Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

YOUTHFULNESS IN OLD AGE.

We met a silverhaired minister the other day, pastor of a young church in a large city, on his way home from his vacation. He was deeply interested in the progress of his church and in the erection of a new church building to cost about fifty thousand dollars. He was erect, clear-eyed and vigorous. He spoke not one unkind word about any one, and no discouraged word about his work, nor did he fall into reminiscences, but looked out on the world and his fellows with friendly utterance and hopeful expressions. He might be called an old man, since he is nearly half a decade beyond three-score years and ten, but somehow it did not come into our mind to think of him as aged. It is, after all, a matter for the individual. Some men are old when they are comparatively young in the number of years they have lived. Some are industrious and sweet-spirited and hopeful, and remain young in heart and influence even when their years are many. God alone is changeless. With Him a thousand years are as one day. But a persistent and attractive youthfulness of spirit is one of the attainable elements in a life of vital godliness.

If you suffer with any curable disease that does not seem to be benefited by drugs; such as dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, liver or kidney diseases, or any ailment involving impure blood, you are cordially invited to accept the liberal offer made below. It is a mistake to assume that your case is incurable simply because remedies prepared by human skill have not seemed to benefit you. Put your faith in Nature, accept this offer and you will never have cause to regret it.

I believe this is the most wonderful Mineral Spring that has ever been discovered, for its waters have either restored or benefited tens of thousands who have accepted my offer. Match your faith in this Spring against my pocketbook, and if the water does not relieve your case I will make no charge for it. Clip this notice, sign your name, enclose the amount and let this wonderful water begin its restorative work in you as it has in thousands of others.

Shivar Spring,
Box 4-A, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

The Christian Herald is one of America's really great religious and social institutions. It is the best loved and most widely read inter denominational family magazine in the world. It has been the means of relieving more distress, feeding more hungry, clothing more naked than all other periodicals combined. It is dedicated to the service of humanity. It is at the forefront in the effort to make of every church a community center for social and religious uplift. It tells the important news of every denomination, but it is the organ of none. You and your family need the stimulus, the inspiration, the vision of world service the Christian Herald gives. A million new short term subscribers before 1920 is the Christian Herald's goal. Its ten weeks half price offer is made without profit to the Christian Herald. 25 cents in coin or stamps sent now (at the Christian Herald risk) is guaranteed to give you more and better literature than you ever could imagine possible. An Attractive House Is Easily Rented

At all times the artistic dwelling is in demand, whether large or small, expensive or inexpensive. An attractive, inexpensive house, however, is an exception. QUICKBILT Bungalows combine beauty and economy.

QUICKBILT

thoroughly covering the needs of the average renter; is especially built for renting purposes. It is well built, cozy, convenient, well lighted well ventilated, attractive both inside and out, and small, but cozy. It is inexpensive in construction, but will bring a good rent. A house too large is as much a drawback as a house too small. This one is just the right size. Bungalows are always in demand. QUICKBILT Bungalow No. 43 is neither cheap nor elaborate. It is especially designed to make the best investment from a rent standpoint.

In erecting this bungalow you will SAVE

WASTE. All the material is already prepared and the large waste piles of scrap lumber are thus eliminated. Every foot of lumber is used. You buy no surplus material.

TIME. Every piece of material has its own place. Everything is numbered and systematized. The instructions to the carpenter are complete and the order of erection is simple. No time is lost in looking for material. The time ordinarily required in preliminary cutting and trimming is saved. As a large portion of the house is built in panels, just that much time and cost is eliminated in construction.

LABOR. With the entire process of erection systematized and complete, the great building "Bugaboo"—preliminary preparation—eliminated, the labor in the erection of a QUICKBILT Bungalow is reduced to a minimum and therefore, a minor consideration. A carpenter of average speed and experience with two laborers can erect the house in 7 days. The ordinary house will take almost as many weeks.

MONEY. A saving in waste of material, time and labor, is a saving in money. With the QUICKBILT Bungalow the expense of erection is cut in half, but that is not all. You need not pay a contractor's fee. The erection is so simple and systematic that any carpenter of average intelligence can erect it with ease. Many owners build them themselves. You pay no architect's fee. The complete plans with all specifications and instructions are furnished FREE. And yet the plans are made after careful study by the best and most experienced of architects, with a view to eliminating waste and gaining the greatest possible convenience, economy and strength. The cost of the material is further reduced by the fact that you buy it from the mill, manufacturer and forest in one. Our complete plants cover the entire process, from the tree to the completed house. You pay no middle-man a profit. You buy direct from the source of material. The price is therefore rock bottom. In our complete plants in which hundreds of houses are built simultaneously every short cut to perfection is used and every waste avoided. As the houses are made in great quantities, you gain the advantage of the low cost of quantity production.

QUICKBILT Bungalow Dept.,
A. C. Tuxbury Lumber Co.,
Charleston, S. C.

A Safe, Profitable Investment.

One of the best investments obtainable is the attractive, serviceable, rentable house. That is, if the cost of the house is not too great. It is difficult to lower the cost without cheapening the house. It is possible, however, with the QUICKBILT Bungalow No. 43, for it is built for just that purpose. A house and lot costing $1,500.00 and renting for an average of $25 per month, is bringing 20 per cent. interest. Taxes, insurance, repairs, etc., will reduce it to about 16 per cent. Can you make a better investment? The rent incomes from an attractive QUICKBILT Bungalow at this time of high rents and universal demand for houses, will make it a profitable investment.

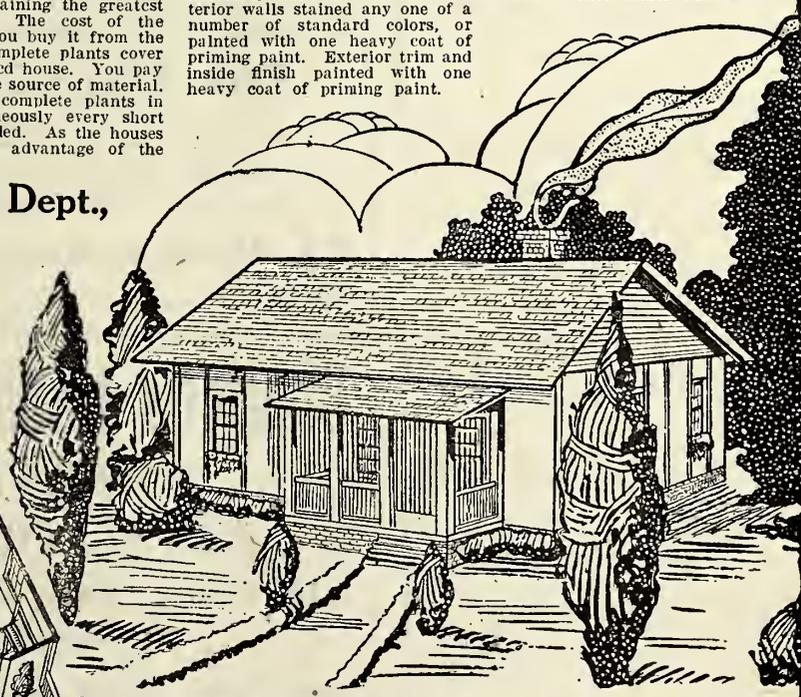

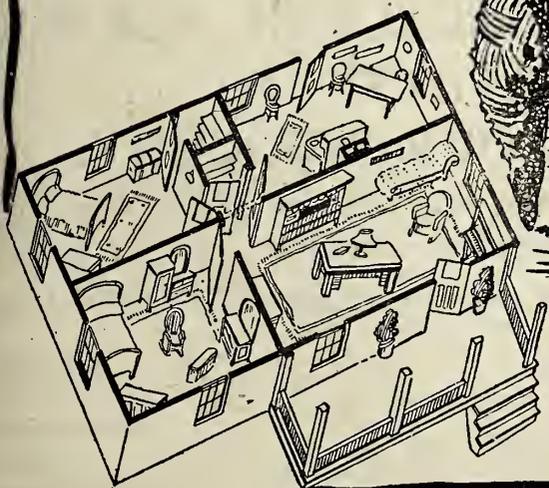

Build On Your Undeveloped Lot.

WRITE TO-DAY

for further information and a copy of our attractive illustrated book, "QUICKBILT Bungalows" No. C-9. It will explain all about No. 43 and many other attractive QUICKBILT Bungalows. It is FREE for the asking. Merely fill out the coupon below and mail it. Better still, if Bungalow No. 43 pleases you, tell us the color desired and instruct us to ship immediately.

Popular for its Convenience.

The house is shipped F. O. B. Charleston, complete with all necessary material except brick work. Size, over all, 21-ft. x 30-ft. There are two large bed rooms, one 12-ft. x 12-ft., and one 12-ft. x 9-ft., a spacious living room, 12-ft. x 18-ft., a kitchen, 15-ft. x 9-ft., closets and an attractive front porch, 16-ft. x 6-ft. The construction is largely of North Carolina Pine, the "Wood Universal," thoroughly kiln dried. Excellent flooring and ceiling. Walls built in panels of siding lined with heavy paper to insure warmth. Durable, fire-resisting, standard asphalt shingles, with slate green or red finish. Excellent doors and sash. All necessary nails and hardware furnished. House comes with exterior walls stained any one of a number of standard colors, or painted with one heavy coat of priming paint. Exterior trim and inside finish painted with one heavy coat of priming paint.

Little Nelly told little Anita what she terms a "little fib."

Anita—A fib is the same as a story, and a story is the same as a lie.

Nelly—No, it's not.

Anita—Yes, it is, because my father said so, and my father is a professor at the university.

Nelly—I don't care if he is. My father is an editor, and he knows more about lying than your father.—Blighty.

Steady Employers.

Smith—"Who are you working for now?"

Jones—"Same people—wife and five children."—The Passing Show.

"Any particular choice of cut?" asked the butcher.

"Yes," replied the customer, "I'd like a cut of about 50 per cent in price."—Boston Transcript.

Thoroughly Captured.

A man who was wanted by the police had been photographed in six different positions, and the pictures sent to the chief of police of a provincial town where it was thought likely the fugitive was in hiding. After the lapse of a few days the following reply reached headquarters:

"Sir: I duly received the portraits of the six miscreants whose capture is desired; I have arrested five of them, and the sixth is under observation and will be secured shortly."—Tit-Bits.

Kindness of Auntie.

Bix—"So your friend became wealthy through a sudden upward movement in oil. What oil stock did he buy?"

Dix—"He didn't buy any. A rich old aunt tried to start a fire with a can of it."—Boston Transcript.

Matrimonial Annoyances.

"Were you annoyed because I sharpened a pencil with your razor?"

"Twice," replied the husband.

"After I had given up trying to shave I tried to write with the pencil."—Washington Star.

The True Capitalist.

Who is the capitalist?
The man with stocks and bonds and gold,
And mansion on the avenue?
The man alone with lands and wealth untold—
Is he of all, the rich man true?

He is a capitalist,
E'en though he may in cottage dwell,
Whose heart to truth is close akin.
O, what indeed do paltry dollars spell,
Unless the life is right within!

He is a capitalist—
Who cultivates contentment sweet,
And loves his work whate'er it be,
Loves quiet glens where waters meet
And friends and flow'rs and melody!

He is a capitalist—
Who sees the rainbow and the light,
When shadows and the storms appear,
Hath vision far—a faith serene and bright —
And meets each task without a fear.

He is a capitalist—
Who hath his surplus well laid by
And doth invest his all for good;
Whose dividend returns are sure and high,
In bank of truth and brotherhood!

Our Huguenot Kin.

IT WAS our privilege when in New York City a few years ago to hear an address by Margaret D'Aaubigny, daughter of the famous Merle D'Aaubigny, author of the History of the Reformation. She said: "The population of France is something more than thirty-nine millions. Of these eight hundred thousand are Protestants, three millions are Roman Catholics, and the remaining thirty-six millions are Atheists. They hate the Church; they hate God; and they will not permit school books containing the name of God to be used in the public schools."

We have often thought that at the outbreak of the recent war, France was the most godless nation on the face of the earth. How did this happen? A prime cause, we are persuaded, was the war of attempted extermination waged for so many years against the Protestants. These were the salt that might have saved the kingdom from such religious and moral degradation.

The religion of the Huguenots consisted in the fear of God, and the keeping of His commandments. It exalted the ethical ideals of the New Testament, and endeavored to realize them in daily conduct. A Roman Catholic historian testifies of them that "they comported themselves as the pronounced enemies of luxury, of public festivities, and of the follies of the world, which were all too prevalent among the Catholics. In their societies and at their banquets one found neither music nor dancing, but discourses from the Bible, which lay upon the table, and spiritual songs, and especially the Psalms as soon as they were brought into rhyme. The women with their modest apparel and bearing seemed like sorrowing Eves or penitent Magdalenes, repeating in their lives the description which Tertullian gave of the women of his own age. The men appeared dead to the world, and filled with the Holy Spirit."

The religion of the Romish Church at that time consisted of a round of ceremonies, which, if one observed with due submission to Pope and priest, would ensure him a passport into heaven, no matter how depraved his heart and life. As an illustration, take the case of the Grand Monarch, Louis the XIV, the arch persecutor of the Huguenots. He was acclaimed the most Christian king, his piety celebrated by the pens of literary celebrities and by the tongues of pulpit orators. He was extolled in unmeasured terms by the Pope himself for his splendid services to the Church and promised by this vicegerent of Christ an "abundant recompense by the Divine Goodness." Yet everybody knew that the court of Louis differed little from the Turkish harem; that his example helped to convert other courts of Europe into high class brothels; and that his open profligacy sent its polluting influence down through all ranks of society.

The destruction and expulsion of the Huguenots was depriving the kingdom of the only effective restraint on the ever-widening and deepening currents of immorality. The time came when the great mass of thinking Frenchmen decided that as between the religion of the Church of Rome and no religion they preferred no religion. The anathemas and interdicts of the Papacy had lost their terrors, and hence they boldly proclaimed their hatred of the Church and of God.

The war of extermination was not successful. A remnant of Huguenots was left. These took root downward and bore fruit upward. They have come up out of great tribulation, and their sorrows are not yet at an end. The desolations of the recent war no one can adequately describe. More than a million of France's choicest sons are beneath the sod, every home was darkened, every heart anguish-smitten. None suffered more than the members of this old martyr church. Of the 900 pastors, half of them entered the war in 1914. Twenty-five of their pastors and evangelists and twenty of their theological students were killed. Seventy-five of their church buildings were partially or totally destroyed. Their property loss in schools, asylums and manses exceeds three million dollars. Their most prosperous congregations were in the war zone, in that region where many populous and flourishing cities were not merely destroyed but pulverized to dust.

Now these broken, bereaved and scattered flocks are gathering back, and wherever they can find buildings, however dilapidated, they are starting afresh the activities of church life. But they have no money, no fuel, no warm clothing, and it is feared that many yet must perish through exposure and disease.

Shall we not help them? We have been helping the destitute of France and Belgium without respect to creed, but since peace has come the old lines of cleavage have reappeared. Our Catholic fellow countrymen are helping their co-religionists in a praiseworthy and liberal manner. Shall we not respond to the crying needs of our nearest of kin? They, like ourselves, are the spiritual children of John Calvin. In the darkest hours of those intolerant times they poured out their blood in defense of truths most precious to us. Sure we must help to rebuild and repair their churches and manses, to pay their impoverished pastors, and enable them to give to France the Gospel in its purity, a message France so sorely needs, and for which her heart seems to be hungry.

"The Dead Line" Obliterated.

We hear much these days about the fatal "dead line," that imaginary and movable period in a preacher's life, when he becomes a "persona non grata" to the average congregation, and is laid aside as a mummy to be preserved for coming generations, by which to "point a moral, or adorn a tale."

The Church has far too many. Some are beyond the line by nature, some achieve it, while others have it thrust upon them—but whatever the reason, it is one of the tragedies of the ministry to see men of education and ability, who should be bearing fruit in old age, laid aside till death shall come.

Sometimes, as we intimated, the fault lies with the pulpit supply committee, and then again it lies with the man himself, who has frittered away his time and talents, and failed to measure up to what the Lord intended he should be.

It is a great comfort, however, amid these wrecks of ministerial life, to find at least one man who seems able to defy time, old age and the carping criticisms of some Church committees.

Down here in this Synod we have one such, of whom we are proud, and who never intends to cross that line. He will be 88 years old next month, and he has been preaching 57 years. He preaches in town and country. He is on many committees of the Synod, and he is always present, coming any distance through rain or shine. And now in order to keep fresh, he proposes to attend Dr. Campbell Morgan's lectures on "Preaching the Word," to be delivered at the Union Seminary in November.

Such a man can never grow old, and such a man is always in demand. May the Lord grant many more years of usefulness to "The Grand Old Man" of the Synod of North Carolina and of the Southern Church, Rev. Halbert Green Hill, D.D., of Maxton, N. C.

Dr. John H. Boyd Vindicated.

Several weeks ago we quoted from the "Presbyterian," of Philadelphia, certain extracts from Dr. Boyd's Church Bulletin and from his farewell sermon. The Presbyterian took them from the "Herald and Presbyter." These quotations had every appearance of being authentic, and as Dr. Boyd was at one time pastor of the Second Church of Charlotte, his swerving from the old truths, while a matter of pain, was at the same time a matter of deep interest to his many friends.

As we intimated in a previous issue, a friend of his called our attention to a blank denial on his part of any such views, and we thereupon very gladly made correction.

Unfortunately, such reports are hard to kill, and when once associated with a man's name, they display wonderful vitality. "Error, wounded," does not always writhe in chains, or "die among his worshippers," Bryant to the contrary notwithstanding.

Recently we have received a letter from Dr. Boyd with a printed statement concerning the charge. The statement is as follows:

"As to the words quoted as part of my farewell sermon in Portland, I never saw or heard them until in September. They are the words of a newspaper reporter. They contain no idea of mine preached at my farewell or at any time in my ministry. They express no idea of mine contained in the sermon I delivered. I utterly repudiate them in the sense which they convey when quoted. They set forth a conception of man's nature and need, the absolute opposite of all that I have taught in my lifelong ministry. The evidence of this will be found in a series of sermons printed and distributed by the thousands after their delivery from my Portland pulpit.

"As to the words concerning the Bible, they are my words. They are taken from a series of propositions, prepared for my congregation, at a time of controversy with 'Adventists' and 'Christian Scientists' who at that time were giving out wrong and impossible meanings to the Word. I said to my people: 'This is not the way to read and understand the Bible. Its language is human speech. Its words have a definite, fixed meaning. The books grew out of simple, natural circumstances, and hence are to be read like other books.' I stand by the words when they are explained and illustrated as I did in my original use of them."

The Mingling of Protestantism and Religion.

During the war, when the patriotic spirit was rampant, many a minister had to choose between Christ and Caesar, and in consequence many things patriotic were allowed to creep into the services of the Church that were against the conscientious convictions of the pastor.

It must be confessed, however, that there were far too many who were more than willing to mingle their patriotism with their religion, notwithstanding the deliverance of our Church Courts on the subject.

Now that the war is over and peace is supposed to have returned to our land, one would think that we could return to our old ways and take our religion without any mixing with other matters.

If we had been asked what denomination would be freer from such practices than any other, we would by all odds name the Episcopal Church, because whatever in their practices one may object to, he must commend them for their reverence for their church buildings and for their orderly services. It seems though that they too were swept off their feet by the patriotic wave and that they introduced "The Star-Spangled Banner" into their Church hymnal.

Bishop Cheshire, of this State, at the recent convention in Detroit, introduced resolutions excluding "The Star-Spangled Banner" from their Church hymnal.

This aroused a storm of indignation, and the author of the resolution was charged with lacking in loyalty. The doughty bishop, however, cleared himself of this charge by informing them that his son had spilt his blood in France.

He argued that a hymn in its essence was addressed to God, and that hymns addressed to a flag should have no place in the musical devotions of the Church.

The bishop was right, and though at our General Assembly we heard it sung as a part of worship, it grated upon our feelings and seemed as much out of place as the flag over the pulpit.

If the Lord were to return at the present time, He would find that Caesar had possession of many things that belonged to Him, while much of Caesar's property had been brought into His Church.

There are many who will not agree with these views, but they at least have age and ancient custom on their side.

The Need of Obedience to Law.

While the world was at war a common danger united all people, and all were ready to deny self in order to advance the interest of the whole.

Now that peace has come, that unity has disappeared, and we see each nation seeking its own gain and each individual thinking only of self.

We of the United States thought that this country would never be brought face to face with the conditions prevailing in Russia, yet if we read the signs of the times aright, we are fast drifting into a state of anarchy. Thousands of men, banded together by a common desire for more money, have given notice that this entire country must suffer unless we can force their employers to grant their demands, and then when there is some suggestion that Congress may make a law against strikes, these patriotic leaders of the strikers quietly announce that they will defy the law.

Thousands of coal miners propose to stop the production of coal on November 1, without regard to the thousands of women and children who have had nothing to do with the struggle between capital and labor.

The President, in view of this awful calamity, proposes to use the laws of the land as far as possible to avert it, whereupon the leader of these men also quietly gives notice that, law or no law, they will do as they plan.

We have nothing to do with the merits of this controversy. The miners may be poorly paid, and in view of their hard life, no doubt they are, and the operators may be amassing riches at their expense. All this may be true, yet none of these facts can make defiance of law a light thing.

Law is the safeguard of our homes, and when the time comes that men defy the law, then comes the end of all liberty and security of homes.

Paul in his Letter to the Romans laid down the true principles of law. Law is an expression of God's will, so that whosoever resists the law resists God.

We need among all classes more reverence for law in the abstract. We need to remember that law, whether good or bad, as long as it is law, requires obedience.

If we ask for the cause of this spirit of lawlessness, we shall find it in the homes of our land, where obedience has become a lost art. Sin itself is the main cause, for the Good Book teaches that sin is lawlessness.

Missionary Scholarships

(Established by the Mary Baldwin Alumnae Association).

By Lizzie Hanger Chalenor, President of Alumnae Ass'n.

TWENTY-SIX years ago, in the parlors of the Augusta Female Seminary, Staunton, Va., a band of devoted women met to organize an alumnae association, which would embrace all "old girls," daughters of the seminary, who remained firm and loyal friends of their alma mater. That little band of women formed the nucleus of what is now an organization, composed of more than 500 members, with new names being added to the list every year.

Since that time, by act of the Legislature of Virginia in 1896, the name of Augusta Female Seminary was changed to Mary Baldwin Seminary, and in 1901 a beautiful memorial window, the gift of the alumnae association, was unveiled in the chapel, both of which acts were tributes to the revered founder of the school, Miss Mary Julia Baldwin.

Later a scholarship was established for day pupils, which is now self-supporting.

May 23, 1919, the annual meeting of the alumnae association was held in the "girls' parlor" of the seminary. It was a large and enthusiastic meeting, and, when a suggestion was made that a scholarship for daughters of missionaries be maintained, the motion was made and carried without a dissenting voice, and when, during the discussion, a motion was made that only Mary Baldwin girls should contribute to this cause, it was enthusiastically passed.

This scholarship means that the daughter (we hope to say daughters later on) of a missionary may have the opportunity of studying at the Mary Baldwin Seminary with her full tuition, including music and two languages and board, paid.

To all missionaries the education of their children is a matter of grave concern, and, to many, a keen anxiety. With the increased cost of living in the foreign field, inadequate salaries and soaring school and college expenses, many promising and ambitious daughters of missionaries are denied an education in our standard schools, where their record has been, without an exception, excellent. Equipped with a thorough English course, imbued with the missionary spirit, accustomed to the natives and climate, and adepts in the language, they (90 per cent according to statistics) return to the foreign field to take up their life-work, not handicapped or harassed in any way—hence, to educate these fine, noble girls, separated from all family ties by thousands of miles, is a splendid missionary investment, and it is the aim of the alumnae association to extend this generous privilege to as many girls as possible, with the consent and approval always of the board of trustees, through whose liberality a concession of 50 per cent to daughters of missionaries has been granted. To enable a girl to go comfortably and modestly through a school term, the alumnae association deems the sum of $450 necessary. To accomplish this end, every Mary Baldwin girl must respond to the call for funds, knowing that even small contributions will be gratefully received and will help on to our goal.

The committee appointed to take charge of the plans for the scholarship has, as its chairman, Miss Elizabeth Bell, Staunton, Va., who will receive any donations and respond to any requests for further details. In order to arrange for the matriculation of one or more girls in 1920-21, it is imperative that the treasurer should have on hand, as early as possible, a sum sufficiently large to insure early enrollment, as the waiting list of the school is large, and delay may forfeit the opportunity.

Those girls, who had the privilege and blessing of knowing Miss Baldwin, whose gentle but firm discipline, beautiful love and friendship for her girls, and devotion to her religion and church, made her beloved and admired by all, will feel that the light of her departed spirit will cast a halo over the missionary scholarship, a memorial so in keeping with her own ideals—for all of us recall the proud and tender interest she took in her missionary girls, who received through her generosity a thorough classical education.

Dr. Egbert Smith, of the Executive Foreign Mission Committee, heartily endorses the plan of the scholarship, and considers it a most helpful and wise provision toward missionary work.

Mary Baldwin girls, wherever you are, when you learn of this opportunity to aid a noble mission cause, pass the word along to others and let them know it is their privilege to contribute, whether members of the association or not; make glad some mother in the mission field, who is struggling to attain means to educate her children in this, her native country, and help to make proud the alumnae association which is giving the needed opportunity, and aims to bring new fresh laurels each year to its beloved alma mater.

The Nacoochee Snowball.

By Annæ Creelman.

It began to take shape on a warm September day. This of course is a rather unusual phenomenon, but Nacoochee Institute does things in an unusual way.

It was opening day at the institute, our hearts were made glad as we watched the students gather in the chapel—such a promising group of boys and girls. We had a full attendance; they were there from the six-footer in the high school to the little five-year-old tot in the primary grade.

There was also present a goodly number of friends in the neighborhood, with a sprinkling of summer visitors.

"Preparedness" was the well-chosen topic of the inspiring address. This was followed by a vigorous and humorous discussion of the needs of the school. The need of a new boys' dormitory was emphasized. Many boys had to be refused admission to our school on account of lack of space. But our friend, the speaker, stressed most of all our need of a new school building. He could see, no doubt like the rest of us, that the present cheap structure with its small class rooms, narrow halls and stairways does not suggest Parnasian heights or Pierian springs or anything associated with mental culture or aesthetic taste.

Before we hardly knew what was happening, the school had pledged itself to raise $250 per year for five years and our friend who had just spoken in so forceful a manner of the need of more class room promptly pledged $2,500 to help build it. Some snowball to be set a-going in three minutes!

The first actual payment for the new building has come in from a friend in the neighborhood. The students, teachers and other workers have contributed toward the first deposit so now we have a bank account—not mentioning the size of it.

One of our dormitories is being fitted up as a hospital. We believe in "preparedness," so we mean to be ready—come health, come "flu."

We were happy to have a visit from Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Miller at the opening of school. Both of these consecrated young people have been associated with Nacoochee in the past, Mr Miller being one of our graduates, and his wife, formerly Miss Merle Little, his friend from childhood, gave three years of very efficient service as teacher at Nacoochee, so the institute will have a vital interest in their work in the Congo region.

What Kind of Union?

By Thornton Whaling, D.D.

Dr. Thornton Whaling, of the Columbia Seminary, and Dr. Gibson, editor of the Presbyterian Banner, Pittsburgh, Pa., have been conducting a very quiet kind of discussion on Federal Union. As by this means Dr. Whaling's views are given to the Northern readers, we think it only fair that we give Dr. Gibson's views to our Southern readers. We give both Dr. Whaling's and Dr. Gibson's articles this week.

THE Presbyterian Banner of September 18 has just come into my hands. I am sorry to see that the editor declines to discuss the question as to the comparative merits of federal versus organic union. The grounds on which he does this is that organic union is the real question at issue and to discuss any other question would lead us far afield and not throw any light on this question. Of course this is equivalent to saying that the U. S. A. Church takes the position that all of the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches, if they wish union, must come to the U. S. A. Church. I will not characterize the statesmanship and policy of this attitude, but is it likely that 10 or 12 churches, with a million or more members, would consent to this form of ecclesiastical suicide, to which they are so lovingly invited?

As to organic union, I will append some statements made by a committee of which I was a member, but written by another hand, but with which I am in hearty sympathy:

That we may clear away all mists and, if possible, all misunderstandings, we will state frankly and fully the objections to union we find in the minds of many in our church, influencing them so strongly as to mean a rupture in our church if union should now be insisted upon.

First. There is a feeling on the part of many that there are doctrinal differences between the two churches. This does not mean that your ministers are regarded as doctrinally unsound, for we are prepared to accept the statement that a large proportion of your ministry is sound. Nor does it mean that we assert that all our ministers are sound in the faith; for we fear this is not the case. This does not mean that many among us charge that your revision has lowered the Calvinism of your confession; though there are those even in your own church who claim that the revision has revised unconditional election, limited atonement and irresistible grace.

It rather means that they feel that there is a difference in the attitude of the two churches toward cases of unsoundness in doctrine. We refer:

(1) To the fact that it is alleged that in your church professors who do not themselves believe in the plenary inspiration of the Scriptures or in the vicarious atonement of Christ, are permitted to teach in your theological seminaries and to propagate these errors there.

(2) To the fact that it is reported that candidates for the ministry are licensed and ordained by some of your Presbyteries who declare that they have not formed definite opinion as to the inspiration of the Scriptures or as to the virgin birth, the miracles or the physical and literal resurrection of Jesus. Being admitted to the ministry with such questions left unsettled, the way is open for the subsequent adoption by these men of a positive denial of these doctrines without challenge.

(3) To the fact that we regard these doctrines mentioned above, as essential to the Christian faith, while many in your church do not seem to so regard them. Our view of that "system of doctrine" to which a minister is required to subscribe at ordination is that it contains all that is essential to Christianity plus all that is essential to Calvinism.

That a man may be permitted to preach the Gospel in the name of the Presbyterian Church merely because he holds to those things which distinguish Calvinism from other evangelical creeds, while he may deny what Calvinism in common with all other evangelical creeds holds to be essential to Christianity, is a position to which our church would not be willing to commit itself, either directly or constructively.

Second. There is a feeling with many that our differences as to the handling of the negro question, whether from a social or religious point of view, are fundamental.

We are all agreed as to the need and desire of bringing the colored race to a saving knowledge of God's truth, and securing for it the best practicable development of Christian life and effort. But all thoughtful men feel deeply the difficulties lying in the way. With you the social side of the problem has largely an academic interest, for they are in the main very far from you. With us it is an all-important matter, for they are very near us.

We have determined as a matter of racial preservation that there shall be no social intermingling. We desire to aid in every way the intellectual, moral, social and religious development of the race. But that aid must stop at the line of social intermingling.

Our church has adopted definitely the policy of entire independence for the colored people in their church organization, coupled with the largest measure of aid, both spiritual and material. Your church, on the other hand, has pronounced itself as not in favor of setting off its colored members into a separate, independent organization. (See Minutes of the Northern Assembly).

Because your practical relation, due to geographical position, is different from ours; because your point of view and ours we fear are different; because your ecclesiastical policy in dealing with the negro and ours are different; many feel that the differences are fundamental, and fearing that union would mean discord, are opposed to it.

Third. There are many of our strongest men who feel that we hold essentially different views as to the spirituality of the church. They feel that we look upon the relation of the church to the state differently from the way in which you look on that relation. And that your understanding of what makes a deliverance of a church court a political deliverance is different from ours.

They recognize that our official standard is the same. That the rule that governs us both is: "Synods and councils are to handle and conclude nothing but that which is ecclesiastical, and are not to intermeddle with civil affairs which concern the commonwealth unless by way of humble petition in cases extraordinary." But they do not feel that we interpret it alike. Our church interprets it to mean this:

The church is a spiritual body, seeking spiritual ends, and using spiritual means to accomplish them. Her allegiance is given to Christ, her Spiritual head. She has no lawful union with any civil government, has no commission to endorse any, nor to support any, nor to destroy any, but is enjoined to teach submission to such as God may set up wherever Christian people live. That the right of humble petition does not give us the right nor warrant to make political deliverances; but is only intended for those extraordinary cases in which the liberties or privileges of the church are threatened or invaded. And that if any deliverances have been made by any of our own church courts that conflict with this interpretation, such deliverances are wrong.

They feel that your church has interpreted this section of the confession differently, in a continuous series of deliverances and actions, beginning with the Spring Resolutions that caused our separate existence as a church and continuing down to your last Assembly's deliverances on woman suffrage.

Now if our interpretation of our confession is right, yours is wrong. If your interpretation is right, ours is wrong. But the point at issue is that there is a difference in our interpretations. A difference it is that exists down to this hour. And many feel that this difference is a great barrier against the organic union of our two churches.

Organic Union of Presbyterian Churches U. S. A. and U. S.

IN OUR discussion of this subject we do not speak as the authorized representatives of the Northern Church, but we believe that what we shall say will be approved by a great majority of that church. It will be our aim, and we believe that it will be Dr. Whaling's aim, to aid the two churches in deciding what would be best for the Master's kingdom at this time. If organic union would interfere with efficiency in the Master's work, we would not have union, and, we are confident that if Dr. Whaling and the members of the Southern Church were convinced that organic union would increase efficiency they would not oppose it.

First of all, we answer one objection that has been presented, viz., that organic union would involve an approval by the Southern Church of all the acts of the Northern Church since 1861, and an approval by the Northern Church of all that the Southern Church did during the same period. Is this objection based on fact? Is it true?

If it refers to changes in our Standards, Confession of Faith and Book of Government, it is true; but, if it refers to deliverances of General Assemblies it certainly is not true. One General Assembly may reverse the action of preceding Assemblies. For example, the Assembly of 1845, by an overwhelming majority, took action, as to the validity of Roman Catholic baptism, that was reversed by an overwhelming majority of the next Assembly. Again, when the Old and New School churches were united, in 1869, it was only necessary to consider difference in the standards of the churches at that time without regard to Assembly differences during the period of separation. The same is true now. If the Northern and Southern Churches unite, only differences in standards would need adjustment, and we do not know of any essential differences. Let us now look at some reasons for organic union.

The cause of separation was the Civil war, growing out of the institution of slavery and an attempt to establish a Southern Confederacy. The Civil war resulted in the overthrow of slavery and the effort to establish a Southern Confederacy, and every state, North and South, is now thoroughly loyal to and a constituent part of the United States. The cause or causes of division of the Presbyterian Church have entirely and forever disappeared. Soldiers who fought for the Confederacy are as loyal to the government, the flag and civil institutions of the United States today as the soldiers who fought to sustain the government in the dark days of 1861-1865. We are assured of this, both by their words and their acts; we could give most convincing proof if it were necessary, but it is not necessary to prove what all admit.

Now, if old soldiers of the two armies, who faced each other on many bloody battlefields, can come together, and feel that they are sincere friends, comrades and fellow-citizens, why should not Presbyterians, who have one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and one Confession of Faith, come together in organic union to establish Christ's kingdom? The real cause of separation has disappeared, and there is no possibility that it will ever return, why, then, should Christians, who are one in all the essentials of Christian doctrine, and live in the same communities, stand aloof from each other and have different church organizations?

Until some good reason is given for maintaining separate organizations, we feel that nothing more need be said. The conclusion is so evident that the simple facts are the most potent argument. We do not believe that it would be well for all Christians to form one great organization and lose sight of distinctive doctrines. When there is very marked difference in doctrinal statement, in church polity or in forms of worship, friction may be avoided and efficiency increased by having separate organizations, but the two churches, North and South, are one in all these and should be one organization.

But some one may say, I accept all that has been said about the essential unity of the two churches, and admit that the real cause of separation has gone forever; but, now that they are separate organizations, is it necessary to have organic union in order to have the highest degree of efficiency? Would not some kind of federal relation be all that is needed?

In reply to this possible claim, we say that efficiency consists in securing the best results with the least expense. If we were to use financial terms, we would say that the man who accomplishes as much with $500 as another does with $1,000 is the more efficient of the two. In building up the Master's kingdom we should make the best possible use of the talents with which we are entrusted. There is so much need of men and means, that we should be economical in the use of men and means, we should not have two men doing the work that one can do as well, or spend two dollars where only one is needed. Now apply this principle where there are two or more churches in the locality when only one is needed and where two ministers are preaching precisely the same doctrines in the same way. To avoid this, any scheme of federal union is inadequate and complicated, while organic union would ordinarily secure the desired result without friction.

Without going into the application of this principle at length, we know one particular town in Mississippi, of about 5,000 inhabitants, where there are 4 Presbyterian churches, one Southern, one Northern, one Cumberland, and one colored. When we were there, the pastor of the Southern Presbyterian Church was preaching for the colored Presbyterians in their church Sabbath afternoons. This was the one redeeming mark of Christian economy and efficiency. No one who studies the situation will be in doubt as to increased efficiency through cordial organic union. In the Mississippi town one minister could have done the work that three were doing, and he could have had better support if there had been only one church organization. Two men would have been available for work elsewhere, and the church would have been able to give more to home and foreign missions.—Editorial in Presbyterian Banner.

The Baker Amendment.

It is assumed to be well known by the people of our Church at large that the New Orleans Assembly authorized the appointment of an ad-interim committee to confer with committees of other churches "of like faith and order" on the general subject of closer relations. It may not be so well known that in taking this action the following amendment, introduced by Judge Rhodes S. Baker, of Dallas, was made a part of the Assembly's action, the amendment being adopted by a unanimous vote:

"In case the discussions of closer relations between this church and any other church shall contemplate organic union, the attention of the ad-interim committee is directed to past deliverances and reports of this Assembly touching such matter, and it is advised that the Assembly and the Church would view with uneasiness any structure of union which failed to take into account and safeguard in the united church the historic convictions and positions of this Church with respect to sound doctrine, just and effective discipline, the plenary inspiration and inerrancy of the Scriptures, the vicarious atonement, the spiritual mission of the Church and its obligations to abstain from interference in matters purely of civil or political concern, its position as to its negro constituency in the South, and other matters of like interest and importance."

Thus it will appear that the ad-interim committee is directed to give attention to the numerous deliverances of former Assemblies on the subject, and to safeguard historic convictions and positions of this Church on at least five great principles that are vital to the purity and peace and the spiritual security and growth of the Church. With the Baker amendment regarding these fundamentals of our faith before the people, they may follow with intelligent interest the course of our ad-interim committee in disposing of the question of organic union. Home Missions in West Hanover Presbytery-- New Buildings

SINCE the last report to Synod West Hanover Presbytery has purchased and built six new buildings for our home mission work, and we have raised almost enough money for the erection of three other buildings soon to be built for manses. The new church has been completed at Monroe; a home for the superintendent has been purchased and well located in the center of Charlottesville; manses have been purchased at Orange, Louisa, Cumberland and Crozet; and the money has been provided for new manses soon to be built at Elon Church, in Amherst county; Rockfish Church, in Nelson county, and at Olivet Church, in Albemarle county. These buildings all rank with the best buildings in the respective communities in which they are located.

The sum total cost of the above buildings was $44,700, and of this amount $38,300 has been paid or is ready in hand, leaving a balance due of $6,400 to be carried as a debt on several of the buildings by the communities in which they are located.

This great amount of money could not have been raised, and this constructive work could not have been accomplished but for the generosity of Mr. Paul G. McIntire, who has given or promised nearly $15,000 for the above buildings, besides other gifts to other home mission causes not in buildings.

Division of Pastorates.

1. Amherst county, consisting a year ago of five churches and four mission points and one pastor, has now two live active pastors for the same field and a new manse is being erected for the new pastor.

2. Center Church, at Cumberland Court House, and Cartersville Church, have just been cut off the group of four churches served by Rev. P. F. Jones, and a new manse has been purchased at Cumberland for this new field, and a new pastor is being sought.

3. The group of Olivet, Crozet and Lebanon, in Albemarle county, has just been divided into two fields, and two manses will soon be available, one for each new group, and two new pastors are needed at once for these promising fields. Rev. R. T. Wallace has just left this work, having been called to Alabama.

4. The Coveseville field, also in Albemarle county, and a corner of Nelson county, is ready for division, and this will be done as soon as a new pastor and a new manse can be provided.

Automobiles.

Since the last report to Synod we have purchased and paid for three automobiles for our home mission workers. We now own five Ford cars, which belong to the work and not to the workers; and eight or ten of our other pastors and workers own their own automobiles, thus making the work more efficient and less laborious.

Summer Workers.

In order to help overtake the great task of the home mission work within our bounds, we employed some 12 or 13 summer workers from the Seminary, and Training School, and Hampden-Sidney College, to help us four or five months this summer. These workers were most active and vigorous, and occupied 19 different mission points, organizing and reorganizing five Sunday Schools. Under their efforts there were about 150 additions to the churches by profession. The cost of this work was about $2,000, but every dollar of it was raised outside and over and above the regular home mission funds. The experiment proved to be a fine investment, much good was accomplished, and we shall try it again.

Evangelistic.

Since the last spring meeting of Presbytery, West Hanover has been engaged in a serious, well-directed campaign of Presbyterian Evangelism, whose avowed purpose has been to enlist every church in the Presbytery in a definite, intensive effort to reach the unsaved. Thus far this summer and fall we have held in our bounds 37 meetings, and there have been about 500 conversions and about 375 additions to the Presbyterian Church. This is three times as many as we received on profession the whole of last year. This evangelistic campaign is still going on, and we are hoping and praying for 500 additions to our church this year.

So vital has been this part of our home mission work in our bounds that Presbytery at the fall meeting changed the name of the home mission committee to "the Committee on Home Missions, Sunday School Work, and Evangelism."

Catechetical Quizzes and Contests

By Rev. E. C. Murray, D.D.

Three months ago we converted our prayer meeting at St. Pauls, N. C., into a quiz-class in the Shorter Catechism. The pastor began this with much trepidation, fearing the speedy disintegration of his small congregation. But the attendance immediately was almost doubled, and throughout the summer has continued from 40 to 60, of all ages, and a goodly number of men and boys. This is about 40 per cent of our town membership, this being largely a scattered country congregation. After a general recitation of both the questions and answers for the evening, the pastor would quiz, lecture and illustrate with chart and blackboard analyses.

The course being completed, a series of contests has been inaugurated, to be held once a month after prayer meeting. Captains have been elected, one man and one woman, who divided the volunteers into two companies, reds and blues, and each company will work for new members through out the six months. Thirty-five contestants have already been enrolled. Each side will be credited with five points for every one standing the test each time. One or more points will be deducted for errors not failures. The sixth contest will be on the whole catechism, and each side will be credited with 10 points for every successful contestant. The score will be posted every month, and the side scoring the most points in the whole contest will be the winner. A general presentation of Bibles will then be made to those reciting the catechism individually.

St. Pauls, N. C.

Growth of Southern Presbyterian Church.

One of the most interesting facts brought out by Dr. S. L. Morris in his new book, "Christianizing Christendom," is that for some years past our Church has led all the large denominations in net gain. He says the Bureau of Census at Washington, D. C., has issued its religious statistics for the 10-year period ending 1916, showing an increase in church membership of 19.9 per cent. He quotes Dr. Victor I. Masters, of the Southern Baptist Board of Home Missions, as saying that, while the Southern Baptists have gained 31 per cent and the Southern Methodists 28 per cent, the Southern Presbyterians have overtopped them both in the percentage growth, having made an increase of 34 per cent. Dr. Morris adds that "the official figures of the minutes of the General Assembly show even higher rate of increase than these government figures. In 1906 the official report showed a membership of 252,882, and in 1916, 348,223, which is a net gain of 37.7 per cent. So that the growth of our Church has not only been double that of the entire country, but has led all denominations in the United States."

These are facts which our people will be glad to know, and which they ought to consider with special thankfulness and care at this particular time.

W. W. M.

Let Us Teach the Truth

By Rev. Wm. P. McCorkle.

I HEARTILY endorse the recent editorial protest of the Standard against the falsifying of Scripture in our Sunday School temperance lessons, and desire, if our learned editors will kindly permit, to make some respectful suggestions to those who prepare and to those who teach such lessons.

1. When our General Assembly at Orlando directed that our temperance lessons be "standardized," we are confident that the fathers and brethren did not mean to order that our Sunday School helps should teach the falsehoods on that topic that are being disseminated by some other churches. Nevertheless, these lessons have notably in recent years, read as if prepared on the principle that "all's fair in love and war," and that in warring against intemperance and all that may even lead to intemperance, it is perfectly right to take liberties with the truth. As the instruction in these lessons is the official teaching of the church, the church has been made to suppress the truth as to many Bible statements concerning wine, and also to teach much that is palpably false.

2. The definitions in the lessons ought to be correct. Some time ago the word "intemperance" was defined in the Earnest Worker as "the drinking of intoxicating liquors." Can any good reason be assigned for such a false definition in a church publication? If true, the church thus asks us to count our Lord an intemperate man, or else to deny or revise the record of His first miracle and of His own words. "John the Baptist," He said, "came neither eating bread nor drinking wine . . . the Son of Man came eating and drinking, and ye say, Behold a man gluttonous and a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners." Shall we cut this out of the record, or undertake to teach that the only wine He drank was unfermented? Something is wrong with the theory which requires such boldness. Paul, too, must, if this definition be counted correct, stand charged with failure to teach proper "temperance" in Eph. 5:18, and much more so in I Cor. 11:21-22. More than that, the poor misguided man actually advised his son Timothy, a "water drinker," to practice "intemperance," even though he only suggested that he take "a little wine also" for his weak digestion.

3. The whole facts in the case of any Bible character or class referred to in the lessons should be given. Yet so persistent have been the efforts, one is tempted to believe, to suppress the facts in some cases that the elect are almost deceived. When our learned editor says, somewhat doubtfully, "Daniel may have been a total abstainer," Homer surely was nodding. In Daniel 10:2-3, the prophet tells of one interval when he allowed neither flesh nor wine to pass his lips for "three whole weeks," because he was in mourning.

In one notable case a "golden text" was made out of Lev. 10:9, the words "Do not drink wine or strong drink, thou nor thy sons with thee" being used, with the qualifying clauses following omitted. The impression was produced on millions that the Jewish priests were forbidden to use wine, when the law limited the prohibition to the periods of their employment in the actual service of the temple. As to the Nazarites, our young people are not told that there were few whose vow was for life—Samson and the Baptist being the only two mentioned in Scripture. As for the rest, when their vow was fulfilled, as in the case of Paul's at Cenchrea, and the appointed rites performed, the law said, "after that the Nazarite may drink wine." See Numbers, 6th chapter. In the case of the Rechabites our lessons invariably put the sole emphasis upon their abstinence from wine, whereas the prophet Jeremiah commends them for their obedience to their father, of which such abstinence was but one of the tokens. The test was made at that point because the temptation to drink wine was greater than that to sow seed, to plant vineyards, or buy or build houses. Yet Jonadab had forbidden all.

Sometimes teachers involve themselves in embarrassment by not teaching the truth. One whom I could name—not a Presbyterian—made a "standard" temperance talk to her class of boys, and after ringing the changes on "touch not, taste not, handle not," applying it to all alcoholic beverages, asked as usual, "Well, boys, what is the lesson for today?" One answered, "Christ made wine at Cana of Galilee." "I was so upset," she remarked to me, "that it took me a whole half hour to explain it." No wonder some labor was required.

4. Every Sunday School teacher and lesson writer ought to be provided with an unabridged Concordance—Cruden's being best for those who do not wish critical discussions—and also a good Bible dictionary. Smith, Hastings and Davis are all reliable. If all the passages in Cruden under the heads of wine, strong drink and drink offerings are examined, together with the corresponding articles in the Bible dictionary, one is not at all likely to be misled by "standard" errors.

5. "But will not this expose us to the charge of advising our classes to drink wine?" Not justly; and we need not be concerned to adopt a course that will effectually shield us from slander. "It is better to suffer wrong than to do wrong." Better far to be slandered than to conceal or misrepresent Bible facts. In advising abstinence, even after conceding all that may be said as to the attitude of Scripture toward wine drinking, we still have plenty of ground to stand on. We may emphasize the following points:

(1) The Scriptures do not advise the use of wine, save as it is required in the service of the sanctuary, as in the drink offering of the Mosaic law and the Lord's Supper of the New Testament, or when it is needed medically. And even in the latter there is a note of caution in Paul's advice to Timothy. Note the force of that word "little."

(2) Distillation was almost unknown in ancient days. The "strong drink" of the Bible was, all of it, fermented liquor, to which spices or drugs had been added to increase its strength. Besides, ancient wines were pure, and many of them of small alcohol content, while modern wines are many of them adulterated and drugged, or fortified with alcohol. And besides, there were no saloons then. Hence the wine industry of Palestine was never the fearful evil that the liquor traffic of the nineteenth century became. Experience and training had made the people for the most part cautious in their indulgence in wine, yet all the prophets thundered against drunkenness.

(3) Aside from the widespread demoralization caused by drink in the last two centuries, modern conditions have made it evident that "public policy" demanded the suppression of the traffic in intoxicating beverages. Swift travel, delicate and dangerous machinery, "live wires," and crowded streets, make it necessary that abstinence should be required of the thousands upon whom the public is dependent for safety in travel and success in business. What is required of multitudes becomes a wise expedient for the rest of us. Paul lays down a broad principle of action when he says: "All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not expedient."

Co-Workers With God.

By Susan Coolidge.

The day is long, and the day is hard,
We are tired of the march and of keeping guard;
Tired of the sense of a fight to be won,
Of days to live through, and of work to be done;
Tired of ourselves, and of being alone;
Yet all the while, did we only see,
We walk in the Lord's own company.
We fight, but 'tis He who nerves our arm;
He turns the arrows that else might harm,
And out of the storm He brings a calm;
And the work that we count so hard to do,
He makes it easy, for He works too;
And the days that seem long to live are His,
A bit of His bright eternities;
And close to our need His helping is.

What Did It Mean?

THE action of the New Orleans Assembly on closer relations: What did it mean? Was it a repudiation of the acts of former Assemblies of our Church, as in Birmingham and Durant, for instance, declaring that it was not prepared to consider organic union? Was it a declaration by the New Orleans Assembly in favor of organic union, or looking that way? Was it a disapproval of the scheme or general idea of federation which was submitted to it by its ad-interim committee?

There are several ways of approaching the question and answering it. The best, decidedly, is a careful study of the words of the action itself. Another might be a hearing of the witnesses and an analysis of the votes by which the action was taken. Another is by the consideration of other acts of both the recent and former Assemblies.

Let us take the exact words of the Assembly's action. Not only did the chairman of the special committee disclaim advocacy of direct organic union, but very many opponents of organic union in the Church and advocates of federal union approved the adoption of the report which this special committee made. This report voiced the Assembly's judgment and wishes in the case. A careful reading of it will tell us precisely what the Assembly meant to say.

"After a very full and frank interchange of views, your committee has reached the conclusion that wide divergence of opinion exists as to what our Israel ought to do in such a time as this. The existence of these diverse currents of opinion and desire cannot be safely or wisely ignored. Something should be done to remove friction and prevent injury and waste.

"Five courses of action have been proposed, viz:

- "1. Complete organic union.
- "2. Organic union according to the so-called 'Synodical plan.'
- "3. Organic union on the basis of Provincial Assemblies, with one supreme national Assembly as the capstone of the system.
- "4. A federal body having only advisory powers, inspirational in its influences, serving as a kind of clearing house for the sentiments of fraternity and comradeship that dwell in the Presbyterian heart.
- "5. A federal union with clearly defined powers and responsibilities and which, at the same time, conserves the autonomy of the constituent churches in doctrine and discipline, as well as in all other matters of local interest, including the tenure of church property and other material interests.

"In view of all the facts brought to its attention, your committee favors some form of closer relations. Your committee, therefore, recommends:

"First. That the majority and minority reports of last year's ad-interim committee, with all other papers that have been in its hands, be referred to an ad-interim committee which, in conjunction with similar committees from one or more of our sister churches of like faith and order, shall consider the whole question of closer relations."

It will be seen at a glance that the recent Assembly did not turn down "federation" as proposed by the former ad-interim committee, but declared that the new committee should consider all forms of closer relations, "federation" included. The former committee had reported to the Assembly that it had found itself "limited by the action of the Durant Assembly to consideration of federal union with the other Presbyterian bodies," and had accordingly limited its negotiations to that subject. The New Orleans Assembly did not turn down this report on federation, but declared that the negotiations should embrace the whole subject of closer relations, including this form, and then referred this report of its former committee to the new committee for consideration along with all the papers in the case and for the study of all possible forms of closer relations. This was quite a different thing from declaring itself against federation. Under its appointment, and with the sanction of the Assembly, the new committee may come in next year, if after all its consideration of the whole subject it elects to do so, with a report recommending federation in the very terms suggested by the former committee when the latter adjudged itself as limited to the consideration of that one form of closer relations.

That this is the correct view of the Assembly's action appears further from the fact that the Assembly carefully provided for the immediate communication of its action to all the Presbyterian bodies, 11 in number besides itself. It did not limit its committee to negotiations with the Northern Church. By this action it lifted itself above the consideration of any one form of closer relations. The Assembly, in this communication, also expressly and formally states that the reports of its former ad-interim committee on federal union had been referred to the new committee.

Any interpretation of the Assembly's action which maintains that the Assembly rejected federation is unwarranted. It is opposed to all the facts of the case.

A Member of the Assembly.

An Orphanage for Georgia.

By Rev. I. S. McElroy.

There are some forward looking people in the Synod of Georgia who believe that the time has come when steps should be taken to establish an Orphans' Home within our bounds and under the care and direction of our own Synod. They claim that there now exists a need for such an institution and that need will be more keenly felt with the rapid increase in the population of our state and with a corresponding growth in our Church within the state. There has been more than one public expression of this conviction during recent years, the most notable being what is known as the Turner bequest. This was a provision in the will of Mrs. Sarah Turner, of Jefferson, Ga., leaving several thousand dollars in trust for a Presbyterian Orphanage to be located in or near Athens, Ga., provided the Synod of Georgia would add an equivalent amount to the amount of this bequest and with certain other conditions.

It was found not practical to comply with all of these conditions within the limited time designated, and the legacy went as provided in the will to the Thornwell Orphanage, the best institution of its kind in our Southland.

The Synod of Georgia relinquished all claim to any part of this legacy of Mrs. Turner's at its session in Dalton, November 16, 1916.

The most recent movement for a Presbyterian Orphans' Home in the State of Georgia comes in the form of an overture to the Synod from the First Presbyterian Church of Covington, Ga. This overture states that $1,000 has been left by a godly woman of Covington for the beginning of a fund to provide a Presbyterian Home for Orphans within our state. The Synod of Georgia, in session in Atlanta, January 29, 1919, referred this overture to "the Executive Committee of Education of the Synod of Georgia."

The committee finds that this bequest of $1,000 has been wisely invested and is bearing a reasonable interest and that there are no conditions in the will of the testatrix to embarrass the Synod in relation to this bequest. The committee concurred in the opinion that this overture from the First Presbyterian Church of Covington should be called to the attention of our people so that others who might be interested in this movement would know that they now have an opportunity to help it on its way to success. If the readers of this article are interested in this subject and will communicate with "the Executive Committee of Education of the Synod of Georgia," care of I. S. McElroy, Columbus, Ga., such communication will receive our most diligent attention. We are not asking to hear from any person—if there be such a person—who is unfriendly to this movement or to the further growth and development of Thornwell Orphanage. We want to hear from those who really believe that the Synod should encourage the establishment of such

News of the Week

The great event of the past week was the President declaring that the threatened coal miner strike is illegal and a blow at the safety of the nation. He warns them that the law will be enforced. The heads of the various brotherhoods on the other hand declare that they will pay no attention to the threat. Later on, Congress, without regard to parties, assured the Government that they would sustain him in any measures. A temporary injunction has been issued against the strike. Hearing on the injunction is set for November 8 before Federal Judge A. B. Anderson.

The Senate has completed the steel strike inquiry. They found that most of the striking element were men of foreign birth.

The friends of Wm. O. Jenkins, American consular agent at Pueblo, have raised $150,000 as a ransom, and he has been released by the Mexican bandits.

Senator Poindexter, of the State of Washington, who has made himself particularly obnoxious to the friends of the League of Nations, has announced his candidacy for the Presidency. He expects to tour the Southern States.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels in an address to the Methodist Conference at Greensboro, urged the application of Christian principles to the world's problems.

Knoxville, Tenn., has again been the scene of riots due to the strike.

King Albert, of Belgium, who has been touring the United States, has placed wreaths on the tombs of Roosevelt and Washington.

He also made brief addresses before the two Houses of Congress. He was cheered by the galleries.

The Council of State Federation of Woman's Clubs held its sessions in Gastonia. There were present many prominent women from all parts of the state.

The Senate of the United States promptly has overridden the President's veto, by passing the prohibition enforcement act with eight votes to spare, the vote being 62 to 20.

Upon being advised that the Senate had overridden the President's veto of the prohibition bill, the United Brewers'

Association announced tonight that a suit would be brought in the courts to test the constitutionality of the law. Its members will abide by the terms of the law, the announcement said, but the association has been advised by counsel that it is unconstitutional.

Porters on the passenger trains of the principal lines of the South have presented a petition to the Railroad administration for a general increase in wages of not less than 65 per cent. The porters claim in the petition that every class of trainmen except porters has been granted increases and that their wages of less than $75 a month is not enough for them to live on. The railroads affected are the Atlantic Coast Line, Seaboard Air Line, Chesapeake & Ohio, Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac and the Southern.

The Senate has killed the last surviving amendment to the Peace Treaty by a vote of 47 to 36.

Judge Boyd having asked for another judge for Western North Carolina District, the President has appointed Hon. E. Y. Webb.

Dr. W. S. Rankin, of Raleigh, was elected president of the American Bible Health Society.

The Government will probably fix the price of coal at a lower rate than that prevailing at present.

Representatives of the Railway Brotherhoods having asked the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee that hearing be re-opened on the anti-strike provision of the railroad bill recently reported to the Senate, it was unanimously refused.

The latest report on the condition of the cotton crop makes it 51.1 per cent.

The trial of the Charlotte policemen for shooting at the car barn riot is still progressing. The witnesses for the prosecution are still to be heard, and then the defence will have its turn.

The President's condition continues to improve, though his recovery will take time and will be necessarily slow. The report spread by his enemies that his brain was affected has been refuted by his vigorous letter on the coal strike. They have found that it is working with old-time vigor.

an institution to be located somewhere in Georgia. We want to have your reasons for this belief and your suggestions as to the best location and the best methods to be pursued for the success of the enterprise. Let us hear from you as soon as possible.

The Synod's Executive Committee of Education consists of I. S. McElroy, Chairman; D. W. Brannen, J. T. Brantley, E. L. Hill, J. S. Lyons, G. E. King, J. H. Patton, W. C. Vereen, J. Hart Sibley.

Evangelistic Notes.

By Rev. R. F. Kirkpatrick, D.D., Chairman Sub-Committee on Evangelism.

Rev. J. E. Thacker, D.D., opened his evangelistic campaign this fall at Millersburg, Ky., with fine results. He is now engaged in a meeting at Danville, Ky.

Rev. F. E. Fincher, D.D., has just concluded a very fruitful meeting at Central City, Ky., in which the whole town was deeply stirred. The congregations overflowed the Presbyterian Church, and it became necessary to transfer the meeting to the Methodist Church, which was also crowded to its capacity. There were 150 confessions of faith pledging church membership. Among other successful meetings held by Dr. Fincher during the past few months was one at Ballinger, Tex., resulting in 215 confessions of faith pledging church membership. A special tabernacle was built for this meeting, and on the two Sunday evenings there were more than 2,000 people present by actual count. Brother Fincher has just entered upon a splendid campaign in Northern and Central Mississippi, beginning at Holly Springs.

Rev. George Belk has been steadily engaged in evangelistic services for some months past with very gratifying results. His engagements are full until January 1, 1920.

Rev. J. McD. Lacy, after a very successful campaign among the churches of East Alabama Presbytery, followed by a few days of rest at home, has entered upon a brief campaign in West Hanover Presbytery.

Rev. R. M. Hall, D.D., has entered upon his duties as Regional Evangelist for the Synod of Texas and is now available for services. He may be addressed at 2909 Crawford street, Houston, Texas.

There has been a very gratifying response from every part of the church to the request sent out by the Department of Evangelism that our Presbyteries make plans for an aggressive campaign of evangelism during the Fall and Winter, and the indications are that the church is preparing to make a serious effort to attain the evangelistic goal of 50,000 additions on profession of faith by April 1, which was fixed by the Assembly's Committee on Systematic Benevolence and Stewardship as one of the objectives of the Presbyterian Progressive Campaign.

Topic for Sunday, November 16—Co-operation in Christian Service. John 17:20-23; 1 Cor. 3:5-10.

Just before Christ entered Gethsemane He uttered the greatest of His recorded prayers, and in this prayer He besought the Father that all His disciples might be one, even as He and His Father are one. We cannot be sure that we understand the full meaning of this prayer, but we know at least a part of it. Undoubtedly He prayed for oneness of spirit in all true confessors of His Name. It was His heart's desire that all of us should be uniformly filled with His spirit of love and goodness, and that each one of us should help all the rest to have this blessing. It is altogether debatable, and is being debated, whether He meant that in our generation all denominations and their boards and agencies should be merged into one. That great question we of the Christian Endeavor Society leave to be argued elsewhere. But we know that Christ wants us all to co-operate toward the end that each help the other and all the rest to be infilled with the one same spirit that was in Jesus.

And we know Christ meant we should be one in the purpose for which all Christians labor. That purpose is twofold. First, we must all be bent upon the glory of God our Father. During our little life here and through the endless age of a glorious eternity to come, all true Christians do and will bend their energies to this noble and ennobling end. The second part of the one grand purpose relates to the remainder of human history here on earth. As long as men shall live in the world Christians must uniformly be moved by the purpose of bringing every soul that is born to a saving knowledge of Christ the Savior. Whether all denominations shall work toward this in the same regiment, we shall not attempt to settle in the Christian Endeavor Society. But certainly all units and denominations of the army of the Lord must help the rest achieve the noble purpose that is before us.

Christian co-operation is being shown now by many of the great denominations in the campaign against heathendom. Much of the territory of the pagan world, has been divided into sections and allotted by common counsel to respective denominations. The Southern Presbyterians have been assigned areas that contain 32,000,000 souls as a task, and many of the denominations have agreed not to interfere. In several sections of the field there are great union seminaries, where several denominations are joining hands to teach the fundamentals of the true religion. All this shows a co-operative will in the churches at home, and everywhere rivalries and scrambling are giving place to mutual helpfulness. The time may never come when Western Christian creeds and agencies melt into one, but the happy day has dawned already for a thorough-going Christian co-operation among many of the churches.

Name some of the evils of today which Christians should all co-operate to destroy.

Name some of the heart qualities men must have in order to be good co-operators toward right ends.

What can a Christian Endeavorer do to co-operate with his pastor?

The Prayer Meeting

By Rev. C. D. Waller.

TOPIC FOR WEEK ENDING NOV. 9, 1919.
 THE EVERLASTING DIVINE KINDNESS.

Is. 54:7-10.

In our chapter the full redemption, which the Christ alone could effectuate, and which is pictured further in chapter LIII, is set forth.

The Bride and The City—under these figures the people of God are represented; but not with the licentiousness of conception and of practice common among the neighbors of Israel.

"But the prophets of Jehovah dared the heavier task of retaining the idea of religious marriage, and even the divine triumph of purifying and elevating it. It was indeed a new creation. Every physical suggestion was banished, and the relation was conceived as purely moral. Yet it was never refined to a mere form or abstraction. The prophets fearlessly expressed it in the warmest and most familiar terms of the life of man and woman."

Hosea and Ezekiel had used the marriage bond, but alas! They had to speak of the unfaithfulness of the wife: but with matchless delicacy and purity and warmth Isaiah speaks of winning the wife back again. The love of God to Isaiah is the holy of holies.

It is a mother's love—a husband's tender faithfulness and forgiveness. Marriage music is heard now and again as in we read his prophesies. Jehovah woos His people in wondrous tenderness and with gracious forgiveness.

"Be not afraid—for the shame of thy youth they shall forget, and the reproach of thy widowhood they shall not remember again. For thy Maker is thy husband, Jehovah of Hosts is his name." "For a small moment have I forsaken thee, but with great mercies will I gather thee. In overflowing wrath, I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer."

We are infinitely indebted to our prophet for these matchless representations of the ways of God and the Heart of God.

In everything—in hiding his face, in his wrath—God is faithful both to Himself and to his people. But it is only "for a moment;" for He cannot forget the covenant—the holy marriage bond.

The "Waters of Noah" were terrible. In spite of the warning of preachers, they came with fearful suddenness and pitiless destruction upon an unbelieving world. But "I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with them, nor rebuke them."

No such engulfing wrath as the patriarch saw shall overwhelm the people of God. The divine kindness is everlasting and it is assured to us by the sanction of an oath. "The mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall my covenant of peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee."

How comforting and delightful are these wonderful assurances! It is the language of the everlasting Christ. It is addressed to the church of every age. It is meant to rekindle her devotion, to drive away her darkness and despair, to reinforce her faithfulness, and to animate her repentance.

How opposite these burning words for a worldly church:

Peter's Great Confession.
Matthew 16:13-24.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."—Matt. 16:16.

AUTHORIZED VERSION

13 When Jesus came into the coasts of Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?

14 And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

15 He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?

16 And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

17 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

17 And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter; and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

19 And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

20 Then charged he his disciples, that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ.

21 From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day.

22 Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

23 But he turned, and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan; thou art an offence unto me; for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

24 Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

Jesus revealed to His disciples all truths that it was needful for them to know in order to publish His Gospel. It was essential for them to be fully convinced of His deity if they were to be His instruments in establishing a Divine kingdom upon earth. Hence He teaches them that He is the Son of God, equal with the Father, not only in plain words, but by miraculous deeds. But He also informs them that He is the suffering Messiah and that He must be humiliated, suffer and die in order to accomplish a Divine scheme of redemption for man. The revelation of Deity is given before that of vicarious suffering that their faith in Him may not fail when He becomes a cross-bearer. The teachings of our lessons we will contemplate under these divisions: Opinions as to Christ, Peter's Avowed Faith in Him, The Foundation of the Church for Christ and His Disciples, The Path to Glory Leads by the Cross.

I. Opinions as to Christ.

Jesus asks His disciples, "Whom do men say that I am?" not for information, for "He knew all men and needed not that any should testify of man, for He knew what was in man." He proposes the question simply to introduce the topic and to lead up to their own avowal and faith in Him. His inquiry causes various opinions of His personality to be mentioned. Some said He was "John the Baptist, some Elijah, others that He was that prophet predicted by Moses or one of the prophets." As during His public ministry diverse opinions respecting Jesus prevailed, so it is now. Many deem Christ a good man who became the victim of human cruelty and malice. Some regard Jesus as a mere man, but the most excellent of the human race, and the sublimest teacher of mankind. Not a few consider Him as Immanuel, God manifest in the flesh, the Messiah of prophecy and promise and the only hope of lost humanity. This conviction must come to us, as to Peter, through the teachings of the Holy Ghost.

II. Peter's Avowed Faith in Jesus.

Peter declares, speaking for his fellows as well as himself, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." He affirms that Jesus had a Divine nature and that He was the Christ, or the Messiah, the anointed one appointed and fully qualified to be the Saviour of the world. This was the opinion of those most closely associated with Jesus and having the best opportunities for knowing His character, considering His conduct and witnessing His deeds. This creed of the apostles and Peter respecting Jesus is a very comprehensive one. It embraces all the doctrines and duties of the Inspired Scriptures Christ approved and sanctioned, all the teaching of Holy Writ in the Old Testament and the New. If He is a Divine Person, His claims are all true and He is the only Saviour of men, the predicted Redeemer from the fall of man and the Final Judge of quick and dead. All He taught and all He commanded, and all He threatened, and all He promised has the stamp of unfailing truth. Men who deem Him a mere man had better revise their creed, examine the foundation of their faith.

III. The Foundation of the Church.

The immutability and enduring character of the church depends upon its foundation. Christ says "Thou art Peter, which means a rock, and upon this rock will I build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." What did He designate by the "rock?" Was it Peter or his confession, the doctrine of Christ's Deity, or Himself as a Divine Person? Peter himself, who is rebuked in this very context as Satan, or an opposer of the Divine plan of salvation, would have been a very poor and unstable foundation for the church. His confession of Jesus' Deity was a foundation only so far as it directed attention to Christ's character as Redeemer. Christ Himself and His redeeming work constitutes the true foundation of the Christian church. This accords with many other Scriptures. By the mouth of Isaiah, Jehovah describing Messiah, declares: "Beholding I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious elect chief corner stone, a sure foundation, he that believeth shall not make haste." Peter himself in his First Epistle quotes this very passage and applies it to Christ. "The power of the keys" or of opening the doors of the church and of binding or loosing or of restraining or permitting, here given to Peter and elsewhere to other apostles, was the inspired authority given them by Christ to state His terms of discipleship and what He forbade or allowed. Jesus Himself is the only true Head of the church and its only abiding Foundation.

IV. For Christ and His Disciples the Path to Glory Leads by the Cross.

Jesus Himself taught His disciples, after they were convinced of His Deity, that He must as the substitute for His people satisfy the laws' claims by humiliation, suffering and death. The redeemed in glory according to John in Revelation give the highest praise to "The Lamb that was slain." As Christ was prepared for glory by suffering and the cross, so His followers oftentimes have to be humbled by affliction and cross-bearing is one of the terms of discipleship. "Perfect through suffering" seems to be the law of God's Kingdom of grace, and makes meet for heavenly exaltation.

how graphically do they suggest the folly and wickedness of desertion, of having the Divine Lover and Husband to attempt to satisfy the heart with inferior or hostile things.

He alone is our Lover—Husband; and with holy jealousy He must needs demand our loyalty and our love. What unaccountable folly to leave Him for Baal, to step out of the hallowed circle of his home for the spiritual licentiousness of alien loves.

We need but to "taste and see that the Lord is good." We need to remember that Captivity with all its woes and sorrows, and expatriation, and longings and vile servitude, privations, is the inevitable issue of sin. But, thanks be to God, these sweet and wondrous words were spoken to exiles: and those among us who are suffering in captivity today, in spiritual exile, should listen while Jehovah the Divine Lover—Husband speaks of his everlasting divine kindness. He is faithful; but the Covenant blessings are ours when we put away our sins.

GRATITUDE.

One of them turned back and glorified God, giving him thanks. One out of ten! Lepers, outcasts, ostracised from their fellowmen, hopeless, dependent upon charity, suffering, come into the presence of the Divine Physician and ask for mercy—mercy, which is “unwarranted favor.” And He who said, “Ask and ye shall receive,” gave them what they asked. For we are told that as they went they were healed.” No consultation of expensive specialists, no tedious treatment, no operating table, no doctor’s bill! Ten men cured, free, in a moment, once more like their fellows, and one turned back giving thanks.

Were these lepers typical of sinful humanity? Is it fair to conclude that nine-tenths of the recipients of God’s daily mercy are ungrateful, and but one-tenth turn in thankful acknowledgment to the Source, the Giver of every good and perfect gift? Does but one-tenth realize that the earth is the Lord’s and the fulness thereof? Surely we cannot claim ownership to it. We did not create it; God did that. Did we ever purchase it from God? He put us here upon the earth, into the garden of his making, to enjoy it and to tend it. The Owner of it all sheds upon us his wonder-working sunshine, he surrounds us with his life-sustaining air, his fields are ready to yield abundant harvest, his seas and rivers await the hand of fisherman and diver, his mines and quarries are treasuries encasing wealth of unimagined magnitude, his giant forests which for ages past have provided fuel and building material for man shows no signs of being exhausted. What a wonderful Creator! What a provident Father! Never failing to provide, never stopping Nature’s machinery, unused or misused though it may be by the people whose privilege it is to enjoy it, our God is ever planning to meet the needs of the descendants of those two in the Garden who were the first ungrateful ones, not content with the bounty which the Owner had provided for them, but wanting that which was forbidden.

Does abundance of possession deaden the sensibilities of man? Has the bountiful giving of God through all the centuries past caused the people of the earth to take things as a matter of course and shrunken our sense of gratitude? Are our heads held high in the complacency of worthiness of all these blessings? Where has gratitude gone? Where is true humility in the presence of our Creator and Giver of all? Let us examine our hearts and see whether we can enter into the feeling of Jacob of old when he humbly addressed his Maker, “I am not worthy of the least of all thy mercies and of all the truth which thou hast shewed unto thy servant” (Gen. 32:10). When the heart is truly humble toward God, the feeling of gratitude is bound to be there also. Most of us are familiar with Archbishop Robert C. Trench’s little verse:

And wholly bright to view,
If one small speck of dark appear
In their great heaven of blue.

“And some with grateful love are filled,
If but one streak of light,
One ray of God’s good mercy gild
The darkness of their night.”

Paul exhorts us to give thanks continually. So walk ye in Him . . . established in the faith . . . abounding therein with thanksgiving” (Col. 4:2); “Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God” (Col. 3:17); “Giving thanks always for all things” (Eph. 5:20).

Oh, let us count our blessings and give God the praise.

Let us no longer be unmindful of his goodness toward us, but joyfully acknowledge our indebtedness to him.

Sing unto the Lord, O ye saints of His,
Sing, sing, sing unto the Lord!
And at the remembrance of His holiness
O give thanks unto the Lord!

THE PARABLES OF SAFED THE SAGE. THE PARABLE OF PET AVERSIONS.

We went to a Reception, I and Keturah. And when they gave unto us Sandwiches and a Cup of Tea, and nowhere to set it, there came a woman and sat beside me, and she asked of me, saying, Art thou Safed the Sage?

And I answered, I am Safed; and concerning my sagacity there is an honest difference of opinion.

And she said, I have somewhat against thee, for my husband hath read thy Stuff, and he telleth me that thou hast no love for Curl Papers. And since he hath read thy Parables, he scoldeth me for wearing a Boudoir Cap to breakfast. But if I did not wear it in the morning, how should my hair look nice for the Reception?

And I said unto her, I have three pet aversions, yea, four things do I abhor. They are bedclothes that come out at the foot, and Tapioca Pudding, and Fringed White Napkins for a man who weareth a Black Coat, and Curl Papers at breakfast.

And she said, But is not the Boudoir Cap all right?

And I said, The Lord hath given unto me a mighty spirit of discernment so that I behold under its lace and ribbon a frowsled head and untidy Curl Papers.

And she said, A woman desireth to look her best when she goeth out.

And I said, A woman should try as hard to look well in the sight of her husband as she did before he was her husband.

And I got her a second cup of tea, and departed.

And as we went our way, Keturah said, I beheld thee in conversation with such and such a lady. How didst thou like her?

And I said unto Keturah, If that woman should discover the list of women whom I have selected for my second wife, she might read it, softly humming, Is My Name Written There? and she would seek in vain.

And Keturah said, May I read that list?

And I said, I will typewrite it for thee and paste it upon thy Mirror.

And the list that I pasted there had these names and no more:

Keturah.

Keturah.

Keturah.

And Keturah said, Though I commend thy good taste in desiring that thy first wife be also thy second, and I feel duly honored, yet am I not sure that I will marry as my second husband a man who giveth no better reason for choosing me than that I do not wear a Boudoir Cap to breakfast.

And I said, That may not be my only reason, but it is a sufficient reason to a man who desireth a few Pet Prejudices, such as mine against the Boudoir Cap at Breakfast. There be women who nag their husbands, and women who season the coffee of their husbands with Rough on Rats, and I desire none of them. But I would rather marry both Xantippe and Lucretia Borgia than a woman who doth not comb her hair until after breakfast. Yea, rather than that thou shouldst come down to breakfast with a Boudoir Cap hiding Curl Papers, I would see thee Chew Gum in Prayer Meeting.—

REV. R. S. ARROWOOD.

On last Thursday, at the meeting of Synod, in Raleigh, Rev. R. S. Arrowood was received into Mecklenburg Presbytery. That evening he left for home, stopping over for a visit to his daughter, in Sanford.

During the night he died suddenly. He was 65 years of age, and had spent a long and useful life in the ministry.

At a meeting of Mecklenburg Presbytery, Rev. Leonard Gill was appointed a committee to prepare suitable resolutions to be sent to his widow.

A CARD FROM MR. BUCHANAN.

Through the courtesy of the editor of the Standard I desire to thank our many friends for their solicitous enquiries as to Mrs. Buchanan's illness, and for their prayers on her behalf. I am happy to say that the operation, under the blessing of God, was successfully performed.

The patient is still quite low, but we believe she is "out of danger," and we are hoping and praying that there will be no return of her malady. So much sympathy has been shown that I find it well nigh impossible to write personal letters to all, so may I ask our friends kindly to accept this published letter as "personal" in its intention.

Beseeching a continued interest in your prayers that the blessing of God upon the efforts of the physicians will result in a permanent cure, I remain your grateful

Co-worker in the Gospel,
Wm. C. Buchanan.

The address of Rev. Wm. H. Woods is changed from Christiansburg, Va., to 312 Leichester street, Winchester, Virginia.

Rev. B. C. Patterson and family, of our China mission, are in this country on furlough and are visiting at present at the home of Mr. Patterson's brother, near Staunton, Va.

The many friends of Rev. George P. Stevens, our missionary at Hsouchoufu, China, will learn with sympathetic sorrow that he has been sorely bereaved in the death of his wife. We have had no particulars.

Rev. J. W. Vinson and family have arrived in this country from China on furlough on account of Mr. Vinson's health. He goes direct to the Mayo Brothers for diagnosis and treatment. Temporarily he may be addressed at 384 Iglehart Ave., St. Paul, Minn.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Mt. Pleasant Church—This church is planning an evangelistic meeting beginning November 16 and to continue for a week or 10 days, with Rev. C. R. Hyde, D.D., assisting the pastor, Rev. Daniel P. Junkin.

Society Hill—One of the elders of this church, Mr. R. C. Spease, conducts a flourishing mission Sunday School out in Chesterfield county, four miles from Society Hill. During the first week of October the pastor, Rev. A. L. Davis, held a meeting in that community, the immediate results of which were the addition to the church of 11 persons on profession of faith and one by letter.

Greenville—At the Third Church, Sunday evening, October 26, Rev. J. G. Walker was installed pastor of the church in the presence of a large congregation. Rev. T. W. Sloan, D.D., presided during the services. The sermon was preached by Rev. Jesse C. Rowan, the charge to the pastor was given by Rev. E. P. Davis, D.D., and the charge to the people by Elder J. A. Russell. Hearty congregational singing and special music added greatly to the attractiveness of the services. Mr. Walker has entered upon his work with zeal and the prospects for the church are excellent.

Great Falls—The ladies of this church have organized a Woman's Auxiliary with an enrollment of 15 members. Mrs. W. L. Latham was elected president; Mrs. J. B. McKeown, vice-president, and Mrs. C. E. Reynolds, secretary and treasurer. These ladies secured nine new subscribers to the Missionary Survey.

The church has also organized a young people's society with 40 members. The pastor labored faithfully to get

The Watchful Waiting That Robs

THERE ARE THOSE WHO ARE ROBBING THEMSELVES

By Watchful Waiting—Waiting Until Death Comes to Bless the World By Their Gifts.

THEY ROB TWO---THEMSELVES AND THE WORLD

This article of timely interest appeared July 2nd in Commerce and Finance, of New York, By Alan H. Temple, entitled

THE BEST TIME TO GIVE

The will of the late Amelia E. Barr, novelist, was read last week. Her literary productivity for more than forty years would put almost any other writer to shame, and she made money. For a score of years poetry alone, a very minor part of her output, brought her more than $1,000 a year.

Yet her estate was valued at $550.

Pitiful? No, glorious!

Mrs. Barr brought happiness to herself and the world by working hard at what most occupied her heart, telling simple tales of simple people. Acquisition played no part in her ideals. Love of humanity was her wealth. When she was reduced to $5.18 she spent most of it for a beefsteak dinner for her daughters.

"God and Amelia Barr are a multitude," she said.

The will of the late Augustus D. Juilliard, merchant, was also read last week. His estate was valued at from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000. After his relatives are provided for the residue goes to the promotion of musical art.

It is the largest endowment ever given to music. He becomes a public benefactor.

Mr. Juilliard's life, though rich in many interests, was centered in acquisition. It became inevitable that what he touched turned to money, for his capital worked for him while he slept. It might be thought that acquisition was his greatest aim in life, and this is not disproved by the beneficial disposition of his wealth.

In modestly waiting for death to disclose his benefaction the merchant cheated himself of the glow of personal sacrifice which might have suffused his later days. In not creating his foundation during his lifetime he cheated himself of a work which might have made him richer in happiness than merchandizing ever could.

The justification of acquisition is the use to which it is put. The time when a fortune is given to the world's good does not matter to the world, but it matters to the man who gives it.

John D. Rockefeller is realizing this. The Rockefeller Foundation is using enormous sums in all charitable directions. It gave $22,500,000 to war relief.

Amelia Barr realized it.

Augustus D. Juilliard, with as big a heart as he had and as great a love of music, could have given not only his fortune while he had it, but also his personal effort and direction, to that which most occupied his heart.

It is better to bring happiness to the world in life than in death.

A man in this state once said that he intended to endow a Chair at Davidson. Death came unexpectedly. He really wanted to do it, and was able; but he robbed himself of the immense pleasure he would have enjoyed had he given this while living.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Million Dollar Campaign—We have raised to date $425,000. March 1 has been fixed as final limit of the campaign. We must raise in the 100 working days that remain at the rate of $5,750 per day.

The workers are divided in two groups. Mr. W. M. Hunter has five men with him working in Albemarle and Wilmington Presbyteries—in the country churches only while the fall weather lasts. Mr. R. K. Axson has three men with him working in Kings Mountain Presbytery.

We are holding back the town churches until December, January and February.

The ministers of the Synod have been asked not to close up February with other engagements in their churches, but to keep them open as far as possible.

Synod urgently requested all the ministers to preach on Christian Education.

We have 1,871 students in our 11 schools. All schools are crowded.

Synod added the following men to the campaign committee: D. C. Lilly, J. M. Wells, J. M. Grier, A. L. James, E. P. Wharton, G. W. Mountcastle, Robert Norfleet, W. H. Belk, J. W. McLaughlin, J. R. Young, G. W. Watts, J. Lee Robinson, J. H. Beall, R. P. Richardson, Smith Richardson, G. B. D. Parker.

The committee will ask a large number of ministers to give some time in February for the final push over goal.

Oxford—On October 26 this church was presented with a handsome Oxford pulpit Bible. The front of the Bible bears the following inscription, in gold lettering: "Presented to the Oxford Presbyterian Church, by Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Taylor, in memory of Dr. and Mrs. Leonidas C. Taylor, 1919."

Dr. Taylor was a member of the Oxford Church for 40 years and a ruling elder for 19 years.

Badin—Our Sunday School has taken on new life recently. A cradle roll of 20 members has been organized. Both Men and Women's Bible classes have been formed. Our attendance has jumped from an average of 35 or 40 to 80. One hundred and thirty are now enrolled. Sunday evening, October 26, the Rally day was observed, giving the program "Lighting Our Southland," with slight changes. An overflowing house greeted the efforts of the children and a collection of $8.83 was taken for Sabbath School Extension.

The contract for the church building will be let this week. Ground has already been broken on the new lot.

Cor.

Walkersville—Rev. Wm. Black held a splendid meeting at Walkersville during the week October 5-12 inclusive. Mr. Black preached with great earnestness. The power of the Holy Spirit was manifested from the very beginning and the congregations grew larger with each successive service in spite of the favorable weather for picking cotton and attending to other farm duties so pressing at this season. The Spirit's power was not only manifested in the 51 professions made, but the whole community was revived so much so that 29 men and women pledged themselves to hold family worship. The contribution to Synodical Home Missions was $110.05, the largest free will offering ever made by this church.

The music, led by Mr. Burr, assisted by Mr. Black and Miss Maggie Bolin, was one of the impressive features of the meeting.

The people had been much in prayer for this meeting. Special prayer meetings were held for three weeks prior and we feel that God blessed us even more abundantly than we had thought to ask. "Ask, and it shall be given you; . . . how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him."

E. S. Watson, Pastor.

Hillsboro—Rev. T. M. McConnell, D.D., of Greensboro, did the preaching through a series of meetings in the Hillsboro Presbyterian Church, beginning October 13 and continuing through seven days. It was one of the most profitable and edifying meetings ever held in Hillsboro. It was not a union meeting—and it was. All the other denominations attended in large numbers. At times the church was crowded to overflowing, some could not get in, some who did could not get seats, and stood through the service.

Those things indicate that the services Dr. McConnell conducted, and rendered, were such as to invite and hold the interest of the people. His preaching was of superlative degree in soundness, simplicity and impressiveness. It was the "old Gospel of the old Book" boiled down. It would not be far from the state of the case to say that every sermon embraced the substance of the plan of redemption.

We were helped by his labors among us, we were pleased with his methods, being, as they were, conspicuous for the absence of any modern evangelisticities, and there were added to the church "such as should be saved."

Dr. McConnell is a most valuable addition to the evangelistic forces of the church. It is hoped that he may have enlarging opportunity, and we wish him ever increasing Divine blessing.

H. S. Bradshaw.

Charlotte was fortunate to have held within her bounds one of the one-day Christian Endeavor Institutes that are being conducted in the larger cities this fall and winter by Karl Lehman and Charles F. Evans, Christian Endeavor experts and secretaries for the work in the South. The institute was held in the First Reformed Church, this city, Sunday afternoon and night, October 26. Over 700 delegates registered for the sessions and many societies had their entire membership registered. West Avenue Presbyterian Church won the banner for attendance, that church having three societies all registered. Several other societies will receive banners for good attendance.

The sessions consisted of conferences conducted by Mr. Lehmann and Mr. Evans, during which many helpful suggestions for Endeavor work in the South were made, and a stereoptican address by Mr. Lehmann showing the work of Christian Endeavor in picture and story. Two hundred dollars for the work in the South was asked from the delegates, this being the first time that they had been asked for money to help on this work.

Among the "aims" for the coming year are: The employment of five field secretaries, one of them for China; 1,000 new societies with 75,000 new members; the distribution of 4,000,000 pages of literature and the publishing of the C. E. paper every month.

Sugar Creek—As I have not seen anything in the Standard from Sugar Creek for quite a while I think I will let the readers of your good paper know of some things that have been done in that old church for the past few weeks.

On October 12 we had an election for three additional elders which resulted in the following men being elected: Dr. S. M. Henderson, Mr. G. L. Hoover and Mr. C. H. Caldwell. On the next Sunday, October 19, three more deacons were elected, namely: Vinton Hunter, Fred Gibbon and F. S. Neal, Jr. All of these newly elected officers will be ordained and installed November 2.

October 26 we had our Rally day exercises for the Sunday School at 7:30 in the evening, and the program gotten up by a committee of ladies was carried out, which consisted of songs by the children, responsive readings and a few recitations, followed by an address on Sunday School work by Dr. R. H. Lafferty, superintendent of the Sunday School in the Second Church, Charlotte. At the close of this address three small boys passed the baskets for the collection while the choir sang a selection which was enjoyed by all. The collection, which was for Sunday School Extension, amounted to $35.

Last but not least, the pastor, Rev. W. R. McCalla, made a short and very appropriate talk to the soldier boys, while the service flag, which contained 25 stars, was lowered by two of the boys that had been in the service. We are very grateful to Him that doeth all things well that not a single one of the 25 boys received a wound, and all except two have returned home, and those two are expected soon. Cor.

ALABAMA.

Mobile—The new pastor of the Central Church, Rev. R. E. Fry, has begun his work here under the most promising prospects for a fruitful and happy pastorate.

Bessemer—The pastor, Rev. I. F. Swallow, has tendered his resignation as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church to accept the superintendency of Home Missions of the Synod of Missouri.

The Synod of Alabama will convene in the Trinity Presbyterian Church of Montgomery, on Tuesday evening, November 11, at 7:30 o'clock. The opening sermon will be delivered by Rev. J. W. Hickman, of Birmingham, at the request of the retiring moderator, Rev. I. F. Swallow.

Montgomery—The pastor of the First Church, Rev. Robert H. McCaslin, has completed six years of service in this church. During this time 1,200 new members have been received into the church. The congregation has just finished paying off entirely the debt on the new Sunday School building. The school is larger now than in its history and the entire work of the church is most prosperous and growing.

Presbytery of North Alabama met October 7 at Anniston with the Second Church. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. John McNeill. Rev. H. M. Moffitt was elected moderator, and Rev. E. C. Scott temporary clerk.

Captain Slaymaker made an address on the Laymen's Movement and a committee of three was appointed, Hon. Rutherford Lapsley, Frank Rushton and W. R. Hutton.

Rev. H. M. Moffitt made the report on Foreign Missions, and Rev. J. M. Wilson the address. Rev. J. W. Hickman, chairman, reported on Home Missions, and it was decided to select a Superintendent of Home Missions, Sabbath School Work and Evangelism. Rev. E. B. Robinson made a favorable report on the Orphanage. Rev. J. P. Stevenson was released from the Hartsville group that he might accept the care of the East Lake group. Rev. I. F. Swallow was released from the pastorate of the Bessemer Church that he might accept evangelistic work in the Synod of Missouri, and Rev. J. A. Warren was released from the charge of the Goodwater group that he might take work in the Presbytery of Macon. Rev. E. L. Renick was received and given charge of the Hartville group, and Licentiate Gardien ordained and installed over the Second Church, Anniston.

The amendments were deferred till the Spring meeting.

An adjourned meeting during the meeting of Synod in Montgomery.

The trustees of Presbytery were requested to make a yearly report. W. C. Clark, S. C.

FLORIDA.

St. Petersburg—At a congregational meeting held October 26, the following additional elders were elected, the first three being taken from the board of deacons: Wm. M. Davis, M.D., J. B. Girardeau, J. W. Perkerson, and H. E. Hayward. The pastor, Rev. W. J. Garrison, having gone to begin a 10 days' meeting for Rev. Dr. Wilkie, at Dunedin, Rev. C. E. Harrington, pastor-emeritus of the Congregational Church, conducted the evening service and gave us a most excellent sermon. E. J. Young.

DeFuniak Springs—On the first Sabbath in October Rally day was observed in the Sabbath School. A large congregation was present, the parts assigned to the young people were well rendered, and an offering of $50 was made to Sabbath School Extension and Publication.

After an address by the pastor, Rev. Daniel J. Currie, on "The French Reformation," October 26, 1919, Reformation day, a special offering of $50.75 was made for relief of the war sufferers in France and Belgium. D. J. C.

GEORGIA.

The East Macon Church has just passed through an unusual season of Spiritual uplift. We had Rev. Frank D. Hunt, our Presbyterial Evangelist, with us for eight days, and he made good in every way. One reason for the splendid results was that the people tried in every way to follow his instructions in regard to prayer and preparation before he came. We had meetings every night for a week before. Not much preaching, but much praying, and when the evangelist came on we were expecting answers to our prayers. There were five professions. No church makes a mistake in getting Rev. Frank D. Hunt, for God is blessing his labors.

We are looking forward to the best year in our history as a result of this meeting. J. T. Wildman, Pastor.

The Presbytery of Macon, at its recent meeting at Climax, Ga., adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, much is being said in church and secular papers as to the evil tendencies of the modern form of the dance, the Presbytery of Macon would record its solemn judgment that the dance as indulged in by many people of the present day is injurious to the healthy growth and development of Christian life and its influence is evil in its effects on the morals of many. Therefore the Presbytery would advise and urge our people to abstain from all appearance of evil in this and other respects so that their Christian example and influence may be helpful instead of hurtful in building up that type of Christian character so needed in the church and in the world.

Rome—Rev. E. R. Leyburn, D.D., pastor-elect of the First Church, of Rome, who began his work there October 1, reports that he and his family have been most cordially received by the people of his new congregation. They found the manse newly painted and thoroughly renovated, and the pantry filled, and everything possible prepared for their comfort. The officers of the church have also ordered a new car to aid the pastor in his work. On a recent Sunday the congregation, with great heartiness and unanimity decided to raise about $18,000 at once to make needed repairs and improvements in the interior of the church building, and to enlarge and rearrange the Sunday School building.

Before Dr. Leyburn and his family left Durham, where he had been pastor of the First Church for over 17 years, the members of that congregation presented them with a very handsome chest of silver and a quantity of beautiful table linen, and also a substantial purse, as an expression of their devotion.

Atlanta—North Avenue Church—Since his return, September 1, from his work overseas with the Y. M. C. A., Dr. Richard Orme Flinn, the pastor of this church, has been giving a series of talks regarding his impressions based on experiences while on the other side. These talks have been heard by a crowded audience each Sunday evening. As these lectures have now been concluded, Dr. Flinn will give a series of talks on the fundamentals of the Christian faith, which are especially designed to deal with those who have intellectual difficulties or who desire to formulate a reason for their faith.

The close of the second quarter of the Church year, October 1, shows that North Avenue has received 44 new members during that time, 16 having been received on profession of faith, and 28 by letter. Twenty-five have been dismissed by request to other churches, and four have been lost by death.

Two weekly Bible classes are being conducted under the direction of the Woman's Society. One meets on Wednesday morning, and is being led by Mrs. M. R. Emmons, who has recently finished a course at the Moody Bible Institute. The other meets on each second and fourth Monday of the month, and is taught by Mrs. S. H. Askew, Bible teacher of the Church day school. This latter class is especially designed for those who wish to study the fundamental questions of the Bible rather than specific studies, and is intended to aid mothers in the teaching of the Bible to their children.

Augusta Presbytery met in Milledgeville, Ga., October 14, and was opened with a sermon by the retiring moderator, Rev. R. C. Wilson, Jr., on "The Divinity of Jesus in the Gospel of John," from Jno. 20:31.

Organization: Rev. M. W. Doggett, D.D., was elected moderator, and Rev. R. C. Wilson, Jr., temporary clerk.

Corresponding Members: Rev. M. McG. Shields, Synodical Superintendent of Home Missions, and Rev. M. C. Liddell, both of the Presbytery of Atlanta.

Received: Rev. M. C. Liddell, pastor-elect of the Greensboro and Penfield Churches.

Presbytery heard with pleasure the address of Rev. M. McG. Shields on the Synodical Home Mission Work, which in face of all the discouraging circumstances of the war has made good and steady growth and enters upon the future with bright prospects opening before this cause.

Systematic Beneficence Committee presented the quota asked for 1920 from this Presbytery and its Churches. The amount asked from Augusta Presbytery was accepted with the proviso that all funds sent to the various causes should be counted as payments thereon, whether sent by Church treasurer, societies, Sabbath Schools or individuals. The sums asked of the Churches was accepted with the proviso that changes may be made for various Churches by Presbytery's committee if any change shall be deemed wise and fairer.

Presbyterial Home Missions Committee reported all fields now supplied except Waynesboro, nearly all the Churches self-supporting, and opportunity now open for our Presbyterial Superintendent of Home Missions, Rev. C. M. Chumbley, to enter upon promising work in new evangelistic fields where we have no Churches. Plans were made looking forward to placing a minister for all his time in Lincoln county as soon as this can be arranged.

Overtures sent down by General Assembly were answered in the affirmative, with the exception of limited terms of office for ruling elders and deacons, which was put on the docket for the Spring meeting.

This was an ideal meeting of Augusta Presbytery—fine weather, full attendance, all the ministers and elders from more than half the Churches, a most hospitable people, who entertained Presbytery luxuriously, an interesting and historical city, a commodious and beautiful church building, and a pastor and officers who spared no effort to add to the comfort and convenience of the sessions.

Next Meeting: First Church, Augusta, April 13, 1920.
E. P. Mickel, S. C.

The Presbytery of Savannah met at Vidalia, Ga., Tuesday night, October 14, with the largest attendance in years. Much interest and enthusiasm was shown and steps taken for aggressive work along all lines.

At the request of the retiring moderator, Elder S. P. Quarterman, the opening sermon was preached by Dr. Neal Anderson, of the Independent Church.

Rev. F. M. Baldwin was elected moderator. Rev. Henry Rankin is the permanent recording clerk.

Dr. Julian S. Sibley was received from the Presbytery of Mecklenburg, and Rev. F. D. Thomas from the Presbytery of Norfolk, and arrangements were made for their installations at Waycross and Brunswick respectively.

Rev. R. P. Henderson was dismissed to the Presbytery of Potosi, and Rev. D. A. McNeil to the Presbytery of Mangum.

A commission was appointed to install Rev. B. R. Anderson at McRae.

Action on most of the matters sent down by the Assembly was postponed until the Spring meeting of Presbytery.

Dr. G. L. Bitzer resigned as chairman of the Committee on Presbyterial Home Missions, and Dr. J. S. Sibley was appointed in his place. Dr. Bitzer remains chairman of the Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship and is also manager in the Presbytery for the Assembly's Progressive Campaign.

Well prepared reports were presented by the Committees on Presbyterial Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, and Systematic Beneficence.

Savannah Presbytery hopes soon to have a Superintendent-Evangelist and Sunday School Missionary.

The next stated meeting will be held at Metter, Ga. An adjourned meeting will be held during the Synod at Albany.

KENTUCKY.

Covington—Madison Avenue—This church, of which Rev. I. Cochrane Hunt, D.D., is the pastor, has just had a very gracious and fruitful Spiritual revival.

Rev. Dunbar H. Ogden, D.D., of Louisville, had accepted an invitation to preach for the week October 20-26, and Miss Mary Dan Harbeson, "Kentucky's Sweet Singer," had been engaged to conduct the music. In anticipation of the meeting the ladies of the church undertook some weeks in advance to raise the money and have the entire interior of the church cleaned and redecorated. This they did in a very thorough and artistic manner and to the great satisfaction of the entire congregation at cost of about $1,700. The congregation was thoroughly canvassed and organized for the services and the entire people were "much in prayer."

Miss Harbeson came to us for the 19th and it was our pleasure to have Rev. Dr. R. H. Crossfield, President of Transylvania University, Lexington, Ky., occupy the pulpit for both services that day, delivering two very strong, eloquent and appropriate sermons and completing the preparation of our people for Dr. Ogden's coming on Monday.

The services continued with growing interest and attendance through the 26th of October with the visible results of 12 professions of faith in Christ, 150 reconsecrations and an indicated purpose of a large number of persons to secure their letters and actively identify themselves with this and other churches of the city.

These tabulated results are meager as compared with those which can never, perhaps, be reduced to words: the renewed zeal of pastor and people, the deepened spiritual life of the entire church, the broadened vision of service and especially the very marked development of interest on the part of the young people of the church whose service throughout was untiring and effective.

This report would be wholly inadequate without a word of appreciation of the splendid service of both Dr. Ogden and Miss Harbeson.

Dr. Ogden's preaching was of the highest order, sound in doctrine, logical in presentation, clear and forceful in arrangement, fearless in its conclusions and yet filled with the abiding and unchanging sweetness of the love of God as it is in Christ. They were presented, clothed in simple words and yet vibrating with a power that can exist only when the Spirit speaks through the hearts of men. Their effect was tremendous and we believe abiding.

Miss Harbeson, as an evangelistic singer, is in a class all of her own. Endowed with a voice of marvellous range and sweetness, backed by a deeply cultured spiritual nature and wholly dedicated to the service of God, she simply sings the Harmony Presbyterian Auxiliary—To the Presidents: The report from the Andrews work was so very encouraging, at the spring meeting, it was decided that we as a Presbyterian continue this work. What have you done for it? We will need $500 at least. This amount can be raised if every woman in Harmony Presbyterian will contribute $1 each.

The man is on the field; we must not fail him! Please bring the matter before your members at once. We would suggest that you call for a free-will offering of $1 per member. Send all contributions to Miss Annie Anderson, Treasurer, Mayesville, S. C.

(Signed) Miss Bettie Aycock, Miss Minnie McFadden, Mrs. N. L. Broughton.

The Tuscaloosa Conference—No doubt many delegates from the other nine states represented at the Tuscaloosa Conference could send us reports, but they will have to be exceptionally fine ones to equal the one from North Carolina in last week's Standard, and the one published this week from South Carolina.

Miss Margaret Gist writes that their church, the First Presbyterian, York, S. C., had two delegates, and that both these women, one of whom wrote this report, have for five years been regular and faithful attendants at a Bible class, taught by Miss Gist and Mrs. S. M. McNeill, which meets every week at the home of one of the members.

Miss Gist adds that these delegates are eager to make use of what they were taught at the conference, and one of them, besides teaching in Sunday School, has gathered a class of children who never go to Sunday School and teaches them at her home.

South Carolina hopes to have a "Tuscaloosa Conference" next year. What about North Carolina?

Am afraid, as we have already taken so much space, that Dr. Bridges thinks we had best wait for another time to outline a plan for using the delegates to this conference in helping other women outside of their own community.

Gospel straight to the hearts of men. Her ability to perfectly adapt the Gospel in song to the spoken Word is very marked and wonderfully effective. An old lady of the church, who has heard most of the world's great singers, was heard to remark: "She has the sweetest voice I have ever heard since Jenny Lind."

Sixteen have already been received into this church and the ingathering is but begun. To God be all the praise.

LOUISIANA.

The Presbytery of New Orleans met at the St. Charles Avenue branch of the First Church on Tuesday, October 21, and was opened with a sermon by Rev. Louis Voss, the moderator, Rev. J. W. Caldwell, having removed to Atlanta. Present were 18 ministers and 11 ruling elders.

Rev. M. J. McLean was elected moderator and Elder W. J. Le Selle, temporary clerk.

Calls were presented for the pastoral services of Rev. J. W. Lee from the Berean Church, which was referred to the Presbytery of Central Louisiana, and of Rev. W. G. Harry from the Carrollton Church. He is to be installed on the second Sabbath in November.

An overture to the Synod of Louisiana was adopted asking for a uniform standard charter for all our incorporated churches conforming to the laws of the Church and of the State.

Proper steps will be taken to transfer the Berean colored church, at its request, to the Presbytery of Central Louisiana, this Presbytery continuing its aid to and interest in the church.

The Fourth Annual Conference for Negro Women convened at Stillman Institute, September 20, Dr. Timmons gave us a cordial welcome to the buildings and campus.

Sunday morning, Rev. Paul Moore preached a beautiful sermon which stirred our hearts and fired our imaginations. The vesper service on the lawn was very impressive and prepared us for Dean Ime's address Sunday night, "What Might be the Things of Helpfulness?" We all were indeed helped.

Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, superintendent, opened the conference Monday morning with song and prayer. Seventy-six delegates were present, 11 states, 59 towns and eight denominations were represented.

Daily features: "One way to Read the Bible" was given by Mrs. Winsborough in her clear, concise and forcible way. Mrs. M. H. Bright, of Tuskegee, Ala., was in charge of Practical Nursing. Her instructions and demonstrations were very helpful. I will say this was one of the very best features of the conference. Mrs. D. D. Little, of Columbia, Tenn., gave fine talks on woman's work.

Mrs. Wells Henderson, state agent, Montgomery, Ala., brought us many possibilities for better education for the negro race.

Some Homes of the Bible, given by Mrs. W. E. Hinds, of Auburn, Ala., was an excellent description of the homes of the Old and New Testaments. Beginning and advanced sewing classes were directed by Miss Edith Gramig, assisted by Mrs. W. H. Shepherd, Louisville, Ky. The two classes were crowded with earnest women showing an eagerness to learn.

Mrs. Roberts, of Tuskegee, Ala., amused large crowds of children on the lawn every evening, brought from the city. Addresses were given each night by Dr. R. H. McCaslin, Montgomery, Ala.; Rev. John Little, Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. W. A. Ross, missionary, Mexico; Mrs. J. W. Bruce, Birmingham, Ala. The Missionary Pageant given by the young women of the city was very enjoyable.

The last day of the conference the good people of Tuscaloosa entertained the delegates royally. We were all taken by the colored women's club in cars sight-seeing then to Dr. Weaver's, the colored physician's home, and enjoyed a lovely reception. From there to Salem Church, where we had the last address given by Rev. Henry H. Proctor, of Atlanta,

An overture to the General Assembly was adopted to direct the Committee on Publication, etc., to devise and urge a Teacher Training course which may be completed in one year, not to exceed 52 lessons and which shall be brief and compact, containing the review of the Old and New Testament history; also courses of study on Sunday School and church organization, the art of teaching and child psychology.

The Presbytery entered heartily into the Assembly's plan of systematic beneficence, stewardship and evangelism and took steps to aid in carrying out said plan.

The Committee of Home Missions presented a gratifying report. It paid its workers about $7,000 during the past six months and increased their salaries. It seeks to get each church on a footing of self-support and independence and to establish pastoral relations where possible.

The Committee on Foreign Missions called attention to the great need of this cause for continued support and increased contributions at this time.

The amendments to the Form of Government sent down by the Assembly received the consent of Presbytery, except the one concerning the election of elders and deacons for a limited term, action on which was postponed till the Spring meeting.

The following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, the impression seems to prevail very generally among the people of this city and State that the Presbyterian Hospital in this city is under the control of the Presbyterians of New Orleans; this Presbytery reiterates its declaration made six years ago that it has no connection with said insti-

Morrison — Harvey Lee Morrison died Thursday, October 23, at his home in Okolona, Miss., at the age of 53 years. Mr. Morrison was born in Statesville, N. C., December 4, 1866.

He graduated at Davidson College. In 1886 he left North Carolina and located in Okolona, Miss., where he later married Miss Stovall, of that place. In his boyhood he joined the Presbyterian Church of Statesville and later moved his membership to the Presbyterian Church of Okolona. For several years he served as deacon in this church and later as elder.

Mr. Morrison is survived by his wife and three children. His eldest son, Gilbert Morrison, graduated in 1916 at Davidson College and later served in the army as an aviator. Mr. Morrison is also survived by his mother, Mrs. Ellen Morrison; by one sister, Mrs. James D. Stocker, of Jermyn, Pa., and by one brother, Capt. C. S. Morrison, of Charlotte, N. C.

IN MEMORIAM.

Miss Willa Stubbs.

Resolutions adopted by the Woman's Auxiliary of Raeford Presbyterian Church upon the death of our beloved member, Miss Willa Stubbs.

Whereas, God in His wisdom has seen fit to call from our midst a faithful member.

Resolved: That in her death we feel the loss of one whose heart was always attuned to thoughts of kindness toward all with whom she came in contact and sympathy for those in trouble or distress.

Second. That while we miss her kindly greeting and gentle, cheerful manner, we bow in humble submission.

Third. That we, as individuals and as a society strive to follow the example she set in loyalty to her friends and her church. Her short life was so pure and unselfish it will ever be an inspiration and blessing to our auxiliary, church and town. She was a loving daughter and a devoted sister, and was very much loved by all who knew her.

Fourth. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy, assuring them of our prayers. May God watch over and comfort them in their sorrow.

Fifth. That a page in our minute book be inscribed to her memory, a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Presbyterian Standard and a copy to the family.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. A. A. Williford, Chm.
Mrs. McLean Campbell.
Mrs. W. B. McLauchlin.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Thomas Newton Steele.

If "death loves a shining mark," surely he found one in this splendid woman, who passed into glory October 1 at her home in the Prospect neighborhood, near Mooresville, N. C.

Mrs. Steele, before marriage, was Miss Mary Query, of Mecklenburg county. Surviving are the following children: Mrs. A. S. Libby, of Atlanta; Mrs. D. C. Smith, of Charlotte; Misses Lula, Nancy and Hester Steele, of the home; Dr. W. C. Steele, of Mount Olive, and Mr. Jas. A. Steele, Superintendent of Education of Iredell county.

She was indeed one of God's noble women. She gave her heart to Christ when a girl and from that time till the day of her death she worthily adorned the doctrine, which she professed by her own sweetness and purity of living. Her influence will live on in the hearts of her friends and be a gentle drawing power toward the gates of pearl.

May the example of this beautiful and consecrated life, promoted now to a higher, happier sphere of service, be an inspiration to us to follow in the footsteps of her loyalty to Him, whom having not seen she loved.

CAN DRIVE TONY.

Dear Standard:

We are twin boys seven years old. We have a horse named Tony and a Buick car. We can't run the car but we can drive the horse a little. We have a big goat wagon and we have lots of fun with it. We haul in the wood and rake and haul the leaves to Tony's stable. We go to school and are in the second grade. We go to see Grandma Blair every day, but Grandma Gwyn lives in California. We love our Sunday School teacher, Cousin Annie Finley. Daddy stays in the bank. We want him to see this letter in the Standard. We love to read the little letters.

PICKED COTTON FOR CHURCH.

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy eight years old. I go to the Central Presbyterian Sunday School. Synod will meet with our church in two weeks. I went to the country to pick cotton for Mr. Dodge's church. I have a little brother named Billy. Hope this letter won't reach the waste basket, as it is my first.

Your little friend,

A LITTLE AUTHOR.

Dear Standard:

I have just finished writing my first real fairy tale and I wondered if you would like to publish it so that the little boys and girls who read the Standard can see it. My mother takes the Standard and she is not a stranger to you, for she went to school to Dr. Bridges. I like to read fairy stories and I hope the children will like mine, for it's my first real story and I've written it by myself, though daddy's stenographer copied it for me because I am only 11 years old. I cannot write very well on the typewriter. With best wishes to you and all the children who read the Standard.

Sincerely,

Jean Thornwell Alexander.

FRANCES IN FAIRYLAND.

By Jean Thornwell Alexander.

Frances Lewis was sitting at the table deep in thought. It was raining torrents outside but Frances was not thinking about this dismal day. She was thinking about a far different matter. "I do wish I could go to Fairyland" she murmured half to herself. While she was trying to decide how she could get there, she heard a faint meow, "Goodness!" she exclaimed glancing out of the window, "there's a poor little kitten."

Hastily picking up her raincoat which lay on a chair, she dashed out in the rain and picked up the little kitten which was seeking shelter in the fence corner. "Poor Kitty" she whispered, patting the little fur ball. The kitten purred comfortably as she set it down by the fire, and ran out to the kitchen to get something for it to eat. "Another stray kitten?" asked Mrs. Lewis smiling, "Yes'm" answered Frances, "I'm going to keep her!" she added decidedly as she filled the bowl with milk.

The kitten had taken her thoughts from Fairyland. "What are you going to name her? I presume it's a girl," Mrs. Lewis added, her eyes twinkling as she followed Frances into the parlor. "Yes," laughed Frances, "and I believe I'll name her Cherry Raindrop." Her mother left the room and Frances sat down on the floor by the kitten. When Cherry Raindrop had finished her milk she jumped into Frances' lap and much to her surprise said purringly, "You were good to me and I will be good to you. I will take you anywhere you want to go." Frances stared at the kitten in astonishment, her surprise was unlimited, but she answered promptly, "Fairyland." "Very good," said the kitten and jumping to the window, she waved her paw at a big cloud and said something that Frances could not understand. A big cloud instantly settled outside the window. "Clouds," explained the kitten, "are the fairies' coaches." Inside the cloud were two little white seats facing each other. The kitten took one seat and motioned Frances to take the other. "As soon as we get in Fairyland," the kitten told her, "I will become a fairy." "It's just like riding in an aeroplane" gasped Frances, as they flew swiftly through the air. "I didn't know clouds went so fast," she exclaimed. "You've never been in one before," said the kitten. "No," said Frances, shaking her curly head. "But they certainly are comfortable," she added, nestling down in the snowy cushions. They found themselves in a pretty green meadow facing a stone wall. "Fairyland is beyond that wall," the kitten said, "But how will we get over it?" demanded Frances. "That is very easy," replied the kitten, "if you will do as I tell you." "All right" answered Frances. "Well," said the kitten, "close your eyes, then move your arms back and forth and see what will happen." Frances did as the kitten told her and immediately rose from the ground. "Now open your eyes" commanded a sweet voice and much to her delight, Frances found herself in Fairyland but beside her, instead of Cherry Raindrop, was a beautiful fairy. "Come," said the fairy, "and I will introduce you to the queen." They ran over to a grove of trees where sat the most beautiful lady Frances had ever seen. The fairy bowed low before her and Frances did likewise. "This is Frances Lewis, Your Majesty," said the fairy, "she very kindly gave me shelter from the rain and in answer to her request I brought her here for the day." "Very well, you may go, Cafaria," said the queen, and told Frances to be seated. "What do you want to do now?" asked the queen. "I want to look around" replied Frances. The queen motioned to one of the pages who stood near. "Go tell old Bambo Faya to come here." "Then turning to Frances, she said laughingly, "He knows more about Fairyland than I do." Very soon the page returned leading the old man. "Bambo," said the queen, "show this little girl around in Fairyland." "Certainly, Your Majesty" he said. The queen turned to Frances, "Good-bye, my dear" she said, "when you have finished looking around come back and dine with me." Then she dismissed them.

First they went to see a brave fairy soldier. He took them in his den with beautiful curtains made of spider webs, (the soldier had no wife to make curtains for him so the good old spider had done it). He showed them wonderful things. His coat of armor, his swords and many things he had found on the battle fields during the war. "Of course," he told them, "our good queen wouldn't make war on anyone but they declared war on us and we had to fight." He also urged them to stay and have a cup of tea and when they consented, he brought in a tiny tray with acorn cups. Then they bade him farewell and went to the home of Dame Fatima. As they drew near her cottage, Bambo said, "Don't be frightened at her appearance, she is one hundred and five years old and is the only ugly person in Fairyland." As they stepped on the porch and knocked, a voice cried, "If you are a friend you are welcome, but if an enemy, beware, pray give your name." "We are friends" said Bambo, "Then you are welcome" said the voice. They entered and saw a woman so ugly that Frances shuddered at the mere sight of her. "We would like for you to tell us of your visit to the star" said Bambo, respectfully. This was a very interesting story for Fatima had been in a big bright star. She had also seen the beautiful star queen and had had many thrilling adventures, then she had returned to her home and spent her life telling strangers of her adventures.

