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

EDITORIAL ~ PARAGRAPHS

Rev. D. H. Tuttle, 66 years of age, 40 years an itinerant Methodist preacher, has for his last year's work the following record: Made 800 visits, sold 1210 Bibles, Testaments and Psalms, offered Bibles to old soldiers of Johnston county—16 accepted—and gave away over 70,000 tracts. This was in addition to his work in the pulpit, as a busy Methodist preacher. Who has a record to surpass this of D. H. Tuttle, pastor of Smithfield station?

Cook, the chief crook, has landed in prison. His latest stunt was fishing for "suckers" and his catch was large, but he carelessly rambled on ground that was "posted." This fake discoverer of the north pole who years ago with great gusto announced that he had nailed the Stars and Stripes to the top of that long sought object of Arctic explorers, strayed off down into the oil fields of Texas and promptly announced that good luck was coming his way and that he was perfectly willing to share his fortune with others. There was an instant demand for his wild cat stock, for one "sucker" is born every minute. This venture of Cook's wound up in the courts with the Arctic and oil faker in the penitentiary for fourteen years. He will in addition pay a fine of $12,000. We fear that flag on the north pole will be blown to tatters before Dr. Cook gets back to the land of perpetual ice. Cook, the champion crook, is in prison for a long term, but there will be others to supply the "suckers" with wild cat stock.

Dr. Frank T. Benson, editor of "The Methodist Protestant," Baltimore, Maryland, in a beautiful tribute to a brother editor writes this golden paragraph about his friend, John Frederick Heisse, who for thirty years had edited the "Washington Christian Advocate":

"We were shocked beyond measure a few days ago to learn that this elect saint of God, who though young had grown old through the heavy burdens he had borne, was suddenly taken away. He slipped out of the gates of life and went home to God. For thirty years he had edited the area organ of the Methodist Episcopal church in this section of the church and during that time he carried the heaviest burdens in successful pastorates and withal his ear was open and his heart tender to the appeal of all who had carried to him their burdens. Too early his body became weary and his heart began to limp and now he is gone, so far as earth is concerned, forever. Though we were not at one in our church fellowship, there was in him a wealth of charity, such a sympathy with the differences that were between him and his friend, that although Methodist union lingered it had already come to pass in the heart of Dr. Heisse. To him there was no broken Methodism. We were already one and the faith of him that all Methodism should become one as it was in his heart was a jubilant assurance from day to day. And sooner or later the union of Methodism is coming to pass, because it has already come in the hearts of the men of vision whose hearts have become the dwelling place of brotherly love."

This last sentence should be emblazoned in letters of light across the sky of Methodism. Men of vision with hearts of brotherly love are already one.

Vinegar in the veins and hate in the heart is not the right sort of equipment for any man. A man like that may put a golden trumpet to his lips, but the multitudes stop their ears in the presence of such discord. Better than a trumpet of gold in the hands of hate is a ram's horn which becomes a mouthpiece of victory. A hammer in the hands of a builder is an instrument of holy service, in the hands of a "knocker" it becomes a symbol of shame. Be not a "knocker" filed with hate, but a lover and builder.

A wit has said that Charleston, South Carolina, is a Chinese city because the inhabitants thereof eat rice and worship their ancestors. We could point to quite a number of the citizens of Zion who do not eat rice but who have the backward look. Their cry is for the good old times, when "them days are gone forever." These worshippers of the past have long been Garden of Eden experts, but they are deaf, dumb and blind in their attitude to that city "which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God." The backward look and the reactionary spirit that accompanies it is unchristian and out of accord with humanity. Lowell has truly said:

"For Humanity sweeps onward: where today the martyr stands,
On the morrow crouches Judas with the silver in his hands;
For in front the cross stands ready and the crackling fagots burn,
While the hooting mob of yesterday in the silent awe return
To glean up the scattered ashes into history's golden urn."

It is interesting to note what Bishop McConnell, in his report of the recent semi-annual meeting of the bishops of the Northern church, says about the unification of Episcopal Methodism. Especially, is this of interest to us of the South because the Northern General Conference will pass upon this subject next May at Springfield, Mass., and the heartiness with which that conference adopts the plan, if it should be adopted, will materially affect the Southern church when called upon to pass upon the same subject. Bishop McConnell writes:

"The progress of unification with the Church, South, was reported, not for any sort of action, but for information merely. Some discussion followed a very careful statement by Bishop McDowell. The only criticism of the unification plan by the bishops dealt with the plans as not immediately providing for more in the way of union. On the face of it, the actual degree of union provided at the outset is not as large as many had hoped, but the plan makes union real, nevertheless. If the plan is adopted, the branches of Methodism at present separate will within a quarter of a century be so completely merged together that the majority of the membership of that not-distant day will have ceased to remember that the church was ever split. If the present plan is not adopted, no other plan can be adopted in the present generation. The conciseness and simplicity of the plan make it intelligible, and its sensibleness and fairness make it attractive to all who are genuinely interested in union.

Uncle Tom Baker

How devil Bill Jones was turned into a Man of God

Uncle Tom Baker was much of a man. He had been wild and reckless and feared not God nor regarded man, but one day at a camp meeting while Bishop Gaston was shaking up sinners and scorching them over the infernal pit, Tom got alarmed and before the meeting was over he professed religion and became a zealous, outspoken convert and declared his intention of going forth into the world and preaching the gospel. He was terribly in earnest, for he said that he had lost a power of time—"I must make it up." Tom was a rough talker, but he was a good one, and knew right smart of Scripture and a good many of the old fashioned hymns by heart. The conference thought that he was a pretty good fellow to send out into the border country among the settlers. So Tom straddled his old flea-bitten gray and in due time was circuit riding in northern Mississippi. In course of time Tom acquired notoriety and from his strong language and stronger gestures and his muscular eloquence they called him sledge hammer, and after a while "Old Sledge" for short. Away down in one corner of his territory was a blacksmith shop, and a wagon shop, and a whiskey shop, and a postoffice at Bill Jones' cross-roads. And Bill was the keeper of them all. And was known far and wide as "Devil Bill Jones," so as to distinguish him from Squire Bill, the magistrate.

Devil Bill's Oath.

Devil Bill had sworn that no preacher should ever toot a horn or sing a hymn in that settlement, and if any of the cussed hypocrites ever dared to stop at the cross-roads he would make him dance a hornpipe and sing a hymn and whip him besides. And Bill Jones meant just what he said, for he had a mortal hatred for the men of God, and it was reasonably supposed that Bill could and would do what he said. His trade at the anvil had made him strong and everybody knew that he had as much brute courage as was necessary. So Uncle Tom was advised to take roundantes and never tackle the cross-roads. He accepted this for a time and left the people to the bad influences of Devil Bill; but it seemed to him that he was not doing the Lord's will, and whenever he thought of the women and children living in darkness and growing up in infidelity he would groan in spirit. One night he prayed over it with great earnestness, and vowed to do the Lord's will if the Lord would give him light, and it seemed to him as he arose from his knees that there was no longer any doubt—he must go. Uncle Tom never dallied about anything when his mind was made up; he went right at it like killing snakes. So next morning as a neighbor passed on his way to Bill's shop Uncle Tom said, "My friend, will you please carry a message to Brother Bill Jones for me? Do you tell him that if the Lord is willing I will be at the cross-roads to preach next Sunday at eleven o'clock, and I am sure the Lord is willing. Tell him to please norate it in the settlement about and ax the women and children to come. Tell Bill Jones I will stay at his house, God willing, and I am shore he is willing, and I will preach Sunday too, if things get along harmonious." When Bill Jones got his message he was amazed and astounded and his indignation knew no bounds, and he raved and cursed at the onslut, as he called it. The onslutting message of Old Sledge—and he swore that he would hunt him up and whip him, for he knew that he wouldn't dare come to the cross-roads. But the neighbors whispered it around that Old Sledge would come, for he was never known to make an appointment and break it; and there was an old horse thief who used to run with Murrel's gang and who said that he used to know Tom Baker when he was a sinner and had seen him in many a fight and said Tom was much of a man. So it spread like wildfire that Old Sledge was coming, and Devil Bill was going to whip him and make him dance and sing a hymn and treat to a gallon of peach brandy besides. Devil Bill had his enemies, of course, for he was a hard man and in one way and another he had gobbled up all the surplus of that neighborhood, and had given nothing in exchange but whiskey, and these enemies had long hoped for somebody to come and set him down.

They, too, circulated the astonishing news and without committing themselves to either party said that h—l would break loose on Saturday at the cross-roads, and that Old Sledge or the Devil would have to go under. On Friday the settlers began to drop into the cross-roads on pretense of business, but really to get the bottom facts of the rumors that were afloat. Devil Bill knew full well what they came for, and he talked and cursed more furious than usual and swore that anybody that come expecting Old Sledge tomorrow was an infernal fool, for he wasn't a-comin'. He laid bare his strong arms and shook his long hair and said that the lying, deceitful old hypocrite would come, for it had been nigh on to fourteen years since had whipped a preacher and made him dance.

Old Sledge at the Cross-Roads.

Saturday morning by 9 o'clock the settlers began to gather. They came on foot, on horseback, buggies and carts—men, women and children. And before 11 o'clock there was more people at the cross-roads than had ever been there before. Bill Jones was mad at their credulity, but he had an eye to business and kept behind his counter and sold more whiskey in one hour than he had sold in a month. As the appointed hour drew near the settlers began to look down the long straight road that Old Sledge would come, if he came at all, and every man whose head came in sight just over the rise of the distant hill was closely scrutinized. More than once they said, "Yonder he comes, that's him shore." But it was not him. Some half a dozen had the old-time bull's eye silver watches and they compared time, and just at ten-forty-five the old horse thief exclaimed, "I see Tom Baker comin' over the risin' of the hill. I hain't seed him for eleven years but, gentlemen, that ar him air I am a liar." And it was him. As he got nearer and nearer a voice seemed to be coming with him and some said he is talking with himself, others sail he is talking to God Almighty, and others said, "I will be darned if he ain't a-praying." But very soon it was decided he was singing a hymn. Bill Jones was soon advised of all this and coming up to the front said, "Darned if he ain't singing afore I axed him; but I will make him sing another tune till he is tired. I will pay him fer his onslutting message; I am not agwine ter kill him, boys; I'll leave life in his rotten old carcass, but that's all. If any of you want to hear Old Sledge preach today you will have to go ten miles from the cross-roads to do it." Slowly and slowly the preacher came. As he drew nearer he narrowed down his tune and looked kindly about him upon the crowd. He was a massive man in frame and had a heavy suit of dark brown hair, but his face was clean shaven and showed a nose and lip and chin of firmness and great determination. ("Look at him, boys, and mind your eye," whispered the horse thief). "Where will I find my friend Bill Jones?" inquired Old Sledge. All round they pointed him to the man. Riding up close he said, "My friend and brother, the good Lord has sent me to you and I ask your hospitality for myself and my beast." And slowly dismounting he faced his foe as though expecting kindly reply. The crisis had come and Bill Jones met it. "You infernal old hypocrite, you cussed old shaved-faced scoundrel, didn't you know that I had sworn an oath that I would make you sing and dance and whip you besides, if you ever dared to pison these cross-roads with your shoe tracks? Now sing, d— you, sing, and dance as you sing." And he emphasized his command with a ringing slap with his open hand on the parson's face. Old Sledge recoiled with pain and surprise. Recovering in a moment he said, "Well, Brother Jones, I did not expect so warm a welcome, but if this is your cross-roads manners I suppose I must sing. And as Devil Bill gave him another slap on the other jaw he began with "My soul be on thy guard."

And with his long arm suddenly and swiftly gave Devil Bill an open-hander that nearly knocked him off of his feet while the parson continued to sing in a splendid tenor voice, "Ten thousand foes arise."

Never was a lion more aroused and more frenzied than was Devil Bill, and with his powerful arms he made at Old Sledge as if to annihilate him at one blow and many oaths. But the parson fended off his stroke as easily as a professional boxer. Then with his left hand dealt Bill another settler on his peepers as he continued to sing—

"Oh, watch and fight, and pray, the battle ne'er give o'er."

But Jones was plucky to desperation, and as settlers were watching with bated breath the crisis was at hand, and he squared himself and his clinched fist flew thick and fast on the parson's frame and for a while disturbed his song and his equilibrium, but he rallied quickly and began the offensive as he sang—

"Ne'er think the victory won nor lay thy armor down."

He backed his adversary squarely to the wall of his own shop and seized him by the throat and mauled him as he sang—

"Fight on, my soul, till death."

But the long and the short of it was that Old Sledge gave him a good whipping and humbled him to the ground, then lifted him up and helped to restore him, and begged a thousand pardons.

Devil Bill Retires in Defeat.

When Devil Bill had retired to the house and was being cared for by his wife, Sledge mounted a box in front of the grocery and preached righteousness and temperance and judgment to come to that people. He closed his solemn discourse with a brief history of his own sinful life before his conversion and his humble work for the Lord ever since. Then he besought his hearers to stop and think. "Stop, poor sinner, stop and think," he cried in alarming tones. There were a few men and women in that crowd whose eyes long unused to the melting mood dropped tears of repentance at the preacher's kind and tender exhortation.

Bill Jones' wife, poor creature, had crept humbly into the outskirts of the crowd, for she had long treasured the memories of her childhood home when she, too, had gone with her good old father and mother to hear the circuit riders in days gone by. In secret she had pined and lamented her husband's hatred for religion and the men of God. After she had washed the blood from his swollen face and dressed his wounds she asked him if she might go down and hear the preacher. For a minute he was silent and seemed to be dumb with amazement. He had never been whipped before and had suddenly lost confidence in himself and his infidelity. "Go along, Sallie," he said. "If he can talk like he can fight and sing, maybe the Lord did send him to the cross-roads. It is all mighty strange to me." And he groaned in anguish, his animosity seemed to have changed into anxious wondering curiosity. And after Sallie had gone he left his bed and drew near the window where he could hear.

Old Sledge led an earnest soul-reaching prayer, and his pleading with the Lord for Bill Jones' salvation and that of his wife and children reached the window where Bill was sitting and he heard it all. Bill's wife returned in tears and took a seat beside him and sobbed out her heart's distress, but said nothing. Bill bore it for a while in thoughtful silence, and then putting his bruised and trembling hand in hers said, "Sallie, if the Lord sent Old Sledge here, and maybe He did, I reckon you had better look after his horse." And sure enough Old Sledge stayed there that night and held family prayer, and the next day he preached from the piazza to a great multitude and sang his favorite hymn, "Am I a soldier of the Cross?" And when he got to the third verse his untutored but musical voice seemed to be lifted a little higher as he sang, "Sure I must fight if I would reign; increase my courage, Lord."

Devil Bill was converted that day and became a changed man. He joined the church and closed his groggery, and helped to build a meeting house, as they were called in those days. And it was always said and believed that Old Sledge mauled the grace of God into his unbelieving soul, or it never would have got in any other way.—Contributed.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

The Duke Commission will meet at Trinity College in the office of President W. P. Few Friday morning, November 30, at 10 o'clock.

Gladys, the 15-year-old daughter of Rev. O. C. Fortenberry, pastor of Lowesville circuit, is seriously sick with pneumonia. She is in the care of a trained nurse and skillful physician and a speedy recovery is hoped for her.

On the annual conference Sunday Rev. J. R. Betts, of Macon, N. C., preached in Roanoke Rapids for the pastor, and his thoughtful and fervent message was greatly enjoyed and appreciated. His father, Dr. A. D. Betts, was for many years one of the most faithful of itinerant preachers.

The new Methodist minister, Rev. R. F. Mock, preached two very fine sermons Sunday. His people here, and all who have had the pleasure of hearing him, are highly pleased with him. He is making a fine impression on everybody. The church was fortunate in getting him.—The Eagle.

Our pastors in Roanoke Rapids and Rosemary, Weldon district, North Carolina conference, Revs. R. H. Broom and E. N. Harrison, are being most cordially greeted by their members and other friends as they begin each his third year. And there is sincere rejoicing by the ministry and the laity that Rev. S. E. Mercer is continued as presiding elder of this splendid district.

Prof. and Mrs. A. E. Akers, of Roanoke Rapids, is sorely bereft by their youngest child's death Friday morning, November 23, 1923, the fatal illness having lasted scarcely more than three days. Little William Robert Akers was in his fourteenth month, bright and happy, and the joy of the household. Another lamb has been gathered to the Shepherd's bosom.

One night last week the members of Franklin Avenue church, Gastonia, went en masse to the parsonage, carrying with them many good things to eat which they left in the hands of Rev. G. W. Vick and his family. Brother Vick says that if they come again that they will be forced to build a larger parsonage to hold his packages. Just tell them to mail the overplus to the Advocate force.

The Hamlet Messenger says: "The return of Rev. W. C. Martin as pastor of the local M. E. church is most gratifying to members of his congregation and, it is believed, to citizens of Hamlet in general. The remarkable strides made by this denomination here was largely due to his untiring and unselfish efforts. It is a pleasure also to learn that Rev. J. H. Shore has returned as presiding elder."

Rev. Dr. J. T. Gibbs, who had served as pastor or presiding elder in the North Carolina conference for 53 years until the recent session of the conference in Elizabeth City, when he asked for the superannuate relation, has decided to make his home in Fayetteville for the present. He has children living in that city, and he goes to be near them. Dr. Gibbs' many friends have been urging him to write a history of his experiences as an itinerant preacher, and it is hoped that he will consent to do so. North Carolina Methodism has never had a more loyal minister than Dr. Gibbs.

Chestnut Street church has been fortunate in having Dr. Beaman as pastor for two years longer than the usual quadrennium. This is the only charge in the conference that has succeeded in keeping a pastor longer than five years. The love for and confidence in Dr. Beaman has grown with each year, and the desire to retain him is stronger now than ever before. He has rendered a service to Chestnut Street Methodist church that can never be measured, and not only to the church he served as pastor but to the entire town. He has endeared himself so to the people that there is more than the usual wrenching of heartstrings over the loss of a beloved pastor. Every child recognizes in him a devoted friend, and many a child's distress over the news that he would not return found expression in heartbroken sobs. The love of the children for him is more eloquent tribute than anything that could be written; it is beyond price or reckoning; and Dr. Beaman will carry the memory of it with him as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.—Editorial in Robesonian.

The Methodist preachers, their wives and widows of preachers in Greensboro and vicinity, will hold their annual banquet at Spring Garden Street church Tuesday night, December 4th, at 6:30.

The many friends of Rev. T. F. Higgins, the popular pastor of Brevard Street church, Charlotte, and who underwent three different surgical operations week before last, will be pleased to know that he is steadily improving and that he hopes to return to his work in the near future.

Rev. W. L. Dawson, Jr., and Mrs. Dawson, who transferred from the Western North Carolina conference to the North Carolina conference, are visiting friends and relatives in Greensboro. They will leave for their new field of labor, the Craven circuit, Friday of this week.

The Thanksgiving feature will be emphasized in connection with the next first Sunday services in our Roanoke Rapids church, and systematic offerings are to be made to the Methodist Orphanage. It is hoped that every member may make ready to display a liberal interest in the work of this most worthy institution.

Rev. Allen H. Whisner, the new pastor at Gibsonville, was forced to undergo a surgical operation two weeks ago. He was in the Wesley Long Hospital, this city. Brother Whisner was able to return to his home last Sunday. It has not been possible for him to preach to his new congregation since arriving in Gibsonville, but he hopes to hold his first service next Sunday.

Walt Holcomb has an article in the December issue of Success Magazine published in New York City. The magazine is one of the oldest and best. Dr. Orison Swett Marden is the editor. Mr. Holcomb writes of the famous evangelist, Rev. Sam Jones, as a Chautauqua Celebrity. The magazine is on sale at the news stands, and no doubt many of our readers will be glad to see the article. The World's Work of December also carries an article by Mr. Holcomb on "Something New—Not Only Under the Sun—But Under the Earth."

"Bishop Denny, in presiding over the North Carolina Methodist conference at Elizabeth City during the past week, stood immovable for the four years limit for a pastorate. A wonderfully strong man, of great learning and of outstanding courage is Bishop Denny, but he just couldn't turn a deaf ear to the demand for the return of the little live ecclesiastical wire that presides over Forest Hill in Concord, so the Rev. J. Frank Armstrong enjoys the reputation of being the only Methodist preacher that was ever permitted to live in Concord for five consecutive years and officiate at the same church."—The Uplift.

The minutes of the recent session of the Western North Carolina conference are being sent out from the Advocate Printing House this week. This journal is filled with information that every member of the Methodist church in the territory of the Western North Carolina conference should be familiar with. It is well edited and well printed, and reflects credit upon Rev. W. L. Sherrill, who edited it, and upon the printer. The price of the Journal is 25 cents and can be had from Rev. W. L. Sherrill, Leaksville, or from the Advocate. The journal of the North Carolina conference is now in the hands of the printers and will be issued from the Advocate press before Christmas. Orders for extra copies of this journal should be filed with Rev. R. H. Willis, Fayetteville, or the Advocate, Greensboro.

Rev. Carl E. Gaddy, of Hamlet, N. C., is now holding an evangelistic meeting in Bourbon, Indiana. The local paper speaks of him after this fashion: "The sermon of the evangelist, Mr. Gaddy, who is a resident of Hamlet, North Carolina, instead of Indiana, was of such excellence that he created a most favorable impression. He is a southern gentleman of pleasing personality and religious training and conviction, and there is no doubt in the minds of his hearers that he has entered the right field to get results from life. Straight from the shoulder he struck out and he is able to parry every thrust that the unbeliever might hurl at him. He figuratively handles the devil without gloves, sin without fear and pictures the results of right living in glowing colors that everyone knows is right but which a great many fail to appreciate. Living a right life means happiness; living wrong means hell. Mr. Gaddy is emersed in the desire to do good to humanity and in the revival in Bourbon, which is now in its infancy, there appears the promise of great results."

"Reverend and Mrs. John Henderson Bradley announce the marriage of their daughter, Grace Gertrude, to Reverend James Samuel Gibbs on Thursday, November twenty-second, nineteen hundred and twenty-three, Cornelius, North Carolina. At home after December fifth, Morven, N. C."

The Goldsboro News editorially says: "Few ministers have made such a deep and lasting impression upon this city as Rev. J. W. Potter, who soon leaves us for new fields of religious endeavor and this impression is not confined to his church membership or denomination. His work as a minister has been of that high standard that appealed to all denominations and all classes. In this work he has been greatly blessed in having a wife who shared his labors with unusual fidelity to the cause he represented. Rev. Mr. Potter goes to Clark Street M. E. church of Rocky Mount for the next year. This church is to be congratulated upon their new pastor. We predict the new charge will try to duplicate Goldsboro's efforts and keep him for five years if they can. All Goldsboro regrets to part with Rev. Mr. Potter and his wife, but rejoice that he is still in the fullness of his vigor and filled with a passion for his life's work that makes him invaluable in the life of Methodism."

WM. H. STOCKHAM IS DEAD

This Christian philanthropist of Birmingham, Ala., who was known in North Carolina as the great friend of the Southern Assembly at Lake Junaluska, passed to his eternal reward Friday, November 16.

From an extended story of Mr. Stockham's life in the Alabama Christian Advocate we clip the following:

Mr. Stockham had been ill for several months, and returned to his home in Birmingham from a distinguished hospital at Rochester only the week previous to his passing away. He is survived by his wife and three sons, Herbert C., vice president of the Stockham Pipe and Fitting Company; Douglas C., also of the Stockham Pipe and Fittings Company, and Richard J. Stockham, of the University of Illinois.

Funeral services were held at two o'clock last Saturday afternoon at the First Methodist church in Birmingham and were attended by a great concourse of sorrowing friends. A large number of the colored employes were seated in the gallery, and paid silent tribute to their beloved employer. Dr. George R. Stuart pastor of the First Methodist, was in charge of the services at the church, assisted by Dr. J. M. Broady, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian, Dr. Robert N. Simpson, of the First Christian, and Dr. L. C. Branscomb, of the First Methodist of Anniston.

In commenting on Mr. Stockham's demise, the Birmingham News said: "Mr. Stockham was a man of great wealth, was most liberal with religious and charitable organizations, becoming known as one of the South's philanthropists. He gave large sums to Christian Education in the Methodist Centenary movement, the upkeep of the Southern Assembly at Junaluska, and was a generous donor to the Y. M. C. A."

SUPERFICIALITY IN SOME FORMS OF SCHOOL EVANGELISM

By John W. Shackford.

One of our conference evangelists recently asked me if I didn't think that there is danger of superficiality in some kinds of Sunday school evangelism. My reply was that there is more than danger, that I was sure there is much actual superficiality in it, and that one of our main concerns is to arouse our pastors and Sunday school workers to the great need of giving more careful attention to this most important matter of making our Sunday school evangelism more vital and more thoroughly effective in reaching the pupils of our schools.

We cannot insist too strongly that our religious education be permeated with the spirit of evangelism. On the other hand we must seek to redeem our evangelism from sporadic emotionalism and mechanical superficiality by relating it more closely to a continuous program of religious teaching. Jesus plainly designed that the work of teaching should prepare the way for complete obedience to Him as Lord and Master. Even in the case of his own disciples he first asked only that they become learners, their confession of his Lordship and the higher reaches of their faith and experience were to follow.

There is a very real need for a re-study of the nature and conditions of a fruitful and abiding evangelism, especially as regards the children and youth of the church. The reason why we so often have professions and accessions of members who have no real knowledge of the meaning of Christianity and of the program of Jesus for his followers are certainly not far to seek.

The practice of receiving members into the church who have had no previous preparation for membership, not even a personal conference with the pastor, and have had no provision made for the care of their souls or the further training in the Christian way, is at strange variance from the practices of the early church, and of early Methodism as well. Whatever may be the excuse, during a great evangelistic meeting, for hurried and superficial dealing with adult converts unknown to the evangelist and whom he may never see again, there can be no corresponding excuse for dealing in this manner with the boys and girls who are in regular attendance upon our Sunday schools.

Sometimes the entire year of opportunity for personal evangelism is allowed to pass with no real effort on the part of either teacher or pastor to talk with the pupils of the deeper things of Christ, and then there is held, without careful preparation, a formal Decision Day at which an effort is made to stir the emotions of the youthful members of the school and press for an immediate decision for Christ. After this, frequently, they are received into the church membership almost immediately with less private instruction than is given to a candidate seeking admission to some fraternal order. When looked at in all seriousness this is little less than trifling with the most serious business of the kingdom. Such practices are a wrong to childhood and justly bring Sunday school evangelism of this type into disrepute.

One hesitates to characterize the lack of understanding of the Christian life or of the mind and heart of a real boy or girl that must lie back of such a mechanical treatment of the children and youth of the church who constitute the primary hope of its future strength. The pastor can plead no reason for holding a decision service in his Sunday school without taking the time to prepare for it and to follow it with the proper care of those who are concerned about their religious life and experience.

A Misconception as to Real Nature of Decision Day.

The very name Decision Day is too often interpreted to mean that a whole group of Sunday school pupils is to be urged at a particular moment on a particular day to decide then and there for Christ. Perhaps they are sometimes told on such occasions that "Not to decide for Christ is to decide against Him." Yet every thoughtful person understands that it is unnatural as well as mechanical to expect all the boys and girls of the church to be ready at a given signal to make a decision of this nature. Especially is this true when no effort has been made to prepare them for this occasion.

What is still worse is that many make what is called a decision when they lack all preparation for it and understanding of its significance. They may act in response to a mere emotional appeal or to the influence of the occasion, or the example of others, and yet have very little real religious impulse lying back of the act, little conviction, and little of anything that has real significance for the Christian life.

To line up the young members of the Sunday school in this fashion, call their response to our appeal "A decision for Christ," and then to give no further thought or attention to helping to interpret their own act, or to understand more fully what their privileges and responsibilities are in the Christian life, is to do a great wrong to these little ones who can so easily be exploited in the name of religion, but who are likewise so ready to be led into the growing experience and understanding of the Christian life.

If we are concerned for an evangelism that lays broadly and deeply the foundations for an ever expanding Christian experience we will not tolerate a Decision Day service of this sort in our Sunday schools.

REV. JACOB SIMPSON

Rev. Jacob Simpson was born in Rowan county, N. C., October 13, 1836, and departed this life May 4, 1923, at his home in Concord, in the 87th year of his age.

In the year 1862 he was married to Miss Amanda A. Culp of Cabarrus county, to which union were born eleven children, seven of whom survive. These are: John B. Simpson of Durham, Thomas R. Simpson of Salisbury, Mumpford I. Simpson, Mrs. Tillie McLester and Mrs. J. D. Stoker of Concord, Mrs. W. D. Sherwood of Salisbury, and Mrs. J. M. Lisk of Albemarle.

Soon after his marriage in 1862 he enlisted in the Confederate army and served with distinction in Company G of the Fifth North Carolina regiment, a unit of Johnson's brigade. He was severely wounded at the battle of Chancellorsville, but when he had recovered sufficiently he returned to his command and a year later at the battle of Spottsylvania Courthouse suffered the loss of his left arm and was permanently retired from service. As far as known only one member of his entire regiment survives him. For some years after the war he was engaged in farming. Later he moved to New Land, where for eight years he superintended a gold mine. In 1882, forty years ago, he moved to the city of Concord. Through all these years he has been a wholesome saving force in the material, social, educational and religious life of the community. Perhaps it would not be overreaching the truth to say that no man ever lived among us who was more universally liked.

In 1874 he was licensed to preach at Matney's Grove quarterly conference, Stanly county. In 1891 he was ordained deacon in the city of Asheville by Bishop Charles B. Galloway. He was a faithful dispenser of the Word of Life and many are those who in eternity will testify to the spiritual helpfulness of his preaching and the inspiration of his high manhood.

Brother Simpson was great in the cultivation of his friendships. Like Emerson, he reckoned a friend as the "masterpiece of nature," and these friends, whether high or low, rich or poor, humble or mighty, were duly appreciated. Like Cyrus, he believed that to lose a friend was the greatest of all losses, and so it came to pass that he carefully studied how to hold the friends he made. Neither were his friends confined to grown-ups. The little children loved him. Today their hearts are lonely because he has gone. With the Psalmist he regarded his own children as olive plants round about the table. He was great in his love. He found love to be the road to God, and so he walked along this sometimes forgotten road till he came to sit at God's feet and learn His secrets. He found it to be the medicine of all moral evil and did not hesitate to take it himself and offer it to a lost world, believing that only by such a remedy could sin be cured.

His love for the church was pure, strong and undying. His interest in everything that pertained to the church was beautiful to behold. He had seen Forest Hill congregation grow from a small handful, meeting in an unoccupied cottage to one of the largest in this section.

One of the greatest desires of his heart was to see this church complete its building program. Again and again he spoke of this unfinished enterprise.

Some weeks ago when his life was despaired of and his departure momentarily expected he said to his pastor, "Tell Will Odell to see that the church is finished. I want to see it done, but I'll have to go."

He was great in his confidence. When he came to the very brink of the river and stood there for several days he was calm as an autumn sunset. Nothing troubled him. He was radiant and eager as he anticipated the voyage. With his friends and loved ones gathered about him he talked for hours at a time, breaking forth into such ecstasies as these: "I see heaven! It is my Father's house. I can't tell you much about it, but it is so beautiful. I'm going home to die no more! Tell all the people to meet me in heaven. I'll think about them and pray for them." He called a little five-year-old neighbor girl: "Be a good little girl. When you are down here passing through trouble, sorrow and suffering I'll be high up in heaven. When this poor lipping, stammering tongue lies silent in the grave, I'll be rejoicing with Jesus!" Breaks into singing "When the battle's over we shall wear a crown,"—then "Think of a poor insignificant man like me wearing a crown of life! I don't deserve it, but I'm to have it because I have served Him!" Pointing upward he cries, "I see the crown, and it's mine, it's mine!"

Then he steps back from the edge of the water and abides for a number of weeks. At last on Tuesday of the past week God's little finger touched him and he quietly fell on sleep. For almost three days and nights he lingered in painless waiting till Friday morning at 9:30 the angel lifted his tired, limp body into the boat and the boatman rowed rapidly till it touched the opposite bank. May we not further imagine that like Christian and Hopeful, he was transfigured as soon as he had entered through the gate and that he put on raiment that shone like gold. Then came there out those that had harps and crowns and gave him one of each. The harp to praise withal, and the crown in token of honor! Then all the bells in the city rang for joy, and he himself sang, "Blessing and honor, and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb for ever and ever!"

It was worth journeying a thousand miles to see this man die! What a peace, what a blessedness, what a joy divine! What an experience for those so highly favored as to witness it! Our last doubt was dissipated like the mists driven before the imperial majesty of the rising sun. Our fears were allayed as when the trembling child, in the hour of supposed danger, feels the touch of his father's hand. Our faith shone bright and clear like the mellow light of the gentle moon as she steps suddenly from out the blackness of a starless midnight storm! We can never think of dying in quite the same manner since he has shown us how to die.

He himself is no longer with us. He has gone where the lamplight is not known, where the starlight is a vanishing memory, where there is no night, where the electric lights are exchanged for ten thousand day-dawns and as many day-noons! His shout of triumph as he borrows the words of St. Paul to express it lingers in our memory by day and by night: "I have finished my course, I have kept the faith and henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge, will give me at that day!"

Children and neighbors, he has left you a prince's legacy worth more than all the gold of all the mines, a legacy finer than all the pearls of all the seas. With Addison we can say of this crowned priest and king:

"The stars shall fade away,
The sun himself grow dim with age, and Nature sink in years;
But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth,
Unhurt amidst the war of elements—
The wreck of matter and the crash of worlds!"

Lynn Waldorf, who is named as the "stellar tackle" of the strong Syracuse University eleven, is much more than a football player. In his junior year he won the Monk's Head prize for all-round excellence—character, athletics, scholarship. He is a member of the Student Council and president of the senior class. Wichita, Kansas, is his home town—at least in this quadrennium, though he has learned to itinerate, having lived the life of the parsonage until 1920, when his father, the Rev. E. L. Waldorf, was elected a bishop and stationed at Wichita.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

THE REAL TEST

By Dr. H. N. Snyder.

More than two years ago Southern Methodism undertook to save and strengthen her institutions of learning by adequately endowing and supporting them. In a remarkable campaign over $18,000,000 was pledged. Though the full amount of what was asked for and needed was not secured, we feel that we did reasonably well, considering the unfavorable financial conditions, in securing so large a sum. It seems to us that this amount, short as it was of what the General Conference had agreed to raise, was a fine expression of the loyalty of the church to General Conference instructions and also a sign of its understanding of the great significance of the program it has been set to carry out. It was felt that the preachers and people had met their duty and had done a supremely important piece of work.

But this is only a "feeling." The reality of how the duty was met is measured by another performance, that of turning the subscriptions into cash. This is the performance that is the real test of what we did. It is one thing to put a name to a pledge and quite another to make it good in terms of money. It is one sort of achievement to pile up millions of dollars in subscriptions and quite a different achievement to transform promises to pay into dollars paid. The really vital matter for Southern Methodists to think about, therefore, is the relation between promise and the fulfillment, whether pledges to Christian education have become money to serve the cause of Christian education by the better endowment and equipment of our institutions.

Let us see how we Methodists have met this kind of test, which is after all the real test. October 25, 1923, the subscriptions due amounted to approximately $6,000,000, and the amount paid nearly $4,000,000, leaving a balance due and unpaid of more than $2,000,000. November 1, 1923, the third payment became due amounting to about $4,000,000, making the immediate task before us the collection of approximately $5,000,000 already due and unpaid.

These unpaid subscriptions suggest that the time has come for us to face up squarely to the financial side of our obligations to the Christian Education Movement, to determine what we are going to do about it and how we are going to do it. In the first place, we should remind ourselves that of the 2,500,000 Methodists in the South, hardly more than 375,000, or 15 per cent of them, subscribed at all to the movement. This means that each of the subscribers averaged a little less than $50—$10 a year for five years.

The significant thing about the figures is that both the number subscribing and the average amount of the subscriptions are relatively small. An average of $10 a year for five years on about one-seventh of the membership of the church could hardly be called a heavy financial burden, even under "boll weevil" conditions. The fact is, we have gotten so used to the habit of thinking how "badly we have been hit" that we are in danger of both exaggerating the size of our financial obligations and resenting even a suggestion of the payment of them, our church obligations as well as our commercial obligations. In this attitude such obligations are apt to bulk larger than they really are, and there is a sort of self-pity that makes it seem cruel for anybody to expect us to meet them.

Such an attitude, if indulged in long, can easily lead to a sort of repudiation, and nothing could be more of a calamity, both to the individual subscriber and to the church at large. Here are pledges made in good faith, not scraps of paper, but moral obligations to a great cause to be redeemed in cash, promises to pay a certain amount for advancing a fundamental interest of the kingdom of God, expressions of loyalty to the church and its institutions, to permit them to lapse for any reason would be discredit to the church and infect with the poison of failure any future enterprise in its very beginning.

All this is obvious enough, but what are we going to do about it? The first thing to do is not to let much time pass before renewing in the minds of our people the vital reality of these Christian education obligations, not only for the purpose of supplying the needs of our institutions, but also for the sake of the moral effect upon our people themselves, the depressing effect of financial obligations allowed to grow cold and die on the conscience. The colleges could possibly struggle along without the money being paid that has been subscribed. They have done this so often before that to do it now would be to learn no new habit. But the church itself would probably suffer such a loss of self-respect and of conscious power as would make its leadership hesitate before attempting any new movement of progress.

But nobody wants, or really expects, Southern Methodism to put itself in any such position or be hampered by memories of failure upon such a large scale. Nevertheless, if this is not to happen, the time has about come to put the whole machinery of the church to work, with faith and courage, upon the vital matter of redeeming the Christian education pledges. It will not be done until we do. Our business now is not so much preaching Christian education as it is in collecting and paying what is due Christian education. This is the real test.

THE REALITY OF CHRIST'S PRESENCE

"Go unto my brethren, and say to them, I ascend unto my Father and your Father, and my God and your God."—John 20:17.

This was an unspeakably more important announcement than the mere fact that Jesus had arisen out of the tomb. The resurrection meant more for the human race than that Jesus was again alive and walking among men. It meant that Jesus had ascended to the Father, and henceforth when they thought of God they were to think of him. It meant that the whole warm, affectionate feeling which they had when they thought of Jesus was to be transferred to the Father in heaven. It meant that whatever Jesus was willing to do for them God with all his power was now enlisted to do. And it meant that Jesus was not confined to any place or time, that there were no special opportunities now in little quiet interviews in the garden or by the roadside, but that always he could be intimately present with all his disciples. How vastly greater was all this than the first thought of Mary that he had come back again to resume the old relationships with the apostolic band!

It is very hard for some minds not to look back to the physical companionship of Jesus with Peter and John as being a more real and vital friendship with Christ than a man can now have. But the reality of the spiritual presence of Christ with his followers cannot be described. It can only be realized by those who fulfill the plain conditions of keeping the commandments and daring to make the ventures in the way of service and sacrifice that assume that Christ is with them and will reinforce their efforts.

There are, however, some things in the experience of all men which give us a faint idea of the greater reality of the presence of Christ with the disciples after he became invisible than of his bodily presence before the crucifixion. We all know that the advices and lessons of good parents are often vastly more influential and very much better understood and appreciated after we get away from them and face the hard experiences of life, than they were when we were yet with them back in the old home. Many a man of fifty realizes that his mother, far removed or perhaps gone into the unseen world, is in every sense of the word more really powerful in the directing of his life than she was when he was fifteen. Abraham Lincoln was more really present and operative in the life of the American people after his assassination and his burial than he was at any time when he occupied the presidential chair. A visible presence is not necessary at all to a powerful influence. The knowledge that the loved one is in the next room often quiets us quite as much as the actual nearness of the person. The presence of mother in the dark, although we do not see her face or hear her voice, comforts us and still our childish fears. So mysterious and wonderful inner experiences come to those who believe in Christ, and faith in the personal presence is really more dynamic and practically helpful than his visible bodily presence could possibly be.

OUR BOOK TABLE*CHRIST OR CHAOS

By Charles C. Selecman, D.D.

The influence of this little book will be for good, distinctly tonic in this day of confusing theories concerning the relation of Christ and His gospel to men and women in the struggles of individual life and to society in its unending effort to rise above the low and sensuous to greater heights of spiritual excellence.

Its clear note of faith in the unchanging God of the universe; in the Bible as His message to men; in the deity of Jesus, the only begotten Son of God; in the fact that His death atoned for the sins of men and in His triumph over death through His resurrection is refreshing.

This successful pastor, now president of the Southern Methodist University, has rendered a good service to the cause of our Master by giving to us such a worthy message.

THE NEW GREATNESS

By Frederick F. Shannon.

Author of "The Country Faith," "The Infinite Artist," etc.

"Rich in experience, original in the manner of the mind, beholding everywhere the unobvious but fundamentally important, brilliant in style, with passionate moral purpose, these are sermons that show the power still living in the American pulpit."

FUNDAMENTALS OF SUCCESS

By H. A. Boaz, one of the Bishops of the M. E. Church, South.

In a clear, simple, but very forceful style the author tells how a young man or woman may make the most of life. He sets forth the wonders of our present-day civilization, the golden opportunities offered, the value and dignity of manhood, the demand for real men and women, and the elements that enter into their making. He discusses failure and how to avoid it, success and how to achieve it.

The book will be a benediction to any young man or woman who reads and heeds.

By S. Parkes Cadman.

"Dr. Cadman shows the young minister that through the centuries of church history the chief means of disseminating truth and winning converts has been through preaching. Every great revival of religion has proceeded from men whose chief gift was the power to preach in such a way that the world listened."—Dr. W. J. Dawson, in the Christian World (London).

ADVENTURES IN EVANGELISM

By Edmund Thickett, Minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Introduction by Rev. Theodore S. Henderson, D. D., one of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Bishop Theodore S. Henderson writes in the introduction:

"No stories of work in the Christian church are of more absorbing interest than those dealing with the turning of men and women to God. To tell such stories is not merely art, for no artist could picture such scenes unless his own soul were in sympathy with the subject. That the writer of this book has the understanding spirit is evidenced not only by his sympathetic treatment of these vivid stories, but by the work of his ministry during many years."

FIELD NEWS

CHURCH MEETING AT WELDON

All the district stewards, charge lay leaders and preachers are called to meet in the Methodist church in Weldon on the eleventh day of December at 10:30 a. m.

It is of the greatest importance that all be present, as a program will be adopted for the year's work.

S. E. Mercer, P. E.

CHECKS ABOUT FIRST OF DECEMBER

To whom it may concern:

The checks cannot be mailed out to the claimants before the first of December. Treasurer Brown imparted this information to the Board of Finance at the close of our conference in Elizabeth City. The claimants may rest assured that the checks will be mailed out promptly when our conference treasurer makes it possible. The amounts will be slightly less this year than last, but the board did its best with what it had to distribute.

J. A. Hornaday, Secretary.

A "SURPRISED" PREACHER

It isn't any use denying it, we were glad when the good bishop said "Raeford circuit, J. H. Frizelle." Of course we didn't pull any strings, but there is always the temptation to do it when one is well fixed. And we met a whole-hearted welcome when we got back to Raeford.

We are setting ourselves to our task for the new year in real earnest, and last night we were busy reading Alexander Whyte's book, recommended by Bishop Denny, and there came a tap at the door and in came a crowd, simply a crowd loaded with good things for the "new preacher and his family." So here we are, sitting amidst bundles and packages all embarrassed and at the same time pleased—and acting as foolish as you please. Well, who is not willing to give their best to folks that are that thoughtful and kind-hearted. Heaven's blessings on these good folks and our pledge to do our dead level best for them in the year and we trust years to come.

J. H. Frizelle.

RUTHERFORD COLLEGE CIRCUIT

There are many of the best people on the Albemarle circuit there are anywhere. But those in the Stony Hill community deserve special mention. The pastor of Central, Albemarle, Rev. C. M. Pickens, and his congregation laid themselves out the whole of last year to make our stay in their town pleasant. We were read out for the McDowell circuit. On the first day of November about sunset we arrived at the parsonage near Nebo. The ladies were there and gave us supper, and that night a crowd came in with a pounding. But on Sunday following one of those northeast rains came and no service was held. On the Saturday following, about 10 o'clock a. m., I received a telegram (sent the day before) from Rev. Z. Paris, the presiding elder, saying: "You are appointed to Rutherford College circuit. Come to Bollinger's for the quarterly meeting tomorrow. I went and reached the quarterly meeting in time for the business session, though it was about 30 miles. For the next two Sundays I filled the appointments on this charge from Nebo, waiting for Brother Elliott to move, which he could not do till he got his appointment from the N. C. conference to which he had been transferred. But last Thursday we came down and there were twelve or fifteen of the excellent women of this community at the parsonage to welcome us, and they certainly did give us as cordial, whole-hearted and complete a welcome as anyone could wish. They cooked us a fine warm supper. Then after supper several cars drove up and they surely did give us one more pounding. Having served this same charge two years about ten years ago, we feel much gratified at the whole-hearted welcome accorded us. One man presented Mrs. Poe with a check. I wish I had space to write of the fine school, the walls of the new church going up, and the vast amount of improvements in ten years.

E. J. Poe, Pastor.

LARGER AND BETTER WEAVER

To the Board of Trustees of Weaver College:

At a meeting of the Rowan chapter of the Weaver College Alumni Association held at Salisbury on Friday evening, November 23rd, a resolution was unanimously passed approving the selection of Dr. C. H. Trowbridge as president of Weaver College and heartily endorsing the plans and policies of the present administration.

This organization further resolved to go on record as pledging its hearty support and co-operation to the official board and president of the college in carrying out their constructive policies for the development of Weaver College.

The secretary was directed to mail copies of these resolutions to the president of the college, the president of the board of trustees, and to the North Carolina Christian Advocate.

President.

Vivian Blockstock,
Secretary.

WHO WANTS GOLD DOLLARS?

A dear little girl, Eunice Boney, wishing to have a part in Greater Scarritt, has sent me three beautiful gold dollars which had been in her family for some years. As this coin is no longer issued it is worth more than face value to collectors and has a value in excess of a dollar. This excess value the bankers tell me is not fixed, but is dependent on who wants them and how much. I would like to realize as much as possible, both because of the greatness of the cause and that our secretary's daughter may know that her sacrifice was worth while. Is there not a reader of the Advocate who will offer me many times the fact value for these beautiful and well preserved coins, seeing that the money thus realized becomes the gift of a dear girl to a great cause? I shall wait until nearly Christmas to see what I am offered before disposing of them. The coins are dated 1856, 1861, 1874.

Mrs. N. H. D. Wilson,
Elizabeth City, N. C.

BIG PLANS IN SHELBY DISTRICT

Brother Kirkpatrick has started his work well, and I think with one or two exceptions that all the churches in the district were represented, either by the pastor and stewards or those who came in their stead. Brother Kirkpatrick outlined his work for the year, and in well chosen remarks indicated the necessity for immediate activity in the work of the church. There were good speeches by Lay Leaders Harry Falls, Goodson and others. Brother Lambeth presented the cause of the endowment for superannuated preachers in the most masterful and telling way.

The ladies of the Main Street Methodist Church, South, served a splendid dinner in the new young people's building.

The afternoon session was taken up by district matters. The presiding elder's salary was fixed at $4,500 and definite measures were taken for payment of the debt of the parsonage. The entire meeting was most harmonious and successful, and the work of the district starts under the most auspicious conditions.

In the absence of Brother Harley Gaston, who is the secretary, the writer acted as secretary of this meeting, at which there were seventy-six persons present from all over the district.

Geo. W. Wilson.

THE NEW SHELBY CHURCH

Ground Floor Plan.

This floor contains the cradle roll room, which will seat thirty or more; the beginners' room, seating fifty; the primary room, which will seat 120, and the junior department, with an assembly room which will accommodate 120 or more pupils, and ten class rooms.

This floor also contains a large kitchen, foyer, storage room, toilet rooms, furnace rooms, two stairways and two exits.

First Floor Plan.

This floor contains the auditorium, which will seat 503, and a class room opening thereunto which has a seating capacity of 252, making a total adult seating capacity of 755, or a mixed seating capacity of 800.

This floor also contains a pastor's study, choir room, offices for Sunday school superintendent and secretary; a teacher-training room and two class rooms; two offices, three vestibules, toilet room, space for senior and junior classes, and two stairways.

Recapitulation.

The building contains thirty-six class rooms, which will care for a Sunday school of 1,096, and twenty-five other rooms, etc., making a total of sixty-one rooms or units.

Design.

The design is English Gothic to be built of red tapestry brick, with stone trim and green tile roof.

This building meets all of the requirements of the "A" or departmental type of Sunday school as set forth by our Sunday School Board.

The arrangement is flexible and with a fine sense of "togetherness" and "separateness."

BUILD RIGHT

One of the distinct satisfactions noted in our Sunday school progress is the disposition to build the right sort of structure for religious education. Those who attended the annual conference at Winston-Salem noted a most superb Sunday school building at Centenary Methodist church. It is built right. The other day when at Marion Rev. W. E. Poovey showed me the plans of his religious education building soon to be erected by the side of his present church plant. The plans agreed upon are well adapted for constructive Sunday school work. Six splendid departments are being arranged for. It is a credit to Brother Poovey and his fine laymen to have planned so wisely and so well. The day has come in our Western North Carolina conference when we can point to actual buildings for examples of rightly constructed church and Sunday school architecture. If you are arranging to build be sure to build right. There is no excuse for not doing so in these days of helpfulness.

HERE'S YOUR CHANCE TO OWN A PIANO

Another Advocate Piano Club is now forming. This club extends to you a warm invitation to become one of its members and participate in the benefits and privileges. Write for Catalogue and full particulars today.

If you intend to provide your home, church or school with a piano or player-piano, don't let this opportunity pass. The club is for your benefit and protection. It saves you money and it positively insures you perfect satisfaction.

Features of the Club Plan.

Each club consists of 100 members. In this way an order can be placed for 100 pianos or player-pianos, thus obtaining for each and every member wholesale prices instead of retail prices which always range from 25 per cent to 35 per cent higher. You are only responsible for your own purchase, but by buying in the club you gain this great saving in the price.

You are guaranteed perfect satisfaction by a reliable Music House, a guarantee that covers the life of your piano against defective labor and material.

By joining the Club you are extended the most convenient terms of monthly, quarterly or yearly payments based on the lowest net cash price. This represents a tremendous saving as compared with the customary installment prices which are usually much higher than cash prices.

The family of a Club Member is fully protected in case of the death of the purchaser. If the regulations of the Club have been complied with, the unpaid balance is cancelled and the family is given a receipt in full.

You have the privilege of trading in your old piano at its real valuation for a new one or a player-piano.

This is a big opportunity for the buyer of a piano or player-piano. Dozens of clubs have already been formed and not one member is in any way disappointed. All are loud in their praise of this plan. Ask Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga., to send you the Club's catalogue and furnish full particulars as to prices, terms of payments and other features.

The Advocate job department makes a specialty of collection envelopes.

WATCH JARVIS MEMORIAL GROW

Our hearts are filled with gratitude and thanks for the return to Jarvis Memorial church of our beloved pastor, Rev. V. P. Scoville.

During the two years he has been with us he has led us wisely and spiritually, many souls have been added to the kingdom and under his influence two young men have entered the ministry and another is preparing.

God has wonderfully blessed us in a material way. We have added a new Sunday school building, well equipped and have a membership of about 800, with the best superintendent in the N. C. conference.

We are praying that we may have a great year and under the leadership of Brother Scoville you may watch Jarvis Memorial grow. Member.

A WORD FROM FARMVILLE

Perhaps a word from Farmville may be of interest to the readers of the Advocate. During the year the Sunday school at Farmville has increased about 25 per cent in enrollment and the offering nearly 50 per cent. An Epworth League has been organized. There have been thirty-four additions to the church on the charge. I think the additions here are nearly double the number added to all the other churches in town. A splendid meeting was held at Arthur, where the pastor did the preaching. Eight have been received there on profession of faith. The people there say that it was the best year they have ever had. Finances at both churches are up in full. The pastor's salary here at Farmville was overpaid $110 according to the amount fixed by the stewards. The congregations at Arthur have about doubled during the year. Here at Farmville the attendance has increased over 300 per cent, until the capacity of the church was about reached. Believing that I could get a larger congregation I made arrangements and transferred my night service to the high school auditorium. On the first Sunday night in November, with service at the Baptist church and also the Disciples church and a rainy night besides, I had 350 people out. That would mean something like 800 per cent increase. Last night at my last service I had about 500 people in that great auditorium. I am told that I have been preaching to more people than any pastor or evangelist has ever preached to in the town of Farmville. I certainly never saw a greater response anywhere, and I never saw greater opportunities for building up the kingdom of God.

Naturally the reader will wonder why I am leaving. Well, I did not ask to leave, for while there were great hindrances to overcome, I remembered the words of Napoleon, "Beyond the Alps Lies Italy." If you were to ask the people of Farmville why I am leaving, I think the almost universal answer would be this: "Because Thrift has preached the truth." I was told last winter soon after I came here that if I expected to stay four years I would have to shut my eyes to the way my people lived. That is something no self-respecting preacher can do. So I have preached on holy living, adhering closely to the Bible and the Discipline of our church. But that did not suit our people. Yet here is a remarkable thing about the situation. So great was the interest in my return by the people of Farmville that men of other churches and of no church offered to make up any deficit in salary that might occur. It was a very remarkable situation. But I put it squarely up to Bishop Denny to say whether a Methodist preacher would have to shut his eyes to the way Methodist people live in order to return to Farmville. Everybody knows what he did.

I go to Moyock with a clear conscience and a happy heart. The Lord is with me. "When I am happy in Jesus, December is as pleasant as May." Amen! C. T. Thrift.

THE PARSONAGE FURNITURE

Every Methodist preacher probably has had the experience of moving into a parsonage which was only half-furnished, or possibly not furnished at all. Perhaps it didn't matter so much to him, for some of us are blissfully unconscious of our surroundings, and so long as we are warm enough and get our meals regularly, it makes little difference whether the sitting room has one chair or half a dozen, and a home-made table looks just about as good as a mahogany one. But while a few ministers may be thus sublimely and celestially unconscious of such things, the ladies of a parsonage are acutely conscious of them. It does make a little difference to them whether there is a smoky chimney, a worn-out stove and a rickety table in the kitchen, and most of them feel more comfortable if the dining room chairs have each four legs, and sound ones at that. And when the angel of the parsonage ushers her frequent guests into the spare bedroom she naturally hates to put a $10,000 guest to sleep on a dollar bed. Her woman soul demands rugs, carpets, and a score of things that other women have, and as it is the only home she will have it seems but fair that the church should see that the parsonage is furnished comfortably and decently.—Christian Guardian.

NEW SUNDAY SCHOOL BUILDING TO BE ERECTED AT ONCE

At a largely attended meeting of the board of stewards of Central Methodist church Monday evening it was enthusiastically voted to award the contract at once for the erection of the new Sunday school rooms in the rear of the church, the work to begin at the earliest possible moment, and to be pushed rapidly forward to completion.

This new Sunday school building will be the last word in Sunday school equipment. It will have all the different departments from the cradle roll to the adult department, and a large social hall in addition.

The building, a two-story affair with a basement, will be placed immediately in the rear of the present church building. The main floor will be on the level with the level of the church auditorium. There will be a twelve foot lobby between the two buildings. On the main floor there will be the cradle roll, beginners, primary, young peoples' and adult departments. Though at present the young peoples' department will be combined with the intermediate, senior department on the second floor. The social hall will be amply large enough to seat the entire membership of the church at a banquet. The hall, on the south side of the building, will be separated from the other departments on the north side by a well lighted six-foot corridor, at one end of which will be the superintendent's and secretary's room. The cradle roll department will be in conjunction with a mother's room, which may be used on social occasions as a cloak room. In addition there will be a well appointed kitchen on this floor, with all the little devices that go to make this phase of the work light and attractive. A dumb waiter will extend from the kitchen to the roof garden, where refreshments may be served in the summer months.

The basement will contain boiler and coal rooms and a gymnasium, which will be immediately under the present social room and the same in size. It is planned to make this room a social hall when the school becomes large enough to demand the present social hall for the young peoples' department. On the northeast corner of the basement there is space provided for a small swimming pool which will later be built.

On the second floor and on the north side will be located a spacious junior department and a large lecture room for young women. On the opposite side of the six-foot corridor will be the intermediate-senior department with plenty of class rooms to accommodate the different ages both of boys and girls. In addition there will be two lecture rooms for young people.

The roof garden will seat four hundred people. It is certain that the roof garden feature will prove very attractive, in that the evening services during the summer when the weather permits may be held on it. Then, too, it will prove a most delightful place for the holding of summer socials, moving pictures and other gatherings.

Each floor of the building will be provided with the very best toilet and lavatory facilities.

With this splendidly equipped building Central church will be in position to meet all the growing needs of her religious, educational and social life, and thus go forward with the other churches of the community that are making similar provision for the future.

The following compose the building committee of the church: A. F. Hartsell, J. E. Davis, C. M. Ivey, A. F. Goodman and J. B. Sherrill.—Concord Times.

A GREAT DAY AT PLYMOUTH

Last Sunday was a great day for Methodism in Plymouth. As a result of the union revival which closed November 18, during which Rev. Ed. G. Caldwell of Dillon, South Carolina, did the preaching, twenty-six joined the Methodist church—twenty-three on profession of faith and three by letter. A large number joined the Episcopal, the Baptist and the Christian churches. Bros. Caldwell and J. C. Costins and Miss Bracy (the party) made a good and lasting impression upon all who heard them.

Our people are looking to the erection of a handsome modern brick church; $10,000 has already been secured in good pledges.

