

DUKE UNIVERSITY

DIVINITY SCHOOL LIBRARY

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representative of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., JANUARY 3, 1923

No. 1

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
The New Year—What It Means	1
The Near East Relief	1
The Dangers of Peace	1
"North Carolina—The Great Opportunity" ..	1
The Growth of the Anti-Lynching Sentiment	2
The Fatal Gift of Fluency	2
An Apology to Our Contributors	2
The Field Representatives of the Training School	2
A Way to a Happy New Year	2
CONTRIBUTED—
"Joy in the Holy Ghost"—By Rev. E. C. Murray, D.D.	3
A Rich Investment—By Miss Anna McQueen Side Lights on Christian Endeavor—By Mrs. E. C. Murray	4
Scotland—By Rev. James Russell	4
Eastern Music—By Rev. Paul L. Berman	4
"What is the Kingdom of God?"—By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.	4
Church and Christian Education—By Rev. E. P. Davis, D.D.	5
Mid-China Mission Meeting—By Rev. W. H. Hudson	5
Sunrise in Aztec Land—By Rev. Jas. I. Vance, D.D.	5
The Little New Year	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
Child Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.

EDITORIAL

THE NEW YEAR—WHAT IT MEANS

The years in their passage are like ships that pass in the night. They touch for an instant, and then glide by, one into the time past and the other into the time future.

One is gone, never to return, while the other comes freighted with weal or woe, we know not which, and the very uncertainty is what gives us anxious thought.

As we face the future, we stand before a thick veil that mercifully hides from our eyes much that would crush our hearts if we could read the future.

While we know not what awaits us in this New Year, we do know that we must judge the future by the past, and that when we do, there is much in it to give us deep concern.

In olden times the Preacher gave himself unto the study of life, and his conclusion was, "Fear God and keep His commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil."

While we may not know the certainties of this coming year, we do know its possibilities, and he is a wise man who faces these possibilities and seeks to prepare himself for them.

Twelve months ago all of us stood facing 1922 just as we stand facing 1923 today. Many of those whose lives touched ours, have since then passed into that bourne from which no traveller returns.

What has been, according to holy writ, will be, and the older we grow, the more what is probable becomes what is certain.

As wise men, not in the sense of worldly wisdom, but in divine wisdom, it behooves us to set our houses in order, to see that we are right with our fellowmen, and above all, right with our God.

As we look out over the Church of God in this country, there is much to depress us, yet there is also much to encourage us.

While error like a deadly disease seems to be spreading everywhere, there are still many thousands who have not yet bowed the knee to Baal. Our voice may be a feeble one, that will not carry far, yet we have tried to contend earnestly for the faith which was once delivered to the saints.

To many we have seemed too extreme in our conservatism, yet we believe that the extreme right is always the safer place.

Instead of being cast down, let us with hearts unafraid bravely face the New Year with its unknown possibilities, and like the Roman gladiators, say, "We who are about to die, salute thee."

"Some trust in chariots, and some in horses; but we will remember the name of the Lord our God."

THE NEAR EAST RELIEF

Having been appointed by our General Assembly as the representative of our Church in this Synod, to co-operate in presenting the Near East Relief cause, we would call upon the pastors of our Church, urging them to present this cause to their respective congregations on January 21, 1923.

You will receive from the State representative special pledge cards and leaflets to help in the preparation of special addresses. Do not throw these cards and leaflets aside, but use them among your people.

The outlook in the East is daily growing worse and the need for help is increasing. Thousands are dying from cold and hunger, while we are living in comfort.

Nothing in the history of the past can compare with the present need, and that Christian who turns a deaf ear to these cries of dying children will have to answer that Lord who has taught us that whatever is done against one of the least of His children is done against Him.

THE DANGERS OF PEACE

At present one would conclude that the world is surfeited with war. We for four years had it in its horrible fullness. Men were mown down by the thousands, some by bullets and shell, others by poisonous gas.

When it was over, we breathed free, and felt that war was a thing of the past. Already the war clouds in Europe are gathering, and peace seems by no means probable. If we could banish war and secure permanent peace we would do so, but as that seems impossible, perhaps it would be wiser to see if we can find some silver lining to the dark clouds of war.

That war is dangerous, no one questions. But are there no dangers in peace? In these latter days

"Peace hath her victories
No less renown'd than war."

According to the census report in the year 1921 there were 10,000 men, women and children killed in automobile accidents, in the 34 States that reported. As there are several more that did not report, we know that we could make the number much larger.

In the list of States Virginia stands first in foot, because Virginia has stringent laws that are enforced.

This State does not lack laws to insure safety. This city has enough laws against the wrong use of the automobiles to fill a large book. The difficulty is that few of them are enforced. We read daily where some one is fined for speeding, but as far as our observation goes, that is the limit.

Scarcely a day passes that our papers do not record the death of one or more, sometimes the old man and sometimes the tender babe in the arms, all hurried to death by the speed fiend, often the more dangerous, because he is under the influence of liquor.

Too often our streets are as full of danger as ever "No Man's Land was," and if the death-dealing driver is not checked, soon we may have to choose war as a means of safety.

If happiness can come by comparison, perhaps we may get some consolation for the evils of threatening war by remembering how deadly to human life peace has become.

"NORTH CAROLINA—THE GREAT OPPORTUNITY"

This is the title of a little book by Rev. A. W. Crawford, Synodical Superintendent of Home Missions in North Carolina. In it he has collected some surprising data as to the progress made by this State in population; in agriculture; in manufactures; in hydro-electric power; in highway development; in education; and in religious development.

Taking this remarkable progress as the ground of his appeal, he presses upon the Church its duty to evangelize the masses.

We have rarely found as many striking facts in as small space. We hope that every minister, officer and member of our Church will procure a copy, and then yield himself to the call for action, that is demanded by this book.

Our progress during the past six or seven years has been remarkable. However, there is much land yet to be possessed.

THE GROWTH OF THE ANTI-LYNCHING SENTIMENT

It is an old saying, full of truth, that you cannot make people good by law, but it is a saying that people in the main will accept it but will refuse to abide by it when it concerns their own grievances.

That lynching is an evil, a relic of barbarism and an incentive to every form of lawlessness, we all know, and no people in the United States are more ashamed of their section's record than the people of the South.

We, however, have been opposed to any national legislation on the subject, holding that it is a matter for the State government to deal with.

We have always contended that an awakened public sentiment would be more effective than any number of laws.

Georgia's record in respect to lynching is not a desirable one, yet it is in Atlanta, Ga., that a commission on inter-racial co-operation was formed, whose object it is to foster a public sentiment that would do what law has failed to do. At a recent meeting of the State Committee on Race Relations, it was shown that during the present year, in Georgia, 22 indictments were returned against alleged lynchers, and four sentenced to the penitentiary, with 15 of these cases still to be tried.

This record is more remarkable in view of the fact that in 37 years ending in 1921, there have been 430 lynchings in Georgia, with only one indictment in that time.

The Georgians are not relying alone upon creating this anti-lynching sentiment, but they propose to have a law to control it. A committee of eminent lawyers has been appointed with Judge Samuel B. Adams, of Savannah, as the chairman. This committee will prepare a bill for presentation to the next Legislature.

Now if the friends of the negro in the North will keep hands off, this matter will be controlled as well here as anywhere else in the United States.

THE FATAL GIFT OF FLUENCY

Moses, when first ordered to lead his people from Egypt, tried to evade his duty by pleading to God that he was slow of speech, and of a slow tongue. The Lord took this excuse at its face value, and made Aaron the spokesman. Aaron did the talking, but Moses the acting.

In every congregation you will find the counterparts of each, the talking man and the acting man, and rarely will you find both traits combined in the same man. Fluency is what the young preacher desires, and he envies his fellow preacher who can speak at any time without special preparation.

In our Seminary days we were intimately associated in Sunday School work with John A. Preston, afterwards the beloved pastor of the First Church, Charlotte, then a Senior, and with J. Addison Smith, a class-mate in the Junior class. Both men were fluent, but Preston realized his danger, and said to Smith, "You and I in our ministry, will have to guard against the danger of verbosity, which will tempt us to neglect thorough preparation, depending upon our ability to speak on any subject and at any time, when our efforts will be words, only words."

We recall a minister in the Synod of Virginia, of striking physical appearance, a rich, well-modulated voice, in figure tall and well proportioned. His fluency was a snare. He began by holding some of the strongest pulpits, and ended his ministry in one of the least important. His entire ministerial career was that of a nomad. He was "a voice and nothing else."

We ought in preaching, to remember that the mind of man naturally craves succinct statements, that it is not the words, however choice, that he wishes, but the thought conveyed by the words.

In addressing a jury, it may be necessary to repeat the same truths in several ways, because the average jury has on it men who are not accustomed to thinking. With them you must not only state the issue clearly, but you often have to ring the changes on the facts presented.

The preacher, however, has an audience that is familiar with much that he says, so that he needs only to touch upon the truth, in order to turn their minds into familiar paths. His main work should be to present that truth in a clear and attractive way. The bane of the pulpit is useless repetition and too free use of synonyms.

Some men lengthen out their church notices, with the result that they prejudice their hearers against what they have to say. Lord Brougham is said to have excused himself for writing a long letter on the ground that he had no time to write a short one. Let the fluent preacher remember this. Avoid a long sermon, and take time to prepare a short one. It will pay you for the extra work.

AN APOLOGY TO OUR CONTRIBUTORS

It is an old truth, learned in our school days, that two objects cannot occupy the same space at the same time. Even if we had never been taught this axiom, we would have soon learned it when we began to edit a Church paper.

We have on hand a large supply of contributed articles, a mass that grows larger rather than smaller by reason of this axiom. We have space for only a few articles, if we reserve a part for editorials and another part for Church news, which means that these articles, the creatures of our contributors' brains, must lie "unwept, unhonored, and unsung."

Recently with sympathetic heart we looked over this accumulation of several months, and as we read, we pictured the anxious thought bestowed upon each article, and the impatient waiting for its appearance, and the heart-sickness that comes from hope deferred.

We sympathize with this impatience and with the resolve to send nothing more, and with any other hard thoughts that you may have. Yet what can we do? We may stretch some of our statements, but it is impossible to stretch our space. We can publish only a certain amount no matter how much we may wish to do otherwise.

We hope that our contributors will put themselves in our place, and face the difficulties that

A WAY TO A HAPPY NEW YEAR

To leave the old with a burst of song,
To recall the right and forgive the wrong;
To forget the thing that binds you fast
To the vain regrets of the year that's past;
To have the strength to let go your hold
On the not worth while of the days grown old;
To dare go forth with a purpose true,
To the unknown task of the year that's new;
To help your brother along the road
To do his work, and lift his load;
To add your gift to the world's good cheer
Is to have and to give a glad New Year.

—Ex.

we face each week. Then they will sympathize with us, and "if we chance to fall below" they will not view us with a critic's eye, but will pass our imperfections by.

We hope that each contributor who recalls some article sent in, but never published, will remember that "all things come round to him who will but wait."

This does not mean that further contributions will not be welcomed. It only means that just at this time, the supply is temporarily greater than our available space. It also means that if you have an article on a live subject, we wish to have it.

THE FIELD REPRESENTATIVE OF THE TRAINING SCHOOL

The General Assembly's Training School at Richmond announces the appointment of Mrs. Margaret T. Russell as the Field Representative of this school. She is a Southern Presbyterian, and has fine testimonials as to her ability and teaching qualification. She is a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute and is a member of our church at Mobile, Ala. She is spoken of as having "a magnetic personality," "true Christian faith," "easily wins hearts," "a superior Bible teacher," "skilled in analysis," "skilled in soul winning," and "her influence persists."

Her duties will be to teach the Bible and organize Bible classes in churches, societies, Presbyterials, and Young People's Conferences.

Devotional

PRAYER

Eternal God, our Heavenly Father, we thank thee that thou hast permitted us to come to the threshold of another year. As we begin this journey through the weeks and the months stretching out ahead of us, we pause for a little while to ask thy special blessing and to seek thy guidance along the way we expect to travel. If we live this year through, we desire our lives to count for thee and for the glory of thy dear Son, our Saviour. If at some place on the journey thou shouldst call us home we desire to be ready to meet thee face to face and to hear thee say, "Well done." We thank thee for past mercies and for countless blessings; for the love wherewith thou hast loved us; for thy word which has been our guide book through life; and most of all, for thy dear Son, our risen and ascended Lord. For all that has made life worth living we give thee our thanks. Make this new year to be rich in blessing, and if thou dost permit us to travel through it to the end, let it be the best year of our lives because we have had fellowship with Christ. In his name we ask it. Amen.—Aquilla Webb, D.D.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR

God make your year a happy one—

Not by shielding you from all sorrow and pain, but by strengthening you to bear it if it comes.

Not by making your path easy, but by making you sturdy enough to tread any path.

Not by taking hardships from you, but by taking all cowardice and fear from your heart as you meet hardships.

Not by granting you unbroken sunshine, but by keeping your face bright even in the shadows.

Not by making your life always pleasant, but by showing you where men and his cause need you most and by making you zealous to be there and to help.

Not by keeping you from battle, but by bringing you off every field more than conqueror through Christ "who loves you."

God make your year a happy one!—Cleland B. McAfee.

GOOD RESOLUTIONS FOR 1923

Among the resolutions that you make for the New Year do not fail to include a determination to study the Bible daily in a devotional spirit. The Psalmist said, "Thy Word have I hid in mine heart that I might not sin against thee." The study of the Word of God is a real protection against sin.

Resolved, to look on the bright side of everything in 1923, since everything has a bright side.

Resolved, to be content with such things as God bestows, and dissatisfied with all the gifts of the devil.

Resolved, to make this a better world to the extent of the powers and opportunities God provides.

Resolved, to fight all bad habits, and cultivate all good ones, in the strength of the Saviour.

Resolved, to make this a purpose year, a faith year, and a prayer year.—Ex.

Close your diary for the year with "the sound of a grand amen." Its failures left with the Divine Mercy—its sorrows with the Comforter—its victories with the Victor.

Time was, is past, thou canst not it recall;
Time is, thou hast, improve the portions small;
Time future is not and may not be;
Time present is the only time for thee.

I have not seen him face to face; what need?

When day by day, his tender love and care,
Wrapt me around; when I can with him plead

My heart's desires, and know he answers prayer.

Not to ourselves are we living;

Not to ourselves do we die;

Freely receiving as giving,

Soul after soul marches by—

Parts of one mighty procession

Stretching from Eden's first dawn

On through large curves of progression,

Till in the future it's gone,

Gone from earth's ken, past heat, past breath,

Into the life that is miscalled death.

W. McL. Jay.

"JOY IN THE HOLY GHOST"

By Rev. E. C. Murray, D.D.

"The Kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." The Christian's highest privilege is not the lawful gratification of his physical nature, but growth in spiritual graces and experiences. And joy is one essential element of the religious life. It is something more than peace; it is the full and exuberant expression of the soul's satisfaction, its song of jubilee. It is not a transient gush of sentimentalism, or loud-mouthed emotionalism, but a deep heart experience and a constant frame of mind.

Joy a Grace

It springs from a divine source: "the joy of the Lord." "With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation." As from the water main all the pipes are filled, so the joyous life of Christ flows through all his members. "Abide in me as the branch abideth in the vine and bringeth forth much fruit. So shall my joy remain in you, and your joy shall be full." It is "joy in the Holy Ghost": "the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, etc." "Be filled with the Spirit; singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." And it comes to us through the exercise of faith appreciating and appropriating Christ and all His benefits. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." "Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." It is spiritual in its nature: "the joy of salvation," "joy in the Holy Ghost." It is the happy assurance of reconciliation with God, adoption into His family, and of His loving favor: "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." It is a happy consciousness of moral rectitude: "Our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity we have had our conversation in the world." It is a holy and happy communion and fellowship with God, and grateful and cheerful service: "I delight to do thy will, O my God." It is the blessedness of blessing others, of loving and being beloved. And it is the delightful anticipation of heaven.

Like all graces, joy is a growth. "It is one of the ripest fruits of the Christian life, and, like all fruits must be grown." Hence it cannot be had for the mere asking, nor aroused by mere volition, or by emotional appeals. It grows spontaneously in the exercise of faith, love and cheerful obedience. "These things (concerning the vine and branches) have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full."

And, like all graces, it is of different degrees and various manifestations, according to natural temperament, physical health, and religious training. It may be not loud, yet deep: some most joyous Christians rarely laugh, much less shout. The sober Puritans have been much misunderstood and caricatured.

Joy a Privilege

It is a false idea that religion is gloomy; that a sombre seriousness is the appropriate expression of spirituality. "The Kingdom of God is joy in the Holy Ghost." An old Scotchman was asked if he expected to get to heaven. "Why, mon, I live there." He breathed its atmosphere of joy, experienced the foretaste of its communion, love and glory. "In thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

Joy in affliction is the Christian's peculiar privilege. Napoleon, banished to Elba, adopted in defiance to fate the motto, ubicunque felix; but the true Christian may really be "happy everywhere." Epicureanism says, "Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die." Stoicism says, "Face misfortune with grim resolution." The best that any mere philosophy can say is, "Rejoice in prosperity; be patient in adversity." But Christianity says, "Rejoice always; glory in tribulation." At midnight, in jail, with their backs streaked with clotted blood and their feet cramped in the stocks, Paul and Silas were praying and singing praises unto God. A pastor found an old man in a wretched hut, the snow drifting in, and very little fire. An open Bible lay on his knees. "Well, sir, what are you doing today?" "Ah, sir, I'm sitting under His shadow with great delight." Christian joy is not derived from worldly circumstances, and therefore is not dependent upon them. There were two friends, one of them very rich. The other, fearing lest his friend's heart should be overcharged with the cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches, one day asked him if he did not find prosperity a snare. "I think not, for I enjoy God in all things." Afterwards he suffered almost ruinous losses, and again his friend asked him if his disasters were not more than he could bear. "No, for now I enjoy all things in God."

Contributed

Joy a Duty

"Man's chief end is to glorify God, and to enjoy Him forever." "Rejoice in the Lord alway: and again I say, rejoice." God has little use for a discontented, despondent, grouchy disposition. "Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye righteous: and shout for joy, all ye that are upright in heart."

Joy is an expression of grateful appreciation of mercies. A father is grieved and displeased to see his child habitually unhappy. A gloomy countenance at God's marriage feast is out of place. "Oh that men would praise the Lord for His goodness, and for His wonderful works to the children of men! And let them sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving, and declare His works with rejoicing." Rev. Gustavus Foster, in his charming story of "Uncle Johnson," tells of one day when the pious old dorky was at work in his little garden, singing and shouting. His pastor looked over the fence and said, "Uncle, you seem very happy today." "Yes, suh, I'se t'inkin' dat if de crumbs of joy that fall from de Massa's table in dis world is so good, what will de big loaf in glory be?" He gave his reason for not going oftener to prayer meeting: "I can't behave myself: when dey begin to sing, and talk about Jesus, I 'gins to fill up, and I has to holler, and den some'll say, 'Carry dat ole man out; he 'sturbs de meetin'.' But I can't hold in. I bust ef I don't holler." It would do some of our sleepy prayer meetings good to be waked up by the joyous "holler" of some soul bursting with gratitude to a gracious God.

Joy is an essential element in spiritual health. "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine: but a broken spirit drieth the bones": sadness saps all vitality. Joy is our spiritual oxygen, giving growth, vigor and beauty; it is the sunshine of the soul. It fortifies against affliction and temptation. It energizes for service: "the joy of the Lord is your strength."

It is a stimulus to religious activity. Soldiers march to music, and sailors lighten their labors with chanteys. When our heart is singing with joy and we can chant, "I delight to do thy will, O my God," then service is pleasure to ourselves and profitable to others. "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation: then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto thee."

It increases our influence for good, by making us and our religion attractive. Like a glowing hearth, inviting and cheering, is the heart of a Christian, warmed with the love of God and illumined with the joy of salvation. "Joyful Christians set the sinner's mouth a-watering for the dainties of true religion." Joy is contagious. One evening in 1883 many telephones in Chicago were vibrating to musical tones: even the police and fire-alarm phones were thrilling with melody. It was a mystery till they discovered that tunes were being transmitted over a telegraph wire close to the telephone wires, and that the latter had taken up the notes by induction.

"Does your life ring out for Jesus with a note of cheer, Telling to the world He daily grows more dear; It will vibrate through the distance with His love for you, And come back a joyous echo, when your life rings true."