They thanked her and went to other places of interest. They also saw the beautiful fruit tree, the fruit of which was made of jewels. After having viewed Fairyland, Frances returned to dine with the queen, having spent a happy day. "Well are you satisfied with your adventures in Fairyland?" asked the queen smiling. "Oh Yes!" answered Frances but I expect I'd better go home." "Very well" said the queen and ordering her chariot, she placed Frances in it and it sailed away.

Frances was very tired and fell asleep in the chariot. When she awoke she was at home. She ran to tell her mother of her adventures but Mrs. Lewis laughed and said "You dear little dreamer." Very strangely the kitten was gone but Frances is still firm in her faith that she really did go to Fairyland, but whether she did or did not I cannot say.

THE END.

SOME BOYS I KNOW.

The city square on which I live is in one respect a most remarkable one. What makes it remarkable is the fact that five boys live on this square and every one of these five is a different kind of boy from any of the others.

One of these boys is a studious boy, one is a thoughtless boy, one a polite boy, one an unkind boy and one a helpful boy. There are a few stories I want to tell about three of these boys, and then you may make your choice of the ones you would like me to introduce to you.

Every morning as I start to my office I meet a bright, cheerful, manly-looking boy—about twelve years old, I should say—with his school books under his arm. After we had met a few times we felt that we knew each other well enough to walk along together. And what do you think I found out about him? Why, just this: That he has read a large number of the great English classics—and he knows something about them, too; that he—so his teacher has told me—stands "A No. 1" in all of his classes, and that he always has every lesson perfect; and, more than that, he is the best baseball player on the school team. Whenever I meet that boy I feel like taking off my hat to him, and I expect to hear some good news about him when he becomes a man.

Last winter I was sitting by my study fire one afternoon when there was a sudden crash, and I looked around to see one of the windows scattered all over the floor. I went to the window and looked out just in time to see my next-door neighbor's boy scurry into the kitchen of his home.

Three or four days later I met him as he entered his front gate. We had always been good friends, and I didn't think a broken window was enough to break up a friendship, so I spoke to him as usual and went on. The next day I

Davidson—Davidson College is a church school and is therefore supposed not to know much about "cards," but opinion seems to be unanimous on the campus and in the town that the college drew a "trump card" when the War department a year ago sent Col. A. H. Mueller here to take charge of the R. O. T. C. While not a Presbyterian by profession, he has accommodated himself admirably to the environment in which he finds himself; he is a West Pointer with a number of years of active service back of him; he is an enthusiast in his work, has something doing all the time, is determined to make the R. O. T. C. count for the utmost possible and by his gentlemanly conduct and courtesy succeeds in a most pronounced way in securing the sympathy and co-operation of the men that constitute his student battalion and yet insists on the strictest military discipline. The R. O. T. C. is voluntary for all the classes except that Freshmen and Sophomores must choose the R. O. T. C. with a credit for a college ticket or else take physical training in the gymnasium under an instructor with no credit toward graduation. Of course with rare exceptions most Freshmen and Sophomores take the military training. There are about 300 men in the companies.

Colonel Mueller sometimes since realized that drilling was a "poor go" without a band accompanying. Thanks to his energy and drive and the endorsement of the plan by student vote, a military band has been organized, drilled and is now a great feature of the daily drill and dress parade exhibition on the campus. Davidson was doubly fortunate in having as a band leader D. R. Freeman, a young man from Steele Creek, trained from boyhood as a member of the Steele Creek band, and who during the war period had military training.

The Y. M. C. A. membership is this week holding room prayer meetings on the different floors of the dormitories, preparatory to the Evangelistic campaign to be conducted next week by Rev. Dr. Albert Sidney Johnson, of Charlotte, who will be here on the 4th, 5th and 6th, speaking each night and conducting chapel services to be held at 8:30 on two of the mornings.

Ga. He told us of the valuable service the negro boys rendered in the world war.

From the testimonies given by each delegate and the interest manifested, this conference has accomplished a great work, which will be far reaching in its effects. Every woman that attended this conference has been greatly helped, and has learned how to help others. I pray to see a conference of this kind in every state. May these great leaders live long and be greatly blessed.

York, S. C.

Since I've been home I have organized a Bible class for young men and have on the roll 20 men who seem to be very interested.

J. A.

found him waiting in my study when I got home.

"I've come to pay you for that window," he burst out, shame-facedly, "and I'm sorry for the trouble it caused you."

"That's all right," I said, "but how did it happen?"

"Why," he replied, "I fired a snowball at a bird, and I never thought about the window behind the bird."

He did the right thing by coming to me about it, and all in all he's a fine, manly fellow, but how much embarassment he'd have saved himself and how much trouble he'd have saved his neighbor "if he had thought." And that is only one of the many, many troublesome things he has done because he did not think.

I was sitting in a street car a few days ago when one of my neighbors got on and went up to a front seat. Two gentlemen were sitting just in front of me, and this is the conversation I heard them carrying on:

"That's a fine boy, Sam."

"Yes," said Sam, whom I recognized

DR. WEBSTER'S "CASE."

The Story of a Child's Prayer.

"IS the doctor at home?" Mrs. Gordon, with Bobby's hand in hers, was standing at the surgery door of Dr. Webster's house, and even the maid who had answered the door was sorry for the anxious-faced strangers.

"He is expecting a patient at three," she said, consulting a slate which hung in the hall.

"I think this is the patient," Mrs. Gordon said, gently pushing Bobby in front of her. "We have come by appointment."

The clock in the consulting room pointed to five minutes from three. It was a horrible-looking clock, with naked wheels underneath a glass case, and an alarming way of showing not only the flight of the hours, but the flight of the minutes, in big black letters on its forehead. A very ogre of a clock! Mother and son gazed fascinated at it, as it recorded five minutes—four—three—two—and—then—one. Just as the hour rang out, a motor stopped with a snort outside the house; there was the sound of a quick step in the hall, and then the watchers, with beating hearts and stretched nerves, saw the door open and the doctor enter.

He was a tall, stern-looking man, somewhere between 40 and 50, with keen, alert-looking eyes behind gold-rimmed eyeglasses. A man of dominating personality—cold and inscrutable. Some folks said he was a scientist first and last—a man who had forgotten to be human; doing his work skilfully, but doing it remorselessly and without recognizing that behind each "case" was a quivering human heart.

"Mrs. Gordon?" he questioned. "Yes, I got Dr. Kirk's letter about you. And this is the young man. How are you?"

Bobby gravely shook hands and answered, "Quite well, thank you."

"Then why are you here?"

"'Cos—'cos—" Bobby began in sudden confusion; and then his mother came to the rescue and explained as well as she could (for oh, the dryness of her mouth!), what ailed her little son.

With a curious, watchful look in his eyes, and without a single interruption, the great man sat and listened to the tale. When she had finished, he asked a few questions, and noting the growing misery in the mother's face, his voice unconsciously took on a softer note, so that she was emboldened to ask, "Is—is—it anything serious, doctor?"

Was there, for a just a tick-length of the naked clock, a pause? Then the words came in cold, professional tones, "Oh no, not at all."

"It will not be necessary to have—" Try as she might, she could not articulate the grim word "operation."

"Oh just a very slight one," he said. The man had disappeared—it was the scientist who spoke. "I shall 'phone to the nursing home, and let them know you are coming."

"And—when—will—the—the—operation—be?"

Bobby was looking at them both with brave blue eyes. "I'm not frightened," he said stoutly; and at the words the scientist made way for a man with a kindly smile who patted the child's head and said, "Of course you're not! You'll go in the afternoon, and tomorrow morning—10 o'clock—to be a prominent business man. "I have my eye on him and some day I hope to have him in my business."

"Not if I can get him first," said the other, who was also a business man. "He's the most polite boy I ever saw, and a boy who is always polite is generally worth while."

There's a record any boy might be proud of, and it's not only a noble record—it's also worth dollars and cents to him.

There are three fine boys, each with an outstanding trait.—Boys and Girls.

we'll soon put you to rights. This is the address of the home. Good afternoon."

The naked clock recorded the fact that it was 26 minutes past three, but to Mrs. Gordon it seemed as though a whole eternity had rolled between their entrance and their departure from the doctor's house. How closely she clasped Bobby's hand as they went down the steps, and why were her eyes so dim she could hardly read the address on the card which Dr. Webster had put into her hand?

Bobby searched her face with troubled eyes. "You're not crying, are you, mammy?"

"Certainly not, goosie," she replied, with a brave attempt to speak brightly. "Why should I cry?"

"And where are we going?"

She told him as well as she could, for there was a lump in her throat well-nigh choking her, and by the time it had all been explained they had reached the nursing home. I do not suppose Bobby or his mother will ever forget those minutes when, having rung the bell, they waited for the door to be opened. That, and the strange smell which seemed to come out and meet them, more than anything else, was what impressed them. The amazing cheerfulness of the nurses was another source of wonder. There was one pleasant faced girl who seemed to regard Bobby as her special care.

"Are you the case from Dr. Webster?" she asked. To which Bobby replied, rather indignantly: "No, I'm not a case. I'm a little boy; an' I'm not so very little either—I'm six."

In spite of this declaration of independence there were tears in the child's eyes when this same nurse undressed him and put him to bed. When later on, she told him mammy must go now, even a man of six felt he could no longer restrain his tears. In the consulting room, with his mammy near it was easy to be brave. But here among strangers; at bedtime too which is the hour in the day a little boy specially needs his mother; without even the protection of his clothes—no wonder he felt forlorn.

"I'll say my prayers as long as God an' you are here," he whispered, cuddling his head into her shoulder, and quite forgetting to be old and wise as befits a man of six!

"Darling," she whispered, "God will stay with you all the time—it's only mammy that has to go." With her arms around her bairn she poured out a passionate prayer in her heart; "only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard." Then Bobby whispered his own prayer:

"This night I lay me down to sleep,
I give my soul to Christ to keep."

Next morning Bobby awakened wondering where he was. His own nurse came and washed his face and hands (a liberty rather resented). Fortunately she had finished ere Dr. Webster entered. She and the doctor talked a good deal about "the case" and "cases," and Bobby wondered what these were. He could not understand what either said, and his little heart was chilled by the unfamiliarity of it all. Presently the doctor turned to him, and his stern face relaxed a little as he met the child's anxious eyes.

"This is the boy who isn't frightened, isn't it?" he asked.

"Y—yes," Bobby agreed. "What's a case?"

The doctor looked a little taken aback at this unexpected question. Then, just to gain time, he said, "I'm sure you know yourself what a case is. You're a big boy."

This touched Bobby's vanity, and did much to help him. "When I speak of a 'case,'" he said, "I mean glass case same's Tom has in his newzeal, you know. He keeps butterflies an' beakles an' things in them. He said"—lowering his voice mysteriously—"he said p'rhaps if I had an operation there might be something cutted out of me that would do for his newzeal. Wouldn't that be nice?" he asked anxiously.

It was many a day since anyone had heard Dr. Webster laugh, and the sound was so infectious that all who heard it found themselves joining in it—so young, so gay, so boyish it was! Even the sick lady who lived in a shelter in the garden said she felt better today.

"Well, Peter"—the doctor began.

"My name is Robert," Bobby said, with childish dignity.

"Robert, then," the doctor said meekly.

"My friends call me Bobby. You may call me Bobby, too."

"Thank you, Bobby. I don't think we'll help Tom with his museum at your expense. But we can talk about that later on. Just now I'm going to put you to sleep, and when you waken up you'll be all right."

"But—but—I'm just done of sleeping," Bobby protested.

"Yes, but you must sleep again."

Slowly the child's eyes traveled from the doctor's now inscrutable face to the cheerful one of the nurse. It was very perplexing!

"If—if—I'm going to sleep again," Bobby began bravely, "I must say my prayers first."

A strained silence filled the room, and then with a little gesture, which was both brave and proud, Bobby closed his eyes and clasped his hands.

"Now I lay me down to sleep," he began bravely enough. The next line was a little shaky, and when he came to the words, "If I should die," the little voice quivered and then stopped. "I—I can't—say—it," he sobbed. "Say it for me, please, doctor. I'm 'fraid."

What memories did the once-familiar prayer of his childhood waken in Dr. Webster's heart that mornin'? Did he think of a time when he, just a little lad as Bobby, was wont to cuddle his head on his mother's knee and whisper the same sweet childish words? Memory swept over him in floods.

"Say it," the little voice urged. "Please say it for me."

For a moment he paused, and then, clutching Bobby's little hand with a grip that was almost painful, he whispered the words:

"If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take."

These were the last words the child heard ere the chloroform stole away his senses.

Outside the nursing home, a haggard-faced woman was walking up and down, glancing every other minute at the clock on a neighboring church steeple. By 12 o'clock, they had told her, she might call at the home and ask how he was. Were ever hours so slow? Were ever moments so leaden-footed? Up and down, up and down she paced. Passersby glanced curiously at her anxious face, and one gentle old man with a saintly face spoke to her.

"Are you in trouble?" he asked gently. "Forgive an old man's curiosity."

"My little boy—" she began.

"Yes, yes." He nodded understandingly. "In the home?" She bowed her head. "At twelve I may go and ask for him; but it's only eleven yet. It's been eleven for such a long time!"

The old man looked tenderly at her. "Ah, those mothers!" he said. "No need to ask them, 'Could ye not watch with Me for one hour?' They would watch all night. Will you allow an old man to share your watch with you?"

His wonderful sympathy and tenderness helped her over that long last hour, and when twelve rang she felt strangely calm and brave.

The nurse who came in answer to her timid ring smiled cheerfully. "He's nicely," she said, "and Dr. Webster has lost his heart to your son. We're all perfectly amazed. Bobby made him laugh! None of us ever thought the doctor could laugh. He wants to speak to you."

The great man entered even as she spoke. "Most successful," he said, shaking hands warmly. There was a new light in his eyes, a softer expression in his face.

Mrs. Gordon, strung up with the morning's experiences, had much ado to keep back her tears. "I—I thank you from the bottom of my heart," she faltered, "for what you have done for Bobby."

The doctor's face looked strangely moved. "I wonder if you know what Bobby has done for me? He—has—restored—my—soul."

So, through tears and laughter and love, there did arise in the great scientist "the man that he would be," and, all unconscious of the high mission he had been allowed to fulfill, Bobby slept through the hours which spanned the gulf between danger and safety, and He into whose hands the child had entrusted his soul cared for him while he slept, and also caused him to "awake and see the morning light."—U. TENNESSEE.

Murfreesboro—First Church Goes Over Top—The darkest hour this church ever saw in the 107 years of her history was six years ago when a pagan cyclone wrecked the church. The church carried no cyclone insurance, and some of the members were hit by the same on their personal estates. What was to be done? It was a dark, bitter hour for the above church. As our city is one of schools, being the seat of the Middle State Normal, Tennessee College, the Central High and other schools, it was evident that the Presbyterians needed a church ranking with the other churches of the city. After much prayer with faith in God we erected a plant that we could not build today for less than $75,000. When we entered the beautiful sanctuary that Mr. George Walters made possible by neglecting his own business, we were face to face with a debt of $19,000. We distributed the same over a five-year period, and have at last landed in the promised land. With this burden out of the way we decided to do more for benevolences. Our apportionment by the Presbytery for the great drive our Assembly is making was for more than $4,000.

On last Friday night we gave a banquet to the 162 men and boys of our church. The ladies of the church were to wait on us with the understanding that later we are to give them a banquet, and we are to wait on them, and the pastor has borrowed in advance the apron in which he is to serve.

Rev. Dr. Tappey, of Shelbyville, made the address at the banquet, and helped to put the men and boys on their mettle, and so on Sabbath afternoon, under the leadership of Mr. James Clayton, assisted by Mr. Ed Hooper and others, six teams in the cars put the thing over, very much to the joy of the pastor.

The pastor has begun the eleventh year of his ministry, and notwithstanding all the imperfection of the work, he rejoices that though he has had his forty-first communion service, he has never had in all these years a communion without some to unite with the church. May the Great Head of the Church use this people more and more for the coming of the Kingdom.

VIRGINIA.

Staunton—Third Church—The Sabbath School held its Rally day service on Sunday, October 12. The Primary, Junior and Intermediate departments of the Sunday School, assisted by the choir, furnished an interesting program, and a creditable offering was taken in the school for Sunday School Extension.

An interesting series of revival services was held at the church, beginning October 5 and continuing through Sunday, October 19. The services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Sprouse, and were well attended. Close attention was given the splendid sermons preached and much interest was manifested. There were 10 conversions during the meeting as well as many reconsecrations of church members. On Sunday afternoon, October 19, five persons united with the church, two adults and three young people.

M. E. E.

Olivet—Rally day was observed on October 19, having been postponed from October 5 on account of rain. An interesting program was given by the Junior and Intermediate departments and an offering was made for Sunday School Extension. The most interesting feature in the exercises of the day was the burning of the notes of the church debt, on the pulpit in full view of the assembled congregation.

The present church building was begun and completed during the short and beloved pastorate of the late Rev. R. L. Walton (1913-1916). Much of the unity and beautiful spirit in which the church was built was due to his wise and consecrated leadership. The church building proper cost $8,000. Of this amount $1,000 was paid by the session of the First Church, Staunton, who had this sum in trust, it being a legacy bequeathed several years ago by the late Davis A. Kayser to Olivet. Outside of several voluntary contributions by friends of Olivet, the remainder of the $8,000 was raised entirely by its members. The last dollar of indebtedness was paid on the fifth Sunday of August by a free-will offering of several hundred dollars by Olivet's members, and the news was telegraphed to the pastor, Rev. W. W. Sprouse, who was at the time spending his vacation with his mother at Fountain Inn, S. C.

As a tribute of love and respect for Mr. Walton, his little daughter, Mary Linton Walton, was assigned the task of setting fire to the notes. M. E. E.

East Hanover Presbytery met September 23 at Bon Air, Va. By request, Rev. T. H. Rice, D.D., preached the opening sermon.

Rev. O. E. Buchholz was elected moderator and Mr. John W. Friend temporary clerk.

Emporia Church was given permission to prosecute a call before Winchester Presbytery for the pastoral services of Rev. T. A. Painter.

Hoge Memorial Church was given permission to employ Rev. J. E. Cook as stated supply, and the Ashland Church to employ Rev. Dr. Edward Mack.

Election of Commissioners to the General Assembly will take place in the Spring hereafter instead of in the Fall.

A very interesting conference on Sunday School Work was held under direction of Rev. Dr. R. A. Lapsley, the chairman of the Sunday School Committee. And another in the interest of Home Missions was held in connection with the report of that committee. The Home Mission work in the Presbytery is in very good condition, every church being supplied with regular preaching.

Licentiate D. C. Young was dismissed to Tuscaloosa Presbytery.

A commission was appointed to organize a church in the West End of Richmond, where Rev. O. E. Buchholz is working.

Rev. R. V. Lancaster, D.D., preached the Presbyterian Sermon on "The Second Coming of Christ." Rev. C. L. King, with Rev. M. A. Boggs, as alternate, was appointed to preach at the Spring meeting on "The Atonement In Its Modern Setting."

Presbytery answered in the affirmative the two overtures from the Assembly on candidates and licensure. It answered in the negative the two in regard to limited service of elders and deacons. The one concerning representation in the Assembly was postponed to the Spring meeting.

Presbytery will hold an adjourned meeting at the Publishing House in Richmond at 11 a. m., December 1, and the Spring meeting will be held in Westminster Church, Richmond, at 8 p. m., April 19, 1920.

The Presbytery was most delightfully entertained by Dr. E. B. McCluer and his people. The ladies served excellent lunches in a hall near the church. Many members said this was one of the best meetings of Presbytery they had ever attended.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Montgomery—Through the activity of the ladies of the church, and at a considerable expense, without a recourse to fairs, festivals and such money-making devices, the manse has undergone a comprehensive system of alterations and repairs. The improvements have made it a much more attractive looking church home for the pastor and his family.

"Reformation Sunday" was observed on the last Sabbath in October, with an address by the pastor, Rev. M. B. Lambdin, on the persecutions of the French and Belgian Protestants, by the Papal Church, during the past 40 years. A generous collection was taken in their behalf.

Four valuable members have been welcomed into the fellowship of the Presbyterian Church recently.

Miscellaneous

THE VALUE OF DOUBT.

There are few things about which writers have been at such variance as about doubt. One has written:

"Who never doubted, never half believed,

Where doubt, there truth is—'tis her shadow."

He has placed doubt in as close relation to truth as the shadow is to the substance.

But another says:

"The gods are dead—
Ay, Zenus is dead, and all the gods but Doubt,
And Doubt is brother devil to Despair!"

He identifies doubt as an evil spirit out of the pit, always accompanied by despair. Tennyson has written:

"There lives more faith in honest doubt,
Believe me, than in half the creeds."

And Shakespheare states almost the opposite:

"Our doubts are traitors,
And make us lose the good we oft might win

By fearing to attempt."

The strange condition is that to some doubt appears as a devil, a traitor, and to others it is the companion of truth and faith. There is no agreement as to the estimate to be put upon doubt.

A more uncomfortable state than that of doubt can hardly be imagined. Yet unless human nature were radically changed and limited these seasons of suspense and uncertainty cannot be avoided. If the path of duty or belief were so plainly marked that there was no occasion to hesitate, no higher intelligence would be needed to live than is required in a marble that it may run down a groove. Wherever there is the privilege of choice there must be the possibility of doubt. For the choice is never between the thing which is wholly good and the thing which is wholly bad. There would be no choice in such a matter. Because the choice is between things that have elements of good and bad mixed in them, men may painfully hesitate before they give their decision, and even after it is given they may question whether they have made the better selection. The nervous system which is capable of giving sensations of pleasure must also be capable of giving sensations of pain. So the power of choice with all its advantages, must give possibility for the torment of doubt.

Some doubts have a ruinous effect. The first sin with all its heavy consequences was not committed until doubt had entered into the mind of the first pair. Ever since that when doubts start, because the doubter does not take his questions to the right counselor to get them answered, or because he feels that if there is any suspicion he cannot afford to put confidence in old religious conceptions, he may swing into a course of worldliness or atheism, and begin to travel the road toward ruin.

But some doubts have an uplifting and strengthening effect. When the Lord appeared to the five thousand in Galilee, "they worshipsed, but some doubted." Thomas is called the doubting apostle because he refused to believe unless he were given testimony of a certain kind. But when those doubters were convinced they were stronger disciples because their doubts had caused them to make a more careful examination of the evidence. People who are hard to convince and are finally convinced believe more firmly because they have found a substantial basis for their belief.

It is not a bad sign when people begin to question and doubt and search. It is a sign that something has happened to them. It may be the stirring of a new life within them, because the light has shined into their hearts. They have caught the gleam, and if they fight their way through to the true light, it is certain that they will no more walk in the darkness.—W. J. R., in the United Presbyterian.

50 EGGS A DAY.

"Before using 'More Eggs' tonic, I was getting only 12 eggs a day and now get 50" writes Mrs. Myrtle Ice, of Boston, Ky.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. "More Eggs" is a scientific tonic that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens lay all the time. "More Eggs" will double the production of eggs. Poultry raisers everywhere are making big profits by giving their hens "More Eggs." The results of a few cents' worth will amaze you.

Send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and he will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs." A million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

THE GAME OF GRAB.

The game of grab ends in universal defeat. If all the working world—mechanics, carpenters, trainmen, policemen, newspaper writers, actors and everybody who earns a salary or a wage—goes out for a raise, everybody will in due time have to deduct from his increase enough to pay the increase in the wages of everybody else. The vicious circle completes itself.—Congregationalist.

FEED THE CHILDREN.

From three to six millions of American children are not getting enough to eat. These are the children whom parents and teachers often speak of as "delicate" or "ailing" or "lazy" or just "plain ornery;" but Miss Lydia Roberts, the dietitian, who has just written for the Children's Bureau of the Department of labor a pamphlet called "What is Malnutrition?" says they are hungry, or, in technical phrase, "malnourished." Some of these children literally do not get enough to eat; more, perhaps, do not get enough of the right sort of food; some are unable, as a result of physical defect, properly to assimilate what they eat.

According to Dr. Josephine Baker, more than one-fifth of the school children of New York City are under nourished. The percentage for the entire United States is even higher. Dr. Thomas Wood places it at from 15 to 25 per cent. Since this takes no count of the malnourished children under school age, in the "neglected period" between the ages of two and seven, when malnutrition usually has its beginning, from three to six million hungry children is probably a conservative estimate.

Many of these children are going hungry, says Miss Roberts, because their parents cannot afford to buy a sufficient amount of suitable, nourishing food. Thousands of American families are today living on an income which does not permit of an adequate diet. But poverty is not the sole cause of malnutrition. Many mothers do not know how to spend their money to get the best return in food value, or how to plan healthful, nourishing meals for their families. Many others have not sufficient control over their children to induce them to eat the right things and to take the sleep and rest necessary to development. They do not realize that the undernourished boy or girl is peculiarly susceptible to disease, that "the listless, inactive, malnourished child, who is constantly tired, who leans against the school house while his comrades play, is father to the man who is handicapped because of low vitality and a poorly developed body—is the inefficient adult, the rejected army recruit."

One of the most effective ways of seeing that the starving children of America are fed, the pamphlet points out, is the malnutrition clinic or the malnutrition class, where children are gathered together for instruction in diet and healthful rules. Mothers are urged to come to the class and the homes of the children are visited to engage the cooperation of the parents. Boston, Chicago and New York are among the cities that have such classes. They report great improvement in the children attending them. The school lunch is another important factor in reducing malnutrition.

Medical supervision of all children until they are through the growing period Miss Roberts regards as the fundamental requirements in bringing America's millions of malnourished children up to normal health and strength. Such supervision should mean the prompt recognition of undernourishment, the correction of defects that may contribute to it, and the instruction of the child and his elders in healthful living.

WONDERFUL EGG PRODUCER.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3257 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar today. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

ONE TOUCH OF NATURE.

Down the street came a wagon, loaded with meat and drawn by a well-rounded, well-fed mare. Her steps became slower and slower, and finally, in the middle of the car tracks, she stopped.

"Git ap," said the driver, "git ap, Jenny!"

But Jenny only turned appealing eyes toward the man on the seat. Behind him came the shouts and oaths of other drivers.

"Poor Jenny, poor little horse!" said the big, dirty man. "Is she all tired out?"

At the sound of his voice the little horse sighed a sigh of tired appreciation.

"Never mind," he went on soothingly, as he scrambled down off the seat and took her by the bridle. "We'll go right out to the side here and rest a bit." And he led her away from the crowd and stood patting her well-curried sides, while she rubbed her nose against his face.

The other drivers moved on, then turned and looked. Some of them smiled. Others replaced the whips which had been taken from their sockets to hurry their own horses after the delay.—New York Times.

EDITOR REFUSES TO RAISE PRICE.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 1.—Notwithstanding the tremendous increase in the cost of paper, postage and labor, the editor of The Pathfinder, leading illustrated weekly of the nation's Capital, announces that he is continuing his offer to send the next thirteen weekly issues of that indispensable magazine for 15 cents. The growth of the Pathfinder in circulation and influence has been phenomenal, the reason being that it is published at the seat of government, now the world capital, and that it interprets the news of the whole world so reliably, so intimately that it has become a real authority. Reading the Pathfinder during the next few months will be like sitting with the inner council of those who will mold the world's destiny for the next generation. Fifteen cents mailed now to The Pathfinder, 145 Douglas St., Washington, D. C., will secure you the next thirteen big issues.

Hyomei

THE BREATH of the FOREST

THAT KILLS CATARRH GERMS.

While lecturing in London, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement, and temperance orator and leader of international fame, who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble.

He went to inland Australia, where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the forest, especially the Eucalyptus trees. This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment,—Hyomei.

Hyomei is a germ killing vapor treatment formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. This medicated air is especially effective in treating Catarrh and colds of the head, Catarrhal Coughs, Bronchial Catarrh, Spasmodic Croup, Catarrhal Laryngitis or Hay Fever. It destroys the catarrhal germs and restores health.

Sold on a positive guarantee of satisfactory results or money refunded. Complete outfit $1.15; extra bottle inhalant 60c. At druggists or by mail, if your druggist cannot supply it. Booth's Hyomei Co., Ithaca, N. Y.

FALL HINTS FOR THE GARDEN.

As soon as the first frost has killed the summer annuals the beds should be gone over, all dead growth removed and the beds raked over and put in shape for spring work. It is an excellent plan, when the beds are to remain empty until late spring, to sow some sort of a clover crop—crimson clover, rye or the like—and turn this under in the spring sufficiently early for it to decay before putting in the new crop of annuals or other flowers. This replaces the constantly decreasing supply of humus, as well as protects the ground from leaching during winter—another source of wasted fertility.

At this time of the year one should repair all garden construction, as of fences, trellises, pergolas, seats, gates, paths and the like. An already weakened part is quite apt to succumb under a winter storm or avalanche of snow or sleet. Then, too, it is a distinct advantage to have all this part of the work out of the way before the busy days of spring, when there is always so much more to do than there is time for. The fall is, of all times, the best for getting rid of weeds, as at this time all such growths may be pulled up and burned, preferably on the spot in which they grew, and thus the seeding of another crop be prevented.—From The Making of a Flower Garden, by Ida D. Bennett. (Stokes.)

The Inhalation Treatment for Whooping Cough, Spasmodic Croup, Asthma, Influenza, Coughs, Bronchitis, Colds, Catarrh.

Don't fail to use Cresolene for the distressing, and often fatal affections for which it is recommended. Established 1879 it is a simple, safe, effective and drugless treatment. Vaporized Cresolene stops the paroxysms of Whooping Cough and relieves Spasmodic Croup at once. In asthma it shortens the attack and insures comfortable repose. The air carrying the antiseptic vapor inspired with every breath, makes breathing easy, soothes the sore throat, and stops the cough, assuring restful nights. Cresolene relieves the bronchial complications of Scarlet Fever and Measles and is a valuable aid in the treatment of Diphtheria. Cresolene's best recommendation is its 40 years of successful use. How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter, then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Spring,
Box 4-B, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

CANDY REPLACING ALCOHOL.

Candy makers, professionally at least, are rejoicing in the dry wave. The reason is an inside one. Sugar turns to alcohol when it is eaten and the confectioners are glad to provide "the makings." Men, somewhat sheepishly, are beginning to enter the candy stores for their own sake, and where they used to put one foot on the rail are now munching chocolate over the counter.

Mary Elizabeth, the well-known confectioner of Fifth Avenue and Newport, said recently that more men were seen in her shops than ever before in their history and that she held the prohibition wave responsible.

"It is a known fact that nothing stimulates so quickly as sugar," she said. "More men are buying candy than ever before and more men are coming to tea rooms for their luncheons than ever before. Why? Because they acquire a certain amount of alcohol by eating candy and because they are more particular about their palates when deprived of the stimulus of drink. If they drink they are careless what they eat or how it tastes."

That Mary Elizabeth does not fear the increasing competition in the candy business is proved by her new book, "My Candy Secrets," about to be published by Stokes. In this book she gives away the fruits of her years of experiences as a candy maker.

EGGS PAID THE PASTOR.

Mrs. Lena McBroon, Woodbury, Tenn., writes: "I've got more eggs than I ever did in my life, paid my debts, clothed the children in new dresses, and I paid my pastor his dues. I have money to spare now. 'More Eggs' is the remedy for me. I sold 42 1-2 dozen eggs last week, set four dozen, ate some and had 1 1-2 dozen left."

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, discovered the wonderful tonic, "More Eggs," that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens work all the time. You need this great egg producer. It means big egg profits for you. Don't delay. Send $1 to E. J. Reefer, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and he will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" tonic. A million dollar bank guarantees that if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request. Send a dollar today. Profit by the experience of a man who made a fortune out of poultry.

Their Christmas Vision

"Their Christmas Vision"

This is the title of a program prepared by the Executive Committee for use in the churches and Sunday Schools of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

It is attractive in appearance. Interesting and instructive in material. Makes a strong appeal for the dedication of life to the service of Christ and His Church.

Its use will help carry out the Presbyterian Progressive Program.

It will be sent in sufficient quantities for use in any of the Presbyterian churches and Sunday Schools, free of cost.

Order now. Begin to prepare for the service, December 21, 1919—the day appointed by the General Assembly.

Order from the Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, Henry H. Sweets, Secretary, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

THE COST OF A PIN.

Sticking a pin in a map does not look like an expensive act. But it is. In the rooms of the Public Health Federation, of the Council of Social Agencies, in this city, there is a map on the wall which will be of great interest to every woman in Cincinnati. It will be of special interest to every mother.

For on that map is kept the record of the little children who die every day in this city. That map is full of pins. Some are rose-colored, some are purple, some are yellow. And there are other colors.

Just now the rose-colored pins are in the majority. Each color represents the cause of the loss of the little life. -Rose-colored pins mean diseases of the digestive tract, which are especially prevalent in the summer time. A brown pin means a contagious disease. A purple one means tuberculosis. Black and white mean diseases of the respiratory tracts.

Being a baby is a hazardous occupation. Four hundred little Cincinnati babies died last year before they had reached their first birthday. Four hundred and twelve more died before they were a month old. Eight hundred babies. One-tenth of the total number born in this city last year.

It does not look like an expensive act, sticking a pin in a map, but think what it costs.

Give me Christian young men. They endure the monotony better than non-Christian men and their valor is unequalled in the hour of crisis. This prevalent idea that the dare-devil and harum-scarum men make the best fighters is all wrong. The decent-living man is the decent fighting man.—General Byng.

What Have We Done Today?

We shall do so much in the years to come,
But what have we done today?
We shall give our gold in a princely sum,
But what did we give today?
We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,
We shall plant a hope in the place of fear,
We shall speak the words of love and cheer;
But what did we speak today?

We shall be so kind in the after while,
But what have we been today?
We shall bring each lonely life a smile,
But what have we brought today?
We shall give to truth a grander birth,
And to steadfast faith a deeper worth,
We shall feed the hungry sons of earth;
But whom have we fed today?

We shall reap such joys in the by and by,
But what have we sown today?
We shall build us mansions in the sky,
But what have we built today?
'Tis sweet in idle dreams to bask,
But here and now we do our task,
Yes, this is the thing our souls must ask,
"What have we done today?"

Neglect of the Rich.

WE were much impressed by the following from an article by Dr. Jowett in the Continent: "I will declare my own conviction that so far as the Church of Christ is concerned, and as touching the supreme interests of redemption, the rich are the most neglected class in modern society. We seek their wealth; we welcome their influence; sometimes we invite their patronage; but how rarely do we seek the welfare of their souls! We organize rescue missions and revival missions for people of other classes, but how rarely do we find a church exercising a sanctifying ingenuity in winning the wealthy folk into the fellowship of Jesus Christ our Saviour. And yet, precisely the same deep, hungry necessities haunt their lives as are found in the lives of others who are not so well-to-do. The same basal passions are there, and the worst forms of discontent and weariness. And the Church is not greatly concerned about them. Very few try to help them."

And yet we are told that the so-called laboring class are alienated from the church because they believe the church is concerned only for the rich, that it is the rich man's club from which the poor are practically excluded by social ostracism. But according to Dr. Jowett, the poor are objects of the church's concern; on them she expends money and labor; while it is the rich for whose spiritual welfare the church manifests a sinful indifference. No missions are planted in Millionaire Row; no missionaries are sent to those who live in brown stone fronts; not even the Salvation Army seems to care for their souls.

There is no class who more needs the Gospel. Those who are lifted above the necessity of toil are the ones most exposed to temptation. "The devil still finds work for idle hands to do." But worse than idleness, is the opportunity which wealth gives for self-indulgence. While the poor are "eating their bread in the sweat of their face," constrained to a wholesome moral life by the limitations of their lot, the idle rich are hunting means to gratify the appetites of a sinful, perverse nature. Fashionable resorts, taken up with the extravagancies of folly and the displays of vanity, are the breeding places of divorce and other forms of social scandal. It is hard to say whether society is more rotten at the top or the bottom.

The influence of the rich for good or evil is so much greater than that of the poor that the church should feel deeply concerned to enlist them for Christ. True, God can get on without them. He does not stand in dire need of their help. It is plainly revealed that He is not counting on them for much assistance in carrying forward the work of the Kingdom. Both James and Paul intimate that God has rather discriminated against them. "Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith and heirs of the Kingdom which He hath promised to them that love Him." Thus writes James, and Paul bids the Corinthians to note how that "not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called." But God has not authorized us to discriminate, and therefore the church should plan and labor to save the rich and have them consecrate their influence to the furtherance of the Gospel.

We think of only one mission to the rich and the noble, Whitefield's illustrious friend Lady Huntingdon. While aiding Whitefield with her money to build chapels, to educate preachers, and to do whatever was necessary to give the Gospel to all classes, she threw open her mansion and gathered an audience from the most aristocratic circles of England. She said she thanked God for the letter m. "Paul did not say, 'not any wise men after the flesh, not any mighty, not any noble,' but 'not many,' and that letter m let her in." She thought other nobles might enter through the same door. There is no record of great success. It is related that the Duchess of Buckingham was highly indignant: "It is monstrous," she said, "to be told that you have a heart as sinful as the common wretches that crawl on the earth. This is highly offensive and insulting; and I cannot but wonder that your lordship should relish any sentiments so much at variance with high rank and good breeding." Lady Huntingdon could only give them the Gospel—she could not make them relish it even from the eloquent tongue of Whitefield.

The Synod of North Carolina and Some of Its Doings.

ONE year ago the Synod of North Carolina met in Raleigh by invitation of the church there, but owing to the prevalence of the "flu" there were present only enough members to transact the necessary business.

In view of the high cost of living and the demoralization of the domestic help, one would have supposed that this church would take that meeting as a suitable response to their invitation. However, the good people there do not believe in subterfuges, and they at once renewed their invitation for this year.

It may be that in the first invitation they had some hopes of entertaining angels unawares, but found the angelic representation was absent. The renewal was possibly in view of better luck the next time.

This time also, we fear that the angels, if present, were certainly unawares. It was a full meeting, more so than for years, and its entertainment no doubt was a heavy tax upon the good people. Owing to the lack of domestic help, many of the commissioners were quartered at the hotels, which also entailed a heavy tax upon the entertaining church.

It is fast becoming necessary to make some sensible arrangements for entertaining church courts, especially Synods and the General Assembly.

Our Methodist brethren have adopted the Harvard plan, which is to furnish lodging and breakfast, and then let the commissioner look out for himself the other two meals.

Dr. D. I. Craig, the last moderator, substituted Dr. W. W. Moore in his place to preach the opening sermon. Dr. Moore is a son of this Synod and is always a welcomed visitor. His sermon, a large part of which we printed last week, was worthy of the man and of the occasion.

When the time came for the election of a moderator, a strange and unusual scene was presented. Four preachers and one elder were nominated: Rev. E. D. Brown, Rev. W. C. Brown, Rev. Dr. J. H. Henderlite, and Rev. Dr. A. A. McGeachy, with Ruling Elder J. W. McLaughlin, of the Raeford Church, "and they all with one consent began to make excuse." Each man had some good reason for dodging the honor. It reminded one of Caesar refusing the crown, or of the blushing maiden, who after refusing the offered hand, wished to be scared again. Seriously, we are sorry that these brethren declined. Of course outside of the honor, the office has little to recommend it, for it means a nervous strain and a close application to the work in hand. Either of the parties nominated would have done honor to the office, and the bestowal of the honor would have put the Synod's stamp of approval upon them.

Dr. Egbert Smith delivered before Synod his recent experiences in China, Japan and Korea. Those who have heard this lecture have all been interested, because there are few men in the church more gifted in ready speech. Dr. Smith eschews statistics and in rapid narrative he makes his hearers see just what he has seen.

He afterwards expressed to the editor his regret at seeing him in the audience, because he knew that it would be his fourth hearing. We wish thus publicly to assure him that each time we enjoy the story, because a good story, like wines, grows better with age. In fact, there is a rare pleasure, when a man is far from home, to meet a familiar face, such as this trip has become. We could run ahead and anticipate what was coming, and then we could but admire the wonderful accuracy of the speaker. He was evidently not drawing the long bow, as some travelers are wont to do, but he told the story each time without any great variation.

The story of the old Chinaman was like an old friend. Time had left no marks of change upon it, and in imagination we felt the genial glow of his humor as he passed judgment upon Dr. Smith's age and dessicated appearance.

At this Synod and often at other church courts, an attempt was made to vary the devotional exercises. We can appreciate the motive, but it has never succeeded. The genius of Presbyterianism is to worship "according to the pattern shown on the mount." If you proceed regularly, they will respond, but when you ask for voluntary prayers or verses to be quoted, there is always an awful pause that is not conducive to a devotional spirit.

Just at this point let the editor express his thanks to Dr. White, the pastor of the church, and Elder J. R. Young, for their courtesy in securing him the floor in order to present the claims of the Standard. We were able to give the best report of the paper in all of its long history, and to assure the Synod that a Synodical paper was, no longer an experiment, but a reality.

A. M. Scales, of Greensboro, one of our most efficient elders, made a very striking speech on Christian Education. Mr. Scales appeared before Synod more than once during the sessions, not willingly, but almost compelled by the opportunity of those who knew his happy knack of striking true in a popular address.

On Christian Education he was followed by Dr. W. W. Moore, who began by expressing his trepidation in having to follow such a man with inadequate preparation. Dr. Moore may have made little preparation, as he claimed, but out of his general knowledge of all subjects, he can always be depended upon to sustain his reputation. His sentences are not only well rounded, but through them there generally runs a vein of humor, which is so conspicuously lacking in many addresses whose chief virtue seems their ability to empty a house in a very short time.

The Synod accepted an invitation to a reception at Peace Institute, and attended it en masse.

The many old students through the State will learn with pleasure that under the efficient leadership of Miss Mary Graham, the Institute is rapidly coming to the front among our schools. Like the Scripture measure, it is full and running over, and judging by the program presented, they are doing excellent work.

If the editor had been asked for his monument, like Christopher Wren, he would have pointed to the dean of the school, and two teachers, and said: "If you seek my monument, look around you." These three were trained by him, while a fourth one was among his first teachers when he began his work at the Presbyterian College. When one watched the dean moving with quiet dignity among the many girls, he could at once have seen that she could have attained such dignity save under the example of the dignified president.

The Home Mission Committee, through its chairman, A. W. Crawford, made the best report in its history. Besides the wonderful advance in contributions it encouraged us all by announcing that the salaries of the Home Mission workers would be increased 50 per cent over what they were in 1914.

Governor Bickett was presented to the Synod and made a short address.

The question of union with other churches came up in the report of the Committee on the Minutes of the General Assembly, where the Synods are requested to appoint a member of the ad-interim committee to consider the question of union or federation with other bodies. Dr. J. M. Wells, of Wilmington, for two years has been a member of a similar committee, and logically he was the man for this committee, not only because he knows more about the subject than any man in the Synod, but he also represents, as we believe, the views of the majority. It was feared that his nomination would be opposed, but the committee was unanimous for him, and when the report was presented to the Synod, it was adopted without a dissenting vote.

The support of the minister of the church at Chapel Hill was a subject that provoked a long discussion. There was no difference of opinion as to the man to put there or the importance of the work, but opinion varied as to the manner of doing it. A special committee heretofore has raised the money by personal solicitation. Dr. Richards proposed that it be made a part of the work of Home Missions, and be assigned to that committee. It was argued on the other hand that in the past when that committee had it in charge they failed to keep up the salary, and that the special committee had been able to do so.

Mr. George Watts, who had been one of the contributors to the special fund, spoke in favor of turning the work over to the Home Mission Committee, and it was his speech that largely determined the decision to do so. The vote, however, was very close, 64 to 60, and after it was announced, one member insisted that a correct count would have reversed the decision.

Dr. Venable spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Moss' work among the students. Mr. Archibald Graham, the father of the late President Graham, made a most earnest appeal for the sustaining of the work there.

Another subject that occasioned a spirited debate was one recommendation in the report of the Regents of the Barium Orphanage. This recommendation was that some discretion be given the management as to the admission of illegitimate children. As there are strong reasons for their admission as well as for their exclusion, the debate was necessarily protracted, with the result that the question is to be studied by the management and brought before the next Synod.

Dr. Moore spoke in behalf of the Training School at Richmond. He promised to speak only five minutes, and such is the innate honesty of the man that at the end of five minutes he actually stopped, and only continued a few minutes longer when by a special vote the Synod asked him to do so.

We could recall so many instances where false hopes were raised by some preachers promising to close in a few minutes, only to find that the phrase, a few minutes, was used in a metaphorical sense.

Among the commissioners there was one colored minister, Rev. J. S. Morrow, a most worthy negro, the pastor of three colored churches in and near North Wilkesboro. On his way down he either lost his pocketbook or else it was stolen. When this came to the notice of a few of the members of Synod, they raised for him upwards of $45.00.

The Progressive Program was presented by Dr. A. S. Johnson, Dr. W. E. Hill and R. E. Magill. The speeches were short and pointed, models of what addresses should be.

We have never known a more peaceable Synod, nor a meeting where each man felt that he had been especially favored in his entertainment. It was a big undertaking for Raleigh in these times of high cost, yet they measured up to the undertaking in every respect.

Has Not Separate Existence Made For Harmony?

By Three Ruling Elders.

WHAT has our Church done to show that she has a right to live? We think that she has justified her separate and continued existence. Especially is it a fact that her separation has not been followed by the baneful consequences which would indicate that she did wrong, the practical results have proved that her maintenance of the fundamental principles for which she stood out has been productive of practical results.

Has she made progress? In the study of this question it must be remembered that her earliest and formative years were spent in the direst poverty, disruption, and distress, in scenes of warfare and reconstruction and the upheaval of all her material dependencies. That she has made progress is shown by the fact that, despite all her handicaps, the little church of 1870, numbering 840 ministers, 1,469 churches, 82,014 communicants, raising all told for her own support and for the benevolences the sum of $872,355, is today the stately body of nearly 400,000 communicants, nearly 2,000 ministers, nearly 3,500 churches, giving last year, in spite of its being war times again, the great sum of $6,516,303 to the cause of Christ.

This progress may be seen more clearly by a careful comparison, during certain corresponding periods, with her sister church of the North. In using in this article the terms "Northern" and "Southern," let it be distinctly understood that it is with no intention of offence or of localizing either body, but simply as a means of greater clearness and brevity. The comparison, it should be noted, is not possible throughout all periods or the whole period before and since 1870, owing to the fact just before the latter date the union of the Old School and New School took place, and in 1906 the Cumberland Church was added, these two unions making an addition in an unusual way to the figures of the Northern Church. The comparison may be justly made for the periods of 1870 to 1900 and 1910 to 1919, and will be confined to these, that only normal and not unusual conditions and accretions may be considered.

From 1870 to 1900 the Northern Church grew as follows:
Ministers, 4,238 to 7,467, or 76 per cent; the Southern Church increased from 840 to 1,461, or 74 per cent.

Communicants, 446,561 to 1,007,689, or 125 per cent; the Southern Church 82,014 to 225,890, or 175 per cent.

Sabbath School enrollment, 448,857 to 1,058,051, or 135 per cent; the Southern Church 47,317 to 162,388, or 243 per cent.

Contributions to Foreign Missions, the clearest indication of the state of the Church's heart and the best measure of her activity, $366,274 to $1,088,367, or 197 per cent; the Southern Church $29,059 to $161,170, or 454 per cent.

Total contributions to self-support and all benevolences, $8,440,121 to $15,054,301, or 78 per cent; the Southern Church $872,355 to $2,041,842, or 134 per cent.

From 1910 to 1919, the Northern Church, with the Cumberland resources added, grew as follows:

Ministers, 7,075 to 9,918, or nine per cent; the Southern Church 1,694 to 1,956, or 15 per cent.

Communicants, 1,339,000 to 1,603,033, or 19 per cent; the Southern Church 281,920 to 364,230, or 29 per cent.

Sabbath School enrollment, 1,211,527 to 1,319,416, or eight per cent; the Southern Church 225,645 to 288,703, or 27 per cent.

Contributions to Foreign Missions, $1,497,271 to $2,213,924, or 47 per cent; the Southern Church $420,602 to $791,441, or 88 per cent.

Total contributions, to self-support and all benevolences, $22,958,968 to $32,804,708, or 42 per cent; the Southern Church $3,932,827 to $6,516,303, or 65 per cent.

Thus has our Church, in her greatly straightened circumstances and far more difficult field, more than kept pace with her great neighbor, and proved her right to a place in the sisterhood of churches. Would it be right for her to jeopardize this splendid progress which she has made with any kind of closer relations which might lessen it? This is a very practical as well as pertinent question just now. Certainly, so far as she herself is concerned, in the matter of her own development and progress, there is no call for her to take any step that may interfere with the steady and substantial growth and activity which she has enjoyed.

Imperfectly Organized.

We do not wish to be considered a pessimist, looking for the dark side of every picture, or a mote-hunter, looking for "the splinter" in every eye, or one who is posing as a doctor for our church; but the following conditions exist, and every Presbyterian in the Synod of South Carolina should be familiar, we think, with them.

We have in the Synod of South Carolina 291 churches. Of these 84 reported last year no additions, and 25 reported no contributions to any cause.

We have in Bethel Presbytery three churches with only one elder; in Charleston Presbytery one church without any elders, six churches with only one elder, and five churches without deacons; in Congaree Presbytery, one church without any elders, seven churches with only one elder, and four churches without deacons; in Enoree Presbytery, four churches with only one elder and three churches without deacons; in Harmony Presbytery, two churches with only one elder and one church without deacons; in Pee Dee Presbytery, two churches with only one elder; in Piedmont Presbytery, one church without any elders, one church with only one elder, and one church without deacons; in South Carolina Presbytery, two churches with only one elder and two churches without deacons.

There was in each church established by the apostles, a plurality of elders. "And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders (more than one) of the church," Acts 20:17. "And when they had ordained them elders (more than one) in every church and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed," Acts 14:23.

We have in the Synod of South Carolina 30 churches with only one elder or no elders—30 churches, which in their present state of organization are not apostolic in government—and, therefore not Presbyterian.

Greenville, S. C.

Jesse C. Rowan.

How to Make $1.00 Yield Quick Returns of $1.10.

Two of North Carolina's best citizens have made the Lees-McRae Institute at Banner Elk the following proposition: They have agreed to give dollar for dollar for every dollar that we raise for the "North Carolina Building" up to and including $2,000, and the General Assembly's Committee has agreed to add 10 per cent to all the funds that we raise for permanent buildings. It will therefore be seen that for every dollar that our friends give (up to $2,000), the school will get an additional sum of $1.10.

We feel sure that our friends who have never failed us in the past will make it possible for us to call on the special friends mentioned above to fulfill their part of the obligation. To this end we ask every one who reads these words or who hears of this opportunity of so using a dollar that it will yield more than 100 fold for the benefit of permanent buildings, to send a contribution, and be sure to state how it is to be used.

Edgar Tufts.

The Synod of North Carolina

By Rev. E. C. Murray, D.D.

THE Synod of North Carolina met in Raleigh, October 28, at 7:30 p. m., with an attendance of 153 ministers and 105 ruling elders, besides the visitors. At the request of the retiring moderator, Dr. D. I. Craig, the opening sermon was preached by Dr. W. W. Moore, on Is. 40:31, in his own matchless style.

Hon. J. W. McLauchlin, of Raeford, was elected moderator; Dr. D. I. Craig was re-elected stated clerk, and Dr. E. C. Murray, permanent clerk, and Rev. E. L. Siler was elected recording clerk, all for three years.

The Synodical communion service was held Wednesday morning, and the memorials of deceased ministers were read: J. H. Dixon, W. W. Davidson, C. A. Munroe, D.D., J. B. Shearer, D.D., and A. J. McKelway, D.D.

Foreign Missions.

The committee reported the glorious fruits of the year's work and emphasized its vastly increased cost, due to peculiar financial conditions the world over. Dr. E. W. Smith told of his recent visit to our Oriental fields in an address full of mingled pathos, humor and eloquent appeal. The death of Mrs. George Stevens, of China, was announced, and prayer offered for the bereaved husband.

Synodical Home Missions.

Rev. A. W. Crawford, superintendent, reported 40 men employed, one church and 14 Sunday Schools organized, 2,212 professions of faith, and $28,359 contributed. For all home mission work in the Synod $76,642 was given. Since 1905 the Synod, including Asheville Presbytery, has increased 89 ministers, 105 churches, 21,604 members, and 20,182 Sunday School enrollment. The program of synodical missions adopted by Synod for next year includes an increased apportionment from $25,000 to $50,000, 20 new evangelists, mission work among the negroes, and the support of Dr. W. D. Moss' splendid work as college pastor of the 200 Presbyterians in the University. Stirring addresses were made by Hon. A. M. Scales and Dr. E. W. Smith.

Schools and Colleges.

It was reported that there are in our country 10,000 more students in the denominational colleges than in all the state and non-denominational institutions, and they furnish 80 per cent of our ministers. Pastors were urged to preach on Christian education and its relationship to ministerial supply and Christian leadership. Davidson and our colleges for women are crowded and rejecting many for lack of accommodations. An interesting exhibit was made of large group photographs of the 1,871 students in Union Seminary, Davidson, the four colleges for women, and the Presbyterian high schools.

The million dollar campaign inaugurated by the conference of schools and colleges was endorsed by Synod, and a number of prominent ministers and business men were added to the campaign committee. $425,000 has been raised, and the addresses of Dr. W. W. Moore, Rev. M. E. Melvin, Hon. A. M. Scales and others gave new impetus to the movement.

Orphans' Home.

There are 260 in the home, and about $50,000 was contributed. With 200 cases of influenza there were no deaths. The home owns 500 acres of land and about 100 head of cattle. The Women's Auxiliary is building a dining room and kitchen, and there is $1,200 in hand for a new dormitory. The endowment has been increased by $500.

The Regents were instructed to enlarge the sphere of usefulness of the home by making provision for orphans who can be supported by their friends, by securing homes for orphans, by contributing to the support of fatherless children in their mothers' homes, and by considering the question of provision for illegitimates.

Women's Auxiliary.

There are 324 societies with a membership of 8,393, the largest Synodical Auxiliary in the Assembly. The total gifts amounted to $98,475, an increase of 25 per cent. They have 195 mission study classes and 33 prayer bands, and take 3,312 copies of the Missionary Survey. Synod expressed its gratification that the earnest, praying women are sharing with us more and more a sense of the urgent calls made upon the church, and are rising in deep-hearted response to the ever-widening opportunities which challenge for Christian sacrifice and service.

Young People's Societies.

These societies now number 247, and contributed about $9,000. An interesting conference was held by 200 representatives assembled in Queens College last June. Synod took a great forward step in response to an overture from the Women's Auxiliary, in organizing all young people's societies into the Presbyterian Young People's League of the Synod of North Carolina. The local church societies, Christian Endeavor, etc., will retain their names and constitutions.

Montreat.

The attendance on the summer conferences was nearly 12,000, and thousands were turned away for lack of accommodation. The Mountain Retreat Association is now planning, with the endorsement of the General Assembly, a campaign for $200,000 for a new auditorium, hotels, cottages, lighting plant, sewerage, etc.

The Montreat Normal School is doing an increasingly good work, with a faculty of nine and 57 students from all parts of the South and abroad.

Systematic Beneficence.

Synod accepted its quota of $663,030 of the $4,000,000 beneficence fund, approved of Presbyterian and group conferences in the interest of the progressive program, appointed Rev. T. P. Allen, Synodical manager of the campaign, and ordered that the committee on Systematic Beneficence be given at the next meeting of Synod a regular order for a popular meeting in the interests of stewardship and beneficence. Inspiring addresses on the progressive program were made by Drs. A. S. Johnson and W. E. Hill and Mr. R. E. Magill. Synod appointed as its representatives on the Assembly's committee on Stewardship and Systematic Beneficence, Dr. D. C. Lilly and Elder G. W. Watts, with Dr. E. C. Murray and Elder W. J. Martin, alternates.

Statistics.

The Presbyteries reported 250 ministers, 105 licentiates and candidates, 494 churches, 58,066 members, 2,078 accessions on profession, and 44,705 Sunday School enrollment. They contributed to Foreign Missions $132,593, to Home Missions $130,641, to Schools and Colleges $148,422, to Orphans' Home $63,097, and to other beneficent causes $103,504, a total of $578,257; and to pastor's salaries and congregational expenses $494,613; a grand total of $1,072,870.

Addresses on the Inter-Church World Movement were made by Dr. E. C. Cronk, of New York, and by Dr. E. N. Orr, field secretary.

Amid this multiplicity of business Synod found no time to discuss closer relations with other churches.

Hearty thanks were tendered the hospitable people of Raleigh for their entertainment in these times of domestic tribulation, and to Peace Institute for the delightful reception Wednesday afternoon.

Synod adjourned late Thursday night to meet in the Church of the Covenant, Wilmington, October 26, 1920. St. Pauls, N. C.

Dr. Ogden Replies to Dr. Whaling

THE hopelessness of a cause is revealed when its advocates are compelled to resort to personal attacks.

Dr. Whaling, in a recent article, takes me to task for ignorance and inaccuracy of statement in my "Open Letter to Laymen."

He does not deal with the four questions considered in my article, but with me, my supposed "ambition to be the tutor and mentor of the entire church," and my "competency(?) as an instructor." The flings are, I think, undeserved by me, and, I know, unworthy of him. Doubtless they will make my friends more loyal, and his somewhat ashamed.

He says my use of the word "laymen" reveals the "cabiler of my Presbyterianism," and that I should seek instruction "as to the proper usage of the word." Let us see.

Perhaps he thinks the term is improper in Presbyterian circles because of its historic association with a sacerdotal system, or perhaps he means that ruling elders as ordained men, should not be thus addressed. I think I am correct in saying that the word "layman" has come into general usage in Presbyterian circles, as a term applied to all the men of the church, other than ministers. At the last meeting of our Synod, having learned that Dr. Whaling was after me, I noted the use of the term. Again and again the phrase was heard, "ministers and laymen." If I mistake not, ruling elders are not only members, but constitute the very heart of our great Laymen's Missionary movement. In this sense I used the term. I was not writing exclusively to ruling elders, but had in mind all the men of the church, other than ministers.

The Standard Dictionary defines "layman" thus: "A man, especially a church member, who is not a clergyman," and, unhappily for Dr. Whaling, among the illustrations of the use of the term, we find this phrase, "a Presbyterian layman."

I have found it wise to use the language of the people. It makes one more understandable. When I say the sun has risen, I am not revealing scientific ignorance. Perhaps Dr. Whaling would say, "the revolution of the earth upon its axis, has brought into view the orb of day."

My second manifestation of ignorance and inaccuracy, is in this paragraph which Dr. Whaling quotes from my article:

"For the first time, our Assembly has authorized the appointment of a committee to confer with a similar committee of the U. S. A. Church upon the entire subject of closer relations, including all possible forms of union."

Dr. Whaling labels this "a startling and inexplicable misstatement," and shows from the records of the 1917 Assembly and of the conference committee, that at the beginning of the two years' work of the committee, the question of organic union was, from a technical viewpoint, before them.

I am perfectly willing to admit that my statement, in order to accurately convey what was in my mind, should have had a qualifying phrase, "in a free and unbiased way." It would then read:

"For the first time our Assembly has authorized the appointment of a committee to confer, in a free and unbiased way, with a similar committee of the U. S. A. Church, upon the entire subject of closer relations, including all possible forms of union."

It is my firm conviction that there has never been a free and unbiased conference between the two Assemblies, in reference to organic union, of the provincial assembly form, the synodical form, or any other form.

The Assembly of 1917, in appointing the committee, said it did not regard organic union as practicable at this time, and recommended the consideration of federation.

The conference committee, in reporting to the 1918 Assembly a federal plan, used the words, "with the voice of the Assembly in mind—we do not regard organic union as practicable at this time."

The 1918 Assembly, in continuing and enlarging the conference committee, went on record as opposing organic union at this time, and favoring the federal idea.

The enlarged conference committee at its first regular meeting passed the following resolution: "That the committee is limited by the action of the Durant Assembly to the consideration of federal union with other Presbyterian bodies, and negotiations with the committee of the U. S. A. Church shall be limited to that subject."

In view of this fact, how is it possible for Dr. Whaling, in insisting that organic union was definitely before the conference, to write "for two years this committee most carefully heard and considered all the statements and propositions that the U. S. A. brethren were pleased to make."

During the first year they heard propositions of organic union only to resist and to reject them. During the second year, they refused even to hear. I am not censuring the committee; they had behind them utterances of the Assembly. I am suggesting that even Dr. Whaling may lapse into inaccuracy. For which I forgive him.

The Assembly at New Orleans, realizing that the federal plan, formulated and reported by its committee of conference, was impossible, authorized the erection of another committee to "consider the whole question of closer relations."

That organic union was one of the possible solutions in the mind of the Assembly, is shown by the instruction given to the committee, in case the discussion of closer relations should contemplate organic union—namely, that the committee safeguard the historic position of our church concerning "sound doctrine, just and effective discipline, the plenary inspiration and inerrancy of the Scriptures, the vicarious atonement, the spiritual mission of the church, and its obligation to abstain from interference in matters purely of civil or political concern, its position as to its negro constituency in the South, and other matters of like interest and importance." In this action the Assembly does not bias the committee against organic union, but wisely guides in the consideration of it.

Whatever may have been my verbal inaccuracy in the paragraph seized upon by Dr. Whaling, I am absolutely right in the statement that the committee now being formed of the Synod's nominees, approaches the problem of union in an untrammelled way, unknown to the previous committees.

Dr. Whaling harps upon "consolidation." Neither the "provincial assembly plan," nor the "synodical plan" contemplates what he is pleased to call "consolidation," but that which I term "simon pure organic union." Both of these provide for local self-government, and ecclesiastical union through representation.

(In justice to Dr. Ogden we publish the above, but trust that the discussion will stop at this point, as it is becoming too personal.—Editor.)

The Unsigned Covenant.

During the conferences of the past summer at Montreat a sermon was preached on the text, "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." Acts 1:8.

Not many days after, a note was handed to Dr. Lingle, the manager of the conferences, suggesting that some step be taken to open the way for those who might desire to do so, to enter into a covenant for 1919-1920 to intercede with our Lord, asking Him to give the Holy Spirit in great and manifest power to our entire church.

The suggestion was received kindly and cordially, with the counter request that the author of the suggestion prepare a tentative form of the suggested covenant.

The form was prepared and Dr. Lingle read it publicly on a Sabbath morning to a great audience. No visible or audible covenant was made, and it was probably wise not to push or apparently coerce the signing of the covenant; but as was suggested, God sees and knows when the hearts of His people have really come into one agreement to ask Him and continually and to urgently intercede with Him for the churchwide outpouring of His Spirit.

The purport of the form of covenant that Dr. Lingle read was in brief, that we realize that we are in great need of

Ministerial Derelicts

LONG ago I read a story of a Spanish galleon, richly freighted with gold and silver, from which a storm had swept the crew and it had been since drifting aimlessly, doing no good to anybody. It was called a "derelict." I have thought it a fit symbol of some in the Gospel ministry. Religiously they are loaded with "the wealth of Ormus and of Ind;" but for some reason—perhaps for various reasons—the cargo cannot be delivered. A right wide experience in overlooking the work of other ministers, so far as Presbyterian ways will allow, has convinced me that often one defect can mar and mayhap ruin an entire career, the gold laden galleon circling around among the churches without "delivering the goods." at last to become a derelict. One was a really fine preacher but prone to criticise the trivial faults and even the innocent peculiarities of others, finally he got to branding the work of highly successful ministers as superficial, possibly "to save his own face," and of course he was soon a persona non grata. Another was a strong reasoner, but had a delivery unbearable to the ears and the nerves, the food being rich but served in a "tin-pan" voice. Memory calls up another, the soul of honor and a ripe scholar, whose time was so absorbed by historic research and the decisions of church courts, that his discourses seemed the opposite of the saintly Rutherford, "insatiably greedy for souls." He did love the souls of men but allowed the evangelical to be engulfed in the maelstrom of personal tendencies. Another, widely read man, an authority on church law, was untidy in his dress and devoted about half an hour to the special preparation of each sermon. So his messages were still-born and "W. C." has long stood opposite his name. A certain man's character is pure as morning dew and he delights in "revival meetings," but for some reason—perhaps timidity—he sits around wishing without working. I think he is afraid some man might be driven away if he should put a finger in his buttonhole, look gently into his eyes and tell of Christ's redeeming love and everyone's need of salvation. A pleasant man, whom everybody likes and trusts, he could multiply himself sevenfold if he would just "get busy." I am purposely not discussing dishonest or untruthful ministers or those who play the role of "Dr. Blowhard" and try to raise themselves balloon-like to fame. I began with ministerial galleons, laden with the sterling silver of character and even the yellow gold of grace, whose barren ministries are due to just one or two deficiencies. I write this in modesty as a man should who has glass windows, at least, in his own house, and therefore must not throw stones but try to help. Long before I reached "the dead line of fifty"—so much dreaded—I had a settled conviction that if a minister continued to study and to really pray and then used his powers, like Paul, in "teaching publicly and from house to house," he would have plenty of work till called to an invalid's chair or a heavenly crown; and I have not seen cause to revise my opinion. A good while ago I passed "the dead line of fifty." In the nature of the case before long I will cross the border. And I feel like saying this word to my companions in years, that if we stay close to Jesus, "keep sweet" and cherish the Master's "compassion when He saw the multitudes as sheep having no shepherd," and go after them, "making mention of His righteousness, even of His only," the Saviour will not only reveal Himself to us but we "shall still bring forth fruit in old age." And as all this is entirely anonymous, may I not say that God is giving me larger opportunity and fruitfulness than ever before?

The New Apportionments.

By Rev. J. L. Beattie.

THE apportionments for the next March canvass are now being printed and sent down to the sessions. The remarkable thing about them is the rather uniform estimate of beneficent ability at from three to five times the salaries of pastors. This ratio suits a considerable number of the abler churches. For a few it is too low, and for a great many it is too high.

Many of the churches are giving from three to five times as much for salaries as they are giving to beneficences and think they do well. The apportionments seem to them enormous. At once they are offended and feel no further interest in the matter. They deserve relief.

Apportionments to be Scripturally authorized, and naturally fair as well, must certainly be based on ability and on nothing else. There are differences of ability among all the churches whether in the country or in the city. The giving ability of some city churches is several times that of other and larger churches only a few blocks away. Similarly the same thing may be said of country churches.

As a minister of a group of some both small and weak country churches, and voluntarily in behalf of all that sort of churches, the writer of this communication pleads for an apportionment to be based on ability, and moves that the this heavenly power and that we are agreed to put our Lord to the test and ask Him and continue asking till He give that for which we ask, an abundant outpouring of His Spirit upon the entire church in this land and in other lands. It was also suggested that we go up before Him and ask for 100,000 souls for this season of 1919-1920.

Have you entered this covenant? It is unsigned by your hand, but does your heart sign it?

While we are definitely engaged in the task of raising $3,500,000, and asking our Lord for this sum, is there any reason why we should not try to bring 100,000 souls to Him and ask Him to so use us that it shall certainly be done?

Inf.

Assembly soon to meet in Charlotte be asked to take steps to have the sessions report to the Presbyteries, and they to the following Assembly, on blanks prepared for the purpose, the true income of every congregation throughout the bounds of the whole church.

The apportionments then to be made should be required to be by percentages gradually raised in passing from the weakest to the strongest, say from one or two per cent to 40 or 50 per cent. It is of course here to be understood that the tithe has not passed over from the Old Testament into the New Testament, unchanged and unchangeable. That institution was a grievous burden on the very poor, and one that made but light demand of the very rich. The new rule is kinder and juster, and invites all to the fullest ability of a consecrated mind and fortune.

There should be no occasion to resent admitting and reporting incomes on the part of any church or person. Under the Mosaic dispensation the tithe was, of course, one-tenth of the income. The law opposed concealment. The labor organizations are seeking to disclose all business secrets. The income of farmers is published by the government for everybody to read. In 1909 the average income of farmers' families in North Carolina was $503.78. The tithe of that average was $50.378. But the average country family is not giving that much to all causes, local and general, and cheerfully living on the remaining $453.40.

The Assembly's committee on apportionments ought by all means to have the advantage of an accurate knowledge of living conditions throughout the bounds of the entire church when they make their estimates and submit their recommendations. The poor country churches want to be so rated among the other churches, that they may pay their just part of the common expenditures, and be entitled to equal honor with each and every one of them, because when they are asked to give according to their ability, they will.

Finally, let them not be asked to give a tithe and to live on hundreds, while the rich churches give far less than a tithe, and live on thousands. Let the poor of both country and city in their giving approach the tithe in amount, and the rich everywhere in their giving increase toward many tithes. Is this not right?

Montreat Safe For the Church and Church Control

By Rev. R. C. Anderson, President.

MONTREAT is comparatively young, just 12 years old in its relation to the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. One of the greatest difficulties encountered in its progress and development has been to get clearly before the Church the facts concerning its organization, purpose and management. Little time has been allotted to the presentation of its cause before the church courts and in the brief time allotted for this purpose it has been impossible to do more than to present a brief outline of the many phases of its workings. A vast amount of literature has been printed and widely distributed, but, unfortunately in these busy days, literature concerning church institutions is carefully read only by a few.

We have encountered many erroneous impressions and much has been said and accepted as true concerning Montreat and its management, which has no foundation whatever in facts. The General Assembly and the several executive agencies of the church have heartily and unanimously endorsed a campaign among the churches to raise $200,000 to meet the immediate necessities of the physical enlargement of Montreat that she may more adequately serve the church and her several causes. Arrangements are now being made to inaugurate this campaign and it seems fitting that the church should have a clear understanding as to the security and control of Montreat as a church institution. To this end this article is written.

In the old charter provision was made for securing the institution for the use of our church, which provision was perfectly satisfactory to the General Assembly, when Montreat was first inaugurated under the general supervision of the church. The following sections appear in the charter:

"Section XVII. That the objects, aims and purposes of the Mountain Retreat Association are the moral and mental improvement of men and women and the promotion of educational and religious interest; and if the acts and conduct of any stockholders in said corporation shall be such as to materially injure said aims and purpose, then said corporation, the Mountain Retreat Association, shall have the right to buy the stock of such stockholder at its true market value and cancel the same, or place in the treasury of said corporation."

"Section XIII. That the board of directors of the said, the Mountain Retreat Association shall be not less than 25 nor more than 50 in number, two-thirds of whom shall be officers in the Presbyterian Church in the U. S."

"Section XXI. That all of the property owned by said corporation and all the income therefrom shall be used for educational, charitable and religious purposes, and beautifying and improving its grounds and property, making the same attractive and appropriate for religious and educational purposes, the preservation of health, the prevention of diseases and the comfort of the inhabitants of the community."

"Section X. All property owned by said corporation such as public property held or used for the common good as in municipalities, school property, library property, land and buildings used for religious assemblies and public worship and all property of every description, the income of which is used for public or common good, for schools, religious work and worship, libraries, orphanages and charitable or benevolent purposes together with said income shall be exempt from taxation."

It will be seen from the above that Montreat was organized as a religious and educational institution, and while a stock company, the stock was made non-dividend paying, and all the proceeds of the institution were to be devoted to the improvement and the development of Montreat. Under this provision the property was made exempt from taxation and two-thirds of its governing body had to be officers in the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. To make security doubly secure, however, the stockholders in meeting unanimously voted that the stockholders be asked to transfer their stock to a body of trustees to be held for the church under a declaration of trust, providing that Montreat should forever be held in trust by trustees who were nominated by the several Synods and the General Assembly. The executive committee of the Mountain Retreat Association was appointed as a special committee to solicit the stock and transfer it in the best form, to trustees to be held for the church. A declaration of trust was most carefully prepared and 79, a majority of the certificates of stock, was transferred under this declaration of trust, providing that the stock should be held forever for the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. This declaration of trust, which has been incorporated as an amendment to the original charter, provides in part as follows:

"Section II. Said board of trustees of stock and their successors forever shall hold and possess said stock for and upon the following uses, purposes, trusts and conditions, to-wit: (a) Said board of trustees shall use, hold, vote and control said stock in such a way and in such manner as to insure and guarantee that the property, real and personal, now owned and controlled by the Mountain Retreat Association, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of North Carolina, shall be perpetually held and used for the objects and purposes set forth and expressed in its charter and the amendments thereto now existing or hereafter made, and that said property shall not go into hands of any person or persons, firm or corporation who shall use the same for selfish, speculative or money-making purposes, but the said property, real and personal, of the Mountain Retreat Association shall forever be used for the promotion and advancement of the Christian religion, under the auspices and control of the Presbyterian Church in the United States commonly known as the Southern Presbyterian Church, for the promotion of the highest standards of morals and intelligence, the promotion of health, the advancement of the religion of Jesus Christ, and generally for the purposes mentioned in the charter of the Mountain Retreat Association and the amendments thereto, and said property so owned by the Mountain Retreat Association shall be sacredly devoted to the purposes herein expressed and mentioned and to the objects and purposes set forth in the charter of the said Mountain Retreat Association and the amendments thereto, and to said trustees."

(b) "That always at least three-fourths of the members of said board of trustees constituting the trustees, holding the capital stock (common) of said Mountain Retreat Association under this trust, shall always be officers, ministers, elders, or deacons in the Presbyterian Church, and the several Synods and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States shall have the power to nominate trustees and when such power is exercised, the trustees in electing successors, shall elect from such nominees, enough trustees, so that the majority of the board of trustees shall consist of such nominees."

(d) "That at least three-fourths of the members of the managing committee, provided in the charter of the Mountain Retreat Association, shall always be officers, ministers, elders, or deacons in the Presbyterian Church in the United States, generally known as the Southern Presbyterian Church."

(e) "No change in the charter of said Mountain Retreat Association shall be made until said trustees or their successors or a quorum of said trustees or their successors shall request such change or changes."

(h) "I hereby declare the purpose and intent of this trust to be that the property of the Mountain Retreat Association shall forever remain a religious and educational foundation under the auspices and control of the said several Synods and the said General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, commonly known as the Southern Presbyterian Church, and as indicated and set forth in paragraph (b) of this declaration of trust that said property shall never be used for speculative, selfish or any other purpose than for

Organic Union

III. Difference of Attitude Toward Doctrine.

By a Pastor.

MY previous articles have been devoted chiefly to telling why I am not enthusiastic for union, though willing for it when the conditions are proper. I will now give some reasons for being strongly opposed to union at this time. These reasons may be summed up in the statement that present conditions render such union the betrayal of a solemn responsibility to God, to the truth, and to the church of the future. Our church holds a singular relation to Christian doctrine. This is true of Presbyterianism in general, and our branch of the church has its special mission in that field. "Arminianism makes scholars and Calvinism makes thinkers." In the development and defense of the doctrines of grace the Presbyterian Church has been foremost. There never has been an uninspired elaborator of Scripture doctrine the equal of Calvin. But "doctrines of grace" have fallen on evil days in our time. Interest in religious truth as truth is at a low ebb. Careful thinking has been displaced by scholarship, the mere accumulation of knowledge. Religious truth is sacrificed to religious sentiment, and to mere ethics and philanthropy. As if there could be any correct sentiment dissociated from truth or any proper religious life that is not founded on correct ideas of truth. A man's belief is what he be-lives. The similarity of the words is accidental, but the connection of ideas is genuine. What a man believes is the thing that he will live by or be-lives. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." The word "doctrine" is ridiculed by many in these days, as if it had never been used in the Word of God, and as if it were an abstraction born of human speculation and had no connection with the issues of life and death and eternity. It is to be feared that much of the desire of the different denominations to unite with each other is not the result of their greater agreement on questions of religious truth, but the result of indifference to truth as such. A gentleman who has lectured in many churches in the East and in the West told me that a number of times in the West the pastor would come to him before his lecture and ask him not to discuss Christian Science too severely because there were Christian Scientists in his church. Another lecturer in an address to one of our "Laymen's Conventions" told of his going to deliver a lecture before the Y. W. C. A. of a woman's college in the East. Before the lecture began he was requested not to speak against Christian Science, because the president of the Y. W. C. A. was a Christian Scientist. How comes it that so-called "Christian Scientists" are members of Christian churches and a Christian Scientist president of a Young Woman's Christian Association? How can one become the recognized leader of Christian work in a great college or even be admitted to membership in a Christian church who

the glory of God and the uplifting of mankind physically, mentally, morally and religiously."

It is to be noted that when property is given in trusteeship for a special purpose, to be held forever, it must forever be held for the said purpose. There is no way known by which property thus held in trust can be diverted from the purposes for which it was given in trust. It is natural and reasonable to suppose that those who have given the valuable property of Montreat, would take every possible precaution to secure the property for the purposes and uses for which it was given. It is also worthy of mention that those who are best acquainted with the relations which Montreat sustains to the church are those who have contributed most liberally to its upbuilding, they have not the slightest doubt as to the perpetual church control of Montreat.

It is to be noted also that the majority private stockholders are interested in the enterprise as a church institution and originally they organized under a charter, which provided that Montreat should be a religious and educational institution and that all the proceeds from their stock should be devoted to the maintenance and upbuilding of Montreat as an educational and religious institution and that under this provision the Montreat property is exempted from taxation, just as all other educational and religious institutions are exempted.

It is to be noted also that while the trustees of the stock under the charter elect their own successors, and technically, are a close corporation, that practically they are not, for they must always elect a majority of their number from the nominees of the General Assembly and the several Synods of the church and thus church control is guaranteed. The reason the charter does not provide that the Synods and the Assembly should elect trustees directly instead of nominating the same, is twofold: First, if the Synods and the Assembly elected trustees directly, then the several Synods and the Assembly would be responsible for all the financial obligation incurred by the Mountain Retreat Association. It was thought best that this should not be so, but that the association itself should be responsible and should not be enabled so to involve the church in debt. Second, if the Synods and the Assembly should elect trustees directly then the church would be directly engaged in many forms of business, which are necessary in the building and maintenance of Montreat, which the church should not be directly engaged in. For example the conducting of hotels, insurance, the handling of real estate, collecting taxes and the keeping of stores are essential for the welfare of the upbuilding of Montreat and can very properly be conducted by a corporation in the interest of the church, while the church itself should not be directly engaged in such affairs. Just as an individual can properly do many things in the interest of the church and for its promotion which the church itself should not be directly engaged in, so it is with Montreat.

As to the government of Montreat, the charter and declaration of trust provide that the trustees of stock and the stockholders should elect a board of directors consisting of not more than 50 nor less than 24, whose sole duty is to elect a managing committee of not more than 12 nor less than seven. This managing committee is the governing body and it elects all officers, the executive committee and program committee. It is to be noted in this connection that the trustees of stock nominated by the Synods and the Assembly are trustees holding and voting the stock of the association for the church, and not trustees acting as directors or as the body of managers.

The charter of Montreat and its declaration of trust has been inspected by the ablest corporate lawyers and it is their opinion that Montreat is safe for the church and church control. Those who are best acquainted with the inner workings of Montreat and those who are most liberally supporting the institution believe this, and the General Assembly with all of the Montreat papers and data in its hands and its several agencies, believing this, have recommended to the church a campaign for $200,000. Surely there is no occasion for any one, less informed, to have any question in regard to this matter. It is therefore sincerely hoped that the church as a whole will respond heartily and gladly to the appeal to give liberal support to this institution, which has been bought and built by a few individuals and which has accomplished in its brief history such wonderful things for the church as a whole. This year thousands of people were turned away from Montreat for lack of room and adequate accommodation. Twenty thousand might have been in Montreat this year had Montreat been adequately equipped to provide for the same. Where did these thousands go? And upon whom does the responsibility rest, that they were turned away from our church meetings? Surely not upon the few individuals who have built Montreat and donated it to the church, but rather upon the church itself for not providing for her own.

Educational

Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Kentucky, Louisville—An impressive service in memory of Professors Robert Alexander Webb and Thompson McDonald Hawes, both of whom died within the seminary vacation, was held in the beautiful Harbison Memorial Chapel of the Seminary on Saturday, October 25. The class room work of the day was suspended and loving tributes were paid to these two men, so unlike in so many ways but equally devoted to the upbuilding of the Kingdom. President Charles R. Hemphill, who presided, gave a brief biographical sketch of each of these professors. Dr. Peyton H. Hoge spoke as the representative of the board of directors. Professors Dosker, Cotton, McAllister, Warren and Shaw brought brief tributes on the part of the faculty, and Mr. J. W. Jackson, of Tennessee, speaking for the second class, and Mr. William Addison Alexander, of North Carolina, for the third class, spoke for the students. The addresses will be printed in an early issue of the Seminary "Register," one that will be set apart as a memorial number.

Prof. Henry E. Dosker, of the School of Church History, is shaping his work so as to leave for the Orient about January 1 to visit his son, Rev. Richard J. Dosker, a missionary in Japan, take a tour of the important mission stations and attend the world's eighth Sunday School Convention to be held in Tokio, Japan, in October, 1920. Mrs. Dosker will accompany him.

Davidson—Students and faculty have been privileged to hear this week in a series of services, covering three days, excellent addresses by Rev. Dr. A. S. Johnson, of the First Church, Charlotte, who has been conducting the evangelistic campaign of the Y. M. C. A., Rev. Robert Miles secretary. The song service has been led very acceptably by Mr. Mell, in charge of the Y. M. C. A. community work in Rock Hill. Dr. Johnson has spoken to large audiences at each service. His sermons have been characterized by brevity, force, point, impelling power and an appealing earnestness and cogency of argument that have been very effective in winning the attention and sympathy of all who have heard him.

Topic for Sunday, Nov. 23—How May We Practice Thanksgiving? Eph. 5:20; Ps. 67:1-7. (Thanksgiving Meeting.)

Let us not imagine that any one way of giving thanks is enough. There are many channels through which our gratitude should flow up from the heart to God. In discussing the question of How to Give Thanks, we are not seeking to select one way from a large number, but to direct attention to many ways, stressing the need to utilize all.

The simplest of all means of thanksgiving is the spoken word. This kind of thanks does not prove gratitude, of course. To say "I thank Thee" to God is nothing more than a common courtesy shown by us to even servants. But while the spoken word proves little, the absence of it proves much. If we will not even show God the courtesy of saying "I thank you," the heart is proven to be not only empty of gratitude but full to bursting with common rudeness.

We may show gratitude by song in public worship. There are many people who never utter a sound or even glance at the hymn-book during the singing. God has ordained that we worship Him with hymns of praise and prayer. Of course it could not be truthfully said that all who decline to worship so are ingrates, for there are some who for vocal reasons cannot sing, and a few who for reasons of temperament cannot lend themselves to praise through song. But commonly, a listless participation in song, or no participation at all, is due to nothing else than a cold and indifferent heart. Let us sing if we can, and at least let us follow the words and make the thought of them our own. Each contribution to the effectiveness of congregational singing, adds to the power of the worship to lift hearts to God in praise.

Silent meditation on God's benefits is one of the most acceptable and fruitful ways to give thanks. Each day, and often in the night-watches, we should recall to our minds a bill of particulars of the good things God has done for us. The mind should be encouraged to dwell lovingly on these blessings. God hears the quiet thoughts of our hearts as men hear the trumpet blast.

Our gratitude must be shown in consecrated lives. Words and thoughts and songs of thankfulness are indispensable, but not complete. Wherever there is real appreciation, grateful deeds are done. When we thank God for giving us money or earning capacity; we do well to give Him some or all of it as a thank offering; otherwise our gratitude may be found superficial. When we praise Him for health and strength, some or all this boon may well be given to His distinctive service; else He might question the reality of our thankfulness. Above all things, let there be no doubt about our sincerity when we speak to God.

What causes of gratitude have we all in common this year?
What has Christ done to claim our gratitude?
What deeds of gratitude may we do?

The Prayer Meeting

By Rev. C. D. Waller.

TOPIC FOR WEEK BEGINNING NOV. 16, 1919:
HOME MISSION WEEK—Luke 10:25-37.

"And Jesus said unto him, Go, and do thou likewise." Not by any means as the priest and levite did—"pass by on the other side;" but as the generous Samaritan did. The commandment of Jesus is within our reach. Surely it is unspeakably precious, and personal service is the sure way of making it ours.

The general theme of Home Mission Week is a splendid one: "The Soul of Democracy: Christian Service, Personal and Social." Democracy is the legitimate outgrowth of Christianity, and especially of that type of Christianity which has taken its name from Calvin. Given the proper place to the sovereignty of God, and the equality of all men before the law, and the right of all to equal legal privileges and opportunities necessarily follows.

But the sovereignty of God must needs be co-ordinated with the great doctrines of his justice, and love, and grace. Jesus came to serve. His unique service has forever enthroned Him in our hearts. The fear of God is ennobled and beautified by love to the Servant of Galilee, and to the Father, and to the Paraclete. So that if we would be really the children of God, we must be servants, helpers, promoters of every good cause.

We infer that the unfortunate man, robbed and beaten by thieves, neglected by priest and levite, was a Jew. Therefore the prejudices of the Samaritan traveler must needs be sternly rebuked and overcome. In our church there is imperative need of mastering and driving out prejudice from our hearts. During Home Mission Week we are asked to think deeply and sympathetically of the negro race in our midst, and of a splendid place for an industrial school for negro girls. But even as prejudice whispered into the Samaritan's heart, "Go on, it's only a dog of a Jew: you have important business; you can't afford to waste your time and money on this Jew-dog," so prejudice will not only whisper emphatically, but "thunder so loud in the index" that one fears this noble scheme of helpfulness, and all other schemes of personal or pecuniary service to the negroes will fail of even a hearing in very many cases. It was no inadvertence that Jesus in this incomparable story makes the Samaritan the servitor, instead of the tribesman, priest or levite.

It is high time that our folks should trample down prejudice and go to the help of these millions of negroes in our midst. The argument from policy is overwhelming. The argument from religion is compelling. But no argument will perhaps be received and weighed: if this service is to be rendered, it will be the love to, and the example of, Christ that will prevail.

For many years the work of negro evangelization, and the work of instruction at Tuscaloosa has dragged on heavily and tardily. There has been very little enthusiasm, very scant love of this work. But it is a great work that should appeal to us as disciples of Jesus.

Strange things are happening. Recently emissaries of hate came among some of these people in the middle west: they inflamed their passions and prejudices, armed them, and incited them to bloodshed. The way to forestall such things is kindness, service, a true education.

The church holds in her hand the key to the future. If she "passes by on the other side" the future is ominous; but if she consecrates her strength to service, if she has the spirit of her Lord, the future is bright with promise. The old way of prejudice and ignorance and pride has brought alienation and war and pestilence. The way of Christ—of sympathy, brotherhood, service—this is the way of peace and progress. This is true not only of different nations, but of diverse races living side by side. May Home Mission Week this year mark a new era in the glorious history of our church.

Luke 9:28-36.

GOLDEN TEXT—"This is my beloved Son; hear him."—
Mark 9:7.

AUTHORIZED VERSION

28 And it came to pass, about an eight days after these sayings he took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray.

29 And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistening.

30 And behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias:

31 Who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease, which he should accomplish at Jerusalem.

32 But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

33 And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said.

34 While he thus spake, there came a cloud, and overshadowed them: and they feared as they entered into the cloud.

35 And there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him.

36 And when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone. And they kept it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.

Our Saviour had convinced His apostles of His Deity and caused them to avow their faith in Him as a Divine Person, the Son of God. He had also assured them of His sacrificial humiliation and death at Jerusalem. But such was the strain to which their faith would be subjected by His predicted crucifixion that it was needful that they should be still further confirmed in these views of His character and functions. Hence eight days after his conversation with them upon these subjects He takes Peter, James and John with Him into the mountain and shows them His glory. The teachings of the lesson we will consider under these heads: The Transfiguration of Christ, The Presence of Moses and Elijah, The Apostle on the Mount, The Testimony to Christ From Heaven.

I. The Transfiguration of Christ.

Habitually the glory of Jesus' personality was veiled and did not appeal to the eye. It was well this was so, for otherwise it might have hindered freedom of intercourse between Him and His disciples. But on the mount the veil was removed and His Deity flashed forth with radiant splendor. It was not from without the glory came. But the Divine Son, dwelling in the clay tabernacle, revealed Himself in all His matchless attributes and for the time being became "The Image of the Invisible God, the Brightness of the Father's glory and the express Image of His Person." The consequence was that His countenance "shone like the light" and "His garments became white and dazzling." Other manifestations of Jesus' Deity were shown in others on whom He wrought miracles and appealed to the understanding. But the Transfiguration pertained to His own Person and address most powerfully the vision and impressed the memory.

II. The Presence of Moses and Elijah.

The last we hear of Moses in the Old Testament is that at the age of 120, in the full possession of his faculties, he dies and "the Lord buried him in Moab." Here, after the lapse of more than fourteen and one-half centuries, he appears in a glorified body on the mount. Two agencies have much to do with man's welfare and destiny, law and prophecy. Moses appears representing law. By him was given moral law for mankind, civil law for Israel, upon which is based social law for civilized nations and the ceremonial law, which was the Gospel in type, picturing Christ and His redeeming work. But if Moses represented law, Elijah represented prophecy. He was among the chief of the prophets, a prophet of fire, of reform, of retribution, of Divine mercy. He visited apostate Israel with a drought of three and a half years. He fixed the doom of Baal's prophets. He pronounced specific judgment upon impious Ahab and Jezebel. He sent refreshing rain upon a faint and thirsty land. He did not die at all, but was alive borne triumphantly to heaven. Here he too was revealed in glory. It was fitting that Moses representing law and Elijah prophecy should appear with Christ on the mount, for Jesus came to fulfill both law and prophecy. "He came not to destroy the law but to fulfill." "The testimony of Jesus is the Spirit of Prophecy." It is significant too that the subject of conversation was not the glories of heaven nor the happiness of the redeemed but "the decease that He was to accomplish at Jerusalem." It was only by His sacrificial death that He could uphold law and verify prophecy.

III. The Apostles on the Mount.

Peter, James and John were privileged above their fellows in being present to behold their Master's glory. They were the most conspicuous, highly favored and devoted of the apostles. Yet even on the mount of glory they show signs of dullness, weakness and fear. It is night and they are overcome with sleep. The cloud of glory overshadows them and "they fear when they enter into the cloud." When awake they see their Master's glory and that of Moses and Elijah. But they do not seem to have fully regained their faculties for a time, for Peter in behalf of the others proposes to build three tabernacles and to abide on the mount with all the others present. It is added, "He did not know what he said," and the proposition shows lack of discernment and wisdom. On earth the Mount of Transfiguration, however attractive, could be but a brief abiding place. Stern duties summoned all these elsewhere and the next day the disciples had that demonstrated. But despite mistakes, the experiences on the mount left lasting impressions on these apostles.

IV. The Testimony to Jesus From Heaven.

As the glorious change of countenance and personal appearance impressed the eye, the voice from heaven addressed the ear. This voice issuing out of the cloud came from God the Father. At Christ's baptism and on other occasions, Christ's Divine Sonship was attested by a voice from heaven. The Father says, "This is my beloved Son, hear Him." This witness affirms Jesus' relation to the Father and possession of a Divine nature. It also asserts the esteem in which He is held by the Father, and the intense love that He cherishes for Him. He is "His beloved Son." Elsewhere in John's Gospel He is declared to be "God's only begotten and well beloved Son." Created beings in a subordinate sense may be termed the sons of God. But Jesus only has a Divine nature equal with the Fathers'. The command is "Hear Him." Attend His teachings, obey His directions.

Thy Neighbor.

Who is thy neighbor? He whom thou
Hast power to aid and bless;
Whose aching heart or burning brow
Thy soothing hand may press.

Thy neighbor? 'Tis the fainting poor,
Whose eye with want is dim;
O enter thou his humble door,
With aid and peace for him.

Thy neighbor? He who drinks the cup
When sorrow drowns the brim;
With word of high, sustaining hope,
Go thou and comfort him.

Thy neighbor? Pass no mourner by;
Perhaps thou canst redeem
A breaking heart from misery;
Go, share thy lot with him.

SPEAKING TO GOD.

ong prayers kill a prayer meeting. See how short are prayers recorded in the Bible. "Lord, help me," is one. rd, save, or I perish," is another. Why, a man said that eter had had as long a preamble as men put into prayers adays he would have been forty feet under water before ould have got as far as the petition for rescue. Prayer asking God for something, and you can ask it in a few ds. If a man will pray fifteen minutes in a prayer meet- he will pray all the spirituality out of it. I'd rather e a man pray three times, and only five minutes at each, i to have him take fifteen minutes all at once.—D. L. ody.

THE UPPER ROOM.

When we come to think of it, there is so much of good in y day that it does seem too bad that any of us should go und with our eyes shut and our souls closed. Life has its edies, and you and I are compelled not only to see them, to carry our share of them, and at times they do seem to ce a grievous and taxing load. And yet there never was ay so cloudy that there was no hint of sunshine in it, re never was a night to dark that there was no sign of e of hope anywhere, there never yet was any man so ppassed about with care and trouble that he could say that d had left him to himself or that joy and gladness had n quite away. And what a pity it would be if we missed sunlight by staring blankly into the clouds, if we looked steadfastly at the darkness that we missed the star, if we gged our care and trouble so closely that they became mon- r obstacles shutting out God and all the gladness and ry of life.—The Christian Guardian.

Do not keep this sacred thought of Christ's compani- p in sorrow for the larger trials of life. If the mote in eye be large enough to bring out His sympathy, and if e grief be too small for Him to compassionate and share, is too small for you to be troubled by it. If you are named to apply that divine thought, "Christ bears this grief t me," to those petty molehills that you magnify into untains sometimes, think to yourself that it is then a ame for you to be stumbling over them. But, on the other nd, never fear to be irreverent or too familiar in the ough that Christ is willing to help you to bear the pettiest e minutest, the most insignificant of the daily annoyances t may come to ruffle you. He will do more: He will ir it with you, for if so be that we suffer with Him, He fers with us.—Alexander Maclaren.

TELLING JESUS.

A dear little girl once said to me: "Every night I tell my a all that has happened in the day; because, you know, he es to his work in the morning before I am up, and it is so he takes his dinner along, so I don't see him till he comes ne in the evening. Then, after we have our tea, he ho'ds n on his lap a while before I go to bed, then we have a e talk and I tell him everything."

I looked at the little one's smiling face, and asked, "What d you tell him?"

She answered, "Oh, I tell him all I said and what I play- ed about the little troubles; and he talks with me about a, and if I have done anything naughty, he prays about it h me; but I always try to be good, because when I must e him something naughty about myself, he looks so sorry, t makes me cry."

If our earthly father is so sorry to have his dear children d wrong, then how grieved our heavenly Father must be, o gave His only Son to die for us, that we might be kept n sin. Let us be very careful never to grieve our Savior. —Christian Conservator.

THEN LAUGH.

Build for yourself a stroug-box,
Fashion each part with care;
When it's strong as your hand can make it,
Put all your troubles there;
Hide there all thought of your failures,
And each bitter cup that you quaff;
Lock all your heartaches within it,
Then sit on the lid and laugh.

Tell no one else its contents,
Never its secrets share;
When you've dropped in your care and worry
Keep them forever there;
Hide them from sight completely
That the world will never dream half;
Fasten the strong-box securely—
Then sit on the lid and laugh.

BEATITUDES FOR THE NEW AGE.

Happy are they who so forget themselves in the thought of others that they have no chance to be self-conscious, even of their own religious state: for they possess the spirit of the new age.

Happy are they who mourn, not imposing their grief upon others, but finding that those whom they have comforted in sorrow come thronging back to give them comfort.

Happy are they who do not stand out for their mere rights: for those who do this lose their best chance of getting either justice or mercy. Those who forget themselves are the real possessors of the earth.

Happy are they who are constantly longing to do right and to be right: for there never is a famine of the bread of life. They shall have opportunity in great abundance.

Happy are they who are kindly in judgement and deed, who do not criticize others because they are not like themselves, nor blame others who have not had the same opportunities as themselves. They shall be kindly treated.

Happy are they who can look upon evil in the world without pollution, who can see other's prosperity without envy, and who do not suspect wrong in those who have more than themselves. They shall know that God is real.

Happy are they who go about the world trying to reconcile to each other those who are at odds, and striving to bring to an understanding classes which consider themselves hostile. They shall be called brothers of Christ.

Happy are they who stick to the right though greatly misunderstood, and though they lose material benefits thereby. Their priceless possession is the spirit of the new age.

—Harris G. Hale, in Congregationalist.

THE BLESSED MAN.

Blessed and honorable is that person whose tongue is obedient to the law of Christ, and whose words are as a spring of wholesome water; who never uses scorn except to scourge sin, so satire except to prune folly; who never puts the simple to confusion, nor flatters the great; who says no ill of any man except under the compulsion of truth and justice; who delights to speak well of every man and bids the cast-down be of good cheer. This man dispels calumnies, lifts shadows, comforts sorrow, establishes righteousness, lays strife to rest, and brings in the kingdom of God.—John Watson.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Charles H. Pratt, who is in charge of the Field Department of the Interchurch World Movement of North America, having especially under him the Foreign Deputation Division, left last week for England, France, Germany, and probably Norway and Sweden. Dr. S. Earl Taylor, General Secretary of the Movement, and Dr. Fred B. Fisher accompanied Dr. Pratt on this trip.

The interest in this movement has been so great in England that there have been several representatives from England visiting this country studying the movement. They were so much impressed with the scope of the movement they urged that a deputation present it in Europe. It is believed there will not be any great trouble in bringing these countries into line with America, because of the interest already manifested by church leaders in Europe. Dr. Pratt made a very successful trip to Canada recently, and he is contemplating a trip to South America after his return from Europe.

Westminster College, Fulton, Missouri, is the recipient of another fine gift. This gift is in the form of an excellent farm of 260 acres, six miles from one of the best county seats in Northern Missouri, on a leading cross-state highway. The deed to the farm runs half and half to Westminster and Synodical Colleges. The place is valued at $32,500. The institutions pay an annuity to the donors while they live. This carries the Westminster campaign, begun by President Reed three years ago, to $705,500, on which all has been paid in already but about $150,000. There have been over 4700 subscriptions and more than 2700 have been paid in full, though most of the subscriptions were made payable in three and some in five years. The assets of the college are now $1,031,000 and no debt.

NORTH CAROLINA

The Campaign for a Million is making good progress. Mr. Hunter's team was at Rocky Mount and vicinity last week and are now at Washington, Greenville and near by. Mr. Axson's team was at Mount Holly, in Kings Mountain Presbytery, last week, and will be in Shelby, Kings Mountain, and Lincolnton shortly. We are working hard to finish up all the smaller churches by January 1, and will try to get in the larger ones January and leave February for the final push throughout the Synod. A copy of "Chips" goes out this week to every one.

Seven Springs—Rev. Wm. Black on November 2 began an eight-day meeting at Seven Springs, assisting Rev. L. E. Wells.

Granville County Group—Rev. A. M. Earle, of Capot Bridge, West Va., has accepted a call to this group of churches, composed of Oak Hill, Hebron, Grassy Creek and Geneva, and is expecting to begin work the last of November.

Oxford—Rally Day for Foreign Missions was observed on the first Sunday in November and an offering of one hundred and fifty four dollars was made by the Sunday school. This church is contributing seven hundred and fifty dollars this year to the cause of Foreign Missions, the money to be used in part payment for the equipment of Rev. A. Hoy Miller and his wife, who are now on their way to Africa.

Lincolnton—This church has just passed through series of evangelistic services of unusual helpfulness. D. Frank Arnold and Mr. C. B. Brooks were with us for two weeks and ministered with great acceptableness to our people. The meeting was not planned as a union meeting but the generous cooperation of the members of the other church from the beginning made it a union meeting in fact. There were over three hundred who signed cards reconsecrating themselves to the Master's service. Thirty-five covenanted to observe family worship and thirty-six have accepted Christ as their Savior and we feel sure there will be others.

St. Pauls—A meeting at the cotton mill chapel conducted by the three town pastors was well attended and marked good attendance and many expressions of interest and faith in Christ. The people surprised the preachers at the close by presenting them with $45, which they had privately collected.

The Presbyterians have this week enjoyed a fine meeting led by one of our own preacher sons, Dr. D. Pat McGeach of Decatur, Ga. His earnest, scriptural, practical and apt illustrated sermons have left a deep impression on old and young. We closed Sunday evening with the communion service, at which 14 new members were received on profession of faith.

One Hundred Thousand Dollars

On the Million Dollar Campaign FOR CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

But it Was in SOUTH CAROLINA, and For South Carolina Synod

Last week at the Synod of South Carolina Mr. C. E. Graham offered the Synod as a starter $100,000 on condition that a million be raised for the schools of that Synod. Was that not fine? They have rolled up their sleeves down there. The Assembly's Team, now working in North Carolina, will direct that Campaign. And they are begging for this Team at once.

We Must Hustle in This Syond OR BE RUN OVER

Our Time Limit Expires March 1st. Fifteen Weeks More, and $565,000 More to Raise. $37,000 Per Week Average

THIS MEANS THAT EVERYBODY MUST GET TO THINKING BIGGER

Surely we are not going to let our little Sister Synod walk away with us. Indeed would this be the "valley of humiliation." If they can do it in South Carolina, we can. If the Baptists can raise six million for all causes in this State and put 1/4 of a million in Christian Education in this State, then we can't think of failure.

We Need a Few Big-Hearted, Big-Visioned Men Right Now

Six Chairs at Davidson, $50,000 Each; One Dormitory at $75,000; Scholarship Fund of $25,000 to Aid Worthy Boys Not Candidates For the Ministry--and One More Man to Offer $100,000. We Have One in N. C.

WHO NEXT?

A Lot of Us Are Praying That Some of the People Who Read This Will Respond in Big Terms. Christian Education is the Cause That Must Be Pressed Now For the Sake of the Future of Our Nation and Our Church.

Scripture Says: "Provoke One Another Unto Good Works"

One of our Laymen says that he heard a Baptist promise to support a missionary and he thought to himself: "If he can, why cannot I." This started him to giving. If you give something big on Christian Education, you start somebody else to thinking. Then your gift accomplishes two things. Any greater Dividends anywhere?

This Is a Great Opportunity For Our People of Wealth

Gifts may be made on condition that the Million be raised. They may be designated to any School, or left for distribution among all of the eleven.

Kenly—We have just closed a meeting in this church, of unusual interest. Rev. W. S. Golden, of Sanford, N. C., came to us on October 27, and God has wonderfully used him through the plain, forceful, and yet attractive manner of setting forth of the Gospel—so characteristic of him—to awaken and stimulate interest in the church, and to bring to the church a genuine revival of religion. While there was only one profession, we cannot always measure the good accomplished in this way. Singularly so in this instance. More than 100 people stood up the last night, saying they proposed to be better Christians and more faithful church members. Seven agreed to erect the family altar. Fifty-seven promised to read the Bible daily. We feel that this speaks of better things to come.

The offering for Presbyterian Home Missions was $20.05, and a thank offering to Mr. Golden of $54.50. C. E. C.

Hugh Point—Special Evangelistic services began in this church on October 13. During the week preceding, prayer services preparatory to this meeting were held in the church. On the 14th Rev. Dr. H. E. Gurney, of Monroe, N. C., came to us and preached twice a day for eight days. The preaching was of a high order, spiritual in tone, scriptural in content, and powerful in its effect. Dr. Gurney's preaching is very instructive and practical and edifying. He is a great Bible teacher, and his work was greatly appreciated. Many Christians renewed their consecration to the Lord Jesus Christ. Eighteen have recently been received into our church; one of these by letter, two on restatement of their faith and fifteen on profession of their faith in Christ. Others have signified their intention to join who have not been received. For these accessions, and for the general satisfactory results of the meeting, we are thankful to God.

Chas. P. Coble, pastor.

Burgaw Group—The Evangelistic campaign this Fall in the Burgaw Group of churches has given us cause for much gratitude. The following four brethren were the preachers in the campaign: Rev. J. W. Stork at Pike, Rev. W. P. M. Currie at Hopewell, Dr. J. W. Purcell at Mt. Williams, and Rev. Geo. M. Matthis at Burgaw. The meetings resulted in twelve additions to Pike church, one to Hopewell, one to Mt. Williams, and eighteen to Burgaw, thirty-two in all, besides five to go to other churches. Twenty-eight of these were on profession of faith and four were by letter or statement from the Methodist and Baptist churches. In addition to these there were two accessions to the Burgaw church shortly before the meeting began, making a total of thirty-four accessions to the group this Fall. With these evidences of God's favor and blessing we look to the future with encouragement.

The Burgaw congregation is now worshiping in their new brick church recently completed. The house has a beautiful and comfortable auditorium and five Sunday school class rooms.

P. L. Clark, Pastor.

Concord Presbytery—Adjourned Meeting. Met at the call of the moderator at Raleigh, N. C., October 29, 1919. Present: 15 ministers and 7 ruling elders. Received: Rev. W. M. Hunter, from the Presbytery of Atlanta, and Rev. J. A. McLean from the Presbytery of Fayetteville. Mr. Hunter is with the Million Dollar Campaign Team, and Mr. McLean takes charge of the Morganton and Quaker Meadows churches, arrangement being made for his installation at an early date.

The committee to install Rev. J. T. Hall at Elmwood reported the duty performed October 25, 1919.

Presbytery endorsed the effort to secure an all-time secretary for Synodical schools and colleges.

It was ordered that an adjourned meeting be held in Salisbury, November 17, at 1 p.m.

Church treasurers will please note that there is an important typographical error in the printed minutes of the Fall meeting at Unity Church, near the top of page 371, in the Percentages for Benevolences. As it stands it reads, Assembly's Training School, 6 per cent; Bible Cause, 6 per cent. In both cases it should be .6 per cent (6-10 of 1 per cent). The printer left off the decimal point.

The Presbytery of Mecklenburg met in an adjourned session at the Charlotte First church, on Monday, November 3, 1919, at 2 p. m. All of the commissioners to the last Assembly reported their attendance.

The installation of the Rev. T. G. Tate, at Baden, N. C., took place on Sunday, October 19, 1919, according to appointment.

The Rev. G. W. Cheek and Elder J. M. Harris were elected trustees of the Rocky River School for Boys at Aquadale, N. C., to hold the property in trust for the church, together with Messrs. John R. Pharr and W. H. Belk who were appointed by the Assembly's Home Mission Committee at Atlanta.

A call from the Waxhaw church for the services of Rev. G. B. Thompson, of Bristol, Tenn., was found in order, and the church was permitted to prosecute it before Holston Presbytery.

The Rev. Leonard Gill was appointed a committee to prepare suitable resolutions to be sent to the widow of the late Rev. R. S. Arrowood, who was received into Mecklenburg Presbytery during the sessions of Synod at Raleigh, N. C., and died at Sanford on his way home from the meeting of that body the next day.

The Rev. C. G. Lynch presented his resignation as pastor of St. Paul church, Charlotte, N. C., that he might accept the call from Williams Memorial Church. After hearing all the parties Presbytery declined to accept his resignation. He will therefore remain in Charlotte.

There will be an adjourned meeting of Presbytery at the Charlotte First church, on Monday, December 15, at 2 p. m.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Enoree Presbytery—At an adjourned meeting of Enoree Presbytery in Anderson, S. C., during the sessions of Synod, commissions reported the installation of Rev. J. W. McClure on October 26 as pastor of Spartanburg Second Church; of Rev. T. P. Burgess on November 2 as pastor of Campobello and Landrum Churches, and of Rev. J. W. Walker on October 26 as pastor of Greenville Third Church.

Mr. George Hudson, candidate for the ministry at Columbia Seminary, reported that he had labored during the summer at Columbus, Ga.

Mrs. J. W. Allen, secretary of the Enoree Presbyterial, made an excellent annual report of the work of that Presbyterial. The number of societies reporting was 20, the number of members was 741, an increase of 139 over the past year, and the total contributions amounted to $7,378. Enoree Presbyterial, like all the others in the South Carolina Synodical, has attained to the standard of excellence.

McColl—Dr. J. J. Harrell who has been pastor of the McColl Presbyterian church for more than seven years, tendered his resignation to this congregation on Sunday October 26; this matter was taken under advisement for one week by this congregation. Dr. Harrell has served this church well and faithfully and has endeared himself to every one by his noble Christian spirit. On Sunday, November 2, at a congregational meeting of the members of the McColl Presbyterian church, it was decided to accept Dr. Harrell's resignation, and allow him to accept the call he has to Bessemer City, N. C., this new field gives Dr. Harrell a larger field of usefulness, and while this congregation was very reluctant to part with our pastor, we feel that God is leading. The following resolution was unanimously adopted as expressing the sentiment of the members of the McColl Presbyterian church.

Resolution: Whereas Dr. J. J. Harrell has offered his resignation as pastor of the McColl Presbyterian church, and same has been accepted with deep regret. Therefore be resolved that the members of the McColl Presbyterian church extend to Dr. Harrell their heartfelt thanks for the splendid service he has rendered this church during his more than seven years' pastorate. Dr. Harrell has served this church faithfully and devotedly, his life has and will always be an inspiration not only to the members of this church, but to the entire community, he has endeared himself to all with whom he has come in contact, and we are very reluctant to release him, but we feel that a higher power is leading him into a larger field of usefulness, this town and community will sadly miss the true christian influence of Dr. Harrell. May God's richest blessings follow him and his family in the sincere wish of this congregation.

Columbia—The men of the First Church have completed another visitation of the homes in the parish. Sixteen teams, each composed of a deacon and elder and another man from the congregation, went out to promote the general work and worship of the First Church.

The similar visitation a year ago resulted in lasting benefit to the congregation and it brought a great deal of pleasure to the officers and the other men who engaged in the visitation. At first the members thought that there must be some financial incentive prompting these busy men to go out into the homes of the congregation, but they soon discovered that their leaders are even more interested in the individual members of the congregation than in their gifts.

APPALACHIA.

Tazwell, Va.—Rev. Frank Hall Wright, D.D., the In-an evangelist, was with us in a meeting lasting from October 19 to November 2. This meeting had been preceded and prepared for by many cottage prayer meetings, held in different parts of the town. Our people were expecting a blessing and praying for a blessing, and the Lord poured us out a blessing.

The services were thoroughly enjoyed by the entire community. Dr. Wright is a strong, forceful speaker and preaches with appealing power. He is a great Bible teacher, touching every point with a "thus saith the Lord." His daily services were little more than Bible readings. All the sermons gripped the large congregations that heard them; especially will no one who was present ever forget the children's service, in which the evangelist spoke for a half hour of Indian life, and then preached on "Trailing the Lost."

Large numbers of the Christian people of the town of all denominations reconsecrated themselves to God. The spiritual life of our church is greatly refreshed. Something like 75 or 80 people made profession of faith in Christ, many of them being children or young people. Most of them will be received into the Presbyterian and Methodist churches. It was indeed a great meeting and will long be remembered by the Christian people of the town. We thank God and take courage.

ARKANSAS.

Blytheville—First Church—This church has just had the pleasure of having Dr. W. Moore Scott, Synod's Superintendent of Missions and Evangelism, for a nine days' evangelistic meeting. There were many obstacles. It rained every day but two or three. The streets were in such condition, the work of paving recently begun not being yet completed, that even a circus which came to town did not show. Notwithstanding these unfavorable conditions, all the scheduled services were held, two a day, except the second Saturday when the morning service was omitted. The evangelist and pastor did considerable visiting and personal work. On account of the inclemency of the weather the attendance at the services was not what it would otherwise have been, and the visible results not half so many. Nine signed decision cards, otherwise made public confession of Christ. Five of these have already been received into the church. One dozen church letters have been sent for. This will make a total of 14 members received and to be received as a result of the meeting of about 18. The offering for the work represented by Dr. Scott was $387.50. Dr. Scott was a seminary classmate of the pastor, and long-time friend of the pastor's wife, and it is needless to say they enjoyed very much having him in their home and church. That the people enjoyed his sermons is evidenced by their offering.

On Sunday, November 2, a Junior Christian Endeavor was organized in this church with about 30 members, Mrs. W. P. Fisher, superintendent; Marion Gray, president; Margaret Cobb, vice-president; Margaret Mahan, secretary, and Maurine King, treasurer.

Recently a home visitation has been made of Blytheville in the interest of the churches and Sunday Schools, the pastor of the Presbyterian Church being the manager of the campaign. The canvass revealed the fact that out of a population of about 7,000, about 19 per cent of adults attend Sunday School and about 50 per cent of persons under 21. Over 500 church members with membership unplaced in Blytheville were reported. All the Sunday Schools have received large additions as a result of the canvass.

GEORGIA.

Friendship—Atlanta Presbytery—Rev. L. D. King was installed pastor of this church on November 2 by a commission composed of Rev. J. Marion Stafford, pastor First Church, Griffin, who presided, preached the sermon and propounded the constitutional questions; Rev. Joseph E. Hannah, pastor First Church, Newnan, who charged the pastor, and Elder Berry, who charged the people.

Rev. J. E. Hannah preached at both morning and evening services and the entire day was a helpful one to Friendship congregation and their pastor.