W. G. Lowe.

A NUMBER OF THINGS

What about that shooting match on Thanksgiving Day, where 25 turkeys are to be gambled off? Is it lawful? Is it lawful to play any game for stakes in N. C.? Well, suppose it is, is it a proper thanksgiving stunt, anyway? Will God be pleased with an offering, chapter and verse? These questions are not asked in a censorious spirit, but as is said in the captions of certain of the Psalms, "to bring to remembrance." I know this was a favorite sport in pioneer times, but it seems to me that in this advanced age it hardly comports with the sacredness of the occasion.

Our college president and several others have recently remarked to me that we have now about the best behaved set of students that ever filled old Rutherford College halls, and yet some very dastardly deeds are done under cover of darkness. But whether students or citizens, I am sure the better and much larger number of the students and good citizens are ashamed of their conduct.

Our resident Methodist pastor, Rev. J. E. Poe, is on the job and filling the appointments for preaching just as they were filled by Brother Elliott last year. Our people gave him the accustomed "pounding" on his arrival at the parsonage. He will hold a Thanksgiving service at the college auditorium Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. We should all be there.

Mr. T. E. Conrad's little boy, who was badly scalded over a week ago, is not out of danger, but the doctor thought this afternoon that he was possibly a little better. It is hoped that this bright little fellow will be spared to become a useful man.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Satterfield of Greensboro were Sunday visitors here, leaving for their home Monday afternoon.

Mrs. D. C. Shuford and two children of Hickory were Sunday afternoon visitors at her sister's, Mrs. Ada Hevner. J. T. Stover.

JONESBORO CIRCUIT

Another conference year has passed into history and, like Pilate said during Christ's trial, "What we have written we have written."

I feel that I should say that I am glad to be returned to this charge for another year, and to mention the faithfulness and kindness of these good people for the past two years. I know we have as faithful and loyal board of stewards at every church as I have ever seen. They have done all that could be asked or expected of them to meet every financial claim of the church. And my reports to conference show that every penny, or 100 per cent, of everything has been paid and even more on salary.

And the people are loyal, responsive and willing to know, to be and to do. By this liberal support a great building program in repairing, remodeling and improving our churches has been successfully carried out with not a dollar of indebtedness. Several thousand dollars have been raised each year for building churches, besides our regular assessments for salaries and conference collection.

We began the year with new zeal and determination to do our best and go forward along all lines of church work.

One new church has been added to the charge, Lemon Springs. I preached for them once and they are anxious and ready to build a new church there. This seem to be a church with fine possibilities and a good field for an Epworth League and a woman's missionary society. I hope to organize these if possible.

May all those who read these lines pray for us and help in the great work of the kingdom. Thanking all the good people on the Jonesboro charge for their help and asking for their continued co-operation, I am, Sincerely, B. E. Stanfield.

SILVER SERVICE FOR MR. AND MRS. W. W. PEELE

A large company gathered at the Sunday school of Edenton Street Methodist church last Tuesday evening to greet Rev. Walter W. Peele and wife, who went to Durham Wednesday to take up the work at Trinity church.

Joseph G. Brown welcomed and introduced Will Young, who, in a brief and delightful speech, expressed the love of the congregation to Mr. and Mrs. Peele, presenting them with a handsome silver service in behalf of the 1500 members of the church.

"When Mr. Peele became our pastor we had a gallery to the church," said Mr. Young, "but we never had any use for it. Soon it was filled at all services. We then put chairs in the aisles to accommodate the increasing congregation, until the fire department warned us we were breaking the fire laws. It was then necessary to enlarge the church, providing seats for 300 more people.

"Mr. Peele taught us that religion and long faces had nothing in common and that cheerfulness and religion dwelt together."

In brief speeches Mr. Peele and Mrs. Peele both gave voice to their thanks and the joy that had been theirs in the five years of service to the church and rendered in Raleigh. An informal reception followed.—News and Observer.

The Florida beach and blue sea looked inviting to the tourist from the North, but before venturing out to swim he thought to make sure. "You're certain there are no alligators here?" he inquired of the guide. "Nossuh," replied that functionary, grinning broadly. "Ain't no 'gators hyah." Reassured the tourist started out. As the water lapped about his chest he called back: "What makes you so sure there aren't any alligators?" "Dey's got too much sense," bellowed the guide. "De sharks done skeered dem all away."—American Legion Weekly.

SERVANTS OF THE KINGDOM

Let the future bring what it may, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble." The field is wide, the need is great. God loves us. Let us do the work He has committed to our hands and let us be much in prayer for wisdom and guidance.—Belle H. Bennett, Lambuth-Bennett Book of Remembrance.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, God in His wisdom removed from our midst, on March 9, 1923, the spirit of our beloved relative and co-worker, Mrs. R. O. Smith, one of the most honored and beloved members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Salem church, Oxford circuit. Although nearly seventy-eight years old and very feeble for several years preceding her death, her loving spirit never wavered in the discharge of her Master's work.

In her removal we feel the loss of her co-operation, but her sweet influence will continue to linger with us.

Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we cherish her memory in the coming years, and follow her good example.

Second, That our hearts are saddened by her passing and that we shall miss her cheerful help.

Third, That while we bow in humble submission to our heavenly Father's will, we extend our love and sympathy to her large circle of loved ones.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, the North Carolina Christian Advocate and a copy be recorded in our minutes.

Miss Sara Hunt,
Miss Edna Crews,
Mrs. D. N. Hunt.

NEW AUXILIARY ON ROCKINGHAM DISTRICT

A new society was organized at Parker's church on the Raeford circuit November 11, 1923, with the following officers:

President—Mrs. G. B. Parker; vice president, Mrs. Ida Hare; recording secretary, Mrs. J. P. Hare; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Miss Lucy Hobson; Supt. children's work, Miss Mary Parker; agent for the Missionary Voice and Our Missionary News, Miss Mattie Kinlaw. Mrs. Thomas, the chairman of Hoke county, was with me, and she is fine. Nine members were enrolled.

Mrs. W. R. Royall, Dis. Sec.

WINDSOR MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Week of Prayer was observed, services being held every day in the home of the mission study superintendent, Mrs. W. P. King.

After the devotional service every afternoon the remainder of the time was spent in reading the mission study book recommended to be used this fall, "The Debt Eternal." This was made more interesting by the mission study superintendent, having read and studied it before, then giving short talks on the most important parts of the chapters. We find this a very good way to get most of the members interested in reading the book.

Another plan was tried last summer which proved very satisfactory. The ladies met on Mrs. M. F. Gilliam's lawn, took lunch, spent the day and read and discussed the "Trend of the Races." The social feature of this made it very pleasant.

Windsor auxiliary is doing very good work. The members are faithful and always ready to help. The amount raised during Week of Prayer was $18. The assessment for this auxiliary on the Belle Bennett Memorial fund ($25) has been paid and reported. The other pledges will all be paid. The box of fall and winter clothing sent to our girl at Raleigh Orphanage in October amounted to $29.35. The local department has been very successful in their special efforts to raise money to be expended upon the parsonage. A nice sum has been raised and some expended. The devotional meetings are held regularly every two weeks.

Mrs. Bessie Dunston, Cor. Sec.

"HIM RUNNED HOME TO HIS MOTHER"

A little girl who enjoyed story telling ended her stories always with "and him runned home to him mother."

The hurrying years drift us far from the scenes of childhood and mother, but no matter how far we may have journeyed in experience in years, in space, we never, never drift so far but that there come times when the heart yearns with longing unspeakable to run home to mother. When the burdens of life press hard upon us and sorrow comes like a deadly disease from which we cannot extricate ourselves, it is then the heart instinctively turns to the loved old home, sister, brother, father, mother. But—

"Where is now the merry party

I remember long ago?"

Verily, "they have all dispersed and wandered far away." My own father and mother have gone home to a rich reward for lives nobly lived—yours perhaps linger to bless you, to wait for your occasional letters, to watch for your occasional coming. As the Thanksgiving time draws near, memories of those dear dead days beyond recall come surging in, and for the moment an infinite sadness possesses us, and a sense of loss overwhelms us as we realize that we may no more run to mother in an earthly home, but in thought, in spirit, in life, we may make each day a journey toward that better home, where she awaits our coming.

This year has brought poignant sorrow and irreparable loss to the hearts and homes of many friends, some of whom will read these lines. To you whose hands are empty, whose hearts are desolate and whose lives must be readjusted, this Thanksgiving day may seem but a mockery, but may we not still count many wonderful blessings? Is not life still rich and abundant in love and dear ones and material comfort? As we gather about our thanksgiving boards, let us draw closely and lovingly to the dear ones still spared to us, while—

"Love's flower of memory tender,
We drop at the vacant place.
She is just away, with her Lord today,
Beholding Him, face to face."

HER GIFT

The minister's eyes swept, with intense searching, the faces of his congregation. He had made an impassioned appeal for help in the support of a little mission church among the mountains—a section where rough men and women knew scarcely anything of God and the religion of Christ. He had hoped to inspire the people with the spirit of giving, to make them feel that it was a sweet, blessed privilege, and he had failed. A deep "God, help me," his lips murmured sense of desolation crept over him.

Mutely. He could not see the bent figure of little crippled Maggie in the rear of the church—a figure that was trembling under the fire of his appeal.

"Lord Jesus," the little one was saying brokenly, "I ain't got nuthin' ter give; I want the people of the mountains to hear 'bout my Saviour. O Lord, I ain't got nothin' ter—"

What was it that made the child catch her breath as though a cold hand had taken hold of her heart? "Yes, you have, Maggie," whispered a voice from somewhere. "You've got your crutch that was given ter you, and it is worth a lot of shinin' dollars. You kin give up your best fren' what helps you to get into the park where the birds sing, and takes you to preachin' and makes your life happy."

"Oh, no, Lord," sobbed the child, choking and shivering. "Yes, yes, I will! He gave up more'n that for me."

Blindly she extended the polished crutch and placed it in the hand of the deacon who was taking up the scanty collection. For a moment the man was puzzled; then comprehending her meaning, he carried her crutch to the front of the church and laid it on the table in front of the old pulpit. The minister stepped down from the rostrum and held up the crutch with shaking hands. The sublimity of the renunciation unnerved him so that he could not speak for a moment.

"Do you see it, my people," he faltered at last; "little crippled Maggie's crutch—all that she has to make life comfortable? She has given it to the Lord, and you!"

There was a moment of silence. The people flushed and moved restlessly in their pews.

"Does anyone want to contribute to the mission cause the amount of money this crutch would bring, and give it back to the child who is so helpless without?" the minister asked gravely.

"Fifty dollars," came in husky tones from the banker.

"Twenty-five."

"One hundred."

And so the subscribing went on, until papers equivalent to $600 were lightly piled over the crutch on the table.

"Ah! you have found your hearts—thank God! Let us receive the benediction," almost whispered the minister as he suddenly extended his hands, which were trembling with emotion. Little Maggie, absorbed in the magnitude of her offering and the love that prompted it, comprehended nothing that had taken place. She had not thought for the future, or how she would reach her humble home, or of the days in which she would sit helpless in her chair, as she had done once.

Christ had demanded her all, and she had given it with the blind faith of an Abraham. She understood better when a woman's arms drew her into close embrace, and soft lips whispered in her ear, "Maggie, dear, your church has made $600 for the mission church among the mountains, and has come back to stay with you again. Take it, little one."

Like a flash of light there came the consciousness that in some mysterious way her gift had been accepted of God and returned to her, and with a cry of joy the child caught the beloved crutch to her lonely heart. Then smiling through her tears at the kind faces and reverential eyes, she hobbled out of the sanctuary.—The Standard.

THE REBORN IN CHINA

China has been long the palace where the strong man armed keepeth his goods in peace, but a stronger than he has come upon him at last and is overcoming him. "I was walking along the paved but dirty street of the city crowded with all sorts and conditions of people," writes Mr. John Reischer of Nanking, "when my attention was suddenly arrested by the face of a woman standing behind a counter in a store opening upon the street. She seemed a thing apart, and I shall not attempt to describe the peace, happiness, character, and spirituality that were so immediately evident. My only explanation, coming as it did immediately, was that the woman must be a Christian. As I got closer and fewer people intervened I saw that she was reading a New Testament, that she was a Christian. I shall never forget that face. Miracles still happen. Certainly nothing less than Christ's miraculous influence could have brought about that change. And as I passed through the crowd up the street to the chapel and cut through the opposite gate homeward-bound I knew, as I had never known before, that only with God are all things possible."

GIVING IS LIVING

"For giving is living," the angel said. "Go feed to the hungry sweet charity's bread."

My selfish and querulous answer ran, "And must I keep giving again and again?"

"Oh, no!" said the angel piercing me through, "Just give 'till the Master stops giving to you."

We wonder what the trouble was with Joe Backus' car. When he drove into the garage the shopman yelled, "Stop that thing." Ask Joe.

North Carolina Conference

A YEAR IN RETROSPECT

Lookin over the past conference year as touching the Sunday schools and the work of the Conference Sunday School Board, the board, in its annual report to the conference, stated that:

"Chief emphasis has been placed upon the work of recruiting and training Sunday school workers, placing the official standards of Programs of Work, securing and assisting district workers, arousing and trying to keep alive missionary interest, including the payment of Centenary pledges made by our Sunday schools, promoting the co-operation of homes with Sunday schools and Sunday-schools with homes, and encouraging the construction of properly designed Sunday school buildings.

"Some indication of the measure of success that has attended our efforts is the fact that during the year 24 training schools (nine standard and 15 non-standard) were conducted, enrolling 2,140 Sunday school workers representing 220 Sunday schools. A total of 1,563 certificates of credit on the Standard Training Course were issued through training schools, Sunday school courses given in Trinity and Louisburg College, at Junaluska, and through correspondence work, a gain of 34 per cent over the number issued last year, which fact becomes more significant when it is remembered that the North Carolina conference last year excelled 36 of the 39 conferences of the entire connection in the number of certificates issued."

Some of the salient features in the report of the conference superintendent of Sunday school work, in addition to those mentioned above, are:

Programs of Work placed in 142 Sunday schools.

Two schools attained "Standard" rank.

Ten district workers secured and set to work.

Fifty-nine pastors earned 107 units of credit in the Standard Training Course.

SOME PERCENTAGE GAINS

The following table gives some interesting comparisons of 1923 with 1922:

	1922	1923	Pct. Inc.
Standard schls. held	6	9	50
Certificates in Std.	382	609	59
Non-Std. schools...	12	15	25
Enr'd in Tr. Schls.	1675	2140	28
Schools represented	160	220	38
Total Certificates.	1171	1563	34
Pst'rs Tk.g courses	36	59	67

MORE INTERESTING FIGURES

In promoting Sunday school work during the year your conference superintendent of Sunday School Work traveled by railroad, automobile and boat a total of 10,612 miles, or an average of approximately 30 miles a day, including Sundays and holidays; wrote 5,739 letters, distributed 10,700 leaflets and pamphlets, not counting 9,000 training school programs and 11,000 Sunday School Day programs; visited 85 Sunday schools and churches, made 99 talks and addresses, taught in nine training schools, and personally directed 15.

PLANS FOR THE COMING YEAR

Your Sunday School Board submitted and the conference unaimously adopted the following recommendations for the new conference year:

1. That Standard Training Schools be conducted where already established and others set up and conducted where the need and the attendance will justify, to the end that each district be served by at least one standard school.

2. That non-standard training schools be conducted in communities not already served by a standard training school.

3. That a conference-wide Sunday school conference be held early in the year.

4. That we heartily approve and recommend the observance of Children's Week in as many of our churches as practicable.

5. That we go on record as favoring week-day religious instruction properly correlated with the work done in Sunday school on Sunday.

6. That we recognize the educational value of our official Programs of Work and urge their use by all our Sunday schools.

7. That we approve the Four-Times-a-Year Circuit Institute as a splendid means of cultivating our rural work.

8. That special stress be laid upon the matter of Sunday school evangelism and that we recommend to our pastors and Sunday school workers the plan outlined by our General Sunday School Board. The time suggested is January, February and March, the campaign leading up to Easter. Schools finding the period between Christmas and Easter impracticable are urged to use the months of June, July and August.

9. That we urge upon our pastors and superintendents the importance of magnifying the work of the Sunday school teacher and influencing sufficient recruits to prepare themselves to teach. We feel that this matter should have attention from the pulpit.

10. That we recognize the importance of supplying our officers and teachers with books dealing with modern principles and methods of Sunday school work and call attention to the list of books arranged for the Sunday School Workers' Library.

11. That we endorse the program of our General Sunday School Board for missionary activity and training, stressing Monthly Missionary Day and urging all our Sunday schools, as far as practicable, to accept missionary specials in accordance with the general plan provided by the General Sunday School Board and the Board of Missions.

12. That we urge building committees having in hand the construction of new buildings or remodeling of old ones to acquaint themselves with the building standards recommended by the Joint Committee on Church and Sunday School Architecture.

13. That we recognize the importance of the preservation of the Christian home and pledge our co-operation to our General Sunday School Board in making effective the aims of its home and parent teacher section.

14. That we co-operate with the Board of Managers of the Trinity Summer School for Preachers in providing courses in Sunday school work.

YOUR WORKERS RE-ELECTED

"We are glad to be able to report that we have been able to secure the services of Mr. L. L. Gobbel as conference superintendent of Sunday school work and of Miss Georgia S. Keene as elementary superintendent for the coming year," says the report of your Sunday School Board. "We appreciate heartily the co-operation which the conference gave them last year, and we bespeak for them the same hearty co-operation during the coming months."

ROANOKE RAPIDS MEETING

In order to take part in a Sunday school conference at Roanoke Rapids your conference superintendent of Sunday school work left Elizabeth

City Saturday afternoon before the adjournment of the annual conference and Sunday evening, in the magnificent public school auditorium at Roanoke Rapids spoke to between 800 and 1000 people from the eight Sunday schools of the community. Monday Miss Keene went from Elizabeth City to Roanoke Rapids and took part in the Sunday school conference there Tuesday and Wednesday. Sunday, Monday and Tuesday representatives of all denominations met together to consider their common task of improving Sunday school conditions of the community and enrolling more of the people in the various Sunday schools. At present, according to Mr. E. J. Coltrane, superintendent of the public schools, who presided over the meetings, less than 20 per cent of the people of the community attend Sunday school. Great interest, however, was taken in the conferences, and it is believed that out of them will come a new and increased interest in the religious training and development of all the people. Wednesday evening was given over to denominational group meetings, in which each denomination was expected to tackle its own particular problems and to plan definite follow-up work.

Roanoke Rapids and Rosemary, two splendid growing towns making up one thriving community, are going forward rapidly in their economic development. They are also blessed with exceptionally good public schools and served by good churches. At Roanoke Rapids the Methodist church, served by Rev. R. H. Broom, has a magnificent building. The church at Rosemary, of which Rev. E. N. Harrison is pastor, has only an average building, but there is some talk of building a new and more serviceable structure.

Western North Carolina Conference

CREDIT STUDENTS

The third annual Winston-Salem Standard Training School, recently held in the new Sunday school building of Centenary Methodist church was very successful. It was particularly successful in reaching our leaders not only from Winston-Salem but also from Kernesville, Lexington, Mocksville and the Welcome and Forsyth circuits. The school turned out eighty-two credits, seventy-six of which were Methodist credits. These credit students came from the following churches: Burkhead 16, West End 15, Centenary 14, Lexington 8, Ogburn Memorial 6, Central Terrace 5, Mocksville 4, Kernersville 3, Green Street 1, Grace 1, Mt. Tabor 1, Erlanger 1, Salisbury 1.

By courses the credit students are listed as follows:

Story Telling, Mrs. G. W. Green, instructor—Miss Mittie Towles Wiley, Mrs. W. F. Beam, Miss Bessie Blum, Miss Anna Brown, Mrs. George Clark, Mrs. R. B. Crawford, Miss Martha Call, Miss Sallie Carroll, Miss Lillian Dalton, Miss Nannie E. Dodson, Miss Kathryn Emmart, Miss Margaret E. Gray, Miss Mary Holton, Mrs. H. G. Johnson, Miss Frances Mills, Miss Sallie Nading, Mrs. Cicero Ogburn, Miss Maggie T. Pickett, Miss Lillian Pickett, Miss Polly Poindexter, Mrs. J. W. Vanhoy, Miss Gertrude Vance, Mrs. N. S. Wilson, Miss Mary White, Mrs. O. V. Woosley, Miss Sadie Walker.

Primary Organization and Administration, Mrs. W. B. Ferbuson, instructor—Mrs. M. W. Norfleet, Miss Lena Davis, Miss Marjorie Hall, Miss Annie L. Walker.

Junior Organization and Administration, Miss Virginia Jenkins, instructor—Raymond Shives, Nellie Blake, J. B. Carter, Mrs. Evangeline Hardister, Frances Carter, Mrs. Will Marler, Fanny Phelps, Mrs. R. A. Wagoner, Lena Willis, Nellie Young.

Intermediate-Senior Agencies, Mrs. J. F. Spruill, instructor—Dr. R. P. Anderson, Mrs. R. P. Anderson, Miss Lula Betts, Rev. E. O. Cole, Miss Gertrude Mock, Ralph Pegram, Miss Ethel Schaffer.

The Teacher, Prof. C. T. Carr, instructor—Mrs. C. R. Johnson, Miss Annie Shook, Mrs. T. G. Trivette, Lois Gourly, Evelyn Foy, Ruth Clark, Mrs. C. W. Snyder, E. A. Nash, E. S. Jackson, Mae Ham, Price Smith, Mrs. Carl Clodfelter, Spencer T. Jones, Mrs. Chas. Long, Mrs. G. H. Hastings, Mrs. B. G. Plumley, Elizabeth Oliver.

The Pupil, Dr. L. W. Crawford, instructor—Mrs. A. B. Bynum, Rev. J. A. J. Farrington, Rev. J. S. Hiatt, Rev. J. P. Hipps, Rev. W. L. Hutchins, Frank A. Stith, Rev. R. A. Smith, Rev. John C. Cline.

The Sunday School, O. V. Woosley, instructor—S. A. Matthews, B. B. Crawford, G. C. Graham, T. S. Womble, H. G. Johnson, E. M. Livengood, Rev. A. C. Swafford, Miss Anna Ogburn, Miss Johnnie Hobson, Mrs. G. C. McCulloch.

MOCKSVILLE

It is thirty miles from Mocksville to Winston-Salem, but these thirty miles did not prevent Rev. A. C. Swafford and three other leaders in his church from regularly attending the Winston-Salem Training School in which they did all the work required for credit. This means that the Mocksville delegation traveled sixty miles each night, read their books, prepared their papers and did with credit the work in their classes. This is the longest distance traveled yet recorded in the attendance upon our standard training schools. It is needless to say that our Mocksville people are interested in their church work. A few years ago they greatly enlarged their church plant. They are now planning to further enlarge it. Rev. A. C. Swafford is a fine man and leads a fine band of Methodists.

LEXINGTON-ERLANGER

From fifteen to twenty Sunday school workers from Lexington and Erlanger regularly traversed the twenty-one miles between Lexington and Winston-Salem in their attendance upon the Winston-Salem Training School. Rev. W. L. Hutchins, pastor of First church, and Rev. R. A. Smith, of Erlanger, headed these delegations and not only took credit in the school but were a credit to the school. It is no small thing to get a crowd together, arrange for their travel over such a distance and do the work required for a week's intensive training, but it pays. If you do not think so ask any one of the Lexington-Erlanger delegation.

STANLEY COUNTY

Methodism in Stanley county is being wisely led. It is therefore growing. Particularly is this true of our Sunday school work. Mr. C. A. Reap, superintendent of public instruction in the county, heads our Sunday school work and Rev. C. M. Pickens, pastor of Central, Albemarle, heads the ministers' organization. Each one of the eight Methodist pastors and twenty-four Sunday school superintendents in the county is a loyal supporter of our program. It is therefore very logical that a standard training school has been arranged for such a fine group of folks. Beginning Sunday afternoon, December 2, a county-wide training school for Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school workers will be held in the city high school building of Albemarle in which five courses will be offered as follows:

Primary Organization and Administration—Miss Georgia Keene.

Junior Organization and Administration—Miss Virginia Jenkins.

Intermediate - Senior Organization and Administration—Mrs. J. F. Spruill.

Principles of Teaching—Prof. C. T. Carr.

Sunday School Organization and Administration—Mr. O. V. Woosley.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

Lee Davis, Raleigh, N. C.
Rev. J. F. Armstrong, Concord, N. C.

Western North Carolina Conference

SOUTH POINT EPWORTH LEAGUE

South Point is in the fight,
Only may we work with our might,
Using our strength for God,
Trying to, each day,
Help someone on the way.

Privates we are, in the ranks;
One and all we must work
In doing our duty—let's never shirk.
Now let's go at the task—
Trust in God to the last.

Each one has a part.
Pull together—now let's start;
Work, watch, and pray—
Onward we go on our way.
Preaching out to those in distress,
Turning their hearts to God;
Here let us do our very best.

Let us each day
Every command obey,
Anchor your soul today,
Giving God the right of way.
Useful are we, on every hand,
Epworth Leaguers, a united band.

FOREST HILL LEAGUERS OBSERVE THANKSGIVING

The senior leaguers at Forest Hill, Concord, had an especially fine devotional meeting last night. A big crowd of young people were present and everybody seemed to take unusual interest in the program which was on Thanksgiving. Some excellent talks were made. Our league is doing good work. Franklin Armstrong, Jr., Reporter.

PASTORS OF SHELBY DISTRICT, TAKE NOTICE!

Please announce from your pulpits the importance of your young people attending their district league meetings.

League presidents, don't be negligent about your duties as president of the leagues. Have your league at West End, Gastonia, the 7th or "bust." Be there promptly at 7:30. Altogether for a bigger, better Shelby district. Be one of the crowd.

C. L. Hagar, Pres.

WATCH SHELBY DISTRICT UNION

Below is the program Mr. C. L. Hagar, president, has arranged for the Shelby District Union, which is to be held in West End, Gastonia, on the night of December 7th:

Prayer—Rev. C. M. Campbell.
Scripture Lesson—Rev. C. A. Godfrey.
Song—Hymn No. 256.

Introduction of Speaker—Pres. C. L. Hagar.

Address—"God's Challenge to the Young People," Rev. J. Frank Armstrong, Concord, N. C.

Music—By Providence Leaguers.
Address—"The Holy Land," Chris. P. Leventes, Gastonia.

The Tar Heel Leaguer—Mr. P. L. Plyler, Morganton.

Business session.
League benediction.
Social hour and refreshments.

HERE COMES THE BRIDE!

And she never looked quite so attractive! Her admirers were never quite so enthusiastic in showering their expressions of love and esteem. One seldom sees a larger or more sensible array of wedding presents. (The rolling-pin was proudly and conspicuously placed among scores of other necessities). The church never had been quite so becomingly dressed. The Epworth League colors were used exclusively—a fine advertisement of our great and growing organization.

A dozen preachers, more or less, were there to add their benediction, and along with these Epworthians from Charlotte, Concord, Greensboro, Norwood and other places.

The groom was present, of course, but received scant attention as usual. Immediately the bride and groom left for parts unknown, but after December 1st they will be at home at Morven, N. C., domiciled in a modern nine-room parsonage.

The occasion for the foregoing was the marriage of Miss Grace Bradley, for many (?) years the efficient and popular field secretary of the Epworth League in our conference, and Rev. Samuel H. Gibbs, pastor of the Morven church.

Zion church, of which the bride's father, Rev. J. H. Bradley, is the pastor, was the place. The time was 3 p. m. Thursday last, and the officiating ministers were Rev. A. C. Gibbs, brother of the groom, of Thomasville, and Rev. J. H. Bradley.

A host of young people are earnestly hoping and wishing that "from now on" life for the contracting parties may be one long sweet song!

LIBERTY EPWORTH LEAGUE ORGANIZED

On Sunday afternoon, October 28, 1923, Miss Johnnie Hobson, secretary of the Salisbury district, and three members of the Salisbury-Spencer Epworth League Union, namely, Mr. Geo. Jarvis, president, and Miss Nona L. Bruce, secretary of the Salisbury-Spencer Union, and Mr. Herman Kennerly, president of First church Epworth League, went out to Liberty church, Gold Hill township, Rowan county, in the interest of organizing an Epworth League at Liberty church.

The meeting was opened by singing the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Miss Hobson and Mr. Jarvis made interesting talks on Epworth League work, and what it means to have an Epworth League in the church. Mr. Jarvis also read the constitution and by-laws of the Senior Epworth League, and the duties of the various league officers.

Miss Nona L. Bruce acted as secretary for this meeting.

After it was learned that the young people of Liberty church had already had two meetings in the interest of organizing an Epworth League, and were eager and ready to organize and ready to begin work, officers were elected as follows:

Miss Roxie Cranford, president.
Miss Agatha Cranford, vice president.

Miss Neta Cranford, secretary.
Miss Fannie Frick, corresponding secretary.

Mr. Jehu Gaither, treasurer.
Miss Ruth Gaither, Era agent.

The president is to appoint the departmental superintendents at the next meeting.

Special emphasis was laid on the necessity of the league studying the Handbook carefully, ordering Epworth Eras to carry on the devotional meetings, keep accurate records and send in the monthly and quarterly reports to the secretaries, make out the year's budget for carrying on the league work and for the African Special, use the pledge cards in securing subscriptions to the budget, and secure Epworth League charter.

The hour and dates for the devotional meetings were set for three o'clock on every Sunday afternoon, except the Sunday for the regular preaching service. On this Sunday the preaching service to take the place of the Epworth League service.

At this meeting seventeen charter members were enrolled as follows: Thirteen active members, three honorary members, and one associate member.

The meeting was closed by repeating the League Benediction.

Miss Nora L. Bruce, Sec.,
Salisbury-Spencer E. L. Union.

FALLING CREEK LEAGUE HELPS ORGANIZE AT SMITH'S CHAPEL

Sunday night, November 11th, twenty-six leaguers from Falling Creek Methodist church met at Grantham's store. Twenty piled into a truck, the other six in a car. League songs were sung as the truck approached the church.

Smith Chapel delighted the visiting leaguers by her spirit of co-operation. The crowded house radiated a warm welcome.

Mrs. E. A. Stevens, Jr., president of Falling Creek League, took charge of the meeting. A very interesting program was rendered. After the program the meeting was turned over to the organizing of a league at Smith's Chapel.

Falling Creek is watching her sister league and stands ready to offer any help or encouragement.

LETTER FROM OUR NEW COMMISSIONER—READ AND HEED IT

Dear Epworthians:

Having recently been appointed in connection with the office of treasurer, that of commissioner of missions, I am writing to inform you of our aim for this department for this year.

Missionary education is the outstanding need at the present time. Our missionary program is halting in many places because our people are not properly informed.

While every chapter should have a mission study class we are asking that every chapter have a class in foreign and one in home missions.

This year being Life Service Year in mission study, we suggest the study of the book, The Choice of a Career. Our church is depending on its young people for the furtherance of the gospel throughout the world. Will we fail in so great an hour as this?

Along with our study this year let us not forget that our slogan is: "A Pledge From Every Chapter; A Pledge From Every Member." There is no better way to make this possible than by the observance personally of the Christian Stewardship Covenant.

If your chapter has not already made a pledge to the African Special do so at once and forward name of your treasurer, and amount of your pledge to me. If your chapter has pledged please make payment monthly, as the central office is trying to collect same on that basis.

If at any time I can serve your chapter I will be glad and happy to do so. Thanking you in advance for your co-operation along all missionary activities, and with best wishes for the success of your chapter, I am,

C. Gehrman Cobb.

CONFERENCE JOURNALS FOR GREENSBORO COLLEGE

The response we received to our request for certain numbers of the journals of North Carolina conference encouraged us to again ask for space in our Advocate.

We lack only 1874, 1877, 1878 and 1898 to complete our file from 1872.

We are also anxious to secure the following numbers of the catalogues of Greensboro Female College: 1847, 1848, 1849, 1855, 1856, 1859, 1860, 1861 and 1862.

A recent gift of a catalogue of 1850 makes us hopeful of securing others of the earlier years. We have many prior to the reopening of the college in 1873, and a complete file since that time.

We shall be very grateful for any help we may receive in this effort.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. R. R. Alley, Librarian.

Orders are being filed for Christmas cards. We have a large assortment to select from. If desired we will make selection for you.

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Springs,
Box 4B, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

Of course every Sunday school and organized class that did not take an offering for the Orphanage last Sunday will do so this coming Sunday. We need the money badly. The country Sunday school, the little mission school, as well as the strong city school, are asked to make a real sacrifice for our Methodist Orphanage. This year we are going to demonstrate the fact that our Methodist Orphanage folks are as loyal and generous as the members of other churches and fraternal orders are toward the orphanage of their choice.

* * * *

Because of the change made in the appointments of the pastors, it is very likely some of the churches will miss Thanksgiving services on the Sunday preceding or following Thanksgiving Day. It is the earnest hope of the superintendent that every pastor will give all congregations an opportunity to make a free will offering to our fatherless children. On circuits it will take four Sundays to get to all the churches, but all ought to have the privilege of making a thank offering. Let every preacher and church be a solid unit in securing a contribution for our two hundred and fifty children!

* * * *

By a unanimous vote the North Carolina conference decided to take the ten per cent assessment out of the general budget and put it into the hands of the pastors. In other words, we have a ten per cent assessment on the charges just the same as we have had for many years, but it is to be kept separate and distinct from the conference budget. The new plan gives the pastors the right to collect the orphanage assessment, which is an amount equal to ten per cent on the assessment for the salary for the past year, and send it direct to the superintendent. I trust that all the pastors, churches and presiding elders will bear these facts in mind.

* * * *

The conference by unanimous vote asks that every church and Sunday school in the North Carolina conference take a collection as a Special for the Methodist Orphanage. Brethren, we need just such an offering. Notwithstanding the fact that the Orphanage assessment does not pay one-half of our current expenses, I have earnestly urged that the Orphanage assessment should not be increased during the past nine years. I believe our pastors and Sunday schools appreciate my position in the matter of not asking a raise in the orphanage assessment. I have faith in my brethren to the extent that I am perfectly willing to trust the whole matter in their hands. They are going to make up the difference by sending specials during Thanksgiving season and all through the conference year. In this faith I confidently leave the whole matter on the great heart of North Carolina Methodism, and the friends of our cause will not fall our orphanage children.

This is Thanksgiving Week.—To the Methodist Orphanage it is the most important week in the entire year. I am earnestly hoping and praying that every Methodist in our conference will make a liberal offering for the benefit of our two hundred and fifty children. Of course the preachers will give every congregation an opportunity to make a special Thanksgiving offering to the cause that lies so close to the heart of our Lord. In the very nature of the case all cannot be present at these services. But the mail can be used and a check or money order can come right into my office from the many individuals who will not have an opportunity to contribute at church services. Let me insist and beg if you please, that every church in town and country do its very best for us this year when our work is expanding and growing so rapidly! Gratitude to God should prompt us to make a contribution that represents to the depth of our appreciation of these manifold mercies. To do less is to prove our unworthiness of His gracious powers.

Elizabeth City.—The magnificent First church, recently completed, was the subject of praise from all the preachers and delegates in attendance upon the session of the North Carolina conference. Never before has it been possible to furnish meeting places for all the boards and committees in the churches in which the conference met. Brother J. M. Ormond deserves the highest commendation for the wisdom in the plans selected. The noble women of Elizabeth City went to the limit in their efforts to prepare good meals. Everything was wonderfully organized to meet the demands of the occasion. The whole conference was royally and bountifully entertained by Elizabeth City Methodism. Brother Wilson and his assistants anticipated our every need, and things ran like clock-work. Possibly the thing that impressed me most was the fine service the Boy Scouts rendered the conference. By their courtesy and efficient service they won the admiration of the entire conference.

I had the rare pleasure and privilege of being the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Derrickson. Their gracious hospitality and fine fellowship was thoroughly enjoyed by Prof. F. S. Aldridge and the writer. I shall always cherish the memory of the nineteen hundred and twenty-three conference. Whenever Elizabeth City invites the conference I shall count it a great joy to vote to go there.

MOVIES IN THE DAY'S HEADLINES

The suggestion that the motion picture industry needs considerable attention from insiders or outsiders is not fanaticism. Here are some typical headlines from daily papers:

- "Boy admits taking pay checks, emulated movies."
  - "Auburn court to try 15 boys. Movies got them into trouble."
  - "Boy seized for theft. Says he tried to imitate motion picture burglar."
  - "Girl victim of film bug, says police."
  - "Children are movie-mad, Chicago investigators say."
  - "Boys chloroform woman in film stuff burglary."
  - "Boy held for wrecking train. Says he copied movie scene."
  - "Children throw switch to see real train wreck."
  - "Victim of hoy movie imitator found dying."
  - "Three young girls missing, believed bound for Los Angeles to become movie stars."
  - "Boy shot playing movies."
  - "Boy shot coasters; blames movies."
  - "Boy hanged while playing movies."
- There are many other such headlines indicating the necessity for reform of the screen.—The Voice.

"THE SECRET OF HAPPINESS"

By C. L. Barhger.

What is happiness? It is a rejoicing of the heart; it is a consciousness of being in harmony with nature; it is an overflowing appreciation for things gained or received; it is something that is thrilling and appealing; it is man's strongest and greatest desire; it causes men to seek and to find truth; it prompts men to serve, because of the remembrance of the joy gained through service; it is an experience that only those experiencing it know the greatness of its joy.

But there is another desire that must accompany this one if our happiness is to be lasting—the desire for "perfection." We all have this desire to some extent. This is seen when men get angry because they are sometimes required to repeat their efforts on account of their not measuring up to their expectations, or what they should.

What is the cause of that torture of uneasiness, or discomfort, of dissatisfaction and disappointment? Is it not a consciousness of fault or failure. It is due to not measuring up to conditions; it may be due to a misunderstanding, or by trying to substitute unreal for real, by trying to shun justice.

We can never be satisfied as long as there is anything amiss. We love beauty, that perfect form of expression. We admire strength. We seek harmonious conditions. We may never reach the highest order of perfection. The individual is nearest perfect that corrects the most mistakes. If we do the best possible for us to do under the present conditions, in a sense we are perfect, and again when we have grown from under present conditions, there are other opportunities for development, and still others.

Our happiness is determined by our choice. We choose between conflicting desires in the light of our own knowledge. There is always one thing greater or higher than another, everything is measured by degrees. The one purpose that concerns you most, the ideal that appeals the strongest to you, should be the ruler of your desires. Other things should be forsaken and sacrificed, or employed in a use that will enable you to make your foremost ambition a reality.

There are a vast number of things to choose from. By our experiences we learn that some things are not worth the price. Sound judgment should be used, by seeking the things that are most profitable and most suitable for our needs. Not only is it necessary to be careful in the choosing of objects, but the method used to obtain those objects, and the purpose for which they are used, are to a measure responsible for our happiness. Happy is the man that knows how to appreciate and consider the real value of things.

None desire to be cheated. We become wise by comparing results and gains, by comparing our lot with others. Preference is only the first step.

It is by qualifying that we enjoy the possession of high things. Truth should be considered among the first things of our choice, because it is one of the most important things in life.

We must know how to do the things that we undertake to do, and what is best for us to have. We should know how to appreciate the things that were created for our happiness.

Finally, what is happiness? It is a recompense for all trials that are won, and all the toils that are given for the cause of God and humanity.

BIBLE SUNDAY

December 9th

THEME

THE BIBLE

PURPOSE

The earthquake in Japan has made large areas of the Far East practically Bibleless. Thousands of Bible printing plates in 25 languages and dialects used in Yokohama have been totally destroyed. They must be replaced at once or the whole missionary program will be seriously handicapped.

NEED

The American Bible Society needs immediately $289,000 with which to make good the actual losses, to say nothing of the enlarged opportunities.

RESPONSIBILITY

is definitely upon the churches of America, whose agency for Bible work in the Far East is the American Bible Society.

OPPORTUNITY

is one of unusual significance and every Pastor, Sunday School Superintendent and Young People's leader should utilize Bible Sunday on December 9th (or nearest convenient date) for the promotion of interest in the distribution of the Scriptures in Japan and the Far East.

THE PINKS AND THE THRILLS OF MOBILIZATION

Comparatively few people know just how big is the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In the homeland alone since August, 1923, I have traveled approximately 20,000 miles in visiting seventeen annual conferences. I have yet to travel nearly 10,000 miles more in visiting ten additional annual conferences. This states nothing concerning the miles traveled by those associated with me in helping to present the cause of the "forgotten man" to the home annual conferences. Nor does it state anything about the miles covered by five of our bishops who have belted the globe to reach our eighteen foreign annual conferences and mission conferences, where they set in motion the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment. If anyone thinks this is an easy or simple task, anyone needs to do a little figuring on the subject.

Mr. Preacher-Man, Lend Me Your Ears.—Perhaps I should request the loan of your trousers instead, as mine are worn nearly threadbare from constant slipping and sliding on railway train seats of every character, the result of constant going hither and thither throughout the church seeking to provide an old-age support for you when you shall have been superannuated. But, notwithstanding, it is your ear I want. Listen, "just between us and strictly confidential," etc., have you effected the organization for the superannuate movement at your first quarterly conference as called for in the "Workers' Guide"? And if so, why have you failed to send the pink leaf report to the oBard of Finance telling about it? Don't you think you owe it to those who are working night and day to provide for you when you cannot provide for yourself to do this service which has been so earnestly requested of you? How can you be careless and indifferent in this matter which is so vital to the success of this sacred cause? It seems to me that the pink tint of every flower or sky line or my lady's dress and cheek should condemn you as unfaithful until that pink leaf report from your charge is safely in the hands of the Board of Finance. Come on, boys, the game is on! Hold the line! Carry the ball! We must make a touchdown! Send in your pink leaf report!

East Oklahoma Conference.—A night and half a day traveling from St. Louis brought me to a small town railway junction in Oklahoma. There I waited for three hours to get a train which landed me at Shawnee late Wednesday afternoon. On Thursday morning I explained the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment to the brethren of the East Oklahoma conference. They heard me gladly and voted unanimously to do for the movement all that was asked of them. I have not visited any other conference that received the details of the plan with greater enthusiasm or more determination to do the work.

The Oklahoma boys have had a hard year. Poor crop conditions, floods, the slump in oil prices, and some other things have made the work exceedingly difficult. However, this wonderful state has a powerful comeback. The people there are not the kind who whine and give up. They have the real fighting spirit, and they recover quickly from every unpromising situation. Many preachers assured me that the superannuate cause would win in that conference, notwithstanding the present depression in financial affairs. Whatever happens, I know those loyal men will make a real effort.

Dr. C. C. Selecman delivered the inspirational address, and it was splendid. As I sat there listening to his eloquent words my mind went back to our days together at college when he won every speaking contest in which he engaged. The superannuates are fortunate in having Dr. Selecman addressing some of the conferences in their behalf. About three years ago he subscribed to superannuate endowment as much as he subscribed to the Centenary, and he has already paid four-fifths of his subscription. He has a right to speak on the subject, for he has proved his convictions concerning it in a manner more convincing than words. May his kind grow in number!

Bishop Moore impressed upon the conference the fact that the movement was solely dependent upon the presiding elders and pastors. He said: "If any preacher fails to do his whole duty in the effort to raise the ten million dollars for superannuate endowment, he will not only be ashamed of himself but greatly regret his failure when he becomes dependent on the fund in his old age." I trust that these words will burn their way into the heart of every preacher in the church. Furthermore, it will be terribly humiliating to those preachers who fail to do their best for this cause and then afterwards receive sustenance from a fund which they had no part in creating.

The East Oklahoma was the sixteenth conference I have visited this fall. Some of the brethren asked me how I was able to hold up under the strain of constant traveling and the burden of the office work in addition. I think it is in answer to the earnest prayers of thousands of people all over the church. If it were not for this spiritual tug of friends of the "forgotten man," I should have snapped long before this. And, too, this glorious work lies very near the heart of our dear Lord. He will surely give strength to those who get under a real and strenuous program to provide the ordinary comforts for his worn-out prophets.

North Mississippi Conference.—About thirty-two hours traveling east and south from Shawnee brought me to Greenville, Miss., the heart of the great Delta. There the North Mississippi conference was busily engaged on Saturday morning. Hardly had I appeared when Bishop Ainsworth called me to the pulpit and very soon thereafter announced the order of the day—that is, the presentation of the plan for superannuate support. A member of the conference told me that he believed practically every preacher was present when I for the seventeenth time explained the details of the movement proposed. The attention was perfect, the interest intense, and the approval enthusiastic.

For the first time it was a layman who delivered the inspirational address—Mr. G. L. Morelock, Secretary of the Board of Lay Activities. He did splendid work, and without exception the preachers and others present were greatly stirred by his words. Evidently he convicted himself by his own speech, for he gave me a check for $50 as a first payment on the amount he expects to contribute to superannuate endowment. I have been much with this new secretary this fall and do not hesitate to state that he is a prince. The church picked a live one when he was chosen for his present task. He will lead the laymen to do a notable work for superannuate endowment.

Bishop Ainsworth exhorted the conference to support the movement faithfully. I started to ask him if he had arranged to take care of certain matters committed to his care by the Board of Finance, but I stopped quickly when he assured me that everything was being cared for. What a friend he is of this great cause, always alert and eager to do his utmost to get it ahead! He is a charter member of the Board of Finance, and his abandon to the work has been from the beginning until now a real inspiration to me. The "forgotten man" has no better friend than Bishop Ainsworth. The Lord bless him.

I spent an hour with the conference Board of Finance and was delighted to find that they were so diligent in their work. Such men as these in the annual conference are a valuable asset to the work we are now projecting. They are wide-awake and eager to go. It is not necessary to persuade them to be watchful for opportunities to assist the cause, for they are constantly seeking something to do that will help. They assured me out of much warmth of feeling that they could be depended upon to do everything in their power.

This is Saturday night, and I am speeding homeward. The week's work has been satisfactory. I am happy in the faith that my beloved church really is about to remember her "forgotten man." And the North Mississippi conference will do her whole share in that process of remembering. This was one of the first conferences to receive me and my cause into wide-open arms, and she will be the last to disappoint any confidence that she inspires. Come on, North Mississippians! The band is playing! Orders have come to go forward! And I cannot find in history where you failed to respond to any worthy call. Come on; it is your turn to fall in line. Soon the great army of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will press forward in solid phalanx, not to take another's flag, but to remove a stain of reproach from her own. Move over, boys, make room for the colors of grand old North Mississippi!

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

GREENSBORO

At the present writing the fourth annual Standard Training School for Greensboro and surrounding territory is being held. Like others it is a decided success. Our Greensboro pastors and Sunday school superintendents are not only standing for the school but they are doing work in the school. It is thought that quite a number will do their work sufficiently well to receive their certificates of credit.

MARION DISTRICT

After leaving Tuesday night's session of our Greensboro school I drove to Lexington, where four hours' sleep were obtained, and then caught an early train for Marion to attend the district set-up meeting as directed by Presiding Elder Paris. He had a very good meeting. The morning session was largely devoted to the work of the district stewards' and pastors' meeting. In the afternoon the various interests of the church were emphasized through their organizations. District Superintendent Joe Kjellander presided over the Sunday school hour and in response to his invitation quite a representative delegation of Sunday school workers from the district were present. It was agreed that a charge-wide Sunday school institute would be held during the year on every circuit in the district. It was also decided that two standard training schools would be held during the year, one for Rutherford county and the other at either Marion or Morganton for as much of that part of the district as can be reached. The Marion district is making progress in a good direction.

MY TEMPER

I have a little temper,
 'Tis like my pony gray,
 Unless I watch it closely
 It tries to get away,
 And rears and kicks and tramples
 On all who near it stand;
 And so I try to curb it,
 And hold it well in hand.
 No use to me a snaffle;
 I keep a tight curb rein,
 And speak to it quite gently—
 Yet sometimes all in vain.
 —Northwestern Christian Advocate.

MY LITTLE PRAYER

There is one little prayer I say
 Over and over, every day;
 So small it is, yet whispered low,
 Love's listening ear will hear, I know.
 And so I pray, "Lord, may my eyes
 See, in each day, some glad surprise;
 May I forget my griefs and lend
 A daily sunshine to each friend.
 When troubles, as deep shadows, fall,
 Let me, in quietude, recall
 The pleasant things that, nothing less,
 I count ventures in happiness;
 And, with thy gentle peace, erase
 The happenings that hide thy face."
 Lo, even as my prayer is sent,
 The answer comes in sweet content.
 —Alice Wilson Oldroyd.

THE JOKE SCARECROW

Ray Coon's mother was making apple sauce, and Ray Coon was standing by watching her as she worked, for he liked to eat apple sauce every morning for breakfast.

"Ray," said his mother "please go over to that tree by the stone wall where the reddest apples grow and bring me some more apples."

Ray Coon picked up his basket and started off to the tree where the reddest apples grew. He hummed a merry tune as he walked along, for he felt happy; but when he came to the tree, he saw that almost all the apples on the side near the stone wall were gone.

"Somebody must have stolen those apples," said Ray to himself, "and it was somebody that could not climb a tree. I guess I had better let Policeman Dog know about this."

There were a great many apples left on the other side of the tree, and so it did not take Ray long to fill his basket. But before he went to find Policeman Dog he thought that he would make a scarecrow and put it up near the wall. Now, Ray did not know exactly how to make a scarecrow, but he set to work, and after a while he had something that he thought would do. He set it up in plain sight from the wall and then went to look for Policeman Dog. He did not have to go far.

"Hello, Ray Coon!" said Policeman Dog gayly. But when he saw the troubled look on Ray's face, he added: "What's the matter?"

"There's a thief that's been stealing apples off that tree by the stone wall," said Ray. "I put up a scarecrow to keep him off, but I thought I had better notify you, sir."

"That was right," said Policeman Dog. "I'll watch out for him."

Every day after that Ray Coon went to the apple tree to see whether the thief had been back and to get an apple or two besides, for that tree had the reddest apples on it, and Ray was very fond of sweet red apples. For the first two or three days he saw no trace of the thief, and he began to think that his scarecrow must really be a pretty good one; but on the fourth day he discovered that some more apples had been stolen.

He went in search of Policeman Dog and told him what had happened. "I guess he isn't afraid of my scarecrow any longer," said Ray.

Policeman Dog thought for a great while, and then he said: "I'll tell you what, Ray Coon. I'll dress up in the scarecrow's clothes and hide by the tree tonight. When the thief comes, he will think that I am just the scarecrow and will come straight ahead. Then I can catch him."

Ray Coon grinned and winked at Policeman Dog and thought that the plan was a fine one.

That night they met at the corner of the fence and walked along together until they came to the apple tree. Policeman Dog got into the scarecrow's clothes and tried to look as much like a scarecrow as possible. Ray Coon hid behind a barberry bush, where he was out of sight but where he could see everything that went on.

Before they had waited very long they heard footsteps. Neither Ray nor Policeman Dog made a sound.

By and by a red head appeared above the top of the stone wall. From his hiding place behind the barberry bush Ray Coon saw that it was Rusty Fox, but he didn't make a sound. Policeman Dog didn't move.

"That old scarecrow is certainly a good joke," said Rusty Fox, and he sat down on the wall and laughed heartily to himself as if he thought that the joke was very funny.

Policeman Dog did not move at all. High above Rusty's head hung a large red apple. It was the largest and reddest apple that Rusty thought he had ever seen. But he had to reach high to get it. Still chuckling to himself over what he thought was very funny, he held it in his hand and looked at it. "That must be the largest and reddest apple on the tree. I guess Ray Coon would enjoy that," he said to himself and laughed again.

"I guess he will," said Policeman Dog, and just then he grabbed the thief and held him fast. "Ray," he said, "Rusty has an apple here that he thinks you would enjoy. It was the largest and reddest apple on the tree."

Ray Coon came out from behind the barberry bush and strolled up to where Rusty Fox and Policeman Dog were.

"That is very kind of you, Rusty," said Ray; "but you worked so hard for it that I think you ought to keep it. Besides," he added in an offhand manner, "I have almost a whole treeful left. Some one has been stealing them, but I don't believe that he will trouble me any more."

Rusty Fox jumped down from the wall and slunk away through the bushes.

Ray Coon looked at Policeman Dog and grinned. "I'm glad Rusty thought that scarecrow was such a good joke," he said.—G. H. Smith, in Youth's Companion.

An eminent Scottish preacher was trying to explain to an old lady the meaning of the Scriptural expression, "Take up thy bed and walk." He informed her that the bed was simply a mat or rug easily taken up and carried away.

"Na, na," was her reply; "I canna believe that. The bed was a regular four-poster. There would be no miracle in walking away wif a bit o' mat or rug on your back."—Presbyterian Witness.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $13,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

Health and good looks

—the reward of internal cleanliness

HEALTH and good looks go hand in hand. If you do not keep clean internally, your looks and health are undermined together. A clogged intestine breeds poisons that reach every part of the body. These poisons ruin the complexion and undermine health. Constipation brings on such ailments as headaches, bilious attacks, and insomnia—each of which saps your health and vitality. Soon much more serious conditions follow.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life

Good Looks Throughout Life If You Keep Clean Internally

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Cleanliness Demands More Than Bathing

Not a Medicine

Nujol is not a laxative and cannot gripe. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

Don't give disease a start. Adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water it is harmless. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

"GOD NOT THE AUTHOR OF SIN"

The above headline attracted my attention as I looked over the Christian Advocate of November 1st this morning. The article that followed was written by Mr. D. L. Earnhardt, and was a protest of a statement by "Bro. Harry Daniels that God created sin." I wish to emphasize the protest made by Brother Earnhardt against the outrageous statement that "God created sin." Is it not time that such statements should receive the most severe rebuke?

The devil is wily and cunning and knows when and where to make his attacks. He is the enemy of all righteousness, and his effort is to destroy all good wherever found.

The answer to Brother Daniels' statement that "God is the author of sin" is easy, and is found in the following statement:

God's account of the creation as given by Moses and found in the book of Genesis declares that God created and made all things that were created and made, and God saw that it was very good. He finished His work on the sixth day, and man was the climax of His creation. "In the image of God created He them." Pure and holy created He them without sin. To charge God as the author of sin is a slander of the wicked one.

God is righteous, and in Him is the law of righteousness. It is impossible for Infinity to err. Sin is not a thing that was created and made, as Satan would have us believe. It has no place of existence as a thing that was made. Sin is transgression, a violation of law. The devil was the first sinner, and so charged himself with the task of destroying the race, whom God made in His own image. Sin was committed, not made. Mankind was deceived by Satan and led into disobedience and violation of God's law, and thus he lost the image of God and became a sinner through the instrumentality of Satan.

Thank God there is hope for the sinner. There is provision made in the gospel of Christ for sinners, whereby they may be saved from sin. If the sinner will but surrender himself to God, God will surrender to him; then there will be a blessed union—a fellowship and communion as he walks with God in love. Life is then made glorious, for His yoke is easy and His burden is light.

MISSIONARY GEMS

Right giving is a part of right living. The living is not right when the giving is wrong.

Make the best of the gifts and the work put before you, and to God—without fear leave the rest.

Lord, send we where thou wilt, only go with me, lay on me what thou wilt, only sustain me.

A campaign for liberal, scriptural, systematic and proportionate giving. To my thinking, none follow more is the need of all need in our churches. closely in the Master's footprints than the medical missionary.

Through love to light. Oh, wonderful way that leads from darkness to the perfect day.

Unless Jesus Christ is Lord of all He is not Lord at all.

No interest in missions? The only explanation is either inexcusable ignorance or willful disobedience.

This is a lost world to be saved, and not simply an ignorant world to be educated.

The day of formal praying and petty giving is over, and the day of big things has come.

Only consistent giving keeps the soul from shrinking.

The man who does not believe in foreign missions had better burn up his New Testament, for it is a record of foreign missions.

The work of missions is the biggest, the most far-reaching, the most divine task that confronts the twentieth century man.

The best remedy for a sick church is to put it on missionary diet.

Anywhere, any time, anything for the Son of God, and the sons of men.

Our missionaries are soldiers of the Cross who have turned away from the money-making business of life to fight the battles of the kingdom.

God will not look you over for medals, degrees and diplomas, but for scars.

Doing nothing for others is the undoing of yourself.

Beautiful feet are those that go on kindly ministries, to and fro.

There is no near and no far, but just one round world of perishing souls to be rescued and saved through the world's Christ.

With God go over the seas, without Him not over the threshold.

There can be loving church without a glowing love for missions. Oh, the bliss of being trusted on the errands of the King. Where the darkness is the darkest, there is the loudest call for the church of Christ to do and to dare.

Said a converted Indian: "You do not know what it is to stand in the dark and reach out your hand and take hold of nothing."

Fill my hand with service blest, fill my heart with holy rest.

You may work without praying, but you cannot pray without working.—Selected.

NOT A HOODED RAID IN THE TOWN OF NEWTON

One of the most dastardly deeds, in the way of a pounding, was administered to the pastor of the First Methodist church in Newton on Friday night, November 2nd, that was ever heard of in these parts. In fact, it looked more like a Ku Klux raid on the pastor and his family than anything else, except that none of the party had on their white hoods or masks, nor were they armed with the kind of weapons that the klansmen are usually armed with. According to previous arrangements of only a day or two before, about 150 of the members of the church met at the church at 7:30 o'clock and marched in a body down to the parsonage with arms full, hands full, boxes and baskets full, and paper bags of all sizes, full to running over, of all kinds of good things to eat, and unloaded themselves of their burdens in the dining room, kitchen and pantry until there was scarcely standing room anywhere, and until the spacious dining room table fairly groaned beneath its heavy burden. When all had arrived and placed their packages and bundles wherever they could find any room, Prof. L. M. Epps, superintendent of the Newton high school, in his characteristic manner, in a few well chosen and appropriate words, presented the gifts to the pastor, who in turn responded in a brief, but most solemn and affectionate manner, after which he called the donors to prayer and offered up to the Great Giver of every good and perfect gift a very solemn, appropriate and affectionate prayer. Then after a few minutes of social enjoyment by a hearty exchange of greetings and of warm and loyal handshakes the friends all left for their respective places of abode, leaving our pastor and his good wife and children to handle the situation as best they could, and I think from the way he preached on the following Sunday it must have been a great blessing and inspiration to him.