Joy makes this sad old world brighter and better. A woman who had borne many burdens and sorrows, but who was noted for her cheerful spirit, told her secret: "I had no money, nothing to give but myself, so I resolved that I would never sadden any one else with my troubles. I have laughed and told jokes when I could have wept. I have smiled in the face of every misfortune. I have tried never to let anyone go from my presence without a happy word or a bright thought to carry with them. And happiness makes happiness. I myself am happier than I would have been had I sat down and bemoaned my fate."

"A singer sang a song of tears,
And the great world heard and wept;
For he sang of the sorrows of the fleeting years,
And the hopes which the dead past kept;
And souls in anguish their burdens bore,
And the world was sadder than ever before.

"A singer sang a song of cheer,
And the great world listened and smiled;
For he sang of the love of a Father dear,
And the trust of a little child;
And souls that before had forgotten to pray
Looked up and went singing along their way."
St. Pauls, N. C.

A RICH INVESTMENT

By Miss Anna McQueen

The first month of the fall term of the school has ended. It is time for me to see about making out the monthly report of the school for the Japanese government officials. Although you do not require such a report, I want informally to give you a little of the school news.

School reopened on September 18th, and that was a very busy, exciting week for me. Besides the arrival of new girls and old girls, new teachers (including a Japanese woman), and old teachers, on September 7th, Miss Graham returned to our home from her furlough in America, and Mrs. M. L. Stearns arrived on the same train from China.

Mrs. Stearns is the donor of our school building and in memory of her sister named the school "Jennie Speer Memorial School for Girls. She is a Northern Presbyterian, and last fall she left her home in Seattle to make her home with her son, who is a surgeon in the Union Medical College at Tsinan, Shantung, China. Accepting my invitation, Mrs. Stearns came to visit the school, and now plans to return to China next week.

In our short afternoon chapel exercises, the school girls lead in prayer and every day last spring they prayed for a new school building. Very often definite partitions were made that Mrs. Stearns would be the one to give us a new dormitory. Of course, we believe her coming to Kwangju was in answer to our prayers, and that the time of her visit, just at the opening of school, was providentially arranged. The morning after her arrival, Dr. Bell conducted the opening exercises of the school. He told of his meeting Mrs. Stearns, in Asheville, the history of her gift, and the building of the school 11 years ago. Then a speech of thanks was made by Sengunie Lee, one of our graduates. She has been our head teacher and also our music teacher for the last three years. Sengunie is a tall, capable, nice-looking girl, and I felt very proud of her as she left her position at the organ, came and stood before Mrs. Stearns, and in beautiful Korean, interpreted by Dr. Bell, thanked Mrs. Stearns for the school and all it had accomplished for her and her people. In parenthesis, I might add that Sengunie has reason to be truly thankful, for if her Christian grandmother had not snatched her from her father's heathen home and brought her to our school, years ago, she would have been married into a heathen home to lead the life of a slave to her mother-in-law and husband. Christianity and education have made a wonderful difference in her life. Last June I was maid of honor when she was married to a young doctor who graduated this year at the head of his class, and is now taking post-graduate work in Seoul. Sengunie told of her entering the school at 12 years of age and how at that time all grades studied together in one small room of Mrs. Owen's gate-house. She eloquently told of our great joy and gratitude when we moved into the large Jennie Speer building. In conclusion, she spoke of the joy and sorrow of seeing today that the school had grown so large in numbers that the building could not accommodate all the pupils who wanted to enter. The chapel was crowded with the 275 girls, sitting close together on the floor, and quite a number of adults in the rear who had come to matriculate new pupils. It was indeed an impressive scene. When one looked at the faces of the three teachers present who had graduated in the school, and thought of the possibilities that lay in the lives of that crowd of young students, it was easy to heartily agree with Mrs. Stearns in her saying she had made a "rich investment."

Now, let me tell you the good news that half of our prayer has been answered! Mrs. Stearns has offered to give a thousand dollars to build a new dormitory provided some member or members of our Southern Church will give the same amount. Won't you help us pray for a thousand dollars? Perhaps some of you may be able to help answer the prayer yourself or influence others to do so. Don't be afraid we might get too many answers, for while we are definitely asking now for a thousand, we really need about $12,000. We need another class building, a heating plant and a laundry. And, we need all of these now, but our most urgent request is for more room for boarding pupils. To prevent having to send away pupils after they reach here, we are continually announcing that the dormitory is crowded. Despite this, we had to say "no room" to about 40 applicants this fall. However, we helped some of the girls make arrangements to board in the village. That is a questionable thing for them to do, and besides they miss the advantages and the training of the dormitory.

One day, in great distress, a grandmother came to me, saying, "What can I do? Day after day for seven days I have tried to get Gebogie to return home with me, but all in vain. She is determined to study, and every time her emphatic reply is, 'Although I beg I will not go back,' or 'Although I die I will not return.'" Could you send away an earnest child like that, who very evidently is not only seeking an education, but is also seeking to know Christ? I went out in a pouring rain and succeeded in renting another room for school girls, and now Kebogie, two other girls and a young married woman are keeping house in that eight by ten room. The young woman centered our school about two years ago, saying that her husband had "thrown her away" and secured another wife because she was not educated. That is a custom of new Korea which prevails among the heathen young men.

Today Christians and heathen alike are appealing to us for a Christian education. In whatever way you can, please help us answer their appeal. To "carry on" we need your prayers all the time.

Kwanju, Chosen.

SIDE LIGHTS ON CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

By Mrs. E. C. Murray

The constructive criticism of Christian Endeavor in the editorial columns of the Standard of December 13th is true as far as it goes, but to one who has had some little experience with this organization it does not give the whole truth.

May I suggest that the ranks of those young people who do not remain to church after the Christian Endeavor meeting is over, is largely recruited from the children who return to their homes after the Sunday School hour. These go home in droves, from the infants up to quite large boys and girls. Should we give up our Sabbath School because of this tendency? No one I am sure would think of doing so for one minute.

Let us apply the same reasoning to our Christian Endeavor Societies. Now I agree with every word in the editorial in question, but knowing human nature, I am sure that it will give Christian Endeavor a black eye in the minds of many of its readers who may not be qualified to discriminate.

The writer has been identified with Christian Endeavor for many years, and is convinced that nothing like it has ever been conceived for the development of the young people, mentally, socially, and spiritually.

When our own Church was rather indifferent, almost passing by on the other side, Christian Endeavor came along and lifted up the young people and gave them a well rounded organization with a plan, and a purpose, and a prayer meeting, and its progress has been well nigh irresistible. Let me say, here, that every Christian Endeavor Society with which I have been connected has with trifling exceptions remained to the evening service, adding perceptibly to the congregation.

If this is not the case in all the churches, let the pastors and sessions look to it, and see if they are shouldering their responsibility as they should, remembering of course that the young people are but products of the homes that train and send them forth.

St. Pauls, N. C.

(Our colleague in his criticisms was only uttering a word of warning as to the possible danger of the Christian Endeavor Society.

The writer, in 1890, was among the first in the Synod of Virginia to fight in its defense. Yet at that very time he recognized the danger alluded to in the editorial. While he sees this danger as one always confronting the society, he still is a staunch believer in the good it is doing as a training school for the young.—J. R. B.)

SCOTLAND

By Rev. James Russell

Scotland is again receiving a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. A little over a year since the fishermen on our east coast from Cathness to Edinburgh felt the power of God in a preached Gospel. Now it has pleased the Lord to visit the west side of the island and Govern, a town on the Clyde, a town of ship-building folks, has received a gracious outpouring of God's Spirit. Two hundred of their men have come into the church in one week, showing God is waiting to be gracious. I am told they have no evangelist, no singer—the preachers of the town and their elders and deacons are the workmen. God's Holy Spirit is the power. These preachers join together. The meeting is held in the largest church, but before that one of the preachers or a layman preaches a fifteen minute sermon in the open air, either at the Market Place or in Public Square, then invites all the workmen just to come on to the church in their working clothes, thus the house is filled with hungry souls. Moody's hymns or the Psalms are all the books used in singing, but a house filled with new-born souls will make music to the Lord without the aid of a pipe organ.

Let such a blessing fall upon our Southland.

EASTERN MUSIC

By Rev. Paul L. Berman, Our Jewish Missionary in Baltimore

Oriental people have no idea of harmony. They sing in unison. And instruments are only used as an accompaniment. Instrumental music, strictly speaking, does not exist. Nor, as far as we are aware, did it in Bible times. When we read "Praise the Lord with lute and harp," it meant sing to the Lord, and accompany the singing with lute and harp.

People sang and played in unison, and the music was, as it is today, of the most primitive character. This is very plainly shown by the very names given to musical instruments. In Amos 6:5, we read of K'elai Shir, invented by David, i. e., instruments of song.

The Harp—It is the first one mentioned in the Bible (Gen. 4:21), and consisted of an instrument with many strings, called in Hebrew, Kinnor, in Arabic, Kannun, From the frequency with which it is mentioned in the Bible, it would appear to have been the national instrument of the Jews. It seems always to have been associated with joy and gladness. Hence in captivity "they hung their harps upon the willows" (Ps. 137:2).

From David's time it seems to have been generally associated with the worship of Jehovah. Hence the word Kinnor is more often mentioned in the Psalms than any instrument. David, as a lad played on the Kinnor (I Sam. 16:16-23), and to its accompaniment sang songs of his sweet Psalms. Neginoth comes from Hebrew Nagan "to play," and is always connected with the harp. (Literally "to harp upon the harp.") When Elisha sent for a minstrel (II Kings 3:15), the word is Nagan again from the same root, hence a proper translation would be Harper. It is interesting to compare some of David's Psalms which have the title Neginoth. Some of these, if sung by David before Saul, would have inspired the morose king to something like confidence in God. (See Ps. 4:8: "I will lay me down in peace and sleep." And again Ps. 6, a prayer for recovery from bodily and mental affliction). Again in Ps. 55, after complaining of sad distress, he adds the comfortable words (v. 22) "Cast thy burden upon the Lord."

It must have been very unusual for a poor shepherd to be able to play the Kinnor. Shepherds only play the flute or pipe. David, the shepherd lad, must, therefore, have been noted far and wide as the talented shepherd who could play the harp. No wonder that even Saul's courtiers had heard of him (I Sam. 16:18).

The Organ, like the Harp, was the earliest invented instrument. Called Ugain in Hebrew (Gen. 4:21). It consists of reeds of different lengths, the player passing his mouth from one to the other. It is the well known Pan's pipe, the primitive organ. Besides the passage in Genesis it is mentioned with Kinnor only in Job. 21:12, and 30:31. Is it not curious that these two earliest instruments, invented by Jubal, should be mentioned by Job only, with just one exception? May not this be an internal evidence of the antiquity of the book? It is also mentioned once with a long list of other instruments in Psalm 150:4.

The Pipe was a plain reed either singular or double, and played like the modern flute or oboe. They are the favorite instruments of shepherds, as they are easily made, and easily played. Called in Hebrew Khabil. Notice plural form in the title of Ps. 5, Nebiloth. They are connected with travelling in Isa. 30:29, and are mentioned in I Sam. 10:5 and I Kgs. 1:40. From these three passages it would appear that they were in ancient times connected with religious worship, hence the sad degeneracy of the people when they used "the harp, viol, tabret, pipe," in their drunken feasts. (Isa. v. 12).

The Viol was a one-string instrument, and the prototype of the modern violin; though there appear to have been viols with more than one string. In Psalm 92:3 we read of a ten-stringed Nevel, also in Ps. 144:9. It seems to have been a very popular instrument from the frequency with which it is mentioned. It is sometimes translated Viol in Isa. v. 12, 14:11; Amos 5:23, and 6:5; and sometimes Psaltery in I Sam. 10:5; and II Sam. 6:5; I Kings 10:12; I Chron. 16:5. Remember that Viol and Psaltery are one and the same instrument.

Horn, or Trumpet—The Hebrew word is Shofar, the ram's horn, and Khatzozerah, a metal trumpet, sometimes translated Cornet. Trumpets were used as war-signals (Jos. 6:4, Judges 3:27, etc.). Also on certain religious festivals, in ushering in the year of Jubilee (Lev. 25:9) and at the Feast of Trumpets (Lev. 23:24). This is still kept by the Jews. It was also used at the coronation of a king (I Kings 1:34; II Kings 9:13, etc.). With the Shopper Joab recalled the scattered Israelites. And with the Shofar, God will restore scattered Israel (Isa. 27:13). And with the Shopar called Salpynx, in I Cor. 15:52, God will call the armies of the dead at last day. Some of the Khatzozerah, or silver trumpets, are seen on the bas-reliefs on the arch of Titus.

The Sackbut is an instrument resembling the Scotch bagpipe.

Of instruments of Persuasion, we have the Timbrels, the modern tambourine. Used on all festive occasions. Hebrew word Tzeltzelim, from a word meaning to make a rustling, rumbling noise, like the noise of the wings of a swarm of locusts. It is generally translated Cymbals. (See II Sam. 6:5; I Chron. 15:16; II Chron 5:12; Ezra 3:10).

The Cymbals (Hebrew Mctziltaim) a dual form showing they consist of two metal plates which are struck together, producing a sharp, clashing sound. This is translated cymbals in Ezra 3:10, and Neh. 12:27. Even the Revised Version confuses the Tzilzelim and Metziltaim.

The Tabret (Hebrew Toph, Arabic Duff) is the Oriental representative of the modern drum.

They are of various shapes and sizes. The smaller ones are chiefly used by females. With this Toph the women came out to meet Saul (I Sam. 18:6). With it Miriam and the women of Israel sang their Psalm of Victory (Ex. 15:20). It is called the adornment of women (Jer. 31:4). With the Toph Jephthah's daughter met her father (Judges 11:34), and thus "brought him very law." There is also an interesting play of words in connection with this instrument in Isa 30:32, 33. The place Tophet seems forced until you see its allusion to the instrument Toph in v. 32. The play of words is a thoroughly Oriental custom of which there are frequent specimens in the Bible. It would make many dark passages clear if such instances were always explained by a note. There is another in Jer. 1:11, 12. Almond tree is "Shaked" in Hebrew. I will hasten is Shaked (See Revised Version). There is another in Is. v. 7. I looked for judgment (Hebrew Mispahat), and behold oppression (Mispahh); for righteousness (tzedake); and behold a cry (tze'awa).

"WHAT IS THE KINGDOM OF GOD?"

By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.

When I come upon a good thing, I like to pass it on. And this new booklet of Dr. R. C. Reed's, with the above title, is emphatically a good thing. It is clear, compact, cogent, and kindly, a fine blending of those heavenly twins of Matthew Arnold, sweetness and light.

I believe it was on a train in China that a good lady once whirled on me with the question, "Are you a Pre or a Post?" I modestly but firmly maintained that I had never been called anything as flowerless, fruitless, juiceless as a post. But whether one is as dry as a post or as sappy as a pre, he will be interested in this book. It renders timely service in showing how different ideas of the Kingdom involve such different interpretations of large parts of the Old Testament and vital portions of the New as to create surprisingly divergent types of Scripture teaching and Christian belief. Whatever your preferences, you will enjoy Dr. Reed's effort to bring these differing views to the test of Scripture and of our Standards.

The testing of these views by our Standards is rather a new departure and one well worth our attention, for those old Westminster Assembly brethren had a marvelous grip of the Bible both as a whole and in detail. I remember some years ago a matter developed in my congregation where my action depended on the interpretation of a sentence in one of the Epistles. Our Confession interpreted it in a certain way, but I had my doubts. So I took it to the man who is today recognized as the greatest living master of New Testament exegesis. He was doubtful himself, but he immediately said that there were three commentators who represented the very latest and finest scholarship as to the meaning of that Epistle. When he took the three down from his shelves, we found that while one of them was rather vague, the other two ranged themselves solidly on the side of the old Confession.

Two things about this book gave me a malicious pleasure. I know it was wicked, but being myself a member of a fallible committee, I could but smile to note that our honorable Committee of Publication had Dr. Reed presented on the title page as the "Professor" of Church "Policy" in Columbia Seminary. I am glad to expose this iniquity, since I have it in for that committee for omitting from their advertised list of suitable Christmas gift books that fascinating little volume, "The Creed of Presbyterians," which every intelligent person knows makes one of the finest Christmas presents that ever came down the pike. It is not generally known that up-to-date pastors are accustomed to spend the entire Christmas Eve in a house-to-house distribution of these literary gems among their people.

The other thing that afforded me a sinful joy, in memory of my own early struggles with the Shorter Catechism, was the discovery that our distinguished author and Assembly Moderator in giving the answers to two Catechism questions, makes a mistake in each. It is certainly comforting to poor secretaries whose favorite song is "The Mistakes of My Life Have Been Many," to find themselves in such illustrious company.

Dr. Reed's thinking is always clear and vigorous, and his style is as lucid and forceful as his thought. When such a man discusses for us in a brief booklet one of the great outstanding themes of Scripture, he lays the whole Church under an obligation which every reader of this article should at once recognize by sending 50 cents for a copy to the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va.

CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

By Rev. E. P. Davis, D.D.

The question of Church and Christian education is of the last importance and is assuming larger proportions each year. There is a great need for the establishment of parochial schools and colleges in our territory for the following reasons:

1. To place ourselves in sympathy with the historic position of our denomination on this subject. The Presbyterian Church has always stood for intelligence, as well as charity and liberty; and it has uniformly manifested this spirit in organizing and maintaining schools, colleges and universities. It thinks that the highest degree of culture is essential to the greatest usefulness in the home, the Church, the State, and the world. As early as 1743, the General Synod formulated a plan for the education of the youth; and the deliverances of the General Assemblies, Synods and Presbyteries have expressed the same policy since that date. It has been shown "that there was not a single church of the Reformation that did not recognize the duty of the Church to maintain, under their own supervision and control, common and grammar schools, academies, colleges and universities."

2. To preserve the integrity of the Presbyterian system of doctrine, government, worship and life. It requires culture to understand and appreciate our system. It has been asserted in general that religion is opposed to the broadest and best culture; and that it does not encourage science, art, literature and philosophy. But in opposition to these views, it can be truthfully said that our Church is in favor of all true culture of body, mind and heart; and strives, by her schools, colleges and universities, to offer the very best advantages for the highest and most harmonious development of the physical, intellectual and spiritual powers. Bancroft says: "Calvin was the father of popular education, the inventor of the system of free schools." Such culture is essential to our system which is the clearest and most consistent statement of divine truth. It is not the design of the Church to seek culture for its own sake simply, but for the higher ends of religion; and for the better understanding of her doctrines, polity and life. The Church cannot originate truth, nor enact laws to bind the conscience; but it is her duty to declare God's truth and publish God's laws as revealed in the Holy Scriptures. She is, therefore, not a creator of light, but a reflector. That she may adequately teach the truths of Christianity, she must thoroughly comprehend them; and to comprehend them she must be educated. Ignorance is not the mother of devotion, but of slavery, immorality, crime and misery. As Goethe says: "Christianity is an infinite thing."

3. To assist in meeting the pressing need of the Church for a learned and godly ministry. We are just now concerned with the fact; and not with the causes that have led to it. We need more ministers and stronger ministers. To supply these vital needs we should multiply schools of high grade in the rural districts of our Synods, provide better opportunities for our boys in the country; robust in body, strong in intellect, and pious in heart, to secure a liberal education. It is the experience of the Church that we cannot look to the institutions of the other denominations, nor of the State, to supply them.

4. To teach the principles of Christian philosophy. This is an age of doubt, and nearly every truth of supernatural religion is questioned. What God has settled, man has opened. Much current literature abounds with unbelief and disbelief. Aestheticism, theosophy, otherism, faith-cure, pessimism, agnosticism, materialism, spiritism, liberalism, Mormonism, Christian Science and Socialism, claim thousands of adherents. Development of whatever is commendable in us by nature is substituted for regeneration; the deification of man for only one God; unselfishness for the atonement of Christ; healing by faith alone for the practice of the medical art and prayer; natural melancholy for divine joy; the philosophy of ignorance for the divine philosophy of knowledge; the identity of matter and mind for duality of these two substances; spiritism for spirituality, etc. Infidelity is clothed in many forms; even as its father "is transformed into an angel of light." (II Corinthians 11:14). Multitudes of our young men and maidens are deceived by these errors, and many of the students in the great universities in the North, either become indifferent to religion or openly oppose its precious truths. If there ever was a time when we should strengthen our Christian institutions, that time is the present.

Greenville, S. C.