L. D. K.

Savannah has been passing through a fight against Sunday moving pictures. The mayor of the city, who is not a member of any church, announced his intention to have repealed the municipal law forbidding such exhibitions on Sunday. The Protestant Pastors' Association immediately adopted resolutions of protest, and a number of ministers preached on the Sunday question on October 26. Rev. Neal L. Anderson, D.D., pastor of the Independent Presbyterian Church, preached on the evening of that date a sermon entitled "Pleasure Lovers More Than God Lovers," which was published in the Savannah Morning News, and drew from the mayor the charge in the papers that the minister had desecrated the pulpit. The mayor's card was ignored by Dr. Anderson personally, but resolutions were adopted by leading churches endorsing his sermon. The president of the Pastors' Association gave official endorsement to the sermon, and the following Sunday over 10,000 citizens, representing all the Protestant denominations in the city, adopted resolutions of protest to the mayor. It seems evident that the municipal law will not be repealed, and that no Sunday movies will be opened in Savannah.

Athens—The Central church has just closed a very successful meeting. For three weeks there were services every night, except Saturday, with two services on the Sabbath. The preaching was done by the pastor, Rev. S. J. Cartledge. No special evangelistic methods were employed. The services were orderly and quiet, but the Spirit's presence was manifest at every service. Backsliders were reclaimed; the whole church was lifted to a higher plane; and fifteen members were received, eight by letter, and seven on profession of faith. On the Sunday following, four more were received, three by letter, and one on profession. The new members were nearly all adults, and represent eight families not connected with this church. The pastor has just entered on his tenth year of service in this field, and on last Sunday the congregation voted an increase in salary, and by rising vote expressed its appreciation of him and his work. At the same time, Mr. John R. Potts was elected to the office of ruling elder. The future of this church is very bright. It is thoroughly organized, with unusually capable and efficient officers, both elders and deacons. It has an excellent Sunday school, and wideawake societies for the women, and the young people, S. J. Cartledge.

Macon Presbytery—At the last meeting of Macon Presbytery, on the recommendation of the Home Mission Committee it was decided to make $1500.00 the minimum salary to be offered any man asked to become pastor of any of our Home Mission fields, whether single church or group. In the case of man with a family we will provide either manse or rental value of house to live in, in addition to the above named salary. Also steps were taken to bring up the salary of every man now in our work to this standard. Also a manse building campaign was inaugurated, to have a manse in every pastorate as soon as possible. The Deacon's Association of the Presbytery was asked to undertake this campaign and put it through. Several new men have recently been secured for our work, others are in sight, and we hope soon to have all of our vacancies supplied.

The report of the superintendent, Evangelist Rev. Frank D. Hunt, showed that in the four months which he has labored in our bounds, he had traveled 4300 miles and preached 99 times. He has spent most of the time getting acquainted with the territory and the churches, trying to secure pastors for vacancies, adjusting groups, and bringing them up to larger liberality in pastoral support. A very encouraging advance has been made by several of our Home Mission churches in this respect, the total increase being $1880.

The Cordele church which has heretofore been helped by our committee and also the Synod's committee, is now entirely self-sustaining, having gone up from $720 and manse to $1800 and manse, has secured Rev. R. L. Benn as pastor and going ahead with enthusiasm in its work.

An Evangelistic Conference was held at Presbytery, and the Presbytery's Evangelist was instructed to make out a schedule for special meetings to be held in every church, using the ministers of the Presbytery as far as possible, and such outside help as may have been arranged for by any of the churches. Nearly every one of our ministers volunteered his services for this campaign and this schedule will be completed and reported to Presbytery during the session of Synod at Albany, and then published.

F. D. Hunt, Evangelist.

The Presbytery of Macon—For the first time since 1862 the Presbytery of Macon met in Climax, Ga. The church was originally known as Mineral Springs and was located two miles north of the present location. It was the boyhood church of Dr. A. B. Curry, of Memphis, Tenn.

The opening sermon of the Presbytery was preached Tuesday night, October 21, by Rev. T. K. Currie, from the text Acts 2:1-6. The attendance on the part of the ministers was 100 per cent. Only 15 of the churches were represented by ruling elders. Rev. J. B. Meacham, pastor of the Moultrie First Church, was elected moderator, and Rev. C. U. Leach, of Sylvester, was elected temporary clerk.

Presbytery took special notice of the safe return from service overseas of Ministers C. A. Campbell, W. P. McElroy and W. B. Clemmons, and Licentiate E. B. Thompson; also that Rev. I. S. McElroy and wife, Mrs. Alice Wilson McElroy, and their babe, Jesse Woodrow Wilson, were at the time enroute to the foreign field. The Presbytery observed a season of thanksgiving and prayer on behalf of these and of the still absent one, S. E. Crosby.

Rev. R. L. Benn was received from the Presbytery of Nashville and orders were taken to install him at Cordele the second Sunday in December. Rev. J. A. Warren was received from the Presbytery of North Alabama and orders were taken to install him at Cairo and Climax the fifth Sunday in November. Rev. W. P. McElroy was dismissed to the Presbytery of Ouachita to be pastor at El Dorado, Ark.

Dr. J. G. Patton preached the doctrinal sermon on "Discipline" and Presbytery requested him to furnish the sermon to the church papers for publication. Dr. C. A. Campbell preached on "The Second Mile" to an intensely interested audience Thursday. Permission was granted the Quitman, Sylvester and Columbus First Church to make substantial increase in the salary of the pastor of each.

Rev. L. G. Henderson, D.D., signified his willingness to undertake the pastorate of the Albany First Church. A commission was appointed to install him the second Sunday in November. Two other ministers have calls to churches in the Presbytery; one will begin his work at Americus about November 1.

Rev. Frank P. Hunt is securing pastors for the vacant fields of the Presbytery quite rapidly. The Home Mission Committee called special attention to the Cordele Church, which stepped out from assistance by two committees to self-support of a pastor for all of his time. Three recommendations of the committee adopted by Presbytery are of special interest. First, that Presbytery be urged to take some definite steps towards a manse building campaign without delay. In this connection the Presbytery agreed to give one-fourth of the cost of building a manse up to $1,000 to each of the first three churches or groups that will accept this proposition within 12 months. The Presbytery requests the Deacons' Association to undertake this manse building campaign. Second, that a standard of salaries be fixed as a minimum for men asked to come into our Presbytery, viz: $1,500 and a manse for married men, and $1,500 without a manse for single men, and where existing salaries for men now in our work fall below this standard that immediate steps be taken to bring them up to it as soon as possible. Third, that the Dawson and Cuthbert groups be rearranged. And fourth, that Presbytery authorize the committee to put on an evangelistic campaign between fall and spring meetings of Presbytery.

Stirring addresses on Home Missions and Evangelism were made by M. McG. Shields, L. G. Henderson, R. L. Benn, S. L. Morris and Frank D. Hunt. Similar addresses were made by I. S. McElroy and R. S. Sanders on Foreign Missions.

The Presbytery noted with deep concern the serious lack of a sufficient number of ministers for the work in our Assembly and of the alarming decline in the number of our candidates for the ministry from 500 to 371 last year. Presbytery declared that this is a situation calling for the immediate and supreme attention of the Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief of the Assembly and would urge the committee to put on at the earliest date practicable some kind of a recruiting campaign or agency much more aggressive than anything heretofore employed by our church. Presbytery urged its ministers to preach on this subject before the spring meeting and to lay upon their sessions and the parents of boys their special obligations in this direction. Each session is to be asked to look out suitable ones and send their names to Dr. I. S. McElroy, Columbus, Georgia.

Cordele was selected as the place of the next stated meeting. Presbytery adjourned to meet during Synod at the call of the moderator.

KENTUCKY.

Canoe—The following commission from West Lexington Presbytery went to Canoe Saturday, November 1, to organize a church there the following Sunday; Rev. J. S. Hains, W. B. Guerrant, A. H. Doak and Elder T. B. Talbot. We had the good fortune to have Rev. J. W. Tyler, D.D., of the Assembly's commission to be with us. The train reached the station at six in the evening, one hour after dark and left us five miles from our destination in a driving rain storm. We rode for three hours up a roaring creek to get up one side of the mountain and then down the other side after the same fashion. And to crown it all, the Kentucky river had backed up almost to the mission house in front of us. We knew when we reached our stopping place because we could go no further. This point has been well named Canoe.

But the people of the community and the workers were wholly undismayed by these conditions. In fact their boundless enthusiasm in the midst of all this water amazed us. Large preparation had been made for this service, and though there was so much against it, the church was comfortably filled in the morning. They listened with unflagging interest to a service that lasted for three hours. That would have more than satisfied an average audience, but their patience was boundless. They came back in the afternoon and then again at night. All this too over roads covered by water and with a walk of miles.

The church was organized with a membership of 56. Three joined by profession that day and one by letter. Every officer of the church is a miracle of grace. Space alone prevents giving some of their history. That whole territory is ours, if the church will only take possession of it. This is the day of our golden opportunity. This field is exceptionally well manned. Mrs. Patsy Turner has labored long and brilliantly there, and the result of it is apparent on every hand. Rev. and Mrs. Cloyd, of Lexington, Ky., are there too now and are doing a most excellent work. They deserve your prayers and support.

If you have any of God's money, will you not make an offering to this work. Send all contributions to Mr. T. B. Talbot, Lexington, Ky.

A. H. Doak, Home Missionary.

TENNESSEE.

Memphis Presbytery—At an adjourned meeting of the Presbytery of Memphis in the Second Presbyterian Church, Memphis, Tenn., October 27, 1919, the Presbytery dissolved the following pastoral relations: Between Rev. George L. Kerns and the Dyersburg Church, and Mr. Kerns was granted a letter of dismission to Norfolk Presbytery; between Rev. H. B. Wode and the Edmondson and White Haven Churches, and he was granted a letter of dismission to the Presbytery of North Mississippi, with a view of accepting the pastorate of the church at Senatobia; between Rev. J. E. Hixson and the McLemore Avenue Church, Memphis, Tenn., effective December 1, and he was given a letter of dismission to the Presbytery of North Alabama.

Presbytery also reconsidered the date originally set for its next spring meeting at Humboldt, Tenn., and decided to meet on Tuesday after the third Sunday in April, 1920, at 8 p. m.

In dismissing the three ministers above named the Presbytery has sustained a great loss. J. H. Lumpkin, S. C.

TEXAS.

Presbytery of Central Texas—At his own request, concurred in by the church, the pastoral relation between Rev. J. A. Black and the Mart Church was dissolved, and he was granted a letter of dismission to the Presbytery of Brownwood.

At his own request, concurred in by the church, the pastoral relation between Rev. J. E. James, D.D., and the Marlin Church was dissolved. Dr. James tendered his resignation as chairman of Systematic Beneficence, which was accepted, and Rev. H. R. McFadyen was appointed in his place. M. C. Hutton, S. C.

VIRGINIA.

Lexington—Our missionary pastor, Rev. Dr. P. Frank Price, preached to a large congregation Sunday morning, October 19, and expects to speak to his people again at the prayer meeting on Wednesday night. He has been gladly welcomed to this, his church home. A. H.

Richmond—Union Theological Seminary—Reformation day was duly observed at the seminary with an address on "The Edict of Nantes," by Dr. W. W. Moore, and a collection for the help of the Protestant churches in France and Belgium.

Rev. W. A. Ross, of Mexico, who is doing post-graduate work at the seminary this fall, was the speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Society of Missionary Inquiry and gave an interesting account of the condition and prospects of Synodical of Florida—The sixth annual meeting of the Woman's Synodical of Florida convened in the First Presbyterian Church, Jacksonville, Fla., November 4-6. With the president, Miss Agnes Davidson, in the chair throughout the meeting, the body held most interesting and instructive sessions.

Among the special features on the program were an address by Dr. S. L. Morris, on his book, "Christianizing Christendom;" a talk by Rev. J. G. Venable on the Presbyterian Progressive Campaign; Rev. Richard D. Dodge was heard on the Inter-Church World Movement, and Mr. C. T. Paxon spoke on the Laymen's Missionary Movement Convention, to meet in Jacksonville in January, 1920.

Much business was transacted, and Miss Davidson's reports on her work as field secretary were received with much enthusiasm.

Miss Agnes Davidson, of Jacksonville, was re-elected to the office of president, while Mrs. Charles E. Dorsey, also of Jacksonville, was re-elected to her office of secretary.

The next meeting of Florida Synodical will take place in Pensacola.

Officers Elected by Synodical of Florida—President, Miss Agnes Davidson, Jacksonville; First Vice-President, Mrs. Herbert A. Love, Quincy; Second Vice-President, Mrs. C. W. Latham, Sarasota; Secretary, Mrs. C. M. Dorsey, Jacksonville; Treasurer, Mrs. Henry Eliot, DeFuniak Springs; Secretary Foreign Missions, Mrs. D. A. Shaw, Quincy; Secretary Assembly's Home Missions, Mrs. R. J. Knight, Safety Harbor; Secretary Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, Mrs. Frank E. Lautz, Lake City; Secretary Young People's Work and Sabbath School Extension, Mrs. Robert McKaskill, DeFuniak Springs; Secretary Synodical, Presbyterian and Congregational Home Missions, Mrs. Arthur Harris, Jacksonville; Secretary Literature, Mrs. W. A. Grate, Sarasota; Secretary Bible Study and Prayer Circles, Mrs. A. A. McLeod, Bartow; Historian, Mrs. O. Z. Olin, Monticello.

the work in Mexico, especially in the territory recently allotted to the Presbyterian Church.

There is a large number of visiting ministers in Richmond this week, attracted by the James Sprunt Lectures by Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, of London, on "The Ministry of the Word," which are now being given daily in the Seminary chapel.

Newport News—Hilton is a most thriving suburb immediately to the north of Newport News. The government has recently expended over $4,000,000 and built from the foundation up a model village.

The First Church has been conducting mission work here for months past. The month of July, Rev. J. C. Ramsay, Presbyterian evangelist of the Norfolk Presbytery, came to the help of Dr. Wellford and his royal force of local workers and from time to time since then has proven an inexpressible help to the cause.

The work has resulted in the coming of Rev. George L. Kerns, who was formerly assistant pastor of the First Church of Norfolk and more recently one of those efficient chaplains in the Navy.

A splendid lot has been secured and when Mr. Kerns arrived the names of 95 communicants and 101 children were delivered to him as probable charter members of the church and congregation.

A splendid corner lot has been secured, amply large enough for the construction of a church and manse. A portable building is now being erected on the property capable of seating not less than 250 people. Regular services are now being conducted and the prospects in this part of the city are most bright for the work.

Deaths.

Morton—Died, in Birmingham, Ala., October 26, Mrs. Margaret S. Morton, sister of Rev. J. R. Bridges, at the age of 74 years.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Mary F. Gregory.

The subject of the following brief sketch, Mrs. Mary Frances Gregory, the widow of the late Sheriff Gregory, of Robeson County, N. C., who had made her home with her only daughter, Mrs. Joseph Allen, of St. Pauls, N. C., passed to her final reward after a pilgrimage of 78 years, on September 17, 1919.

In her latter years were spent in the home of her daughter, and ministered to by her grand children and where everything was done that human hands could do to make her comfortable. The body rests in peace.

She expressed a desire to be buried at St. Pauls Presbyterian Church, where her mortal remains rest, awaiting the resurrection of the just and the coming of the Lord.

Mrs. Gregory was a remarkable woman in many respects. For a number of years after her husband's death she superintended her farm with remarkable skill and ability. But as the years passed her strength waned and she was compelled to give it into other hands.

She leaves numerous friends to mourn her departure. McL.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Charles Phillips.

In the death of Mrs. Charles Phillips our State has witnessed the going forth of the last of a long line of patriots and builders. She passed peacefully to her rest October 4, 1919, in her last hours tenderly ministered to by her devoted family and friends.

Mrs. Phillips was the aunt of Dr. Kemp Plummer Battle, lately translated to that quiet afterwards where all the Christ folk meet at last in the kingdom meek of joy and love. She and her sister, Mrs. Spencer, were for many years among our cherished citizenry and, in days to come, their names will be associated with the best things to which human beings aspire and will shine as beacon lights to guide over stormy seas to the distant haven. Mrs. Spencer has left her impress along the more active lines of leadership. Mrs. Phillips simply lived, and living, she created an atmosphere that gave to all who came within her influence the peace that steals into the heart at the vision of the setting sun.

She was the daughter of Joel Battle, a member of the Legislature that framed the constitution of the University. When she first came to Chapel Hill as Miss Laura Caroline Battle, her brother, Judge William Horn Battle, was head of the Law School in the University. Their home, "Senlac," was a center of sweetness and light and a permeating influence in the life of the community and state.

Miss Battle studied first in two local private schools: "Kelvin Grove," directed by Miss Charlotte Jones, in Pittsboro, N. C., and another institution in Washington, N. C. Later, she attended a boarding school in Bordentown, N. J., directed by the wife and sister-in-law of Prince Joachim Murat.

She was married December 8, 1847, to Dr. Charles Phillips, one of the founders of the Presbyterian Church, Chapel Hill. Together they lived in affectionate devotion for over 30 years and together they wrought for the University and the State.

To quote from a recent article in the "Tar Heel":

"Her interests in the great events of the world as well as in the minor events of university life never faltered and her eagerness for the daily papers, the recent magazines and the new books was undiminished to the last. She noted the events in college athletics, rejoiced over every victory, was hopeful after every defeat, loved the atmosphere of youth and gaiety around her and was moved when the sound of the college bell fell upon ears growing deaf to the sounds of earth."

Mrs. Phillips was tenderly devoted to the Presbyterian Church, Chapel Hill, and a charter member of its Women's Missionary Society. Though forced to remain indoors during the last years of her life, she still kept in intimate touch with both church and society, and now that she is gone, her helpful presence and interest are keenly missed.

She lived her religion. Jesus Christ was herself in the Christ spirit! She was literally one of the living epistles. Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven and through such we learn the higher beauty and meaning of life.

INTERESTED IN ELECTRICITY.

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy eleven years old. I like electricity and I like aeroplanes too. I have an old electric bell and it has two rows of wires that I take shocks from. I will close by asking how many amperes does it take to make a volt.

LIKES PASTOR.

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy nine years old. I go to school and am in the third grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. Our pastor is Mr. Dubose. We like him fine. Please don't let this letter reach the waste basket, as it is my first letter to the Standard.

Your unknown friend,
James Smith.

A NICE SCHOOL.

Dear Standard:

After reading the other letters in your paper I want to tell about our school. I am in the fifth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Auston. I like her fine. I have two other brothers that go with me, one in the same grade I am, the other in the ninth. Please print this as I want to surprise my mother and father. Your friend,

Sam Thorne Patterson.

PEGGY SHAW'S MANNERS.

Peggy Shaw had a hard time. She was the youngest of a large family who were noted for their good manners. Robert, the oldest boy, was a great big strapping fellow of fourteen, the best pitcher of his age in town, and an excellent tennis player, yet he never neglected to give his seat to a woman in the street cars or to fail to carry the washwoman's heavy bag if he was going her way.

Eleanor Shaw was twelve years old. She was as pretty as a fairy princess or a blushing rosebud in the garden. Her hair was light and fluffy, and always looked well. Eleanor was never awkward or embarrassed. She had very little patience with poor, blundering, left-handed Peggy.

"Peggy Shaw, you said 'hello' to the minister," she scolded her little sister. "What do you suppose he will think of you?"

Peggy's pink cheeks grew as red as peonies. "He said, 'Hullo, Peggy,' himself," she argued helplessly.

Eleanor took no notice of the interruption. "I was so mortified," she went on. "Now, Ethel is only a year older than you, but she never says 'hullo' to anybody. Oh, Peggy, what makes you do such things?"

Later, as Peggy was helping her mother to get supper, Eleanor told of poor Peggy's lapse of good manners to all the Shaws, who were waiting impatiently for supper.

"Peggy Shaw!" said the family in a horrified voice.

Peggy was very carefully carrying into the dining room a big glass dish full of custard. She was so startled when everybody said Peggy in that dreadful tone that she let go of the precious cut-glass dish. The dish flew into a hundred pieces, and there was custard everywhere.

Peggy stayed downstairs long enough to help repair the damage, then she scampered upstairs like a frightened little mouse. She was still crying when Robert brought up her supper.

"Crying doesn't mend matters," he argued. "Come on, little sister, I made you this omelette myself."

Peggy let Robert wipe away her tears with his clean, dry handkerchief and consented to eat the omelette. Robert loved to cook.

"But, Robert," she mourned, "I'll never have any good manners. Eleanor does everything right. Why can't I be like her?"

Robert started to say something, then he changed his mind. "I'll tell you what, little sister," he said at last, "you keep on trying to be kind, and your manners will come out all right. See if they don't."

Peggy beamed through her tears. She consented to come downstairs after a while, and everybody was kind to her. Robert and she played dominoes on the couch all evening.

The next day was Saturday. It was very stormy as Saturday frequently is. Peggy helped her mother all morning, but Eleanor embroidered on her doily.

"Eleanor, that dress is dirty," said her mother, after dinner. "Aren't you going to change it?"

"Yes, mother," said Eleanor, politely, but she still continued to set tiny even stitches into her embroidery.

Peggy ran upstairs and washed her face in cold water, combed her thick, straight, brown hair, and sighed to think that it was not fluffy and golden like Eleanor's, and then slipped into her little blue sailor suit. The doorbell rang at this moment.

Peggy waited a moment, but no Eleanor came in sight, so she shyly went to the door herself. A little lady in gray silk and a rosy two-year-old boy were waiting. They had come in a limousine, so of course, the storm had no terrors for them. Peggy brought them into the pretty cozy-looking living room, and in a moment Mrs. Shaw appeared.

Peggy liked babies. This little fellow made friends with her at once. He took her hand in his tiny rosy fingers and walked around the room, opening all the doors. But he was not strong enough to open the closet door, so Peggy laughingly went to his aid.

"Peggy and Baby will open the door together," she told the little fellow.

Both ladies smiled to see the children pull and tug at the door, which stuck fast for some unaccountable reason. But Peggy was muscular for a girl of her age, and at last the door flew open.

"Girl in there!" cried the baby in astonishment, as she saw Eleanor in her soiled blue blouse, crouched against the shelves.

"Peggy," said Mrs. Shaw, evenly, "show Baby the goldfish and shut the closet door. Yes, that's right."

Mrs. Shaw's eyes twinkled with mischief as they met the caller's smiling face, but Peggy realized only too well what she had done. Eleanor buzzed around like an angry hornet when the visitors finally departed.

"Didn't you feel me holding that door, Peggy Shaw?" she stormed.

Peggy's eyes filled with tears. "I thought it had stuck," she said, in her wistful little voice.

"Peggy hasn't any manners," said Eleanor, wisely.

"Eleanor, it was all your fault," said Mrs. Shaw, evenly, coming out of the hall. "Now forget your quarreling. Aunt Honora Wilson has just telephoned that she is going to stop here for supper on her way to New York. Now you must both help!"

Even Eleanor looked alarmed. Aunt Honora was a very grand person who descended upon the Shaws once or twice a year. She was very fashionable, and wore wonderful clothes. Naturally, Peggy was very much afraid of her.

"We'll have the chicken pie I intended for tomorrow," planned Mrs. Shaw, rapidly, "and we'll use the gold-banded china."

The Shaws knew how to work. They were ready for Aunt Honora when she arrived. She kissed the five little Shaws and their mother, and twined Eleanor's golden curls around her fingers.

Robert Shaw was very pale. He had to take his father's place at the table. He managed very nicely until it came to the chicken pie. Then, in his confusion, he divided it into six beautiful sections, instead of seven. He served his mother and Aunt Honora, then it was Eleanor's turn, then Marion's, and so on. He had just dished up Maisie's portion when the dreadful fact dawned upon him that the pie wasn't going to go around.

Peggy looked at him with clear, limpid eyes. "Robert," she said, in her

Story and Incident

Worthy to Be Remembered.

By David Lyall.

MARY MACKELLAR had been out of Drumairn for three years with only two brief intervals of leave from the war zone. She was on her way now to take a month's leave and to obtain permission from her folk to take further service over there. She had been one of the few asked to remain on active reserve, and to hold themselves in readiness for the call at any moment.

She had been mightily pleased over the distinction conferred, in itself all the proof she needed that her service had been appreciated.

She had gone out in the first instance as cook in a hostel where canteen workers and motor drivers lived, but had been transferred with the lady who had taken her from Drumairn, to a hospital up nearer the lines.

And there within sight and sound of the intimate horror of war, she had gotten an indelible picture of its awful reality, and had few illusions left.

She was a squat short person with a pleasant, rather strongly featured face, black hair and eyes, and a singularly pleasant, almost irresistible smile. Perhaps it was irresistible because it sprang so readily to her face, illumining it as the sun might illumine a somewhat commonplace landscape. She wore a blue uniform and a small hat which suited her well, and was altogether a trig, capable, attractive figure as she descended from the train at the busy station of her native town.

No one met her, because her arrival was not expected, and in the crowd she easily escaped observation from any chance person who might have recognized her. She was very conscious, however, of a singular feeling of depression which had begun to envelop her as soon as the train touched the confines of the lowlying manufacturing town which had little beauty to recommend it.

The haze of smoke enveloped its tall chimney-stacks as of yore; nothing was changed, only Mary herself. She stood a few moments until her box was rescued from the piles of luggage and shouldered by a stalwart female porter, who gave her a nod as she observed:

"You've been to the front, but we've dune oor bit here, a' the same——"

"I'm sure you have," answered Mary merrily; "but the boys will soon be demobbed now, and let you off."

"I'm not needin' to be let off my job—I like it fine. Besides, a' the lads that were on this station are deid."

She spoke stolidly without any expression of feeling, which perhaps added poignancy to the appalling fact. Mary restrained the desire to ask the number, and hurried out to the old four-wheeled cab, now the only form of vehicle available at Drumairn Station. Over the rough cobbles the horse, who had earned demobilization long ago, ambled leisurely. Drumairn was hilly and the Mackellars being well-to-do working folks, had a little house of their own on high ground not so very far from the Morison Park.

That green oasis interested Mary Mackellar, because it was Miss Morison, the daughter of the millowner who employed her father and her brothers before they went to the war, who had taken her to France. At Hillside Crescent, number nine, one of a row of little villas all alike as peas in a pod, the cab deposited Mary, and the wheezy old cabman carried her box to the front door. She left it standing there, finding the door locked, and went around to the back on a tour of inspection. She fancied the place less tidy and immaculate than of yore, and some desolation seemed to brood over it. It was just 12 o'clock. In pre-war times her mother would probably have been carrying on her perpetual war against Drumairn dirt, and might have been seen shaking or even beating carpet or rug in the backyard. But

The announcement that Rev. Dr. Frank Price, an honored and greatly beloved missionary to China would speak here Sunday was received with great pleasure. Dr. Price, about thirty years or more ago, prior to his going to China, conducted a meeting at Davidson during the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Campbell, and is further remembered most pleasantly by reason of visits subsequent to his work in the East. He has sent three sons to Davidson, all reflecting honor upon the college and parents alike.

In keeping with all that has characterized this scholastic year that evidences a "Greater Davidson," Davidson College Day is to be celebrated this term with a larger and more ambitious program than has ever before marked the day. The date is placed for early in December. It is proposed to have present trustees, alumni, friends all in abundance and to heat to a still whiter heat the enthusiasm that would make of the College a greater institution, greater in endowment, greater in enrollment, greater in the size of its teaching force, greater in its influence for good on its own campus and in the church generally. The social features of the day will be pleasing, the intellectual spread in the way of live speeches even more so but the crown and climax of the occasion is to be the formulation of plans and ways for putting the College right to the front and for furnishing it with an equipment that means excellence along not some or many but all lines. Be it said with emphasis, be it noted carefully—not one cent will be asked for on this occasion. This is the day and hour for a grand rally in review of the past, present, and looming future of Davidson College.

The Atlanta Alumni Association gave the foot ball team a very enjoyable evening at a banquet last Saturday on the occasion of the game with the Georgia School of Technology. The banquet was held in the Grill at the Ansley Hotel and was well attended, the personnel of the Davidson men in Atlanta represents quite a number of men prominent in the medical, educational, religious, and business life of the city. Some thirty or more of alumni were present.

earnest little tremble, "I don't care for any pie tonight. Mother, will you pass the jelly?"

And Peggy smiled as she nibbled a piece of bread and blackberry jam, while the rest ate mother's splendid chicken pie. Aunt Honora looked at her sharply from time to time.

After supper they let the dishes go, and sat in the living room, with Aunt Honora, for half an hour until train time.

"All your children have good manners," said Aunt Honora to Mrs. Shaw, "but Peggy is quite wonderful." She slipped a little gold chain about Peggy's white neck as she said good-bye.

Peggy's eyes were full of wonder and doubt. "Aunt Honora," she said, honestly, "I haven't any manners at all. It's Eleanor that is polite."

Aunt Honora put on her soft lavender hat and talked at the same time. "I wonder if Eleanor knows that good manners go with a kind heart. Just keep on being kind, little Peggy."

Robert beamed on his little sister as he picked up Aunt Honora's bag. Peggy stood quite on tiptoe and held up her sweet little mouth to be kissed again. "Why, Aunt Honora," she said, happily, "if manners are just being as kind as you can, I shall never worry about mine again."

End everybody laughed but Eleanor, who looked very thoughtful for a long time—Presbyterian Banner.

everything was silent and wearing almost a deserted air. When she tried the back door, however, it yielded to her touch, and she stepped into the scullery, where her eyes were immediately offended by a pile of unwashed dishes. The kitchen, though tidy, did not shine as of yore, and the fire, banked up with a lump of coal and a lot of dross, did not invite one on a cold January morning. A kind of slow terror took hold of Mary Mackellar, and, stalking out into the little front hall, she raised her voice:

"Isn't anybody in the house?" Presently she was answered by a voice rather feeble, but which she recognized as her mother's.

Her strong young limbs took her up the carpeted stairs two steps at a time, and she burst into the front bedroom to find her mother in bed, lying quite flat on her back, looking white and pinched, and in no way at all resembling the cheery, brown-faced mother who used to be the hub of the universe in the little home, keeping them all up to the mark.

"Mercy me, mother! are you ill?" she cried aghast. "Why wasn't I told?"

Mrs. Mackellar smiled and stretched out her hand, from which the stains of many years' toil had been almost eradicated.

"It was my fault, lassie—I said I would wait till ye came—I've got along all right. I'm mendin', they say. It's very low. For me, I'm not feeling the benefit of it yet."

Mary Mackellar sat down on the front of the bed, then noticing that the abrupt movement made her mother wince, she drew up a chair and sat down on it.

"Tell me what's happened," she said brusquely. "Unless it hurts ye to speak."

"Oh, I can speak, though not very loud. I've been ill off and on for a year. Something came here," she said, indicating her left breast. "And had to be taken away—I was in the infirmary three weeks, and came home last week."

"And is all they can do for you now to leave you lying here by yourself?" asked Mary with darkling brows.

"Oh, I'm all right. Aggie does up the work before she goes to her teaching, and gies the place a wipe ower. Your father takes his dinner at the mill. That's a' amounts to. But I'll soon be a' right, maybe.

"So you're hame, lassie. You're thinner and different. Are you pleased to be back?"

"Of course," said Mary Mackellar stoutly. "That goes without saying. But I can't get over it, mother, you in your bed, and me not to know. I'll have something to say to them about it."

"Your father was for writing, but I minded him on the laddies aye beggin' for cheery letters, so I've not let them tell wan o' ye. I'm a' richt, just tired, suppose, an' gettin' auld. Besides, atween you an' me an' the bedpost, Mary, it's the war—I couldna stand the war, and so mony bein' killed. That oor lads hae gotten through wi' just wounds makes no difference. I'm aye seein' ither mothers' sons lyin' deid oot here. It's been juist owful here in Drumairn. There's hardly a hoose in oor crescent that has'na an empty chair, bar oors. It's naething but the war. Now it's ower I'll maybe better, but naething will ever bring back them that's awa."

Mary Mackellar sat very still, saying not a word, feeling with a kind of awe that this was a side of the war she had not seen, nor given a thought to. The tragedy of the waiting woman at home, the mother's heart torn with anguish for her own and other's woes. It seemed suddenly to dim such glory as she had come up with in Flanders and in France.

"You're not telling me aboot yoursel', Mary."

"Oh, I'm fine, mother, as you can see."

"And will ye be able to stop at hame now? They're a' sayin' that naebody will stop at hame now it's a' ower, and that the real war is just beginning. Your father thinks that. Things are lookin' black among working men, too. I doubt we're not through wi' it."

"Oh, yes, we are," said Mary, blithely. "Anyway, we've got the worst over. Now tell me, mother, what do you have for your dinner?"

"There's some soup in a Thermos here. Aggie filled it before she went out, and that wi' milk does me fine till she comes back at four o'clock."

"I see; well I'll go and put off my things and forage for myself, mother. You don't get much to eat on trains now, and I'm hungry."

"There's sure to be something in the press. I don't know now, Mary, and the queer thing is I don't seem to mind. I've seen the day when the thought of no' haein' everything just so for your father would hae kept me awake nights."

Mary jumped up, swallowing something in her throat. She looked down with a compassion that was wholly tender on her mother's changed face.

They were not an emotional family, emotions did not flourish, were perhaps not unduly encouraged in Drumairn, where life was a serious business, but the mother, having been set apart for a time, had obtained the vision which enabled her to understand.

"We'll be a' richt now you've come back, lass," she said, bravely. "Go and take off your things."

Mary went out, closing the door, and, like a thing of unrest, wandered through the whole house into its every corner.

It was as if she was taking inventory of the waiting duty.

Gone in one moment her dreams of further service over there, side by side with those for whom she now cherished a passionate devotion born of imperishable memory and association.

She saw destiny, grey, unattractive, closing in on her; could feel the grinding of the wheels of daily drudgery.

To rise when the whistles blew, awakening a great industrial population to the new day's toil, to creep down the stairs, clear the ashes from the grate, and get ready the family breakfast. Clean, bake, wash, sew, day in and day out, without a break and with very little recognition. Just her duty, that was all. And it might last for ever and a day! She needed none to tell her that her mother's working days, if not entirely over, would henceforth be restricted to the lightest duties.

Meanwhile she must be cared for mightily. She had been a brave soldier, too, braver than anybody knew. And when the final strain had lifted she had just given in, that was all.

It was all mercilessly clear to Mary Mackellar, and the strong common sense, the steadfast facing of every difficulty which had made her invaluable in the war zone did not fail her now. Mrs. Mackellar, wearied perhaps with the joy that had brought incredible relief, fell asleep, resting her white face on her hand.

She was awakened by the sense of something strong and fine and comforting by her bed. Opening her eyes, she saw Mary, in white cap and apron a picture to look at, bearing a small tray in her hands.

"Your dinner, ma'am, and your new nurse," she said with a twinkle of her eyes and the smile that had made sunshine for lots of them over there. "All I hope is you're going to be properly appreciative."

Mrs. Mackellar stretched out a quivering hand, and one tear, just one, stole down her cheek.

"Oh, my lassie!" she said. "Thank God!"

But what she thanked God for she did not say, nor did Mary ask. Perhaps she knew the secret fear that had lain on that tired heart, robbing it of its zest for life. Five in all she had given to the fight for freedom, and Mary was the first to come home. Unchanged, apparently, and not belittling the daily round, the common task! It was something to thank God for.

Mary never told of the battle that had been fought and won among the pots and pans hanging around the scullery sink.

An ignoble fight, you think? Oh, no. Worthy to be numbered, that is all. There will be many histories of the war written on earth, but only one will be needed in heaven.

In the record that is being kept up there, the names of Mary Mackellar and her mother, and others like them, will shine like the stars of the firmament, for ever and ever.—British Weekly.

denies the cardinal truths of Christianity and substitutes an absurd philosophy for religion? "What agreement hath he that believeth with an infidel?" We are often shocked these days by accounts of the kind of religious counsel our soldiers sometimes received in the camps and on the battle ground, before going into the fight. One trainer of a school of religious workers among the soldiers urged them not to bring Christ to the soldiers, but to sit at the feet of the soldiers and learn practical religion from them. He told them that when a man gave his life to his country he knew more of practical religion than the preachers or the Y. M. C. A. workers. It was not at all uncommon for religious leaders addressing soldiers before a battle to preach to them the Mohammedan doctrine, that if a man died for his country he thereby saved his soul. And that, notwithstanding the explicit statement of the Scriptures that no man is saved by works of righteousness which he has done, and that there is no other name under heaven whereby he must be saved than the name of Christ. In one most startling instance, a distinguished Christian, himself an orthodox expounder of the Gospel, gave a copy of the Koran to a dying Mohammedan. He justified this on the ground that "it is better for a man to have some God than no God." And that, in the teeth of God's revealed truth that if a man be without Christ he is "without God and without hope." So far are good men being swept from their loyalty to truth by floods of ardent skepticism!

And mark you, the indifference is not to abstractions nor to questions of minor importance. It is the saving truth of the Gospel that is involved. Is there a God, and if so is He the God set forth in the Bible? Is the Bible a revelation from God and therefore an infallible guide, or is it the product of human genius, no more inspired than any other work of human genius? Is Jesus God, or is He a creature? Are there future states of happiness and misery? Do future perfection and bliss depend on our doing the best we can, or did Christ make true atonement for sin? Is that atonement applied by human will power or by the infinite Spirit of grace? Such are some of the questions at issue today. They are vital questions which concern the fundamentals of life and death eternal. Can we afford to treat them as matters of inferior importance? Read the alarming articles in "The Sunday School Times" for June 21, 1919, and August 30, 1919, on the teachings in theological seminaries in this country. Those articles were not written by alarmists, but are statements of existing facts. There are times when it is sinful not to take alarm. The Bible lays the greatest emphasis on truth. God is not merely Love, He is also Light. Christ declared Himself to be "The Way, the Truth and the Life." The apostle declared that "the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable." In these days men are virtually saying, "Let us first be peaceable and we will consider purity afterwards." John, who is in a peculiar sense the apostle of love, says, "I have no greater joy than to know that my children walk in the truth." Christ said, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Of the Holy Spirit He said, "When he the Spirit of truth is come he will guide you into all truth." The wise man said, "Buy the truth and sell it not." The church is declared to be "the pillar and ground of the truth." What is to be done in an age of indifference to truth and decadence of doctrine? When that time comes, of which the apostle tells, when there shall be a "falling away" and the "man of sin," the "son of perdition" is revealed, when the "perilous times shall come" and men shall "depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils," what attitude should the church then assume? When the truth is threatened in any measure, what are those to do who are loyal to the truth? Should there not be a body of Christians somewhere whose special mission it is to conserve in its purity the saving truth of the Gospel? This, I take it, is the mission of our own church. It is to bear witness to the truth in a time of worldwide defection and upheaval. It is to hold high the torch of truth while the storms of ignorance, of unsanctified scholarship, and of spurious sentiment combine against it.

If it is merged in any other religious body it should be one that at least to the same extent as ours is bent on the same high purpose of conserving truth. Otherwise its witness is obscured and its voice weakened, if not lost. In saying this, I do not reflect upon the soundness in the faith of the U. S. A. Church, with which we are now urged to consolidate. To use the language of our ad-interim committee, it is their "attitude toward unsoundness" to which we object, their treatment of unorthodoxy. They might be quite as sound as we are, but unless they adopt measures to conserve that orthodoxy are they not placing the cause of truth in jeopardy and should we knowingly join forces with them in it? Higher criticism is treated with entirely too lenient a hand by that church. Men are admitted to their ministry who either deny cardinal facts of Christianity or are undecided about them, such as the inspiration of the Scripture in any exclusive sense of inspiration, the virgin birth of Jesus, His miracles, His resurrection, any true atonement for sin by Him. Dangerous teaching is permitted in their theological seminaries. It is significant that in the articles in "The Sunday School Times" referred to above, the one seminary that is cited as being positively, emphatically, unequivocally, unequivocally orthodox is a seminary of our own church. It is not implied that that seminary is the only orthodox one, but it is made conspicuous by being put beyond the reach of all suspicion.

It is sometimes pleaded that the U. S. A. Assembly of 1910 has met this criticism by adopting a statement covering all the mooted points. But suppose that the language of that Assembly is entirely satisfactory to the most orthodox but that the church seems unable to give practical effect to it by preventing heretical teaching or by excluding unorthodox men from the ministry. What then? Shall we unite with them on the basis of what they merely wish to do, or wait until they show the ability to control unorthodoxy? Are we willing to incur all the risks of their continued failure to control unsound teaching? Are we willing to share with them the responsibility for such errors? Had we not better make sure by waiting till there is not only a profession but actual results?

I am prepared to admit that there may be cases of unsoundness in our own ministry, men who are seriously affected by higher criticism, men who shock us by preaching lax views concerning the sanctity of the Sabbath. But is the remedy for that to merge with a church where there is even greater toleration of such things or stay where we are in a position to handle these questions more effectively? Shall we remain where we can have some hope of successful resistance to error, or go where that resistance is weak and growing weaker?

The Daughters of the King.

Ps. 45:13-16.

The Daughters of the King
Are glorious all within,
With hearts made whiter than the driven snow;
Their beauty doth delight,
For 'tis a pleasant sight
To see His glory thus begun below.

In clothes of brodered gold
Shall they their King behold,
As with companions pure they all shall come;
Their jubilee shall ring
In the palace of the King
When all the ransomed ones are gathering home.

And in their fathers' place
Shall come a younger race
Whom faithful mothers to their Savior take;
And, trusting in the Word
Of Jesus Christ their Lord,
Of all their sons nîay noblest princes make.

CHINESE WOMEN WANT COMMON SENSE SHOES.

Chinese women have started a campaign of their own for common sense shoes and perfectly-shaped feet similar to the one which the Social Education Department of the Young Women's Christian Association is waging in this country. The Chinese campaign is just part of the work of the National Students' Patriotic Society and is being carried on by the women students—some 8,000 of them, who are included among the 20,000 students enrolled in this society for creating patriotic resistance among the Chinese to misgovernment and foreign aggression.

The Chinese girls go into the homes to talk to the women and, as so few of the women can read the literature which the students have, telling of their movement, and what they want to do, they have made large, graphic charts which will emphasize the points they make. One of these is a chart showing the bound foot of the Chinese women and the natural, unbound foot, in such a way as to encourage women to free themselves from ancient customs. This chart closely resembles the one which the Y. W. C. A. has just published for use in the exhibits in this country, according to Mabel K. Stafford, Y. W. C. A. secretary, recently returned from a tour of China and Japan.

After getting the women interested in being free themselves, Miss Stafford says the students begin explaining how China should be free from political bondage. They have worked out all sorts of ingenious ways of combining health and social education with political education and of injecting political education into household affairs in such a way that they can interest the women, first in subjects which they know and gradually arouse them to patriotic zeal and understanding.

Girls do none of the street speaking for the campaign. They spend their time making things to raise money, translating leaflets into a phonetic script which can be read by the people, experimenting in ways of manufacturing things which are scarce since the boycott against Japanese-made articles has become effective, going into the homes to talk to the women, and in interviewing officials who have refused to grant the men students what they have asked.

The four points for which the students are fighting are: (1) The ousting of pro-Japanese and corrupt officials from the government in Peking; (2) freedom of speech and of the press; (3) return of Shantung to China; (4) cancellation of the 21 demands made by Japan in 1915.

THE FAILURE OF PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

There are many signs of unrest in the Roman communion," says The Churchman, "all indicative of the influence of war conditions and the uncertainties of peace reconstruction. The clergy of southern Italy are not the only ones who have discussed the maintenance of clerical celibacy, nor is this question the only subject of clerical discussion there. The American Press lately reported that groups of priests in central Italy had gone on strike and demanded an increased tariff for clerical services. Among the Bohemians the women communicants of the church have addressed a petition to the Roman authorities for the abolition of clerical celibacy. What the attitude of the curia will be on this question may be gathered from a letter recently sent by the Pope to one of the Hungarian archbishops and printed in the Italian newspapers. Pope Benedict gives distinct instructions against the discussion of the subject. He describes celibacy as the peculiar glory of the Latin Church and the principal source of its strength. He speaks of the degradation that will ensue if the clergy show an example of human weakness. Apparently the curial idea of marriage is derived from the matrimonial experiments of Alexander VI, and the wise words of Pius II have been forgotten, who urged, after a long experience as a man of the world, that there were very good reasons for abolishing clerical celibacy."

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
INSURANCE DEPARTMENT. Raleigh, July 27, 1919.

I, James R. Young, Insurance Commissioner, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct abstract of the statement of the American Mutual Liability Insurance Company, of Boston, Mass., filed with this Department, showing the condition of said Company on the 31st day of December, 1918. You Will Write a Letter Like This

I wish I knew which one of the thousands of letters I receive would have the most weight with you, my friend. I can't quote all of them here, but I am going to ask you to read these carefully and then give me a chance to renew your health and make you write me one very much like them:

Barnard St., Savannah, Ga.
Mr. N. F. Shivar, Shelton, S. C.

Dear Sir: I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all its train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft boiled eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and, of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, reordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantity as possible, for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

A. L. R. AVANT, M. D.
Leeds, S. C.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M. D.

These are not selected cases nor are the results unusual. I receive thousands like them from physicians, ministers, lawyers, merchants, farmers, manufacturers and every conceivable profession. I want the satisfaction of receiving such a letter from you. No matter what your complaint may be, dyspepsia, indigestion, nervous headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, or any curable ailment that has not responded to drugs. I invite you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If the water fails to benefit you simply say so, return the empty demijohns and I will promptly and willingly refund your money—every cent. Sign below:
Shivar Spring,

Box 4-C, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE.

At the annual meeting of the trustees of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, October 15, Dean James M. Gray reported a total enrollment for the year ending August 31, of 2,183 students in the day and evening classes, representing 22 denominations, 43 states, and 23 foreign countries; and more than 6,000 professed conversions in connection with the students' training in practical Christian work; also in the correspondence department an active enrollment August 31 of 4,620 students, and a total of 6,548 students under instruction during the year.

Through the institute's employment bureau, resident students who worked part time to support themselves earned the sum of $176,146.50.

A new feature of the institute life is a Sunday afternoon meeting for Bible exposition by the dean, in the auditorium, corner of LaSalle street and Chicago avenue.

A WONDERFUL INSTITUTION

Do you know that in the city of Greensboro is an institution that is doing a great work for those who are addicted to the use of Drink and Drugs? It also treats successfully neurasthenia and kindred diseases. Those in charge are men of a very high order, its president, Col. W. H. Osborn, being well known all over the State, consequently the influences around the institution are most healthy in every way.

If you have a friend, relative or loved one, that you are anxious about and want to see well again you can write freely to Mr. N. O. Smoak, Supt. Keely Institute, Box 18, Greensboro, N. C., with the full assurance that what you say will be held in strict confidence. All literature is sent in plain sealed envelopes.

50 EGGS A DAY.

"Before using 'More Eggs' tonic, I was getting only 12 eggs a day and now get 50" writes Mrs. Myrtle Ice, of Boston, Ky.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. "More Eggs" is a scientific tonic that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens lay all the time. "More Eggs" will double the production of eggs. Poultry raisers everywhere are making big profits by giving their hens "More Eggs." The results of a few cents' worth will amaze you.

Send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and he will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs." A million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

THE ELIXIR OF LIFE.

Dr. Serge Voronoff, of Paris, claims to have obtained amazing results in experiments which have for their object the restoration of youth, and the prolongation of human life. In brief his theory is that by the grafting of certain glands taken from young animals on the bodies of the aged the vigor and bloom of youth is restored to them. Voronoff is the director of the physiological laboratory of the College de France and since publishing the results of his experiments has been bombarded with letters and telegrams from all over the world demanding to be treated immediately. He protests he has no elixir of life to sell in bottles as yet, but has obtained promising results. The doctor illustrated the character of his treatment by showing a picture of a he goat of 15 years, which corresponds to about 70 years for a human being. By planting in this decrepit animal some glands taken from a young goat the old "critter" became quite frisky and gamboled about like a gay young buck. Doubtless there are a lot of old he-goats who would be quite glad to experiment with Voronoff's fabulous cure. We judge that this noted French savant dearly loves a hoax. It is quite easy to fool most of the public most of the time.—United Presbyterian.

THE BEST LIME FOR SOUR SOILS

The value of a lime for agricultural purposes depends on its effectiveness, its rapidity, its safety, its ease of handling, its price. It has been sometimes said that Burnt Lime is the most effective but except in isolated cases its price is prohibitive and it is the most dangerous form to use. Its action is too rapid frequently for the good of the soil and crop. The same is partially true of air and water slaked limes and they have the added disadvantage in being troublesome and expensive to distribute, a uniform distribution being almost impossible.

The best limes for agricultural purposes are not necessarily the strongest. Some, however, are too slow. Ground limestone being not so well pulverized, and being less soluble, takes from 12 to 18 months to gain its effect. The delay weather conditions drain the soil of its lime content before it can get in its effect.

The most successful form of lime has been proven to be marl. It has the strong qualities of burnt lime, containing the same effect without the danger of destroying the humus and injuring the seed. It is thoroughly pulverized and practically 100 per cent soluble, and is immediately effective. Its effect will be felt on the crop immediately following and will last for six years.

Relco Marl, mined from one of the purest and best beds of fresh water marl in the United States, contains 100

11 Hens Idle; Now Lay 221 Eggs a Month

Mrs. Young Almost Gave Up Raising Chickens. Then She Tried This Plan.

"When I accepted your offer and tried Don Sung, I had been getting 1 or 2 eggs every other day. The next month, using 50 cents worth of Don Sung, my 11 hens laid 221 eggs. I almost gave up raising chickens, but now have I decided to raise as many as I can."—Mrs. F. C. Young, Bellefonte, Pa.

Feed is too expensive to waste on idle hens. You can easily start your hens laying and keep them laying, even in coldest winter. To prove it, all you need to do is accept, as Mrs. Young did.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind. 466

He Forgot Something.

"You seemed embarrassed when that pretty girl met you at the station."

"I had a reason for feeling embarrassed," answered the doughboy.

"What was it?"

"I promised to bring her the Kaiser's ears."—Buffalo Commercial.

No Disagreement.

"A man never ought to be allowed to leave so much money," says a Labor writer, discussing the will of an American. It ought to be pointed out that the millionaire in question did not really want to leave it.—London Punch.

EGGS PAID THE PASTOR.

Mrs. Lena McBroon, Woodbury, Tenn., writes: "I've got more eggs than I ever did in my life, paid my debts, clothed the children in new dresses, and I paid my pastor his dues. I have money to spare now. 'More Eggs' is the remedy for me. I sold 42 1-2 dozen eggs last week, set four dozen, ate some and had 1 1-2 dozen left."

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, discovered the wonderful tonic, "More Eggs," that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens work all the time. You need this great egg producer. It means big egg profits for you. Don't delay. Send $1 to E. J. Reefer, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and he will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" tonic. A million dollar bank guarantees that if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request. Send a dollar today. Profit by the experience of a man who made a fortune out of poultry.

Their Christmas Vision

"Their Christmas Vision"

This is the title of a program prepared by the Executive Committee for use in the churches and Sunday Schools of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

It is attractive in appearance. Interesting and instructive in material. Makes a strong appeal for the dedication of life to the service of Christ and His Church.

Its use will help carry out the Presbyterian Progressive Program.

It will be sent in sufficient quantities for use in any of the Presbyterian churches and Sunday Schools, free of cost.

Order now. Begin to prepare for the service, December 21, 1919—the day appointed by the General Assembly.

Order from the Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, Henry H. Sweets, Secretary, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

CAT HAD RIGHT OF WAY.

When traffic was at its height on one of New York's busiest thoroughfares recently, and a long line of trucks on either side, moving continuously, made crossing dangerous for all foot travelers, a cat emerged from a produce store with a kitten dangling from her mouth, and essayed to cross the street. Each time she started she had to turn back because of a truck, and her efforts quickly attracted a crowd.

Down from the corner came a policeman. He soon saw what was the matter, and, while there was nothing in the traffic regulations to cover the point, it took him only a moment to decide what to do.

Going into the street he raised his hands in the way that truckmen have learned means "Stop." They stopped. The cat, seeing her opportunity, took a firmer hold on the nape of her progeny, and then, holding it high to keep even its curled tail out of the mud, she slowly and deliberately picked her way across and disappeared in a cellar.—

The Bored Were There.

The minister was given to making many announcements as well as to preaching long sermons. At the close of a long list of "things to be remembered," he announced:

"At the close of the sermon this morning in the room to my right there will be a meeting of the Board."

When after the benediction he entered the room he was greeted by the entire congregation.

Into the general store of a village in Virginia there came one day not long ago a diminutive darky who laid upon the counter a single egg and said, "Boss, my mudder says please give her a needle for dis aig."

The storekeeper smiled. "Why," he said, "you can get two needles for an egg."

"No, boss," continued the darky, "my mudder don't want no two needles; she says, please give me de change in cheese."—Harper's Magazine.

Met His Match.

Struck by the notice, "Iron Sinks" in a shop window, a wag went inside and said that he was perfectly aware of the fact that "iron sank."

Alive to the occasion the smart shopkeeper retaliated:

"Yes, and time flies, but wine vaults, sulphur springs, jam rolls, grass slopes, music stands, Niagara Falls, moonlight walks, sheep run, Kent-hops and holiday trips, scandal spreads, standard weights, India rubber tires, the organ stops, the world goes round, trade returns, and—"

But the visitor had bolted. After collecting his thoughts he returned and showing his head at the doorway, shouted: "Yes, I agree with all that perfectly—and marble busts."—Irish World.

A Prayer to the Giver of All Good

By John Jordan Douglass.

Lord of the sunshine and the dull gray rain,
Thine is the heart where grief so long hath lain;
Thine the Autumn with its leaves of gold,
And thine the snow's white mantle, fold on fold.

All these are love, the gifts of richer grace:
In storm and sunshine I would seek Thy face;
I am so blind, and yet I fain would know
That angels' wings are fluttering near like snow.

Lord of the harvest and the sullen drouth,
All nature praises Thee with minstrel mouth;
Let me not be less faithful than the bees
That whisper benedictions in the breeze.

Let me not be a recreant while the stars
Make music to the sunset's golden bars;
Attune my heart's harp to the notes above,
Lord, give me love.

Lord, give me light when brooding darkness falls,
Lest I should yield to baser passion's calls;
Lest I should wander far and fail to see
Thy beacon red upon far Calvary!

Lord, give me truth, that shining silver sword
That e'er has driven back the falsehood's horde;
The truth of Him who was the truth, the way:
The same forever as on yesterday.

And grant me faith when night falls chill and drear,
Lest I should grope amid the mists of doubt,
That I may feel his warming heart beat near;
With all the glory light of God shut out.

Editorial

That Alleged "Machine."

A DEAR brother whom we have known long, and admired both for his ability as a preacher and for the spirituality of his life, has written to us that it was currently reported that we were credited with having built up a Synodical machine for the purpose of stifling any debate on organic union during the recent meeting, and such was the success of the aforesaid machine that one wishing to speak was unceremoniously rolled over.

Bowing our thanks for the implied tribute to our silent influence, we wish to make a plain statement. For twenty years the editor has been a quiet and inoffensive member of the Synod, and during that time he has never spoken except in the interest of the paper. So utterly has he effaced himself that he has never been on any committee nor has he ever had any part in the work of the Synod, outside of the college and the press.

As the editor of the Synod's organ he has never concealed his views as to organic union, but he has always been candid in the expression of his opinion. He has opposed it on two grounds. In the first place, we have done a great work apart, and in the second place, any attempted union would bring together discordant elements that would retard the coming of the Kingdom instead of hastening it.

He has tried to be impartial in allotting space, giving equal privileges to each side, and if he has seemed to have given more space to those opposing union, it has been because more of them have entered the list.

If by such editorial conduct of the paper a machine has been built up, it has been unknown to the editor. However, the idea of a machine implies underhand dealing, secret working, together with skillful wire-pulling. We most emphatically deny making any machine, but especially one of the political type.

From the close of the New Orleans Assembly, when the appointment by each Synod of a member to serve on the committee to consider "Union" or "Federal Relations," was ordered down to the meeting of Synod in Raleigh, with the exception of a short editorial and a paragraph in a letter from Montreat, we have never written publicly on the subject nor even corresponded, as far as memory serves us. Though this was the important question coming before Synod, we discussed it with no one but the dear brother who wrote about the machine, and then we casually asked whether he did not think that Dr. Wells was the logical representative of the Synod in view of the fact that he had already served on several other committees charged with similar work. The next time we touched upon the subject was after the committee had agreed upon its report, when we asked the chairman whom they had nominated. Of course with a few harmless question like the above, a man gifted with the artistic imagination, can easily see the construction of a machine.

Now we have tried to make our readers see the question as it appears to us, and to make them realize what a Pandora box of evil such a union may prove to be. This has been done in the open. We have never tried in any secret way to influence others.

Some of those favoring union are dear friends, and we give them credit for conscientious convictions. We wish to see the will of the majority expressed, and whatever that will may be, we shall try to be satisfied, and above all, we want no wire-pulling, no brow-beating, but a free expression of views without any restraint.

As to the charge of "making a machine," we have only this to say: It is a well known fact that a drunken man always imagines that other people are drunk.

The Unrest in the Episcopal Church.

In many respects the Episcopal Church has long been noted for its conservatism. It was not so much conservatism in doctrine, because doctrine among them has never had the place of importance that it occupies in the eyes of Presbyterians. Among them there has always been great liberty in the matter of doctrine, so that you could often find great diversity of doctrinal views in one city, and in fact their Articles are saturated with Calvinism, while their preachers often preach the rankest Arminianism. As one said to us once, "We give a man as much freedom in doctrine as he may wish."

The conservatism of which we speak has been in their rites and ceremonies. Recently at their tri-ennial General Convention there was a decided tendency to radical changes in many of their ceremonies. One of the proposed changes was so intensely Roman Catholic that Thomas Nelson Page, former United States Ambassador to Italy, protested against it.

The Virginia Episcopalians have always been Low-Church, so when there was a move set on foot to have prayers for the dead; Mr. Page denounced the adoption of any such prayers. He even threatened a division of the Church, saying, "Better be divided than that we be led into paths we know not."

The Convention also took a hand in the affairs of the Nation, asking for a Congressional Committee to inquire into the alleged evil influence of certain types of motion pictures. Labor and capital also received some good advice, while they endorsed the principles of a League of Nations, but not following the League Covenant as it stands before Congress.

These symptoms of unrest are not peculiar to this staid old Church, but may be found in all Churches.

In the midst of the turmoil of the present, when nothing seems stable, it is difficult for men to keep the Church within her appointed sphere. They imagine that she can cure the ills of the world with the weapons of the world, and so fully convinced of this truth are they that they find it hard to wait on God and God's ways.

Experience seems to have no lessons for them. If they will study the history of the Church, they will find that her most successful weapons have been spiritual rather than carnal, and that as citizens they can accomplish those desired changes.

The Future of Our Race.

All of us can recall our astonishment and shame when we found that the examination conducted for admission to the army revealed the sad fact that few of our young men were physically sound.

The National Physical Education Service has brought to light some equally astonishing truths. According to these experts of the boys and girls in this country of school age, at least 50 per cent of the 25,000,000 have physical defects.

The future of our race does not seem encouraging, according to this showing, and it suggests that something must be radically wrong in our methods.

Of course each generation inherits the weaknesses of the past; but after allowing for all that, we are persuaded that there are other causes. Luxurious living on the one hand and defective nourishing on the other, combine to produce much of this result. Children are pampered too much, with the result that they are soft, and ill fitted for the hard struggles of life.

The man was right who told his sons that he had tried to give them every educational advantage by sending them to the best schools, but that there was one school that had done much for him, to which he could not send them—"the school of hard knocks."

Whither Are We Drifting?

We have always been anxious in any co-operative movement, lest our Church be led into strange paths, and made responsible for strange actions. In these progressive days he is a very level-headed man who is not caught in the current and swept off his feet.

The world is full of social unrest, and violent measures are being tried, so that Christian people, seeing the evils abounding, feel that religion should be the remedy and that the Christian people of the country, instead of standing apart from the ills of men, should step in and show to the world that religion was something more than saying, "Lord, Lord."

Up to this point they deserve praise and commendation. They fail, however, to remember that what is incumbent as a duty upon individual Christians is not incumbent upon the Church as a distinct organism, commissioned by our Lord to do a certain work within a certain sphere.

The individual Christian should vote and he should be a part of the body politic, but the Church, the Body of our Lord, should only act within the spiritual sphere.

It is the duty of the members of our Church as citizens to bring about social reforms, but they should not have the Church as the Body of Christ act outside her peculiar sphere.

At the National Industrial Conference of the Inter-Church World Movement, claiming to represent 200,000 Protestant Churches, they framed a program of policy which they will lay before President Wilson. This program proposes to reform nearly all the ills with which the world is afflicted such as the question of collective bargaining, of labor's right to share in the control of industry and its profits, of the right of labor to be heard above capital, of the exploitation of negro labor, of the recognition of the principle of freedom of choice to women in occupation, of the promotion of the rational extension of the co-operative movement in both the distribution and production of goods.

We approve of all of these reforms, if they are brought about by a combination of Christians, but when our Church is made a party to it, we must protest, and remind those who sponsored and brought about this new world movement that the very principal upon which our Church was founded and her chief reason for existence is that the Church should confine herself to things spiritual.

Our Executive Committees started this movement, and now it has grown beyond their control. It may be that when they mingled with their more progressive brethren of the North they were twitted with moss-backism, and in suggesting this movement they were trying to prove their progressivism. If such be the case, then their first venture ought to satisfy them and prove that it is always wiser and safer for the shoemaker to "stick to his last."

The Taxing of Church Property.

It has long been a custom of the State to release Church property from taxation, and the very suggestion that the Church be placed upon an equal footing with every one else is apt to arouse bitter complaint.

In England at present it is a burning question, as the Established Church has large and valuable holdings in England.

In this country we have assumed the justice of the Church's exemption from taxation, without trying to consider the question on its merits. If we would consider it, we would at once recognize the inconsistency of our position, especially the Southern Church, which sprang into existence upon the principle that the State and Church should occupy separate spheres. By being exempt from taxation the Church is to that extent supported by this contribution from the State, varying according to the amount of the tax.

We believe that the State ought to levy its taxes without favoring any class, and we also believe that the Church would be the more blessed, if it stood on an equal footing with every one else.

As yet it is not a vital question with us, but the time will come when the State will see the injustice of the matter, and will insist upon taxing the Church.

Golf as a Sunday Recreation.

We hear from every side that golf is fast becoming the Sunday game of Sabbath-keeping America. People who would not attend a game of baseball on Sunday, either play golf with no compunctions of conscience, or else they contemplate the spread of golf playing on Sunday with no such horror as the Sunday baseball would arouse.

It would be difficult to find a cause for this indifference on the part of the player or the spectator. It may be that because on week days many of our preachers keep up their health by indulging in it, men may attach to it an air of piety that might serve to float it over Sunday, or it may be that because it is a quiet game, unattended by shouting crowds clamoring for the blood of the umpire, its playing would be no great violation of the Sabbath. However, be the cause what it may, as a Sunday sport it is spreading.

We have even heard of Presbyterian deacons indulging in it on that day, though he was a deacon in name only.

The highest legal authority in Massachusetts has been called upon by the Governor of the State to weigh in the legal balance both Sunday golf and Sunday baseball, and his researches failed to find any difference. Such being the case, the baseball fans propose to take advantage of the popularity of golf by making the playing of baseball on Sunday an issue in the coming election on the ground that golf being allowed on Sunday baseball should be also.

What causes most surprise is the fact that in pious New England the Church people, instead of standing together in opposition to this new attempt to break down the Sabbath, are divided in opinion.

To some people whatever is progressive is always attractive, whether in the realm of politics or religion, so golf on Sunday, being an advance upon the practices of the past, is doubly welcomed.

If there be no legal distinction between Sunday golf and Sunday baseball in Massachusetts, there surely can be none in this State, so that if one is forbidden, the other should also be prevented.

The different Country Clubs evidently need the attention of sheriffs of the State, and while our judges are handling many moral questions in their charge to the grand juries, they might very appropriately touch upon Sunday golf.

We ought either to enforce our Sunday laws, or else revoke them. A law ignored brings about contempt for law in general.

Figures Sometimes Lie.

It all depends upon the one using them. Sometimes he with malice aforethought deliberately makes them lie, while at other times a man by a slip of the pen and a failure to state clearly what he means, finds himself in the ranks of the Ananias Club, nolens volens. Such was our position in a recent editorial entitled, "Let Good Enough Alone," in which we stated that our rate of increase last year was 37.7 per cent. It should have been 37.7 per cent increase for the ten-year period ending 1916.

In another column Dr. Bean, of Clinton S. C., kindly sets us right, for which we thank him. In our case "the wish must have been father to the thought."

“Keep Ye Justice and Do Righteousness”

By Rev. R. F. Campbell, D.D.

“THUS saith Jehovah, keep ye justice and do righteousness; for my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed. Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that holdeth it fast; that keepeth the Sabbath from profaning it and keepeth his hand from doing any evil. . . . Every one that keepeth the Sabbath from profaning it, and holdeth fast my covenant; even them will I bring to my holy mountain, and make them joyful in my house of prayer: their burnt offerings and their sacrifices shall be accepted upon mine altar; for my house shall be called a house of prayer for all nations.” (Isaiah 56:1, 2 and 6-b-7).

Isaiah lived in a time of social unrest. There were wars and rumors of wars. The kingdoms of Ephriam and of Syria had joined forces against the kingdom of Judah, and were threatening Jerusalem with their armies. But after this danger had passed, there was a still greater peril from the kingdom of Assyria, which was anxious to possess itself of Palestine as the gateway through which it could march to the conquest of Egypt, its great rival.

In addition to these clouds on the distant horizon, there were domestic troubles within the kingdom itself. Politically there were divided counsels; socially there was injustice, oppression and discontent. For these national evils there were various prescriptions, into the details of which we need not enter. Isaiah's prescription was a return unto the Lord with humble confession of the nation's sin and a renewal of the solemn covenant between the Lord and His people. The only hope, he declared, was a renewal and deepening of the religious life of the nation. The times were in many respects like our own—so much so that Isaiah's language might be taken for a description of the conditions that we see about us and in ourselves today.

The hopeful thing about the present situation is that there are some who have hit upon Isaiah's prescription as the only effectual remedy for our political and social diseases. And the call to a renewal of the religious life does not proceed from the pulpit alone, but also from those who represent the business life of the nation. I wish to read two such calls that have recently been sounded by leaders in manufacture and trade. The first by Mr. Roger W. Babson, of Boston, in his Barometer Letter to the Merchants, Bankers and Investors; the second by Mr. Richard H. Edmonds, editor of The Manufacturers Record, of Baltimore. You will note that Mr. Babson points out the need of religion, and that Mr. Edmonds describes the kind of religion we need.

The Need of the Hour.

Mr. Babson says: “The need of the hour is not more legislation. The need of the hour is more religion. More religion is needed everywhere—from the halls of Congress to the factories, mines and forests. It is one thing to talk about plans and policies, but a plan and policy without a religious motive is like a watch without a spring or a body without the breath of life. The trouble today is that we are trying to hatch chickens from sterile eggs. We may have the finest incubator in the world, but unless the eggs have the germ of life in them, all our efforts are of no avail.

“The solving of the labor situation is wholly a question of religion. The wage worker will never be satisfied with higher wages and shorter hours any more than you and I are satisfied with more profits and a bigger house. Things never did satisfy any one and never will. Satisfaction and contentment are matters of religion. Communities and industries where right motives are paramount have no serious labor troubles.

“When both employer and wage worker honestly believe that we are here in this world to serve others, the labor problem will be solved, but not until then. We employers should learn to give up and labor should wake up. However, neither of us will do it except as we are actuated by religious motives. We all need a new outlook on life, a new political policy, a new industrial policy and a new social policy. The old politics founded on fear and striving only for protection has fulfilled its usefulness. We need a new politics based on faith and striving for production.

“Meanwhile what is happening to our churches? They are going to seed. The ministers are paid starvation wages and the whole church industry lacks pep and imagination. And yet the church is the only organization in existence for generating right motives in man. Schools develop intellect, theaters and novels foster passion, but the church is the sole organization which develops those good motives of love, sympathy, hope and inspiration on which the industrial salvation of the world depends. But that organization is asleep, and other agencies which develop hate, jealousy and fear are running rampant.”

Mr. Edmonds points out that our country needs above all things else a revival of religion. He writes over the caption, “Am I My Brother's Keeper?” as follows:

Am I My Brother's Keeper?

“Above all else this country needs a nationwide revival of old-fashioned prayer meeting religion—

“A religion that makes men realize that if there is a heaven, there must also of necessity be a hell—

“A religion that makes a man realize that every act is recorded in his own conscience, and that though that may slumber, it can never die—

“A religion that makes an employer understand that if he is unfair to his employes and pays them less than fair wages, measured by his ability and their efficiency and zeal, he is a robber—

“A religion that makes an employe know that if he does not give full and efficient service, he, too, is a robber—

“A religion that makes a farmer, who packs bad fruit at the bottom and deceives the buyer by the good fruit on the top, realize that he is a thief just as much as the one who robs a hen roost at night—

“A religion that makes a man who robs a railroad of its fare, or its freight bill, know that he robs himself of all right to feel that he is an honest man—

“A religion that makes a man realize that by driving too hard a bargain with his servant, his employe, or his merchant, he can just be as much a profiteer as the seller or producer who swindles by false weight, false packing or false charges—

“A religion that will teach church members who fail to contribute to the extent of their ability to the support of religion, and that compels them to recognize that if they are paying their pastor less than a living salary, they are robbing God and man alike—

“A religion that will make the laboring man, who by threats or by actual violence against the non-union man, strives to keep him out of employment, realize that he is at heart a murderer and is murdering the individuality and the liberty of his fellowman, and is displaying a hatred which, if it has the opportunity, will commit physical murder—

“A religion that will make the politician who yields principle for the sake of party, who worships at the feet of any class and sells his soul for political preferment know that he is not only a coward and a poltroon, and unworthy of the respect of any decent man, but which will also make him see that he is helping to murder human liberty, as great a crime as murdering the individual man—

“In short, we need a revival of that religion which will make every man and woman strive in every act of life to do

The Synod of South Carolina

By Rev. T. H. Law, D.D.

THIS body held its annual sessions in the Central Church, Anderson, November 4-6. Rev. H. R. Murchison, the first pastor of the church, under whose leadership the commodious and handsome building in which the Synod convened was erected, was unanimously elected moderator, and presided with efficiency and general satisfaction. The meeting was in every respect an exceptionally fine one. The weather was perfect, the attendance unusually large (170 members being enrolled), the hospitality of the Anderson people was abounding, the spirit was excellent, the discussions were lively, and there was a progressiveness in the work rarely before evinced. We have reason therefore to expect that this meeting will mark the beginning of a new era in our work in South Carolina.

Through the Synod's executive and permanent committees all the departments of the church's work were presented in carefully prepared and comprehensive reports. And besides these, Secretary Egbert W. Smith was heard in an impressive address on the Progressive Program and the Assembly's Causes; Rev. Dr. P. F. Price, moderator of the Chinese General Assembly, on the work in China; Rev. Dr. W. H. Miley, Synodical evangelist, on Evangelism; Rev. Drs. A. W. Blackwood and E. N. Orr, on the Inter-church World Movement; Rev. A. R. Bird, of Washington, D. C., on the needs of our work in the Capital City; and Rev. J. H. Rosenberg, on Missions to the Jews. All these addresses were appreciated and responded to.

But several matters in the Synod's own interests evoked very earnest consideration and significant action.

Perhaps the most important of these is Local Home Missions.

The Synod has an executive committee on Home Missions, which works under a plan of co-operation with the Presbyterian committees, but in recent years it has been seriously hampered by lack of funds and of a general evangelist. This year, however, the committee reported a full treasury, and the employment of Dr. W. H. Miley, who had already entered upon the work of evangelist. Rev. F. H. Wardlaw, one of our pastors who has often served in that way through his musical gifts, was elected singing evangelist, and the committee was further authorized to employ a general superintendent of missions, who shall also be the leader of the Progressive Program in the Synod. In this connection the committee was also directed to pay a debt resting on the Fort Hill Church, which serves our Presbyterian students at Clemson College, the state's large agricultural and mechanical school, and in addition to provide funds to the amount of $1,050 for improving the church accommodations.

A Million Dollar Educational Campaign was another most important matter discussed, considered and formally launched by the Synod. This gigantic enterprise looking to the endowment of the four educational institutions under the care of Synod, had already been organized and heartily endorsed by all the eight Presbyteries. But the Synod gave its cordial endorsement to the scheme, and appointed a committee to conduct the campaign. It is proposed to appropriate one-half of the funds raised to the college at Clinton, one-fourth to Chicora College for Women at Columbia, and the remaining fourth to Columbia Theological Seminary and Thornwell Orphanage, which draw support from outside sources. The beginning of the enterprise was greatly promoted and its success made promising by the handsome gift of $100,000 by Mr. C. E. Graham, of Greenville, S. C., noted for his liberality. This campaign is not to be a part of the Assembly's Progressive Program, but outside and in addition to it. The Synod accepted its quota of $315,000 for benevolences.

Thornwell Orphanage, the precious child of the late venerable and beloved Dr. W. P. Jacobs, and ever fondly cherished by the Synod, this year called forth a very lively and vigorous discussion. In Dr.

Jacob's day when we all trusted the interests of the institution to his judicious and safe management, there was a local board which controlled largely the financial affairs of the orphanage. But now that it looks for its support from the Synods of South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, which regularly appoint trustees, it was urged by some that the control ought to be wholly in the board of trustees of these Synods. And accordingly the question before the Synod, which it had been considering for several years, was whether the charter of the institution should not be changed so as to vest full authority, control and ownership in the Synods' trustees. Lawyers were pitted against lawyers and the warmest supporters of the orphanage argued against each other as to the need and expediency of the proposed change. But the Synod decided by a large majority that it should be made, and appointed a committee to procure it, and sent commissioners to the other two Synods to urge their concurrence.

The Inter-Church World Movement,

though very clearly and forcibly presented by its designated representatives, was vigorously opposed on the floor of the Synod. The outcome was a compromise, the Synod simply commending a conference to be held in Columbia on December 17-19 to consider the whole matter, appointing a committee consisting of D. M. Douglas, E. E. Gillespie, A. D. P. Gilmour, D. B. Johnson and J. B. Spillman, to call the attention of our constituency to it. Beyond this the Synod did not go in the way of endorsement of the movement.

"Closer Relations"

of course had to come up under the request of the Assembly; but the discussion centered wholly in the person to be nominated to represent this Synod on the committee. It was very evident from the discussion that the Synod of South Carolina does not favor organic union under present conditions, and Hon. W. F. Stevenson, a member of the last committee on conference, and Rev. Dr. H. T. Graham, chairman of the special committee in the last Assembly, both understood to be opposed to organic union at present, were before the Synod; and the latter was chosen by a small majority. The Synod then added the name of Mr. Stevenson as alternate—not asked for by the Assembly but recommended should anything interfere with Dr. Graham's serving. No party spirit was manifested in the discussion.

After a very busy meeting, which all seemed to enjoy, and with hearty thanks to our kind hosts, noting especially the sumptuous and well-served dinner on which the members feasted together under the cheerful and gracious service of the Woman's Auxiliary, the Synod adjourned about 11 o'clock Thursday night, to meet next in Bennettsville, October 12, 1920, at 10 a. m.

"Let Good Enough Alone."

Dear Editor: There is an error in your editorial under this title in the Presbyterian Standard of Oct. 29. It is stated there, that "According to the official figures of the United States Government the percentage of increase of all denominations the past year was 19.9 while our percentage was nearly double those figures." And again, "Last year the Baptists increased 31 per cent while we increased 34 per cent according to the Government figures, but 37.7 per cent according to the figures given in our Assembly Minutes." The article by Dr. Moore in your next issue, showed that these figures, taken from Dr. Morris' recent book were not for the past year, but for the ten-year period, 1906-1916. It is true that the Assembly figures give 37.7 per cent as the increase but for the ten years closing with 1919 the increase was a little over 29 per cent. The actual increase over 1918 was only 1708, not quite one-half of one per cent, instead of 37.7. No doubt the war has to a great extent interfered with the growth of all the churches, but to claim an increase of 37.7 per cent last year shows that "Homer sometimes nods."

The Issue Raised By Dr. Lingle

By Rev. W. M. McPheeters, D.D.

ARE there "today any great principles of the Gospel, or of Presbyterianism separating the Northern and Southern Presbyterian Churches?" Such, as formulated by himself, is the issue upon which Dr. W. L. Lingle has sought a negative decision before our church. From its very nature it is obvious that this issue is one that concerns every one interested either in the past, the present or the future of our church. Farther, Dr. Lingle's position, and the general and just esteem in which he is held throughout the church give a special importance to such views proceeding from him. Holding these views, he no doubt teaches them to his classes in our largest seminary. And many in the church who feel themselves either incompetent, or not in a position to look into the matter on its merits will accept Dr. Lingle's views merely because of their confidence in Dr. Lingle himself. This confidence is of course a great asset for Dr. Lingle; and I may be pardoned if I add, it imposes a correspondingly great responsibility upon him.

As offsetting the purely adventitious advantage just mentioned, it will be only fair and proper that I direct specific attention to the fact that the views advanced by Dr. Lingle are not those that were held and taught by his distinguished predecessors in his present chair. Dr. Thomas E. Peck, for instance, was a man of exceptional perspicacity and thoroughly familiar with the history of our church. He held and taught that there were great principles separating our own from our sister church. This, of course, does not prove that Dr. Lingle is wrong—for time, other things being equal—is a wonderful clarifier of thinking. But while not proving that Dr. Lingle is wrong, the fact that Dr. Peck held a diametrically contrary opinion will cause even those whose confidence in Dr. Lingle is greatest to pause before assuming that he is right.

Before examining Dr. Lingle's discussion of "the question at issue" let me pause to say that my only interest in the matter—as I am sure is true of Dr. Lingle also—is to arrive at conclusions in accordance with the actual facts. But obviously in order to do this "the question at issue" must itself be perfectly clear and definite, and further whatever would tend either to divert attention from it or to cloud it must be sedulously avoided. I can only say that to me it seems that Dr. Lingle's discussion fulfills neither of these absolutely essential conditions.

Let the reader recur to Dr. Lingle's own statement of "the question at issue." Manifestly the words intended to be pivotal in it are "today," and "great" or "fundamental principles." Unquestionably the word "today" together with the sharp contrast that he draws between "the past" and "the present" seem to warrant the conclusion that Dr. Lingle admits that in "the past" there were "fundamental principles" separating our own from our sister church, but that such is not the case "today." If such is Dr. Lingle's position, it would greatly have helped his readers to test its correctness had he stated what were the "fundamental principles" he had in mind; when and how our church committed itself to them; when it disavowed or receded from them; and where the record of these matters may be found. Surely it is clear that, if at any time in the past there were "fundamental principles" separating our own from our sister church, then unless the one church or the other has changed its principles, there must still "today" be "fundamental principles" that separate them. The mere lapse of time has no effect upon principles. Whatever the nature or the number of the "interesting things that have taken place" in the last "fifty or sixty years," the only thing that would have been of special interest for this discussion would have been something evidencing a change of principle either upon the part of our own, or upon that of our sister church. Evidence for such a change of principles in the case of either church is conspicuous by its absence from Dr. Lingle's discussion.

True, Dr. Lingle devotes a good deal of space to directing attention to such actions of our Assembly as that of 1901 touching "a sister seminary;" those between 1861 and 1875 of a political character; and those of 1909, 1910, and 1914, respectively. But he evidently regards these actions one and all as inconsistent with what he himself calls the "historical principles" of our church. Presumably he regards them as having some logical bearing upon "the question at issue." Without traversing this ground in detail it will be enough for me to say that I quite agree with Dr. Lingle that all of the actions cited by him are inconsistent with the "historical principles" to which our church has committed itself; that he might have made a much longer list of such actions than he has; that I value his public testimony to the fact that they are inconsistent with our "historical principles," only regretting that he has not borne this public testimony at an earlier date, and for a better purpose. To this I must add two remarks: One is that to me it seems that the effect of Dr. Lingle's way of dealing with these inconsistencies is simply to divert attention from the only real issue, needlessly to confuse uninformed and undisciplined minds, to cloud the real issue, and to prejudice a calm consideration of it. The real issue, let it be remembered is—not has our church uniformly or usually conformed its practice to its principles, but—has it at any time disavowed or changed the principles that Dr. Lingle apparently admits at some time in the past distinguished it from our sister church? Now, I do not believe Dr. Lingle himself will affirm that it was either the intention or the effect of any of the actions that he cites to disavow or change the "historical principles" distinguishing our own from our sister church.

My other remark is simply that however discreditable to us the actions cited by Dr. Lingle, still, he himself being judge, they establish the fact that as late as 1914 there were "principles" distinguishing our own from our sister church. A law that has been annulled cannot be violated; neither can a principle that has been disavowed. In other words; the action of 1914 would have not been inconsistent with our principles, had not our principles still prohibited political deliverances. What our fathers disavowed in 1876 was not the principles to which our church had committed itself in previous years, but all action "contrary to its historical principles"—let the reader note that the words I put here in quotations are not the words of our fathers, but those of Dr. Lingle himself. "There is," Dr. Lingle very truly, as well as fairly observes, "something splendid in this disavowal." Perhaps he will permit me to ask him whether he can point to any similar disavowal of its political deliverances upon the part of our sister church. He is no doubt aware that at the Baltimore conference, in 1875, the representatives of our sister church were challenged to secure such a disavowal from it, and that they failed to accept the challenge. I wonder if it has occurred to Dr. Lingle to ask himself, Why has there been no such "splendid" disavowal on the part of our sister church? The answer is not far to seek. It is because they do not regard their political deliverances as contrary to but rather in accord with their historical principles.

Concluding this part of his discussion, Dr. Lingle is content, it seems, to set the political deliverances of our Assembly over against those of our sister church, and to ask with grave irony "just where is the fundamental separating principle?" Shall we say that the principle is that they "make such deliverances" very frequently, and that we make them "only occasionally?" Of course we shall say nothing of the kind. All that we shall do to disillusionize any who might be victimized by Dr. Lingle's ironical quandary is to call attention to the fact that he has used the phrase "fundamental principle" where the sense called for the words "fundamental difference." Had Dr. Lingle asked, as he should have done—not "just where is the fundamental separating principle," but—"just where is the fundamental difference between our own and our sister church in this matter of political deliverance?" there would be no reason for any

An Adequate Financial Program Adopted By the Synod of South Carolina.

By J. B. Spillman.

The Systematic Beneficence Committee of the Synod of South Carolina has projected a program that will appeal to every business man in the Synod and will put the Synod of South Carolina on a firm financial basis.

This budget provides for the Synod's quota of the Assembly's causes, the support of Home Missions in the Synod and Presbyteries, and the adequate financing of the current expenses of the four educational institutions. Every pastor and church officer should study this program of the Synod of South Carolina. There are many provisions that should be adopted by other Synods.

Besides the financial provisions, the personnel of the Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship Committee, as this committee will be termed in the future, will be composed of the chairman of the Systematic Beneficence Committee in each Presbytery and the Synod's representative on the Assembly's Committee. This is a very wise provision and this change will put men on this committee who should become experts in financing the church's work.

Another wise provision is the changing of the time of the Synod, so that the meeting of Synod will be between the meeting of the General Assembly and the fall meetings of Presbyteries. This will enable the Synod to take up matters referred to it by the General Assembly and act upon them and pass them on to the Presbyteries in the fall meetings, before the spring campaign for funds. All Synods should meet before the fall meetings of Presbyteries.

The budget for the Synod of South Carolina is as follows:

Assembly Causes, $189,000, or 60 per cent—Foreign Missions, $104,895, or 33.3 per cent.; Assembly's Home Missions, $50,400, or 16 per cent.; Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, $23,625, or 7.5 per cent.; S. S. Extension and Publication, $6,300, or 2 per cent.; Assembly's Training School, $1,890, or 6 per cent.; Bible Causes, $1,890, or 6 per cent.

Synodical and Presbyterian Causes $126,000, or 40 per cent—Local Home Missions, $47,750, or 15 per cent.; Schools and Colleges, $53,550, or 17 per cent.; Presbyterian College, $28,350, or 9 per cent.; Chicora College, $18,900, or 6 per cent.; Columbia Seminary, $6,300, or 2 per cent.; Thornwell Orphanage, $25,200, or 8 per cent. Total, $315,000.

Of the total amount contributed in each Presbytery for Local Home Missions, the Presbytery is expected to pay to the Synod's Home Mission Committee 40 per cent. This will give the Synod's committee sufficient money to maintain its work.

The Synod's Home Mission Committee expects to secure a man to be general superintendent of the Home Mission work of this Synod and who will be the campaign manager to conduct the drive of the Progressive Program and follow up this work during the year.

The clearing house plan was carried over until the meeting of Synod next fall, as it was deemed wise that the Synod should await action by the General Assembly.

Fix thyself firmly upon the belief of the general resurrection, and thou wilt never doubt of either of the particular resurrections, either from sin, by God's grace, or from worldly calamities, by God's power.—Rev. John Donne.

quandary—real or ironical. He himself has supplied the sufficient and obviously correct answer to the question. It is: "They," i. e., the brethren of our sister church, "do not regard this whole matter" of political deliverances "as we do." That is merely Dr. Lingle's very indirect and oblique way of saying that political deliverances are in accord with their interpretation of our common standards, but not with our interpretation of them. Hence the frequency of their political deliverances. Whereas in our case, in spite of the fact that such deliverances are contrary to our principles, our Assembly does occasionally muddle itself into one.

Why Dilatory Methods in Church Courts?

By H. E. Ravenel.

I OBSERVED your comment soon after the adjournment of the Assembly in reference to the congestion of business on the last day. It is to be wished that more of the editors and church members would agitate this subject, with a view of reforming the practice of the Assembly so as to avoid waste of time.

Since the adjournment of the New Orleans Assembly I have casually met two prominent business men of our church, one a cotton planter and merchant of northern Louisiana, and the other a cotton mill man of North Carolina, who each told me that he had determined, after attending previous sessions of the Assembly, that he would not go again on account of the dilatory methods of the body.

There seems no doubt that we are losing the presence and counsel of some of our ablest elders for this reason, though how far the evil extends no one can tell.

One of the first acts of the Assembly at New Orleans was to order a sermon every morning at 11:40. Now, of course the Assembly should be devotional, and it is so. Every day is opened by devotions, and every night a sermon, or an address on some form of church work is had in connection with worship in regular form.

Attention to the business of the Lord is religion, and unless I misunderstand the function of the Assembly it meets primarily to promote the Kingdom of God by attention to the King's business. But no matter what was before the house, or how much absorbed men were in the topic under discussion, all business had to go over when the hour for the sermon arrived.

The result of this and other dilatory proceedings was that all of the following matters were passed upon at only two sessions on the last day at New Orleans, when numbers of the representatives had left, 43 having been excused:

- (1) Report of Committee on Foreign Correspondence.
- (2) Report of Committee on Suggested Changes of the Book of Church Order in Reference to Candidates for the Ministry.
- (3) Report of Standing Committee on Foreign Missions.
- (4) Report of Standing Committee on Publication and Sabbath School Work (embracing 10 recommendations).
- (5) Report of Standing Committee on Narrative.
- (5) Ditto Bible Cause.
- (7) Ditto Committee on Audits.
- (8) Ditto Committee on Council of Reformed Churches in America.
- (9) Committee on Leave of Absence.
- (10) Committee on Records of Synods.
- (11) Committee on Thanks.
- (12) Committee on Inter-Church World Movement.
- (13) Committee on Addresses of Visiting Brethren.
- (14) Committee on Education of Home Missionaries' Children.
- (15) An amendment reconsidering a certain overture from the Presbytery of Piedmont.
- (16) Report of the Committee on Systematic Beneficence, which as we all know covers the entire field of church activities.
- (17) A proposed amendment to the Book of Church Order, and a few other matters.

It is perfectly clear that only the most perfunctory consideration could have been given to most of these matters by the body. Of course they had been considered in committee, but we might as well say that our standing committees have power to act as to take everything they say without consideration.

I do not feel qualified to criticize the fathers of the Assembly, but I feel that reform in the methods used is much to be desired and should be studied by our leaders.

that which, on the great Judgment Day, they will wish they had done, as with soul uncovered they stand before the Judgment Seat of the Eternal.

"Until the people of this nation accept and live this religion there will be strife where there should be peace; there will be strikes and lockouts and murder where there should be co-operation and harmony; there will be hatred where there should be friendship and love.

"A nationwide acceptance of this, the only true religion in action, would bring business-peace and world-peace where there is now turmoil, and men would then cease to seek to gain their aims by lawless acts of immorality, but would in spirit and in deed follow the divine command, 'All things whatsoever ye would that men do to you, do ye even so to them.'"

As to their substance, these two articles might pass for chapters from Isaiah. But Isaiah goes a great deal further than either Mr. Babson or Mr. Edmonds, or than both of them combined.

Mr. Babson tells us that "the need of the hour is more religion." Mr. Edmonds tells us what this religion should be in its practical results. But neither of them point out, except incidentally, the means and agencies through which this religion is to be implanted and cultivated in the life of a nation.

Isaiah, more than any other prophet, elaborates the means and agencies through which alone religion can be introduced and maintained among any people.

These means and agencies he summarizes under four heads. He declares that the true religion depends on four agencies:

1. The Lord's Word.
2. The Lord's Day.
3. The Lord's House.
4. The Lord's Servant.

Where these are neglected or ignored religion will languish and die.

1. The Lord's Word.

Isaiah's formula is, "Thus saith the Lord." He opens his prophecy with the words, "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth; for the Lord hath spoken."

He believed that the only religion that could save mankind was a revealed religion, the religion of a book. He makes the principles of this book the test of all moral and spiritual teachers and teaching: "To the law and to the testimony," cries he. "If they speak not according to this word, there is no light in them."

He declared that while all the glory of man shall fade like a flower and wither as the grass, "the word of our God shall stand forever."

He believed that this word was as indispensable for spiritual growth as moisture is for vegetable growth. "As the rain cometh down from heaven and the snow and watereth the earth that it may bud and bring forth seed for the sower and bread for the eater, so shall the word of the Lord be." He believed that the neglect of God's word was one of the prime causes of national unrest and national ruin: "Wherefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel, Because ye despise this word, and trust in oppression and perverseness, and rely thereon; therefore this iniquity shall be to you as a breach ready to fall, swelling out in a high wall, whose breaking cometh suddenly in an instant." (30:12-13).

2. The Lord's House.

I need quote only one passage to show the glory of the church as Isaiah foresaw it in his vision: "And it shall come to pass in the latter days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many peoples shall go and say, come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he will judge between the nations, and will decide concerning many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Now notice that there is no hope of peace in the world except through the influence of the church proclaiming the principles of God's truth. "Out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

The church is the peculiar institution of Christ, the only one that will survive "the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds." He has declared that His church is built by Him upon the rock of truth, and that the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

The Apostle Paul declares that one of the fundamental questions for men to consider is their attitude to "the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth."

The most important parts of a building are its foundation and the supports of the roof. Without a sure foundation the building will crumble; and without proper support for the roof the walls will be sprung apart and the whole house will be in danger of collapsing. God has given to His church this important function in our social structure; it is "the pillar and ground of the truth;" through the truth that has been committed to it, the church is the foundation at the bottom and the support at the top of human society.

I said that Mr. Babson and Mr. Edmonds mention only incidentally the agencies through which religion is to be maintained and propagated. They both, however, turn to the church as chief among these agencies. Mr. Edwards starts out with the assertion that "above all else this country needs a nationwide revival of old-fashioned prayer meeting religion."

Mr. Babson declares that "the church is the only organization in existence for generating right motives in man; schools develop intellect, theaters and novels foster passion, but the church is the sole organization which develops those good motives of love, sympathy, hope and inspiration on which the industrial salvation of the world depends."

May I turn aside a moment to emphasize the soundness of Mr. Babson's position on the function of the church—"that of generating right motives in man—those good motives of love, sympathy, hope and inspiration on which the industrial salvation of the world depends." She is not to be a partisan in industrial disputes, nor even an umpire. Her business is to proclaim those principles which must animate both parties to the dispute, and that must guide arbitrators and umpires. She must refuse to take the part of either labor or capital as such, but with a clear, ringing voice, and a heart on fire with love for man as man, she must declare that what God requires of us all is to do justly, to love kindness, and to walk humbly with Him.

She must follow the example of her Master who taught that we should do unto others as we would have them do unto us; but who declined to settle a controversy between two brothers as to their inheritance with the words, "Who made me a judge or a divider over you?"

3. The Lord's Day.

I need not dwell on this, as I have had so much to say about it from time to time.

At present I shall content myself with calling your attention to the vital connection between it and the two generators and nourishers of religion already mentioned.

The Lord's Word, the Lord's House, and the Lord's Day stand or fall together.

Even if the observance of the Lord's Day were not prescribed, it would stand to reason that the Lord's House could not be maintained, nor the Lord's Word inculcated, without a definite time set apart for this purpose.

But the three are joined together again and again in the Scriptures. Isaiah unites them in the text: "Thus saith the Lord"—there is God's Word: "Blessed is the man that keepeth the Sabbath from profaning it"—there is the Lord's Day: "Them will I bring to my holy mountain, and make

Dr. Campbell Morgan at Union Seminary

FIVE years ago when Dr. Morgan was in Richmond he delivered an address to the students of the seminary in the Watts Chapel which was so full of sound and helpful counsel to prospective ministers that it deepened a desire the faculty had long entertained to have him come at some time convenient to him and give our students a series of lectures on Preaching, a subject which he has made peculiarly his own. It was accordingly arranged that he should be the James Sprunt Lecturer in the following year and should give ten addresses on The Ministry of the Word. But that Summer the World War broke out, and being unwilling to leave his people at the time when they needed him most, in the agony of war, he wrote that he would have to postpone his visit. When the war was won he felt free to come, and so, to the great delight of our students and the large number of visiting ministers who had gathered in Richmond to hear him, he began the course of lectures so long looked forward to on November 4th.

In introducing him Dr. Moore, the president of the seminary, said it would be the most superfluous of all things to try to tell ministers who the lecturer was, for all ministers knew him as the most noted expository preacher in the world, but added that to the new students who might not be so familiar with his career it would not be inappropriate to mention a few facts about him. He made his first visit to this country in 1896, twenty-three years ago. He went as a visitor and onlooker to Northfield during one of the Summer conferences. Mr. D. L. Moody, hearing that an English preacher was present, called on him one evening to offer prayer. At the close of the meeting when Mr. Morgan was making his adieu and announcing his departure on an early train the next day, Mr. Moody said to him in his blunt and hearty way. "You're not going to take a train tomorrow. You are to preach here at ten o'clock. I have already announced you." From that day Campbell Morgan and Northfield were always thought of together in this country. Summer after summer he was a fixture on the conference program. After the death of Mr. Moody he lived for four years at Northfield as extension lecturer, going out to give Bible addresses at many places throughout the United States.

Then his own country requisitioned him. In the heart of London, near Buckingham Palace, stood a great building known as Westminster Chapel, with a seating capacity of 2,500, but with a congregation that was almost extinct. It was to this unpromising field that Dr. Morgan was called, and here he wrought a stupendous creative work. When he began there was a morning congregation of about 30. In a short time he was preaching to morning and evening congregations that aggregated 4,000 people. Fifty or more members of parliament were among his regular hearers. For 12 years he poured his very life into that work. But the tremendous strain of it began to affect his health and it became necessary for him to find relief in lighter work. Lately he has been supplying the pulpit of the Highbury Quad-them joyful in my house of prayer for all nations"—there is God's House.

We find the same trinity of holy agencies in the life of our Savior "who left us an example, that we should follow in His steps."

We are told that at the beginning of His ministry, He came to Nazareth, where He was brought up; and, as His custom was, He went into the synagogue (God's House) on the Sabbath (God's Day) and stood up to read from the Scriptures (God's Book").

Wherefore what God hath joined together, let no man put asunder.

How beautiful the words in which Isaiah commends to the nation the observance of God's holy day: "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable; and shalt honor it, not doing thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

4. The Lord's Servant.

The latter part of the prophecy of Isaiah is full of a great ideal—a great person, called the Servant of the Lord, or the Redeemer. There can be no doubt as to who it is that fulfills these prophecies. It is the Lord Jesus Christ—the only redeemer of men.

In a passage from Luke's Gospel, already quoted, we read that "Jesus came to Nazareth where He was brought up, and, as His custom was, He went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day and stood up to read. And there was delivered unto Him the book of the prophet Isaiah. And when He had opened the book, He found the place where it was written: The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He hath annointed me to preach the Gospel to the poor; He hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord. And He closed the book, and began to say unto them, This day is the Scripture fulfilled in your ears."

You will remember, too, that the Ethiopian Eunuch as he sat in his chariot was reading from the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, which speaks of that great person, the servant of his Lord, as a suffering Redeemer: "He was wounded for our transgression; He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with His stripes we are healed. He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not His mouth."

When the Eunuch asked Philip who it was that was here spoken of, we are told that Philip began at the same Scripture, and preached unto him Jesus.

Yes, as John declares in the book of the Revelations, "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." And as Jesus Himself proclaimed, both the law and the prophets bear witness to Him. He is the Saviour of sinners, the Redeemer of God's people, the Prince of Peace, the only hope of the world. All other means and agencies—the Lord's Word, the Lord's House, the Lord's Day—lead to Him, and are incomplete without Him. "He is head over all things unto the church, which is His body, the fullness of Him that filleth all."

If our social and industrial problems are to be solved, if we are to have peace within our borders and throughout the world, we must hark back to the religion of our fathers. And in order that this religion may be preserved and propagated we must depend upon those means and agencies which God has appointed—the Lord's Word, the Lord's House, the Lord's Day—all of which head up in the Lord's Divine Servant. There is no other name given under heaven among men whereby we must be saved but the name of Jesus.

I cannot do better than conclude this sermon with a paragraph from an editorial in last week's Asheville Advocate:

"In making up groups for the settlement of questions that involve the welfare of all God's children in America, the one important person has been forgotten. Capital has depended upon Gary, ignoring God. Labor has put its faith in Gompers, forgetting God. Democrats have been worshipping at the shrine of Woodrow Wilson, while republicans have made Lodge their lord. The desire to rule has crowded religion from the hearts of men. The Saviour has been crucified upon the cross of selfishness, and we in our pigmy minds think we can win the battle alone.

"History tells us that we cannot do it, and that there can be no settlement, nor peace, until the Spirit of God once again is allowed to enter and rule the hearts of men in America."

Dr. John H. Jowett, lately pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, of New York, who succeeded Dr. Morgan as pastor of Westminster Chapel, says he has never been able to determine whether Dr. Morgan's great opportunity was to be found in a settled pastorate or in a wider ministry, ranging over the whole country and through many lands. We may well share Dr. Jowett's uncertainty on that point when we remember on the one hand the marvellous work he did as a pastor in London and when we remember on the other hand what he has accomplished as president of Cheshunt College, at Cambridge, and as lecturer at innumerable Bible institutes throughout Britain and America. But at any rate we are glad that just now he is himself taking the view that this wider ministry gives him the greater opportunity for the present and that in his discharge of this wider ministry it is our privilege to have him at our seminary.

In a tribute to him on the eve of his departure from England, Dr. Jowett said: "He lived and labored here, as he has lived and labored everywhere, for the exposition and illumination of the Word of God. It has been his one aim

This witness is true. In the work of unfolding the Scriptures he is in a class by himself. He is the pre-eminent expository preacher of our time. At Union Seminary, where the chief aim has always been the making of effective preachers, we are glad to have a man presenting this subject who has shown so conclusively that the minister can do his best work by simply preaching the Word in its purity and fullness.

All this was seen in these 10 lectures. They were close and richly suggestive expositions of Scripture. As this paper has recently published the subjects of the several lectures, we shall not at this time say more of them, but we take pleasure in announcing that the volume containing Dr. Morgan's James Sprunt lectures on the Ministry of the Word has just been brought out by the Fleming H. Revell Company, of New York, and can be procured at once from the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va.; price, $1.50.

The seminary students and the ministers are not the only people who have had the benefit of Dr. Morgan's work in Richmond, but the general public as well. He has been "loaned" by the seminary to the community at large and has been giving Bible addresses every night to great audiences in the City Auditorium.

The Bible lesson tells of a vision which the prophet saw of life-giving waters which flowed from the Temple. The wonderful stream increased in depth and power as it went. A quarter of a mile from its source it was ankle deep, at half a mile it reached to the waist, and when it had run a mile or more the depth was too great to cross without swimming. All along the banks of the stream fruit trees sprung up where desert sands had been, and the lifeless Dead Sea where the fresh waters now emptied began to teem with fish of the finest sorts. The very leaves of the trees beside the waters were as full of healing as the fruit was good for eating. And the power to bless which the waters possessed was because of their source in the sanctuary of God. These waters are the gospel of Christ.

The sore which the gospel heals is sin. This sore of sin is the great root cause of all the fevers and pains of humanity. Every heartbreak, every nerve-throb, all disease and death, come from sin. If there were no sin there would be no pain among men. Of course it is not always our own particular sin that brings the pain; often suffering comes to us from the sins of others. But always and everywhere among men sin is the producing cause of pain of every sort. The blood and Spirit of Christ heal the sin and thus remove the cause. The more thoroughly a land is Christianized the greater is the progress made against disease of all sorts. The United States is not yet fifty per cent Christianized. Scarcely half of its people are even members of the church. If we ever become a hundred per cent Christian we shall have a land more nearly exempt from ill health and sorrow than was ever seen before on earth.

If every person in the United States were Christian, successful efforts would be made to remove hygienic ignorance which produces so much illness.

Not a little sickness is due also to extreme poverty. If every person in America were to become Christian there would be no poverty due to indolence, for indolence is un-Christian. And there would be no poverty from oppression, for the Golden Rule would remove the cause.

A great deal of ill health comes from overwork. If we were all thoroughly Christian, no one would find overwork necessary, for we would bear one another's burdens.

If all of us were Christians there would be no sickness from excesses or licentiousness, for Christians are self-controlled and pure.

If all were Christians there would be no illness from neglect, for application of the Golden Rule would make neglect impossible.

Let us accept Christ and urge Him upon all. This is our best hope for a healthful world, and our only hope for life eternal.

Who ought to be expected to give most help to Red Cross and other health agencies—Christians or non-Christians? Why?

Ought churches to run hospitals in this country as they do missionary hospitals in heathendom? Why?

Ought Christians to work for prevention as well as cure of sickness? Why?

The Prayer Meeting

By Rev. C. D. Waller.

TOPIC FOR WEEK BEGINNING NOV. 23, 1919.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE—Psalm 145; Eph. 5:20.

Both David and Paul found abundant causes of thankfulness to God. David said, "Every day will I bless thee," and Paul spoke of "giving thanks always." This makes a powerful appeal to us; yet it is a beautiful and useful thing that a special day is set apart by presidential appointment as a national period of thanksgiving.

A thankless—an ungrateful heart is peculiarly obnoxious both to God and man. To be the recipient of favors continually, and yet to feel no gratitude—what can surpass this in repulsiveness?

The best way to avoid the shame of ingratitude is to "count your blessings one by one." Think carefully of the daily gifts and mercies which God has showered upon you. Remember too that we are not worthy of the least of these blessings. Thus every mercy will warm our hearts with growing and grateful love to our Father.

Let us not forget that to neglect this becoming exercise is very hazardous, resulting surely in pride, ingratitude, and the sacrifice of spiritual beauty and power. As a nation we have tremendous reasons for gratitude to God. It is true that we have causes of uneasiness. Class hatreds, anarchy, brutal lawlessness challenge our manhood and our love of country. Perhaps we had congratulated ourselves that our free country would be immune from such disorders and crimes. But these things should only serve to bring into brighter relief the national and local blessings which God has bestowed upon us.

Our abundance should awaken sympathy and pity for the poverty and suffering of millions less fortunate than ourselves. It is one of our reasons for thanksgiving that we have been able and willing to minister both personally and financially and by the fruits of our fields and herds and mines to those who are ready otherwise to perish. And our thanksgiving will be more honest and profound if we have done our best by labor to produce the things that the world needs. This is no time for shorter hours of labor, for shirking or idleness. As God has been good to us, surely we must be good to our suffering fellow men. A cultivated Jew recently presented the sufferings of his people in eloquent descriptions to a congregation of Christian people where the writer was officiating. It is cause for thankfulness that the age-long strife and shameful, unchristian persecution of the Jews by Christians has given place to such scenes as this all over our country, and that the followers of Jesus are pouring out their means to help the ancient people of God in their extremity of suffering and privation. It is a cause of thanksgiving that our President under the faithful skill of physicians has become convalescent: and we will not fail in our thanksgiving service to offer fervent prayers to God for the complete recovery of his useful life.

Nor should we fail to remember with sincere and deep gratitude to God that, perhaps for the first time in history, an honest and an enlightened effort has been made to replace the Machiavellian principles or practices in international affairs with the principles of Christianity. We should earnestly pray, and use every proper means that the scoffers and opponents of the League of Nations may be brought to confusion.

Our personal causes of thankfulness, as we count our blessings will cause our hearts to glow with gratitude to God; but while we rejoice in these mercies let us remember practically those less fortunate than ourselves. Thus we may add reasons of gratitude not only to them, but also to ourselves.

Jesus Corrects John's Narrowness
Luke 9:46-56.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity."—Eph. 6.24.

AUTHORIZED VERSION

46 Then there arose a reasoning among them, which of them should be the greatest.

47 And Jesus, perceiving the thought of their heart, took a child, and set him by him.

48 And said unto them, Whosoever shall receive this child in my name, receiveth me; and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth him that sent me: for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great.

49 And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us.

50 And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: for he that is not against us, is for us.

51 And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem.

52 And sent messengers before his face: and they went, and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him.

53 And they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem.

54 And when his disciples, James and John, saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?

55 But he turned, and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of.

56 For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village.

Men often aspire to greatness. They frequently have erroneous conceptions as to wherein true greatness consists, and make mistakes as to the proper means of its attainment. Human beings too are oftentimes narrow in their conceptions of truth and duty, and this narrowness leads to sad practical results. It often causes men to be bigots in religion, and partisans in politics, who have more regard for the dominance of their party, than for the welfare of their country or mankind. Greatness and narrowness are both adverted to in our lesson, and we will consider its teachings under these heads. The Apostles desire greatness. The Samaritans reject Christ, James and John propose to consume them, Jesus rebukes their purpose.

I. The Apostles Desire Greatness.

They sought greatness of position and honor in the temporal kingdom which they supposed their Master would establish in the world. It was often a subject of dispute among them and they did not understand that Christ designed to found a spiritual kingdom upon different principles and with other rewards than in those pertaining to earth. This yearning for external greatness of place and honor among men without any regard to moral qualities or service rendered, Jesus reproveth. "He took a child and set him by Him" and said, "Whosoever shall receive this child in my name receiveth me, and whosoever receiveth me receiveth Him that sent me: for He that is least among you all the same shall be great." Here our Saviour teaches that the humility, submission and trustfulness of a little child is essential to true greatness. Elsewhere speaking upon this same subject He affirms that service is needful for greatness, and that "If any man would be great among you let him be your Servant." The truly great will not only serve but perform the humblest service.

II. The Samaritans Reject Christ.

Jesus was on His way to Jerusalem. The most direct road was through Samaria. The Lord sent Messengers before Him to provide for Him entertainment in a Samaritan village. They would not receive Him "because His face was as though He would go to Jerusalem." The Samaritans were a mixed race, descended from the heathen moved to the country at the time of the Assyrian Captivity, and from the poorer Israelites that remained in the land. The Samaritans were therefore aliens to the Israelites, differing from them not only in race but religion and they habitually had no dealings with each other. These people maintained a worship instituted by themselves in their own land, did not go to Jerusalem to worship and declined to entertain Jesus, because He was evidently a Jew on His way to the Capital City to engage in its homage to Jehovah. They felt just like the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well who when asked by Jesus for a drink of water instead of giving it to Him said "The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans." They lacked vision of who Jesus was and what He could bestow. When enlightened she and her countrymen acted very differently, and gladly received Christ.

III. James and John Desired to Consume Them.

They were indignant that their Divine Master should be rejected and treated with such dishonor. They refer to the prophet Elijah, calling fire down from heaven on the two companies of Ahab's soldiers sent to apprehend him. They desire to know if they should not do the same for these rejectors of Christ. They failed to make allowances for their ignorance, and to recognize the grand purpose for which Jesus came to the earth. They had zeal for their Master's glory, but did not then perceive that His glory was better promoted by saving men than by destroying them. Hence Jesus gently but faithfully rebukes them saying "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of, for the Son of Man came not to destroy men's lives but to save them."

IV. Why Jesus Rebukes Their Purpose.

It was not in accord with His mission to earth. He did not come to inflict on men the penalties their sins deserved. He says, "For the Son of Man is not come to destroy men's lives but to save them."

Friends of Union.

Two truthful and tremendous statements may be made about "organic union" between the once united, but now separated, Presbyterian churches: First, it is a question that cannot be settled by threats or sugar-teats. Second, it is championed by a very respectable number of representative ministers and members of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

The friends of union are deeply interested in the committee on union, to be selected by the Synods, because the proposal for this committee came from an Assembly favorably disposed towards a union that would satisfy the needs of the hour. I am sure that no friend of union would have this committee made up of predetermined partisans; nor yet of forward-looking intellectuals of the inner circle of powers ecclesiastical. If I may be permitted to interpret the desires of the friends of union, pardon me for saying: I am persuaded that they are praying, in agony of soul, for a committee of pious men who are willing to follow the leading of Divine providence under the influence of the Holy Spirit. The friends of union, I am sure, feel that no committee, Synod or Assembly has any right to make any decision or deliverance until in surrender to God it is led of the Holy Spirit to the action determined upon.

Let no one be unduly excited over the consideration of this question. The friends do not wish to force union. As a conscientious and persistent friend of union I think that the reference of this issue to the Presbyteries, for frank and full discussion leading to calm and dispassionate action, is all that is wanted. The union question will never be settled in committees, Synods or Assemblies. The proper, constitutional and only place where it can be settled is in the Presbytery. It will precipitate discussion, to be sure, but discussion is the very life of truth and Presbyterianism. It seems to me that the friends of union have a legal and moral right to have an organic issue settled in the Presbyteries.

"If ever we are tempted to think that there is no use trying, that the forces opposed to us are too strong, that we had better do as some are doing and drift, let us renew our strength at the Source of strength, and persevere along the narrow way. There is no other road that leads to eternal life."—Selected.

Devotional

WHO FAILS NOT.

When those we trust betray us, when those we love forsake us, when those we have helped revile us, the failure bites deep into the soul. But one thing stands out boldly against this record of human failure. God never fails. His strength knows no weakness, His wisdom never blunders, His goodness holds no flaw. Father and mother may forsake, human love may prove untrue, but there is no possibility of the Eternal Father ever ceasing to love His own. No sinful man ever trusted God in vain. No weak and helpless one ever found Him to fail. Have faith in God.—The Christian Guardian.

THE FATHER.

The prodigal's father was waiting and watching. Hope deferred had often made his heart sick, but it had never made his eyes dim. As we grow old, we generally acquire far-sight. We need glasses to read with, but the far horizon, the distant landscape—our eyes have adjusted themselves to that. We are moving toward "the land of far distances," and our eyes are growing accustomed to the perspective. Love is more than far-sight; it is sight. Infinite love sees more in humanity than the most optimistic humanist ever saw. Are these qualities not in us? Of course they are! We never see people as they are until we love them. God sees in us what our friends fail to see: nobilities, sanctities, capacities, of which we ourselves have never dreamed. Jesus renamed Peter "a rock" while he was yet soft as putty. But he was not putty; he was clay, and in the furious fires of trial he became like rock. The Master surprised Nathanael by saying, "When thou wast under the fig-tree I saw thee." He saw a prospective disciple when he was yet a great way off. To every one of us who is a great way off from the Father, God sends the Elder Brother to hasten our steps lest the night fall and find us exiles from His heart and house.—C. C. Albertson.

"Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God" (Rom. 12:2.)

Offer yourselves to the Lord, and keep offering, and you will find that you are delivered out of the hand of your enemy. The world says: "Come and have a little dance, a little gambling, a little pleasure. We will not gamble for dollars, but let us put up a few cents on a game of whist." What we must say is: "I am doing a great work, and I cannot go down: I am building the walls of Jerusalem." You need not ask whether it is wrong to go to a ball or the theatre. Preach Christ, live for Christ, look for Christ, and walk with Christ, and the world will very soon drop you. Faith in a living Christ will keep us from the world.—H. W. Webb-Peploe.

There are men who tell us that a revelation from God is impossible. I simply ask them, How do you know? Because if God exists it is not impossible; all things are possible with Him.

Others say that a revelation is not needed. If I should ask a dozen men the time of day, and each watch should mark a different time, it would be difficult to tell which one was right; they might be all wrong, but it would be clear that only one of them could by any possibility be right. A man might claim the gift of infallibility for his own watch, which would not be modest; or we might say, "There is no telling what o'clock it is," which would be uncomfortable; or we might say, "It would be convenient if there were a big town clock by which we could all regulate our watches."

What we want in this universal conflict about moral questions is a town clock.

Others say that there is so much in the Bible that could not have come from God; that this or that, for instance, is not God's style. I don't know just what God's style is, but it seems to me that what is good for one is good for the other; and when I ask that my verifying faculty be allowed the privilege of eliminating from the Bible what I do not like I am fair enough to say that my next-door neighbor may have the same privilege. It may turn out that his eclecticism has not hit upon the same thing to take out or keep in as mine has. Now when we have all taken out what we do not think could have come from God, I should like to know how much of the Bible would be left except that for which the book-binder is responsible.—Francis L. Patton.