THE COKESBURY HYMNAL

"A SONGBOOK FOR EVERY OCCASION"

Hymns for the Church	Songs for the Sunday School	Songs for the Revival
---------------------------------	--	----------------------------------

The Cokesbury Hymnal is a songbook for every occasion and for every possible use—for the regular Church service where a HYMNAL cannot be afforded, for the Sunday school in churches of all sizes, and for the revival services as well.

The Cokesbury Hymnal brings back the old hymns and tunes that our fathers and mothers used to sing. Songs that thrill the heart and inspire the soul with the intense love of divine worship. They are the hymns and songs that the people love to sing, because they come from the deepest recesses of the heart and because the heart and mind and soul respond to them in a glorious rhythm of worshipful praise.

Preachers, song leaders, and Christian workers from everywhere made the selections comprising the Cokesbury Hymnal. The publishers asked them to select only those hymns that are nearest to the hearts of the great mass of Christian people. On nearly every list submitted the old familiar songs were predominant! They represent the most treasured numbers from the very best books of the foremost song publishers of the world.

Special Chorus Arrangements

Professor Harold Hart Todd, Professor of Harmony and Piano in Southern Methodist University, has contributed special chorus arrangements for eleven of the most popular choral numbers, a feature that cannot be found anywhere in a songbook of this price.

Responsive Readings

Not satisfied with publishing a remarkable songbook, the publishers have included a selected group of responsive readings. The readings are taken from both the Old and New Testaments, many chosen for use on special occasions, while all are appropriate for regular use in the weekly Church service.

Three Indexes

The Cokesbury Hymnal is equipped with three complete indexes so that any one song or list of songs for a special purpose may be easily found. There are over fifty different subject headings, with from one to forty-three different songs listed under each. Only its actual use in your own Church can demonstrate in a better way that it is a songbook for all occasions.

Orchestrated Edition

Of supreme importance to the members of the choir and orchestra is the orchestrated edition. The publishers of the Cokesbury Hymnal have had every song in the book set to music for fourteen different instruments—bound in separate volumes, one for each instrument. These books will be available January 1, 1924. Information as to prices, etc., will be furnished on request.

IN MEMORIAM

HORREN — Hannah Horren was born in Woolwich, Kent, England, December 25, 1823. Came to this country with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Thos. Stradley, when five years old. Lived near Asheville until she died, October 13, 1923, lacking two months and 12 days of being 100 years old. Married Jas. Madison Horren in 1844. Mother of 12 children, eight of whom with several grandchildren survive. Professed religion at 18, joined the Baptist church, later reconsecrated at the old Reems Creek camp meeting and joined the Methodist church with her husband. Was a consistent member of Mt. Pleasant Methodist church when she died. J. M. Folger.

HATCH—Annie Elizabeth Hatch was born near Warsaw, Duplin county, on December 23, 1933; died in Mt. Olive, N. C., October 8, 1922; so was 88 years nine months and 15 days old. She was married to Joseph R. Hatch. To this union were born twelve children. Six of these and 26 grandchildren survive to mourn this saintly, consecrated mother.

She joined the Methodist church when a child, and remained a consistent and loyal member until God called her. For more than the proverbial four score years she had been noted for her natural strength, admired for her strong character and loved for her kindness and Christian graces. She kept the faith and fought a good fight. Her departure was sudden and unexpected, but she was ready.

One Who Loved Her.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Again the death angel has entered our ranks and removed from our midst Bro. John Winborne, one of the oldest and most loyal members of Harrellsville Methodist church. He was faithful to his church as long as his health permitted, and during his last illness bore up with great patience, forgetting the trials of this life as he looked forward to that glorious life in the great beyond.

Mr. Winborne died September 19, 1923, and in his death we, the Ladies' Aid Society of Harrellsville M. E. church, have lost a friend; therefore be it resolved:

First, That his place is vacant, but his influence liveth.

Second, That we extend to his devoted family our tenderest sympathy and pray they may feel the precious comfort of our heavenly Father's love.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread upon our minutes and a copy sent to the Christian Advocate for publication.

Mrs. Roxie Jones,
Mrs. Myrtle F. Gillam,
Mrs. Nell N. Powell,
Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, it has pleased our heavenly Father to call to rest Mrs. R. D. Ross, the beloved president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Wadesboro Methodist church; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we endeavor to bow in humble submission to the divine will of Him who doeth all things well, and search for comfort in His precious Word.

Second, That on account of the death of Mrs. Ross we will sadly miss her wise counsel and her lovely way of scattering sunshine. That she leaves with us the influence of a life that will continue to live among us as a star ever beaming in our society, beckoning us to nobler deeds and loving kindness to all mankind.

Third, That we extend to her bereaved family our sympathy and condolence. In this trial may God give them peace, perfect peace.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the society, a copy sent to her bereaved family, a copy sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, and a copy sent to Wadesboro Messenger and Intelligencer for publication.

Mrs. J. W. Massemore,
Mrs. W. K. Boggan,
Mrs. J. O. A. Craig,
Committee.

YANDELL—On August 10, 1923, Mrs. Sarah Yandell, of Charlotte, N. C., at the ripe old age of 99 years, one month and twelve days, passed to her reward in the beautiful home of the soul. She was the daughter of William and Elizabeth Yandell and was married to M. M. Yandell March 5, 1857. Eight children were born to them. One died in infancy. The others are: Mrs. M. E. Wentz, E. L. Yandell, E. F. Yandell and Miss S. E. Yandell of Charlotte, N. C., and W. C. Yandell, A. F. Yandell and Mrs. F. C. Crump of Pineville, N. C., who survive. She has 19 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren. Her husband died April 26, 1910.

She was a loyal and faithful member of the Methodist church from early life and a noble Christian woman. Her children loved her dearly and did all in their power to keep her with them just as long as they could. I do not think any mother was ever better treated than she.

She was buried in Pineville cemetery to await the great resurrection morning. She had a great host of admiring friends. We all loved her. May heaven's richest blessings rest graciously upon all the bereaved ones.

T. J. Houck, Pastor.

KITRELL—The subject of this sketch, Mrs. Tempe Kittrell, daughter of Rev. Horace A. Burton and Margaret D. Williams, a Baptist minister, was born February 8, 1938, and died July 12, 1923. In November, 1877, she was married to I. W. Kittrell, who died about fifteen years ago.

Sister Kittrell professed religion when about 15 years of age and joined Rock Spring M. E. church, of which she remained a member until she moved to Henderson. Then she cast her lot with Salem, and after marriage she joined Herman, where she was a faithful and loyal member till death called her to her eternal reward. There were many fine qualities possessed by Mrs. Kittrell, such as cheerfulness, kindness, patience, endurance, good works, a true faithful wife, an affectionate sister, a zealous member of the church and a devoted Christian who loved to worship God and sing praises unto Him who loves us. Mrs. Kittrell was one of eight children and leaves two sisters, Mrs. Octavia Smerdon and Mrs. M. Burton Estes to mourn her going, but who feel confident of seeing her again where there shall be no more parting. May God give grace and comfort unto these dear ladies and make their latter days bright and happy.

B. H. Black.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, the death angel has again entered our ranks and removed from our circle our friend and co-worker, Mrs. E. H. DeGrotte, we, the ladies of the North Reidsville Missionary Society, resolve:

First, That in the death of Mrs. DeGrotte our society lost a faithful and willing worker, always in a quiet way doing what she could.

Second, That as a charter member of our society and superintendent of supplies, ever faithful and cheerful in discharging her duty, her absence is keenly felt by our society and the community in which she lived, and while we cherish her memory we bow in humble submission to our Father's will, knowing that some day we will understand.

Third, That we extend to the bereaved ones our love and sympathy and trust that her example will lead them on to that bright shore where they will meet to part no more.

Fourth, That we pray that her bereaved husband and children may feel the comfort of our heavenly Father's love.

Fifth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Christian Advocate, to the Reidsville Review and a copy be filed on the records of our society.

Mrs. R. W. Hutcherson,
Mrs. F. B. Jones,
Mrs. Babell Wacis,
Committee.

FARMER—Mrs. Mary Malinda Farmer, wife of Mont W. Farmer, of R. F. D. 5, Marshall, N. C., was born in Buncombe county, N. C., March 5, 1847. Her maiden name was Mary M. Rogers. She with her parents and others of the family migrated to and settled on a place near the head of Little Pine Creek. At this place she was living at the time of her marriage to M. W. Farmer, December 1, 1870. Shortly thereafter she and her husband went into the Pawpaw section and located on a place, where they have since resided until the time of her death, October 16, 1923, nearly 53 years in all. This couple, respectively, are of two of the old and respected families of the western part of the state.

It is said of Mrs. Farmer by those who knew her best that she was a good wife and mother, a helpful and agreeable neighbor and a devout Christian. She made a profession of faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Episcopal church at Marshall, N. C., on August 12, 1894. She lived a consistent member of that church until her death.

Having been in poor health for the past two years, the decline became more rapid during the last two months. She passed away at two o'clock a. m. October 16, 1923, and the following day at 2 p. m. her body was laid to rest in the family graveyard, a small plot of ground on a beautiful ridge just above the old home where she had lived for more than half a century. The floral gifts were in great profusion, completely covering the casket. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. R. H. Morgan and Rev. Jake Martin.

Surviving the deceased are her husband, M. W. Farmer, two sons and six daughters, two brothers and one sister.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Mrs. Fannie Banks Rand, who on October 16, 1923, went home to the mansion prepared.

God breathed a thought of His infinite mind,
And there lived a human soul,
In a temple fair, with impulse divine,
Reaching out to bless, and even enfold
In the wealth of her love all those whom she met,
As along life's pathway—her face toward the goal,
She journeyed, with purpose unswerving.

Her heart to God given, the ripening years found
Her serving God's purpose in making a home—
The bulwark of nations, and haven of rest
To those whom God gave her, daughters and sons,
Then bereft of companion, with unfaltering trust,
She finished the task on earth to her given,
And leaves a rare legacy of work well done,
And children on whom her example has fixed
The resolve of high purpose to meet her in heaven.

The temple so wondrous, in which for a while
Her soul has abided, is still in God's keeping,
As we place it so gently, the husband's beside;
And the soul that seems flown may yet linger near
As ministering angel, to those she held dear,
To guide them where no more will they hear
The voice of sorrow or weeping.

On the judgment day, when rewards are given
For faithful service, in the book of heaven
Will be found recorded, as one who inherits
The crown of life, and the of white,
The name of the mother in Jesus'
merit,
Has guided her own by her own soul's light
And lived a life, midst the earth's dark dross,
And proved the efficiency of Calvary's cross.

EDITORIAL ~ PARAGRAPHS

Said Abraham Lincoln: "Let reverence for the law be breathed by every mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap; let it be taught in schools, seminaries and colleges; let it be written in primers, spelling books and almanacs; let it be preached from pulpits and proclaimed in legislative halls and enforced in courts of justice." This utterance of that Great American should make an urgent appeal just now to all loyal and true American citizens when men in some sections of the country are banding themselves together to enforce the law by breaking the law, as if there were such a thing as enforcing obedience to law by acts of lawlessness. Law enforcement can come only by legal processes.

Cain stands first chronologically among the criminals of the race. Abel stands at the head of that elect company which has been in right relation with God, with man and with their own consciences. They were brothers in the flesh but in nothing else. These early examples teach that character lies deeper than pedigree or early environment. Occupation has little to do with it. Neither was Cain bad because he tilled the soil and Abel good because he herded sheep. For these men being of the same household had the same parentage and the same early environment and the farmer is in all respects equal to the shepherd. Yet these two men are as far apart as the poles. They both observed the forms of worship, but one is a murderer and the other is first in the household of faith. It is all a difference in moral character. In one heart was sin and selfishness, in the other was a desire and determination to treat God right, to treat his fellows right and to be true to himself. As a result Cain became a vagabond in the earth while Abel has been placed among the illustrious of the ages.

Let's begin to put the names of country churches upon those buildings which stand by the roadside so that tourists and others in passing will know that it is a Methodist church and what is its name. Post also the pastor's name as city churches do. There was a time when few people except of the immediate neighbors saw the average country church. But with automobiles and good roads that is no longer true and the people from afar, even from distant states, will be interested in the name and denomination of the church. Put in a well selected place "Shiloh Methodist Church," "Concord Methodist Church," or whatever may be the name. Who will begin this good work? The Advocate will be glad to carry the names of those who lead in the good work. Let presiding elders call attention to it in the quarterly conferences, let pastors agitate the matter, let wide awake laymen, men or women, take up the subject and see that you do this bit of advertising and at the same time make your community of added interest to the traveling public. Let's start this work and other churches will take it up and in a little while the country churches like city churches will have posted both their names and the names of the pastors.

"I do love little dogs! They don't smoke cigarettes; they don't swear; they don't drink booze. I do love little dogs!" So declared Carrie Nation of hatchet fame who figured large on the public stage a little more than a decade ago. This militant apostle of sobriety adopted questionable methods and picturesque speech in her warfare against the evils of the day, but she never failed to get a hearing. Mrs. Nation's old Bible that had served many a night for her pillow in Kansas jails is still in existence and is in the hands of a Methodist preacher who always shows it in his temperance lectures under the auspices of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association.

A few years ago when Dean Charles R. Brown of the Yale Divinity School was booked for a series of addresses at the Trinity College Summer School for preachers, men who should have known better, yet with their deplorably limited knowledge did not, said that Brown was a heretic. Here is one utterance of his; if it be heresy, let's have more hersy. Dr. Brown says: "Of this one thing I am sure, when I ride through the streets of our cities and towns, or when I scan the amusement columns of the daily papers, this amusement-loving age of ours does not seem to be in such sore need of more moving picture shows that the Christian church should go into the moving picture business in order to meet any such alleged need. Six days the movies labor and do their work—the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God. In it, let them rest if they will, that their man servants and their maid servants also may rest; and because the people get enough of the movies during the other six days, let us undertake to give them something better on Sundays."

The American people have gone to talking about the industrial progress of North Carolina. Its good roads, its new and bigger school houses and its constantly increasing wealth have become subjects for the metropolitan dailies to feature upon their front pages. The Rip Van Winkle state is now awake and occupies the center of the stage. And the glare of the footlights pleases this once timid neighbor of Virginia and South Carolina. But with all the state's progress that merits publicity, is the church keeping pace with the state's progress in other aspects? We fear not. Last year the net gain in membership in the North Carolina conference was 2,112 and in the Western North Carolina conference 4,136, which makes a total gain for Methodism in North Carolina of 6,248. That is too small. We should register a gain of 10,000. We doubt whether the present gain is keeping pace with the growth of population in the state. Is the church actually losing ground in North Carolina, as compared with the progress of the state in other respects, becomes a question for us to seriously consider. The comparatively little that we have accomplished combined with the mighty resources at hand and the limitless opportunities about us should urge us to the task with renewed zeal and a deeper consecration.

AN APOSTLE OF SUNSHINE

"Grow old along with me! The best is yet to be." This great utterance of Robert Browning was fulfilled to the letter in the life of Rev. S. M. Davis, who at the age of 76 died in the early morning of December 1, 1923, at the home of his niece, Mrs. Joe Phillips, Caroleen, N. C.

The evening of life with Rev. S. M. Davis, who has given the world an object lesson in how to grow old beautifully, was like the cloudless morning of a perfect day. With this choice Christian spirit there was no eventide with its gathering shadows. All life with him was the morning of a larger and better day. To him it was constantly better further on.

His admiration for Methodism as it was when he became an itinerant preacher fifty-six years ago was limited only by the capacity of his appreciative heart. But he never for a moment harked back to the former times and said that they were better than these. On the contrary, he asserted with all the energy at his command that the present were the greatest days in Methodist history and that tomorrow held in store even greater things. For his bishop, his presiding elder, his pastor and each of his associates he had at all times only words of praise. A complaint never touched his tongue, neither did acid at any time corrode his heart. But the radiance of his optimistic spirit blessed each and all who came in touch with his life.

All this is the more remarkable when one remembers that for almost two decades he had been as some are accustomed to say "laid on the shelf." But you could not lay S. M. Davis on the shelf. His health might become such, as it did, that he could not continue in the active work, yet he continued to watch how goes the battle and to send his messages of cheer to the boys on the field. And his little home at Caroleen which might have become a miserable abode where his crabbed spirit, cribbed and confined, might have rankled and impatiently awaited its release, became in stead "a cottage by the brook." And as the brook which flowed hard by the cottage of Brother Davis went laughing and singing to the sea, so did the spirit of this aged itinerant go laughing and singing on the journey to his eternal home.

Brother Davis was born in the Sharon community of Rutherford county March 4, 1847. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Isley Davis. In 1867 he joined the South Carolina conference, which met that year in Morganton, N. C. His name now stands second from the top in the chronological roll of the Western North Carolina conference. The name of T. F. Glenn, who joined the Holston conference at Marion, Virginia, in 1857, heads the roll.

From his home community comes this report of his last days and of his family connections:

"Although his health had not been of the best for several days death came as a shock to the entire section. The aged minister had been out walking Thursday evening and had retired evidently improved after the evening meal. Relatives with whom he lived found him dead in his bed early in the morning. Physicians summoned said death was a result of heart trouble and probably came in a sudden convulsion. He was never married and with the exception of several nieces has few living relatives. Among the nieces are: Mrs. Joe Phillips of Caroleen; Mrs. Daisy Mitchell and Mrs. Yarborough of South Shelby; Mrs. W. E. Glasgow of Greenville, S. C.; Mrs. James Hendricks of Hendersonville; Mrs. I. T. Cruggs and Mrs. J. M. Lumley of Charlotte."

The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in Sharon Methodist church and were in charge of Rev. Z. Paris, presiding elder of the Marion district, and Rev. J. P. Hornbuckle, pastor of Henrietta-Caroleen station.

Sharon was the home church of Brother Davis and the congregation of 1500 that gathered for the funeral services was an impressive tribute to the life and character of this beloved minister who was a prophet not without honor in his own community.

BISHOP JAMES ATKINS TAKEN ILL AT CONFERENCE

Last week while presiding over the Little Rock conference Bishop James Atkins of Lake Junaluska, N. C., was taken ill on Wednesday, and Bishop H. M. Dubose of San Francisco took over the presidency of the conference. But Bishop Atkins on Sunday night had so recovered from his attack that he read the conference appointments.

Shortly before midnight, however, Monday night the bishop suffered a stroke of paralysis and at the time we go to press Wednesday all hopes of his recovery have been abandoned by his physicians.

Bishop James Atkins.

Mrs. Atkins is with him and his two sons and daughter, Mrs. J. W. Shackford, has been summoned to his bedside in Little Rock, Ark., where he was the guest of Dr. James Thomas, a presiding elder of the Little Rock conference.

Bishop Atkins has been for years a prominent figure in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was elected bishop at the General Conference in Birmingham, Ala., May 1906, and since the last General Conference in 1921 his episcopal district has embraced the state of Arkansas. From 1918-1921 he was bishop in charge of the mission in Belgium, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

From 1896 to 1906 he was the Sunday school editor of the church. When elected to that office he had for four years been president of Emory and Henry College. His presidency of Asheville Female College extended over a period of ten years, 1879-1889. He was for seven years a pastor, having joined the Holston conference in 1872. Bishop Atkins was born in Knoxville, Tenn., April 18, 1850. Was educated at Emory and Henry College, where he received his M. A. degree in 1872.

A GREAT SENSATION IN HIGH POINT

The garage of Rev. E. K. McLarty, pastor of Wesley Memorial church, High Point, was entered in broad daylight, his automobile taken and that High Point pastor is now the victim of complex and indescribable sensations. We let him attempt to tell about it:

"Have you heard of my misfortune on Thanksgiving Day? My garage was entered and my automobile taken in broad daylight. And I have proof positive that some members of Wesley Memorial church are guilty. In fact, I have in my possession some names which I am withholding from the authorities for the present. I may decide not to report them for the reason that they left a brand new Hudson sedan in the place of my old one. You may be sure we had a great Thanksgiving at the parsonage. We are in search of adjectives in the superlative degree to express our appreciation of this splendid gift from our good friends. They tell us that it gave them more pleasure to give it than it gives us to receive it. Of course we believe that just like we believed our mother's telling us youngsters that she would rather take the punishment than to give it. How can we repay these people for what they have done for us? Heaven's choicest blessings upon every one of them."

REV. J. V. WILLIAMS IS DEAD

Rev. J. V. Williams, well and favorably known in eastern North Carolina where he spent a large part of his life, and widely known throughout the church on account of frequent contributions to the North Carolina Christian Advocate and to the Christian Advocate in Nashville, Tenn., died at 11:30 o'clock last Sunday morning in a hospital in Charlotte, where he had been seriously ill since last April. Brother Williams was 71 years of age. He was born in Hyde county, N. C., in 1852.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon, and were conducted by Rev. J. E. Abernethy, pastor of Trinity church, assisted by other ministers of the city. Interment was in Elmwood cemetery.

Brother Williams is survived by two sons, J. Leon Williams of Charlotte and Clyde Williams of Florida. Mrs. M. E. Hubbard, a daughter of his, died last January in Cleveland, Ohio.

Rev. J. V. Williams was an unusually interesting personality—interesting as a conversationalist, interesting in his manner of conducting a religious meeting, interesting as a writer.

It mattered not what subject he touched, it was at once invested with interest. Editors were always glad to get his "copy" because it never failed to be readable and generally was of unusual interest. His gift in this respect was truly remarkable, and it is a gift of a high order.

Brother Williams was a great believer in old time Methodism. The old hymns, and the old practices of the class meeting and the experience meeting were as dear to him as the apple of his eye. He believed in shouting. "The tumult and the shouting" of the saints became heavenly music to his ears. He was never happier than when leading some old hymn that had been in vogue in camp meeting days.

We shall miss him. His many friends in North Carolina and in New York where his life has been given to the Christian ministry will mourn the departure of this good man.

CHARLOTTE OBSERVER'S APPRECIATION OF BROTHER DAVIS

Col. Wade H. Harris has in Sunday morning's Observer the following editorial appreciation of Brother S. M. Davis:

The effort is upon us to speak becomingly of the patriarch who lies dead and is buried today; whose eyes "have seen the King in His beauty and have beheld the land that is very far off." Rev. S. M. Davis, aged Methodist divine, had won the hearts of The Observer readers through his occasional contributions to the paper—contributions that were animated with love for his fellowman and that abounded with the simple truths of the Gospel. Brother Davis had rounded out a career of more than 50 years in the ministry. For 52 years he had never missed a session of the conference, and during the past three years his abiding regret was that failing health had barred him that pleasure and comfort. In his life and death was established a shining example of the power of faith to sustain and to triumph. He believed in the glory of the church and in salvation from sin through God. He gave literal acceptance to the office of Christ as revealed in the Scriptures. He believed his mission was "to preach good tidings unto the meek; to bind up the broken-hearted; to appoint unto those who mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness." The endeavor of his life was to live as a priest of the Lord. He was orthodox, but with that he was not intolerant. He was rather inclined to avoid the controversial, and, like Bishop Rondthaler, to "comfort the people out of their sins."

It was during the past week that Mr. Davis prepared one of his short sermons for The Observer and in this his faith in prayer is eloquently expressed; in this sermon, like all others which he wrote, there is no argument; he relied upon pointed illustration and example. But the end has come for his messages to the people through the paper; he would have us, we know full well, express the hope that some of the seeds he has sown will spring up a blessed harvest in the souls of men.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

The postoffice address of Rev. W. F. Elliott is 405 Alston Avenue, Durham, N. C.

Mrs. Seymour Taylor, wife of our pastor on Concord circuit, has been confined to her bed for several days.

Mrs. R. C. Allison, wife of Brother Allison of Kerr Street, Concord, has been quite indisposed since conference. She is slightly better now.

Rev. and Mrs. Lee A. Falls of Epworth, Concord, were at Greenville, S. C., last week attending the marriage of Mrs. Fall's niece, Miss Mary Baker.

Rev. W. A. Jenkins of Central church, Concord, is happy as he contemplates the beginning of work on the Sunday school annex of his church.

Rev. M. T. Plyler and family will continue for several months to live in Durham. They will continue to occupy the district parsonage and Dr. M. Bradshaw will remain at the Memorial parsonage.

Rev. W. A. Stanbury had a full house at Edenton Street, Raleigh, where he preached his first sermons last Sunday. Rev. Mr. Stanbury has just closed a successful quadrennium at Grace church, Wilmington.

Dr. Jesse Troy Lasley, son of Mr. J. C. Lasley, Reidsville, N. C., has moved to Greensboro and opened his dental offices in the Huntley-Stockton-Hill building. Dr. Lasley will receive a cordial welcome to the "Gate City."

Rev. J. C. Umberger has been the happy recipient of his second pounding since conference. This time from Long Pine church, and he desires through the Advocate to thank every giver of these good things.

Rev. W. W. Peele last Sunday, in beginning his work at Trinity church, Durham, was greeted by capacity congregations both morning and evening in the big Academy of Music, where services are held while the new church is in process of construction.

More than twenty students at Emory University earn all or a large part of their expenses while attending college, according to figures compiled for the current year by the faculty committee on self-help. This committee is the means by which many Emory students obtain employment.

Rev. Ebenezer Myers has taken hold of his work at Westford, Concord, with his accustomed vigor. He has just closed an excellent revival in his church. Brother Myers was too indisposed to preach last Sunday night. His pulpit was filled by Rev. Seymour Taylor of Concord circuit.

Rev. J. Frank Armstrong wrote the admirable appreciation of Rev. Jacob Simpson that appeared on page five of last week's Advocate. Through some mishap his name failed to appear with the article. This we regret and hasten to inform the public as to its authorship.

The board of stewards of Centenary church, Greensboro, gave an informal reception last Friday evening in honor of the return of Rev. R. G. Tuttle and family who is back for another year. The new members of the church were also guests of honor. The evening was delightful in all particulars.

The M. E. Church, South, has an organized form of evangelism. The general evangelists and singers have an annual conference in December. This year this conference meets in Memphis, Tennessee, at the Chisca Hotel, December 19th and 20th. It is usually a very interesting gathering. The evangelists make their reports and outline their work for another year. It is a time when they exchange ideas and suggest plans and programs for the successful carrying out of the evangelistic movements of the church.

Pastors and people of the North Carolina conference should give heed to the following notice from Junius Wren, Treasurer, Siler City: "Allow me to call your attention to the resolution passed at the recent session of the annual conference asking each pastor to take a free will offering during the month of December to be sent to the treasurer of the Board of Finance to be distributed to the superannuates on the basis of the conference appropriation. The need is great and I hope that we can send a nice sum to each of these worthy heroes of the church. Very sincerely, Junius Wren, Treas."

Rev. J. A. Bowles, who for several weeks has been in the Jefferson hospital, Philadelphia, for an operation in his throat, is getting on as good as can be. He is up in his room, reads the papers, and writes letters home. He expects to get home in about two weeks. All this will be a gratifying report to his numerous friends in North Carolina.

The Interdenominational Ministers' Association of Concord is made up of about twenty pastors representing eight denominations. Rev. J. Frank Armstrong, one of our pastors in the city, was recently elected president of this association for the second time during his residence there. Rev. W. A. Jenkins, another Methodist pastor, has been president the past year.

Rev. D. H. Tuttle is in favor of unification. Listen to him: "Methodist unification throughout our nation will strengthen salvation, as preached by the continued itineration of our militant Methodist ministry. Therefore, let us begin to unite right away, even in May, and then very soon, even in June, enjoy the boon so long desired. Read Psalm 133. I thank you."

Rev. G. C. Ervin has been chosen as educational director for West Market Street church, and he began his work last Sunday. Brother Ervin is a son of Rev. J. O. Ervin, pastor at Rutherfordton, a senior at Trinity College and a young man of ability. He will give Saturday and Sunday to the work at West Market until commencement. After he receives his degree next spring his entire time will be devoted to his new work.

"After serving two happy years in one of the best homes in Morganton, and serving some of the best people in and around Morganton, we have been transferred to the McDowell circuit and are comfortably housed in the parsonage at Nebo. The good people here have pounded us and put some new things in the parsonage. We have been kindly received on this work and trust we will have a good year." So writes Rev. John M. Price.

Rev. G. M. Daniel, pastor, writes: "Come to Graham next June and see a beauty spot of nature at the corner of Main and Maple streets. Last Saturday under the direction of the Sunday school superintendent, and Miss Edna Reinhardt, home demonstration agent for Alamance county, a 'planting bee' was held (and more than 200 flowering shrubs, evergreens and roses were brought by young and old, and set out on our church and hut grounds. We are also taking some pride in providing a suitable marker for our church, telling the many strangers who are passing that this is headquarters of Methodism in Graham."

City Roads church, Elizabeth City, last year had a pastor who unfortunately was without a wife. This year that church has another pastor and the Independent, one of the papers of the city, features the arrival of the new pastor by running a cut of the new pastor's wife and also carries the following sketch: "Here then is a photo of the wife of Rev. Daniel Lane who comes to the pastorate of City Road Methodist church of this city, succeeding Rev. H. E. Myers, who goes to Durham this week. Daniel Lane himself comes recommended as a live wire preacher, but they say he is only one of a team of which his wife is the second party. Mrs. Lane is the mother of two small children, but they don't keep her from taking an active part in the social life of the church. Rev. N. H. D. Wilson describes her as "a woman of culture, energy, sweetness and fidelity," who will be found in the fore of all feminine activities in the church."

IMPRESSIVE OCCASION

Recently the work of making Forest Hill Methodist church a most modern one, adding of Sunday school rooms, redecorating of the walls, installation of exquisitely handsome furniture and making anew the entire interior, has been completed. It is so modest in its harmony of colors that one is impressed with a feeling of restfulness and charm and hope.

This congregation is the child of the late and beloved Captain J. M. Odell, who builded it in the midst of the people who aided him in his manufacturing activities. It is recalled that Captain Odell always stood for education and religion. Succeeding him in an inspiring devotion to the maintenance and good health of the congregation is his son, Hon. W. R. Odell, who follows most splendidly in the fine impulses and aspirations of his sainted father; and supplementing his effort is a loyal grandson and son, Mr. A. G. Odell, who is one of Concord's outstanding young business men.

The new church was rededicated some weeks ago, but not until Tuesday evening, last, did the general public have occasion to see the interior of the church. The occasion was an organ recital by Dr. H. A. Shirley, dean of the music department of Salem College, masterfully presiding at the Odell Memorial organ, a substantial and loving gift to the church by Mr. W. R. Odell. The tablet on this instrument, magnificent both in its exterior design and the sweetness and volume of its tone, reads:

Dedicated to the glory of God and in memory of Elizabeth Sergeant Odell
1856—1907

Hundred and hundreds of Concord people, who remember with a distinct pleasure the graceful goodness and the beautiful cordiality of the fine and superior little woman, the late "Miss Lizzie Odell" (as her many admirers lovingly called her), and who filled the spacious auditorium and its wings full on that rare evening, attest the sweetest and choicest memory of the late Mrs. Odell and the high esteem in which Mr. Odell and family are today justly held.

Capable critics pronounce Dr. Shirley a master—the great pipe organ obeyed his wish just like a dutiful child.—The Uplift.

THAT SERIOUS LEAK IN BALTIMORE

Dear Doctor:

The notice you recently published, in regard to pastors and parents notifying the undersigned concerning our people who have moved to Baltimore and our young men and women who are in attendance upon the Johns Hopkins University, other schools and are in training at hospitals, has been productive of considerable fruit. There have been not a few responses, and young men and women, pursuing their studies in this city, have been located and their moral and religious welfare will be looked after. Families have been found that would have drifted from Southern Methodism but for these replies. Thousands of people from the South who have moved to Baltimore have been lost to our church in the past, because the church here has had no means of locating them.

This leak in our Methodism can be stopped if every pastor and parent, who have people or children in Baltimore, will write the undersigned at once, and make a practice of notifying the church when their people move to this city.

Carlton D. Harris, Pastor,
Alpheus W. Wilson Memorial Church,
309 E. Univ. Parkway, Baltimore, Md.

REV. M. D. HIX PASSES

Rev. M. D. Hix, a superannuate of the North Carolina conference, died Monday night at his home in Durham, N. C. He had been in poor health for quite a while and his presiding elder at the annual conference in Elizabeth City reported him feeble in body. The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Brother Hix joined the North Carolina conference at Greensboro in 1889, which was the last session before the division of the conference, and had, therefore, been an itinerant preacher for thirty-four years. He had served a variety of charges and was an effective Methodist preacher. We hope to have at an early day a sketch of his life for publication.

A PROMINENT MANUFACTURER CLAIMED BY DEATH

Mr. T. C. Leak of Rockingham, whose death occurred last Tuesday afternoon at Pinehurst, where he had gone to attend the North Carolina Cotton Manufacturers' Association, removes a prominent and successful manager of cotton mills and a leading citizen of Rockingham, his home city.

He was president of three cotton mills and interested financially in other business enterprises in addition to realty holdings. His cotton farms this year produced over 2,000 bales of cotton.

He was a steward in the Methodist church, a loyal alumnus of the University of North Carolina. This prominent and useful citizen passes at the early age of 51, his death being due to paralysis. The funeral was held in the Methodist church Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock.

A MID-SUMMER CRUISE IN THE MEDITERRANEAN SEA. II

By S. H. C. Burgin, D.D.

A visitor should see the Acropolis under the light of a full moon, if he would enjoy its rare beauty to the fullest. Standing amid its ruins on a wonderful night in July, we could imagine something of its former glory and wonder at the genius which created it.

Another unforgettable experience that same night was a service on Mars Hill, with many people from the ship in attendance, and in which the writer participated.

At the request of Greek friends in Texas, we had a delightful interview with the Metropolitan of the Green Church, now perhaps the most influential ecclesiastic in that communion. We found him a charming gentleman, deeply interested in America, its politics, movements and progress. By courtesy of Dr. Doughty, director of the Near East Relief for America, about one dozen of us were taken by autos thirty-five miles into the country to Crepos to view an orphanage for eleven hundred refugee Greek and Armenian girls, also a boys' orphanage containing seven hundred. What we saw there convinced us of the far-reaching work being done for these homeless children, and of the necessity of the continuance of this noble work for some time to come. At least eighty thousand children are being cared for and trained for future citizenship. America's assistance is greatly appreciated. Greece today is unsettled in a financial and political way. No one knows what will happen next. Wise leadership is apparently lacking and great problems are confronting her. We saw the king and queen, nice young people, who have little to do with the administration of governmental affairs.

Constantinople, wonderful for location and beautiful in its setting, is a place of great attractiveness. While St. Sofia remains in Moslem hands, yet there is consolation in the fact that the Dardanelles is no longer closed, but open to the commerce of the world, thanks to the strong policy of Great Britain.

A collapse of a second story floor in the Near East Relief Orphanage a few miles up the Bosphorus, precipitated about fifty of us to the first floor, injuring thirty people, among them Mrs. Burgin and myself, and Dr. and Mrs. George Stuart. While pinioned among the timbers, fire broke out and only the providence of God saved many from death. So far as I know, all the injured have recovered.

We were in Constantinople soon after the victory of the Turks at the Lusanne Conference. The British were preparing to evacuate the city, to the regret of the resident foreigners, and we felt safer when we saw British and American battleships in the harbor. Everywhere were evidences of prosperity and an alert, aggressive national spirit. The Turks look anything but a defeated people. Proud and insolent, they openly declare dislike of England and all foreign dictation.

Under the leadership of Kemel Pasha, flushed with the recent diplomatic victory and their success over the Greeks, the spirit and power of Islam will have to be reckoned with in the future.

As we passed Gallipoli, where an hundred thousand British soldiers laid down their lives, we wondered at the strange political game that permits the Turk to remain in Europe.

Sailing along the coast of Asia Minor, we had the rare privilege of seeing historic Rhodes and also the Island of Patmos, with its soaring mountains and the shining monastery on the very summit, beautiful in a western sun, reminding us of the delectable mountains. We could almost visualize St. John on the highest pinnacle, declaring, "I, John, saw the New Jerusalem coming down out of heaven," or writing of a new heaven and a new earth, and of the time when there would be no more sin, nor war nor night, nor pain nor death, and our spirits cried "Amen," and we bowed our heads and worshipped.

It is impossible to describe our emotions when we approached Palestine, the land of our Lord's earthly pilgrimage—Palestine, the little country held sacred by hundreds of millions of followers of three great religions. Under the British mandate the country is making progress. Some splendid highways have been built. The railways are very well operated, while business is moving along as usual, and a feeling of confidence in the government is prevalent. Colonies of Zionists are to be seen at a number of points and although the experiment is comparatively new, they seem to be making some headway.

Landing first at Beirut, a city of ninety thousand people, we made a trip by auto through Syria to Baalbek to view the ruins of the wonderful temple of Baal. So stupendous are the ruins that no great stretch of the imagination is necessary to picture its former grandeur. Returning to the ship, we next landed at Haifa, for the Palestine tour. A visit to historic Acre, but a few miles distant, was replete with interest and profit. We were fortunate to secure one of the best dragomen in Palestine to conduct our party all through Palestine. Mt. Carmel and the scenes of Elijah's labors and triumph were next visited, after which a wonderful ride through the Plain of Esdraelon past Pezreel, Endor, Nazareth, Bethshan, Nain, and many other spots made famous by Old and New Testament characters. They crowded thick and fast upon each other. Palestine is so small and the places and characters of Biblical interest so many and on every side the effect was kaleidoscopic. We saw proofs of our Lord's statements and confirmations of His references on every hand. Palestine is still oriental, and the local color, habits and customs are about the same as in our Saviour's time. The Bible is the best guide-book used by Palestine dragomen for tourists.

The Sea of Galilee, indescribable in its beautiful setting, and the ruins of Magdala, Capernaum and its synagogue, Bethsaida and Tiberias, the Mount of Beatitudes, Tabor and Great and Little Hermon, Cana of Galilee, Nazareth with its beauty and eternal interest, Nablus or Schechem, the home of the remnant of the Samaritans, with their precious and venerable Pentateuch, Jacob's Well, the site of Dotham, and Samaria, Bethel and Shiloh, the ancient highway between Egypt and Assyria used for thousands of years—these and dozen of other places of great interest to the Bible student, give the reader some idea of what we were privileged to see by auto from northern Palestine to Jerusalem.

The view of Jerusalem from Scopus, the hill overlooking the city where Titus camped, is truly magnificent. Every hour of our stay in Jerusalem was packed with deep interest. Day and night, we visited many sacred places of the Holy City, sanctified by the footsteps of our divine Lord, and forever glorified by His presence, suffering and achievements.

A memorable meeting was that of the Free Masons of the Steamship Tuscania one night in King Solomon's quarries, where a suitable program was rendered, the writer by invitation delivering an address. Our party, too, went down to Jericho, "but not as a certain man who fell among thieves," but by auto and over a splendid British highway.

Elisha's fountain is still shown and the Dead Sea and River Jordan claimed our attention. Rachel's tomb, Bethlehem, and many other points of interest were visited our last afternoon. The embarkation at Jappa was thrilling. Large boats, manned by skilled boatmen, carried us through and over the turbulent waves to our good ship, in which we sailed for Alexandria.

Egypt, the land of mystery, with its age-old secrets, is fascinating in the extreme. Memphis, Thebes, Luxor and the surrounding country, with their wonderful mountains, temples and tombs, mute witnesses of civilization milleniums ago, are surpassingly instructive and impress one beyond words to describe. Of course, we visited the Pyramids, gazed upon the Sphinx and saw King Tut's treasures.

Cairo, a city of about one million people, is a human mosaic, oriental, subtle, kaleidoscopic, with a charm all its own. A memorial service in memory of President Harding was held at the Continental Hotel, which was attended by several hundred Americans, at which the writer made an address on "Harding, the Man." While the service was in progress a procession passed on the street heralded by bands, proclaiming the returns of pilgrims from Mecca. The Egyptians we met seemed restive under the British mandate and seem to have a well-defined idea of the necessity of Mohammedan unity. At Naples, second call, we left the good ship that had carried us thousands of miles, visited Rome with its treasures and Monte Mario, the strategic site of the Northern Methodist School for Boys, which has provoked so much antagonism from the Roman Catholics.

One month we had been touring Europe. While in Paris, we met our old friend, Bishop Blake, of the M. E. Church, and while at Brussels we had fine fellowship with Bishop Beauchamp, just returned from America, and with him visited our Central Mission building, orphanage, clinic and girls' schools. They are all well located and are worth much more than they cost. I was highly pleased with the progress already made and the wise plans of the bishop for our future work. His generalship under God will bring large results for the kingdom and Southern Methodism is to be congratulated on having projected this steadily growing mission in this needy field.

Everywhere we went we saw and felt the need of an evangelical Protestantism. The priest-ridden nations of the Old World need the pure gospel, and we must give it to them to the limit of our ability. Greater than the vexing problems of Europe today, and they are indeed great, social, industrial, commercial and political, the overshadowing need is a religious one, not a dead, but a living Christ. Every dollar expended by Southern Methodism in our European missions is needed and will, in time, yield an abundant harvest.

After three months abroad, spending time in England, Wesley's church, Scotland, etc., we are returning home, thankful that we are Americans and Methodists, and with the conviction that God has honored our church and nation with the greatest religious responsibility in all history, which we would not shrink yet which can only be met by the use of spiritual means.

BRIEF BIBLE MEDITATIONS

By E. C. Few.

"The Painfulness of a Broken Confidence."

Proverbs 25:19, "Confidence in an unfaithful man in time of trouble is like a broken tooth and a foot out of joint."

To break faith is a tragedy that puts an ignoble mark of blackness upon the inner heart. To be disappointed by the faithlessness of one whom we confidently trusted as ever faithful, is to feel a regret more keenly and a sting more sharply than a serpent's tooth. In time of trouble the human heart pants for sympathy and comforters, and is ready to exercise confidence in any who apparently manifest the symptoms of that sympathy so seriously needed. The unfaithful has the opportunity of his life to get in his strokes of infamy and deceit when he has drawn to himself the confidence of one in trouble and despair. He plays his pranks of evil trickery. He is as honey to the palate of the mouth, but as bitter herbs when in the stomach. He feigns love and loyalty. He labors as the boa constrictor to get his entire strength about the frailty of his prey, and then he contracts with all of the force of his prejudiced narrowed soul, and the sudden crash of confidence takes place. How painful is a broken tooth with nerves exposed, and the excruciating agony of a foot out of joint can be understood only by those who have experienced it. To find a Judas whom you believed a Saint John is to suffer in Gethsemane and bleed upon a cross.

"How to Put the Devil to Flight."

James 4:7, "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you."

It is said that an attacking bear will quickly be vanquished when he meets the steady and determined look into the human eyes. On the other hand, should one turn and run, the bear would immediately give chase. The devil cannot bear the piercing frown of righteousness. He fights only when he has the enemy on the go. His cowardly nature is such that he dares not come into an open field and wage a clean battle. He is subtle in his strokes, and his sharp eye is ready to discern the quakings of his prey. But when he confronts a stone wall of godly resistance, he loses no time in making his disappearance.

Many times have I come upon serpents in the byways and hedges, and each time I seized a proper weapon and began the assault. In not a single instance did the snake attempt to reciprocate in martial array, but he used every nerve and energy in speedy attempt at flight. The devil is a serpent of iniquity who takes advantage of an enemy unarmed and unprepared, but when bravely resisted he makes his getaway. We should be so utterly submitted to God that our daily vocation is a successful resistance of the evil one.

FAMILY CIRCLE READING

Wm. Thornton Whitsett.

Earth holds no dearer spot than where parents and children meet daily in the home. There impressions are made that time can never destroy. The home affords opportunities for influences that no other spot can have. Wise, indeed, are those who realize these possibilities and seek to use them for the highest aims and ends. The meeting of the family around the table for meals; the gathering of the members in the sacred precincts of the family circle; the constant association of those who dwell under the same roof—wo can estimate the permanent values that may be given to such daily contact! Children with their impressionable natures and their rapidly forming characters may here be reached as in no other place. A home well supplied with the proper reading material of papers, magazines and books—what a field for cultivation of all that is highest and best in mental, moral and spiritual development! Added to this, there is the unmatched influence of father and mother with all the wealth of wisdom that they may have gathered from all their contact with life, richly available for the younger members of the family.

Parents long for the best for their children; they are willing to make any reasonable sacrifice for their children's betterment; what a mistake they may make in failing to cultivate this rich field for the child's uplift. Never are there any books read that make the appeal that those make which are read in the family circle by mother, or by father, and that have the added comment of parental suggestion and discussion, in addition to what the printed page conveys. A thousand charms are added to the volume that becomes the familiar possession of those who daily gather around some common board, and who pass to each other the ideas suggested by what the book may contain. It is a fact that the average person does not read a great many books during even an entire lifetime. It does not take a very large library, or a very great expenditure, to supply a family with all the reading matter that it can use and digest. All the more reason for seeing that this matter is neglected by no family. Parents make a great mistake if they never find time, and never make time, for reading in the circle of the home. It is there that the great names of literature should be often spoken of, and the great books of the ages, made as familiar friends for each and every member. The pleasure that comes through this channel if it is properly cultivated becomes one of the keenest pleasures of an entire lifetime. Long after the boys have wandered away and set up homes of their own; long after the daughters are firmly fixed in other circles, the days of early home life will move as a mighty force in life. The books there read in those early formative years will be the books that stand out most clearly, and that do most to guide and inspire. The choice gems of literature there so easily learned and fixed in memory will blaze like stars, and there will result a permanent culture and refinement of taste that can be gotten in no other way so easily.

Mind brightens by contact with mind, and when discussion follows reading there results a permanence of impression possible in no other way. Every home longs to add to itself all that may enlarge its happiness, and here opens up a field that nothing else can displace. Pages that carry with them the added music of a mother's voice, and the memory of days long since dead, are pages with which no others may be compared. A father will long speak when his voice has become silent if his voice is associated with his reading and comment of books that still stand upon the library shelves. Then, too, there is such a splendid opportunity for training and guidance in the suggestions that may accompany family reading, and the words that may be dropped here and there by way of approval or disapproval of the author's style of writing, his scope of thought, his views of character, and his estimate of nature and life.

Modern life has become more and more hurried and pressing. A thousand things knock at our doors for a hearing. Time must be guarded or it will often be wasted. The things of greatest value must be known and preserved; but we can surely do nothing wiser than to give a portion of our time and attention to what we may term reading of the family circle.

In this connection the well known lines of Henry W. Longfellow come to mind, in his poem, "The Day Is Done," from which we quote the last verses:

Come, read to me some poem,
Some simple and heartfelt lay,
That shall soothe this restless feeling,
And banish the thoughts of day.

Not from the grand old masters,
Not from the bards sublime,
Whose distant footsteps echo
Through the corridors of Time.

For like strains of martial music,
Their mighty thoughts suggest
Life's endless toil and endeavor;
And tonight I long for rest.

Read from some humbler poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart,
As showers from the clouds of summer,
Or tears from the eyelids start;

Who, through long days of labor,
And nights devoid of ease,
Still heard in his soul the music
Of wonderful melodies.

Such songs have power to quiet
The restless pulse of care,
And come like the benediction
That follows after prayer.

Then read from the treasured volume
The poem of thy choice,
And lend to the rhyme of the poet
The beauty of thy voice.

And the night shall be filled with music,
And the cares that infest the day,
Shall fold their tents like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away.

—Henry W. Longfellow.

PHI BETA KAPPA AND THE HALL OF FAME

By the Secretary.

The unveiling on May 22, 1923, of tablets and busts at the Hall of Fame, University Heights, New York City, brought again into prominence this method of honoring great Americans. While the location of New York University is not particularly accessible, the fact that the Hall is visited by thousands of people each year is evidence that as an institution it attracts wide attention.

The man who conceived the idea was Dr. Henry Mitchell MacCracken, Miami '57, for a quarter of a century chancellor of New York University, under whose leadership the College of Arts and Pure Science was removed to Washington Heights, thus inaugurating a wonderful movement for the expansion of the university. Dr. MacCracken became an honorary member of the Delta Chapter of New York in 1887, and was later deeply interested in the institution of a chapter at Miami, his alma mater.

Since Dr. MacCracken's death Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson, an honorary member of the Alpha of Virginia, has been the director who has supervised the selections and made the arrangements for the erection of tablets and busts. Thus Phi Beta Kappa members have had a leading part in inaugurating and carrying forward the Hall of Fame project. They have not, however, been responsible for the selection of the worthies whose memories are therein perpetuated.

The first selections were made in 1900. Of the twenty-nine men then honored thirteen were members of Phi Beta Kappa. They are:

John Marshall, of the original society.
James Kent, Yale 1781.
Eli Whitney, Yale 1792.
Joseph Story, Harvard 1798.
Daniel Webster, Dartmouth 1801.
Samuel F. B. Morse, Yale 1810.
Ralph Waldo Emerson, Harvard Alumnus 1828.
Henry W. Longfellow, Bowdoin 1825.
Nathaniel Hawthorne, Bowden 1825.
Horace Mann, Brown Alumnus 1830.
Washington Irving, Harvard and Yale Honorary 1833.
Asa Gray, Harvard Honorary 1842.

Henry Ward Beecher, Amherst Alumnus 1853.

Of the others then selected, at least five could not have been members of Phi Beta Kappa by reason of their age—George Washington, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, and Jonathan Edwards.

In 1905 there were eight selections, of whom four were of Phi Beta Kappa:

John Quincy Adams, Harvard 1787.

James Russell Lowell, Harvard Alumnus 1846.

General William T. Sherman, Dartmouth Honorary 1866.

John Greenleaf Whittier, Harvard Honorary 1888.

Three women were selected on this occasion—Mary Lyon, Emma Willard, and Maria Mitchell, all of whom had died before Phi Beta Kappa's policy as to the admission of women had become well defined.

In 1910 ten additional names were selected, and of these four were members of Phi Beta Kappa:

George Bancroft, Harvard 1817.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, Harvard 1829.

Phillips Brooks, Harvard 1855.

William Cullen Bryant, Harvard Honorary 1817.

At the institution of the chapter at Williams College in 1864 Mr. Bryant was also among the graduates elected to Alumni membership.

In the 1915 list six Phi Beta Kappa members appear among the nine selected. They are:

Rufus Choate, Dartmouth 1819.

Joseph Henry, Union Honorary 1828.

John Lothrop Motley, Harvard 1831.

Francis Parkman, Harvard 1844.

Louis Agassiz, Harvard Honorary 1849.

Mark Hopkins, Williams Alumnus 1864.

This proved to be the high water mark in Phi Beta Kappa selections.

Among those selected in 1920 only one held membership in Phi Beta Kappa—Samuel L. Clemens, an honorary member of the Alpha of Missouri, elected at the organization of the chapter in 1902.

It will be seen that of the sixty-three men and women who have been deemed worthy of a place in the Hall of Fame for great Americans, twenty-eight, or forty-four per cent, were members of Phi Beta Kappa. Eighteen of these were elected on their student records. When we consider how few were the chapters in the early days the result is truly remarkable.

A SONG OF THE GRAY YEARS

By J. E. McCulloch.

Far up the River Time in the long, long ago
I found the Isle of Love, where God's own blessings grow.

'Twas there that I was born and heard the first lullaby song;

'Twas there I used to play when love ne'er dreaded wrong.

In that dear Isle of Love an angel's face I see,
My mother, blessed mother, sings and prays for me.
How sweet to sleep once more in the humble trundle-bed!

How blest to kneel again beneath my own bowed mother's head!

But time has borne me far on its swift-flowing years,

And often I have drunk life's cup with bitter tears;
Still onward, ever onward to the great and boundless deep

My little bark of life shall sail till tearful hearts find sleep.

O, swift River of Time, turn back!

Flow back to my childhood home;

There in love's dear isle

Let me rest a while

In mother's home, sweet home!

O no, sad River of Time, flow on, flow swiftly on!
For I shall hear again somewhere my mother's song,

And on my brow shall press her sweetly soothing kiss;

In God's new mother home somewhere I shall find her bliss.

FIELD NEWS

STRAITS CIRCUIT

This has been a very pleasant Thanksgiving day for the members of our Ladies' Aid Society of Summerfield church. We were sweetly entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Davis. All seemed to have a delightful time and enjoyed the good things to eat.

This is a day that points our memories back to the many blessings we have received through the years—much sorrow mingled with our joys perhaps, but when it all comes from the Giver of all good gifts we should take it as a token of love, remembering all things work together for good to those who love the Lord.

Through the gloom and shadows look we, on beyond the years; the soul would have no rainbow had the eyes no tears.

Carrie L. Whitehurst.

FREMONT

Without gusto and the blaring of trumpets, on our return to the Fremont charge for the third year we have been very graciously received by as loyal and as an appreciative people to be found anywhere. Many expressions of joy and appreciation have been accorded us. On every side, in and out of the church, the word "glad" has greeted our appreciative ears. Our Fremont congregation, a considerable number of them, came in on us last Monday evening unexpectedly and gave us a severe pounding. This token of esteem and good will was met by deep feelings of hanks. We had prayers before the kind friends left our doorway, and our hearts were tenderly touched. We only pray that we may be able to render a larger and a more effective service through the year.

J. A. Dalley.

FROM VANCEBORO TO CEDAR GROVE

After having spent three of the most pleasant years of our ministry in the progressive little town of Vanceboro, in Eastern Carolina, where we made some honest effort for the advancement of the kingdom, and where some results of this effort are visible, we have entered into a new field of work in the hills of the North Carolina conference, which hills we love in spite of the red mud—hills so nearly like those of Chatham, where first we saw the light of the physical world and also where we first received spiritual light, and where on a rock amidst the trees we first practiced our ministerial utterances, regarding the trees as men, women and children.

We have been kindly received on the new Cedar Grove circuit. There are more ways of saying welcome than one, and on last Monday night both Methodists and Presbyterians said it with material gifts, the largest we have ever received at any place. That throng of one hundred people more than filled our pantry and our hearts, and with bowed heads we gave thanks to God. Surely we owe a debt that cannot be quickly paid, and through the years of our stay here we shall find ourselves endeavoring to make these people know we are glad of the opportunity of serving such a splendid people, and we shall seek in it all to glorify Him unto whom we are indebted for everything.

Through the kindness of a young Presbyterian man who recently lost his wife, we are now living in one of the most complete little bungalows that could be found anywhere, and he offers this without charge until the new parsonage is finished. New parsonage furniture for the entire house has just been purchased by the Cedar Grove circuit members at a cost of approximately five hundred dollars. It is modern and up-to-date. We are well fixed for living, and we hope to be humble enough to serve. When we move into the new parsonage, the North Carolina conference cannot boast of a much better home for a preacher's family. God is praised for the fine prospect before us, for the hope of the kingdom here, and for fellowship with such an excellent body of people. E. C. Durham, P. C.

THE CRITTENDEN HOME

The letter of the Florence Crittenden Home of last issue is a very painful letter. The more so by the fact of the criminals who were responsible for the condition of the unfortunates are still at large although known, it seems, by the inmates of the home—and at large a menace to the purity of our state.

In past ages when the great men lived whose lives we love to emulate, sins of the description of some of these unfortunates the betrayers were punished with the extreme penalty, and for less crimes nations have been destroyed. The home for the unfortunates, it seems, is the best to do at present under the circumstances. But how can a state prosper with this plan in existence? It would seem to cast a slur on the morals of our loyal state to be kept up permanently while the accomplices and betrayers are hiding behind the screen of society and family.

These are great crimes mentioned in the letter for which vengeance must fall, and if our state overlooks such crimes it may share in punishment. If those criminals were exposed as their victims are, also the partners in crime exposed alike, there would be no more use for the unfortunates' home. N. M. W.

A POUNDING

On Sunday morning, November 25, I filled my regular appointment at Ebenezer church on the Randolph circuit, and on being asked to hold a Thanksgiving service at that church on Wednesday night I gladly consented to do so.

Wednesday night found me getting into my Ford and starting off for my appointment. On entering the church I noticed the altar was filled with packages and bundles of all descriptions, but thinking the good people had brought them as a gift to the orphanage I commended the people in my heart for their bounteous gifts and began the Thanksgiving service. After the sermon an offering for the Children's Home was taken. Before closing the service Mr. A. D. Gray, superintendent of the Sunday school at Ebenezer, and a good worker, informed me the packages and bundles were for the pastor. I was very much surprised, pleased and gratified to think the good people had remembered me and my family in such a kind and generous way. After closing the happy service with the hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," some of the good brethren pushed my car up to the door of the church and literally loaded her with good things. Trinity having added a new police to her inhabitants put me to wondering how I could get by his house without arousing his suspicions as to how I had filled my car, but since my live chicken knew that to be a friend of the preacher he must keep quiet, I came through the village and home with no trouble.

The pounding was one of the largest I have ever received, which gave us a real Thanksgiving at the parsonage. These loyal people at Ebenezer have done a good work during the past year. The church having been painted year before last, they carpeted it this year and hung blinds to the windows. It has also been the mother church of three preachers. Although small in membership she stands among the elect of God's people.

J. E. Woosley, P. C.

ST. JOHN'S AND GIBSON

At the recent conference in Elizabeth City the bishop returned this preacher to this charge for his fourth year. Wife and I are delighted. Many have been the hearty handshakes and the "Glad to have you back with us again." While there has been no concert of action, in the way of pounding like some of the preachers, but there is a continual stream of tokens of appreciation and esteem. They seem to take real pleasure in sharing their good things with the pastor. No wonder that the late Bishop Kilgo said that of all the charges in North Carolina if he had his choice it would be St. John's and Gibson. When the hogs are killed and dressed, a package is laid aside which finds its way to the parsonage. Or when in my pastoral rounds, on leaving a home I often find that my car has been quietly visited by some member of the family, who has left fresh meats, flour, butter, pecans, or something else of value. No pastor serves a more appreciative people, and I take this method of expressing my gratitude for their kindness.