MID-CHINA MISSION MEETING

By Rev. W. H. Hudson

The stations of the Southern Presbyterian Church south of the Yang-tse River, excepting Chinkiang, are known as the Mid-China Mission. All north of this river, including Chinkiang, but excepting Tsinan (Shantung) and Peking, are in the North Kiang-su Mission, which held its annual meeting at Kuling, August 12-22. The Mid-China Mission met in Hangchow, October 14-20. About 45 of our missionaries were present part or full time. Reports indicate that medical work is nearly self-supporting. It does not seem wise to increase rates too much for fear of commercializing the hospitals.

Educational work was especially encouraging, all schools full and some overflowing.

The evangelistic department suffered most from the cut in appropriations and from political, social and economic disturbances.

There were 328 additions to our own churches besides those who joined union or other churches. Further depletion in the ranks of evangelists, male or female, seem disastrous. There was very little discussion over the carefully calculated estimates for the coming year which were restricted to the same reduced appropriations as those for the current year.

The most important matter under discussion was the soundness of doctrine in Union Educational Institutions. The investigation begun by order of the Executive Committee indicated that Nanking Theological Seminary professors had been interviewed by Dr. P. F. Price and they each had signed statements which sustained confidence in the existing staff. The nomination of five young men, two foreign, three Chinese just graduated as full professors was rejected by the North Kiangsu Mission on the ground of inexperience, but in view of urgent need for teachers, voted for as assistant professors by Mid-China Mission, with recommendation for training in the work before election as full professors. What at first seemed to be a crisis was thus averted.

The newly nominated president of Hangchow Christian College, Rev. Robert F. Fitch, D.D., came in person, stated his plans, purposes and answered every question propounded so satisfactorily, that he was accorded a rising unanimous vote. The members of the college faculty also submitted statements in writing as to belief and teaching.

The Woman's Union Bible Training School and the Girls' Union High School are in process of investigation by an enlarged committee that will continue its work and report all findings to the Executive Committee at Nashville before the next meeting of the General Assembly. So far, it seems only fair and just to say that caution within, rather than criticism without, has kept these institutions all worthy of our confidence and support.

It is useless to deny, however, that all sorts of doctrine have reached China, not in the person of Southern Presbyterians, but of others invidious to mention. Eternal vigilance is the price of safety. It is reassuring to know that we have direct representation in the above institutions, both in the several faculties and on the boards of directors. As none of the four are endowed, they are dependent on the good will and confidence of the supporting missions for annual budgets as well as for equipment. They are controlled by a majority vote of many earnest and thoughtful men and women, not by the idiosyncrasies of any one person.

The next in amount of discussion was the motion for approval, with an appropriation, for the China National Council, which is a committee of one hundred hoping to function as representative of all the missions in China as well as of the Chinese Christian Church. Action was postponed for another year. Opinion in the mission pro and con was so divided that it was agreed by all to wait for more light and less heat.

The North Kiangsu Mission had already declined to approve or finance this committee by a vote of 20 to 7. In comparing the actions and policy of our two missions, it should be remembered, that North Kiangsu Mission occupies its own territory almost exclusively with little opportunity for union work, while the Mid-China Mission is surrounded by, or wedged in with, many other missions, mutually constrained to associate, co-operate or unite, especially in educational institutions which are so costly for one mission or even one denomination to equip and maintain efficiently. In doctrine, the two missions are at one and one only. In policy they are as different as geographical and economic conditions may require.

The North Kiangsu Mission is accomplishing extensive evangelistic work in a large, unoccupied field, with many villages and rural districts. The Mid-China Mission works out from large cities and market towns dividing the territory with other missions, or other denominations, which have worked side by side for many years.

The emerging, infant Chinese Christian Church will resemble Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist or other denominations, according to founders polity, in others a blending of various types induced by union movements. No one can tell what the ultimate basis of doctrine or actual polity will be. So far as Southern Presbyterians are concerned, we are committed to "Conservative Theology and Progressive Methods."

Chinese opinion, so far as it is known, does not want the foreign missionaries over or under, but with them, until the native church attains clearer spiritual insight, more moral stability and firmer financial standing. The missionaries now as ever, need wisdom, patience and persistence in spiritual effort.

Kashing, China.

SUNRISE IN AZTEC LAND

By Rev. Jas. I. Vance, D.D.

This is the title of the new book for mission study classes in connection with our foreign work. Its author is Rev. William A. Ross, our missionary in Mexico, who in this charming volume packed with inspiring and challenging facts has laid the Church under additional obligations.

It is a fascinating story of the needs and progress of Christ's cause in a land of wonderful opportunity.

Mexico is our nearest neighbor. It is rich in all that goes to make a great state. Its deepest need is the religion of Jesus. Its history is full of romance and adventure, of suffering and struggle, of lights and shadows. It is a country of great forests and fabulous mines and enchanting traditions and crushing disappointments.

Mr. Ross, in the title of his volume, ties all this to the new day which is about to dawn on this wonderland and its romantic race, provided the Christian Church enters the open door. Shall the Protestant Church make it sunrise for Aztec land?

It would seem that with such a theme and country and this splendid volume to open the way, it should be easy to assemble an unusually large number of mission study classes this year. We are somewhat handicapped by reason of the late appearance of the book. Difficulties connected with its preparation and publication have caused it to be issued some months later than we had planned, but if the pastors and church societies will take the matter promptly and vigorously in hand, the delay will not seriously hurt our work.

The book may be had of our Publication Committee, in Richmond, Va., the price in paper backs being 50 cents.

THE LITTLE NEW YEAR

The candle-makers have made a mistake

In picturing Time as a man,
A withered old grayhead who carries a scythe,
With a forehead all wrinkles and tan;
For Time is a rotund and motherly dame,
Not the least bit unkind or austere,
And every twelvemonth she gives to the world
A sweet little baby New Year.

See the dainty white baby-clothes hung on the wall

And piled up in heaps on the ground,
Of a texture so fine that if touched they will melt,
And nothing but dewdrops are found.
They are trimmed with the lace that is made by the frost
In the long winter nights, dark and drear,
And bordered with swan'sdown to warmly enfold
The dear little Baby New Year.

Hear the silvery music of bells on the air

Ringingly over the snow;
With a joyous succession of rapturous notes
They toss the glad news to and fro.
For the north wind is rocking a cradle tonight
By the light of stars burning clear,
And Time, a proud mother, rejoices again
O'er the birth of a baby New Year.

—Ex.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

To the North Carolina Auxiliaries—Happy New Year! Start the New Year right by making—and keeping—a resolution that, during January and February, your Auxiliary WILL have a Foreign Mission Study Class, using "Sunrise in Aztec Land"; and that you will use your influence in your church to push the Equipment Fund. Let's make 1923 the banner year for Foreign Mission Study Classes, and enroll every Presbyterian woman in North Carolina in either a Study Class or Reading Circle. Don't say you can't because you have no leader in your Auxiliary. If that is really true, I'm sure you can borrow one from a neighboring Auxiliary for an all-day meeting, after your Reading Circle has read the book. Don't say you have no time for reading. If you are really so busy, get your husband to read it to you at night, while you do the family mending, and he will enjoy it as much as you do. You do not realize what you are missing if you are not studying these wonderful records of God's blessing on the work of your Church. Fifty years in China, Day In and Day Out in Korea, Triumphs of the Gospel in the Belgian Congo, and now, Sunrise in Aztec Land. They are mines of riches, and sources of the greatest joy, in that we see how abundantly God has blessed our work; and they are also calls to prayer and greater efforts in the Master's service.

If you cannot have your Foreign Mission Study Class in January or February, because of bad roads, bad weather, or sickness, wait till these conditions improve, and have your study class, if you do not have it till summer, but be sure to have one, and encourage your young people to have one. Do not miss this inspiration.

Auxiliary Presidents, and Foreign Mission Secretaries, yours is the responsibility! Order your books NOW; make your arrangements NOW; only God can measure the results. "I must work the works of Him that sent me while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work." Our Synodical slogan is, "Send out thy light and truth." Our goal is, "Every Presbyterian woman in North Carolina studying, praying, working for missions."

Yours in the Master's service,
Mrs. W. L. Wilson,
N. C. Synodical Sec. of Foreign Mis.

Important Meetings In January — The Foreign Mission Conference meets January 9th to 12th, at Bethlehem, Pa.

The Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions will hold their annual meeting in the assembly room of the National Building of the Y. W. C. A., 600 Lexington Avenue, New York City, January 13th, 14th and 15th.

The annual meeting of the Home Missions Council and the Council of Women for Home Missions will be held in Atlantic City, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, January 17th, 18th and 19th. Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, St. Louis, Mo.

Sunrise In Aztec Land—Timely indeed is this study of Mexico, our nearest neighbor, presented in most attractive form by Rev. W. A. Ross, our senior missionary to that historic country.

In this volume of something more than 200 pages Mr. Ross presents the novel contradictions and striking contrasts of Mexico, following with a summary of the early settlement and history of this most interesting land.

The dark background of cruelty, superstition and illiteracy but serve to emphasize the coming of these agencies which today are working for the development and advancement of this remarkable country. Love for the people of Mexico speaks from every line of this book and the writer's confidence in their final national redemption is unshakable. This belief never falters that Mexico will yet assume her rightful place among the nations of the world.

A graphic account is given of the beginnings of the work of the Southern Presbyterian Church in the northern part of Mexico, of its interruption by revolution after revolution and of the necessary withdrawal of our missionaries from the war-torn land.

Of especial interest will be the description of the new territory which has been assigned to our Church in S. W. Mexico. Its wonderful climate, its attractive population and its great possibilities are graphically depicted.

This volume is a worth-while addition to the group of splendid denominational mission study books which have preceded it, and the women of the Church will gain much valuable current information as well as education concerning the progress of the Kingdom in Mexico through the study of this volume.

Order from the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va.
Mrs. W. C. Winsborough.

Someone Forgot—A little boy living in the most poverty-stricken part of a great city found his way into a Mission Sunday School and became a Christian. Not long after, someone tried to shake his faith by asking him some puzzling questions: "If God really loves you, why don't He take better care of you? Why doesn't He tell someone to send you a pair of shoes?" Thinking a moment with tears rushing to his eyes: "I think He does tell someone, but somebody forgets."

The One-Minute Mission Talk—Is it not significant that hospitals and all intelligent medical treatments have been born in Christian lands? Every heathen land has its own variety of torture for the treatment of sickness; but they nearly all agree that it is caused by evil spirits. The Indians of South America in many places lance and beat the sick person, to drive out the demon; certain African tribes place the unfortunate case in a small hut and smoke out the demon (incidentally killing the invalid). In China they frequently set up a fearful noise with yelling and beating tin cans to drive away the demon. But sympathy is almost unknown except for their nearest and dearest. It is only Christ who teaches love and a sense of responsibility.

Brooklyn could send a doctor to assist every doctor now on the foreign field, and still have 596 left. New York City has 500 nurses in its Department of Health alone, while Protestant missions have only 500 in the whole foreign field. Is that fair? Does a population of one city (large though it is) need more than a billion heathen? Africa has 15 women doctors among 136,000,000 people; China has 93 among 400,000,000, and India has 159 among 315,000,000. And these people all feel pain as keenly as you and I. Why must they wait? Would you not care, if it were your child that had to be thrown out into the jungle when sick, for the wild beasts to devour, because you knew there was no hope of curing it or even easing its last moments, and you teared the demons of death? But that is occurring constantly in Africa, where the witch doctor seldom attempts to heal even trivial complaints. O Christ, thou Good Physician, quicken our hearts to care as thou dost care!—S. S. Times.

Ways of Helping the Sick—In answer to those asking what and how to send articles out to Korea, I will make the following suggestions:

For the Ellen Laving Graham Hospital, Kwangju, send most any form of Red Cross supplies, such as sheets, towels, operating gowns, plain domestic aprons, counterpanes. We have a staff of 25 and each one must have a gown or apron, as they work in the hospital. Some society could prepare the linen for the beds, the sheets, pillow cases, towels, etc. Send these articles to Miss Georgia Hewson, Kwangju, the nurse in charge.

For the Sunday School, send the ordinary S. S. picture cards, and bright postal cards and the large picture scrolls. Do not send the ordinary literature in English for Koreans read Korean. Peloubet's notes are used by some missionaries, but find out first if they are needed. Send such to most any member of Kwangju station.

For the Lepers: Sewing needles, scissors, shears, thimbles are most useful and appreciated. For the boys, pocket knives and harps or pencils. Old spectacles are useful for there are 500 chances to one that your old glasses will fit some leper.

Doctor's gowns or the ordinary kitchen apron of good domestic are most useful. Bandages or old sheets for making same. Our good American friend in response to our call, sent out more than 2,000 vests; now we wish the pants that go with these vests, and if you have them, the coat and overcoat also. Have bundle day in your church and all who can bring old clothes; then your society can have the job of packing and posting the articles.

As a suit of clothes costs us about $4.00 in Korea, you can send an old suit and realize that you are donating at least $4.00.

Do not send more than 11 pounds in one package, but just as many packages as you like, and mark them, "Gifts for Lepers, Kwangju, Korea, Asia, care of J. K. Unger."

We are in great need of an organ for the leper hospital and your church may have an old one that has been displaced by the pipe organ. Send it out to us.

For any further particulars write to

Yours very truly,
Columbus, Ark. R. M. Wilson.

The leper said to Christ, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." He is pleading today to you and to me, "If thou wilt, thou canst help make me clean." God has given us a splendid remedy now for this dreaded disease and we are making the miserable outcast lepers well, happy and strong Christian citizens, and teaching them to make a living by various trades. Won't you help give happiness to the large number of lepers who are waiting in front of our home in groups of from five to as many as 40 at times, and they are often sleeping right there for weeks in the cold and snow, occasionally dying there because there is no money to take them in. It costs $4.00 per month to provide food, clothes, etc. In the huts it costs only 50 cents per month, as only food is provided. Won't you save one of these needy ones or tide him through the winter? Sixty-five were sent out this summer from the home because the funds had run out. We hope these 65 can be taken back before cold weather comes.

R. M. Wilson.

To S. S. Teachers and Superintendents—Little Kim last year brought 418 new pupils to Sunday School at Kwangju and one of the instruments used in this work was the old Sunday School picture cards that are used in many of our churches in this country. It's like this: He goes up to some little heathen child half clothed, in the street, and says, "Hi there, Dabo (Dabo means he cries well), put on your shirt and come to Sunday School and we will give you one of these pretty American cards." And very soon he with a dozen more have come to Sunday School to receive one of the cards. He sees how neat, clean and well clothed the other children are and very soon he will clean up too and come to church and become a regular member.

These cards are in great demand and of much service in our work. Also bright postal cards, the large picture roll used in the Sunday School. Look about your church and gather all such and send to any of the following members of Kwangju, Korea: Misses Margaret Martin, Miss Anna McQueen, Miss E. Shepping, Mrs. L. T. Newland, Miss Georgia Hewson. Or select some members of any of the other four stations.

Mr. Whang Sang Ho is the superintendent of our largest Sunday School and he will be glad to receive the above articles as well as Red Cross buttons, or buttons and badges of any nature which he uses as prizes for the best scholars and rewards. He is doing a very fine work in the Sunday School and as bookkeeper at the Ellen Laving Graham Hospital.

Ordinary Sunday School literature in English is not of use though 1922 Peloubet's Sunday School Notes can be sent to a few of the missionaries as helpers. The 1922 Peloubet's are used in Korea in 1923, one year later.

If you wish any further particulars about this, write to Columbus, Ark. R. M. Wilson, M.D.

Kwangju, Korea—1. Our Hospital—Can you imagine the alarm in an American hospital at the diagnosis "Leprosy"? It is not an infrequent thing in our hospital. The Ella Lavine Graham Hospital feels keenly the great loss in the death of Mr. C. E. Graham, of Greenville, S. C.

Our nurse is still digging at the language; she was paying off a workman, and intended to ask him if he had twenty sen, but she asked him if he had "hookworm."

Many thanks to the friends who helped to furnish the Foreign Patients' Room at the Hospital. A new mattress, bed, pillows and window shades have just come.

While Dr. Wilson is at home, the medical work at the Ella Lavine Graham Hospital is in charge of a fine young Christian native doctor, Dr. C. K. Rowe, a graduate of Severance Union Medical College.

2. Our Leper Hospital—We now have in the Leper Colony 241 men and boys, and 185 women and children. When the winter comes we will be overrun with applicants for entrance.

Last month four recited the Shorter Catechism and two the longer Catechism. Forty are now studying the Catechism.

There are 67 pupils in our day school at the Leper Colony, with four teachers.

The cost of supporting a leper last month was $3.50. This includes food, clothing, medicine, home and fuel. God is richly blessing the work.

We are making cloth now and hope in the future to make all they wear. The women make the cloth into clothing.

FREE YEAR BOOKS

For the last three months of the fiscal year, January, February, March, we are making a special offer of six 1922-23 Year Books Free with each 30-cent subscription for at 10 cents a month for the two programs, Auxiliary and Circle. Those who do not know the Year Book may thus have a chance to try it at small cost.

PROGRAM LITERATURE

The Woman's Auxiliary,
256-259 Field Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

THE PRAYING CHRIST

A beautiful devotional study rich in spiritual truth is the little leaflet The Praying Christ, written by Rev. H. Tucker Graham, D.D., of Florence, S. C.

It portrays the prayer-life of the Master in various crises of His career on earth and very aptly makes a practical application of the result of such a habit of prayer in any life today. The Baptismal Scene, Choosing the Apostles, and the Transfiguration Scene are among the studies discussed and held up for example.

On this leaflet Mrs. W. C. Winsborough based the devotionals that so strengthened and delighted her hearers every morning during the summer at the Montreat School of Missions.

Secretaries for the Promotion of Spiritual Life in the Auxiliaries will find these studies full of program material, and no home with a family altar should let the opportunity for securing one pass unheeded. Price, 10 cents a copy. Order from The Woman's Auxiliary, 256-259 Field Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

1923 PRAYER CALENDARS

The recognized fundamental need of the Church today is more prayer. The power of prayer is unlimited, but it must be the kind of prayer Christ taught. Each person who came to Him for aid was taught to ask definitely, intelligently as well as believingly, for the thing wanted.

If every home in the Church were praying every day for a certain definite thing, what a power that intelligent prayer would be! And if every home in the Church were praying the SAME DAY for the SAME DEFINITE THING, what an infinitely greater power that concentrated prayer would be!

Such concerted prayer can be practiced only by means of a prayer list, and this the Prayer Calendar furnishes. It contains a brief outline of the work of every Executive Agency of the Assembly with the names of the missionaries in both Home and Foreign Fields and their various places of service. "What the world needs today is, not only more missionaries, but the outpouring of God's Spirit on every one whom He has sent out to work for Him in the foreign field."

No home in the Church should be without one of these Calendars. They are artistic in coloring and composition and would make a charming New Year gift for family or friend as well as a deeply significant one.

Price, 15 cents a copy, $1.50 a dozen. Order from Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va.

"THE STRENUOUS LIFE"

That is your father, dear, just going out the door; Oh, he's been living here for seven years or more! In business he's so deep he has no time to fret With little girls, but keep up hope—we'll meet him yet.

That is your mother, dear, just getting in the car, She knows that you are here and also who you are! But what with clubs to meet and bridge to play, you see, With hours so short and fleet, she's turned you o'er to me.

But there, my dear, don't fret, or let those blue eyes blur; Sometime I know you'll get acquainted, too, with her. Why, sometimes in the night, when angels vigil keep, She asks if you're all right and when you went to sleep.

I think you'd like them both, I think they'd both like you. But what with "higher growth" and many things to do, They're simply rushed to death, but there, my dear, don't cry,

If you live long enough we'll meet them by and by.

—James W. Foley.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

JANUARY 7, 1923

JESUS HEALING ON THE SABBATH

Lesson: Luke 13. Printed Text: Luke 13:10-17

GOLDEN TEXT—"It is lawful to do well on the Sabbath day."—Matt. 12:12.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

10 And he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath.

11 And, behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself.

12 And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity.

13 And he laid his hands on her: and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God.

14 And the ruler of the synagogue answered with indignation, because that Jesus had healed on the sabbath day, and said unto the people, There are six days in which man ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath day.

15 The Lord then answered him, and said, Thou hypocrite doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering?

16 And ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the sabbath day?

17 And when he had said these things, all his adversaries were ashamed: and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 18. Wherein consists the sinfulness of that estate wherinto man fell?

A. The sinfulness of that estate wherinto man fell, consists in the guilt of Adam's first sin, the want of original righteousness, and the corruption of his whole nature, which is commonly called original sin, together with all actual transgressions which proceed from it.