We grow accustomed to failure. There is never a success but is built upon a dozen failures. There is no man so wise, so strong, so good but his path is marked by many a failure. Wise men are not wise enough, strong enough, to avoid failure; and many a story of failure is sad and tragic enough, and sometimes the failure is a failure of love and friendship and truth, and this is the worst of all.

Home Circle

CULTIVATE YOUR CHILD'S CONFIDENCE AND BE HIS CLOSEST FRIEND.

A little child begins by "telling mother" everything, Bumps or bruises, joys or sorrows, all are brought to her as naturally as the child draws breath, and this continues as long as he is unconscious of himself as an individual.

The time for special care is when he becomes aware of himself as a separate entity. From this time on, a cold look, an indifferent air, an uninterested attitude, a word of ridicule or sarcasm may wound the child's sense of confidence or justice so deeply that he will shrink within himself and never again show his inmost thoughts or most sacred feelings to his mother or to any one else. Incalculable harm is done through thoughtlessness, even by the most devoted parents, in failing to recognize this stage of the child's development and to reverence his individuality and his right to it. The mother loses the greatest power for good she possesses and misses the greatest joy and recompense she can have by not sharing her child's hopes and fears, his troubles and triumphs. The bitter experience will come to her sooner or later of realizing that her child is sharing these with another person who must, therefore, be spiritually nearer to him than she is.

There are a few absolutely certain ways of avoiding this catastrophe which have been used over and over again by wise and devoted mothers. One is, never fail to listen attentively and sympathetically, giving your best wisdom to help your child see his problem clearly for himself.

Another is, respect your child as a spiritual being, an individual as different from all other individuals as God meant him to be. Meet him on his own ground, and do not try to make him conform to a pattern of your own.

Respect your child's confidence absolutely. Once betrayed, it may never be given again.

A young lad of twelve I once knew, told his mother something that interested him, and asked her not to tell any one about it. Later in the day he passed under the bay window in which she and a friend were sitting with their sewing, and he heard her telling what he had told her in confidence. He was a rather quiet lad, but very determined, and after the visitor left he went to his mother and said: "Mother, I passed under the window and heard you telling Mrs. Blank what I asked you not to mention to any one. I just want to let you know that as long as I live I will never tell you anything that concerns myself until I am ready for everybody to know it." And he kept his word, although he was always a most devoted and dutiful son.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Dr. E. C. Murray is now in Charlotte, being under treatment at the Charlotte Sanatorium. He is one of the Synod's useful and busy men.

Rev. E. E. Gillespie, D.D., of York, S. C., is conducting a series of meetings at Knox Church, Charlotte. Dr. Gillespie is no stranger to this city, as he was for some time the efficient Superintendent of Synodical Missions in North Carolina.

Rev. W. P. McCorkle, D.D., formerly of Martinsville, Va., is now making his home in Charlotte. Dr. McCorkle has preached very acceptably to the following churches: Hopewell, Mallard Creek, Banks and Huntersville. He will gladly supply any vacant pulpit.

On November 9 the editor had the privilege of preaching to the people of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, of Covington, Ky. It was a pleasure to see evidences of the constructive work of Dr. Hunt, the pastor, and to learn what a power for civic righteousness he is in the city.

We had this week a very pleasant visit from Rev. George L. Cook, once of this Presbytery, but now of Winchester Presbytery, Synod of Virginia. He will be remembered as the beloved pastor of Paw Creek Church. Though he has passed the meridian of life, his bow still abides in strength, and each Sunday he preaches several times, riding long distances, in the trying weather of the Alleghanies.

SOUTH CAROLINA:

Campobella and Landrum—Rev. T. P. Purgess was installed pastor at Campobella and Landrum Churches on November 2, by a commission of Enoree Presbytery.

Spartanburg—Rev. J. W. McClure, lately of Kentucky but formerly pastor in this State, was installed pastor of the Second Church, Spartanburg, by a commission of Enoree Presbytery, October 26.

Pee Dee Presbytery—At an adjourned meeting of Pee Dee Presbytery held in Anderson, S. C., November 5, 1919, the pastoral relation between Rev. J. J. Harrell and the McColl Church was dissolved and Mr. Harrell was given a letter of dismissal to Kings Mountain Presbytery in order that he may accept calls to the churches of Bessemer City, Long Creek and Cherryville. An adjourned meeting of Pee Dee Presbytery will be held in Hartsville, S. C., November 30, 1919, at 5 p. m. A. H. McArn, S. C.

Great Falls—Rev. W. L. Latham, the pastor of this church, is making a name for efficient work. Through his active co-operation with the circulation manager of the Standard, a thorough canvass of his field was made. The church can now report that all the families except three take a Church paper.

Not only is the Church paper to be found in nearly every home, but the Confession of Faith has also been put into the homes. During the recent meeting held by Dr. R. C. Reed, ten families were received into the church. Both people and pastor have reason to be proud.

Rock Hill—The plans are about complete for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the First Presbyterian Church, which was effected on November 13, 1869.

Beginning on next Thursday, November 13, the congregation will fittingly celebrate the semi-centennial. All the

Eating at the Second Table

Since 1914 the Church Has Had to Eat at the Second Table

Every war appeal had the right of way. Money was given by the millions. And all causes of the Church suffered. We had to wait. We waited in good grace, too, and did our part by the others.

BUT NOW—everything that wants money is making a "Drive." There seems to be no disposition on the part of some causes to LET THE CHURCH CATCH UP WITH HER PROGRAM.

TAKE THE COLLEGES OF THE CHURCH: They were stripped of students for the war—and of income, too; they have had to meet rising prices on old budgets; their income has not increased; they are running on a pre-war basis still. THEY WERE PLANNING FOR A FORWARD MOVE BEFORE THE WAR STARTED, to catch up with their needs, and patriotically stopped their program of expansion.

THE COLLEGES OF THE CHURCH FACE THEIR MOST SERIOUS SITUATION NOW. If they do not get increased endowments soon they cannot stand the strain, and the Church will be the loser. OUR PEOPLE MUST DISCRIMINATE BETWEEN APPEALS THAT ARE MADE.

THE CHURCH OF GOD THAT HAS NURTURED ALL OF THESE OTHER CAUSES INTO LIFE AND AT WHOSE BREASTS THEY HAVE DRAWN THEIR SUPPORT SHALL NOT BE FORCED TO CONTINUE EATING AT THE SECOND TABLE.

If we believe in the Kingdom of Christ, and that the world needs His message; if we believe that the World Leadership that is necessary for carrying out His program must come from our Church Colleges, then in the name of fairness and justice let us insist that His Church and His Cause shall have FIRST claim on HIS property in our hands.

Our plans for a million dollars for our schools in this Synod were stopped during the war period. Now we appeal to every loyal Presbyterian in the Synod to help finish this task.

pastors who have served the church since its organization are still living except the first, Rev. Mr. Cooper, who was also pastor of Ebenezer Church.

It was the hope of the congregation that each of the former pastors could be here to take part in the golden celebration. Dr. W. B. Jennings, of Germantown, Pa., and Rev. W. L. Lingle, of Richmond, Va., found it impossible to attend. Dr. W. M. Anderson, of Dallas, Texas, and Dr. Alexander Sprunt, of Charleston, have accepted the invitations to be present. Dr. Alexander Martin, of this city, will attend, of course. The program to be followed during the celebration is as follows:

Thursday, 7:30 p. m.—Historical Address, B. Jennings White; A Word of Welcome by the Present Pastor, Rev. F. W. Gregg, with responses from various visitors present.

Friday, 3 to 5 p. m.—Social meeting, with the Oakland Avenue and Ebenezer congregations; 7:30 p. m., "The Presbyterians of the World," Dr. Alexander Sprunt; "The Church a Community Asset," Dr. W. M. Anderson.

Sunday, 11 a. m.—"Looking Forward," Dr. W. M. Anderson; 7:30 p. m., Sermon, Dr. Alexander Sprunt; Farewell, Dr. Alexander Martin.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Million Dollar Campaign—The Eastern Army, made up of Mr. Hunter's team, were at Concord and Kanasopolis this week. The Western Army, made up of Mr. Axson's team, is making a complete job of Kings Mountain Presbytery. The totals as we go to press are little over $450,000. The pastors have all been asked to preach on Christian Education in November.

Pine Hall—Rev. John R. Herndon, pastor of the Waughtown Presbyterian Church, Winston-Salem, recently preached four consecutive evenings for this small country church in Stokes county. There was one profession of religion. Although the congregations were small they were greatly interested in the messages of the Gospel and the seed sown will be cared for by the Great Husbandman.

Red Springs—The Presbyterians of Red Springs are also sharing in the wave of prosperity that has hit our country and are now planning the erection of a modern Sunday School room to cost fifteen thousand dollars. This church, under the pastorate of Dr. J. J. Hill, has accomplished things which once seemed impossible and are still striving for greater things in the Master's work. B.

The Presbytery of Fayetteville will meet in adjourned session at First Church, Fayetteville, N. C., Tuesday, December 2, 1919, at 12 o'clock m. Matters of importance are expected to come before us at that meeting, and all who are interested are requested to be present, and any who have matters to bring before Presbytery soon may do so then. The Executive Committee of Home Missions will also meet that day.

L. Smith,

Supt. of Home Missions.

Antioch—Antioch Church is still going forward; her somewhat new system of the Lord's acre is proving very beneficial and is greatly swelling her contributions. They are discussing a new brick church to cost $30,000. It was the pleasure of our people to have with us recently a former beloved pastor, Rev. W. T. Walker, of Barium Springs. He preached for us at an evening service.

The C. E. Society also recently had to address them Mr. R. C. Lowrance, of "The Lumberton Bar," who is one of the most gifted speakers in North Carolina. The Lumberton quartet was also present and were heard with pleasure.

F. B.

Gastonia—Rev. Leonard Gill, evangelist for Synod and Mecklenburg Presbytery, closed a most successful and satisfactory meeting in our Congregational Mission field tonight. The meeting began last Sunday night in the school house of the Seminole Mill village, and despite inclement weather during the week, resulted in winning many men and women for the Kingdom and Church. Mr. Gill preached forceful gospel sermons throughout the week and lifted up the Great Master of men in a manner that all who would, could "look and live." A total of 46 decisions with a large number of requests for prayer were the results. An offering of $82.00 was taken for Synodical Home Missions, which in all probability will increase to $100.00, before being sent in. Mr. Gill will return next Thursday to hold another meeting in our Piedmont Mill field.

Hawfields—Rev. O. G. Jones, D.D., assisted the pastor in a meeting beginning on Sunday, November 2, and continuing over Sunday, November 9. Large and interested congregations were greatly edified by the stirring, scriptural and powerful messages of God's consecrated servant. There were comparatively few in our community who were non-communicants because of the large number of additions received last year. Of the small number left, four united themselves with the church upon confession of Christ, and practically the entire membership present rededicated themselves to God. The offering to Synod's work was $63.53.

We are thankful to the great Head of the Church for the blessing received, and hope that we shall be permitted to have His devoted servant with us at some future time.

Jonas Barclay, Pastor.

Red Springs—The steady evolutionary growth of the Presbyterian Church here during the last seven years if written would read like fiction. Dr. J. J. Hill, the present popular and efficient pastor, succeeded Rev. R. W. Jopling, and when he came there was an indebtedness of about $18,000 on the new church. The total collections for 1912 amounted to $3,784. The total collections for last year amounted to $9,452. This shows something of what Dr. Hill has accomplished during his pastorate, the average number of members received has been 39 per year. During these years Dr. Hill has greatly endeared himself to all the people regardless of denomination. He has labored in season and out of season for the advancement of the Kingdom. With a united people behind him it can be reasonably said that the present great work which is being done is only an earnest of that which is to follow. B.

Winston-Salem—First Church—So much has happened in our church life this fall that it is hard to condense it all into a news item. First our missionary campaign came on, with the inspiring addresses of Dr. Logan, of Japan, at a Sunday night service, at the meeting of the Brotherhood at supper, and at the Woman's Auxiliary, when he so stirred our women that they rose one after another to offer their means for the advancement of God's cause in heathen lands. Then followed the wonderful canvass for missions, at which time the missionary offerings of the men especially were greatly increased. Then Mrs. Ross visited us, and in her appealing, characteristic way, made us see the conditions in Mexico and long to relieve them with our money and our prayers.

After a most solemn sermon, on November 2, the newly-elected elders, R. W. Gorrell, Thomas Meslin, R. C. Norfleet, W. W. Smoak and E. L. Anderson, and deacons, P. A. Gorrell, E. W. O'Hanlon, W. L. Buhmann, C. H. Sebring, H. L. Riggins and S. Clay Williams, were ordained and installed.

Our Rally day the last Sunday in October was most encouraging, both from the number present and the offering. An interesting feature was the presentation of handsome bronze medals to the returned soldiers and war workers.

The Beginners' department of our Sunday School has taken on new life through the wonderful equipment recently given them, a set of little tables and a beautiful new piano, the piano being the gift of Mr. and Mrs. George Norfleet in memory of their little Mary, whose sweet voice was hushed on earth to sing her Savior's praises above.

Under the leadership of Dr. Lilly a teacher-training class has been organized and over 60 members enrolled. The class meets one hour on Tuesday evening and studies first "The Teacher," section two of our committee's course, and then the Sunday School lesson for the coming Sunday. The attendance has been fine at the three meetings we have had and the class most responsive to Dr. Lilly's inspirational teaching.

The Synod of North Carolina met in its 106th annual sessions in the First Presbyterian Church, Raleigh, N. C., on Tuesday, October 28, 1919, and continued its sessions three times a day until late Thursday night. It was the largest Synod ever assembled in the state. There were 158 ministers and 110 ruling elders present, besides 14 corresponding and visiting brethren, including the Governor of the State, who made a brief address, making a total of 282, and yet 96 ministers were absent and 388 churches were not represented.

At the request of the retiring moderator, Rev. D. I. Craig, D.D., the Rev. Walter W. Moore, D.D., president of the Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., preached the opening sermon on the text, "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength: they shall mount up with wings as eagles: and they shall run and not be weary: and they shall walk and not faint"—Isaiah 40:31.

Hon. John W. McLaughlin, a ruling elder of the Raeford Church, Fayetteville Presbytery, was elected moderator, and Rev. E. L. Siler, of the same Presbytery, was elected temporary clerk, which office, on motion, was made permanent, and Mr. Siler was elected to it at a salary of $25 per year.

Rev. D. I. Craig, D.D., was re-elected stated clerk and Rev. E. C. Murray, D.D., permanent clerk.

Reports were heard with great interest on Foreign Missions, Synodical Home Missions, Church and Christian Education, Schools and Colleges, Systematic Benevolence, the Orphans' Home and other causes. Many splendid addresses were made in connection with these reports, the cause of Christian Education and the raising of one million dollars for our church institutions, being emphasized and heartily endorsed. These reports will be published in full in the Minutes of Synod, and some of them may appear in the Presbyterian Standard. The Presbyterian Standard was ably and faithfully represented by Dr. J. R. Bridges.

The address of Dr. Egbert W. Smith, describing his long trip to the Orient, was very instructive and greatly enjoyed. The "Interchurch World Movement" proposition was presented, but no definite action was taken in regard to it.

Rev. J. M. Wells, D.D., was elected to represent the Synod on the ad-interim committee to consider the whole matter of closer relations with other Presbyterian bodies.

On the second day the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed, and after the "Communion", memorials of five deceased brethren were read and adopted by a rising vote, viz: Rev. J. H. Dixon, Rev. W. W. Davidson, Rev. C. A. Munroe, D.D., Rev. J. P. Shearer, D.D., and Rev. A. J. McKelway, D.D. These memorials will be printed in the Minutes of the Synod.

The following overtures were presented: To care for more children at the Orphan's Home. This was answered in resolutions adopted, offered by Dr. Richards; To appoint a Field Secretary of Foreign Missions for the Synod—declined; To change the basis of representation in our Church Courts—declined;

An overture in regard to the Montreat Association: "In view of the action of the last Assembly", this overture was declined. The Synod endorsed the effort to raise $200,000 for the better equipment of the Association. At the request of the Committee on Schools and Colleges for an endorsement of a Secretary: Granted for one year. The memorials from the Ladies' Auxiliaries were answered in the affirmative by the adoption of the report on Young People's Work.

Among the closing acts of Synod the following resolution was adopted: "In recognition of the greatness of the problems, social, economic and political, that our country faces in this troubled time of reconstruction, and mindful of our duty to pray for those in authority, the Synod closed its sessions with special prayer for our people, our legislators, and our President." This prayer was offered by Dr. C. E. Raynal.

The weather was fine, the hospitality was all that could be desired, and perfect harmony prevailed.

The next Synod will be held in the Church of the Covenant, Wilmington, N. C., on Tuesday, October 26, 1920.

ALABAMA.

The Synod of Alabama met in the Trinity Presbyterian Church of Montgomery, November 11, 1919. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Hickman, of Birmingham. The retiring moderator having left the Synod during the year, the Synod was convened by Col. Charles S. McDowell, Jr., the last moderator present.

Rev. Joseph Duglinson, of Selma, was unanimously elected moderator, and Rev. C. K. Taffe was elected temporary clerk.

The attendance was only an average attendance, there being present about 75 commissioners.

The Synod spent much time on the matter of electing the representative on closer relation ad interim committee of the Assembly. Rev. Thornton Whaling, D.D., was elected the Synod's representative, and Rev. Robert H. McCaslin was elected alternate.

Synod considered at length a strong report on lay attendance presented by a committee of laymen of which Ruling Elder Leslie Gilbert was the chairman. The report was adopted, which calls for an inspirational program during the meeting of Synod, the attendance of deacons by special invitation, the holding of a longer session, and the proper reporting the meeting to all the church sessions.

The matter of education was a deeply absorbing question. Reports from the Alabama Presbyterian College were very gratifying. Under the presidency of Rev. David Clark the college has made splendid progress, the indebtedness is being gradually retired, the student body enlarged. Synod instructed the trustees to make the school a junior college. Isbell College was given careful attention through the reports of the board and the president. Synod took a most advanced and forward look when it approved of an educational canvass in the Synod for $300,000 for its educational interests, to be divided as follows: Alabama Presbyterian College, $200,000; Isbell College, $50,000; Columbia Theological Seminary, $25,000; the Orphans' Home, $20,000, and Southwestern Presbyterian University, $5,000. This campaign is to be under the direction of the Assembly's committee, and if the funds can be realized it will entirely clear the institutions of all indebtedness as well as make a substantial contribution to the two outside institutions in which this Synod is interested.

The Synod also elected a campaign manager for his entire time to stimulate and promote the growth of the church, to increase the enthusiasm and interest of the church throughout the Synod in Home Missions, education and to promote the Progressive Program campaign of the church. Rev. D. F. McConnell, of Prattville, was unanimously elected to this office.

The Synod revised its policy of Synodical Home Missions enlarging the work and making provision in the budget for this cause. Synod determined to place a Presbyterian minister at the University of Alabama to labor among the Presbyterian students.

During the session of Synod, Dr. Egbert W. Smith delivered a most inspiring address on his trip to the orient. He also represented the Assembly causes. On the last evening of the session Dr. John McNeill spoke on Evangelism.

Rev. David Park, of Anniston, was elected stated clerk for the next three years, and Rev. E. R. Fry was made permanent clerk.

Government Street Church, of Mobile, was chosen as the place for the next meeting of Synod.

A resolution was passed endorsing the Interchurch World Movement, and nominating Revs. D. F. McConnell and J. A. MacSporran as the Synod's representatives on the Survey Council for the state.

The Synod was most delightfully entertained by the ladies of the two churches both days at luncheon, and on Wednesday afternoon the Synod was carried in automobiles to the aviation field to witness some exhibitions in the air.

ARKANSAS.

Holly Grove—Since the return of the pastor, Rev. J. H. Morrison, from a six weeks' visit at Asheville, N. C., Montreat, Statesville, Concord, Rocky River Church, Mallard Creek, Robinson, Allens, Laurinburg, Smyrna Church, and Charlotte, and the fiftieth anniversary of the Mecklenburg Presbytery, at Steele Creek, these churches of Pine Bluff Presbytery have been visited of God's blessed presence.

At the last communion season the names of 19 new members were announced. The communion was observed, three infants baptized, all finances paid according to pledges, a new Sunday School room added to the church building costing $634, and the statement made that the pastor's salary was raised from $750 to $1,000, paid monthly.

A splendid suit of clergy clothes has been presented to the pastor. Six elders, six deacons.

Valley Grove Church—One new member added on profession and baptism. The beautiful new church completed and seats in semi-circular form. The Sunday School every Sunday and preparations for the Christmas tree begun. The Ladies' Auxiliary ready to purchase a communion table and communion set. A French orphan supported. The salary paid in full. Five ruling elders and four deacons.

Marvell—Eight new members added last week; one new ruling elder elected, ordained, installed; the Sunday School growing; the salary paid in full; $200 raised to paint and repair the church; three ruling elders; two deacons.

Synod of Arkansas met in First Church, Pine Bluff, Rev. J. I. Norris, pastor. Rev. C. H. H. Branch, of Texarkana, opened the Synod with a notable sermon on, "Sirs, We Would See Jesus."

The retiring moderator, Rev. M. S. Smith, had gone from our bounds to Mississippi.

But few, if any, have better clerks than Rev. W. F. Rogers and James W. Marshall, who handle the records in typewritten book form.

A ruling elder, Mr. F. C. McCrary, was chosen moderator by 28 to 27 over Rev. C. H. H. Branch, and the pretty race was made unanimous in favor of the ruling elder. A large number of commissioners appeared the following morning.

Rev. Bob Jones was holding a tabernacle meeting, and a few turned Methodist "pro re nata" for the evening. The Lord's Supper was conducted by Rev. J. H. Morrison and Rev. E. M. Munroe, who had been classmates at Davidson College.

The movement to change the boundaries of the four Presbyteries was voted down and enlarged measures adopted for helping Washburn Presbytery, the smallest of the four that constitute the Synod at present.

A gift of $15,000 from a member of the church of which

Rev. W. K. Johnson is pastor at Marianna, forms the nucleus of an Orphans' Home. The Jeter School, at Combs, conducted by those faithful young people, Mr. and Mrs. Jeter, was taken over by the Synod as a Synodical institution. The Southwestern Home and School at Itasca, also received due consideration.

The chief time of the Synod was given to the discussion of Arkansas College, and the Synod launched its campaign for an endowment of $250,000 in the hands of a most competent band of workers.

Rev. John Van Lear was chosen as Synod's man on closer relations with the brotherhood of Presbyterians throughout the world.

The ladies of the church gave a social gathering and banquet in the Sunday School rooms.

Rev. J. H. Morrison had the pleasure of meeting Rev. Mr. McNutt, whose wife was from Portland Avenue Church, Louisville, his first charge, and Rev. Gus Jury, who was among the first fruits of his evangelistic work, and Mr. Walter Mayo, ruling elder in Valley Grove, the last he has organized, being the nineteenth he has built or organized. The span of time covered was about 40 years.

The summer conference at Batesville was commended as thorough, profitable and delightful, and it was agreed upon to make it annual and perpetual.

The Synod accepted the invitation to hold its next meeting with the church at Batesville and the college founded by Rev. Isaac J. Long, from South Carolina. The large part of the ministers in the Presbyterian Church of Arkansas were trained there and many of the ministers of other Synods. "By their fruits shall ye know them."

More than 500 members have been added to the church since last November.

J. H. Morrison.

FLORIDA.

Presbytery of Florida—The fall meeting of the Presbytery of Florida was held in the Knox Church, of Pensacola, November 4 and 5.

Fifteen ministers and ten ruling elders were present.

At the request of the retiring moderator, Rev. W. E. McIlwain, D.D., the opening sermon was preached by Rev. H. A. Love, of Quincy.

The following ministers were received: Rev. R. D. Daffin, from the Presbytery of Sao Paulo, Brazil; Rev. J. P. Word, from the Presbytery of Western Texas; and Rev. T. G. Watts, from Macon Presbytery.

Rev. D. J. Blackwell was elected moderator, and Ruling Elder A. D. Campbell, of Chipley, was chosen recording clerk.

A new church was reported as having been organized at Havana, Fla., on May 25, 1919.

On Tuesday night a splendid Presbyterial discourse was given by Elder T. C. Merchant, of Madison, on "The Duty of the Church to the Masses." Rev. T. G. Watts was appointed to give the Presbyterial discourse at the next meeting of Presbytery, on "Justification by Faith."

The Home Mission Committee reported that Rev. C. W. Humphreys, D.D., had given up his work at Bagdad because of declining health and that Rev. R. Q. Baker, for the same reason, would give up his work at Euchee Valley, Westville and Magnolia, on January 1, 1920. Both of these brethren have served long and faithfully in the ministry.

On recommendation of the Home Mission Committee, Rev. D. J. Blackwell, H. A. Love, and elders of the Quincy Church were appointed a sub-committee on Church and Manse Erection Fund.

In connection with the report of the Foreign Mission Committee, an interesting and instructive address was given on Brazil, by Rev. H. C. Daffin, of Brazil.

Pastors were asked to preach both on Foreign Missions and on Assembly's Home Missions, the latter during Home Mission Week, November 23-30.

New permanent committee on Orphans' Home was formed as follows: Rev. R. G. Newsome, Rev. H. A. Love, and Elder B. L. Porter.

President W. M. Kemper made a most encouraging report of Palmer College. Presbytery endorsed a joint campaign for $250,000 in behalf of Palmer College, Columbia Seminary, and Thornwell Orphanage, and also unanimously overruled the Synod to organize that campaign.

Presbytery accepted its quota of $29,290 of the $4,000,000 campaign for benevolences for the next church year.

Next meeting will be in Quincy on Tuesday after the second Sunday in April, 1920.

A unanimous rising vote of thanks was passed, thanking the pastor and congregation for their cordial and whole-souled hospitality.

Daniel J. Currie, S. C.

GEORGIA.

Carrollton—A series of evangelistic services covering a period of about two weeks, under the leadership of our General Assembly Evangelist, Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, D.D., has just been held in our church. The members of other churches in the town heartily co-operated with us in the meeting, the seating capacity of the church at times being taxed to the utmost. Dr. Thacker is a preacher of unusual power. The people heard him gladly. He is a thoroughly scriptural preacher, without a trace of sensationalism in his preaching and methods. The leaders of the music, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Armstrong, rendered most acceptable service. Mr. Armstrong is without a superior, indeed hardly without an equal, as a leader of the song service. As the immediate result of this meeting there were 556 reconsecrations; 15 promised to join the churches of the several denominations by letter; and 65 signed cards accepting Christ as their Savior. Of this latter number eight expressed a preference for the Presbyterian Church. The good influences of this meeting will long be felt in this community.

LOUISIANA.

Ouachita Presbytery met in the country church of Mount Holly, Ark., October 7. This church, now nearing its seventy-fifth birthday, has supplied nearly every strong church in this Presbytery with some of their most active members. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. M. M. Lawson.

Thirteen ministers and twelve elders attended. Rev. J. A. Stanley was chosen moderator, and Elder W. E. McRae, of the El Dorado Church, temporary clerk.

Received: Rev. G. W. Jurey, from Lafayette Presbytery, and Licentiate Jas. W. McNutt, from Potosi Presbytery. Rev. W. P. McElroy, of Macon Presbytery, was examined and his name ordered enrolled when his letter of transfer should arrive.

Dismissed: Rev. Jas. I. Paisley was dismissed, at his own request, to Washburn Presbytery, and Candidate F. Leslie Shannon to Dallas Presbytery.

Dissolved: Whelen Church was dissolved, all the members having moved away.

Calls: Scotland Church called Rev. John S. Thomas for all his time. Rev. C. H. H. Branch, D.D., Rev. J. C. Williams, D.D., and Elder W. E. McRae were appointed to install him. This is a notable forward movement in the Scotland congregation, a country field. DeQueen Church called Rev. G. W. Jurey for all his time. Dr. Branch and Dr. Williams were appointed to install him the first Sabbath in November.

Ordained: Licentiate James W. McNutt was ordained to the full work of the ministry as an evangelist.

Sermons: Dr. J. C. Williams preached on "Predestination;" Rev. John T. Barr preached on "Why We Are Presbyterians," and Dr. E. D. Brown preached the Presbyterial sermon on "Infant Baptism." The next Presbyterial sermon is to be on "Inspiration of the Scriptures," to be preached by Rev. C. H. H. Branch, D.D.

Overtures: Presbytery consented to overtures from the Assembly touching reception of candidates, licensures and ordination, but declined to consent to overtures touching election of elders and deacons and representation in the Assembly. Synod of Arkansas was overruled to adopt a policy in the election of trustees of Arkansas College which would make the board of trustees more representative of the Synod and more equitably distributed among the four Presbyteries.

Christian Education: The campaign of Arkansas College for $300,000 endowment was endorsed and Elder N. C. McCrary, of the Ashdown Church made Presbyterial manager of this campaign. The sum of $66,350 was apportioned to our churches for this cause.

Assembly's Home Missions: Increase of salaries of home missionaries was reported. Home Mission Week was ordered observed in November.

Foreign Missions: Rev. E. M. Munroe conducted a conference in the interest of work overseas. The increased cost of the work and the net loss of five missionaries last year were stressed.

Presbytery's Home Missions: Every county in the Presbytery has a Presbyterian church. All the home workers receive their Presbyterial appropriations in prompt payments. About 35 of our 42 churches have regular services. Three evangelists are available for special services, Revs. W. Moore Scott, R. A. Brown, and Thomas H. Watkins. Churches were urged to increase the salaries of their pastors.

Next Meeting: Prescott, April 13, 1920.

Presbytery adjourned to meet at the call of the moderator during the sessions of Synod at Pine Bluff.

James W. Marshall, S. C.

MISSOURI.

Synod of Missouri—In view of the raising of a committee of conference on closer relations with one or more denominations of evangelical Christians of like faith and order as that of our own church, the Synod of Missouri places itself on record as approving and as being in full sympathy with the action of the last General Assembly of our church, found on page 43 of the minutes for 1919, paragraph 5, which in part is as follows:

"In case the discussions of closer relations between this church and any other church shall contemplate organic union, the attention of the ad interim committee is directed to past deliverances of and reports of the Assembly touching such matters, and it is advised that the Assembly and the Church would view with uneasiness any structure of union which failed to take into account and safeguard the historic convictions and positions of this Church with respect to sound doctrine, just and effective discipline, the plenary inspiration and inerrancy of the Scriptures, the vicarious atonement, the spiritual mission of the Church and its obligations to abstain from interference in matters purely of civil or political concern."

TENNESSEE.

Nashville—Moore Memorial Church—Rev. Charles R. Erdman, D.D., professor in Princeton Theological Seminary, will deliver the mid-winter series of lectures and sermons in this church from January 9-16.

His general subject will be "The Application of the Gospel of Yesterday to the Problems of Today."

Dr. Erdman will speak at 4 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. each day together with a monster men's meeting on Sabbath afternoon in a large downtown auditorium.

He was with Dr. Scanlon, the pastor of this church, some years ago in a former charge in Mississippi, and the building was taxed at each service with the throngs who desired to hear the noted Princeton professor.

Large preparations are being made for the entertainment of ministers from the Synod and all contiguous territory.

Jackson—First Church—The congregation of the First Presbyterian Church has been worshipping in the county courthouse since September 15, while extensive improvements are being made in the church building. The interior is being decorated for the first time since the church was erected, some six years ago. A new furnace is being installed and these with other improvements will make it very comfortable and attractive. It is hoped that the work will be finished by Deaths.

IN MEMORIAM.

Miss J. K. Friend.

In the death of Miss J. K. Friend, voice teacher for the Presbyterian Orphanage, on October 10, 1919, the Ladies' Missionary Society of Little Joe's Church, at Barium Springs; has lost one of its most beloved and esteemed members.

Therefore be it resolved:

That the memory of her sweet voice, of her conscientiousness and faithfulness in her daily tasks, of her devotion to her Master's work, and of her consecrated life, will always inspire us to greater service.

That our Missionary Society is but one place where she will be missed—in the Sunday School work, in the church choir, and in the hearts of each of the faculty as well as each child in our home.

That we are deeply grieved at our loss, but we rejoice to know that she died a radiant death, and we bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her brothers and sisters in their bereavement.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and church paper and also recorded in the minutes of our society.

Mrs. W. T. Walker.

Mrs. W. O. W. Paine.

A BROTHER AND A SISTER.

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl eleven years old. I have a little sister and brother. Their names are Lucile and Forest; one is seven and one is four; they are cute. Lucile is in the second grade and Forest is not going to school; he will start next year. I want to surprise my papa's brother. One of my playmates came over to play with me and she and I wanted to write to you. Hope this will not reach the waste basket.

Your little friend,
Mildred Mallard.

"GOBBLER GOLDEN."

By Anne B. Payne.

Young Mr. Gobbler Golden was a very beautiful bird. There was not another fowl in the barnyard half so handsome, and though he had never seen in a mirror, he knew just how good-looking he was, for there was a big pan of water in the yard and every time he came near it, Gobbler Golden would stop and take a peep at himself. He liked to do this very much, and his lovely golden-brown feathers caused him great pride and pleasure.

With all of this, he had only two friends, which was his own fault. He thought the other turkeys were either too old or too young for him to play with and he would have nothing to do with the chickens and ducks, though he liked to have them stand around and look at him. His two friends were Billy Bronze and Dingy Dan. Though several months older than Gobbler Golden, they were much smaller and not neatly so fat and fine looking. Both were born and raised in the barnyard and had never been away from home, while he had come from a farm many miles away and had spent a whole day on the train. For this reason Gobbler Golden felt that he was much wiser than they.

These three turkeys were often together. They hunted bugs and berries and after it rained they had good times feasting on the fat little frogs, in the brook back of the barn. Billy and Dan liked to chase each other around and play tag, but Gobbler Golden thought he was too grown-up to do that.

One beautiful afternoon in November Billy Bronze and Dingy Dan had gone off to find some worms for their mother who had hurt her foot and could not walk. Gobbler Golden was by himself, so he strutted up and down the yard with his head high and his feathers spread out. When he thought the other fowls were not looking, over to the pan he would go and gaze at himself in the water. While he was doing this he heard voices and laughter, and turning around he saw two ladies and several children standing at the gate. They were all talking at once so he could not tell what they said. Then the tallest lady pointed at him and cried:

"He's the one, children—isn't he a beauty?"

The little boys and girls clapped their hands and threw him some corn and he was so proud and happy he could hardly stand still. If only his two friends had been there to see him he would have been gladder still.

Gobbler Golden slept on the same roost with Billy and Dan. That night before they went to sleep he told them all about the visitors. The moon was shining and he saw by its light that his friends did not seem as pleased as he thought they would be. Billy looked at Dan in a queer way and Dan shook his head.

"He was too young to remember," said Dan.

"Had we better tell him?" said Billy.

Dan nodded his head, and then Billy Bronze told Gobbler Golden all about Thanksgiving. When he had finished Dinky Dan whispered sadly: "So you are the turkey they are planning to eat the day after tomorrow."

Gobbler Golden was so surprised and frightened he almost fell off the roost, and how he wished for his mother. She could tell him what to do.

"But Dan and Billy, I don't want to die," he cried. "Why don't they kill one of you?"

"O, we are not fat enough," they replied.

"What must I do?" said Gobbler Golden, "Do tell me where to go."

At first they thought he ought to be punished for being so proud but they were kind-hearted turkeys and felt sorry for him. They talked it over and finally Billy said:

"Of course you could run away down the lane to the woods but that is dangerous and you might get shot."

Gobbler Golden thought about this long and hard. When he turned to speak to Dan and Billy he saw that they were both fast asleep. He jumped down from his perch and crept quietly from the coop. Slowly crossing the yard he took a last drink from the pan but was so weak and shaky that he spilled some water on his front feathers. In the moonlight, the barnyard looked better to him than it ever had before, and how he hated to leave its friendly fences. With a backward glance he flew over the gate and started down the lane towards the wood.

It seemed to Gobbler Golden that he had walked for miles, over meadows and through groves of trees, when he finally came to a vacant lot of tall dry grass with a few old apple trees and a stream of water. He was too tired to go a step further so he flew up to the lowest limb of the tree and was soon fast asleep.

When he opened his eyes the next morning there were three other turkeys roosting higher up in the same tree.

They did not look like Billy and Dan and the other turkeys he knew and their necks were very blue, but he knew that they must be turkeys of some sort. He was wondering how they got there when the biggest one waked up. He looked down at Gobbler Golden in great surprise and asked him where he came from. Then he jumped down on the limb beside him. Gobbler Golden told him everything as he seemed interested, and when he had finished the other turkey looked very sorry for him.

"Why don't you come and go with us," he said.

"Thank you," replied Gobbler Golden, "What farm did you come from?"

"O, we are wild turkeys," said his new friend, "And live in the woods and go anywhere we like with nothing to stop us. I wouldn't live on a farm."

That seemed a fine life to Gobbler Golden so he decided to go with the wild turkeys. When the other two waked up they were willing to take him along too though they looked at him doubtfully.

"Can you run fast and fly high?" said one of them.

"I'll try," Gobbler Golden replied meekly.

But he was tired and sore from his long walk and was too fat to go fast. Soon he was out of breath trying to keep up with them and when they rose in the air and flew over a low clump of trees, he gave it up and let them go without him.

Back at the apple tree once more, he found some worms for dinner and drank from the cool little stream. As he leaned over the water he saw himself, and was shocked at the change. His lovely feathers were dirty, torn and ruffled and he looked like a different bird from the one he had seen in the pan. At first he was very sorry but when he remembered that it was his feathers and his flesh, that had caused all his troubles, he did not mind so much.

For three days he stayed there living on bugs and worms and hiding in the tall grass in the day-time, and roosting in the apple tree at night. On the morning of the fourth day he was so dreadfully lonesome for Dan and Billy that he decided he must go back to the barnyard, at once.

After wandering and walking all day, he finally came to the lane, so tired he could hardly stand up. Then a dreadful thought came to him. Suppose they had killed Dan and Billy for Thanksgiving. This worried him so he almost ran the rest of the way.

But there at the gate they both stood. They had seen him coming and ran to meet him flapping their wings and making a great noise of welcome. Gobbler Golden jumped up beside them and was so happy that he forgot how tired he was and even forgot to be ashamed of his mussed dirty feathers. When all the other turkeys, chickens, and ducks crowded around to hear his story, he was very polite to them.

After a few days of rest Gobbler Golden was his old self again though not so fat and handsome. But he made so many friends among all the fowls and had such good times with them that he did not care at all, and did not even remember to look at himself in the pan.

OCTOBER'S FAREWELL.

By Elizabeth MacPherson.

October gave a party
And invited all the Trees
She sent the invitations

By a frisky little Breeze
And asked that they consult Her
About their costumes, please.

Old Mother Earth looked doubtful
She said, "Why, we don't know
A thing about October,
Except Her love for show,
And the way She paints is scandalous,
I don't want you to go."

"Not so," the Trees flung at her,
"You old knot-on-a-log,
You old stick-in-the-mud,
Your brain is in a fog.
Why, October's coming party
Has the Forest all agog."

"She is the very grandest Lady
That has ever come this way,
And we are trying to please Her,
So She'll like us and will stay.
And we are not going to listen
To one word you have to say."

October, when consulted,
Said that decollete
Was the latest thing in glad rags.
Shook the topmost leaves away,
And then dyed the remaining ones
With colors, flashy, gay.

Oh, 'twas a wondrous party;
So gay, and glad, and free,
With a Wind, as dancing partner
For every single Tree;
And costumes that would dazzle
Plain folk, like you and me.

October laughed and frolicked
'Till she could stand no more;
Then, spying grim November
Waiting beside the door,
Slipped past him, saying softly,
"Now you may have the floor."

'Twas then the trees grew chilly,
And a trifle weary too,
(For the winds were dancing roughly)
And they wished the thing was thru.
But they could not find their hostess,
So they knew not what to do.

Old Mother Earth clung to them,
Striving to keep them warm.
Neither chiding nor reproving,
For 'twould only raise a storm.
And she knew the next gay stranger
Could lead them into harm.

Church News.

Thanksgiving day. Despite this handicap the work is moving forward steadily.

The Women's Auxiliary has formed 10 mission study circles, meeting weekly in neighborhood groups, using Dr. Morris' splendid new book, "Christianizing Christendom," as the text-book. Over 100 ladies are enrolled in these classes.

The ladies of the church recently gave a "fruit shower" to the pastor's wife, coming en masse and bringing 120 jars of deliciously preserved and canned fruit and vegetables, besides other useful gifts. The manse family is deeply appreciative of this and other kindnesses on the part of our good people.

Mr. Arthur J. Stegall was recently elected to the office of deacon. He has been ordained and installed.

At the October communion there were 12 additions to the church membership.

This church is looking forward with deep and prayerful interest to the series of evangelistic services which will be conducted by Dr. Frank Fincher, the Assembly's evangelist. These services will begin January 2.

VIRGINIA.

At Roanoke Church, Charlotte County, Va., from November 2 to 9 we held our protracted meeting. The preaching was done by Rev. W. T. Doggett, of Danville, Va. It was with "demonstration of the Spirit." Our people were greatly quickened and blessed. There were 15 conversions. On November 9 there were received into the church one by letter and 10 by profession. There are others, we hope and believe, who will also come into the church as a result of the meeting. Two or more of the converts will go into the Baptist Church, or the Methodist.

J. A. S.

Richmond—Sunday, November 9 was a red-letter day in the calendar of the Grace-Covenant Church of Richmond.

A quiet but sustained campaign to enlarge the membership of the Sunday School is being conducted and on Sunday 21 new members were enrolled. The attendance for the day was 416 and of this number 208 were adults. Six deacons and four elders were ordained and installed at the 11 o'clock service in a simple and impressive service conducted by the pastor, Rev. Charles R. King.

The newly elected officers are as follows: Elders, Albert Sydney Johnson, J. Scott Parrish, Nat Frazer and L. E. Harvey; Deacons, R. McLean Whittet, Alfred P. Goddin, H. L. Granger, J. D. Clothier, L. R. Spencer and Dr. C. B. Pearson.

The pastor announced that a special fund of $1,200 had been contributed voluntarily by members of the church to support a fourth missionary in the foreign field. The church already has as its representatives in foreign mission lands Mrs. Clara G. Gammon, Brazil; Mrs. W. D. Reynolds, Korea, and Rev. Walter McS. Buchanan, Japan. The congregation is worshipping in one of the large public school buildings of the city pending the completion of its new Sunday School building on Monument avenue. Rapid progress is being made on the new plant which promises to be one of the most complete Sunday School buildings in the South. It is three stories in height, will provide for 1,800 Sunday School pupils and complete facilities for the seven-days-a-week program the church is promoting. The cost of the Sunday School plant, exclusive of the lot, will be about $125,000.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Huntsville—We have just closed a two weeks' union revival meeting in this church, the Methodist of the town uniting with the Presbyterians in the meeting. Rev. William Waters, an evangelist from Rockville, Md., did the preaching. From the very beginning there was intense interest manifested. Large congregations were present at both the afternoon and evening services. The visible results of the meeting were 16 professions of faith and a score or more reconsecrations. Never in the history of the town has there been such a spiritual awakening as was manifested during this revival season. Both the Methodist and the Presbyterian church have received large additions to their membership. Rev. J. M. Walker, pastor of the Marlinton Church, supplies this church, preaching for us once a month on a Sunday afternoon.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. Jno. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Home Missions—Just now, when most of us are giving our time and attention to the Home Mission Study Classes, is a splendid time to begin to plan for the observance of Home Mission Week, November 16-23, with its theme; The Soul of Democracy: Christian Service, Personal and Social.

If you have not had your Home Mission Study Class, won't you do so at once? It is not too late and it will mean so much to each member of your Auxiliary. But, whether you do or not, by all means, plan for the observance of Home Mission Week.

The program this year is devoted to the study of the Negro question, and nothing is more important today than that we use all our influence in building up Christian harmony and friendship between the two races.

For this reason, the Home Mission Committee is asking for $25,000, for an Industrial School for Negro Girls. The offerings from Home Mission Week will go to the establishment of this school which will stand for a higher, purer, more uplifted womanhood among our Negro women. Will you not see that your Auxiliary has a part in the founding of this much needed school?

Programs and self-denial envelopes may be ordered from the Executive Committee of Home Missions, Atlanta, Ga.

Sincerely,

Mrs. J. Mc. R. Bracy,
Fayetteville Presbyterial Auxiliary.

The Synodical Auxiliary of the Synod of North Carolina met in Durham, November 4 and 5 with a full attendance of delegates and officers.

Orange Presbyterial Auxiliary and the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian Church proved to be hostesses par excellence.

The splendid program which we are giving in full will be of interest not only to the women of North Carolina but to all readers of the Auxiliary column.

M. Baker, Tarboro; Secretary, Mrs. S. A. Robinson, Gastonia; Treasurer, Mrs. A. G. Carter, Sanford; Sec. Foreign Mis., Mrs. J. A. Brown, Chadburn; Sec. Assembly Home Missions, Mrs. W. E. White, Graham; Sec. Ch. Ed. and Min. R., Mrs. George Howard, Tarboro; Sec. Y. P. Work, Miss McElwee, Statesville; Sec. S. P. and C. Home Mis., Mrs. J. R. Irwin, Charlotte; Sec. Orphanage Work, Mrs. F. P. Hall, Belmont; Sec. Literature, Mrs. S. W. Rankin, Greensboro.

The North Carolina Synodical Meeting—The Seventh Annual Meeting of the N. C. Synodical Auxiliary has passed into history. I have attended no other so I cannot draw comparisons but I feel sure no church could have handled it better than the First Church of Durham or have done more to make us comfortable and welcome. The delicious lunches served each day at the church, the ready service of the ladies at all times, and the genuine hospitality in spite of domestic stress, will linger long in the memories of those fortunate enough to be present.

To me the outstanding features were the value of the Executive Committee Meeting, the intense and intelligent interest paid to each report or recommendation laid before the full Synodical, and the increase in spirituality evidenced in the reports of the Presbyterial Presidents.

As a clearing house for all matters pertaining to Synodical and Presbyterial Auxiliaries the all day session of the Executive Committee has no equal, especially when it has the rare privilege of Mrs. Winsborough's inspiring presence and wide experience.

When reports and recommendations came up on Wednesday there was always free discussion and no measure slipped through unchallenged. Whatever comes down to Presbyterial or Local Auxiliaries is the result of earnest consideration for every woman present paid close attention to every measure and hesitated not to speak her mind!

To this there was one notable exception when a motion was made to express our appreciation and recommendation of Mrs. J. M. McIver's work as editor of the Standard's Woman's Page; it passed unanimously and enthusiastically.

Our evening meetings were interesting and the topics, ably discussed by Mrs. Winsborough, on Tuesday evening, and Messrs. Garth, Axson and Magill, on Wednesday evening appealed to us all.

The best wish we can have for the Eighth Session when it meets in Concord Presbyterial next Autumn is that it may come up to the high standard set by the Seventh.

Davidson, N. C.

Mrs. A. Currie,

A visit to the sanctuary, an hour with God, whether in the meeting house or elsewhere, will clear things up. How often, when the spirit of heaviness creeps over the heart and when things look misty and shadowy and there is a kind of feeling of unreality creeping over you, the only sure relief is in prayer! An hour spent in communion with God will banish more of this gathering darkness than a lifetime of mere human reasoning, for man "by wisdom knoweth not God," and it is only through the Spirit that we can know the things that are freely given us of God. "In Thy light we shall see light."—Exchange.

Educational

Davidson—The foremost event in the religious life of the community and of the campus this week has been a visit from Rev. Dr. Frank Price, of Nanking, China, who was accompanied by Mrs. Price. The distinguished and beloved missionary, now a veteran not in years but in service in the foreign field, and holding the chair of Theology in the Seminary of Nanking, spoke some four or five times here Sunday. He occupied Dr. Richard's pulpit morning and evening, addressed the Y. M. C. A., the children of the Sunday School and was heard at still another service. Every one who heard his morning address on the greatness of China and her people, was enthusiastic as to its merits and its moving appeal for laborers to evangelize that great country. At night Dr. Price gave a brief sketch of the spread of Christianity in China, painfully, disappointingly slow for decades, but after a half century or more gaining momentum till now there are some three hundred thousand Christians in that country. But these figures do not begin to tell of the influence that Christianity has had as a leaven among the millions of that land.

Tonight in the Presbyterian Church this community will be privileged to hear Dr. Ernest V. Claypool in his great address on Greatness gained by World Work. He speaks under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League of America.

The latest College Bulletin has for its title Holding the Heights or a Plea for the Christian College. The Bulletin states that Davidson's total enrollment of students is 4,994, total graduates 1,449, ministers 654, missionaries, foreign, on the field 25, enrollment for current sessions 435.

Elsie High School—October brought a number of rare treats to Elsie High School, Hemp, N. C., a visitor from Fayetteville Presbytery the first of the month, a missionary Rally the 17th, and on the evening of the 24th, a delightful lecture by the Rev. W. S. Golden, on "Friendship With Books." On the same evening there was a "book shower," which added more than two hundred volumes to the school library.

The school feels very grateful to the friends who have responded so generously to the call for books.

Never meet a situation which appears absurd to you with ridicule or sarcasm; this is fatal.

Perhaps the most important rule of all is, do not be afraid to discuss any subject, to meet truth with truth, frankness with frankness, confidence with confidence. Long ago I told my children I would always give honest answers to their questions in as far as they could understand them, and would explain more as they grew older. Give them scientific truths when they ask for them, reverently and simply, and know the joy of seeing their minds open to the facts of life with appreciation of their beauty and holiness, and of watching their love and respect grow for their father and mother and for all life!

Never be afraid of confessing ignorance. A child thoroughly respects the answer: "I don't know accurately enough to tell you correctly; let us look it up together." This is where father can be brought in with effect, even if he is much away and very busy, for a child can soon learn in confidential talks with mother that father would be just as much interested, just as anxious to help, and just as good or perhaps a better advisor, if only he were there. Then whenever his advice is especially needed, the matter can be referred to him at a convenient time.

To be a parent is a vocation, not a pastime. God has given into our keeping an individual not a replica of ourselves for a plaything, and it is not enough to give only our love, which is a natural gift; we must give spiritual insight and understanding, joy in the child's growing and developing powers and true companionship.—Martha Galaudet Waring, in National Kindergarten Association.

THRIFT PROVERBS.

Sign no armistice with extravagance. Keep on buying war savings stamps and "the world's choicest securities," Liberty bonds.

Sign no armistice with waste. High priced clothes and food are higher when waste cuts their use in half. Get your money's worth and put your savings into war savings stamps.

In the year since the armistice was signed the Treasury department has retired nearly a billion dollars worth of Liberty bonds. Buy more now, while prices are favorable, at any banking institution.

Armistice day, 1918, brought relief and thanksgiving to more than a score of nations and to hundreds of millions of people. Your own armistice with financial worries and troubles will come when you have signed yourself to habits of steady saving and thrift. Buy war savings stamps regularly.

The armistice was signed a year ago, but there is still a line of American sentries along the Rhine. Keep a guard of war savings stamps on watch over your dollars.

It was safe to demobilize the army after the armistice, but it will never be safe to demobilize your habits of thrift. Keep them in training by regular purchases of war savings stamps and treasury savings certificates.

The Germans admitted defeat when the armistice was signed, but the high cost of living hasn't hollered "uncle" yet. Working and saving with investment in government securities will bring prices down.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

The news of the death of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, which occurred at her home, "The Bungalow," in Branford, Connecticut, October 30, will be received with a quickening of old memories by people in widely separated portions of the globe and in widely different walks of life. To many who knew her chiefly through her poetry, which was characterized by passionate power, it will be a surprise to learn that she was 64 years of age at the time of her death. Her poems have been read by ardent lovers of more than one generation, to whom she has always appeared the embodiment of love and romance—read, perhaps, by more people who knew nothing of her, except through certain bits of her work which appealed to them than the writings of any other American author. She was born in Johnstowne Center, Wisconsin, in 1855. She began writing at the age of eight. Some of her contributions were accepted by publishers when she was only 14. When she was 15 years of age she received her first check from Leslie's. She is very frank to confess that she was urged to her work by the desire for things which she found no other way of securing. Many of her works in both poetry and prose were reproduced by English and foreign language publishers. Her recent contributions with reference to communications with the spirit of her late husband, who died in 1916, attracted wide attention.—Advance.

Rheumatism and Indigestion

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between indigestion and rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. All of these diseases are probably related and all are probably due in whole or in part to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

The following letters are interesting in this connection, Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder Troubles and in Nervous and Sick Headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that, if used continuously for a reasonable time will give a permanent relief. It will purify the blood, Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes:—"I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began to use Shivar Spring Water and in a short time was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes:—"Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes:—"The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes:—"My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes:—"Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by Rheumatism, Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from Rheumatism, or from any curable disease accept the guarantee offer below by signing your name. Clip and mail to the Shivar Spring, Box 4-D, Shelton, S. C. Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

KEEP THE WINDOWS UP.

Unquestionably there is something pleasant to many people about the atmosphere of a room that is cozily closed up against the breezes and draughts and perchance dust and noises of the outside world. There are pleasant little domestic odors that are more perceptible when autumn comes and windows begin to be closed. There is the aroma of afternoon tea and the scent of chrysanthemums from the living room table, and just a suspicion of the cigar or cigarette being smoked in the library beyond and a mere suspicion of the fabric smell that comes from the new silk curtains that have just been hung. On the whole it is a very well-bred, pleasant smell, and one reason why you like it is because it suggests the delightful afternoons that you spend indoors when cold weather comes, afternoons that are really a relief after too much country club and motoring and summer hotel verandas.

And in the morning after you have dressed in your bedroom, still chilly from the windows that have been wide open all night—for you feel it your duty to keep your windows open at night—you come down stairs quite content to have the dining room windows and doors closed. You have not exercised, of course, and you feel convinced that you would shiver if the windows were open, although as a matter of fact the morning sunshine would really add to the wholesome tone of the indoor atmosphere.

Still you know the chief reason why

"THE HARBOR ROAD"

By Sara Ware Bassett.

In the little Cape Cod village of Wilton lives Nate Harlow, with his sister Deborah and their lovely niece Tressie. When the family exchequer runs low Deborah decides to take some summer boarders, and the unforeseen complications resulting from the venture make up a tale in which there is a glimpse of old Boston and its traditions, and a broader glimpse of the sea with its white ships and bordering dunes. The tang of the salt air and of New Englandism breathes in every page of this delicate, humorous, and appealing story.

The Inhalation Treatment for Whooping Cough, Spasmodic Croup, Asthma, Influenza, Coughs, Bronchitis, Colds, Catarrh.

Don't fail to use Cresolene for the distressing, and often fatal affections for which it is recommended. It is a simple, safe, effective and drugless treatment. Vaporized Cresolene stops the paroxysms of Whooping Cough and relieves Spasmodic Croup at once. In asthma it shortens the attack and insures comfortable repose. The air carrying the antiseptic vapor inspired with every breath, makes breathing easy, soothes the sore throat, and stops the cough, assuring restful nights. Cresolene relieves the bronchial complications of Scarlet Fever and Measles and is a valuable aid in the treatment of Diphtheria.

KILLS CATARRH GERMS

Famous Hyomei—Mr. Booth's Wonderful Discovery.

Some years ago, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement and temperance orator and leader of international fame who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble. Seeking to regain health, he went to inland Australia where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the Eucalyptus forests.

This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment known to medical science—Hyomei, which is formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. Hyomei is a germ killing vapor, absolutely harmless but wonderfully effective in the treatment of Catarrh and colds of the head, Catarrhal Coughs, Bronchial Catarrh, Spasmodic Croup, Catarrhal Laryngitis or Hay Fever.

The treatment is simple but most scientific. You breathe Hyomei. It is pronounced the only method of treatment that sends, by direct inhalation to the most remote part of the air passages, a balsamic air that destroys germs and bacilli of bronchial catarrh in the breathing organs, soothes and allays irritation and enriches and purifies the blood. All druggists. Booth's Hyomei Co., Ithaca, N. Y.

pneumonia and other pulmonary diseases demand so much larger a toll of death in winter than in summer is because of the closed windows. As our windows close, the curve in the chart in the Department of Health that shows the number of cases of pneumonia increases and as our windows open again with the coming of spring the curve decreases.

It would really be a great thing of we just didn't get back in our old closed window habit this autumn. If we could accustom ourselves to living in rooms that were ventilated and as cool as those of our English cousins who depend so largely on open fires for heat in cold weather, then we would have benefited ourselves immensely. If we could take a few setting-up exercises every morning to begin with, then we would not have this timidity about opening the windows to begin with.—Ex.

Dr. Jowett is easily accorded the first place in the pulpit of today. One note of criticism and one only has been largely made against him. It was said that during his splendid ministry in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, N. Y., his messages lacked the great social note that has come to be such a vital part of modern Christianity. They carried no social burden; they had no social vision. They might have been preached with equal appropriateness in any age. His return to England marked a radical change in this respect. His messages in Westminster pulpit have been as conspicuous for their social message as those in the Fifth Avenue pulpit were for its absence. The sermons being reported in the press sound like the messages of the old Hebrew prophets. He has recently attacked with knightly passion, the British factory system; Britain's materialism and international jealousy. The message of the inner life is half the Gospel. The message of the social conscience is the other half. Both are receiving attention in Westminster's great pulpit.—United Presbyterian.

The armistice ended the war but like typhoid, the after effects must be given close care and attention. Wise financial physicians prescribe the strong tonic of thrift and the regular absorption of war savings stamps.

Until the armistice was signed, the boys on the other side had to trench constantly to secure protection. You will have to retrench to keep the advantage they won. War savings stamps, treasury savings certificates and Liberty bonds are the right tools to use.

The roar of the guns ceased at 11 a. m., November 11, 1918, but you can make November 11, 1919, resound with the roars of the profiteers by increasing production, saving a part of what you earn and investing in Liberty bonds and war savings stamps.

ONE-FOURTH OF OUR SOLDIERS FARMERS' BOYS.

In a pamphlet just sent out by the government, urging soldiers to continue their insurance, it is stated that 1,200,000 of our soldier boys in the world war were born and reared on farms. The farms of the country contributed about one-fourth of the man power of the forces of the United States engaged in the war.

A total of 4,539,048 men took out War Risk Insurance, their aggregate policies totaling nearly $40,000,000,000, and each policy averaging $8,700. Of this total insurance, men from the farming districts carried approximately $10,420,000,000. From the record, only about 25 per cent of the men who had insurance during the war are continuing to keep it up. The Secretary of the Treasury recently issued a ruling allowing every man 18 months in which he has the opportunity to reinstate his insurance after he has allowed it to lapse because of non-payment of premiums.—Banner.

WONDERFUL EGG PRODUCER.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar today. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

A HOPEFUL TREND.

The open communion sentiment in immersionist churches in this country is unquestionably on the increase. This is the testimony not only of papers like the Independent, which, after a canvass of opinions, says that "the movement to places less stress upon immersion as the only valid form of baptism is steadily gaining in volume and momentum," but it is also asserted by immersionist authorities.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., at a dinner in the New York Baptist Mission, declared that he did not consider immersion as a necessary qualification for membership, and that in the church of the future form and ceremony will play a minor part. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, a Baptist pastor in New York, has said publicly that "immersion should be taken from the doorsill of the church and placed upon the altar. It should not be a matter of first importance in church membership, but love of God and service of Christ should be the essential thing." Dr. Joseph W. Kemp, a Baptist minister, now pastor of an interdenominational church, no longer makes immersion a test of fellowship, but admits members into his church whether immersed or sprinkled.

The Herald of Gospel Liberty, commenting on these and similar utterances, says that "the Spirit is working, widening and sweetening human hearts, and guiding both clergymen and laymen to exalt the things which are essential." It is also intimated that "many Baptists agree with Mr. Rockefeller, who do not dare to utter their opinions." The influence of Mr. Spurgeon and of English immersionists has been more potent than some American close-communion authorities have been willing to admit.

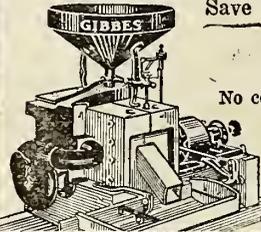

Marshal Foch when he dictated the terms of the armistice left no loop hole for Hun trickery. If you give extravagance a chance you will lose the advantage thrift has gained. Your Liberty bonds preserve your advantage.

WAGES TO WIVES.

Whether we agree or not on the subject of wages for wives, yet every single one of us will laugh at the simple, humorous philosophy of "Mirandy," written by Dorothy Dix in Good Housekeeping.

"Sis Mirandy, ma'am," says Sis Alethia to me de odder day, "how do you hold wid dem whut is promulgatin' dis heah newfangled doctrine dat wives had ought to be paid wages by deir husbands?"

"Whut's de matter wid de old-fashioned plan of a wife takin' all of her husband's pay envelop instid of des gittin' a rake-off?" I axes her. "Dat's de way our mothers done an' de way we does, an' so fur as I kin see, hit wuks out all right. Anyway, I ain't noticed dat none of de married men dat I knows is settin' up automobiles or wearin' diamonds on de money deir wives leaves 'em to spend on deirselves."

Their Christmas Vision

"Their Christmas Vision"

This is the title of a program prepared by the Executive Committee for use in the churches and Sunday Schools of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

It is attractive in appearance. Interesting and instructive in material. Makes a strong appeal for the dedication of life to the service of Christ and His Church.

It's use will help carry out the Presbyterian Progressive Program.

It will be sent in sufficient quantities for use in any of the Presbyterian churches and Sunday Schools, free of cost.

Order now. Begin to prepare for the service, December 21, 1919—the day appointed by the General Assembly.

Order from the Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief; Henry H. Sweets, Secretary, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

Standard Piano Club Makes Piano Buying Easy

You will never know how easy it is for you to provide your home with a splendid Piano or Player-Piano until you have investigated the splendid money-saving proposition of the Presbyterian Standard Piano Club. Those who have purchased their instruments through the Club write us that they are surprised and delighted with the big saving in price, the convenient plan of payment and the superb quality of their Pianos and Player-Pianos.

The Ludden & Bates Player Piano

The Player-Piano has come to stay, for it enables every one, young or old, to perform on the piano, no matter whether they have ever studied music or not. But to play in the best time, with the best expression and with the sweetest tone quality, you must have the Ludden & Bates Self-player Piano. It is really two splendid instruments in one—a regular high grade Piano for use by musicians and a Self-Player Piano for those who do not know one note from another.

If you secure your Player-Piano through the Club you not only save approximately one-third the price, but you also secure the benefit of the Club's Free Music Roll Service by which you can exchange your old rolls for new selections at a nominal cost to cover postage and the expense of handling. This represents, in the course of time, a tremendous saving. Do not make the mistake of obtaining your Player-Piano from a house which cannot give you a free and comprehensive service in the exchange of music rolls.

And why shouldn't they be surprised and delighted? They are members of a powerful syndicate—a Club of One Hundred Buyers, and are logically entitled to the lowest price at which a high grade Piano can possibly be sold. The factory recognizes this right by making the lowest possible Factory price. Each Club member is responsible only for his own order—the Management fills up the Club.

In addition we have arranged a safe and convenient plan of payment which Club members say is ideal. It is vastly superior to the old installment plan for it perfectly protects every interest of the Club member and insures him against every disadvantage of the partial payment plan as ordinarily conducted.

Others Are Delighted, Why Not You?

The Club will save you approximately one-third the price, or about one dollar out of three. It positively insures your perfect satisfaction with every detail of the transaction. You must be thoroughly pleased with the Quality, Price and Terms, otherwise the Club will, after thirty days, ask you to return the instrument and on receipt of same will refund whatever you have paid.

Do not look upon the Club as an experiment, for it passed that stage years ago. Thousands of delighted members are ready to assure you that the Club is the one perfect solution of the piano buyer's problem. We have printed hundreds of their letters in a book. Write for a free copy and see what they say. Here are a few samples selected at random:

Typical Letters From Club Members

Cedartown, Ga., Dec. 31, 1912.

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.—"The Piano is a treasure, and everyone remarks on the sweetness of tone, and it has been so much pleasure to the family. The Club Plan places the Piano in so many homes that otherwise would have to wait an indefinite time to buy. Accept my sincere thanks for your courteous treatment."

MRS. R. A. SPINKS.

College Grove, Tenn.,
Feb. 15, 1913.

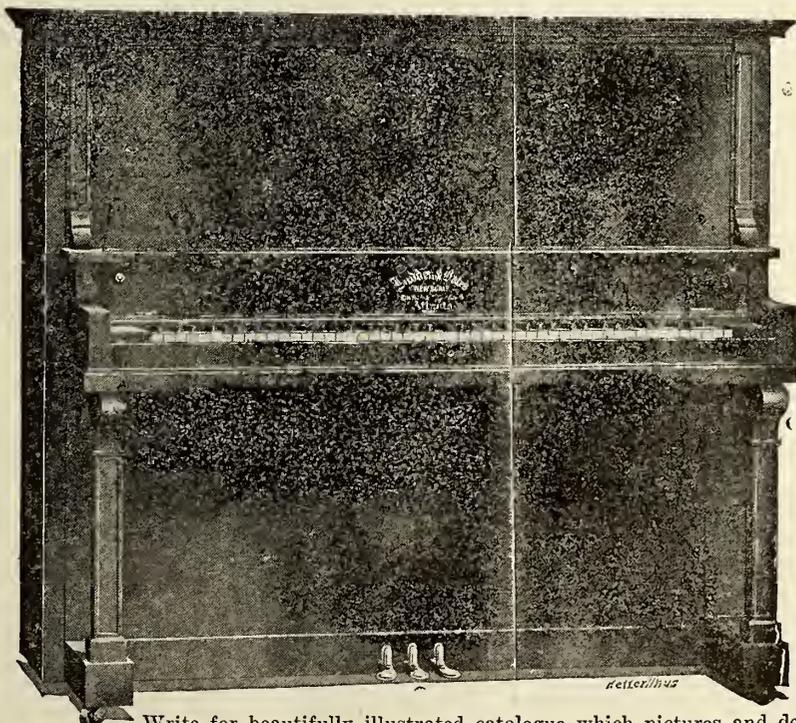

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.—"In regard to the Piano, I am perfectly delighted with it, and everyone that has heard it, or has played on it says they never heard a finer toned one, and I can observe such a vast difference in this one and others that are in this community, that have been placed by agents. Too, every one, even those that know nothing about music, can tell the superiority of this Piano over others. Wishing you much success, I am,"

MRS. JORDAN RIGGS.

Columbia, S. C.,
Dec. 28, 1912.

Ludden & Bates, Atlanta, Ga.—"I have had one of your pianos in my home for several months and I find that it comes up to your representation in every particular. Your Club Plan for the payment of same strikes me as being very lenient and I think that every home can afford a Piano on this basis. Trusting that you have a very prosperous business along this line, I am,"

MRS. AVA JACKSON.

Thanksgiving Number

Editorial

Thanksgiving.

Gratitude is a virtue that appeals to all, and in nothing has that Master of the English tongue shown his power more than in the picture he paints of an ungrateful child in King Lear. Above all men the Christian should show gratitude, because he of all men has been most blessed. While his expression of gratitude should not be confined to any one day or season, but at all times he should give thanks, it is especially incumbent upon him to join with his fellowmen on the National Thanksgiving Day, when at the close of the producing season the country assembles in its separate places of worship, to give thanks to God for His goodness to the children of men. This year we have abundant reasons to thank God.

The epidemic which at this time last year was taking its toll by laying low the choicest of our people, has disappeared. The barns of the farmer are bursting with fullness, while the laborer is receiving more money than ever before in his history.

He who steered the Ship of State through the storm of war, and stood like adamant in defense of the rights of every man in this world, has been spared to the country, and though apparently his great work at the Peace Conference has been thwarted, we can still look for brighter days.

In our own Church we have much for which to be thankful. Our Home and Foreign work has eclipsed all previous records, while in our own ranks we are at peace, and we still earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. In the spirit of love for our Father and our fellowmen, let us gather about us our dear ones, and in the presence of the juicy turkey and the steaming pudding give thanks to the Giver of every perfect gift—who has neither variable-ness nor shadow of turning.

But lest we content ourselves with pious words, let us give some tangible proofs of our gratitude for our mercies by remembering the Orphans at our Orphanages. Mr. Walker in another column appeals to us. Let us resolve to make the Thanksgiving offering this year surpass all previous ones in the same proportion as the price of food surpasses all previous prices.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Synod of Georgia.

THE Church at Albany, Ga., invited the Synod to meet with it one year ago. The influenza got there first, and the Church concluded that it could not handle both at the same time, and so asked the Synod to postpone its visit until this fall. As the Synod had no disposition to contest the claims of the influenza, it promptly acquiesced.

The Synod met on Tuesday evening, and was opened with a sermon by the retiring moderator, Dr. F. K. Sims. We did not reach the spot in time to hear the sermon, but it won a favorable verdict from the brethren, and must have given the Synod a good start; for sure it is that the Synod moved off with great smoothness and ran all the way to the close without the slightest friction. It was our privilege to hear two good sermons—one from Dr. D. P. McGeachy, a worthy son of North Carolina. He has a habit of thinking out of the usual rut, and is gifted with a supple tongue, and a good vocabulary, though he claims to have bigger thoughts than he can find suitable garments for. The other sermon was from Dr. Neal L. Anderson. He also carried us over an unfamiliar road, and treated us to fresh scenery. We are grateful to brethren who can render us such a service.

We had two capital addresses from our two active, able and aggressive Secretaries of Home Missions. They show great mental resourcefulness in finding new material with which to impart freshness and force to old themes. Dr. McMillan painted a panorama of world conditions with a view to stimulating the energies of the Church to redoubled efforts. Dr. Morris did the impossible in presenting all the great departments of the Church's work in a speech characterized by unity, movement and concentrated application.

It was expected some difference would develop, generating noise and heat, thunder and lightning, when the time came to select a member of the ad interim committee appointed by the Assembly to confer with committees of other Presbyterian Churches on the subject of closer relations. But there was not the faintest rumble of thunder, nor anything suggestive even of sheet lightning. The Synod put the stamp of its approval on the service of Homer McMillan by electing him without a dissenting vote.

The Interchurch World Movement awakened very little interest, and was side-tracked until next meeting of Synod. It seemed to be a little too big for the brethren to see around it, and a little too hazy for them to see through. Consequently they followed the wise advice of David Crockett: "Be sure you are right, and then go ahead." For the present they are not sure as to what is right. Just call a thing a "movement" and that is sufficient to commend it to some people. If it is a "movement" they are for it. They are progressive, forward-looking, and any kind of "movement" appeals to them. They ought to be happy, because, as some one has said, there are so many "movements" it looks as if the Church had St. Vitus' dance. The Synod of Georgia finds its hands full in trying to supply the needs in its own bounds, and the needs beyond, to which the General Assembly is calling it with ever louder and more insistent voice, and can afford to wait till it catches more distinctly the meaning of the vague, dim voices that are calling from interchurch and world spaces.

While zeal for Foreign Missions shows no signs of abatement, the zeal for Home Missions in the Synod of Georgia is developing into a downright enthusiasm. And well it may. The Synod is peculiarly fortunate in its Home Mission Work. At its head is Rev. M. McG. Shields, D.D. He comes to each meeting of Synod with fresh stories of splendid victories, and with stirring appeals to press the fight yet more vigorously. He has figures to show that the roll of communicants has grown four times as rapidly in the last five years as in the five preceding years, due evidently to the one single fact that during the last five years the Synod has engaged in Synodical evangelism. To emphasize the need of enlarging vastly more this branch of work, he calls attention to the distressing fact that forty-nine counties in Georgia are without a Presbyterian church, and that fifty others have but one each. Is not this state of affairs a serious reproach to our Church? We had an equal start with the Methodists and Baptists, and now while the woods are full of these, one-third of the state is entirely destitute of Presbyterians, and another third has just enough to make them a novelty.

Christian education is on something of a boom in the Synod of Georgia. The Synod's latest pride is Nacoochee Institute. Under the wise guidance of J. K. Coit, this school is taking on large proportions and attracting wide attention. It is receiving generous recognition even in distant States. It began as a school for mountain children, but it soon drew to it children from the valleys who were equally needy and deserving. So that now no geographical limit is set to those who may enjoy its privileges. All indications point to a great future for Nacoochee. Thornwell Orphanage, Davidson College, Columbia Seminary, and Agnes Scott all came in for favorable consideration. For some unknown reason, Oglethorpe failed to blow its horn. It was testified, however, to the Synod that Oglethorpe is still marching to the front.

The Synod was in session only two days, Wednesday and Thursday. At 1:30 p. m. each day the Synod was called to the basement, where the ladies of the church had prepared to fill every aching void. Such a spread on the first day provoked the remark, "I bet you can't do this again." The next day showed that the ladies had won the bet.

Some members of Synod think each meeting is the best. This time the Synod was unanimous. And on calm review, it is hard to think of any possible improvement.

The Edmonds Case Again.

In October, 1915, Rev. Henry M. Edmonds, D.D., pastor of the South Highlands Church, Birmingham, Ala., was deposed from the ministry by North Alabama Presbytery for holding views contrary to our Confession of Faith.

He took with him many members of that church and organized an Independent Presbyterian Church, and has since been worshipping in a Jewish Synagogue, just across the street from the South Highland Church.

September 26, 1915, Dr. Edmonds published in a secular newspaper a signed article in which he denied the doctrine of the substitutionary sacrifice of Christ to satisfy divine justice and to bring us to God; and in which, among many other things he asserted that this doctrine, according to his conviction, is "a part of our heathen inheritance dressed in terms of Roman court procedure," etc.

Upon these grounds Presbytery deposed him. Recently this same Presbytery restored him to the ministry and received him back into its membership.

According to a special to the Birmingham Age-Herald, Dr. Edmonds appeared before an adjourned meeting of Presbytery during the meeting of Synod and applied for admission.

A special committee was appointed to confer with him. This committee consisted of Rev. H. M. Moffatt, moderator; Dr. Thornton Whaling, of Columbia Seminary; Rev. F. B. Webb, D.D., Dr. John A. MacSporran and Dr. W. C. Clark. The committee brought in the following report:

"Your special committee reports that the Rev. H. M. Edmonds, D.D., having been thoroughly examined as to his views on theology by members of this committee; being deemed by them in accord with the system of doctrine found in our Standards, it is hereby

"Resolved, That upon Dr. Edmonds making the same statement to Presbytery that he has made to this committee, he be enrolled as a member of the Presbytery of North Alabama."

Dr. Edmonds made the statement, and was given the right hand of fellowship, while the brethren sang, "Blest be the tie that binds."

All is well that ends well, and if this were the end, we too would join in the same hymn, even at the risk of producing discord in the singing.

There seems, however, another side to the story.

Mr. Sydney Bowie, an influential elder of Dr. Edmonds' flock and also one of the elders who followed him from the South Highlands Church, is quoted as follows in the Birmingham paper: "This is a victory for Dr. Edmonds. A committee from the Presbytery waited on Dr. Edmonds and asked him to come back into Presbytery. It was clearly brought out that the Church believed in him, and believed that his religion was identical with its own."

The next day Mr. Bowie in a public card explained that the interviewer misquoted him in saying that a committee from Presbytery waited on Dr. Edmonds. What he did say was that some prominent members of Presbytery had discussed the matter with him and had urged him to take this course, and that the course was taken in response to these suggestions.

As Mr. Bowie does not deny the other part of the interview, we can assume that, according to his understanding, the Presbytery believes in him and believes that his theory of religion is identical with its own.

Add to this claim this quotation from Dr. Edmonds' public statement to his own people on the following Sunday: "Again, some have been surprised that I am written as accepting the system of doctrine taught in the Westminster Confession of Faith, when a few weeks ago I said in my pulpit that I could not accept that statement of faith without qualification. I was entirely frank with the examining committee concerning these qualifications, for I wanted to be honest, and was under no compulsion to go back.

The committee considered that my exceptions did not concern the body of the doctrine, but touched only upon non-essentials. I told them that I believed in the divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ, in the divine inspiration of the Scriptures, in the election of grace, and in the sacrificial life and death of Jesus Christ as the ground of my salvation."

According to this statement, a part of which only we have quoted, he tried to make his people believe that he stood where he had always stood, and in this he agrees with Mr. Bowie's claim.

We have great confidence in the committee, especially those with whom we are acquainted. Mr. Moffatt, Dr. Whaling and Dr. Clark are not only sound in the faith, but they are supposed to know sound theology. When therefore a man comes with their imprimatur upon him, we are disposed to accept him at his face value.

When, however, we recall the many past theological expressions of his views in the public press, in which he made light of inspiration and ridiculed the vicarious sacrifice of Christ, and also search in vain in his statement to his own people for some expression of regret for such views, we wonder if our good friends are not the victims of a theological camouflage. Presbytery believes that he has changed his views since he last stood before them, and his people believe that he stands where he has always stood, and each party bases its belief upon what he has said to each—so there you are.

The Interchurch World Movement

By Rev. James I. Vance, D.D.

THERE is so much misunderstanding of the Interchurch Movement on the part of people not fully informed that the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions, with whom the movement originated, have asked me to prepare a brief article for our Church papers on the subject.

The first thing to be emphasized is that it is not a movement for union, but for co-operation. There is not the slightest intention, or even desire, on the part of the men in charge of the Interchurch Movement to disturb in any way existing denominations. There is every desire to bring about the heartiest and fullest co-operation for all the Protestant churches of the United States in Christian work.

The next thing to be emphasized is that it is not primarily a money movement. There will be a nationwide canvass for gifts, to be sure, but this is an incident. It is primarily a great spiritual movement, and the supreme effort is not for money, but for life.

If Christ's work is to be done, life must be consecrated and trained. It is the conviction of the Interchurch leaders that this must start in the home, and that the greatest need in America today is the establishment of the family altar in every home. Parents must be made to see that they are responsible for the young life committed to them, and urged to consecrate their children at birth to the callings of service, especially that of the Gospel ministry.

Vitally connected with this is the work of the Religious Education Department, which is engaged with primary and secondary schools as well as with the Christian college. A survey is being made in three thousand schools, to see whether our present system of secondary education registers in conduct and character. Scientific tests are applied which bring out the facts. The war has shown the folly of education without religion. The German university which, before the war, was regarded as the last word in education, has gone down in defeat. The college men of tomorrow must be educated in institutions where volitions and emotions are as thoroughly trained as the reason. For this work the Christian college must be

A THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

"By the President of the United States of America,

A PROCLAMATION:

"The season of the year has again arrived when the people of the United States are accustomed to unite in giving thanks to Almighty God for the blessings which He has conferred upon our country during the twelve months that have passed. A year ago our people poured out their hearts in praise and thanksgiving that through Divine aid the right was victorious and peace had come to the nations which had so courageously struggled in defense of human liberty and justice. Now that the stern task is ended and the fruits of achievement are ours, we look forward with confidence to the dawn of an era where the sacrifices of the nations will find recompense in a world at peace.

"But to attain the consummation of the great work to which the American people devoted their manhood and the vast resources of their country they should, as they give thanks to God, re-consecrate themselves to those principles of right which triumphed through His merciful goodness. Our gratitude can find no more perfect expression than to bulwark with loyalty and patriotism those principles for which the free peoples of the earth fought and died.

"During the last year we have had much to make us grateful in spite of the confusion of our economic life resulting from the war. We have prospered. Our harvests have been plentiful and of our abundance we have been able to render succor to less favored nations. Our democracy remains unshaken in a world torn with political and social unrest. Our traditional ideals are still our guides in the path of progress and civilization.

"These great blessings vouchsafed to us, for which we devoutly give thanks, should arouse us to a fuller sense of ourselves and to mankind to see to it that nothing we may do shall mar the completeness of the victory which we helped to win. No selfish purpose animated us in becoming participants in the world war, and with a like spirit of unselfishness we should strive to aid by our example and by our co-operation in realizing the enduring welfare of all peoples and in bringing into being a world ruled by friendship and good will.

"Therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, hereby designate Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of November next, for observance as a day of thanksgiving and prayer by my fellow countrymen, inviting them to cease on that day from their ordinary tasks and to unite in their homes and in their several places of worship in ascribing praise and thanksgiving to God, the Author of all blessings and the Master of our destinies.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done in the District of Columbia this fifth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and nineteen and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-fourth.

"By the President:

"WOODROW WILSON.

A Young Girl's Escape From Massacre in Urumia, Persia

BESIDES those to whom the following letter will bring its own appeal, there are many in Virginia and other Southern States who will remember Rev. Michael Sayad, who studied for the ministry at Union Seminary before returning to Urumia, Persia, where he was a faithful minister to his own people, and a missionary to the Moslems and Kurds. He and his wife and three little girls, and his young son, have all perished during the persecutions of the Christians in Persia. The following pathetic letter is from his only remaining child, a young girl 21 years of age, who, while she was expecting to be killed in the terrible massacre which occurred in Urumia, on May 24, was praying that God would help her to stand bold and faithful to the last, not to deny her faith in order to save her life. She writes from Tabriz to a friend of her father in Richmond, Va.

"I think you would be most interested to know our last days in Urumia and how we were brought to Tabriz. We were nearly 850 men, women and children left in American missionary yards under American flag. Kurds for more than one month had some skirmishes with Persians in Urumia. Kurds in that time were friends with us. Dr. Packard was helping us with relief money. As the Kurds were stronger than native Persians, they gave us guards and kept us in mission yards. On May 24 Persians fought Kurds; they got help from Tabriz; few hundred soldiers and some machine guns and two cannons. As the number of the Kurds was less they were driven out from the city, so Persians came back, entered mission yards, did that shameful massacre which I cannot write, the cruelty they did by daggers, hammers, rifles, revolvers and stones killed nearly 261 women and children, among them few men that were left from first massacre. Women and children were torn to pieces, some burned and some women were taken in streets and whipped to death. Nobody can imagine that four horrible hours that those wild and cruel ones, thirsting for Christian blood, what they did, unless he be there and see himself. Now I will tell you how I escaped that massacre. There was a stable; I ran there; I saw another woman and hid myself in a corner and dugged a little soft ground, so as I was lying down; could not be seen, and there was a small window that I could see what was going on in the yard and in the rooms. After that I was there for more than two hours, could see nothing but slaughter and hear cry of women and children. I was praying God to help me to stand bold and faithful to the last, and not to let me be taken as a captive by those heathen. I was glad to think that after death I could see my dear father, mother, brother, sisters, which it is not a long time they have left me and gone to the place where there is not cruel Moslems, nor massacre, nor bloodshed. At last one of them entered the stable, saw the woman that was with me there. He began to strangle her and ask money from her. As she could not understand his language she showed me to him. He came to me and said if I would give him money he would not kill me. Fortunately I had some money with me. I gave them to him and begged him to kill me not. He promised that he would not kill me and left the stable, but as I did not believe him, and I thought he is going to bring some others, so I thought I would go and try to reach Dr. Packard's rooms. I jumped over many, many dead, and I was wounded in three places by sword in my neck, but as I had a thick shawl around my neck that helped wounds not to be fatal. It was a miracle that I escaped among the bullets. Arrived in the room Dr. Packard was, and he was not killed. By that time governor of the city send few soldiers, we all and Dr. Packard were taken to governor's home, wounded, shocked, we were kept there for 25 days. Our people in Tabriz heard that, telegraphed everywhere, and then American consul as representative of all allies, with him Mr. Muller and few others sent by Persian government, came to Urumia and took us to Tabriz. Now we are in Tabriz waiting what allies will do for us. We are helped some little by American Relief. I am very thankful to God for that relief, but it is very, very little. It is only enough for bread, no meat, no tea, nor clothes. Some time I am thinking to come to America. I thought I would consult you. If you see it wise, then I will need expenses of the journey and a letter of recommendation to American consul here to help me in starting. I think it is not possible that in a short time our nation will get back to Urumia to their ruined houses, because the help is coming very slowly. I want to come to America, for if not I will go mad here, because my troubles are very, very big. Give my love to all friends.

"I remain yours respectfully,

"Virginia M. Sayad."

An effort is being made to help this young girl in her present need and to do what may seem most expedient for the future. The following from Rev. W. W. Moore is a sufficient endorsement of her cause. He writes:

"Union Theological Seminary, Oct. 16, 1919.

"The appeal on behalf of Virginia Sayad is one which I can commend earnestly to our benevolent people. She is the daughter of the late Rev. Michael Yonan Sayad, of Persia, who was for three years a student in Union Seminary, graduating in 1901. His death in 1915 was a result of the hardships brought on his people by the world war. Since that time all the members of his family except this daughter have perished amid the calamities which have overwhelmed their country. After escaping with her life she is now alone in the world and in need of help. It is hoped that many of our people will take part in relieving the necessities of this sorely tried Christian girl, who, along with her people, has suffered for her faith, and now turns for help to her father's friends and others in this country.

"W. W. Moore."

Mr. J. P. Cochran, one of the missionaries from Urumia, who is now in this country, says Virginia is a sweet girl, of good family, the daughter and granddaughter of good Christian people. I think if there is any way to get her here it would be well to let her come. She has as much education as any girls get in Persia, and I have no doubt is competent to do something for her support. Her mother's father was a physician and had been held in honor by his own people and the Moslem population. Yet he was murdered by the Turks.

Mr. Paul Shimon, in reply to a letter of inquiry, says that $500 is about the amount that will be needed to bring Virginia to this country, and that if it can be raised quickly she could come over under protection of a Syrian minister and his wife, for whose passage, with their children, an appeal is being made elsewhere. He says that money for her can be wired direct to the Armenian consul through the American Committee for American and Syrian Relief. Anyone who desires to assist her can do so by sending a contribution to Robert A. Lancaster, Jr., 721 Mutual Building, or to Dr. Wm. S. Gordon, 5 East Franklin St., Richmond, Va.

Every man who comes into close and vital association with God is continually surprised at the bounty of heaven, at the tenderness of the divine fatherhood, at the largeness of the divine love; surprise follows surprise in ever-growing amazement because imagination is left behind and expression utterly fails when the goodness of God is contemplated. — Joseph Parker.

Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship Campaign Committee

By Rev. Wm. Fred Galbraith, Secretary.

THE Campaign Committee of the Assembly's Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship met at the call of the chairman, November 14, in the office of the secretary, 407-9 Times building, Chattanooga, Tenn., with the following members present: Homer McMillan, R. E. McGill and Jno. I. Armstrong.

Rev. S. Waters McGill, recently elected campaign manager, was present and outlined his plans, in part, for prosecuting the campaign.

Rev. H. H. Sweets and Rev. Lynn R. Walker, being unable to be present at the meeting, requested Rev. W. H. Hopper and Wm. Fred Galbraith, respectively, to represent them at the meeting.

The program committee of the Mountain Retreat Association having invited the Assembly's Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship to prepare a program covering the last week of July, 1920, the invitation was accepted. Details of this program will be arranged and the entire program will be published. This committee is grateful for the invitation to share in the Montreat program next summer.

A resolution prepared requesting General Assembly or the executive agencies of our Church to underwrite our denomination to the amount of five per cent of the sum in which the whole Church was to participate in the united budget of the Interchurch World Movement of North America, was sent to all the members of the Assembly's Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship, by mail, requesting their official votes on this proposition. The result of this referendum is as follows: Those favoring underwriting the Church to the above amount, six; against underwriting the Church, six; voting for another meeting of the entire committee for further information, five; leave to the executive secretaries, one; not voting, two.

With the result of this vote before all present, it was the judgment of the campaign committee that this is equivalent to not approving the underwriting of the expense of the Interchurch World Movement to the extent of five per cent.

A message was directed to the sixteen Synodical managers, several days prior to the meeting of the committee, endeavoring to ascertain the effect on the churches in their respective Synods should a possible change of date be made for the taking of the every member canvass in 1920, to conform with the simultaneous drive of the Interchurch World Movement.

Having received replies from fifteen of the managers, based upon the nature of the replies in most part, the committee recommends that we adhere to the date heretofore understood for taking the every member canvass, March 21, 1920, following up thoroughly the canvass the week following, with the understanding that the canvass is to be completed by March 28, with full and final reports to be in the office of the secretary of the Assembly's Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship by April 6. It is further understood that the days of March preceding the 21st are to be given to intensive study and preparation for the canvass.

In adhering to March 21-28, 1920, for our every member canvass we are in perfect accord with the Interchurch Movement. At a National Leaders' Conference of the Interchurch World Movement, held at Atlantic City, November 5-8, it was unanimously decided that any church (denomination) that found it impracticable to take own annual every member canvass for benevolence in April, the month designated for the simultaneous drive, should not and would not, be considered disloyal in the least to the Interchurch World Movement of North America.

The following resolution was adopted: Inasmuch as the General Assembly has endorsed the Interchurch World Movement and representation in the movement, we recommend that every agency in our Church co-operate as fully as practicable, and we suggest to the executive committees that they underwrite the expenses of the Interchurch World Movement in such amounts as they may deem wise.

All our campaign managers, Synodical, Presbyterian, Group and Congregational, and other leaders, are urged to secure the largest possible attendance on and participation in the educational and training conferences to be held during the winter by the Interchurch World Movement.

Committee adjourned with prayer to meet again December 11, 1919, at 9:30 a. m., in the office of the secretary.

A Fair Test.

By Rev. H. Waddell Pratt.

It was at a conference between a committee of the Southern Church many years ago that a member of our committee proposed to the Northern committee a plan which, if carried out, would have removed one of the chief obstacles to organic union. The suggestion is so simple, so easy to try, and so effectual if successfully carried out, that we venture to suggest it again.

It seems to be very generally agreed in our Church that the Gardiner Spring Resolutions were wrong. That is, the Northern Assembly in passing them committed sin. It is claimed, however, that the nature which expressed itself in this sin no longer exists. It is maintained that the principles which prompted those utterances and the subsequent actions of the courts of the Church, have long since been abandoned. There is a fair test that can settle the whole matter, a test which will no longer leave this a matter of opinion, but which will make it a matter of fact. The test is this:

That the committee of conference shall recommend to the Northern Assembly that a resolution be passed by that Assembly branding the Gardiner Spring Resolutions as a sin both against the Lord Jesus Christ and their brethren of the South, that every act of every court subsequent which carried out in action the principles enunciated in those resolutions was in like manner a sin against the Lord Jesus Christ, and that now in the name of the whole Northern Church and for the honor of Christ they repudiate and condemn utterly as sins those utterances and acts. If the Northern Assembly would pass a resolution embodying this confession of sin (and sin stands unforgiven until confessed in the case of an organization as well as of an individual), and if it was passed by the same proportionate majority as were the Spring resolutions, it would prove that the principles actuating that Church today had changed, and one of the chief obstacles, perhaps the greatest obstacle to organic union, will be removed.

The day of thanksgiving is a day of remembrance; but it may be also, and in some points it should be, a day of forgetting—a day in which we forget our losses and our disappointments, while we think of the loving kindness of the Lord.

China and Japan

By Rev. S. H. Chester, D.D.

PERHAPS the most masterly discussion of the international relations of China yet published is contained in the work, "China—An Interpretation," by the late Bishop J. W. Bashford. In the 16th chapter of this book he discusses the relations of China and Japan, concerning which he makes this statement: "Japan must either conquer and govern the Chinese, or else she must treat China as one neighbor should treat another, and thus win her friendship, her trade, and in time of need, her support."

He then proceeds to demonstrate that the only wise and safe course for Japan is to pursue the latter of these courses. He answers very thoroughly the contention that the political control of China by Japan giving freedom of colonization as well as control of industrial development, is necessary for Japan's own growth and development. He shows by reference to unimpeachable authorities that there is ample unused territory in Japan itself and in her present island dependencies to provide for the maintenance under proper and intelligent management, of at least double Japan's present population. The main consideration in this regard, however, is that Japan, in case she does not cripple her resources and divert the energies of her men in military operations, has a prospect of becoming the industrial and commercial leader of the Far East, as Great Britain has been of the Atlantic basin, and in this way providing for the maintenance of an increased population within her own borders.

He also shows that Japan is now in no financial condition for the heavy military expenditure which her political control of China would demand. She has all that she can handle in that respect to take care of her present enterprises in Korea and in Formosa. The adoption of a military policy such as would be necessary to maintain the over-lordship of China would involve a tax rate that would impoverish the Japanese beyond the point of endurance.

Again, the career of militarism demanded by the attempt to control China politically would result ultimately in the downfall of Japanese civilization. On this point Bishop Bashford calls attention to the axiom laid down by Lord Bacon, namely: "Any nation which gives itself definitely to war may become for the time being a great military power, but in so doing destroys the foundation of a permanent existence." In proof of this he cites the histories of Greece under Alexander, of Rome under her colonizing Emperors, of Spain in her period of conquest and of France under Louis XIV and under Napoleon. "This," says Bishop Bashford, "is because the permanent maintenance of armies not only drains the financial resources of a nation but decimates the nation's manhood. We do well to remember that a greater than Bacon has said, 'They that take the sword shall perish by the sword.'"

He also calls attention to the treaties between Japan and other nations, which would render impossible the carrying out of an aggressive military policy in China. The western nations are committed to the "open door" policy, and they will certainly not sit idly by and see this policy negated by any attempt on the part of Japan to establish her supremacy in China, with the possibility of closing of the open door in the face of the western nations.

We would commend this great book of Bishop Bashford's and especially the sixteenth chapter of the book, to those who wish to have a clear and comprehensive idea of the real situation as between China and Japan as regards their present and future relations. We would also commend this chapter to any intelligent Japanese who are able to read English, as containing matter which it would be in every way desirable to have brought to the attention of those who are now in control of Japan's foreign policy, and who would be able to guide her in the right direction at this critical time in her history.

The Privations of Foreign Missionaries.

To the Editor of Presbyterian Standard:

Dear Sir: For once I want to be a heretic, and raise a mild objection to the great outcry about the awful conditions of the brethren in the foreign field.

If you will carefully observe you will find that the privations of missionaries in foreign lands is more than offset by the greater privations of many of those ministering the Word at home. Mention is made of certain necessities of life that have been increased in price. Now nine of the common necessities of life at home have been so much increased that the average salary of many of the ministers at home has been cut almost two-thirds, and this in spite of the fact that in some cases there has been an increase.

Bread, butter, meat, sugar, eggs, chickens, bacon, clothing, shoes, these have all been increased from 100 to 500 per cent, and the best I can do in striking an average, is that the cost of necessities has increased in this part of the country at least 250 per cent, while ministers' salaries have been increased only about 25 per cent, which makes the salaries of today worth much less than half what they were worth four years ago.

The men with a salary of $3,000 to $10,000 do not feel the pinch like the man with a salary ranging downward from about $2,000. Take a man, for instance, with a salary of $2,000, if he gives even a tithe, which he is more than apt to do, then say he has a boy or girl (not to say more than one) in college, that will be an expense of say about $600, and this with the 200 for religious and benevolent causes leaves him $1,200 to keep his family and himself respectable and maintain a home such as a minister is expected to maintain.

Then there are many of our Home Missionary pastors, who are having to maintain a family on much less than $2,000, and this is not true, as far as I am informed, in the foreign field. North Carolina ranks as well as any other Synod in salaries, I believe, and the record shows that in this Synod, we have 54 ministers paid from $1,500 to $2,000; 68 ministers are paid from $1,000 to $1,500; and 35 are paid $1,000 or less. Possibly there are about 20 men who are paid salaries ranging from $2,500 to $5,000.

I take it the men on the foreign field are paid better salaries, and are provided with means to educate their children, such as would make some of our Home Missionaries think they were almost in glory.

I am just as much in favor of foreign missions as most of the brethren, but there is a point where we are apt to deviate from right, in that we neglect other parts of the church's work. I know men in our own land who are unable to send their children to college, and they are suffering many other privations also, and they are suffering silently.

What will become of foreign missions if the work at home is neglected? Dr. Morris says there are more than half of the residents in our own country outside the pale of Christianity, and we have certainly a duty to these people. And our brave missionaries at home are working hard to fulfill this duty. Why not put the men at home and the men abroad who are serving God in the ministry on the same basis?

put on its feet, so that it can compete along the whole line with secular institutions, and its degree command all the respect that any college or university degree may hope to have.

In the work of Home Missions a fourfold survey of every state, city, county, town, village and community in the United States is being made. The first is a survey made from the county seat, giving the system of roads, schools, public institutions, population, and so forth. The second is a trade survey, made with the store as the center. The merchant is asked to give the boundaries within which his customers live, and answer a number of questions about social, school, industrial and church conditions in that area. The third is from the individual church as a center. The pastor is asked to define the territory within which his members live, the number of members, active and inactive, the growth or decline for the past five years, and various other questions revealing the measures of the church as a force in the community. The fourth is a house to house canvass which will be made only in those communities where the churches promise to follow it up.

All of this material is sent to New York, and a map in colors is made of every city and county. This is sent back to its community, and the preachers and church leaders of all the denominations meet to consider it and make recommendations. Their recommendations go up to a state council composed of men selected by the denominational agencies, and these together consider and decide what is to be done. Certain facts are being strongly brought out already in these surveys. One is that there are many unoccupied areas where no church of any denomination is at work. Another is the worse than inadequacy of an absentee pastor. Still another is that the chances of a church for growth increase with its size.

For the first time in the history of the church a complete world survey is being made for our work in non-Christian lands. This is in addition to the denominational surveys, and the results will be used in preparing the budgets for the various fields.

An industrial conference has been held, the wisdom of which has been called in question. It may be said that while the Interchurch World Movement strongly believes that the church should be felt as a spiritual force in industrial, economic, social and political, as well as ecclesiastical matters, inasmuch as these are a part of human life, still no one has imagined that the church would attempt to decide the questions at issue between labor and capital. It is hoped, however, that it may be able to lead both sides to approach each other and consider their differences in accordance with the spirit of the Golden Rule. It certainly hopes to show men on both sides that they will never get right with each other as long as they are wrong with God.

The chairman of the Interchurch Movement is Dr. John R. Mott, and the general secretary is Dr. S. Earl Taylor. On the staff are men who have been tested out in handling the lines of work assigned them. It looks as though these men have gone to school to their denominational enterprises in order to fit them for this great interchurch project. Considerable money is being spent. Some feel that some is being wasted. I have gone over the budget. No exorbitant salaries are paid. Many men are at work merely for their expenses. Every item of expenditure is being scrutinized, but there is no hesitation on the part of the Interchurch Movement in spending money, provided the results sought warrant the proposed expense.

The budget of the movement showing how every cent has been spent, with copious notes explaining each item, is now in the hands of our Systematic Beneficence Committee for a full and careful examination. The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions of our church has unanimously voted in favor of our Systematic Beneficence Committee's assuming its share of financial responsibility for the movement. Whether we do this or not will not affect the movement; it will only affect us; for the movement has already been underwritten by several of the largest denominations in America. It would seem, however, that inasmuch as the movement originated with Southern Presbyterians, our church would rejoice in the opportunity to share in responsibility as it hopes largely to share in blessing.

The Grandfather's Orphans' Home.

The Grandfather Orphans' Home is an institution that has the honor of being one of the departments of the Lees-McRae Institute, at Banner Elk, N. C. It therefore lives under the motto, "In the Mountains, of the Mountains, for the Mountains." It is situated on a farm one mile from the school and close to the great Grandfather Mountain, from which it draws its name. It has been in existence for five and one-half years, during which time it has cared for 70 children. There are 46 in the home now. These children come mainly from east Tennessee and western North Carolina. They are a sturdy set.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Holcomb have been the superintendents of the home ever since it was started. They have seen the little farm house in which the home was first opened, twice added to with large wings. They have seen a boys' dormitory and many other improvements made both on the property and in the lives of the children who have been under their care. Misses Agnes and Kate Query have been helping for several years, one as a matron in the girls' building and one as teacher. It would be hard to find four people better suited for a special work than these four people are for the work that they are doing.

How Supported?—There are two sources of support. One is what is raised on the farm. We were in the cellar a few days ago and saw 700 quarts of canned fruits and berries, three barrels of kraut, 60 bushels of potatoes, 30 bushels of apples and lots of dried beans. In the barn we saw over 100 bushels of grain: wheat, buckwheat, rye and corn. In the lot we saw seven fattening hogs, five milk cows and several calves. All these things were produced on the farm and will be used in the support of the children. The other source of support is what the people give. Contributions have come, in money and produce and clothing, from far and near, from friends and strangers, from churches, Sunday schools and societies. For the good crops and for the good friends that the Lord has raised up for us we feel devoutly thankful.

What of the Future?—We believe that the Grandfather Orphans' Home is now one of the permanent institutions of the Presbyterian Church. So long as children are born into the world and so long as mothers and fathers die there will be orphans to care for. There are probably more orphans in the mountains in proportion to population than exist in other parts of our country. Not that the mountains are unhealthy, but because the mountain homes are nearly always swarming with children. We believe therefore that any person who helps to build a home in the mountains for these unfortunate children and then brings the support of the children to the attention of the people does a double kindness. It is a blessing to the children and a privilege for the people. We will therefore be disappointed if many who read these lines do not send something for the support of the children and if some do not thank us for the opportunity and privilege that we are giving them to have a part in this great work.

God is the soul's rest, man's only true sanctuary.—Christian Guardian.

"In Thesi" Deliverances.By Rev. John M. Wells, D.D.

DR. LINGLE does not find my definition of how an in thesi deliverance becomes law, satisfactory. Having found it unsatisfactory, I expected of course that he would give a satisfactory one. Sitting in the chair of Dabney and Peck, our great masters in Church law, assuredly he should have given us a definition. Instead he "will be grateful to anyone who will send an article of three or four thousand words on these questions."

I had hoped that he would "argue the matter." Instead he makes what seems to him "a perfectly fair application of this law." That the reader may have this application before him I quote Dr. Lingle's words: "In the fall of 1909 the Presbytery of North Alabama passed a resolution strongly endorsing a prohibition amendment to the state constitution. This action of the Presbytery was brought before the General Assembly of 1910 by complaint. The Assembly declined to sustain the complaint and in so many words sustained the action of the North Alabama Presbytery. This was a judicial decision of the Assembly and was pronounced by the Assembly of 1911. It was also pronounced final by the Assembly of 1911. According to Dr. Wells' definition that decision of the General Assembly in sustaining the action of the North Alabama Presbytery made the action of the North Alabama Presbytery a law of our Church. In other words, according to this definition, since 1910 it has been a law of the Southern Presbyterian Church, that its members must vote for a prohibition amendment to the state constitution, when the opportunity presents itself, or be liable to discipline. We do not believe that for a minute."

Of course the reader sees that there is a fallacy in Dr. Lingle's reasoning. He himself feels it though he does not see it. The feeling leads him to say, "I am not dealing in sophistry or mere catchwords."

For the sake of the reader who has not studied the law of our Church I will consider Dr. Lingle's "application" at greater length than I otherwise would.

Dr. Lingle fails to recognize that a cause decided by one of the courts of our Church is not necessarily one that involves judicial prosecution. Paragraph 143 of our Rules of Discipline says: "The term (discipline) has two senses: the one referring to the whole government, inspection, training, guardianship and control which the Church maintains over its members, its officers and its courts; the other a restricted and technical sense, signifying judicial prosecution."

Dr. Dabney says: "In 1839 the sense of the Assembly was definitely sought on this point by complaint from a lower judicatory; and it was decided by the Assembly that an appeal can only lie in judicial cases, while in all other kinds of decisions the complaint is the proper proceeding. On this principle the Assembly has uniformly and consistently acted in a number of cases, as well as all other law-abiding judicatories in our Church."

The supreme court of the United States has before it cases involving the constitution, the right and powers of legislative bodies and many other matters, none of which carry with them any liability to indictment for any individual.

But every case when decided by the supreme court becomes the law of the United States by virtue of that decision.

So the supreme court of the Church, our General Assembly, has cases before it involving our constitution, the rights and powers of our Presbyteries and Synods, and many other matters, none of which carry with them any liability to prosecution or discipline for any individual.

But every such case when once decided by the General Assembly becomes the law of the Presbyterian Church by virtue of that decision. There are many such cases I might quote. Such a case was that used in his "application."

2. Dr. Lingle fails to recognize that what is settled by a legal decision is the issue before the court, and that alone. What was the issue before the court of the commission of the General Assembly? It was this: Has a Presbytery the right to endorse a prohibition amendment to the state constitution? What was the decision? "Your commission in voting not to sustain did not mean to recede from or compromise the principle of non-intrusion into civil affairs which concern the commonwealth, but to leave our courts free as to the mode of dealing with a gigantic moral evil," etc. Only that and in substance nothing more. Nothing about indictment of the individual; nothing about liability of any member to discipline.

A law was established, whether right or wrong; but it was a law having to do with the powers of a Church court, and not with the prosecution of an individual. Here is where Dr. Lingle's logic completely broke down.

If the thoughtful reader will take the case I cited in my previous article, and will note the issue before the court in each case, he will see that the substance of the Spring Resolutions has passed into the law of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

How may or does an "in thesi" deliverance become law? If I understand our system, it is when a theoretical opinion comes before our Church as a concrete case for decision. When such a case is decided, what was before merely an opinion becomes a law. It is then binding upon the Church.

The above is still my definition. And I will hold it until "one of Dr. Lingle's Correspondents" in the "Union Seminary Review" in a "constructive, non-controversial article of three or four thousand words" shows me real grounds for adopting a different.

Wilmington, N. C.

"Their Christmas Vision."

"I believe 'Their Christian Vision,'" writes Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, Superintendent of the Woman's Auxiliary, "is the very best of the many splendid exercises you have issued for the use of the Sunday Schools of our Church. It is filled with the true spirit of Christmas, from the Anthem of Joy at the opening, to the bringing of gifts for the poor as the closing hymn is sung. The sweet solemnity of such a service will do much to impress upon a child's mind the religious character of festival that is too often more pagan than Christian. Every church and Sunday School should prepare at once to present this beautiful Christmas lesson."

Dr. Gilbert Glass, Superintendent of Sunday Schools, says: "It is the very best Christmas program published by any agency. Its use by the churches will result in spiritual blessing to the church and Sunday School, and in the enlistment of lives in the Master's service."

Mr. R. E. Magill writes: "'Their Christmas Vision' is the best yet. The managers have agreed not to appeal to our churches in December for the relief of the Armenians, Syrians and the other people of the near East, but will call upon them in January. I hope all our churches and Sunday Schools will use this helpful program."

Begin at once to prepare for this service. If possible arrange to consolidate the hour of church worship and the Sunday School, either at the morning or evening hour. The General Assembly requests its use on the Sabbath preceding Christmas.

Under the existing law, enlisted men between the ages of 19 and 22 are eligible for appointment to the military academy after one year's service in the army. Appointments are made by competitive examination. The course at the academy is three years, with a commission as second lieutenant in the regular establishment upon graduation.

The Southern Furniture Manufacturers Association in annual convention in Asheville announced that the prices will remain high as long as the demand exceeds the supply.

Marvin Ritch, the Charlotte lawyer who was indicted in connection with the strike at Albemarle, was fined, amounting, with costs, to $819.

John M. Morehead, of Charlotte, has been nominated as the republican candidate for Congress in the Ninth district, to succeed E. Y. Webb.

Dr. James Sprunt, of Wilmington, president of the State Historical Association, at the annual meeting in Raleigh delivered a fine address on "The Restoration of Jerusalem."

The Farmers' Educational and Co-operative union of America at its closing session in Memphis, Tenn., went on record as opposed to universal military training, urged that the Federal farm loan act be amended to permit loans to farmers who do not own land as well as to land owners, and proposed that only a practical working farmer be appointed to office of secretary of agriculture.

Our Lord needs in His Church today disciples with the clearness of mind, the steadiness of faith, the balance of judgment which His Spirit gives. He needs in His service men and women whose faith rests on sure foundations, who believe intelligently, and, therefore, finally, all the glorious truths contained in the Creed, who accept the teaching of the Scriptures as interpreted by the Church and believe this with all their minds as well as with all their hearts and souls and strength. It is this spirit in us, and this firm faith in our Lord and His truth that makes us witnesses of His resurrection.—Dr. Wm. Manning.

The glory that dwells in the sacred humanity, and which even here flows from him into his own, is there given in fullness unto God's sons, who stand resplendent in that glory, before the throne.—Rev. G. Body.

TOPIC FOR WEEK BEGINNING NOVEMBER 30: OUR DUTY TO DEPENDENT CHILDREN.

Psalm 146:9.

There is a picture painted upon the memory of every student of the life of Jesus. It is a picture of rare beauty and great power, of universal significance. It is the picture of the children in the arms of Jesus, after He had rebuked His disciples for ordering the nurses or mothers to go away and let Jesus alone.

"Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for to such belongeth the Kingdom of Heaven." It is the genitive of possession. Of course His love and care would especially go out to children whose natural protectors have been removed either by sin or death. Of course, also, it is through His people that He would evermore take the little dependent ones in His arms, and bless them, and protect them, and provide for them. If we know the heart of our Lord, we will not for one moment doubt this; and if we sincerely pray: "Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth," we will do what we can to care for such children.

Some of our best men and women have given, and are giving their lives to the care of dependent children. Dr. Jacobs, of Clinton, S. C., for instance. To his pastorate of the Presbyterian flock, he added the pastorate of the orphanage. And how splendidly it grew, and how wonderful was the help that came from far and near. If Dr. Thornwell could visit again the scenes of his labors, and the State that he loved, perhaps one of his greatest satisfactions would be that this great institution at Clinton is called by his name. Dr. Thornwell himself, though not an orphan, was really dependent. Had it not been for his two benefactors the Church would surely have been deprived of his unique services, and the State and college of one of her most honored citizens and teachers. "Full many a flower is born to blush unseen" unless the helping hand of Christ's followers find them, and lovingly care for them. The passion that is expressed in Mrs. Browning's "The Cry of the Children," is what every one of us needs. There are thousands of homes that might be richly blessed by the bringing in of one of Christ's little ones.

A banker said today: "Do you know what is the matter with our country? It is extravagance." Why not spend some of our money on dependent children, and less on the fineries and superfluities? Do you forget your own orphanage? Have you ever visited it? Does your heart go out in love and pity for the little ones there? Do you contribute regularly and liberally so that the children may be properly fed, clothed, and educated? Would you like to see it enlarged, so that so many appeals would not have to be refused—so many little ones shut out?

"The cry of the children, O my brothers," how deeply it touches our hearts. But perhaps you have not heard that cry; perhaps you will not hear it for fear your feelings would be aroused, your sympathy awakened, and your money and time given to aid them. "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not"—but if we are hard-hearted and turn away our faces from these little ones we do forbid them to come to Jesus. Not to help is to hinder. Here is opened to each one of us an avenue of usefulness, a way of pleasing and serving God. Our duty is plain and imperative. The path of duty is also the way of great satisfaction and happiness; for we cannot help one of these little ones without thinking with joy of the sunshine we are pouring into that little heart, and of the great possibilities that may eventuate in a manhood or womanhood enriched by piety, or genius, or service to Church or State.

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. This great truth is announced for the comfort of all the downcast and broken-spirited. Jesus is telling them a new hope has arisen for them. That hope is available for all men, of course, but Jesus knows it is the poor in spirit that will feel their need and will accept as little children the blessings that are offered. He congratulates them, therefore, and tells them that the kingdom of heaven is theirs. They are fortunate both in the prospect of an early relief from all that is painful in their poverty of spirit and in the fact that this very lowliness and depression made their minds ripe for the acceptance of the offered blessings.

Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled. They have been unhappy and unsatisfied. Their condition has been as painful and as full of yearning as that of one who famishes in a desert. We are surprised at first that a hungry and restless life could be called fortunate. But Jesus declares it has become so. These thirsting and hungering folk may now be filled, He says. They are doubly fortunate. They are blest in the assurance now of an early relief of their thirst, and also in the fact that the aching, long felt sense of want is itself the thing which disposes them to accept the righteousness which Christ has come to bring. It would be well for all of us if we felt our emptiness more keenly. It is only when our condition causes us real pain that we become willing to accept righteousness by the processes through which it may come to us.

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God. Their purity has deprived them no doubt of many of earth's pleasures and excitements. They have not looked upon the sins with which the wicked gorge their eyes and souls. They have been regarded with contemptuous pity perhaps as being poor, prudish, and provincial innocents that never felt the flings and thrills of a purple life of lust or conspiracy or high and crooked finance. But Christ congratulates them and makes the happy declaration that by reason of their purity they shall see God. They shall perceive Him in nature around them, in the stars and the violet; they shall be able to perceive Him in all His providences over their lives; they shall perceive Him in this Jesus Christ whom men of grosser vision see as only man; and one day they shall see Him face to face in heaven above.

The poor in spirit, the sad, the meek, the hungry and thirsty, the tender-hearted, the pure, the peaceable, the persecuted and reproached! What an array! But these are they whom Christ congratulates as the future members of the kingdom. Let us take Christ's thoughts to heart and ponder them.

Have several members of the society tell which one of the Blesseds most impresses him or her. And why.

Tell why Jesus did not congratulate the strong, the rich, or the popular.

JESUS TEACHES PETER TRUE GREATNESS.

John 13:5-16, 36-38.

GOLDEN TEXT—"The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many."—Mat. 20:28.

AUTHORIZED VERSION.

5. After that he poureth water into a bason, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

6. Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and Peter saith unto him, Lord; dost thou wash my feet?

7. Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter.

8. Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wish thee not, thou hast no part with me.

9. Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head.

10. Jesus said to him, He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all.

11. For he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean.

12. So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you?

13. Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am.

14. If then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet.

15. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you.

16. Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his Lord; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him.

36. Simon Peter said unto him, Lord, whither goest thou? Jesus answered him; Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now; but thou shalt follow me afterwards.