Last year was one of splendid success. There were 49 members received during the year, 30 of these on profession of faith. The budget was paid in full, two foreign missionaries supported, one in full and the other in part, besides the care of a number of orphans. There was raised all told over seven thousand dollars for all purposes. Plans are being laid for the year now beginning and I trust that we are to witness another year of splendid progress. A. J. Parker.

GRIFTON CIRCUIT

To say the least, we are delighted with the work and the people on Grifton circuit. We are truly among a good people. This has been exemplified to us in many ways.

We arrived here exactly three days after the close of the annual conference, found the parsonage undergoing a regular cleaning at the hands of the good ladies of Grifton, and shortly after our arrival the table was spread with good things to eat, prepared by the good women of the town and community. But it did not stop here. About seven o'clock there was a loud knock at the door, and when the pastor opened it in rushed a multitude of folks with bundles and packages of all kinds, consisting of sugar, flour, ham, bacon, lard, butter, salt, sweet potatoes, preserves, canned goods, etc., enough to last a hungry Methodist preacher and his family of seven for many days. May the Lord bless them all. We will try to repay them in part by good, efficient service and loyalty to the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

This is the second pounding that we have received in the last two months, we having been the recipient of a fine one just before going to conference at the hands of the good people of Bath. We left a mighty loyal people when we were sent from Bath, but God called us to this field, and we came gladly.

We have laid no definite plans for the year, except to make some needed changes in the time of meeting with the four churches that we have to serve.

All the churches are in good repair, with the possible exception of the one at Grifton, and I feel sure that the better natures of the people here will assert themselves, and that the needed repairs will be made early in the season. We have an excellent parsonage well furnished, and we are happy in the Lord. We are expecting a good year. R. J. Lough, P. C.

BIBLE SUNDAY

December 9th

THEME
THE BIBLE
REMAKING THE ORIENT

PURPOSE
The earthquake in Japan has made large areas of the Far East practically Bibleless. Thousands of Bible printing plates in 25 languages and dialects used in Yokohama have been totally destroyed. They must be replaced at once or the whole missionary program will be seriously handicapped.

NEED
The American Bible Society needs immediately $289,000 with which to make good the actual losses, to say nothing of the enlarged opportunities.

RESPONSIBILITY
is definitely upon the churches of America, whose agency for Bible work in the Far East is the American Bible Society.

OPPORTUNITY
is one of unusual significance and every Pastor, Sunday School Superintendent and Young People's leader should utilize Bible Sunday on December 9th (or nearest convenient date) for the promotion of interest in the distribution of the Scriptures in Japan and the Far East.

PAGANISM IS CRUMBLING

¶ A Methodist Bishop, recently returning from world wide travels, thus remarks, "In all my travels belting the globe I did not see one new pagan temple, but hospitals, schools, churches, rising as Christianity is going forward! How, in the face of such an achievement, can we stop even for a moment"?

Methodism is perhaps the most potent force in this crumbling of paganism, and it is the Centenary which is sending

METHODISM FORWARD

Without it we would today be impotent. It has added five new lands to our world parish and multiplied our work three-fold.

Yet only half of the pledges have been paid!

How can we dream of stopping?

We cannot!! We will not!!

LIFE'S SERMONS

The good St. Francis of Assisi once stepped down into the cloisters of his monastery and, laying his hand on the shoulder of a young monk, said, "Brother, let us go down into the town and preach." So they went forth, the venerable father and the young man. And they walked along upon their way, conversing as they went. They wound their way down the principal streets, round the lowly alleys and lanes, and even to the outskirts of the town, and to the village beyond, till they found themselves back at the monastery again. Then said the young monk, "Father, when shall we begin to preach?" And the father looked kindly down upon his son and said: "My child, we have been preaching; we were preaching while we were walking. We have been seen—looked at; our behavior has been marked; and so we have delivered a morning sermon. Ah! my son, it is of no use that we walk anywhere to preach unless we preach as we walk."—Paxton Hood.

FOR YOUR SISTER

Is it asking too much that we should give 12 hours a year to prayer for and study of that for which the Son of God gave His life?

This is not a plea for money or a plea for work.

It is a plea for twelve of the 8,748 hours of the year for the missionary society.

We need givers and we need workers, but most of all we need better attendance.

Whether you belong to the society or not, you are invited to attend the meetings. Will you give twelve hours to missions this year?

We lead such busy lives that unless we plan ahead, many important things are neglected.

Most of us have a sort of general expectation of attending the meetings, but first one thing and then another comes up and they are crowded out. We would not definitely avow our purpose to attend, but gradually we forget.

Make twelve engagements for this year.

Set aside one hour of each month. Write down the date, where you will see it daily.

Hold these engagements sacredly above petty interruptions and flimsy excuses.—Adapted.

THE TWO LITTLE STOCKINGS

Recitation.

The two little stockings hung side by side,
Close to the fireplace broad and wide.
"Two?" said Saint Nick, and down he came,
Loaded with toys and many a game.
"Ho! ho!" said he with a laugh of fun,
"I'll have no cheating, my pretty one;
I know who dwells in this house, my dear;
There's only one little girl lives here."
So he crept up close to the chimney place,
And measured a sock with a sober face.
Just then a wee little note fell out,
And fluttered low, like a bird about;
"Aha! what's this?" said he in surprise,
As he pushed his specks up close to his eyes,
And read the address, in a child's rough plan.
"Dear Saint Nicholas," so it began,

"The other stocking you see on the wall

I have hung for a child named Clara Hall.

She's a poor little girl, but very good,
So I thought perhaps you kindly would Fill up her stocking, too, tonight,
And help to make her Christmas bright.

If you've not enough for both stockings there,
Please put all in Clara's; I shall not care."

Saint Nicholas brushed a tear from his eye,

"God bless you, darling," he said with a sigh.

Then softly he blew through the chimney high,

A note like a bird's when it soars on high.

When down came two of the funniest mortals

That ever were seen this side earth's portals.

"Hurry up," said Saint Nick, "and prepare

All a little girl wants where money is rare."

Then, oh, what a scene there was in that room!

Away went the elves, but down from the gloom

Of the sooty old chimney comes tumbling low

A child's whole wardrobe, from head to toe.

How Santa laughed as he gathered them in

And fastened each one to the sock with a pin!

Right to the toe he hung a blue dress.

"She'll think it came from the sky, I guess,"

Said Saint Nicholas, smoothing the folds of blue,

And tying the hood to the stockings, too.

When all the warm clothes were fastened on,

And both little socks were filled and done,

Then Santa tucked a toy here and there,

And hurried away through the frosty air,

Saying, "God pity the poor, and bless the dear child

Who pities them, too, on this night so wild!"

The wind caught the words and bore them on high,

Till they died away in the midnight sky,

While Saint Nicholas flew through the icy air,

Bringing "peace and good will with him everywhere."

Y. P. PROGRAM CALENDARS, 1924

Every member of every young people's auxiliary will want to own a copy of the "year book," which is in the form of a program calendar. First, because it is so unique; second, because it is so reasonable; and third, because it is so intensely interesting.

In the form of a calendar, each month carries the program and a beautiful picture, either of Scarritt, of Scarritt's daughters, or the picture of their activities both at home and abroad.

Since the Young People's Special is Scarritt this year, much time and thought have been given to the program that they might be an inspiration to the young people to know how the influence of the school, built entirely with love gifts, has spread to the uttermost parts of the earth through the lives and through the work of its thousand daughters.

One copy will be sent to each young people's auxiliary free of charge. Additional copies may be secured for six cents from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.—Bulletin.

ADULT YEAR BOOKS FOR 1924 NOW READY

The adult year books are exceptionally beautiful both in appearance and in the messages they carry. The frontispice has a picture of Miss M. L. Gibson, also a foreword written by Miss Gibson.

The missionary topic for the year is "The Illumined Task," and each program has been carefully worked out in an effort to show how the conquering Christ has brought light and life to a waiting people.

One copy of the adult year book will be mailed to each auxiliary free of charge. Any auxiliary or member wishing additional copies may secure them for ten cents each from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn.—Bulletin.

The many friends of Mrs. Wilson, former editor of our Woman's Page of the Advocate, will be interested in the following announcement, and extend congratulations:

"Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Wilson announce the birth of Mary Jane, November 18, 1923."

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

If the tender, profound, and sympathizing love practiced and recommended by Jesus were paramount in every heart, the loftiest and most glorious ideas of human society would be realized, and little be wanting to make this world a kingdom of heaven.—Humacher, Missionary Prayer and Meditation.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

We are entering upon the last month of 1923. The books will soon be closed and the chance to make good, to correct mistakes, to do the task left undone so long, will be gone for this year at least.

Among the things left undone were the reports you failed to send at the right time to the proper person to be included in same quarter's reports to our council officers. In the department of study and publicity, Mrs. Hume R. Steele, council superintendent of study and publicity, permits you to send in that forgotten report on January 1st, when you send in your fourth quarter's report, to be included in the report for the year as whole. Please bear this in mind and do not fail to make full report of all your work for the year.

We feel sure that we can extend the same privilege in the social service department, though we have not been authorized to do so.

It is important that the latest report blanks should be used, and this month is a good time to order them, or the the books, rather, that contain them. The corresponding secretary's record and report book contains blanks enough for two years for her own report to the district secretary, and for those of the superintendents of social service and mission and Bible study. Order from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn. The price is 35 cents. The superintendent of literature sends out the blanks for the auxiliary superintendent of publicity in the quarterly batch of literature she mails to each auxiliary. This book should be filled out and mailed to the conference superintendent of study and publicity January 1st with all the other reports.

THE CENTENARY PAY-UP CAMPAIGN

The co-operation of the Woman's Missionary Society in the Centenary Pay-Out Campaign is pledged in the following action taken by the council executive committee:

That the council shall co-operate with the Centenary Commission in the cultural program during the months of December and January by assisting:

1. In all-day missionary programs in every church in Southern Methodism.
2. In the Week of Prayer preceding Pay-Out Week.

3. In sponsoring the pageant "Apostles of Light," to be given in large cities and demonstrations in smaller places.

There are eight demonstrations, as follows:

1. "Save America."
2. "The Centenary at Work in Japan."
3. "The Centenary Opening Blinded Eyes."
4. "The Centenary Comes to Methodism's Aid in Brazil."
5. "A Visit with the Mexican Centenary."
6. "Curing Miss Centenary."
7. "The Centenary in Korea and Siberia."
8. "Mother Methodism's Seventy-Fifth Birthday in China."

The hearty response of the women to the call for this extra service has been most gratifying.

A little folder giving briefly the story of the demonstration, the characters, etc., has been prepared on each demonstration. We will supply as many as one hundred and fifty of these folders free to any church using a demonstration, if that number is needed in giving publicity. You may order from Literature Headquarters. Be sure to state the name of the demonstrations being used and the number of folders desired.—Bulletin.

HARVEST DAY IS HERE

Do not fail to plan for an ingathering of members and of money on Harvest Day. Order "The Missionary Society Listens In" or "The Missionary Society That Could Not Pay Out" to use in making your program.

One month of 1923 in which to double. Make Harvest Day count for new members.—Bulletin.

RESOLUTIONS

We, the members of the Woman's Society of Wanchese Methodist church, wish to express our sorrow in the loss of its oldest and one of the best beloved members, Mrs. Sabra Daniels. She was also a life member.

"Aunt Sabie," as she was lovingly called, died August 15 after an illness of a few weeks. Her health had been failing for years, yet her devotion and zeal for her Master's work was so great that she attended not only our society but church and Sunday school whenever she was able to be carried. Such devotion is an inspiration to us who follow. We shall miss her greatly, but in humble submission we bow to "Him who doeth all things well" and resolve:

First, That we as a society perpetuate to her memory by following in her steps of faithfulness and devotion.

Second, That while we miss her we rejoice in hope of the reward God has promised to the faithful.

Third, That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved children and try to comfort them in their sorrow.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to the North Carolina Advocate and Missionary News for publication and a copy be spread upon our minutes.

Mrs. Eliza Meekins,
Mrs. Mattie Midgett,
Mrs. Cleopatra Daniels.

MISS KEENE MAKES REPORT

Below is the report of Miss Georgia S. Keene, conference elementary superintendent, submitted to the Sunday School Board at its recent meeting in Elizabeth City. Some of the most important items in the report of the conference superintendent of Sunday school work were given last week; other facts from it, the report in full if space will permit, will be given through these columns later.

"As Conference Elementary Superintendent, I have tried during the year to promote in every way possible the elementary work in our conference, and feel that even though there is a great deal more to be done, that we have made progress in this field.

"Wherever I have been I have urged that our Sunday schools have graded worship and instruction for the boys and girls 12 years of age and under. A large number of schools have begun the use of Graded Literature, and departments and classes have been organized according to age groups, with each group having services adapted to the age and limitations of the pupils. The organization of the Elementary departments—Cradle Roll, Beginner, Primary and Junior, wherever practical, has been stressed.

"The elementary Programs of work have been presented to workers from about 65 elementary departments, and some of these departments have adopted these programs and are working toward standard. Next year this phase of the work should be stressed, and our conference should have a large number of tandard elementary departments.

"A special effort has been made to have Children's Week observed in as many of our schools as possible. Two hundred and fifty letters were written and a number of visits made on behalf of this cause. Thirty Sunday schools planned to observe the week. Not all reports are in, but probably 25 observed it this year, an increase of 75 per cent over last year's observance. Next year there should be a much greater observance in our conference.

"Half of my time has been given to teacher training work. I have taught in 11 Standard and 12 non-standard schools. As a teacher in these schools, I have come in direct touch with approximately 700 elementary workers in our conference, and have learned of the conditions in their Sunday schools.

"Elementary courses have been offered in all our Standard Training Schools, and 275 elementary teachers and department officers have taken these courses for credit.

"I have visited 45 Sunday schools and churches and made 40 talks. All of these talks have been in the interest of the boys and girls of our conference.

"Three thousand five hundred leaflets, pamphlets, and other literature on the elementary departments have been distributed. This has been done in training schools and upon requests from the field for help.

"On my efforts to put on our programs and reach our workers in the field over thirteen thousand letters have been written.

"We have been looking toward a district organization with an elementary superintendent in each district, but have only obtained three workers. Only one of these has been active. Mrs. E. B. Ward, of the Rock-ing ham district, has done a splendid piece of work. A district elementary institute was held in that district in August with a very good attendance and interest.

"A Conference Elementary Council meeting was held this year with a small attendance, but, I believe, worth a great deal to our work. Miss Kennedy, our general elementary superintendent, was with us for this meeting.

"A Key Woman campaign has been started, and we want an Elementary Key Woman in every school in our conference. Through her the conference and district elementary superintendents can promote the program of elementary work and keep in touch with the workers with the children in the schools. Seventy schools have already appointed a person for this place, and some of these women have already sent in reports.

"I have attended a meeting of the General Sunday School Council and two meetings of the General Elementary Council. This has been a very great help to me in my work. It is fine to meet with others in the same field of work and discuss and work out our problems together.

"I earned a certificate of credit at the Training School for Church Leaders at Lake Junaluska and have read several books on Sunday school work during the year.

"In all of my work it has been my great desire to lead the men and women of our churches and Sunday schools to see how important it is to give the child the very best advantages for religious development and for meeting his religious needs and then to help them in every way possible to show this attitude in their Sunday school organization and work.

"Following is a statistical summary of work done:

Miles traveled .....	9650
Letters written .....	1325
Literature distributed .....	3500
Talks made .....	40
Churches and S. S. visited .....	45
Training Schools taught in—
Standard .....	11
Non-standard .....	12
Story hours held .....	15

Western North Carolina Conference

SUNDAY SCHOOL PASTORS

The following twenty-two leading ministers in the Western North Carolina conference have taken one unit of credit this conference year. Five were earned in the Charlotte school, eight in the Winston-Salem school and nine in the Greensboro school. We were immensely proud of these fine fellows. They mean a lot to our cause. The list will grow as other good pastors are added to it from time to time during the year. But note the ones we already have and the charges they serve:

Rev. W. T. Albright, Walnut St., Greensboro.

Rev. J. H. Armbrust, Spencer Memorial, Charlotte.

Rev. J. H. Barnhardt, West Market Street, Greensboro.

Rev. W. A. Barber, Glenwood, Greensboro.

Rev. G. T. Bond, Spring Garden Street, Greensboro.

Rev. John Cline, Forsyth circuit.

Rev. E. O. Cole, Kernersville.

Rev. J. A. J. Farrington, Central Terrace, Winston-Salem.

Rev. L. B. Hayes, Park Place, Greensboro.

Rev. J. W. Hoyle, Jr., Pleasant Garden circuit.

Rev. J. S. Hiatt, Burkhead, Winston-Salem.

Rev. J. P. Higgs, Grace, Winston-Salem.

Rev. W. L. Hutchins, First church, Lexington.

Rev. T. F. Higgins, Brevard Street, Charlotte.

Rev. H. G. Hardin, Tryon Street, Charlotte.

Rev. W. M. Robbins, Hickory Grove, Derita.

Rev. C. M. Short, Calvary, Charlotte.

Rev. R. A. Smith, Erlanger.

Rev. A. C. Swafford, Mocksville.

Rev. R. G. Tuttle, Centenary, Greensboro.

Rev. W. F. Womble, Greensboro district.

Rev. J. E. Woosley, Randolph circuit.

CREDIT STUDENTS

One hundred and thirty-three students earned certificates of credit in our recent Greensboro Co-operative Standard Training School for Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school workers. Of this number ninety-seven were listed as Methodist credits enrolled in the following congregations: Glenwood 18, Centenary 14, West Market Street 12, Park Place 10, Wesley Memorial, High Point 8, Bethel 4, Old Trinity 4, Grace Methodist Protestant 4, Carraway Memorial 3, Pleasant Garden 3, Walnut Street 2, Greensboro district 1, Christian church 1, Director of Religious Education, First Presbyterian church (Methodist) 1.

The Greensboro school was a most interesting and profitable one. Our Greensboro workers are always willing to do their best for the cause of religious education. One of the outstanding features of the school was an enrollment of twelve of our ministers in the courses of the school, nine of which attended regularly and did the work necessary to obtain credit.

The credit students are listed by courses as follows:

The Program of the Christian Religion, Dr. Chas. C. Weaver, instructor—Rev. J. H. Barnhardt, Rev. W. A. Barber, Mrs. W. A. Barber, L. M. Berthalf, Rev. G. T. Bond, Mrs. Hattle Coble, Rev. L. B. Hayes, N. Rush Hodgkin, Mrs. John Hoyle, Jr., Rev. John W. Hoyle, Jr., Thomas Hoyle, W. C. Lambert, Chas. Osborne, Jr., J. F. Scurlock, T. E. Story, Rev. R. G. Tuttle, Rev. W. F. Womble, Rev. J. E. Woosley, W. N. Shelton, Rev. W. T. Albright, W. B. Richardson, J. Foster Barnes.

Principles of Teaching, Prof. Claude T. Carr, instructor—Mrs. Geo. P. Phillips, Mrs. J. M. Rhodes, Mrs. J. W. Mann, Miss Mae Hardin, Miss Fleta Owen, Miss Emma F. Elliott, Mrs. W. R. Elliott, Pearl Jackson, Mrs. Philip W. Flagge, Miss Margaret Lambe, Mrs. W. W. Whittington.

Pupil Study, Mrs. E. R. Michaux, instructor—Mrs. Agnes R. Hayes, Ray Jones, T. E. Langley, Miss Annie Mae Oakley, Mrs. W. B. Richardson, Mrs. Stella F. Weatherly.

Junior Organization and Administration, Miss Virginia Jenkins, instructor—Miss Fannie Gordon, Dr. Harris Glascock, J. A. Hughes, Miss Margaret Iseley, Miss Mamie Jones, Mrs. J. W. Kennedy, Fletcher Langley, Miss Leta Langley, Mrs. C. E. Landreth, Howard Mead, Mrs. W. H. Newlin, Miss Mary Paschal, Miss Gladys Routh, Miss Kate Renn, Miss Esther Wakefield, Mrs. Fred Ingram.

Primary Organization and Administration, Mrs. W. B. Ferguson, instructor—Miss Elizabeth Andrews, Miss Sallye Astin, Miss Elizabeth Bennett, Miss Ella Campbell, Miss Ruth Curtis, Miss Synette Field, Miss Marita Frye, Mrs. H. B. Gunter, Miss Maude Hester, Miss Lillie Hyams, Miss Lillian Jones, Miss Mozelle King, Mrs. W. W. Long, Mrs. L. C. Matton, Miss Genevieve Moore, Mrs. Robert Morrow, Miss Allene Mitchell, Miss Edna Millikan, Miss Beulah McKenzie, Mrs. C. W. Nowell, Mrs. W. E. Ruffy, Mrs. Frank Sizemore, Mrs. Deuk Smith, Miss Martha Smith, Mrs. J. D. Strader, Mrs. C. R. Thompson, Miss Bertha Walden, Mrs. Conrad S. Whittington, Miss Olivia Woosley.

Beginner Organization and Administration, Mrs. C. L. Van Noppen, instructor—Miss Grace Betts, Mrs. J. W. Austin, Mrs. N. Rush Hodgkin, Mrs. J. W. King, Mrs. G. T. Bond, Miss Mary Curtis, Mrs. A. Cleo Davis, Mrs. G. G. Dickson, Miss Jennie L. Hunt, Mrs. W. C. Lambert, Mrs. J. E. Paschal, Mrs. W. T. Purgason, Miss Budie Renn Petree.

PRESIDING ELDER

Rev. W. F. Womble, the presiding elder of the Greensboro district, is the first "elder" to get on our credit honor roll for this conference year. We are proud of Brother Womble. It is hoped that he will have some mighty good company before the year is over. Brother Womble is a great believer in the Sunday school work of our church. Wherever he goes religious education in developing Christian character received a great boost. His district is leading the way in Sunday school emphasis just now. Hurrah for Womble and the Greensboro district!

TRAVELERS

It must be mentioned that eight fine women from Wesley Memorial, High Point, fifteen miles away, regularly attended our Greensboro school and obtained credit. Wesley Memorial has some fine men, but just now I want to call attention to the fact that the women are finer.

From Trinity, on the Randolph circuit, a delegation headed by Rev. J. E. Woosley, pastor, and C. A. Osborne, superintendent, attended all twelve class periods of the Greensboro school. To do this they traveled forty miles each night. Four out of this delegation received credit and another will receive an office credit in a short while. These travelers from High Point and Trinity are showing by example that they know how to use an automobile for the Lord's work.

DING! DING!!

Have you ever seen a Sunday school superintendent slap his hand down on a little bell to signal his Sunday school to rise for a song and then "ding, ding" them down by the same signal? Whenever you see such a fellow go up to him after the close of the Sunday school session and ask him why the Lord gave him intonation of the voice, facial expression and a magnetic personality? Why use a rattling bell when by a raise of the hand or an entreaty of the voice the Sunday school will be glad to follow instructions? If the minister does not need a bell to have his congregation rise and to sit down it is reasonable to think that a superintendent can well dispense with his artificial rattle. Why use a piece of mechanism to take the place of a charming personality? Bells are made to signal people from one place to another but not to "ding" in the ears of those congregated to worship.

REPORT BLANKS

Arrangements have been made with Mr. A. L. Dietrich, treasurer of the General Sunday School Board, to furnish our office free with sufficient report blanks for all our Western North Carolina conference Sunday school superintendents to use in making their fur reports each year to the quarterly conferences. These report blanks will be mailed out to each superintendent in our conference and there need be no excuse for not giving the facts to the quarterly conference, the board of managers for the Sunday schools of the charge. This report blank will call for fourteen items of information, comprehensive in scope and needed in supervision.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

Lee Davis, Raleigh, N. C.
Rev. J. F. Armstrong, Concord, N. C.

North Carolina Conference

MORE NEWS OF WAYNE COUNTY

First, I want to thank you and all of my Epworth League fields for their prayers and good wishes during my "shut in" days after the accident. I am now able to see some with my left eye and it is still improving. The doctor says it is a miracle and he doesn't understand how I can see any. But I can understand. I have about three hundred of the best young people in the world, the Wayne County Epworth League Union, praying for me. I think this explains it.

On Sunday evening, November 25, a group of us had the pleasure of attending one of the best programs at one of the best chapters that I have ever witnessed. This was at Pine Forest League on the Goldsboro circuit. We arrived at the church about 6:15 o'clock, just in time for the missionary study class which they hold at this time each Sunday evening. We gladly accepted an invitation to join the class for the evening, and it was one of the most inspiring that I have ever had the opportunity of seeing. They use as their text book "The Choice of a Career." Several members of the class gave mighty good one minute talks on "How a Young Person Should Choose His or Her Career," which were greatly enjoyed by all present. Then after a few minutes of general discussion the next lesson was assigned and the teacher appointed for next meeting. Miss Emma Davis, who so ably instructed the class that evening, appointed Miss Mettie Sutton to take charge next meeting. The class then adjourned. The devotional meeting began immediately under the leadership of Miss Lois Cox. It was a Thanksgiving program, the topic being "Gratitude." After a real good song service and the scriptural reading Rev. Branson led in a very appropriate and inspiring prayer. We then heard some very good speeches, including Prof. Mendenhall of Rosewood high school, whose subject was "The Idea of Thanksgiving and How It Should Be Observed."

The subject of the talk by Rev. Mr. Branson of Friends church was "Being Grateful," and a reading by a young lady, "The Road to Yesterday." Both were greatly enjoyed by all.

Pine Forest is a real live league of about one hundred and twenty-five members, under the leadership of Miss Emma Davis, who is a real live wire and keeps things on the move. She is a young lady of whom Pine Forest is justly proud. She has the support of the community as a whole and, to make a long story short, "they are doing things," and the rest of us will do well to pattern from them.

W. F. Parker, Cor. Sec.,

Daniels Chapel Epworth League.

AN OPEN LETTER

To the new and old ministers (if we may be permitted to use such a term) in the Raleigh district. (The above includes the new P. E.)

The Raleigh district is where you'll find a group of Epworth leaguers hard to beat. (Ask Bro. W. W. Peele). If you have trouble with your conference collections put them on the job.

Do you need someone at times to lead your prayer meeting service? Call on them.

And Sunday school teachers? Raleigh district Epworth League has a storehouse full. Use us!

Singers for your choir? Lots of them, from basso to soprano.

On cloudy days when the blues doth come call on the Epworth Leaguers. They'll make you smile and shout for joy.

Some one to nurse the sick or bring them flowers of good cheer? Get your Leaguers to do it.

And what about collections for subscriptions for the Advocate? Send your Leaguers to the task.

In fact, at any time, any place, a worthy task to perform, just call on the Raleigh District Epworth Leaguers. We'll back you up every inch of the way.

For specials we have made a wreath for a lady out at the cotton mill, and also sent a large bunch of flowers for her grave.

The most of the above named flowers were taken to our hospital.

One of the most enjoyable things we have done is to organize an Intermediate Epworth League choir. We have the last Sunday night in each month set apart for our choir to sing at the church service. So far we have had two Sunday nights.

CHARLOTTE INTERMEDIATES HAVE FINE REUNION

The regular quarterly meeting of our Intermediate Epworth League Union of Charlotte was held at Hawthorne Lane church Friday night, November 23. The meeting was well attended and a very interesting and helpful program was given, carried out entirely by the Intermediates. Interesting reports were made by each superintendent and a talk given by Mr. James Sease, president of the city Senior union on the importance of all superintendents and assistants attending the "City Union Efficiency Institute" which will be held at Trinity church December 2-7 inclusive.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mabelle Hamilton; vice president, Mae Little; recording secretary, Gladys Hardin; corresponding secretary, Elizabeth Simmons; treasurer, Roland Asbury; Epworthian agent, Gladys Greene; reporter, Ethel Fallin.

The installation service was in charge of Rev. L. D. Thompson. He very beautifully and impressively explained to the officers their duty and obligations to the union. The attendance banner was won by Belmont Park League and presented by Mrs. Williams, superintendent of Seversville League. A social hour was enjoyed, during which games were played and the Hawthorne Lane League very bountifully served refreshments. We then gathered around the piano and all joined in singing "Blest be the tie that binds." We were led in prayer by Mr. Beard and started for home, declaring this one of the best union meetings we have ever held.

Mrs. Jennie M. James,
City Supt. Jr. and Int. Leaguers.

MT. OLIVET, CONCORD CIRCUIT, MOVES

The Senior Epworth League of Mt. Olivet church has done much to keep the younger generation in the church in giving them an opportunity for activity. The meetings have almost entirely been handed over to them, and the church feels that they are capable of handling it.

By taking a small contribution each month our financial problem does not seem very great. In this way we are paying $40 to the African special and $15 to the conference collection this year, besides meeting the general expense of the league.

Since we have been in the union our leaguers have always looked forward to the union Epworth League meetings. Also, our league enjoyed a social recently in which the league spirit was prevalent.

While realizing that we are living in the present we are ever conscious of a demanded growth.

The council recently held a meeting and laid plans for the future. Our league hopes to do more than it has done in the past, when the four departments are well organized, and plans are under way for the installation of a mission study class.

Rheumatism and Indigestion

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating, through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

If you suffer from Rheumatism, Indigestion, or from any curable disease accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to Shivar Springs,

Box 4D, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons (two five gallon demijohns) of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give the water a fair trial in accordance with instructions which you will send, and if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

THE METHODIST ORPHANAGE

Read the list of opportunities. Possibly there are those among us who would like to render the Orphanage a large service by obligating himself or herself to supply one of those needs. Some might be interested in them as memorials. Here is their chance.

* * * *

I want to ask our friends to read the letter that is appearing among these notes. It is from one of our former boys who is now out in the business world for himself. It shows how much the children trained here love and appreciate their old home and the friends who befriended them while here.

* * * *

Many churches, Sunday schools and organized classes have remembered our Orphanage during the Thanksgiving season, for which we are sincerely thankful. I am just wondering if there are not many more that have not yet responded to our appeal who will do so next Sunday or the following Sunday. Our need is urgent and our responsibility tremendous. Everybody is expected to help us carry forward this noble work.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Barnes:

Thanksgiving is approaching. This is a season in which we all should stop, take inventory and consider the many blessings that we are the recipients of and have to be thankful for.

I might say that during my six years' stay on "The Hill" Thanksgiving and Christmas were always the two happy, longed for, and much appreciated occasions of the year. I shall never forget the beautiful tables that were spread for us by the good friends of the Orphanage.

I have many blessings for which to be thankful, but the one which I shall always try to keep foremost in my mind is the opportunity which came to me in the year nineteen hundred and eight (1908) to enter your institution. I have truly thanked God many times for placing me where He did and at the time He did.

It is my earnest desire that the motherless and fatherless boys and girls now under your tender care may know and appreciate more fully what is being done for them. As an alumnus of the institution I wish to show my appreciation in even this small way by inclosing my check for five dollars ($5.00), which I hope will make the spread on Thanksgiving Day just a little larger and help to cheer the hearts of the boys and girls.

With many good wishes to all, I am,
Sincerely,
Harvey Maness.

* * * *

On Thanksgiving night I had the privilege of uniting in marriage Mr. Jasper Weathers and Miss Sula Boyd. The ceremony was performed in the Orphanage chapel in the presence of the officers and children. Sula finished her high school course at the Orphanage nearly six years ago, afterwards graduating from Greensboro College for Women. For the past two years she has been teaching school at Youngsville, N. C. She was regarded by all at the Orphanage as one of the truest and best girls ever to go out from us. We wish her a life of great usefulness and much happiness.

BRING THIS JOY TO YOUR HOME

An exceptional opportunity is offered through the Advocate Piano Club for all readers to furnish their homes, churches and schools with the joy of music rendered from the highest quality instruments at the lowest possible price.

The Advocate Piano Club is formed for your benefit and protection. Each club consists of 100 members, who by buying together obtain wholesale prices instead of retail prices. You know what that means. You are only responsible for your own order, but you gain all the advantages.

Other Features of the Club.

You are guaranteed perfect satisfaction by a reliable Music House; a guarantee that covers the life of your piano against defective labor and material.

By joining the Club you are extended the most convenient terms of monthly, quarterly or yearly payments based on the lowest net cash price. This represents a tremendous saving as compared with the customary installment prices which are usually much higher than cash prices.

The family of a Club Member is fully protected in case of the death of the purchaser. If the regulations of the Club have been complied with, the unpaid balance is cancelled and the family is given a receipt in full.

You have the privilege of trading in your old piano at its real valuation for a new one or a player-piano.

The Advocate Piano Club positively insures its members against disappointment. Dozens of clubs have been formed and never yet has a buyer been dissatisfied. Arrangements have been made with Ludden & Bates, Southern Music House, which makes piano buying safe and easy. Ludden & Bates have been selling pianos and player-pianos throughout the South for over 50 years. It is a reliable house whose guarantee means exactly what it says. They are not in business today and out tomorrow, but are ever ready and willing to make good on every promise they make.

Don't wait longer to furnish your home with the happiness that can come only from music rendered from an instrument that has been the choice of hundreds of the South's greatest artists. ## Life of Thomas Coke

By WARREN AKIN CANDLER, D. D.

Great achievements, whether they be of individuals or of the masses, are usually the result of the uncommon devotion of some great man. The establishment of the Methodist Church and the promulgation of its doctrines during the early years centered upon the lives of a few devout leaders, among whom was Thomas Coke. In the propagation of Methodism he was second only to John Wesley, and in some respects he was superior to that great man. Layman or preacher will profit by a close study and application of the life of this illustrious character.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

THE FIRST REAL TEST OF LOYALTY TO THE SPECIAL EFFORT

When you read these lines, all of the fall annual conferences will have been held. You have been reading on this page many encouraging reports telling about the favorable and enthusiastic receptions by these conferences of the plan of special effort for superannuate endowment. At this writing, November 17, I have personally visited twenty of them and will visit seven more before these lines are printed. Never in my life have I been associated with any movement that had such unanimous approval as this. Hundreds of preachers have expressed to me their determination to do their part for the success of the effort, and I have not met a preacher or layman who doubts its complete triumph. But now we are in the midst of days which will test the loyalty of those who have so vehemently expressed their purpose to co-operate. I refer to certain matters of the plan which call for action at the first quarterly conference.

Have You Done These Things?—

The first quarterly conference is expected to approve the charge's quota, decide upon the plan to raise the quota, appoint the charge special effort committee as required in the 1922 Discipline, and report the action on these matters to the Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo. "The Workers' Guide," which has been placed in the hands of all the preachers, gives directions in full detail concerning the doing of these things. If the instructions of said booklet touching the duties of the first quarterly conference are studied with care, it will be impossible to mistake their meaning. Have you examined the booklet carefully on this subject? Did your first quarterly conference act as directed? Have you sent the pink leaf report to the Board of Finance? Or, if your first quarterly conference has not been held, are you preparing to give attention to these matters when it is held? Are you loyal to the program to date?

A Telegram That Made Me Happy.

—While attending the Memphis conference this week I received a wire from the office in St. Louis which read as follows: "It is storming pinks now." This message had reference to the number of pink leaf reports being received daily at the office from the first quarterly conferences. Storming pinks! Let us get the full meaning of the figure. Have you witnessed a snowstorm in winter? Do you remember how the flakes fluttered down from every direction? That is the picture the office was transmitting to me in that wire, except, of course, the snowflakes were in this case pink leaf reports. As I thought about it I could see those pinks coming in from every section of our great church and falling into the arms of my assistants in the office. It thrilled me with joy and gratitude. About two months ago a preacher expressed himself on this subject as follows: "The Board of Finance is giving the church a wonderful plan for the special effort, but Todd will find that the first quarterly conferences will not send in those pink leaf reports." Well, notwithstanding the brother's doubts, the pinks are coming. And if the preachers really mean to carry on in behalf of the "forgotten man," the pinks will keep on coming until every charge in the entire church has reported.

The Lift of a Little Thing.—I can hear an occasional preacher say: "This pink leaf report from the first quarterly conference is a small matter, and I shall not get excited about it." Say, brother, do you recall a journey you had through the night on a railway train? All the hours you were sleeping without anxiety there was nothing but a little flange on the car wheels between you and death. Small matter, yet, but what a job it was doing. Why, brother, your head rests on a pivot the size of a pinhead. Don't turn away from something as unimportant because it is little. Remember this pink leaf report matter is the flange on the wheels of the "forgotten man" special. If you do not give it your serious attention, you are likely to ditch the special in the bounds of your charge. The church has placed upon the Board of Finance the responsibility of leadership in the special effort for superannuate endowment; the board in its detailed plan for the movement has called for a pink leaf report from every first quarterly conference, and the books of the board touching this special effort as it concerns your charge cannot be prepared until you send in the pink leaf report. What is your answer? Will you trust the judgment of the leaders? If you will, send in your report.

The Men Who Go Around.—The church has about three hundred presiding elders. There was a time when some unthinking ones called them the fifth wheel, meaning to express the idea of their unimportance. But we now know that such an expression concerning them is as wrong as holding lightly the work of a company's captain in an army of soldiers. The men who go around the districts of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should rather in these days be looked upon more as the stabilizers of aeroplanes. It is by their efficient service that our great machine for doing things finds her balance. Men of the merry-go-round, I am for you. Having been one of you, I know how full your hands are of the church's business. In this special effort for the old preachers we will not be able to do more than cripple along in disorganized fashion without you. The first quarterly conference of this year calls loudly to your hand of direction. If you faithfully meet the requirements of the special effort program in that meeting, all will be lovely for the beginning of our work. But if you fail to do your duty there, all that comes after will suffer from your neglect of important things at the start. Therefore I beseech you in the name of our aged and worn-out heroes to give attention to those matters requiring action at the first quarterly conference as printed in "The Workers' Guide." Let not a single charge in any district fail the method of procedure at this point. And by all means see to it that every charge promptly sends the pink leaf report to the Board of Finance. I am not trying to dictate your movements, but I am pleading for your cooperation at a crucial juncture of our special effort program.

A Change in the Music.—For some weeks I have been giving on this page an account of the pulse beat of various annual conferences visited by me concerning their attitude toward the special effort for superannuate endowment. If it were possible, such publicity would be continued until every annual conference of the church could be reported. But other matters of the great movement now press for attention. We have been listening to the music of mobilization until now the brave boys are all mobilized. We must now change to the tunes adapted for the work or preparation in the cantonments. If we have quickened our steps under the thrilling melodies of "We're going over! We're going over! And we won't come back till it's over over there!" let us now add to our determination fully to prepare ourselves to finish the job while the band is playing "It's a long, long way to Tipperary." Watch this page, boys. Every time the step changes the band will play a different piece. And finally, when we have finished the work and all of us lay down our arms, we will dispense with the band and all of us join in singing "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

The Call of the "Forgotten Man."—My, what an urge is going through the church just now in the interest of an old-age support for our worn-out servants of the ministry! It presents its claim upon us with an emphasis that cannot be ignored—that is, if we are still to be Christians. It is a Red Cross summons to a battle field where lie the age-stricken and disease-wounded forms of valiant soldiers calling for a drink of cold water. Shall we turn a deaf ear to such a cry? God forbid! Come, you preacher sons and grandsons of these veterans of the cross and let us moisten those parched lips so plaintively calling to us. Aye, let us tenderly speak to these suffering fathers in our Israel, give them sufficient bread to eat, clothe the nakedness of their battle-scarred bodies, and let them rest their dear old gray-crowned heads in our affectionate arms and know before they die that they are not forgotten!

One Word, More, Please.—Send the pink leaf report to the Board of Finance immediately following the first quarterly conference.

What Would Christmas Be Without Music?

SNOW—thick and white and fleecy; candles twinkling their cheery message of welcome; fragrant fir trees laden with bright balls and tinsel—and music—the sweet singing of all the old-time Christmas carols. That is the real spirit of Christmas!

There's no music in the world like that of a piano. There's no pleasure like gathering friends and family around the piano for a few of the old, familiar songs—those beautiful carols that never grow old.

The Weaver piano is making this Christmas an especially happy one for hundreds of folks. Its full, rich beauty of tone is a constant delight. Its designs are exquisite in every detail of line and finish; its mechanism is as perfect as it is possible to make a piano.

Make this your red-letter Christmas, too! When you buy a Weaver, you're making an investment in happiness—an investment that you'll never regret. Only a small outlay down, and the Weaver is yours, to enjoy the whole time you're paying for it. The terms are purposely made easy. These easy terms will buy a Weaver upright, grand or player piano. ## BOB CAT

By Abbie Farwell Brown.

Bob Cat was gray and homely, and for a tail he had only a stump. But he lived in a pleasant house on a pleasant farm in the pleasant country. There were many things to do in the woods and fields, and sweet smells all about, especially the smell of catnip in the garden behind the house.

Bob was happy and never minded being homely until one day he spied in the window of a railway train that passed the farm a white kitten with a beautiful fluffy tail. That tail made him envious.

"O dear," he miauled pitifully. "How can I get me a nice plummy tail?? I am ugly."

"You've got nothing to worry about," laughed Bunny Rabbit, whose tail was even shorter than Bob's.

"Maybe if you went begging some one would give you a tail," suggested Frisky Squirrel, and he waved his own tail proudly.

"That is a good idea," said Bob. "Surely some one may have a tail to spare." So he sleeked his clothes and put on his most winsome smile. "Prrr, miaow?" he teased. But among all the animals that had tails not one could he find that was willing to give his to him.

"I am too ugly," thought Bob. "No one wants to make an ugly person happy."

"Why don't you steal a tail?" whispered Sly Fox and then sneaked away. He had a beautiful brush, and Bob looked after him wistfully. But Bob was not yet wicked at heart.

Wise Owl hooted at the idea. "If you must have a tail," he said, "don't be a beggar or a thief! Why don't you earn one, little by little?"

"That is the best idea yet," said Bob. "I will go to the city and sell catnip to the city cats. They will pay me in fur, and presently I shall get a fine fluffy tail."

So he picked a good bag of catnip, of strong spicy leaves, the kind that cats like best. Then he sleeked up his coat, and off he started for the city.

"Where are you going?" mumbled Sly Fox, with his mouth full. Bob told him; but Sly Fox sneered. "It's easier to steal than to bargain or beg," he said. "I know. But anyway take care of yourself in the city."

Bob did not answer. Take care of himself indeed! Wasn't he the biggest cat on the farm, and weren't all the creatures of the woods and fields afraid of him, even though he had no tail?

Now when he reached the city it was noisy and dirty, and there were no sweet smells at all. He peddled his wares from house to house wherever he saw a cat sitting in the window. As soon as tabby smelled the fresh spicy smell of Bob's catnip she came purring to the door to bargain with him. His price was always a tuft of fur. And presently instead of catnip the bag was full of soft, warm hair of all colors—white, black and yellow.

"What a fine fluffy tail I shall have!" he thought proudly; and he left many happy cats behind him, running after their tails and acting silly, as catnip-greedies always act.

But on his way home, when Bob was almost out of the city gates, he heard a threatening growl, and before he could get his back up in a safe corner a big black cat fell fiercely upon him and cried, "Give me that catnip."

"It's all sold," wailed Bob. "You'll have to wait."

But out of the alley behind him came scampering four other robber cats of different shades, and they pounced upon Bob's bag of fur. "Here it is!" they howled, fighting one another on account of the lingering smell, scattering the fur about and scratching poor Bob, who tried to defend his property. One among so many, he was glad to escape the robbers and limp home, torn and ruffled.

"I have lost all my day's work," he mourned. "I'm no nearer getting my nice plummy tail than before."

"You must try again," said Wise Owl when he heard the story. "Put the fur in a tight fresh bag so that they can't smell it."

But Sly Fox said, "Nonsense! Better take my advice and do the stealing yourself."

Bob brooded over the matter for several days. He was ashamed of having failed. He felt that he hated all cats because some had hurt him, but that was unjust. He finally decided to try Sly Fox's wicked advice.

He did not tell Wise Owl or anyone else, but he slunk away with a bag of fresh catnip and with his claws newly sharpened in case he should meet the robber cats again. He avoided alleys and kept to the wide streets where he felt safe. He visited the houses of the tabbies, who were glad enough to welcome him and to give him a tuft of fur for his catnip. But besides that, as soon as each tabby's back was turned, Bob would reach out and claw another tuft. Then pouf! Out of the window he would jump before his victim could even cry "Miaow!" In that way naughty Bob soon had his bag crammed to overflowing, and was chuckling over his success. Then hi! something seized him by the back of the neck.

"Here, you! You are the wicked cat who has been stealing the poor pussies' fur," cried the policeman sternly. "Just look at this bag chuck full of every color in the rainbow. You will have to go to prison for this."

Off he dragged Bob to the Cat Show, which is prison; the worst punishment that any cat can have. There is no quiet, and you can't hide; everyone stares in at your cage; strangers poke at you through the bars and say silly things. You can't get out to play and run; there is no catnip; the other cats glare jealously.

Over Bob's cage they put a sign that read: "The Prize Worst Cat. He Steals Fur." And everybody who passed exclaimed in horror: "My, my! What a wicked cat!"

Bob was unhappy and ashamed. "I will never steal any more!" he promised.

So at last they let him out, but he still had a Cat Show tag round his neck, and he could not loosen it. He sneaked home to the farm with no tail, for the police had taken away all the fur, both that which he had stolen and that which he had fairly bought. Bob had waited until night, hoping that no one would see him and ask questions. But in a tree near the farm sat Wise Owl, who could see even at night.

"Where have you been?" he asked sadly. "In trouble, I fear. What is that strange-looking thing which hangs round your neck?"

Bob hung his head. "It is the prison sign," he said. "I can't ever get it off."

"Cat Show. First Prize for Badness," read Wise Owl. "Well, now you have done it, haven't you?"

"Now no one will ever respect me," wailed Bob. "It is worse than having no tail. I don't mind that now."

"Yes, it is much worse," said Wise Owl gravely. "You have been bad.

You must show what you are sorry and try to live it down."

"How?" asked Bob humbly. "Go to the city and tell the tabbies that you are sorry and make each one a present of catnip to pay for the fur you stole."

"No! I will never go to the city again," howled Bob.

"Oh, yes, you must," urged Wise Owl. "It is the only way."

"I should rather stay here without a tail," said Bob.

But on the morrow he started again for the city with a bag of catnip to pay his debts. He had no chance. The tabbies, watching out of the windows, turned their backs as soon as they saw him coming and would not answer the bell. Bob could not even give away his catnip. Even the street cats scampered off when they spied his tag, sneering, "Cat Show! Don't come near us."

Up and down the city Bob padded, calling his wares pitifully, unable to get rid of them. Late in the evening he came to a part of the city that he had never visited before. The houses were big and the windows were big. And there on a window seat of the biggest house sat a little fluffy white kitten, looking out wistfully. When she sniffed catnip she began to purr and looked pleased and raced down to the door when Bob called. She had the most beautiful fur in the world. A ruff stood out all round her neck, and the tail she waved was like a great white ostrich plume.

"Oh!" said Bob with big eyes. "What a beautiful tail you have!"

"Pooh," purred the kitten. "Who cares about tails? I'll give you mine if you like. I'm tired of it."

"Will you really?" mewed Bob, wondering at such generosity.

"Of course," said the kitten. "It doesn't make me happy. It might make you happy if you want it. But what delicious catnip! I wish I could have all I want."

"I will bring you all want," cried Bob eagerly, "for a present. I don't want any fur."

"But I want to go where catnip grows and pick it myself," said the kitten. "I want to run and play outdoors. I hate the city. They never let me go out—I am so precious. They take me to cat shows because I am precious. See, this is my dreadful tag. It is so uncomfortable." And sure enough, round her neck under her fur on a blue ribbon she wore a tag like Bob's, but hers read: "First Prize for Beauty."

"How cruel," cried Bob indignantly, "to punish you for being beautiful! Don't they love you?"

"They are just proud of me," said the white kitten. "If they really loved me, they would want to make me happy. They would not shut me up without catnip. They would let me run in the woods with good cats like you. For I like you in spite of your tag and your bobtail. You are kind and sorry."

"Thank you," said Bob humbly. "Then I don't care about them myself. Will you come with me and live on the farm where catnip grows?"

"Oh, yes," purred the kitten, "I will, and we shall share everything, fur and catnip and all. And by and by our tags will wear off."

So Bob and the white kitten crept down the big front steps of the big house and went frisking off to the country where there were pleasant fields and pleasant woods and sweet smells of catnip and other things. And there on the farm they lived happily ever after with Wise Owl for their friend.

But long before that Sly Fox had come to a sudden and deserved end.—Youth's Companion.

He: "That dance last night reminded me of a horse race I saw last week at Belmont Park."

She: "How come?"

He: "Well, after the first lap it was neck and neck."—Mirror.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets That Are Nauseless, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bed time, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.

COOL SPRING

While the Cool Spring pastor and family were joining in a Thanksgiving service at the school auditorium Thursday a goodly number of the good people of Providence church entered the parsonage and spread a bountiful Thanksgiving dinner, which they all enjoyed together after the return of the parson and family.

The kitchen table was also loaded with numerous packages containing good thing to be cooked later.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Providence presented the parsonage with three nice new quilts, making five new quilts presented by this busy society for the past twelve months.

These are exceptionally good people, and the way they treat the pastor and family makes any man of God do his best. The pastor and all the members of the family say that last Thanksgiving was the best and happiest they have ever experienced since they have been living in parsonages, and never will forget the good day made possible by the good people of Providence church. Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

We, the members of the Liberty congregation of the Davie circuit, Winston-Salem district, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in parting with our pastor, Rev. James B. Fitzgerald, who has served us so faithfully for the past three years, resolve:

First, That we appreciate the earnest and faithful work that he has done during the whole time of his stay, believing that he conscientiously gave of his best labor to every church on the charge; that he has stood at all times for community uplift, civic improvement, law enforcement, and above all else higher and better Christianity. We regret deeply his leaving and commend him to the work he may be sent to serve for the coming year. Signed on behalf of the Liberty congregation,

W. H. Bivins,
G. W. Everhardt,
J. W. Carter.

Orders are being filed for Christmas cards. We have a large assortment to select from. If desired we will make selection for you.

EDITORIAL ~ PARAGRAPHS

"Brag is a big dog, but Holdfast is better," was a familiar saying of former generations but present day lads seldom, if ever, hear it. Oliver Wendell Holmes set the stamp of his genius upon the same idea in the following terse and homely phrase:

"Stick to your aim; the mongrel's hold will slip,
But only crowbars loose the bull'dog's grip."

Governor Morrison's recent declaration that he will employ every power granted him by the constitution to prevent lynchings in North Carolina while he is governor is just such as we should expect from the state's chief executive. In this action he will have the united support of the good citizenship of the state. While upon this subject of the peace and dignity of the state we wonder if the constitution gives the governor any authority to assist the prison authorities to get hold of Doc Peacock who when last heard from was reported to be in Florida.

"If thou hast run with footmen and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horsemen?" inquires the prophet. Among the enemies of life are both the small and the great. The small, or smaller, are here called footmen and the great or greater are called horsemen. There is also suggested the possibility of defeat at the hands of the inferior. The little sin may eat as a canker and the little tasks may cause one to throw up his hands in surrender. If so how can one expect to battle with giants or bring the larger task to a joyful completion?

This is a dangerous book for your children. What book? "The Story of the Bible," by Hendrix Van Loon. To eliminate the supernatural, to ignore, or explain away the miraculous, and to make the author's personal opinions the primary rule of interpretation seems to be the outstanding objectives of Mr. Van Loon. Any account of the life of Christ that omits entirely the resurrection story arouses at once grave suspicions, as to the intent of the author, or as to his ability to determine what is of first importance in the life of Jesus. Beware of Van Loon's "Story of the Bible."

Dr. Charles R. Brown, dean of Yale Divinity School and a Congregationalist, in his appraisal of the characteristic contributions of Methodists to our Christianity names the following: (1) Their splendid Christian zeal; (2) Their large utilization of the emotional nature in the formation of Christian character; (3) Their sense of the value of organization. Dr. Brown says: "I regard the polity of the Methodist church as the best in the world, not even excepting the Roman Catholics." Yet in the face of such an appraisal from that great Congregational preacher, educator and writer, there are Methodists who are willing to allow their zeal to cool, who discount the value of the emotional in religion and who are constantly hammering at our church polity.

Dr. Sam Steele says that he is not for Methodist unification until the Northern Methodists hold a memorial service in honor of Jefferson Davis in one of the leading churches and that Bishop Hamilton leads the prayer, Dr. Claudius B. Spencer delivers the address of eulogy, the assembly sings "Maryland, My Maryland," and Bishop McConnell pronounces the benediction. "When that happens I am ready for unification, and not till then," says Dr. Steele." Fortunately, Dr. Steele speaks for himself and not for any considerable portion of the Methodist church. Furthermore, the church's action in all things should be based upon religion and not politics.

"The Children's Bible" by Sherman and Kent is the last word in the printer's art and is perhaps more widely and enthusiastically endorsed by the leading religious periodicals of the country than any book of its kind. "The text is that of the Bible itself, but in the language of the child, so that it may easily be read to the younger children and by those who are older." These selections from both the Old and New Testament will be, also, of perennial interest to adults. Dr. Henry Van Dyke says of the book: "I wish I could have had a book like this for my children when they were little. Now I shall use it for my grandchildren. We must keep the Bible in living touch with the youngest generation." The volume, which costs only $3.75, will make an admirable Christmas present. The Advocate will be glad to order this handsome and invaluable book for any of our readers who may so desire.

President Coolidge in his message to Congress gives little encouragement to bootleggers and those who sympathize with the illegal traffic in liquor. The President says:

"The prohibition amendment to the constitution requires the Congress and the President to provide adequate laws to prevent its violation. It is my duty to enforce such laws. For that purpose a treaty is being negotiated with Great Britain with respect to the right of search of hovering vessels. To prevent smuggling, the coast guard should be greatly strengthened, and a supply of swift power boats should be provided. The major sources of production should be rigidly regulated, and every effort should be made to suppress interstate traffic. With this action on the part of the national government, and the co-operation which is usually rendered by municipal and state authorities, prohibition should be made effective. Free government has no greater menace than disrespect for authority and continual violation of law. It is the duty of a citizen not only to observe the law but to let it be known that he is opposed to its violation."

"It is my duty to enforce such laws," declares the President of the United States. At the same time let every American citizen remember it is his duty both to obey and to help enforce these laws. He who fails is not 100 per cent American.

WHAT THE SPECTATOR LEARNS

It has been said that a man cannot white-wash himself by painting the other man black. Neither can a man build a pedestal for himself by attempting to destroy that upon which another stands. To say ugly things about another is an unconscious bid for the world to talk in like manner about one's self. For the world has ever persisted in paying a man back in his own coin.

Be not deceived. When a man or woman comes to you to say unkind or untruthful things about another the same people go to that other individual to say the same sort of things about you. The poisoned tongue like the tooth of an adder is no respecter of persons.

Why do people persist in carrying a hammer with which to knock, rather than to build? Why make the tongue as the tongue of an asp instead of an instrument of praise?

To these questions there are several answers. Sometimes the trouble is a bad liver. The afflicted should take calomel. Sometimes the trouble is a bad heart. Neither calomel nor strychnine will answer the purpose. There must be a new spirit, a spirit of love.

NORTH CAROLINA BAPTISTS IN CONVENTION

The Baptist State Convention is in session this week in Gastonia, the textile metropolis of Gaston county, which leads all the counties of the world in the number of its cotton mills. The Baptists will be at home in the cotton mill city. In fact the Baptists are at home anywhere. They, like the Methodists, have been strong with the common people, but they, too, are at home now in society. We have never heard of Dr. B. W. Spillman, who has for six years presided over the convention, or Mr. Archibald Johnson, the blockade preacher, adorning themselves in the conventional attire of evening dress. But quite a few of their brethren of the laity do.

The Baptists are a great people. They are loyal to the core. They undertake and push to successful completion great enterprises. They believe in God and in Jesus Christ as His Son, and in the Bible as the word of God. And last of all, they believe in themselves. To this great body of militant Christians we extend the right hand of fellowship.

ARE YOU AN ORATOR?

For an answer to the question we refer you to the following story that has been set adrift:

A negro met an acquaintance of his, also colored, on the street one day and was surprised to see his friend had on a new suit, new hat, new shoes and other evidences of prosperity. "Hey, boy," he said, "how come you dressed up this way? Is you got a job?" "I'se got somethin' better'n any job," replied the other; "I'se got a profession," "What is it?" "I'se a orator." "What's a orator?" "Don't you know?" replied the resplendent one in surprise. "Well, I'll tell you what a orator is. If you was to walk up to a ordinary nigger and ask him how much was two and two, he'd say 'four,' but if you was to ask one of us orators how much was two and two he'll say, 'When in de cou'se of human events it becomes necessary to take de numeral of de second denomination and add to it de figger two, I says unto you, and says it without fear of successful contradiction, dat de result will invari'bly be four.' Dat's a orator."

The Northwestern tells us that forty co-eds in the Sociological Club of the University of Minnesota were called upon to answer the following question: "What is your ideal of a husband?" The responses left the following attributes in the fore: "Moderately good looking, athletically inclined, morally clean, respectful toward religion, healthy, appreciative of the good and beautiful things of life, well trained socially, optimistic and good-natured, chivalrous." It is a matter of congratulatory comment that wealth was not even mentioned, though an income to permit comfortable living was mentioned by several.

NOT THE MACHINE BUT THE MAN AT FAULT

It is said that out of the inspection last year of 73,000 automobile brakes 13,000 were found defective in New York City. The report may be accurate and as large per cent of defective brakes may exist throughout the entire country. Other parts of the auto machinery may also be defective. Yet the fact remains that the greater part of the accidents which resulted in the death of almost 12,000 people and the injury of a much greater number were not caused by defective machinery, but in the majority of cases by defective drivers. If the men and women who sit at the wheel were as well constructed as the cars that the factories turn out the casualty list would be comparatively small. The machinery in this country for making auto drivers evidently is not in quality on a par with that which turns out automobiles.