There are many reasons for seeking the sanctuary. Where God is worshipped and His Word expounded we may get light when we are in darkness. We may obtain strength when conscious of weakness. We may get guidance when in perplexity as to truth or duty. We may secure comfort when in sorrow or bereavement. We sometimes make our infirmities an excuse for not attending the house of God. But the woman mentioned in our lesson, despite her sore infirmity, sought the synagogue on the Sabbath because she was a daughter of Abraham, there met Jesus and received help and blessing that she had not anticipated. We may with profit attend to the Woman's Condition; Jesus' Love and Sympathy; The Rulers' Hypocrisy; The Healing and Results.

I. The Woman's Condition

She was in large measure paralyzed, "bowed together and in no wise could lift up herself." She no doubt suffered severe pain as well as disability in moving. For 18 years she had been in that condition. On account of the lapse of time she may have despaired of being any better. We are told too that Satan had thus afflicted her, and had "bound her thus these many years." Exactly what agency he had in her infirmity we do not know. But we are informed that God for wise purposes of His own does permit him to tempt and afflict saints. He visited upon Job sore calamities with Divine consent, and yet Jehovah put a limit to his destructive power. The woman's condition was in many respects distressing.

II. Jesus' Love and Sympathy

Some may gaze on disability and suffering without emotion. Not so with Jesus. He felt for the afflicted woman pitying love. Her infirmity and pangs excited in Him deep compassion. Deprivation, want and pain ever produced in Him profound pity. When He saw the multitudes wandering in ignorance and error like sheep without a shepherd, "He had compassion on them." As this woman was "a daughter of Abraham," and shared his faith and piety, He loved her not only with the love of pity, but with that of complacency and delighted in her graces. Christ too had sympathy with her troubles and distress. He could share in her emotions and participate in the deprivations from which she suffered and in the pains which she endured. It soothes pain to know that we have sympathizing friends. "Jesus is the same yesterday, today and forever." "We have a High Priest who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, having been tempted in all points like as we are yet without sin." Christ is an active sympathy prompting efficient help.

III. The Ruler's Hypocrisy

A hypocrite is a pretender claiming to possess what does not belong to him. The ruler of the synagogue pretended to a zeal for Sabbath observance which he did not practice. He claimed that no sort of work for relieving suffering or want should be done on the Sabbath day. Jesus showed him that this was not so because that he and his brethren led their ox or ass for watering on the Sabbath day. Christ argues that if animals' needs should be cared for on the Sabbath, much more should a suffering woman and "a daughter of Abraham" be relieved from a bond inflicted upon her by Satan for 18 years. The ruler could not assert that Jesus had done any work in the ordinary sense of the term, for He only commanded the woman "to lift up herself." The ruler addressed his reproof to the people as to coming to be healed. He dared not rebuke the Master for the healing done, for Jesus as the Son of God is "Lord even of the Sabbath day," and best able to declare how it should be observed. The ruler's pretended zeal for the Sabbath was intended to cloak his envy, hatred and opposition to Jesus. Therefore Christ called him a hypocrite.

IV. The Healing and Results

The woman was healed immediately and completely. By coming to the sanctuary she received far more than she expected. She met Jesus, was relieved from a grievous burden of years, and had her faith confirmed and strengthened. Jesus' Divine power to help and save was demonstrated. His ability to supplement human disability was rendered conspicuous. His command to do a thing that was humanly impossible was accompanied by a Divine power that made it feasible. Thus it is with a repentance, faith and a new obedience. Hypocrisy was exposed and condemned. What may be rightfully done on the Sabbath day was manifested. A suffering saint was relieved and made glad. The adversaries of Jesus were confounded and made ashamed. The people rejoiced and God in Christ was glorified.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

THE WORD OF GOD

M., Jan. 8—Power of the Word: Heb. 4:12, 13.

T., Jan. 9—Prophecy Proves It: Jer. 36:1-8.

W., Jan. 10—Jesus Believed It: John 5:37-47.

T., Jan. 11—Testimony of the Writers: Rev. 1:1-3.

F., Jan. 12—Character of the Word: Rom. 15:4, 5.

S., Jan. 13—Experience Proves It: Matt. 5:18-20.

Sun., Jan. 14—Topic: Why Do You Think the Bible Is the Word of God? II Tim. 3:14-17.

It is said that Lord Byron, the noted English poet, wrote the following words on the fly-leaf of his Bible, quoting from Sir Walter Scott's "Monastery":

Within that awful volume lies,
The mystery of mysteries!
Happiest they of human race,
To whom God has granted grace
To read, to fear, to hope, to pray,
To lift the latch, to force the way:
And better had they ne'er been born
Who read to doubt, or read to scorn.

The most instructive character in the Bible for the young is Timothy. He had a pious mother, Eunice, and as good a grandmother, Lois, both of whom took great pains to teach the boy the Holy Scriptures, which Paul here declares to be the inspired Word of God, and the guide of character as well as the sign-post toward eternal life. What reasons have we for believing that this Book is divinely inspired, and that it contains the revealed will of God to man for his salvation?

We may look for the evidences of the inspiration of the Scriptures under three heads, the external, or evidences of the Bible found outside the Scriptures; the internal, or evidences found inside the Bible, and the practical, or the evidences found in the influences of the Bible in every-day life.

I. The External Evidences

The external evidences of the Bible are history, prophecy, miracles, and the preservation of the Scriptures.

The Bible contains the history of the human race, telling of its origin, the great disaster to it in the flood, the division of the race into nations at Babel, the relation of the early nations and the later nations to the history of the Jews. The ancient histories of other peoples as recorded in their writings prove the correctness of the Bible. Also, the old monuments, the pyramids, and clay tablets, found in digging into old mounds and hills show that the Bible was right.

Again, prophecies uttered in the Bible were fulfilled, though the prophecies were spoken hundreds of years before, as, for instance, the destruction of Babylon, by Cyrus. The miracles of Christ are a proof of the Bible. These works of Jesus are fully proved by many witnesses, and beyond question reveal His supernatural power, and being a part of the Bible story, prove that the Bible must be true, and therefore the Word of God. The wonderful way in which the Bible has been preserved for us, though it is so old, dating back to Moses' time, 1,500 years before Christ, shows that God has taken care of the Bible Himself.

II. Internal Evidences of the Bible

The sublime and beautiful language of the Bible, its earnest and sincere purpose to instruct and uplift mankind, its idea of God, its history of the moral condition of mankind, and its gospel by which it hopes to relieve this condition, are the internal evidences of the truth of the Bible.

The language of the Bible, or the Bible simply as literature, gives it the place as the Book of books. Its stories, precepts, and doctrines are the most elevating forces of education. No other idea of God is satisfactory to mankind, but the idea of Scripture, which places Him as supreme in power and perfect in character. The Bible story of man's fall and his misery and depravity as the results of that fall, find observation and experience full confirmation. The gospel story of the birth, life, death, and resurrection of Christ fits in with the lost and ruined estate of man. All these things prove that the Bible is the Word of God.

III. The Practical Evidences of the Bible

While there are external and internal evidences of the Bible that are conclusive and satisfying, yet after all the most satisfactory proof of the Bible lies in our own experience with it.

We are taught by the Bible the only moral system that fits our own moral nature, the Bible's exaltation of truth, honesty, purity, reverence for authority, unselfishness and service to mankind, finds complete approval in our hearts. Its impulse toward moral reformation stirs our consciences and spiritual desires. The Bible finds us unable to meet the demands of our own moral nature, and much less the demands of God's law, and so it provides for the pardon of sin, and the regeneration of the soul. It makes a reformation possible, and outlines those precepts that, as Paul says, make the Scriptures profitable for teaching us the truth, for reproving and convincing us of our sins, for correcting and reforming the life, and instructing us in the right ways of conduct and service, thus furnishing us for a perfect human career. These practical evidences of the Bible are as convincing proof as we need, for they supply us with a pattern for a moral life, they impel us to a life of successful achievement, and fill our hearts with hope for eternal salvation through Jesus Christ our Saviour.

The best book on this topic is Alexander's Evidences of Christianity. Write Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Box 1176, Richmond, Va.

SUNRISE IN AZTEC LAND

Dr. Juan Ortiz Gonzales, Editor
La Nueva Democracia (The New Democracy),
New York, N. Y.

This is the title of a new book by W. A. Ross. It is not a large volume, containing only 244 pages, but in those pages the background of Mexico's history is well and picturesquely presented to the reader, along with a study of those men, movements and influences which have created the Mexico of today. This new Mexico is a striking and promising personality among the nations, and Mr. Ross has described its making with keen insight.

Not the least interesting part of his story is the part the Presbyterian Church has taken in guiding this modern development in Mexico. With the other Protestant bodies, he claims that it has been the fostering and nurturing influence behind the progressive movement that is sweeping the nation forward. Those well acquainted with the riches of Mexico's past will take delight in the wise selection of material used in the presentation of the historical background to the reader. Those to whom the history of Mexico is a sealed book will be equally pleased by the concise resume of the pertinent facts of the nation's past which is presented to them in charming literary style.

Mr. Ross has rendered a distinct service to us as citizens, as Christians, and as Presbyterians. As citizens, because the future of the world depends largely upon developments in the western hemisphere. Yet the influence of America can never become a trusted and efficient leadership unless it follows humanitarian principles in its dealing with its neighbors on this continent. The standard by which our motives in foreign

(Continued on page 10)

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

THE DAVIDSON CAMPAIGN

In addition to the list of churches that we published last week as having subscribed their quota to the Davidson Campaign we would name also Rockfish Church in Wilmington Presbytery as having met her quota in full. This is one of the old churches of the Synod, having been established in 1757, but her bow still abideth in strength.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

The address of Rev. R. M. Pegram is changed from Hazard, Ky., to 1748 Frankfort Ave., Louisville, Ky.

Rev. J. G. Anderson, D.D., has changed his address from Gainesville, Fla., to 809 South Orleans Ave., Tampa, Fla.

NEAR EAST RELIEF

Received for this cause:

Carmel Church	$ 5.00
Second Church	10.00
Cash	5.00

WEEKLY NEWS NOTES FROM BARIUM

Everybody has Christmas in his bones. Santa Claus has come to the basement. Our good friends of the First Church, Raleigh, as has been their custom for several years, are kind enough to answer all the Santa Claus letters from the children, and it is a very exciting time when the large Santa boxes arrive. They are taken to the basement where they are checked off and each child's package sent to his or her cottage. Most of the cottages have Christmas trees, and there is great excitement to know whether they will get what they asked for or not.

We feel sure that this is going to be a very enjoyable holiday. Lists of the different children have been asked for by societies and individuals.

School closed Thursday for two weeks' holiday. Quite a number of the teachers will spend the holidays with friends and at home. Those leaving this week are as follows: Miss Shockency, to Eminence, Ky.; Miss Smith, to Orlando, Fla.; and Mrs. Aston and daughter, to New York.

The latest arrivals are: Judy McCoy, Mary Alice and Margaret Moose, and Winfred, Lillian and Margaret Wicker.

Miss Brown, the nurse, has her hands full, and it does not look as if she would have very much rest during the holidays. There is quite a bit of "flu," and while there has been no one seriously ill at any time, some have been and are still right sick, and when a nurse is on both night and day duty, it keeps her pretty busy.

Mr. Johnston went over to Greensboro, Tuesday night on business. He spent Sunday in Winston-Salem.

Lynn Hostettler, who is a student at Oak Ridge, is home for the holidays. His mother and sister are teachers at the Orphanage, and have a cottage here.

This is the coldest morning we have had. The thermometer registered 22 degrees on the office porch at 8 o'clock.

NORTH CAROLINA

First Church, Durham—President Walter W. Moore, D.D., of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., will preach the sermon this evening at the joint annual communion service which is held the first Sabbath of the year by the four Presbyterian churches of this city.

Charlotte—One of the features of the Christmas time in this city was the Christmas music programs that were given in the various churches on Christmas eve.

The carols and hymns appropriate to the season were sung by the choirs with fine effect. Possibly one of the most beautiful programs of the many heard was rendered by the choir of the Second Church, under the direction of Mrs. Coral Hayner-Baker, the organist, this being repeated at the evening service on New Year's eve. The Second Church boasts some of the best voices in the city, and on this occasion the choir was augmented by a number of other voices.

The program began with "The First Christmas" (Barnby) and ended with "The Hallelujah Chorus" (Handel), and was most beautiful throughout. The pastor, Dr. McGeachy, on December 31st, preached a New Year's sermon that was thought-provoking and that carried an earnest appeal to men to accept Christ before launching out on the uncertain voyage of the New Year.

Highland Church, Fayetteville—We came to Fayetteville on October 27th, to begin our work as pastor of the Highland congregation, and truly our "lines have fallen in pleasant places." We have found a people with the will to work and our heart has been constantly encouraged by their loyalty and the splendid spirit in which they have followed our leadership, and this has been true with reference to the young people as well as those more mature in the service of the Kingdom. The Sunday School is growing steadily, under the careful planning of a Weekly Workers' Conference; the men are making their Bible class grow each week; the Christian Endeavor societies, both Junior and Senior are wide-awake; and all the services of public worship are well-attended. Not satisfied with moving us into a new manse with every modern convenience, and stocking our pantry with the good things of Cumberland County, they celebrated

Church News

Christmas by calling us to the front door at 6:00 a. m., where we found a thoroughly equipped Ford touring car with a card attached "From Your Folks." There are no words in which a pastor can adequately express his appreciation to such "Folks," but we are praying that we may merit their confidence and return their kindness, by being a true Shepherd and leading them in the service of Him whose presence fills every life with joy unspeakable. Sam K. Phillips, Pastor.

Philadelphia—The first Sunday of November was communion day at Philadelphia Church. The main body of the church was crowded to its utmost capacity. Preparatory services began on Friday night before and continued through Sunday night. One man, the head of a family, was received on profession of faith and two by letter. Ten infants were dedicated to the Lord.

Rev. J. J. Brown, of Rock Hill, S. C., a brother of the pastor did the preaching.

This church is very much alive and is progressing in various lines. The women are organized on the Auxiliary plan, composed of five circles, which have done an excellent work. One of their recent accomplishments is rebuilding of a rock and cement wall around the two cemeteries at a cost of $1,200.

The men have also been busy. They have done some needed repairs on the church and put down a deep well on church and school grounds. A house has also been repaired on church ground for sexton who has been employed for church and school.

The Brotherhood class of the Sunday School has for its motto: "We Do Things." The first thing they did was to raise funds for a new piano. They were successful and in a short time installed a new Cable piano.

This church has had a Laymen's Association for some time. Out of this association two evangelistic clubs have been formed. These clubs are devoting their efforts at present to the outlying territory in the congregation. Much good is anticipated from these consecrated brethren.

Greensboro—With already a number of eventful happenings recorded at the Church by the Side of the Road this year, perhaps the night of December 17th will for sometime to come be outstanding in the memory of the large congregation which gathered on that evening. The occasion was a "White Gift Service," in connection with the pageant arranged by the Louisville Committee, entitled "Together They Shall Sing."

A high objective had been set up in the agreement that all hands would work for a liberal offering of life in the white gift feature of the program.

The pageant was artistically staged and beautifully enacted. Then came the various departments of the Sunday School with their "white gifts"—mainly canned peaches wrapped in white paper, for Barium Orphanage. About 150 white packages were placed upon the platform, each pupil bearing one in hand. The young men's class brought up a whole case of peaches. Next followed gifts of money for the orphanage, amounting to $35.15.

At this point the pastor called for the life gifts for the Master. First, the suggestion for re-dedicated lives brought to their feet the entire church membership who were present, and many visitors. Then the call was made for those who would for the first time make a profession of their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and 19 persons came forward, taking their stand around the platform. Finally the call was made for those who would send for their church letters and join by transfer, to which 13 responded by coming forward and standing back of those already grouped about the pulpit.

The 32 men, women and young people crowded the space up front and made an impressive picture, while the officers of the church listed their names. There upon the center of the platform was a manger, fragments of straw showing above its sides, while an incandescent light in the bottom of the manger cast its glow upward in the semi-darkness. Piled around this were the white packages of fruit, and close by the money offering, while surrounding the platform stood the "gifts of life," all in the presence of a re-dedicated congregation.

In such a setting and under such blessing from God, it was not surprising that the pastor broke forth in a prayer of gratitude and praise which was not on the program. "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name!" the closing hymn was sung with a fervor of spirit rarely shown even in song, and the congregation broke up in a veritable love feast.

—(From Friend O'Man for January.)

SOUTH CAROLINA

Charleston, Second Church—Dr. R. A. Torrey, the famous world preacher will conduct a series of meetings in this church beginning January 7th. The following is Dr. Torrey's creed:

"I preach four great truths. I preach the whole Bible from cover to cover. I accept everything; except nothing. I preach the power of the blood of Christ to save—the doctrine of the atonement. I preach the personality of the Holy Spirit. I preach the power of prayer."

In these days of doctrinal straddlers, such a statement is refreshing.

Charleston, Second Church—Sunday January 7th, will be a day of great interest in church circles of Charleston, and particularly among the Presbyterians of this city, while at the Second Presbyterian Church Rev. J. W. Hickman, pastor, this date will be of special significance, because the Torrey-Curry services will begin then, continuing daily, at morning and evening hours, through Sunday, January 21, and affording thousands of people, men, women and children the opportunity of hearing one of the greatest and best known preachers of the United States and Europe, for Dr. R. A. Torrey, of Los Angeles, enjoys an international reputation, and his voice has been heard in many parts of the world.

The singing will be held by Rev. C. P. Curry, a Methodist minister and evangelist, who is well known through the South as a soloist and a director of congregational singing.

Charleston—The annual community Christmas tree services were held on the Citadel Green and the address of the occasion was delivered by Rev. J. W. Hickman, pastor of the Second Church.

Mr. Hickman used the 14th verse of the second chapter of St. Luke's Gospel as the basis of his remarks:

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will toward men."

Mr. Hickman began by briefly sketching the coming of Christ, telling of His coming being prophesied by the prophets, and in the course of history His birth. He talked of "peace on earth," directing attention to the fact that there had always been wars and bloodshed on earth and a lack of peace. He said that this fact would bring the question, "Is the Prince of Peace a myth, or have the people failed to live according to His teachings?"

He said that if people refuse to accept Christ that they immediately make Him a blasphemer and an imposter. He also said that failure on the part of people to accept Christ made them anti-Christian, and that to be pleasing in the sight of God one must be Christian; must have the spirit of Christ, which is to serve and to be altruistic. Mr. Hickman declared that a man who fails to accept Christ and to have a Christian spirit is just as guilty in the sight of God as those who commit social sins, such as murder and theft.

Fountain Inn—This church has had the rare treat of enjoying the Gospel of Christ as presented by a Canadian evangelist, Rev. F. A. Robinson, D. D., for six days, who for 13 years has been secretary of Evangelism, now doing "special work in association with congregations throughout the dominion," a minister richly blessed in personal Christian experience and service; with a message, "enriched by a wealth of illustrations from his extensive travel," and knowledge of "the varied social conditions existing among the people of prairies and mountains, forests and fields," lumber and mining camps; a man of splendid mentality, "a quiet, direct, and easily understood speaker;" a singer of no mean attainment; an excellent choir trainer and musical director, so interpreting the hymns as to make the song-message most effective; a preacher who offers a Saviour who can and does save to the uttermost.

His story of personal knowledge and experience of the power of the simple Gospel presented to the "lumber-jack" and coal digger steeped in iniquity and hardened in sin, is soul-cheering and thrilling. There were a number of visible results of the meeting, and we are sure the precious seed sown will yet produce a greater harvest to the honor and glory of the Lord of the harvest.

Dr. Robinson has twice toured Canada with Dr. Campbell Morgan whom he is now visiting in Athens, Ga., with whom he is planning an evangelistic tour of Australia next winter.

May the Lord raise up many such preachers.

Pastor.

APPALACHIA

White Pine—Rev. W. Bruce Doyle, a former pastor, recently visited this church for a week-end meeting, preaching five days including Sabbath, December 10th. Six members were received, four were baptized, and the Lord's supper celebrated at the Sabbath morning service. This was a happy meeting again of preacher and people.

ALABAMA

Opelika—Since the coming of Rev. W. Bruce Doyle last May this congregation has begun and finished a six thousand dollar manse. It is a seven-room, brick bungalow, located next door to the church building. This brick manse and church house with its Sabbath school apartments gives the congregation a good plant.

ARKANSAS

First Church, Texarkana—The pastor of this congregation, Dr. C. H. H. Branch was dismissed by Ouachita Presbytery at a recent called meeting in order that he might accept the pastorate of the Hyde Park Church in Tampa. For a number of years Dr. Branch has been the active pastor of this church, and he will be greatly missed not only from this work, but from the Presbytery and Synod as well, where his labors have been abundant.