37. Peter said unto him, Lord, why cannot I follow thee now? I will lay down my life for thy sake.

38. Jesus answered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, The cock shall not crow, till thou hast denied me thrice.

Our Saviour's teachings were expressed not only in words but in deeds. Designing to impress upon His ambitious disciples that the greatness was not inconsistent with lowly service, in this passage He illustrates that truth by His own example. His real greatness of character had often been demonstrated. On this occasion He shows them that the truly great can perform humble service and by their superiority are nerved for lowly tasks. We will contemplate the instructions of the lesson as follows: Jesus Washes the Disciples' feet, Peter's Objection, The Lord Removes It, Peter's Devotion to Christ.

I. Jesus Washes the Disciples' Feet.

When a person had bathed, walking with open sandals the feet became dusty. Hence in Oriental lands it was a mark of hospitality to offer water for cleaning the feet of guests. The service was often rendered by an inferior servant. It was refreshing and added to the comfort of those for whom it was performed. But our Saviour did not desire merely to minister to the physical enjoyment of His disciples. He wished to teach them an important lesson of lowly service. He prepared Himself for the humble work by "laying aside his outer garments and girding Himself with a towel and pouring water into a basin." This preparation for lowly toil is suggestive for us. He proves to His disciples that real greatness will perform the humblest service and that if He, their "Lord and Master," would wash their feet, they ought to render lowly help to each other.

II. Peter's Objection.

When he comes to Peter, he declares that his Lord should never perform for him such a lowly office. He deemed it beneath the dignity of Christ to do such work. Peter lacked vision and so do we all upon many subjects. When he was enlightened as to the significance of the service and as to the need of the cleansing by humble service that Christ could give, he gladly submitted and exclaimed, "Lord, not my feet only but my hands and my head." Christ explained that "the bathed man needed only to wash his feet but was clean every whit or entirely. He also intimates that they needed not only physical but moral cleansing, and that they were cleansed from guilt by Him except him who forsook and betrayed Him. Many of our objections to Christ's requirements would, like those of Peter, disappear if our minds were illuminated to have proper vision.

III. The Lord Removes Peter's Objection.

Peter did not think that the Son of God and the Messiah of prophecy should wash His disciples' feet. Jesus shows him that the highest can perform the lowest essential service. Nay, that his very greatness better qualifies him for its performance and that humility needful to humble aid dwells in the most highly endowed beings. He also teaches Peter and ourselves that if we need physical cleansing secured by lowly service much more do we require moral cleansing wrought by Christ, by taking a more humble position than that of washing the disciples' feet. To purify us from guilt Jesus assumed the position of a manacled prisoner before the Sanhedrim, a condemned criminal at Pilate's bar and a sin-bearer on Calvary's cross. His very dignity as Immanuel, as God manifest in human nature, fitted Him for the service as the sin-bearer of the human race, for a being less great could not have made an acceptable atonement.

IV. Peter's Devotion to Christ.

That this apostle was devoted to the Lord despite his defects and sins is clearly manifested. He shows his devotion when called, by forsaking his property and business. He proves it by accompanying the Lord for three years during His public ministry. He demonstrated it by following Jesus to Caiaphas' palace in company with John on the night of His betrayal, when the others forsook Him and fled. In the passage before us he reveals his devotion to His Master by desiring to follow Him wherever He went. He expresses the same adherence by declaring "That he would lay down his life for Christ's sake." Yet when the test came Peter failed. He denied His Master thrice even with profane oaths. He did it from fear of man and from dread of death, though the Jewish priests could not have put him to death if he had confessed his Master, and did not harm John, who boldly stood by Him. Peter's faith in Jesus did not utterly fail, for the Master prayed for him. But his trust in Christ became very weak and inoperative. He put himself too in unfavorable circumstances for its exercise. He yielded to fear and to Satan's temptation in seating himself among Christ's enemies when he entered the palace. Had he like John placed himself beside the Master his faith might have been invigorated and denial might have been avoided. But the human heart is weak and Jesus, knowing all things, predicted Peter's fall.

Pray for Him.

A friendly observer of the meeting of one of our strongest Synods listened carefully for any reference to the President and to the League of Nations. He heard many brethren lead in prayer, but he heard no petition for the man whose burdens have been heaviest and whose health has broken under the strain. The purpose of the present note is to suggest that no public or private devotion should pass without such remembrance of our President and of the spiritual needs of the world which seem to many of us to depend so largely upon him. This note is written in the spirit of love and in the assurance that the brethren who remembered the various causes committed to the church are in the habit of remembering their President in their prayers in the home church.

The man who has never had to strive for his belief in God and immortality has been spared a terrible ordeal. Having never ceased in this respect to be a little child, he has never known the grown man's struggle to become again a little child. But the character of the man who has made the struggle and has achieved childlikeness is the noblest thing in God's creation.—George Wharton Pepper.

Devotional

WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS.

There come times when our reasons for thanksgiving seem all to fade away—if we look only at the things that are seen. We have heard men say, "I do not see what that man has to be thankful for." Of course not. No one could see any reasons why "that man" should be thankful, for they were not seeable reasons; yet they were wonderfully substantial reasons, reasons which remained when all apparent reasons had disappeared. Bountiful and beautiful are the blessings which most of us enjoy in so rich a land, and we may well offer praise for the abundant fruits of field and forest, for the peace and plenty in the midst of which we live, for the liberty and love which to so large a degree characterize our civilization; but if any or all of these should fail, we can still look upward into the loving face of Him who provides them all and say with Whittier:

"And I trust that he who heeds
The life that hides in mead and wold,
Who hangs yon alder's crimson beads,
And stains these mosses green and gold,
Will still, as he hath done, incline
His gracious care to me and mine."

—Selected.

GRATITUDE.

Gratitude to our loving heavenly Father ought to be a whole-souled business—and in "everything we ought to give thanks." Instead of doing it on set occasions, like "thanksgiving days" or Sabbaths, we should make the altar of our hearts smoke with perpetual incense of praise. Instead of thanking Him for occasional feasts, we should thank Him for daily bread. We are ready enough to thank Him for providential escapes from great dangers or severe sickness, but forget to thank Him for health and safety all the rest of the time. God will not accept the simple gratitude of our lips; He demands the gratitude of our lives. Thanksgiving is good; thanks-living is best of all. Jesus Christ gave you and me Himself, to save us. Let us give our whole souls, and time, and substance, and influence, to His service. Then we shall not be ashamed to sing Hallelujahs in Heaven.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

PRAYER FOR THANKSGIVING.

(Phil. 4:6.)

"When a boy," said a prominent member of a church, "I was much helped by Bishop Homline, who visited a house where I was. Taking me aside, the bishop said, 'When in trouble, my boy, kneel down and ask God's help; but never climb over the fence into the devil's ground, and then kneel down and ask help. Pray from God's side of the fence.' That," said he, "I have thought every day of my life since." Continuing, he remarked: "Sanford Cobb, the missionary to Persia, helped me in another way. Said he: 'Do you ever feel thankful when God blesses you?' 'Always.' 'Did you ever tell Him so?' 'Well, I don't know that I have.' 'Well, try it, my young friend; try it, try it. Tell Him so; tell Him aloud; tell Him so that you will hear it yourself.' That was a good revelation. I found that I had only been glad, not grateful. I have been telling Him with grateful feelings ever since, to my soul's help and comfort."—Ex.

The words and laws of Christ, which do not change, and cannot fail, must not be left in the dead print of closed and dusty Bibles or in the sermons of preachers, or the hymns of choirs and congregations. They must be faced and accepted and worked out into the warp and woof of daily life by every one of us who bears Christ's name.—Bishop Rhineland.

COUNTING OUR MERCIES.

It is unfortunate that we become so accustomed to our mercies as not to know that we have them. We do not hear the clock on the mantle tick, but we feel it when it stops ticking. In the same way we never quite become acquainted with our blessings till they are on the edge of going out of sight. We have enough to make us all happy and thankful if we will be quite long enough to take an affectionate inventory of our commonplace mercies, and let our hearts feel of them and mix themselves with them till we become saturated with their comfort and waken into a loving sense of the patient goodness of their giver.—Herald and Presbyter.

IT TAKES SO LITTLE.

It takes so little to make us glad,
Just a cheering clasp of a friendly hand,
Just a word from one who can understand;
And we finish the task we long had planned,
And we lose the doubt, the fear we had—
So little it takes to make us glad.
—Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., in the Gas Attack, a trench Magazine.

"FUST-RATE AND VERY THANKFUL."

Our country town still holds the fame
Of Grandma C., a sturdy dame,
Whose doughty deeds in house and field
And church her energy revealed,
And whose undaunted spirit shone
Through phrase and manner all her own—
"Fust-rate and very thankful."

Of all the echoes from her days
Most clearly rings that homely phrase
(It seems a text and sermon, too).
When she was hailed with "How d'ye do?"
From friends and neighbors passing by,
Unfailing was her quaint reply,
"Fust-rate and very thankful."

No doleful tales had she to tell,
No martyr's murmur, "pretty well!"
Not she. Her happy chronic state
With unction she announced, "Fust-rate!"
And with an emphasis as glad,
Her grateful word would always add,
"Fust-rate and very thankful."

As light survives the set of sun
Her bright and cheery words live on,
A happy influence that spurs
Our hearts to utterances like hers;
And when friends greet us day by day,
Like her, we, blithe and grateful, say,
"Fust-rate and very thankful."

—Selected.

You will notice that in the placid waters of a lake everything which is highest in reality is lowest in the reflection. The higher the trees, the lower their image. That is the picture of this world; what is highest in this world is lowest in the other, and what is highest in that world is lowest in this. Gold is on top here; they pave the streets with it there. To serve is looked upon as ignoble here; there those that serve rein, and the last are first. Any girl is willing to fling away paste diamonds for the real stones; when a man understands what God can be to the soul he loses his taste for things he used to care for most.—F. B. Meyer.

The month of November is one of the months assigned, under the General Assembly's plan of Systematic Beneficence, to the cause of Home Missions. The treasurer of this cause is A. N. Sharp, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.

We will gladly give space to the able discussions of the Prayer Meeting Topics, if our readers find them useful.

Those who have been using them will please drop us a postal card.

Rev. J. C. Painter.

We, as members of the Home Mission Committee of West Hanover Presbytery, realizing the deep loss that we have sustained in the death of our old friend and associate of many years, Rev. J. C. Painter, deem it fitting that we express in words somewhat of the feeling that we have toward our old associate.

Mr. Painter was one of whom it may truly be said "that none knew him but to love him, and none named him but to praise."

His great humanity, his love of God and man, his unflinching courtesy, strong common sense, and his tactfulness in dealing with knotty problems that have come before our committee, endeared him to us in an unusual degree. We loved him, honored him, and obeyed him, for we had such confidence in his judgment that it was a pleasure to agree with him, and when in rare cases we had a disagreeable duty to perform, he it was that we selected to do it. He did what was assigned to him with tact, courtesy, and a firmness that left no uncertainty as to his meaning.

We shall miss him for a time, with the certainty that we will join him in the great company of the redeemed "in that better country, even an heavenly"

Our Orphanages.

The friends of the fatherless, everywhere, are earnestly requested to remember the orphans in connection with the approaching Thanksgiving season. The many homes, established for such children, are doing a most helpful work in their behalf. They are providing shelter, clothing, food, education and training for a large company of dependent children. All such homes are now asking for liberal gifts from all interested in behalf of the needy children of our own land. It is felt that it is not asking too much that each one shall give to this worthy cause the equivalent of one day's salary. Some may feel disposed to do even more.

This is written to earnestly urge that all our people will cheerfully accede to this reasonable request, and that they will send their one day's earnings to the Orphanage of their Church or choice, through their local church. The Orphanages all need that a generous response be given this appeal.

In writing thus in behalf of the cause generally, I would especially request that the Presbyterians of the Synod of North Carolina will do liberal things for our Orphanage at Barium Springs, N. C.

Most cordially yours,
W. T. Walker, Supt. and Treas.

We must ask the kind indulgence of our readers in the use of newspaper for this issue. It is no fault of our own. NORTH CAROLINA.

Patterson Church—This church has been greatly blessed by a series of special services held by Rev. R. O. Lucke, pastor of Bayless Memorial Church, Concord. The services lasted two weeks, beginning Sunday, November 2, and closing on Sunday night, November 16. Mr. Lucke preached pure Gospel sermons in a forceful, "straight-from-the-shoulder" manner, which cannot fail to be productive of great and lasting good. It is not yet known how many will unite with the church as a result of the services. B. B.

The Presbyterian Ministers' Association of Charlotte, Mecklenburg county, most respectfully and earnestly requests the Assembly's Stewardship Campaign Com. to go very slowly in participating in the Interchurch World Movement, until the movement be clearly defined, not to appropriate five per cent of the projected $4,000,000 to be raised for benevolences to it, and seriously to consider complete withdrawal from the movement.

Steele Creek—The children's ingathering of cotton service will be held at Steele Creek Church, Friday, November 28, at 1 p. m. sharp. A basket dinner will be served on the grounds at 12 o'clock. The visiting ministers who will have a part in the service will be Dr. A. S. Johnson, Dr. J. R. Bridges and Rev. John E. Wool. The public is cordially invited to attend the services.

Winston-Salem—A Teacher Training Class of more than 50 members is being conducted in the First Church by the pastor, Dr. D. Clay Lilly on each Tuesday evening.

Forty-seven members have been received recently. At a congregational meeting Sunday, November 16, while Dr. Lilly was away preaching in the interest of the "Million Dollar Campaign for Christian Education," the pastor's salary was increased from $3,600 to $5,000 per year.

Jones' Schoolhouse, Johnson County—At this point an afternoon Sunday School has been maintained for several years by a few members of Selma and Smithfield churches and a monthly preaching point by the pastor. A week's meeting has just been closed in which there was splendid attendance and a good deal of interest. The preaching was done by the pastor, Rev. J. J. Murray. Ten members were received into the Presbyterian Church, and there are a few more to come in soon. Of those received three were heads of families and three were mothers.

Dundarrach—Rev. A. W. Crawford, Superintendent Synodical Home Missions in North Carolina, assisted the pastor, Rev. Eugene Alexander, in revival services November 9 to 16. The services were preceded by daily cottage prayer meetings during the previous week, conducted by the women of the congregation and community. The attendance was good throughout the week. The Dundarrach school attended in a body each morning service. Brother Crawford presented the Gospel truths in his own particularly clear, forceful and impressive way and won his hearers.

The visible results of the meetings were three professions of faith in Christ, which were received into the church, together with two who came by letter. The offering for Synodical Home Missions taken on Sunday amounted to $78. However, the results of the services cannot be measured by the number of professions. The people were revived and look forward to a greater and better service. Cor.

To the Pastors, Sessions and Sunday School Superintendents in the Synod of North Carolina—Dear Brethren: As another Thanksgiving season approaches, I write to ask that you will not forget the Orphanage cause. Please encourage all the members of your church and Sunday school to contribute liberally to this object. One days' income is asked for our fatherless children. It is a reasonable request, and would give a mighty impetus to our work if every one, regardless of the amount of daily earnings, would contribute such sum. Others may be disposed to do more. Let all be encouraged to do a liberal share. Please make it convenient to present this matter to your churches and Sunday schools, on or about Thanksgiving day. Many may not be present at the services on that day. Please endeavor to secure their gifts around this season. The offering made at this time regularly means much to our cause; it is the great effort made in our behalf for the year.

We shall hope for liberal things from your people toward the maintenance of our family of 230 children and 30 workers.

Fraternally yours,
W. T. Walker, Supt.

Charlotte—Knox Church—This church has been greatly favored by an eight days' meeting, conducted by Dr. E. E. Gillespie, of York, S. C. There's a ring of genuineness about the man and his sermons—sound, earnest and forceful as they are—that is most stimulating. The church and its friends greatly enjoyed the daily services and are feeling spiritually refreshed and edified. A large number signed reconsecration cards, and 16 young people from the Sunday School were received on confession of faith. The congregation was further encouraged by the announcement Sunday that the $10,000 worth of building and loan stock assumed six years ago had been paid in full and a mortgage for that amount cancelled the past week, and that the total membership of 130 at that time had now slightly more than trebled. The deacons announced that another large note had also been retired the past week, that three-fourths of the $21,300 debt had now been paid, and that a determined effort would be made to collect the subscriptions covering the remainder by the middle of December.

Concord—Second Church—The ordination and installation of two elders, Messrs. A. M. Turner and Grover Creech, took place at the morning service, November 2.

Mr. Brownlee, of Louisville, Ky., presented the cause of the Million Dollar Campaign most impressively and convincingly at the morning service, Sunday, November 16.

The pastor and his family were most generously "pounded" on Monday night, November 10. This congregation, besides ministering most abundantly to their pastor in material things, are wholeheartedly and unitedly endeavoring to co-operate with him in the more important realm of spiritual things.

The Virginia Preston Missionary Society observed the week of self-denial "according to schedule." The offering was most generous. This society has long been aware of the truth that "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Tarboro—The Tarboro paper in giving an account of the four years' work of Rev. R. A. Lapsley, Jr., pastor of the Presbyterian Church, presents some striking evidences that aggressive work is being done by the Tarboro Church.

During the four years there have been received into the Presbyterian Church and at the mission points identified with it 290 persons, 209 upon profession of faith, and 81 by letter. Four years ago the resident membership of the Howard Memorial Church was 151; now it is 279, a gain of 128. Four years ago the membership of the Leggetts' Church was 43; now it is 101, a gain of 58. The combined membership of the two churches is now 380, double what it was four years ago.

During these four years the debt that rested on the manse and on the organ of the Howard Memorial Church has been entirely wiped out. The church is entirely free from debt with the exception of what will be needed to complete the Sunday school building. This building will be ready for occupancy by the first of the year. It has a splendid Sunday school auditorium; four large rooms for the Men's Bible class, the Ladies' Bible class, the Beginners' department, and the Primary department; and 12 smaller class rooms for other classes. It has a ladies' parlor, a social room, a large dining room and kitchen. It has a basement that will be used as a gymnasium.

The Duplex envelope system is used, and practically every member of the church contributes to the support of the local church, and to benevolent work outside. All of our bills are promptly paid, and all of our benevolent apportionments are met in full.

During the four years, Pinetops, which started as a mission of the Tarboro Church, has become self-supporting. It has a resident pastor and has almost completed a new $4,500 manse. Nahala, another mission of the Tarboro Church, has been made into a separate field, with resident pastor, for whom a manse is being built. Two new mission points have been opened, with regular preaching and thriving Sunday schools. Through the generosity of one man, the church at Leggetts is to have a splendid new brick building, which will make it one of the most handsome and best equipped country churches in the state.

Fayetteville Presbytery met in adjourned session at Ralegh, October 29 and 30, during the sessions of Synod, with an attendance of 30 ministers and 15 ruling elders.

A commission, consisting of R. A. McLeod, W. E. Hill, L. Smith, with A. S. Anderson, alternate, and Elder E. H. Williamson, with C. G. Rose, alternate, was appointed to dissolve Longstreet Church, transfer the members to other churches, and transfer the property to the trustees of Fayetteville Presbytery.

A call from Pittsboro Church for one-half the time of Rev. R. M. Phillips was referred to the Home Mission Committee.

It was arranged to increase the salary of Rev. C. E. Clarke to $1,800, the increase to begin October 1, 1919.

Edwin S. Coates, of Spence Church, was received as a candidate for the ministry.

Presbytery gave its consent for Synod's committee to employ a field secretary of schools and colleges, provided he be not a minister of the Gospel.

The matter of contributing regularly to the support of the Montreat Normal School was docketed for future consideration.

Rev. J. A. McLean was dismissed to Concord Presbytery, and Rev. R. S. Arrowood to Mecklenburg Presbytery.

Two meetings were added to the evangelistic campaign as follows: Jackson Springs, Rev. O. G. Jones; Pinehurst, Rev. W. L. Wilson.

The letter to the ministers and sessions of Fayetteville Presbytery, prepared by the chairman of the committee of Church and Christian Education, was read and adopted, and turned over to Synod for use in its popular meeting on education.

It was ordered that a special order of the day on Colored Evangelization be observed at the next spring meeting. Committee, J. J. Murray, A. R. McQueen and E. F. Murray.

The vacancy in the Board of Trustees of Davidson College, created by the transfer of Rev. R. S. Arrowood, was referred to the nominating committee to report at the adjourned meeting in Fayetteville.

Adjourned to meet in the First Church, Fayetteville, at 12 m., December 2, 1919.

ALABAMA.

The Tuscaloosa First Church is rejoicing in the prospect of a series of meetings in which the noted Scotchman, Dr. John McNeill, will preach. The series begins on December 8.

Sheffield—The ladies of the Sheffield Presbyterian Church recently gave a reception to their pastor-elect and to his family to which was invited the pastors of the town and their families. There have been 16 additions to this church since the first of May. Cor.

Presbytery of North Alabama—Dr. H. M. Edmonds appeared before the Presbytery of North Alabama, during Synod, and applied for admission. A special committee, consisting of Revs. H. M. Moffett, Thornton Whaling, F. B. Webb and John McSparran, was appointed to confer with and examine Dr. Edmonds, and brought in the following report, which was unanimously adopted, viz:

"To the Presbytery of North Alabama your special committee reports that Rev. H. M. Edmonds, having been thoroughly examined as to his views on theology by the members of this committee, and his views, as expressed to the committee, being deemed by them to be in accord with the system of doctrine found in our Standards, it is hereby resolved, upon Dr. Edmonds making the same statement to Presbytery that he has made to this committee, that he be enrolled as a member of the Presbytery of North Alabama."

Dr. Edmonds then made a brief statement, saying that he received the Standards of this Church as containing the system of doctrine taught in the Holy Scriptures, that he regretted the separation and rejoiced in the reunion. The moderator then welcomed him, in the name of the Presbytery, and while "Blest be the tie that Binds" was being sung, the members of Presbytery extended him the right hand of fellowship. Then Dr. George Lang led Presbytery in prayer.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Rock Hill—With a farewell service at night, November 17, the exercises in connection with the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the First Presbyterian Church came to an end. It was a great day for Presbyterianism in Rock Hill. The congregations of the First, Oakland Avenue and Ebenezer Presbyterian churches joined for the services both morning and evening and the church and Sunday school rooms were crowded to accommodate those desiring to attend.

Dr. Alexander Sprunt, of Charleston, preached the final sermon Sunday night, a forceful and inspiring message. Dr. Alexander Martin spoke a farewell message to the visitors and appropriate responses were made by the visiting pastors. The officers of the three churches were called to the front and all stood while the congregation sang "Blest Be the Tie."

At the morning hour Dr. W. M. Anderson, of Dallas, Tex., preached a stirring sermon, stressing the necessity for the church laying more emphasis upon evangelism. He spoke of the duty of the church mem-

Conducted by Mrs. Jno. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Report of President of Wilmington Presbyterial to Synodical Auxiliary of North Carolina—Wilmington Presbyterial sends greeting and a report that will gladden your hearts.

In spite of the many interruptions, last year was one of the best in our history of 31 years. Ten of our 41 auxiliaries reached standard of excellence and 15 went on Jack's honor roll. Every church that went on Survey honor roll last year doubled, in some instances trebled, gifts of previous years. This shows the great need of information. Truly the Survey drive is the first round of the ladder. Our mission study classes have also proved a great source of information and inspiration.

Our 41 auxiliaries reported a membership of 1,137; total gifts for the year $10,364. This is an increase in membership of 171, or 17 per cent, and an increase in gifts of nearly $4,000, or 64 per cent. We use the "efficiency card" with 10 points, giving a banner to the auxiliary reaching the highest standard of efficiency. This has proven a great stimulus in our work.

We completed a $1,500 scholarship for Grove Institute this year, raising the whole amount in three years. We adopted the plan this year of holding group conferences on our Day of Prayer. These consist of eight groups with a chairman for each group. Prayer, Bible study and educational talks to be especially emphasized at these meetings. We also adopters in their personal work of bringing souls in contact with God's work, of the duty of the pastor in preaching evangelistic sermons and of the duty of the church as a whole in providing adequate facilities for the house of worship and the Sunday school department. The congregation of the First Church is contemplating the erection of a commodious Sunday school building, and the sermon was directed to the end that interest in the project might be quickened. Something over $12,000 was subscribed for the building fund at the close of the sermon.

The First Presbyterian Church was organized on November 13, 1869. There have been 1,827 members admitted during the half century of its existence, the Oakland Avenue Church has been organized from the membership and the church roll now contains 570 names. Rev. W. B. Jennings, Rev. James S. White, Rev. W. M. Anderson, Rev. Alexander Sprunt, Rev. W. L. Lingle, Rev. Alexander Martin, and Rev. F. W. Gregg have served as pastors. Messrs. Anderson, Sprunt and Martin were in attendance upon the celebration. Dr. Gregg is the present pastor. Dr. Lingle was unable to be present. The others have passed away.

Columbia—The series of addresses delivered by Dr. W. M. Anderson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Dallas, Tex., at the Columbia Seminary, was concluded Wednesday morning. Dr. Anderson is one of the great preachers of the South, and his addresses here stirred and thrilled those who heard him. He was heard by numbers of people not connected with the seminary. His keen humor and his fine experience as a minister made his address full of human appeal and interest.

Transylvania Presbytery—At a called meeting of Transylvania Presbytery, in Danville, Ky., the pastoral relation between Rev. A. G. Vance, D.D., of the First Church, Nashville.

Our young people's work is growing in efficiency and uniformity. We have 26 auxiliaries with 454 members, and $715 reported this year.

(We hope this fine report sent by the president of Wilmington Presbyterial Auxiliary will remind the presidents of the other North Carolina Presbyterials to send in their reports. At the recent meeting of the Synodical Auxiliary the editor of the Woman's Column was requested to publish these reports, and we will gladly do so.)

The Meeting of the North Carolina Synodical Auxiliary From the Viewpoint of Its Hostess Church—

Even the seasoned member of a local auxiliary may fail to have the right perspective, and with a stay-at-home's contracted vision, may fondly fancy her society to be the Alpha and Omega of what is done in the sphere of woman's work in the Church.

This crops out in her narrative report when she goes to Presbyterial for the first time, as she details conditions, experiences and achievements, as though her society back home was pioneer in unexplored territory. And even a Presbyterial may fail to see that other Presbyterials are meeting the same problems, promoting the same work that engages its mind and soul.

How good and salutary it is, therefore, that both local auxiliary member and Presbyterial representative may have given to them the larger vision of scope, effort and development, in a meeting of the Synodical Auxiliary. Then do we realize that our own home band, however prosperous, is but an integral part of a larger co-operative body which is itself only one of a group forming a still larger co-operative body—all carrying forward the same phases of work for our Master. And as we conclude, under the Synodical's stimulus, that in union there is power, we are drawn into the conviction that in union there is responsibility: hence we must be up and doing to measure up to the standard.

This is perhaps the most profitable effect upon us, of Durham's First Presbyterian Church, so favored as to have been hostess to the Synodical of North Carolina in its recent meeting, November 4-5. As boats in shallow water feel the rising tide floating them free and far, so we of the local auxiliary feel ourselves, as never before, to be a part of a big operative movement that is bearing us up and on.

Intercourse with the very cream of North Carolina's Presbyterian womanhood in our homes, in the social, devotional and business hours, and the instructive, up-building messages brought by the evening speakers, are other rich benefits received and appreciated by us. No, I would not lose sight of one of the best by-products of the meeting: the quickened sense of fellowship that came with the harmonious committee work of the local auxiliary in preparation for the Synodical. So I testify that we are the fortunate ones, the blest and grateful ones, as I look back upon this most successful gathering. Durham Auxiliary Member.

Wanted—A Christmas Present—Stillman Institute, our training school for colored preachers at Tuscaloosa, has taken a great step forward during the past year in the way of better equipment, larger dormitory and increased attendance. While we all rejoice in this, there is another great need at this time which we hope the Church will supply at once.

We all know what part music plays in the life of the colored race. Stillman Institute students are no exception, they love music and sing well. Recently they were asked to give a musical evening at the State University at Tuscaloosa, and did so acceptably.

Story and Incident

When Caroline Was Kind.

By Sally Campbell, in The Continent.

CAROLINE MONTGOMERY walked the city streets sedately, as became a woman of business. "But within me," she exulted, "I am as skippy as a lamb! Two more days and a piece of a day and I leave all this vast wilderness" with a slighting glance at Greater New York, "and go to a place where the earth is really inhabited! There'll be neighbors glad to see me, and relations, and the nicest little mother in the whole wide world, and," Caroline's eyes glowed, "Dick."

Caroline had always gloried in her brother Dick. He was so big and strong and handsome, so royally receptive of life's pleasant things. Then came the accident which left him hovering on the outward margin of existence for long, terrible weeks. In the end he was set to face a future probably as long as that of other men. "He was alive!" Caroline told herself this Monday morning before Thanksgiving Day. "When we knew he wouldn't die I felt that I must never be unthankful again. He said he was no longer a 100 per cent American; he had a shriveled hand and a bad eye and a limp, all from an ordinary accident—there wasn't any blue ribbon or gold star about it. But I knew I was thankful, even before I said how brave he would be. Dear Dick, how brave he is! How could this help being our biggest Thanksgiving Day, when my darling brother, the delight and pride of me, is so fine?"

Caroline lunched at her boarding house. Today, meeting her landlady in the hall, something in her capable aspect caught her attention. "Have you had news?" she asked. "Has your son written?"

"Yes, this noon. He's coming!" Even Mrs. Welsh's voice was different. "He has forty-eight hours' leave; he will be here over Thursday."

"How nice! I am so glad! I hope every boarder is going away."

"I never knew a year like it," the new voice of Mrs. Welsh answered in confidence. "I do believe they are all going but little Miss Barnard. She hasn't any folks near by, I guess. But she's a very quiet young-lady; she doesn't count like most boarders."

"Yes, she counts," contradicted Caroline with displeasure. "She ought to go. Miss Barnard should have consideration enough to have folks."

"She'd like it, most likely," said Mrs. Welsh. "She is quiet. Harry and I won't see much of her."

Miss Barnard was quiet; there could be no doubt of that. "And so industrious," mourned Caroline, starting upstairs. "Why can't she take a holiday? Harry may have to go to France soon. But I suppose she would think the universe was toppling if she stopped work for a minute." Caroline had reached Miss Barnard's room. She glanced in upon a girl sitting with folded hands. "Idle. Absolutely idle. She looks lonesome," meditated Caroline.

Afterward, in her room, she took off her hat again at the bureau and looked severely into the looking glass. "Did you tell me that you had the real Thanksgiving spirit? Did you say that you meant to keep the day better than ever before? Allow me to point out certain truths to you: Good wishes and kind deeds located in—well, in Long Island or New Jersey—are quite easy; they are also quite worthless. If you will invite little Miss Barnard to go home with you great handicap. The institute has no musical instrument whatever except a wheezy little organ which is not worthy of the name. They should have a good piano, and should have it at once.

This would enable the glee club or double quartet to practice really worthwhile music, and prepare themselves to give pleasant entertainments and do credit on Wednesday you may consider yourself a benevolent person. If you won't, don't twaddle about pity for her and Mrs. Welsh and Harry. Mother revels in cuddling the homesick. Dick likes company. (I had half a mind to take pretty Lilian Giles with me.) To be sure, we are not a statistical family, but if Miss Barnard doesn't count mother and Dick a privilege she knows mighty little about figuring, after all. And it would be life from the dead for Harry's forty-eight hours' leave!"

Before the dinner bell rang the invitation had been given and accepted.

On Wednesday afternoon, when Caroline and Miss Barnard were leaving, Mrs. Welsh laid her fingers, work-worn and tenacious in the struggle for livelihood, gently on Caroline's arm, and said, "The day you came you told me you wanted a job because your mother couldn't make the farm pay. Tell her that if she didn't know how to farm she knew how to bring up a fine girl."

Caroline was out on the street before she got her breath again. "Why, it was a speech!" she said. "But did I talk to Mrs. Welsh the first day about the family? Plainly I was from the country. In the country we care for one another's autobiographies."

"I like the country," said Miss Barnard.

Caroline shot an appraising glance at her calm little profile, in doubt whether the remark were "heartfelt or conversational."

Later on, settled in the train, Caroline talked of her mother and Dick. Miss Barnard listened well.

"The doctors said," said Caroline, "that everything depended on the patient's pluck and sanity. Afterward they said they never saw such a quick recovery as Dick's or such persistence in accomplishing things that seemed impossible. They brag of him, almost," laughing, "as I do."

On the platform, was Dick, and from the expression in his eyes, Caroline knew that to bring Lilian Giles would have been a mistake. "Dick is relieved! Dick was afraid of the girl guest! I could hug Miss Barnard for being such a little wren of a thing!"

Along the way Dick stopped to take in a long-legged boy with very red hair and very blue eyes. "We'll give you a lift Jack," he offered. "Where are you going?"

"To Tobe's."

"Good! I didn't know Tobe was here."

At the crossroads Jack slid over the wheel, scrutinized swiftly the back seat, grinned at Dick, and fell to the rear.

"What do you think of him, Miss Barnard?" questioned Dick.

"He looks as if he might be rather overemphasized."

Dick laughed outright. "Yes a high explosive. You haven't heard him talk. You ought to hear Jack talk!"

"But, Dick," protested Caroline, "you said, 'Good! How could you? With Jack and Tobe together nobody is safe.'"

"My dear girl, this neighborhood has been moving. We have a committee of citizens to uplift us, and Jack is a leading member."

Caroline was dumb.

"Probably already he is telling Tobe (picturesquely) that any fellow who comes here on probation expecting to give trouble is making many kinds of a mistake. He'd better settle down before he starts anything, and, on that understanding, Jack will see that he gets instruction in the canning industry. Jack's taste for law and order is wholly

Deaths.

Wells—Levi. S. Wells, a highly respected and faithful officer of Rockfish Presbyterian Church, died at his home, near Teacheys, N. C., October 16, 1919. He is survived by a wife, four sons and three daughters. He was a good citizen, a kind father, a devoted husband, and a Christian gentleman.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Miss Octavia McKinnon.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom removed from our midst our beloved sister and co-worker, Miss Octavia McKinnon who was a faithful and devoted member of our Ladies' Aid Society.

Therefore be it resolved: First, that while we miss her kind greeting and gentle, cheerful manner, we bow in humble submission to the will of Him, who doeth all things well.

Second, that we commend to all the members of our society and church, which she loved so well, her life of marked devotion and self-sacrifice to the cause of Christ, and that we will endeavor to follow her example of faithful, conscientious service and seek to catch inspiration from her life.

Third, that we extend to the bereaved relatives our sincere sympathy.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be placed on the minutes of our society; a copy be sent to the bereaved relatives and also one to the Presbyterian Standard and Dillon Herald for publication.

A WET THANKSGIVING.

"Do you think they will come, mamma?" asked the children for the hundredth time, turning from the long line of rainsoaked railroad track and forlorn corn fields outside to the pleasant scene within.

The mother smiled and said, "I don't know, dears. It may stop raining." In a few minutes she would be called upon to answer the very same question, but, knowing how anxious they were, she prepared to answer them patiently. She was a pretty, comfortable-looking young woman of about thirty-three, but today her face wore a troubled look when alone. She never enjoyed Thanksgiving Day because her anxiety over the dinner and the house. Today she said to herself that she did not care if it poured down all day, except that the children would be disappointed. Her husband's mother had always gathered the absent children about her on Thanksgiving Day and had requested her son, who inherited the old homestead to always keep up the custom. So each year from the city came two brothers and two sisters with their families to celebrate the day in the old home. To the grown people it was a day of pleasant memories, but to their growing sons and daughters, a day of discontent. These young people never lost an opportunity, when their parents were not watching, to make fun of everything about the house, including its occupants, whom they characterized as "behind the times."

"I don't believe they can come today," thought Mrs. Pearce, taking a critical look at the gray sky. "It has been raining so long and the papers are full of washouts and disasters, so I really don't think they will venture. It would be such a relief not to have those impudent young people for just once that I would not know how to act. I don't care if all the stuff I prepare will be wasted," and she turned to put more wood in the stove.

"Well, Bessie," said Mr. Pearce, shedding his dripping coat on the porch, "it looks as if we would have no guests today."

"The turkey and chickens are cooking, anyway. The hack may drive in at any minute."

"Oh, papa," cried three disappointed little people, "won't they come?"

"I'm afraid not, chicks," said Mr. Pearce, taking little Ruth on his lap. "There, dear, don't cry. Some other day they will all come. Just think how much you, and the boys, and mamma, and I will have to eat to get rid of the great big dinner. The pudding is nearly as big as you and hear it jump in the kettle. I'm sorry I ate any breakfast."

"Mamma will have to do like they did in my story book with King Arthur's pudding," said Joe.

"How did they do?" inquired papa.

"What they could not eat that night, the queen next morning fried," quoted Joe.

As the turkey and its companions steadily browned in the oven and the pudding jumped in the kettle, the rain fell.

"I'll just peel a few potatoes and sweet potatoes, for with all the meat and things that are baked there will be enough wasted," said Mrs. Pearce. "It is too late to think of company now and I will have dinner in an hour."

"Let's look once more to see if the hack is coming, and then play games till dinner time," proposed Harold.

"All right," cried the others, racing to the windows. "Papa, mamma, come here!" they screamed. "A train is stopping right down by the bridge."

Mr. and Mrs. Pearce looked, and, sure enough, a passenger train was standing with the engine in a stream of water that overflowed the track.

"What do you think has happened?" asked Mrs. Pearce, as the men from the train got out to look around.

"Maybe they think the bridge is not safe," said Mr. Pearce. "I'll just walk down and see."

Mrs. Pearce had just put the potatoes on the stove when her husband came in and said, "It looks as if those people would have a dreary time of it. The engineer attempted to run through the water, but it reached the firebox and now they can neither back out nor go forward. They'll have to wait till a train comes up from behind and pulls them out or the water subsides."

"I should think a train might come dashing up from behind and run into them," said Mrs. Pearce.

"No danger of that. All trains are running slowly on account of the large number of little bridges through here. The conductor thinks some of the bridges he crossed this morning will be washed out before night if the rain keeps up. There is a little baby on the train, too. I promised it's mother to take it some milk in a short time."

"How will she heat it?" asked practical Mrs. Pearce.

"I'm sure I don't know. Perhaps you had better warm it before I start."

"Please bring the baby home with you," begged Ruth.

"Are there any boys on the train?" asked Joe.

"How many people are there? Why couldn't we have them all up here for dinner?" asked Mrs. Pearce.

"The very thing. It will brighten the day for the children and all your good food will not be wasted. There are not more than twenty, including the train crew."

Mr. Pearce with an armful of wraps and several umbrellas hastened down the track, while his wife attacked a huge pan of potatoes. Very soon the children were dancing before the windows, watching the little procession, and Mrs. Pearce had to leave her work and come, too.

First came a big man in uniform, carrying what seemed to be a bundle of wraps, while another man carefully shielded him with a big umbrella. Right behind came a slender little woman and a young girl picking their way across the brown ties.

"That man's got the baby," screamed Ruth.

"And that's the baby's mamma behind," said Joe.

"There comes papa with three boys. Goody, goody!" exclaimed Harold.

Mrs. Pearce hastily counted, "Four train men, four ladies, three boys, five gentlemen and the baby. Seventeen besides our own family. No, there are two more people getting off. Still that's not as many as if our folks had come. Hurry, children, pick up your playthings. They will soon be here."

Such a jolly set of people. Instead of growling at the rain they were thankful to be rescued from the dismal train and were as hungry as wolves. In five minutes one young lady took charge of the sweet potatoes, while her brother helped Mrs. Pearce, and the kitchen overflowed with assistants. A pretty young lady with the help of a big traveling man was setting the long table in the dining room. The children, after each had held the baby a few minutes, took their little guests into the sitting room while the baby's mother rocked him to sleep upstairs.

"Let me make the coffee," begged the brakeman. "I have done nothing but grate chocolate and I can make first-rate coffee. Try me."

"This is my regular occupation," said the fireman, replenishing the stove. "If the water runs into this fire-box before dinner there'll be trouble."

It was the merriest company of Thanksgiving guests that the old dining room had seen for many years. Mrs. Pearce beamed with delight at the many compliments to her cooking, for, from the way the food disappeared, she knew they were sincere.

"What a lucky day for me," sighed the brakeman. "For years I have eaten Thanksgiving dinner out of a pail and been thankful for it, but look at me now."

Everybody laughed, for a mountain of mashed potatoes traversed by streams of gravy reposed in the center of his plate, and was surrounded by tablelands of squash, sweet potato, cold meats and turnip, while dishes of salad, apple sauce and cabbage formed a wall outside.

"Sandwiches, pie and coffee have been my Thanksgiving dinner for years, too," said the conductor.

"I shall be spoiled for hotel dinners forever more," said the traveling man.

"When do you think the train will start?" asked one of the boys, anxiously.

"Not till I finish this pie and pudding," said the conductor, decidedly. "Are you in a hurry to go?"

"No," said the boy, with a sigh, "I just thought I'd ask Mrs. Pearce to save my pie for me. I can't eat another bite now, but if the train starts soon I'll put it in a piece of paper."

Late in the afternoon, in the midst of the delights of popcorn and hickory-nut taffy, the trainmen, who had been on the lookout, reported that a train was coming slowly down the track, and every one lamented.

"Maybe there is a bridge out between us and them," suggested a small boy, with his mouth full of popcorn.

"No such good luck," said a young man, stretching a shining rope of taffy from the traveling man's hands and deftly tossing it back again.

"Mrs. Pearce said the pudding is all gone, so I guess I can go now as well as any time," said another young man.

"Now, mamma, you won't have to fry any pudding for breakfast tomorrow, will you?" said Joe.

In spite of the dismay of the children, the big engine pulled the helpless one out of the water, the fires were started, and soon everything was in readiness to back to the nearest station, where a detour could be made around the flooded district. Taffy, popcorn, fruit and cake were hastily tied up for everybody, and when the train stopped right in front of the house to take on its load, there was much running back and forth for bundles. The big traveling man carried a handful of bitter sweet to remind him of the table decorations, and each young lady had a bunch of it pinned to her jacket. The men's pockets bulged with parcels and each boy had a jack-o-lantern that was a work of art. At least, the owners thought so. The baby was the only one in the party not burdened with something to remember the day by, but the doctor had a bottle of milk in his pocket for the infant.

"What a fine time we have had," said Mr. Pearce to his wife, as they ran back for the boy's taffy and nuts. "Those people had a splendid day in spite of their bad luck and we couldn't ask for more appreciative guests."

"It is the best Thanksgiving I ever had in this house," answered his wife.

As they all gathered around the train the doctor said, "Three cheers for the Pearce family, and the wettest and best Thanksgiving we ever had."

They were given with such good will that the baby was wakened and joined lustily.

"You must all come back next year," said Mr. and Mrs. Pearce, and nineteen voices replied, "We will."—Hilda Richmond.

THANKSGIVING CONUNDRUMS.

When is a boy like a turkey? When he's a gobbler.

What part of a turkey fits into a sentence? The 'vs.

Where are the turkey's bones after Thanksgiving? In the soup.

What part of the turkey does the farmer like? The crop.

What part goes with the army? The drumsticks.

What is the difference between a mound of hay and a barnyard gobbler? One is a hay cock, the other is a turkey cock.

How do you know a turkey is a wise bird? Because he never makes a goose of himself.

What is the disagreeable part of a Thanksgiving turkey? The bill.—The Christian Intelligencer.

It is beautifully significant of the real character of the religion that God enjoins, that its keynote is not lamentation and sighs, but thanksgiving and joy.—Bishop Warren.

When Caroline Was Kind.

acquired, but he loved seat-caning chairs from the first hour, as a duck loves water."

"Not Jack Henry!" cried Caroline.

"The same. He was working up the subject until all the boys have the fever. Tobe will get it."

"Who is the teacher?"

Dick looked at his one perfect hand.

Caroline patted him on the shoulder and pursued her interrogatory. "Who worked up Jack's taste for law and order?"

"The minister principally. All of us took shifts at it."

"The minister," repeated Caroline, "and Jack! Imagine the combination!"

"You needn't imagine it," said Dick. "You can see it working any day of the week, including Sundays."

"Does Jack ever go to church?"

"Always. He may yet be touring Africa as an industrial missionary."

"Instead of tramping America free," said Caroline, leaning forward for a better view of the roadside. "Where does Daddy Peters live?"

"Here."

"But the gate is on its hinges. And there's a wonderful woodpile."

"Yes," assented Dick. "To keep the baby safe. To keep the baby warm."

"Whose baby?"

"His. The baby," said Dick, "was Jack's idea. It was found wrapped up in a ragged coat in the postoffice. Jack stole him and left him on Daddy's doorstep, and hid himself to enjoy the joke. Daddy Peters investigated the baby and picked him up like an expert; the baby looked Daddy over, hooked one arm around his neck, and held tight. They went inside and shut the door. Jack could leave when he was ready."

"Poor little thing! I suppose the neighbors have given it food."

"Not much, they haven't. Daddy told me that every drop of the boy's milk he had paid for himself; the township couldn't put it over on him that he didn't support the child, for he did. It is true, coal is short, able-bodied workers are short. Daddy cuts and hauls brush and railroad ties and does odd jobbing at a lively rate. He enjoys it immensely, gets more dignified every day. And the baby is the light of his eyes."

A little farther on they met Daddy Peters and Andy, the baby. Andy's attention was riveted on a gay wooden toy which his small fat fingers could hardly encompass. "He's so took up with his present that Dick made for him," said Daddy, "that he ain't much company right now. This play automobile is some whittling, Dick."

"Is it really your handiwork, Dick?" asked Caroline.

"My own," he answered, proudly. "Not so bad for a beginner, eh?"

Caroline commended. But Miss Barnard kindled with interest. "It must be some of the new toy-making for France!" she cried. "I tried to go in New York to the exhibition. Andy, will you let me see it?"

"The minister's sister sailed last week," said Dick, "to teach the men overseas. She came here to rest a month first. She showed me a lot; said it didn't tire her. I was afraid I was a bit urgent, but the chance to learn to do things is tempting to such fellows as I."

Daddy Peters spoke promptly. "Such fellows as him," Daddy said, "are the hope of the land. When the good Lord wants to be kind to a place he'll maybe give it somebody like Dick here. That will set folks to thinking about himself oftentimes and Sundays, and then other times till it's natural. What's left of you, son, is worth heaps more than the whole of you ever was. Maybe," a whimsical smile breaking through his honest fervor, "it's something the same way with me."

"I was just saying," struck in Dick, "that you are getting younger every day; and richer."

"Talking about getting younger and richer," said Daddy, "Caroline, have you seen Miss Myra Downs?"

"No."

"Miss Myra was born poor and got poorer. She was afraid day and night of coming on the town, I never worried much myself." Daddy paused to wink prodigiously. "But Miss Myra worried; she was wrinkled before her time. But now, owing to Dick's lessons on the typewriter, she can earn money, and it's plumping out her cheeks and taking the edge off her disposition. Miss Myra is going to have company to dinner tomorrow. All right, Dick, you can move along. All right, Andy, we'll be traveling home."

As the hours of the short holiday went by Caroline was more and more pleased with her "wren" of a quest. "She doesn't bubble over and sputter like some of us. But she is enjoying every single thing. She likes mother and Dick, and they like her. She likes hunting nuts and walking over the fields; she likes her dinner; she liked the country sermon. I never heard any better in New York; maybe I'm partial. But I know there wasn't any better man preaching there to-day, and his goodness showed, Miss Barnard said. I could see she saw it. And she watched for Jack and Daddy Peters and Miss Myra Downs with all her might. Dick loves her interest. She is a grand success."

But when the last brisk walk had been taken toward the black fir trees against the sunset when supper was over, and a cozy circle made around a glowing fire in the deep hearth, Caroline was conscious of some elusive change in her guest. Miss Barnard gave her the feeling that she was listening, that she waited.

Suddenly the doorbell rang, "Some of the neighbors," said Mrs. Montgomery.

But it was not neighbors. One was a very resplendent personage in uniform; the other was an inconspicuous citizen.

Miss Barnard greeted them.

"We apologize," said the general, "for intruding business upon a holiday. But it is pressing. And it can be short, I hope. You have heard of the school for convalescent soldiers, in which Mr. Blanchard," glancing toward the inconspicuous owner of a highly conspicuous pocketbook, "has interested himself?"

Dick had heard.

The general looked to Mr. Blanchard to speak. He said, "We need teachers, experts. I am combing the country for them. Miss Bernard has suggested you, Mr. Montgomery."

"I came," continued Mr. Blanchard, "to see whether you would consider the matter."

Dick released a long breath of excitement. "It would be the best fun in the world! If I could do it." But his face clouding, "I don't suppose I could. Why, no! I am no expert."

"Miss Bernard says that you are."

"If Miss Bernard says you are an expert," supplemented the general, with a big, rumbling laugh, "you are."

The visit was short, according to promise. Dick, returning from the gate, kissed his mother. "Now," he said, a little unsteadily, "we can hire a farmer next year. We needn't sell."

"And our farmer can teach me to be a farmerette!" cried Caroline, joyfully. "I can tell New York goodbye! Oh, it's glorious!"

Presently Caroline went to search for Miss Barnard and found her in the hall looking out at the stars. "How can we ever thank you?" began Caroline, then stopped and hid her face in the sleeve of the other girl's sweater. "Dick has been fine and strong and good when it was awfully hard," she whispered. "This will satisfy him so! We can never thank you."

"How shall I thank you," answered Miss Barnard, "for bringing me with you and showing me what real and satisfying autobiographies are? I hope," the quiet voice hesitated, and then went evenly on, "I think I have started mine to-night."

By and by Caroline lifted her head and wiped her eyes and inquired joyfully, "Hasn't this been the thankfullest Thanksgiving Day? I hope Mrs. Welsh and Harry had a good time."

Miscellaneous

THE Y. M. C. A. IN A NEW SITUATION.

The Y. M. C. A. has been confronted by a new and important situation by the action of the War Department, which has issued an order discontinuing their work and that of all the other six welfare societies in the army, on November 1, within the continental limits of the United States. For three or four months they are permitted to carry on their work with troops in France, Germany, Siberia, the Panama Canal Zone, Hawaiian Islands, and Alaska. The Navy department is at present pursuing a more liberal policy toward this work. Some of these welfare societies will not severely feel this action of the War department, which plans to take over all the work into a military organization. To the Y. M. C. A., it will be more significant. This organization began its work with the soldiers in the Civil war, under the form of the Christian Commission. In its present form it began its work in the Spanish war. It has at great expense established work and erected buildings with most of the forces at home and abroad. In the opinion of some, the influence of the Knights of Columbus may have had something to do with this change of program. It looks like one of the Romish moves for control in connection with the national activities, and Protestants may well take notice that they may learn the facts. Whatever may be the reason for this action, the Y. M. C. A. will do well to define and affirm their own distinct character, and the Government should make some financial adjustment for the buildings which they must now abandon.—Presbyterian.

50 EGGS A DAY.

"Before using 'More Eggs' tonic, I was getting only 12 eggs a day and now get 50" writes Mrs. Myrtle Ice, of Boston, Ky.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. "More Eggs" is a scientific tonic that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens lay all the time. "More Eggs" will double the production of eggs. Poultry raisers everywhere are making big profits by giving their hens "More Eggs." The results of a few cents' worth will amaze you.

Send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and he will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs." A million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

A WONDERFUL INSTITUTION

Do you know that in the city of Greensboro is an institution that is doing a great work for those who are addicted to the use of Drink and Drugs? It also treats successfully neurasthenia and kindred diseases. Those in charge are men of a very high order, its president, Col. W. H. Osborn, being well known all over the State, consequently the influences around the institution are most healthy in every way.

If you have a friend, relative or loved one, that you are anxious about and want to see well again you can write freely to Mr. N. O. Smoak, Supt. Keely Institute, Box 18, Greensboro, N. C., with the full assurance that what you say will be held in strict confidence. All literature is sent in plain sealed envelopes.

STRANGE FLOWERS IN NO MAN'S LAND.

A strange phenomenon is to be seen at present on the battlefields of France. Flowers, not known within living memory, are breaking out in the scarred surface and in shell holes and dugouts. Botanists have become interested in the discovery of the plants which it is believed have sprung from seeds buried in the depths of the earth for decades past.—Ex.

Some Things You Should Know About Your Church

The Supply of Ministers and Missionaries

The greatest need of the Church today is a large-increase in the number of capable, efficient, consecrated Ministers and Missionaries.

An Urgent Need

In the home land we need at once 250 Ministers for vacant fields. Many of these fields have been neglected for years. They are gradually disintegrating and the Churches are slowly being dissolved.

Scores of men are needed as pastors' assistants, Sunday School and Home Mission, Synodical and Presbyterian Superintendents and for pioneer work among the negroes and foreigners.

Several hundred trained young women are needed as pastors' assistants or secretaries, as teachers and as Missionary workers.

On the foreign field we face a similar need. The Secretary of Foreign Missions writes: "We are in crying need for several fresh doctors, preachers and teachers to fill vacancies. Please send out this call with all your might."

A Need Growing More Intense

Up to the time of the war we were having a healthy increase in the number of Candidates. We have to repeat the sad record of the Committee in 1865 when this was written: "Nearly all our young men were called into the army, or were, from causes connected with the war, interrupted in their studies."

In 1916 and again in 1917 the Presbyteries reported 482 candidates on their rolls. In 1919 only 371 were so reported.

Eleven Presbyteries with 218 churches, 136 ministers, 708 elders, 727 deacons, 14,404 enrolled in Sunday Schools and 18,826 communicants, reported not one candidate for the ministry.

A Need Revealed by Comparison

For many years the proportion of our candidates to the membership has been an average each year of one candidate to 609 members. Today we have one candidate to each 981 members.

Between 1909 and 1919 there was an increase of 84,427 members and a decrease of 60 in the number of candidates.

Fifteen years ago we had one candidate to every 67,947 of the population of the Southern States. Today we have one candidate to each 100,033 of the population of the South.

A Need Demanding Time to Meet

These needs cannot be met at once. Trained workers are needed. At least 2,000 boys and girls should now be enrolled in the Church's Reserves, being thoroughly trained in school, college, training school and theological seminary to fill these places, to enter upon the advanced work now being planned, and to take the places of those being retired on account of sickness or old age, and of those who are dying.

A Need That Must Be Met

Dr. John R. Mott says: "In this time of world upheaval, and as we enter the period of reconstruction, it is clear to me that there is no work more important than that of insuring an able, well-educated leadership of the Christian forces."

Christ has given the only remedy for such a condition as this: "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the Harvest that He will thrust forth laborers into His harvest."

During December pastors and sessions are asked to keep this matter constantly before their people.

"The Presbyterian Progressive Program" cannot be carried out unless there is a larger enlistment of life in the Church's leadership.

Try This For Your Health

For diseases which do not readily yield to drug treatment, such as chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, uric acid poisoning, and diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and liver, the best physicians send their wealthy patients to the famous mineral springs. Some even spent months at the Spas of Europe and were almost invariably benefited, or permanently relieved.

I believe that the Shivar Spring is the greatest mineral spring ever discovered and I believe it so firmly that I offer to send you enough water for a three weeks' treatment (two five gallon demijohns) on my guarantee that if it fails to benefit your case I will refund the price. You would hardly believe me if I told you that only about two out of a hundred, on the average, say that they have received no benefit. The water is restoring thousands. It restored my health when my friends and physicians thought my case was incurable and I am willing and anxious for you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If I win you become a life-friend of the Spring. If I lose I will be sorry for you but I will appreciate your courtesy in giving the water a trial and will gladly refund your money on request. Sign the following letter: Shivar Spring,

Box 4-H, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

28 Idle Hens Now Lay 27 Eggs a Day

And This Was In Cold Winter Weather—Mrs. Davidson's Plan is Simple.

"I fed a 50-cent box of Don Sung to my flock of 28 hens that were not laying. But they are laying now. I receive as high as 27 eggs a day and never less than 22."—Mrs. Jennie Davidson, Yates Center, Kansas.

Mrs. Davidson wrote this letter in February. Figure her profit on two dozen eggs a day from hens that "wouldn't lay" during January and February. We'll make you the same offer we made her. Here it is:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 5 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 466 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

MENTAL ATTITUDE.

Whenever you go out of doors, draw the chin in, carry the crown of the head high, and fill the lungs to the utmost; drink in the sunshine; greet your friends with a smile, and put soul into every handclasp. Do not fear being misunderstood; and never waste a minute thinking about your enemies. Try to fix firmly in your mind what you would like to do; and then, as the days go gliding by, you will find yourself unconsciously seizing upon the opportunities that are required for the fulfillment of your desires, just as the coral insect takes from the running tide the elements it needs.

Picture in your mind the able, earnest, useful person you desire to be, and the thought you hold is hourly transforming you into that particular individual.—Christian Herald.

WHAT IS THE CLUB?

The Standard Piano Club is both a theory and a fact. The theory is that a piano manufacturer can afford to sell one hundred pianos at a lower factory price than he would be willing to make on an order for only one instrument. The fact is that the Club has saved each of its members nearly one dollar out of three, and everybody is therefore delighted.

The theory of the Club is "Co-operation." The fact is "Perfect satisfaction." The theory is "A square deal to every member." The fact is "Not a single case of dissatisfaction."

If you are interested in securing a piano or a self-player piano of the highest quality, by all means write for your copy of the Club's catalogue and the special prices and terms to Club members. Address the Managers, Ludden & Bates, Standard Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

D. L. Moody points to the fact that there is a great deal more said in the Bible about praise than about prayer.

BANISH CATARRH

Hyomei Will Relieve You or Nothing to Pay.

When you make up your mind to get rid of disgusting Catarrh, follow this advice:

Go to your druggist; ask him for a HYOMEI Outfit (pronounce it High-o-me). This outfit consists of a bottle of HYOMEI (liquid), a hard rubber pocket inhaler, a medicine dropper, and full instructions for use. Pour a few drops into the inhaler, and breathe it a few minutes each day, according to directions.

HYOMEI relieves Catarrh because it reaches every nook, corner, and crevice of the membrane of the nose, throat, and bronchial tubes. Stomach dosing, sprays, douches, and ointments don't kill the germs because they don't get where the germs are. As the publisher of this paper knows, if you are not satisfied with Hyomei in cases of Catarrh and colds of the head, Catarrhal Coughs, Bronchial Catarrh, Spasmodic Croup, Catarrhal Laryngitis or Hay Fever, your money will be cheerfully refunded. Refuse substitutes. If your druggist does not sell it, we will send you a complete outfit, charges prepaid, for $1.15. Address, Booth's HYOMEI CO., Ithaca, N. Y.

A WISE DOG.

There is a story of a French dog whose breakfast was forgotten, whereupon he ran out into the garden, and carried in a flower, which he deposited at his master's feet. It was a sprig of forget-me-not. The truth of this story is perhaps open to question, but a Florida correspondent whose veracity is undoubted, tells this story. Jack is a handsome Newfoundland dog. Every evening at nine o'clock he is taken to walk by his master who has an orange-wood walkingstick which he likes and usually carries.

Every evening on the stroke of nine Jack rushes to the hat-rack in the hall, noses about among the walkingsticks and umbrellas, until he finds the orange-wood stick and immediately afterward appears before his master with it in his teeth, wags his tail and prances delightedly about and shows as plainly as possible that he will be a broken-hearted dog if his friend and master omits the usual evening stroll.

One evening the family were in the

THE TEST OF TIME.

When an article is without merit public sentiment condemns it. It immediately dies a natural death. When an article has merit, it will be everlastingly in demand. Gray's Ointment has now been used for a full round century. No greater proof can be offered of its effectiveness. One hundred years of honest, good old-fashioned value for money received has made it a family word in every household. Effective for sores, boils, burns, cuts, bruises, stings, eczema and the many forms of skin eruption. Ask your druggist. If he can't supply you send his name to W. F. Jack danced gayly into the room with the orange-wood stick in his mouth.

"No, Jack," said his master, "we cannot go tonight. It is raining too hard. We should get wet. Just listen to it rain, Jack."

With that the host turned his attention once more to his quests, and presently they heard Jack pulling over the things in the hat rack. They supposed he was putting away the walking stick like the clever dog that he is.

A few moments later a beseeching little bark was heard. There in the sitting room door stood Jack.

He had an umbrella in his mouth. Everyone flew for the rubbers, water-proof and hat of the man of the house, and that gentlemen, bearing the umbrella so persuasively offered him, took Jack out to walk without further delay. —Youth's Companion.

WONDERFUL EGG PRODUCER.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3258 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar today. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

"The Ministry of the Word"

G. CAMPBELL MORGAN, D. D.

The James Sprunt Lectures Just Delivered at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.

The great English teacher and preacher first deals with the fundamental conception held concerning the two great factors in his title, and then proceeds to examine the Word and the especial expression given it in the respective ministries of the Prophet, Apostle, Evangelist, Preacher and Teacher. He then reviews the changed world conditions, the unchanged obligations of the messenger of God, the preparation for the ministry, and what constitutes the proper exercise of the vocation.

THE COMING CATASTROPHE.

Meanwhile the agitation goes on for more and more wages but less and less production. But there is only one way to get down the living cost alike of the Government and of the public. It is to stay on the job instead of striking. It is to work instead of idling. It is to increase production instead of decreasing production.

If the American people can not see this fundamental truth, and if they do not act on it, they are going to pitch themselves headlong over an economic precipice.—New York Sun.

Their Christmas Vision

"Their Christmas Vision"

This is the title of a program prepared by the Executive Committee for use in the churches and Sunday Schools of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

It is attractive in appearance. Interesting and instructive in material. Makes a strong appeal for the dedication of life to the service of Christ and His Church.

Its use will help carry out the Presbyterian Progressive Program.

It will be sent in sufficient quantities for use in any of the Presbyterian churches and Sunday Schools, free of cost.

Order now. Begin to prepare for the service, December 21, 1919—the day appointed by the General Assembly.

Order from the Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, Henry H. Sweets, Secretary, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

HOUSEKEEPING HINTS.

By darning stockings diagonally across the weave, instead of with it, the stitches will give as the stockings stretch and are not as likely to pull away from the darned edges. This method is especially good to use where stitches have dropped. It also helps in the wear of the stockings if the heels are darned a little before they are worn.

Yellow soap will relieve the pain from a burn. It will stop a leak in the boiler in emergency cases.—Banner.

QUICKBILT

BUNGALOW NO. 50

A complete bungalow, built to give the small family all that can be desired in a modern, substantial, attractive, well-built home, at a reasonable price.

COMFORT-It is closely built to stand the severest weather. Well lighted, well ventilated, easily heated.

CONVENIENCE-The plans, prepared after careful study by the best and most experienced of architects, are so designed to cover every need of the average family.

DURABILITY-Made with the very best of materials. Designed for greatest strength. Each part securely locks into the other. Erected after perfected patented locking process. Will stand the roughest of tempests without strain and will far outlast the average house.

BEAUTY-The designs are graceful and represent the most modern architectural art. It will blend readily with its surroundings and furnish a beautiful, appropriate home.

ECONOMY-QUICKBILT Bungalows are built in an immense plant in which hundreds of other houses are being built simultaneously. Every short cut to perfection and economy is used and thereby, you gain the advantage of the low cost of quantity production. The architect's and contractor's fees are avoided, for you are furnished free a complete set of specifications and plans, and with them the erection of the house is so simple that any carpenter of average intelligence can erect it. Many owners build them themselves. In purchasing a QUICKBILT Bungalow you eliminate all extra middle-man's commissions and profits, as you are dealing direct with the source of material; with the mill, manufacturer and forests in one.

SATISFACTION-Once in your QUICKBILT Bungalow you will be highly satisfied with its convenient arrangement, its artistic finish and its coziness.

COSTS LITTLE TO ERECT.

With the material already prepared for the house, waste is eliminated from the cost. As a large portion of the house comes already built in panels, preliminary preparation is avoided. The systematic, simple, thorough plans and instructions save time and make it possible for a carpenter and two helpers to erect the house in less than 10 days. A saving in waste, labor, time and material is

Dr. Wm. M. Anderson at Columbia Seminary.

COLUMBIA SEMINARY has just been blest with an unique series of four lectures by one of its distinguished sons. In the last several years we have had quite a number of eminent men to lecture before the Seminary on the Smyth Foundation. These lecturers have been distinguished for learning, for ability and for practical achievement in various spheres of literary effort. They brought to us the fruits of ripe scholarship, and made valuable contribution to theological literature. Their lectures will doubtless be read with interest and profit by students of coming generations. But for immediate helpfulness to those who heard them, these four lectures by Dr. Wm. M. Anderson easily take precedence of them all.

We are going counter to Dr. Anderson in calling them lectures. He insisted that they were not lectures but talks. Perhaps the distinction was just, but we recall that Wendell Phillips, one of the most eloquent orators that ever stood on an American platform, was described as an animated talker. However we may characterize what Dr. Anderson did, it was just the thing to rivet the attention and capture the hearts of those who heard him. He put himself at once en rapport with the students; he took them into his confidence; and came to grips with them.

Dr. Anderson spoke to the students out of the abundant stores of a rich experience—an experience extending over 31 years of strenuous and fruitful labors. His object was to give his young brethren the benefit of all that had contributed to his success as preacher and pastor. While far from boasting of what he had done, he gave a statistical summary which spoke for itself. He has been pastor of four churches, Rock Hill, Jackson, Nashville, Tenn., and Dallas, Texas, since he left the seminary 31 years ago. During this time he has preached 6,234 times, received 4,250 members, married 1,634 couples, baptized 932 persons, and conducted 892 funerals. These figures reveal a ministry that has been greatly blessed of God. In his earnest and familiar talks Dr. Anderson attempted to show the students the methods he had used for achieving these results. He stressed the importance of getting acquainted with people, not superficially, but as thoroughly as possible, of constantly reaching out after more people, of laying hold of strangers by tactful methods of approach, and of establishing a relation of friendly interest. He made it perfectly evident that he had given earnest heed to the apostolic injunction: "Do good unto all men as ye have opportunity, especially to them who are of the household of faith," and with affectionate persistency he urged this duty on the student body.

Dr. Anderson has been literally a "fisher of men." He has made it his supreme business to catch men, and to draw them to the Church, and ultimately to the Master. He has been tactful and resourceful in prosecuting this business. To this end he has used the good stock of common sense that God has given him, and taxed his wits to the utmost. He has used more than one kind of bait, and thrown more than one kind of net. He has practiced with the Apostle Paul in "making himself all things to all men if by any means he might save some."

These talks were illustrated with numerous incidents from Dr. Anderson's experience, many of them humorous, and many of them pathetic, but all going to show that his methods would work. His cordial, hearty manner, his bright, optimistic spirit, the warm evangelical tone that pervaded all he said, and the intensely practical character of his words, made a deep and, we would fain believe, a permanent impression on all the students.

It has been the privilege of Columbia Seminary to be represented in the professors' chair by the most richly gifted teacher our Church has known in the person of James H. Thornwell, by one of the greatest missionaries of modern times in the person of John Leighton Wilson, by two of the greatest preachers of their generation in the persons of Benjamin M. Palmer and John L. Girardeau, but in none of these has she greater reason to rejoice than in such successful "fishers of men" as Wm. M. Anderson. May his tribe greatly increase, and may he be spared many years by the Master whom he loves for the work which he loves.

The Inter-Church World Movement—Some Facts to Consider.

There is always danger attending any hastily adopted measure, such as the adoption of the Inter-Church World Movement near the close of our Assembly at New Orleans.

This movement originated with our Foreign Mission Committee, and upon being reported to the Assembly was referred to a special committee who recommended its adoption. No one discussed it, according to the Minutes of the Assembly, except two members of the Foreign Mission Committee, one member of the Home Mission Committee, and Dr. H. H. Sweets.

Dr. R. H. Fleming, a member of the special committee, dissented from the majority on the ground that these inter-denominational movements were apt to lead us further than we should go. Dr. Fleming is now far removed from personal controversy, but were he living he would be gratified to know that he saw the future with prophetic eye, judging from some of the proposed actions.

We have been informed that this same movement has adopted an Industrial Program, declaring the principles on which it would prosecute its survey and seek the betterment of the conditions around us, naming five fundamental points or lines of development, these being the principle of industrial representation, the rights of laborers to organize, the extension of the co-operative movement, the industrial status of women, and their equal right to an equal voice with men in the democratic control and management of society and the recognition of the right of our negro fellow Americans to economic justice and freedom, and freedom from economic exploitations.

Individually we would all endorse these principles, but as the Church of Christ we have nothing to do with them. The Church should not handle State affairs.

But this departure from our traditional policy is not the only objection. Such movements, especially one on as large a scale as this one, require a large amount of money, and the question is where is that money to be secured?

During the summer and since, we have tried to get the answer to this question from the managers in this section, but we found them as much at sea as we were. The only hope they held out was that they were depending upon certain rich men to furnish the funds.

The next fact that presented itself was that the managers of this movement had notified each Church that they would expect it to contribute to the common budget of expenses five per cent of all money collected. We are out for $4,000,000, and they ask that we give them $200,000 of that amount if collected.

As our own expense budget in our canvass will be $60,000, the combined lump will leave quite a hole in the total.

We learn from first authority that the Systematic Beneficence Committee has informed the Executive Committees that the sentiment of the Beneficence and Stewardship Committee is opposed to the underwriting of the expense of the Inter-Church World Movement to the extent of five per cent.

It seems that the Northern Church provided against any financial responsibility by the following action of their Assembly: "Our co-operation in the movement is 'upon the condition that funds raised by the Presbyterian churches and agencies shall be paid to and distributed through the regular channels of the Presbyterian Church.' Also that 'no financial obligations for the administrative expenses of the Inter-Church Movement shall be incurred by any of our boards or agencies without the authorization of the General Assembly or its Executive Commission.'"

That Assembly also defined and limited the movement to the survey of the fields, educational campaigns and simultaneous efforts of the different denominations to raise their own budgets.

Dr. James I. Vance, in reply to our inquiry, writes frankly and kindly as follows:

"I do not know what the expense budget of our progressive program is, but I do know that the Inter-Church World Movement is asking all co-operating churches to underwrite the expenses of the movement to an extent not to exceed five per cent of their participation in the movement.

"The Northern Baptist Church has done this, and also the Northern Methodist, the Congregationalist; the Northern Presbyterian Church has advanced $200,000 to the movement, and I understand is to underwrite as requested. And other churches have gone into it.

"The feeling on the part of the men who are at the head of the movement is that the churches will probably not be called upon to pay anything, as the expenses of the movement will be more than met out of funds undesignated or specially contributed to cover the expenses.

"At the same time, to put it on a business basis it was felt wise to ask that the churches participating in the movement back it up by underwriting it not to exceed five per cent. Somebody of course has got to stand sponsor for such a movement. It would seem that the denominations that are participating are the proper ones to do it."

"The canvass is to be confined to the denominational budgets, and is to be conducted by the denominations each among its own constituency. Constituencies outside of any denomination will also be canvassed, and the funds undesignated will be divided among participating denominations on the basis of their participation in the movement."

We have dwelt upon this matter not for the purpose of stirring up strife, but because those managing it have no desire to conceal anything, and also because any such movement to succeed must have the whole-hearted support of the Church, which can only be obtained by full publicity.

The Standard in the Home Mission Fields.

The Synod of North Carolina in its Home Mission work has advanced more rapidly than any Synod in the Church, due largely to its wise Superintendent and his band of aggressive workers.

These men are not only hard workers, but they think over their work and devise ways and means. One who occupies a field where Presbyterians are scarce, but where the outlook is good, is so impressed with the value of a Church paper in opening homes to him and in indoctrinating the people after they join the church, that he proposes to use part of his own salary in putting the Standard in every home. Of course we would never consent to such a proposal, but we prefer to open a Paper Fund, to which we invite subscriptions, the understanding being that for every dollar contributed for this purpose, we will donate a dollar. These workers will then place the papers where they are most needed.

We have one liberal elder who has put the Standard in many homes in a certain county, with the result that today that county has grown more rapidly in Presbyterianism than any county in our Synod.

Here is a chance to double the Lord's money in advancing His Kingdom.

More Men Needed.

Dr. Sweets had an appeal in a previous issue that deserves the prayerful attention of every reader of the Standard. A few years ago there was a great falling off in the number of candidates for the ministry, not only in our Church, but in all the Churches.

Earnest prayer went up to the Lord of the harvest for more laborers, and in answer He sent us men. Then came the war, when so many of our younger ministers went into the service, and the students at our colleges enlisted, with the result that the thoughts of all became centered upon earthly things.

Though active hostilities have ceased over a year ago, the results of the war are still afflicting us, and it seems difficult to get men to think of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God.

The conditions confronting us are ominous. From 482 candidates for the ministry in 1916 and 1917, we have in 1919 only 371, and 11 Presbyteries, having 218 churches, report not one candidate. Something is radically wrong.

It is true that the world is in a turmoil and men are demoralized, but even all that does not explain why 218 churches should have no young men feeling the call to preach.

Without presuming to sit in judgment upon any particular man, we are convinced that if each pastor had earnestly presented the claims of the Gospel ministry both from the pulpit and in private, this record would have been different.

The Committee on Christian Education realizes that one way to increase our working force is to endow our colleges and schools, and they are calling upon the Church to rally to this cause in December.

Friendship With Books

By Rev. W. S. Golden.

An Address to the Students of Elise High School, on the Occasion of Their "Book Shower."

I WISH to begin as the good old colored preacher began when he said: "Beloved, in the fust place I puppuse to tell you what I ain't goin' to tell you." I have not come to you with a string of books listed, which I will attempt to thrust upon you as those which ought to be your favorites. We don't wish anyone else to pick out our hats for us, or our clothes, or our friends. And so I am equally sure that if I attempted to pick out a certain assortment of books, and tell you that if you liked them you would do, and if you didn't like them, you were off in your intellectual tastes, I'd be tiresome, and you would be unconvinced.

There was a time when a knight would say that a certain lady's eyebrows were not exactly symmetrical, or that blue eyes were prettier than eyes of the color of hers, and forthwith a duel would be in order. But if some fellow comes up now and enthuses over black hair, and your girl's hair is red, instead of fighting him, you let him "rave on," and feel not sorry that his taste is different from yours.

So with books. One of the best friends I have, and one whose genuine culture I respect, loves Byron. Byron makes me get tired, and I love Browning, and Browning makes him tired. I have friends who love fiction, and I don't love it. What kind of books you like, or can learn to like, I don't know, and am not trying even to suggest. And I think that is the reason so many really intellectual people are so tiresome, they try to make everyone like what they like.

But while I can't pick your friends for you, it is altogether fitting for me to magnify as best I can the deep and beautiful power and benediction of friendship. The particular sphere of friendship we are considering is the friendship with books.

One of the most attractive advertisements published is one quite familiar, which pictures a family quietly at home, listening to a talking machine. The machine is in the background and the whole room is full of the great singers and musicians of the world, who have come in to sing for the family by the fireside. And yet, though they come from every land, all are the artists of this generation. Someone a few days ago was regretting the fact that Patti's voice was gone before it could be recorded for all time. Can you and I reach back through a hundred generations, and become acquainted and grow friendly with the fine people, not only of the musical art, but of adventure, travel, poetry, science, religion; with the philosophers and dreamers and cranks and martyrs and funny folks and lovers of many lands and centuries gone by? Certainly we can. And the more we have to live in a little place or on a farm back in the hills, the more we have to stay tied to irksome and uninspiring tasks, the more we need to cultivate their company and friendship. What I am trying to bring home to you is this: that though your body and mine may have to live where duty puts us, we owe it to ourselves and to those whom it is our duty to inspire, to be again and again moving out our minds to range along the royal highways of human thought where the great spirits of the centuries are waiting to walk and speak with us.

But, eager as these people are to speak with us, we must remember that most of them lived in different times from ours. Words didn't mean always just the same as they do now, and great events were present in their day which we have to look for now in history. People believed many things then that are not so much believed now. And we must remember all these differences when we would make friends with them. We must get back into their day, and into the world full of the people they are talking about.

The best way I know to begin is to find a little piece of time each day to move in this society of the immortals. I know a young man who tried it. There was a certain time each day that was just waste time, and there is with every one of you. The waste time was that which you spent at the postoffice waiting for the mail to open, or at the depot to see the train come in, or pitching horseshoes, or talking politics or baseball. I am not saying that these things are wrong, please understand. I feel sure that if politics were talked more and there were more friendly mixing together of people things would be better sometimes. I am not urging anybody to be a hermit. But I do insist that there is a time every day that you can give to the friendship of great people. Now I wouldn't make that time too long, half an hour is enough. I wouldn't undertake to finish my book in any set time. I would say this: "Here is a half hour that I am going to spend every day with William Shakespeare, or Aristophanes, or whoever it is. I am not going to leave a page of it till I understand what he says. I am going to put quality, not quantity, into my reading. If I simply can't make anything out of it, I am going to get a book on the subject by somebody who does understand it, and can explain it to me. Every historical character named, I propose to look up in the encyclopedia, or in the index to my history, till I know him and what he did. Every sentence that I can't understand, I'll look to see if there isn't a word in it that I don't understand, or if the word isn't being used in a sense new to me. I will take for granted that this thing makes sense, else it couldn't have lived as long as it has, and I intend to find out what that sense is."

Now you say, "That is a rather hard kind of drudgery you are laying out for us as a way to build friendship with books." Remember, I said that it was not to last over half an hour a day, and that you were not to consider yourself bound to cover any set passage, but merely to understand, or make some sense out of what you get over. For I am absolutely convinced that the reason so many great books mean so little to us is that they don't mean anything at all, they are simply words "without form and void." We have to get understanding first, and I frankly say that I have found it often hard work. But when once we get it, let me tell you what it is like.

On old man back in the country had a son who came out to see him in a Ford, and took the old man for a ride. When they came out to the car, the old man took his seat, and the son went around in front to crank. He turned and worried and wiped his face, and the old gentleman said, "You better hitch a horse to it if you have to pull it by a crank." But the boy said, "Wait a minute! Sit still!" and about then the spark inside got mixed up with the gas mixture, and the power was all there. What you have to do is to crank up your mind, sweat and twist and worry, but stay with it; and sometime, like a flash, the spark of interest will leap in the rich mixture of genius and there will be an intellectual explosion within you that will pick you up and carry you away with a power you hadn't dreamed of. And then remember that my advice was to stop while your interest was still hot, instead of going on like a child trying to enjoy a barrel

"GO YE AND MAKE DISCIPLES."

By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.

There is no more important feature of our Presbyterian Progressive Campaign than the effort to win 50,000 to Christ this year, or about three times what we have ever done before. As the Bible delights in figures, using them to express the results of Peter's sermon at Pentecost, it is appropriate that our Church should use them to designate the goal of our evangelistic endeavor.

To reach this goal we must make prayerful and diligent use of:

1. Pulpit Evangelism—Let every pastor hold a protracted meeting, preaching Christ directly to the unconverted with simplicity and tenderness, and expecting results. Let him secure the names of all those in the Sunday School and congregation who are old enough to accept Christ but have never done so; and let praying circles make importunate, definite prayer for the immediate conversion of each of these.

2. Personal Evangelism—This is the oldest method, Andrew finding Peter, Christ personally seeking the woman at the well, Nicodemus, the man born blind, Zaccheus, and a long list of others, till we find Him on the cross forgetting His own anguish in the endeavor to save a poor thief. We cannot all preach, but here is the opportunity for everyone, available not three times the week in a church, but every hour of every day in every place. To all of us, preachers, elders, deacons, private members, comes the Saviour's command, "Go ye and make disciples."

A Questionnaire.

Kindly publish the appended questionnaire, relative to Sabbath desecration, inviting replies to be sent to the undersigned that material may be thus provided for an adequate presentation of the growing peril to the cause of Christ within our bounds.

Replies are invited from clergymen, business and professional men and any and all others that the full viewpoint may be had from the entire Southland.

Assurance is given that no name or special location will be used in the compilation of the information thus secured unless with the special consent of the person supplying the information.

Trusting that you may see your way to grant this request in the interest of a greatly neglected need of Christ's Kingdom, I am,

Most cordially yours,
I. Cochrane Hunt.

1. Are the Sabbath laws of your state adequate for the protection and safeguarding of the Christian Sabbath?
2. In your city and throughout your state, so far as you know, does public sentiment secure a reasonable enforcement of existing laws?
3. What is the most outstanding instance, in the present or recent past, of growing Sabbath desecration, if any?
4. Has Sabbath desecration in your community developed in any marked degree within the past five, or ten, years? If so, in what direction and through what agencies?
5. What appears to be the attitude of the average returning soldier toward Sabbath observance?
6. Can you see any developing tendencies in your city, or state, for a demand to legalize commercialized sports and recreations, such as baseball, the moving picture, etc.
7. What means are Christian citizens employing to counteract such tendencies, if they exist?
8. Are these, or other commercialized recreations, now legalized by either state law or municipal ordinance?
9. Within the range of your observation, what has been the influence of the automobile on Sabbath desecration?

10. Has there been any noticeable growth of juvenile delinquency in your community in connection with, or apparently growing out of, the increasing use of the automobile on Sunday?

11. So far as you can judge what has been the influence upon the Christian home of any observed development, or growth, of Sabbath desecration?

Address your reply to I. Cochrane Hunt, Covington, Kentucky.

The Orphan Children.

One of the truly great problems facing every people today is the proper care and training of orphan children. In Germany these are the wards of the State. In France and Belgium and other countries of Europe what the State has been able to do has been supplemented in recent times by millions of dollars of relief money from the United States.

In our country the care of these needy ones has been given over almost entirely to the Church. And the Church, acknowledging the God who proclaims Himself "God of the Fatherless" as her God, has accepted the charge and has done a noble work in preparing many of these young people for Christian citizenship.

One question therefore for every member of our Church to answer, is this: Shall the Church do this thing in a thorough way or in a partial way? That is, shall the Church make provision for one class of orphans only—those who are fatherless, and deny its fostering care to other classes, or shall the Church extend its helping hand to all classes of orphans?

Another question must be answered, and is in fact being answered by every one of us: Shall the Church, having extended its fostering arms about any fatherless child, care for that child in a generous way or in a niggardly way? Or, to put it in another way, if a rich Church undertakes to provide shelter for a homeless one for Christ's sake, shall it be a good shelter. If the Church undertakes to clothe the naked, shall it be good suitable clothing? If it undertakes to feed the hungry, shall it be wholesome, nourishing food?

Finally, the institution through which the money given reaches its object is worthy of the most generous support. The Home at Barium Springs is doing our work in the way we should want it done. The writer has had opportunity in a number of instances of observing in his own home the splendid results, in the development of character and efficiency, of the work of this institution. The work now being done is worthy of all praise. Any servant of the Master may well consider it a privilege to have a part in it.

BOOKS, BOOKS!

Books, books,
With golden looks—
Hives of rarest honey!
Story, song,
A friendly throng—
The world for little money.

Blow, blizzards, blow!
The hearth's aglow,
No other comfort needing
Than just the light
Of pages bright—
Sweet-sheltered fireside reading.

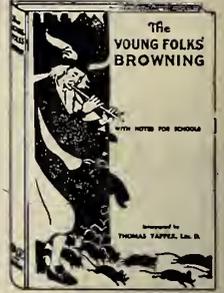

With friends o' mine
I sup and dine—
The gentle, kind and clever;
And though I'm poor
In worldly store,
I'm rich in friends forever!

Let Us Introduce You--

We are presenting to you in our annual Book Number, this issue, reviews of many of the season's new works of fiction, biography and juvenile stories, and some old books in special holiday attire. Out of this assortment you may make some friend of lasting worth. We do not carry any of these books in stock, but we are giving the publisher in case you may want any of them.

Sherry—By George Barr McCutcheon. Dodd, Mead & Company, New York.

This is a story where the material is excellent and varied, but the putting together is rather crude. Mr. McCutcheon has written better books than this, though the interest in it is sustained.

It is the story of a young man of good family who after the death of his parents runs through a fortune in gambling and drinking. When he spends his last dime he determines to reform. He makes a brave fight, which is enlivened by the presence of a pretty girl, who is the most interesting character in the book.

There is love-making and mystery in abundance.

Polished Ebony—By Octavius Roy Cohen. Dodd, Mead & Company, New York.

We have had many negro stories, but they belong to the negro of the plantation. Here we have a new character, the negro of high life in the city, with all the weakness and foibles of the white race occupying the same station.

This is a collection of readable stories, written in a very attractive style.

From Dodd, Mead & Company we have the following two books for children:

The Water Babies—By Charles Kingsley; $1.25.

The Children's Life of The Bee—By Maurice Maeterlinck; $2.00.

"The Water Babies" needs no introduction. For years it has been a children's classic, written in Charles Kingsley's best style; it has charmed generation after generation of little ones, and is still performing the same good work.

"The Children's Life of the Bee" is one of those books of which there are too few, which teach children useful lessons. The author has written the Life of the Bee for older people, and in this book he has simplified the facts of that book and brought them within the comprehension of children.

The Secret of the Tower—By Anthony Hope; $1.60 net. D. Appleton & Company, New York.

Those who enjoyed "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Rupert of Hentzau" will be glad to know that the author has written another story, the first since the beginning of the war in 1914. The characters here are real, living not in some imaginary land, but in England, just after the war.

"The Secret of the Tower" is a well sustained secret that keeps one guessing all through the book. Dr. Mary Arkroyd, a physician and a discharged soldier named Beaumroy and an eccentric old man named Saffron, are the principal characters. The interest hinges on what Mr. Saffron and Beaumroy bring from London to the tower.

The conversations are bright and the interest well sustained. It is a novel far above the average.

Little Miss By-The-Way—By Lucille Van Slyke; $1.50 net. Frederick H. Stokes Co., New York.

A story that is different is a prize for the reviewer, and certainly "Little Miss By-The-Way" is of that class. The characters are refreshing, quaint and human and "Little Miss By-The-Way," who knows nothing of death or wrong, is most lovable.

The whole story breathes an indescribable charm, and we are taken into the "Land of Pretend" and really see a fairy tale come true.

Smiles, A Rose of the Cumberlands—By Eliot H. Robinson; 1.50 net. Page Company, 58 Beacon St., Boston.

The scene of "Smiles," by the author of "Man Proposes," is laid in the Cumberland Mountains. Rose or "Smiles" is a little girl of supposedly good parentage, who is adopted by an old mountaineer and his wife. How, in spite of her lowly surrounding, she finally, aided by a young surgeon, becomes a nurse and finds her rightful place in the world, is the story. The plot is rather improbable, and the style somewhat crude, yet it is withal a very pure and readable story.

Peace and Patriotism—By Elva S. Smith; $1.50 net.

This is a timely collection of 150 poems and speeches, grouped under the headings: Patriotism, Peace and International Good Will, National Songs of Other Lands, Service.

It is a book of 318 pages, and it has a carefully grouped index.

Billy Vanilla—By Sol. N. Sheridan; $1.25 net. Lathrop, Lee and Shepard Company, Boston.

This is a charming story for boys, and even the girls will not pass it by. All will enjoy knowing William McMillan, better known as Billy Vanilla, and also the Shaggy Boy, the Boy a Thousand Years Old, the Man With the Red Whiskers, and many others we have not space to mention.

They have exciting times, and if any boy wishes to read a real good boy's book, let him get this one.

The Makin' O' Joe—By Louise Matthews Sweet. George H. Doran Company, New York.

This is a Down East story, full of down east humor which is rather broader than we enjoy. To those who like books of this kind, this kind of a book will be suitable.

Our Little Quebec Cousin—By Mary S. Saxe; 60 cents net. Page Company, Boston.

We have often endorsed this series, "The Little Cousins of Long Ago," as a most attractive way of teaching history to children.

This is the story of a French-Canadian girl, in which we learn all about their customs.

Woodcraft Boys at Sunset Island—George H. Doran Company, New York.

This is another book to charm boys, for what boy is there who does not enjoy a story of life on an island, with camping out? Here we have the adventures of a party on Sunset Island who have fun in abundance.

Uncle Sam Fighter—$1.50 net. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

There is nothing connected with the great war more wonderful than the manner in which our country prepared an army of citizens and out of them made men who were able to turn the tide of battle.

Mr. D. N. Puy describes every phase of the preparation, so that no one can read this book without being proud that he is an American.

Wigwam Wonder Tales—By William Thompson; $1.35 net. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

This is a collection of stories, illustrated with 30 pictures. The author has traveled among the Indians of the Northwest and gathered up firsthand their myths.

Here parents will find a book that will give pleasure to the children and at the same time be of a high ethnological value.

The Bells of San Juan—By Jackson Gregory; $1.75 net. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

This is a story of the Southwest, a most attractive woman doctor comes to a town where the sheriff is engaged in an effort to subdue a gang of desperados. She gradually makes her way among the people, and in the end marries the sheriff.

Those who have lived on the border will at once recognize the reality of the pictures, both of the lawless gamblers and the sheriff with nerves of steel.

The story is one of the best we have read for some time. It has action in abundance and is full of mystery, so that the reader finds his interest sustained to the end.

"Wee Ann," A Story for Little Girls—By Ethel C. Phillips. Houghton Mifflin Company, New York.

In these days when of the making of books for the "grown-ups" there seems to be no end, we are always glad to get a book for little children, especially one as sweet and simple as this.

"When I Come Back"—By Henry Sydnor Harrison; $1.00. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

This is a war book, but not one of battles. It tells of a young lawyer entering the army and "roughing it" equal to any. His gentleness and unselfishness give it a charm that touches the heart.

"Winona's Way"—By Margaret Widdemer; $1.35 net.

This is one of the Camp Fire Girls Series. It is the story of the way in which some girls, after the armistice had put an end to war work, were able to help an entire community.

Like all books from the Page Company, it can be commended for its wholesome purity.

"Singing Mountains"—By A. B. Cunningham; $1.50 net. George H. Doran Company, New York.

This is a story of life among primitive mountain people. It is the story of a preacher's family in the mountains of West Virginia. It is rather long and wordy, but the interest keeps up to the end and the moral is good.

"Rosemary Greenaway"—By Joslyn Gray; $1.50 net. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

This is a book for girls. It is the story of a strong willed girl whose intense love for her father who is dead set her in opposition to the entire family.

When her mother marries again she becomes very resentful towards her step-father, but in the end she finds that he really was the one who protected her father from disgrace.

"Bulldog Camey"

—By W. A. Fraser; $1.50 net. George H. Doran Co., New York.

We have always been partial to stories of border life. Here we have one that will answer that craving.

The following are the ingredients:

Crude border life, mounted police, Indians and half-breeds, and the primitive man and woman. Out of this Mr. Fraser has made a most readable story.

"For Days and Days"—By Annette Wynne; $2.00 net. Frederick A. Stokes & Co., New York.

No lesson is more important in the training of the young than the development of the imagination. When we remember to what a field of pleasure it gives a child entrance, we realize the importance. This is a book of poems, adapted to the young, just such as mothers will find useful and school teachers will welcome.

"The Young Folks' Browning," With Notes for Schools—60 cents net. Page Company, Boston.

Browning is generally regarded as a poet suited to older people and they must be of a metaphysical bent.

Here we have a rare collection of poems suited for children, and bound in a very neat and attractive manner. The value of its contents and its cheapness will recommend it to those who wish to bring their children into touch with one of the great poets of England.

"Rainbow Valley"—By L. M. Montgomery. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

The scene of this novel is laid in Prince Edward Island, and it is the story of the minute doings of plain people. We have the daily gossip and soon get on familiar terms with the inhabitants.

The children of the manse and the children of Anne Blythe keep the village stirred up, as they are full of the pranks of healthy children. The story is rather long, but it is good.

"The Great House"—By Stanley Weyman; $1.25 net. Longmans, Green & Co., New York.

It has been a long time since we read a book by Mr. Weyman, so we are ready to welcome it. When the author of "A Gentleman of France" writes a book, he needs no praise. It deals with a critical period of English history when the land was stirred over the Corn Laws.

There is a mystery of the disappearance of old documents relating to a disputed succession. It also gives a pleasant picture of the life in England in the Eighteenth century.

"Adventures of Sammy Sassafras"—By Carl Waterman. E. P. Dutton & Company, New York.

These are the adventures of a little boy who went into the woods to shoot a bear, who in turn took the gun from him, and brought him before an assembly of wild animals to pass sentence on him. It is one of the best books for children we have seen for a long time, just such a book that children of six or seven would enjoy.

The Story of George Fox—By Rufus M. Jones; $1.50. The MacMillan Company, New York.

This story of George Fox has been written for children, but the style is such that old and young will enjoy it.

We do not know a character in history more heroic in certain respects than that of this great leader of the Quakers. A man may be wrong in his conception of life, but when in support of that conception he faces bravely persecution and imprisonment we are bound to admire him.

A young boy reading this book will be a finer man when he is grown.

"The Sea Bride"

—By Ben Ames Williams; $1.75. The MacMillan Co., New York.

Here is a book with the fresh odor of the sea to greet the reader, and like all sea stories, it grips the imagination at once.

A hard-hearted captain, an honest and fearless sailor and the inevitable woman in the case, rightly combined as only this master of sea stories can combine them, has given us a story of the sea that will be a pleasure always to the imaginative reader.

"Dangerous Days"—By Mary Roberts Rinehart; $1.60 net. George H. Doran Company, New York.

Mary Roberts Rinehart is one of the foremost writers of the day. Her war contributions have made her famous, while her fiction has established her reputation on both sides of the water.

This story is equal to anything she has ever written. It gives us a view of high life in New York just before America entered the great war. The picture is not a pleasant one, if it be a true picture of high life, though it may be true to facts.

Under the terrible influence of the war some of the characters improve, but even at the best, they violate our sense of propriety.

"Hands Off"—By Beulah Marie Dix; $2.00. MacMillan Company, New York.

This is an exciting story of a New York young man reared in luxury and an American girl reared in Mexico who meet under peculiar circumstances.

The young man has fallen among thieves and is thrown into jail, whence he is removed to become a laborer on a Mexican ranch.

The lover of excitement in books will find complete satisfaction here.

"I shall have to ask you . . . either to make it right with her at once or leave the table." From "Rosemary Greenaway," by Joslyn Gray. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

"Ladies In Waiting"—By Kate Douglas Wiggins.

Those who have read Mrs. Wiggins' charming stories will find this a collection of five of her best. "The Ladies in Waiting" are those damsels who are waiting for the prince to ride by.

Her humor brightens the book. This is a book for one's spare moments.

Houghton Mifflin Company are the publishers, New York.

"Marty Lends a Hand"—By Harold L. Latham. The MacMillan Co., New York.

Here we have a most readable book for boys. Marty is forced to leave school by reason of an accident to his father, and in searching for something to do he begins to raise mushrooms in an abandoned copper mine. Here he has a series of exciting adventures with German spies.

It is a book that all boys will enjoy.

"Wonderings and Other Things"—By Edna Kingsley Wallace. E. P. Dutton & Company, New York.

This is a book of short poems that will appeal to young children. They are supposed to express the many imaginations of a child's mind, and the many things at which she wonders.

"When We Were Little"—By Mary Fanny Youngs. E. P. Dutton & Company, New York.

These are also poems for young children, written by Miss Youngs, whose ancestors have lived in an old grey house in Oyster Bay Cove, near where Colonel Roosevelt lived. It is an attempt to put into simple verse the simple ways of a simple people. Colonel Roosevelt wrote an introduction for it and Mrs. Roosevelt lent pictures to illustrate the poems.

"Light"—By Henri Barbusse; $1.90 net. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

The fact that this is the fourth edition of this should prove its popularity.

It is a story of contemporary French life before the war, during the war, and after the war. It undoubtedly is a book of power, far above the average book of the day.

"The Land They Loved"—By G. D. Cummins; $1.75. The MacMillan Company, New York.

The land they loved was Ireland. The heroine leaves America for the old country, and upon her arrival she finds that time has wrought many changes since she left. Of the three brothers who loved her, two are dead, and the story then deals with her relation to the third brother. Of course it touches upon the great war and the part played by the Irish soldier in it.

"Is the World Growing Better"—By James H. Snowden, D.D., LL.D. MacMillan Co., New York; $1.60.

This is a practical question that men are always asking, especially in these days when to many the end seems near.

There are two opposing theories. Dr. Snowden discusses the question from every point of view, and proves that the world is growing better. His style is clear and his reasoning convincing.

"The Business Career of Peter Flint"—By Harold Whitehead; $1.50 net. Page Co., Boston.

This is a long drawn out story of the struggles of a young boy, who begins at the bottom and through many blunders and occasional lies fails time after time, but in the end he succeeds.

It is a good lesson for young men starting in life, but there is low slang and too free use of profane words.

"Famous Generals of the Great War"—By Charles H. L. Johnston. Page Company, Boston.

This is another book for boys of a different type. It is such a book as a boy loves to read, because it describes the great generals of the world's war. The reader will not only be charmed with the story, but he will learn much about the war. It is an excellent way of teaching recent history.

"A Cavalier Maid"—By Emilie Benson Knipe and Alden Alden Arthur Knipe; $1.75. MacMillan Co., New York.

Georgiana is a rich young heiress left in the care of a nobleman in poor health, who leads a secluded life.

Charles First brings her to court in order to get control of her money. She is afterwards kidnapped and taken to America, where she has many adventures. Those who like to read about the primitive days of the Puritans when men and women lived in the open will here find a story to please them.

"The Black Drop"—By Alice Brown; $2.00. MacMillan Co., New York.

In a New England family cultivated and moral there is born one son who is their opposite in every respect. Nothing seems able to reach him, and though when the war opens the family become enthusiastic pro-Allies, this black sheep becomes pro-German, and by his activity he involves several of the family.

The story is good, but it would be better if it were condensed into smaller space.

"The Wish Fairy of the Sunshine and Shadow Forest"—50c.

"The Four Little Pigs That Didn't Have Any Mother"—50c.

Here we have two children's books from Henry Altemus Company, Philadelphia. They are printed with large type with colored illustrations.

They are bed-time stories that mothers need. The illustrations add to the charm of the book.

"Dave Darwin and the German Submarines."

"Dave Darwin's South American Cruise."

"Dave Darwin on the Asiatic Station."

These three books are from the same firm of Henry Altemus. They will appeal to real boys, for they take him into battles many, and also teach him useful lessons. Boys from 12 to 15 years will enjoy such books.

The Tie That Binds

of sugar all the way down. It's just as sweet on the bottom as on the top, but the bottom, for most of our limited capacities, is reserved for another day. The person who reads all the time usually ceases to be good for anything else; he may develop into a critic of literature, but he ceases to be an enjoyer of it. I am not especially hoping any of you will become literary anatomists, pickling books in the formaldehyde of criticism and then dissecting their shrunken corpses. I am commending to you, not the semi-ghoulish satisfaction of the non-creative person who lives among the dead bodies of slain books and points out their defects in the light of his own standards of excellence; I am commending to you the living friendship of great books from great minds and wonderful hearts than can never die.

Understand this, and it may help us all: great literature was not synthesized according to a set of rules which drew a pattern to make it by in order to make it pretty. The Germans are great makers of synthetic things. For instance, when they couldn't get rubber, they made stuff called synthetic rubber, which never had been near a rubber tree, but which did fairly well in place of rubber. Instead of getting perfume from flowers, they would find out about what was in the perfume made from flowers, and by synthesis make something that smelled somewhat as the genuine perfume smelled. These great books weren't put together by a literary rule book, any more than the mountains were built to fit the maps of the surveyors who have climbed over them and looked at them. They were lifted by the mighty power of genius, cast up out of the volcanic depths of human experience, clad in gleaming white, struck by the light of God; and there they stand, in the majesty of unalterable fact, no matter how many blind or downward-looking men have passed along their base.

Most of all, this is true of the greatest Book of all. The Bible wasn't written by God's stenographers, taking testimony. It was written by God's witnesses, giving testimony. How much more interesting it would be for us if we always bore in mind that it is not primarily a Book, but a long succession of wonderful experiences. Its writers bring us no message of speculative "perhaps's" and "maybe's," but they testify what things they have seen and felt. These men of old suffered, and prayed, and hoped, groped and found God, and lost Him, and were found again. What is the twenty-third Psalm, a piece of literature, or poetry, or a song? Yes, but more; it is a man like you and me, with work to do as we have work to do, finding grass for his hungry flock where God had planted it, and water where God had caused it to flow; finding shade to rest in, finding protection against those who would destroy him and his, and realizing that this coolness and peace came from One above who was good enough to send him yet another kind of good when he needed it.

What are the prophecies, books? Yes, in the same sense perhaps that the capitol in Washington is a piece of real estate. They are books, in that they have words and sentences, chapters and pages put together so that we can read them. But why speak of them as books, in the usual sense of the word, any more than we would think of calling the Venus de Milo several hundred pounds of stone? These prophecies are men to whom God has given a discontent with the age in which they live; men out of whom God has taken the common heart, and into whom He has put the flame of His own spirit, men who are interested in things which their age has forgotten or never learned. They plead and speak and sing, they fight and submit, rejoice and lament, until they fall into the hands of the people they are striving to redeem and are burned, sawn asunder or thrown to the beasts; or until God

WHY THE SOUTHERN CHURCH PREFERS FEDERAL UNION.

By Rev. Thornton Whaling, D.D.

THE Southern Presbyterian Church has expressed a preference for Federal Union rather than for Organic Union, and it is earnestly desired that our brethren of the U. S. A. Church should understand the reasons for this preference. If human testimony can be believed, 75 per cent of our ministers and church officers prefer Federal rather than Organic Union, and I beg the privilege of assigning some of the reasons for this widespread preference.

First. Federal Union is Catholic, while Organic Union is provincial.

There are 10 or 12 other Presbyterian and Reformed Churches in our country with hundreds and hundreds of thousands of members, and any plan of union ought to take them into view. Federal Union contemplates the integration of these great churches into a Federal Assembly, and is therefore broad in its vision and amply wide in its scope.

Organic Union, on the other hand, is so provincial that it leaves altogether out of view those other 10 great historic churches and narrows its scope to a union of only two churches in the great brotherhood of more than a dozen. It is too narrow, provincial and petty as contrasted with the catholicity, breadth and scope of Federal Union.

Second. Federal Union is tolerant, while Organic Union savors of bigotry.

Federal Union recognizes each of the other 10 or more churches as legitimate types of Presbyterianism, wrought out under the providence of God, under the guidance of the Divine Spirit. It believes that each one of them is as fully entitled to continued existence as any of the others. It finds a method by which, without annihilating their identity or destroying their autonomy, they can combine in one great Federal Union, while preserving the historic and traditional types to which they are committed, under the leadership of the great Head of the Church.

Organic Union, on the other hand, regards one church which it is true is the largest Presbyterian Church numerically in the United States, but still only one type of Presbyterianism, as the exclusive, legitimate and normal type in conformity with which the others must finally reduce themselves. Without the use of harsh language to describe such policy, it certakes them or the voltage of their enthusiasm burns them up. They are men who have cause to believe, and do believe, so strongly that at last they lay their message out where the logic of events can prove to future centuries that they spoke for God.

Think, then, of your books as doors through which you can go into the great everywhere, and meet those who have lived the most in every age, and share their life. You will not have time to meet all the immortals, choose your own friends among them. They will be glad to greet you, for you are in that future for which they wrought. You come up over that horizon toward which their faces were set. Be patient, and strive till you have learned something of the thought land in which they live, and I know, by the stuff that is in you, that when you have come to understand them you will find them wonderful company.

I will close now, and beg your pardon for talking so long, and thank you for listening. Perhaps you'll agree that I have a right to use the words of the bashful young man, who didn't make much, but who finally got courage to ask his girl to marry him. She promptly said "Yes," and after a while said to him, "Why don't you say something," he replied, "I have said too much already."

The oil mills property, the ginnery and fertilizer plant were burned. A warehouse containing about 2,500 tons of seed, however, was saved. The loss is estimated by officials of the company at from $150,000 to $175,000. The property was fairly well insured.

Why the Southern Church Prefers Federal Union.

tainly savors of narrowness, intolerance and bigotry. Third. Federal Union is forward-looking, while Organic Union is backward looking.

Federal Union, based on the principle of representation and federation, is the key to the future, according to the statement of great statesmen like Lloyd George, Clemenceau and others. Illustrations of its operation are manifested all around the world, and notably in the Imperial Federal Republic of the United States. The League of Nations is a partial effort toward realizing, in international life, this same principle. The eyes of Federal Union are fixed upon the future, in the confident faith that civil and ecclesiastical politics alike are to find the bond of union in the practical application of this great principle.

Organic Union, on the other hand, looks toward the past, emphasizing bonds that were shattered in 1861, and speaks loudly and emphatically about a National Church. They are out of date in the Twentieth Century and are destined never to be in date in any subsequent period. The effort to knit sundered bonds might result in a kind of patchwork like the old crazy quilt, but cannot give you a live organism, animated by one organic principle, as Federal Union proposed.

Fourth. Federal Union is possible, while Organic Union is impossible.

The Presbyterian Church in the United States is ready for Federal Union, and other Presbyterian churches have indicated a willingness for such a combination. When a plan is discovered which allows brethren of all the Presbyterian and Reformed churches to retain their distinctive principle in doctrine, government, administration and ritual, they will find no sufficient reason to decline entering into it. The Southern Church stands in readiness to enter, heartily and enthusiastically, into such a combination.

On the other hand, Organic Union requires not only the Southern Church, but all of the other churches, to surrender everything which they regard as distinctive and peculiar and it is certain to encounter antagonism which will make it impossible of realization in our day. Disintegration and disorganization of the churches must be the prelude and condition which alone will make consolidation possible.

It is a distress to many minds to find that the statesmanship of the greatest Presbyterian Church in the United States is not equal to the task of seeing that consolidation is impossible and that real and true Federation is the key to the wise union of all of the branches of our common Presbyterianism. We love the U. S. A. Church; we do not wish to destroy it as a type of Presbyterianism, but we are not willing that it should be the only type and that all of the other churches consent to surrender their autonomy and be re-made again after the fashion of even the great U. S. A. Church.

The Prayer Meeting

By Rev. C. D. Waller.

TOPIC FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING DECEMBER 7: UNQUESTIONING FAITH.

Luke 7:6-10.

A noble-man, this centurion. His servant was dear unto him. One is not expecting to find such a man in the petty office of the captain of one hundred. Slaves were sometimes privileged characters—sometimes even dear to their masters. But these masters were men of wealth and culture. But this centurion is splendidly introduced to us by the fact that he loved his slave. He was evidently a man of superior heart, no slave to conventions, untouched by the baser characteristics of his class and calling. Indeed history needs no finer models of manhood, none more humane, none with higher, richer faith than some of the men who have commanded men in camp and battle. Who does not at once recall William the Silent, Chinese Gordon, Robert E. Lee, and "Stonewall" Jackson. In the World War, it is said that some of the greatest military leaders on the Allied side were and are men of genuine faith in Jesus Christ.

In our short records of the life and service of Jesus, many things we are sure are left out. There was doubtless a time when the Centurion had no unquestioning faith. Indeed we are fain believing that he examined very carefully into the character, the life and the deeds of this Jesus. His faith was doubtless the result of careful investigation. But at last it stood forth calm, clear, and invincible. Perhaps for sometime it was a silent faith; or expressed only in a narrow circle of familiar friends. But one day, the servant whom he loved lay sick. Then that faith spoke in remarkable fashion. He did not himself repair to Jesus: he sought out the Jewish Elders, who were under deep obligations to the Centurion, and sent them as his emissaries to Jesus. And we are glad to meet these Jewish Elders also. They came in no mere perfunctory spirit. They earnestly plead for the favor of Jesus in behalf of this foreigner. "He is worthy," they said: "He loveth our nations, and himself built our synagogue." Noble band of elders and noble Centurion! Of course we read: "And Jesus went with them."

I confess to a sense of disappointment that Jesus did not visit the home of that Roman; that He and the Jewish Elders and the Centurion did not meet around the couch of that beloved slave; and that we have no record of what would have happened there.

It was not to be. The Centurion sent to Jesus, when he learned that He was on his way to his home, a remarkable message that stopped him.

He felt that he was not worthy that Jesus should have come under his roof: and that it was by no means necessary. "Say the word, and my boy—(note the change of expression dictated by his love) shall be healed." And he even argued the case with Jesus, so profound was both his faith and his humility. "You, Lord, command this power of healing as I, a Roman Commander, speak to my subordinates. For me to speak is of them to obey. Therefore, say it with a word." This is beautiful, remarkable, full of encouragement. No wonder Jesus was delighted, astonished, acquiescent. No wonder the slave was from that moment "whole," and that Jesus expressed to the accompanying people his glad astonishment.

One wonders how often our blessed Lord has such experiences; how often he finds, as generations rise and fall, such beautiful and such noble faith. He shall see of the travail of his soul, and doubtless many such instances out of every generation contribute to the satisfaction and joy of our Master.

And how the church and the world longs for, and needs such men as this noble Centurion. One ventures to say, that synagogue was not named after the generous builder. No, the man who sent that message concerning authority and humility to the Healer would never suffer that. It was joy enough for him to serve—to build—to live. No wonder that such a man at last attained an unquestioning faith.

Then when one thinks of the rewards of such a faith! Think of the beloved slave "whole;" think of this centurion's future life as an ardent disciple; living there in Jesus' home town, the Master doubtless visited him later; and now for long centuries, the centurion, and we hope his slave "boy" then made whole, has been rejoicing that he found Jesus an unquestioning faith.

Topic for Sunday, Dec. 14—How to use the Bible. Ps. 19:7-11; Matt. 4:1-4.

We must make ourselves familiar with the contents of the Bible. We may expect very little help from it if we keep it merely for consultation as we do the encyclopedia. The latter is a storehouse of classified knowledge to which we may apply when the need arises. The facts it contains are not meant to be carried in the mind, but only to be drawn on upon occasion. But the Bible should be mastered and assimilated by our minds and carried with us as a part of our personalities wherever we go. If we hold it as a mere reference book to consult on matters of morals and religion we shall not be able to obtain correctly and readily what we want from it. It must be so known by us and so thoroughly made our own that we catch the spirit of its teachings and its divine Author.

How shall we make the Bible a part of our mental furnishing? Not by the use of any single method, but by the combined use of many. Reading the Bible straight through once a year is valuable for keeping the general matter and scope of it before the mind. But we must also concentrate our study on important passages and go thoroughly into detail. We must also memorize many of the striking and essential verses. No Christian is thoroughly furnished until he has driven many Bible truths into his consciousness by the intense process of memorizing. And the Bible must be prayed over. It is a peculiar book in this, that it is not really understood at all unless the Holy Spirit sends light upon its page and into our hearts.

We should use the Bible as our guide. Often we are puzzled to know the right and wrong. Here is a young man, for instance, who wishes to know whether it is ever right to tell a lie, even to save a life. He turns to the New Testament and sees that Jesus calls Himself a King of truth, and that He never spoke a false word, and that His Disciples in their best moods never departed a hair's breadth from the truth. He perceives then how God feels about the matter, and he is guided to the decision that a lie is never justifiable.

We may use the Bible for our comfort. When we are anxious, God's promises reassure us; when we lose place or fortune, we are shown by the Book that spiritual things count most; when we grieve for our sins, pardon is offered; when sorrow comes through the death of loved ones, the Bible tells us of the Resurrection. There us not a human distress which the Bible cannot banish or alleviate.

Show how Jesus in Matt. 4:1-4, used the Bible as a sword to repel the Tempter.

What Bible verse has helped you to be a better Christian? Tell why Bible verses help so much when we are trying through personal work to lead one to Christ.

PETER AND JOHN ASLEEP IN GETHSEMANE.
Mark 14:32-42.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Watch ye, and pray, lest ye enter into temptation."
—Mark 14:38.

SCRIPTURE LESSON.

32. And they came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he saith to his disciples, sit ye here, while I shall pray.
33. And he taketh with him Peter and James and John, and began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy;
34. And saith unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death: tarry ye here and watch.
35. And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him.
36. And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.
37. And he cometh, and findeth them sleeping, and saith unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou? couldest not thou watch one hour?
38. Watch ye, and pray, lest ye enter into temptation. The spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak.
39. And again he went away, and prayed, and spake the same words.
40. And when he returned, he found them asleep again, for their eyes were heavy, neither wist they what to answer him.
41. And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: it is enough, the hour is come, Behold the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.
42. Rise up, let us go; lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

Christ's Being uniting Deity and humanity, His deeds, and experiences accorded with both Natures. He performed acts suited to a sinless human nature, He accomplished deeds that only a Divine Being could achieve. His practical experiences were such as man often realized. He was sometimes honored and at others maligned and persecuted. He stood on the Mount of Transfiguration attested as The Son of God by personal glory and by human and Divine testimony. He entered Gethsemane and encountered an agony that no mortal could comprehend and share. The truths of our lesson claiming our attention will be, Jesus Taking three Apostles With Him in Gethsemane, Christ's Burden in the Garden, The Lord's Prayer, The Apostles Asleep and Christ's Comments.

I. Jesus Taking Three Apostles With Him in Gethsemane

The three carried into the deeper shades of the Garden, Peter, James and John had enjoyed peculiar privileges before. They were present when Jairus' daughter was raised from the dead. They only of the Apostles stood on the Mount of Transfiguration and beheld the Master's glory. Now they alone were permitted in the Garden to witness Jesus' agony as a sin-bearer for His disciples. Despite their imperfections, they were doubtless men of great force of Character. Jesus when he called them, designated the Sons of Zebedee, "Boanerges" or "Sons of Thunder," and during the Lord's public ministry they often gave evidence of great zeal and energy. Peter was habitually the leader among the Apostles and he was empowered to open the doors of the Church to Jews and Gentile. These disciples among the strongest and most forceful of the Apostles Jesus took with Him into the recesses of the Garden. He associated them with Him in His grief, for companionship, sympathy, and prayer. In deep sorrow the human heart craves, companionship, manifested sympathy, and intercessory prayer.