CARRIE NATION OF HATCHET FAME

Last week we referred to Carrie Nation's sayings about little dogs and in the same paragraph told what had become of her old Bible. Some of our readers took this to be an endorsement of the old lady's illegal methods of dealing with the liquor traffic.

It puzzles us to know why anyone should for a single moment have got hold of such a notion. The Bible, for instance, quotes repeatedly from the devil and tells us of his belongings, of his sifter in which he sifted Simon, of "the synagogue of Satan," and such like. But no one ever interpreted this to mean that the Bible endorses Satan. Why then should the Advocate be looked upon as approving of the methods of Carrie Nation simply because it quoted one of her sayings and gave a bit of interesting information about her old Bible?

The facts are that Carrie Nation made the mistake which is just now a widespread error. It is this: That illegal methods may be employed in the enforcement of law and good morals. You cannot enforce the law by illegal methods, neither will good morals come as a result of violence which is contrary to law. Obedience to law does not come as the fruits of lawlessness.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION

The Youth's Companion has always held the highest ideals in regard to the cleanliness of the matter contained in their publication. They have been the leaders in advocacy of the doctrine of clean literature in the home. We can think of nothing of more serious moment in modern life than this question of clean literature, especially for the young people, for what with very carelessly censored moving pictures, and various other perverse influences the young people of today are in grave danger. Interesting reading matter which will keep them at home and improve them, at the same time that it proves interesting, emphasizes the importance of the circulation of such literature as the Youth's Companion.

THE DARING OF FAITH

Faith outruns the facts and is swift in its search for goals that are distant and difficult. It is not content to camp on the frontiers but hastens away to the unexplored regions. Read the eleventh chapter of Hebrews for proof of all this.

The heroes of faith as God has set them in the picture gallery of the illustrious were all men and women of vision and of daring "of whom the world was not worthy."

Their lives rested not upon the things that they could prove but upon the things that they believed. Call the roll and see: Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, Rahab, Gideon, Barak, and others.

All their lives through the centuries have declared that faith is the victor. "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside the weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."

THE ANCHOR HOLDS AMID THE STORM

"Train up a child in the way that he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it," is God's truth. It is a law of life. It contains words of encouragement for all who are instructors of youth. Every parent is given to know that his labor is not in vain.

But there are exceptions to this rule as there are to all others. But these glaring exceptions often cease to be exceptions because the moorings of youth hold with tremendous tenacity. Life once cabled in its early years to a godly home is seldom wrecked upon the wild seas.

We cite two remarkable examples. The first is that of Rev. William A. Sunday:

"Years ago I walked down a street in Chicago in company with some ball players who were famous in this world—some are dead now—and we went into a saloon. It was Sunday afternoon, and we got tanked up and then went and sat down on a corner. It was a vacant lot at that time. We sat down on a curbing. Across the street men and women were playing on instruments—horns, flutes and slide trombones—and the others were singing the gospel hymns that I used to hear my mother sing back in the log cabin in Iowa, and back in the old church where I used to go to Sunday school.

"And God painted on the canvas of my recollection and memory a vivid picture of the scenes of other days and other faces.

"Many have long since turned to dust. I sobbed and sobbed, and a young man stepped out and said: 'We are going down to the Pacific Garden Mission. Won't you come down to the mission? I am sure you will enjoy it.'

"I arose and said to the boys, 'I am through; I am going; and I turned my back on them. Some of them laughed and some of them mocked me; one of them gave me encouragement; others never said a word.

"I turned and left that little group on the corner of State and Madison streets, walked to the little mission, fell on my knees, and staggered out of sin and into the arms of the Saviour."

But keep in mind that it was the recollections of his early home and good childhood influences which broke the wayward heart of Billie Sunday and turned him back to God.

The other instance that serves to enforce the value of godly influences in early life is the case of S. H. Hadley, for many years the superintendent of the Jerry McCauley Mission in New York City and who was converted in that mission when Jerry McCauley was himself in charge of the mission and Hadley was a drunken bum of fine natural gifts who one night visited the mission. Of that memorable night Hadley says:

"I listened to the testimony of probably twenty-five redeemed drunkards, every one of whom told my story. They had all been saved from ruin.

"When the invitation was given, I raised my hand and soon was kneeling down with quite a crowd of drunkards. I was a total stranger, but I felt that I had sympathy and it helped me.

"Jerry made the first prayer. I shall never forget it:

"Dear Saviour, won't you look down in pity upon these poor souls? They need your help, Lord; they cannot get along without it. Blessed Jesus! these poor sinners have got themselves into a bad hole. Won't you help them out? Speak to them, Lord; do for Jesus' sake. Amen."

"Then Mrs. McCauley prayed fervently for us. 'Dear Saviour,' she said in closing, 'I was a drunkard down in Cherry Hill fourteen years ago, and you saved me. Save these poor drunkards for Jesus' sake.'

"Then Jerry sang in his peculiar voice, still kneeling—

"There is a fountain filled with blood,

Drawn from Immanuel's veins;

And sinners plunged beneath that flood,

Loose all their guilty stains."

"I had heard that dear old song years before around our fireside at evening prayer, in my happy childhood, and it came back as a sweet memory."

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Methodist men's clubs will send the names of their presidents and secretaries, also name of pastor of the church to Rev. J. W. Frazer, 15 N. Joachim Street, Mobile, Ala.

"Two Mile Religion" was the subject of Rev. M. McM. Grant's first sermon last Sunday morning at Lumberton. Large congregations heard the new pastor at both the morning and evening services.

Rev. A. L. Lucas spoke to the Wesleyan Methodist Conference at Colfax on the necessity of the abiding Christ. Mr. Lucas emphasized that we need more than a historical Christ—the need an abiding Savior.

Rev. W. A. Bivens has been appointed by Bishop Denny as pastor at Fairfield. Brother Bivens has been superintendent of the school at Fairfield for several years and is a man of very fine ability. He will render good service at Fairfield.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of West Market Street church are closing a year that has to its credit unusual activity. The collection of $6,500 for local and foreign work is among the things accomplished by these missionary women. Is there a better record than this anywhere?

Rev. W. O. Goode, conference educational secretary, was in Greensboro last Sunday and preached at 11 o'clock in West Market Street church. He spoke aptly and interestingly upon the subject of "Ideals in Education." The large congregation was delighted with his message.

Mrs. T. D. Ellis, wife of Dr. T. D. Ellis, secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, died at their home in Louisville, Ky., early Monday morning, December 3. Her body was laid to rest in Americus, Ga., Wednesday, December 5. Our deepest sympathy is extended to Dr. Ellis in this hour of his great bereavement. Only those who have gone this way understand.

Of interest to his numerous friends will be the following from Rev. W. P. Constable: "I am now out of the hospital and am spending a few weeks with my son at Durham. I am much better and believe I am on the road to recovery. It was found at the hospital that an operation was necessary and we have every reason to believe that same was successful. My address will be 211 Morehead Avenue, Durham, N. C., for several weeks."

The Rev. E. H. Davis, new pastor of the Methodist church, and Mrs. Davis arrived here Monday afternoon. The ladies of the two missionary societies were at the parsonage to receive them and had a warm supper prepared. The pantry had been filled with good things to eat earlier in the day by a pounding from the church members. Mr. and Mrs. Davis charmed all who met them and they are receiving a warm welcome in Franklinton.—The News.

Rev. W. A. Lambeth thrilled a great congregation at Trinity church Friday night when he delivered his wonderful address on the "forgotten man" to the South Georgia conference. His address was full of quaint philosophy, old truths put in new clothes, wit and wisdom driven home to the hearts of his hearers by an earnestness of delivery not often found in public speakers. Lambeth has a great message bounding out of a great, warm heart and a life all given to God. The large congregation who heard him Friday night were tremendously impressed with the truth of his message and will be mighty glad to hear him again.—Wesleyan Advocate.

Rev. and Mrs. W. G. Farrar and children, who have been living at Princeton for the past four years, passed through Smithfield Tuesday en route to Raleigh and Apex to spend a day or two before going to their new home in Rocky Mount. Rev. Mr. Farrar has had charge of the Princeton circuit. A new church five miles north of Selma, Johnson's Chapel, was built last year. Mr. Farrar has done a splendid work on his charge, 206 having been received into the church during his pastorate of four years. The conference sent Rev. Mr. Farrar to Rocky Mount, and the best wishes of a large circle of friends in Johnston county go with him and his family to their new home.—Smithfield Herald.

Bishop Beauchamp, who recently returned from Europe, declares that in his judgment the Protestant church has not faced such an opportunity in a hundred years as is now presented in Europe. The bishop regards the present period of Centenary collections as one of vital importance.

Brother O. P. Routh says: "You will find me at Central Falls instead of New Hope Academy. We have been pounded three times. First attack was by Central Falls; the second was West End; the third was by Cedar Falls. The first of these was more than a month ago; the others came soon after. We are enjoying the good things yet."

During the present year between January 1 and September 1 the Centenary collections of the M. E. Church, South, reached the sum of $2,365,851.61, it is announced by Dr. W. G. Cram, directing secretary of the Centenary Commission. "Of this amount," says Dr. Cram, "$2,165,011.11 came from the pledges, $52,191.80 from the Sunday school, $156,654.70 from the Epworth Leagues, and the balance from other sources." The total amount of Centenary subscriptions as given by Dr. Cram is $36,911,166 with a total amount paid of $18,035,502.98.

Mr. Brisbane laughs at the dupes of Roman Catholicism. Here is what he says: Mr. Otto Cook, dying, leaves $1,000 to his wife and $36,500 to be spent on prayers for his soul. If they ever laugh in heaven, and if Otto Cook ever gets there, he ought to hear unusually loud laughter on his arrival. Undoubtedly the religious organization inheriting the $36,500 will remedy the injustice in that kind of will. It's also to be hoped that Divine Providence will find a way to impress upon Otto Cook the fact that he exaggerates considerably the importance of his own little soul. For that kind of soul, ten cents should be enough."

Rev. W. L. Sherrill, pastor at Leaksville and secretary of the Western North Carolina conference, spent several weeks last summer in a hospital in Charlotte, where he underwent an operation for gall stones. He finds it necessary to return to the hospital for further treatment and the doctor has ordered him to take a rest of three months. He insisted that he surrender his work at Leaksville, but his people would not consent to his giving up his work, but rather preferred that some preacher fill the pulpit at the morning hour and the laymen conduct the evening services. Such an arrangement has been effected. We hope that a few months quiet and absolute rest will restore Brother Sherrill to perfect health.

Here is how the Centenary dollar is pro-rated: Twenty-four cents goes to foreign mission enterprises through the General Department Board of Missions; ten cents, foreign work, woman's department; fourteen cents, home missions, general department; five cents, home missions, woman's department; ten cents is returned to the annual conference where it was collected to supplement salaries of underpaid preachers and assist local home missions work; seven cents is spent for church extension, and a cent of this goes abroad; four cents goes to buildings at mission headquarters, eleven cents goes to the new European mission fields; seven cents goes to the war work fund in the United States. This war work fund is now being used for soldier and sailor welfare and to build churches in educational centers.

An editorial in the News-Dispatch says: "Rev. A. D. Wilcox, the new pastor of Grace Methodist church, occupied the pulpit for the first time Sunday. At the morning hour he introduced himself to his people, told them of his pleasure of being sent to Wilmington, and then introduced briefly a series of discourses on "The Sermon on the Mount." He further announced that the evening services would be evangelistic in character and urged all members to return to hear the first one in the evening. They returned in full force and a large congregation faced the preacher at the evening hour. At both services the Grace congregation was supplemented by a number of visitors. The evening sermon was strong and convincing. Using God's call to Gideon, when he had the blues, he outlined the types of men God uses in His cause. The ending was that of a continued story, with his hearers impatient for the next installment. Mr. Wilcox is at home in the pulpit, creates an atmosphere of good fellowship, and then with vigor of thought and delivery holds his audience."

CENTENARY PAY-OUT CAMPAIGN

At a meeting of the presiding elders and the conference board of missions in Hickory on Friday, December 7, plans were made to hold district meetings to work out more thoroughly the arrangements for the All Day Missionary Meeting and the Week of Prayer in January. The pastors, the district lay leader, the charge and church lay leaders, presidents of woman's missionary societies, and the local church Centenary treasurers are invited to attend these district meetings.

The following meetings were definitely arranged for: Greensboro district, Monday, December 17, at 10:30 a. m. in the office of the Odell Hardware Company; Mt. Airy district, Tuesday, December 18, at 10:30 a. m. in the Rural Hall Methodist church; Charlotte district, Tuesday, December 18, at 10 a. m. at Central church, Monroe; Winston-Salem district, Wednesday, December 19, at 10 a. m. in Centenary church, Winston-Salem; Shelby district, Wednesday, December 19, at 1:30 p. m. at Main Street church, Gastonia; Salisbury district, Thursday, December 20, at 10 a. m. at South Main Street church, Salisbury; Asheville district, Thursday, December 20, at 10 a. m., Central church, Asheville; Statesville district, Friday, December 28, at 10 a. m., Broad Street, Statesville. R. M. Courtney.

RED SPRINGS

I should be lacking in gratitude if I failed to express for myself and family the pleasure that we have experienced in serving this good people during during the past year. Even the afflictions through which the pastor passed gave occasion for their kindness to express itself beyond what we could otherwise have expected. From the time they escorted us to the new parsonage on New Year's day until we started for conference, we were shown every courtesy that was possible, and they saw to it that every obligation on the charge was met. And then it did our hearts good to receive their greetings upon our return. Again on Thanksgiving eve they sent the representatives of one of the leading grocery stores of the place with a barrel full of good things to eat to make happy our hearts for thanksgiving. We cannot conceive of any people being kinder to their pastor. He would be a poor sort of a man who would not render the best service that is in him under such circumstances. May God give us great things in His service during the year upon which we are entering!

L. S. Massey, Pastor.

THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE BROTHERHOOD

To All Members:

Bro. M. D. Hix was a member of our organization and as such I have drawn check on our treasury in favor of Sister Hix for the amount due her as beneficiary.

I am now calling for assessment No. 3 to replace in our treasury the amount of benefit paid out to Sister Hix. Please send me your checks so that we may have the next benefit in treasury ready to meet the call when it shall come. See Constitution and By-Laws.

Sincerely,

W. P. Constable, Sec.-Treas.

Swan Quarter, N. C.

WAY BACK IN 1890

The world's most famous automobile manufacturer was working in a bicycle shop.

A millionaire hotel owner was hopping bells.

America's steel king was stoking a blast furnace.

An international banker was firing a locomotive.

WASHINGTON DISTRICT NOTICE

The preachers, lay leaders and district stewards of the Washington district are called to meet in Tarboro at 10 a. m. December 18th, 1923. Let everyone concerned endeavor to be there.

I ask that the preachers urge their officers to come.

OBSERVATIONS OF A BUSY-IDLER

Touching Special Personal Prayer—The Work of a Quiet Man.

By C. W. Hunt.

A young man feeling the call to preach, went first and prepared himself, giving many years to toil over books that he might labor well for the Master. Last year he acceptably filled his first appointment, endearing himself to all—of every creed that came in touch with him. He was returned to his work for the second year, and entered gladly into the fray. Hardly had he begun when he was suddenly stricken and the surgeon's knife was his only hope, and had to stand for three operations before the trouble was removed, and he was left with but a shadow of human hope. It went out to all the Methodist churches in Charlotte, and some others, on Sunday, November 18th, that Rev. Thos. F. Higgins, pastor of Brevard Street church, was unconscious and at death's door. All of Charlotte Methodism went to special prayer for this life of service just begun. Monday the news came he was holding his own, and Tuesday that he was improved; and from day to day since there has been more hope, and his ultimate recovery is expected.

* * * *

A few weeks ago, in passing, the writer stopped to pay his respects to the first preacher-visitor that he remembers, in the home, Rev. J. W. Wellons of the Christian church, who is now nearing his 98th birthday; still possessing all his mental faculties, with the same bright, honest eye of 60 years ago, when I first knew him. Long since retired from pastoral work, it seemed unusually fitting that this saint should make his home at Elon College, where his influence can radiate to all parts of his beloved denomination, thus giving the center of the church of his choice the benefit of his ripe experience and saintly character. We talked of the olden days, of his love for a father, with whom he long lived and labored as neighbor, friend and minister; of the many good times they had together, and of "Uncle Wellons" present work. Said he: "When the fire came and swept away our main building I told Dr. Harper, the president, that I was too old to get out, seeking aid for rebuilding, but that I would stay here in my room and pray, holding Dr. Harper up to a throne of grace hourly. He went away and came back with a hopeful sum, and we thanked God. He went away again and came back with more than as much again. All the time I was praying with faith, and each time the news was better." I was about to say goodbye, when he said: "Not until you and I have prayed together." He led the prayer; every word a personal, pointed petition for me and mine, and thanks for the life of him who has gone on. In the place of the one Elon College building that went up in smoke there has come five splendid buildings, and the happy faced and aged saint watches with more than ordinary interest the many men who are placing the bricks and the timbers for a greater Elon." "The prayers of the righteous man availeth much." Who would not feel honored for being prayed for, by "Uncle Jimmie Wellons?"

* * * *

Several years ago an unobtrusive business man of Charlotte, born and reared there, approached the editor of a morning paper, with the suggestion that inasmuch as so much space was given to news from everywhere, good, bad and indifferent, that there be printed in a conspicuous place in the paper each day a selected verse of scripture. The matter did not appeal to the editor, and a second visit was fruitless. The matter was then taken to The News, the afternoon paper. Here it was agreed to run the verses, provided the quiet man would provide them. This he did every morning for six months; at the end of which time the editor informed him that a sheet containing selected verses ad come to him from New York, and the quiet man would be released. Frank D. Alexander, the quiet man investigated and found that some man somewhere in New York state had felt a similar call to a new work, had persuaded his local editor to do what Mr. Alexander had persuaded the Charlotte News editor to do, with the result that this editor had so many calls for information as to where these verses, at the head of the editorial column came from, that unknown comrade of Alexander's prepared them in sheet containing selected verses had come to him them. Not by prayer, but by a call two men think ing along the same line, neither known to the other, started something that has gone on and on and been an inspiration and a help to many an oppressed soul. Heed the call! Wonderful works have begun from what seemed a matter of small import.

NOTES FROM YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL

Bishop Denny a Member of the First Football Team at Princeton.

The first football game between Yale and Princeton was played fifty years ago this fall, and a fact of great interest to Methodist students at Yale is that one of the members of the first Princeton team was Bishop Collins Denny of the M. E. Church, South. This game was the first played under association rules. There were twenty players on each side, and it is said that the ball exploded during the game. We judge the bishop was a good player, since Princeton won by a score of 3-0. This first contest was marked, by the cordial feeling which has characterized the relations of the two great universities through the years.

Bishop McConnell Addresses Wesley Club at Yale.

"You will find Methodist congregations sympathetic, open-minded and receptive to the truth," said Bishop Francis J. McConnell, in an address to the Yale Wesley Club, on November 26. The bishop congratulated the young men on the high type of training they are receiving at Yale, and on the opportunities that will be theirs as Methodist pastors. In his very practical and helpful talk he reminded them that although every man is in duty bound to get the very best preparation possible, in the actual work of the ministry, his first consideration must be the needs of his people.

The Yale Wesley Club is composed of Methodist students in the Divinity and Graduate Schools, together with the Methodist pastors of New Haven. The United Brethren and Evangelicals have been included by invitation, since their interests and point of view are so similar to those of the Methodists. The Methodist group in the Divinity School is by far the largest denominational group. The Wesley Club exists to promote fellowship among the members of the different Methodisms, and represents a practical experiment in unification, the results of which are most gratifying.

North Carolina is well represented in the Wesley Club by L. M. Hall, Wallace, N. C. (Trinity College); S. A. Maxwell, Pink Hill, N. C. (Trinity College); A. J. Hobbs, Jr., Corapeake, N. C. (Trinity College and Emory University); R. M. Price, Greensboro, N. C. (Trinity College).

Miss Florence Teague
Secretary of Wesley Club.

REPORT OF BOARD OF LAY ACTIVITIES

(Adopted by the North Carolina conference, at Elizabeth City, N. C., November 17, 1923.)

Your Board of Lay Activities recommend that we undertake in the year just ahead of us to carry out the following program:

1. That we set as our goal the payment in full of all salaries and of all conference collections for the year 1924. To this end we request the presiding elders and pastors to use the lay leaders to set up early in the year a financial program in accordance with paragraph (3) below, and toward the close of the year to use them in such final efforts as may be necessary to complete all conditions in all churches.

2. That we reaffirm our obligations to carry to a successful conclusion the great undertakings of the Centenary campaign and the Christian Education Movement; and we offer our services in the Special Effort to be made during the year for the benefit of our superannuated preachers.

3. That a thoroughgoing every-member canvass be undertaken in every church as soon as possible after the adjournment of this conference, and along such general lines as are laid down on pages 35 and 36 of our Manual of Lay Activities; that we emphasize the doctrine of stewardship not only of property but also of life; and that every member of the church be urged to make weekly payments, or monthly payments in the case of church members who belong to circuits that do not have preaching every Sunday.

4. That a detailed financial report be made to the congregation of every church, monthly in stations and at least quarterly in circuits; and that early in each conference year full explanation be made of each congregation of every item included in the collections and expenditures for the year.

We strongly urge this recommendation, to the end that intelligent and systematic giving may be secured from every member of the church.

5. That boards of lay activities in all the districts, in all the circuits, and in all the churches be formed, organized, and made effective; and that the committees required by Paragraph 547 of the Discipline of 1922 be appointed, organized, and set to work.

6. That we undertake to procure for our highways such markers as for example: "Two Miles to Salem Church. Everybody Welcome"; and appropriate signs about hotels and railway stations; and that names be put on our churches for the benefit of strangers that may be passing that way.

7. That the second Sunday in June be set apart as Laymen's Day and that we undertake to have laymen hold services in every church during the absence of pastors attending the Preachers' Institute at Trinity College.

We request that the bishop and conference be asked to give an hour for the purposes of the Board of Lay Activities, and that Dr. W. P. Few speak on the work of that board.

We recommend that Dr. W. P. Few be re-elected conference lay leader.

The officers of the board are:

W. P. Few, Chairman, Durham, N. C.
B. W. O'Neal, Vice Chm., Oriental, N. C.
F. S. Aldridge, Sec.-Treas., Durham, N. C.

LETTER FROM CHAIRMAN BOARD OF FINANCE

Dear Brother:

At the recent session of the annual conference a resolution was passed by the conference that there should be a voluntary collection taken in every church in the conference, during the month of December, for the benefit of our claimants. Let me urge that no preacher shall overlook this. The amounts may be small in some places, but let us hope that the total shall be sufficient to relieve the suffering and needs of those who are so dear to the hearts of all of us.

We have today buried one of our claimants, Bro. M. D. Hix. He had been sick a long time. The expense on this account has been very heavy. Now we have added one of burial. This is only one of the needy families and friends among the list of superannuates and claimants.

After you have taken this collection, please send it to Mr. Junius C. Wrenn, Siler City, N. C., the treasurer of the Board of Finance. He with the advice of the other officers of the board will attend to the distribution.

Let us do all we can for those who have spent their lives for the cause of Christ, but who now are helplessly awaiting for this reward.

Sincerely,
F. S. Aldridge,
Chm. Board of Finance, N. C. Conference.

THE MANESS CHARGE

We are hack on the job hard at work. We have four as good churches as any charge—all equipped with Sunday school rooms, and the nice part of it is they are all paid for. We work on the pay as you go plan, and our people come when they are called and stay till it is done.

Saturday afternoon we called the stewards together and completed the plans for building a six-room parsonage, work to begin at once. At the close of this meeting we got the surprise of our life. Just as the sun was kissing the tips of the trees good night, the stillness was broken by the honk and roar of cars and before we could figure out what it all meant that big-hearted Bro. J. C. Cummins broke into the parsonage, followed by his good wife and a number of friends from Cool Spring, all loaded with good things, passed through to the pantry and unloaded; then back to the cars and more good things were brought and piled in until the space was so full that we are forced to make more room to store it all away. It all amounted to more than forty dollars. You know this makes a preacher feel good. Just think of it! Forty dollars worth of eats in the house at one time! Oh, boy!

We have been here three years and have wanted for nothing. We are safe in saying that we are serving the best people in the district. May God bless them and give them all the good things of life is the prayer of their humble pastor and family.

L. R. Gaines.

MY FORGOTTEN BROTHER

By Oscar P. Fitzgerald.

A man I saw whose step was not that of youth, nor whose body bore the appearance of that health and vigor found with the man of twenty-two. His hair had turned to silver. His eyes, though clear as the day's light, had lost their vision to scenes far away. His shoulders were stooped as one with burdens great in weight. His knees bent in walking as one who had carried the burdens of other men. His clothes, though neat, were worn through many winters, as one could readily see. His general appearance bore that of a difficult and hard struggle, as he trod the last mile of his earthly pilgrimage. His trouble was not that of mind or soul. For there rested upon him that calm, serene attitude, as a halo of light. But his was the appearance which is expressed in one when he has fought a valiant fight, won a glorious victory, only to find, when the din of battle is cleared away, that his comrades have deserted him. Yet there was an expression of joy and peace upon him that he had done his duty. He had carried on. He had been wounded. Well, probably not fatally. But his wounds were grievous. And none of his comrades had remained by to offer aid, or to carry him from the scene of battle. They had deserted him. They had left him to die without the human touch, the human gratitude, the human sympathy, the bandages and balm that might stop the flow of life's blood. Was it because he was old? Too old to go into the heat of battle again that this neglect was his? This bitter experience of seeing his comrades leave him on the battle field to care for his own wounds, and bear his own pain alone? Was it because he could no longer keep step with the young and carry as heavy a pack? Was it because he was wounded and unfit for future service that he was left to find relief and succor alone? No, it was none of these. He had been forgotten. There were other battlefields, other battles to fight, and his comrades had gone to conquer these. They had just forgotten him.

"Stranger, I see you have the scars that tell of many battles." "Yes," said the stranger, "I have been in many battles. I have fought through many hard struggles."

"Yes," said he, "I had a Commander who ordered us to take neither script nor purse on our crusade, 'for the laborer is worthy of his hire.' And I followed His command. While a soldier on the active list I was fed and clothed. Oh, it was not the richest diet, nor the best clothes; but I was able to keep body from hunger and fairly warm. And, too, I had the companionship and love of my comrades."

"Did not your Commander provide better provisions for His soldiers than that?"

"Oh, yes; He gave us water that we need never thirst, food that we need never hunger, and clothes of righteousness that keep us forever warm in His eternal affections. But somehow those we fought for, those whom we fought by and won to the great Cause never thought of giving us much. So when we became old and worn out we had no means of having the little comfort for our last days."

"I see you have a deep scar upon your breast."

"Yes, that was given me in my last great battle. You see, I was getting old; not many people wanted me. I had spent my youth and strength in service, now all that was gone. But my faith and loyalty to my Commander was still as great as ever. The enemy had made a bold stand, and I knew that I must employ all the spiritual forces I could command. Yes, we won the battle, and many new recruits were enlisted in our Cause. But I received this scar—" The tears were gathering in his eyes, and he said, "This, this, is the scar of Rejection; but I count it my badge of honor. For my Commander has said, 'Well done, my good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things.' Now a little longer I am with you, then I go to my new, my permanent home."

"Well, but where do you now live?"

"Oh, I did not mean to tell you that, for it is not the most stately mansion or the most beautiful palace. For my Commander told us, 'The birds have nests, and the foxes have holes, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head.'"

"Do you mean to say you have no home?"

"Well, I have no home here. But I will soon have a home, real home."

"Who are you, stranger?"

"Well, since you have asked I will tell you. Do you know the worn-out preacher who lived on a small salary and always went to the appointment, no matter where? He never questioned the place or the work. But he went and toiled for them and lived on what they gave. His work was hard. His salary was small. He was oftentimes misunderstood. Many times he was criticised. But he labored on in the name of his Commander, Jesus Christ. No man ever heard him complain. No record was ever made of his faithlessness. He was faithful to his trust even to the last. But one day men saw that he was old. Some said that he was out of date. He was not progressive. And that they must have a younger man. Well, I was doing the best I could. I was following orders from my Commander. I was living His faith, and preaching His gospel. Even if my voice was not as strong, or my body as well able to bear the heat of the battle as of other days, I was faithful.

"That year when annual conference convened I was made a superannuate. No, I am not retired, for no true soldier of Christ ever retires. I am just exiled.

"Well, you asked who I am—I am your forgotten brother."

"Yes, that is true, too true. You are my forgotten brother. But you must be found. You must be found!"

AN IMAGINARY LETTER

(What Paul might have written, but, thank God, did not!)

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"Doubtless you recall the invitation you extended me to come over to Macedonia and help the people of that section. You will pardon me for saying that I am somewhat surprised that you should expect a man of my standing in the church to seriously consider a call on such meager information. There are a number of things I would like to learn before giving you my decision, and I would appreciate your dropping me a line, addressing me at Troas.

First of all, I would like to know if Macedonia is a circuit or a station. This is important as I have been told that once a man begins on a circuit, it is well nigh impossible to secure employment in station work. If Macedonia embraces more than one preaching place I may as well tell you frankly that I cannot think of accepting the call.

"There is another important item that you overlooked in your brief and somewhat sudden invitation. No mention was made of the salary I should receive. While it is true that I am not preaching for money, there are certain things that need to be taken into account. I have been through a long and expensive training; in fact, I may say with pardonable pride, that I am a Sanhedrin man—the only one in the ministry today.

"The day is past when you may expect a man to rush into a new field without some idea of the support he is to receive. I have worked myself up to a good position in the Asiatic field, and to take a drop and lose my grade would be a serious matter. Nor can I afford to swap 'dollar for dollar,' as the saying is among the apostles.

"Kindly get the good Macedonian brethren together, and see what you can do in the way of support. You have told me nothing beyond the implication that the place needs help. What are the social advantages? Is the church well organized?

"I recently had a fine offer to return to Damascus at an increase of salary, and am told that I made a very favorable impression on the church at Jerusalem. If it will help the board at Macedonia, you might mention these facts in Macedonia, and also that some of the brethren in Judea have been heard to say that if I keep on, in a few years I may have anything in the gift of the church.

"For recommendations, write to Rev. Simon Peter, D. D., Jerusalem. I will say that I am a first class mixer, and especially strong on argumentative preaching. Solicitously yours,

"Paul, The Apostle."

METHODIST EVANGELISM

By George R. Stuart, M. A., D. D., LL. D.

The Sam Jones Lectures, Emory University, 1923.

No more fitting selection could have been made to deliver the first series of these lectures than George R. Stuart, the friend and life associate of the great evangelist, Sam P. Jones.

His lectures make no attempt at scholastic display. They are sincere expressions, direct from his heart, in which he discloses his most successful methods and practical means of instilling the fundamentals of Christian evangelism as learned in his own school of experience.

THE BEAUTY OF GOD

By G. C. Rector.

I have had the privilege of reading G. C. Rector's book entitled "The Beauty of God." It is a beautiful tribute to beauty as it is found in the Creator and in his handiwork—animate and inanimate. It is a refreshing and inspiring little volume which will delight all who enjoy real poetry—viz., the embalming of exalted truths in appropriate language. It quickens thought and supplies graceful words in which to clothe noble conceptions of God, nature, and man.—William Jennings Bryan.

A PILGRIM HARP

By J. Herbert Bean.

These poems are the sincere expressions of the author's best thoughts.

No special order as to time of writing or sequence of thought is followed in the arrangement of verse in this volume. Truly it is a Pilgrim Harp with sad and joyous notes intermingling, the lights and shadows of song alternating, perchance, at times, in whimsical fashion.

Withal the reader will find more of light than of darkness, more of faith than of doubt, more of love than of hate, more of life than of death in this collection of verse.

FIELD NEWS

WONDERFUL CITY

By James Monroe Downum.
Wonderful City rare,
Beautiful scenes so fair,
In service of thy Lord,

There dwell our loved ones dear,
In full and holy cheer;
Our holy Lord is there
With all His love to share.

How wonderful thy ways,
Built for eternal days,
And flowers blooming sweet,
Each happy eye to greet.

How yearn our souls for thee,
From earthly ills free,
Where we our Lord shall praise
In all the endless days!

UWHARRIE CIRCUIT

Brother Editor, will you please tell the people the reason for my not writing sooner is that I have been too busy. Long before I knew many of the people I am to serve I was kept busy for several different times storing away provisions for the winter, and they are still coming in. So ye editors can come down and spend Christmas with me. I have found my churches and lots of the people, and am glad to say that I am satisfied and at work. The people are clever and kind and seem to appreciate the work of their pastor. We are praying and expect to work for a great year on this charge. My postoffice is Farmer, N. C., and you can tell everybody that wants to see me to come down, as I expect to be on the job for about eleven more months this conference year. If you will send me a few sample copies of your paper I'll see if they won't sell themselves. Geo. W. Clay.

ITEMS FROM CRAMERTON

After the adjournment of the conference we returned to Farmington to make arrangements to leave and tell them goodbye. Our anticipation of the new field was great. Late in the evening we arrived and found a Methodist greeting waiting for us that helped to make us feel at home. The conference did not send them a Haus to feed, but the groan from the pantry indicated how heavy it had been loaded with good things for the pastor and his family.

I found things here in first class condition. The church had a prosperous growth under Brother McKinney and the faithful work of Miss Faison. The work is beginning fine and is giving hope for a good year here. All interests of the church are being stressed, but especially that of the evangelistic type. Under the leadership of Brother Adams there are prayer meetings held in different parts of the town twice every week. This means something to building up the religious life of the place. In the near future we hope to have a genuine revival that will indeed revive the church and save souls from sin.

C. O. Kennerly, P. C.

THE UNHEARD OF

Overstuffed mahogany furniture in the living room and a six-piece mahogany suite in the bedroom of a district parsonage—who ever heard of such a thing! Well, these are the things that now adorn the Greensboro district parsonage. The good women of West Market, Greensboro, generously donated the living room suite, and the women of Wesley Memorial, High Point, who are always ready to do their part in everything, followed with a beautiful bedroom suite. We are enjoying all this to the fullest extent. We want to thank them all from the depths of our hearts for the kindness they have shown us. We are unable to find words to express our appreciation.

This may be the beginning of a well furnished district parsonage, as others have 'phoned me that they want a part in this also. It will be hard to find a more loyal people anywhere than these of the Greensboro district.

Come to see us and we will let you sit on chairs that neither look or feel like parsonage chairs.

Mrs. W. F. Womble.

HAYWOOD CIRCUIT

There has been no news from this charge for quite a while. But it is still on the map. We were right glad to be returned to the work again for another year, and if anybody is mad about it we have not heard of it. The people have kindly received us and we are trying to do all the good we can. One revival meeting has been held on the charge at Davis Chapel since conference with good results—fifteen professions of religion and church members strengthened. Brother Clark Medford, a good local preacher of Waynesville, N. C., assisted me in the meeting, and did some good, strong preaching. He is a good, earnest, true worker in a meeting, and is willing to help the brethren in meetings when he is needed. We hope to get things organized soon for a good year's work. This is a good country, and we hope to see these strong grown-up good people of the mountains and the rising generations consecrated to the work of the Lord. P. L. Terrell.

THRIFT-MOORES CHARGE

Brother Griffith moved out and we came in the same day.

The first Sunday in November was rainy all day, but we held services at three churches which make the charge. This is an ideal little charge. Moores is two miles west of Thrift and Pleasant Grove is three and a half miles north from the parsonage; good roads to each church.

On Monday night after the second Sunday all three churches stormed the parsonage without a word of warning and gave a genuine pounding and loading the dining table with lots of good things to eat. We survived the pounding all right and after a social hour of getting acquainted we joined in prayer to our Father, who is the Giver of all the blessings of life, both in material and spiritual things.

There are a goodly number of choice spirits among the membership of the circuits. We have two fine Epworth Leagues, one at Moores and the other at Pleasant Grove churches, with as fine a lot of young people as you will find anywhere.

We have a Woman's Missionary Society at Moores and they are a noble band of women, working together planning for larger things in the kingdom of God on earth. They have secured five new subscribers to the Missionary Voice and received two new members into the society at their last meeting, and let the preacher in charge join as an honorary member. There is the first missionary society that has asked this preacher to join and meet with them. So I feel highly honored by our society.

We hope to be used of our heavenly

Father in working with these good people in building every interest of the church while we labor among them. We feel the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places. We ask the prayers of all good people that we lead them to higher lives of Christian living. J. J. Edwards, P. C.

BRIGHT SKIES OVER MT. HOLLY

The Mount Holly Methodist church is beginning the new year under bright skies. Under the leadership of Rev. O. P. Ader, our beloved pastor, we propose to make the year 1924 the best in the history of Mount Holly Methodism. For the third time Pastor Ader has been sent as the shepherd of our flock and the Mount Holly people are standing with him in his far-reaching work.

On last Tuesday evening at a meeting of the board of stewards various plans were made for the work of the church for the coming year. Mr. C. P. Howard, well known Mount Holly business man, is chairman of the board and one of the most faithful officials in the entire conference. Mr. W. L. Tucker, another business man of our town, is superintendent of the Sunday school and is ever active for the church's best interests. Mr. J. L. Finger and Miss Roella Abernethy are the secretaries of the board. We have twenty stewards, a membership of more than four hundred, a Sunday school of two hundred and fifty, and a field of labor "white unto the harvest."

The board holds regular monthly meetings for the purpose of keeping ever awake and alive to the building up of the kingdom. Under the pastorate of such a man as O. P. Ader the Mount Holly church will continue to go forward in promoting the cause of Christ. C. Excell Rozzelle.

A CHRISTMAS GIFT FOR THE COUNTRY

"Peace on earth and good will toward all men." In this season of Christmas giving, it is within the power of Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, to give America, and humanity generally, a fine Christmas gift—the freedom of all political prisoners, for whose liberation there is the slightest justification.

The espionage act was a war emergency measure. It was a serious break with the free speech and free press tradition of our country.

The sentences imposed under this act were terribly severe, and can be accounted for only on the score of war hysteria. Think of the greatest exponent of human liberty jailing men for 15 or 20 years, or indeed two years, for expression of opinion of any sort, in war or peace, upon the conduct of government!

We have but recently celebrated the fifth anniversary of Armistice Day. Italy, France, Belgium and Canada granted general amnesty before the close of 1919. Sentences imposed upon British prisoners were so short that they expired long ago. Why is it that the government of this country alone is obdurate to appeals for clemency? The record of our country on this matter is the least creditable of any in connection with the great war, and every month of delay increases the severity of the indictment.

The judgment of history will finally be pronounced when the passions of war have died and a new generation comes to review the acts of the present generation.

The hundred millions of our people, young and old, were whole-heartedly for the war, the aged, the women, even the children sacrificing to help their country win perpetuation of the sacred rights of liberty, and the best of American manhood offering its all that the shackles upon human lives might be broken.

Why not a Christmas present in the form of clemency, liberty for the political prisoners? W. S. Surratt.

FROM THOMASVILLE TO ROSMAN

We arrived in Rosman November 7. The parsonage had been refinished throughout; also found a nice warm supper awaiting us, a hearty welcome, and last but not least a generous pounding, which continues. I have made a round on my work and find a kind, receptive people at all the churches. Our first quarterly conference convened at Rosman November 26. Rev. H. C. Sprinkle, our presiding elder, was at his best and brought us a great message at 11 a. m. and held the quarterly conference in the afternoon. The financial report showed they had spent over $400 on church and parsonage this quarter. We are planning, praying for, and expecting a great year on the Rosman circuit.

J. C. Richardson, P. C.

FROM NEWTON GROVE TO FAIRVIEW

After having spent two of the most pleasant years of our ministry in the progressive little country village of Newton Grove in Samson county, where we made some honest effort for the advancement of the kingdom and where some results of this effort are visible, for which we praise God, we have entered into a new field of labor in the mountains of the Western North Carolina conference—which mountains we are learning to love in spite of the rugged rocks and crooked roads, the like of which Mrs. Phillips never saw before.

We have been very kindly received on the new Fairview circuit. There were twelve or fifteen of the excellent men and women of the community at the parsonage to welcome us, and they certainly did give us as cordial, whole-hearted and complete a welcome as anyone could wish. There are more ways of saying welcome than one. They said it first by cooking us a fine warm supper, and second with material gifts, the largest we have ever received at any place. Therefore we feel much gratified at the whole-hearted welcome accorded us—both by Methodist and Baptist, for the latter have made many visits to the parsonage since our arrival with many good things to eat. We hope to be a great blessing to all the people in this community. Reader, pray for me and mine.

S. W. Phillips.

WESTFORD CHURCH, CONCORD

We have been very graciously received at Westford church. We came Thursday, November 1, arrived for late dinner and found a goodly number of our splendid people at the parsonage with loads of dinner and some for days to come, and that evening after we had eaten supper we heard a noise at the front door, and they were there in large numbers—men, women and children, with all kinds of bundles, marching straight to the dining room piled them high. Then all repaired to the parlor, where a number of speeches were made expressing hopes and purposes for the new year, closing with prayer. This array of pounders then left us in possession of the spoils, some of which continue to this present time.

They have increased the salary, have put quite a lot of nice new things in the parsonage and in many ways encouraging their new pastor. So that I feel as much as in me is I am their servant for Jesus' sake. I have never had a more responsive people. We have a very fine choir and the largest per cent of folks who pray in public and have family altars of any charge I have ever served. I am not the least bothered about conducting Wednesday evening prayer meetings or any other prayer meetings, as there are so many earnest, competent ones to do it. Of course I attend and take part in these meetings.

We closed a two weeks' revival last Sunday, had a good number of professions and much good has been done. I did all the preaching but two sermons. Brother Williford from Bro. Seymour Taylor's work (a local preacher) preached one sermon and Bro. Seymour Taylor preached last Sunday night, as I was sick. Our people say he preached a splendid sermon. I am receiving members frequently by certificate.

Of course any one reading these lines will see that I am delighted with my work and my people. May the Lord bless every one of them.

I have been sick with a cold since Sunday, but have been out of bed two days, for which I praise the Lord.

E. Myers.

AYCOCK AT CANTON

It has been a long time since I have written anything for publication. But if you will let me have just a little of your space I wish to say just a few things.

We are here for our fourth year, as most of you already know, but there are a few things about this that you do not know, and that is what we wish to say. We have been severely pounded twice by two of our women's Bible classes. Now these poundings were something to be proud of. For they were done with a will. There was a spirit of enthusiasm about them that made this preacher and his family feel good. We have been most heartily received and everything points to a good year, in fact the best of them all. The salary will be substantially increased over last year. We are now living in one of the very best preacher's homes in the conference; hard wood floors all over it and brand new furniture from the front to the back and from the bottom to the top. What I am talking about, this furniture is not the proverbial parsonage kind, but real good substantial stuff, such as one would find in the best homes.

We are going to try to make this place attractive to a real preacher next year. For by that time these good people will deserve one. May the Lord help us to do something for them and with them for the advancement of His kingdom this year.

A. L. Aycock.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

Whereas, the Western North Carolina conference saw cause to move our pastor, Rev. W. F. Elliott, to another conference. We, the members of Bollinger's Chapel, do extend our regrets that we must lose him, and we feel that we want to put on record an expression of our appreciation for his faithful and very efficient service while with us, resolve:

First, That we want to thank him for his faithful work while with us, and wish him a very pleasant work where he may be assigned. We have thoroughly enjoyed him as pastor, as a real friend, and as a Christian gentleman. It has been a benediction to have Brother Elliott with us. He has pointed us to higher ideals and inspired us to nobler purposes.

Second, We commend him most highly to those who are fortunate enough to have him as pastor. Our love and prayers will ever follow him. We thank the conference for sending him to our church. He carries our love with him to his new work.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to him as a slight remark of our esteem, and that a copy be sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.

The Charlotte Observer

SIX WEEKS FOR $1

Every sermon delivered by the world's greatest evangelist during the six weeks' revival campaign he will open in Charlotte, December 30, will be printed in full in the issue following its delivery.

Billy Sunday's thrilling phraseology, his striking gestures and platform antics, and the manner in which his sermons are received by the thousands who will jam the specially constructed tabernacle, will be duly recorded by an Observer staff reporter.

The fact that The Observer is a morning paper will enable it to give a more complete report of the services than any other Charlotte newspaper.

In addition to the complete Billy Sunday reports, The Observer will carry every piece of news developing in North and South Carolina, the local news handled by a large corps of reporters, and the world news gleaned from a complete Associated Press service. Features, comics, special articles of general interest and an editorial page second to none in the South, make up a paper that is more than desirable.

Your doctor advises
internal cleanliness

HE will tell you that the first results of constipation—headache, sleepless nights, biliousness, backache, etc.—warn that the body is flooded with intestinal poisons. In time, these poisons may cause the breakdown of health and lead to serious disease. In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Hence, doctors urge internal cleanliness—regular and thorough removal of food waste from the body.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

THE WORLD'S BIBLE

Christ has no hands but our hands
To do His work today;
He has not feet but our feet
To lead men in His way;
He has no tongues but our tongues
To tell men how He died;
He has no help but our help
To bring them to His side.

We are the only Bible
The careless world will read;
We are the sinner's gospel,
We are the scoffer's creed;
We are the Lord's last message,
Given in deed and word;
What if the type is crooked?
What if the print is blurred?

What if our hands are busy
With other work than His?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's allurements is?
What if our tongues are speaking
Of things His lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help Him
And hasten His return?
—Annie Johnson Flint, in The Southern Methodist.

AN INTERESTING AND IMPORTANT MEETING

There will be a joint session in Nashville on December 19 and 20 of committees appointed by the Woman's Missionary Council and the Epworth League Board to consider the matter of combining the work of the Epworth League and the Young People's Missionary Society. Something like 400,000 young people are represented in these two organizations of young people.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

JANUARY 1, 1924

On this day all the reports for the last quarter of 1923 are due. Every auxiliary president and superintendent should be absolutely positive that their work has been adequately and correctly reported. If there are any items in the reports that have been overlooked during the year that have not been reported when they should have been, they may be sent in to the proper conference officer or superintendent and included by them in the year's report as a whole. This is most important. Remember January 1st. Remember to report.

SCARRITT SITE SECURED

A site for Scarritt College, the college that is to take the place of Scarritt Bible and Training School, now located in Kansas City, Mo., has been secured in this city. The property is on Grand Avenue and Nineteenth Avenue South, extending 372 feet on Grand and 540 on Nineteenth. There are six or seven fine residences on this property. Across Nineteenth from this property a vacant plot of ground 430x275 feet has been secured. This latter plot joins the Southern Y. M. C. A. College on the west, and the other plot lacks only three lots of joining Peabody on the south. Peabody property lies between the Scarritt property and Vanderbilt University.—Nashville Advocate.

MRS. S. C. VANN

On the morning of November 10, 1923, at Franklinton, N. C., Mrs. S. C. Vann passed from this life to the life more abundant. At the time of her death she was president of the Franklinton auxiliary. For many years she has been one of our most faithful workers and most liberal givers. She has served in many ways. At one time she was district secretary of the Raleigh district. No one can ever know the extent of her work. Like the Master, whom she served so lovingly, she "went about doing good." She was the friend of all in need, and many hearts are sad and desolate because of her going. Her memory will live in hundreds of hearts, and we thank God for her beautiful life and character.

Mrs. N. H. D. Wilson.

ANDERSON Y. P. AUXILIARY

The Anderson Young People's auxiliary met in my home and held week of prayer service November 29th—Thanksgiving night.

The program was beautifully arranged, consisting of scripture reading, singing, prayers, reading by different ones of two stories. God was in our meeting. It was an inspiration to me; it seemed as if heaven was not far off. The sorrow and sadness that has been over me this year by losing loved ones, and being with my dear young people gives a source of happiness in my soul. This band of boys and girls are fine. I gave them a treat after service.

With love for this work,
Mrs. J. E. Perry,
Supt. Y. P. M. S.

MINNIE WILSON SOCIETY

Since writing about our society in your last issue, dividing its membership into circles, we want to tell you something of what we have accomplished during the first month of the change.

We raised the sum of seventy-four dollars, and from this amount we paid our assessment to Greater Scarritt.

Each circle meets once a week, and are sewing for our bazaar which is to be held the 4th of December next. At these circle meetings we are taking our mission studies. We appoint a different leader for each week and find it very interesting.

Mrs. W. N. Jenkins graciously entertained the leaders of the several circles, together with the president of our society, Tuesday evening, November the 20th last. Several new ideas were introduced and all enjoyed the evening.

On Monday evening, November the 19th, the Minnie Wilson Missionary Society held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. R. L. Knowles, having the largest attendance it has had for quite a while, there being 35 members present.

After the transaction of all business and listening to several interesting and entertaining talks from several of our members, we then gave way to our pastor, Mr. Grant, who will soon leave us for his new field of work. Mr. Grant made a very interesting and instructive talk which we all appreciated and enjoyed. This being Mr. Grant's last meeting with us, we of course feel the loss of him and were made sad by the occasion. Our loss is Lumberton's gain. Our prayers go with him.

We will welcome our new pastor, Mr. Yearby, and trust that his stay among us will be a pleasant one.

After a service of light refreshments by Miss Kate Blanchard and the hostess the meeting adjourned.

Mrs. R. L. Knowles,
Supt. Study and Publicity.

HARVEST HOME DAY OBSERVED

The Woman's Missionary Society of Central church, Mt. Airy, held an interesting Harvest Home service in the new ladies' parlor December 3, with Mrs. D. Vance Price in charge of the literary program, and the president, Mrs. J. L. Woltz, in charge of the business. An interesting feature of the program was an "experience meeting"—"What being a member of the missionary society has meant to me." A number of ladies responded, speaking most helpfully of the inestimable value of the missionary society in their lives; then each gave an item from one of the foreign fields. Interspersed with these experiences were short Bible readings, emphasizing thanksgiving and Harvest Home day. Special music by members of the choir was much enjoyed.

The report of the officers showed all the machinery in good working condition and functioning satisfactorily. The election of officers for 1924 resulted in the following:

President—Mrs. R. H. Leonard.
Vice President—Mrs. J. A. Hadley.
Rec. Sec.—Mrs. J. L. Ashby.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. J. D. Minick.
Treasurer—Mrs. Herbert Foy.
Supt. Supplies—Mrs. W. W. Thomas.
Supt. Social Service—Mrs. A. B. Somersville.
Supt. Local Work—Mrs. J. H. Folger.
Supt. Mission Study and Publicity—Mrs. D. V. Price.
Supt. Young People—Mrs. B. E. Herman.
Supt. Children's Work—Mrs. J. A. Jackson.
Agent for Voice—Mrs. S. M. Hale.
Treas. Local Work—Mrs. A. E. Smith.
Pianist—Mrs. N. C. Marion.
At the close of the meeting sandwiches and coffee were served, and a delightful social hour was enjoyed.

TRYON STREET, CHARLOTTE

The week of prayer was observed at Tryon Street Methodist church in Charlotte the last Monday in November. The morning session began at 11 o'clock. All ladies brought box lunches and a social and very enjoyable hour was spent. During the morning prayers were offered for all phases of our missionary work at home and abroad. Bible references were given and discussed to show the value and effectiveness of prayer.

The specials for the week of prayer, namely, The Laura Hagood Demonstration School at Soo Chow, China, and the Bethlehem Center at Nashville, Tenn., were thoroughly explained to those present.

The afternoon program consisted of two interesting presentations, one a dialogue, in which a very unsympathetic missionary woman was made to see the practicability of a Bethlehem Center. The other was a pageant, "Laura Hagood's Messengers." Three women represented the three spirits and children from the children's missionary society impersonated Chinese children. The afternoon's collection was given to the children's missionary society as their day of prayer offering.

All who attend this day of prayer expressed themselves as having spent a pleasant, profitable day and as feeling closer to Him for having participated in the day of prayer.—Contributed.

THE NEW MEMBER — WHAT SHOULD BE DONE WITH HER?

Help her to get an intelligent knowledge of our work. To you who have been in the work for years the terms we use are easily understood; but to the new member such words as auxiliary, council, general fund, contingent fund, etc., are confusing, if not altogether unintelligible. Explain them to her, not once, but again and again, until she is perfectly familiar with them.

Show her the pictures of your particular missionaries and make her acquainted with them. Tell her where each is located and what her special work is.

If she has not subscribed to the Missionary Voice, urge her to do so. If she feels that she cannot, get one of your members who is a subscriber to share her copy with her each month.

Give her something to do. Find out her qualification. If you have not a place ready for her to fit in, make one. She will soon feel that she "belongs" when she realizes that a part of the work devolves upon her.

Appoint one of the old members to be specially nice to her. Make her feel that she is welcome and show her what a beautiful bond of fellowship binds all missionary women together. Finally, pray for her. You have done all you can; now ask our heavenly Father to fit her for service and use her for His glory in the extension of His kingdom.—Adapted.

"THAT THINE OWN RIGHT HAND CAN SAVE"

Five small fingers that cling to one of yours when the way home is long. That go softly groping for your watch to find where the tick comes from, or into any pocket to see what's there. Not much use for buttoning the owner's clothes or managing a spoon at meal time. Not very clean either unless mother has had a look at 'em lately. Not much of anything at all, in fact—just five small fingers. And yet they hold a man to his work when nothing else will, when the job is a tiring nuisance, and ambition foolishness, and the world a mess of grimy dust. No lawyer ever drew a contract that griped like the trust of a tiny hand laid in yours. No orator, no musician of them all, ever hammered out a phrase that meant as much as "Father's come home!" "Hostages to fortune," said the old philosopher Bacon. Bacon was a fool that time. Fortune herself is a hostage to the heart that holds the fadeless memory of five small fingers close within your own.—Selected.

THE GOSPEL OF GOOD CHEER

O walk on the sunny side of the street
When the day is chill and cold;
Have a cheery word for all you meet
And a smile that shines like gold.
Yes, walk on the sunny side of the street;
Whatever happens, keep sweet, keep sweet.

There's never a cloud but 'twill go away
Nor a fog but the sun breaks through;
There's sunshine somewhere every day,
Then let it shine on you.
And keep on the sunny side of the street;
And, whatever may happen, keep sweet.
—Stephen Moore.

STANLY COUNTY SCHOOL

The Stanly County Co-operative Standard Training School for Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school workers opened last Sunday afternoon in the high school building at Albemarle most auspiciously. There were present thirty-eight Presbyterian and one hundred and three Methodist Sunday school leaders on the opening afternoon. Among these leaders are nine ministers and eleven superintendents, most of whom have enrolled as credit students. The school was expected to be quite a successful one, but the actual attendance and interest shown are beyond our expectation. In spite of very rainy weather splendid delegations from Badin, Norwood, Norwood circuit and Salem circuit have been regularly attending the school. In each instance the pastor has led way. In Albemarle itself Central, First Street and Tabernacle are represented by their pastors, superintendents and a number of other leaders. Our school is doing real constructive work.

FIRST STREET

It was my pleasure several Sundays ago to attend the Sunday school at First Street, Albemarle. On arriving at the church several minutes before the school was due to open I found the pastor, Rev. R. A. Swaringen, and his good wife in the building welcoming the early arrivals and seeing that everything was arranged in fit order for a school of religious education to properly function. Soon the superintendent, R. M. Russell, arrived and a good Sunday school was started. The accommodations at First Street are entirely too small for the great numbers who attend and the pastor and superintendent are working with their people on plans for larger and better accommodations. The prospects are mighty good at First Street for a good year's work.

CENTRAL, ALBEMARLE

Central, Albemarle, is steadily forging to the front. In my several visits to this enthusiastic congregation I have noted continuous advancement along many lines. I used to think that Central, Albemarle, was one of our most conservative congregations, but such is certainly not the case now. The pastor, Rev. C. M. Pickens, and his Sunday school superintendent, Mr. C. A. Reap, are leading wisely and well. Among other good things this congregation rejoices in the fact that it has a very strong men's Wesley Bible class numbering one hundred or more each Sunday. This splendid class is taught by Hon. R. L. Smith and its organization is headed by another good man named W. A. Smith. This congregation has in three or four years doubled its pastor's salary, now paying $3,600. Among other things a pastor's assistant and better Sunday school facilities are being arranged for. Central, Albemarle, is truly growing.

STANDARDIZATION

There are one hundred and twenty-five Sunday schools, sixty of the "B Type" and sixty-five of the "C Type," the former meaning a Sunday school of some departments and a number of class rooms and the latter meaning a one-room Sunday school, in the Western North Carolina conference that have secured "Programs of Work" and are fashioning their endeavor accordingly. These programs of work call for ten definite lines of activity. During January and February it is proposed to carefully check up on all Sunday schools now working on these programs of work and to place others in Sunday schools where there is a disposition to systematize religious educational work.

LITTLEJOHNS

The first Sunday school in the Western North Carolina conference to become standardized is that of Littlejohns, on the Lenior circuit, located seven miles out of Lenoir, on the highway from Lenoir to Moganton. It will be remembered that a delegation from Littlejohns Sunday school attended a training school at Hickory last April, twenty-eight miles away. Last September every officer and teacher of this Sunday school attended the Lenoir training school and received credit for work done there. So far as I know not other Sunday school in our conference can boast of such a record. Anyway the Littlejohns Sunday school now has a "Program of Work" with ten blue seals on it. This school reached the requirements during the pastorate of Rev. F. H. Price, who is now serving the Shepherds circuit in Iredell county. Mr. H. M. Courtney, whose brother is Rev. R. M. Courtney, of Centenary fame, is superintendent of Littlejohns Sunday school. Littlejohns has led the way. There will be some "Otherjohns" to follow.