Camden First—The pastor of this church, Rev. Charles Haddon Nabers, assisted the pastor of the First A. R. Presbyterian Church in Little Rock with a revival during the first week of December.

In the death of Mr. J. H. Morgan, for many years clerk of the session, the Camden church has sustained a severe loss.

At a congregational meeting held on December

15th, the following additional officers were elected: elders, Messrs. T. D. Fooks and A. L. Morgan; deacons, Messrs. G. J. Graysberg, C. I. Grayson, C. B. Hurley, Sr., Erwin McGill and John Henry Morgan.

Just before the Christmas holidays the congregation enjoyed a visit from Rev. D. W. Fooks, a brother to one of our elders and the stated clerk of the Cumberland Presbyterian General Assembly.

GEORGIA

At a recent called meeting of the Presbytery of Athens, Rev. John C. Langford was dismissed to the Presbytery of Lyons, Synod of New York, U. S. A. For three years Mr. Langford has served the churches of Comer, Danielsville and New Hope, where he has done excellent work. He has been called back to his former charge in North Rose, New York, under circumstances that indicate a clear intimation of the divine will.

S. J. Cartledge, S. C.

Menlo—We have completed one year of service in the Menlo group of churches. Last fourth Sunday was our regular communion occasion. A larger number than usual were present, and partook of the sacred emblems. Quite a number of the young people, engaged in teaching, banking, or other lines of business, were at home for the holidays. In this group of churches, consisting of Alpine (Menlo), Beersheba, and Walnut Grove, 37 have been received during the year, two by letter and 35 on profession of faith.

The pastor and wife were generously remembered during Christmas. The pastor was presented with a purse by the men, and his wife one by the members of the Auxiliary. There was quite a little pounding, besides, but this goes on all the time. The Lord has favored us with a lovely home, and we are supported by a loyal and endearing people, and the outlook for the future is bright, trusting the promises of God.

J. T. Wade.

Atlanta—A unique program was that which occupied a recent Wednesday hour when five organizations of the West End Presbyterian Church, Rev. W. S. Wilson, pastor, Atlanta, Ga., competitively reviewed Dr. McMillan's book "Unfinished Tasks," before a large and delighted audience.

The organization in the order of participation were: The Men's Association, Business Woman's Circle, Junior Christian Endeavor, Senior Christian Endeavor, and Auxiliary.

The Men's Association, under guise of a class taught by Mr. George White, elder, and member of the Assembly's Home Mission Committee, reviewed the first two chapters. Questions whose answers produced the salient facts were propounded and answered in a way that gave the impression of a fine spontaneity. The teacher using the blackboard to summarize with telling effect.

The chapter on colored missions was reviewed by the Business Woman's Circle. Two of the members met on the platform as if by accident. One had been to the Mission Study Class where Dr. McMillan's book had been studied. The other had read the book and was especially interested in the chapter on Negro Missions. One by one the members dropped in contributing their quotas to the discussion. It was agreed that the soul of the negro found expression in their religious songs. This paved the way for the singing of "Standing in the Need of Prayer."

With the assistance of charts the Junior Endeavor presented its chapter.

The cleverest idea was that of the Senior Endeavor. The boys staged a meeting of the Assembly's Home Mission Committee, each boy impersonating a member. The various sub-committees were called upon for reports. Girls costumed to represent the different races to which the committee ministers appeared to appeal for larger support. To them the committee found it necessary to reply that until the church was more liberal their requests must be refused.

The part of the Auxiliary while it involved no unique method could not have been improved upon.

The uniform merit of the presentation, and the diversity of the contestants, made the decision difficult. It was awarded to the men.

Food for meditation was contained in the overheard remark of a member of the Auxiliary. "We got what we went after, the decision does not matter."

The program required two hours. Interest was sustained throughout. The enthusiasm, good fellowship, fine men calling each other by their given names, and the splendid attention proclaimed a church active and functioning in all its parts. Under Dr. Wilson's leadership the Sunday School has added one hundred members within the year.

This plan of mission study could be copied with profit by other churches.

E. V. Tadlock.

KENTUCKY

Danville—The Evangelistic Conference held at Danville on Thursday, December 7th, was a good one. The meeting was held in the First Presbyterian Church and had delegations from Harrodsburg, Stanford, Salvisa and New Providence. Almost everybody took part and all the speeches were to the point. We feel that this conference resulted in great good and our people went back to their churches prepared to do more than ever for the cause of Evangelism. Rev. J. J. Rice, our pastor at Danville, was very helpful, and the ladies served a delicious luncheon at the noon hour.

Highland—Dr. R. L. Telford, of Richmond, recently closed a meeting at Highland in West Lexington Presbytery. The meeting resulted in 40 additions to the Presbyterian Church and tremendous good to that section of the State. Dr. Telford is a forceful preacher of the Gospel and a most lovable man. Wherever he goes he leaves the impress of the Gospel upon the people.

LOUISIANA

New Orleans—A feature in many of the churches in the closing days of November was the visit of a bevy of Indians from our orphanage at Goodland, Oklahoma, led by Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Springs. It was not a bunch of "ten little Injun boys," but of 12 little Indian girls, from 8 to 16 years of age. They sang, and recited, and stood tests of their knowledge of the Bible and catechisms, in delightful meetings, suitable for either Sunday or week-days, in Canal St., St. Charles St., Third, Claiborne Ave., First, Prytania St., Memorial, Carrollton, and Metairie Ridge churches, in Westminster chapel, and in Newcomb College. They were entertained in the homes of the people of New Orleans, one or two together. They delighted the large audiences that heard them, and their presence in homes showed how carefully they had been trained in the institution which gives them a happy home. Their coming was not designed to be for the purpose of raising money, though liberal collections were voluntarily made, but to show many of the churches which support them the nature of the Goodland work. At each meeting Mr. Spring, their superintendent, himself an Indian, and for 26 years an active ruling elder in the Hugo Church and identified with the best movements of the church as well as of the former Choctaw nation and the present great State of Oklahoma, made an address of exceptional interest and power on Presbyterianism, Christian Education, and Home Missions. The interest of all the churches was quickened and most wholesome and enlivening entertainment was given to both mature and young people in all the congregations.

TENNESSEE

Bluff City—Rev. Trigg A. M. Thomas, D. D., General Evangelist, after spending most of the month of December with his people at Bluff City, is now conducting meetings in Kentucky. Dr. Thomas has promised to conduct the Marengo County Union Camp Meeting and Training School for Christian Workers, at Dixon's Mills, Alabama, next summer. He has also promised to conduct the Carroll County Union Tabernacle meeting at Carrollton, Mississippi, next August. All communications for Dr. Thomas should be sent to him at Bluff City, Tenn., and not Kansas City, Mo.

Bristol—The meeting in Windsor Avenue Presbyterian Church, Geo. F. Roberts, pastor, conducted by Rev. Walter K. Keys, of Cold Springs Church, near Bristol, closed December 10th, having run two weeks. Six have united with the church and others are expected. There was great good done in reconsecration on the part of the church in general and the men of the church in particular. Mr. Keys is a young man of great spiritual force as a speaker, and gave us the Gospel in simplicity as a power. He is pastor of Cold Springs Church in which he was born and reared.

Mr. Patch, a ministerial student of King College, led the singing and did it well. He has a fine voice and knows how to get the people to sing. A junior choir was a striking feature of this meeting. The last week-night service was the largest and best of all the week-night services. They made many friends in Windsor Church. These two young men have a bright future before them.

G. F. R.

WEST VIRGINIA

Franklin—This church enjoyed "seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord" for two weeks recently (December 4-17 inclusive), when Dr. Wm. C. White, of Churchville, Va., came to us and preached the old Gospel with great attractiveness and power. Dr. White assisted the former pastor of this church in a protracted meeting in March, 1916, and the entire congregation was anxious for him to return and preach for them again. Anticipating that the congregations would be large and fearing that the old church would not hold all those who would come, temporary seats were placed in the handsome new church, recently completed but not yet furnished, and there each night Dr. White preached to congregations that would have filled the old church to overflowing, compelling some to be turned away. Preparation was made for ten days preceding the coming of Dr. White. There was first the holding of cottage prayer meetings for one week and then preaching by the pastor in the church the last four nights before Dr. White came.

As for the visible results of the series of meetings; there were 50 who made profession of their faith in Jesus Christ as their Saviour and five who renewed their vows. On the last day of the mission there were received into the membership of the church 40; 38 on profession and two on certificate. The following Sunday there were received eight; seven on profession and one on certificate. Two joined other churches. The spiritual life of the church has been enriched and we feel that "the Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad." Several heads of families promised to establish the family altar.

A. P. Dickson.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Central Church of Washington—At the result of the Christmas-giving by the Sunday School at its celebration Friday night, December 15th, boxes have been sent to the mountain schools at Grundy, Va., Nacoochee, Ga., Stuart Academy, Patrick Co., Va., Claudeville, Va., and to the Presbyterian Orphan Home, Lynchburg, Va. The amount of money that had been hoped for was $500. The amount given to date (December 26th) is at least $535. The service Sunday night, December 24th, was held at 7 o'clock, instead of 8, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. Jas. H. Taylor, told to the Sunday School the story of the nativity in a way specially adapted to the little folks, who were present in large numbers and listened eagerly. There is in Washington a federation of churches to which this church has belonged until quite recently, when the connection was severed by the unanimous vote of the session, the reason being that this federation so frequently undertook to exert control or influence in matters outside of the proper function of the Church, as we Southern Presbyterians understand it.

A. H.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Central Church of Washington—The annual Christmas Giving exercises of the Sunday School were held Friday night, December 15th, in order that the gifts might reach their various destinations before Christmas. Besides books and toys, the money contributions amounted to $460.00, with perhaps a little more to come.

A. H.

PERSONALS

Rev. M. B. Lambdin has recently resigned the pastorate of the Montgomery, W. Va., Church in order to travel in the Holy Land.

While absent his wife will be with her daughter, at Victoria, Va., where all letters should be sent.

His sister, Miss Barbara Lambdin, assistant to Dr. Flynn, of Atlanta, Ga., will accompany him. They started on the trip, December 26th.

NOTICE TO PASTORS

The Anti-Saloon League of America is calling on the pastors throughout the nation to celebrate the third anniversary of National Constitutional Prohibition. The card being sent to the pastors reads thus:

"January 16, 1920—Three Years of Prohibition—January 16, 1923.

"January 16, 1923 is the third anniversary of Constitutional Prohibition in the United States. The Anti-Saloon League is asking every pastor in the nation to devote one service on Sunday, January 14, to a recognition of this anniversary. It will be a great opportunity to offset the wet propaganda of today by recounting the results of 'three years of Prohibition.' Here is an opportunity to get the facts before the American people. Will you join the pastors of the land by making this the theme of one of your sermons January 14, or preferably two or more pastors join in a union service? We will be glad to furnish you, without cost, literature that will give authentic reports of today from all sections of the country, regarding the record of these three years. Please answer at once on the attached card."

Already 200 pastors in North Carolina have agreed to hold this service, and literature has been sent to them. If you wish your church to join in this service, write us a postal requesting this literature, and it will be sent to you. R. L. Davis, Supt., Raleigh, N. C.

ATTENTION, ALL YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES!

The Young People's Department in the Standard is to begin next week. You have been hearing rumors of this probably, and now we are really to have our own section in the paper of our Synod.

This DEPARTMENT is for you and we want you to fill it. We want each local organization to send in from week to week, news notes on their activities, new plans of work, mission study classes, how they are helping the church, and so on. We want a good supply of these for the opening issue. Please get to work at once and mail to me at Davidson, N. C., something for the first issue. Mail it right away, please.

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor,
Davidson, N. C.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

Educational

Mitchell College closed on the 11th, ten days earlier than was intended, because of an order by the city council closing all the schools and places of public gatherings. This was done as a precautionary measure to forestall a possible epidemic of influenza. There was no sickness in the college, and the fall term has been remarkably free from sickness of any kind. The new infirmary has not been used at all. The work was going on most smoothly and effectively. The college will open again (D. V.) on Tuesday, January 2nd, and work will begin at 9:00 o'clock Wednesday morning, January 3rd. All the time lost by this early closing will have to be made up by extending the spring term.

The student body has received the "Mitchell Messenger," the first issue of which was due about the time school closed. Several popular lectures and plays, together with the music faculty recital, have added variety to the routine of college life. The Christmas carol service, arranged for the last Sunday before Christmas, had to be omitted, along with the annual dinner of the Senior class. This class, by the way, numbers 23. Much favorable comment has been heard concerning the changes made in the building, as well as the reorganization of the curriculum. As rapidly as possible the work in all departments will be fully standardized. It is practically assured that the only two vacancies in the dormitory will be filled after Christmas.

Peace Institute—The faculty and students of Peace Institute have all gone to their homes or for visits to friends for Christmas vacation. The session which has been held this far has been a very successful one in every way.

The days before the holidays were happy ones with anticipation of the home-going, and with the spirit of Christmas giving. A box of individual presents for the children at Balfour Orphanage was sent. Each of the servants on the place was made happy by individual presents. Contributions to the Near East, the Red Cross, the Y. W. C. A., and their needs have been met. Last year the students at Peace reached a high place in their per capita giving.

The usual custom of singing Christmas carols was observed before the last night of departure.

The play "The Two Talismans," given by the Dramatic Club, evidenced again the artistic ability of Miss Fanny Bradshaw both in the presentation and the costumes.

The Christmas carol service, one of the most beautiful parts of the school life at Peace Institute, was given by the Choral class, under the personal direction of Miss Gardner, on Tuesday evening. Amid Christmas greens and many candles, a highly artistic program, consisting of old and new carols, solos, and a beautiful anthem, was rendered. The chorus was carefully trained, singing the words so distinctly that each could be heard clearly. A very attractive number was a quartet arrangement of the Adams "O Holy Night," by Misses Martha Lee Borden, Margaret Buckingham, Sue McNair, and Elizabeth Oden, and was sung in perfect time and good tone. Miss Gardner, director of the voice department, sang "O Little Town of Bethlehem," by A. L. Barnes. Her voice is rich, pliant, and colorful, and she thrilled her audience as only one possessing such endowments could have done.

Flora Macdonald College—Miss Winifred Kirkland, of the editorial staff of the Ladies' Home Journal, visited the college last week and spoke to the students in the English classes on "Reading and Writing." A reception in her honor was given by the Woman's Club, in the college parlors.

Dean C. G. Vardell, of the Conservatory, will give an organ recital in Gastonia on the evening of January 11th, under the auspices of the Gaston County Alumnae Association, and in Albemarle on February 15th, under the auspices of the Sunday School class of Mrs. J. D. Bivens, president of the Stanley County Branch.

The annual Christmas service known as the "White Gift Service" was celebrated on last Sunday night in the auditorium, under the direction of Miss Mary Johnston. Following the opening number, a "Carol" for violin, by Miss Ruth Vardell, the college chorus of 65 voices, under the direction of Miss Mary Foreman, rendered the cantata "Bethlehem," the solo parts being taken by Miss Ellen Black and Miss Louise McCallum. Others taking part in the service were the Misses Louise Mandeville, of Georgia, and pupils of the organ and piano departments. The reading of pledges and offerings showed a total of $124 given for various charities. Rev. Mr. Black, of the Presbyterian Church, made the closing prayer.

Davidson—In response to an invitation from the Y. M. C. A. for an address before the association, Rev. Dr. J. M. Wells was here on Sunday. He filled Dr. Richards' pulpit in the morning, where he was heard by an appreciative audience in his discussion of the character of Elijah, the qualities that made him great.

Another visit to Davidson in the spring by Dr. Wells is hoped for and expected, his sermons being invariably both informing and instructive on the one hand, and forceful and thought-impelling on the other, and with it all easy and pleasant to follow.

Just prior to the Christmas recess the student body in official meeting passed by a more than two-thirds majority amendments to the constitution of this body by which not only organized hazing is forbidden, but hazing in any and all forms, and courts are established by which offenders in the Freshman class, provoking upper classmen to violation of the law, and offenders in upper classes engaging in hazing will be dealt with. The new order of procedure is a tentative measure to be tried out for several months, and with the backing that it has from an overwhelming majority of the students, there is reason to believe that it will prove popular and permanent.

News of the Week

The figures indicate a great growth in the Charlotte post office, an increase of 25 per cent over 1921. On Thursday and Friday before Christmas there were posted 290,000 letters.

On the occasion of former President Wilson's sixty-sixth birthday a delegation of five from the Woodrow Wilson Foundation extended to him birthday greetings. Among others were Hamilton Holt, Rabbi Stephens S. Wise, Mrs. Chas. E. Simonson, Mrs. Charles L. Tiffany, and Mrs. Carolina Runtz-Rees.

It is charged that the capitol at Washington is the bootleggers' Paradise. Senators and Congressmen who voted dry, are accused of violating the dry laws under cover. Indications are that an investigation will be made.

Otto H. Kahn's, New York banker, proposal that this country differentiate between seven and a half billion dollars loaned to Europe before the armistice and the two and a half billion loaned after hostilities ceased, does not appeal to Washington authorities.

Pope Pius is considering the possibility of calling an ecumenical council in Rome during 1925, the next jubilee year of the church, it was announced in the Papal encyclical.

Masked bandits, armed with sawed-off shotguns, and without regard for human life, fatally wounded Charles Linton, guard of the Denver branch of the Kansas City Federal Reserve Bank, stole $200,000 in currency of $5 denomination at the doorstep of the government mint and escaped. The robbery occupied less than a minute's time.

Recommendations that the State enter the role of peacemaker in industrial disputes through the passage of a law referring such controversies to the department of labor and legalized boards of mediation, and then the child labor law be strengthened, are contained in the annual report of M. L. Shipman, commissioner of labor and printing, to be presented to the General Assembly.

The commissioner also favors legislation providing "adequate industrial safety standards" and means of enforcing them; regular boiler inspection; passage of an eight-hour day law, and continuance and increase of the employment service bureau appropriation.

Governor Morrison has taken up with the budget commission his plan for developing the fish and oyster possibilities of eastern waters and for establishing fish hatcheries along the principal streams of the central and western sections. The amount he wants for this work is a half million dollars.

The Ku Klux Klan in Pennsylvania was outlawed by the grand lodge of Free Masons at the meeting of representatives from throughout the State.

Friends of Woodrow Wilson who are raising a $1,000,000 fund for the perpetuation of his ideals, celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday by sending him word, through a delegation which called at his S street home, that the success of their movement was assured.

At the same time, the Senate adopted a resolution offered by Senator Harris, Democrat, Georgia, expressing "pleasure and joy" at his recovery toward health. The resolution was put through quickly with a chorus of ayes from the Democratic side of the chamber, many of the Republican senators, engrossed in other matters, apparently paying no attention to its purport.

Further extension of the State's program for the development of rural high schools, additional appropriations for building purposes at State institutions of the character of Cullowhee Normal and Industrial School and Appalachian Training School, and the increase of facilities for teacher training will be among the most important recommendations the State department of education will make to the General Assembly.

The naval appropriation bill carrying a request that the President negotiate with foreign powers relative to limiting construction of war craft under 10,000 tons was passed by the House. The bill, which carries a total of $325,000,000, stood up precisely as affirmed by Chairman Kelly's sub-committee, and provides for an enlisted naval force of 86,000 the same as fixed last year.

SUNRISE IN AZTEC LAND

(Continued from page 7)

affairs are being judged in recent years is our policy toward Mexico. Thus every American citizen ought to be deeply interested in what this policy has been and what it is likely to become.

As Christians, we realize that the ties of commerce and of diplomacy are easily broken, while the enduring bond of the Gospel of Jesus Christ can tie us to another people for time and eternity. The basis of a fruitful and lasting friendship with Mexico can only be found in Christian missionary effort. As Presbyterians, we take pride in the fact that Presbyterians were the first Protestants that the great Reformation sent to the New World. Presbyterians have a peculiar opportunity in all Latin American countries because Presbyterianism was first systematized and proclaimed to the world by a French intellect, that of John Calvin. And the French influence in Latin American culture is today so strong that the basis of their civilization may be said to rest as much upon French as upon Spanish foundations. It is peculiarly easy for the Latin American to think as the French think, and he has therefore found Presbyterianism less alien to his nature than some of the other evangelical faiths.

The book is charmingly written, the material is well arranged and the presentation very suggestive.