II. Christ's Burden in the Garden.

His heart was greatly burdened for He said "My Soul is Exceedingly Sorrowful Even Unto Death." We are furthermore told that such was His agony, that, "great drops of blood issued from His body." What caused such terrible distress of soul? Doubtless the pressure of a world's iniquity, with all the fearful ills that it involved for the substitute and surety. The shrinking of a holy nature from contact with moral corruption. The shuddering horror of a pure soul about to encounter the humiliation, the indignities, and tremendous pangs connected with criminal trial, degrading companionship, and Calvary Cross. The withdrawal of His Father's countenance from Him for a time, as the sin-bearer for humanity, and which realized on the Cross extorted the bitter cry, "My God, My God, Why Hast Thou Forsaken Me!" All these things, combined to give burden and agony to Jesus in the Garden, and on His way to Calvary and the Sepulchre.

III. The Lord's Prayer.

Jesus did, when in distress, precisely what His disciples should do; He prayed. "If any be afflicted let him pray." Thrice He prayed: "If it be possible, let this cup pass from Me," nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt." The cup must represent all the evils that He must encounter, if He drank it as a sin-bearer for humanity. He expresses His willingness, that the Father's will should accomplish in Him and by Him there was no other way in which the gracious purpose of God could be achieved. He not only shrank from the horrors of condemnation and crucifixion, but the Apostle thinks that "He feared His human nature would fail under trial, before redemption was accomplished. Writing to the Hebrews, Paul says that "He was heard in that He feared." The Evangelist declares, that while the cup was not withdrawn "An Angel was sent to strengthen Him." Unquestionably after His prayer the Savior was calm and self-controlled, and met all the trials of His atoning death with the utmost fortitude.

The Apostles Asleep and Christ's Comments.

The Apostles had had a toilsome day, and exciting night. It was growing late and they were weary. When Jesus withdrew from them to pray, they fell asleep. When the Lord returned after the first prayer, He finds them sleeping. Addressing Himself to Peter, who had professed the utmost devotion, He says "Simon, sleepest thou, couldest not thou watch with me one hour?" His words express a gentle reproof, He also excuseth their weakness and weariness, saying "The Spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak." Christ furthermore warns them they "should watch and pray lest they enter into temptation." Had Peter been praying in Gethsemane he might not have denied his Master. The second time Christ finds them asleep and they have no words in which to offer excuse. After the third prayer, they are still sleeping, and the Lord does not reproach them, but bids them "Sleep now and take your rest." The time for watching and praying is past. "The Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners."

Some people ask how a man is to know he is saved. How do you know anything? Suppose that I am dealing with an inquirer who has accepted Christ, but has not the assurance which a believer should have. Do I ask him to kneel down and pray and pray until some happy feeling comes unto his heart? If I do, I do not know how to lead a soul to Christ. No; I take God's word and put it into his hand, and say, "My friend, will you read the thirty-sixth verse of the third chapter of John: 'He that believeth on the Son of God hath everlasting life.'" I say to him, "Who has everlasting life?" "He that believes on the Son of God." "Do you believe on the Son of God?" "I do." "Have you everlasting life?" "No; I do not feel it!" "Will you please read that verse again?" And he reads, "He that believes on the Son of God hath everlasting life." He looks at the Book and says, "He that believeth on the Son." I say, "Do you believe on the Son?" "I do." "What have you?" "Why, I do not know that I have anything." "What does that verse say that the one that believes on the Son of God hath? How many of those who believe on the Son have everlasting life?" "All of them." "How do you know it?" "It says so." "Do you believe on the Son?" "I do." "What have you?" "Everlasting life!" "How do you know it?" "Because God says so." It is only after he rests on what God says in his Word that he has the testimony of the Holy Ghost. Faith in the Word of God comes first.—R. A. Robertson.

To believe, not because we are learned and can prove, but because there is a something in us, even God's own Spirit, which makes us feel light and truth as truth—this is the blessed faith.—F. W. Robertson.

THOSE OF THE FIXED HEART.

When the psalmist cried out, "My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed," he describes in vivid speech the triumph of one who is going through troubled times. These difficulties he pictures with metaphor crowding upon metaphor in almost breathless speech. Figure is piled upon figure in his effort to express the strenuousness of the conflict. "My soul is among lions; and I lie even among them that are set on fire, even the sons of men, whose teeth are spears and arrows, and their tongues a sharp sword. * * * They have prepared a net for my steps, my soul is bowed down; they have digged a pit before me, into the midst whereof they are fallen themselves."

Yet amid all these troubles and dangers he assumes an attitude that gives his spirit strength and assurance for song. "My heart is fixed, O God, my heart fixed. I will sing and give praise."

During the dark days of the past five years those of the "fixed heart," though saddened by the awful costs of war, never lost hope in the fact that God would lead His people to a place of victory. Calamities may come, great leaders may fall, and the clouds may shut out the sunlight, but God still lives and our hearts may be filled with praise.

These are the days when men's hearts are tried as the great economic unrest is unsettling the world. The dangers of want and industrial strife threaten every home. But he of the "fixed heart," he who trusting in God, is praying and doing all in his power to save the world, bring the reign of justice, and usher in the kingdom of our Lord, may join the psalmist in his fellowship of assurance and praise, for God still is in His creation and His will shall finally prevail among men and nations.—N. Y. Advocate.

Consecration is not the act of feelings, but of our will. Do not try to feel anything. Do not try to make yourself good or earnest enough for Christ. God is working in you to will, whether you feel it or not. He is giving you power to will and do His good pleasure. Believe this and act upon it at once, and say, "Lord Jesus, I am willing to be thine;" or if you cannot say as much as that, say, "Lord Jesus, I am willing to be made willing to be thine forevermore."

Consecration is only possible when we give up our will about everything. As soon as we come to the point of giving ourselves to God we are almost certain to become aware of the presence of one thing, if not of more, out of harmony with His will. Every room and cupboard in the house, with the exception of this, thrown open to the new occupant; every limb in the body, but one, submitted to the practiced hand of the good Physician. But that small reserve spoils the whole. To give ninety-nine parts and to withdraw the hundredth undoes the whole transaction. Jesus will have all or none. Who would live in a fever-stricken house so long as one room was not exposed to disinfectants, air, and sun? Who would undertake a case so long as the patient refused to submit one part of his body to examination? Who would become responsible for a bankrupt so long as one ledger was kept back? The reason that so many fail to attain the blessed life is that there is some one point in which they hold back from God and concerning which they prefer to have their own way and will rather than His. This one little thing mars the whole, robs them of peace, and compels them to wander in the desert.—F. B. Meyer.

So much we miss
If love is weak; so much we gain
If love is strong; God thinks no pain
Too sharp or lasting to ordain
To teach us this.

—Helen Hunt Jackson.

PASS IT ON.

Once, when I was a schoolboy going home for the holidays, I had a long way to go to reach the far-away little town in which I dwelt. I arrived at Bristol and got on board the steamer with just enough money to pay my fare; and that being settled, I thought in my innocence I had paid for everything I needed in the way of meals. I had what I wanted so long as we were in smooth water; then came the rough Atlantic and the need of nothing more. I had been lying in my berth for hours, wretchedly ill and past caring for anything, when there came the steward and stood beside me. "Your bill, sir," said he, holding out a piece of paper.

"I've got no money," said I in my wretchedness.

"Then I shall keep your luggage. What is your name and address?"

I told him. Instantly he took the cap with the gilt band around it that he wore and held out his hand: "I should like to shake hands with you," he said with a smile.

I gave him my hand and shook his as well as I could. Then came the explanation—how that some years before some little kindness had been shown his mother by my father in the sorrow of her widowhood. "I never thought the chance would ever come for me to repay it," said he; "but I am glad it has come."

"So am I," said I.

As soon as I got ashore I told my father what happened. "Ah," said he, "see how a bit of kindness lives! Now he has passed it on to you. Remember, if you meet anybody that needs a friendly hand, you must pass it on to him."

Years had gone by. I had grown up and quite forgotten it all, until one day I had gone to the station of one of our main lines. I was just going to take my ticket when I saw a little lad crying—a thorough man he was, trying bravely to keep back the troublesome tears as he pleaded with the booking clerk.

"What is the matter?" I asked.

"If you please, sir I haven't money enough to pay my fare. I have all I want but a few pence, and I tell the clerk if he will trust me I will be sure to pay him again."

Instantly upon me flashed the forgotten story of long ago. Here, then, was my chance of passing it on. I gave him the sum he needed and got into the carriage with him. Then I told the little fellow the story of long ago and of the steward's kindness to me. "Now today," I said, "I pass it on to you, and remember that if you meet with any one that needs a kindly hand you must pass it on to him."

"I will, sir," cried the lad as he took my hand, and his eyes flashed with earnestness.

"I am sure you will," I answered.

I reached my destination and left my little friend. The last sign I had of him was as the handkerchief fluttered from the window of the carriage as if to say: "It is all right, sir, I will pass it on."—Rev. Mark Guy Pearce, in New Zealand Methodist Times.

SONGS IN HEAVEN.

I do not think the heaven to which we go
Will be so strange that we shall feel afraid,
But, rather, that the sweetest things we know
Will flourish undecayed.

I do not think the songs will be all new,
Or we should hunger for the sweet old lays Whose echoes oft have bade our souls be true,
Amid the loftier praise.

I think the choirs will hush their anthems, when
They fear for souls from earth the home-sick pang;
And we shall sing to listening angels, then,
The songs our mothers sang.

PERSONALS.

Rev. J. J. Harrell has changed his address from McColl, S. C., to Bessemer City, N. C.

Rev. A. P. Dickson, Jr., address is now Franklin, W. Va., instead of Williamsville, Va.

Rev. Wm. Hooper Adams' address is changed from Springfield, Mo., to Boonville, Mo., to which church he has accepted a call.

At the annual showing of cotton raised by the Steele Creek children for missions, it was reported that $800 had been realized. Of this amount we understand that our old friend, J. B. Watts, contributed $300, from cotton he raised for his son, J. B. Watts, Jr., who is at college.

Rev. G. L. Cook, of Lost City, W. Va., formerly pastor of Paw Creek Church, Mecklenburg Presbytery, paid us a visit last week. Though he hails from Lost City, and though time has dusted his head, he is one of the liveliest men we have lately met. He is, in a trying mountain field, doing a work that few younger men could do.

Dr. E. C. Murray, of St. Pauls, N. C., who is at the Sanitorium for treatment, also paid us a visit.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Chester—In an able address Sunday morning to a large congregation at Purity Presbyterian Church, Rev. H. C. Ostrom, D.D., well known Presbyterian missionary to Japan, at present engaged in the student volunteer movement, declared the Japanese nation was the initial non-Christian government to ascend to the ranks of a first-class power. Dr. Ostrom spoke of Japan as the “young giant of the East,” reeking with agnosticism, but being a youthful nation, it still offered Christian America an opportunity to help mold its un-Christian nationality into that of an ideal Christian one.

Columbia—The Thanksgiving offering for Thornwell Orphanage at the union service in the First Presbyterian Church, Thursday, was $297.29. In previous years a number of persons have sent in their gifts later.

The church was filled with thankful worshippers on Thursday morning and after appropriate exercises, conducted by various Presbyterian divines, the annual sermon was preached by Rev. W. H. Boggs, on the theme, “God’s Unspeakable Gift.” After a comprehensive survey of reasons for thanksgiving as a nation and as individuals, the speaker showed the highest reason of all, the gift of the Saviour. The large congregation was greatly pleased with the discourse and helped by it.

Charleston Presbytery met in its regular session in Harmony Church, and was opened with a sermon by the moderator, Rev. Dr. Melton Clark, on Isaiah 46:10, “Declaring the end from the beginning.”

Rev. P. W. DuBose was elected moderator, and Rev. S. R. Hope, clerk.

Presbytery heard highly instructive addresses from Rev. Dr. Lynn, President of Thornwall Orphanage, and Rev. Dr. D. M. Douglas, President of Presbyterian College of South Carolina.

Mr. W. Fred Lightsey was made Trustee of the Presbyterian College of South Carolina.

Mr. L. A. Beckman, Jr., of the New Weppetaw Church, was received as a candidate for the Gospel Ministry.

Our Income From Cotton and Our Investment in Character

At the present price of cotton we are investing only about one-third of a bale per year in each student in our educational institutions in North Carolina--for World Leadership, for the Church at home and Abroad. And this after 131 years of effort.

These are the figures that shame:

Net value of School Property, Synod N. C.

ENDOWMENT

Davidson College,	$375,000
Union Seminary,	786,929
Flora Macdonald,	44,000
		$1,205,929

EQUIPMENT, LAND, BUILDINGS

Davidson College,	$350,000
Union Seminary,	393 450
Flora Macdonald,	113,557
Mitchell,	100,000
Peace,	165,000
Queens,	491,224
Five Preparatory Schools (Missions)	100,000	$1,713,312
Total Endowment and Equipment		$2,919,241
Deducting Union Seminary,		$1,180,379
Invested after 131 years in North Carolina only		$1,738 862

Income on this accumulated capital of 131 years at 6%, $104,331

Total number Students in our eleven Institutions	1,842
Deducting Union Seminary	76
Total number Students in North Carolina alone	1,766

Dividing the income at 6% on our accumulated capital invested in Christian Education ($104,331) by the number of students in our North Carolina Schools (1,766) we have an average of only $59.00 per year per student invested in training of Christian Leadership.

And the State is investing $180 annual appropriation per year per student in higher education not counting the investment in buildings and equipment.

And the Presbyterians for the Kingdom of God Just $59.00,
Counting Everything

In the name of our Lord and His Church, is it not about time we were raising a Million Dollars and more for Education?

As this goes to press we have $476,000 pledged, most of it conditioned on securing One Million.

(We deducted Union Seminary in the above figures simply for the sake of showing the status in North Carolina, and not because the Seminary is not on our hearts and does not need more help.)

Carefully prepared reports were read on Foreign and Home Missions. A conference was held one afternoon in the interests of Evangelism, and resolutions were adopted calling on the churches to give diligent and prayerful attention to the recommendations of the Assembly's Committee on this subject.

Presbytery gave its unanimous endorsement of the proposed endeavor to raise $1,000,000 in the Synod for educational purposes, and pledged assistance and co-operation.

The overtures sent down by the Assembly for Presbyterian review and action were docketed till the spring meeting of Presbytery.

The next meeting will be held in Beaufort, S. C. the second Tuesday in April, next.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Glade Valley—Rev. C. W. Erwin is now living at Glade Valley and is giving all of his time to evangelistic work in Alleghany county.

Cross Roads—After 10 years of faithful and efficient work, Rev. W. O. Sample has resigned the pastorate here and at Stony Creek. In concurring with him in his request to Presbytery, the church adopted beautiful papers expressing their great appreciation of Mr. Sample and his work.

Gastonia—Rev. Leonard Gill, Synodical evangelist, closed a series of six sermons at Piedmont Mill chapel, a point in our Congregational Home Mission field, last night. Many requests for prayer, rededications on the part of church members and nine received into the Presbyterian Church on profession of faith, and one on statement of faith. There are but 25 families in the little community, and this meeting almost makes it 100 per cent Christian.

Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D., writes: Last Sabbath, the 23 inst., I preached the dedication sermon of a new colored church at Elizabethtown, N. C., and also at the First Presbyterian Church at that place. The First Church has been without a pastor for two years, but the Sabbath School has been maintained, and the Ladies' Missionary Society fostered, and they are preparing to call a pastor now.

At Maxton we are preparing to install a new pipe organ. Hope to have it in place next week.

Salisbury—First Church—Rev. Robert S. Arrowood, Jr., has been assistant to the pastor for the past six months and completed his term of service November 30. During this time he has greatly endeared himself to the pastor and congregation. He is a strong preacher and a good mixer, and only words of commendation have been heard about his services. Mr. Arrowood has a call to the McKinnon Church, Concord, N. C., and offers by other churches, but has not decided where he will locate. The church that secures his services will be fortunate.

Byron Clark, Pastor.

Irving Memorial—This new church was organized with 16 charter members on the third Sunday of October, by a commission of Orange Presbytery, consisting of Revs. P. H. Gwynn, George W. Lee and S. M. Rankin, and Ruling Elder T. L. Smith. It is located in a fine farming section of Rockingham county, near Wentworth. Messrs. S. E. Irving and J. R. Strong were elected, ordained and installed ruling elders. A committee of five was appointed to secure a building site and to erect a building. Sunday afternoon the committee met and accepted, with a vote of thanks, a beautiful site donated by Mr. Scott Irving. A very appropriate prayer service was held on the newly accepted building lot. The church has fine prospects of great usefulness. S. M. Rankin.

Charlotte—A Sunday School Institute is being arranged for by the Presbyterian Ministers' Association of this city for the benefit of the churches and Sunday Schools of the city and county. It will be held at the Second Presbyterian Church, Wednesday and Thursday, December 10 and 11, with sessions at 3:30 and 8 p. m. Dr. Gilbert Glass, of Richmond, Assembly's Superintendent of Sunday Schools, together with his co-workers, Miss Anna Binford and Miss Elizabeth Shields, will conduct the Institute, with additional talks by a few local speakers. There will be sectional conferences held for the workers in the various departments and a general discussion of Sunday School work. All the Presbyterian Sunday Schools in the city and the county are asked to send just as many of the officers and teachers as can be induced to come. Those from out of town will be entertained at supper in the homes of the Presbyterians of the city.

Paw Creek—On Sunday night, November 23, a meeting which had been going on for a week in the Paw Creek Presbyterian Church was closed. Rev. Wm. Black, assisted by his singer, Mr. Andrew Burr, conducted the meeting. The earnest and faithful Gospel preaching of Mr. Black and the beautiful singing of Mr. Burr, assisted by Mr. Black, proved a great means of help to all our people. There were 90 professions of faith in Jesus Christ. Fifty-two of these united with this church. Two more expressed a preference to join this church, but as yet have not done so. There were 12 who gave the Methodist Church as their preference, and 22 who named the Baptist Church as their choice, while two gave no church preference. On the last Sunday of the meeting a free-will offering was taken for Synodical Home Missions, which cause Mr. Black represents. This offering amounted to $187.08. We are profoundly thankful that God sent Mr. Black and Mr. Burr to us for this season of revival.

C. H. Rowan, Pastor.

Asheboro—The Presbyterian Church at Asheboro has been richly blessed during a series of services conducted by Dr. T. M. McConnell. These services mark an epoch in the history of this church. Dr. McConnell is a deeply spiritual man and his preaching is of a rare order—simple, so that a child can understand—intensely scriptural—strong, appealing to the reason, as well as to the hearts of men. He preaches the Gospel in all its purity and under its influence the church was greatly strengthened. Communion service was held on Sunday and there were quite a number who professed faith in Christ and the membership of the church was increased more than 50 per cent. On Sunday afternoon at a congregational meeting a committee of five was appointed to take the initial step toward the building of a new church. The church as it now stands was built in 1848 and owns beautiful and valuable property in the center of town, which it proposes to develop. While the church has never had a very large membership, it has sent valuable additions to the churches in other places. Dr. McConnell has consented to supply the church, and under his leadership, with the enlarged membership and new church, there is a bright future ahead. Cor.

Mebane—Our church enjoyed a rich spiritual blessing when Rev. C. Connor Brown, assisted by Rev. C. O. Pardo, singer, held a series of evangelistic services September 21-28. The gospel was presented in a clear, forcible manner and the visible results were, the re-dedication of the lives of Christians, the acceptance of Christ by twelve members of the Sabbath School and the addition of two by letter.

Our Rally Day exercises were pronounced the best that we have ever had, much interest was manifested and the offering amounted to $155.00. After the usual announcements of promotions and special honors, the pastor presented three Bibles and a Testament for reciting the Catechisms, the number for the past year being twenty-two.

The Ladies' Auxiliary observed the Week of Prayer and Self-denial for Home Missions; a study class was taught by the pastor, using the book, "Christianizing Christendom." The class was well attended and much interest was shown, the offering amounted to $81.60.

A Teachers' Training Class has been organized with twenty-four members. Our Sabbath School has been endeavoring to reach the Standard of Efficiency and the last requirement was met in the organization of the class.

The good people of the church visited the manse the evening before Thanksgiving and filled the house with good cheer and brought many substantial gifts. Such thoughtfulness was greatly appreciated by the pastor and his family.

ALABAMA

Anniston—The large Sunday School room of the First Presbyterian Church here was taxed to capacity yesterday afternoon with an enthusiastic gathering of Presbyterian men, representative of the Eastern group of North Alabama Presbytery; this section lying in the Coosa Valley, from Valley Head, Collinsville, Attalla, Gadsden, through Anniston and Talladega to Sylacauga, Columbiana and Calera.

Arrangements have been made for inspirational addresses preliminary to the organization of the Presbyterian laymen of this section, for aggressive evangelistic effort and employment of an evangelist for all of his time.

Three representatives from the Atlanta Men's Billy Sunday Club came in Sunday night, and their addresses furnished a very unusual setting for this occasion, ably assisted by Capt. F. L. Slaymaker, recently out of active service for the United States, and now engaged in a higher service.

The Atlanta men "could not talk", being plain laymen, credit managers, merchants, etc., representing large business interests in Atlanta, but since the Billy Sunday Movement they have been giving their time and attention to religious work, and, incidentally, attending to their daily affairs to make expenses. No such inspirational addresses have been given, and no such unusual experiences related in the line of religious work as were forcibly packed into one short hour yesterday afternoon, and it is believed that the men who were privileged to hear them came away with determination which will mark an epoch in their lives religiously, as evidenced by unanimous standing vote to accept and carry out to their ability any cause for service which may be put upon them.

An organization was effected as follows: President and Ex-Officio Chairman of Executive Committee, Oscar Dupre, Attalla; First Vice-President, Geo. E. Cater, Anniston; Second Vice-President, E. R. Currier, Jacksonville; Treasurer, R. V. Davidson, Gadsden. Executive Finance Committee: Henry Milner, Columbiana; S. E. Thomas, Sylacauga; D. A. McNeill, Talladega; T. A. Gannaway, New Lebanon; B. S. Russell, Oxford; W. L. Jones, Anniston; Jno. B. Nisbet, Jacksonville; Rutherford Lapsley, Anniston; G. L. McCall, Piedmont; W. A. Leach, Gadsden; W. F. Johnston, Anniston; R. H. Middleton, Attalla; Mr. Keener, Collinsville; Wm. B. Thompson, Valley Head.

It is confidently expected that arrangements will be made to employ an evangelist and superintendent of Home Missions and Sunday School work for all of his time, and such a man is desired for this work as soon as possible.

FLORIDA.

St. Petersburg—At the morning service, November 23, Rev. Mr. Garrison announced the reception of 12 members by certificate. At a congregational meeting held after the service, nine additional deacons were elected, as follows: Capt. Geo. M. Lynch, Dr. Geo. W. Fitch, A. R. Dunlap, Joe B. Robinson, J. C. Ottman, W. J. Stringer, J. A. Metzler, J. W. Apply and W. H. Pearson.

The union Thanksgiving service of the Evangelical churches of the city is to be held in the Presbyterian Church, the largest of our churches, and Rev. Dr. W. H. Hubbard, the new pastor of the Baptist Temple, is to preach the sermon. E. J. Young.

GEORGIA.

Atlanta—Central Church—Two important congregational meetings have been held recently after the morning service. At the first, December 16, Mr. J. T. Wardlaw was elected ruling elder. At the second meeting, Mr. C. O. Smith and Mr. E. H. Gillespy were elected deacons.

Atlanta—West End—The Woman's Auxiliary observed Home Mission Week in an all-day gathering at the church on Wednesday, November 19. There was an attendance of 42 and the time was largely occupied in a comprehensive review of the mission study book, "Christianizing Christendom," which was followed with the intensest interest by all present. Several musical numbers were enjoyed and a delicious lunch was served at the noon hour. At the close of the meeting an offering was taken for the proposed school for colored girls, for which funds are being gathered.

A circle was recently organized by the business women of the church and the response has been very gratifying. There were 32 present at the last meeting and enthusiastic plans were made for future work.

The communion of the Lord's Supper was observed November 23, and a large congregation was in attendance. There were 13 persons received into the membership of the church, five of whom joined by profession of faith and were baptized.

Atlanta—North Avenue Presbyterian Church—On the Sabbath preceding the week of study and prayer for Home Missions we were fortunate in having Dr. Homer McMillan, Secretary of Assembly's Home Missions Committee, occupy the pulpit. Dr. McMillan delivered a most appealing and instructive address. The week was observed with the missionary society meeting Monday afternoon, an all-day meeting Friday, and a special hour for prayer each day.

Mr. Clarence C. Hamilton, National Field Secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, spoke at a city Christian Endeavor rally at this church last week, at which the North Avenue Christian Endeavorers were host. Mr. Hamilton in a stirring address explained the Christian Endeavor program for the next two years in which Loyalty is the keyword—loyalty to Christ, the Church, the Pledge, to Service, and to Christian Endeavor ideals.

Beginning November 25, Dr. Geo. E. Guille, of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, will conduct a Bible school for one week. Much thought and prayer has been spent in preparation of this week, and a good attendance and great things are expected of the week's study of the Bible.

Columbus—The Rose Hill Church has just closed a series of most successful meetings, November 2 to 9. Rev. Frank D. Hunt, the evangelist of Macon Presbytery, conducted the meetings, preaching two splendid sermons daily. These services proved to be a great spiritual blessing to the members of the church and the community at large.

This church has recently elected two elders, Messrs. S. T. Phillips and S. A. Mitchell, and two deacons, Messrs. George Riller and Wm. R. Turner. At the morning service, November 9, Mr. Mitchell, having already served as an elder in his former church in Jackson, Tenn., was installed, and the other three officers were ordained and installed. It was a most impressive service, being conducted by the pastor, Rev. T. K. Currie, assisted by Rev. F. D. Hunt, and the session of the church.

At a recent congregational meeting our pastor's salary was raised 50 per cent in order that he might discontinue the school work in which he has been engaged, and hereafter devote his entire time to the church.

With the burden of the church debt lifted, and new members enrolled, the church is looking forward to a year of increased activity and greater service for the Master.

KENTUCKY.

Louisville—The Highland Presbyterian Church on November 23 extended a unanimous and hearty call to Rev. A. D. P. Gilmour, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Spartanburg, S. C., to become its pastor. This church was left vacant by the death of its beloved pastor, Rev. T. M. Hawes, D.D., on August 29. X.

LOUISIANA.

The Synod of Louisiana met in the First Church, Baton Rouge, November 18, with 35 ministers and 11 elders in attendance.

Rev. H. M. McLain was elected moderator and Elder George Battalora, temporary clerk.

Rev. John I. Armstrong delivered an instructive and impressive address on the Presbyterian Progressive Program.

Dr. J. G. McAllister presented the claims of Louisville Theological Seminary, offering inducements to Synod to affiliate itself with that institution. Similar flattering terms were held out in communications received from Union and Columbia Theological Seminaries. The Synod declined all these offers with an expression of the kindness and courtesy shown therein, and left its Presbyteries free during the interregnum, until another theological school shall be established within its bounds, to send their candidates where they choose, under the regulation of the Assembly.

The control of Silliman Institute was transferred from the Presbytery of Louisiana to the Synod, which elected nine trustees, three from each Presbytery, as the new charter provides.

The property of the Louisiana Orphanage at Minden was transferred to its newly organized board of trustees. It embraces 70 acres. Owing to the proximity of oil fields its value may be greatly enhanced. The Synod hopes that the time may not be far distant when the operation of an orphanage within its bounds shall be realized.

Palmer Orphanage was commended to the sympathetic and generous support, especially by Thanksgiving and Christmas offerings.

Rev. George Summey was unanimously nominated for the ad interim committee on closer relations. He requested every minister and elder in the Synod for an expression of opinion on this question. Rev. J. F. McKenzie is his alternate.

Synod endorsed a proposed drive by the Assembly's Committee on Education for $150,000 within the Synod to be divided on the percentage of two for Silliman Institute and one for the Louisiana Orphanage.

A committee was appointed to prepare the form of a charter for all our churches that will conform with the standards and policy of the church and the laws of the state.

The Montreat Normal School was commended to the liberality of the churches. Synod endorsed the campaign for raising 200,000 for the equipment of Montreat.

The Synod fully accepts with the other Synods the Assembly's Progressive Program, with the distinct understanding that this program is to be carried out independently by the Church without the aid of any other agencies.

The dinners served in the basement by the ladies of the First Church, with numerous after-dinner speeches by members, were delightful occasions, and Synod expressed its keenest appreciation for these and all the other courtesies shown its members.

The next stated meeting will be held at Abbeville.

TENNESSEE.

Nashville—First Church—On Reformation Sunday, Dr. Vance preached on "The Edict of Nantes," and a collection amounting to $1,300 was taken for Protestant Relief in France and Belgium.

On Armistice day the women gave a luncheon in the Sunday school building, with the women who had joined the church during the last year as honor guests. Two hundred and fifty were present, and all the women's societies of the church received additions to their membership as a result of the interest awakened.

At the close of public worship Sunday morning, November 16, the following additional elders were elected: Messrs. Lemuel R. Campbell, J. C. Lucas, Meade Frierson, Thomas P. Kennedy, Wm. Ridley Wills, George M. White, Smith Tenison and J. Owen Hendley. A congregational meeting is called for November 30 to elect 15 additional deacons.

On the afternoon of November 16 a churchwide canvass of the congregation was conducted in the interest of Sunday school efficiency and extension. This is a part of the Church's progressive program. Fifty teams in automobiles covered the entire congregation in one afternoon.

Rev. A. Gibson Link, of Campbellsville, Ky., has been elected assistant pastor, and expects to begin his work December 1.

TEXAS.

Notes from Texas-Mexican Presbytery—The last quarterly report shows 32 members received on profession of faith, and gives a total for six months of 80 as compared with 82 for the whole of last year. Total of contributions for the quarter were $1,236 as against $669 for corresponding quarter of last year.

At a called meeting of Presbytery on November 10 Licentiate Guillermo A. Walls, who is in charge of the Sunday School interest of the Presbytery, was ordained to the full work of the ministry.

At the same meeting the San Benito Church, formerly connected with Tamaulipas Presbytery, was received and placed under the care of Rev. I. P. Balderas.

Plans were also made for the permanent publication of a quarterly bulletin of the work in Spanish for circulation among the churches of the Presbytery.

Galveston—The First Presbyterian Church of this city, under the leadership of Rev. J. P. Robertson, D.D., and with the help of some resident Presbyterian Mexicans, has inaugurated a vigorous work among the large Mexican colony, an example that many others might follow with mutual profit.

Laredo—Rev. Elias Trevino assisted the pastor of this church in a series of services from November 3 to 9 in which eight members were received on profession of faith and a large number of candidates for membership were not received awaiting fuller instructions as to the step they proposed to take.

San Antonio—The Sunday School has had a large increase in membership as the result of the recent campaign. The attendance during the rainy weather has been around the hundred mark, and the collections from $6 to $10.

Kingsville—The pastor of this church has a very promising work in two of the nearby ranches in addition to his flourishing work in the city.

Austin—Miss Anne E. Dysart, a member of the Mexico Mission, has returned to Austin and entered heartily into the work here for another season.

We have just succeeded in completing the transfer of the property formerly belonging to the Methodist Mission, to our own Executive Committee of Home Missions. This transfer gives us a valuable location, though the dilapidated building on it is really not fit for use. We are looking forward to the time when we may be equipped for doing our duty to the cause of Mexican evangelization in this capital city.

Some of the absent members have returned and the Sunday School enrollment has gone to above 60, almost twice what it was formerly.

Corpus Christi—Our church building here suffered some from the recent gulf storm, being already badly in need of repair as well as enlargement. This work should be done without delay in order to preserve the property and to accommodate the growing congregations. We would be glad to have some voluntary help for this purpose. The American brethren of this city have always taken care of the material interests of this work, without help from elsewhere, but as they lost so heavily in the storm, they should not be called on at this time for any extra help.

Rev. R. D. Campbell.

VIRGINIA.

Lexington—Several weeks ago our pastor received an automobile as a present from the congregation. This will enable him to reach outlying points for preaching, and also to visit members whose homes are distant.

At the regular monthly meeting of the session, held Monday night, Nov. 10th, it was decided to appeal to the congregation to increase their gifts to Foreign Missions by at least $1000 before the end of the present church year, and the pastor presented the cause Sunday morning, Nov. 16th. At that same service two members, man and wife were received by letter. Instead of preaching a sermon that morning the pastor and Elder James Lewis Howe gave the congregation an account of the Synod in Charlottesville, an excellent way of instructing people who find the reports in the church papers rather difficult to follow, and these people are no doubt in a large majority.

Petersburg—Second Church—The service on Sunday morning, November 16, was of the nature of a memorial of the late Rev. Isaac E. Yohannan, for 16 years a missionary of this church in Persia. While news of his death was received some months ago, the church delayed holding this service in the hope that they might have present Rev. Isaac M. Yonan, moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Persia, known to be en route to America.

After the reading of a brief memorial by the pastor, Dr. Yonan spoke of the life, the labors and the death of Mr. Yohannan. As he told the story of his work as pastor, evangelist and missionary to the Moslems, and finally during the days of the war as chaplain in the camps and hospitals ministering to friend and foe alike, until heartbroken and dying of hunger and thirst, he fell almost in sight of relief, there was not a person present but who thanked God anew for this man and his ministry.

The Missionary Survey's Campaign for 50,000 Subscribers.—The Goal: A Survey in Every Home. 27,250!! Up We Go! Now what do you think of that? Up Jack climbs on the circulation pole, in spite of the advance of 25 cents in subscription price to 75 cents per year in clubs of five or more, and $1.00 per year for individual subscriptions. Where is our friend "Gloomy Gus," who thought the ladies would not submit to the raise in the price of their missionary magazine? Come forth, prophet of evil, and show thy face! Jack wishes to warn his friends, however, that "Christmas is coming." And with these days of December come accumulating engagements which will threaten to absorb interest to the exclusion of renewals. During November and December a great many subscriptions expire. Those are busy days with everybody. Many other interests clamor for one's attention and support. But there can hardly arise a more important thing than the continuance of the Missionary Survey. If renewals should be neglected during these two months, down would go our circulation. Your individual renewal and the renewals of other subscribers in your church may not seem to be a large matter alone, but these are what go to make up the whole, and here in the Survey office their neglect would be seriously felt. May we suggest to club agents and to all subscribers that they put their missionary magazine first on the list for December activities—send in a full list of renewals and some new subscriptions as a further boost to that "Climbing Figure" at the top of this page.

The Honor Roll.

Churches going on the Honor Roll this month, having secured an average of one subscription to every five communicants or better are: Jacksonville, N. C., Church of the Covenant, Wilmington, N. C., DeRidder, La., and New Willard, Texas.—December Missionary Survey.

A PLEA FOR THE TWELVE.

By Mrs. E. C. Cronk.

8,748 Hours in the year. 12 For the Missionary Society.
8,736 Balance on hand.

With this service the Yohannan Society, that included in its number others than the immediate resident members, went out of existence, closing a chapter of missionary activity which, while unspeakably sad in its ending, was signally blessed of God. And the end is not yet, for "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church."

At night Dr. Yonan spoke to a large and deeply interested audience on "The Gallant Fight of the Assyrian Nation in the Cause of the Allies and the Sake of Christianity."

The Campaign Committee of the Assembly's Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship has secured the services of Rev. S. Waters McGill, Nashville, Tenn., as Campaign Manager for the Presbyterian Progressive Program.

Mr. McGill is a graduate of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, at Louisville, Ky., an ordained minister in our church, and has had large and eminently successful experience in financial campaigns for religious organizations, educational institutions and government causes.

The committee and the church are to be congratulated on securing Mr. McGill for this important position, for which he has special fitness for organizing and promoting the campaign through our church.

He is associated with the secretary, Wm. Fred Galbraith 407-12 Times building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Deaths.

IN MEMORIAM.

John Frederick Gilmore.

Mr. John Frederick Gilmore died at Fayetteville, N. C., December 20th, 1918, after a long and trying illness, on his fifty-eighth birthday. Though a native of Bladen County he had become widely known throughout Robeson and Cumberland Counties.

The circumstances of life forced him to assume heavy responsibilities even in his boyhood and he had made his own way in the world. From his young manhood he had been engaged largely in the lumber business in which he achieved an eminent success combined with an excellent reputation for sterling integrity.

At the age of twenty he united with the Presbyterian Church of St. Pauls, N. C., in which church he became an active and energetic deacon. For fifteen years he made his home at what is now known as Rex, N. C., where he was engaged in business. Here he was greatly beloved and was instrumental in the erection of the Presbyterian Church. To the day of his death this little village held a large place in his thought and affection. At the time of his death he had been an active deacon in the First Presbyterian Church of Fayetteville for more than five years.

He was a man of marked individuality. Unostentatious in the extreme, impatient of sham and pretense, a firm believer in the value of the homely things of life, his manner of life was simple and and his charities were not only done in secret but in the most unexpected places. The friends of his youth all recall his unusual devotion to his mother and his death leaves a vacant place in the hearts of many people who will keep his memory green. Intensely loyal to those whom he loved he was equally appreciative of the kindness and courtesy of others.

He is survived by a wife who was Miss Annie Johnson, of Lake City, S. C., and his two sisters, Mrs. Mary Patterson of Bladen County, and Miss Ophelia Gilmore, of St. Pauls, N. C.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. George Stephens.

Mrs. George Stephens was the daughter of Mrs. J. S. Thompson, of Atlanta, who for years has been prominent in mission work in her own church, (The Central Presbyterian) and also in the Synod of Georgia.

Mrs. Stephens has a sister in China, Mrs. F. L. Brown.

Mr. Stephens was away on a preaching tour. One morning Mrs. Stephens got up to look after the children; the Chinese servant heard her fall in the bathroom; running in she found her unconscious and the lamp overturned. She put out the burning oil before it reached Mrs. Stephens. She put out the fire and called for help. Mrs. Stephens was carried to her bed and medical help summonsed. She regained consciousness and shortly after twin girls were born, but never breathed. Dr. Keaten who was with her, called in Mrs. Grier. She came in the afternoon and although everything possible was done, she died about 9:30 p. m. Mr. Stephens did not reach home until three hours after her death.

One of the missionaries in writing of her says, "She was a splendid missionary, had the language better than anyone here, and was so full of energy and fun and love for the Chinese."

There was first the Chinese service and then the foreign service. Mr. Stephens with remarkable control, led the hymns, all favorites of his wife. His fortitude is remarkable.

A very sad feature, second only to the grief of husband and the two little children left, was the terrible shock to her mother. For years Mrs. Thompson had her heart set to go to China. All preparations had been made for the visit and she set sail with a heart full of joy. The sad intelligence did not reach her until landing.

NEW SUNDAY SCHOOL BUILDING.

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy seven years old, and in the second grade. I like my teacher fine. I go to the First Presbyterian Sunday School. I have a little brother four years old. His name is Ben Lacy Rose. Please put this in the Standard as I want my two grandmas and two grandpas to see this. We are going to have a new Sunday School. My papa is the superintendent. Your friend, Charles G. Rose, Jr.

Fayetteville, N. C.

ENJOYS THE LETTERS.

Dear Standard:

I wonder if there is a child anywhere that enjoys reading the children's letters and children's stories in the Standard more than I. I've never written you a letter; so thought I would write while I'm staying with my aunt and uncle, and surprise father. I live at Old Town, N. C., but am going to stay this winter in Elmwood, with my aunt and uncle, because they have no children except a baby, and want me to stay with them. I like to stay because they live on a farm and there are so many things to interest me. I am going to school every day. I am in the lower fifth grade. I love my teacher, Miss Ina Morrison. Your little nine year old friend, ASKS A QUESTION.

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl in the first grade. I am six years old. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. I like my teacher. Her name is Miss Lot'ie Bennett. My school teacher is Miss Shel'on Zoeller. I like them both. I can not write myself, so my sister is writing for me. I will close asking a question:

Who was it that dropped his axe in the water and it floated, and where do you find it? Your little unseen friend,

BILLY'S LIVELY IMAGINATION

Billy's lively imagination was so well known in his family that the only thing the grown folks did was to laugh when Billy came in wild-eyed, with a big story. Imagination is a big word for little folks, but it means something like making up stories to write or tell—not telling an untruth, but thinking things are larger or smaller than they really are. Billy never made anything smaller, for his imagination was the kind that saw mountains where there were only little hills; as every one knew how easily he was frightened and how large things looked to his round, blue eyes, there was no harm done.

"Bear in the orchard! Bear in the orchard! He's coming right this way!

Shut the door, quick!" screamed Billy, rushing into the kitchen and almost upsetting his Aunt Molly, who was icing a big lemon pie for dinner. The threshers would drive in for dinner before noon, so Aunt Molly and four other ladies were cooking so many good things that it is a wonder Billy ever could have been persuaded to go for apples to the orchard. "The bear is large as an elephant!" he added, when he could get his breath.

"It's the little calf in the orchard," said Aunt Molly calmly. "I heard it bawling a few minutes ago, and I suppose Billy was teasing it, or perhaps it was frightened at him. It is not used to children."

"It is a bear! A real bear!" said Billy. "It growled at me."

Then all the ladies laughed, and went into the dining room to help Billy's mother set the table. It was early, many of the things were ready to put on the table, for threshers are always in a hurry, and like meals served promptly. Billy's mother began telling of the time Billy declared he saw a big snake, and it turned out to be an angle worm; and Aunt Molly said once he thought a bird in the sky was an airplane, but all the time Billy was insisting that it really was a bear.

"What is that noise in the kitchen?" said Aunt Molly, as a big crash was heard. "It sounds as if something was falling. Billy, please go and see if that water pail was too close to the edge of the table and slipped off."

"I'm afraid of the bear," whimpered Billy.

Aunt Molly opened the door, but she shut it again quickly, while her eyes were as frightened as Billy's. "It is a bear! A big brown bear!" she screamed. "He had his paw in my lemon pie."

Then everybody was frightened for sure, and Billy hid in his mother's skirts, crying.

"Don't you be scared, lady," called a big voice from the kitchen. "I've got him, and I'll pay all damages."

They ventured to peer out through a crack, and there was the bear's keeper leading him away, with lemon custard dripping from his nose and paws. He had broken through the screen door and begun eating the good things on the table. The keeper told them they were both tired from the long walk, so he tied the bear to an apple tree while he took a sleep. The bear broke loose and followed Billy to the house, where he enjoyed the pies which had been prepared for the threshing dinner.

"Never mind paying for the pies," said Aunt Molly, for the bear's keeper looked old and poor. "I can make some more. If we had listened to Billy and shut the door, the bear could not have come in."

"That was once it wasn't 'magination," said Billy, when the bear was safely out of the yard.

"I should say not," said his mother. "Billy, next time you see a bear coming through the orchard we certainly will shut the doors and lock them, for nice lemon pies are too good to be wasted on a big, old bear."—Journal and Messenger.

FLAPJACK JIMMY.

There was only one kind of work Jimmy Peace disliked, and that was helping in the kitchen. He milked the cow, did errands and weeded the garden, without a word, but when it came to cooking he did not look so cheerful.

Still, he was good-natured about it. His mother took in sewing, and sometimes she could not put her work aside long enough to get supper; then Jimmy had to make biscuits and scramble eggs. He knew how to make flapjacks, too; that is how he got his nickname. One evening when the other boys were sliding down the hill near his house they peeped in at the kitchen window to see why he did not join them, and there was Jimmy, cooking flapjacks. He looked so funny in his big apron that then and there they nicknamed his Flapjack Jimmy.

After that he disliked more than ever to make flapjacks, but some one had to do it, and so he used to tackle the job with a good will. He whistled so hard that the flapjacks seemed to jump up and down in the griddle in time with the tune. And he did not stop whistling until the last cake was cooked.

One day at noon when Jimmy was making the kitchen fire, a stranger knocked at the door and asked the way to Blackburn's camp on Kinnicut Mountain. He and some other men, he explained, were going up to the camp for a few days, but they were not sure of the road.

"You seem to know these hills pretty well," he remarked when Jimmy had finished directing him.

"I do," Jimmy said. "I've been climbing them ever since I can remember."

"Want a job?" the stranger asked suddenly.

The boy jumped; he did want a job. It was not often that he had a chance to earn any money.

"I'll give you a dollar to show us the way up to Blackburn's" the stranger offered.

Fifteen minutes later Jimmy was leading the party up the steep side of Kinnicut Mountain. His short legs moved so fast that the men found it hard to keep up with him. Later in the day, when a drizzling rain set in and the trail became more and more slippery, they did not even try to keep up; but the flash of their guide's red sweater as he pushed ahead among the trees showed them the right trail.

"It's a good thing I found that boy," said Mr. Taylor, the man who had knocked at the door.

The others agreed. They agreed, too, that they hoped Jimmy would soon bring them to the camp for they were drenched to the skin and nearly starved.

But when they reached the place at last, cold and wet and hungry, they found no cheer waiting them. The man who was to cook for them had not come and the camp was silent and cold. The travelers groaned as they entered the dreary place.

Mr. Taylor went into the little room that served as a kitchen and came back looking gloomy. "The supplies are all here," he said, "but much good that will do us! We can't eat the stuff raw."

Jimmy looked up from the fire that he was kindling on the hearth. "I suppose I can stir up something for supper," he said. But he spoke reluctantly; the fact is, he did not fancy turning from a guide into a cook.

The crowd looked at him eagerly. "Well," they said, "you don't look much like a cook, but it will be better than nothing."

So the men dried their clothes by the fire while Jimmy bustled about in the kitchen. He found flour, butter, eggs, and canned milk among the supplies. "It looks like flapjacks," he said to himself with a sigh. He tied a towel round his waist and began to whistle.

Half an hour later he called the others in. Supper was steaming on the kitchen table; hot coffee, fried bacon, scrambled eggs—and flapjacks. The men sat down with grunts of satisfaction.

Jimmy put more wood into the stove and plied between the fire and the table with platters of golden-brown cakes. The campers ate so fast that he had to mix another bowl full of batter and keep greasing the griddle afresh. He tossed flapjacks until his arm ached.

When at last the men had finished they pushed back their chairs and cheered for the cook. "It was very much better than nothing," they said. "No mistake about that!"

The next morning Jimmy cooked flapjacks again. When the regular cook came a little later, he said he must hurry home.

"Don't forget, we shall want you next year," Mr. Taylor said. "Here's your money."

Jimmy looked at the money; it was a five dollar bill. He hesitated.

"The flapjacks alone were worth five dollars," said Mr. Taylor with a smile.

Jimmy flushed all over his freckled face. He had never before had five dollars in his whole ten years, but somehow he did not feel right about taking so much money.

"Flapjacks aren't hard to make," he said.

Mr. Taylor looked at him quizzically. "But they're hard to keep on making," he answered.

Jimmy knew that his secret was out. Mr. Taylor had seen him getting ready to cook dinner at home and had guessed that he was an old hand at the job.

He grinned. "You're right," he said. But as he dashed down the side of Kinnicut Mountain, with his precious five-dollar bill clutched in his hand, he thanked his stars that he had learned how to make flapjacks.—Marian Willard, in The Youth's Companion.

Woman's Auxiliary.

It is not much to ask—12 from 8,748—yet it is more than most of us give.

Our Savior gave His life for missions.

Is it asking too much that we should give 12 hours a year to prayer for, and study of that for which the Son of God, gave His life?

This is not a plea for money nor a plea for work.

It is a plea at the first of the year for twelve of the 8,748 hours of the year, for the Missionary Society.

We need givers and we need workers, but the most discouraging thing to missionary leaders is the poor attendance at the meetings.

Whether you belong to the Society or not, you are invited to attend the meetings this year. Will you give twelve hours to Missions this year?

We lead such busy lives that unless we plan ahead, many important things are crowded out.

Most of us have a sort of general expectation of attending the meetings, but first one thing and then another comes up and the missionary meetings are crowded out. We would not definitely throw them out and avow our purpose not to attend, but gradually they are crowded out.

Make twelve engagements for this year. Set aside one hour of each month now. Write down the date where you will see it and not forget it. Hold these engagements sacredly above petty interruptions and flimsy excuses. Plan definitely to attend the twelve meetings of the year.

Educational.

Davidson—The campus is pleased to learn that S. T. McCloy, class of '18, from Monticello, Ark., now a student at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, has received an appointment to a Rhodes Oxford Scholarship for October, 1920.

The State Union of Student Volunteers has accepted through its president, Miss Janie Kluttz, of North Carolina College, Greensboro, an invitation to hold the annual conference in March, 1920, here at Davidson. The invitation was extended by the Student Volunteer band of Davidson through R. E. McClure.

The approach of Thanksgiving day has a double interest this year, as the week-end will usher in the Senior oratoricals, the date for this important event in the life of the graduating class having been moved several years ago from April to November.

Rev. Dr. Richards, who has been touching the top places in his sermonic work almost every Sunday this fall, preached an unusually strong sermon last Sunday from the text, "Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth." The outstanding thought in the sermon was that men call today for a practical religion, one that shall manifest itself in good works, in humanitarian effort, in a life that will make men happy and content in the life here.

Rev. J. T. Pharr, well known to the students as "Tim" Pharr in college days, and who is soon to take a wife, and a pastorate at Renick, W. Va., has been giving some valued help to Coach Crayton this fall from time to time in training the football squad.

Columbia Seminary—The years work at Columbia Seminary continues to progress most satisfactorily. Under the supervision of President Whaling, and the direction of the Rev. W. S. Epperson, D.D., intendant, everything possible is being done for the comfort and well being of the students, and the entire body feels that the Seminary is in the midst of one of its most successful sessions.

Dr. Whaling has guaranteed to each candidate for the ministry boarding at the refectory, board at the rate of $12 per month. In order to make up the difference between this amount and the cost of the food a number of churches and friends of the Seminary have sent groceries and canned goods for use in the dining hall, any such will be most acceptable when shipped to Richard F. Simpson, Manager, in care of the Presbyterian Seminary.

The Rev. Mr. Daffin, Synod of Florida, one of the missionaries of the Southern Presbyterian Church to Brazil, was a visitor on the campus last week. Mr. Daffin is an alumnus of Columbia Seminary and gave the students a most interesting account of the work in Brazil.

Several of the professors have recently returned from meetings of the Synods, which control the Seminary. The Rev. Thornton Whaling, D.D., President, attended the sessions of the Synods of Alabama and Mississippi; Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., the Synod of Georgia; and Rev. W. M. McPheeters, and Rev. J. O. Reavis, D. D., the Synods of South Carolina and Florida, respectively.

All the students regretted exceedingly that Dr. Whaling was called away last week to Virginia, on account of the illness of his mother. Also they are hoping for the speedy recovery of John D. Gillispie, a member of the senior class, who has been in a local hospital for several days.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

By R. F. Kirkpatrick, Chairman Sub-Committee on Evangelism.

All of the Assembly's evangelistic staff are now busily engaged in holding meetings, and the Assembly's evangelistic program is being energetically carried out.

Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, D.D., has taken up his evangelistic work again and is having fine success. In a recent meeting at Carrollton, Ga., there were 65 conversions, and the entire church felt the spiritual uplift of his presence.

Rev. Frank Fincher, D.D., has just concluded a very successful campaign among a number of the larger churches in North Mississippi Presbytery, as a consequence of which the churches have been greatly revived and there have been large numbers of additions. At Holly Springs, there were 130 confessions of faith; at Clarkdale, 119; at Oxford, 108; and at Sumner, 77. Dr. Fincher's time is scheduled up to March 15, 1920, and churches desiring his services should correspond with him at once.

Rev. Trigg A. M. Thomas, D.D., conducted a very effective evangelistic campaign in Lewisburg, W. Va., during the month of October, as a visible result of which there were 238 conversions, 56 transfers of letters; and the Sunday following the revival 136 of these were received into the Presbyterian church, 52 of them receiving the sacrament of baptism. The entire community felt the uplift of this great service, and there will be many others yet to be received into the church.

Rev. R. A. Brown, in addition to his labors as Regional Evangelist in Arkansas and Oklahoma, has been finding time to co-operate with the church at Fayetteville, Ark., in securing a pastor. Mr. Brown recently held a meeting at Batesville, Ark., in which there were 10 additions to the Presbyterian church and an offering of $235 for our Assembly's work.

Rev. J. Mc. D. Lacy is still engaged in an evangelistic campaign in West Hanover Presbytery. One of his recent meetings at Bethel church in that Presbytery, in which there were 11 additions to the church on profession of faith and 2 by letter. As soon as this campaign is finished, Mr. Lacy expects to go to Lexington Presbytery for a number of meetings.

Rev. R. M. Hall, D.D., has entered upon his duties as Regional Evangelist in Texas, his first meeting being at Cleburne. The weather throughout proved most unfavorable, yet there were 6 additions to the church on profession of faith and a liberal offering for the Assembly's work.

It is very gratifying to note that many of our Presbyteries and Synods are falling in line with the evangelistic goal designated by the Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship for our Assembly as one of the objectives in the Four Million Campaign this year. This objective, it will be remembered, call for 50,000 additions to our church on profession of faith by April 1. It is hoped that all our Presbyteries and Synods will assume a definite evangelistic responsibility and make energetic efforts to attain their goals.

Miscellaneous

IRELAND AND ENGLAND.

The contention now between Ireland and England which has been pressed into this country and which has found its way into our Congressional debates, is not well understood by the American people. The lack of knowledge leads to unjust conclusions.

About seven hundred and fifty years ago the Pope Adrian, who then had great civil power, directed King Henry of England "to enter the island of Ireland in order to bring that people into subjection to laws and to exterminate the nurseries of vice from the country." The following Pope, Alexander, commended the king for saving the people of Ireland, "who in utter disregard of the fear of God, are wandering into every downward course of crime, and are destroying one another with mutual slaughter." King Henry entered Ireland on invitation of an Irish king. His rule was unanimously accepted by the people and blessed by the bishops. Repeatedly England had to interfere to save these people from mutual slaughter. They had a national parliament. Under the English kings Ireland had an Irish parliament, under which the country continued in a state of turmoil and sedition, ending in the terrible rebellion of 1798, in which ten thousand people were killed. The Act of Union put an end to this parliament and its accompanying disorder and conflict. Since then Ireland, like Scotland and Wales, has had direct representation in the united parliament. Under this union Ireland prospered increasingly, until now the same old rebellious and contentious spirit is renewed and there is now a demand for Ireland's independence. The party which favors this has been in a state of opposition to the British Government, has tried to carry out various plans of rebellion and even conspired with Germany in the recent war.

The province of Ulster, in the North of Ireland, is inhabited by people who are largely of Scotch blood and are known as Scotch-Irish, North-of-Ireland people, and Ulstermen. These people have favored the united parliament, the Union act, and are known as Unionists. They are unflinchingly loyal to the United Kingdom. In 1912 there was a deliberate attempt to force Ulster out of the British Union and compel her to submit to an Irish parliament. Ulster defended herself and has remained in the union, and her sons and her resources were loyally devoted to England in the recent war, while the Sinn Fein and other sympathizers were acting disloyally. This whole question is one belonging to England alone, and it should be left to her to solve it. It is a violation of international polity for Americans to meddle with it. Even natives of Ireland, now American citizens, should turn it over to the old country, and all promoters of this question canvassing this country should be sent home.

Some Things You Should Know About Your Church

II. HOW SECURE THE LEADERS NEEDED.

In order to secure the right kind of men and women in sufficient quantities for the ministry and mission service of the Church clear thinking, definite action, and earnest, importunate, believing prayer is needed.

GOD'S PART.

The Master gave the real solution when He said, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into His harvest." It is the work of the Holy Spirit to guide boys and girls and men and women into God's plan for their lives. But the Holy Spirit works through human agency and a prayer, a word, a letter, and a leaflet have been used of God to help thousands see the purpose of God for them.

THE PART OF THE PASTOR AND SESSION.

Possibly the heaviest responsibility rests upon the Pastor. He must hold before parents and their children the claim of God upon the young lives. In former days Sessions used to call the youth of the Church before them for prayer and counsel about their life's work.

That ministers are giving their own sons to the ministry is revealed by the fact that of 2,051 candidates in recent years 360 were sons of the manse.

THE PARENTS' PART.

The responsibility of parents to maintain an atmosphere in the home in which high and holy aims of life may thrive is supreme. Decisions are formed much earlier in life than many appreciate. Of 1,937 candidates in our Church 29 heard the call of God to the ministry and decided to give their lives to that work under 10 years of age, 127 between 11 and 15, 953 between 16 and 20, and 589 between 21 and 25, while practically all declared that the early influence of the home was the most potent factor in their decision.

THE TEACHERS' HELP.

Few teachers fully appreciate the wonderful opportunity they have of helping their pupils to reach correct judgments about the problem of life work. It is not necessary or wise to urge a specific course upon them, but to show them the fundamental principles upon which such a question may be decided: God's ownership, His plan for every life, the importance of making life count for most both here and hereafter—the stewardship of life.

RESPONSIBILITY OF THE YOUTH TO THE CHURCH.

In this time of need for a large increase in the number of capable leaders each child of God should cry from a heart willing to obey, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" It becomes your duty to pray, to study God's Word, to examine your gifts, to study the needs of the world and the opportunities of the Church, to hush the noises of the world as God says "Be still and know that I am God."

UNITED PRAYER AND EFFORT.

To secure the 2,000 boys and girls who should be in training now in the school, college, training school and theological seminary all should give themselves to prayer and work. Sermons, addresses, prayers and the wise use of literature in Church, Sunday School, Y. P. Societies, Men's and Women's Societies and in the homes should be constantly used.

The Executive Committee will send to any of the youth of the Church whose names and addresses are forwarded to the Louisville office the choicest leaflets on the work of the ministry and mission service. They will also forward helpful literature to those pastors, parents and teachers who desire to help in this great work.

Letters From Rheumatics

Possibly you have imagined that you could never get your own consent to write a testimonial letter, but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of Rheumatism you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring. This water overcomes many diseases, including Indigestion, Gout, Uric Acid Poisoning and Liver and Kidney diseases, but no patrons of the Springs are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water than those who have been relieved of their Rheumatism. Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the Management:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick Headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of Stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The Water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from Rheumatism or any curable disease accept the guarantee offered below by signing your name. Clip and mail to the Shivar Spring,

Box 4-F, Shelton, S.-C.

Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

DREAD OF END OF THE YEAR.

"I dread to come to the end of the year," said a friend to us recently; "it makes me realize I am growing old."

That suggests a question: When is a man old?

In Shakespeare's time a man was old at forty, and often, because of the gay life, invalidated long before that.

Sir Walter Scott at fifty-five bemoaned the fact that he was an old man.

Montaigne retired to his castle at thirty-eight to spend his declining years in peace and study.

Dr. Samuel Johnson once remarked that at thirty-five a man had reached his peak, and after that his course must be downward.

Physiologists tell us that in all mammals except man the period of life is five times the period of growth. A dog gets its full growth in two years, and lives ten; a horse in five years, and lives twenty-five. On this basis a man should live from one hundred to one hundred and fifty years.

Why were these three men—Scott, Montaigne and Johnson—old while they were still comparatively young men?

The answer is, because they felt old and acted old.

William James said that some men are "old fogies at twenty-five."

He was right. The minute a man ceases to grow—no matter what his years—that minute he begins to be old. As long as he can look back on every year and say, "I grew," he is still young.

The minute he ceases to grow, the day he says to himself, "I know all that I need to know,"—that day youth stops. He may be twenty-five or seventy-five, it makes no difference. On that day he begins to be old.—Ex.

160 HENS—1500 EGGS.

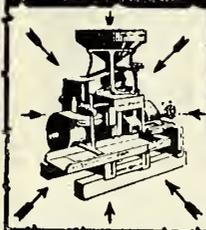

Mrs. H. M. Patton, Waverly, Mo., writes: "I fed 2 boxes of 'More Eggs' and got 1500 eggs from 160 hens in exactly 21 days." This scientific tonic has made big egg profits for thousands of poultry raisers all over the U. S. It revitalizes the hens, tones them up and makes them lay all the time. Get ready now and make big profits out of your hens this winter. A $1.00 package will double the egg production and a million dollar bank guarantees to refund your money if you are not entirely satisfied. Send $1.00 now to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3259 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and get a season's supply of "More Eggs." Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

114 Eggs a Day Now Instead of 25 a Day

That Means About $105 Extra Income Per Month for Mrs. Ropp.

"I have 200 hens, including late pullets not old enough to lay, and had been getting 25 to 30 eggs a day. Then I tried Don Sung in the feed, and am now getting 107 to 114 eggs a day." Mrs. Essie B. Ropp, R. R. 2, Littles, Ind.

Mrs. Ropp got this increase of 7 dozen a day in the middle of winter. At 50 cents a dozen, 30 days a month, his makes $105 extra income a month. The Don Sung for her 200 hens cost her about $2.50 per month. You can see how well it paid her, and we'll guarantee it will pay you. Here's our offer:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 466 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

AN IMPORTANT CASE.

The Chemung case in the Synod of New York has been finally disposed of. At least, it has been tried and decided, we hear of no appeal. Nearly two years ago the Presbytery of Chemung licensed Mrs. William H. Chapman to preach. The statement was made that such action was taken in order to bring the question of the licensure of women before the Church. Dr. Robert C. Hallock, of Dundee, complained to Synod. As the flu prevented a meeting of Synod Dr. Hallock sent a memorial and complaint to the Assembly, which directed that the case go to Synod. At the meeting of Synod in Rome, N. Y., the Judicial Commission, Dr. Robert Watson, chairman, returned a unanimous verdict directing the Presbytery to rescind the license and admonished it that there are constitutional and orderly ways of seeking changes in our Church law. After the trial an overture to the Assembly proposed changes in the law was offered but Synod promptly voted "No Action." A committee of the General Assembly, of which Dr. S. Hall Young

WONDERFUL EGG PRODUCER.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results. A dollar's worth of "More Eggs" will double this year's production of eggs, so if you wish to try this great profit maker, write E. J. Reefer, poultry expert, 3259 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., who will send you a season's supply of "More Eggs" Tonic for $1.00 (prepaid). So confident is Mr. Reefer of the results that a million dollar bank guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request and the tonic costs you nothing. Send a dollar today. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.

Hyomei

THE BREATH of the FOREST

THAT KILLS CATARRH GERMS.

While lecturing in London, the noted Richard T. Booth, founder of the blue ribbon movement, and temperance orator and leader of international fame, who induced over a million men to sign the pledge, developed a very serious catarrhal trouble.

He went to inland Australia, where he breathed day and night the antiseptic balsams as given off by the forests, especially the Eucalyptus trees. This experience led Mr. Booth to the discovery of the most wonderful catarrhal treatment,—Hyomei.

Hyomei is a germ killing vapor treatment formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. This medicated air is especially effective in treating Catarrh and colds of the head, Catarrhal Coughs, Bronchial Catarrh, Spasmodic Croup, Catarrhal Laryngitis or Hay Fever. It destroys the catarrhal germs and restores health.

Sold on a positive guarantee of satisfactory results or money refunded. Complete outfit $1.15; extra bottle inhalant 60c. At druggists or by mail, if your druggist cannot supply it. Booth's Hyomei Co., Ithaca, N. Y.

"The Ministry of the Word"

G. CAMPBELL MORGAN, D. D.

The James Sprunt Lectures Just Delivered at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.

The great English teacher and preacher first deals with the fundamental conception held concerning the two great factors in his title, and then proceeds to examine the Word and the especial expression given it in the respective ministries of the Prophet, Apostle, Evangelist, Preacher and Teacher. He then reviews the changed world conditions, the unchanged obligations of the messenger of God, the preparation for the ministry, and what constitutes the proper exercise of the vocation.

SEEKING THE LOST.

The word "lost" has a fearful meaning when applied to a person. An object of value may be lost and we search for it. An animal may be lost and we search for it according to our estimate of its value and our interest in it. But a person lost excites the most painful interest and the most strenuous effort to find him.

Once we came to a village in the mountains and all was in excitement. A child was lost. All day the search had been going on, but no trace of the lost one was found. All night the people continued to search, but in vain. There was a gloom over all. The lost child was in every mind and heart. Everyone had visions of what had befallen the little one. It might have fallen over a cliff, it might have been devoured by wild animals. It was never found, and ever after sorrow dwelt in the home.

"Lost" is the word Jesus uses with reference to men. It has a fearful meaning. The soul has wandered away from its home; there is no knowledge of the way; dangers are on every side, and it is not possible to return.

But Jesus seeks the lost one. There is intense solicitude, and a fearful anxiety, with every possible effort to find and recover the lost one. There is to the mind the picture of the sorrow in the home, of the heart burning with grief. Nothing could more vividly show to us God's love, and His solicitude for our salvation. It is not enough to say that God waits to be gracious, that He is ready to save everyone who comes to Him. All this falls far short; He seeks to save. He not only desires, but He puts forth effort to save. His desire and effort are in proportion to His love; and that is infinite.—Selected.

Their Christmas Vision

"Their Christmas Vision"

This is the title of a program prepared by the Executive Committee for use in the churches and Sunday Schools of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

It is attractive in appearance. Interesting and instructive in material. Makes a strong appeal for the dedication of life to the service of Christ and His Church.

Its use will help carry out the Presbyterian Progressive Program.

It will be sent in sufficient quantities for use in any of the Presbyterian churches and Sunday Schools, free of cost.

Order now. Begin to prepare for the service, December 21, 1919—the day appointed by the General Assembly.

Order from the Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, Henry H. Sweets, Secretary, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

Save A Hundred Dollars on a High Grade Piano

You are cordially invited to take advantage of the great money saving opportunity which is presented to all the readers of this paper by the Presbyterian Standard Piano Club. If your home needs a good piano or player-piano, or if you would like to exchange your old instrument for a new one, we invite you to write for a catalogue and full information.

By clubbing your order with the orders of ninety-nine other Club members in a great factory order for one hundred instruments (eight carloads) you receive your part of the tremendous saving in cost, amounting to about one-third the price of your instrument and totaling a hundred dollars or more on a high-grade piano or player-piano.

Convenient Terms-Strongest Guarantees

The Club is organized for the economy, convenience and protection of piano buyers. It insures the lowest possible prices, the most convenient terms of payment, and gives you the strongest guarantees of the quality and durability of your instrument. It assures you of present and future satisfaction and protects you against defects of workmanship and materials.

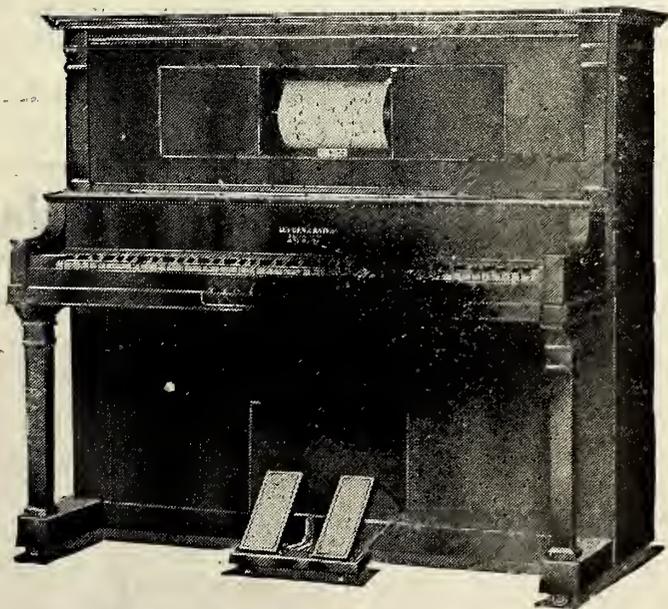

An Old Reliable House

The house of Ludden & Bates, under whose management the Club is directed, was established in 1870. It is known and honored wherever good musical instruments are appreciated. For nearly half a century it has enjoyed the largest patronage throughout the South. Under its administration the Club has served many readers of this paper and in each case has made an appreciative and enthusiastic friend.

Let Us Serve You

We most cordially invite you to investigate the many attractive money-saving features of the Club. Let us send you a copy of the handsomely illustrated catalogue describing the new and beautiful styles of pianos and player-pianos, with full information as to the saving in price, convenient terms and the guarantees of quality and durability.

Sparkles

Not a Square Deal.

It looks to the Clay Center Dispatch as though our new Allies are not treating us quite fairly. When we sent Mr. Root to Russia we sent a mar whose name even the most unlettered editor can spell without looking it up, while both Russian and Belgium have sent us men with names equal to breakfast foods.—Kansas City Star.

A visitor in a small town in Arkansas unwittingly "held up" the local newspaper. Having lost a valuable dog he rushed to the newspaper office and handed in an advertisement offering fifty dollars reward for the dog's return.

About half an hour after he thought he would add to his advertisement the words, "No questions asked." So he hurried to the office again. When he arrived he found the place empty except for a small boy, who wore a sulky expression.

"Where's the staff?" asked the stranger, glancing about the deserted room.

"Out looking for your dog!" replied the boy, who was evidently aggrieved at being left behind.—Current Opinion.

"I'm a very busy man, sir. What is your proposition?"

"I want to make you rich."

"Well, leave your recipe with me and I'll look it over later. Just now I'm engaged in closing up a little deal by which I expect to make three dollars and a half in real money."

Tactless.

"So Miss Jones is angry with her doctor. Why is that?"

"He tactlessly remarked that he would soon have her looking her old self again."

"What's this?" said Elsie's mother, as the child handed her a familiar-looking quart box.

"I said cold cream, child."

"Well, that's the coldest I could get, mamma."—Kansas City Journal.

Disappearing Hair.

"I think the baby has your hair, ma'am," said the new nurse, looking pleasantly at her mistress.

"Gracious!" exclaimed the lady, "Run into the nursery and take it away

—"Walter Jones," said the teacher sternly, "you are not attending to the lesson. Did you hear Jessie Smith's description of the American product, hominy?"

"Yes'm," replied the small boy glibly. "All right, then. Give me a sentence in which you bring in the word correctly."

SPIRITUALISM.

LIKE all movements that owe their origin to our perverted religious instincts, Spiritualism has its revivals and declensions. It had its beginning in this country in 1848. The originators were two little girls, Kate and Margaret Fox, living at Hydeville, near Rochester, N. Y. They discovered that they could crack their big toes, and make a sound like a short sharp rap on the floor. An older sister, Mrs. Fish, was let into their secret. She found that she could induce people to believe that the sound was created by invisible spirits. Soon the neighborhood was filled with great excitement. She concluded to try the fraud out on a great scale. She rented a large hall in Rochester, and invited a full investigation. Strange to say, by this time the sensation had grown until people of great distinction were interested. The night for the exhibition saw present men of more than national fame, Horace Greely, Geo. Bancroft, Fenimore Cooper, William Cullen Bryant, William M. Thackeray, and women of such note as Alice Carey and Harriet Beecher Stowe. Physicians were selected to investigate and report. Among these was Austin Flint, at the head of the medical profession. He and two others carefully scrutinized the persons of the girls while the rappings were heard. They failed to detect the trick, but assured the public that it was capable of a natural explanation.

P. T. Barnum uttered the truth when he said "people like to be duped." Despite the opinion of Dr. Flint and his associates, multitudes preferred to believe that the rappings were a method adopted by the spirits of the dead to communicate with the living. The mysteriousness, the weirdness the uncanniness of this explanation made it exceedingly popular. It gratified a marked appetite for the ghostly and preternatural. The silly superstition spread like wildfire until Spiritualism counted its disciples by hundreds of thousands.

Horace Greely became a benefactor to Kate Fox and educated her. Elisha Kent Kane, the famous arctic explorer, married Margaret. In their later lives these two women tried to undo the wrong they had done the public. In 1838, Mrs. Kane appeared before a great audience in the Academy of Music in New York and with trembling voice and professions of deepest penitence made her renunciation. "I am here tonight," she said, "as one of the founders of Spiritualism, to denounce it as an absolute falsehood from beginning to end, as the flimsiest of superstitions, the most wicked blasphemy known to the world." At the same time she gave a demonstration of the way in which the rappings were made by the joint of her big toe.

The New York papers gave a full account of this expose, and added the tremendous weight of their influence to aid in putting an end to the stupid imposture. But it was all in vain. The votaries of Spiritualism had found a lie which they liked and nothing could induce them to give it up.

The truth is too prosaic, too tame and commonplace. It does not produce the shuddering, fearsome thrill that comes from believing oneself in contact with the beings of another world.

The hideous lie still lives and flourishes. It has some two million adherents, fifteen hundred public mediums, and private mediums by the thousands. It has five hundred ordained ministers and church property valued at $6,000,000.

Just at this time Spiritualism is having a great revival. It is being boosted by great literary and scientific celebrities like Sir Conan Doyle, Sir Oliver Lodge and the late W. T. Stead. The popular magazines are featuring it, Societies for Psychological Research are dignifying it by subjecting its phenomena to serious investigation. But so far neither these learned men, nor these enterprising societies have been able to throw any light on it that will relieve it of the appearance of a combination of shameless hypocrisy and childish twaddle. It is a fraud of such a low order, the alleged messages from the other world are so vapid and vacuous, so colorless, so wanting in the touch of human passion and imagination that it is strange any mature mind could take an interest in it.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

FROM time immemorial the number seven has had a magic and even sacred import. It is also the complete number. The perfect power of the Lamb is denoted by His seven horns.

With the Christmas of 1919, the editor completes seven years of service.

Standing amid the lengthened shadows of the year he sends his greetings to his readers who through these many years have so patiently and indulgently read his weekly contributions.

He sends greetings to those whose advertisements have kept the wheels going, and to the public generally whose patronage has enabled us to increase our equipment and prepare ourselves for a wider field of usefulness. Upon each and all we invoke Tiny Tim's benison, "God bless us every one."

THE FIRST RESPONSE.

We recently appealed to our readers for contributions to a fund with which to supply the Standard to families in the Home Mission fields.

It is the experience of our Home Missionaries that nothing gives stability to their work in a new field more than the placing of a Church paper in new homes.

The difficulty is that it requires training to develop the reading habit, and where the work is among a non-Presbyterian people, the need of developing the denominational spirit is all the more necessary. So impressed was one of our missionaries with the help that the paper would give him, that he proposed out of his meagre salary to subscribe for a few copies. He realized that while his influence was limited by the fewness of his visits, in the Church paper he would each week have a substitute, who would speak for him; by this means he could train them while absent, and that when he tried to enlist their interest in work of the Church they would know what that work was.

We would not permit him to pay for the papers, but opened a Fund for the purpose of supplying papers to needy homes, offering to give a dollar for every dollar contributed.

The first response came in the shape of a donation of $10 from the estate of Miss Isabella Ray. There was a clause in her will directing her executor to give a part of her estate to assist in building up Christ's Kingdom on earth.

Mr. D. H. Ray, of Fayetteville, rightly concluded that he would give at least ten dollars to this cause. We hope that others may be incited by this example to increase this fund.

We are losing money by the plan, but we believe that what we lose could be put to no better use than to send the Standard to these homes and thus help to make of the inmates intelligent Christians.

ORGANIC UNION—REASONS FOR AND AGAINST

DR. R. L. DABNEY possessed, without doubt, one of the ablest as well as the most versatile minds that this country ever produced. He was a man of very strong prejudices, but when he stated his opponent's position, he always did so in a stronger and clearer manner than the man himself could have done.

Lacking his mental ability, we shall not be able to state our opponent's position as clearly or as strongly as he would like, yet we do believe that we can state it as fairly and honestly as he himself would, if he were to try.

This paper has always opposed organic union, but we have never condemned those who desire it.

Before giving the reasons for our position we shall try to state the reasons advanced in favor of organic union with the Northern Church.

1. The conditions in the border States make it almost imperative.

By the nature of the case a Southern Presbyterian Church in any border city is necessarily the weaker church, and is therefore overshadowed by its Northern neighbor. This is true because being on the border all of the accessions from without are, with but few exceptions, from the North, or else if they come from the South, they join themselves with the stronger body. The border preacher therefore leads an isolated life, and it is natural that he should desire union, not only to avoid friction, but to secure sympathy. Then his flock is generally a mixed one. They have no interest in the past divisions, and cannot understand why a great Church should divide and stay divided upon some abstract question of long ago.

2. When they trace the boundaries of the two churches they find that the boundaries are along sectional lines. There are no Southern churches north of Maryland, while the Southern Church resents any Northern Churches south of the Mason-Dixon line. The most natural conclusion then is that this division of the churches is sectional, based on war feelings, and they argue that if the politicians and soldiers of the Civil War can forgive and forget, surely the churches ought to do the same.

3. Continued division means a waste of resources, which is a sin in God's sight, when the waste places are calling for men and money.

They point to the fact that you will find two Presbyterian churches in one small town, when the combined efforts are scarcely sufficient to support one.

4. The idea of bigness also powerfully appeals to some. There is something attractive in size. You see its hold upon children, and these grown men are merely children in some of their fancies. They would like to have a great National Presbyterian Church of America, extending from the frozen circle of the Arctic regions down to the yellow waters of the Rio Grande River.

5. Then they lament the effect of divisions upon the men of the world.

They reason that the Church represents God's Kingdom on earth, and surely the Church ought to set an example of harmony instead of being divided by controversy.

These reasons are undoubtedly sound, and if there were none on the other side, we would have to join these brethren in their efforts.

Without taking space to consider each of these reasons, we merely remark that the one that has the most influence upon men is that we appear to be divided along sectional lines, and that therefore we are merely prolonging the bitterness of the Civil War, while the politicians and soldiers have joined hands, and have forgotten it.

This leads us to begin with this in giving our reasons for opposition to any union between the two churches.

1. The division is apparently along sectional lines, but in reality it is upon a question of principle. When we divided and organized the Church of the United States it was not because some lived North and some lived South, but because some insisted upon mingling the affairs of Church and State, while others insisted upon the strict spirituality of the Church. Though the Church North has professed to have changed its views, whenever opportunity offers, it yields to the temptation, and goes into ways where we cannot follow. Knowing this proneness, we realize that union under such circumstances would mean discord, and consequently weakness.

2. Then we are a remarkably homogeneous people. We doubt whether any large body can be found whose views are more united. This difference is seen in other respects besides in Church affairs. It seems a peculiarity of the sections, and can no doubt be traced to the character of the first settlers.

3. So far from being attracted by the idea of a big Church, we prefer a small Church, because small bodies work better.

It was recently shown in this paper (November 12) that from 1870 to 1900 the Northern Church increased in membership 125 per cent, while we increased 175 per cent. In contributions to Foreign Missions they increased 197 per cent, and we 494 per cent. After the union with the Cumberlandlands, the Northern Church increased in membership, from 1910 to 1919, 19 per cent, and we 29 per cent. In Foreign Missions during the same period they increased 47 per cent and we 88 per cent.

4. One of the strongest reasons we have for keeping apart is that we wish to preserve our own name and history. We feel that God raised up our Church for a distinct work, and we are proud of our record: To unite would be to be swallowed up by a big body, to lose our identity and to have our history forever blotted out. Our Church property would become the property of the great National Church.

Such are some of our reasons, and so strong are they that if our brethren who are in favor of union get the power and force the issue, the result will be a divided Church in the South, thus perpetuating the very evils they seek to cure.

THE PRIZE RING AND THE PULPIT.

It is stated by one of our exchanges that Jack Dempsey, who defeated Jess Willard in a supposed fistic exhibition, has signed as a vaudeville actor for a period of 15 weeks at a salary of $225,000. These figures are staggering, but we tell the tale as it was told to us.

All over our land there are men of education and refinement who are living on a paltry salary of $1,000 or $1,500 a year, and at the same time they are educating their sons and daughters.

A highly developed body brings this fabulous amount, while a highly developed brain is paid a mere pittance. We do not wonder that the supply of candidates for the ministry has fallen off, or that young men do not enter the ranks of a profession that measures the value of a true man so low. It is a well known fact that the supply of any commodity depends upon the demand for it. If brawn is exalted above brain, it is because the present age demands brawn.

Of course it is not very flattering to our reputation as a highly civilized people that we have gone back to the primitive age of the world, when a man was judged by physical strength, yet this condition of affairs would seem to prove it.

Then instead of the Church praying the Lord of the harvest, to send forth laborers into the harvest, let us give to our present laborers an adequate support, not necessarily one equal to that of the ex-prize fighter, but one, at least, that will keep grim want from their door.

The Two Advents A CONTRAST

By Prof. Addison Hogue

(NOTE—Our Blessed Lord's Return evidently comprises a number of details, and the Bible does not tell us the order in which these occur; and yet any writer on this subject naturally has to mention them in some order or other, though freely admitting that only the main facts are revealed, and not their exact chronological succession.)

WHATEVER may be the time of our Lord's return, its nature will be in vivid and startling contrast with His first advent.

When He came to this world before, He came as a lowly babe, cradled in a manger: when He comes again, it will be as

KING OF KINGS

AND

LORD OF LORDS.

His first advent was announced one night by an angel to a few shepherds. His second coming will be known to the whole world; for every eye shall see Him.

When He was on earth before, He was despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief: the second advent will show Him riding forth in majesty and might, at the head of His legions, conquering and to conquer.

When He was on this earth in His estate of humiliation, not even His direst distress induced him to pray to His Father for the legions of angels who could have rescued Him from the enemies to whom He had been betrayed: when He returns, it will be at the head of all the angelic hosts, and He will be followed by the armies of heaven mounted upon white horses.

Wicked men in mockery and derision once placed in His hand a reed to represent a sceptre; and upon His head they pressed a crown of thorns: when He comes back to this world, His hand will again be grasping a sceptre, but this time it will be the sceptre of universal empire, and with it He shall smite the nations; and He will also be wearing a crown, but it will then be a crown of gold.

When He was standing before His judges at the close of His earthly life, He was shamefully treated, being buffeted and spit upon, and He bore it patiently: but when He returns, He will come in flaming fire, rendering vengeance to them that know not God, and to them that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus.

At the time of His crucifixion, He prayed for His murderers, even while they were nailing Him to the cruel cross. He prayed for them then, because "the happy gates of Gospel grace" were still standing open for them, even as they are now standing wide open, that whosoever will may enter in: but when He returns, woe, everlasting woe to unregenerate sinners, for they shall be punished with eternal destruction from the face of the Lord.

When He was on earth before, He was the meek and lowly Jesus, who opened wide His gracious arms and invited to His loving and yearning heart all who were weary and heavy laden, that they might find rest unto their souls: but the next time He comes—oh, how terrible the contrast!—it will be to tread the winepress of the fierceness of the wrath of God the Almighty. Such will be His attitude toward His foes.

But what will be His attitude toward those who love His appearing? For them there are laid up crowns of rejoicing, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give them in that day. When He descends from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel and the trump of God, then—oh blessed and glorious destiny for redeemed sinners!—then we who are alive shall witness the tremendous scene of the first resurrection, when those who sleep in Jesus shall burst the bonds of the grave and rise from the dead; and then we ourselves, changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, and made incorruptible and immortal, shall be caught up in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we be ever with the Lord.

Wherefore let us comfort one another with these words; and God grant that we may all be of the number of those who are looking for the blessed hope and the appearing of the glory of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ; and may the Lord direct our hearts into the love of God and into the patience of Christ, to the end that He may establish our hearts unblamable in holiness before our God and Father at the coming of our Lord Jesus with all His saints.

Amen. Even so come, Lord Jesus!

Resignation of W. C. Smith.

The Presbyterian Committee of Publication announces with sincere regret the resignation of Mr. Wade C. Smith as editor of the Missionary Survey and Onward.

Mr. Smith has accepted a position with the Interchurch World Movement and will be in the Stewardship department.

Mr. Smith has rendered our Church a service of high value as a member of our editorial staff and we shall greatly miss his genial smile and unflinching optimism. Arrangements have been made for the editorial conduct of the two papers and plans are being perfected to add features which will increase the popularity of the two publications.

The Publication Committee spread upon its records the following resolutions when Mr. Smith's resignation was accepted: "In accepting the resignation of Mr. Wade C. Smith as editor of the Missionary Survey and Onward, this committee wishes to place on record its high appreciation of Mr. Smith and the splendid work that he has done as editor for the past seven years. The members of this committee have learned to regard Mr. Smith with sincere Christian affection and we will miss him as our friend and fellow worker. We also wish to express our sincere appreciation of all the work that Mr. Smith has done as editor. He has performed his duties faithfully and with an unusual de-

MY ROOM IN THE INN.

*One night I dreamed I was a guest,
That night in Bethlehem town,
Where He was born, who gave to it
Its famous world renown;
And safe I slept within the inn
That quiet star-lit night,
While in the stable near, there shone
The world's eternal light.*

*And in the morn my host revealed
The story of that birth,
To us, his guests, who sat and heard,
And feasted in our mirth;
But one inquired, in thoughtful mood,
Why shelter was denied;
"There was no room within the inn,"
Our genial host replied.*

*Up spake I then to them, and said,
"If I had only known,
They might have had my room last night,
In little Bethlehem town."
Then I awoke; and now I know
The Prince of Peace is come,
And needs a place within my heart—
Will I now give Him room?*

New Conditions in Korea

By Rev. L. T. Newland.

SINCE returning from my furlough I have been trying to get adjusted to a new Korea, for I find after a year and a half's absence that I have come back to a new country and it is being impressed on me more and more every day that we must improve our methods of missionary work if we are going to keep up with the procession.

Take a few illustrations. When I went to America in 1918 as yet Korea had reacted very little to world conditions except to complain at the increased cost of living, but otherwise they were living much as they had always done. Then it was the rarest thing for a Korean to ride other than third class on the trains and I returned to find it exceedingly difficult to find room in the second class car, as it was full of Koreans, and not the occasional silk dressed, dandified rich man of former days, but farmers and artisans in their work clothes who had the money for a little comfort and were bent on having it. It is the same way with the auto lines. There was a time when foreigners and Japanese practically monopolized these lines of travel, but now you have to come early and even wire ahead in order to get a seat on these bus lines. The Koreans have gotten out of the way of walking and even our school boys ride in on the autos. So it is all up and down the line. The last few years have brought the farmers big money and they have elevated their style of living way above what they ever dreamed of in the old days. They are demanding the best of everything and have waked up with a vengeance to the blessings of this new age.

The financial awakening of Korea of course reacts in the church, and it affects our work in two ways. First, we are appealing to people with different tastes and ideas than we were even a few years back. While Korea is not money-mad yet there are more of them enjoying the comforts money can buy than there ever have been in the history of the people. This has brought about decided materialistic views and the good things of this life are making a powerful appeal to the masses because they have gotten their first taste of them. This of course as a natural result has affected that spirit of sacrifice and love for the spiritual that have so characterized this people in the past. Then too they are demanding better things in our work than before. There is a positive demand that our schools be better equipped and more comfortable than they are now. No longer are our homes and buildings the finest things they have ever seen and can never hope to aspire to. Now they travel in comfort and have seen and read more and know that we after all have very poor equipment in these schools of ours. They are perfectly willing to pay more tuition but they will not be long content with our equipment as it is now.

The medical work is in the same condition. The mass of the people has at last gotten to where it can have its ills treated and a tremendous opportunity opens before our work, but they have also awakened to what constitutes good treatment and makes up a well managed hospital. As yet we do the best work that is done out here, but not for much longer can one doctor look after a big medical work, the foreigners in the station and a great deal of outside work on the side. The day has come for well equipped and well manned hospitals and if we are going to keep up the past record of our medical work or surpass it, we will have to bring this branch of our work up to the level of the public demand.

This new condition affects every part of our work. We evangelists face a new, alert, awakened people, ready to be persuaded, but with minds that must be won over by a Gospel that is able to give a reason for the faith it professes. We itinerate now by auto and motorcycle rather than by foot and horseback, and the mode of itineration has not changed any more than the methods in which we must go about getting the Gospel to the people. The time for mass meetings and revivals seems to have arrived where formerly it was house to house, man to man personal work.

And this brings me to the second effect on our work. It would seem that with the influx of money and a modern civilization that there would be correspondingly large increase in worldliness, and while this is true to a certain extent, yet right along beside it is a great spiritual awakening. That which usually effects the church adversely in Korea under the blessings of the Father has had just the opposite result. There is no doubt that the supreme day—the Der Tag for the church—has arrived in this land. For years, under the careful but veiled propaganda of the government, there has been a spirit of indifference or actual opposition on the part of the well-to-do, those in office and especially the young men and women of the better class. They were kindly tolerant of our misguided zeal but took no interest in our work. The events of last spring had two results, first they destroyed that dominating influence over this class in respect to their attitude toward Christianity. The fact that the government is still far from being sincerely cordial towards our work is one of the greatest recommendations the religion of Christ has to some of the people here. Then as a second result Korea awoke to her political condition to find that her political future was practically hopeless and so the awakened mind of the people sought for something that would solace them in this disappointment and they found the answer in our common Saviour.

Everywhere we go there is an open door now, especially among the young men and they are believing sometimes with more zeal than knowledge but there is no doubt that Christianity is more popular today than ever before. We have just closed a meeting in Kwang-ju in which the Spirit was present in a wonderful way. Of the great number converted by far the larger per cent are young men and women of independent means or older men of real wealth. In former years we could not even get this class out to church to listen, let alone believe. This time they crowded the building every night for a week. A great day has dawned, at last we are getting hold of the actual leaders of Korea. There is no way to estimate what would be the results if we could get out into every one of the large villages and preach, it at least would startle us. They are buying Bibles by the thousands, are giving towards getting the Gospel preached and are in every way manifesting the keenest interest in the welfare of their souls.

Now what is to be done to meet this situation. The first phase can be tersely summed up in that magic word—money. We cannot hope to keep up and be as stunted in our work as we are now. Not only has the yen shrunk to less than one-half its former spending size, but we have got to have more and better equipment of every sort. There must be more money to put into equipping the evangelistic work as well as the schools and hospitals.

As for the last phase, it is time the church wake up to the conditions out on this field. Our force has been terribly depleted the last few years and even now, with a large number returning from furlough, the work is still greatly undermanned. Whereas to meet the new condition each of us should be doing a higher grade of work than we ever did, each worker has heavier burdens to bear and has to spread his energies over a larger variety of work than ever before. The great opportunity is before us and the promises seem to be unlimited, but we cannot hope that the great Head of the Church will hold back the force of evil forever and allow us to take our own time about entering this open door. We need men and we need them desperately. Korea is entering new life; if we will but heed the Saviour's commands and thrust forth the laborers, this life can be turned into channels of such great usefulness and blessing that the whole East will be touched and changed by it.

gree of efficiency. The whole Church will miss his excellent editorial work. We wish for him the largest measure of usefulness in his new work and pray that our Father's richest blessing may rest upon him and his home and all of his work."

Organic Union

IV. Church and State—Withdrawal Difficulty.

By a Pastor.

IN my last article I contended that loyalty to sound doctrine, at this critical juncture in the affairs of the world, requires that we maintain our separate organization as a Church. I now proceed to give two more reasons for not affecting a union with the U. S. A. Church.

1. The first of these reasons is that in the providence of God it has been given to our Church to formulate and promulgate the proper doctrine of the relations of Church and State, with a distinctness and emphasis unequalled in the history of the Church, and that much of our work in that sphere will be lost if we surrender our individuality as a Church. If we lose our separate organization now we will surrender our testimony on that doctrine, so important to the peace and prosperity of both Church and State. To surrender that would be to sacrifice much that we have struggled for these nearly 60 years. Some one will doubtless be ready to reply at once, "O, but we have gone beyond that now! All that was away back yonder near the middle of the last century. We surely have got beyond that. Are we never to stop fighting the war?" I beg your pardon. The question is both older and newer than 1861. The alliance of Church and State began a little more than 300 years after Christ and for centuries it was unchallenged. It was agreed that there should be some relationship between the two and the only question was as to what that relationship should be. The Ultra Montane doctrine was that the Church is supreme over the State and the Erastian doctrine was that the State is supreme over the Church. The history of such theories of the relation of Church and State is a bloody and shameful one. Think, for instance, of bishops in military armor leading soldiers to battle in the name of the Church, and of Christ! How much warfare grew out of the efforts to effect a proper adjustment between these two kinds of government! It did not seem to occur to men that there need not be any relation between the two at all, but that each might be independent of the other. It was after the War of the Revolution that this doctrine of the entire independence of the Church and State began to arouse the attention and command the assent of men. The Confession of Faith had to be changed to conform to these newly discovered Bible teachings. When a change takes place in the sentiment and policy of a people as revolutionary as that was, the real change in point of view is never sudden. There is always a party distinctly antagonistic, and those who favor the change do not always grasp at once its full significance or see it in clear outline. So when the old Erastian doctrine was swept out of the Confession, by the American Presbyterian Church, it required time to bring out in correct outline this doctrine of the Scriptures and of the early Church, which had been so long obscured. In 1861 a fierce political contest arose over an interpretation of the Constitution of the United States, Was the allegiance of a citizen due supremely to the Federal Government, or to the State Government? A bloody war grew out of this contest. The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in 1861 met in the midst of supreme political excitement, and under that excitement made a deliverance on that political question, declaring that the allegiance of the citizen was due supremely to the Federal Government. The Southern section of the Church, prevented by war conditions from sending its representatives to that Assembly, organized a separate Church. It assigned as one of its reasons for doing this the fact that the Northern Assembly by its political action had betrayed the Scriptural and American doctrine of the separation of Church and State, the doctrine that the Church's functions are exclusively spiritual. If that one political deliverance had been all, had their Assembly ever declared that that deliverance was a mistake, had they refrained from similar political deliverances since, had they not incorporated the policy of that deliverance into their organic law by judicial decisions, the whole of that aspect of the question between these two great Churches would have been different. It is true they have repeatedly declared their adherence to the doctrine of the separation of Church and State, but they would have done that in 1861, even in the very Assembly which passed the Spring Resolutions—the political deliverance which so grieved our Church and which became one of the occasions of division. It was not that they had intentionally discarded the doctrine of the separation of Church and State, but they gave it a different interpretation from ours. They continue to interpret it differently and therefore continue to make the same sort of political deliverances. Those of us who oppose consolidation with that Church are not doing so merely on the ground of some old and abandoned error. "Many things have happened since 1861." They are things which repeat and emphasize the original error. From 1861 the difference between the two Churches has widened. The Northern Church is committed to the policy that whenever any political questions have a moral aspect, the Church may pronounce a judgment upon them. The Southern Church has taken the position that it is not within the rights or responsibility of the Church to make deliverance upon any questions of State, even those of a moral nature. There are certain exceptions to this rule well defined in the Confession of Faith. When the State deals with questions of a moral character (really all of its questions are more or less ethical), it does so for a different purpose and uses different means from those of the Church in dealing with the same sort of questions. The records of the U. S. A. Church abound with instances of deliverances on questions of Civil Government, such as prohibition, woman suffrage, capital and labor, and the offering of their Church with all its resources to the Federal Government for the prosecution of a war. Meanwhile they claim to hold to the separation of Church and State, but do not seem to have grasped our idea of the absolute independence of these two governments, the utterly different character, purposes and methods of Church and State. I am quite free to admit that there are deliverances on the records of our Church courts that are contrary to the principles we profess, but the question is not whether we are consistent but what is right according to the Scriptures and according to the lessons of history. If our Church has erred in making political deliverances, is the remedy for this mistake to go back into the Church where such mistakes are the rule and where our testimony would be surely swallowed up? Or shall we stay where we are, where we can keep up the fight for that doctrine which means so much to the peace of both the Nation and the Church and so much for loyalty to Scripture truth? If we have done wrong in violating our own principles, do we atone for that wrong by uniting with a Church which violates those principles habitually, and from long accepted theory?

I maintain that if we unite with the U. S. A. Church we lose our testimony for the truth in this matter. Our testimony would be quickly swallowed up. A faint voice of protest might be heard occasionally in the General Assembly, but it would die in the din and clamor of "Patriotism" and moral reforms and social service. An illustration will explain this. The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, of which our Church is a constituent, several years ago took action looking to activity in certain questions of government. Our Assembly at Newport News sent a committee to the Council to protest against such activity in politics. This committee made a strong impression on the council and the council promised not to offend again. If the motion had failed in the Newport News Assembly nothing more would ever have been heard of the question. It would never have reached the council at all. Now, if we merge with the U. S. A. Church, holding the views it does on such questions, any protest our members might raise in the Assembly would be smothered every time and never reach the council. Will some advocate of union tell us

THIS WE SAY.

*Merrie Christmas, this we say,
Old time phrase of sweetest greeting,
Gladly give it on this day,
Clasping hands in joy at meeting;
Absent friends hear through the heart,
On far continent and isthmus
That which makes the tears to start,
Merrie Christmas.*

*Merrie Christmas, this we say,
Though Mars is closely stalking
Along with every step we take,
And our best efforts balking,
Merrie Christmas, gaily say,
Though men are sternly waging
The world-wide war of modern times,
And past all human gauging.*

*Merrie Christmas, this we say,
To our friends at meeting,
Though in the laughing eyes the joy
Seems swift in its retreating,
Merrie Christmas, here and there,
Until the day is closing,
Thinking Christ would have it so,
And on His faith reposing.*

—Clara Ophelia Bland, in Living Church.

what he thinks will become of their doctrine if we merge with the U. S. A. Church?

2. I have one more reason for resisting consolidation with the U. S. A. Church. It has committed itself to union, not only with one Church, but with all the Protestant Churches in America. One wonders if that proposition has no limits. Does it include Christian Science, if not, why not? There are Churches calling themselves Christian, that hold to rank Palaganism, teaching lost sinners that they may be saved by the mere cultivation of virtue, thus making the cross of Christ of none effect. Does the proposed union of all Churches include these? Some believe in autocratic church government, even in these days of the waning of autocracy. Are we prepared for union with those? One enthusiastic advocate of the omnibus union naively exclaims, "Let us unite first of all on brotherly love and we can work out our creed and form of government afterwards." If men really have convictions as to Bible teachings concerning grace and government, will not those same convictions instantly reachert themselves when the framing of the new creed and the new scheme of government begins? Another ardent advocate of this union declares publicly that his goal is a union that embraces even Catholicism itself. Now, here is the question: If we unite with the U. S. A. Church and they go into a union with whole of Christendom, or any considerable part of it whatsoever, and we should wish to withdraw from the obnoxious union, how would we ever withdraw? There is only one way to withdraw, and that is by surrendering all our church property and beginning all over anew. That is the law regulating church property, as repeatedly upheld by the courts of this country. Shall we so far abandon ourselves to reckless sentiment as to be led blindly into union with a Church that is already confessedly and actively working for union with all sorts of bodies, using the Christian name but distorting the saving truth of Christianity in almost every conceivable manner?

"Faith of our fathers! holy faith!
We will be true to thee till death."

So the Armenians have sung through centuries of persecution, even with their imperfect knowledge of that faith. They have suffered every imaginable torture and death itself, rather than betray the truth as they see it. Shall we betray our fuller knowledge of the truth, and for infinitely less consideration—the fear of being called narrow, or the altogether uncertain benefits to be gained by union?

THE MID-WINTER COURSE FOR MINISTERS AT UNION SEMINARY.

During the month of January in each year it is the custom of the professors in Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Virginia, to give special courses of lectures for the benefit of ministers who wish to put themselves abreast of current theological discussions and to freshen up on modern methods of religious work.

Courses of this kind will be offered during the coming month on such subjects as Sunday School Work, Christian Sociology and Missions; The Inspiration of the Scriptures; Repentance, Sanctification and Good Works; English Bible in the Pentateuch, the Prophets and the Acts; lectures on the Books of Daniel and Revelation; and lectures on subjects of especial interest in connection with the departments of Old Testament and New Testament Exegesis. In addition to these courses, Prof. George M. Sleeth will give throughout the month three courses on the art of effective speaking; one on the Training of the Speaking Voice, another on the Oral Interpretation of the Scriptures, and another on the Delivery of Sermons, giving in all three the practical training to the individual student which has made his work of such extraordinary value in former years.

There will be also four lectures on Hymnology, by Dr. Hubert M. Poteat, of Wake Forest College; four lectures on Stewardship, by Dr. E. L. Hill, of Athens, Ga., representing the Virginia Assembly's Committee on Systematic Beneficence; four lectures on the Pastor and His Work, by Dr. W. M. Anderson, of Dallas, Tex.; four illustrated lectures on Our Mission Work in South America, by Dr. H. F. Williams, secretary of our Executive Committee of Foreign Missions, at Nashville; and two illustrated lectures on the British Campaign in the Holy Land and the Future of Palestine, by Secretary R. E. Magill, recently returned from a survey of Palestine as a member of the Commission on Armenian and Syrian Relief Work.

Other features of this mid-winter course for ministers will be announced later. This brief announcement is made in response to a number of inquiries which have been received from ministers here and there in the Church who wish to make arrangements for spending a winter vacation of two weeks or so which will be both restful and profitable. It is an interesting fact that most of these inquiries have come from ministers who were present last year and who, knowing the value of the work, wish to take it again this year.

There is not as much available space in the dormitories this year as usual on account of the increased attendance, but rooms will be reserved for those who wish to come in the order in which the applications are received. The rate for visiting ministers during January will be $6.00 per week. Those who wish to attend are requested to write to Mr. William R. Miller, Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Virginia, stating when they wish to come, and how long they expect to remain.

The second half-session begins on January 1, at 9 a. m.

A BABY BORN IN BETHLEHEM.

There was a baby born in Bethlehem.

I know they say

*That this and that's in doubt, and, for the rest,
That learned men who surely should know best Explain how myths crept in, and followers' tales confused the truth.*

I know, but, anyway,

*There was a baby born in Bethlehem,
Who lived and grew and loved and healed and taught,
And died, but not to me.*

*When Christmas comes I see Him still arise,
The gentle, the compassionate, the wise,
Wiping Earth's tears away, stilling her strife;
Calling, "My path is peace, My way is life!"*

When the Christ Child Came

Winifred Arnold, in The Continent.

THE old woman stirred uneasily in her sleep and opened her eyes. Then, with the smile still wreathing her lips, she lay and looked into the semi-darkness of her little bedroom. It was such a beautiful dream that she had had, that the Christ Child himself had come to visit her. And it was still so real that as she gazed through the open door into her little kitchen she could almost see him as he stood there before her little stove with the wreath in his hand.

It must be cold in the kitchen now, she thought, the fire in the little stove was always low in the morning—bitter cold for the little child in his white robes. She must hurry and open the drafts and put on more coal. In an instant she was out of bed, without a thought for her stiffened joints, and halfway across the room.

At the door, however, she stopped for a moment while the smile deepened in the sunken corners of her mouth. How foolish she was. It was only a dream put in her head by the little boy who had come yesterday with his mother to bring the Christmas wreaths. He had talked so much of the Christ Child who came every year with his gifts.

How could she hope that the Christ Child would come to her? An old woman and so bitter against God as she had been when she lost her only remaining grandchild in the cruel war!

The smile faded, and then came again, with an added touch of sweetness. It was because God had forgiven her, she thought, that her dream had come—another sign of his love and forgiveness. First he had sent the woman to teach her that though the loved one was gone the love was still left in her heart for her to give to others; and now he had sent this beautiful dream, this beautiful promise, it seemed, that the Christ Child himself would come to visit her on this Christmas day. She must hurry and get ready for such a guest.

* * * *

Eagerly she quickened the fire in her tiny stove until the little kitchen glowed with warmth. Then she dressed herself rapidly in her humble best, and spread the table for her simple breakfast, putting on an extra cup and plate across from her own, and making a double portion of porridge.

"If he comes, I must be ready for him," she whispered with another half smile at her own "foolishness" as she did so.

Halfway finished with breakfast, she stopped and pulled herself hastily by the edge of the table to her feet. There was certainly a step on the doorstep outside, the sound of a muffled rap.

Before the sound had died away she was at the door and was throwing it wide with one trembling hand, while with the other she steadied herself on the doorjamb. It was too wonderful—

"Please, missis, don't you want your walk sweep' out?" It was a child's voice, to be sure, but the childish figure before her was neither white-robed nor golden-haired. Beneath a torn cap, the untidy shock of hair was undeniably red; and the bare hands grasping the worn-out broom were blue with cold.

For a moment the old woman stood gazing at him silently, and then her disappointment changed to a warm rush of compassion. "I ain't got the money to spare to pay ye for it, sonny," she said kindly, "but I'm just eating my breakfast. Mebbe you'd like to step in an' take a bite with me an' get het up a little. I know what boys' appetites are."

"You bet your life!" ejaculated the boy; and in another moment he was sitting in the vacant place watching hungrily while the old woman filled a blue bowl with porridge and milk. At first she had planned to save part for her dream guest, but when she saw the look in the boy's eyes she gave it all.

* * * *

"I used to have a boy that cat just as hungry as you do," she commented kindly as he munched down the third slice of bread.

"Him that the star's for in the window?" inquired the boy. "It's gold ain't it? Then he's—er—er—croaked over there?"

"Yes," said the old woman simply. "He gave his life. 'Twant took from him same's I thought at first. He give it. I give it, too."

Awkwardly the boy got up and pulled on his torn cap. "Say," he said, "I—I'll just sweep out as I go 'long. A breakfast like this's morn't enough pay."

"Thank ye kindly," answered the old woman. "I'm kind of expecting some real special company later; and 'twould be nice."

She stood and watched him as he worked; a marvelously good job he did, considering his old broken broom. And she smiled, thinking, "A clean path for the Christ Child's little feet." She could see him almost as clearly as she had in her dream, a shining little figure in his white robes, with his shining golden head. It seemed so real, so real! It must be it was true.

Suddenly as she shivered with the cold wind which penetrated around the rattling window sash a thought struck her. How cold the Child would be in his little white robes!

Hastily she turned away from the window and walked across to the little bedroom. When she came back she had two wraps in her hand; one a rusty black cloak, the other a shawl of gay green and red plaid. She threw them over the arms of her patchwork covered rocker, and in the intervals of clearing the breakfast table she studied them.

"They ain't neither of 'em just suitable, of course," she said at last, "but seeing he's just a Child, so, I dunno as the red—I could wrap him all up in it real cute—same as I used to Johnny when we went sleigh ridin' back to Farmersville."

* * * *

With a smile full of happy memories she turned the rocker to face the stove and spread the red and green shawl over it to warm while she carried the black cloak back into the bedroom and put that room in spotless order.

Returning, she put more coal on the fire; and then, pulling up a little straight wooden chair, seated herself with her feet on the hearth and gazed happily at the patchwork rocker. She could wrap the shawl around him all warm and cozy, just as she used to Johnny. She could almost feel the softness of the little body as it snuggled into the warm red folds.

Wrapped in her happy reverie, she did not heed a knock at her door until it had been repeated twice. Then she rose with a sudden start and almost ran to fling wide the door.

"He's come!" whispered her old heart, chokingly, and then, with a guilty jump, "and had to wait on them cold steps while I set here moonin'! Oh, the poor little cold feet!"

Then once again she stepped back, trying to hide her disappointment at the sight before her. For instead of the Child in white garments, there stood a woman in a shabby blue suit, with a baby in her arms wrapped in a thin black shawl. She was coughing spasmodically, but her eyes were blazing with something like anger, and she disregarded the kindly gesture with which the old woman bade her enter.

"I had to stop," she gasped at last, "to ask you—are you the woman—that's put a Christmas wreath—around a gold star flag—a gold star?" In the midst of another paroxysm of coughing she pointed an accusing finger at the little front window.

The old woman shook her head. "No," she answered simply. "I ain't. Come in." And then, as her visitor obeyed and sank shivering into the arms of the warm red chair, she added quietly, "But I wish I was. Let me tell you about it."

* * * *

Seating herself in the straight chair again, she smiled gently across at the guest. "Yesterday at this time," she said, "I felt just as you do. And then a woman came here, a widow with a little boy, that had just lost her man over in France. And she brought me the wreath and put it around the star. To show, she said, they was our Christmas presents that we had give to the world just as they give their lives, and God give His Son. And we mustn't spoil it by not bein' willin'.

"She said that the more you give the more you love, and that's so, ain't it? Have you got a gold star, too, dearie?"

The young woman nodded. "I just got this," she said, holding out a folded paper, "just to say he was dead, and I'm on my way downtown now to see if I can't find out something more.

"And I don't love nobody!" she added fiercely. "God nor folks, nor anybody else—but Jim!"

"I know," said the old woman softly, "not even Jim's little girl over there in your arms hardly. But you will, dearie, I know. It's the love stopped up in your heart that aches so. Just let it pour out. That's what she said, an' it's true. And now I'll make you a cup of hot tea before you go on."

She rose as she spoke and began to prepare the tea, talking as she did so of Johnny and of Jim and of the wonderful words of the Lady of the Wreaths.

And when the visitor, sobered and refreshed in spite of herself, rose to go, her hard eyes softened with tears now, the old woman went to the patchwork rocker and pulled off the bright shawl. "Wrap this around the little one, dearie," she said softly. "You'll need that black one for yourself to keep you warm in that thin suit. It's a bitter day."

When they had gone, the old woman went back to her little straight chair.

"I guess, after all, he'd ruther I'd warm them first," she said. "Anyway, I can set here an' keep up the fire, to be ready when he does come. And then, pretty soon, there'll be dinner to get."

But even as she began her preparations a man's feet came running up the little walk from the street. Without even a knock he burst open the door.

"My wife is sick!" he cried. "Dying! And I can't get any one to come. They're all having company for dinner, they say. You must come!"

He glanced at the little table, laid for two. "Are you going to have company, too?" he cried desperately. "You can't! I tell you, you can't!"

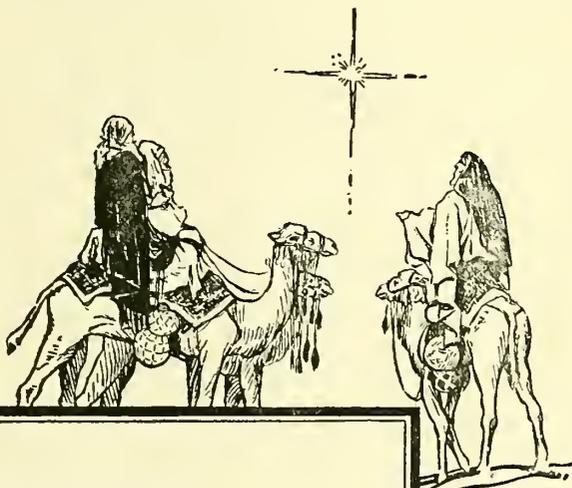

"I was—only kind of—hoping," said the old woman slowly, "but I'll come. Just let me get my bonnet and cloak. You kinder fix up the fire while I'm getting ready. I want to leave it good and warm for him, anyhow, and the door unlocked."

At the end of the afternoon another little soul had been born into the world—a Christmas baby. And the grandmother had come from the country to take care of him and the new mother.

Tired and spent, the old woman walked slowly up the clean little

This beautiful Christmas letter is addressed to the Christian people of America whose generosity in the past has enabled the Armenian people to survive and in whose continued support lies the sole hope of the suffering millions of the Bible lands.

Dear Friend:

Another little child has shrivelled up and died!

The mother, creeping back, gaunt and cold, from the desert, has put down the thin little bones with those that strew the road, so-many-miles, and has sunk beside them, never to rise again.

Only a little child, and a mother, out on the bleak Armenian road - but what is that Vision hovering there - and what is that Voice the cold winds bear to the ears of our souls - "I was hungry and ye gave me no meat - I was naked, and ye clothed me not?"

To-day - yee, to-day - while we are preparing our gifts for Christmas - many more of these little children - not a hundred, nor a thousand, but two hundred and fifty thousand of them - are still wandering uncared for and alone in that dead land, "their weazened skins clinging in fear to their rattling bones", and they are crying out with gasping breath, "I am hungry! I am hungry! I am hungry!" And the Voice of One who watches us as we prepare gifts to celebrate His Birthday, comes again to the ears of our souls - "I am hungry! I am hungry! I am hungry!"

Now the children, and the mothers of Armenia are dreading the winter. "Just human remnants, they are, not protected, many of them, from the elements by even the dignity of rags"

But we can feed and clothe those perishing ones - some of them - before it is too late. Herbert Hoover cabled from the Caucasus: "It is impossible that the loss of 200,000 lives can at this day be prevented, but the remaining 500,000 can possibly be saved." They need not starve, and freeze and die if we will save them.

Open now your heart and purse. They need not die! Give ye them to eat!

To-day nearly eight hundred thousand destitute Armenians - His people - need food and clothing. He took little children in His arms and blessed them To-day will you take one, or more, of those sad, cold, hungry little children of Armenia into your arms and heart, in His name; and give them food, and warmth and life?

"In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, My brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

News of the Week

Secretary of the Navy Daniels, in his report, states that our navy is second only to that of Great Britain, and that it is incomparably stronger and more efficient than ever.

During the past, owing to the coal situation, there was a wholesale cut in the passenger service of the country, but the prospects now are that all trains will soon be restored.

Senora Felipe Angeles, the widow of the Mexican revolutionary leader who was recently executed by the Carranza troops, died in New York, where she came a few weeks ago. Owing to her enfeebled condition she was not informed of her husband's execution, and died without knowing it.

Forest fires have been raging the past week in western North Carolina. They have burnt over more than 100 acres of the big Webb farm, in Beaver Dam township. They were caused by the carelessness of hunters.

Damage suits, aggregating $11,000, have been brought against the Mountain Retreat Association. The plaintiffs allege that by reason of the installation of a sewerage system by the defendant association in the assembly grounds, which system is said to empty into a stream meandering through the city, they have been damaged in that the air has been made foul and the stream polluted, thus decreasing the value of property adjacent to the stream in certain sections.