DISTRICT FIGURES

The following figures give the district Sunday school enrollment for 1922 and 1923, the last two conference years. From these figures it will be noted that every district in the conference showed some Sunday school gain except the Mount Airy district, which reports a loss of 368. It was first reported that the Winston-Salem district would show a loss, but instead there is a gain even after two charges had been transferred to other districts, one going to the Mount Airy district and the other to the Greensboro district. The first column of figures stands for the 1922 enrollment, the second column for enrollment of 1923 and the last for the gain recorded.

District	1922	1923	Gain
Asheville	10,125	10,354	229
Charlotte	13,982	14,521	539
Greensboro	14,940	16,014	1074

A FULL DAY AT LA GRANGE

With Rev. R. E. Pittman's La Grange congregation your conference superintendent of Sunday school work spent Sunday, December 2, speaking three or four times in Sunday school and church services. During the Sunday school hour he spoke before Mrs. D. L. M. Fields' fine class of young people and later briefly before the whole Sunday school. Then at the 11 o'clock hour he had the pleasure of talking for 30 or more minutes to a house practically full of attentive and apparently very much interested listeners. Following this service there was a meeting of the officers and teachers of the Sunday school, with a few other interesting persons, at which the official Program of Work "C" was presented and explained and then adopted unaimously. The La Grange school is already doing a splendid work for its boys and girls, young people, and adults, and is going to try to render better service.

It was a busy and pleasant day for the speaker and, as the people were kind enough to say, one of inspiration and help to them. It was particularly delightful to meet with that young people's class, numbering in its membership cheerful, hopeful young folks who are doing things. It is organized as a Wesley class.

The pastor, returning to this charge for the third year, is entering upon the new year with enthusiasm, and pastor and people are anticipating a good year together. In line with his desire to give his people the best in all things, the pastor is about to install a radio set in his church and to give radio sermons and sacred concerts Sunday nights following the regular evening services.

KINSTON SCHOOL, MARCH 2-7

From La Grange your conference superintendent went to Kinston, where Sunday evening he met with Rev. C. K. Proctor's Queen Street congregation and presented, briefly, plans for the Standard Training School to be held there March 2-7 for the Sunday school and church leaders of that section of the New Bern district within a radius of 20 or 30 miles of Kinston. This matter was also taken up in the quarterly conference which convened at the close of the service and was heartily endorsed by the conference. Rev. J. C. Wooten appeared before this congregation at the evening service for the first time since coming to the district as presiding elder and preached a splendid sermon. He also presided over the quarterly conference and gave his enthusiastic endorsement of the proposed training school. Rev. Mr. Proctor, the pastor, Mr. Braxton B. Jones, the Sunday school superintendent, and the other leaders and workers are unanimously eager for the school and are looking forward to the help which it will bring to their school and to the pleasure of having workers from other Sunday schools in their midst.

WILSON IN NEW BUILDING

Prof. H. E. Spence, head of the Department of Religious Training at Trinity College and chairman of your conference Sunday School Board, and the writer attended a meeting of the Workers' Council of the Sunday school of First church, Wilson, Monday evening, December 3. It was the first workers' meeting held in the splendid new $80,000 departmental Sunday school building, which the school used for the first time Sunday. Supt. A. E. Bishop presided and, after transacting miscellaneous business, called on the writer for a short talk. The principal speaker was Professor Spence, who held the unlimited attention of the group, calling attention to the great importance of the work in which they are engaged in these perilous times and to their unusual opportunity to do monumental work in the new building.

One of the significant matters discussed at the meeting was a training class to be taught by Prof. Chas. L. Coon. Fifteen or twenty teachers indicated their purpose to take the course. Another matter was the formation of a workers' library. Both of these matters were brought up by Mr. J. Shep Bryan.

At Wilson, March 9-14, will be held a Standard Training School for the Sunday school and church workers of Wilson and vicinity.

ELEMENTARY KEY WOMEN

The following Elementary Key Women have been appointed for their Sunday school:

- Miss Annie L. Stanton, Stantonsburg.
- Miss Bannie Finch, Evansdale.
- Mrs. J. W. Arnold, Sharon S. S. (Red Oak).
- Mrs. M. M. Fisher, Lake Landing.
- Mrs. C. S. Guthrie, Englehard.
- Mrs. J. R. Coggins, Bethlehem (Spring Hope).
- Mrs. R. C. Calton, Nashville.
- Mrs. W. P. Wrenn, St. John (Goldsboro).
- Mrs. Bessie Patrick, Grifton.
- Miss Orelie West, Bethany (Do- ver).
- Mrs. G. M. Holly, Colerain.
- Miss Sarah Pearson, Black Creek.
- Miss Mary Anderson, Yanceyville.
- Miss Blanche Pinchback, New Hope.
- Miss Zelma Loy, Webb Ave. (Burlington).
- Mrs. S. G. Lindsey, West Durham.
- Miss Rebecca Limer, Cedar Grove.
- Mrs. H. M. Grizzard, Kenly.
- Mrs. A. W. Etheridge, Selam.
- Miss Edna White, Oxford.
- Mrs. L. T. Royall, Smithfield.
- Mrs. G. O. Pitts, Zebulon.
- Mrs. J. G. Midgett, Salvo.
- Mrs. T. M. Burham, South Mills.
- Miss Bernice Whitehurst, Sharon (South Mills).
- Mrs. A. H. King, Merry Mount.
- Miss Annie Cutchins, Whitakers.
- Mrs. R. L. Allen, Rich Square.
- Mrs. J. P. Brett, Ahoskie.
- Miss Margie Stewart, Shocco (Middleburg)
- Mrs. J. A. Reid, Wesley Memorial (Wilmington).

The following fourteen of these women have already sent to Miss Keene a yearly report from their Sunday schools: Miss Edna White, Mrs. H. M. Grizzard, Mrs. L. T. Royall, Mrs. R. L. Allen, Mrs. R. C. Calton, Mrs. J. R. Coggins, Miss Zelma Loy, Miss Sarah Pearson, Mrs. John Midgett, Mrs. J. W. Arnold, Miss Rebecca Limer, Miss Margie Stewart, Mrs. S. G. Lindsey, Mrs. C. S. Guthrie.

These women will help your conference elementary superintendent promote the elementary work in their Sunday schools and will enable her to do more effective work among them. Wouldn't it be fine if we had an Elementary Key Woman in every school in our conference? If you think so, see that one is appointed for your school right away and her name sent to Miss Keene. The Sunday school superintendents already have a card for reporting the names and addresses of the Key Women for their schools. Let's use these cards.

OXFORD ADOPTS PROGRAM

The workers in the Beginner department of the Oxford Sunday school have adopted the Program of Work "B" for this department and are working toward standard. They have attained eight of the ten points on this program of work and are planning to reach the other two in a short time. Miss Elizabeth Floyd is the superintendent of this department.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

Western North Carolina Conference

THE SUNSHINE LEAGUE

Perhaps a word from Hayesville charge may be of some interest to the readers of the Advocate. We, the members of the Oak Forest church, Hayesville charge, Waynesville district, have organized an Epworth League, the name of which is the Sunshine League.

We have twenty-eight members to begin with and a good prospect for more. We are expecting this to be a fine league in the near future. Our church at Hayesville has a good league, but they will have to move up or Sunshine League will lead them.

The Oak Forest Sunday school has been the best in Clay county, but we will have to hustle or some of the other Sunday school will get ahead of us, for there are several good churches on the charge.

We have also organized a Wesleyan Bible class here at Oak Forest. The members are greatly interested in it, and we know it will be a great help to our church.

You may expect to hear from Hayesville charge again, for all of our people are becoming more interested in religious work than they have been for many years.

Cor. Sec.

UNION MEETING

The Wayne County Epworth League Union met with the Elm Street League Sunday night, December 2nd. The attendance was much larger than usual. The church was full and many had to stand.

The devotional meeting, which was conducted by Mrs. A. E. Wilson, was one of the best we have heard. The subject was "How Can I Find My Place?" A number of very interesting talks were made on the subject. We were welcomed by Mr. Roger Hinson and the program assured us that we were cordially welcome.

After the devotional meeting Miss Emma Davis took charge of the meeting. The roll was then called and nearly all of the leagues were represented. The secretary read a letter from Mr. Chauncey Barcliff expressing his appreciation for the offering sent him last month. We will meet with the Pikeville League first Sunday night in January.

The Wayne county leagues are doing nicely and I expect if the union keeps growing somebody will have to get busy and enlarge the churches.

"Hurrah for the Epworth League."

Ruth Herring, Cor. Sec.

EDENTON STREET AND DRAMATICS

Your readers of the league news have probably read several times lately of plays and pageants given by Edenton Street League. Well, you haven't read it all because the young actors are so busy preparing for the next play after we give one that we forget to write it up for the Advocate, but our editor keeps so close behind us that we have to tell you readers what we are doing.

The last performance we gave was a Thanksgiving pageant which brought out the spirit of the season very forcefully.

Our league meetings are well attended and we have some splendid workers, but we are not at all contented with our work. We are hoping that the new year and the Christmas spirit will give us renewed energy so that we may do even more for Christ in the future than we have in the past. Getting back to the subject, we are now planning a Christmas play to be given on the fourth Sunday in December. Miss Mamie Speas seems to be the power behind the throne when it comes to dramatics at Edenton Street. The parts are being distributed to the characters in the play and practice is expected to begin this week. Dramatics is proving to be a great help and inspiration in the spiritual life as well as the social and cultural, because all those given so far have been plays which present a very forceful sermon.

LEAVE FOR NEW HOME IN TROY

Rev. J. H. McCracken, wife and daughter, left November 27th via automobile for Henderson and Durham, where they will visit before arriving in Troy, their new home.

Mr. McCracken and family leave Washington carrying with them the best wishes of the entire city, for no pastor of the M. E. church here has been more popular both as preacher and pastor. Since coming to this city three years ago the church under his guidance and direction has made wonderful progress along all lines.

In speaking of his work in Washington, Mr. McCracken said just on the eve of his departure, "I am leaving Washington for only one cause and that is a higher climate, for there are no better folk in the world than in Washington."

It is the opinion of all the members of the church here that the year just closed has been the best in the history of the church. More than $15,000 was raised for all purposes. The church now has on its roll 835 members, 228 of this number joining during the three years pastorate of Mr. McCracken. The Sunday school has doubled in attendance and the Sunday school building is taxed to accommodate the number, which means more room must be provided.

"The board of stewards are second to none," said Mr. McCracken. "The women have been a mighty factor in bringing things to pass. The church is in the best financial condition it has ever been."

"Yes," said Mr. McCracken, "I'm leaving the best people in the world."

Last night the board of stewards presented Mr. McCracken with a handsome rocking chair in appreciation of his work as pastor of the church. The gift was merited in every way. Mr. McCracken has a warm place in the hearts of the people here and universal regret is expressed over his leaving. May he be spared many years to his family and to the great church which he so nobly represents.—Washington Daily News.

Mary's Beau (waiting for her to come down stairs)—Is Mary your oldest sister?

Kid Brother—Yep.

"And who comes after her?"

"You and two other guys."

EVERY GOOD METHODIST

Is interested in the successful completion of the Centenary and Educational Campaigns. What cause could be nearer our hearts than that of the Forgotten Man? But to get the full sympathy and co-operation of our Methodist people in these worthy movements, we must present the cause not only from the pulpit but through the church press as well. In fact, one of the most efficient helpers the pastor has is the church paper. Its readers have a more sympathetic understanding and interest in the work of the church which he as pastor is directing.

Increase the efficiency of your people by placing the NORTH CAROLINA CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and (NASHVILLE) CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE in their homes on GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY.

HAPPENINGS AT THE CHILDREN'S HOME

By Martha M. Wood.

So many kind words of appreciation have been said and written to the writer concerning the items in the Advocate about the Children's Home that I feel negligent not to have an article in the paper every week, but you know how it is—busy people are not, as a rule, steady correspondents.

However, this week the superintendent and John M. got into the Home truck, made a trip to Thomasville and came back with a dozen chairs for the larger girls in the Cornelius building—chairs with a broad arm for writing convenience, a stand up desk and another for the office, and a small typewriter desk that has been consigned to my use.

Such a nice little desk with a low top and two drawers for paper—it ought to be an inspiration for an article or two.

I had been using a tea wagon to hold the typewriter. A tea wagon that the missionary society ladies of Shelby presented me with one time. But the tea wagon seemed to find such a load a misuse, so the typewriter finally came to repose on a board on a stool—a perfectly good makeshift, though not exactly ornamental.

Having a liking for homemade things, I had drawn a design for a little table that I thought would suit me exactly for a typewriter desk. I thought I would like one of Home grown boards made at the Home shop. But I learned that Mr. Binkley, the shop genii, was busy constructing wagon sheds and hay lofts, and after that another little barn was waiting to be built, so that the type-table prospect seemed to be a remote and dim probability. So I received the desk from the factory with a warm appreciation of the fact that a desk at hand is worth more than a dream in the boards.

* * *

Thanksgiving brought its usual abundant good things to the Home. Thanksgiving at a place like this is more than a day—it is an elastic period, anticipating the date many days and reacting on toward Christmas. It begins to get into the air and into the minds of the friends of the children right after conference, and by the first of November begins to materialize into a stream of letters and packages, bales and bundles, crates and wagon loads of goods and groceries.

A good friend of the Home who lives up in the mountain country, was in town during conference and visited the Home. She told the superintendent that if he could arrange to send for it that she could get up a load of fruit and vegetables for the Home. To let her know beforehand and she would phone around and have the provisions collected up.

It seemed like an attractive proposition, so as soon as convenient, after making several attempts to get a good day for the trip, Mr. Wood and John M. took the new truck one morning and got up to Mast in time to load the truck before night, to get an early start home next day.

And it was a load! Mr. Wood said that he was afraid that he was loading too heavily, but it came through alright. There were 14 bags of apples, six bags of Irish potatoes, two bags of sweet potatoes, three bags of cabbages and four boxes of canned fruit.

The grandmother of the three little Salmon boys sent word that she had some molasses that she would like to give the Home if we could send something to put it in. So one morning John took the truck and some containers and went after it. Two of the little boys went along. The older one had been promised the trip and the littlest one, five years old, came down to the superintendent's house early that morning to ask permission to go also, promising bravely that he would come back without crying.

They brought back not only 18 gallons of nice molasses, but 14 pumpkins, a bushel of dried beans and a peck of peas and a bag of walnuts.

Mr. Wood and his household were invited to eat Thanksgiving dinner at the dining room with the children. It was an excellent dinner—Miss Current knows how to have things cooked to look good and taste good. There was roast chicken with dressing, rice and gravy, cranberry sauce and celery, sugary sweet potatoes, bowls of delicious apples, an abundant serving of ice cream and nice little cakes.

Dinner was served late to give the kitchen girls a half holiday from the kitchen. As no one needs supper after eating a late big dinner these short days.

* * * *

The date of the meeting of the executive committee of the board was held the 28th. There were only two out of town members present, Dr. Marr and Mr. Ireland. There was no definite business transacted, but many matters of interest were considered and discussed. One of these was the location of the infirmary building which has prospect of being begun soon.

The infirmary building, with ample room for the sick and conveniences for the nurse and her helpers, will add much to the comfort of the Home. The present quarters have been occasionally crowded. Besides sharing part of an infirmary with others isn't an ideal arrangement for the sick, nor those who room there, when the sick are much sick. Fortunately we have not had much serious sickness.

The last time I wrote I told about the boys giving an entertainment at the school auditorium. Since then the girls got up an entertainment at the school auditorium. Since then the girls got up an entertainment program of songs and amusing stunts. An hour laughing exercise was a particular advantage to me that evening, for the concert came after eating a 'possum supper (with other good things) with our friends, the Newells, over at the district parsonage. Mrs. Newell and Olive came back with us to the entertainment and seemed to enjoy the fun almost as much as we did the supper.

* * * *

Three of our older boys went down to Greensboro last Friday to an Older Boys' Conference. They came in after they got back Sunday night to tell us about it. Of course they had a good time.

Margaret Wood has been away visiting friends in Washington, and is back home again. We were all glad to see her back. We just naturally like to have her around, and quite a pile of letters were accumulating on her desk, which from the variety and different post marks, indicate inquiries from Santa Claus Christmas helpers.

Orders are being filed for Christmas cards. We have a large assortment to select from. If desired we will make selection for you.

Mr. W. B. Barrow gave me fifty ($50) dollars with which to buy turkeys for our Thanksgiving dinner. It is needless for me to state that our large family enjoyed the treat to the fullest extent. Mr. Barrow has our sincere thanks for such an unselfish deed.

* * * *

Our many friends have very kindly remembered us this Thanksgiving season by sending us chickens, potatoes, and many other articles. The gifts have been so numerous I find it impossible to write about each one. Let me assure each and every one who helped in any way that they have greatly pleased our children and have shown new evidences of their love for our cause which lies so close to the heart of our great church. My prayer is that as they have ministered to His little ones that He will minister to them abundantly in spiritual things.

* * * *

When it comes to doing things on a big scale my mind at once turns to my warm personal friend, B. G. Thompson, of Goldsboro, N. C. Ever since our Orphanage has been established he has been one of its best friends and most generous supporters. A few days before Thanksgiving he sent me his personal check for five thousand ($5,000) dollars. This generous contribution is in keeping with the bigness of his heart. No appeal for help from our beloved Methodist Orphanage has ever been turned down by Brother Thompson. As God prospers him in material things he shares them gladly with our dear children. Many years ago he learned that the secret of happiness does not lie in what a person possesses, but what he disburses for noble causes in His name.

* * * *

I wish to say that our Thanksgiving receipts from the churches, Sunday schools, organized classes and individuals have been very gratifying. There are quite a goodly number who have not yet responded to my call for assistance. It is not too late yet. How I do trust that they will respond within the next week or two! There is one desire that is uppermost in my heart as I write these notes. It would give me supreme joy if I could thank in person each one that has contributed his or her mite or his or her large sum to make it possible for me to finance our beautiful home. Such expressions of faith and love cause my heart to leap for joy. Our pastors, Sunday school superintendents, teachers and officers have my profound gratitude for such timely help. Wish I could mention all by name, telling of their devotion and generosity, but lack of space forbids this course.

* * * *

The Will Ormond estate, which was left the Methodist Orphanage, was sold last week at public auction. The proceeds will go to the endowment fund. Of course it will be some time before the entire amount is paid in full as the deferred notes extend over a period of four years. The board of trustees thought it advisable to sell the land, rather than to undertake to look after it at this distance. It was not my privilege to know Brother Ormond immediately. I had the great pleasure of spending an afternoon in his home before he went to his heavenly reward. He was a successful business man, a fine citizen and a consecrated church member. By his will the Orphanage endowment fund has been enlarged. Throughout the years that are to be, his gift will go on helping and blessing orphan children who shall find shelter and friends at the Methodist Orphanage. What a worthy example he has left for others to follow!

* * * *

There are scores of old people in our church who have means that ought to come to the Methodist Orphanage when they are called hence. In addition to this, they do not want the risk nor the worry of letting their money out upon interest. Then the matter of taxes is quite an item. Our board of trustees can handle all such funds and give these old people gilt edge security. If they turn their money over to us we can pay them six per cent interest semi-annually as long as they live. This plan will save them from paying interest and having anxiety over securing the principle and collecting interest. At the death of such parties the principle automatically goes into the Orphanage endowment fund. I shall be glad for our pastors to call the attention of old people with means to this annuity plan as adopted by the board of trustees of our Methodist Orphanage.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

STOP! LOOK! A<sup>N</sup>D LISTEN!

The work just now of supreme importance to the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is that which is listed in the Workers' Guide to receive attention at the First Quarterly Conference of the Conference year 1923-24, as follows:

- 1 Determine the Charge's quota and apportion same to the Churches of the Charge.
- 2 Decide upon the Charge's plan for raising its quota.
- 3 Appoint the Charge's Special Effort Committee. (And, immediately following the First Quarterly Conference, call a meeting of this committee for organization as called for in the Workers' Guide.)
- 4 Fill out the Pink Leaf Report appearing in the Workers' Guide on pages 19, 20, and send it under first-class postage to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

The Board of Finance cannot make the necessary preparations for keeping the accounts with the Charge, or for doing other important things vital to the success of the Effort, until the Pink Leaf Report, telling of the actions of the First Quarterly Conference, is received.

Thousands of pastors throughout the Church have solemnly promised, and with unquestioned determination, to co-operate in the plan of the Special Effort with unflinching loyalty. The plan is now calling for the Pink Leaf Report to be placed in the hands of the Board of Finance. Come on, men; take steady aim—and RING THE BELL!

Once upon a time a presiding elder was called the FIFTH WHEEL OF THE WAGON, but now we know he is the SPARK PLUG OF THE AUTOMOBILE. Spark, brothers, spark! Make the GASOLINE do business in the First Quarterly Conferences for the "Forgotten Man"! And see that the Pink Leaf Report goes forward. Remember, you promised you would!

LETTER FROM JAPAN

Perhaps a few more thoughts on the recent earthquake and on the conditions following the earthquake would not be uninteresting to you and the readers of the Advocate. The exact number of deaths will perhaps never be known, and the amount of property destroyed can hardly be estimated. One paper puts property damage at $50,000,000,000.

Though hundreds of thousands were killed and perhaps one-eighth of the property of Japan was destroyed or damaged, the Japanese people are not discouraged. They are bearing up with an indomitable spirit and courage. This is the kind of spirit that makes Japan a great nation. The Japanese Methodist church, as well as all other churches, was hard hit, but one interesting thing is that no Japanese Methodist preacher, or any member of their families, was killed. Some of them had miraculous escapes. One preacher with his family in Yokohama escaped into a boat when the parsonage was shaken down. He, in order to look after someone else, left his family in the boat and went back to the crumbled house. While there the fires came on and he was unable to get back to the river that day. The next day, however, he found his way back, and although all the other boats had been burned together with their occupants, his wife and children were safe.

The most terrible thing was the burning to death of 32,843 people in one place, a place consisting of about four acres. When the first shock came they rushed to this open space for safety. Then when the raging fires came on there was no way of escape. Their clothes were set on fire, and from one to another it spread. They were so densely crowded that when they died they died standing. There was no room to fall. Surely, life is but as the withering grass. And not more than 200 yards away there ran the Sumida river.

Many deeds of heroism have been recorded. Hundreds of doctors and nurses lost their lives in trying to save their patients. Servants risked their lives in trying to save their masters. Differences of race were forgotten. One woman stood in the water neck deep all night and held another person's baby above her head in order to save it. Yet, despite all this heroism and kindness, there were many crimes committed. Anarchists, labor leaders, Koreans and Chinese were killed. Wild rumors were started that bands of Koreans were preparing to assault Tokyo citizens, and others. On hearing this, panic-stricken vigilantes murdered every Korean in sight. The people of Japan deeply deplore these vicious acts, and are deeply grieved to know that such a thing ever happened. The nation at large has no enmity towards its Korean brethren. A proof of the sympathy of the Japanese people towards the unfortunate victims has been given by a memorial service being conducted at a Buddhist temple in Tokyo, which was attended by many influential officials and leading citizens.

The Japanese people greatly appreciate what is being done by America, and other nations along the lines of relief, as was shown by the great ovation given Ambassador Woods on his departure for America a few days ago. Japan is going ahead with plans for reconstruction. Out of the crumbled ruins and ashes of old Tokyo will rise a better, and let us hope a purer city. A movement is now on foot to abolish all places of public prostitution in new Tokyo. In an excellent article in one of the leading dailies of Japan, the editor in closing throws out this challenge to the nation: "While our people are about to establish universal manhood suffrage in the land, are they not willing to redeem the rights of tens of thousands of the poor victims of the ignominious institution of white slavery?"

SAY IT WITH PINKS

Our Little Folks

CHRISTMAS KINDNESSES

Our Savior was born in a stable in order to teach us something. We must look for a reason and a meaning in everything which He did, for while He was here on earth each of His acts, as well as each of His words, had a deep significance. What did Christ mean to each us, then, by being laid in a manger in the home of meek and lowly animals? It was because He Himself was meek and lowly of heart, and loved to be with the meek, lowly, sinless creatures. The lesson is perfectly clear and plain. Christ loved animals, gave them a share of His great loving heart, and wanted us to love them for His sake, says a writer in Our Animal Brothers.

Animals are very easy to please. Kind words are much to them, and small gifts go a great way. Why should not every horse, donkey, dog and cat, yes, and all the farm creatures, too, have a Christmas treat, and share our joy? Horses and donkeys love sweets, apples, carrots, and bits of bread. How sad to think that many spend Christmas alone and forgotten, perhaps cold and hungry in wretched stables, or wandering about in the bitter weather!—Our Dumb Animals.

AMBER EYES' CHRISTMAS GIFT

Amber Eyes lay before the open fire in her pretty basket. In front of her dangled three half-filled stockings, for this was Christmas eve.

Mother, father and children were fast asleep in bed, the stockings were filled with fruit and candy, and the presents were on the big table in the corner of the room, waiting for morning. Upstairs the children dreamed of them and smiled in their sleep; and their parents smiled in theirs as they dreamed of the children's happiness.

But Amber Eyes was not purring, which was her way of smiling, nor was she happy. No, indeed, not even though she knew that on the table was a lovely new ribbon bow like the one she wore. Amber Eyes was worried. Beside her in the basket were three little kittens, fast asleep—black, gray, yellow and white—the three prettiest kittens a mother cat ever had. And it was about them that Amber Eyes was worrying.

"Dear me," she thought, "it is just about time for them to disappear. Just as I get my kittens well trained and beginning to behave as well-bred kittens should, they disappear, and what becomes of them I never know. Of course every cat knows that her kittens must go away into homes of their own, but how am I to know they are well placed? Kittens are such a care that a mother feels it her duty to see they have proper homes. I must do something at once, or I fear it will be too late."

She thought long and hard for a mother cat, but at last an idea came to her. "The very thing!" she exclaimed. "The very thing!" I must begin to get them ready at once, for it will be morning very soon now, and I must get them settled before then."

She began to wash Blackie with the little pink tongue that mother cats use to wash their babies, and he soon woke up under her vigorous scrubbing and mewed a faint protest.

"Be still," mother cat said to him with a little cuff of her paw. "I have lots to do before morning. There, you are clean now. Come Gray and Daisy, you must be washed, too," and soon all three kittens were as clean from the tips of their noses to the end of their tails, and the little pink cushions on their tiny feet, as kittens could be.

Then Amber Eyes took Blackie by the neck, jumped to the top of the Morris chair, then to the mantle-shelf over the fireplace, and dropped him right into little sister's half-filled stocking. Then Gray's turn came, and he found himself in Donald's stocking. Last of all mother cat dropped Daisy into the stocking that belonged to little Cousin Elizabeth—Cousin Elizabeth, who had come with her mother and father to spend Christmas.

"There," Amber Eyes said as she went back to her basket, "I have done the best I can. Blackie and Gray will be safe under my eye until they are old enough to know how to behave, while I am sure I can trust Daisy with that sweet little girl who stroked them all so softly this evening." Then stretching herself comfortably she put her head on her paws and fell asleep.

In the morning when the children—Donald, Little Sister and Cousin Elizabeth—raced downstairs for their stockings, they found each kitten just where mother cat had dropped it, curled up—fast asleep. Did they keep them? Well, did you ever know anyone who refused a Christmas present?—Our Dumb Animals.

DIARY OF A CHRISTMAS SEAL

Northern Woods March 1. I am a part of a giant pine tree. There seems to be a lot of agitation going on near the ground. I wonder if we are actually getting chopped down. I am tired of staying here, anyway. Any place gets monotonous after a hundred years. I need a change of scene.

Northern Woods, March 2. Well, my predictions came true. We were felled to the ground yesterday, and my great dream of adventure is about to be realized. I heard the boss lumberjack say today that we were going to have a long river trip and maybe shoot the rapids. Wonderful!

Paper Mills, April 15. I wonder what is going to happen to us? There are piles and piles of us now far from home. Are they going to cut us up into toothpicks or road wagons?

Paper Mills, April 16. I was mistaken about the wagons and toothpicks. They are going to make paper of us, and in order to do that it will be necessary to crush us into pulp.

Paper Mills, June 1. O, my, what a process we've been through! I am dizzy yet from the experience I've had. They took some of us and put us through all kinds of rollers and presses and cutters and steamed us and dipped us in chemicals till I thought I would be torn to pieces. But I'm glad they did it. I am what they call paper now. My surface is white and snowy. I wonder what they will do with me next.

The Big City, July 1. My, what a long journey I've had! So many of us all alike, all bundled together, piled up in a great big warehouse. We spent days and days on the railroad, and I am really glad for a little rest, only I hope they don't keep us here too long. I want to do something in the world.

The Big City, September 1. Into the whirl of things again. Through a printing press and my back rubbed with sticky stuff! It seems that the job Fate has picked out for me is a tremendous one, and I am so excited. I am a Christmas seal with a smiling Santa Claus on my face. In the offices where lots of people gathered around to inspect me they call me "The Biggest Little Thing in the World." That's because I am helping to stamp out a great white plague, they said.

The Big City, December 1. For many weeks I have heard so much about what I am expected to do that sometimes I have wondered whether I can really conquer such a terrible enemy as tuberculosis. The campaign begins today, and I am installed in a beautiful booth with a great figure of Santa Claus on it and a rosy-cheeked young woman behind the counter to sell us and collect the pennies which are to serve as ammunition against the deadliest enemy of mankind. This is a sale which is to continue for ten days, but really I am not the thing which is being sold. No. I heard one man remark that this is "a ten-day sale of good health," and I think he is right.

The Little City, December 26. I have been so busy that I am getting behind with my diary. But it may interest you to know that I carried millions of messages of good health and good cheer, and I went everywhere the mail man went. A little girl bought me with a penny and put me on a letter she sent to her daddy away off from everybody. He was pale and wan, and I saw tears—tears of tenderness—come into his eyes as they lighted on me. My, but it is good to have a worth-while mission in life!—Presbyterian Advance.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON REFERENCE, COUNSEL AND DECISIONS

The Committee on Reference, Counsel and Decisions, appointed by the General Conference to harmonize the program of the forward movements of the church, met pursuant to the call of Bishop Mouzon and Bishop Beauchamp, in the Lambuth Building, General Committee Room, at Nashville, Tennessee, December 27, 1923. The following members of the committee were present: Bishops Mouzon, McMurry and Beauchamp; Doctors A. J. Lamar, Stonewall Anderson, Luther E. Todd, and W. G. Cram. Bishop Atkins and Dr. Tadlock were absent.

The committee made a thorough survey of the field, looking carefully into the plans of the Centenary Commission for the collection of the Centenary pledges, and into the plans of the Board of Education for the collection of the educational pledges, and into the proposed plans of the Board of Finance for raising the Superannuate Endowment Fund. The committee ordered the following statement to be made to the church:

We are pleased to report that there is practically no conflict in the proposed plans of the Centenary Commission, the Board of Education and the Board of Finance; that there is practically no confusion in the field at large. We therefore urge our people everywhere to support heartily the plans which these three great agencies of the church have presented, and will present to carry on the work committee to them by the General Conference.

We further call upon our people to keep in mind that as a church we are in a period of forward movements, and the success of these movements will depend upon the united loyalty and efforts of the whole church. Our is a connectional church; therefore, whatever program is launched by the one great authoritative body—the General Conference—is and must be the program of every local church, from the largest and most influential, down to the smallest and most insignificant. We, therefore, urge our preachers and people everywhere to stand fully and completely behind our forward movements in order that the united force of our connectionalism may be expended in making them a complete success.

The cultural and promotional efforts of these forward movements have been so arranged that confusion and conflicts may be avoided. For the year 1923 the Centenary shall have right of way in the use of the organizations and public agencies of the church during the months of January, February, March and April. The Board of Education shall have a similar right of way during the months of August, September, October and November. It is understood that during the period of special emphasis of any board or commission, the other boards or commissions will carry on in a normal way the ordinary processes of cultivation and collections, without calling upon the general organizations and public agencies of the church. Inasmuch as the General Conference has designated February 1 to July 1, 1924, as the period in which the Board of Finance shall present to the whole church the cause of Superannuate Endowment Fund, it is understood and agreed that the Centenary Commission shall have December 1923 and January 1924 as a period of special emphasis and appeal for collections.

CROUSE CIRCUIT

Please give me room to state that the people of Crouse circuit have contributed much to the comfort of their pastor. When we moved in we were greeted by a goodly number of kind ladies, who have painted the parsonage and furnished it comfortably. Thanksgiving Day we were greatly surprised when a number of ladies entered the dining room and filled the table to overflowing with groceries. To head it all the people at the quarterly conference raised the pastor's salary from $1100 to $1800. We extend our thanks to them and ask the prayers of all for the greatest year in the history of Crouse circuit.

How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Springs,
Box 4B, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

IN MEMORIAM

JONES—In the Presbyterian Hospital in Charlotte Bro. J. Fletcher Jones peacefully and quietly fell on sleep November 10, 1923. He was born in Chatham county near old Buckhorn Methodist church in September, 1858.

In early life he was soundly converted and united with said church. But in later years he moved to Broadway and engaged in the mercantile business and became one of the charter members when the church was organized and was trustee until called home. He also served as a steward several years.

Brother Jones never married. He was a quiet, peaceful and upright citizen. He loved the church and was a real Christian gentleman and a man of integrity.

For several years he had been in declining health, and was conscious that the end was near; yet he was not afraid and said often he was ready to meet his Lord. I believe he is at rest. May God bless the brothers and sisters.
B. E. Stanfield, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, Brother E. L. Sides, a revered member of the Ireland Bible class, responded to the Master's call on the night of November 12, 1923, to cease his labors here and be at rest with Him, and while we feel assured that he was called on high for nobler and better things as a just reward for his faithful work here for his Master, yet this class feels that it should give some expression of its sorrow for his departure and appreciation of his splendid Christian attributes; therefore, be it resolved by the Ireland Bible Class:

First, That in Brother Sides this class had a consecrated and devoted member. Although for some time past, owing to the fact that he felt it to be his duty to teach a class in our sister Centenary church, he could not be with this class in its Sunday morning exercises, yet his interest in it and affection for it never abated. That we mourn his departure and commend his devotion to his church and this class.

Second, That this class extend to the family of Brother Sides its tenderest and sincerest sympathy.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this class, a copy be sent to the family of our deceased brother, and a copy sent to the Christian Advocate with a request to publish.

C. S. Stubbins,
J. R. Chrismon,
John S. Michaux,
Committee.

McMINN—James Mark Huston was born October 10, 1912, and died November 23, 1923, aged 11 years, one month and 13 days.

A shadow of gloom has been cast over the entire community. A terrible accident happened in our midst and death snatched the life from one of our favorite and brightest boys.

On Friday afternoon school had just been dismissed and dear little Mark bounding with all the buoyancy of youth came running down the driveway from the school building. In his eagerness to reach home, he darted rom behind a hedge and was crushed under the cruel wheels of a passing automobile. He was rushed to the hospital, but died a few minutes after reaching there.

Mark's sojourn here on earth was short but full of brightness and sunshine and he will be missed on every hand. Full of wit, smiles and good humor he won the hearts of all who knew him, and a ray of sunshine has been taken from the home and the community. He leaves a father, mother, five sisters and one brother besides the whole community to mourn his loss.

Funeral services were conducted at Tweed's Chapel near Fletcher on November 25th by the pastor of the Biltmore Methodist church, Mr. W. Frank Sandford, and the body laid to rest in the family burying plot.

A place is vacant in the home—
The place can ne'er be filled;
The little voice we loved so well

In death has now been stilled.
His stay on earth was very brief,
But full of love and cheer,
And every heart was crushed with grief,
For the child to all was dear.
But we know he dwells in a better land;
There he beckons loved ones home,
And we all shall wait for that glad day
When the Master's voice says,
"Come."
Maud Gatling.

PATTERSON—Wm. Franklin Patterson was born December 4, 1837, and died November 28, 1893, lacking only a few days of being 86 years old.

He was married February 22, 1859, to Candice Louisa Lorange, to which marriage there were born eight children. His wife died December 23, 1898, and he married Miss C. M. Mays October 15, 1902. Brother Patterson belonged to Hopewell, Beulah, Rocky Springs and Taylorsville Methodist churches. He had held places of responsibility in his church, being at one time Sunday school superintendent at Piney Grove, Beulah and Rocky Springs. It was through his instrumentality that the church at Beulah was built. He was a great singer in his early life and thus wonderfully helped in the church services.

He is survived by five children, 27 grandchildren, 30 great-grandchildren and his widow. To all of these we extend our most heartfelt sympathy.
A. R. Bell, P. C.

MAYS—Mrs. Sarah J. Mays, who had been a life long member of the Methodist church, was transferred from earth to paradise November 22, 1923, at the age of 81 years, 10 months and 15 days. She leaves to mourn her loss four children, Mrs. Lula Hasen, J. A. Mays, Mrs. C. L. Mitchell, Mrs. J. R. Barnes, and one brother and one sister.

Hers was a good long life, but it was used in the service of her Master, and even while on a bed of affliction she did not find fault at anything or anybody, but patiently waited for release. She has gone to her reward. May the manel of her righteousness fall upon those who are left.
A. R. Bell, P. C.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Inasmuch as God in His wisdom has seen fit to remove from earth to heaven Mrs. Martha Elizabeth Blue, the mother of Mrs. Tom Blake, the beloved president of the Chadbourn Missionary auxiliary, we, the members of this auxiliary, do hereby resolve:

First, That we tender to Mrs. Blake our heartfelt sympathy in the loss of her beloved mother and assure her that in her grief our hearts go out to her in the fullness of love.

Second, To offer her comfort in the thought that her mother's life so sweetly lived in simple faith is an assurance of her abundant entrance into heaven.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of our society, a copy be sent to our church paper, and a copy be sent to Mrs. Tom Blake.

Mrs. W. F. Smith,
Mrs. W. F. Yates,
Mrs. Jas. B. Bardin.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

On Tuesday morning, November 20, 1923, God called our friend and co-worker, Helen Currie, to come and live in the mansions prepared for her.

Helen joined the Methodist church in early childhood, and although for the past four years her health had not permitted her to be an active member of the church and Sunday school, yet she was greatly interested in its work, and true to the Master's cause.

For several years she was a faithful member of the young people's Sunday school class of our church, and her presence and influence as well as her cheerful encouragement will ever be felt among us.

Her last work in our Sunday school was as a teacher of one of our junior classes, and her faithfulness and devotion to this work cannot be surpassed.

It is not for us to question why she was taken from us so young in life, but to bow in humble submission to God's will, realizing that He doeth all things well.

Therefore, as members of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school of First church, Rockingham, N. C., we desire to put on record the following resolutions:

First, That we as members of the Sunday school strive to imitate her noble example, whist stands out as a beacon light calling us onward and upward to a better land.

Second, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and pray that God's spirit may abide in their home.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread on the Sunday school record, and copies sent to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, and to our town paper for publication.

Georgia Biggs,
Octavia Scales,
Mrs. J. D. Bundy,
Committee.

The Advocate as a Christmas present will be enjoyed for 51 weeks.

THIRTEEN MILLION DOLLARS IN CHURCH VALUES

The value of property belonging to the Methodist Church in North Carolina exceeds $3,000,000. On this vast amount of property there is only $3,000,000 of insurance—less than one-fourth of its value protected.

Suppose you had stock in a furniture factory one-fourth protected from fire, what would you do? You would either sell, or hold the directors responsible.

See that your church officials protect your most valuable assets or you may be called upon to donate again to rebuild a church parsonage destroyed by fire.

Insure in The Methodist Mutual—owned and controlled by the two North Carolina Conferences.

IN MEMORIAM

GRAY—Sarah Thurston Gray was born on January 24, 1845, and died on November 3, 1923. On August 16, 1868, she was married to Dr. Clayborn Bray. To this union were born seven children—J. Malley Gray, Mrs. John Riley, Mrs. J. C. Hendrix, Mrs. W. L. Watson, Mrs. W. D. Palmer, Mrs. C. T. Ross and C. A. Gray. She is also survived by thirty-six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Gray, in early childhood, joined the First Presbyterian church in Greensboro, but later after moving to Pleasant Garden united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in that place.

She was preceded to the grave several years by her husband, who likewise had been a member of the Methodist church with her. Her Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His wisdom has seen fit to call from our midst our friend and sister, Mrs. Maggie Hodges, age 55 years, the Ladies' Aid Society of Sharon church, South Mills circuit, submit the following resolutions:

First, That we have lost a faithful member, true friend and neighbor.

Second, That we may profit by her example. Almost helpless for more than two years, she was patient and cheerful.

Third, That we commend her husband and children to our heavenly Father for comfort and strength.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our society and a copy be sent to the bereaved family.

Mrs. Lina E. Gordan,
Mrs. Emma Sawyer,
Mrs. Mary B. Sawyer,
Mrs. Mary E. Abbott.

IRVIN—Mrs. Margaret Irvin was one, if not the oldest, residents of Shelter Rock township. She was born January 17, 1836; died November 19, 1923, being almost 87 years old.

Between these dates there lived one who came down to the evening sunset of life with the favor of God upon her life. She was remembered very kindly by her neighbors and friends, and these were numbered by their acquaintances.

She made her home with her brother, Mr. J. W. Rowe. It was my pleasure to visit the home a number of times. I always found her cheerful for one of her age, and especially when we take into consideration the infirmities incident to one of her years. She did not suffer long; the blade was placed among the ripened wheat and she was garnered to the skies.

She leaves behind to mourn her going one brother, formerly referred to; one daughter, Mrs. D. J. Stokes; six grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

We laid her to rest in the cemetery at Trinity Methodist church, of which she was a member, on Tuesday, November 20, 1923.

C. H. Caviness, Pastor.

WINBORNE—John S. Winborne, son of William J. and Mary Winborne, passed from earth to his reward September 19, 1923, aged 75 years and three months. In early life he connected himself with Harrellsville M. E. church, to which he was ever faithful and true, in his quiet way meeting all his duties and obligations, ready to do his part. When he signed the Centenary pledge to those present he said, "If I die before this pledge is paid, I want you to see it is paid." Truth and honesty was his life motto. His home was the place friends and neighbors met. He could tell you something of interest on any subject; was a great reader and well informed. He was a scholar of the "old type."

His wife preceded him a few years. They leave to mourn their loss two sons and three daughters, Thomas W. and Charles W. Winborne, Mrs. Fred White, Mrs. Mitton Bowen and Mrs. L. W. Saunders. It was his privilege to see his children join his home church. L. H. Winborne, another son, passed away last March. He often spoke of the end being near, and to his pastor he said he was willing to "meet God," in whom he had trusted all these years. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. S.

T. Barber. Those present attested of his many friends, and with touching tenderness sang favorite hymns. "How Firm a Foundation" was applied to his life. A statement made by him was firm. In his passing the church loses the oldest member, the community a good neighbor, the home a faithful father. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

R. J.

PEARSON—On November 26, 1923, the Lord saw best to come to the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Pearson, Second street, Northwood, Greensboro, and claim as His own little W. E. Jr., just 20 months and 18 days of age.

The little one was with us such a short time, but had gained the love of every one with whom he came in contact. His was such a gentle, lovable disposition, always from tiny babyhood greeting every one with a smile.

The following day his funeral was preached in the home by Rev. W. L. Dawson of the Summerfield charge, assisted by Rev. C. P. Goode of Reidsville and Rev. Mr. Kennedy of Bethel church, Greensboro, and under a mound of beautiful flowers we tenderly laid the little one in Greene Hill cemetery to await the coming of our Lord.

"The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away, bleesed be the name of the Lord."

His aunt,

Nellie Sherrill.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, the Lord in His wisdom has removed from the Bellhaven Missionary Society of M. E. church our beloved sister, Mrs. M. C. Carr, who was a very faithful member; be it resolved:

First, That we, as a society, perpetuate her memory by following in her steps of cheerfulness and devotion.

Second, That while we miss her we rejoice in hope of the reward God has promised to the faithful, and bow in humble submission to His will.

Third, That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved family and ask God's blessing on them in their sorrow.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to the Bellhaven Journal, and a copy to the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy be spread upon our minutes.

Mrs. A. L. Bell,
Mrs. J. N. Edwards,
Mrs. E. W. Clark.

PRICE—John Hampton Price was born in Henry county, Virginia, on January 23, 1834, and died at his home in Stoneville, N. C., on July 29, 1923, age 89 years, nine months and six days.

He was married to Miss Mary H. Dalton October 23, 1867, and to this union were born six children—Miss Anna Lee, Mrs. W. L. Ward, Mrs. S. P. Tesh, Robert B., John R., and Samuel H., all of whom are living.

Brother Price was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1871, and lived a consistent Christian life.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer in the Stoneville Methodist church on July 31st, in the presence of a large congregation. Not only will he be missed in the home and church, but Rockingham county loses one of her most useful and influential citizens. W. M. Wall, P. C.

JAMES—On October 16, 1923, God called Mr. Geo. R. James from toil and care to life eternal. He was sick for several weeks before his death, but he bore his suffering faithfully to the end. He was a quiet, faithful man, a devoted father, and was loved by all who knew him. He will be greatly missed by his dear wife, children, grandchildren and friends. He is now at rest while loved ones are left to mourn. Dear grandpa, we miss you, and hated to give you up, but God knew best. May our heavenly Father bless and comfort us all.

Sleep on, dear grandpa, and take thy rest;
Lay down thy head upon thy Saviour's breast;

We loved you well, but God loved you best.

His granddaughter,

Omega Foushee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

For the third time this year death has robbed Scott's Hill's Ladies' Aid Society of one of its most loyal members.

It is with much sorrow that we record the passing of Mrs. W. F. Mitchell, who was a friend to all and who was loved by all. Her real worth was not known until after she was taken away. She and her husband came here from Pennsylvania about ten years ago and both have made many warm friends. Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society, are filled with much sorrow over the place made vacant.

Second, That we may strive to live the same sweet and helpful life that she lived.

Third, That a copy of this be placed on the minutes of our society, one sent to the Christian Advocate and a copy sent to the bereaved husband.

Mrs. J. W. Downum,
Mrs. R. L. Foy,
Mrs. W. M. Eubank.

PRICE—James Henry Price, a native of Guilford county, died at his home in Mayodan, N. C., on November 22, 1923, age 71 years, eight months and 11 days.

He was first married to Miss Angle E. Middleton January 18, 1874, who died on June 28, 1909. He was married the second time to Mrs. Emma Stewart on May 2, 1913, and she and six children by his former marriage survive him.

Brother Price was converted and joined the Methodist Protestant church when he was just a young man. Later he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and remained in her communion till death, being a faithful and loyal member.

On November 24th the funeral services were conducted by the writer in the Methodist church in Mayodan in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

W. M. Wall, P. C.

ANDREWS—After a lingering illness of more than a year's duration as a result of a severe attack of "flu," Bro. James A. Andrews fell on sleep at his home near Rockingham just as the new day began November 17, 1923.

In the year 1839 he was happily married to Miss Lucy McIntosh, who with four children survive him. Three others had preceded him to the glory world. He was born September 25, 1866.

Brother Andrews joined Mizpeh church the same year he married under the ministry of Rev. F. L. Townsend. He lived a peaceful Christian life and was always regular and faithful to attend church on a Sunday school.

I visited him during his illness and he was happy in a Saviour's love; wanted to get well if it was God's will, but ready to go when called home. I sincerely believe he has entered into that rest that remains for the people of God. We expect to meet again when this life is over.

May the Lord bless the bereaved.

B. E. Stanfield.

EDWARDS—How blest the righteous when he dies! Thus when the spirit of Bro. J. J. Edwards of Ayden took its everlasting flight one of the best and purest men I ever knew let us. As a young preacher, awkward, timid and inexperienced on my first charge, I found in this man a kind, helpful friend. He stood by me and helped me in many ways which I shall never forget. He loved the church and for 53 years was a steward, and filled other official positions, as Sunday school superintendent, trustee, etc., at different times. His fidelity and loving zeal in his home he was a kind, affectionate and devoted husband and father, and in the town a quiet, unobtrusive, progressive citizen that exemplified the best type of genuine citizenship. He had a large circle of friends who loved him and stood by him and were drawn to him as with hoops of steel. Without hesitation I can truly say that Uncle John Edwards was a Christian gentleman.

He lived his religion and in business as merchant or in the home or anywhere else you could clearly see that he was a Christian. He had profound contempt for shams either in religion or anywhere, but lived a sincere, honest life without ostentation or pride.

The funeral was conducted by his pastor and the writer in the church where he had worshipped for many years, and then his mortal remains were taken to the old family burying ground in Greene county and laid to rest. May peace be unto his ashes. Our loss is his gain. Servant of God, well done. May God abundantly bless the bereaved children and friends.

B. E. Stanfield.

JOHNSTON—Frederick Swain Johnston, born April 12, 1867, died November 17, 1823. He was born, lived and died at Franklin, N. C. There at the age of eleven years he joined the Methodist church during the pastorate of Rev. M. P. Swaim. Mr. Johnston was married July 31, 1889, to Miss Anne Allen of Georgia. To the union were born Jackson Allen, Frederick Swain, Jr., Eugene Lynn, Anne Elizabeth and William Robert, Jr., all of whom, together with their mother, survive the deceased. Mr. Johnston was graduated from Emory College, now Emory University, in 1887, and from that year until 1890 he was editor of the Press, the town and county paper of his own home of Franklin. In September of 1892 he was licensed to practice law, in which profession he remained until the time of his death. He was the Sunday school superintendent in the Methodist church at Franklin for thirty years. The last quarterly conference before his death elected him for the thirty-first year of service in this capacity. He was also an active steward in his church for many years.

I knew Brother Johnston in a very intimate way, having been his pastor for four years. He carried the dignity and nobility of a sterling Christian character into his chosen profession. He was never accused by any who knew him of stooping to anything beneath the conduct of a thorough Christian gentleman. He was a man of extraordinary mental powers. A lover of good literature. His was a scholarly mind running to the high plane of the poet mind. He loved the hymns, history and doctrines of his church and with all these he was, as a layman, most unusually familiar.

One of the marked characteristics of Brother Johnston was his fine sense and fine use of humor that made him always the center of attraction in any group. With his affable and genial spirit and personality he was always at home with the unlearned or the most scholarly.

In his religious life Brother Johnston was not demonstrative. His religion did not take on that form of piety which is often mistaken for saintliness. But his spiritual life ran deep; there were no shallow places in his religion. That fine thing which we call consistency was a marked virtue in his religious character. He stood always firm in his faith and fixed in his loyalty to his Lord and to his church. His was a Christian mind, a Christian heart and a Christian life. His religion is expressed most perfectly in a text of scripture which he was often heard to quote: Micah 6:8, "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" And in a hymn which the writer and others have often heard him quote or refer to—No. 472 of the Methodist hymnal, the closing verse of that hymn seemed always to be a special favorite with him:

I know not where his island lift
Their fringed palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond his love and care.
And thou, O Lord, by whom are seen
Thy creatures as they be,
Forgive me if too close I lean
My human heart on thee.

Space will not permit my mention of all the fine Christian virtues and great personal qualities that made Brother Johnston one of the most useful citizens, one of the most able lawyers and one of the best churchmen that his state has ever produced. His modesty in all things denied him that much wider reputation which all men of his kind are entitled to.

R. H. Daugherty.

"Even Unto Bethlehem"

By the Rev. GEORGE CLARKE PECK, D.D., of Baltimore, Md.

Let us now go even unto Bethlehem.—Luke 2:15.

THIS is a dear, familiar invitation echoing across the centuries. Very personal and circumscribed in its original address, of course. Yet I make sure that the original issues of it would, if they are aware, be glad to have us join them in their tender pilgrimage. I move, therefore, that we accept the invitation and bear the shepherds company, "even unto Bethlehem." Normally, it would not have been Bethlehem, as the small qualifying adverb implies. The place of the nativity was small, inconspicuous, "little among the thousands of Judah," as Micah confesses in his ascription, and yet startlingly rich in sweet memories. Apart from its crowning honor, Bethlehem is well worthy of a visit, for the beauty of its traditions. Like many another village, geographically unimportant, as Erfurt, Weimar, Epworth, Ayrshire, it has immortal rank. Through this little hamlet set among the Judean hills ran the human line of Jesus. Without including Bethlehem you cannot write His ancestral story. And considering that story, I cannot think of another place so suitable as Bethlehem to be His birth-place. Shall I refresh, in memory, the story?

Bethlehem and Jacob.

It was near Bethlehem that Jacob lost Rachel when Benjamin was born. Within plain sight of its walls the hour of a woman's anguish fell; an hour of mortal agony for Jacob's tenderly loved wife. You can hardly read the story without a sudden clutching at the heart: it is all so human—and withal so dignified and restrained in the recital. And the new baby was born, and his mother's life paid the price. And the father never forgot. Long, long afterward, as Jacob lay dying, and Rachel's other child, Joseph, stood by to receive a last benediction, Jacob lived over again the fearful hours of that fateful day in the neighborhood of Bethlehem. "As for me, when I came from Padan, Rachel died by me . . . when there was still some way to come unto (Bethlehem), and I buried her there."

Sweet, long, deathless memory! The world is not apt to forget a grief like that. Say that Jacob had many loves: Jacob had, nevertheless, just one love; and he held that close to his heart to the end. "I buried her there," he said, dreaming backward to Bethlehem. What he really meant was that he buried there part of himself.

The mind has a thousand eyes,
The heart but one;
And the light of the whole world dies,
When love is done.

Of course he built a monument. The record says: "And Jacob set a pillar upon her grave." But the real memorial was the memory he kept till memory itself went out with the tide of life at evening. Not far from the village, on the main road to Hebron from Bethel, you may visit still, if the chance ever is yours, a small domed building. It is the world's perpetuation of the memory that Jacob carried to his own grave. For, all the world loves that kind of a lover, and claims him for husband or brother or friend. Bethlehem is a big place when it shrines a love like that. And London or Paris would be a mere hamlet lacking that sort of love. And it seems to me that Bethlehem was a little more fit to be the human birth-place of the Son of God, since it held, among its immortal annals, the story and the visible memorial of such a love.

Bethlehem and Ruth.

But the scene changes, and we hurry over the centuries. And again it is Bethlehem. And again it is love that sanctifies the place. Everybody knows the story. At least, everybody ought to know it. Ruth was not born in Bethlehem. It was her husband's hailing place. And after he died in the land in which they married, she migrated to Bethlehem with Naomi, her mother-in-law, also widowed. Naomi's heart was crying toward home. You can stand a foreign land while you have company for your heart. You can make a home of any place when you can pick your company. Miles do not count: you can naturalize yourself anywhere when your heart is glad. But when your friend or mate dies and leaves you elsewhere than at home, that "elsewhere" is a foreign land. And how one longs to get home! Of course home will never be the same with the old faces missing, yet how one yearns to be there. It was so with Naomi. Husband gone, her heart asked for Bethlehem.

And Ruth could not bear any longer the homesick look in the elder woman's eyes. So Ruth went with her to Bethlehem in the hills. Mother-in-law and daughter-in-law: let all stupid jests hold their silly tongues in the presence of this exquisite record. More beautiful confession of unselfish love the world does not know. So far as she could foresee, Ruth had everything to lose and naught to gain; yet here is what she said: "Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people and thy God my God: where thou diest I will die, and there will I be buried." That in the event Ruth gained far more than she gave up takes no flash from the splendor of her renunciation. It was to unfamiliar skies and poverty and a foreign tongue she went—with a smile and a song. And then, by one of those swift, half incredible reversals with which God keeps life piquant, Bethlehem became home to her also. And the child that God laid in her arms became the grandfather of David, and so the forbear of "that Man" whose advent was morning to men everywhere.

Bethlehem and David.

But again Bethlehem: this time as the city of Ruth's great-grandson. It was David, you recall, who first made Bethlehem famous. He was her boy; a ruddy faced lad as the Record says; used to the wind and the stars and the broad day. I suppose that everybody in Bethlehem loved Jesse's youngest son, and was proud of his strength and his gifts. You could not help loving David—even in his sins. For even his sins were the sins of a boy; and when he sinned he grieved his heart out with sorrow and shame—like a boy. And when he got to be king, Bethlehem held her

IN THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

The Southern Methodist Press Association held its annual meeting last Friday and Saturday, December 14-15, in the Mount Vernon Representative church, Washington, D. C. It was the most largely attended and profitable meeting that the association has held since its organization five years ago. Two busy days were given to the work in hand. In addition to a discussion of problems that confront editors and business managers, such as the editorial management of the paper, advertising, subscriptions, and kindred matters, one whole morning was devoted to the consideration of present day doctrinal controversies, unification, world peace, and race problems. Carefully prepared addresses had been asked for by the program committee and each responded as he had been requested.

The following members of the association were in attendance:

R. S. Satterfield, Nashville, Tenn.; J. M. Rowland, Richmond, Va.; P. E. Riley, Dallas, Texas; E. M. McNeil, Nashville, Tenn.; T. R. Wiggins, Nashville, Tenn.; A. J. Weeks, Nashville, Tenn.; A. C. Miller, Little Rock, Ark.; S. K. Cockrell, Baltimore, Md.; T. L. Hulse, Louisville, Ky.; J. A. Burrow, Nashville, Tenn.; W. L. Reid, New Orleans, La.; C. A. Chalmers, Huntington, W. Va.; A. W. Plyler, Greensboro, N. C.; C. D. Ransford, St. Louis, Mo.; W. H. Nelson, San Francisco, Cal.; D. H. Ashton, Tulsa, Okla.; L. J. Ballard, Atlanta, Ga.; W. J. King, Atlanta, Ga.; E. B. Chappell, Jr., Nashville, Tenn.

Mount Sequoah, Ark., was selected as the next place of meeting. This is the new summer assembly ground for the western section of the church and the next meeting of the association will be held in the summer.