Every Presbyterian should own the book, because he is a Presbyterian, because he is a citizen of the United States, and because he is a citizen of the world and a brother to all humanity.

It is published by the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va., in paper cover at 50 cents, and full cloth at 75 cents.

SOME ANNOUNCEMENTS ABOUT THE MARCH CANVASS

The Church at large will be interested in knowing that our committee will have off of the press soon a study book for women entitled "Christian Stewardship for Women," prepared, at our request, by Mrs. S. H. Askew, of Decatur, Ga. This little book will be taken up by the women on the 18th of February as a study book for a few weeks. It will sell for 15 cents, and will be ready for delivery by February 1st.

Our committee is strongly urging all pastors to set aside the International Sunday School Lessons, so far as the Men's Bible Classes are concerned, for four or five weeks, beginning February 18th, and substitute in the Men's Bible Classes, Cushman's Book, "The New Christian," which we can furnish at 25 cents in paper. We believe that it will be of tremendous help in the Every Member Canvass if the men of our Church will study stewardship a few weeks prior to the canvass.

An order form for printed matter and supplies is being sent out to every church in the Assembly so that each church may order what it needs without waste. Instead of sending printed matter as heretofore without a request from a church, we will ask each church to take the initiative and order its own supplies. We urge every church to get in its order at the earliest date possible. We will be in a great rush during February to serve the entire Church.

The Secretary of Stewardship in every Presbytery will be furnished by us with a duplicate of every order that comes in from the churches of his Presbytery so that he may know what is being ordered in his Presbytery, and what churches are preparing for the canvass and those that are not.

Every pastor in the Assembly is urged, not only by our committee, but by the majority of the Synods and Presbyteries, to set apart February 18th to March 18th to give his people a course of study on stewardship in its broad aspects, through pulpit, prayer meeting and Sunday School.

Let us make this the most effective canvass our Church has ever made. Every other department of our Church will be quickened by this process.

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee,
Chattanooga, Tenn. M. E. Melvin, Sec'y.

CHILDREN

HOPE SANTA WAS GOOD

Dear Standard:

I am nine years old. I am in the fourth grade at school. I go to Sunday School every Sunday I can. I hope Santa Claus came to see all of you this year and filled your stocking plum full to the top. I hope my letter will not reach the wastebasket.

Your friend,
Elizabeth Burke.

Burlington, N. C.

TO SCHOOL AT HARNETT

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl nine years old. I go to school at Harnett, my teacher's name is Miss Weaks. I go to Sunday School at the Presbyterian Church at Harnett. I guess I had better close. From your friend, Novella Byrd.

Harnett, N. C.

HELPS KEEP HOUSE

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl 11 years old. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. My teacher's name is Mrs. E. M. Bain, I like her fine. My mother is dead. Sister, papa and myself keep house I must close, wishing you happy New Year. From your friend, Mary Byrd.

Harnett, N. C.

LONGER NEXT TIME

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl nine years old and I have one brother and one sister. My brother is eleven and my sister is nearly three. My teacher is Mrs. James Macfie. We like her fine. I am in the fifth grade. I am in fear of the wastebasket. I will write a longer letter sometime soon. I want to surprise my aunt in Columbia, S. C. Your little friend,

Frances Douglas.

Avon, S. C.

A TWIN LETTER

Dear Standard:

Have you room for a letter from two little children? We have a little brother and a little sister, both smaller than we are. Neither of us have missed a day at school this year. We will close for fear of the wastebasket.

Your little friends,

Elizabeth and James Snowden Singletary.

Clarkton, N. C.

THE NEW LEAVES

"Wake up" said a clear little voice. Tommy awoke and sat up in bed. At the foot of the bed stood a boy about his own age, all dressed in white, like fresh snow. He had very bright eyes and he looked straight at Tommy.

"Who are you?" asked Tommy.

"I am the New Year!" said the boy. "This is my day and I have brought you your leaves."

"What leaves?" asked Tommy.

"The new ones, to be sure," said the New Year. "I hear bad accounts of you from daddy—"

"The Old Year, of course!" said the boy. "He said you asked too many needless questions, and I see he was right. He says you are greedy too, and that you sometimes pinch your little sister, and that one day you threw your reader into the fire. Now all this must stop."

"Oh, must it?" said Tommy. He felt frightened and did not know just what to say.

The boy nodded. "If it doesn't stop," he said, "you will grow worse and worse every year, till you grow up to a horrid man. Do you want to be a horrid man?"

"N-no!" said Tommy.

"Then you must stop being a horrid boy!" said the New Year. "Take your leaves!" and he held out a packet of what looked like copybook leaves, all sparkling white, like his own clothes.

"Turn over one of these leaves every day," he said, "and soon you will be a good boy instead of a horrid one."

Tommy took the leaves and looked at them. On each leaf a few words were written. On one it said, "Help your mother!" On another, "Don't pull the cat's tail!" On another, "Don't eat so much!" And on still another, "Don't fight Billy Jenkins!" "Oh!" cried Tommy, "I have to fight Billy Jenkins! He said—"

"Good-bye!" said the New Year. "I shall come again, when I am old, to see whether you have been a good boy or a horrid one. Remember—'Horrid boy makes horrid man;

You alone can change the plan."

He turned away and opened the window. A cold wind blew in and swept the leaves out of Tommy's hand. "Stop! stop!" he cried. "Tell me—" But the New Year was gone, and Tommy, staring after him, saw only his mother coming into the room. "Dear child," she said, "Why the wind is blowing everything about."

"My leaves! My leaves!" cried Tommy, and jumping out of bed he looked all over the room, but he could not find one.

"Never mind, said Tommy. "I can turn them just the same, and I mean to. I will not grow into a horrid man." And he didn't.—Christian Advocate.

ETHEL'S SUBSTITUTE

Tinkle, tinkle, went the telephone, and Betty lifted the receiver.

"Is this you, Betty?" asked a voice at the end of the line.

"Yes," replied Betty in her sweet, clear voice.

"Well, this is Ethel. Say, Betty, I'm awfully sorry, but I won't be able to go with you this afternoon, as we planned. Cousin Stell has just arrived for a visit and I can't possibly get away. Too bad, for I did want to see 'Daddy Longlegs.' Can't you substitute someone in my place?"

Betty's voice sounded just a little mournful, although she tried to keep the joy in it.

"I'm afraid not, it's so late; and I'm sorry, too. I wanted to go with you. We both loved the book, and, while mother does not approve of all moving pictures, she wanted me to see this one. Well, we must make the best of it. Good-bye."

A moment later Betty stood in the middle of the room and debated. She was dressed for the street, for she had expected to start in a very few minutes. It was too late to ask anyone else. Mother had gone out to make some calls, so she couldn't ask her.

She went out into the kitchen for a paper she wanted. There was Mrs. Plummer just putting on her shabby old coat and hat. Betty smiled at her.

"Is the washing all done?" she asked.

Mrs. Plummer nodded. "Yes, the last piece is on the line. It's been a wonderful day for drying too."

Betty looked at her reflectively—at the hair streaked with gray under the old hat, at the water-soaked hands, the sagging, weary shoulders.

"Are you very tired, Mrs. Plummer?" she asked gently.

Mrs. Plummer shook her head. "Not so very. I got through early today" She smiled across at Betty. "This is one of the best places on my list," she went on happily. "Your ma always gives me such a good dinner, and serves it with kindness, which is the finest sauce in the world. And you are going to be just like her, Miss Betty. You already have her kind ways and her smile." She paused. "Are you going out too?"

"I was," replied Betty, "until my friend disappointed me, Mrs. Plummer," she said suddenly. "Wouldn't you like to go with me to see a moving picture this afternoon? It's 'Daddy Longlegs.' I know it will be good, because the book is."

Mrs. Plummer stared. "You're asking me to go with you to see the picture, Miss Betty?" she asked.

Betty nodded. "Yes. Why not? My friend Ethel, who was going, had a cousin come on an unexpected visit, and I want a substitute."

Mrs. Plummer flushed. "If you really want me, dearie," she said, "I'd be delighted to go."

"I really do," smiled Betty, "and we'll start at once."

* * *

After supper that evening the telephone rang. Betty again took up the receiver.

"This is Ethel," said a voice on the line. "I wanted to ask you if you saw 'Daddy Longlegs.'"

"Yes," replied Betty. "I went."

"Alone?"

"No; I substituted someone in your place."

"Who?" demanded Ethel. "Amy or Mabel?"

"Neither of them," was the reply. "I took, in your place, Mrs. Plummer, mother's washerwoman."

"Betty Pryor!" cried an astonished voice. "You didn't!"

"But I did," said Betty.

"Well you are the strangest girl," declared Ethel.

But Betty, as she recalled the look of pleasure on Mrs. Plummer's tired face as she sat side by side with her that afternoon, was not sorry that she had substituted her in Ethel's place. For Betty was, as Mrs. Plummer had said, very like her mother.—Ex.

TO BABY LAND

"How many miles to Baby Land?"

"Any one can tell;

Up one flight,

To the right;

Please to ring the bell."

"What can you see in Baby Land?"

"Little folks in white—

Downy heads,

Cradle beds,

Faces pure and bright."

"What do they do in Baby Land?"

"Dream and wake and play.

Laugh and crow,

Shout and grow;

Jolly times have they!"

"What do they say in Baby Land?"

"Why, the oddest things;

Might as well

Try to tell

What a birdie sings!"

"Who is the Queen of Baby Land?"

"Mother, kind and sweet;

And her love,

Born above,

Guides the little feet."

—George Cooper.

BOBBY'S "REALLY-TRULY MAGIC"

Bobby was in a bad humor, and in a corner pouting.

When his mother came home from market, she noticed the cloud which overshadowed the usually bright face of her boy, and asked, "Why, what's the matter, sonny?"

"Nobody'll do a thing for me," came the sour reply, while a big tear slowly trickled down the boy's cheek.

"Well, well, perhaps we can change things a bit. Wait until I take off my hat and coat, and we'll talk the matter over. I think I know a bit of magic which will do the trick."

"Magic," repeated Bobby to himself, after mother had vanished into the kitchen, "magic—well, what on earth does mother mean?"

He was anxious for her to return. "Magic" stories were his favorites. He was anxious to hear this one.

"Oh, mother! Please tell me the magic story!" he cried when she returned.

"Oh, my dear, it isn't much of a story; just a little secret or magic word which I want to whisper in your ear."

More mystified than ever, Bobby held his ear close to mother while she whispered something to him. The tears weren't flowing any more, and Bobby wiped his eyes, grinned, and then jumped up and ran to the kitchen.

"Oh, Sarah," he cried, smiling his brightest smile, "won't you please give me a glass of milk?"

"Why, of course I will," replied the cook, hastening to get the nice cold milk.

Bobby took the milk, gave cook a hearty "Thank you, Sarah," and hastened back into the room where his mother was sewing.

"It works, mother!" he cried, gleefully. "I'm going to try it all day."

Away he ran to play. In a short time, as Bobby was busy swinging in the yard, under the shady trees, the rope broke, and he was landed on his back on the grass. He wasn't hurt a bit, but it was so provoking to have his swing break just as he was having a good time!

Running toward the barn, he remembered the "magic" word.

"Oh, John," he called to the hired man, "my swing's broken. Won't you please come and fix it for me?"

John was very busy just then, and hesitated a bit, but seeing the bright smile on the little boy's face, and hearing the magic word, he laid down his tools and hastened to fix the swing. "Thank you, John," called Bobby, and the hired man smiled back, and said he was glad to do it.

All day long Bobby used the magic word. When evening came mother said:

"Well, Bobby, boy, how does the magic word work?"

"Just fine, mother dear! Only I've found that there's another word to be used with yours. One to get done what you want done now, and the other to get something done the next time. You see, I say 'please' first, and when I get what I want, I say, 'Thank you,' too.

"They're the first 'really-truly' magic words I've ever heard of," said Bobby. Then he added, with a bright smile:

"Mother, won't you please let me say 'Thank you' again?"—Chester E. Shuler, in S. S. Times.

PATIENCE

How smooth the sea beach pebbles are!

But—do you know

The ocean worked a hundred years

To make them so

And I once saw a little girl

Sit down and cry

Because she could not cure a fault

With one small "try." —Jewels.

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Lane-Turnage, Trevathan-Turnage

—In Presbyterian Church, Fountain, N. C., November 14, 1922, by Rev. Daniel Iverson, Doctor Edgar Lane, of Pinetops, N. C., and Miss Myrtle Turnage, of Fountain; Mr. Earl Trevathan, of Tarboro, and Miss Ethel Turnage, of Fountain, N. C.

Wilson-Cooper—Mr. M. B. Wilson and Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper, daughter of Mr. W. D. Rhodes and Mrs. Mary Whitworth Rhodes, at the residence of the bride's parents in Lee County, S. C., on Dec. 5, 1922; Rev. W. H. Workman officiating.

Wilson-Nelson—Mr. Thos. Reece Wilson, Jr., and Miss Claree Nelson, daughter of Mrs. John Smith Nelson, at the home of the bride's mother, December 6, 1922. Rev. W. H. Workman officiating.

Mellor-Anderson—At 809 South Orleans Avenue, Tampa, Fla., the home of Mr. Jno. G. Anderson, Jr., the brother of the bride, December 15th, by Rev. Jno. G. Anderson, the father of the bride, Mr. Frederick Harvey Mellor and Miss Fannie Barbour Anderson.

Gambrell-Sherman—In Greenville, S. C., November 20, 1922, by Rev. E. P. Davis, Mr. William R. Gambrell, of Ninety Six, S. C., and Mrs. A. E. Sherman, of Greenville.

DEATHS.

Sossaman—Departed this life, Norfolk, Va., December 8, 1922, Mrs. W. A. Sossaman, aged 58 years.

Mrs. Sossaman was a faithful Presbyterian, noble Christian, a devoted wife and mother.

Brother and sister, G. F. O'Connell, of Richmond and Mrs. J. R. Edmunds, of Greensboro, with family and friends, mourn her loss.

D. N. McLaughlin.

MISS SALLIE J. RAY

In Sanford, N. C., December 10, 1922, after a few days illness, this noble soul entering eternal rest. The Bible picture of "My Neighbor" is an epitome of this woman's life. She loved the Lord her God with all her heart, mind, soul, strength, and her neighbor as herself.

REV. D. M. HAWTHORNE HOME MISSIONARY FOR THIRTY-ONE YEARS CALLED TO HIS REWARD

Rev. D. M. Hawthorne, pastor of Weir, McCool, Mt. Zion and Bethsalem churches, came to the hospital in Jackson some two weeks ago for treatment. The doctor found, after and exploratory examination, that his malady would not yield to a surgical operation and advised Mrs. Hawthorne that the condition was hopeless.

On Thursday afternoon, November 30, 1922, he quietly passed away. At his own request he was buried in the cemetery at Bethsalem Church, which is in the country about six miles from Ackerman, Miss.

Revs. J. C. Watson, W. F. Tims, and

J. B. Hutton conducted the services. The church was filled with representatives from the churches of which he was pastor and with people from all the countryside. This sorrowing concourse of people bore silent testimony of the tender affection they bore to him and of the high esteem in which they held him. It was an impressive scene when at the conclusion of the services in the church, a number of negroes who had been standing at the door and windows of the church requested that they might look upon his silent form, and filed into the church and stood with bowed head and tear bedimmed eyes in the presence of him who held their confidence and their love.

Mr. Hawthorne was born on Indian Run about five miles from Glade Springs, Va., on January 3, 1858. His father died when he was scarcely able to remember and when he was some 12 years old his mother died, leaving him an orphan boy with out means.

About a mile from the home where he was born and spent the years of childhood, there was a wood work shop, which furnished all the buggies, wagons, and implements for the farms of that section. To this he went and took up the work, living in the home of Mr. W. W. Williams, the owner of the business. Here he grew to manhood following the calling in the hills of Virginia, which back across the centuries his Master had followed in the hills of Galilee.

In his later teens he made known to Rev. J. D. Sullivan his desire to study for the ministry and soon after made his home in the manse hard by Old Glade Springs Church. After Mr. Sullivan gave up the pastorate of Old Glade, Mr. Hawthorne found a home with Mrs. Rebecca Robinson, a godly widow in whose home there was always a prophet's chamber. Here he was treated as a member of the family through the days of preparation for his work.

His college course was taken at King College and at Hampton Sidney. This course was prolonged by reason of the fact that he had to stay out and teach in order to get money to pay his expenses.

His theological course was taken at Union Seminary, Hampden-Sidney, Va. He graduated in the class of 1889-90. He was licensed to preach by Abingdon Presbytery. He was ordained by Central Mississippi Presbytery in 1893, having accepted calls to the Goodman group of churches. Soon after his ordination he was married to Miss Minnie King, of Green Spring Church, near Abingdon, Va. Miss King was a graduate of Stonewall College and an earnest Christian. She soon began to teach in the country neighborhood where her husband preached. For seven years they labored here, endearing themselves to the entire citizenship and deeply impressing it for good.

He then received and accepted a call to Plaquemine, La., where for a number of years he rendered faithful service. It was here that his wife's health gave way, she having contracted tuberculosis. Thinking that the change might be beneficial to her health he removed to the mountains of North Carolina and then to Canyon City, Tex. Here in the great West he labored in the same humble, earnest Christlike way until the dread disease had wrought its work on his help meet and she was called up higher.

Within a few weeks after this he came back to his old Presbytery in Mississippi and in the field, from which he was called home, he has wrought these twelve years.

Some nine years ago he married Miss Kate Woodward, a refined, cultured, earnest Christian woman, a member of one of the best families in the Bethsalem congregation. In full sympathy with her husband she devoted her life to the great service in which he was engaged and enriched his life with the wealth of her sympathy and affection. The Lord has truly called her to pass through deep waters. On the Thanksgiving after noon while her good husband was breathing his last in the hospital in Jackson, she received a telegram that her aged mother was passing away back at their home. The home is about midway between the nearest railroad station and the church. When she reached Ackerman at 9 o'clock Friday morning, she was told that her mother had passed away at 1 a. m. As she passed the home on the way to the church to bury her husband she stopped to look at the mother and then went on to the church.

Mr. Hawthorne visited Old Glade Spring Church in Virginia, in August at the time of the Sesqui Centennial. It was in this church that he was reared and from it had gone forth as a messenger of the cross. All who saw were impressed with the joy that was in his heart and that he was ripe for the coming of the King. The last message he ever delivered was on this visit. He took his bed immediately on reaching home and never left home save to come to the hospital in Jackson.

He spoke of the happiness the visit to his old church brought him and of how much he appreciated the many kindnesses shown him by his friends there, only a little while before he went to be with the Lord.

It was the writer's privilege to know him and be enriched by his friendship all the days of his life. And when loving hands tenderly laid him to rest in the red hills of Choctaw County, Miss., far away from the scenes of his childhood and from his kindred and friends of other days, there in the quiet country church yard his life passed before me in retrospect. In every stage of it he was the same, always and everywhere trusted and loved. This was true of him when as a lad he was in the home of his widowed mother, true of him in the shop where he wrought, true of him in college and seminary, true of him in the church in which he was reared, true of him in all the churches to which he ministered.

His chief characteristics were humility, self-forgetfulness, fidelity, loyalty—in short Christ-likeness.

His sermons were well wrought and sound; his speech was seasoned with sympathy, his acts were prompted by love, principles were his motives and truth was his guide. As a friend he was loyal, as a presbyter he was true, as a pastor he followed the example and went in the spirit of the Great Shepherd.

One of his last sayings was that the Lord had been good to him in the friends He had given him.

Men of affairs trusted in him, little children confided in him. The unanimous verdict of all the people was, that, he was "good."

He carried but little in the show window, but much behind the counter. The home missionary's life is for the most part spent far removed from the public gaze, it is hidden in the hearts of the common people. Is he not like "the corn or wheat" which falls in the furrow to die alone and then lives multiplied in the harvest.

For thirty-one years he has faithfully sown that life in the furrows of the home mission field, and hath now gone to receive the well done of the Lord of the harvest, and his works, shall they not follow him?

J. B. Hutton.

MRS. JOHN A. SIMPSON

Mrs. Sarah Frances White Simpson, wife of Rev. J. A. Simpson, after an illness of about ten days, departed this life Wednesday, December 6th. Mrs. Simpson was the daughter of Hon. and Mrs. Ben White, of Danielsville, Ga. At an early age she joined the Danielsville Presbyterian Church, and was a consecrated Christian. In her young womanhood she married Rev. John A. Simpson, and to that union was born two sons, John Jr., and Ben White, whom, together with their father are left to mourn her loss.