Owing to Mr. Wilson's opposition, the Senate has dropped the consideration of the Fall resolution asking the President to break with Mexico. Senator Fall, however, claims that he has evidence to prove a plot against this country, and that a big mine strike was planned, all being with the approval of Carranza.

During the past week torrential rains have caused great damage in the South, amounting to millions of dollars. Thousands have been made homeless, and train service demoralized.

Up to this date the Mexican Government has made no reply to America's sharp note. The Jenkins case is in the hands of the Supreme Court of Mexico.

Without opposition, John P. Grace was elected mayor of Charleston, S. C.

The Republican National Convention will be held at Chicago, June 8. Chicago won over St. Louis by a vote of 44 to 9. It was decided to limit campaign contributions to $1,000 from any one person.

For the first time in history there is every prospect of the Irish question being settled satisfactorily, according to a statement made in a speech by Walter Hume Long, first lord of the admiralty.

According to the New York Herald, the Episcopal Church in the future will be directed by a presiding bishop and a body of 21 to be known as the Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church. The presiding bishop, it is stated, will be the Right Rev. Thomas F. Gaylor, of Memphis, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Tennessee, who will come here shortly to take up his new work.

The George A. Fuller Company, of New York, one of the largest construction companies in the United States, has bought the Carolina Shipbuilding Company yards at Wilmington from the United States Shipping Board. The company is preparing to complete the full program of ships planned by the shipping board for Wilmington, which will be one of the largest shipbuilding points on the South Atlantic coast.

Representative John H. Small was elected by acclamation president of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress. This was a recognition of Mr. Small's tireless efforts throughout his public career for better water transportation facilities in the United States. He was chairman of the house committee on rivers and harbors during the last two years the Democrats were in control of Congress. Some parties of the West wished to elect a Western man, but it was finally decided to go unanimously for Mr. Small.

According to a statement sent the Senate, 44 States have ratified the prohibition amendment. Virginia heads the list, having reported January 17, 1918, with Kentucky following two days later.

At the State Convention session of the Farmers' Union, Dr. H. Q. Alexander declined to stand for a renomination as president. R. W. H. Stone, of Guilford county, was elected by a majority of one vote over Paul Jones, of Edgecombe county. Mr. Jones was in favor of the reevaluation of land, while Mr. Stone opposed it. The vote is regarded as a test of how the farmers stand.

Dr. Garfield, fuel administrator, being dissatisfied with the terms whereby the strike of coal miners was ended, has resigned.

Talorsville is to have a new cotton mill. It will have 5,000 spindles and will be run by electric power. The Little Shoals, on Little River, has been purchased and the power will be generated there.

Union county is to have a whole-time health officer. In addition to this officer there will also be a whole-time nurse.

DEATH OF REV. D. W. C. SNYDER, D.D.

We are grieved to announce the death in New York on December 2 of Rev. D. W. C. Snyder, D.D., formerly a missionary of our Church in Africa, and of whom many of our people will have the most delightful recollections. He was one of the most interesting platform speakers, and one of the most delightful guests in the home, of any of the many such people that have gone out to represent us in the foreign field.

Dr. Snyder was born in New York State in 1859. He went to Africa under our appointment in February, 1893. His first wife died at Leopoldville of African fever on the return journey of his first furlough. We remember a most pathetic circumstance connected with her death. She had been for about two years at Luebo, during which time she had not seen the face of another white woman. When she came to Leopoldville, where she was taken in almost a dying condition into the home of one of the missionaries of the English Baptist Mission and one of the ladies of that mission came in to see her, looking up at this first white face which she had seen for so long, she exclaimed, "O, isn't she beautiful." Dr. Snyder was married to his present wife during his furlough at home. Returning to the field, he remained until March, 1902, when he was compelled to come back on account of Mrs. Snyder's health, and joined the Presbytery of Brooklyn and took charge of a church on Staten Island, where he labored up to the time of his death. A few years ago Dr. Snyder had a paralytic stroke and never fully regained his health, although he was able to do some work in the ministry until shortly before the time of his death. After a life of earnest and faithful and laborious service in the Master's cause he has now entered upon the rest that remaineth for the people of God. S. H. CHESTER.

walk to the unlocked door and entered the still, warm, firelighted room. The patchwork rocker held out to her its arms of welcome and, dropping wearily into them, the old woman fell at once into the easy sleep of old age.

And as she slept she smiled. For once again there came to her the beautiful dream of the morning. There in her little kitchen stood the Christ Child in his white robes, with his shining golden hair. And she fed and warmed him as she had fed and warmed the little boy and the newly widowed mother with her child. And the eyes with which he looked up at her were full of the joy and peace and love which the other mother had showered upon the new-born baby at her side.

Another knock on the little front door roused her, and she sat up quickly.

"Can it be—at last?" she whispered, and then shook her head wisely. "Not in his little white robe," she said. "I see it now. But whoever comes for help, it is the Christ Child himself who brings him."

With her happy smile deepening, she stepped eagerly forward and threw wide the door.

The Prayer Meeting

TOPIC FOR WEEK BEGINNING DECEMBER 21st, 1919.
CHRISTIAN LOVE THE BLESSING OF THE SEASON.
John 13:33-35.

A delightful theme for a delightful season. Men have talked and sung of love from days primeval; but a new love entered as a factor in life at the Advent. It was love that found expression in the birth of Jesus. And such a love! So pure, unselfish, beautiful and holy. It was the supreme manifestation of the supreme love. So also every Christmas season should find Christian love regnant in our hearts. Alas! how different is the average experience. We give to those who have no need; to those who will feel compelled to give again to us. This is not Christian love, except in the former case when love is the motive. Of course Christian love does not deprive even the richest of our gifts; but it assuredly thinks and plans for those who really have need; and the purest joys of the Christmas season should come to us from such benefactions. But love has a thousand manifestations. It finds delightful expression as Santa Claus: in providing surprises, in motherly ministries, in filial remembrances—in countless ways. Christian love is a unique blessing to those who are loved, but especially to the former. It is more blessed to give here than to receive.

It is the force that has transformed the house into the home. Its influence sweetens and pervades and transforms. It is a thing of life and beauty and power. But it is not Christian love if it is bounded by home lines or limits of city or state or country.

Christ stepped over all boundary lines to reach Bethlem and Calvary—Chauvinism is one of the curses of our age. If the love we bear to our country is Christian, it will find itself going out wherever there are men and women and children. The selfish heart says "impossible." But Paul has taught us in his magnificent poem on love in the Corinthian letter that miracles are wrought by this mighty and heavenly power. What is repugnant and impossible to selfishness is natural and delightful to love.

Nor does this principle find its expression in noisy demonstrations, like fire-crackers, and brass bands; it "abides"—as Paul says. At this Christmas season there is a world-wide call for Christian love. Practically it tugs at our hearts from two directions: or, better put, it should flow out in helpful ministries in two streams.

First to follow the yearning heart of Jesus that men may know of Him and His gifts.

From every home we should send the money to Nashville that will enable our church to support and extend her work in distant lands. Love seems to have been asleep these past months. Let us awaken her and she will do wonderful things.

Then this Christmas we should use every proper means to carry on the work of the boys we sent to France and Flanders. They bled and died there to make that the last war—if possible.

Love commends them, drops tears upon their graves, honors them returned to us, and does all possible things to prevent the awful calamity of their having fought in vain.

Let us support, pray for and work for the Covenant of the League of Nations. The instrument is not perfect; but it is Christian in spirit—in its trend. Let us so love our neighbor that by means of this noble instrument we will pour in oil and wine into his wounds.

Will not Christ be pleased to see such love in our hearts?

Man is not God, but hath God's end to serve;
A Master to obey, a course to take,
Somewhat to cast off, somewhat to become—
How could man have progression otherwise?

Sunday, Dec. 28—Topic: How to Make Next Year Better Than This. Ps. 90:1-17. (New Year's meeting).

If we are to make next year better than this year has been, we must think more about God. There is tonic for our life in true thoughts of God. When Isaiah was worshipping in the temple on a certain notable day, he saw the Lord, high and lifted up. Two great seraphim stood above Him and cried to one another, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hosts. The temple rocked under the earthquake tones, and all the interior was filled with smoke. The young prophet was overwhelmed and began to feel as never before his own unworthiness, and he cried aloud in terror, Woe is me, unclean and undone! But God purified him; and when He called for some one to serve Him, Isaiah cried in prompt response, Here am I, send me. And from that day forward the good man lived a better and bigger life. It was because he had seen the Lord, and because the sight was food for thought and inspiration to better service.

Not only must we think more about God, but we must take a true view of life. The Bible lesson tells us that life is but a morning that we spend here before the scythe cuts us down. It is all too brief to spend on trifling things. It is too full of vast and everlasting consequences for us to give its short hours to flippancy and sin. It is so packed with possibilities of eternal good for ourselves, that we dare not dream its precious time away. It offers us one grand hour of service to our fellow men and God before the night comes; and we must not idle. Life is a post of duty, a very brief one surely, but a post of duty all the same; and when this view of life is found, each succeeding year sees a better service than the year that went before.

Read this little poem of Babcock's, and take as your own the lofty purpose that it tells of:

Be strong!

We are not here to play, to dream, to drift;
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift.
Shun not the struggle—face it; 'tis God's gift.

Be strong!

Say not the days are evil—who's to blame?
And fold the hands and acquiesce—Oh shame!
Stand up, speak out—and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong!

It matters now how deep entrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day how long;
Faint not, fight on. Tomorrow comes the song.

What can we learn from past failures?
Tell how God's forgiveness of the past clears the way for better things in the future.
Who is the indispensable Helper toward a better life?

THINK OF OTHERS.

Some one has said, "The message of Easter is 'Think of heaven;' the message of the Fourth of July is 'Think of our nation;' the message of Thanksgiving is 'Think of your blessings;' the message of New Year's Day is 'Think on the passing of time,'" but the message of Christmas says, "Think of others."—Ida Q. AT THE EMPTY TOMB AND WITH THE RISEN LORD.
John 20:1-21:25.

GOLDEN TEXT—"He is risen, as He said."—Matthew 28:6.

SCRIPTURE LESSON.

1. The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2. Then she runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple, whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3. Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre.

4. So they ran both together: and the other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5. And he, stooping down, and looking in, saw the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in.

6. Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie.

7. And the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

8. Then went in also that other disciple, which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

9. For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10. Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

Ch. 21:15. So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs.

16. He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, feed my sheep.

17. He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

18. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdest thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest; but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not.

19. This spake he, signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken thus, he saith unto him, Follow me.

Mary Magdalene was the first person to whom Jesus revealed Himself on the morning of His resurrection. She had received great benefits from Him for we are told that He had "Cast out of her seven demons." He had given her too the Gospel Salvation. She loved much and was earliest at the Sepulchre. She found the stone rolled away, but the grave was empty. She goes to inform His disciples and meets Peter and John. We will consider Mary Magdalene at the Tomb, Peter and John at the Sepulchre, Peter's love for Christ, and Peter's Predicted Death.

I. Mary Magdalene at the Tomb.

She came before any of His apostles. She was drawn thither by tender love. She did not expect a resurrection any more than His other disciples. They did not then understand Christ's predicted rising from the dead. She went to the tomb, perhaps to recall her memories of Jesus, to weep over her loss, or to share with other women of Galilee in embalming His body. Finding a vacant Sepulchre, she goes to tell the apostles that the grave was open and the body missing. She meets Peter and John, and returns with them to the tomb. After their departure she remains at the Sepulchre. Then Jesus appears to her and she does not know Him, but supposes Him to be the gardner. When Jesus says "Mary" she recognizes His voice and responds, "Rabbone." He does not allow her to touch Him, but commands her to go and tell His brethren. She obeys and testifies to the disciples that she had seen the risen Lord, and what He had spoken to her. Mary Magdalene shows us that supreme love, follows Jesus closely, has Christ revealed most speedily and promptly complies with His commands.

II. Peter and John at the Sepulchre.

Called by Mary Magdalene, and told that the grave was empty they went in hast, ran, to the place. John being the younger man, outran Peter and came first to the Sepulchre. stooping down he looks into the tomb and saw the linen clothes, but did not enter. Peter coming later, went into the sepulchre as his impulsive nature and habit of leadership dictated; beheld the linen clothes, and the napkin, folded and lying by itself, indicating deliberation, and no hurried departure from the grave, such as might have been shown had His disciples stolen the body. What effect this visit to the Sepulchre had on Peter, we are not told. But Christ appeared to him that same day and satisfied him as to His resurrection. After Peter and John entered the Sepulchre, and we are informed that he then believed in Christ's resurrection. Two of Jesus' most loving disciples, were soonest satisfied and delivered from painful doubt.

III. Peter's Love for Christ.

At the Sea of Galilee, Jesus, after His resurrection, appeared to seven of His disciples. The names of five are given and Peter and John are among them. Here occurred Christ's memorable conversation with Peter, recorded in the 21st chapter of John's gospel. Three times our Savior asks Peter "Simon, Son of Jonah, lovest thou Me." Twice He uses the word expressing the love of friendship. Every time Peter employs the word signifying tender affection. Not until the last question does Jesus use Peter's word, and asks "If he has tender affection for Him?" Peter was grieved that the question was asked three times, because it painfully reminded him that he had thrice denied His Lord. Every time he affirmed his affection for Jesus, and the last time, he asserts Christ's Omniscience, and declares "Thou knowest all things. Thou knowest that I love Thee." Our Lord employs three expressions to show how Peter must prove his affection for Him. "Feed My Lambs," "Feed My Sheep," "Shepherd My Sheep." If we love Jesus we must feed the young and the mature of His flock with the food of Knowledge. We must also "Shepherd them" or give them the constant care of a faithful shepherd for His flock.

IV. Peter's Predicted Death.

The Lord has indicated to Peter that he would die a prisoner and be led to a death from which the natural man shrinks. He had been a free man "Guiding himself and walking whithersoever thou wouldest." "When thou shall be old thou shall stretch forth thy hands and another shall gird thee and carry thee whither thou wouldst not." Peter was to verify his love for Jesus not only by feeding and shepherding His sheep, but by dying after the same manner as his Lord. The Lord's parting charge was "Follow Me," and he was to follow Him not only in his life's labors, but in the mode of his departure from earth. Jesus predicts Peter's earthly end and the apostle does not fail.

DR. WILLIAM M. ANDERSON AT COLUMBIA SEMINARY.

Columbia Seminary has no more distinguished and useful former student or alumnus than the beloved and brilliant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Dallas, Tex. He has just delivered a remarkable and impressive set of lectures to the students of this institution and also to large numbers of the institution's friends, attracted by the magnetism and eloquence of the gifted speaker.

Dr. Anderson has every gift that equips one for ministerial usefulness: an attractive physique, a melodious voice, graceful gestures, strong mentality, vivid imagination, and powerful emotions. In addition, he has an adequate acquaintance with the Scriptures and good literature, combined with a ripe and rich experience, all of which would render it certain that he would be remarkably successful in the ministerial service. But, transcending all this unusual outfit, is his genius as a pastor and church administrator. During the last 10 years he has received into his church more than two thousand members, a record which perhaps has no equal in the history of our Church. This result is largely due to his skill, faithfulness and consummate gifts as a winning, magnetic and Christ-like pastor.

He gave in these four lectures the result of his experiences and genius in this splendid pastoral service and no student who heard him could ever forget the impression made by his spirit and many of the important lessons taught by his experiences.

These lectures are to be repeated at Union Seminary in January. The Kentucky Seminary would do well to get them, too, and Princeton and McCormick could not do better than to have them repeated there.

No pastor in our country can speak more earnestly and magnetically on the theme of "Pastoral Work and Duties" than Dr. Anderson.

He, who first wrote the name, wrote it at the end of the list—below every name. He was a Roman officer, charged with the duty of the census of the district about Bethlehem. All day long the line of tired pilgrims had filed before the desk. At last the wearying record was completed: the officer set himself to casting up the columns. Then suddenly a shadow fell across the page. He turned impatiently toward the doorway to see the figure of a stalwart man outlined against the setting sun, a child in his arms.

"I could not come earlier," he said. "The child was born last night."

"You are at the inn?" the officer asked.

"No—we arrived too late: the babe was born in a manger."

"Your name?"

"Joseph."

"Of what tribe?"

"Of the tribe of Benjamin and David. We are the descendants of kings," he added.

The officer did not look up. The world was full of the sons of former kings—and now there was no king but Cæsar—lord of the earth by right of war.

"Your wife's name?"

"Mary."

"And the child's?"

"Jesus." The voice of the big man was soft, as though fondling the syllables. "It means the Savior of his people." The officer merely nodded.

"Jesus, son of Joseph, of the tribe of Benjamin," he wrote and closed the book. It was the last name on his list.

In other years men have written His name high or low, according to the temper of the time. There have been generations in which no business was so urgent as the task of adding glory to that name. And again, suddenly, the flags of battle have flown high; the lowly banner of His cross trails behind them in the dust; in guilty afterthought the rulers turn to implore His blessing—placing His name again at the end of their ambitions and hate.

But His name cannot occupy that place. Underneath the roar and smoke of battle there are signs today that the world is groping its way back to Him. One finds them in the market-place, the council-chamber, and the office. Even in the midst of battles come cries of men in their helplessness, putting His name above that of their leaders. Wherever families gather silently above a vacant chair, His name is breathed on the lips of women and of little children.

When, at length, weary of war, the world turns its scarred, blood-bathed face, seeking peace, it will be His name in which its prayer will be raised. Across the ruin of men's hopes His voice will answer back:

"Peace I leave with you,
My peace I give unto you."

Out of the war will be born a new list of heroes. But when these, too, in time shall have been forgotten, the eyes of men will still turn upward to behold His name.

Among rulers, His yoke alone is easy, His burden light. Among reformers, He alone dared to teach men that they are relatives of God and so the equal of their kings. He, too, was torn and wounded. But in the moment when the world had crushed Him, He could say: "Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world."

For faith like that the tired race is ready now. The age is ripe for Him again. The name that nineteen hundred years ago was written last, upon the census rolls, is to be the "name which is above every name: that at the name Jesus every knee should bow, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord."—Collier's Weekly.

RECEIVING.

"I like to give Christmas gifts," said the old, white-haired minister.

Every line of his face bespoke unselfishness. He had no need to protest that he liked to give; his whole life showed that.

But he liked to get, too. He was old enough, and honest enough, that he dared lay aside all pretense of being bored by Christmas, and confess his unspoiled, childlike joy in getting things.

"I reasoned it out long ago," he went on, to the young listeners. "I always liked to get things, but I used to be a bit ashamed of it. I was afraid it might seem greedy."

"I remember well my first gift. It was a tin horn that mother brought me from town one day. I can feel yet that thrill of delight with which I undid the wrappings. I wonder if we would love our mothers quite so much if they never gave us anything. It's an unthinkable thing, though, isn't it? Why, the very name 'mother' means giving to us. It's a part of the preciousness of mother."

"And don't you see that God means giving, too? The old prophets understood that. Isaiah tells us, in that forty-sixth chapter, that the gods of the heathen have to be carried, that they are just heavy burdens borne on the shoulders, but our God carries us, even to hoary hairs. There's the wonderful difference. The heathen gods get service and adoration and sacrifice, but our God gives and serves us. He delights in pouring out the rich gifts of heaven and earth upon his children. Surely they ought to receive with joy, as well as gratitude. Don't be afraid that the powers will exact from us a measure of suffering for every measure of joy. That was a heathen notion, too. Let us take as freely as our Father gives, with no more dread of a lurking shadow just beyond than the little child feels when it takes a gift from mother."

"And I think the nearer we come to being the Father's little ones, the sort of whom the kingdom of heaven is, the more joyously we will take and use all good gifts. We will give, too, because we love, and cannot help giving, and because we want to show a likeness of our Father to the world. But always will feel the mystery and joy of the child in receiving the unexpected good things that come to us."—Elsie Vernon, in Christian Standard.

"NOW ABIDETH."

May Christmas bring to you,
Its tripart joy:
True Faith, to free you e'er,
From doubt's alloy;
Strong Hope, to sing your heart
To sweet repose;
And Love, to help you soothe
Another's woes.

—Advocate.

SHE WAS FULLY SATISFIED.

One of Dr. Campbell Morgan's recent stories related to a poverty-stricken fish-wife who was found on Christmas Day eating a Christmas dinner which consisted of a piece of bread and a toasted herring. Her visitor said something to her of the poverty of the fare, and the old woman, with face aglow, replied: "Poor fare? Dear heart, don't you see the Lord has laid tribute on sea and land to feed me this blessed Christmas Day?"—Ex

Church News

Collections for December are for Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, and the treasurer is John Stites, care Louisville Trust Company, Louisville, Ky.

OUR FRONT PAGE.

We are proud to call the attention of our readers to the front page of the Standard as proof, not only that we are keeping up with other progressive Church papers, but especially to let them know that the scene there depicted is the work of our special artist, Mr. John B. Mallard.

Mr. Mallard has done excellent work in political cartoons and in special engravings.

This is a proof that the Standard has not only been flung to the breeze, but that it is also going to the front. In a short time we shall be in our new building, with ample room and equipment. Then watch the Standard grow.

"THE BELLS."

This is the title of a small book of poems by the Rev. John Jordan Douglass, the pastor of our church at Wadesboro. It is cloth bound, with 104 pages, and is illustrated by John B. Mallard, and is published by the Presbyterian Standard Publishing Company. Price, $1.60 net.

Mr. Douglass' reputation as a poet is already established, as he has contributed frequently to the public press. If it were not, this little volume would make people realize that a poet gifted with the genuine fire has arisen among us.

Writing upon a variety of subjects, he brightens all he touches, and with exquisite and delicate touch he expresses one's feelings, as only a true poet can. We bespeak for the little volume a liberal patronage. The second edition is now under way. It will make an ideal Christmas present.

PERSONAL.

Rev. D. C. Young's address is now Akron, Ala., instead of Richmond, Va.

Rev. Ino. L. Ray has changed his address from Kenly to Old Fort, N. C.

Rev. F. B. Rankin's address is Mt. Holly, N. C., instead of Rutherfordton, as formerly.

The address of Rev. W. C. Alexander is changed from 2223 White Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., to 2119 Elliott Avenue. His pastorate is unchanged.

Rev. Edward E. Lane, for several years pastor of the church at Christiansburg, Va., after 18 months of Y. M. C. A. service in France, is returning to the United States by way of Brazil. His address after January 1 will be No. 12 East Eighth street, Charlotte, N. C.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Greenwood—October 12th Dr. W. H. Miley began a meeting here which continued for eleven days. The congregations were good, and a deep interest was manifest throughout. As some of the visible results, 440 signed cards of reconsecration; 40 made profession of faith in Christ; 20 church letters were secured, and over $300 raised for the work.

Clinton—From the Clinton Chronicle of November 27 we learn that another Presbyterian Church is to be organized in Clinton. For the present the congregation will worship in the club room of the Commercial Club. The new church will be called the William Palmer Memorial Church. Rev. J. F. Jacobs was invited to preach at the first meeting of the congregation. They have not circulated a subscription list yet, but four contributions have been offered amounting to $11,025.

York—Dr. W. H. Miley began a meeting here September 21, continuing for 12 days; holding in all 25 services. Rev. F. H. Wardlaw rendered valuable service in leading the singing. The services were well attended every afternoon and evening, and a deep spiritual interest marked the meeting throughout. Two hundred and sixty cards of reconsecration were signed; twenty made profession of faith; seven church letters were secured, and after paying all expenses, including salary of the singer; $250 was given to the work.

Hopkins—This church enjoyed the pleasure of having Rev. J. O. Reavis, D.D., of the Columbia Seminary with them in four evangelistic services. Dr. Reavis preached in his usual forceful and attractive manner and to large congregations. There were two accessions to the church at this time. Much progress has been made during the year by the congregation. A church and an acre of ground have been purchased, a gift of $100 has been received with which to paint the interior of the building, and a pretty table for the communion service from the Ladies Aid Society. These material things and the good attendance at services and the interest displayed cause the congregation to feel greatly encouraged.

The Cheraw Church has adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, Our General Assembly did give its endorsement to the movement known as the "Interchurch World Movement" during the last hours of its meeting in May, 1919, and

Whereas, It now develops that this movement proposes to stand for many things which are worthy in themselves but are, in our opinion, outside of the scope of the Church's work and in violation of the historic position of our Church, and

Whereas, Our Church is now asked to underwrite the expenses of said movement to the extent of five per cent of its proposed budget of $4,000,000, which would be $200,000, contrary to the representations of its promoters in the General Assembly.

It is resolved by the session of the First Presbyterian Church of Cheraw, S. C.:

1st. That we are opposed to our individual church engaging as a church in this Interchurch World Movement.

2nd. That we respectfully protest against our church at large entering the movement. In both cases we protest for the following reasons, to-wit:

1st. It violates the well know historic position of our Church referred to above.

2nd. That it will divert funds from the benevolent causes of the

ANOTHER CHAIR AT DAVIDSON ENDOWED

The Gastonia Church Gives $50,000 to Endow the Woodrow Wilson Chair of Economic and Political Science at Davidson

Under the splendid leadership of the pastor, Dr. J. H. Henderlite, the congregation of the church at Gastonia undertook to raise $50,000 for a Chair, and in five days had pledged the whole amount.

It is believed that this is the first instance of this kind in our Church. Certainly this congregation has set an example that many will follow in the days to come. No greater monument could they have built than to set aside a fund that perpetually will bear witness to their liberality and testify to their constructive capacity. Always Gastonia will be known as the Church that endowed a Chair in one of our great Colleges.

Now Winston and Wilmington and Charlotte and Greensboro must keep step by taking a definite share in this great Million Dollar Campaign for Christian Education. There are individuals also who are thinking of endowing Chairs. They have example in the Cannon family who last week endowed the Bible Chair for $50,000.

Kings Mountain Presbytery, the baby Presbytery of the Synod, and largely home mission, has led the entire Synod in per capita gifts by resident membership, subscribing altogether almost $100,000, with a little over 3,400 membership.

Let us get Davidson's quota in the large designated gifts such as Chairs and leave the multitude of small subscriptions to provide all other quotas. This is the surest way of all. : : :

What We Must Have to Finish the Task:

From Orange	Presbytery,	$125,000
“ Wilmington	“	75,000
“ Fayetteville	“	150,000
“ Albemarle	“	75,000
“ Mecklenburg	“	125,000

If one group of churches in one of our best towns will build the Dormitory at Davidson for $100,000 and three more will take Chairs at $50,000 each, we can go over the top with a million and to spare.

We Close March First

A whole lot of our preachers and laymen are going to have to help us in February. Don't beg off. This is too big a job, with too much at stake.

Yours for victory,

The Million Dollar Campaign Committee

Church as administered through our authorized agencies into outside causes and through outside agencies not under our control.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Pineville—Rev. G. W. Belk is conducting a series of meetings at Pineville for Rev. G. F. Robertson. He was greeted with three fine congregations on Sunday.

Matthews—Rev. Charles Kingsley, pastor of Providence and Matthews Churches, of Mecklenburg Presbytery, resigned the pastorate of Matthews in order to give his full time to Providence.

Maxton—The installation of our pipe organ, a Pilcher organ, costing $2,500, will be complete this week, and on next Monday evening Mr. Charles G. Vardell, Jr., will give a recital on it, assisted by Mr. Albert Brown, vocal soloist, of Wilmington, formerly with Dr. Chapman and Mr. Charles Alexander.
E. L. S.

Westminster—This church has been very much blessed lately by a visit from Rtv. A. T. Lassiter who was with us in a weeks meeting. As a visible result of his preaching there were nine added to the church, six by profession and three by letter. In addition to this, $225 was raised for local purposes and $13 for Presbyterial Home Missions.

Duke—Rev. Geo. F. Robertson, of Pineville, N. C., was with us in a two weeks series of union evangelistic services this fall. As a result of his strong Biblical sermons a hundred reconsecrations and thirty-five confession cards were signed. Seven of these joined the Presbyterian church. The official corps of this church has been very much strengthened by the recent election and ordination of two new deacons, Mr. C. S. Hicks and Mr. R. S. Kelly.

Fayetteville Presbytery—The moderator, Rev. J. J. Murray, has called a meeting of Fayetteville Presbytery to convene in Bethesda Church, Aberdeen, N. C., Tuesday, December 23, 1919, at 11 o'clock a. m., to consider and act on the resignation of Rev. J. K. Roberts as pastor of Carthage, Union and Eureka Churches, and to transact any business growing out of said resignation.

Big Rockfish—At a recent meeting of the congregation and Sunday School of this church it was decided to raise a scholarship in the Student Loan Fund, amounting to $400, as a memorial to Mr. Lauchlin MacDonald. Subscriptions for a large part of that amount were immediately secured. Mr. MacDonald was for 51 years an elder in this church, being made an elder at the age of 18 years. He was for 28 years the superintendent to the Sunday School. His faithful service will long be remembered.

Rev. J. M. Clark, D.D., Superintendent and Evangelist for Concord Presbytery has conducted recently the following series of meetings:

At Valdese in the Waldensian Church, with 59 reconsecrations, 12 professions, 6 promises to move church letters from a distance into the church at that place, and an offering of $32 for Presbyterial Home Missions.

At Yadkinville where we have a very small organization, 36 reconsecrations, 10 professions, 4 additions to our church, and an offering for Presbyterial Home Missions amounting to $30.

Rockingham—The outside appearance of the Presbyterian church has recently been greatly improved by the finishing up of the caps of the pilasters. The interior of the church has been complete for some time, but the finishing touches to the outside have just been completed. The caps are of stone finish, and a band of the same finish connects them on each of the towers at the three entrances. The design makes a very pleasing effect.

It will be interesting to the friends of this church to know that the treasurer has in hand subscriptions, payable by March 31, 1920, sufficient to cover all payments on the church building. And, this being the case, Mecklenburg Presbytery, comprising the counties of Mecklenburg, Union, Anson, Richmond, Stanly and Montgomery, has been invited to meet here for its regular spring sessions, at which time special dedicatory services will be held and the church formally dedicated as a house of worship.

Yadkinville—On Sunday night, December 7, a meeting which had been in progress for a week in the Yadkinville Presbyterian Church, was closed. Rev. J. M. Clark, D.D., Evangelist and Superintendent of Home Missions, Concord Presbytery, conducted the meeting. The earnest and faithful preaching of the Word by Dr. Clark proved a great blessing to the people of the town. There were 10 professions of faith in Christ. Four of these united with the church. Others expressed a preference to join this church, but as yet have not done so. Forty Christians reconsecrated themselves to the Master's service. An offering was taken for Presbyterial Home Missions, which cause Dr. Clark represents; the offering amounted to $30. We are grateful to God for this season of revival.
J. E. Robinson.

Clarkton—Rev. W. H. Goodman, pastor. This church is now to be directly represented on the Foreign Mission field since one of her daughters goes, with half of her support contributed. This is Mrs. J. E. Wayland, nee Miss Rosa Lee Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Clark. Besides that of her church and Christian home, her special preparation since graduation at Queens College, has been at the Training School in Richmond.

Mr. Wayland is a native of Waynesboro, Va.; graduated from Union Seminary in 1918, and since that time had been pastor of the church at Stuarts Draft, Va., where he and his wife greatly endeared themselves to people of that congregation and community.

This young couple left here on the 8th of December for Vancouver, from which place they sail December 18 on Empress of Japan, to take up their work at the Tsing-kiang-pu station of our China Mission. Our hearts, our gifts and our prayers attend them and we wish them Godspeed on their mission of service.

Charlotte—All who are interested in Sunday School work have had a rare privilege the past week in attending the Sunday School Institute that was held for two days at the Second Presbyterian Church. The institute was conducted by the Southern Church's experts and recognized leaders in the Sunday School world, and the attendance of teachers and superintendents from the city and county churches was excellent.

Dr. Gilbert Glass, Assembly's Superintendent of Sunday Schools, conducted the institute in a very practical and interesting manner, and he was assisted by Misses Anna Branch Binford and Elizabeth Shields and Anne Rankin, all of whom have done such splendid work through the columns of the Earnest Worker.

At the afternoon sessions sectional conferences were held, these meetings being very practical and helpful. Miss Shields conducted the conferences for the Beginners and Primary teachers; Miss Rankin for the Junior teachers; Miss Binford for the Intermediate and Senior teachers, and Dr. Glass for the Adult and Administrative departments. Each instructor knew so well the work, the needs and the problems of his special department that these conferences cannot fail to bear fruit in the Sunday Schools of Mecklenburg county.

The night sessions were given over to addresses on the various phases of the work. On Wednesday evening Dr. Glass made a fine address on "Sunday School Standards and Objectives," and Miss Shields, in charming manner illustrated by a series of stories her theme "Story Telling and Its Place in Religious Education." On Thursday evening Dr. Glass spoke on "Teacher Training" and Miss Binford made a splendid talk on "Teaching the Lesson." A round table at the close of each session brought up for discussion a number of points and problems that teachers face.

Galatia Church—This old country church is rejoicing as a youth in the full vigor of life. An eight room manse, costing a little over $4,000, has just been completed, and was presented to the church by the building committee on Thanksgiving morning. More than half the cost of the building has been paid out of this year's crop. A private electric light plant has been installed at the church with the result that physically, at least, we are no longer in darkness.

A meeting of two weeks' duration has just closed. The meeting began with a series of home prayer meetings so arranged as to touch every part of the congregation. These home services were conducted by the members of the session and other members of the church, and were productive of great good to all parties concerned. Beginning with Friday night, November 28, Rev. A. T. Lassiter, of Benson, N. C., preached in the church morning and evening through Sunday, December 6. He preached righteousness with great earnestness and power, and he declared the wonderful mercy and love of God through Christ with persuasive tenderness. The attendance was good throughout the meeting and the entire community was revived and refreshed. The visible results were 27 professions of faith, 22 additions to the Presbyterian Church on profession, and one addition by letter; an offering of $113.40 for Presbyterian Home Missions, and a thank offering of $61.50 for Mr. Lassiter. The Lord has been good to us, whereof we are glad and praise His name.

Mooresville—First Church—The pastor of this church, Rev. S. H. Hay recently submitted a list of fifty subjects for sermons to the congregation and is now preaching a series of ten sermons chosen by the people from the selected subjects. The preacher is preaching with ever increasing power and the congregations are large and appreciative. Those most interested feel that this church is on the verge of its greatest usefulness and power. We have just recently unanimously voted to adopt a missionary in the Congo and assume his support beginning January 1, 1920. This makes two missionaries supported by this congregation. In addition to this, one of the elders and his family supports a medical missionary in Korea, and one of the deacons supports a native worker in China and two native workers in the Congo.

Wallace—Evangelistic services have been conducted in each of the congregations constituting the Wallace group of churches, since June, and the results, considered as a whole, have been encouraging. The Word was faithfully preached during these several meetings by the following brethren: Rev. A. W. Crawford, at Willard; Rev. W. M. Baker, at Jones Chapel; Rev. Geo. M. Matthis, at Mt. Zion; Rev. E. B. Carr, at Rockfish, and Rev. W. H. Goodman, at Wallace. During these meetings there were 24 additions to the Presbyterian Church—Willard one, Jones Chapel one, Mt. Zion one, Rockfish 13 and Wallace eight. Each of these congregations has been, or is planning to do some aggressive work. The church at Willard was dedicated, free of debt, on November 30; additional elders will be elected at the time of the next regular service, and a committee has been appointed to organize an auxiliary among the ladies of the congregation. Mr. J. D. Carr has been recently made superintendent of the Sunday School at Jones Chapel, and the building at that point is being finished up and otherwise better furnished. The Mt. Zion people have adopted plans for enlarging their church building and making other improvements. The Woman's Auxiliary held their Day of Prayer at Rockfish in October, and the minutes of a meeting of "The Rockfish Female Missionary Society" which met in that church in March, 1818, were read, and strange to say, even that early the old church could report a missionary society with 34 members. The Wallace congregation has adopted plans for enlarging and otherwise substantially improving the manse. The sons and daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. Milton Southerland recently presented to this church a handsome individual communion service as a memorial to their parents. The following additional officers have been installed: Elders, John Powell and O. Carr; deacons, J. N. Southerland, Alex. Southerland and W. D. Cavanaugh. With increased forces and better equipment we face the future with hope.

The ladies' and young people's societies in the several churches are doing excellent work, and can always be counted on.

ARKANSAS.

Valley Grove Church—Monroe County, Arkansas—A meeting of two weeks was held in this church by the pastor, Rev. J. H. Morrison, closing December 4, in which there were six added to the membership on profession of faith in Christ Jesus their Lord, and all received the ordinance of baptism standing up, like Saul of Tarsus was baptized in the Acts, 9th chapter and 18th verse, in the house of Mr. Judas on Straight Street, City of Damascus, Capital of Syria.

FLORIDA.

St. Petersburg—At the morning service, December 7th, the pastor, Rev. W. J. Garrison, announced the names of seven persons; five from one family, who had been received into membership by certificate.

Commerce—Rev. C. M. Chumbley, the recently elected Evangelist of the Athens Presbytery, held the services in the Commerce Presbyterian Church last Sunday, during the absence of the regular pastor, and preached a very splendid gospel sermon. His subject was the "Comforter" his text being found in the 7th verse of the 16th chapter of John, and from this text, Mr. Chumbley explained, clearly, fully and forcefully, the offices of the "Comforter." In addition to being a splendid preacher, Mr. Chumbley is a learned lecturer, and the "Mary R. Flemming Bible Class" greatly enjoyed his exposition of the Sunday School lesson for that day, "Jesus at Gethsemane."

Toccoa—Rev. John A. Simpson, the pastor of the Commerce Presbyterian Church, occupied the pulpit of the Toccoa Presbyterian Church last Sunday morning and evening. Mr. Simpson was born and reared in Toccoa, but is a living exception to the Biblical rule that "prophet is not without honor, save in his own country," for the people of Toccoa, regardless of denomination, are proud of the success which he has already achieved in the pulpit, and confidently predict still larger success for him in the future. An unusually large congregation greeted Mr. Simpson, and thus inspired, he preached one of the finest sermons heard there in a long, long time.

Pleasant Hill Church, in Macon Presbytery, was visited by the Presbyterial Evangelist, Rev. Frank D. Hunt, who preached for us during eight days, December 3-10. Besides the morning and evening services, Mr. Hunt had a service each school day at the high school, adjoining the church. As a result of the meetings 24 young people made a profession of their faith in Christ as their personal Saviour. Of this number five or six will unite with the Presbyterian Church, the others expressing a preference for the Methodist and Baptist Churches. We trust that a great blessings has come to this neighborhood.

KENTUCKY.

Paris—On November 30 the congregation of the First Church of this place extended a call to Rev. T. S. Smylie to become their pastor. The congregational meeting was presided over by Rev. A. R. Shaw, of the Louisville Seminary.

Lexington—First Church—On November 23 the pulpit of the First Church was supplied by Rev. A. R. Shaw, D.D., of the Louisville Seminary. Nine young people were received into the church at this service.

Lexington—The plan that has been discussed for the past several weeks for the union of the First Church, U. S., and the Second Church, U. S. A., has been abandoned for the present, which fact was announced to both congregations on Sabbath, November 30, and the First Church, U. S., will proceed at once to the calling of a pastor. The following is the formal notice read to the two congregations: "On account of certain conditions developed in the consideration of the proposed union of the First and Second Presbyterian Churches of Lexington, it is deemed inexpedient to proceed any further in this matter at this time."

TENNESSEE.

Nashville—The Glen Leven Church from November 30 to December 7 enjoyed a season of great refreshment from services conducted by Rev. Wm. Black and his singer Mr. Andrew Burr. The visible results from the meetings were 52 cards of profession signed, 21 of these indicating a preference for the Presbyterian church. Many of our men began public prayer during the meetings and 40 persons promised to begin family worship. Twelve members on profession were received on December 7, and a number of others are expected. Mr. Black spoke with his old time fervor and the singing skillfully conducted by Mr. Burr was a helpful agency in the good work. We feel that under God these services have been a great blessing to our church.

TEXAS.

First Southern Church, Austin—The most successful Rally Day in the history of the Sunday school of this church was held in October. The auditorium of the church was filled and the Sunday school offering was $102.

Early in November, a ten days' evangelistic meeting was held in this church, in which Dr. Frank Fincher, one of the General As-

A CORRECTION.

Dear members of the North Carolina Synodical Auxiliary: Those present at the meeting in Durham will remember that the per centage for Orange Presbyterian in the gifts per capita column was challenged. A revision of the Thermometer Chart shows that instead of assembly's evangelists, did the preaching. These services had a most unusual attendance; there were quietness, and reverence, and the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. Dr. Fincher preached the heart of the gospel—the love and atonement of the Son of God—in a tender persuasive manner. Rev. W. H. Matthews led the singing and proved a trained worker who helped greatly in these services. There were many reconsecrations; thirteen have already been received into the church and the whole church has been revived.

Presbytery of Central Texas—At a called meeting of the Presbytery of Central Texas held December 2, in the First Presbyterian Church, Waco, the following was transacted:

At the request of Rev. Ernest S. Sansom, concurred in by the church, the pastoral relation with the Clifton church was dissolved. A call for the pastoral services of Mr. Sansom was received from the Maysfield church, placed in his hands and accepted by him. The following commission was appointed to conduct the installation services on the second Sabbath of January, 1920. Rev. H. R. McFadyen to preside, preach the sermon and propound the constitutional questions; Rev. L. E. Selfridge to charge the pastor, and elder Judge John Watson of Cameron to charge the congregation. At his own request Rev. H. L. Paisley was dismissed to the Presbytery of Washburn. M. C. Hutton, S. C.

HOW TO REPORT OFFERINGS FOR FRENCH AND BELGIAN RELIEF.

Several inquiries have come from churches asking how their offerings to war work and French and Belgian relief are to be reported to the Presbyteries and the General Assembly.

I have written to Dr. Law, the Stated Clerk of our Assembly, asking for an expression of opinion from him on this subject, and he has sent the following reply:

Replying to yours of November 29, the Durant Assembly declined to comply with an overture asking for a separate column in the statistical tables for the war work offerings, but directed that they be reported in a foot-note. (See Minutes of 1918, page 48, number 28). But upon referring to the tables sent up by the Stated Clerks of Presbyteries, which are before me, I find that very few reported these contributions at all, unless, as you suggest, they were included in those reported as miscellaneous benevolences. With this general omission before us, I advise, as you say, that this year they be reported under the head, "Miscellaneous Benevolences," for which there is a column in the tables."

These offerings, therefore, are to be reported under the head of miscellaneous benevolences.

Some churches seem not to understand that the offerings for French and Belgian Relief and for war work are to be sent to Mr. A. N. Sharp, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga. He is the Treasurer of Home Missions, but he is also the Treasurer for War Work Funds. It is important that when these funds are sent to him they should be specially designated as for war work, or as for French and Belgian or Italian Relief.

Many contributions have come to the Foreign Mission office that should have gone to Mr. Sharp for our work, and many have been sent directly to me. Of course all these have been forwarded to Mr. Sharp, but it would save time and trouble if the remittances were made immediately to him in the first instance.

James I. Vance, Chairman.

31 per cent Orange's percentage should read 94 per cent. This brings Orange's total average from 41 per cent up to 58 per cent. This correction is gladly made.

Praying that as individuals, as local Auxiliaries, and as Presbyteries we will strive in 1920 to give a good account as stewards of the manifold grace of God. Yours sincerely,

Mrs. W. B. Ramsay.

Orange Presbyterian Auxiliary was very fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. W. A. Ross, of our Mission work in Mexico, to make an itinerary of two weeks. She was with us from October 1 to 14, and visited eighteen churches. Mrs. Ross is one of our most beloved missionaries, and she presented the work in Mexico in a most attractive and appealing manner. The work there and the character of the people are seen by us now as never before.

Her visit aroused interest in the mission work in almost every Auxiliary she visited. Prayers have been offered and contributions given that would not have been done otherwise. We feel that her visit has been a wonderful help and inspiration to us.

Mrs. Geo. W. Oldham.

President of Orange Presbyterian Auxiliary.

A BIBLE STUDY—Mark 3:13-15.

By Mrs. H. E. Gurney.

One of the high privileges enjoyed by the Synodical at Durham, was a message from that servant of the Lord, Mrs. Gurney of Monroe. Mrs. Gurney had been asked to give the Bible studies at the Synodical but as the Father held her a prisoner in her home she was urged to send a message from the Word. This "prison letter" was read at the closing session by Mrs. W. A. West. It is published below with the hope that the Spirit will further use it to strengthen His servants in their work for the Kingdom.—Ed. Woman's Department.

In these verses we find the three great qualifications for those whom the Lord of the harvest sends forth to be His laborers.

First, their response to His call—He called, "And they came unto Him." Perhaps we should pause long enough over this first step to observe that it is a call to a person, because the enemies of Christianity have, from the beginning, with unerring instinct, concentrated their attacks upon its Founder. The conflict was never fiercer, nor the wiles of Satan more deceptive, than at the present, so that the solemn warning by Paul concerning those who pervert the Gospel of Christ could not have been more needed in the time of the Galatians, than in our own day. It is, however, to be taken for granted that those gathered in this Assembly have accepted the Gospel as it was proclaimed at the first by an "Angel of the Lord," "Good tidings;" "Concerning a Person;" "A Savior which is Christ the Lord." Now, when we have come to Christ there arises at once within us a desire to prove our faith and loyalty by our works. Having the Abel experience: Peace with God, we wish to go forward at once to the Noah experience: Great "works" and "witness" for God. But in the Master's plan, the Enoch experience: Walking with God—Fellowship—comes between. As it standeth written in our lesson the order of qualification is:

First, to come to Him

Second, to be with Him.

Third, to be sent forth.

The message entrusted to me concerns more particularly the second great qualification—Fellowship—"Being with Him." There is such a vast difference between knowing about our Lord, and being acquainted with Him. As the Samaritans voiced it "Now we believe, not because of Thy saying, for we have seen Him ourselves and we know," and the study of the lives of those whom God has greatly used will show that this heart to heart acquaintance with Him has in every case been a pre-requisite.

May the Holy Spirit press the threefold question home to each one of us—Are we in Fellowship with our Lord? Is Christ revealed to us? Can we truly say "I know Him whom I have believed?"

And I know of no exception to the rule, that a consciousness of the presence of God brings an acute consciousness of sin. If with Paul we truly say: "I know Him," with Paul we certainly will say: "Of sinners I am Chief."

Going back to earliest times we find Job. An upright man, who eschewed evil and who maintained his integrity under most trying circumstances, but there came a day when God revealed Himself to

Story and Incident

A CHRISTMAS ANGEL.

By R. E. McClure.

"Please sir, is you Santa Claus?"

"Why, no, little girl. What makes you ask?"

"Nothing, only my mamma said that Santa Claus was a real rich man and always wore a big fur coat 'cause he lived in a cold, cold country. It sure is cold up here, ain't it?"

Little Martha Porter stood gazing at the gray stone mansion from which the multimillionaire banker had just come. He was dressed in keeping with his wealth. His handsome coat protected him from the penetrating cold and the high fur collar kept his ears from freezing in the biting north wind that howled around the corner. In truth John Wilson bore the mark of luxury. It would seem that hard work had been lacking in his career. The larger part of his income had come from his father's estate and ordinary business luck had netted him the balance. In spite of the scarcity of labor or of the high cost of living he managed to keep a house full of servants. Indeed if asked about himself John Wilson would assert that he was through and through a gentlemen, meaning of course a gentlemen of leisure as any cared to understand.

But not so the little bit of humanity, shivering on his doorsteps. The thin emaciated face, the frame-like skeleton to which clung a faded and worn-out coat several sizes too large, the sunken eyes and the hungry appearance gave evidence of the lack of even the necessary things in life.

Martha, at one time had had a happy home. But she had never enjoyed many of the luxuries of life, but her home had been happy—happy in its simplicity. It was only a small part of her life that was spent in the old southern village as she remembered it. At the age of six her father died. Friends persuaded her mother to try New York, where she was told she could make more money to support herself and child. During the three years spent in the great city hard labor, under unfavorable circumstances had sapped the mother's vitality—and there stood little nine year old Martha Porter—an orphan at the mercy of a seemingly cruel fate.

"My mamma told me before she died that Santa Claus always brought good little girls nice things at Christmas time. I've tried to be good. It's been almost a week now since mamma died and it's Christmas Eve. I don't know Santa Claus. Won't you please tell him to bring me a real good dinner. I ain't had nothing to eat 'cept scraps and I'm hungry."

John Wilson did not pay much attention to the little girl. He merely stopped long enough to tell one of his servants to give the little waif, as he called her, something to eat, and was off for his office.

The very first letter which he saw on his desk set him on one of his customary rages.

John Wilson, Esq.,

Two rooms on the top floor of your tenement have been unpaid for this month. Party has gone but left personal belongings valued at ten dollars. Please advise. Smith and Co., Agents.

The following reply was immediately made. Smith and Co.,

Seize personal property, sell same and offer rooms for rent. I must have my money. John Wilson.

This was now a characteristic of the man, but he had not always been thus. Some eight years before he was the proud father of a little curly-haired girl of five. He almost worshipped her and her mother fairly idolized her. One day she got away from her nurse and slipped out with the crowd—nobody knew where.

A panic stricken father had used every means that his money could command but failed. Louise Wilson had evidently been kidnapped. For a long time John Wilson was hopeful of finding at least some trace of his child, but after years of search had availed nothing he had given up hope. His nature changed. He lost the kind disposition that he once had as life lost its interest for him. Each day became one round of monotonous detail, and more and more this man of money handled each item as a cog in a great wheel—as something to be done before he could leave the office.

The day's work over, Wilson jumped into his car and was being whirled through the busy streets to his own home. Great was his surprise to meet at his doorstep the little girl of the morning.

"Please, sir, won't you please make them stop?"

Instinctively her hand reached out for his and clasped it as best she could. He looked over his big fur collar and saw a pair of eyes that pleaded stronger than any speech he had ever heard.

"They are taking away everything I've got and I won't have any place to sleep. Besides, my mamma made it and I—I want it."

Some hidden cord of sympathy was drawing this gruff man, and a little child was leading him. Through streets of palatial residences and then into the poorer sections of the great city, after a long walk, the strange companions stopped before a ten-story building. In the back corner of the tenth floor were two rooms almost vacant. They had been scantily furnished and the last article was now being removed—a dingy, torn, faded, wornout quilt.

"Oh! please, Mister, don't let them take it, my mamma made it."

John Wilson could hardly tell what prompted him, but he stopped the men long enough to see their authority. They handed him instructions signed by Smith & Co.

Having gone this far he would go further. Thereupon he started an investigation. From a woman living on this floor he learned that a Mrs. Porter had lived there with her daughter and that the mother had always seemed to make enough for herself and her child. About two weeks ago Mrs. Porter was taken sick. She died in a few days. She had left enough money to pay her funeral expenses, but not enough to pay December rent, then due. Little Martha had lived the best she could and every night returned to sleep in her mother's bed and to wrap herself in the old faded quilt.

The sun was setting in the west. It was Christmas Eve, but there this man, and that day when he testified; "I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear, now mine eye seeth Thee." He was constrained to add, "I abhor myself, I repent in dust and ashes." Also, Isaiah; He had been a faithful Prophet; speaking the word of the Lord with much assurance, but his first cry when the King, the Lord of Hosts was revealed to him, was "Woe is me, for I am a man of unclean lips." Later there is Peter's: "Depart from me for I am a sinful man, O Lord," and the woman at Jacob's well, acknowledging her secret sins, and even John the beloved, fallen on his face as one dead, before the revelation of Jesus Christ. Following this experience there is another invariable rule, God has never left any soul in this valley of humiliation. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and cleanse us from all unrighteousness." The universal testimony of the prostrate one is: He lifted me; I received strength. Furthermore this is the strength for service. John is empowered to write "the things which were, which are, and which are to come." A whole town receives the Savior from the testimony of the Samaritan woman who had been with Christ. Simon, the "Catcher of fish" becomes Peter "Fisher of men." From Isaiah's cleansed lips flows forth the purest redemption truth. (He is pre-eminently the Evangelist of the Old Testament). Out of his dust and ashes Job is brought into holy place of prevailing intercession.

It is just the same today. Let but "The light of the knowledge of the Glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ" shine into our inmost hearts, and straightway the old idea of worshipping Him with the work of our hands, as though He needed anything, vanishes. Our faith rises to confident dependence upon Him "in whom we live and move and have our being," and our loyalty meets the supreme test of an absolute surrender. Then whatsoever He saith unto us We Do It, and the inscription; "She hath done what she could not" would be as true of any one of us, as of the missionaries across the sea, for the power is of God and not of us.

Assuredly if we have the first two great qualifications we will not lack the third. Obediently we will go, whenever and wherever, He sends us. We have not passed this way heretofore and the path is new and strange to us, but that does not matter, since our Lord "Knoweth the way we take," and He is going with us all the way.

"Now may God fulfill every desire of goodness and every work of faith with power; that the name of our Lord Jesus may be glorified in you, and Ye in Him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ."

"WHEN SANTA CLAUS FORGOT."

A CHRISTMAS TALE.

By Anne B. Payne.

IT was the night before Christmas—a real Christmas Eve, white and beautiful with snow and glistening and slippery with ice. A round, silver moon hung high in the heavens trying his best to shine on everything, turning the icicles to jewels, and lighting up the sky for Old St. Nick.

Most of the houses in the village were dark and silent as it was nearly midnight. At one end of the long street was a small cottage almost hidden in a clump of trees. The shadows around these trees were so thick and dark that the moon could not drive them away; but there was a window with no shutters and a broken pane, and into this Moonbeams danced gleefully.

Inside the room they looked around. The fire was almost out and everything looked bare and cold. There was a table, two chairs and a bed over in the corner. The Moonbeams crossed the floor, peeped over the foot of the bed and then stood still. Lying on the pillow were two small heads—one with straight black hair and the other with golden curls. On each face was the same kind of smile. When the Moonbeams saw the smiles, they turned around quickly and looked at the fireplace.

There they were—hanging side by side, from the mantelpiece, a red stocking and a shorter blue one. Both stockings were swinging slowly back and forth, and nodding sleepily. The Moonbeams brightened and scampered over in the corner to wait for Santa Claus.

The clock struck twelve. The Red Stocking stirred and the Blue One shivered. It was very thin and there was a hole in its toes, and the last red coal in the fire had died.

After that, all was very still in the little house till the clock struck one.

Another hour passed; the Moonbeams did not move, and still the children smiled in their sleep.

The clock struck two. The stockings started and stretched themselves, and the Blue One whispered anxiously:

"O, why doesn't he come?"

"He must have forgotten us," the Red Stocking answered.

"Perhaps he didn't know we had moved," ventured the Blue One.

"The house is small and dark," said the Red One. "It may be that he did not see it."

The little Blue Stocking looked toward the bed and saw the smiles on the two faces.

"O, what shall we do?" it sighed sorrowfully.

The Moonbeams had heard it all. They jumped up quickly and shone right on the troubled stockings.

"Don't worry," they cried gaily. "Just come with us."

The two stockings leaned close together and pulled and wiggled and jumped till the tacks gave way, and down they fell.

"This way," said the Moonbeams.

CHRISTMAS NIGHT.

SOMETIMES I think that Christmas night's the best.

Before the nursery fire, when we're undressed,

And all the toys are put away, except,

Perhaps, my engine and the baby's bear,

Then mother comes away from all the rest

Downstairs to tell our Christmas story there.

She takes the baby on her lap and we Sit 'round her on the hearth-rug so we see

The pictures in the fire, and then she tells

About how shepherds watched their flocks by night

And what the angel said, and how the three

Wise kings came riding—and the big star's light.

And then she tells us how it showed the way

To just a stable where the oxen stay.

And there they found Him in His mother's arms,

A little baby Christchild—and He smiled;

And that (she says) is what made Christmas Day

For you and me and every little child.

Before the nursery fire when we're undressed,

Sometimes I think that Christmas night's the best.—Everybody's.

The stockings followed them closely as they slipped through the broken pane in the window. They had never been out alone before and it was so cold they huddled together. The Moonbeams led them to a big house standing on the next corner and stopped under a window that was partly raised.

"Some careless servant did this," chuckled a Moonbeam. "But how lucky for us."

Then they beckoned to a wind that was passing, and before the stockings knew what was going to happen, they were picked up and pushed through the window.

Inside, they stood perfectly still, too surprised to move. They were in a large beautiful room, heated and dimly lighted by the soft red glow from a stove. On one side stood the most splendid Christmas Tree the stockings had ever dreamed of.

It was covered with candles, chains and crystal balls, and laden with gifts. But the Tree did not seem to mind its burden at all, and stood up tall and straight with a silver star on its highest branch. On the floor, all around it, were boxes of good things to eat. The stockings were gazing up with wonder when the big Tree looked down and saw them.

"Why, hello," it cried, "what are you little stockings doing here, and why are you so sad and empty on Christmas morning?"

The stockings looked around for the Moonbeams, but they were waiting outside. Then together they told him their trouble. The Tree listened carefully, and when they had finished, it said:

"So Santa Claus has forgotten you."

"I guess he did not know we had moved," they defended.

"The children's mother should have told him," said the Tree.

"O, no," they cried, "she has been too ill."

Then the old Tree was silent and looked down over all its branches and whispered something to the Good Things at its foot.

"Lie down, little stockings and open as wide as you can," the Tree said kindly. "I'll help you."

The stockings obeyed wonderingly. Then they heard a noise, a rustling, and straight into each of them rolled an orange, an apple, and a cake with frosted icing. Following them came nuts, candy and raisins, running over each other, trying to get in first. When the Tree finally told them to stand up, the stockings felt very heavy, but there was still some room in their tops.

"Now come over here and stand under my limb next to the door," the Tree told them, "I have some extra gifts here."

When they stood under the limb, the Tree shook it gently and into the top of the Blue Stocking fell a lovely doll with golden curls. The Red Stocking had to shake itself to make room for the toy engine that was crowding in.

The stockings were now full to the top, and over—full of joy, too, as well as the other things. They tried to thank the kind, old Tree, but he would not let them.

"Don't thank me," he said, smiling down on them. "I will never miss the things. Just run along home before the Moonbeams leave you."

The stockings stood in the window and looked out at the gay little Moonbeams who were playing tag to keep warm. But they were so heavy they could not get down alone. The Moonbeams saw them and as the other wind had gone, they shone hard on the top branches of a tall tree where the North Wind was swinging sleepily. He growled a little, but came down, picked up the fat little stockings on his big shoulders and whisked them round the corner so fast it most took their breath away. He put them down on the window sill of the little house, and roared away. Then the little stockings said good-bye to the Moonbeams and squeezed through the broken window.

They stopped beside the bed and looked at the children who were still smiling. The stockings smiled, too, and happily they lay down on the hearth to wait till morning.

A BELATED PRESENT.

FRANK had a bank. It came to him among other gifts on his birthday in September. It was a tiny, red bank, with a bright, blue chimney, and, as his Father explained to him, through the narrow slit in the top of that chimney he was to place what were called the "deposits." His Father had put in the first "deposit"—a bright, new dime—that had fallen to the bottom of the bank with a fine clatter.

"You see, Frankie," his Father had whispered to the little fellow, who stood watching him with pleased, eager eyes, "It will hold nickles, too, and pennies, lots of them. See how soon you can fill it. Perhaps you will have enough in the bank to buy your Mother a pretty present at Christmas."

In the days and weeks that followed, most of the pennies and nickles that came Frank's way went down the blue chimney. Frank liked to hear them fall against the others. He liked to shake the bank and listen to the rattle, and he liked to hold it in his hand and feel it grow heavier with each new "deposit." For Frank was saving with a purpose, to buy a Christmas present for his Mother.

It was the day before Christmas. The bank was not full. The coins still rattled smartly when it was shaken but Frank was a happy little boy as he stood alone in the play-room and shook the pennies and nickles out through the narrow slit in the chimney. When he counted the money he found that he had seventy-six cents—one more penny than he really needed. He picked out a bright one and put it back in the bank. "For seed," he said gleefully. Then, with the rest tied up securely in his handkerchief and safe in his pocket, he scampred away to the candy-shop as fast as his feet could carry him. Soon he had bought a beautiful box of candy, of the kind his Mother liked best of all.

"It must be a surprise," Frank thought on the way home. "I won't tell any one, not even Daddy. I'll put it by her plate at breakfast tomorrow. Won't she be glad! It will be the best Christmas she ever saw. I know she'll say that."

Frank's Mother had gone shopping that afternoon. He had not expected her back until after dark, but, as he turned the corner, he saw her at the gate talking to a neighbor. He promptly turned back and went down a side-street to the alley, meaning to go in at the back gate, through the kitchen, and up the back stairs to the play-room. He opened the gate. There stood Daddy at the door, fixing the latch. Daddy was not to know either.

For a moment the little fellow did not know what to do. Then, close by the wood-pile, he saw an empty cracker-box, a tin one, with a lid. It would hold his present all night and keep it safe until he could get it in the morning. Swiftly he slipped the candy-box inside, closed the lid, tucked it in close by the wood-pile and then went on to house to watch his Father put the screws in the door.

The skies were cloudy and the wind was chilly. Both Frank and his Father were glad to go inside to the bright fire and the hot supper that was waiting. Bed time came, then the long night of sleep.

"Merry Christmas, Frankie!" called his Mother from the doorway in the morning. "Hurry and dress, dear, and come see your presents."

See his presents! Of course, but first he must go outside and bring in the best of all, her present. Poor Frankie! He opened the kitchen door on a very different world. It had been snowing hard all night and was still snowing. The strong wind had blown the snow into great drifts. They were piled high against the fences and they quite buried the wood-pile. He had no idea where, at the bottom of that mitten on. You will take cold. Come in. Breakfast is waiting. Come look at your presents. Have you forgotten? This is Christmas."

Then Frank did cry. Safe in his Father's arms in the warm room he sobbed out his trouble to the Father, who always understood. "Well, well!" he said. "It's too bad, but wait until after breakfast."

"But it won't be a surprise any more," wailed Frankie.

"Oh, yes, it will," said his Father. "We won't tell her until we find it. Come now, cheer up. Don't let her see you cry. She musn't suspect, you know."

It was a wonderful collection of presents Frank found at his plate, enough to make any small boy happy, and he was happy. However, in spite of all the fine, new playthings, he left them many times that morning to go to the window to watch his Father dig.

Soon there was a path to the wood-pile. Then his Father dug carefully along the side where Frank thought he had left the box, but there was no trace of it. Then he tried another side, and another, and another, but there was no box to be seen.

"I'm afraid, Frankie boy," said his Father, coming back to the kitchen, "I'm afraid some one saw you put that box there and has taken it away. It isn't to be found. Now, don't cry. You'll just have to be brave and begin again and do it all over, and when you get your bank full this time, tell Daddy, and we'll see that everything shall be all right and safe. We'll both be in the secret. She'll like that better anyway."

So Frank began again. Some weeks passed. The snow was all gone. One morning he stood at the kitchen table watching his busy Mother, who was preparing to make some cookies.

"Frankie, dear," said his Mother, "My fire doesn't burn well. Put on your cap and mittens and go to the wood-pile and find some small sticks of wood for me. These are all too big."

Frank trudged away, proud to be able to help. Stooping to pull out a stick from under some others, he saw a gleam of something bright. Instantly, he thought of his present and, a very excited little boy, he began to pull out the sticks of wood and throw them to one side. Soon he could see that it was the very box. He had not noticed that evening, when he had placed it in the little hollow in the side of the pile, that the wood above was insecure, and, plainly, in that long night of wind and storm the pieces had slipped down and covered it so that even his Father had not been able to find it. It was quick work. The box safe in his arms he burst into the kitchen, his eyes shining, cheeks aflame, shouting:

"Merry Christmas, Mamma! Merry Christmas! Here's your present!"

Mamma was surprised. There was no doubt of that. She opened the tin box, she untied the package within. There, all safe and dainty, just as it had come from the store, lay the fine box of candy. She listened as Frank told the story.

"You precious child!" his Mother said, taking him into her arms. "And that's why you seemed so quiet and strange all Christmas day. But, do you know, Frankie, this is my birthday. Your present has come just in time for that, even if it is too late for Christmas, and it is beautiful—a box of my favorite candy. Nothing could be nicer."

Frank thought so, too.—Orpha Bennett Hoblit, in Congregationalist and Advance.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

Oh, run, and jump, and skip, and hop,

We're going to town to Christmas shop!

The rough wind blows,

And makes your nose

Look like a frozen cherry.

We'll buy a bouncing ball for Ted,

A bat for Fred,

And skates for Ned;

And for Mamma an emery red

Shaped like a large strawberry.

Oh, dance, and prance, and laugh,

and sing,

We're going to buy most everything!

A puzzle map,

A white fur cap,

A scarlet ostrich feather;

A string of turquoise beads for Nan,

A doll for Fan,

A sled for Jan,

A topaz ring for Sister Ann,

And shoes of gilded leather.

Oh, whirl, and twirl, and jig, and spin,

We're going to bring the holly in!

Search high and low

For mistletoe—

Green leaf and waxen berry,

Ivy and box we'll wreath and twine

With fragrant pine,

In quaint design,

To deck the tree where candles shine,

And make our Christmas merry!

great, white mound, lay his small box with its precious contents.

Frankie almost cried—but not quite. He knew that boys old enough to go to school did not cry—often. So he winked back the tears, seized the fire-shovel and went outside to dig. There his Father found him some time after, a very cold and wet, but a very determined little boy, trying to make a path through the deep snow with the fire-shovel, but not succeeding very well.

"Why, Frankie, boy," said his Father. "What are you doing that for? It is no use making paths while it is still snowing so hard. And you haven't your cap and Hunt-Bramble—On November 4, 1919, at the manse in Atkinson, N. C., Mr. Robert T. Hunt and Miss Nellie Bramble were united in marriage by her pastor, Rev. H. F. Beaty.

Sloan-Elliott—At the home of the bride's father, Mr. Geo. D. Elliott, December 3, 1919, by Rev. E. Emory Washburn, Dr. Henry Lee Sloan, of Charlotte, N. C., and Miss Emily P. Elliot, of Lincolnton, N. C.

Crews-Medford—At the home of the bride's father, in Oxford, N. C., on December 4, 1919, by Rev. Stuart R. Oglesby, Jr., Mr. Richard Y. Crews and Miss Marie Medford, both of Oxford, N. C.

Deaths.

Blue—Mr. D. Blue, an honored citizen of Cumberland county, N. C., and a lifetime member of Galatia Presbyterian Church, which he served many years as a faithful and loyal deacon, departed this life November 8, 1919, in the sixty-eighth year of his age. The funeral was conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. A. McLeod, and the body was laid to rest in the cemetery by the church. The elaborate floral offerings and the great congregation at the funeral attested the high esteem in which this good man was held.

ELIM COLUMBUS DAVIS.

"Uncle Lum," as he was called by his friends, died on the first day of October, 1919, at the home of N. C. White, where he spent the closing years of his life. He was born May 10, 1848, near Rocky River Presbyterian Church, in Cabarrus County, North Carolina. From his earliest youth he was a faithful and devoted member of the Rocky River Presbyterian Church. He was for 35 years an elder of this church, serving as clerk of the session, and for 15 years superintendent of the Sunday School. The last eight or ten years of his life were spent in Charlotte, moving his membership to the St. Pauls Presbyterian Church. Five years ago he was elected ruling elder and served in this capacity till the end. No man was more faithful and devoted to his church; even when he was unable to be present at church we felt the powerful influence of his private devotion.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we bow to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.
2. That in the death of Mr. Davis this church has lost a faithful and loyal member.
3. That the session has lost a faithful and wise counselor.
5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Porter, of Concord, N. C., and Mrs. Alice McWhirter, and Mr. and Mrs. N. C. White, of Charlotte, N. C.
5. That they be spread on the minutes of the session, and a copy be sent to the Presbyterian Standard.

A CHRISTMAS ANGEL.

were no preparations being made for any celebration in the mansion. Usually Christmas was the time when festivities were wanted less and missed more than any other time in the year, but today John Wilson was feeling different. Consequently he ordered the rest of the meagre furnishings put back in the room and handed the men a note addressed to Smith & Co. He wished the little girl good night and left a brightened face and eyes gleaming through tears of mingled sorrow and joy.

It was a different sort of Christmas Eve that John Wilson spent with his wife. The hard surfaced, veneered heart of a business man had been pierced by a sharp-pointed arrow of sympathy, and in the twilight this lonely couple planned a pleasant surprise for a newly-made friend.

Christmas morning was cold and bleak, but inside was warmth, because two hearts were filled with love for others. In spite of his usual custom of late sleeping, the master of the mansion woke up early, and the servants showed their surprise on their usually expressionless faces. John Wilson and his wife were both smiling.

Christmas was already meaning more to them, for they were swiftly moving toward the old tenement house on an errand of mercy. They were just in time to catch Martha as she was leaving the entrance on her search for enough food or money to keep her through another day—and to find Santa Claus and a real Christmas dinner.

Old Santa Claus had changed his robe of red, his reindeer team was an automobile, and his plan of secrecy was laid aside. A little hungry child was soon taking the ride of her life.

"My, how fine," she said, "I didn't know they did ride, so nice." And the seven-passenger car moved as if on a street of glass as it sped toward the same front door where Martha and her new friend had first met.

Little Martha's emaciated body was just a good fit for Louise's old clothes, even if they were made for a five-year-old, and after a good bath this little girl was so different that when she saw herself in the large mirror, she said, "Well, if this is me, I sure have changed."

Even the stone walls seemed to echo the joy and playfulness of childhood—and grown folks can be children too. Not for many years had there been such a Christmas, and dinner—turkey, cranberries and all the good things to eat.

The day passed happily, and in the evening Martha was given a nice white bed with real clean, white sheets and a snow-white spread. And how she did sleep. The fact was, it almost looked like she would hardly wake at all.

The day after Christmas saw a change. Martha contented herself in the morning, but as soon as Mr. Wilson came back in the afternoon she met him with a serious expression on her face.

"Santa" (that's what she called him), "it's all mighty nice to stay here. I'm having a real good time, but I—I got to go."

"Go where?" asked Mr. Wilson.

"Back to the tenement," said Martha. "There's a little girl that's sick down there and I'm afraid nobody has done anything for her."

She insisted, and there was nothing left but to take her back to her old home. On the ninth floor in a little back room there had been a girl slightly older than Martha. She had been sick for fully two weeks, and every morning Martha had gone to her room and done all that her childish ways allowed her to do for the stranger.

But they were too late. Someone had just taken the little sufferer to the hospital. Which one no one knew. Nor did they know who had sent them for her.

Seeing nothing left for her at the tenement, Martha agreed to return to the fine home after arrangement had been made to save the old quilt her mother had made.

That evening as he was seated in a finely furnished room John Wilson became interested in Martha's patient.

"Well," said Martha, "she must have been a little bit older than me, though she was not so large. She had just a lovely face, all surrounded by real, sure enough curls. Around her neck she always had a beautiful gold chain and a little thing that somebody said had the letters "L. W." on the outside and it opened and had a picture inside. I don't know where she got it, but she always had it on."

Enough had been said to excite Mr. Wilson to the highest pitch. Could it be possible that his little girl was alive? It is needless to say that no steps were left unturned to find the hospital where the girl had been taken. The public ward of a large hospital was where the police had had her placed.

As soon as possible after the discovery, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, with little Martha, were being led through the long rows of white cots and finally found a girl of 13 or 14 wearing a chain and a locket bearing two letters, "L. W." Inside were two pictures—one of her mother and one of her father.

In spite of her weakness the sufferer looked at the three—then at the pictures. Suddenly her eyes brightened and a smile flitted across her face as she murmured, "Mama, Papa."

As soon as they were alone and Louise Wilson was resting comfortably in a private room, Martha looked her new found friend in the face and said, "Say, can you be my papa as well as my Santa Claus?"

"Of course I can, for you have been my Christmas Angel," replied John Wilson. His wife nodded her assent from the bedside of a recuperating patient.

Miscellaneous

THE HOPE OF THE CHURCH OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

MONTREAT TRAINS HUNDREDS

"The Summer Conferences at Montreat are so valuable to the Church because of their inspiration, instruction in the best methods, and enlistments of loyalty in the promotion of our large Church enterprises, that no better investment can be made than to fully equip this splendid and attractive summer resort for the accommodation of the rapidly increasing attendance and for the adequate auditorium that you are planning. It was a matter of great regret to all of us last summer that many of our people who were anxious to attend the different Conferences and have the advantage of the fine programs which had been prepared were unable to do so because they could not secure accommodations. Those who felt the responsibility for arousing interest in the great causes of the church and building up efficiency in the various forms of Church activity have come to see in Montreat a great opportunity to carry forward our plans in the happiest and most fruitful way. We are therefore very much interested in the large plans which you have for the building up of the Greater Montreat."

Some Things You Should Know About Your Church

IV. SUSTAINING THE LEADERSHIP OF THE CHURCH.

This statement is for the members of the Presbyterian Family alone—Tell it not in Gath! Publish it not in the streets of Askelon!

A FATAL OVERSIGHT.

We have been so busy with the war, the unrest, the H. C. O'L., and the many demands upon time and energy that we have too often overlooked the men and women in the ministry and on the mission fields.

God foresaw this sin and said to Israel once and again as they entered upon the conquest of Canaan, "Take heed to thyself that thou forsakest not the Levite as long as thou livest upon the land."

SUPPORT INHERES IN MINISTRY.

To support the pastor is just—he has been called away from all the sources of worldly gain. It is right—the Church promises to supply material things to him while he ministers to the Church in spiritual things. It is wise—he is to be the specialist in religion and should have time to give to the Word and to prayer. It is according to Divine decree—"even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the Gospel shall live of the Gospel." It is not an added gift. It is not a gratuity. It is not a "charity."

A SERIOUS SITUATION.

Many of our pastors and missionaries are in pinching need. Scores have not received an increase in salary for ten, twenty years, although the cost of living has increased from 100 per cent to 250 per cent. Our neglect has produced underpaid and neglected leadership. Many borrowed on their life insurance policies up to the limit. When another premium, and interest, became due they have had to give up their policies.

They are not complaining. They will not ask for more. The God of Elijah will provide. They can say, with the Psalmist, "I have been young and now I am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread." Let us not ask them to have all the faith.

Can it be that God is withholding the great boon of an efficient ministry in adequate numbers because the Church is showing such lack of appreciation of the strong, capable, self-denying men who serve us today? Think on this thing.

ADEQUATE SUPPORT GUARANTEED.

Each congregation by the raising of the right hand has solemnly promised to continue to give its pastor "that competent (mark the word!) worldly maintenance which they have promised in the call, and whatever else they may see needful for the honor of religion and his comfort among them."

A LIVING.

The average salary to all pastors is $1,611, including estimated rent of manse and aid from H. M. Committees!

Of 1,408 pastors, 346 receive less than $1,000, including rent of manse and aid from Home Mission Committees of Presbytery, Synod and General Assembly; 617 receive between $1,000 and $1,499; 244 between $1,500 and $1,999. Only 95 receive between $2,000 and $2,499; 43 between 2,500 and $2,999; 37 between $3,000 and $3,999; 16 between $4,000 and $5,000, and 10 receive over $5,000.

SUPPORT NOT INVALIDATED BY RETIREMENT.

After the minister has served his generation by the will of God and on account of sickness or old age has been forced to retire both from labor and from income, shall not the Church gratefully provide for him? Shall we not minister to the pressing needs of the widows and little orphan children who have shared the toil and privations of those who have gone to their eternal reward?

A GRACIOUS PRIVILEGE.

To meet the accrued liability of the Church to these self-denying servants of Christ and our Church is a privilege.

We have on the rolls of Ministerial Relief right now 109 infirm Presbyterian ministers whose average age is 72 years; 160 widows who for a time must have help; 27 afflicted orphans without father or mother; and in these 296 homes are 71 little fatherless children under 14 years of age.

Every dictate of justice, of honor, of gratitude, of self-respect, of expediency, and of religion urges us to provide bountifully for these. It's a privilege too: "For God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love, which ye have shewed toward His name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister."

MORE LIBERAL RESPONSE NEEDED.

These veterans who are bathed in the sun-set glow, and are ready to depart to be with Him must be better cared for. Last year the 41 "Honorably Retired" after an average of fifty years' service and an average of eighty years of age received an average of $349. The 66 other ministers an average of $287. The widows an average of $196. The average assistance to each of the 296 families on the Roll was $229 per annum, or 63 cents a day per family. We are doing a little better now. We are going to do much better at once by your help.

Where Drugs Fail

Many Chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from Shivar Mineral Water. If you suffer from chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning or other curable conditions due to impure blood do not hesitate to accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer as printed below. His records show that only two in a hundred on the average, have reported "no beneficial results." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful spring. Simply sign the following letter:

Shivar Spring,
Box 4-H, Shelton, S. C.
Gentlemen:

I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Mineral Water. I agree to give it a fair trial, in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within a month.

CHRISTMAS GREENS.

Everybody knows the Christmas trees, holly, mistletoe, and Christmas greens on our markets, but where these cheering plants come from and how they grow is not so well known.

Christmas trees are furnished principally by two families of trees—the spruces and the firs. The spruces are the more bushy looking trees, with numerous small cones near the top. All through northern New England, northern Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota the spruces form vast forests. The black spruce grows in swamps, where few other trees can live, while the white spruce competes with the noble pines for higher and better soil.

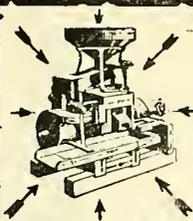

Every year millions of young spruces are cut in the northern forests and shipped to the cities and prairie states in carload lots. If the woodsmen can find a stand of young firs they take them also. The fir looks more refined and less bushy.

While the use of Christmas trees has come to us from Germany, the custom of decorating our houses with holly and mistletoe originated in England.

The home of our American holly is in the woods of New England and the Alleghany mountains. In the north it is a small evergreen shrub, but in the south it sometimes grows to be a tree fifty feet high. With its glossy leaves and bright scarlet berries the holly is an object of beauty in its native woods as well as in our fashionable homes and churches. The hand of man has never cultivated this beautiful shrub, at least not on a commercial scale, but the wild birds are attracted by its bright berries. They eat the scanty pulp and scatter the seeds far and wide. While some species of holly grow as far south as Texas and westward into Missouri and Arkansas, the great forests of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota contain not a single species of these beautiful shrubs.

A queer kind of plant is the mistletoe. If one saw it for the first time he might mistake it for the common witch's broom which is familiar to every northern woodsman. In reality the mistletoe is a parasite which grows and lives on other trees, such as maple, poplar and tupelo. Its white fruit is eaten by birds, and the small seeds are accidentally dropped on the branches of trees. The seeds adhere to the bark, and if they happen to have been planted on the right kind of host they germinate and send a kind of sucker-like growth into the bark and wood of their host, and a new mistletoe plant begins its life and grows at the expense of its host, from which it derives nearly all its nourishment. Our Christmas mistletoe is restricted to the middle and southern states, growing from New Jersey to Missouri and south as far as Florida and Texas, but is not found in the northern states. Several species of mistletoe, however, do occur in our western forests.

The most humble plant of this happy season is the small plant known as Christmas greens or ground pines. It is a close relative of the ferns and mosses and, like these, occupies the shady nooks and places on the forest floor, where it trails and twines among the roots of the stately pines. It never produces any flowers or true seeds. Its small heads, which look like tiny ears of grain, are filled with yellow dust. This dust is carried off by the wind or shaken out and carried off by the gentle touch of squirrels, rabbits and other woodland folks.

Few of us who enjoy the cheer of these Christmas plants ever meet them in their native haunts in winter; we can only study them where they grow when we take our summer outing to the northern woods and to the mountains. —Presbyterian.

TRIM IT YOURSELF.

The Christmas tree that is trimmed with homemade decorations is always best because it stands in the home as a gay monument to the work of loving hands. No tree loaded with decorations from the store can mean as much in any household since anyone with money may go forth and get the decorations while it takes that which is worth far more than money to "trim it yourself," love of home and of the family.

A cone-bearing branch of pine makes a splendid decoration over the mantle. Pop a lot of corn and string it, these festoons of pure white against the deep green of the tree are effective. If red berries are found, string one of these between every three kernels of corn.

But when I say, "Trim it yourself," I do not mean to stop at the tree. Trim up the whole house, give it a joyful holiday appearance.

At the newel post at the foot of the stairs a great bunch of evergreen branches in the umbrella-holder makes an attractive sight to greet whoever enters the hall. It seems to fill the entire hall and make it doubly attractive.

I have on several occasions used umbrella-stands and waste-baskets for this purpose and found them satisfactory. Red crepe-paper or a bow of red ribbon will give a touch of Christmas color to the most ordinary waste-basket.

In many a home the top of the post at the head of the stairway is a good place for a small plain bowl filled with greens and holly. Branches of hemlock, fir,

15 Eggs a Day From 23 Hens, in Winter

Mr. Duni's Hens Increased Every Day—Plan is Easily Tried.

"We have 23 chickens and hadn't had an egg all winter. In five days after feeding Don Sung, we got four to five eggs a day; in three weeks, we were getting 10 to 12 eggs a day; in five weeks we got 15 to 19 eggs a day."—John Dun, Box 102, Cherry Valley, Pa.

Mr. Duni started giving his hens Don Sung in January, in zero weather. He now keeps his hens busy in cold weather, when hens usually stoy laying. A trial costs nothing. Here's our offer:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 466 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

PRESBYTERIAN RESPONSIBILITY

The first Missionary work on this continent was for the Indians.

The Southern Presbyterian Church at its organization recognized that its first Missionary responsibility was the evangelization of the Indians, who had been driven from their homes in the South to Indian Territory.

The saintly Read, Lloyd, Gibbons, Hotchkin are a galaxy of noble men who shared their hardships and privations in the early days for Christ's sake.

Through the efforts of these devoted men and those who followed in sacrificial succession, over 3,000 Indians have been brought to Christ and over 5,000 taught in the Mission Schools of the church.

Silas Bacon, Henry Wilson, Milton Brown, Frank H. Wright, successful pastors and evangelists, are fruits of their labors.

The Indians love their Church, and Indian Presbytery is the first "over the top" in every campaign.

Oklahoma Presbyterian College is a great Missionary institution. It is overflowing with students. Enlargement is imperative. $100,000 is needed for a new Dormitory and added equipment. This equipment, endorsed by the Assembly, must be furnished.

or arbor-vitae are particularly suitable for this purpose.

In decorating pictures, the "over-done" effect must always be avoided. Small twigs of holly or evergreens placed here and there over the pictures are all that is necessary.

In the living-room a welcome change from the old familiar holly decorations can be made by tying small branches of arbor-vitae, fir, cedar or hemlock with red or white frosted ribbon and putting them at each place.

For the center of the table a basket of fruit with small twigs of evergreens placed here and there will be very pretty.

Make the children's room a source of great pleasure during the holidays. Give them a small Christmas tree to be their own and allow them to decorate it as they will. From the current magazines they can cut out dolls to be hung on the tree, and a few inexpensive ornaments and small red apples will furnish the additional material. This is a plan well worth trying for the sake of the young folks of the household and their little friends.

Stars and half-moons, some made of silver cardboard, others of red blotting-paper, can be suspended from the doors and windows, and little angel babies with wings of tissue-paper hung from the ceiling will be an added delight to the children.

Several large figures of Santa Claus purchased for a few cents or cut out of periodical can be pasted directly over the nursery windowpanes, producing a most novel decoration. For the sake of variety a string of paper dolls holding hands can be used in the same way.

Each child should be allowed to wear a little bunch of evergreen tied with a bow of red ribbon, and any visitor to the house might be presented with small twigs of green ready to be pinned on. A work-basket filled with these little favors can be placed in the hall or living-room.

A pretty window decoration consists of branches of evergreens and holly tied together and suspended by fine wire. Or branches of evergreen alone tied with red ribbon can be used if preferred. If wreaths are used, plain holly or evergreen wreaths without bells or other ornaments are in good taste and really most effective.

A few final bright touches can be added by placing red pillows on the couch and red rugs here and there. Red lampshades or anything else of that color that has been put away can be made use of again; and a small basket filled with greens and suspended from a chandelier or a hook in the ceiling makes a most charming decoration.—Ruth Boyd, in The Presbyterian.

From State Red Cross Seal Commission.

The annual sale of the Red Cross Christmas Seals is now on. No more beautiful expression of the Christmas spirit can be made than for every letter, card and package to bear the seal of the Red Cross. The seal adorns the package, is a recognition of the blessings of the Red Cross, and the money will be used to stamp out the Great White Plague. We are enjoying an era of unrivaled prosperity. Let every one have the grace to show forth gratitude by buying the Red Cross Seals.

—“Is this a healthful town?” inquired the home seeker of a native.

“Yes, certainly,” was the answer, according to Tonics and Sedatives. “When I came here, I hadn’t the strenght to utter a word; I had scarcely a hair on my head; I couldn’t walk across the room, and had to be lifted from my bed.”

“You give me hope!” cried the home seeker with enthusiasm. “How long have you been here?”

Savings Division
U. S Treasury Department

Before national prohibition became a fact, one of the slang phrases which sped among men of intemperate habits was "Drink up and get a red nose." Dr. Nehemiah Boynton of Brooklyn has bettered that saying by advising Americans to adopt thrift habits and avoid a grindstone nose."

"Help the government to prevent a characteristic of the future American countenance from being a grindstone nose" said Dr. Boynton in a communication to the Congregational ministers of Brooklyn urging them to support the Thrift and Savings Campaign of the Savings Division of the Treasury Department.

"Benjamin Franklin put the matter in a nutshell when he said 'A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose to the grindstone.' These are days not merely of the high cost of living but of unusually large wages, salaries and incomes for multitudes of people. Days, too, when the temptation to extravagance and financial carelessness has risen to the proportions of a menace to the future stability of multitudes of American homes.

"The antidote for this situation is thrift—good old fashioned American economy and saving; making with earnestness and forethought what our forefathers used to call 'provision against a rainy day.' Such provision the government would assist to provide through the opportunities afforded by the Thrift Movement. You do no greater service of its kind for your people than by lending your active sympathy and support to this very pertinent endeavor of the government to popularize, especially among our young people today, the grace of thrift."

The effect of thrift on the moral character and welfare of a community or an individual cannot be too strongly emphasized according to George K. Home, chief of police of Los Angeles.

"Thrift is a deterrent of crime" said Chief Home, "because thrift develops character. Police records show that few thrifty persons land in jail. The regular saving of money requires courageous determination and some self-denial but it pays big dividends in better citizenship, greater independence, power, initiative, confidence and self-reliance."

Get Your Piano Through The Standard Piano Club And Save One-Third The Cost

No matter where you live, nor what style of piano or player-piano you want the Club will save you at least one-third the cost. By "bunching" our orders in a club of one hundred buyers, each gets the rock bottom factory price and saves from one to two hundred dollars according to the style of instrument selected.

But the big saving in price is only one, and by no means the most important, of the many attractive features of the Club. Read the following brief outline, then write for catalogue giving full explanation and particulars.

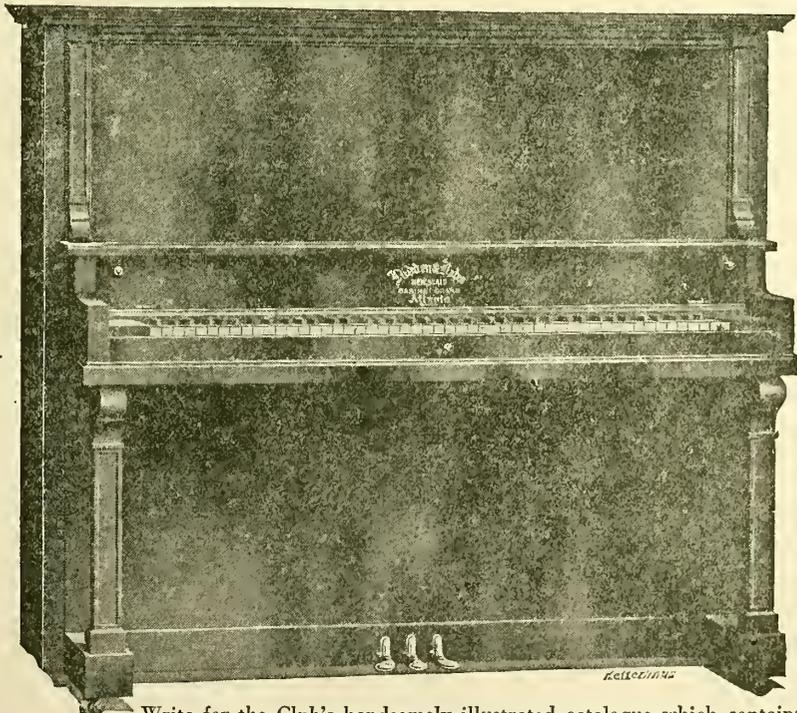

FEATURES OF THE CLUB

1. A clear saving of one-third the cost.
2. Nothing to pay unless, after a thorough trial of the instrument in your own home, you find it perfectly satisfactory and decide to keep it.
3. If, after the free trial, you are delighted with the superior quality of the instrument, the attractive price, the liberal and convenient terms, the protective guarantees and the Club as a whole, then you accept it. But if for any reason, you are not pleased, you simply notify the Club and upon receipt of their shipping instructions return the instrument, freight collect. The trial costs you nothing, puts you under no obligations and is the only perfect protection against every possibility of dissatisfaction.
4. Freight prepaid, safe delivery guaranteed.
5. Easy and convenient terms of payment and a clear receipt to your family in the event of your death before the instrument is fully paid for, provided, of course, you have complied with the printed regulations of the Club.
6. Every instrument is fully guaranteed against all imperfections of workmanship and materials.
7. Liberal allowances for old pianos and organs in exchange for new pianos and new player-pianos.
8. Each purchaser is responsible only for his own order and yet benefits by the combined action of the one hundred buyers.
9. You have a complete line of the best pianos and player-pianos to select from and will find no difficulty in getting an instrument that suits you exactly.
10. Even a child who knows nothing about business is perfectly safe in purchasing through the Club, for there are no tricks, no misrepresentations, no exaggerations, no falsifying, no special prices to special buyers, no imposition, no annoyance by insulting letters, no begging you to keep the instrument, etc., etc.
11. You get an instrument of the highest quality, of the sweetest tone, of rare artistic beauty, of the greatest durability, of the strongest endorsement, and of the most approved reputation and standing.
12. You deal with people of the highest standing, of unquestioned reliability, of greatest experience and efficiency, of clean and honorable reputation, people who would not cheat you if they had the opportunity.
13. Every statement and representation made by the Club is guaranteed both by the Advertising Manager of the Presbyterian Standard and by Ludden & Bates, one of the oldest, largest and most responsible piano firms in America.

Absolutely No Risk in Purchasing Through The Club

The Club assumes all of the responsibility of proving to your entire satisfaction that you are getting an instrument of the highest quality at the lowest possible price. You are the judge and the Club leaves the decision entirely to you. When you have tried the piano or the player-piano we know what your decision will be, for we know what hundreds of other people think of the instruments and the prices. If you would like to see the letters of those who have purchased through the Club we will gladly send you a booklet containing them.

If you would like to save a hundred dollars or more on your instrument and be absolutely sure of perfect and lasting satisfaction, write for your copy of the Club catalogue today. Address

Write for the Club's handsomely illustrated catalogue which contains full description and photo-engravings of the latest art designs in pianos and player-pianos.

THE BEAUTIFUL BETHLEHEM BELLS.

Over the roar of the cities, over the hills and the dells,
With a message of peace to the nations, ring the beautiful Bethlehem bells,
Bringing joy to the souls that are sighing in the hovels where poverty dwells—
There is life—there is life for the dying, in the beautiful
Bethlehem bells.

For they sing of love that is deathless—a love that still triumphs in loss;
They sing of the love that is leading the world to the Calvary cross;
Ring sweet o'er the sound of the cities—ring sweet o'er the hills and the dells
And touch us with tender pities, oh, beautiful Bethlehem bells!

"FISHERS OF MEN."

It is a very hopeful sign that our Church is becoming deeply aroused to the duty of more persistent and strenuous efforts in behalf of the unsaved. Not only the General Assembly but the lower courts of the Church, are declaring their purpose to give more attention to the work of seeking and saving the lost. Our Church is feeling painfully the reproach of the slow growth of its communion roll.

This is well. We believe it is the Spirit of the Master stirring in the hearts of His people. His supreme mission was to seek and save the lost. To this as their supreme mission He called the apostles. "Come ye after me and I will make you to become fishers of men." He associated them with Himself that He might teach them and train them and imbue them with His spirit to the end that they might devote their lives to catching men. This was their one great work—the prize of their high calling, and whatever else they did must be subordinate to this and contributory to this. Paul is a fine illustration of such concentration; "I make myself all things to all men if by any means I might save some." In all diversity of occupation, in all variety of social conduct, his eye was ever upon the same end. He was called of Christ and sent forth to catch men.

True there is a pastoral duty. Christ commanded Peter, "Feed my sheep; feed my lambs." It was never meant, however, that this should monopolize the preacher's time. It is rather incidental, while the prime task is to play the part of an "ambassador of Christ," and beseech men to be reconciled to God.

There is a tendency to suffer the pastoral work to become all-engrossing. It is indicated in the very fact that the settled preacher is called pastor. He wears this label because he is chiefly, if not exclusively engaged in pastoral work. The function of winning men to Christ is assigned to another class, the evangelists. When a special effort is to be made in a settled pastorate for catching men it is customary to send for an evangelist. He is supposed to be an expert in this line, while the pastor is supposed to lack the experience necessary to success.

We believe in evangelists. We rejoice to see the Church adding to the number. We wish that every Presbytery might employ one or more; that every Synod might supplement the work of its Presbyteries, and the General Assembly supplement the work of its Synods. There is little danger that we shall have too many. But their sphere is marked out in our Form of Government—"foreign countries," "frontier settlements" and the "deserted parts of the Church." They are needed to carry the Gospel to territory that cannot be reached by the preachers who are anchored to particular churches, or groups of churches.

Christ was not speaking exclusively to them when He said, "Come ye after me and I will make you to become fishers of men." They should not be greatly needed within the boundaries covered by the stated preaching of the Word. Every pastor should do the work of an evangelist. He should ever be on the alert to catch men. The unsaved are all about him. He does not have to travel beyond the bounds of his parish to find them. Why should he not regard them as the proper objects of his labor? As their need is the greatest, why should they not come in for first thought and chief effort? It will hardly do to say that he has not the time, for their need creates the most imperative demand on his time. He can put his time to no more important use.

If any pastor is neglecting the unsaved within his reach, he should read Richard Baxter's Reformed Pastor. Hear this from him: "He that will let a sinner go down to hell for want of speaking to him, doth set less by souls than did the Redeemer of souls; and less by his neighbor than common charity will allow him to do by his greatest enemy. O therefore, brethren, whomsoever you neglect, neglect not the most miserable. Whatever you pass over, forget not poor souls that are under the condemnation and curse of the law, and who may look every hour for the infernal execution, if a speedy change do not prevent it. O call after the impenitent, and ply this great work of converting souls, whatever else you leave undone."

The pastor who is trying to develop his members into ideal Christians, can easily find enough to keep him busy. Glaring defects are constantly obtruding themselves on his attention. If his heart is much set on correcting these, he will doubtless vex his soul from week to week, and he will try to find comfort by laying on the lash, and then rubbing in the salt of Scriptural admonition. But after all he will fail in his effort to make ideal Christians. The spiritual life of his members will not suffer by the loss of the time and efforts which he withdraws from them to give to winning the unsaved to Christ. On the contrary, nothing contributes more to edification of Christians than to see sinners brought in penitent trust to the feet of Christ. The soul-winning pastor is the one that wears best and maintains among his members the highest standard of Christian living.

HUMAN NATURE THE SAME EVERYWHERE.

Where the treatment of the poor negro is concerned, the people of the South are evidently not "sinners above all the Galileans." Wherever the white race and the black race come into competition, this prejudice is generally manifested.

Our brethren of the North view the case from afar, and pass judgment upon us because of our treatment of the negro, and it must be confessed that we manage to give them abundant reason for criticism. Much of the treatment, we condemn, and we wish very much that we could put a stop to it.

Sometimes, though not as often as in the South, because the black race abounds in the South, the Northern whites come into close touch with the negro, and it is a rare case that the Northern man does not act just as the Southern man does, because both have the same human nature and are subject to the same racial prejudices.

Our Congregational brethren, being chiefly from New England, form a large body of our critics, so that, if one would judge from their criticism, this treatment of the negro is peculiarly a Southern product.

Recently their Annual Council met in Grand Rapids, Mich., far removed from the negro-hating South. Some of the colored delegates went to a hotel for lunch, but the proprietor refused to serve them and declared that he would close his house rather than serve negroes. Some of them at once entered suit to

AN OPPORTUNITY IN BRAZIL.

THE history of the Presbyterian Church in the South is one of which we have reason to be proud, but of no pages are we prouder than those written by our missionaries. In the short life of our Church from 1861 to 1919, our progress in the foreign field has been one of the wonders of missionary enterprise, whether in Africa, Japan, Korea, China, Brazil or Mexico. Among those who have written this history no name stands higher than that of Dr. George W. Butler, who has at last gone to his reward.

He was a native of North Carolina, as is his wife. They have spent the greater part of their life in Brazil. When he moved to Canhotinho, where his last days were spent and where his greatest work was done, he willingly faced danger, privation and isolation until he could win the people. Here for a time he lived with his family in a building with a leaking roof on a dirt floor. Their food was stewed in a kettle over the fire in the yard. The drinking water was bad and scarce, and they had no water with which to bathe. One room and two closets served for preaching hall, reception room, bed room and hospital. When he opened his first clinic in this shanty his equipment for his work was one dollar's worth of medicine and a few surgical instruments.

Today in that same section, as the result of his self-sacrificing work and that of his companions in service, we find a thousand believers, a church building with a capacity of 600, and two Sunday Schools. In Canhotinho alone there are 300 believers.

At the time of his death Dr. Butler's private property consisted of eight acres of land on which there are three dwelling houses and another building used for a drug store, operating room, etc. There are three excellent cisterns of water on this property. These cost about $500 each. On the property are 8,000 coffee trees in bearing condition, producing about a ton of coffee annually. Adjoining this property there are five acres of ground suitable for very attractive playgrounds. This property adjoins a hospital belonging to our Foreign Mission Committee, but at this time there seems no prospect of operating the hospital. Then there is no doctor in Brazil to take his place.

It is planned to turn this hospital building into a much needed school for girls, and to secure this property of Dr. Butler's and combine the two. It is well worth $8,000, but we learn that Mrs. Butler will sell it for $6,000.

Already the Roman Catholics in Brazil are boasting that they intend to secure this property.

The Synod of Virginia has pledged over $3,000 for this cause.

We have written this in order to give some of the test the validity of the Michigan law forbidding discrimination.

When the Southern General Assembly met in New Orleans, last May, the ladies of the Presbyterian Churches of the city each day served an elegant lunch for the members. We lunched in a large room with many tables reaching across it. Our colored members had a table to themselves and were served by the same ladies and at the same time as the whites, which we have no doubt would have been the case, if the ladies of Grand Rapids had served lunch, possibly with the exception, that the white and colored members would have sat cheek by jowl.

Human nature is generally the same without regard to geographical bounds.

Lord's stewards a chance to use some of His money for this purpose.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Campbell, of Roanoke, is chairman of the committee to secure this property. Any one wishing to contribute can write to him, or send to us. The failure to secure this property would be disastrous to our work in that section of Brazil.

A CALL TO PRAYER.

Paul urges us to pray without ceasing and to pray everywhere. Whenever the Church has obeyed this injunction, the Church has been strong and effective.

There are, however, times when prayer is especially appropriate. The close of the year has always been a time when men felt impelled to pray. There is something serious about the midnight hour, when the Old Year is passing away and the New Year is coming in. Men think of the flight of time more seriously than usual. They realize that here is a mile-post whence they look back upon the year's journey. They count up their blunders and make new resolves for the future.

The year 1919 will soon be among the portions and parcels of the dreadful past. If we look about us with Spirit-quicken eyes, there is much to depress us. The Church of God has been shorn of her strength. Her membership is no longer men born of the Spirit, on fire with a zeal for souls, no longer shining as light in the midst of darkness, no longer living separate from the world. On the contrary, the Church is apparently dead. A neutral Gospel is preached, and the mercy of God has usurped the place of His justice, and we rarely hear the cry of what must I do to be saved? The family altar is rarely found, while the love of money has eaten up the zeal of the Church.

Instead of mourning in sackcloth and ashes, the Church is self-satisfied, and imagines that she is rich and has need of nothing.

Let the children of God, at this crisis of the Church's life and of the country's welfare, come together around the throne of Grace, whether it be in the public sanctuary or in the private home, so that when the Old Year dies and the New Year is ushered in, through the power of the Spirit working in the Church, a great change will appear.

Instead of being immersed in the world, the Church should be found crying for mercy, repenting of her deadness, and girding her loins in order to carry out the last Great Commission.

Let the pastors and elders, the fathers and mothers, all join in this great movement that is going to sweep over the State.

Let this New Year be, not a time for boasting, but of sin-confession, and then we shall see those who are now at ease in Zion, bestirring themselves and making ready for the coming of the King.

"PRESBYTERIAN PROGRESS."

The above is the name of the new child of journalism, born in the Synod of South Carolina, who will make quarterly visits to the membership of that Synod.

Rev. G. G. Mayes is the editor, and Rev. Dr. J. M. Holladay the business manager. The name indicates the business of the paper—to report the progress of the Presbyterian Church in South Carolina.

Judging from the program set forth, there will be progress in our sister Synod.

The Standard sends greeting and a God-speed.

Three Parables

I. The Forgotten Wise Man.

(From Ecclesiastes)

THERE was a little city, and few men within it. And there came a great king against it, and seized it and built great bulwarks against it. Now there was found in it a poor, wise man; and he by his wisdom delivered the city.

Yet no man remembered the same wise man.

II. The Unmuzzled Ox.

(From Paul)

What soldier ever serveth at his own charges?

Who planteth a vineyard and eateth not the fruit thereof?

Who feedeth a flock and eateth not the milk of the flock?

Saith not the law also the same? Is it not written in the law of Moses, "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn?"

Is it for oxen that God careth

Or, saith he it assuredly for our sakes? Because he that ploweth ought to plow in hope; and he that thresheth, to thresh in hope of partaking.

If we sow unto you spiritual things, is it a great matter if we shall reap your eternal things?

III. The Unthinking Layman; or Old Bill Crow.

(From The Christian Advocate)

Brother Jim Jones was a Methodist of the old school; always at his place in church, ready to shout, sing or pray. He never cheated in a horse trade, nor lied about his dogs, and was always honest with his neighbors and his God.

Among his stock was old Bill Crow, a black mule nearly a third of a century old. His faithful service had been almost as long as his years.

One morning Brother Jones hitched Bill Crow to the plow and started across the field.

"Git up" said Brother Jones.

Bill Crow didn't move. He just turned his head and looked kinder mournful like at his boss, and then laid down. His working days were over. Brother Jones knew that, because it was the first time Bill Crow had ever refused to move. He looked into the mule's eyes and thought he saw tears in them. He knew Bill Crow had done his level best, and that he hated to quit. But there was no help for it; and he turned the old mule out in the woods to die.

That night Joe, Brother Jones' boy, said:

"Pap, what've you done with old Bill Crow?"

"Why, son, he fell down at the plow this morning, and so I turned him out to die. Guess his working days are over."

"You turned old Bill Crow out to die?"

"Why, sure; he ain't no good any more."

"But, see here, pap; ain't he been working for you all his life?"

"He sure has, son, and he worked hard, too."

"And you goin' to church every Sunday and singin' 'I Want to Be An Angel?' Pap, do you reckon an angel would treat old Bill Crow that way after he'd worked for him all his days?"

This was putting the thing in a new light to the old man, and Brother Jones began to feel that he had been pretty mean to old Bill. He spoke to his wife about it, and she told him that if he didn't go out and get old Bill Crow and bring him to the barn and feed him and treat him well from that time on, she'd leave him. Every person about the place seemed to think that Brother Jones had treated old Bill Crow outrageously mean; and Brother Jones got so ashamed of himself that he sneaked down into the woods and hunted up the old mule and brought him back.

From that day on every day was Sunday to old Bill Crow.

Was Joe right?

Were Sister Jones and the hired man and the neighbors right?

Did old Bill Crow's third of a century of faithful geeing and hawing and ploughing and mowing beget duty?

* * *

And I wonder if Brother Jones thought further, so that on the next day he sent his contribution, and thus fulfilled his duty to the Old Preachers who had served more patiently and faithfully than his old mule.

If not, Joe will be after him again, and so will his good wife and his conscience; for Old Preachers' service begets duty.

* * *

Have you remembered the old Ministers' needs and his claim upon the Presbyterian Church which he has served so long and with such self-denial?

The Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief works for the enfeebled ministers, and the needy widows and little children of those who have died.

Do you wish to help them? Communicate with the secretary. The endowment fund for this purpose will endow you with earthly immortality and enable you to help the Old Preachers long after you have left the scenes of this life.

Do you wish to help the "necessitous cases" now? Send the money for the annual fund which empties itself annually into the lean purses of this most worthy class of God's "saints who are in need."

The legal title of the committee is "The Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (commonly called Southern Presbyterian)" incorporated under the laws of the Commonwealth of Kentucky. Be sure to name it in your will.

A PAYING INVESTMENT.

It has been my pleasure to go to Montreat summer after summer for the last ten years and I regard it as of inestimable value to the spiritual life of Southern Presbyterian Churches. Its Young People's Conference has begun to make itself felt throughout our whole church, the splendid Bible lectures by the foremost teachers of America, the Missionary programs, the matchless sermons and above all, fellowship with the choicest spirits in the Southern Presbyterian Church make a day or week or a month at Montreat the brightest spot of the whole year in the life of any Christian.

It is my firm conviction that money spent in making Montreat efficient in the wonderful work it has already done for our churches will be returned immediately in double value in the spiritual and educa-

Brazil of Tomorrow

By Edward E. Lane.

THE Duke of Wellington used to say that the business of a general in war was to guess what was on the other side of the hill. It is no less the business of the church to know her times and forecast the future advances of her spiritual warfare. The great world struggle of the last five years has been like a mighty star shell flashing its light everywhere and illuminating the paths along which the nations are to move. The horizon was never so clear as it is today. Are there any great movements for the future of Brazil that seem to be coming into view?

The vast unoccupied lands of Brazil will be largely taken up during this century, for there is little available territory left in other portions of the globe. Africa is almost altogether a black man's country, and where it is not, the white races have already come. In Europe there is nothing left. Asia has its teeming millions. The United States and Canada are nearing the limit of their capacity to absorb new settlers, and will soon begin to curtail emigration. The case is very different with Brazil. She has a larger expanse of new lands than any other nation. "The Amazon valley is the largest unoccupied area of fertile space on the earth's surface" says a traveller. On the vast plains of Brazil, coffee, sugar cane, corn, rice, and cotton will grow without fertilizers. President Roosevelt, writing of the central areas of Brazil, which he visited on the journey that resulted in the discovery of the River of Doubt—now Roosevelt River, said that some day these plains would support a great population. Does anyone acquainted with the conditions in Europe doubt the prediction of the great American?

Humanly speaking nothing can prevent the rapid development of the resources of Brazil. All the physical conditions that make for material prosperity are present, but while North America was making giant strides, the Southern Hemisphere for centuries remained stationary. A new day has however, dawned. Brazil made more progress materially, intellectually and spiritually for the fifty years from 1869 to 1919, than in the preceding four hundred years. She advanced more in the twenty-five years, 1892 to 1917 than in the preceding fifty, and in the four years of the great war she gained more than in the twenty-five years that had gone before. The great American packing houses of Armour & Company and Swift & Company already own great establishments for refrigeratory meat, destined for Europe. Factories are operating for the first time in the history of a great cotton country. No land can be richer in its water rights—its great rivers and falls. These are to furnish power for the electrification of the leading railways and the manufacturing centers. With the materials of the whole world depleted and exhausted, it is as certain as the rising and falling of the tides that the commerce of all nations will ask for what Brazil has.

Brazil has only 25,000,000 population, but it is to be doubled and trebled by emigration from Europe. James Bryce, the former Ambassador of Great Britain to the United States says that "Brazil is the chief resource to which the overpeopled countries may look as providing a field for emigration, and to which the world at large may look as capable of reinforcing its food supply. Southern Brazil will attract emigrants for many years to come." There are three greatly congested European countries that will swell this tide of new settlers—Spain, Germany and Italy. The Spaniards, with a language near of kin to the Portuguese are already coming in a steady stream. No American, who since the armistice, has seen the crowded towns of Germany, believes that the millions of that land are going to rest content where they are. Shut out by the Allied countries, doomed by the Peace Treaty to industrial suicide, and soon to be heavily taxed, the Germans can find an asylum only in South America. Italy must also supply a vast number of emigrants for Brazil. Not only is Italy overcrowded but she is nearer bankruptcy than any other European nation, and her surplus population must have an outlet. It is seeking room in Brazil. One half the city of Sao Paulo is Italian. Moreover the Italians form seventy-five per cent of the laborers on the coffee farms. Wages are good. Food is cheap, and in a short time the Italian peasant can buy his own little "fazenda." With Europe paralysed by the war for a long time, and all its areas overpopulated, nothing can stop the multitudes, who, hoping to escape from intolerable conditions at home, will seek in Brazil and the Argentine a land where there is space and opportunity for life and happiness.

With the lines which the development of Brazil will follow so clearly delineated—if the Presbyterian Church in America, that first gave the gospel to Brazil, has any duty to her child, the struggling native church, it is to strengthen her before the inundation from Europe arrives.

The arrival of peace has left the United States with an immense fleet of merchant vessels. It will not rust in the home ports. These one time transports will be put into service along the coasts of South America. With the cargoes of American manufacturers, destined for Brazilian markets, there is a binding responsibility to send also the ideals, the ethics and the faith that has made the United States what it is. If the material resources of a country are exported, with them should go the spiritual resources.

The territorial war has classified the nations. We have discovered that peoples are either assets or liabilities, either safeguards to liberty and righteousness, or menaces. Germany, Turkey and Russia have been frightful perils. The purpose of what President Wilson calls "forward looking" men is to convert the people that are liabilities into assets. To set the world right and keep it right, to prevent another upheaval in fifty or seventy-five years the number of nations dominated by Christian principals, must be multiplied, that in the great crisis of human history, sure to come, good may not be overcome by evil, but may itself overcome the evil. There is no great land that can so quickly be placed among the world resources of righteousness as Brazil—if the Christians of the English speaking commonwealth have understanding of the times to know what they ought to do.

KEEPING CHRISTMAS.

It is a great thing to know how to spend Christmas; but it is a far greater thing to be so free from selfishness, malice and irreligion that one can really "keep Christmas." The unbrotherly man has no Christmas in his soul. Like old Scrooge, in the "Christmas Carol," he does not comprehend Christmas until his heart is opened to the Christmas Light.—Reformed Church Messenger.

tional outcome in the life of Southern Presbyterians. Our whole church is bound to feel a tremendous influence in proportion to the wise expenditure of a large sum at Montreat in the immediate future. A million dollars would not be too big for it would be worth every penny spent.

Presbyterian Progressive Program

A WHOLE PROGRAM FOR THE WHOLE CHURCH.

By Rev. S. Waters McGill, Campaign Manager.

THE Southern Presbyterian Church is ideally constituted for the conduct of a Progressive Program such as it has now undertaken. For the most part our Church is composed of forward looking men and women. It is not our custom to undertake "drives" or "spurts" or "spasmodic appeals," some of which leave an unfinished task. We prefer the steady forward march of the progressive program with things done decently and in order that make for continued growth and ever increasing results. For this reason there has not been much hurrah about the present Progressive Program. For this same reason there has been an ever increasing advance in our affairs which have to do with the extension of the Kingdom of Christ.

Origin.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States in regular session adopted the plan which has been called the Presbyterian Progressive Program. This plan was committed in part to the General Assembly's Committee on Systematic Beneficence. Part of the plan was delegated to the Assembly's Committee on Christian Stewardship. The plan included a financial objective for the support of the benevolences of the Church. The standard set was $3,500,000 for the first year, $4,000,000 for the second year and $4,500,000 for the third year, or a total of $12,000,000. This represents a per capita gift of approximately $11, which on the basis of enrolled membership is a larger undertaking than that of any of our sister churches. This financial quota includes the benevolences of the General Assembly, the Synods and the Presbyteries exclusive of any current expense needs for local congregations.

The financial part of the Progressive Program was undertaken by the Assembly's Committee on Christian Stewardship under the able and sacrificial leadership of Rev. R. L. Walkup. After the seemingly untimely death of this faithful leader the work was continued with marked success by Dr. Homer McMillan, who stepped into the breach created by the death of Mr. Walkup. The goal for the year ending March 31, 1920, is $3,500,000. Because of disturbing war conditions, the break in leadership and other causes easily understood, the goal for the first year has not yet been attained. There is every reason to hope that the amount will yet be realized in full. General Pershing said to the American Expeditionary Forces when they were ready for the conflict, "Let's Get Where We're Going"—and they did. One of the first things for us to do is to "Get Where We Started." This is all the more imperative in view of the statement that if we reach our goal for the present year all of our Executive Committees will be amply provided for, covering all of their needs, including their heavy outstanding indebtedness.

The succeeding General Assembly, discovering the closely related work of the Systematic Beneficence Committee and the Christian Stewardship Committee, combined the two committees into the present Assembly's Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship. This committee is now actively at work developing the whole plan of the Presbyterian Progressive Program of our Church.