The officers for the ensuing year are R. S. Satterfield, associate editor of the Christian Advocate, president; A. W. Plyler, vice president; J. M. Rowland, secretary. The officers constitute the executive committee and will also formulate the program for the next annual meeting.

Guests of Mount Vernon Church.

The members of the association were guests while in Washington of the Mount Vernon Representative church, of which Dr. Clovis G. Chappell is the pastor and Rev. Mr. Rippey is the assistant pastor. The pastor and his assistant left nothing undone that could add to the pleasure of our stay. Each day the association took luncheon together at an exclusive cafe, Saturday night a banquet was tendered us by the board of stewards of Mount Vernon at the Capital City Club, a drive each afternoon to points of interest in the city and even to Mount Vernon and arrangements for the association to see the President in his executive office were among the special courtesies shown the visitors.

The Representative church has grown to be a great church. Since Dr. Chappell became pastor six years ago 2,600 members have been received into the church.

The total amount raised last year was $66,622. Of this amount conference general work received $3,458. The amount paid on church buildings was $17,957. The Sunday school raised $8,488 and the league $1,489.

The assessment for Centenary was $21,000. More than $31,000 has been paid to date. The assessment for the Educational fund was $18,000. More than $6,000 has been paid to date.

The loose collections last year amounted to $12,000.

Dr. Chappell is still as popular as at the beginning of his pastorate and hundreds are turned away each Sunday, a goodly number of whom attend the overflow meeting in the Sunday school room, where Rev. Mr. Rippey preaches also to the junior congregation.

The mistake in the erection of this church was in building only about one-half as large as the church should have been. The auditorium should have been twice as large as it is and the Sunday school needs double the room it has.

Southern Methodism in the Capital.

Eight years ago Southern Methodism had but a small place in the national capital. We had seven churches, it is true, but not one of them was an outstanding church in numbers, strength or influence. Old Mount Vernon with its faithful membership met in an old red brick church just across on the opposite corner from where the Representative church now stands. It did a wonderful work, but it could not do under the circumstances what it should do. Epworth church had a small building in the northeast section. Emory had a very small building out in the extreme northwest section. Mt. Pleasant was about completed. Calvary, Marvin and St. Paul were existing.

But what is the condition today? Mount Vernon Place church is the strongest Protestant church in Washington, so far as influence is concerned. It is next to the strongest in number of members and amount of yearly budget. Epworth church has a wonderful new building just completed. The membership has increased from about 300 to more than 900 in the past three years. Emory has a fine building located in one of the best residential sections of the city. Mt. Pleasant is a strong uptown church. Marvin, St. Paul and Calvary have increased in membership and are strong, though small, churches in their sections.

Southern Methodism is now a recognized force in the capital. It is conceded by every one, even other denominations, that the enterprise of the Representative church has done more to strengthen Protestantism in the capital than any other thing that has happened in years.

The Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Baptist, Christian or Disciples, Episcopal, Unitarian and Catholic churches are engaged this very moment in building their Representative churches in the capital.

Southern Methodism has led the way in a city that has persecuted it for many years. The opportunity is ours if we will only take advantage of it. As stated before, the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has an opportunity of becoming in every sense of the word the Representative church, not alone of our denomination, but of Protestantism. If the church at large will help in this matter as it should this can be accomplished. The people want to come, but we have no room for them. If adequate room could be provided for both church and Sunday school it is an assured fact that the church would have several thousand members and one of the largest Sunday schools in the world in a few years. The local church has the necessary leadership and workers to accomplish this task, but it does not have the money or any way of getting it. What shall the church do? Will it take advantage of its great opportunity or turn aside from it?

ON KILL DEVIL HILL

Twenty years ago last Monday Wilbur and Orville Wright flew the first heavier-than-air machine. The first flight lasted 12 seconds and measured 120 feet, in the face of a cold wind blowing 27 miles an hour. Orville drove the biplane with its little four-cylinder gasoline engine and Wilbur ran along by the side to steady the machine as it lifted itself above the sand dunes of Kill Devil hill. Wilbur drove for the second flight which lasted 13 seconds. Orville drove for the third flight that continued 15 seconds. The machine for the fourth and last flight of the day was driven by Wilbur, who remained in the air 59 seconds and flew 850 feet. Such was the record on December 17, 1903, which has become one of the memorable days of the year. Only five persons braved the cold to see what took place on that historic day when the Wright brothers were lifted into the Hall of Fame to dwell there forever.

Of these two immortals, Orville, now 52 years of age, is at work in his laboratories in Dayton, Ohio, testing theories that tend to perfect the flying machine.

Wilbur, who was four years older than Orville, died of typhoid fever in 1912. The older brother is said to have been the leader in the vision of flying, as these young men worked in their bicycle shop in Dayton, O.

After 20 years the speed of the flying machine has reached 267 miles an hour, mail is carried across the continent, and aviation has become one of the great arms of service in the world's armies.

The knowing ones of Dayton said of the Wright brothers 20 years ago, "The fools are trying to make a machine that can fly. Both are crazy and always were. You can't go against nature."

But those prophets of unbelief are dead, while the crazy men are clothed in immortality. Faith and daring and industry won.

ONE OF GOD'S NOBLEMEN

We are just in receipt of a letter from a princely layman in Asheville which among other things says:

"Sunday afternoon as I sat in my room by a good warm fire and read the stories of 'The Forgotten Man' I could but wonder if there were any in our own Western North Carolina conference who would feel at this glad time that they were forgotten.

While I thought upon these things it occurred to me that if there were you would be in position to know, and I decided I would send you a small check and ask you to use it as you deemed best, and place it where you felt it was most needed and would bring to the recipient some cheer, if from no other cause that of being remembered.

Kindly distribute this as you think best, but say nothing as to the source.

As I read these stories I appreciate more and more the contribution I made to Brother Rogers as he went over our conference laboring for means with which to help make the closing days of these saints more comfortable."

Not only will the $50 check from this great and good layman bring Christmas cheer to some superannuates of our conference, but this letter should turn the mind of the entire conference to the Superannuate Endowment campaign.

CHRISTMAS FOR THE CHILDREN

Cedar, holly and mistletoe are in parlor and hall. The children are almost frantic with joy because Santa is coming with dolls, and horns, and wagons, and bicycles. Remember the children as the yuletide approaches. Let joy be unconfined in their little hearts. For the years pass swiftly and childhood will soon slip away into youth or into manhood and womanhood, and Christmas will be no more what it once was; hence, while the children are here make the season all that the little ones should desire. The laughter and glee of the children is the heavenly music on the birthday of the lover of little children.

And amid it all do not forget the little children of God's humble poor who may wait in vain for the coming of the long expected toys which never fail to gladden the heart of childhood.

NO PAPER NEXT WEEK

The men in the shop have been on the job every day in the year except Sundays. They did not stop even for the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving. These hard working and faithful men must have a few days off at Christmas. For that reason there will be no issue of the Advocate next week. But we expect to greet our readers again January 3, 1924.

To one and all a Merry Christmas!

THE GOOD FORTUNE OF A POPULAR PASTOR

Last Sunday morning the Spring Garden Street church and Sunday school presented their pastor, Rev. G. T. Bond, a solid gold, 23 ruby jeweled Hamilton watch with chain to match. It is the final word in the watch maker's art.

The church appreciates most highly their pastor, who is doing a great work at Spring Garden. He preaches to immense congregations both morning and evening. The attendance at Sunday school ranges every Sunday near the 500 mark.

GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY

Sunday, January 27, 1924, has been set apart by the church as Good Literature Sunday. It has the endorsement of the bishops of the church. It seems to us that the pastors, if possible, should plan to preach upon the subject of good literature that day and present the claims of the church paper. Large and permanent results may accrue from the proper observances of the day. We trust that the plan will commend itself to our pastors.

Rev. J. T. Higgins, pastor of Brevard Street church, Charlotte, who several weeks ago was so seriously ill in a Charlotte hospital, has now, according to the attending physician, passed the danger point, and expects to be at his beloved employ before long. During Brother Higgins' illness Rev. E. C. Rozzelle of Mt. Holly has preached at the morning hour. Methodist ministers of the city have supplied at the evening hour.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

Rev. J. M. Folger, pastor at Mt. Pleasant, Asheville district, says that the good and kind people of his charge have released him from all grocery bills for quite a while. A pounding explains this sweet release, for which the pastor is very grateful.

"Nicodemus Joins the Church" is the title of a story from Rev. A. C. Gibbs which awaits a place in the columns of this paper. Rev. Mr. Gibbs was in the editor's office Monday and lodged a denial that any Nicodemus had joined his church. It was some other man's church that he had joined.

Dr. J. F. Kirk, pastor of the First church, Salisbury, spent part of Monday in Greensboro and favored the Advocate office with his presence for a few moments when he called to get a copy of the Advocate that had failed to reach him. Kirk says that he cannot get on well without the Advocate.

The following is from the Bulletin of last week of Glenwood church, Greensboro, of which W. A. Barber is the pastor: "The pastor and his wife are unable to adequately express their appreciation for the splendid pounding received last Wednesday night. It was a complete surprise to the pastor, even though it had been whispered to Mrs. Barber. We can only say thank you, and God bless you."

Miss Maggie Renn, who for 15 years was bookkeeper and handled the mailing list of the Advocate, spent several days this week in Greensboro with Mrs. J. J. Renn and Miss Kate Renn. Miss Renn while here visited the Advocate office and all were delighted to see her. She has not lost her interest in the Advocate. Says she reads everything in the paper, even the advertisements, and that she was greatly pleased to visit the old place again. Miss Renn is on her way to visit a brother in Virginia.

Rev. J. E. Houser, pastor of Cherryville circuit, according to the Eagle's report will begin a campaign December 16 and continue through the month. A committee in each church will solicit subscriptions and renewals for the Advocate. "Our slogan is: 'The Advocate in every Methodist home.' Next Sunday at 11 o'clock at Behlehem and at St. Paul at 3 o'clock the pastor will preach on the subject: 'Some reasons why a man should take and read his church paper.' We always extend a hearty welcome to people of other denominations and also to those of no church affiliation to worship with us."

Rev. E. C. Sell, Stedman, N. C., sends the following note under date of December 15: "Rev. Philip Greening, one of our honored superannuates, has sold his home here and has moved to White Oak. We regretted to see this veteran of the cross, now in his 83rd year, leave our village, but he has gone to spend the sunset days of a long and useful life amid the quiet scenes of Bladen county in the community where he found his second wife. Brother Greening's work is done, and he is awaiting the call to pass over the river and be with God. His post-office address is White Oak, N. C."

Dr. H. M. Blair writes the following interesting news item: "Quite a number of Advocate readers will recall Dr. J. P. Nicholson, for many years a well known physician practicing in north Iredell and Yadkin counties. He was also a useful local preacher for many years. Some years ago he gave up the practice of his profession and has been living quietly with his step-son, Mr. L. R. Barnard, at 746 Percy street, this city. On Thursday, December 13, he celebrated his eighty-seventh birthday and is still hale and hearty, and wishes to send a note of greeting to his many friends who are still among Advocate readers. The old veteran, though now far past his four-score year, is as bright in mind as a man of fifty and finds great delight in rehearsing the interesting experiences of his long life. He began the practice of medicine before the Civil War and was an army surgeon during the war, his practice in all covering a period of sixty years. Your readers will be interested to learn that Dr. Nicholson is a brother of James Nicholson, who is credited in our Methodist hymnal with the authorship of two of our most popular hymns, viz., 857, "Whiter than snow," and 891, "It is better further on." Dr. Nicholson is happy and cheerful in his old age and says he is now only waiting the will of his Lord."

Brother Geo. T. Simmons, one of our superannuates, writes to the members of the N. C. conference: "I would be glad to address each one privately who contributed to my relief during the session of the N. C. conference, but as this is impossible I wish to express through the Advocate my deep appreciation of your contribution and assure you it was a great help to me. But more than all I appreciate the Christ-spirit which prompted the kind act. I am now at Retreat for the Sick, 2621 Grove Ave., Richmond, Va., where I underwent a serious operation this week. I am getting along as well as could be expected."

Rev. J. M. Barber, Dudley Shoals charge, is with those who are posting the name of the church. Hear him: "I noticed in your editorial paragraphs of last week that you wanted the country churches to put the names upon them. I want to inform you that we on the Dudley Shoals charge are building a nice brick church, and have in the corner of the main part a beautiful slab of white granite with these words engraved, 'Grace M. E. Church, South.' We are ready for the roof now, and will have it enclosed soon. We have six good Sunday school rooms and will heat the building with steam. Things are moving along very well on this good charge. I love my people, and they love me. Pray for us."

Rev. B. E. Stanfield, Jonesboro circuit, sends this interesting item: "I noticed in the editorials of the last Advocate an article about having the name put on churches, even country churches. When we remodeled Poplar Springs church last year and had memorial windows put in this summer we had the name of the church put in the transom over the front door so it can be read at a good distance. And last night at the workers' council of the Jonesboro Sunday school it was decided to put the name of this church over the front door, and Mrs. Belle Barnes' Sunday school class offered to present the church with an electric sign to be put in front of the church. So we are in line with the editor and our thoughts are in the same ditches."

Rev. Oscar L. Simpson of Spindale sends us the following news item that is of unusual interest: "The Rev. R. F. Bryant, superannuate Methodist preacher well known in North and South Carolina, had a close call from death at the hands of an automobile speedster in Spindale Monday, December 10. Brother Bryant was knocked violently to the ground. With agility and coolness that would have done credit to one many years younger, he jumped to his feet and obtained a view which later enabled him to make positive identification. A deputy was summoned and the driver of the automobile placed under arrest within ten minutes after the incident occurred. The authorities in Rutherfordton promptly confiscated the automobile on the ground that it was being used to transport liquor. The driver is lodged in jail to await trial. He will be charged with driving recklessly and maliciously while under the influence of liquor. While the distinguished veteran, battered but by no means vanquished, was on his way to Rutherfordton in search of the man who had come so near hurling him into eternity, he with the deputy sheriff with whom he was riding had still another narrow escape due, it is alleged, to careless pig-headed driving. Driver number two will have his day in court."

RECITAL AT LOUISBURG COLLEGE

Louisburg College students gave the third recital of this semester Friday evening, December 14th. Every number on the program was well rendered and gave conclusive evidence of gratifying progress in each department represented. Special mention should be made of the violin and saxophone number, "Off to the Front," played by Laurence Cooper and Frank Wheelless. Louisburg boys who belong to the college orchestra. Other students taking part in the entertainment of the evening were: Misses Mary Malone Best, Kittie Boddie, Bettie Mohn, Elizabeth Newell, Margaret Holden, Mary Lee Kearney, Belvin Finch, Ora Holden, Bettie Holden, Louisburg; Mary Leila Honiker, Potsdam, N. Y.; Katie Richardson, Raleigh; Mildred Barrow, Farmville; Marfy Lee Starling, Garner; Muzette Winstead, Roxboro; Sallie McCullers, Garner; Julia Daniels, Elm City; Elinor Edwards, Ayden; Mildred Waters, Hollister; Lois Sanford, Vass; Susie Crowell, Thomasville; Vera Campbell, Siler City.

Just 27 days from the time copy was received for the journal of the recent session of the North Carolina conference the Advocate Printing House began mailing the completed journal. They will all be mailed out this week.

REVIVAL AT TRINITY COLLEGE

Dr. Ashley Chappell, pastor of Central Methodist church, Asheville, N. C., recently conducted a very successful series of evangelistic services at Trinity College.

During the course of the services several hundred members of the college community responded to definite appeals made by Dr. Chappell for more complete consecration of life to the cause of Christ. A number of students took their definite Christian stand during the course of the meeting.

A canvass of the college made previous to the meeting showed 97 per cent of the student body to be members of a Protestant church, and therefore the services were conducted largely with a view to reconsecration. And this aim was successfully accomplished.

Dr. Chappell's preaching was of high order, and was greatly appreciated by the college community. He was especially happy in his picturization of spiritual experience in terms which appealed to college students.

A feature of the week of evangelism was the series of dormitory prayer groups organized and conducted by the students. Over twenty such groups met nightly for prayer and testimony.

"EVEN UNTO BETHLEHEM"

head exceedingly high, and called herself by the name: "the city of David." And Bethlehem remembered affectionately everything about him; the pranks he played, and the wonderful songs he sang, and his chivalry and his modesty: just as the little island of Corsica remembered Napoleon, and Erfurt remembered Luther, and Concord remembers Emerson. 'Tis a pretty way towns have when their sons are grown famous.

And David remembered everything about Bethlehem. Sometimes I think you can take the grade of a man by the way his memory works toward his birth-place. Somewhat radical ails the man who outgrows the scenes of his boyhood and his playmates. This growing-up and growing-famous business is fraught with many a peril to the heart of a man. And when his heart cries wildly, sometimes, for a sight of the old apple trees, and the dear sound of a voice that is still, I take fresh joy in him. Never shall I forget the look in the eyes of my brilliant friend when he told me he had bought the old farm on which he was raised; how he had mended the gate, and put fresh gravel on the walk, and re-rigged the bucket in the well. And I traveled several hundred miles for the sheer delight of watching his happiness puttering about the old place.

David was like that. I suppose there were moments when he forgot Bethlehem; but there were tense moments in which he remembered her hungrily. How do I know? Well, take this for sample: "Oh, that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem, which is by the gate." David was hard pressed that day. He had learned by bitter experience the uneasiness of the head that wears a crown. He had come to one of those lighting moments in which he doubted the value of the things he had gained. Some of you know precisely how he felt. He would have been glad to lay aside all the trappings and honors of royalty for the simple, unharnessed life of the village in which he was born. Then his heart broke loose in fevered, passionate cry for a drink from the old well by the gate. Everybody knows the graphic sequel; how three of his captains took their lives in their hands, and hurst through the enemy's lines, and got the water to cool the fever of their idolized chieftain's heart, and how David himself choked at the very thought of drinking water that had been like to cost so dear, and poured it out on the ground as an oblation to God.

Bethlehem and Micah.

But I must hurry with my annals. Again the centuries slip by and again we hear of Bethlehem. This time it is a voice from afar that speaks the word. Days are dark for the whole land. Commercialism had eaten into the vitals of the nation. You could buy anything—except peace and love—in Israel. Then, suddenly, from across the watershed of Judea, comes this confident cry: "Thou, Bethlehem, . . . which art little to be among the thousands of Judah, out of thee shall one come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel." What the prophet knew that we do not know, I cannot say. How far he really glimpsed the Christ of Bethlehem I do not undertake to guess. His description does not seem to fit the Man who came by the way of Mary's arms, to redeem His people. What impresses me most is that Micah had stumbled upon a way of God in human affairs. Out of an inconspicuous village of a decadent people, the light of the world was to shine. Morning for humanity was to come from behind the modest hills where Bethlehem lay nestled. Thank God we cannot pick, beforehand, the winners and the famous places of earth. God has a wonderful fashion of surprise. From the backwoods he calls a Lincoln; from the Connecticut hills a Beecher; from servant quarters a Charles Lamb; from a brewer's home an Oliver Cromwell; and so on through a brilliant list. He is constantly choosing the weak things of this world to confound the things which are mighty. Until He has actually done it we never can guess what God can do; and we ought not to dare to say what He cannot do. He picked Bethlehem "the little" for an honor too great for a world to contain.

Bethlehem and Jesus.

Again the centuries, and again Bethlehem. I do not know how to tell this part of the story adequately.

ly. It is too big for my pen and my heart. Some men have said it is too big to be true. The grave-place of Rachel; the marriage-place of Ruth, the birth-place of David, singled out now to be the cradle of the world's supreme hope. Meantime the whole land had gone dark. Bethlehem seemed only a trifle more forgotten than Jerusalem and Samaria. The heel of the conqueror was upon the neck of a proud race. Then the almost incredible thing happened. And it happened at Bethlehem. Humanly speaking, there was almost no conceivable reason for its happening there. Mary belonged to Nazareth. I do not know that she had been in Bethlehem before. And of all times for a woman to be away from home!

So the glory came at Bethlehem when a new-born Boy lay in his mother's fond arms. Perhaps there were other ways for the surpassing glory to come. Certain it is that our brothers and sisters of the long ago were not expecting it to come in that fashion.

They all were looking for a King
To slay their foes and lift them high:
Thou can'st, a little baby thing
That made a woman cry.

Nor have we of the later day gotten used to such a mode of Advent. We do not yet know all that God can do by a man. We have not yet learned that all the things He needs to have done on earth must be done by men and women. Jesus deserves His name because, for one thing, He saves us from the sin of undervaluing manhood and womanhood and childhood. Let us go back to Bethlehem and learn that. Bethlehem has done better than to give us a King. Bethlehem has given us a Man to show us what a man can be. "Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

CHRISTMAS IN LIFE AND LITERATURE

By George Cleason Wilding.

We never tire of the Christmas idea. What a hold it has on all hearts throughout Christendom. It has girdled the globe and gone out to the ends of the earth, if there are any ends to it. In some of its features it is much older than some of us have been inclined to consider. It is after all our most important holiday the wide world over, and it never will be superseded.

It was the habit of Him whose birthday we celebrate to take what was good in men and ideas and systems and remould them to higher uses. So it is peculiarly fitting that the anniversary of Christmas, when it was first celebrated in the second century of our era, should have taken from heathen mythology and customs the more beautiful parts for its own use. "Christmas," says Dean Stanley, "brings before us the relations of the Christian religion to the religions which went before; for the birth at Bethlehem was itself a link with the past."

The pagan nations of antiquity always had a tendency to worship the sun, under different names, as the giver of light and life. And their festivals in its honor took place near the winter solstice, the shortest day in the year, when the sun in December begins its upward course, thrilling men with the first distant promise of spring. This holiday was called Saturnalia among the Romans, and was celebrated with great merriment and license by all, extending even to the slaves. There were feasting and gifts and the houses were hung with evergreens.

Among the rude people of the North great blocks of wood blazed in honor of Odin and Thor, and sacrifices were made to them. Mistletoe was cut from the sacred oaks with a golden sickle by the Prince of the Druids, between whom and the Fire-worshippers of Persia, there was a close affinity both in character and customs.

The ancient Goths and Saxons called this festival Yule, and it is preserved to us in the Scottish word for Christmas, and also, in the name of the Yule Log. The ancient Teutons celebrated the season by decking a fir tree, for they thought of the sun, riding higher and higher in the heavens, as the spreading and hosing of a great tree. Thus our own Christmas fir was decked as a symbol of the Sun of Righteousness tree.

As Christianity replaced Paganism, the early Christians, in the tolerant spirit of their Master, adopted these beautiful old usages, merely changing their spirit. So the Lord of Misrule, who long presided over the Christmas games of Christian England, was the direct descendant of the ruler who was appointed to preside over the sports of these ruder nations.

"Merrie Old England" was the soil in which Merrie Christmas took its firmest root. Even in Anglo-Saxon days King Alfred and his men were holding high Christmas revelry when attacked and overcome by the Danes. Christmas was not then a single day of sport; it usually continued for full two weeks. This was the case in our Southern States "before the war". The slaves received presents from the master on Christmas morning and held merry-making of all sorts till past New Year's day. English country gentlemen kept open house during these two weeks of Christmas festivities.

With the rise of Puritanism the very existence of Christmas was threatened. Even the innocent and harmless good cheer of that season was looked upon as Pagan, or, what was worse, Popish. The Mayflower brought over with it an anti-Christmas feeling. They objected to it because of the drinking and carousing that unfortunately had accompanied the celebration of Christmas in Old England. New England would have none of it.

In England this feeling culminated in 1643, when the Rounhead Parliament abolished the observance of all saints' days and the "three grand festivals" of Christmas, Easter and Whitsuntide, "any law, statute, custom, constitution or canon to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding." The King protested. All in vain. In London there was an alarming disposition to observe Christmas. A mob collected in protest against this extreme order. But Parliament adopted strong measures and enforced them, and for twelve years none of these festivals was at all generally observed in any part of Britain.

The General Court of Massachusetts followed the rigid example of the English Parliament in 1659 when it was enacted that "anybody who is found observing, by abstinence from labor, feasting, or in any other way, any such day as Christmas day shall pay for every such offense five shillings."

The restoration of English royalty brought back the restoration of the English Christmas. But it was not until 1681 that Massachusetts repealed that drastic ordinance of 1659. But the old Puritans fought it to the last.

No other holiday has so rich a heritage of old customs and observations as Christmas. The Yule Log has from time immemorial been haled to the open fire-place on Christmas Eve, and lighted with the embers of its predecessor to sanctify the roof-tree and protect it against those evil spirits over whom the season is in every way a triumph. Then the wassail howl, full of swimming roasted apples, goes its merry round. Then the gift-shadowing Christmas-tree shade its divine brilliance down on the path of the coming year; or stockings are hung for Santa Claus (St. Nickolas) to fill during the night. Then the mistletoe becomes a precarious shelter for maids, and the descendants of minstrels of old go through the snow from door to door, singing their mellow old carols, while the merry Christmas games are not forgotten.

Even the Christmas dinner has its special observances. In many an English hall the stately custom still survives of hearing in a hoar's head to inaugurate the meal. And mince pie, plum pudding and some fowl, goose, duck or turkey, naturally go with the Christmas dinner.

There is a beautiful legend that on every Christmas Eve the little Christ child wanders all over the world hearing on his shoulders a bundle of evergreens. He comes to the doors of all classes of people in the guise of a beggar asking an alms. So, on this night all needy ones are welcome at every door. This old legend embodies the true Christmas spirit, for at this genial season of the year all selfishness is rebuked, and all hearts should be open to the needs of their fellowmen.

Christmas is the birthday of One whose chief contribution to the human heart and mind is His message of boundless, universal love. He brought to the world the greatest thing in it, and that is why this anniversary has such an intimate place in our hearts, and why its jubilant bells find this echo there:

"Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring, happy bells across the snow;
The year is going, let him go;
Ring out the false, ring in the true."

There comes a time in the lives of all children when they ask: "Is there a Santa Claus?" Yes, indeed there is a Santa Claus! A divine Santa Claus! A very real one. How dreary this old world would be without Him. We may not see Him but He comes to all of our homes. May we always welcome Him. Thank God He lives, and will live forever.

Christmas has a generous and abiding place in literature, and the stock of Christmas sketches, stories and poems is constantly increasing. As to the origin of this day we have numerous contributions. Take that sweet little poem of that nobleman, Philips Brooks:

"O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie!"

And that "Christmas Carol" by James Russell Lowell; and Reginald Heber's "Brightest and best of the Sons of the morning!" and Isaac Watts—"Hush my dear, lie still and slumber," and Charles Wesley's, "Hark! the Herald Angels sing," and short poems by Miss Mulock, Margaret DeLand, Mary Austin and a host of others.

The Colonial Christmas has moved a number of authors to "take up their pens." "Hymn for Christmas" by Felicia Hemans, "The Three Kings" by Longfellow, "Hymn on the Nativity" by John Milton, which is quite lengthy, and many more by various writers.

Some of the most interesting specimens of this literature clusters about the celebration of this day. Take "Christmas Eve at Mrs. Wardlee" from "Pickwick Papers" by Charles Dickens. What a jolly scene it portrays. And Clement C. Moore's "A Visit from St. Nicholas," perhaps the most popular, and the most frequently recited, of all of the Christmas poems. Just to think that this lively description was written by a solemn professor in a theological seminary, merely for the entertainment of his children, with no thought of publication. What a lilt there is in it:

"'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house

Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse."
Take "Christmas Eve," from "My Study Fire," by Hamilton Wright Mable. A most delightful picture of this happy season, "Christmas in the Olden Time," by Walter Scott, is full of life. Who could read "The Christmas Goose at Cratchits" without crying for joy? Dickens is inimitable. And "God Bless Us Every One," by James Whitcomb Riley, "Christmas Bells" by Longfellow, "Minstrels and Maids" by William Morris. What a burst of enthusiasm there is in Leigh Hunt's "Inexhaustibility of the Subject of Christmas." How much music there is in Mary Mapes Dodge's "The Festival of St. Nicholas." How vivid is that little poem, "The Christmas Holly" by Eliza Cook. Washington Irving's "Christmas" is a beautiful description of this sacred and yet genial day. And how stately in its sweep is Alfred Tennyson's touching poem, "The Birth of Christ." Look at that rollicking picture of Dickens' "Christmas at Fizziwig's Warehouse." But we leave untouched many other literary gems in this realm. On the significance and spirit of Christmas many authors have given us their best thoughts. Take "A Christmas Carmen" by John G. Whittier. What majesty there is in it. And "The Spirit of Christmas" by Charles Dickens. How tender it is. In "Good wishes at Christmas," one can almost taste the good things of the feast. How appealing to children is Richard Watson Gilder's "Sery." And how true to life is "Christmas" from "Dreamthorp," by Alexander Smith. "The End of the Play" by Thackeray will bear reading several times. "Christmas Dreams" by Christopher North is beautifully written and full of instructive thought. Those who read Henry Van Dyke's "Keeping Christmas" will catch the spirit of the day and be benefited. George A. Baker's "On Santa Claus" takes us into the inner circle of this friend of children. Nothing that has ever been written on Christmas that is finer than J. G. Holland's "Christmas Carol."

"There's a song in the air! There's a star in the sky!

There's a mother's deep prayer, and a baby's low cry!"

I must pass by a group of attractive poems and sketches to just call a passing attention to "A Simple Bill of Fare," by "H. H.," whoever he or she may be. It is a pleasing and helpful study.

When it comes to longer stories there are "The Fir Tree," by Hans Christian Anderson; "Little Roger's Night in the Church," by Susan Coolidge; "Mr. Bluff's Experiences of Holidays," by Oliver Bell Bronce; "Santa Claus at Simpson's Bar," by Bret Harte. All of these have real merit.

We have a few of the old-time carols, such as "God Rest You, Merry Gentlemen," "Old Christmas Returned" and "The Boar's Head Carol." These have been in use very many years.

Additional to all of these poems and stories we should like to call attention to a number of unique and amusing poems by Annie P. L. Field, "The Christmas Insurrection," "The Night After Christmas," and "The Christmas Fires." Then she has a few heart touching poems, "When the Stars of the Morning Sang," "A Prayer at Bethlehem" and a carol, "O Child of Mary's Tender Care," etc. "The Mother," by Robert Haven Scauffler is a most appealing sketch, revealing the beautiful affection of Mary for her babe.

Yes, this most popular and sacred holiday is firmly and permanently enthroned in the literature of Christendom, as well as in the hearts of the people. How blessed it mellows our weak and selfish human nature, and makes the whole kin.

THE WORLD'S GOD DAY—THE CHRISTMAS BELLS

Rev. C. F. Sherrill, Shelby, N. C.

Christmas is the world's glad, great day. Joy and gladness walk in the footsteps of the Christ Child. Over the green hills of Judea, the night the Lord Christ was born, the celestial choir, fresh from the inner glory, sang the sweetest song the earth has ever heard—"Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, good will to men." The angels struck the keynote for the world's holy singing. "Joy to the world, the Lord has come," sings the Christian heart, chant the Christmas anthem, and peal the Christmas bells. The very air is electrical with a holy joy and gladness. Old hearts are young once more, and young hearts are full to overflowing. Joy and gladness and good cheer walk in the footsteps of the infant King who came the first Christmas night.

The dreary days of winter are made the happiest by the coming of the Christ. In the footsteps of the world's great sin joy and gladness walk at this happy yule time. The glad songs of the world's great jubilee fills the air, and the merry voices of the children make the heart glad. In the gallery of the skies the celestial singers, a multitudinous host, on well poised wings hovering over Bethlehem's plains, sang the natal songs of the world's Lord and Christ, and struck the keynote for an ever-growing volume of holy song, whose sweetness and glory shall resound in the many tongues of men to the far parts of the earth to the end of time, calling the human heart to its sweetest love and the human life to its finest service.

Easter, Thanksgiving, Christmas—these are the world's great festivals, the gems of the year, the joy of the human heart. Easter gives the soul an unconquerable hope, bathing it in the sunshine of a new morn. With joy and gladness, with songs and praise Thanksgiving fills the heart and gladdens the life. Christmas comes with the songs of the angels and the joy of the skies, making the young sing for very joy and making the old young again, filling the home and heart with the blessed joy of childhood. Through the whole year, then blessed Christmas, in the holy love and sacred joy, abide in the hearts of all, making each and all of the hours and days of the year as the coming of the glad angels.

"For lo! the days are hastening on,
By prophets-bards foretold,
When the ever-circling years
Comes round the age of gold;

The Incarnation remains now and forever the divinest display of the Father's wisdom and love. "Let us make men in our image," was the Father's word and wish when man was created. When Christ came to redeem a lost world, just the reverse took place—God was made in the image of man. God made in man's image; man, made in God's image: creation—Incarnation. What angel can measure the heights and depths of the honor the Godhead places upon man! In the Incarnation we see what the Father thinks of us. Christmas is God's estimate of every human life in its present and eternal possibilities. The ringing of the Christmas bells and the song of the angels over Bethlehem's plains is the Father's eternal call of the soul on sonship. In the Christ we see what the Father thinks of us. In our sinless Lord we behold the grandeur and glory of our life here. The eye of faith looks through the Incarnate Life to the fullness and perfection of our own life in the ages to come. Man made in God's image—God made in man's image—this is the blessed story to mortals revealed in the Great Book.

"The earth has grown old with its burden of care,
But at Christmas it is always young;
The heart of the Jewel burns lustrous and fair,
And its soul, full of music, breaks forth on the air
When the song of the angel is sung.

It is coming, old earth, it is coming tonight,
O'er the snowflakes that cover the sod;
And the feet of the Christ-Child fall gentle and white,
And the voice of the Christ-Child tells out to the night,
That mankind are the children of God."

THE FIRST MORTGAGE ON THE CHRISTMAS PURSE

W. G. Cram.

Christmas! A season of gladness to all Christian people! The birthday of joy! The hour of fullest life!

The sorrowful world needs a genuine Christmas this year. Not a Christmas that burns shavings to make a light, not a festival that burns powder to make a noise. Not a Saint Nicholas who loads the few with gifts and forgets the many. Not a Christmas that festoons with gorgeous colored crepe the chancel and the altar, and strews the house of God and the waiting people with confetti—all paper, mere paper, that flutters a moment then falls to the ground. A symbol of nothing! A blessing to nobody. The world needs a Christmas that expresses the love and life of Christ.

The world is all athirst for a true Christmas this year, a Christmas that expresses the love of God, the grace and peace of Christ. The giving of gifts is a beautiful custom. Christ started it. He gave Himself. He gave life. Ever since Christ gave Himself to the world we have been giving gifts one to another, gifts to our children, gifts to our loved ones, gifts to our friends, gifts to our neighbors. Have we included Christ in this riot of giving? Do we share with Him our Christmas gifts? Is He on our list? Somebody has truly said, "Christ is the only one who on His birthday beholds others receiving the birthday gifts." Of course, the love and joy and holy sentiments in the hearts of His people are gifts of worship. We must not minimize that. Christ does not always want silver and gold. But He needs it this year. Devastated Europe, pagan China, helpless Korea, stricken Japan, priest-ridden Mexico and South America, and this great United States—our native land—are pathetically in need of the love and help of God.

Christ has committed the task of expressing His love to His church. Let us include Him in our gifts this year? He included us in His gift. He will take these gifts and commend the church. The church will command her ministers, her teachers and her missionaries. These agents of the Christ will proclaim the message of life and love, and the people everywhere will enjoy real Christmas cheer.

America can give the world a real Christmas this year if she will. Out of every dollar earned in the United States, twenty cents goes for luxuries, and this expenditure totals nearly ten billion dollars. This is ten times as much as we spend for education. Our church giving is far below such a figure. That twenty cents should be reduced. Much of it can well be spared to redeem unpaid vows and pledges.

The Methodist church of our southland can make this a Christmas of great cheer to the Orient, to South America and Europe, and here in these United States. On the great Centenary pledge of $35,000,000 made five years ago we still owe very large sums. Let every individual pledger who owes a balance include that unpaid balance in the Christmas budget. Let it be the "first mortgage" on the Christmas purse. Pay it out and thrill the heart of Christ and warm and cheer the shrunken souls of our fellowmen everywhere.

FIELD NEWS

A POUNDING AT SUNRISE

If none of you good preaching brethren have received a pounding before breakfast—well, then I am head sure. I "stand head."

The other morning just as the sun rose to flood this world with his golden light the thunder of a road truck was heard. It stopped in front of the parsonage and as the young men came lugging in their loads, little Virginia, the granddaughter, sprang to her feet and shouted, "Oh, it's the pounders! It's the pounders!" And sure enough Pineville had pounded the preacher before breakfast. We thank them. May the Lord bless them, every one.
T. J. Houck.

RALEIGH DISTRICT PLANS

The preachers and district stewards, assembled in Raleigh December 12, 1923, set the following goals for the district:

1. One-half of ese salaries and the collections to be paid by Easter. The object is to use the first five months of the conference year when the people have the money to meet one-half of the financial obligations.

2. Improvement to be made in the church property of every charge. It may take the form of debt-paying, building or improving the grounds, or of all these.

3. Special attention to be given to the Pay-Up Week of the Centenary, stress to be put on the special service in each church.

4. Well planned revivals in each charge. This does not necessarily imply a few days' meeting in every church, but it does imply carefully prepared and well wrought out revival efforts in each charge.

Along with these goals are the Supperannate Endowment and Teachers' Training to be cared for.

The meeting proved to be most interesting and was filled with vision and determination. To carry out the plans laid will result in a most notable year. All together for the best yet.
M. T. Plyler.

WAXHAW CHARGE

Perhaps it would not be out of place to tell the Advocate what is doing over here on the Waxhaw charge where Brother Plyler got his start—and his tracks can be seen yet.

We have entered upon our second year, and no preacher ever received a more cordial welcome than this one. Then they are proving the genuineness of these statements with the goods.

Noah Webster said "Friday is as lucky a day as any." That was proven yesterday, for it was a red letter day at the parsonage. The largest pounding that ever took place at this parsonage was pulled off yesterday afternoon by four of our churches. Bond's Grove started the ball to rolling, then Mineral Springs was on the dot. We did not get these good things put away till representatives from Heath's Memorial stood smiling at the front to turn in their load.

So after Mrs. Cook, Mrs. McCorkle and her children of Bond's Grove had gone, and Bros. H. A. Carter and Crowell Doster of Mineral Springs had taken their departure, and Maj. R. T. Niven and Sam Marz of Heath's said goodbye, Pleasant Grove said we are on the map, too. Then Bro. K. C. Craig took charge of us for a while. Then thinking the storm was over, for it was evening, the lady started supper, and lo and behold that good natured C. L. Howie disturbed us by bringing up the rear. And he sure did.

But to begin with, one good brother of Waxhaw brought us a turkey for Christmas and one of the elect ladies a large fruit cake.

But that is not all. While I was at conference the building committee of Waxhaw le the contract for a new brick church of the modern kind. Then on November 26th we held a ground breaking service. The foundation is now laid and if the weather will admit the work will go right on. It will cost about fifteen thousand when complete.

Pleasant Grove has a plan on foot to enlarge their church and build Sunday school rooms. Mineral Springs may start a new church at that place this year. Bond's Grove may add Sunday school rooms also. Heath's Memorial church will be finished in the spring. Pray for us, brethren.

E. N. Crowder, P. C.

REV. E. T. IPOCK AND FAMILY

Brother Ipock is a local preacher of the Methodist church and lives at Tuscarora, N. C. He is a good man and has an interesting and excellent family—wife, a son and two fine boys.

Brother Ipock served the Grimesland three years and did a fine work. The last year he was there he was stricken with paralysis and since that time he has lived at Tuscarora, where his good wife has run a little store, endeavoring to take care of her afflicted husband and keep her children in school. But it is a hard pull with her, and I want all their friends and mine, and all who love God, who believe it is more blessed to give than to receive, to send them a Christmas present—in money, real money!

Some can give $10, some $5, and there are many who can give one to two and half dollars.

I sincerely hope we may be able to give enough to do them some good. Send your gift directly to Rev. E. T. Ipock, Tuscarora, N. C. Now let's do this at once! I start this with $5. May God bless them and all who give.

A. B. Crumpler.

"NOT TO ARGIFY OR SPUTIFY"

I do not come prancing down the pike to measure lances with you in intellectual combat. I do not crave to argify or sputify. But I do not like your recent editorial pronouncement on "The Story of the Bible," by Prof. Hendrik Van Loon. You say it is a dangerous book and offers as a reason for the belief that is in you that the author has eliminated the supernatural and has set forth his personal opinions.

I bought this book for my eleven-year-old boy, having given him "The Story of Mankind" by the same author last year. Before turning it over to him, however, I gave the book a careful reading, and for the life of me I cannot see why you consider it a dangerous book. It is a simple narrative of the Sacred Book and of the rise of the Christian religion. It is written especially for children, and is naturally devoid of cumbersome theological terms. It does not pretend to be a doctrinal authority, but it is certainly reverent. I would not ask my boy to find his theology in the book, but there is a world of information in it, set down in an interesting manner, and I want him to have that. I have read the book with great profit myself.

As to the author expressing his personal opinions, what else did you want him to do? What else could he do? Had he expressed yours he had as well let you write the book. Didn't you express yours in the editorial? Somehow I cannot see the point in the criticism. Maybe I am a sort of moral myope. But I think that Willem Hendrik Van Loon has done me a great service in writing "The Story of the Bible."

Tom P. Jimison.

RUTHERFORD COLLEGE CIRCUIT

We had not more than fairly begun to consume the proceeds of the pounding which the Rutherford College church gave us when the Connelly Springs congregation sent in a load of flour, lard, sugar and canned goods, and many other articles. Then the neighbors keep sending in beef, sausage and other useful articles. How will we ever repay such kindness? We are going, with the Lord's help to do our dead level best for them.

E. J. Poe.

TROTMAN RECEIVES WARM RECEPTION

We were very glad to come back and serve a people who had been so kind and loyal to us the past year, and with whose co-operation we were able to do such a good year's work and believe that with the continuance of such support and leadership of the Holy Spirit we can accomplish greater things the present year.

Our reception has been warm and sincere; not a discordant note has been sounded and we feel that we are moving up on higher spiritual ground as a whole charge.

We believe there is no happier lot than to meet with a worshipful and appreciative body of people who awaits your coming with hungry hearts for the bread of life and who support you with their prayers while you attempt to feed them.

So it is in the little chapels by the roadside. The buildings are not noticeable for their architectural beauty—they should be better—but there is the beauty of reverence within, and the hard drive and other cares are soon lost in the sweet fellowship at a throne of grace, where pride and vanity has never dethroned the simple faith of our fathers. Of course these country churches are lacking in many of the new and modern customs and manners, but they are still productive of fruit that feed the churches.

W. E. Trotman.

ADVANCE PREACHER POUNDED

The good people of Advance circuit have again manifested their interest in their preacher and his family.

On the eve of Thanksgiving delegations from the various churches brought many things to supply our needs. And the end is not yet, for gifts continue to come.

We are entering on our fifth year's labors on this charge, and our reception this year is the most cordial of all.

For all these tokens of appreciation we are truly grateful.

May God help us to so live and labor as to prove worthy of the confidence of our people.
J. M. Varner.

WEAVER COLLEGE MATTERS

Weaver College has a strong faculty, a splendid body of students, good accommodation for the students, a fine department of music, a new and fine athletic field, entirely new quarters for the library, good scientific equipment. Its finest asset of all is the very fine body of alumni—splendid men and women all over the land—business men who have prospered, leaders in industry, many grown rich; professional men in all lines, in the forefront of their professions, occupying high places in congress, judge of supreme court on the supreme court bench, ministers, leading pastors and presiding elders. Weaver College may well be proud of the men who have gone out from it. A tree is known and prized by its fruits. The college has now taken on new life. It has a new and larger vision. The alumni are bestirring themselves organizing and laying plans for a great forward movement. Recently a very enthusiastic banquet of the alumni of Buncombe county was held in Asheville and steps were taken to build a gymnasium which shall when finished be inferior to none, so that due attention to athletics may be given. The indications are that the present accommodations which are already strained will be wholly inadequate for next year, and a larger dining room and other dormitories will be a necessity. President Trowbridge is an educator of the first rank, and he is gathering about him all the available forces to make it a great school. It is understood that other alumni associations are being organized in other counties. Rev. C. M. Pickens of Albemarle is president of the state organization, and he will give all needed information to any who may wish to organize for the forward movement. Let the good work go on.

D. A. Atkins.

HOW DO YOU KNOW?

In your comment on Dr. Sam Steele's reasons for not being for Unification with our northern brethren you say: "Fortunately Dr. Steele speaks for himself and not for any considerable portion of the Methodist church." I am guessing you mean the M. E. Church, South. I am wondering just how you found that out. I suppose you are just guessing at it. That is a pretty risky thing to do—you might just possibly be mistaken. I kind of think you are. A goodly number of us think like Dr. Steele, but we haven't said so yet, but we will when the time comes.

Again you say: "Furthermore, the church's action in all things should be on the basis of religion and not politics." What is the difference between any man's religion and the same man's politics? Pretty dangerous distinction you make. Some of us have had experiences with our good brethren of the northern section of the church. Better go slow in making statements like that. Dr. Steele knows a lot of things and is a mighty good man and thinks like more people think on this subject than some of you knowing (?) brethren seem to think.

Jas. H. Frizzelle.

THE COOKS MAY COOK

On Monday evening about seven o'clock the door bell of the Methodist parsonage on Key street rang, and on opening the door there was found to be on the porch and in front of the house a large number of men, women and children, all carrying bundles. They entered the house and took full possession, placing all these bundles on the dining room table and in the kitchen, consisting of useful articles too numerous to mention.

The preacher and his family were almost as much surprised as they would have been if Pilot Mountain had tumbled over in front of the house, or if there had been an electric storm out of a clear sky. The Pilot Mountain people surely know how to give the new preacher a warm reception.

I think the work here has started off very hopefully. As usual, we found here a church debt of between five and six hundred dollars. We have raised enough money to pay all this indebtedness off and with another hundred dollars will have enough to heat the church with a hot air furnace.

We have built a new garage, costing $98, and the parsonage is to be wired for electric lights this week. The stewards met Monday and added $150 to the preacher's salary. We expect in the near future to make a canvass for the Christian Advocate, hoping to get all old subscriptions renewed and a number of new subscribers. The Christian Advocate was never better than it is now.
J. A. Cooke.

MATTAMUSKEET TO GRIMESLAND

We left Lake Landing, Hyde county, for Grimesland in our Ford November 27th, and reached Grimesland on the 28th, stopping over at old Bath to see some of our old friends that we once served and enjoyed our stay very much. It almost made us hungry to be back on the old Bath charge when we met again so many of our old friends. It was rainy and we did not see all, but we saw a good many of our dear ones. We regretted very much that we did not see Dr. Jack and T. A. Brooks, Brother and Sister Tarkington, Brother and Sister Cartwright, the Crifields and many others that we could now mention, but time and space falls me.

It was with many regrets that we had to leave the good people of the Mattamuskeet charge, but the Lord knows best. I never served a better people in all my ministry. I shall never forget their hospitality to us while with them. May the rich blessings of our great God be with them. I would say to Brother Midgett, their new pastor, that his people will take care of him in a great way.

Now as to Grimesland, we arrived at the parsonage November 28th in the afternoon, and found the ladies at the parsonage busily preparing for the new preacher in the way of furnishing the house and fixing a nice hot supper, after which a host of ladies and men from Simpson and Grimesland churches with cars piled in to us all the good things that you could imagine for the inner man—and they keep on doing.

We have been to two of our churches and large crowds greeted us, and would say that the people on the Grimesland charge are looking up and we are looking for a great year, and may God help us all to stay by the old ship as we go forward and get more to write about. You will hear from us.

J. J. Lewis, P. C.

FROM PASQUOTANK TO YANCEYVILLE

On the morning of November 23rd we bade farewell to Elizabeth City, leaving behind us a host of true and faithful friends. The people down there were so kind and generous, even until the very last. Epworth church gave us a nice pounding just before conference, and the good people from all over the charge and from former charges and other churches showed their appreciation of our little service to them by calling during the last weeks of our stay, and in many instances they left substantial tokens of their love to us; in fact, the people were so kind and thoughtful that we were loth to separate ourselves from these dear friends, but even if space divide us, our hearts are knit together in a bond of love and friendship that will ever remain.

We journeyed to Durham the first day, and spent the night with Bro. J. W. Bradley. It seemed good to mingle with this fine family and enjoy their fellowship after a hard day's driving through the rain. Next morning we visited our son at Trinity College and looked over some of Durham, and along in the afternoon we journeyed on to Greensboro, where we visited relatives and friends until Thursday, December 6th. We then journeyed on to Yanceyville, arriving at this place just this afternoon. We found a party of ladies and gentlemen busily engaged preparing the handsome parsonage for our comfort. We were escorted to the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Gwinn, our next door neighbors, where we were served to a nice hot dinner. We then went over to the parsonage and began to arrange things, and before we dreamed of such a thing it was supper time, and lo, some of the neighbors trooped in with a steaming hot supper. Then, just to think! by the time we had our faces washed next morning, in came some of the neighbors bringing a hot breakfast; this prepared us for the task of unpacking, and we went at it cheerfully. Along in the afternoon a young man said he thought we would have company that night. Of course this aroused our suspicions and we began to think thoughts that were fully realized in what followed. At about eight o'clock a large company of ladies and children, laden with nice things for the pantry, filed into the parsonage and deposited them in a large pile in the corner of the dining room. Just when we were in the midst of greetings and good fellowship with the ladies and children, a company of men, also laden with good things to eat, marched in and deposited theirs with what the ladies and children had brought, making a mound of hams, flour, chickens, butter, groceries, etc., that cheered the heart of this preacher and his family. Besides this there has not been a day since we arrived that we have not received some nice and useful gift, from the size of a load of wood on down. We want to express our appreciation of all this thoughtfulness and kindness here in words, and we hope further to express it by service to these good people. May God's richest blessings rest upon all of them, and we pray that they may prosper in all their laudable endeavors during this year.

E. L. Stack.

THAT'S THEIR CUSTOM

Yes, it was a bold and daring thing the Siler City people did last Saturday night. It was after deep darkness had enveloped everything that they stealthily made their way to the parsonage and forced their way in without even giving the slightest suggestion of their presence. And yet the pastor's family freely condones this seeming impropriety, since they evinced the kindest feelings and good wishes by the scores of packages left on the dining room table; and now only feelings of the deepest gratitude are cherished by the occupants of the parsonage.

The year starts off with a rising tide, and plans are being made for an advance along all lines of church activity.

At the first stewards' meeting one of the stewards pledged $1000 to the building fund toward the completion of the handsome new church.

The two churches in Siler City, First church and West End, are having a substantial growth, and the future is rich in prospect. The country churches are also falling into line for advancement. The oldest class at Hickory Mountain has begun the study of the third missionary book within the last quarter, and the evidences of new life are manifest under the consecrated leadership of Mrs. O. B. Mann.

The lusty youngsters of Siler City boast of about the liveliest Epworth League in the North Carolina conference. They are doing things all the time, and each program is rich and full. And the faith of our fathers is still living among us. O. I. Hinson.

HERE IS A GOOD PRESENT!

What shall I give for a present? is always a knotty question. Try "Travels in the Old World," by Rev. J. M. Rowland, editor Richmond Christian Advocate. A good book is always appropriate and this one is full of laughs and information and inspiration. One dollar will bring it. Your friend will like it; 430 pages with rare illustrations. Advocate Publishing Co., Box 584, Richmond, Va. 3t-eow.

"My experience has been that I could not do my work intelligently, that I could not appreciate the work of the Church with its privileges and duties aside from the information and stimulus I receive from our Church papers."—Bishop Collins Denny.

Now is a good time to plan for GOOD LITERATURE SUNDAY. Supplies will be sent you from Lamar and Barton, Agents, Nashville, Tenn.

"What Hath God Wrought!"

¶ The Centenary record is one which none need take on faith. Its accomplishments are concrete and all may see them.

¶ Search Methodist history, and you will find nothing comparable to the glorious advance made by the Centenary since 1918.

In 118 we had 7 foreign mission fields; now we have twelve.

In 1918 we had sent no new recruits for two quadrenniums; since then we have sent 274.

In foreign fields the Centenary has built 250 new churches and residences and purchased nearly 100 sites for other churches.

The Centenary has won 15,000 converts in those lands where we did not even operate in 1918.

The Centenary has built or enlarged 12 hospitals and 42 schools in foreign lands alone.

And these are but sample achievements of what the Centenary has done, though but half the pledges have been paid.

My Dear Sisters:

As I've been thinking of our work and what a privilege is ours to be co-workers with Him in bringing this world to the light, I have been led to review the work which we have accomplished this year, and think of what remains to be done.

I feel constrained to write just a few lines to stir up your minds in regard to some of the things in which we are all interested.

Have you doubled the membership of your society? If not, I wish each member would try to get a new member before December 31st.

Have you been trying to organize a missionary society near you? Try to have one organized by December 31.

We must not forget our Belle Bennett Memorial fund. We want to honor our beloved leader, and at the same time give our young people a better opportunity to fit themselves for the work of missionaries either at home or on the foreign field.

I hope you are having pleasure in planning for your pageant and demonstrations to arouse missionary interest and enthusiasm that the Centenary obligations may be paid. Please drop me a card telling which one of the demonstrations you are to use, and also tell what churches you are to be responsible for, either in presenting the demonstrations or helping in an all day meeting.

We should consider it a great privilege to help bring the wonderful work of collecting the Centenary pledges to a successful finish.

Let us not forget the Lucy H. Robertson scholarship fund. Our new girl (Miss Ethel Bost) who went to Scarritt this year is making good, and I am sure we each want a part in her preparation for service.

I am hoping that the Harvest Day will see every society with its financial obligations paid or planned for. Our budget of $43,000 for 1923 must be paid in full. You know that that means everybody doing her best. We have been able to send to our Council treasurer more money this year than ever before, so I have faith to believe that we are going to pay everything in full.

Let us all pray and work with that in mind. Let us also pray that more of our young people will volunteer for definite service.

Yours for service,
Mrs. H. A. Dunham, Cor. Sec.

FROM MONROE

The December meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Central church, Monroe, was a most interesting one.

Harvest Day was observed and the room was appropriately decorated for the occasion. The devotional, led by the president, Mrs. T. C. Lee, was very inspiring, her subject being, "Mary, the Master has come, and calleth for thee. The play, "The Society That Couldn't Pay Out," was presented and thoroughly enjoyed.

It was decided to organize a young woman's society, and this completes the missionary organization in Central church. Mrs. C. C. Weaver will have charge of the new society, and Miss Annie Redwine will take over the juniors.

Officers for the new year were elected and the society is planning to pay its obligations in full. After the program light refreshments were served by committee in charge.

Mrs. Roscoe Phifer, Pub. Supt.

RONDA MISSIONARY SOCIETY

On Sunday, December 2, the women of Ronda Methodist church, assisted by Mrs. Horton and Mrs. Smathers of North Wilkesboro, organized a missionary society to be called The Miller Missionary Society.

Officers were elected as follows:
Mrs. E. E. Brown, president.
Mrs. Rhoades, vice president.
Mrs. Foster, secretary.
Mrs. W. E. Sales, treasurer.
Mrs. Blackburn, Supt. social service.
Mrs. Morton, membership committee. Reported.

REAL CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Have you ever stopped to consider what it really means—this enduring miracle that has repeated itself every year for 1900 years, and bids fair to go on repeating itself to the end of time? It draws near again. In a few days it will be the one thing uppermost in the minds of all of us; so now is a good time to think a little about it, before the full tide sweeps over us.

Suppose that between now and the twenty-fifth of the month we take down our Bible and read the four Gospels—all of them. It will not take long; an evening or two will do it. Matthew and Mark and Luke and John were near to Christ; their stories are all we need.

When we have finished we shall find that we have been reading of the life of One who was as poor, in all that we usually mean when we speak of "wealth" or "money" or "means," as any beggar; so poor that He said of Himself, "The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." We shall also remind ourselves that He is the Person from whom the world received its one supremely beautiful, its one imperishable gift. We worry and fret because we cannot give the valuable presents we should like to give to show our love for that Being who never had gold or silver enough to buy even the meanest of the toys that we have been choosing with such heartburnings and dissatisfaction!

Perhaps when we have the inconsistency and the shame of that fixed in our minds—when we have torn the mask of our selfishness from the poor effigy of Christmas that we have been so long a-making and have shown the hideous, grinning skeleton behind it—we shall begin to see the real Christmas; we shall perceive at last that what Christ gave was Himself, and that what all of us must give to hope to enter into the real joy of the day is likewise ourselves.

We need not do it by buying beyond our means, for the spirit of Christmas is love and thoughtfulness for others and the willingness to give of our time and our labor and our affections. A letter, warm from the heart, a friendly call, a kindly service at the expense of some personal privation—each is a Christmas gift more precious than anything bought in stores.

Scrooge and his nephew and little Bob Cratchit are always with us, and we can take whichever one of them we please for our pattern.

"What right have you to be merry? You're poor enough!" cried Scrooge. "What's Christmas time to you but a time for paying bills without money; a time for balancing your books and having every item in 'em through a round dozen of months presented dead against you?"

That is the skeleton. But now hear the nephew: "I have always thought of Christmas . . . as a good time; a kind, forgiving, charitable, pleasant time, the only time I know of in the long calendar of the year when men and women seem by one consent to open their hearts freely. . . And therefore, uncle, though it has never put a scrap of gold or silver in my pocket, I believe that it has done me good and will do me good, and I say, God bless it!"

There is the real Christmas, with the face of the Master shining through it, ours for the taking.

And so, as Tiny Tim observed: "God bless us every one!"—The Open Road.

BETTIE HENLEY VANN

The Lesson of Her Life.

By N. H. D. Wilson.