Since the coming of this family to Commerce, Mrs. Simpson has always taken a leading part in the work of her church, as Sunday School teacher, as president of the Ladies' Missionary Society, of the Commerce Presbyterian Church, and more recently as president of the Athens Presbyterial. Mrs. Simpson's splendid services in behalf of her church and her Maker have left the indelible impress of her Christian character on all with whom she came in contact. Not only will she be missed in her home, but also in her church, in the Presbyterial and throughout this entire section.

The funeral services occurred in Commerce Presbyterian Church Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, Rev. Samuel J. Cartledge pastor of the Prince Avenue Presbyterian Church, of Athens, Ga., being in charge, assisted by Dr. E. L. Hill, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, in Athens, Ga. Besides those two divines of Athens, Ga., there were also present Rev. Mr. Painter, of Virginia, recently returned missionary to foreign lands, now 90 years of age, also Rev. H. J. Boswell, pastor of Ila, Ga., Presbyterian Church, and Rev. Mr. Langford, pastor of the Danielsville Presbyterian Church.

After the services in the local Presbyterial Church, the interment occurred in the cemetery in Danielsville, Ga. The exercises at Danielsville being in charge of Rev. Messrs. Boswell and Langford.

Mrs. Simpson had hardly reached the meridian of life, and yet during her short life, her days were filled with acts of loving kindness to the sick and suffering, and her life was devoted to the service of her Maker and the salvation of souls.

Mrs. Simpson was possibly known and loved for her many splendid Christian traits of character by a larger number of people than any other worker in the entire Presbyterial of Athens, and the Church was crowded with those not only from Commerce, but from all sections of Athens Presbytery who came to pay their last tribute of respect to the beloved dead. Even nature herself seemed to be in sympathy with the bereaved ones, and the lowering clouds and gently falling rain was taken as a token that the angels themselves were weeping over the death of this good and Godly Christian woman.

Story and Incident

TIT FOR TAT

"You gotta annee monnie, eh?" asked the Banana Man, sharply.

The little children who tagged him from door to door were not used to hearing him speak sharply. They had long been acquainted with him, and it was the first time they had ever heard him speak that way. Without a smile too! Victor's brown eyes grew bigger and browner in his white face as he looked up, startled, to see what the matter was, and Rosalie, the washerwoman's little girl from the mouth of the alley, flushed as pink as her rose-pink calico. But she answered bravely:

"It's my mother. She says wud'd ye come to the alley?"

"Ni' sweet awnge! Toofa ten cent!" called the Banana Man, slowly turning his wagon-stand toward the mouth of the alley.

It wasn't Italian he was speaking, though it didn't sound as if it could be spelled in English. But the tagging children understood him. They ran a little before, now, and piloted him to their door, as if he needed to be shown how to get there. They were still tagging when he stopped at the basement entrance Johnny, the youngest, blue-speckled from head to foot in his long blue tier, was holding him by the loose, baggy trousers, for fear he might vanish suddenly.

A lady was standing there. She had come to bring some washing that she was in a hurry for.

"I am just home from the shore, you see," she explained apologetically, "and everything is mused or soiled, or I wouldn't hurry you. The little boy, Jasper—didn't I bring him to see you once?—he hasn't a linen suit left, and it promises to be warm Sunday. You will try, won't you? Nobody flutes the blouse ruffles the way—oh, am I blocking the way? Thank you! I was sure you would do it, if it is late in the week. What a crowd of little folks! Well, Jasper! Where did you come from?"

She laughed musically, recognizing her own boy in the flock that followed the fruit wagon. His dainty spotless blouse and beribboned hat looked strangely out of place among the others, but she only laughed indulgently, and slipped a coin into his hand as she went past him.

"Treat the children, Jasper," she said, in a low voice. "And then come home to Mama quickly. Mama wants you."

Her smile overflowed like morning sunshine as she went by, and rested for an instant on the Banana Man. She wondered that he met it so gloomily. The next minute she had passed on serenely, and just then he caught the gleam of the silver quarter in the boy's hand, and snatched it almost before it was offered to him.

"You taka banan'!" he cried, poising himself to run, and waving frantic hands backward toward the cart. "You taka anyting, awnge, banan'. peanutta—anyting! I notta care. I mus' go 'way one leetla minute! You tend peanutta for me!"

Rosalie, to whom this wonderful charge was made, was quite overcome with the magnificence of the office, and just then her mother appeared in the doorway, protesting loudly that she must not do it.

"And here, come back here, you Eye-tal-ian, and sell me something for lunch for the childher! Here's your money—you needn't to be scart you won't get it!"

He did stop at that, for the thought came to him that maybe one quarter might not be enough. Druggists were very dear, and he must have the medicine. He waved both hands full of apologies to the sharp-tongued Irish woman, and came back an instant to serve her. Barely stopping to make change, off he darted again, calling back, earnestly:

"Firsta monnie I gotta—and leeta boy so seeck! He die, I notta bring dose medicine!"

Dashing into an apothecary store on the nearest corner, he nearly over-set two or three leisurely passers-by, among them the mother of Jasper, met again, as it seemed by some purposeful accident, as she waited on the corner for her car. People righted themselves more or less angrily, according to their tempers, and the lady turned and looked after him with interest as he almost leaped inside the door. She had caught a word of two of his broken English, as he tried to frame apologies.

"What is it about the little boy?" she asked kindly, going in after him and laying a gentle hand on his arm, as he vainly tried to make the clerk understand what he wanted.

"He verra seeck!" he cried, with big, earnest eyes fixed on her face; "and oh, they notta know what ees eet here to maka well! The doctor he sa-ay!"

"Have you a prescription?" asked the lady. "A paper—directions—something written?"

Suddenly the man tore a crumpled scrap from his blouse, and the clerk, taking it from him, began quickly to put up the prescription.

"I will go with you," she said, quietly.

Trying, with short, quick steps to match his long ones, she was soon out of the gay streets and into alleys such as she had seldom seen, swarming with noisy children. Down some dark, narrow steps they went, and there certainly was a sick boy, all alone. The mother of Jasper knew that breathing. It was growing toward night and the croup was coming on.

"Moder she die. Haf die tree week. A man he notta know!" said the poor, distracted father.

Jasper's mother knew, and her knowledge was kindly and wholly at his service. Some neighbors came from upstairs and brought hot water and things as she needed them. It was not long before she had done what medicines alone would have failed to do, and the little fellow was softly sleeping, his head against her breast. Then she laid him down and went away, telling them what to do in case of any further trouble.

"I notta pay you notting!" half sobbed the poor Italian, brokenly, following her to the door, and trying to express his gratitude. "I on'y poor Eytalian. I haf on'y banan'—peanutta!"

"Pay it to the next child you see!" said Jasper's mother. "'Tit for tat,' we English say! Pass it on—help some other boy. That is 'paying back.'"

The father returned with a beaming face to his boy's bedside. One look showed him that all was right, and he set off to bring home his fruit cart, for it was now too late to do more in the way of peddling. It was the time of short days and early twilights.

"'Tit for tat' she say! Firsta lectla child, see? I s'all pay eet! I will be ver' kin' to dose leetla boy. Many peanutta I gif dem—many banan'. I shall no more!"

Of a sudden the beaming face grew red; the fist was clinched in anger. Rounding the corner of the street his fruit wagon met his seeking eye, but no fruit thereon, no peanuts in the empty pail, and a huddle of children squatted in a group, talking earnestly, did not notice him. A dozen other children were running off in various directions, carrying armfuls of bananas and apples and other fruit. He had been swindled. The children had stolen everything, and these others were enjoying their share. He would fix them! At that instant the group fell apart and a loud hubbub began in which no word was clear to him, though the children and neighbors who ran to their doors heard it plainly

"He's chokin'!"

"He's dyin'!"

"He's swallowed a cent!"

"Oh! oh! Jasper's killed! He's killed! He's choking to death!"

The enraged Italian cared not to know what the trouble was. He knew only that his fruit was gone. He thought only of his living. Seizing the first child within the sweep of his arm, he administered such a cuff that the little fellow's ears rang for minutes; the girl babies fled in shrieking

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works

R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor CHARLOTTE, N. C. W. 7th St. and Southern Railway
Oldest Largest Best Phone 281

North Carolina— The Great Opportunity

This little booklet of 41 pages, just from the press, is brim full of exact, up-to-date facts.

It has been prepared with much care for all who love and want to know North Carolina, and especially the religious problems which we face:

For the ministers, officers and members of the Presbyterian Church that we may have an intelligent grasp of the task which God has committed to our trust:

For the Auxiliaries, the Y. P. Societies, the Sunday Schools as a handbook for careful study.

For "North Carolina Day" in the Sunday Schools and Y. P. Societies, set by Synod January 14th; for the Auxiliaries in January, Synodical Home Mission month, it is just right and just in time.

The study of the facts makes us lift our heads with a new pride in our great State as it lunges forward with giant strides of achievement in every line.

It appalls with a fresh revelation of our need—the idle power, the unused resources, the illiteracy; truly—but way beyond all, the great unchurched and unsaved mass of men.

It humbles with something like trembling before God lest His Church fail to see and to grasp her opportunity in this her Great Day

We believe the Facts will grip you as they have gripped us.

They are given you in His name.

Any number of copies can be secured at bare cost of printing and mailing, 5 cents, by addressing A. W. Crawford, Supt., 320 S. Mendenhall, Greensboro, N. C. Postage stamps will do for small orders.

ABERDEEN & ROCKFISH RAILROAD

BETWEEN ABERDEEN & FAYETTEVILLE

Eastbound Westbound
Daily Ex. Sunday Daily Ex. Sunday
Mixed. Paas. Mixed Paas. Mixed

STATIONS
No. 22. No. 38. No. 41. No. 21.
Lv. Ar. Lv. Ar.
7:30am 9:10am Aberdeen 6:41pm 5:00pm
Ar8:35am 10am Raeford 5:55pmLv3:50pm
Lv2:10pm Raeford Ar2:50pm
Ar. Lv.
4:00pm 11:20am Fayetteville 4:50pm 1pm

WAGRAM BRANCH
Southbound Northbound
Daily Ex. Sun. Daily Ex. Sun.
Mixed Mixed
No. 11 No. 12
Lv. 10:30am Raeford Ar. 12:40pm
Ar. 11:15am Wagram Lv. 12 noon
W. A. BLUE, General Supt.,
Aberdeen, N. C.

terror, and the choking, purple-faced Jasper was the only one who did not discreetly disappear before the whirlwind of his wrath. Him he seized, and strongly boxed and even pounded on the back and sides, finishing by turning him feet uppermost and shaking him with a most ungentle swing that looked as if it might loosen every joint in the helpless little body. Then he set him down right end up, asking:

"How you feela now, eh? Will you do dat some more, eh? Will you?"

"There's your cent!" cried Rosalie, who had run back and now picked up something out of the dust and handed it to him. "There's your cent—you've shook it out of him! And here's the rest of your money. The neighbors was feeling bad about you, and they bought all you had so you could have money for your little sick boy. Me mother kept it for you!"

"And it's you are the fine doctor!" said Rosalie's mother, admiringly. "Sure, an' ye knew in a minute what to do to save the b'y! He's dead by now but for the shakin'!"

Jasper's mother spoke up, with her arms about her boy, and a very unsteady voice to utter her thanks in. Not finding Jasper when she arrived home, she had quickly come to the place where she had seen him last, and reached it just in time to see his danger and the quick remedy applied by the Italian. She well understood the value of promptness.

"You are a brave fellow," she managed to say, gratefully. "I saw it all. Your debt to me is quickly paid! When I said 'Tit for tat' I never thought you would have a chance to act it out in this way!"

In spite of himself the fruit vender went home covered with riches and glory. His English was not equal to explanations. Besides, he did not know as he cared to try any. He was bewildered at their praises, but very glad to find that he had not requited harm where none was intended.

"Ver' fine word, dose Onglis!" he muttered, trundling homeward with full pockets. "Tit for tat"—she sava my boy, I sava her boy. I live by dose words all days.—Anna B. Bryant, in Congregationalist.

"The great souls never seek revenge, but live
To sweeten life, to give and to forgive;
Behold, too, how the camphor-trees impart
To the biting ax the fragrance of their heart."

A hornet's nest is no place to preach the Gospel of peace. The hornets are organized for war.

School Desks
Opera Chairs,
Folding Chairs,
Church Pews,
Kindergarten Chairs,
School Supplies,
Blackboards.
SOUTHERN DESK CO., Hickory, N. C.

WHEN WRITING OUR ADVERTISERS PLEASE MENTION THIS PUBLICATION

North Carolina Day

JANUARY 14th

In the Sunday Schools and
Y. P. Societies

Appointed by Synod at Lincolnton

Study the Marvelous Development—the Great Need, the Great Opportunity of Our Church Today, in North Carolina

Special Offering for the Synod's Mission Work

It has aided in the organization of 275
Sunday Schools in North Carolina. It has aided in the organization of Churches in North Carolina. It had 84 ministers and Sunday school missionaries on its force last year.

BLYMNER CHURCH BELLS
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DUR-ABLE, LOWER PRICE.
OUR FREE CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

FOR GIFTS OF Watches, Jewelry or Silverware
Write
JAMES ALLAN & CO.
THE JEWELERS
185 King St. Charleston, S. C.
67 years in business selling
the best goods at the most reasonable prices
Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references
We prepay charges on all purchases

6% and Safety
Did you ever stop to figure that 6 per cent was 100 per cent more than 3 per cent and 50 per cent more than 4 per cent?
1.—Would you work for the salary you are now getting if some other firm, equally able to pay it, offered to double your salary or pay you half as much again? We doubt it.
2.—Then why not apply the same common sense to your money.
3.—THE SECURITY SAVING & LOAN COMPANY, SECURITY BUILD-ING, 2125 Third Ave., Birmingham,
Ala., has been paying 6 per cent for 16 years, and has grown from $25,000 to nearly $1,000,000.
Write anybody in Birmingham about the SECURITY and write us for literature and statement.

World's Best Roofing at Factory Prices
"Reo" Cluster Metal Shingles, V-Crimp, Corrugated Standing Seam, Painted or Galvanized Roofings, Sidings, Wallboard, Paints, etc., direct to you at Rock-Bottom Factory Prices. Positively greatest offer ever made.
Edwards "Reo" Metal Shingles
cost less; outlast three ordinary roofs. No painting or repairs. Guaranteed rot, fire, rust, lightning proof.
Send for samples and free roofing book.
Edwards Ready Made Buildings
Send for the Edwards Catalog of "Superior" Ready-Made Buildings, showing a complete line of houses, bungalows, barns, wood garages, poultry houses, etc., all at money-saving factory prices. These buildings are not merely "ready-cut" but actually ready built, and represent a wonderful money-saving.
READY MADE

Let Edwards Save You Money
Be Sure to State Which Books You Want
—Roofing and Free Samples; Ready-Made Buildings; or Metal Garages. Postal or letter brings one or more of them FREE.

Free Roofing Book
Get our wonderfully low prices and free samples. We sell direct to you and save you all in-between roofing profits. Ask for Book
No. 2373
LOW PRICED GARAGES
Lowest prices on Ready-Made
Fire-Proof Steel Garages. Set up any place. Send postal for Garage Book showing styles.
THE EDWARDS MFG. CO.,
2323-2373 Pike St., Cincinnati, O.
FREE Samples & Roofing Book

SOUTHWESTERN
The College of the Mississippi Valley
Memphis, Tenn.

Every subscriber is asked to pay up and pray on. Some can do both, all can do one
With part of the stone to be delivered this month subscribers are earnestly requested to pay now and help speed construction.
The Palmer Memorial Building will be first. (It is the first building to the right of the Tower in the picture.)
Some memorials—eternal serving monuments—have already been arranged for.
An ideal plan for friends with means.
Some have put SOUTHWESTERN in their will. Think it over.
Please pay in full now if at all possible. If you can only pay part that will help.

Send Check to
L. C. Humes, Treasurer
SOUTHWESTERN
The College of the Mississippi Valley
Memphis, Tenn

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Passenger Traffic Service Improved Passenger Train Schedules

Effective December 17, 1922

(Schedule figures are given as advance information and are approximately correct. Figures at intermediate stations changed proportionately.)

To Passenger Agents, Ticket Agents, Conductors, and Connections:

Effective Sunday, December 17, 1922, passenger train schedules will be improved as follows:

Table with columns for No. 31 AUGUSTA SPECIAL and No. 32. Lists train times and destinations like New York, Baltimore, Washington, etc.

"a" Stops to discharge or receive passengers from or to points North of Charlotte. These trains will continue to handle same equipment as at present.

New local trains will be established between Charlotte and Columbia as follows:

Table with columns for No. 3 and No. 6. Lists train times and destinations like Charlotte, Griffith, Hebron, Pineville, etc.

Schedule of train No. 1 Columbia to Savannah will be changed as follows:

Table listing train times and destinations for train No. 1, including Columbia, Cayce, Styx, Shuler, Edmund, etc.

The schedule of RICHMOND DIVISION trains Nos. 8 and 108 will be changed as follows:

Table with columns for No. 8 and No. 108. Lists train times and destinations like Danville, South Boston, Keyesville, etc.

Train No. 108 connects at Keyesville with train No. 8 for Richmond.

Agents and representatives will give this improved service widest possible publicity.

- W. H. TAYLOE, Pass. Traffic Mgr., Washington, D. C.
W. A. BECKLER, Pass. Traffic Mgr., Cincinnati, Ohio.
E. N. AIKEN, Gen. Pass. Agt., Cincinnati, Ohio.
H. F. CARY, Gen. Pass. Agt., Washington, D. C.

A PUZZLE FOR THE SALES DEPARTMENT

By Robert R. Updegraff, in Harper's Magazine

An amusing case of imagination applied to a product by outsiders was the puzzling experience of a large company making, among other things, bright-colored celluloid penholders. Quite suddenly there was a noticeable increase in the orders for these penholders which the sales department was at a loss to explain.

Then it all came out; millinery fashions called for feathers that season, feathers with colored quill points sticking boldly out of the hat-crowns. Quill points in the brilliant colors of the feathers were not to be had, but some milliner's imagination had suggested that colored celluloid penholders would do very well if the cork part intended to be gripped by the fingers when writing were removed.

THE RETORT PERTINENT

When Evangeline Booth was in Cleveland she was interviewed by a reporter who asked: "Do you think the world is getting better?"

With a quickness of wit she shot back the reply, "Well, I'm doing all I can to make it better. What are you doing?"

We pass the question along, for it's not a question for newspaper reporters alone, nor preachers, nor lay leaders in our churches. It is a question pertinent to every person as he faces the stern reality of life.—Ex.

GOOD POSITIONS

Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete our commercial and stenographic courses.

Our aim this season is to enroll a very large number of such students who can be trained for high and responsible positions. Won't you be one to enroll? A postal addressed to us will bring you our catalog. Write for it.

DRAUGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE Knoxville, Tenn.

Facial Blemishes Nujol advertisement featuring an image of a Nujol bottle and descriptive text about skin care.

WANTED

Raw Furs, Hides, Tallow, Beeswax, and Gingseng. Write for prices.

FRANK E. BROWN Roanoke, Va.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD

Effective November 13, 1922 Leave Charlotte Except Sunday 7:30 a. m. for Norwood, Mt. Gilead, Star, Varina, Raleigh and intermediate points

Connects at Star for Aberdeen, Ashboro and intermediate points

Connects at Raleigh for Wilson, Washington, Greenville, Belhaven and intermediate points

New equipment and improved Schedules

One way fare Charlotte to Raleigh $5.64

J. K. POWELL, D. T. A. P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

George W. Hart—W. C. Ariail—John. L. Harris

Carolina School Supply Co.

119 Brevard Court, Charlotte, N. C. Distributors for the American Seating Company in the Carolinas. High Grade School Desks and Auditorium Chairs. Desks, Blackboards, Crayon, Erasers, Etc., carried in stock in our Charlotte Warehouse.

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va.

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILROAD

Winter Excursion Rates

to Florida Points and Havana, Cuba

Tickets on sale October 1, 1922 to April 30, 1923, with final return limit to June 15, 1923.

Important winter schedules effective November 12, 1922, with through sleeping car lines to Florida's East and West Coast Resorts.

For further information, Pullman reservations, etc., call on nearest ticket agent or address

E. W. LONG Division Passenger Agent Charlotte, N. C.

Sparkles

An old lady was seated in a waiting room when an Irishman entered and sat down beside her. He was smoking a vile-smelling pipe and kept his hat on.

After glaring at him for a minute she said: "If you were my husband I would give you poison."