Objectives.

The definite objectives and requests of the Progressive Program include (1) Woman's Auxiliary: the organization and promotion of Home and Foreign Mission study classes in October and November and in January and February respectively; the promotion and observance of February as a special month of intercession; responsibility for a special campaign in March to put the Missionary Survey and a Church paper in every home. (2) Laymen's Missionary Movement: the holding of conventions in Synods to promote the objectives of the Progressive Program, co-operating with the Synodical managers. (3) Sunday Schools: the adoption of the following goals: 40,000 new scholars and 15,000 new church members from the Sunday Schools by March 31, 1920; a definite pledge for benevolence and gifts to all the causes. (4) Young Peoples' Societies: adopting the following goals: 10,000 new members by March 31; a definite pledge for benevolences and gifts to all the causes. (5) Assembly's Committee on Sabbath and Family Religion: definite promotion of the movement to secure a family altar in every home. (6) Brotherhood and Men's Bible Classes; the study of stewardship and the assuming of responsibility for securing adequate increase in pastors' salaries. (7) The Assembly's Home Mission Committee: new emphasis on evangelism with definite plans to secure at least 50,000 new members by March 31; the promotion and observance of Home Mission week in November; the organization and promotion of study classes; general campaign of education in February and March, covering the needs of the committee. (8) Foreign Mission Committee: organization and promotion of Foreign Mission study classes; general campaign of education in February and March, covering the needs of the committee. (9) Committee of Publication and Sabbath School Work: general promotion of the work assigned to Sunday Schools and Young Peoples' Societies as already outlined; general campaign of education in February and March, covering the needs of the committee. (10) Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief: promotion of the plans for the dedication of life through Sunday Schools and Young Peoples' Societies in December; the observance of the week and day of Prayer for youth in the schools and colleges in February; general campaign of education in February and March, covering the needs of the committee. All of the agencies of the Church are requested in promoting all their regular work, to keep clearly before the people that what they are doing is a definite part of the Progressive Program over which the Assembly has asked the Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship to assume general supervision.

Briefly stated the definite objectives are (1) Spiritual Life, (2) Evangelism, (3) Christian Education, (4) Missionary Education, (5) Religious Literature, (6) Ministerial Support, (7) Sabbath School Extension, (8) Young Peoples' Work, (9) Christian Stewardship, and (10) Every Member Canvass. It is through the Every Member Canvass particularly that the financial goal is to be attained.

Organization.

The plan of organization provides for the General Assembly's Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship appointed by the General Assembly. This Committee has elected as its Secretary Rev. Wm. Fred Galbraith, D.D., formerly of Dallas, Texas. This Committee has appointed the Campaign Committee composed of Dr. Homer McMillan, Chairman; Dr. Henry H. Sweets, Dr. Lynn R. Walker, Dr. A. D. P. Gilmour, Dr. John I. Armstrong, Judge T. F. West and Mr. R. E. Magill. Dr. Galbraith is also Secretary of this Committee. The Campaign Committee has elected Rev. S. Waters McGill as Campaign Manager.

The offices of the Campaign Committee are located in the Times Building at Chattanooga. Six spacious rooms have already been secured, a stenographic force

PINE BLUFF'S LAYMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

For the purpose of futhering the plan of a Laymens Association within each Presbytery, a call was sent out by Mr. V. O. Alexander of the First Church of Pine Bluff for a laymens meeting of the Pine Bluff Presbytery to be held at Dermott, Ark., November 20, 1919.

In response to this call there assembled at the Presbyterian Church in Dermott the following representatives from the various churches.

Pine Bluff, First Church, V. O. Alexander, D. W. Dickey, E. E. Moseley, T. M. Hooker, J. A. McLeod, J. H. Means. Pine Bluff, Alexander Memorial Church, Claud I. Shell. Helena, First Church, J. S. Epps, H. E. McRae, Jas. A. Hudson. Fordyce, John R. Hampton. McGehee, Dr. J. C. Chenault, W. B. Bellamy, Rev. H. Robertson. Wilmot, D. E. O. McDermott. Monticello, Oscar Finch and Dr. Flournoy Shepperson. Dermott, Dr. E. E. Barlow, Rev. N. Smiley, Rev. Wm. A. Rolle.

has been engaged and work has actively begun to push the entire program on enlarged lines. The Campaign Committee has adopted for its slogan "A Whole Program for the Whole Church." Charts, literature and leaflets are being prepared covering the entire work of the Campaign and the Church. This literature will be distributed through the Synodical Managers and through them to the Presbyterial Managers, to Group Managers and to local congregations.

Synodical managers have already been elected by the various Synods as follows; (1) Alabama-Rev. D. F. McConnel, (2) Appalachia-Rev. L. R. Walker, (3) Arkansas-Mr. A. N. Whitmarsh, (4) Florida-Rev. E. D. Brownlee, (5) Georgia-Rev. J. B. Ficklin, (6) Kentucky-Rev. W. H. Hopper; (7) Louisiana-Rev. Geo. Summey, (8) Mississippi-Rev. Fred R. Graves, (9) Missouri-Rev. R. S. Boyd, (10) North Carolina-Rev. T. P. Allen, (11) Oklahoma-Rev. E. H. Moseley, (12) South Carolina-Rev. E. E. Gillespie, (13) Tennessee-Rev. E. D. McDougal, (14) Texas-Rev. Brooks I. Dickey, (15) Virginia-Rev. Wm. E. Hudson, (16) West Virginia-Rev. J. L. Lineweaver. The Presbyteries have also elected Presbyterial Managers who in turn appoint Group Managers and Congregational Managers. With this complete organization, with the full co-operation of all of the Executive Committees and with the hearty support of every Pastor large results are bound to be attained. The whole plan will be shot through with prayerful preparation and earnest effort for the sake of the Kingdom and the Church.

In speaking of the Presbyterian Progressive Program the Moderator of the General Assembly, the Rev. A. M. Fraser, D.D., has said "If our Church had continued to give only $2,000,000 a year to beneficences while other organizations were giving hundreds of millions for religion and charity, and the Government was spending billions in war, we would have been left a pitiable and unworthy spectacle. The Progressive Program has saved us from reproach. It has also saved our Causes from disaster. We planned the Program for aggressive work, God needed it for conservation. Think also how hurtful our immense wealth would have been, had there been no influence of religion to sanctify it. The Progressive Program was providential. Let us rally to it with thankfulness and enthusiasm."

A great meeting of members of the Assembly's Committee on Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship, the Synodical Managers and the Campaign Committee will be held in Chattanooga on Tuesday December 30. There should be united prayer for God's blessing on this gathering as it deliberates with reference to the enlargement and prosecution of the Progressive Program.

S. Waters McGill,
Campaign Manager.

The meeting was called to order by temporary chairman, V. O. Alexander and after the preliminaries noted in the program which is hereto attached and made a part of the minutes of the meeting, the organization was perfected as "The Laymens Association of Pine Bluff Presbytery" and the following officers elected for the ensuing year: V. O. Alexander, Pine Bluff, Chairman, John R. Hamilton, Fordyce, Vice-Chairman, J. H. Means, Pine Bluff, Sec'y and Treas.

A Finance Plan was then presented by Capt. F. L. Slaymaker, Secretary of the Laymens Missionary Movement of the Southern Presbyterian Church with headquarters in Athens, Ga. Capt. Slaymaker's visit was for the purpose of assisting in organization and the finance plan was adopted as outlined below:

Membership Enrollment Card.

I hereby enroll my name as a member of the Laymens Association of Pine Bluff Presbytery from-----Church.

Name----- Address-----

I desire to pay annually a $1 membership fee for the current expenses of the association.

Name-----

Every man present enrolled and paid the membership fee of $1 and the association, with 20 original members was ready to begin its activities.

At the evening session a visiting layman, Mr. J. H. Nelson of Minden, La., told of some wonderful results of laymens activities in the Red River Presbytery of Louisiana. How missionaries had been put in the field and financed by laymen. How dead churches had been revived and how churches that had formerly been supported by the Home Mission Board had become self-supporting.

Capt. Slaymaker then addressed the meeting upon the duties and opportunities of these men who had enrolled for the work of the association. Also of the necessity of each church organizing and enrolling its men to become a part of this great work of extending the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

The Chairman appointed a committee to draft resolutions and the following were presented by Mr. John R. Hampton, Chairman of the committee and adopted:

Resolution.

We, the Laymen of the Presbyterian Church of Pine Bluff Presbytery, do hereby pledge our pastors that we will, to the best of our ability, do all we can to assist them in futhering and strengthening the Kingdom of Christ, here on earth, and we hold ourselves in readiness to answer any call made upon us when we can consistently do so.

Resolution.

Resolved that we give active support in helping to wage the Campaign next spring in the interest of the Presbyterian Progressive Program, and that we volunteer our services to the Presbytery's Campaign Manager and to our pastor in the conduct of this campaign.

Resolution.

Realizing the fact that the Sabbath School is the very life of the church we do earnestly recommend that the men of our churches use their best endeavors to stimulate this work and to encourage the study of God's Word. And our pastors are requested to preach a special sermon along this line December 28.

Resolution.

As the attendance at Wednesday evening prayer meeting is the spiritual barometer of the church, we would earnestly request our members to cancel all social or business engagements that would conflict with the hour of meeting and all attend prayer meeting.

Resolution.

The Laymen of Pine Bluff Presbytery do earnestly request that an evangelistic meeting be held in every

Progress of the Million Dollar Fund

By Mamie Bays.

THE Million Dollar Campaign for the schools of the Synod of North Carolina is making satisfactory progress and Rev. M. E. Melvin, D.D., field secretary of the Assembly's department of Christian Education, reports this week that $605,000 has been pledged toward the $1,000,000 fund. The campaign will close March 1, and it is confidently believed the Presbyterians in North Carolina who are deeply interested in the cause of Christian Education, and especially in the representatives of this cause as found in the schools of this Synod, will rally to this campaign until its goal will be passed with a good margin before its closing day has come.

As evidence of the distinct interest in this campaign, in Christian Education and in Davidson College, within the past ten days two chairs have been permanently endowed at Davidson, and Mr. C. E. Graham, of Greenville, S. C., has offered to contribute $60,000 to endow another chair, if Presbyterians in North Carolina pledge $1,000,000 by the time the present campaign closes. The chair Mr. Graham desires to endow will be the chair of education, especially for the training of superintendents and principals of schools.

The First Presbyterian Church at Gastonia, after a campaign of only five days in that town, conducted by the Assembly's team of Christian Education, has pledged $50,000 to permanently endow the "Woodrow Wilson chair of Economics and Political Science."

The endowment of the other chair at Davidson was announced during the exercises conducted at the college on "Davidson Day," an account of which appears below.

"Davidson Day," as a special feature of the Million Dollar Campaign for Presbyterian schools in the Synod of North Carolina, was observed here in a most interesting and enthusiastic manner. The outstanding and most important feature of the day was the announcement of Rev. W. M. Hunter, a member of the General Assembly's team of Christian Education, that the sons and daughters of J. W. Cannon, of Concord, had contributed $50,000 to the million dollar campaign fund to endow permanently a chair of English Bible at Davidson, to be known as the J. W. Cannon chair of English Bible. Mr. Hunter announced further that the total amount contributed to the campaign fund in Concord was $65,000.

Another announcement of special interest in this connection was that of R. M. Miller, Jr., of Charlotte, an alumnus of Davidson College, who stated that he would be one of 10 or 20 men to contribute $50,000 to endow an alumni chair at the college.

Following this was another announcement, which was made by James W. Pharr, also of Charlotte, that he would contribute $5,000 to the endowment of the alumni chair.

Dr. W. J. Martin, president of the college, who presided at the meeting, presented the following resolution addressed to Rev. J. M. Grier, D.D., of Concord, a loyal friend of the college and pastor of Mr. Cannon: "Audience assembled on Davidson College Day received with hearty enthusiasm the announcement of the noble gift of $50,000, of sons and daughters of J. W. Cannon, endowing perpetually the J. W. Cannon chair of Bible in this college. A greater monument to the father than any of stone. It will serve perpetually to inculcate in young men of leadership the principles of brotherhood as exemplified in Christ and taught in God's Word. These principles alone the remedy for present unrest and safety for the future.

"Our congratulations to Mr. Cannon on the honor done him by loyal sons and daughters and to the children for their constructive, statesmanlike use of God's increase to them.

"Our hearty appreciation to all concerned for the splendid gift and the challenge to other families and other churches to come in a great way to the assistance of the leading college of our Church.

"Wm. J. Martin."

This resolution was adopted unanimously by a rising vote of the audience.

Dr. Martin read a number of messages from trustees, alumni and other loyal supporters of the college expressing their regret that they could not be present at the exercises of today and wishing the college and the campaign now in progress for Christian education the greatest success.

The first speaker of the day was Rev. M. E. Melvin, D.D., field secretary of the department of Christian Education of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and manager of the campaign now in progress in this Synod. Dr. Melvin spoke first of the splendid spirit of co-operation he had found in this campaign and of the favorable attitude throughout the Synod toward Davidson College, and said that he hoped the campaign would go far enough beyond the million dollar goal to give this college $500,000.

Dr. Melvin spoke also of the great task of information upon the part of many people regarding the cost of education and showed that the cost to Davidson College each year for each student is $216.10, whereas the income from each student is only $114.90, leaving a deficit of a little more than $100, which must be met in some way, and which can be met by endowment.

Dr. Melvin stated that most people are not thinking in big enough terms, and he made special appeal to the student body of the college to support this campaign.

Representing the student body, Dwight Chalmers, of Charlotte, spoke of needed improvements and equipment at the college and urged his fellow students to show the true Davidson spirit in supporting this campaign and to help it also by means of publicity, by writing home about it, and by giving money to it.

Prof. W. E. Shumake spoke for the faculty in advocating the campaign and assured the campaign workers that the faculty would do its part in supporting the same and urged the faculty to look at it from the standpoint of the duty of contributing to it and of influencing others to do so. He also emphasized the importance of the faculty and the students working together in this interest.

Calling attention to what the alumni of the college can do for the campaign, R. M. Miller, Jr., urged especially loyalty, co-operation and liberality upon the part of each one in supporting it, insisting upon loyalty and co-operation that is 100 per cent strong and liberality to the point of generosity and sacrifice.

Rev. C. M. Richards, D.D., of Davidson, spoke for the trustees, especially the 30 trustees in the Synod of North Carolina, and gave assurance that they would be among those to pledge most liberal amounts to the campaign, and that they would take care of the part of the fund coming to Davidson. The trustees, he said, believe the students here to be the best to be found on the globe, as is evidenced by the fact that 90 per cent of them enter active Christian work.

Speaking especially of "a bigger and a better Davidson," Dr. Martin called especial attention to the immediate needs of the college, including remodeling of the Chambers dormitory, the erection of a new dormitory, a new power house, more class rooms, a better equipped laboratory, a laundry, a larger faculty and a special endowment fund to help worthy students secure an education here who are not financially able to come without aid. Dr. Martin intimated that these needs of the college would require the outlay of $1,760,000, and he expressed the confidence that all of INTERCHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT CONFERENCE AT RALEIGH, N. C.

By Rev. E. N. Orr, D.D.

With an attendance of 195 delegates, coming from six different counties of the state and representing 27 denominations, the state conference of the Interchurch World Movement was held in Raleigh, N. C., December 15-17.

The meeting began at 10:30 Monday morning and continued its sessions until 9:45 Wednesday night. The conference was held in the First Presbyterian Church, of which Dr. White is the pastor. We were somewhat disappointed in that the personnel of our team was completely changed so that the men whom we had advertised as leading speakers were replaced by others. However, we were very fortunate in having present Dr. Miles Fisher, of New York; Dr. A. D. P. Haupt, of St. Paul, Minn.; Dr. W. B. Greenway, of Philadelphia; Secretary Fred Galbraith, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Mr. Charles Rowland, of Athens, Ga. (the two last named being prominent Southern Presbyterians). This team held the undivided attention of the delegates from the opening session to the close. The interest was keen on every theme that was discussed and there was, through the session, a growing appreciation of the earnest effort made by the Interchurch Movement to answer the perplexing problems confronting Protestant leaders. Dr. Fisher was the team leader and won the confidence of all by his ability to put things clearly, his kindness and unfailing courtesy and the great penetration with which he went to the heart of every problem that was before the conference. The following are some of the topics discussed by the team and on which there was the fullest discussion on the part of the delegates. This was very interesting and indicated that those present were seeking to find the answer to any questions which were in their minds.

"The Hour of Christian Opportunity" was ably discussed by Dr. Haupt. The "Significance of the Interchurch World Movement" was discussed by Dr. W. B. Greenway. Some paramount issues such as the "Race Question" were discussed by Dr. E. N. Orr. The "Ultimate World Needs" in terms of Jesus Christ was ably handled by Dr. Fisher. Perhaps nothing more interested the conference than the "American Survey." Upon this theme Dr. Fisher was assisted by Dr. Geo. Ramsey, who is in charge of the rural survey of North Carolina. Some very interesting and startling facts were given with reference to the rural counties in North Carolina. In one county it was shown that 77 per cent of the white population over 10 years of age were not in any Protestant church. In another, 69 per cent were outside the church. It was shown that in the whole State of North Carolina there were 62 per cent of our people connected with churches and 38 per cent, or 648,248, persons were outside of Protestant churches. The conference exhibited the keenest interest in the survey now being conducted by the movement. Copious notes were taken indicating an earnest desire to secure the facts with reference to our State. One delegate said, "I would give a good sum of money to have the facts concerning every county in this State. It would give me the best possible material for a series of home mission sermons." Another delegate said, "I propose to recommend to my denomination that we immediately undertake work in one of the needy counties of North Carolina. The "Foreign Mission Survey" was very ably presented with a stereopticon by Mr. Chas. A. Rowland, chairman of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Southern Presbyterian Church. After having presented many pictures showing world needs he drove home with telling emphasis the fact that the world need would never be met if the denominations were unwilling to co-operate in a great worldwide program. He showed that co-operation at home is absolutely necessary for the adequate program abroad. He showed that this movement was born in the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and repeated the saying, "This movement is of God." Every hour of the convention brought help in the way of a better understanding of the Protestant tasks. Every session was closed by an earnest period of prayer. In the concluding session a most unusual "experience meeting" was held. Practically every delegate present rose and testified to the helpfulness of the conference. Several men said, "I came to this conference with an open mind to learn of this movement, and I am committed to it as a great enterprise bringing in the Kingdom of God." The registration cards show 195 delegates representing practically every large denomination in the State and many of the smaller ones. The team leaders who had been present in other conferences stated that the Raleigh meeting was very gratifying in every respect.

PROGRESS OF THE MILLION DOLLAR FUND.

these needs of the college would be met out of the campaign now in progress.

Rev. T. E. P. Woods, principal of Westminster School, Rutherfordton, commended the spirit of the student body of Davidson, especially as shown by the reconsideration action of the students after the recent "holiday strike."

The contribution of the student body to the making of this "Davidson Day" a distinct success was all that could have been desired. The students attended the exercises in the chapel in a body and the music furnished by the college band was one of the outstanding features of interest of the program, and the college songs and "yells" were thoroughly enjoyed.

In the afternoon the drill of the students under the direction of Colonel Mueller was one that showed training that would have been a distinct credit to men who had long received training in military camps. Following this came the exercises on the athletic field, which gave the same evidence of proficiency and which will be remembered as most enjoyable features of the program of the day.

PINE BLUFF'S LAYMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Presbyterian Church within our Presbytery for at least one week, between January 1 and March 31, 1920 and when a regular ordained minister cannot be secured to conduct said meetings, that laymen be secured to hold services for at least one day in each church. And that the Home Missionary Committee be requested to begin at once to arrange for same.

Resolution.

Resolved, that we commend to laymen of this Presbytery the campaign to raise $250,000.00 for endowment of our Synodical College at Batesville, Ark., and urge the enthusiastic support and warmest sympathy for this movement.

Several cities offered their hospitality for our 1920 meeting but it was decided that McGehee would be more accessible for most of the delegates and so the association adjourned to meet in McGehee at the call of the chairman.

News of the Week

Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, has announced himself as a candidate for the presidency. He will make a personal canvass in every state, and will not submit his claims "to politicians in convention."

Mr. Wannamaker, president of the American Cotton Association, has asked for a congressional inquiry into the cotton crop estimate issued by the Agricultural department for December. He claims that it is virtually the same as was issued in the summer, though every one knows that the crop has greatly deteriorated.

Clyde R. Hoey was elected to Congress in the Ninth district over John M. Morehead. The Republicans are charging fraud, and will take the case to Congress.

A committee of the Senate charges the Housing Bureau with gross inefficiency. They declare that there was great mismanagement and extravagance. They threaten to bring suit to recover part of the money.

The religious leaders of North Carolina recently met in Raleigh in the interest of the Interchurch World Movement. Uniform Federal divorce laws were urged, and a return to old-time Puritan ideals.

James W. Gerard, of New York, has signed a minority nominating petition as a candidate for President of the United States at the State primaries in March, it has been announced. The petition also was signed by six delegates to the recent State proposal meeting. Principles accompanying the petition are summarized as being: "To make and keep the country safe for democracy."

It is predicted that the Senate and House will both reject the proposed plan to have an army of 576,000 men. It is thought that they will agree on 280,000 men as the number.

Maynard, "the flying parson," who recently was quoted by the Anti-Saloon League of New York, as saying that some of the aviators who crossed the continent would not have been killed, if they had left liquor alone, now denies that he was correctly quoted. The league officials, however, replied by reproducing his letter. It is another case of imprudent speech.

By a vote of 256 to 34, the House passed the Senate bill continuing the sugar equalization board through 1920. This requires that the bill shall go into conference.

The cotton men of this State have organized. Governor Bickett presided. L. S. Tomlinson, of Wilson, was made president.

According to Mr. Hoover, starvation faces 15 to 20 million in Central Europe, which means the breakdown of stable government unless the situation is soon relieved.

By a unanimous decision the Supreme Court of the United States upheld the prohibition law. This does not touch the validity of the sale of beer.

According to reports received, at least 80 per cent of miners are at work. Restrictions upon the use of coal have been removed.

Emma Goldman, who had appealed from the sentence sending her back to Russia, has withdrawn the appeal, and she will be deported.

Congressman Goodman thinks that Camp Bragg has passed the danger point, and that it is now a fixture. It promises to become the largest military post in the United States. The House has passed a bill appropriating $1,173,000 to complete the camp.

The government and the five packing companies have effected a compromise. It affects 87 corporations and involves capital of more than one billion dollars. These companies will be restricted to dealing in meats and provisions.

Viscount French, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, was shot at when out driving. The shot aimed at him wounded a policeman and killed a civilian.

Story and Incident

SANTA CLAUS, JR.

By Madeline Sharps Buchanan, in The Continent.

GWENDOLIN HENNESSY, aged 13, as a rule carried a merry heart beneath her old red sweater. As a rule her pale green eyes held a twinkle, somewhere, back in their honest depths, and usually "the smile of her," as her dead mother would have said, was a charm.

But tonight as Gwendolin closed her father's paper and magazine stand beneath the elevated and took her homeward way, somehow her heart was heavy and her straight young mouth was solemn and smileless.

Christmas was only a week away; it would be a white Christmas, too, because even then the snow was banked high where it had not yet been carried away.

Shops and corners were gay and bright. One would not know tonight, to glance at its smiling face, that a deadly war had been eating at the heart of the world. No, Christmas seemed coming with its usual dancing step; its magic was somehow already there.

Yet Gwendolin, child of Irish wit and sunny heart, usually ready to respond to any cheer about her, sordid and hard as her own life was, Gwendolin was blue and depressed. She had seen too many Christmases in Sunshine court; the ache in her heart was growing greater every year. She could count dear only knows how many children she loved who had never had and probably would never have a Christmas; old ladies whose heads shook as they talked; old men who sat in corners and leaned over canes and prated of other days; boys and girls, two she knew well, who had never walked and never would.

She thought wearily now as she climbed the tenement house stairs she could not stand many more Christmases here.

The sewing machines were still tirelessly, wearily, behind the closed doors of the Lapowitz family; Jimmie McNeil still sat, helpless but smiling, by the window of the one room that comprised his world; on the third floor Gwendolin peeped in a moment to smile, too, at fragile little Widow Brown who had consumption and took in washing; but on the fourth floor, her floor, ah, there was one gleam of sunshine at last!

Bulky, kindly, homely Mrs. O'Rourke, broom in hand, sweeping out Gwendolin's own room, as though the good soul had not enough to do for herself, husband and seven children!

Here was a smile that matched Gwendolin's own; a brave hearty, comradely smile!

"Faith, darlin', it's later than iver ye are!" she greeted in her loud warm voice: "Yer supper's on cookin' and the half av me own meat pie on yer table. So hurry up wid ye! 'Tis Christmas again, alanna!"

The Prayer Meeting

By Rev. C. D. Waller.

TOPIC FOR WEEK BEGINNING DEC. 28, 1919.
LIFE COMMITMENT—Rom. 12:1-3; Prov. 3:1-18.

As we look these last days into the new year, it is wise and useful to take account of our lives, as merchants take account of stock. The greatest of all facts to be then considered is God, and our relation to him, our greatest concern. Have we lived during the past year "as ever in our great Taskmaster's eye?" Have we committed our lives to Him to be shaped, directed, used and blessed? If not, is not this the best possible time for this life consecration?

Consider Paul's argument. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your reasonable service."

He bases this appeal upon those wonderful "mercies of God" that have been the theme of his letter up to this point, the Gift of God's Son, the Gift of the Holy Spirit—a full and free salvation to a world of sinners. And whence comes these precious gifts? Out of the amazing grace of God. "Therefore" we ought to become, by the act of our souls, "a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God—our reasonable service." We should so recognize God's mercies and God's right to our life and service, that it will be with glad acquiescence that we lay our lives down at Jesus' feet. Indeed this is the only true life for any of us. God has made us for Himself, and true and unalloyed happiness will only be ours when we have made the full surrender. We want to make our lives count for the most possible. Can we do this if we turn away from Jesus as Master? Jesus has taught us the glory of service. He came "not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." Service and salvation, with Him went hand in hand. We can by His wonderful grace walk in His footsteps. We shall perhaps not be called upon to die for others; but we can live for others; and we will find, if we enter wholeheartedly into this life of service, that it is the best possible life. "If ye love me feed my sheep—my lambs." Jesus would have us for His sake enter upon the life of service.

Of course, this means at the outset the conquering of selfishness. Than this there can be no finer or nobler victory. Selfishness is the basest and most hideous of blemishes. It curses self and others. It is a root of many miseries, a dwarfing passion, unsocial and deforming.

But selfishness can only be dethroned and driven out of our souls by the enthronement of Jesus. If He reign in our hearts, there is an end of self-rule. There can not be two masters. Therefore let us take Christ Jesus as Master, and place ourselves under His orders. "I will go where you want me to go, dear Lord. I will be what you want me to be."

God made us a Christmas present at the beginning of our era: it will be a new and blessed era for Christ, for the world, and for ourselves if we will make of ourselves a Christmas gift to Jesus.

This will settle many questions. The future, though hidden from us, will be bright with the presence of God, and perfectly safe for us under His guiding and protecting hand. Disappointments will have the bitterness taken out of them. Best of all, under His orders we will live, and work, and fight; and "all things will work together" for the divine glory and for the good of His children. Our "labor shall not be in vain." His ensign shall always be over us; and our hearts shall be kept in perfect peace.

It is by lives gladly and entirely committed to Himself that God is working out His gracious purposes, and blessing the world.

* * *

Sun., Jan. 4—Topic: "I Believe in God." John 14:1, 8-10; Mark 9:17-24; 11:22 (Consecration meeting).

* * *

Belief in God is a great deal more than mere assent to the fact of His existence. Almost every one believes there is a God. Only the fool has said in his heart that there is no God. But by no means all "believe in" Him. Many believe there is a God, but have the wrong idea of His character and person. The true idea of God is that He is a heavenly Father and Spirit, infinite, eternal, and unchangeable in His being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, godness, and truth. But even to think correctly in regard to what sort of a being God is, is not equivalent to "believing in" Him. Believing in God means having the right idea of Him plus trusting Him and serving Him and resting all our hopes in Him.

* * *

It is a great sin to disbelieve in God. To believe that He does not exist is to offer Him the insult of deeming Him a nobody. To believe He exists but is not a great Father is also a sin, for it slanders Him. To believe Him to be the great Father that He is, yet to decline to accept Him as our own Master and Saviour is equally as great wrong, for in doing this we sin against knowledge and light. It is time for men everywhere to see unbelief as it is, a great, ugly crime that is worse than theft or murder. Unbelief is always either a misrepresentation of God or deliberate rebellion against Him.

* * *

A real belief in God brings forth invariably that fine thing which we call Christian conduct. Nothing so moulds one's character and so determines his course of action as his belief in God. Practically all the heathen believe in a God of some sort, and they try to do what they conceive to be His will. If they think he is a drunken god as Bacchus, they too will be drunken. If they believe Him tricky and impure as Zeus, they also will become the same. Like God like his people, is a phrase that is substantially true. There is no influence so noble and uplifting as a true religion, and none so ignoble and degrading as a false religion. Let us get the true idea of God as revealed to us in the Bible, and then let us believe in Him. A righteous life will follow as an effect follows a cause.

* * *

Does it seem strange to you that we speak always of "believing" the things of God rather than of knowing them by having proved them in just the way that we can prove that three and two make five or that blue and red make purple? We walk by faith now—which is belief—and it must be so, and is better for the present; but some day in the better world to come we shall walk by sight, and shall see Him face to face.

* * *

How may we develop our own faith in God?

How can we assist the development of our neighbor's faith in God?

Tell two or three stories from the Bible or from your own observation, in which God rewarded faith.

REVIEW: THE TRAINING OF PETER AND JOHN.

1 John 1:1-9.

SCRIPTURE LESSON.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Ye shall be witnesses unto me."—Acts 1:8.

1. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life;
2. For the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;
3. That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ.
4. And these things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.
5. This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.
6. If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth:
7. But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.
8. If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.
9. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

ARMENIAN RELIEF.

To the Readers of the Standard:

Perhaps it has not occurred to you that you may easily help to save the Armenians from utter destruction at the hands of their enemies. Famine and the sword are fast enacting the most shameful tragedy of history in Armenia. The victims have been for many centuries a Christian race—a race of fine qualities and of wonderful achievements under great obstacles.

What can you do?

1st. Write at once to your congressman and senators expressing the earnest wish that the United States accept a mandate over Armenia. This you have a right to do as a citizen—this is a sacred duty as a Christian citizen.

2nd. Help to furnish bread and medicines—and do it now, or it will be too late.

How dreadful is our guilt if this Christian nation perishes. What you do, do quickly; or it will be too late.

C. D. WALLER.

The Standard is again receiving gifts for this cause, which are forwarded to the proper authorities, or you may send contributions direct to Cleveland H. Dodge, Treasurer, No. 1 Madison Ave., New York City, or to the State Treasurer of this fund, Robt. A. Brown, Citizens Bank Bldg., Raleigh, N. C.

Received for this cause: Belk Bros. Co., $120.

AN ELASTIC HEART.

"I don't see how Myrtle manages to think about so many things, do so many pleasant things, and really care about so many friends," said one girl of another.

"She has a heart that stretches, but does not snap," was the answer. "And that kind of an elastic heart can be had by practicing Myrtle's way with just the heart one has. You can begin by stretching a little, and by and by you can stretch over more and more, just as Myrtle does. Try it."—Ex.

CHRISTMAS.

The Christmas season is pervaded by an atmosphere entirely peculiar to itself. The Christmas spirit is, in the broadest sense, joyous. And it is a peculiar joy. It is sometimes spoken of as being the happiest season of all the year.

The spirit of Christmas is inherently compassionate. This is so because the great fact from which it springs and to which it relates is in itself the world's supreme expression of "peace and good will."

The spirit of Christmas carries with it the elements of forgiveness and everywhere tends to smooth out the wrinkles of ill will and to promote "peace and good will" in circles great and small to the praise of the Prince of Peace, "The Desire of the Nations."—Evangelical Messenger.

CHRISTMAS THOUGHTS.

I want to ask you that have loved ones who have passed on where the evergreen never fade if you will not enter into this joy at this Christmas time, and so enter in that all traces of sorrow shall leave your faces. Think what Christmas must be there! Think of their talking with the very angels who sang over the plains of Bethlehem! Think of their joy in anticipating our arrival; and you know we may see them before another Christmas comes round, and then all our opportunities for making earth gladder will have gone. Do you ever think of those who have sorrows that your sorrow would be a perfect joy to them? So many have their dead always in sight—dead to honor, dead to all nobility. Think of the wife who has to hear the staggering step of a drunken husband! And she remembers the time when he was so different—when the step was firm and elastic, when the eye was clear and the voice was music. Think you that young wife would not be glad if she could know, as you know, that her loved one was in Paradise, and had left an unstained name behind him? Oh, there are things so much worse than what we wrongly call death, that I call on you this Christmas time, out of whose houses dear ones have passed to the Father's house, to twine the Christmas greens and rejoice in all that Christmas means.—Margaret Bottome.

He came to give, what the heart craves and the world so sorely needs, the gift and blessing of peace. His "peace, good will to men," means more than His attitude toward men; its realization is this peace to men of good will, revealing our attitude toward Him and to make us "kindly affectionate one toward another." He would make each nation neighbor to all nations and each man brother to all men. To those who have not kept His law how far off we seem from the ideal which our Lord came to establish. In these troublous times the vision is beclouded and the ideal seems abandoned. But the end is not yet, for men will come to see that nations cannot live by strife and that even victories have their loss of peace. The world will have to return to the "peace to men of good will" as the only basis on which the world can live its life and keep to its aims. The ultimate victory will not be of arm, for there will be no victory and no lasting peace until the warring world acknowledges what Julian the Apostle confessed, "Thou hast conquerer, O Galilean!" If all the nations would carry out the spirit of Christmas what untold misery and suffering it would save! We know not how far God is now teaching the world "the things which belong to its peace." Out of this fearful holocaust of war will come, what would have saved this blood-bought experience, a new interpretation of the law of peace among nations, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." This will come, and come only,

MOTHER'S CHRISTMAS GIFT.

It never comes to Christmas but I think about the times

We used to save our pennies and our nickles and our dimes;

And we bunched them all together, even little baby brother

Put in something for the present that we always gave to mother.

We began to talk about it very early in December.

'Twas a very serious matter to us children, I remember,

And we used to whisper nightly our suggestions to each other,

For by nothing cheap and tawdry could we show our love for mother.

Her's must be a gift of beauty, fit to symbolize her ways;

It must represent the sweetness and the love that marked her days.

It must be the best our money, all combined, had power to buy,

And be something that she longed for, nothing else would satisfy.

Then it mattered not the token, once the purchase had been made;

It was smuggled home and hidden and with other treasures laid.

And we placed our present proudly in her lap on Christmas day,

And we smothered her with kisses and we laughed her tears away.

It never comes to Christmas but I think about the times

We used to save our pennies and our nickles and our dimes;

And the only folks I envy are the sisters and the brothers

Who still have the precious privilege of buying for their mothers. —The American Boy.

BAD COMPANY.

Bad company is dangerous. Any young man or woman who chooses associates of doubtful character or frivolous life is deliberately stepping into the danger zone. In a great city, to choose any friends with good habits is the surest road to safety. Better be lonely for months than join with those of careless life.—Ex.

WHICH?

Anne "stood up for her rights" at home, at school, and everywhere. She obtained them too. The other Annie "smiled up for hers," and obtained them. Better yet, she did not have any bitterness mixed in with her rights, only pleasant looks and words and feelings. Would they call you Anne, or the other Annie?—Ex.

when men are conquered, not by men, but by Christ. War may have its conquests, which are not victories for peace but simply for mastery. Its effects only deepen hates and estrangements and the hoped-for day of revenge. If the world ever needed the Christmas spirit, it needs it as it never needed it before to put an end to this bitter strife.—Bishop Woodcock.

Church News

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The working force of the Presbyterian Standard Publishing Company consists of the finest set of workmen in the city, taken as a whole. They work steadily while they are at it, and when any emergency arises, they work at night.

It is only due then to these faithful workers that they have a short holiday during Christmas week. We shall therefore omit our issue of December 31, and appear the next time on January 7. If you fail to get your Standard next week, you will understand the reason.

PERSONALS.

The Synod asked the Sunday Schools to give one collection to the Synod's Home Mission work, in January, and another in July. This is very necessary in view of the forward movement started by the Home Mission Committee. Our Home Mission record is one to be proud of, but there must be no letting down in our efforts.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Salisbury—Dr. Byron Clark, pastor of the First Church has returned to his work after a long rest for treatment of his sight. To the joy of his people and the church at large he is again at his post. Dr. Clark is a power for good in Salisbury as well as in the Synod.

Lumber Bridge—Lumber Bridge Church, one of the fine old churches of Fayetteville Presbytery, never does things by halves. In the summer this church presented its pastor with a purse for vacation expenses. Later on it presented its pastor with a check for $150, to help fight the high cost of living. Just before Christmas the whole congregation made a visit to the manse at Parkton preceded by a large truck filled with good things for the pastor and his family.

Naomi Church—near Wagram. This church is supplied by Rev. Charles R. Bailey, of Laurel Hill, N. C. A meeting was held last August in which Rev. A. W. Crawford preached which resulted under the blessing of God in a real revival of religion. There were 10 received into the church at the time. Since then there has been an addition; elder, Mr. J. A. Barber, elected and ordained and installed. The church had recently adopted the Every Member Canvass. The Sunday school has taken on new life and is preparing to present a Christmas Program as part of the season's activities.

Antioch—Recently the following choice men of our congregation were ordained and installed deacons in our church: J. W. Hasty, D. H. Hodgkin, E. G. Hodgkin, J. H. McPhaul and M. H. McPhaul. These give us fourteen deacons in all, two to each district in the congregation, one as chairman and general treasurer, and another as treasurer of benevolence. They look after collecting practically all funds for benevolence and local expenses. The "Lord's Acre League" has been a great success again this year, but a fuller report will be given of that later. The pastor has been requested by Mr. F. H. Jeter, Agricultural Editor of the State Extension Work to write a full account of our plan to be used in the literature he issues in his extension work. The credit for the success of the plan here is largely due to the live board of deacons here who not only set the example themselves but endeavor to enlist everybody else. Cor.

The Presbyterian Ministerial Association of Charlotte and Mecklenburg county met at the First Church at 11 a. m. on Monday, the 15th. At the meeting of December 7 the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Rev. John E. Wool, president; Rev. C. G. Lynch, vice-president; Rev. C. C. Anderson, secretary and treasurer. The following committees were appointed: Program: Rev. J. W. Orr, Rev. H. E. Gurney, D.D., Rev. J. L. Caldwell, D.D.; Social: Rev. A. S. Johnson, D.D., Rev. J. W. Grier, Rev. W. R. McCalla.

The following program was adopted for the joint communion of the churches of the city and county at the First Church, on Sunday, January 4, 1920, at 3:30 p. m.:

To preside, Rev. G. F. Bell; Talk, Rev. R. S. Burwell; Scripture, Rev. C. C. Anderson; Prayer, Rev. D. Iverson; Bread, Rev. J. L. Caldwell, D.D.; Wine: Rev. Bunyan McLeod, D.D.; Prayer: Rev. J. W. Grier. Elders in charge: John R. Pharr, H. H. Orr.

Flora Macdonald College—Two hundred dollars in cash represented the Christmas offerings of Flora Macdonald girls made at the annual "White Service" on Sunday night. This sum will be sent to Missions, Mountain Schools and Orphanages in the South. The service, beautifully impressive in its simplicity, was held in the auditorium with the audience sitting in semi-darkness, the only illumination being lights from the proscenium arch and row of candles placed at the front of the stage. Sixteen young ladies dressed in white took part in the program, made up of Bible readings, chorus numbers, solos, duets, all sounding the note of the Christmas season.

Mr. Charles G. Vardell, Jr., in addition to his work as director of the Conservatory of Music and organist of the First Presbyterian Church of Fayetteville, is giving a series of Organ recitals, and on Monday night was heard at the First Presbyterian Church of Maxton.

Mecklenburg Presbytery met in the Charlotte First Church on Monday, December 15, 1919, at 2 p. m.

Rev. Dr. M. E. Melvin was present and presented the cause of the Educational Campaign of the Synod. A committee was appointed to help him in the organization of the work in this Presbytery, consisting of Rev. A. S. Johnson, D.D., Rev. J. W. Orr and Rev. W. R. McCalla.

Seversville Church, Charlotte, was permitted to prosecute a call for the services of Rev. W. T. Pearman before his Presbytery in Tennessee.

Steele Creek Church was permitted to increase its pastor's salary from $1,600 to $2,000, and use of manse.

The pastoral relation between Rev. C. C. Meyers and Wilmore Church was dissolved.

The committee on Systematic Benevolence reported, naming the group managers, and urging that the churches hold their group conferences early in March.

The committee of adequate salaries for ministers was continued, and was requested to report at the next meeting.

Presbytery adjourned to meet at the Charlotte First Church, on Monday, January 5, 1920, at 2 p. m.

Baden—Rev. C. Conner Brown assisted the pastor, Rev. T. G. Tate, in a ten days meeting closing Wednesday night December 11. Mr. Brown was assisted by his singer Rev. C. O. Pardo. Both won their way into the hearts of the people Mr. Pardo by his gospel singing and Mr. Brown with his fearless and forceful denunciation of sin and able presen-

Christmas---AND IN SIGHT OF THE GOAL

North Carolina Presbyterians have much to be happy over at this season of the year. We started out to raise one million dollars July first with doubt in many minds. As we rest for a brief holiday spell we have--

$637,158.03 PLEDGED

WHICH MEANS that we have to secure $362,841.97 BY MARCH FIRST.

The great bulk of the amount pledged will not be binding unless we secure the whole million.

WHICH MEANS that we will have to do a lot of work --intensive, self-sacrificing work.

The people are responding. It is a question of seeing all of them. We do not have enough help to cover the ground by March first.

The following have promised to serve on the Reserve Corps: N. W. Fleming, Jr., Pinetops; J. W. Stork, Chinquapin; I. N. Clegg, Rowland; H. C. Carmichael, Burlington; D. I. Melver, Burlington; R. M. Williams, Greensboro; J. O. Mann, Wilmington; G. F. Kirkpatrick, Lillington; Jno. R. Herndon, John McSween, Jr., Rowland; P. L. Clark, Burgaw; A. W. Shaw, Mebane; D. T. Caldwell, Wilmington; J. R. Phipps, Pollocksville; S. H. Hay, Mooresville; R. A. McLeod, Manchester; Geo. M. Mathis, Clinton; Walter H. Goodman, Clarkton; W. M. Baker, Mt. Olive; W. A. Murray, Shelby; G. H. Ellmore, Wilmington; Zeb V. Turlington (elder), Mooresville; T. E. P. Woods, Rutherfordton.

These men will help us some in January between Sundays but principally in February. Watch them go over the top.

The Lexington Church subscribed $8,560 and will make it $10,000 before we finish. How is that! : : :

Pray that this may be the biggest victory our Church ever had in this kind of endeavor.

We especially ask every pastor into whose church we have not been to preach on Christian education as early in January as possible.

Yours for victory,

The Million Dollar Campaign Committee

tation of Christ. There was a good attendance throughout, a number of reconsecrations, while fifteen have joined the Presbyterian church as a result of the meeting and more will follow besides some to unite with other churches in the town. An offering of $36.66 was taken for Synodical Home Missions, which cause Mr. Brown represented, and $50. for expenses of the meeting. There are other evidences of the Power of the Spirit of God; renewed activity on the part of His people, and a determination to lead a better life by many on the outside. We expect to see and feel the good effects of the meeting for many days to come.

Work has now commenced on our new Presbyterian church, the foundation has been laid and brick work will begin as soon as the weather permits.

Vass—Rev. A. R. McQueen, of Dunn, N. C., recently preached a week for us in our Vass church. The meeting was a joy and blessing to us. He preached strong, rich Gospel sermons throughout. The church was revived and six new members were received into the church on profession of faith in Christ. We wish he could hold a meeting for us every year.

Charlotte—Second Church—The evening service, Sunday, December 21, was turned over to the Sunday School for the presentation of their Christmas exercises. "Their Christmas Vision" was given with Christmas carols and recitations by the children and a Christmas story by Mrs. C. B. Floyd. The collection taken was for a memorial scholarship for the young soldiers of the church who died in the service of their country.

Charlotte—Tenth Avenue—The service at this church Sunday night, December 21, was a very delightful one, the origin and meaning of Christmas being the theme of both the sermon and the song service. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. D. Iverson, Rev. H. M. Pressly conducted the service, making a very helpful and interesting talk on the real meaning of the happy season upon which we are entering. Then the church choir, assisted by Miss Essie Stokes and Mrs. Nell Dixon Amburst, rendered a lovely cantata, "The Holy Child." A large congregation was present at the service.

Queens College—Christmas festivities and services began early at Queens this season and continued with unabated joy until the last student had left the college walls for the long anticipated "holidays." Sunday afternoon, December 14, the college was filled with friends from the city who had come out to enjoy with the students their annual "Carol Service" which has grown to be so popular. Lovely Christmas carols and hymns were beautifully sung by the College Choral Club under its able director, Miss Dalson. Dr. Bunyan McLeod, of Westminster Church, brought the Christmas message in a helpful and inspiring talk.

On Monday night an old-fashioned pantomime party showing the spirit of Christmas was given.

On Wednesday evening the girls had their Christmas tree party, which proved a very happy occasion for all. The halls were elaborately decorated and in the center was a beautiful Christmas tree which glistened with tinsel and colored lights. Just above the tree was an illumined star. Bright fires burned in the open fireplaces. The girls, dressed in white, with red trimmings, marched down the long hall singing "Joy to the World." The choral class stopped in front of the tree and sang in an effective manner Christmas carols. These were interspersed by readings.

School closed December 18 and will open January 5.

Gilwood—An attentive and goodly sized congregation greeted our pastor, Rev. R. W. Culbertson for the 11 o'clock service on Thanksgiving morning. After an excellent Thanksgiving sermon, a substantial offering was made for the Orphanage at Barium Springs. The day was ideal and a bountiful dinner was served in the grove.

It has been the custom for several years past to have the ingathering of the children's cotton on Thanksgiving Day. The weighing of the cotton vied in interest with the dinner, judging from the genuine pleasure with which those present watched bag after bag weighed and thrown into the wagon.

These bags aggregated a good bale of cotton, from the sale of which the children have the pleasure of adding to the Lord's treasury $247.50. The interest of the parents in this plan, which has been successfully worked in Gilwood for several years, was very evident, and is, of course, the real secret of its success. We are humbly thankful that the majority of the children of our congregation are being reared to have serious regard for their religious obligations. Practically all of these young people are active members of the Children's Missionary Society or the Christian Endeavor.

These two organizations rendered a very creditable program in the afternoon.

We hope to interest more and more of our young people in this plan of raising cotton for the Lord and we hope to see it react upon the parents until there shall be a band of fathers whose greatest pleasure in all their acres shall be in the one designated as "God's Acre."

Waynesville—Rev. W. M. Sykes, D.D., pastor of this church is very much encouraged with the continually brightening outlook of the work here. The church has received more members this year than before in a long time, and the spiritual condition of the church is good. The membership is taking a hopeful outlook upon the future.

Dr. Sykes preached the sermon at the Union Thanksgiving service in the Methodist church to a large congregation, the subject of the sermon being: "The Stately Steppings of Jehovah Through the Ages." The sermon made quite an impression upon the audience. The Presbyterian church contributed $53.25 to the Balfour Orphanage as their Thanksgiving offering.

Besides having done his own pastoral and ministerial work, Dr. Sykes has held several evangelistic meetings for his ministerial brethren of the Presbytery. In September he held a meeting for Rev. Jno. R. Hay, at Brevard, N. C., as a result of which there were five additions to the church, three on profession and two by letter. In October he held a meeting for Rev. J. Q. Wallace, at Morrison church, where the Morrison Industrial School for Girls is located. Here the membership of the church was greatly revived and the school girls practically all reconsecrated themselves to the service of the Master. Some three or four children of the Sunday school made profession of Christ. In November Dr. Sykes, assisted by Rev. W. P. Chedester who had charge of the music, conducted a meeting for Rev. J. A. Harris at the Paint Gap church in Yancey county, and as a result there were twelve additions to the church on profession of faith. The pastor said this was the best meeting he ever knew at Paint Gap. The church and community was stirred and blessed by the meeting. To God be all the praise for his blessings upon our labors.

Jackson Springs—Since coming of a resident pastor to this church a year ago, it has made great progress. During the year there have been held at this church a Young People's Presbyterial Rally, a Sunday School Institute, and the fall meeting of Fayetteville Presbytery, at which time the Jackson Springs Church observed her 100th anniversary. These meetings have been a great inspiration and help to the congregation. As there is a good State High School with dormitory here, work among the young people is important. A Christian Endeavor Society was organized in April which now has 40 members, with an average attendance of 75. The Christian Endeavor Society began to do Christian work at once and got out neat cards giving the hours of the different services and an invitation to strangers. The summer visitors responded to these invitations and most of them were regular attendants at our services. The Christian Endeavor Society then took the lead in securing an individual communion service, giving one-third of the amount and canvassing the congregation for the balance. This set was first used at the Presbyterian communion service. The Christian Endeavor Society then presented a nice pulpit Bible to the church, and it has contributed to the Bible cause, the Bulla Student Loan Scholarship and to missions.

The Woman's Auxiliary canvassed the congregation for subscriptions to the Survey, and doubled its list of subscriptions and enrollment. The ladies are now having a weekly mission study class.

Jackson Springs has always been noted for its good Sunday School, which is keeping up its reputation. Recently the Sunday School presented some Life and Service hymn books to the church.

November 23-30 was observed as a season of prayer with meetings every night, and on Thanksgiving night a sermon by the pastor and an offering for Barium Springs.

On November 30 Rev. O. G. Jones, D.D., of Greensboro, began a week of evangelistic services which closed December 7. Dr. Jones was at his best and preached with great power, and this was a season of spiritual refreshment. Those who were church members reconsecrated themselves to God's service, and there were 29 additions to the church, making a total of 39 during the past year. There were 25 added on profession of their faith in their Redeemer, and four by letter from other churches. This was a wonderful meeting and no one can measure its results. There were 11 adult baptisms. Communion service was held on Sabbath, December 7, and was a blessed occasion. On the afternoon of December 7, one of the elders, Mr. Daniel Patterson, a faithful member for years, was laid to rest. We thank God for the great blessing on this meeting and the work here and go forward with new courage. The offering to Synodical Missions was $63. After hearing one of Dr. Jones' sermons on duty to your pastor, a move was quietly made for a manse, and a number of subscriptions have been received, and we hope to have a nice manse here before long. There are several mission points which this church should reach: one at Samarcand Manor, the State Home for Women; one at Derby School. The pastor, Rev. W. L. Wilson, cannot find time for more work, as he is already serving the following points: Jackson Springs, Bensalem, Elise, Culdee, Mt. Herman, Eagle Springs, Pinchurst, and, since Mr. Arrowood's death, West End, but the field is soon to be divided. New churches are to be built at West End and Culdee and there are a number of mission points that should be cared for at once. The field is white to the harvest.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Chester—The Rev. R. Roy Brown, who has been pastor of the Catholic, Pleasant Grove and Hebron Presbyterian churches in Chester county for eight years and recently tendered his resignation to these churches, has accepted the call to the pastorate of Richburg, Cedar Shoals and Fort Lawn Presbyterian churches in this county.

Great Falls—The Great Falls Churches have recently formed a "Board of Relief" for the needy people of town. The plan of such a work in this community originated with the pastor and officers of the Presbyterian Church. Later it was decided to have a conference with representatives from the Methodist and Baptist Churches. This was done, and a joint board of relief formed, and a considerable fund raised for this cause (distinctly a church work).

This board consists of three laymen (one from each church), three women, the pastors, the physicians and the community nurse.

The three laymen form the executive committee, and the three women an investigating committee, all cases and conditions of need to be reported to the executive committee.

No aid is rendered to anyone until after the case has been thoroughly investigated, and the board is satisfied there is real need. And no money is given to any one at all. The investigating committee finds exactly what things are needed and these things are bought and delivered.

What church or churches will be next to undertake such a work as this (jointly or separately)?

W. L. L.

ALABAMA.

Auburn—Rev. Charles Webster is temporarily supplying the pulpit of this church. A committee to call a pastor has been appointed.

Montgomery—Mr. Clifford J. Durr, a son of Ruling Elder John W. Durr, the senior elder in the First Church, has won the Rhodes Scholarship for Alabama, and will leave for Oxford after the holidays. Mr. Durr is the third young man out of this congregation to win the Rhodes Scholarship.

Mobile—The Government Street Sunday School has established a Memorial Scholarship Fund of several hundred dollars in honor of Mr. R. O. Harris, who so efficiently served as superintendent of this school for so many years.

Hartford—Rev. J. F. Ford, of Brewton, has been called to the Hartford group of churches in East Alabama Presbytery. Mr. Ford served this group several years ago.

Hayneville—Rev. J. H. Guy has been called as stated supply of the Haynesville group of churches. He is rendering most acceptable service in this field.

Shorters—Rev. W. H. White has been called as stated supply of the Macon county group of churches, and has already begun his work.

Greenville—This church is vacant, and offers a most inviting field of labor. A recent evangelistic service in this church added a large number to the membership on profession of faith. Mr. J. F. Glass is the clerk of the session.

ARKANSAS.

Paragould—The young church here continues to grow and expand. A good lot has been secured and a church building will be erected upon it in the near future. A live Sunday school is conducted in the home of the Synodical evangelist, Rev. T. H. Watkins, who supplies them with preaching till a pastor is secured. Eight or ten members have recently been received into the church.

Synodical Home Missions—The Synod's committee has elected Rev. J. P. Kidd as one of the Synodical evangelists and he expects to begin service with the committee about April 1, 1920. Mr. Kidd has had much experience in evangelistic work and his church at Argenta has wonderfully grown under his ministry for the past two years. This gives a very strong and efficient force in the Synodical field composed of the following ministers: Rev. W. Moore Scott, D.D., Supt., Rev. R. A. Brown, regional evangelist, Revs. Thos. H. Watkins and J. P. Kidd, Synodical evangelists, and Rev. C. A. Harper, singing evangelist. An active campaign has been planned for the coming year.

GEORGIA.

The Smithville Church was host on Dec. 2 to an adjourned meeting of the Presbytery of Macon. The Presbytery dissolved the pastorate of Rev. J. W. Stokes, at Donaldsonville. With the first Sabbath in December he began work at Fort Valley. A commission was appointed to install Rev. G. A. Grille pastor of Dawson and Pleasant Hill Churches. The quota of the 1920-21 Benevolence Budget for the churches of the Presbytery was adopted and will appear in the printed minutes. The principal work of the Presbytery was the examination and ordination as evangelist of Licentiate E. B. Thompson, a member of the Smithville Church. Before a large audience of his fellow townsmen Mr. Thompson stood a searching examination to the entire satisfaction and hearty approval of the Presbytery. Mr. Thompson's sermon as part of trial, was especially commended for its clearness, scripturalness, and its sincerity of spirit, and with all its brevity. The ordination took place at the evening service in the presence of a full house. Rev. F. D. Hunt, Superintendent-Evangelist, presided. Rev. J. B. Meacham, the moderator, preached the sermon of the occasion. Rev. J. W. Elder, stated supply of the congregation offered the prayer. Among the Presbyters laying hands on him was the father of the young candidate, the honored elder of the Smithville Church, Mr. O. S. Thomson, who was thus witnessing the consummation of his hopes and prayers. Rev. Erwin B. Thompson takes charge of the Geneva, Ephesus, Manchester group, making his home in Manchester, Ga. That he may be installed at Manchester he was granted a letter of transfer to the Presbytery of Atlanta. The Presbytery adjourned to meet in Macon First Church at the call of the moderator of January 7, 1920, on the occasion of the Laymen's Convention.

Fort Valley, Ga.

KENTUCKY.

Maxwell Street, Lexington—A canvass of the congregation was made last Sunday to secure seven thousand dollars to install a pipe organ and finish the basement of the church. The response was most hearty, and six thousand dollars was secured the first afternoon. When the canvass is completed the seven thousand dollars will be fully subscribed. This will complete the equipment of our church, and will provide ample room for all the activities of the church.

Sayre College, Lexington—On Sunday evening, ten days before Christmas, the Sayre Choral Society, under the direction of Mrs. I. D. Best, gave an interesting and delightful program, which was a Christmas Carol Service. The three Presbyterian churches of the city omitted their regular evening services, and united for this service at Maxwell street church. The house was well filled, and every one went away much pleased and greatly helped. Rev. R. T. Gillespie, the pastor of Maxwell Street spoke on the birth of Christ, and its significance in a world of sin.

Wilmore—We have just closed a most pleasant series of meetings with the General Assembly Evangelist, Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, D.D. To say that every one was delighted with both the man and his preaching but feebly expresses it. The church was crowded with people of every denomination. So much so that the services on Sunday evenings were moved into the large Methodist church which was most kindly volunteered for that purpose. The interest in these meetings was so general that church lines were completely obliterated. Hundreds expressed the wish and purpose for a better life. It is the universal wish here that he come for another meeting.

The singing of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong was marvellous. There has never been a song leader here who so caught the people. All ages, young and old alike were captivated by him. We shall never forget the pleasure that they have given us.
A. H. Doak, pastor.

LOUISIANA.

The Synod of Louisiana met in pro-re-nata session at the First Church, New Orleans, Thursday, December 18, with Rev. W. B. Currie, of Louisiana Presbytery, the last moderator present, in the chair.

The Berean (colored) church of New Orleans was transferred to Central Louisiana Presbytery, Snedecor Memorial Synod, in compliance with the request of the Berean Church and in accordance with the direction of the General Assembly in connection with the organization of the Snedecor Memorial Synod.
Louis Voss, S. C.

MISSOURI.

St. Joseph—First Church—Our old friend Dr. W. R. Dobyns on December 7 rounded out a twenty year pastorate. The showing made is one of which he has reason to be proud.

During these years three colonies have been sent out and four houses of worship built. The gospel has been carried, and is now being sustained in Africa, China, Japan, Korea, Mexico, beside that being done in our own country, state and city. Thirteen hundred and forty-three people have been added to this church, four men have been ordained to the gospel ministry, three women sent to the foreign missions, and nine persons are now supported in the work of foreign and home fields. In this city beside this church and its work, three places of worship are maintained, all of which are well manned. Some idea of the wide reach of the work may be obtained from the contributions indicated below.

Foreign Missions	$ 90,079.00
Home Missions	82,504.00

TENNESSEE.

Memphis—Westminster Church added $900 to the salary of the pastor, Rev. C. W. Sommerville, D.D. We rejoice to learn that our churches are awakening to the need of relief for their pastors.

Nashville—The Moore Memorial Church, Dr. D. H. Scanlon, pastor, will have Dr. Charles R. Erdman of Princeton Seminary to deliver the Mid-Winter Series of Lectures, from January 11 to 16, 1920.

The ministers of the Synod of Tennessee who attend will be entertained by the congregation.

The subjects to be presented from "The Book of Lilfe" are as follows:

Sunday morning, January 11, Cornelius; afternoon, The Book of Books; evening, Jacob.

Monday afternoon, January 12, Ruth; evening, Sampson.

Tuesday afternoon, January 13, The sermon on the Mount; evening, The Gospel of John.

Wednesday afternoon, January 14, Stephen; evening, Prayer.

Thursday afternoon, January 15, Philippians; evening, Divine Guidance.

Friday afternoon, January 16, The Epistle of James; evening, The Holy Spirit and the Believer.

TEXAS.

Austin—On Sunday morning at the First Southern Presbyterian Church in Austin the following elders were installed: Judge J. B. Greenwood, Mr. L. K. Smoot and Mr. J. I. Lawrence. The first two were ordained, but the latter was a former elder in the church at Mineral Wells. A very powerful ordination sermon was preached by Dr. J. C. Oehler, D.D., of Palestine. This church now has 11 elders and 15 deacons.

VIRGINIA.

East Hanover Presbytery held an adjourned meeting in Richmond on December 16. Rev. W. E. Hutchison was received from Tuscaloosa Presbytery and a commission consisting of Rev. Dr. J. Calvin Stewart, Rev. O. E. Buchholz, Rev. L. W. Curtis, Rev. Dr. T. H. Rice (alternate), Mr. Owsley Saunders and Mr. F. F. Rennie, was appointed to install him as pastor of Overbrook Church, in Richmond, Va.

Rev. T. A. Painter was received from Winchester Presbytery and a commission consisting of Rev. Dr. C. R. Stribling, Rev. W. W. Bain, Rev. L. W. Curtis, Mr. Martin Flournoy and Mr. Alex Rae were appointed to install him pastor of the Emporia Church.

Rev. C. A. Wilson presented his resignation as pastor of the Brunswick and Bott Memorial Churches, and the pastoral relation was dissolved, and he was dismissed to Lexington Presbytery.
Wm. S. Campbell, S. C.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Huntington—First Church—Rev. J. Layton Mauze, D.D., pastor. Christmas week was ushered in with this congregation by the true spirit of Christmas being taught by precept and song at the church services on Sunday, December 21. At the evening service a Christmas cantata, "The Prince of Peace," was beautifully rendered by the church choir, with organ and orchestra accompaniment. The sermon, appropriate to the season, was preached by the pastor.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting the general theme was "The Christmas Thought and Message," with "Ministering to Retired Soldiers" as the particular title of the program used. "The Passion Play" in pictures was an interesting feature of the Christmas entertainment of the Sunday School, given Monday night.

Montgomery—Rev. M. B. Lambdin has been asked by the directors of the Interchurch World Movement with headquarters in New York, to act as one of its speakers in the interest of its recently launched campaign.

The semi-annual opening of the Mite Boxes, under the auspices of the Ladies' Mission Society, of the Presbyterian church, took place at the manse Friday evening after Thanksgiving. It was a very interesting and delightful affair in every way.

The manse folks of the Presbyterian church were genuinely and agreeably surprised the evening before Thanksgiving by an invasion of their home, on the part of a large number of the membership and friends of the church, who gave the pastor and his family a first-class "pounding."

Among the gifts was a fine turkey from the pastor's Men's Bible Class.

Watch Service on New Year's Eve—At the recent meeting of the Synodical in Durham, the secretary of literature, Mrs. W. S. Lacy, had for distribution a leaflet entitled "50,000 Which Could Keep Rank." I trust that not a copy was scrapped, but that each has proved a blessing and inspiration to some one's prayer life. On page five of this leaflet the suggestion is made for a watch service for prayer on New Year's eve. According to this suggestion, as the secretary of Bible Study and Prayer Bands, my first call is to the women of the Synodical to observe New Year's watch as a special season of prayer, praying for a worldwide revival. Each to observe the watch alone with the Word of God, or as Auxiliaries, or as Prayer Bands to meet for a season of prayer, praying out the Old Year and praying in the New. For encouragement in these prayers see promises found in II Chron. 7:14; Matt. 18:19; Acts 1:8; 2:1-39; 4:31; 16:31; 17:30-31; Rom. 10:12-18; II Cor. 5:20; II Pet. 3:9; Rev. 3:20.

Mrs. S. M. Rankin,

Synodical Sec. of Bible Study and Prayer Bands.

"Church Scholarships in the Students' Loan Fund"—Dear Co-workers: The special work planned for the Young People's Societies this year is the erection of "Church Scholarships in the Student Loan Fund" and Presbyterial Scholarships.

The General Assembly authorized the Committee on Christian Education to increase the Student Loan Fund to $250,000 (it is now $57,000). As young people are the beneficiaries in this fund it is our hope and prayer that our boys and girls may have a large part in helping raise our Synod's apportionment of this amount.

The Synod of North Carolina has received in the 11 years since the establishment of the Student Loan Fund, possibly the greatest benefit of any Synod in the Assembly, and it is only justice that we should erect scholarships to at least cover loans received by the boys and girls of our Synod.

Four hundred dollars constitutes a scholarship and one of these can be erected in one, two, three or four years. We trust that many churches will respond to this call and erect a scholarship for the benefit of its young people who need or may need a loan to obtain a college education. This scholarship will bear the name of the church or a name decided upon by the church and will be held as a loan to one designated by the church. The First Presbyterian Church, Winston-Salem, has erected "The Grant Rector Memorial Scholarship;" the Christian Endeavor Societies of the First Presbyterian Church, Greensboro, are completing memorial scholarships for the boys of that church, and the Laurinburg Presbyterian Church is erecting a scholarship which is being used by one of our Barium Home boys. The Young People's Societies of the Synodical have erected two scholarships for the benefit of the boys and girls of Barium Home. Two girls are now using these scholarships.

A program has been prepared to aid the young people in this work. After consulting with the pastor and session, the young people going out two and two are asked to carry leaflets to members of their church asking them to read the leaflets carefully and prayerfully and make a liberal contribution, stating that the contribution will be given to the church treasurer and credited to their church as contribution on the $250,000 for the Student Loan Fund. Leaflets carried by the young people are our Presbyterian "Student Loan Fund," "Prison or Throne?" and "Because." Names of those reading the leaflets and contributing are written on blank leaves to be found at back of leaflets and will be reported at an open meeting of the Young People's Societies.

A program, "Christian Education, Student Loan Fund and Ministerial Relief" has been specially prepared for this meeting. Programs and all leaflets can be ordered from Dr. Henry H. Sweets, D.D., 122 Fourth Ave., Louisville, Ky.

All contributions are to be forwarded by church treasurer to Dr. Sweets as payment on "—— Scholarships in the Student Loan Fund" erected through the efforts of the Young People's Societies of the Church.

May no leader of young people say the task is too great for our Church, but take it to God in prayer and He will give us the faith that enabled Paul to say, "I can do all things through Christ that strengtheneth me."

Yours in His service, Mamie McElwee,
Synodical Sec'y Y. P.s Work.

"I don't think I can stand many more of them here, Mrs. O'Rourke," said Gwendolin drearily.

"Phwhat! Phwat's ailin' ye, Gwendolin Hennessy?" Mrs. O'Rourke paused with fat hands on her lips. "Shure, darlin', ye ain't sick?"

"Not the way you mean, I guess not," laughed Gwendolin. "But, oh, Mrs. O'Rourke, it's sick I am of the misery around me and thim that's niver known a Christmas! Ain't it awful, Mrs. O'Rourke? Ivery year I've found somethin' to cheer me up; wan year it was me red velour hat and the old lady phwhat made a Christmas for all of us, and last year it was makin' a Christmas for the Malones, but, shure, this year I'm feelin' as if nothing could cheer me up, just nothin' at all, at all."

Mrs. O'Rourke nodded solemnly.

"'Tis the war, darlin'. It's in the air ye breath. But shure, it mustn't be makin' us feel so, Gwendolin Hennessy. It's the war that's made the misery that's always around us tin times worse."

Gwendolin's green eyes opened wide.

"Well, I niver thought of that," she said, "I guess maybe you're right."

When, a few days before Christmas, the Malones accosted her with questions concerning Santa Claus, she fled down the rickety tenement house stair with her fingers in her ears.

"Shure, the poor little sows!" she murmured, and all that day the wistful faces of the Malones and many more like them, not just the great army of poverty's children, but those she knew intimately, intruded themselves between her eyes and the festive streets, the people she sold to, the familiar outlook upon her hurrying world.

"It's dreadful the way I'm feelin' this year," she told herself seriously. "Other times I've not known what to do for any av the poor things, but now, faith, I'm thinkin' I'd not have the heart to do it if I did! And that's awful."

And that night, clear, cold and starlit, full to the brim with the Christmas spirit, the streets filled with bundle laden pedestrians who were bravely "keeping the home fires burning," the air resonant with the raucous cries of the little newsboys concerning the latest American advance, that night as she entered Sunshine court, cold and weary of faithful little heart and feet, Gwendolin Hennessy met him. He was standing like a little prince in his fur trimmed coat and fur cap, his hands in his pockets, looking about him at the court, with more wisdom than his 11 years should have granted him. When Gwendolin came upon him, when she saw the clean-cut patrician little face, she stopped and gasped, and the ghost of her old ready smile came to life upon her lips.

"My goodness gracious me!" said she. "Ain't ye lost?"

"No," said the boy gravely and took off the little cap. "This is Sunshine court, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Gwendolin grimly. "Wouldn't ye know it by its look?"

The boy smiled faintly. "Hardly. Afraid there isn't much sunshine, is there?"

"Not much," replied Gwendolin. "Want to see anybody here?"

"No."

They were silent a moment then, and stood looking gravely at each other, the patrician product of Newport and Fifth avenue, and the east side child. And then the boy spoke again.

STILL LIKES HER KITTEN.

Dear Standard:

After reading the nice letters I thought I would write you again. I still have my kitten I told you about before. I have lots of fun playing with him. I am in the fourth grade at school. My teacher's name is Mrs. Hamilton, and we all like her fine. She is reading us "Probable Sons." Please print my letter as I want to surprise my father and mother.

Your little friend,
Lucy Martin Currie.

LOWERED THE SERVICE FLAG.

Dear Standard:

We have had a beautiful Sunday, and I will end today by sending you a letter. We took down the service flag in our church today. It had 65 stars on it. Every one that went overseas got back. Mr. Sadler and Mr. Holland took it down. Mr. Holland was decorated by Pershing and Prince of Wales. I want to surprise my grandma.—Tuesday is my eighth birthday.

Your little friend,
Pansy McConnell.

IN THE FIFTH GRADE.

Dear Standard:

I am 11 years old. I go to Sunday School and church every Sunday I can. I am in the fifth grade at school. My mother takes your paper and I enjoy reading "Children's Department" very much. As this is my second letter I will close.

Your friend,
Clair Robertson.

GOING TO GOLDEN WEDDING.

Dear Standard:

I saw my cousin's letter in your paper so I want to write one too. I like to read the letters. We had a fine time Thanksgiving; went to my mother's old home in the country; there were thirty-nine of us. I am six years old and am glad so I can go to school. My Grandpa and Grandma Rose have their golden wedding next week.

Your friends,
Jean Evans Rose.

SUNNY JIM'S CHRISTMAS FAMILY.

"Get yer paper, Mister! Evenin' papers! Record—Trav'ler—'Merican—all about the big subway accident!"

Sunny Jim choked on the accident and rubbed the back of his cold little hand across his eyes. "'Merican, Mister?" he dashed to an office door and deftly twisted a paper into the hand of the man who came out. Jim knew him well. He came out of that office every night, and always by himself. Jim called him the man who walked alone.

"How's the kid?" asked the man.

"Oh, they're mendin' him," said Sunny Jim hopefully, "but he's some done up, b'lieve me! An' say!" Jim wriggled between the man and the tearing wind, "He'll be to the hospittle fer Christmas! 'Course he'll be all right, but d'yer know what fer he's worryin'?"

Jim crossed the broad office step and selected a paper for another homegoer. "He's got an awful homesick 'cause his mother'll be all alone," he confided when he was back again. "They always have a Christmas dinner together, Sandy and his mother. Yes, sir, you bet! Why last year they hed sweet pertaters, and pork chops, an' cramb'ry sauce. Ain't it nice to be a real fam'ly!" Jim's eyes shone. "And' he's gettin' to have fever to go home!"

The man who walked alone blew his nose hard, for the night was cold, and Jim set up his shrill cry again as his friend swung on to his car.

On his way home after the long evening's work with extras, Jim knocked at the door of No. 5 Paradise Row. It was opened, and Sandy's mother drew him in to warm his hands at her fire. Jim always felt a part of the family when she did this. "An' did you see the lad-die?" she said eagerly, her blue eyes shining.

"He's gettin' on slick," cheered the boy, wriggling his fingers to the baby stove's warmth, while Mrs. McQueen was already at work again on the shirts that grew by the slow dozen under her ever-stitching needle. "His foot's begun to grow together, an' his head's not swole half so big. If 'twant fer wantin' you so, an' his Christmas dinner!"

Quick tears drowned the shining blue patience of Mother McQueen's eyes. "Well," her voice quavered a bit, and she sewed faster than ever, "I'm hoping I can get along fast enough so I can take an hour off on Christmas afternoon and go up to see him."

"Hooray!" Jim hopped on one thawing set of toes. "That'll be bully!"

"But don't tell him," warned Sandy's mother; "let's s'prise him!"

And Sunny Jim climbed up to the seventh floor to his half a bed with Mrs. Marini's Tony, and dreamed of Sandy's Christmas surprise.

Next day he worked extra hard at noontime, so he could take the visiting hour at the hospital to see Sandy. Sandy, white and big-eyed on his pillows, uttered a whoop of delight.

"Ain't you the brick," he cried. "But say," anxiously, "you'll be losin' a heap o' cash. Any guy sellin' fer you?"

"Don't you be worryin' 'bout the cash," said Sunny Jim grandly. "I got enough fer today, anyhow." He jingled the nickles and pennies in his pocket so it sounded quite rich and full.

A shadow hid the joy in Sandy's eyes. He grew suddenly quiet. "What's got you" demanded Jim.

"Nothin'," protested Sandy.

But Jim knew better. After some managing Sandy finally told his biggest trouble—not the crushed foot, not the aching head, but Mother's Christmas shawl!

"It's costin' a dollar an' a quarter," he said hopelessly. "I've saved ever since summer, 'an I got seventy-five cents. But I can't get any more now. It's some pretty—all white, and blue, like her eyes, an' she wouldn't shiver when she sews. It's in Risler's!"

Sunny Jim's eyes echoed the trouble in Sandy's. He hastened to the rescue. "Now look a' here, Kid, don't you be frettin' about that. I happen to have some spare nickles myself, an' I kin easy lift it to fifty cents by Christmas Eve. I'll get the shawl-thing then—that'll be time."

Sandy glowed. "Aw, say, Jim, that ain't fair," he faltered. "I couldn't let you—when you're wantin' it fer some one else!"

"Quit yer fussin'," said Jim grandly. "There ain't any some one else to me—it was just to do as I please with, an' I please to do this!"

He went away then, because Sandy showed signs of too much joy for the holding back of his tears.

Gravely Jim considered that night, but he figured that if the next two days were good ones, he could bring his small store up to fifty cents. "It's like b'longin' to a fam'ly," he said happily.

The night before Christmas Eve he went to see Sandy's mother again. She was counting a little pile of nickles and dimes when he went in. "You see," she said, "I'm not going to bother about any Christmas dinner this year so long's Sandy can't be here"—she choked a little. "But I thought instead I'd get him one of those drawing boards, with all the little rulers and things. He's always making drawings; some day he's going to school and be one of those surveying men. I thought he could do a lot while he's in bed, when he can sit up. I've got a dollar and a quarter saved, but it takes a dollar and a half, and I can't get paid for this week's work till after Christmas!" Two tears rolled into the little heap of hoardings.

Jim gasped! He was going to straighten out one secret—could he do another? His family was growing. But he just couldn't stand it to see her feel so badly. "Let me in on that," he cried eagerly. Before he knew how he had persuaded her to do it, he had left with her the last needed quarter as his share of Sandy's Christmas gift.

He lay awake, wondering how he could get thirty cents over bed and eat money in just one day! He had had all but five—now thirty looked a fortune!

If it had been a good day, there might have been more hope. But the wind was icy, and about noon it began to snow. By six o'clock it was a real old-fashioned Christmas blizzard. Every one hurried, forgetting to buy papers. Sunny Jim invented enticing news calls, but the interested were very few. Their thoughts were on the last Christmas packages or their trees and parties, not on the news.

About nine o'clock most of the other boys gave it up and went home. Jim was as near despair as he had ever come in his life. He must have fifteen cents more—just fifteen cents. If he could sell the rest of this lot of extras—but they slipped helplessly heavy under his tired arm.

He leaned against an art-light post and watched the crowded cars slipping by, their clangor muffled by the millions of soft-whirling flakes. Wild schemes flitted through his brain like the flakes through the air. But he was too worldly-wise to be deluded into thinking he could work them. He knew his trade.

A paper slipped from his pack to the pavement. As he picked it up it opened to the back page—pictures, jokes, real fun, every inch of it. His limp numbness stiffened with a jump—he counted the papers of that edition. Enough! If he could sell that bunch!

As quickly as his cold fingers would let him he folded every paper with its last page out. Watching his chance, he wriggled into a car crowded with men just in from a long train from the West. Never had his sunny smile, which had earned him his name, been sunnier. He was radiant, shrewd, sure of success. "Get your evening paper," he challenged. "A whole page of fun for a penny, an' you need it on a night like this!"

He ducked and twisted his way through the car, offering his funny page, chuckling at the pictures with contagious glee. One by one faces lost their tired lines. Smiles came; many forgot to look for change, looking instead at the game little chap with the sunny smile and the blue, cold fingers.

When Jim at last dropped from the car, his arms were empty—every paper sold, more than the price of his Christmas offering jingling in his pocket.

The next afternoon there was a Christmas party at bed No. 5, Ward 20. Pink grew in the cheeks of the white little boy with the bandaged head and the splintered foot. His eyes shone as he eagerly fingered a drawing board with "all the little rulers and things." Beside the bed sat Mother McQueen, smiling out of the fluffiness of her wonderful blue and white shawl with a smile of great tenderness at Sandy, and at Sunny Jim, see-sawing back and forth on the hind legs of his tipped back chair.

The chair came down with a bump, and Sandy, Mother McQueen and Sunny Jim shared suddenly and long. Sandy's smiling nurse was bringing in a huge basket and setting it on the table beside the bed. And out of that basket came—well what didn't come! Everything you could think of for a real Christmas dinner. "A man brought it for Sandy and his family," said the nurse. Sunny

Jim came to first. "Was he all by himself?" he demanded.

"All by himself," agreed the nurse.

Sunny Jim whooped with delight.

"My man who walks alone," he triumphed. "He asked about you ev'ry day! Ain't he the brick though?"

The surprise dinner lasted a long time. When they finally came to nuts and oranges, Sunny Jim crossed his legs in measureless content. "By cracky!" he sighed. "Ain't it nice to have a fam'ly!"—Ethel Gesner Rockwell, in Congregationalist.

A CHRISTMAS GOOSE.

It was Tuesday afternoon, just a week before Christmas, and Jack and Teddy and Joe were down on the bank of the mill stream catching drift-stuff for firewood to surprise mother.

"Get a good pile of it," Deacon Porter sang out to them, "and then I'll take my team and haul it home for you!"

So the three little fellows worked away with all their might and main until it was almost night.

"We might as well go home now, and come again tomorrow," said Joe. "I'm hungry's forty bears, and—oh, Jack, what's that in that little cave there? See! he's dove now. There! there he is again!"

It was a great, gray-backed bird with a flat bill. In an instant Jack was all excitement. His cheeks burned red, and his eyes were bright as stars.

"It's a wild goosel!" he cried. "Oh, boys, if we only catch 'im! He's just what we want for Christmas! Head 'im, head 'im off, Joel! The water ain't deep! We can catch him!"

Oh dear, what a time! Into the water they all went, floundering and splashing about like so many porpoises.

"The—there he rises! No, he's dove again!"

"There he is! there he is! Look out, Joe, don't let him get by you!"

"Teddy, Teddy, grab him! Oh, see that now!"

"He'll get away! Ja-ack, I say!"

"I've—I've got 'im!" cried Jack, triumphantly.

And sure enough he had—fast by the legs—poor, frightened goosel! Jack carried his prize out of the water, holding it tight in his arms, and home they all went to mother, to tell the story over and over.

"I b'lieve," said Teddy, earnestly, "I b'lieve God put that goose there a-purpose for our Christmas dinner, 'cause he knew we wouldn't have any!"

"Pooh, n-nonsense!" said Jack. "What a boy you are, Teddy!"

"Less why didn't he fly away then?" persisted Teddy. "Gooses can fly."

Sure enough! But the reason was pretty soon found out.

"His wing's hurt," said Jack. "Somebody's shot him, and hurt his wing. That's why he didn't fly!"

"Poor thing!" said mother, pityingly. "Suppose we try to cure it!"

So she got some warm water and soft cloth and bandaged up the hurt wing as well as she could; and the boys made a pen, with water and a box of straw in it.

"We'll keep him there till the day before Christmas," said Jack, "and get him good and fat. I just hope his wing'll get well."

It did get better very fast. In a day or two they had to hitch the big gray fellow to keep him from flying over his pen and away. He began to grow tame, and he ate "like a pig," Jack said.

"He'll make a nice dinner," said he. But Joe and Teddy said never a word. Somehow, they didn't like to talk about Christmas dinner. Mother smiled to herself when she saw the way the wind was blowing. I think she didn't feel very sorry.

"Jack," she said after breakfast, when the day before Christmas had come, "if you're going to—"

Jack knew what she meant. He went out slowly, with a very sober face. Joe had gone on an errand. Teddy, drawing pictures on his slate, by the window, didn't look up. He didn't, even when the door flew open a minute after, and Jack burst in again, but his cheeks were rosy-red.

"Oh, mother," Jack cried, "he's gone! And I'm so glad! I couldn't have killed him, mother. If he'd always been a tame goose, maybe I could; but I couldn't kill him—poor, wild thing! It would seem just like stealing something. I'm glad he's got away, mother."

Teddy looked up then, beaming like a star.

"That's for cause we let him go, Joe and me did," he said. "We'd rather have 'tatoes, Joe and me would, so we let him go."

"Oh, Teddy!" cried Jack, with a laugh. "Dear Teddy," whispered mother, with a kiss.

So their Christmas dinner had flown away, and not one of them felt a mite sorry. They wouldn't have had time to feel sorry long, anyway; for pretty soon came a rap at the door. Mother opened it.

"Here's a nice fat goose for your dinner tomorrow," said Deacon Porter, "and a squash and turnip or two, I guess. Oh, yes, and this little kettle full o' cranberries. We've got more'n we need up t' the house, and it'll be quite a favor if you can use 'em. Morning to you."

And off the big wagon rumbled again.

How pleased they all were! "Oh, mother!" cried Jack, "how did he know about our goose?"

"Oh, I didn't know!" said mother, wisely. "It is Christmas time you see, and that is when all kind of goods things happen!"—Woman's Home Companion.

MAKES WIFE BENEFICIARY.

Alvin C. York, the young Tennessee soldier credited with deeds of prodigious valor overseas, took a bride soon after his return from overseas, and they are now in their mountain home, Pall Mall, Tenn. To the Bureau of War Risk Insurance in Washington, D. C., this heroic soldier recently wrote that being now married he desired to make his wife, Gracie York, beneficiary of his $10,000 war risk insurance.

SANTA CLAUS, JR.

"No. I'm looking for lots of people. Did you ever hear of Samson Knowles?"

Gwendolin wrinkled her brows. "Samson Knowles? Yes, he is the rich man who was foriver doin't so much for the poor, isn't he?"

"Yes," said the boy softly. "He is my father."

"Oh!" said Gwendolin. "Yes, well—where is he now?"

The handsome little head lifted proudly.

"He is in France."

"Hurray for him, thin!" said Gwendolin heartily. "But phwhat are ye doin' here?"

"I'm doing what father did every year," said the boy reverently. "He came among the poor and brought Christmas cheer, and I'm going to, too, until he comes back."

The brave voice broke and then went on: "He said he was coming to Sunshine court some year. I didn't do anything last year because I didn't think of it and then—I wasn't so old. But we didn't have any Christmas at home because of father being where he was. Mother doesn't care for me or anything since father went. So I though I'd do what he used to, though I haven't any money myself. But I've a fine plan, and mother is going away over Christmas."

"And lave ye all alone?" asked Gwendolin indignantly.

"Yes. She did last year, too. She doesn't wish to think of Christmas since father went. Of course I have Gates and Wardie and a houseful of servants and they obey me, too!"

The little head went up while Gwendolin stared, open-mouthed, forgetting she was cold.

"But a houseful of servants doesn't make a Christmas, does it?"

"No," said Gwendolin, "I guess not, though I niver thought of that kind of a wan before."

"It's the worst kind," nodded Samson Knowles, Jr. "I've had one and I just won't have another. I'm lonesome, awfully lonesome."

"But," Gwendolin groped in mental darkness, "doesn't yer mother love yer?"

"Of course. But she loves father better, and she cries all the time."

"Oh!" said Gwendolin a little blankly.

"Yes," went on the boy serenely, "so this year I made up my mind to do something like father used to. And Gates, he thinks it will be nice, too. You see, I haven't any money, so I will have to do it this way."

"Do phwhat phwhat way?" asked Gwendolin.

"Why, this Christmas thing," the boy waxed impatient. "Father used to go about giving out Christmas dinners and for those who had no homes he had a party somewhere. I don't know how to do any of that and I haven't any money, so you see, there's my own great big house all empty and Wardie says it will be fine. I'm awfully lonesome."

The brave lip trembled and Gwendolin's eyes filled.

"Av course ye are!" she agreed heartily. "It's a Christmas party ye want to be givin', is it, in yer own house?"

"Yes," eagerly. "Can you find some people, or, a dozen or so, who would like to come?"

Gwendolin opened her straight young mouth, but it was smiling now.

"Sure, ye ought to 'a' told me last July!" she giggled. Quite suddenly it seemed like Christmas. "I won't know where to stop."

Samson glanced about curiously.

"Are there so many?" he asked timidly.

"Many! Ye poor ignorant sow!" Gwendolin spoke as though she were his grandmother. "Many! All the big houses in the land couldn't hold 'em all! But I'll be askin' a few for ye. I know who will be sick wid the joy av it and who will just be wonderin' phwhat to wear and thinkin' it's no moren't they deserve. Sure, ye'll be lettin' me do the askin', won't ye?"

The keen pleasure the anticipation gave her shone in the little eager face that never lost its freckles.

"Why, yes," said the boy wonderingly. "How would I know who to ask?"

"Faith, ye'd be helpless!" said Gwendolin scornfully. "Come on wid me now, Santa Claus, Jr.!"

"I thought," ventured the boy as he followed Gwendolin, "that I would send our biggest limousine for them, twice, or three times, maybe."

Gwendolin paused on an upper step and looked radiantly down upon him. "No matter phwhat they go in, thin that I'm goin' to ask," she nodded, "it'll be a chariot, shure, a chariot wid wings, I'm thinkin'!"

An hour later Samson Knowles went back to the taxicab he had kept waiting at the corner, where a grave-faced man sat, watch in hand, and waited for him, and Gwendolin went with him, dancing lightly over the sleety snow.

"Isn't it wonderful," Samson was saying, his eyes shining still with the wonder of the things he had seen. "Isn't it wonderful to have money and be able to do this sort of thing, the sort of thing father did?"

Gwendolin looked at him solemnly. "Sure," she said with her quaint wisdom, "it's wonderful to want to!"

For once in its long, narrow, wretched and dirty life, Sunshine court came near deserving its name.

It was a rare sunshine, indeed, that permeated its every corner, where nodded an old gentleman over a cane, or a white-haired old lady sewed neckties with shaking hands, or a helpless boy or girl sat in everlastingly the same chairs and stared out a window upon everlastingly the same thing!

Yes, and Mrs. O'Rourke was having a blissful time with the seven!

A threat of "Ye'll be stayin' home from the Christmas party!" and the delinquent waxed immediately angelic.

The depression, too, had somehow lifted from Gwendolin.

She forgot there was a war. Or if she remembered it at all it was with a comfortable feeling that our glorious country was being fought for by men like Samson Knowles' father, men who had sons like Samson Knowles!

Dimly Gwendolin realized this and went happily her busy way until the wondrous Christmas day dawned.

It would be hard to describe the excitement in Jimmie McNeil's room where his trembling mother, who scrubbed floors in an office building, painstakingly washed Jimmie's hair, red and curling it was; or rapture in the little Widow Brown's breast as she mended an old blue serge; she had once been a laundress in an uptown mansion and had more visions than the rest of them; or the dancing-eyed, open-mouthed joy of the Malone twins; the silent, breathlessly anticipatory happiness of little Nettie Morgan, who, like Jimmie, would never walk; or the mad, uncontrollable exuberance of the O'Rourke seven.

"I'm not knowin' whether to be glad or sorry, Gwendolin darlin'," groaned poor Mrs. O'Rourke an hour before the "biggest" limousine came for the first load of guests. "Shure, they're worse good than they are bad as the time comes nearer."

Gwendolin laughed her sunny laugh. The joy of Sunshine court was also her joy. She had even skipped from room to room and had drawn lots to see who went in the first limousine.

"Faith," said Mrs. O'Rourke, watching Gwendolin as she herself endeavored to tie a large pale green bow on a small bright red head. "Faith, I think I said it once before, Gwendolin darlin', but ye've shure got all ave the sunshine and none of the court in yer, sow!"

And it was Gwendolin who helped put little Nettie Morgan in the first limousine, all wrapped in Mrs. Lapowitz's shawl, lent for the occasion. The chauffeur, a bright-eyed young chap, carried Nettie carefully down the five flights and helped in the Brown and Dandy Moran, who had a wooden leg, and bodily flung the giggling Malones and two of the O'Rourke's in after them.

All Sunshine court, hooded and shawled, bare shivering hands tucked in pockets or beneath folds of skirts, saw the limousine off and waited for its return on that cold, starry Christmas night.

There was no feeling of jealousy or resentment among those left behind, for well they knew that Gwendolin's choice in the matter of guests had been wisely made.

The Christmas party was admitted at the side entrance of the great Knowles mansion and led to the servants' dining hall, a long, wide room made into a fairyland of holly and greens, ferns and flowers. The air was sweet as a breath of the south, and poor old Mrs. Donnelly stopped in the door and lifted her trembling white head and sniffed ecstatically.

A delightful person in black and white, a person about 50 with a little cap on her head and a lovely motherly voice, met them at the door of the dining hall, and with the assistance of a tall, grave-looking man in evening clothes, removed their wraps and made them all instantly at home.

The man, Gwendolin soon learned, was Gates, the butler, a person of influence and evidently of long standing in the family; the delightful old lady who was so charming to them all, to Jimmie and Nettie in particular, was Mrs. Ward, the housekeeper, and the next best person in the world to Samson Knowles' mother.

"She's been with mother always, even before she knew father," whispered Samson to Gwendolin. "She nursed me."

And Gwendolin, looking at the lovely middle-aged face, the wise, kind eyes, and strong, tender mouth, wondered what Mrs. Ward thought of this mother who could run away so heartlessly two Christmases and leave her boy alone in a "household of servants."

But if there was a house full of servants the Christmas party did not know it. There were none in the great long room that was so green and that smelled so sweet.

Two huge trees, all electric lighted, stood in opposite corners, filled with gifts for every one. Gwendolin herself had a new green sweater, a soft warm tam o'shanter, mittens and a five dollar bill in a pretty leather purse.

Looking about in awe, the Irish child saw that every one else had lovely things, too, sensible, warm and beautiful things, with dolls and wagons and engines and candy for the children. A Victrola played in one corner of the room and the old ladies and gentlemen sat close by it, their hands clasped in their laps in silent rapture, their old ears bent to catch each note of the famous golden voices and the martial band music.

The Malones and the O'Rourke's went quite mad. It must be confessed that Samson Knowles himself was not far behind them.

One had but to see his tumbled curls, his flushed cheeks, his wild antics and to hear his gleeful shouts and screams of laughter to know that that young heir to millions was having the finest time of his life.

So were the Malones. So were the O'Rourke's. Little they cared who this new jolly comrade was or what he possessed.

He was lots of fun and he'd asked them to a foine party, he had. Life was rose color to the Malones and the O'Rourke's.

"See him, Gates," murmured Mrs. Ward while she and Gates served the hot coffee, and sandwiches, ice cream, cake, fruits and nuts, "see him, the angel! He hasn't laughed since his father went."

"But that's because his mother—" began Gates with a dark frown.

"I know," sighed Mrs. Ward, and there was an indignant flash in her mild eyes.

Gwendolin Hennessy also tasted of an unusual joy. For this was her doing, too, her party, too, in a way. Looking about she squeezed Mrs. O'Rourke's arm. "Sure, I asked all the right wans, didn't I, Mrs. O'Rourke now?" she asked happily.

"Oh, ye darlin'!" was Mrs. O'Rourke's sole reply, but it sufficed.

In a far corner Gwendolin discovered baskets, all neatly packed; and there were just as many baskets as there were families in the long room.

"Those," said Samson, looking at her with solemn eyes, "The Christmas dinners for all of you. Father always did that, only by the hundreds instead of just a few. I said it was too bad you couldn't have it here now on Christmas night, but Mrs. Ward said you'd all rather have two parties out of it. I don't know where all the money came from. Gates and Wardie just smiled when I asked."

"Sure, it's grand of ye," said Gwendolin in awe, "Now wouldn't yer father be glad if he knew it?"

"I wrote him right after I met you and told him what we'd planned," the proud little head went up again.

And then, at the height of the hilarity, when they were all still gathered about the long bright table, when Timsey O'Rourke's face was a mass of chocolate ice cream, and crumbly bits of kisses clung to the tip of Nettie Morgan's pug nose; when old Daddy Moran was wiping the coffee from his long white beard; when the fires of the dream long dreamed and at last come true burned in little Jimmie McNeil's wan cheeks; when Gwendolin smacked Annie O'Rourke for sneaking her bit of chocolate layer cake and assured herself happily that this was about the best Christmas she'd ever had, a tall, slim, very lovely lady stood in the doorway and looked with wide wondering eyes upon the scene.

She was dressed in a simple blue cloth gown and still wore her stylish little lynx hat. Over her shoulder Gwendolin, who saw her instantly, caught a glimpse of the frightened face of a maid.

Mrs. Ward saw her and Samson, ere she drew quietly back and disappeared and Gwendolin saw the look that passed between Mrs. Ward and Gates, and all the fun suddenly ceased for Samson.

He drooped, became pale and quiet, and wise Gwendolin knew by the way he blinked that great tears lay behind his lashes. It had not taken a second look at the lovely lady to know she was Samson's mother, the mother who for two Christmas days had forgotten she had a little son and had wrapped herself selfishly in her own pain and anxiety. A hot indignation swelled in Gwendolin's breast. They—Samson—had been having such a beautiful time!

For some moments Gwendolin sat frowning at her plate, and presently she somehow derived enough courage from the pool of melting ice cream to do what she greatly desired to do.

Slipping from the room unnoticed, by the door where the lady had stood, she found herself in a wide, spacious hallway, with an arch at the further end. How Gwendolin reached her goal that night, dodging the servants (truly Samson had spoken correctly when he said there was a household of them!) darting down hallways and up staircases, appalled, struck dumb, at the grandeur about her, amazed at her own daring, more than once losing courage, how she finally reached the door of the suite of the mistress of the house, Gwendolin never knew.

But she did, at last. She knew it was Mrs. Knowles' room because the door was half open and she saw Samson's mother sitting in a lounging chair, while Mrs. Ward's charming, motherly voice was speaking.

"My dear, you must awake to what you owe the boy. Robbed of his father and mother, is it any wonder he frets and grows thin?"

"For shame, Julia Knowles! Last Christmas Gates and I were heartbroken for him. This year we decided that he should have a Christmas, and when he thought of this his dear little self, of copying his father and his great charity, we helped all we could. Of course I used a very little of the money Mr. Knowles left in our hands for charitable purposes, but we've given Samson a Christmas, and thank goodness, we've given a few others a Christmas, too! Gates and I will never forget it. No wonder Mr. Knowles used to say, 'Ah, Wardie, it is wonderful to give!' If you could have seen the joy they could not express, those poor things down there!

"And the children!" Mrs. Ward stopped to wipe her eyes. "And that blessed boy of ours! My, my, what a night he's had! But it's spoiled now. He saw you and he's afraid. Fearful of your displeasure. Don't spoil his Christmas, dear. Remember that he is your boy, and so far God has spared his splendid father.

"If you would only come down there, my dear, and see the wonder of it, the joy they've never known on the faces of the poor little worked out women; the really, truly Christmas in the faces of the children; the surprised and silent happiness in the faces of the old men and women whose first Christmas has come a little late, but better late than never! And there are two poor little souls who cannot walk—" Mrs. Ward's sweet voice trembled slightly, "Dear! dear! If you will but come you will see why Mr. Knowles loved his work and you'll make Samson a very happy little boy."

Mrs. Knowles rose and put out her hand. "Come, Wardie, we'll go down," she smiled though her eyes were misty, "I've neglected my boy. It came to me tonight when I looked in down there. If harm comes to my husband I must be thankful that I have his little son."

Gwendolin drew a long breath and would have retreated, but Mrs. Ward saw her and put her hand on her yellow head. "And what did you wish up here, my dear?" she asked kindly.

Gwendolin glanced from Mrs. Knowles' sweet face to Mrs. Ward's smiling one and tucked her hand in the latter's plump arm.

"Sure," she said with a relieved sigh, "I came up to say just phwat you did, ma'am, but ye said it all for me!"

When little Samson Knowles, down in the servants' dining hall, ran into his mother's arms and was kissed and held there; when the mistress of the house went kindly among her son's guests and had a pleasant word for each, when she herself wrapped little Nettie Morgan in Mrs. Lapowitz's shawl; when the biggest limousine came to the door and Mrs. Knowles helped give out the Christmas baskets, Mrs. Ward caught a satisfied smile on the Irish child's lips, and she turned to Gates with an amused surprise.

"I do declare," she said, "Gates, that Gwendolin Hennessy child is the oddest little soul! She seems wise enough and old enough to be everybody's grandmother!"

And Mrs. O'Rourke, a bundled up O'Rourke held by each hand, passing caught the remark and stopped to smile.

"Sure," she said again warmly, with an emphatic nod, "Sure, she's a darlin'!"

COUNCIL OF ORGANIC UNION.

A year ago, on invitation of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., representatives of eighteen denominations met in the Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, Pa., to consider the question of organic union of the churches. The sentiment at that conference was so strong that an Ad Interim Committee was appointed of representative leaders, with instructions to prepare plans of union and submit such plans to an official council to be held within a year thereafter.

The Ad Interim Committee has held numerous meetings is recommending a plan of Federal Union and will submit several other plans for the organic union of churches.

This Council on Organic Union is called to meet in Witherspoon Hall, Philadelphia, Pa., February 3-6, 1920. Delegates will be present from such churches as the Methodist Episcopal Church, Protestant Episcopal Church, Presbyterian Church, Congregational Church, Reformed Church, Disciples, Evangelical Churches, etc.

Dr. William H. Roberts is Chairman of the Ad Interim Committee, Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbert, Vice-Chairman, Rufus W. Miller, D.D., Secretary, David G. Downey, D.D., of the Methodist Church, Historian and Mr. E. H. Bonsall, Treasurer of the Committee.

A CHURCH EATEN UP BY DOGS.

In the Hudson Bay county, says Popular Science Monthly, where the dogs are half wolves, a band of these famished animals actually ate up a church. The Eskimo Christians had built a tiny chapel, to hold twenty people. But the poor converts did not long enjoy the little church, of which they were so pathetically proud. The building was of whalebone, an edible substance, and one Sunday the pagan dogs ate every morsel of the sacred edifice.—Kind Words.

Miscellaneous

A RAT FOR EVERYBODY.

How do you like to give up one-half of one cent every day for the support and sustenance of a measly brown rat?

In substance that is just exactly what you are doing, according to figures compiled by the United States Public Health Service, following a careful study in cities where the Service has made a survey.

There is one rat, at least, for every person in the United States. This estimate is considered conservative, but coincides with that for Great Britain and Ireland, and also with authoritative figures for Denmark, France and Germany. The annual upkeep per rodent was computed by the same authorities as $1.80 in Great Britain, $1.20 in Denmark and $1 in France. The expenditures in this country will, very probably, exceed the estimate for Great Britain. One-half a cent a day is considered conservative; but even on this comparison it costs the United States $180,000,000 a year to support its rat population. (This does not include mice.)

It is because of this terrific economic loss, and the additional fact that rats are a constant menace to the public health, that the Public Health Service has issued a warning to the country to take the necessary measures to destroy them. In a new bulletin, "The Rat," very convincing arguments are advanced as to why and how the rodent should be destroyed.

There are just three kinds of rats in this country included in the survey: the "Norway," or brown rat, the black rat and "Alexandrian" rat. The "Norway" rat, larger, more ferocious and antagonistic than the other two, has pretty generally killed them off, and today the black rat and "Alexandrian" rat are seldom found except in seaports.

Not so the brown, or "Norway," rat. Since he discovered America he has literally blazed a trail across the continent and taken possession of it as he went along. Today is it conservatively estimated there is at least one rat for every dweller in the cities, and that on the farm there is at least three rats for every person on the estate.—Ex.

A WONDERFUL INSTITUTION

Do you know that in the city of Greensboro is an institution that is doing great work for those who are addicted to the use of Drink and Drugs? It also treats successfully neurasthenia and kindred diseases. Those in charge are men of a very high order, its president, Col. W. H. Osborn, being well known all over the State, consequently the influences around the institution are most healthy in every way.

If you have a friend, relative or loved one, that you are anxious about and want to see well again you can write freely to Mr. N. O. Smoak, Supt. Keely Institute, Box 18, Greensboro, N. C., with the full assurance that what you say will be held in strict confidence. All literature is sent in plain sealed envelopes.

The Greatest Missionary Institution

Educate a man, and you educate an individual. Educate a woman, and you educate a family.

The population of Oklahoma is about 2,500,000. Less than 18% of the people of this new State are even nominal members of the Church, either Protestant or Catholic.

In Oklahoma there are more than 100,000 Indians, the largest number in any single State, whose evangelization was the first assumed missionary responsibility of the Southern Presbyterian Church.

The Oklahoma Presbyterian College is a great Christian training school for women. No institution in the Presbyterian Church fills a more useful and unique place as an evangelizing agency. It is recognized as the greatest moral and spiritual force in this great State.

The old order has passed. A new day is here. The service of this splendid missionary institution must be enlarged. The General Assembly calls for $100,000 for a new Dormitory and other equipment, which is needed at once to meet the ever widening opportunity.

The friends of Christian education are asked to provide it.

Making Good in the Ministry

Prof. A. T. Robertson, M.A., D.D.

This book throbs with the blood of a soul hot with enthusiasm for the success of the ministry. The story of John Mark is an interpreted biography. It shows us a minister of the first century with a message to his brethren of the twentieth century concerning matters affecting the minister's calling and conduct in all centuries. It is a modern book by a modern man, fresh with inspiration for those of us who realize the force of the author's saying: "It is not easy today to make a success in the ministry. It never was easy. It never will be easy."

...tive service in the line of duty, compensation and free medical treatment until such time as they are restored to physical fitness. During the summer of 1918 there was a general combing out of the military training camps of the country in an effort to bring up the standard of physical fitness, and many men discharged at that time may be unaware of their rights under an act of Congress to compensate for disability and medical attention and hospital treatment where necessary. All cases of this or a like nature should be brought immediately to the attention of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance.

EXCHANGE YOUR OLD BODY FOR A NEW ONE.

You can do it in three weeks and thereby renew your health. This article is written by a physician who has seen it demonstrated in numerous cases and explains how it is done.

Listen: If your weight is one hundred and thirty-three pounds your body contains eighty pounds of water, for according to standard medical books, the human body contains sixty-seven and one-half per cent of water. Now disease is invariably caused by impurities which we call poisons, and these are readily dissolved by the right kind of natural mineral water. Drink ten gallons (eighty pounds) of Shivar mineral water (use no other water for twenty-one days), and you will have exchanged your old body for a new one, so far as the soluble part of it is concerned. The impurities will be dissolved and pass away. If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning, or other curable conditions due to impure blood, accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer which appears below. Read the following letter carefully; then sign and mail it:

Some Things You Should Know About Your Church

V. THE ENDOWMENT FUND OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF.

Every intelligent Presbyterian appreciates the responsibility of the Church in providing a support for its Ministers and Missionaries.

Many who give with liberality to the support of their pastors forget the debt we owe to those who on account of sickness and old age have been forced to lay down their work and whose incomes have thus been cut off.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY AND THE ENDOWMENT.

In order that the enfeebled veterans and the needy widows and orphans of deceased ministers may be cared for in a manner and with a certainty never possible in the past, the General Assembly asks that the Endowment Fund of Ministerial Relief be increased from $600,000 to at least $1,000,000 as soon as possible. The interest from this invested fund together with the increased offering secured for the annual fund in the Progressive Program, will enable the Church more fully to discharge the obligation to its faithful servants.

REASONS FOR THE ENDOWMENT FUND.

If any cause in the Church should be endowed it is Ministerial Relief. Those on the roll are no longer in the public view. They are shut up in their rooms. They are easily forgotten. Their claim is just and sacred.

The Endowment Fund renders less uncertain the provision to meet the certain needs of our self-denying servants.

All the Churches of the world that are approximating their duty to their ministers are now erecting, or increasing, their Endowment Funds.

Besides the bountiful provision made for the Levites through their participation in the tithes of the temple service, whole cities were set aside as permanent help for them.

To secure a stable income for the disabled and aged ministers, endowment investments are necessary just as surely as church and manse property investments are needed. In the one case the investment is for interest income to relieve need and pay a debt; in the other to provide a permanent place of worship, and to save rent.

MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH, ATTENTION!

This is a matter that calls specially for your thought and prayer and effort and liberality.

Our preachers have succeeded wonderfully in raising money for new churches, colleges, the poor of the community, hospitals, orphans' homes, and the Church agencies for carrying on the work over land and over seas, but they have been poor beggars for themselves.

Many of them hesitate—unwisely we believe—to present the cause of Ministerial Relief. They never "ask for more" for themselves while health remains and they are still in the service, so that they may lay by in store for the days of need.

You know their claim is just. You know the Church, which has so successfully preached justice and brotherhood, must not fail to practice among her own the Gospel it has preached. You know your duty and your privilege.

OVER AND ABOVE GIFTS.

The Endowment Fund is not included in the amounts requested in the Presbyterian Progressive Program—only the annual fund of Ministerial Relief is in this.

We must have $400,000 more to reach the $1,000,000 Endowment Fund asked by the General Assembly.

Remember this Fund in your will.

Forward a liberal offering right now to the Treasurer, Mr. John Stites, care Louisville Trust Co., Louisville, Ky.

"Memorial Funds" are held in the Endowment—a lasting, helpful monument

Remember that unless we care for these of our own household of faith they will suffer, and the whole family of, which Jesus Christ is the head will suffer with them. : : : : : ; :

GOOD CHEER.

The general manager of a large Pittsburgh firm recently sent this letter to their employes:

To promote happiness, efficiency and service to our fellowmen, let us sincerely promise that wherever we are:

We will talk health instead of sickness.

We will talk prosperity instead of failure.

We will carry good news instead of bad news.

We will tell the cheerful tale instead of the sad tale.

We will mention our blessing instead of our burdens.

We will speak of the sunshine of yesterday instead of the clouds of today.

We will encourage instead of criticize.

We will be a friend to everyone.

We will help, not hinder.

We will witness for Christ, daily, by conduct and conversation.

We will give flowers to our friends while they are living.

We will worship God in our church at least once every Sabbath day, unless providentially hindered.—United Presbyterian.

THE SHORTEST NAME.

Among the names of 4,500,000 soldiers, sailors and marines recorded in the files of the War Risk Insurance Bureau at Washington, the shortest family name was "Ti," borne by two soldiers who were natives of Hawaii. Their name consisted of two letters, but it was pronounced in two syllables.

DON'T BARK.

Fault-finding is not difficult. Isaac McCurry illustrates this: A dog hitched to a lawn mower stopped to bark at a passer-by. The boy who was guiding the mower said, "Don't mind the dog; he is just barking for an excuse to rest. It is easier to bark than to pull this machine." It is easier to be critical than correct. It is easier to hinder than to help. Easier to destroy reputation than to construct character. Fault-finding is as dangerous as easy. Anybody can grumble, criticize, or censure like the Pharisees, but it takes a soul to go on working faithfully and lovingly, and rise superior to all, as the Lord Jesus did.—Selected.

The poor imitate the rich and get poorer; the rich imitate the poor and get richer.—Boston Transcript.

MANY WAYS TO SPELL 'EM.

A girl clerk in the Bureau of War Risk Insurance finds from the card index files of Uncle Sam's fighters that the name "Aloysius" is spelled in forty-nine different ways, and "Ignatz" in eighteen ways. Even the simple name "John" is spelled in twenty-four ways, as follows: John, Giovanni, Ian, Jac, Jack, Jackie, Jacques, Jan, Jans, Hans, Jean, Jno., Joahn, Jock, Johan, Johann, Johannes, Johni, Johnie, Johnnie, Johnny, Johny, Jon, Juan.

Some of the Great White Father's Indian soldiers bore melodious, if complicated, descriptive names. A few among many: Harry-Cries-for Rib, George Sleep-from-House, Benjamin Comes-out Bear, David Drops - at - a - Distance, Charles Owl Walks-in-the House, Wash Day Clouds, Isaac His-Horse-Is-Fast.

The town of Salmon, Idaho, furnished a soldier with five given names: Harry Adolph Thomas Richard Eugene Bullock.

A DISTINGUISHED FAMILY.

The Rodriguez family from Porto Rico, according to the files of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, sent 894 men into the American forces, and among this number, which was almost large enough for a battalion, there were but seven first names, as follows: Domingo, Francisco, Jose, Juan, Romon, Tomas and Antonio. The serial number of each man was in the 600,000 class.

Too Suggestive.

Crabshaw—No wonder. They gave her an alarm clock for Christmas.—Life.

The SAFEST-HANDIEST-CHEAPEST

Lime

RELCO MARL

Now Gets 48 Eggs a Day Instead of 3

Mr. Vincent Cured His Hens of the Winter Loafing Habit. Easily Done.

"My egg supply has increased wonderfully. Early in January, I started using Don Sung. I had been getting about 3 eggs every other day from 70 hens. By the end of January I was getting 30 eggs a day. In two weeks more, I was getting 4 dozen a day."—G. W. Vincent, South, Ky.

Mr. Vincent's results, in January, prove that you can get the eggs when eggs are high. It's no trouble and costs nothing to try. The same offer that Mr. Vincent accepted is open to you.

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 466 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.

"Their Christmas Vision"

The first edition of this attractive Vocational Program was exhausted. A second edition is going rapidly.

It is voted by those who have examined it the very best we have yet issued.

Orders should be made at once as the last edition will soon be gone.

Appoint the committee mentioned in the Supplement immediately, if you have not attended to this.

It is to be used by request of the General Assembly December 21.

We have a lot of beautiful "Lighthouse Mite Boxes" which we will send free on request.

Order from the Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, Henry H. Sweets, Secretary, 410 Urban Bldg., Louisville, Ky.

REINSTATE NOW.

Under a special ruling issued recently by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, Washington, D. C., all former soldiers, sailors and marines whose government insurance has lapsed or been cancelled may have until December 31, 1919, within which to reinstate their insurance, by paying only two months' premiums on the amount of insurance they wish to reinstate.

The only other condition imposed is that the insured shall now be in as good health as he was when discharged from the service, or as he was when the grace period of his insurance expired (whichever is the later date), and shall so state in his application.

Immediate advantage of this liberal provision should be taken by those interested. In the matter of securing life insurance protection, he who acts quickly acts wisely. No time as good as now.

Make the check or money order payable to the treasurer of the United States and mail it, with your application for reinstatement, to Premium Receipt section, Bureau of War Risk Insurance, Washington, D. C.

THEY WERE ALL THERE.

In the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, the files of our fighting forces indicate that many prominent men were represented by namesakes. Of "George Washingtons" there were 123, "General Washington" 6, "Robert E. Lee" 119, "John Quincy Adams" 47, "Abraham Lincoln" only 5. General Grant, General Wellington, General Pickett, General Jackson, and even Napoleon Bonaparte were all there, although their rank in the world war was that of private.

The Way They Work.

"Have you any alarm clocks?" inquired the customer. "What I want is one that will arouse the girl without waking the whole family."

"I don't know of any such alarm clock as that, madam," said the man behind the counter; "we keep just the ordinary kind—the kind that will wake the whole family without disturbing the girl."—Tit-Bits.

His Plunder.

A man will chase a dollar as a dog would chase a hare,
And after it he runs up hill, down dale and everywhere.
And as he keeps pursuing it for many a weary mile

It seems as if 'twas shrinking, growing smaller all the while.

When first he starts out after it its size is huge, immense,
But when he catches it at last it looks like thirty cents.

—Tennyson J. Draft, in Kansas City Star.

His Only Complaint.

The landlady bustled up to her new lodger as he came down to breakfast the first morning.

"Good morning, sir," she wheezed.

"Good morning," said the lodger.

"I hope you've had a good night's rest," said the landlady.

"No," said the mild-mannered man. "Your cat kept me awake."

"O," said the landlady, tossing her head, "I suppose you're going to ask me to have the poor thing killed?"

"No, not exactly," said the gentle lodger. "But would you very much mind having it tuned?"—London Tit-Bits.

A certain judge after passing sentence always gave advice to the prisoner. Having before him a man found guilty of stealing, he started thus: "If you want to succeed in this world you must keep straight. Now, do you understand?"

"Well, not quite," said the prisoner, "but if your lordship will tell me how a man is to keep straight when he is trying to make both ends meet, I might."

—London Tit-Bits.

"Bacon and Lamb, twenty-five cents," ran the notice—but, alas! it turned out to be only a book store advertisement.—Exchange.

While polling one of the wards lately the canvasser, after inquiring for the man of the house and learning that he was not at home, asked the following question of the woman who had answered his knock:

"What party does your husband belong to?"

This was the reply: "I'm the party my husband belongs to. What about it?"—Columbus Dispatch.