Bettie Henley Vann, daughter of James Aldridge and Josephine Moore Henley, was born at Franklinton, N. C., October 28, 1858. Her father, a leading merchant in the community and a leader in the Methodist church, from whom she inherited her rare administrative ability and whose consecrated Christian manhood was throughout her life a great inspiration to her, died when she was only fourteen years of age. Soon after his death, she was sent to the Baptist school in Raleigh which was presided over by Prof. Hobgood, and a year later to Greensboro Female College. After two years there and before her graduation, she gave up her college work because of the ill health of her mother. But she never ceased to be a student. On the foundation laid in college, she hulked wisely and well. On December 18, 1878, she married Samuel C. Vann. To them were born three children, Mabel (Mrs. J. A. Moore), Aldridge Henley, and Eleanor. Mr. Vann, the children, and seven grandchildren survive. She died in the home in which nearly all of her married life was spent and just across the street from her childhood home, November 10, 1923.

These are "the short and simple annals" of a truly great life. To be closely associated with it for more than thirty years, to share its joys and its sorrows, to be honored by its confidence and its love, was the greatest joy which the pastoral life has brought to my wife and me. In conducting her funeral I was obedient to her known wish and made no comment on her life. It was not needed. The more than a thousand who crowded the church and the approaches to it, the dense throng of white and black who surrounded her grave, did not need any word about her. They had known her. Her modesty, which was great to a fault, might be respected. But as one who has known and loved her for more than thirty years, who has been privileged to see her beautiful life grow, mature and blossom even as one of her own beloved flowers, I can not deny the larger congregation who shall read this the lesson of life which her life illustrated and taught.

When she returned from Greensboro College, a girl seventeen years of age, her pastor insisted on her taking the infant class in the Sunday school. Her modesty made her wish to refuse. Her loyalty made her accept. From that day until her death, nearly fifty years, she taught the same class. In a very real sense that class became the chief factor of her life. On that those teachers who put so little into their classes and get so little out of them, might know what this woman meant to her church, her community and to the world through her class and what it meant to her! It was always on her mind and heart. In her frequent visits to the great cities, she did not seek recreation or amusement. She sought to find new ways to teach her class. She was ever studying for it and ever studying it. She lived for it. She invested her time, her money, her thought and her prayers in it. And it paid her and the world wondrous dividends. For many years there were but two churches in Franklinton and they had different hours for Sunday school. As a result practically every child of the town passed through her class. She knew their birthdays and remembered them. She knew their home life, for she visited them. She loved each one. She prayed for them. She followed them through their years of childhood into the larger life. When they struggled, she sympathized. When they faltered or fell, she was ever ready to forgive and lift up. What a mighty, divinely directed power for good she became for them! And how those children loved her, trusted her, depended on her! They are three generations now, children, parents and grandparents. I have known some of our greatest and best men, but I have nowhere known one who wielded the power of God and for good in the community that did this modest woman. Such was the work of a faithful Sunday school teacher.

And how the blessing came back to her! How she found joy in their success and enlargement in their broadening lives! I was her pastor when her own children were small. I watched her train them. She was the ideal mother. Preparing to teach the children of others, she was made ready for her own. And the reflex on their lives of sympathy in her life work has made them what she wanted them to be, Christians and Christian workers. Her husband's love for her made him share her enthusiasm for childhood. The crowning joy of her last years was his interest in and gifts to the children of his community and to the orphans of the church. She never let pleasure, her home or her family interfere with her great work. And her home was sanctified, her family blessed, and her pleasure multiplied by it. "He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it."

But her interests were not confined to her class. She gave to her husband and her children a beautiful home in every sense of the word. To her kinsfolk and friends she was friend and benefactor. She was foremost in every good work in church and community, modestly foremost. In the Woman's Missionary Society, the children's missionary society, the local church, in her husband's cotton mill, in the orphanage, among the poor, for Christian education, in the Red Cross—wherever there was field for service, she was found. Her life was lived for others. When wealth came, it made no change in her spirit; it only widened her opportunities. Her husband's love would have lavished on her every luxury. She asked nothing for herself. Would he please her, let him give to others. Oh what a woman she was! How closely she walked with God! How wondrously did Christ fill her life! And through her He wrought, comforting the sorrowing, strengthening the weak, healing the sick, teaching the young, inspiring the lowly, healing wounds, closing divisions, blessing all.

I have walked with her in her garden and seen her delight in her flowers. How she watched over them! Tended them! How she found joy in their growth and in their wondrous beauty! It seems to me that I have walked these many years with my Master in His garden. I have seen Him love her, watch over her, tend her, care for her. I have seen her grow, and mature, and blossom. And in her I know that the Master has found pleasure. When her flower was perfected, she could only pluck it for her home, her friend or her church. But He hath transplanted His into the eternal life where she can grow, and blossom and serve, with an ever increasing beauty.

I should not have permitted myself the joy of bearing this well deserved tribute, to have honored my departed friend. She would not have wished it, and I would have respected her wish. But if one young life shall be inspired to a larger consecration, if one teacher shall be led to a more faithful service, if her Master's cause shall be promoted thereby, I think that she will forgive her friend and be glad.

CAMPAIGN OF EVANGELISM

Recommendation No. 8 of the Sunday School Board adopted by the annual conference at Elizabeth City reads as follows:

"That special stress be laid upon the matter of evangelism in the Sunday school and that we recommend to our pastors and Sunday school workers the plan outlined by our General Sunday School Board. The time suggested is January, February and March, the campaign leading up to Easter. Schools finding the period between Christmas and Easter impracticable are urged to use the months of June, July and August."

The evangelistic aim of the Sunday school, which, as stated in our official Programs of Work, is to "bring each pupil into a knowledge of God's will and an acceptance of Jesus Christ as personal Saviour and Lord," should be supreme at all times, but in the multiplicity of their duties Sunday school workers not always keep this aim clearly before them, so that there is value in a special effort when the whole thought of our workers is fixed upon this one great objective.

The plan, which, in the main, will be followed throughout the Sunday schools of Southern Methodism, is as follows:

"That the first month or period be given to the preparation of the forces, the training of teachers and other Sunday school workers in mind and spirit for the work of evangelists; that the second month or period be given to active evangelism in the Sunday school, in the classes, and by personal effort, this period culminating with Confession or Decision Day; and that the third month or period be given to special preparation of pupils for reception into church membership."

Pamphlets giving the details of the plan have been sent to each pastor. Other leaflets are available for those desiring them. Let us consider these suggestions carefully and prayerfully, get into the campaign whole-heartedly, and thus enter upon the new year aright.

SCOTLAND NECK PROGRESSIVE

Scotland Neck Sunday school, having been carefully checked on Program of Work "C", is found to have increased its efficiency to the point where it now measures up to the standards set forth in points 2, 3, 4, 6 and 8, and is entitled to the "Progressive" seal for 1923. This seal has been awarded.

This school, of which Rev. E. L. Hillman is pastor and Mr. J. G. Madry superintendent, adopted the program early in the year and went to work to attain the points and, in the doing, to become a bigger and better agency for the religious training and development of its pupils. It is still working and improving and expects to attain the "Advanced" seal and then the "Standard" seal.

Approximately 150 Sunday schools in the conference have adopted these Programs of Work. Many have not been checked up. If yours has not and you want it to be, write to your district secretary or to your conference superintendent of Sunday school work.

PROGRAMS OF WORK

Does your school have the official Program of Work? And is doing its dead level best to work it? It outlines clearly just what your church stands for in the matter of Sunday school organization and administration and, when followed, lifts all phases of our Sunday school work to a uniformly higher level. Already we are observing, as a result of the placing of these Programs of Work in our schools, a new interest in and appreciation of the plans and purposes of the Sunday school. We expect to continue to lay emphasis upon this phase of our work with even increased intensity. It's worth while. It's worth following up. How about your school?

CERTIFICATES AND DIPLOMAS

Through correspondence and training class work a number of Standard Training Course certificates and diplomas were issued in November. To Miss Blanche Hester, of Louisburg, was issued a Blue Seal diploma, and to Miss Stella Etheredge, of Mt. Gilead, a diploma without seals. Certificates went to Mr. and Mrs. Junius Wrenn, of Siler City, Miss Estelle Beaty, of Wilson, Miss Kathleen Homan, of Elizabeth City, and Mrs. E. B. Ward, of Rowland.

We are hoping that an ever increasing number of Sunday school workers and prospective workers will pursue this training work by correspondence and that training classes may be conducted in many more of our churches. If you are interested, we will be delighted to furnish you with complete information and suggestions.

GENERAL COUNCIL MEETING

The fifteenth annual session of the General Sunday School Council of the M. E. Church, South, was held in Nashville, Tenn., December 11-18, and gave itself over to a study of plans for the development of rural work. The North Carolina conference was represented by Miss Georgia Keene, conference elementary superintendent, and L. L. Gobbel, conference superintendent of Sunday school work. Morning, afternoon, and night sessions were held and were brimful of interest, enthusiasm, and helpful plans and suggestions for reaching and serving in a more effective way the boys and girls and youth of our rural communities.

Among the important topics considered were plans for promoting the campaign of evangelism in the Sunday school and of making the Sunday schools more effective at this vital point. How to make our Sunday schools and, therefore, the church of tomorrow, truly missionary, was another matter very carefully considered.

Between 70 and 80 conference board chairmen, conference superintendents and elementary superintendents, professors of religious education in our church colleges, and members of the General Board staff were in attendance.

NEAR EAST RELIEF

Our Sunday schools are called upon to contribute to numerous objects, not all of which can be supported. There are some calls, however, which must be answered, and one of them, we believe, is the call of the Near East Relief. The helpless victims of Turkish cruelty are depending upon Christian America for life. It isn't necessary here to attempt to describe conditions; you already know of them. Our suggestion is that you present the situation to your Sunday school some time during the month of December or January and ask for a voluntary offering. Our boys and girls do not want the children of Bible lands to perish for lack of bread. Send your contributions to Dr. E. B. Chappell, Sunday School Editor, 810 Nashville, Tenn., who has this work in hand for our church.

USING CHRISTMAS OFFERING

Mr. M. W. Brabham, in the December issue of "The Methodist Superintendent and His Helpers," sets forth the following timely suggestions:

"Whatever may be said for the Christmas season, the Sunday school faces with each recurring year the question of whether or not the offering of the school is being so taken at this time as to yield greatest returns in terms of character.

"Money carelessly asked for and more carelessly received and disposed of becomes a stumbling block in the way of thousands of school members.

"Whether the offering goes for the local school and its needs, to the Conference Sunday School Board and its great work, to the Near East Relief, to the home for children, to the poor of the community, or for other 'worthy causes, this much should be kept in mind:

1. No pupil should be called upon to contribute thoughtlessly.
2. No offering should be taken without a clear understanding of its purposes.
3. No offering should be received in the midst of noisy announcements and chatter.
4. No offering should be taken other than in a thoughtful manner and as an act of worship.
5. No offering should be disposed of without a full accounting to the proper authorities of the local school and church."

VERY SUCCESSFUL

The Stanly County Co-operative Standard Training School for Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday School workers, held in the city high school building at Albemarle December 2-7, was very successful. In fact, it was more largely attended and more interest was shown in the work of the school than was anticipated; even though no small things were expected. With an enrollment of 136 coming from all sections of the county and with the issuing of 77 credits, 61 going to the Methodists and 16 to the Presbyterians, every one voted the school a decided success and urged that another be held next year. The Methodist credits were distributed among the following churches in the following stated numbers: Central, Albemarle 23, Norwood 12, Badin 9, Salem 6, First Street, Albemarle 4, Norwood circuit 4, Tabernacle, Albemarle 2.

The credit students listed by courses are as follows:

The Sunday School, O. V. Woosley, instructor—Rev. F. O. Dryman, Rev. R. O. Eller, Rev. L. H. Griffith, Rev. C. M. Pickens, Rev. R. A. Swaringen, A. P. Allen, Miss Leola Atkins, Mrs. F. C. Anderson, J. F. Hatley, Dr. T. A. Hathcock, E. L. Lefler, Z. V. Moss, C. A. Reap, R. M. Russell.

Principles of Teaching, Claude Carr, instructor—Mrs. W. H. Snuggs, Mrs. J. D. Bivins, Mrs. S. H. Milton, Mrs. Ed N. Smith, Mrs. D. A. Shankle, Mrs. S. T. Gullede, Mrs. C. M. Pickens, Robert L. Furr, Rev. C. R. Ross, Mrs. C. R. Ross, Mrs. M. L. Wilson, B. D. Archer, S. V. Ross, W. E. Boyle.

Intermediate Senior Agencies, Mrs. J. F. Spruill, instructor—Mrs. G. G. Adams, J. D. Bivins, Miss Laura B. Deaton, Mrs. F. O. Dryman, Mrs. R. O. Eller, D. E. Lefler, A. F. Ross, Mrs. R. L. Smith.

Junior Organization and Administration, Miss Virginia Jenkins, instructor—Rev. G. G. Adams, Miss Ruth Avett, Miss Margie Allen, Mrs. T. D. Almond, Miss Margaret Boylan, Miss Virginia Colson, Miss Josie Chrisco, Mrs. Robert L. Furr, S. F. Gordon, Miss Mary Gullede, Mrs. J. D. Harwood, Mrs. D. E. Lefler, Mrs. E. L. Lefler, Miss Vivian Lipe, Mrs. John Liske, Mrs. R. A. Swaringen.

Primary Organization and Administration, Miss Georgia Keene, instructor—Miss Lesca Freeman, Mrs. S. F. Gordon, Miss Fanny Lisenby, Mrs. Z. V. Moss, Mrs. L. O. Parker, Mrs. H. E. Reap, Mrs. R. M. Russell, Miss Pauline Whitley, Miss Florence Lefler.

HUSTLING PASTORS

It is generally true that the fellow who is continually complaining about how much he has to do does very little. His complaint advertises a lack of managerial ability. I have noted some pastors who spend quite as much time talking about how much they have to do as they do in actually putting things across. But such can not be said about the Stanly county Methodist preachers. They are a hustling bunch. Seven of the eight in the county attended regularly our recent training school and received credit for the good work they did. The first three mentioned in the following list are not only pastors of congregations but are also principals of large consolidated public schools. Note the list of credit pastors from the Stanly county school:

- Rev. R. O. Eller, Salem circuit.
- Rev. C. R. Ross, Badin.
- Rev. G. G. Adams, Norwood circuit.
- Rev. C. M. Pickens, Central, Albemarle.
- Rev. R. A. Swaringen, First Street, Albemarle.
- Rev. F. O. Dryman, Norwood.
- Rev. L. H. Griffith, Albemarle circuit.

SIX STARS

While we are cutting capers about the pastors who take our training courses for credit we should not overlook their wives who make them what they are. We had six such stars in the Stanly county school, who after keeping house all day and after doing many other things, among them the feeding of the ministers attended our school regularly and received certificates of credit. They are listed below. The first two mentioned are not only home makers, but also teach school every day.

Mrs. R. O. Eller, Mrs. C. M. Pickens, Mrs. C. R. Ross, Mrs. G. G. Adams, Mrs. F. O. Dryman, Mrs. R. A. Swaringen.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Hearty good wishes and most cordial greetings are extended to the 8081 Sunday school officers and teachers in the Western North Carolina conference. A genuine spirit of thankfulness takes possession of us because of the good and lasting work you have done during the days, weeks and months of the year. You have no doubt found keen delight in giving to others that which has been so bounteously given to you. Shall we not then as we celebrate another birthday our Saviour emphasize the spirit of giving rather than receiving? Our Saviour has been so generous in his gifts to us. Let us be generous in our gifts to Him.

AT THE HUB

Your humble servant is at present at Nashville, Tenn., the hub of Southern Methodism, attending a meeting of the General Sunday School Council of the Southern Methodist Church. This council is composed of the Nashville central office heads and their assistants, the conference workers, directors of religious education in local churches and colleges who apply for membership and such other workers in the field of religious education as may be elected by the council. The purpose of the annual meetings of the council is to develop a policy for the guidance of Methodist Sunday school work. Our present sessions are proving most valuable. The Western North Carolina conference is represented by Miss Virginia Jenkins, conference elementary superintendent, Miss Maud McKinnon, director of religious education of Tryon Street, Charlotte, Mrs. Mabel Baughman, director of religious education of Central, Asheville, and your conference superintendent of Sunday school work.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK

GOOD FOR WENDELL

The Main Street Epworth League, chapter No. 12276, has been chartered since last June. The league is doing some good work. Most of our members never worked in a league before, and consequently we are just learning this work. We haven't a junior and senior league, but are all together, as we have so few members.

We have a program every Sunday evening just before preaching hour. Socials are held once a month. All enjoy these social hours. Our league held one service in a home where there was an invalid. The older members hold a mission study class every Wednesday night.

Dahlma Williams, Cor. Sec.

TRINITY LEAGUE ENTERTAINS

Trinity Epworth League of Wilmington entertained all the leagues of the city, which are four in number, on Friday evening, November 23rd. The business session opened promptly at 8 o'clock and last almost two hours, which was extraordinary as there were many subjects on docket for discussion. The attendance banner was awarded to the Winter Park League. However, the banner on Standard Efficiency was retained by Trinity League. In this connection it may prove of interest to say that Trinity League maintained the banner on attendance consecutively for one year and a half, and lost it to Grace Street League. We felicitate ourselves on our record achieved; however, we are not going to live on what has been, as we are trying to recapture the attendance banner and expect to do so in no distant time.

Immediately after the business session came to a climax the meeting was turned over to the social department, which presented a most pleasing program, as follows: Two vocal solos, one violin solo, one piano solo, two recitations, one mock wedding, one mock funeral. The Trinity League participated in the two latter numbers, which was full of pep and comedy and kept the audience in constant uproar all the way through.

Delicious hot chocolate and cake were served, which was later followed by several snappy games.

The evening was fully enjoyed by every one present, as the time went speedily by and brought a late but most reluctant good-night.

WANCHESE LEAGUE

Our third department superintendent is due the thanks of our league for the entertainment given in the form of a Hallowe'en party at the home of her father, Mr. Sam Baum, October 31st. All present reported a grand time and a hope of many such gathering of youth in the happiness it gave us all to be there.

While enjoying the blessings of life which is right and proper, let us never forget that all that we have and all that we are is from a merciful heavenly Father.

Our league held its business meeting and a devotional meeting in the month of October. On the night of November 15th it held a devotional meeting. This was well attended and very interesting. Two of our girls sang a duet, which was enjoyed by all. The writer made a talk on the subject of Jesus and His mother. The point we tried to make was that Jesus would not even let as sacred a one on earth as his mother interfere with his work as planned by His Father. He sacrificed all earthly honor for the salvation of sinful man; and how can we stand idle and enjoy the comforts of life and the hope of heaven hereafter and do so little? How much real sacrifice do we all make for the cause of Christ, leaguers? Sometime, somewhere, we will be called to account for all that we do, or do not do, in the work of the Master. Let this thought sink in: How will my record be over there—not Bill's or Jack's, but mine? How will it show up on the eternal book? You may have very important business, but none to compare with this question. Let's try to answer it right by God's help.

On the night of November 4th, after the regular preaching service, our pastor, Rev. A. W. Price, installed the league officers. This was a very inspiring service.

We are going to work this next year. Yes, people are getting ashamed of the way we are doing the Lord's work. Next year you will see this league move at a rapid rate. We have the material and the tools to build with. All we lack is the energy, and as the winter gets this dull fall feeling out of us and we get full of spring pep, the old league at Wanchese will move on. It is like kind words, it can never die, and with the bright spring sunshine and picnics and socials and best of all the grace of our heavenly Father we will break all records.

Western North Carolina Conference

MT. BETHEL LEAGUERS

Willing Workers League of Mt. Bethel church, Olin charge, is coming right along. It is only a few months old, but it is growing fast. These young people are eager to do things. You can tell that by their name. This league has raised some money already to improve their church. This league is so eager to do things it jumped on the pastor Saturday night and gave him a real pounding that was felt all over. The boys and girls came with many good things to the parsonage, and when they went away they left a preacher and family feeling good.

A FINE DISTRICT UNION MEETING

Our Shelby district union held its quarterly meeting in West End Methodist church, Gastonia, last Friday night. A majority of the forty chapters sent representatives, Polkville taking the palm in the matter of distance traveled. They had more than a dozen delegates whose combined travel that night aggregated nearly 500 miles! Each of these delegates came a distance of approximately eighty miles. The Denver League in Lincoln county also traveled about fifty miles each, round trip.

The addresses by Rev. J. Frank

Armstrong of Concord and Mr. Coris Levesten, a prominent Syrian Methodist of Gastonia, featured the occasion.

It was gratifying to see a large number of pastors present. After the business session was over the West End Leaguers served hot chocolate and cakes to all the visitors. King's Mountain gets the next district meeting.

CALVARY SEEMS TO HAVE A LIVE "CHICK"

Just a line from Calvary League, Charlotte. We have a live mission study class. "Creative Forces in Japan" is our study book. We don't lack for teachers; we have some fine ones in our league.

On Thanksgiving evening our league had a service at the church. Both senior and junior leagues took part and was very helpful. Each one brought a package of something to eat and several families were helped. Our league is doing good work along all lines, but we want to do better.

Miss Lillie Chick.

MILLS RIVER LEAGUE VISIT COUNTY HOME

On Tuesday evening, November 27, twenty leaguers from Mills River church went to the county home in two Fords and one truck. This trip seemed to be enjoyed by both leaguers and inmates.

We carried papers and magazines for the old folks to read, also eats such as pumpkin pies, cookies and fruits.

After our young people had sung a number of songs and our pastor, Rev. J. O. Cox, had prayer we returned home resolved to go again.

Sue Brittain.

DOINGS OF POLKVILLE LEAGUE

When winter comes the grizzly bear takes his family to their home in the cliff for the long winter nap. I wonder how many leaguers are found napping? Not true at Polkville; we are more alive today than we have ever been. Twelve of us, representing the junior, intermediate and senior departments, attended the district meeting at Gastonia last Friday evening, December 7th. After hearing the wonderful messages we returned home with new ideas and a determination to do more in the future. If we will all do our "little bit" by being cheerful, wearing a smile and helping to bear other burdens, greater things will be accomplished.

A few weeks ago the seniors organized a mission study class with Miss Mary D. Palmer as teacher, using as text book "Japan on the Upward Trail," also recently the intermediates organized electing Miss Mary Elliott as their instructor, studying "The Honorable Japanese Fan." These two classes meet each Sunday immediately after Sunday school with fine attendance.

At present the three leagues and even the honorary members are in the midst of a membership drive and will close Christmas. Each member is cooperating nicely and doing his best, because the winning league will be entertained by the losers. Talk about "pep," but we have got it!

The December league social was held Saturday evening of the 8th at the lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Covington. This was "stunt night," and one hundred points toward the drive was awarded to the seniors for giving the three best "stunts," but the intermediates were not far behind. Then our hostess served apples and chestnuts, which were greatly enjoyed by all. We soon departed—glad that we came.

We are going to have a special program and Christmas tree on Christmas eve to cheer the children as well as grown-ups.

Quit you like men, be strong.—1 Cor. xvi. 13.

In becoming Christians let us not cease to be men! Nay, we cannot be Christians unless we are men first.—Theodore Parker.

CHRISTMAS CAROL

Our God, Heaven cannot hold Him
Nor earth sustain;
Heaven and earth shall flee away
When He comes to reign:

In the bleak mid-winter
A stable-place sufficed
The Lord God Almighty
Jesus Christ.

Angels and archangels
May have gathered there,
Cherubim and seraphim
Thronged the air,

But only His mother
In her maiden bliss,
Worshipped her Beloved
With a kiss.

What can I give Him,
Poor as I am?
If I were a shepherd
I would bring a lamb,

If I were a wise man
I would do my part—
Yet what can I give Him,
Give my heart.

—Christina Rossetti.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME

By Martha A. Wood.

Perhaps it would be of interest to the readers of the Advocate and the friends of the Children's Home to see a list of the things that were sent in to the Home during the month of November. So I am copying several pages of the register that looks after this class of receipts. This does not include the money received.

Four large manufacturing concerns remembered at Thanksgiving that orphan children need large quantities of clothes, and sent in generous bales of their goods.

A large bundle of outing from the Minneola Manufacturing Co., Gibsonville.

A bale of denim from the Proximity Manufacturing Co., Greensboro.

One hundred and twenty-four yards of Concord zephyr gingham and 37 yards of drill, Gibson Manufacturing Co., Concord.

Two hundred yards of sheeting from Columbia Manufacturing Co., Ramseur; 198 yards gingham from Locke Cotton Mills, Concord.

Three bales of goods will make numbers of warm winter nightgowns, little boys' wash pants, girls' dresses and nightshirts, etc., etc.

November the first brought a box of clothing for the little girl that Mrs. Paul Kiker's Sunday school class of Wadesboro is clothing. Eight dresses with bloomers to match, a sweater, six pairs hose and money to buy coat, cap and shoes. There were some toys and candy in the box for Ruby.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Old Fort sent in a bed built, and Mrs. Jason of Bakersville five yards of gingham.

Sweater, cap, two gowns, four underbodies, three union suits, four pairs black hose, seven pairs brown hose for Annie Bell R. from missionary society, Statesville.

Dress and bloomers, union suit, gown, two pairs hose for Geneva from Sunshine Missionary Society, Lexington.

Four union suits, four gowns, four underbodies, nine dresses with bloomers to match, two sweaters, two caps, five pairs white stockings, two of black, two of brown; two pairs gloves and money for cloak and shoes, for Juanita, from Mrs. Frank Rose's Sunday school class, Monroe. Jaunita is "the baby."

Four everyday dresses with bloomers, and a coat from Mrs. E. G. Gilmer, Statesville, for Annie Bell R.

Some canned fruit, jelly and cash from Philathea class, Thomasville.

Six gingham dresses and bloomers, and four outing gowns for Valeria C., from Stamey Bible class, West Market Street church, Greensboro.

On the 20th the Civic Club sent in some nice little cakes.

Five dresses and bloomers, four outing gowns, four underbodies, five pairs hose and a cap and sweater came from Mrs. S. A. Little, Charlotte.

Thirteen gingham dresses, 10 gowns, 18 pairs hose, one blouse, some cash, from Circles Nos. 3 and 4, Park Place church, Greensboro.

Two boys' suits from Mrs. J. L. Little, Morven.

Six handkerchiefs, eight pairs hose, a towel and a box of groceries, from East End Sunday school, High Point.

Eleven cans of fruit and half dozen oranges, from Junior Sunday school class, Farmington.

A box of clothing from Missionary Society, Spring Garden Street church, Greensboro.

Quilt from Mrs. J. B. Parks, Elkin.

A quilt, fifty pairs hose, two sweaters, a dress, 18 towels, 19 handkerchiefs, and some second hand clothing, from Missionary Society, King's Mountain.

A bed spread and 100 handkerchiefs from woman's Bible class, Glenwood church, Greensboro.

A piece of gingham, three boys' blouses, five pairs hose and seven towels from Providence Aid Society, Cool Springs charge, Statesville.

A turkey from O. C. Shaver, Richfield.

Two boxes apples, Home Circle, Morganton.

A case of canned fruit from Rev. G. L. Wilkinson, Marlon Mills and Linckfield charge.

A barrel of apples from Comrades Sunday school, Boon.

A box of chickens sent by A. E. Nickols, Stonesville.

A crate of chickens from Mt. Zion church.

A case of canned fruit sent by J. N. Dayvault, China Grove.

Box of apples and oranges from Mrs. J. C. Friend, Concord.

Basket of oranges, one of apples and box of candy from Junior Dept., Centenary Sunday school, city.

Quilt from Mrs. J. L. Poindexter, Franklin.

Three boxes of candy from Mr. and Mrs. Clay V. Ring, Kernersville.

A box of oranges from Lovel Dix, city.

Fifteen gallons of ice cream given by the Forsyth Dairy Co., Winston-Salem, kindness of the North Carolina Ice Cream Association.

This ice cream was highly enjoyed as dessert Thanksgiving Day.

A box of oranges, box of apples and several pounds of candy from Mrs. J. C. Fink, Concord.

Twenty-one handkerchiefs from Primary Dept., Sunday school, Bethel church, Asheville.

Notwithstanding our care in keeping the small children home this winter, it seems that we may have to contend with an outbreak of measles, as there are several cases at the infirmary.

The first to take it was little Jack Thompson, who goes to school to the city schools over in town. He was taken sick at Thanksgiving, and though careful quarantine was maintained after the measles developed, it was too late; three of the little girls who were sick upstairs at that time have developed measles.

However, we may get off with a limited number of cases. Only fifty of the children, according to their health records, have not had measles, and of course all of those may not take it at this time. But it is quite likely that Christmas will be celebrated in a very sad fashion by some little folks at the Home this year.

The beautiful service which the women of the missionary societies have rendered our Orphanage cannot be too highly praised. Our children have received so many tokens of their love and sacrifices. The clothing of our children by these noble, unselfish women is one of the finest exhibitions of applied Christianity of which I have any knowledge. I want to publicly commend them for their altruistic service.

* * * *

Mr. R. A. Burt, who has had charge of our farm and dairy for the past few years, has moved and is now living in another part of the city. He was devoted to our children and found his highest joy in doing something for their happiness and Christian development.

Mr. J. A. Boone succeeds him as farm superintendent. He comes highly recommended as a Christian gentleman and a successful, up-to-date rucker and farmer. We extend to him a warm welcome.

* * * *

We would be glad to hear from a number of our good friends who have subscribed on the Baby Cottage and the Atwater building. We want to begin on these buildings within the next two and a half months. Plans and specifications are just about completed and we need money with which to erect the buildings. A payment now on either the Baby Cottage or the Atwater buildings will be very much appreciated.

* * * *

Brother L. B. Pattishall, who has been the pastor of our Orphanage family for the past five years, has greatly endeared himself to us. He has wrought well and our prayers and love will follow him in his new field of service.

Brother W. H. Brown has entered wholeheartedly upon the work at Jenkins Memorial church. He has made a fine impression and everybody is confidently expecting him to have a year of large success. The Orphanage gives him a warm welcome and wishes to co-operate with him in every way possible to help make his pastorate fruitful.

* * * *

Our building program presents a fine opportunity to those who wish to erect a fitting memorial to some dear friend or loved one. Such a building would not only perpetuate the memory of one who was loved so dearly, but would serve a noble purpose. I recall several prominent Methodists of means who could put up one of those buildings as a memorial to the one whose life and character meant everything to them. Is there anything too costly to keep alive their memory? Is there any cause more worthy of a memorial than our beloved Methodist Orphanage? Is there any time more opportune to decide this important matter than when the angel's song is heard again over the plains of Bethlehem, and when the spirit of the Christ touches and makes generous the heart of the world?

* * * *

There are scores of old people in our church who have means that ought to come to the Methodist Orphanage when they are called hence. In addition to this, they do not want the risk nor the worry of letting their money out on interest. Then the matter of taxes is quite an item. Our board of trustees can handle all such funds and give these old people gilt edge security. If they turn their money over to us we can pay them six per cent interest semi-annually as long as they live. This plan will save them from paying taxes and having anxiety over securing the principle and collecting interest. At the death of such parties the principle automatically goes into the Orphanage endowment fund. I shall be glad for our pastors to call the attention of old people with means to this annuity plan as adopted by the board of trustees of our Methodist Orphanage.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

Edited by Luther E. Todd, Secretary

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

The "forgotten man" is calling you—for the pink leaf report from the first quarterly conference.

A wire from the offices of the Board of Finance received at the South Georgia conference on Wednesday, November 30, stated that pink leaf reports were pouring in from every section of the church. Have you sent yours?

Another wire from the offices received at the South Carolina conference on December 1 stated that fifty-six pink leaf reports had been received the day before. Was one of them from your charge?

I am spending this beautiful day, December 2, on the train, hurrying to St. Louis for two days' work in the offices before leaving for the Florida conference. While I ride I write in behalf of the church's worn-out preachers. And also I am wondering if you have sent in your pink leaf report.

Bishop W. F. McMurry was the able representative of the special effort for superannuate endowment at the Central Texas conference. But those who heard him tell me that he was a whole team in himself. At the close of his address Dr. Alonzo Monk, Jr., pastor of First church, Corsicana, Texas, voluntarily walked to the front and handed Bishop McMurry a check for $910, saying that it was the full amount due from his charge for the first year in the special effort for superannuate endowment. Bravo, Dr. Monk, you are a worthy son of a noble father! The Board of Finance commends you heartily, and all the claimants of the church acclaim you!

Bishop McMurry scores again. He represented the Board of Finance at the Texas conference and did it in a manner pleasing to all. Hardly had he finished speaking when the pastor of Caldwell charge, Texas conference, whispered to one of his young laymen, J. R. Woodson, as follows: "Jim, how much of the Lord's money have you?" Mr. Woodson replied: "I have enough to pay the whole amount due from our charge on this movement for the first year." And he took his check book from his pocket, wrote a personal check for $555, walked down the aisle, and gave it to Bishop McMurry to send to the Board of Finance. The big bishop nearly doubled up, for he realized suddenly that he had years ago started this same Jim in the Christian life. Ah me, "how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him who bringeth good tidings!" What have we here? A peptimistic bishop, an optimistic pastor, and Jim. Come on, bishops, presiding elders, pastors, Jim is close by everywhere. By the way, Mr. Woodson, they tell me that a jimmy is the best tool on earth when it is used in the right way. Let others in on your secret. Richest blessings be upon you, man! You have started something. And your pastor—well, I wish I had a lock of his hair.

Let me see, I had something very important to put down just here. O yes, I remember now; it was to inquire whether you have sent your pink leaf report to the Board of Finance.

The North Georgia conference was ablaze with interest in the special effort for superannuate endowment. On the very day that the great cause was presented Mr. Lewis H. Beck, a noble and generous layman of Alabama, gave $10,000 in bonds to superannuate endowment. Mr. Beck is widely heralded as a man of sterling qualities and just dealings. He is a loyal member of our Trinity church, Atlanta. May his liberal contribution suggest to other laymen of his kind the privilege which is theirs to do something extraordinary for this sacred cause. And while this heaven is working all of us will pray earnestly for heaven's richest blessings to come upon Brother Beck, the faithful and loving friend of the "forgotten man."

On November 26 Brother Thomas, presiding elder of the Murphysboro district, Illinois conference, visited the offices of the Board of Finance. He said that every charge except two in his district had sent in the pink leaf report, that the two charges which had not reported would do so as soon as the first quarterly conference was held, and that every charge in his district would show something added to its minimum quota. Whew, what a presiding elder! Fine, brother! And, mark you, this elder operates in one of the conferences where the work is exceedingly difficult. Come, everybody, let us give him the grand honors!

Now, that puts something into my head—for which you should be thankful. Sometime later I shall publish in one list the names of the presiding elders who succeed in having every charge of their respective districts send in the pink leaf report. It will be an honor roll worth while. Furthermore, any presiding elder who qualifies for this honor roll may have if he requests it an 18x22 group picture of our college of bishops. The picture will be sent postpaid by the Board of Finance and complimentary for the service stated. I sincerely trust that every presiding elder in the church may be able to claim this token.

Immediately following the presentation of the plan of the special effort at the South Georgia conference Bishop Ainsworth delivered an address on the subject that was truly a flash from heaven. If a man was ever inspired, the bishop had the endowment on this occasion. He held that great body of men as those under a light from above. He lost himself completely in being a voice of the God of the "forgotten man." The conference trembled with emotion, few eyes were dry, and all our hearts were thrilled. God bless you, Bishop Ainsworth! I shall never forget that hour.

Bishop W. F. McMurry was with me at the Little Rock conference, and his work for the cause was magnificent. When Bishop "Mac" really squares himself on any subject, there is nothing much left to be said. Well, at Little Rock he did. I told him that his address was fully up to anything he ever did in his palmiest days as secretary of the Board of Church Extension. He grunted, smiled, and said: "I am just beginning to get ready to start on this thing." If Little Rock was the place of his commencing, he is laying out a program for himself alone that would demand the strength and skill of twenty.

Will the following brethren please give attention: Our bishops, each and every one of them; all of the team men who gave service in presenting the special effort to the annual conferences; all of the members of the conference boards of finance; each and every presiding elder who was and is; each and every pastor and his lay delegates to the annual conference; all of the editors and business managers of the church press; all of the connectional men and women in each and every department of the church's work; all of the men and women connected with schools, hospitals, orphanages, or other special service; and each and every one of anything else unintentionally omitted.

ALL OF YOU, listen! I am deeply grateful for the co-operation you have given in the matter of presenting to the annual conferences the plan of the special effort for superannuate endowment. God bless you! A good start has been made, and you have helped to make it. If some day the history of this movement should be written by somebody, it will not be complete until all of your names appear within its pages in bold-face type.

And now while we are all together in one group let us join hands and sing something. What shall it be, a war song? All right, all together: "We're going over! We're going over! And we won't come back until it's over."

Fine! And before we turn to our appointed places let me remind every one of you that the very next step on the way over is to see that every charge in the connection sends to the Board of Finance as soon as possible that pink leaf report. Amen.

Rev. W. A. Lambeth says: "Stick to this thing, men! Stick to it like a cocklebur to a cow's tail."

HEAD OF THE CLASS

A glance at the 1923 minutes will suffice to prove, I think, that Main Street, Thomasville, paid more to the budget of the church for general and conference work than any church of equal rating, from the standpoint of membership and pastor's salary, in the Western North Carolina conference. Lexington, a neighbor, paid the same, but with a membership of 851 to Main Street's 580. It is also evident that Main Street paid more per member than any church of equal or higher standing in the conference. Furthermore, Main Street paid more than quite a number of $3600 and $4000 charges. I mention Dilworth, Charlotte; Central, Mt. Airy; First church, Salisbury; Central, Shelby; Main Street, Gastonia; Broad Street, Statesville, and possibly others.

This array is not intended to make anyone believe that Thomasville is a victim of or a sufferer from unjust policies. She is not. All that Thomasville does is done willingly. She feels proud to share the vision of the able presiding elder and other leaders of the Winston-Salem district—the vision of a clean sheet for the district. That vision has never been possible of attainment where the country charges were assessed more than they would pay. Thomasville and other churches of the Winston-Salem district are, willingly, carrying larger burdens, for the present, than the country charge may have a chance to find and develop its real strength. That day will come; then part of the load can be shifted.

Nor is that all Main Street is doing. There is not a charge in the surrounding country that has not felt her helping hand. Her parish is not confined to the limits of her own membership. Never is a church built or a benevolent movement, of any sort, launched in which Main Street does not take part.

Last year was a great year; but we are standing on the threshold of a greater. Our people are more hopeful; our congregations are larger; but best of all, "God is with us."

A. C. Gibbs.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Mrs. Sarah E. Spence was born February 18, 1868, died November 20, 1923. She was a member of the Aid Society and had been ever since it was first organized. On account of ill health she was not able to attend regularly, but her thoughts and best wishes for the society were always present.

She loved her church and Sunday school, of which she was a faithful member. She joined the church when a young girl. She was a quiet, faithful woman, a devoted mother and loved by all who knew her.

Whereas, God in His wisdom and love saw fit to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Spence, be it resolved:

That the Ladies' Aid Society of Newland M. E. church extend our heartfelt sympathies to the children and relatives and commend them to the loving care of our heavenly Father. While we miss her, we feel that our loss is her gain.

Also that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to the North Carolina Advocate for publication and a copy be spread upon the minutes of our society.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets That Are Nauseless, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds, coughs, sore throat, and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and colds and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One or two Calotabs at bed time, with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Genuine Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents for the large, family package; ten cents for the small, vest-pocket size.

Our Little Folks

CHRISTMAS

By Mrs. E. M. Anderson.

Christmas is coming!
Glad time of the year;
Little hearts are rejoicing—
Old Santa is near.

Little cheeks growing rosy,
And little eyes bright,
Little faces so merry,
And hearts so light.

Little stockings all ready
To hang up at night;
Then sleep little darlings
Till morning light.

Then bright little faces,
All beaming with joy;
O here is real pleasure
Without its alloy!

O dear little faces,
O little eyes bright,
Why are you so happy
And hearts so light?

Why all your rejoicing,
And gladness and mirth?
O today was born
Our Saviour on earth.

Well may you rejoice,
And all be bright;
Today's the birthday
Of the King of Light.

For you, little children,
He came from above;
Of such is the kingdom
Of heavenly love.
St. Petersburg, Fla.

THE OUTDOORS' CHRISTMAS STOCKING

Of course Mother always knew, but still—and anyway she hadn't said for sure—

She had just said: "I'm afraid Santa Claus won't know where to find us this year." You see they had just moved from the drouth-stricken West and old Santa might not find out soon enough just where they had stopped.

But every year before that he had come. Once there was a dolly. And once there were little dishes. And every year there had been candy.

And every year Ethel had written her Christmas letter to dear old Santa and sent it by the bright little fire fairies. One, two, three times—that was as far back as she could count—she had written the same loving little note in the script that little children use:

"I love you, dear Santa Claus. Please put something nice in my stocking this Christmas. I'll hang it right at the foot of my bed.

"Love and kisses from your little friend, Ethel."

And every time the warm-hearted little fire fairies had taken the message right to old Santa; and every time he had picked out something that she was just wishing for and put it in her plump little stocking.

"I think I'd better write to him anyway," she decided, "and maybe the fire fairies will find him in time."

So Mother sharpened her pencil and Ethel wrote very carefully. But when she came to "I'll hang it right at the foot of the bed," she stooped and thought—hard.

"I don't believe I'll hang it at the foot of the bed this time," she said slowly; "the chimney on this little house might not be big enough for old Santa to get through. Oh, I know. I'll put it outdoors. There's a big nail right out on the side of the house, and I'll hang it right on that."

So Ethel finished her letter, and that night, sitting on her mother's lap in her little white nightie, she gave it to the fire fairies. And on Christmas Eve, right after supper, out she went and carefully hung her stocking on the big nail somebody had driven in the side of the house.

"Merry Christmas, sweetheart," called Mother, as Ethel's blue eyes popped open the next morning. "Come and see what a nice present old Santa brought."

She got into her clothes ever so fast and ran out, but—

The little fat stocking wasn't anywhere.

But yes, it was. The wind had blown it down in a snug corner between the house and a big, roly-poly barrel. And snuggled right down on it was the dearest little kittens you ever saw!—Selected.

THE WINTER PICNIC

Peggy had come from the city to spend this week on the farm with May, and May had promised to take her on a winter picnic as a treat.

"But, Cousin May, I never heard of a winter picnic," said Peggy.

"Well, you are going to take part in one this very morning," answered her cousin.

"Are we going to take things to eat?"

"Of course we are, Peggy, but neither you nor I shall eat a bite! I'm going to take a little basket of things. Hurry and get on your coat and overshoes, my dear."

Peggy was a much puzzled little girl, but May wouldn't explain the least bit more. She only told Peggy to hurry.

The two girls bundled up well, for Jack Frost was in the air that day. They buckled their overshoes high, and they took along their skates, for there was ice on the pond.

"Now," said May as she fastened the last buckle, "let's be off. There's our picnic basket on the shelf."

"But that's such a little basket," exclaimed Peggy, "and it's empty"

"Just wait," said May, "we shall fill it at the barn."

"Oh, so we are going to make a fire and roast things?"

"Never a fire shall we have, and never a bite shall we eat on this picnic," declared May.

"Goodness me!" sighed Peggy. "What kind of picnic is this going to be?"

"I told you that it was a winter picnic," said Mary with a merry laugh, "but here we are at the barn. Let's fill the basket to the brim."

Greatly wondering, Peggy followed Cousin May into the barn. May knew just what she wished to take. With wide eyes Peggy watched her fill the basket. First to go in was a big ear of corn, next several heads of wheat, then a measure of oats and a handful of buckwheat, and last, some walnuts and hickory nuts from May's little store in the loft. Then the little basket was full.

"The picnic place," said May, "is in the woods near the pond. Every week this winter I've been giving a picnic there. Today's should be most welcome on account of the snow."

The two started merrily down the slope toward the woods. Peggy's eyes danced. She thought that she knew now what sort of picnic it was to be. Soon they entered the woods, and May guided Peggy toward a little knoll, well sheltered with trees and shrubs.

"Here is the picnic place," said

May. "This big rock covered with snow is the picnic table. Come, help me set the table, Peggy dear!"

Peggy began to unpack the basket. May stuck the big ear of corn upright in the center of the table while Peggy arranged the heads of wheat round the ear. Then she and May placed the nuts all round the edge, as if they were dishes. Finally Peggy made little pictures on the snow with the oats and buckwheat. The feast looked inviting.

"But where are our guests, Cousin May?" asked Peggy when they had finished.

"S-s-sh!" May warned her. "They are probably watching us this very minute. Let's go skating on the pond now, and when we come back later the picnic folk will be at the table."

The ice on the pond was as smooth as smooth could be, and the two girls had a glorious time skating. But they soon crept back to see whether the picnic folk had arrived. Yes, indeed they had. They seemed to be enjoying themselves greatly.

Peggy was so pleased with the picture that the picnic folk made at the table that she nearly cried out. But a warning from Cousin May fortunately stopped her just in time.

Among the guests were a gray squirrel, a beautiful cardinal and a saucy bluejay. There were many snowbirds too and a song-sparrow. And there at the corn was a little white bunny.

Oh, but it was a busy picnic! Of course the guests were not showing good manners. They turned their backs to one another, and they often scolded. But the little girls excused those faults, for the picnic folk were very hungry.

"Why, Cousin May," whispered Peggy as they turned to go skating again, "a winter picnic is the very best kind of picnic. It's so good to give those hungry things a bite to eat!"

And that week there were two winter picnics for the picnic folk on Cousin May's farm, because Peggy said that she wanted to give one that was all her own.—Youth's Companion.

CHILDREN'S SAYINGS

Tommy—Mother, can't the cook put up my lunch instead of you doing it? Mother—It's no trouble, my dear.

Tommy—I know. But cook's got a better appetite than you got.—Selected.

A little girl was spending her first night from home. As the darkness gathered she began to cry. The hostess asked, "Are you homesick?" "No," was the reply, "I'm here sick."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Marie, who is seven, was having tea with a friend when a visitor called and took some notice of her.

"And have you any little sisters at home?" the lady inquired.

"No," said Marie. Then, after a moment, she added reflectively: "But, I have two brothers at home—and they have a sister—and I am it."—Harper's Magazine.

Sunday School Teacher—Why was the fiery furnace seven times heated? Willie—I suppose it went out between times.—Selected.

Mrs. W. M. C. writes: "I had been away overnight visiting my sister. Next morning I said to my three-year-old daughter, 'And how did my little girl get to sleep last night without narcolepsy?'"

"'Oh,' she replied, 'papa tried to sing to me like you does, an' I went to sleep weal quick so I touldn't hear him.'"—Boston Transcript.

W. H. BROWN AND FAMILY HAPPY

We came to Raleigh Friday night, November 30th, and while we have not had time to get settled in our new home, we are very much at home. Our people have been so thoughtful of us and so friendly and have come out to services so well we scarcely know that we are among strangers.

The ladies who had for us upon our arrival a warm and nicely fixed parsonage a warm supper, a pantry in which there were many supplies, and a warm welcome, have done even more than we expected and are still doing for our comfort and convenience. It is a glorious thing to fall into the hands of a company of good, live women.

On Monday night after our arrival our stewards had their first meeting in which every one was present, and in a cheerful and helpful mood. After attending to most of the business they asked the pastor to go to the parsonage for a book and upon his return they informed him they had unaimously voted to make his salary one hundred dollars more than what they paid their pastor last year and paid a substantial part of the raise right then and there.

The entire orphanage family seems to have conspired together to make our coming and our stay pleasant and profitable. They have assisted in preparing the parsonage for us. They have come to hear us in large numbers, have made us feel ourselves a part of the family, and have been a source of real inspiration to us.

We feel that we have shouldered the greatest responsibility we have ever taken upon ourselves, and we got underneath it with ear and trembling, but the spirit in which the people have entered into the work with us has dispelled our fears and quieted our nerves. We are praying God that we may indeed be a blessing to this church and community.

W. H. Brown.

SEVERELY POUNDED AT THANKSGIVING

Just a little space to say that as the family and myself were seated in the home busily engaged with various duties, the tramping of many feet and babel of tongues were heard on the front porch. On investigation I found a crowd at the door with all sorts and all sizes of packages clamoring to enter. They rushed in, piling the dining room table with their gifts with many packages on the floor.

This was one time I could not say just what I wished and properly express my thanks.

Soon after this first crowd left another came and then another. So their "pounding" was administered in broken doses. Several of the churches on the charge were represented and especially Broadway by a big majority.

Thus from the physical side we were ready for Thanksgiving as well as the spiritual. Thanks to all these good people.

B. E. Stanfield.

WELDON CHURCH AND WELDON DISTRICT GET GOOD START

Rev. G. W. Perry, assigned to the Weldon church at the recent conference, met his congregation for the first time last Sunday morning, December 9th. It was a beautiful day and all the other churches closed up to worship with the Methodist to give the new pastor a warm, Christian welcome. Brother Perry had a great audience and preached a very tender, impressive sermon, which not only pleased the Methodists but all of the other churches.

At the evening hour Rev. S. E. Mercer, presiding elder, preached a sermon of real spiritual power to another packed house.

On Monday evening the first quarterly conference for the Weldon church was held. The stewards placed the pastor's salary at $3000. Mr. Wm. L. Knight presented the cause of the Superannuate Endowment Fund and the conference voted to accept $4000 for this most worthy cause. This is considerably above the minimum asked from this church.

On Tuesday, the 11th, at 10:30 the preachers, district stewards and charge lay leaders met for conference in the Methodist church. Of the twenty-three preachers in the district all were present except one. There were eighteen of the twenty-three district stewards present and a large majority of the charge lay leaders were also present.

The presiding elder had worked out a carefully planned program for the present conference year. This program incorporated the very heart of every interest of our church. After considering the paragraphs they were adopted one by one.

In this meeting Mr. W. T. Shaw presented the cause of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, after which the conference accepted the amount assigned to the district by a unanimous vote.

Mr. Wm. L. Knight, district lay leader, spoke on this and also the work of the Board of Lay Activities.

At 11:30 Rev. E. L. Hillman of Scotland Neck delivered a very excellent sermon on "Evangelism."

Rev. R. M. Courtney, Centenary secretary, was present and presented the Centenary cause in a most compelling way.

Miss Amma Graham, the capable district secretary of Woman's Missionary Work, followed with a splendid talk, committing the woman's organization to the fullest in completing the collection of the Centenary money.

There were other inspirational talks made on the Sunday school work and Epworth League work. The entire body of preachers and laymen were the guests of the Weldon church at dinner at the Terminal Hotel.

The Weldon district has a very fine body of preachers and is exceedingly fortunate in the large number of representative laymen that are scattered throughout the district. The meeting was a fine, enthusiastic one and everything indicates that the district is going to have another year of great progress.

Mrs. E. L. Hayward,

So it is the prospect, the hope, of the eternal life that make the best safety of this life. The man who is anticipating heaven is armed not only against the troubles, but the sins of earth. The sinfulness of life is bound up everywhere with the littleness, the temporariness of life.—Philips Brooks.

IN MEMORIAM

TEAGUE—Laura R. Teague was born August 5, 1869, departed this life November 14, 1923, aged 54 years, three months and nine days. Sister Teague's husband preceded her to the great beyond December 4, 1920. She gave her heart to God early in life and joined Sharon M. E. church, of which she remained a member until death. Just before her death she spoke several times of being ready to go. She was patient in suffering and died a triumphant death.

J. W. Vestal, P. C.

CLINE—Amanda Elizabeth Cline was born June 8, 1861, died November 5, 1923. She had been a member of Brookstown M. E. Church, South, for many years. Sister Cline leaves a husband, Peter Cline, and four children as follows: E. O., C. C. and Grover Cline, and Miss Stella Cline. Vienna Consolidated School gave a beautiful floral offering at the funeral. Sister Cline died with a living faith in Christ.

J. W. Vestal, P. C.

WINSTEAD—Released in his sixty-second year from prolonged suffering patiently borne, James D. Winstead's spirit went into the eternal beyond. His career was one of usefulness, he being a devotedly thoughtful husband, a sacrificial father, and a worthy citizen who rendered conspicuous and faithful public service to his community and county. Although the death of Brother Winstead was not unlooked for, its actual realization left his relatives and a great company of friends with aching hearts which miss him sorely.

BLAIR—Frances Hill Blair, daughter of the late John and Abigail Blair, was born June 6, 1943. On January 31, 1861, she was united in marriage to the late Wm. F. Deal. To this union were born eleven children. She professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist church early in girlhood, and remained a faithful member until her death. She departed this life October 18, 1923, at the ripe old age of eighty years, four months and twelve days. She was tenderly laid to rest at Ebenezer church by loving friends. The funeral was conducted by her pastor. J. M. Barber.

POINDEXTER — Adelia Rebecca Poindexter, wife of Benjamin J. Poindexter was born May 11, 1859. She passed from this life November 11, 1923, aged 64 years and six months.

Mr. and Mrs. Poindexter were married September 27, 1887. To this union there was born five children, four daughters and one son—Mrs. W. F. Hauser, Lewisville, N. C., Hazel, Lula, Stella and Doub Poindexter of Winston-Salem, N. C., Route 2.

Sister Poindexter was converted and joined Doub's church in the year 1876. Later in life she transferred her membership to Union church on the Lewisville charge, where she remained a member until death. She was a sweet spirited Christian mother.

PATTON—Rev. John Nelson Patton was born January 5, 1880, and died November 5, 1923, age forty-three years and ten months. At the age of fourteen he professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist church. He preached the gospel faithfully for nineteen years. On July 23, 1905, he was married to Miss Bertha Hahn. To them were born five children. He leaves a loving wife and five children and an aged father. He was a good preacher, a good husband and a good father. He died in the faith. "For him to live was Christ, but to die was gain." He was buried at Marvin church by his pastor, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. J. R. Walker. May God bless and comfort the bereaved family.

J. M. Berber, Pastor.

THOMAS—After a long and painful illness of several months Bro. B. Cova Thomas quietly and peacefully fell on sleep November 25, 1923. He was born in Lee county near Broadway February 2, 1874.

About fifteen years ago he married Miss Lillian Cox, who with several small children survive.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

For your own protection—

The peril of the road crossing has become a national problem with the multiplication of automobiles.

The Southern Railway System has eliminated 584 grade crossings, and is eliminating more every year, but 7,000 remain to be separated on this system alone. The total cost to complete the work is a stupendous sum—probably half as much as the cost to build the railroads.

Even if the money were available, and the public willing to pay the increased freight and passenger rates necessary to provide a fair return on it, many years would be required to do the work.

Protection from the peril for the present generation at least must be found in some other way. Trains cannot stop at every crossing if they are to be run at the sustained speed expected by the public and required to carry the commerce of the country. The train crosses a highway about every mile. The motorist encounters a railroad only occasionally.

It is necessary, therefore, for the automobile driver to stop in order to avoid risk. No one who did this was ever killed. In North Carolina, where the law now requires such a stop, the number of road crossing accidents on our lines has been reduced one-half.

Grade crossing accidents can be prevented if you will approach the zone of danger determined to exercise caution For Your Own Protection.

It is better business to save a life than to save a minute.

Personal Responsibility

(Reprinted from the Saturday Evening Post)

Final dependence for a reduction in the number of railroad grade-crossing disasters must be placed upon the individual's sense of responsibility. If when approaching and crossing a railroad at grade the traveler will think of that crossing as a zone of danger to him, and regard himself and those with him as in imminent danger until the crossing is completed, the chances of accidents will be automatically reduced to the minimum.

he SOUTHERN SERVES THE SOUTH

During the ministry of Rev. L. H. Joyner he joined Morris Chapel church March 28, 1909, and his body rests in that cemetery now.

Brother Thomas was the oldest son of a family of eleven children. He was a father to them after the death of his parents, and by his sober, moral life and business ability he did well for them. And he is the first of these to be called away.

Brother Thomas was a good man and lived a quiet consistent Christian life. He was true to the church and faithful to his Christian duties. May the Lord bless the sorrowing ones.

B. E. Stanfield.

HARRISON—Joseph R. Harrison was born May 16, 1853; married Sarah P. Coggins November 24, 1876. To this union were born eleven children, all of whom survive except Marvin, who preceded him to the glory land in infancy.

Some time in middle life he professed faith in Christ and joined the church at Siloam and later when he moved away he was not forgetful of his relation to the church and carried his church membership to Oak Grove, where it was more convenient to his new home.

If all were as obedient as he there would be no need of law. He had a very attractive disposition—gentleness and thoughtfulness of others made him especially loved by all who knew him.

God touched him on November 24, 1923, and now his mortal body sleeps but the spirit that people admire so much has gone back to God. The reward that is promised to every one who lived as he did.

The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. George Clay, assisted by Dr. C. C. Hubbard.

His age was 70 years, six months and eight days. A Neighbor.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

The woman's Bible class of Edenton Methodist church felt a distinct loss when the death angel called at the home of Mrs. M. H. Dixon of Norfolk August 21st, 1923, and bore the sweet spirit of her mother, Mrs. William M. Bond, up to the city not made with hands.

Whereas, as she was a consistent member of the Methodist church, Woman's Missionary Society and teacher of the woman's Bible class, a most faithful mother and wife, we miss her presence and cheerful greetings; therefore be it resolved:

First, That we as members of her class extend our heartfelt sympathy and love to her family in this dark hour of bereavement; we commend them to Him who is too wise to err and too good to be unkind.

Second, while we bow in humble submission to His divine will our hearts are lifted in gratitude for the beautiful life of this our friend and co-worker.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be given the recording secretary, a copy sent to the family and a copy submitted to the North Carolina Christian Advocate for publication.

Mrs. S. X. Stephenson,
Mrs. W. E. Coffield,
Mrs. W. T. Gordon.