"Yis mum," retorted the Irishman, "and if yez wuz me wife I'd gladly take it."—Ex.

Ministerial Repartee

Father Kelly and Rabbi Cohen were the best of friends. They were guests at a banquet one evening at which ham was served. Father Kelly smilingly whispered to Rabbi Cohen: "Rabbi, when are you going to lay aside that old stuff and eat ham?"

The rabbi smiled back and whispered, "At your wedding, Father Kelly."—Ex.

Diplomacy

Hubby—"Really, Ethel, 75 for a hat is the height of extravagance."

Ethel—"Well, my dear, I simply have to look nice when I'm with you. You're so distinguished looking."—Life.

A Future Financier

Man—"You're an honest boy, but the money I lost was a $10 note."

Boy—"Yes, I know; I had it changed so you could give me a reward."—Ex.

"A farmer's son once decided to be a lawyer. His father drove him in to town and got him a job as office boy to a law firm. Three days later the young fellow was back home again.

"Well, Josh, how do you like the law?" his father asked.

"Aw, it ain't what it's cracked up to be," said the boy. "I'm sorry I ever learned it."—Ex.

Easy Come, Easy Go

The average life of a coin is twenty-five years. That's what it gets for traveling so fast.—Washington News.

CLOTHING

FOR MEN AND BOYS

Since 1879 we've been selling the good people of North Carolina clothing by mail.

Write us about YOUR wants. We'll please you.

O. S. Perry & Co.
ESTABLISHED 1879

MAIN AT ELEVENTH RICHMOND, VA.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn,
President.

207 N. Tryon St.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY,
Sec'y & Treas.

BELK BROS. CO.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July

20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids-Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crochet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

3570

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

THE STIEFF PIANO is not Merely Good—it is more than that. The exceptional beauty of tone of Stieff Pianos and their wonderful durability is what distinguishes them. Fill blank and mail

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

If the price of a Stieff is too high, we have the Shaw, the Bennett-Bretz, Davis & Son, and Leslie pianos at lower prices—from $325.00 up.

CHAS. M. STIEFF, INC., Charlotte, N. C.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday-morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

We Thank You

For your patronage during the past year. It is our purpose during the coming year to serve you just as conscientiously and with the same promptness.

Yours for a Happy and Prosperous New Year

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family and the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridgès, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., JANUARY 10, 1923

No. 2

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The United States and the World's Problems	1
The Doctors in Consultation	1
The Young People's Work	2
"The Every Member Canvass"	2
Sunday School Association	2
"The Presbyterian Faith"	2
The Death of Rev. Edgar Tufts	2
CONTRIBUTED—
Rev. Silas L. Bacon—An Appreciation—By Rev. S. L. Morris, D.D.	3
Notice to S. S. Superintendents and Pastors —By M. E. Melvin	3
"Listening to the Prisoners Groan"—By J. W. McNeill	3
Why the North Kiangsu Mission Declined to Approve of a National Christian Council in China	3, 4
The Edward P. Humphrey Fellowship in the Louisville Theological Seminary—By Rev. John M. Vander Meulen, D.D.	4
"Sunrise in Aztec Land"—By Rev. Chas. E. Diehl	5
Light on Mexico — By Rev. Samuel Glasgow	5
Dr. Egbert W. Smith's Visit to the Congo— By Dr. E. R. Kellersberger	5
"The Presbyterian Faith"—By Rev. G. W. Belk	5
For the New Year—By Isabel Graham	5
Presbyterian Progressive Program—Tithers' Goal	10
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave.,
N. Nashville, Tenn.
Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call,
Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R.
Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

THE UNITED STATES AND THE WORLD'S PROBLEMS

The political aspect of this question we leave to the secular press and to the statesmen that whittle soft pine at the Cross-Roads Store.

It is with the moral question that we have to do, whether this country is measuring up to her opportunities as revealed by Providence, or whether she is justified in following the example of the priest and Levite, in passing by on the other side, when the suffering people of the Near East have fallen among thieves, and have been left half dead.

The difficulty in all such discussions, is to keep prejudice from swaying our judgment, so that instead of sitting as impartial judges, we allow our partisan bias to warp our judgment, and we shut our eyes to the good that is to be found in every act.

The average American is a born politician, so that by training he can see only good in his own party and only bad in that of the opposite side.

Disabusing our minds, as far as possible, of all prejudice, let us examine the course of this Government in this the great crisis of the world.

That we entered the war from altruistic motives no one will deny, unless it be our ambassador to England; and that we had much to do with the making of the Versailles treaty, all will confess.

It will also be agreed, though perhaps not as unanimously, that our course, after the Senate took control of foreign affairs, has not been as creditable to our reputation as all would desire.

Too many of those who differ with the party in power are inclined to nurse that grievance and deny that any good can come out of Nazareth.

In recent months there has been a gradual change in the course of the administration, for which due credit should be given, a change that will help to disprove the charge that this great people are so intent on money-making that they care nothing for the down-trodden of other lands.

Those who have followed the course of our Secretary of State, not as carping critics, but as sincere lovers of their country, have noted with great approval a decided interest in the welfare of other nations.

We may not be carrying out the provisions of the League of Nations, nor reaching the idealism of Woodrow Wilson, but we are doing something to prove to the suffering nations of Europe that we are not so engrossed in our own affairs as to care nothing for what is ruining them.

Though having no official standing in the Conference, our representative in the name of the United States insisted that the freedom of the Straits should be for all nations on equal terms, and by so doing he frustrated the plans of the Russians and Turks. He also stood with Marquis Curzon, who represented the Allies, in insisting upon having a permanent agency for the protection of the Christians in the Turkish Empire.
By this action a recurrence of the awful massacres of Armenians will be prevented. Then he also protested against the Turkish plan to drive 300,000 Greeks from Constantinople.

Whatever may have been the course of the administration in the past, it is evident that it is trying to help the world in some way.

While it may seem to move slowly, let us give credit for what is done, and hope that in time America will stand in the eyes of the world as she did in the great war.

Let us also remember that Secretary Hughes and the President, having more information than the average critic, are more apt to do the right thing than any of us who get our ideas from partisan papers.

THE DOCTORS IN CONSULTATION

That the Church of God is not in as fine health as she should be, no one will assert. She has always been more or less ailing, but in these latter days she is supposed to be losing strength and is now about to perish.

In our last issue we had the opinion of Dr.
Clark, whose work in the Christian Endeavor has given him a world-wide reputation. He thinks that the Church is being fed too freely on preaching. He wishes the diet to be changed, and instead of the strong meat of doctrine upon which the saints of old grew strong, we should be put upon singing and responsive reading, making melody in our hearts unto the Lord.

The Moody Bible Institute has great influence among the evangelical churches, because it stands for the integrity of the Scripture, the deity of Christ and His atoning blood.

When such men give an opinion, it must carry weight.

In their Monthly for November they diagnose the trouble with the Church to be, not too much preaching, as Dr. Clark does, but poor preaching.
They call attention to the fact that while there is a cry of a small supply of preachers, every vacancy has a score of applications. One church advertising for a pastor, received ninety applications.

Some speculation is indulged in to determine where the fault lies. It is a problem of frequent recurrence, because as far as we can remember, the rank and file of the ministry has been restless.
Of course there are notable exceptions, where men have lived and died serving one church, but that is rare.

There are several causes for this condition of affairs. The habit of criticising is one of the chief. When you begin to criticise, you soon lose interest in the man and in what he says.

Then the struggle in some congregations on the part of the pastor to make both ends meet is another.

The preacher loves his wife and children as dearly as other men, and when he sees the struggle with poverty, the desperate effort to make one dollar do the work of two, on the part of one who before her marriage knew nothing of poverty, he feels that it is his duty to secure her greater comforts if he can, and therefore he is on the alert for a change.

The editorial to which we have referred attributes this constant change in the pastorate to several causes. It mentions poor judgment, tactless-ness, lack of real interest in his work, and downright indolence.

We fear that there is some truth in each of these indictments, especially in the last mentioned.
How seldom do we find a student pastor, one who really studies the Bible, and how seldom do we find a pastor who really thinks through a subject.

Of course one answer to these charges is that times have changed, and a pastor has demands upon his time that his predecessors never dreamed of, and that he must neglect part of his work if he really studies.

We admit that there is a degree of truth in this answer, but even allowing for all that is claimed, we still hold that there is no profession where a man can get by with less work. The people are long-suffering and patient, and a man, the least inclined to indolence, finds it difficult to resist taking advantage of these openings.

More study and more tact in dealing with people will not always close the mouth of the critics, we know. We believe though that if a man will observe the ordinary courtesies of a real gentleman and will study the Bible systematically, he will take a stronger hold upon the affections and confidence of his people, that cannot easily be broken.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

Those of us who represent the past generation, can recall the time when the young people of the church were a negligible factor. In the plans for the development of church life they were not sought, and when they were recognized in the activities of the church, they were expected to be seen, but not heard.

We can recall the consternation that prevailed among the older members when the Young People's Societies were first organized, and the dire predictions of failure made at the time.

Time, however, has shown that these dear old brethren were neither prophets, nor sons of them, but that this new movement was ordered of the Lord. That it has been attended with certain dangerous tendencies we all recognized, but the good Lord who makes even the wrath of man to praise Him, and holds in check the remainder of it, has graciously helped us over these dangers, and made this new movement a great help to the advancement of His Kingdom and the development of the spiritual life of the young.

The Synod of North Carolina has given official recognition of this movement and requested the Standard, as its official organ, to set apart a section of the paper "to be known as the Department of Sunday School and Young People's Work." In accordance with this request we have set apart a portion of our space, to be devoted to this work, with Mr. W. A. Gamble, of Davidson College, as editor. All contributions to this department should be sent to him at Davidson College.

We trust that our young people will avail themselves of this opportunity to make their influence felt in the church.

"THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS"

The record of our Church for benevolences has been so great that other denominations are citing us as examples to the flock, a fact of which we are proud. This remarkable progress has been largely due to the persistent efforts of the Assembly's Stewardship Committee, backed by the earnest efforts of the pastors.

Some complaint has been made concerning the expense of that Committee, much of it undeserved, yet we note that Dr. Melvin is trying to cut down all unnecessary expenses.

Among these expenses no small item has been the waste in printed matter, due to the fact that the Committee in sending supplies for any canvass of the church has had to guess at the amount of printed matter needed for each congregation, with the result that in too many cases the pastor's waste basket overflows with what has cost the Committee a good sum of money. In order to avoid this, Dr. Melvin, in preparing for the Every Member Canvass on March 18th, is sending to each pastor and session an "Order Form" for study books, printed matter, and Every Member Canvass supplies.

Under this arrangement instead of being overloaded with material that costs money, yet is wasted, each church determines its own needs, and the responsibility for the waste is placed upon them rather than upon the Committee.

It is especially necessary that the pastors send in orders early, as during February there will be a congestion.

While our record is a wonderful one, it is capable of being much more so if all our churches will loyally support the Committee in their efforts.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

The Mecklenburg County Sunday School Convention will meet in the First Baptist Church of this city, on January 14th-16th.

Every Sunday School in the county of every denomination will be represented, and an interesting program has been prepared.

Dr. Marion Lawrence, consulting General Secretary of the International Sunday School Association, will be present. Dr. Lawrence will speak along different lines of Sunday School work.

He will be assisted by Mr. D. W. Sims, General Superintendent of the North Carolina Sunday School Association, and Miss Daisy Magee, Children's Division Superintendent of this State.

In these days the work of the Sunday School has been reduced to a system, in which specialists along different lines are engaged.

We hope that these meetings will be largely attended.

"THE PRESBYTERIAN FAITH"

This is a little book for the use of the ordinary man, who has no time for the study of theology, yet who wishes to be able to give a reason for the faith he possesses.

The author, Rev. G. W. Belk, is a minister of our own Church who has been a most successful evangelist and pastor. In this book he tries to answer the questions concerning the Presbyterian Church that are constantly put by those who think of joining our Church.

For simplicity of style and clearness of expression we heartily commend it.

Personal workers and pastors who are confronted by questions of church doctrine and polity, will find it invaluable.

One Texas elder valued it so highly as a means of clearing away false impressions of our Church that he voluntarily met one-half of the expense of this new edition.

The cost is small, but the value great. Order from Mrs. G. W. Belk, Montreat, N. C.

A PRAYER FOR A HAPPY NEW YEAR

Bless thou this year, O Lord!
Make rich its days
With health, and work, and prayer, and praise,
And helpful ministry
To needy folk.
Speak thy soft word
In cloudy days;
Nor let us think ourselves forgot
When common lot
Of sorrow hems us round.
Let generous impulse shame the niggard dole
That dwarfs the soul.
May no one shirk his share of work
Through selfish thought.
Each day fulfil Thy holy will
In yielded lives;
And still the tumult
Of desires
Debased.
May faith and hope and love,
Inspired from above,
Increase.
Bless thou this year, O Lord!

—Andrew S. C. Clarke, in EN.

THE DEATH OF REV. EDGAR TUFTS

This will be indeed sad news to many of those who have followed the career of this consecrated servant of the Lord.

Beyond a short telegram from Johnson City, as yet we know few particulars. For some time he has been ill, but he did not allow it to be known generally. On Saturday, January 6th, he died of pneumonia. His funeral was to have been on Sunday.

He was born at Kirkwood, Ga., December 4, 1869. He took his college course at Davidson and was licensed by Concord Presbytery, May 18, 1897. He was ordained September 15, 1897, and was the evangelist of Concord Presbytery (1897-1901). He also served as evangelist in Savannah Presbytery for one year.

He soon found his life's work, as the founder of Lees-McRae Institute, at Banner Elk, N. C. This school has grown beyond his greatest hopes, with a wonderful future before it.

No words can do justice to the single-minded consecration and sanctified common sense of this devoted brother. He transformed mountain homes and carried hope into obscure corners, and kindled ambition in many a lowly mind. Above all he made those who had lived for years out of touch with a new world, realize that Christianity was something that is concerned with how men should live in every-day life.

His loss will be felt throughout this section, and his like we shall not soon find. We thank God for his life and his example.

Devotional

FAITH

Each day man launches out into the unknown. Each day he comes face to face with problems which require solution; and such solutions oftentimes do not seem to bring him closer to his ideal, but the reverse. Yet the man who attains does not become baffled by adversity, but, with his eyes on the goal, passes on and on until he has achieved.

We discover behind each and every step on the ladder of fame the small but all-powerful word "Faith." We agree that a task without a purpose is irksome and is an inevitable failure. So likewise a life that has no goal is a failure because there is no basis of faith.—Ex.

IN THY HAND, LORD

My times are in Thy hand, O Lord! And surely, that is the best. Were I to choose, they should be in no other hands, neither mine own, nor any others. When He withholds mercies or comforts for a season, it is but till the due season. Therefore it is our wisdom and our peace to resign all things into His hands, to have no will nor desires, but only this, that we may still wait for Him. Never was any one who waited for Him miserable with disappointment.—Robert Leighton.

BELIEF IN GOD

Belief is a mighty word. It seems to some of us such an abstraction. It does not appear to have any personality in it. And yet God says that it is belief in Jesus which is the irresistible power that overcomes the world. Many a man is a weakling today in the church, because he has no overwhelming and dominating faith in Jesus Christ as the Son of God. No mere belief in Jesus as a man, however perfect, can give the Christian the power to overcome "this present, evil world."—Ex.

HUMILITY

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Unbelievable! Has not the short sword of the Roman Legion, has not the Senate in Rome, something to do with the inheritance of the earth?

How dare this Man say that great conquerors, Alexander and Caesar, who were many things but not meek, did not own the earth.

There is just that little word, "inherit," which makes all the difference in the world. The Goths might sack Rome; but where is the Gothie Empire of the Mediterranean today? "As proud as a Spaniard," was a proverb of the Middle Ages, but the Spaniard has not inherited the earth. Napoleon could say to his guardsman, standing as the sentinel at his door, "You are tall, but I am great." The descendants of Napoleon have not inherited the earth.

The strength of America came from her forefathers; people persecuted for their faith in the home countries, who in meekness crossed the sea to seek new homes in the wilderness of the New World.

Pride cometh before the fall—sometimes the way is long that leads to the fall, but the fall is inevitable. It is not only the Church that has grown from the strange seed, the blood of martyrs. When men are broken to their knees and heads are bowed, there is much hope for such.—Ex.

WRITE "BIGGER" AND "BETTER" OVER EVERYTHING

"So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." We have never done our best; we can always do a little better. The most wonderful thing about life is growth; in fact, growth is the law of life. There is no standing still. "Holding your own" is falling behind.

To "make next year better than this" we will have to think over our work this year and wherein we have failed. What have been our weak points? Where could we have done better work? What particular work have we been slighting? Is the fault in our work or ourselves?

The writer has kept two mottoes over his desk for many years, "Do It Now" and "Don't Worry." A good motto is a great guide in doing good work well: System and planning is a good way to do effective work.

For what God is doing in and through us, and is willing to do, we thank Him and continue to pray that,

"As on the river's rising tide,
Flow strength and coolness from the sea,
So, through the ways our hands provide,
May quickening life flow in from thee."

REV. SILAS L. BACON.
An Appreciation.

By Rev. S. L. Morris, D.D.

A telegram has just been received in the Home Mission office announcing the death of Rev. Silas L. Bacon, the leading Choctaw minister of Indian Presbytery, and one of the most remarkable characters and finest products of our Mission Schools for the Indians.

Mr. Bacon was educated at Spencer Academy, under the tuition of Rev. J. J. Read; which at that time was our leading Missionary School for Indians. His religious life was fervent, pronounced and uncompromising. Very early he heard and answered the call to become an ambassador for Christ to his own people. He ranks with Allen and Frank Wright (father and son), and no man ever had more unbounded influence nor enjoyed more thoroughly the perfect confidence of Indians and Whites.

Perhaps his greatest achievement was the establishment of Goodland Indian School and Orphanage. Beginning in a small way 20 years ago, its first dormitory was a rude hut for boys supplemented by his own humble home for girls. He literally impoverished himself, putting his property, earnings, and every available asset into the enterprise. If the Tribal authorities assigned 80 scholars at $7.00 a month each and 100 came, he accepted all, although receiving no remuneration for the board of these extra students. In a letter to Dr. Morris he made the following explanation: "Since Christmas pupils began to pour on me, I have more scholars than contract calls for, but I am not going to turn them off, no sir! I am going to divide my bread with them until I starve myself; but rooms and bed-clothes are scarce with us. We will not murmur at this, but I am looking forward every day, that if I do my part, my Master will do His part."

He was instrumental in securing for the school 640 acres of Indian land valued at $6,000 and an appropriation from the Choctaw Legislature of $10,000 for buildings; and the Executive Committee had already erected one brick dormitory at a cost of $5,000. Through the appeals of Mrs. Gibbons and himself he erected other buildings; and at his death left behind an institution valued at nearly $50,000, which has trained hundreds of Indians. He gave the preference always to the poorest and most destitute children, saying that those which had the means could attend Oklahoma Presbyterian College or the Government schools.

By reason of failing health the management of this institution passed more than a year ago into the competent hands of Bailey Spring, another Choctaw; but this institution must always be credited to Silas Bacon, its founder, its supporter for years, and its first superintendent. His wife was his equal in every respect except she could not speak English. Her death in April overwhelmed him and his letter to Dr. Morris on that occasion was one of the most pathetic ever received in this office. He never recovered from her loss and has followed her to his reward and to their happy reunion.

His character and spirit may be judged by two incidents which occurred in the Indian Presbytery, Dr. Morris, Secretary, being present on both occasions. On one occasion, discussing the results of missionary work, Mr. Bacon said very dramatically: "It is often asked what has become of the money spent on Indian Missions. If you will come with me to yon cemetery I will show you the graves of hundreds of the sainted dead. Is it money wasted that filled these graves with Christians instead of heathen?" On another occasion, discussing the need of an infirm Indian preacher and the impossibility of securing money from Ministerial Relief in time to relieve his pressing necessities, Mr. Bacon said: "Take my salary and give it to this old man. I am young and can work for a support."

Silas Bacon is typical of multitudes of Indians with rugged, earnest Christian characters who are unknown to the Church—elders, deacons, and Godly women—conspicuous and unmistakable products of Divine grace, more than justifying the investments of the Church in its unrivalled Indian Missions.

NOTICE TO SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS AND PASTORS

The Assembly's Stewardship Committee believes that it would be an effective and useful preparation for the Every Member Canvass, which takes place March 18th, to have short exercise in every Sunday School in the Church on either March 4th or March 11th.

Our Committee will prepare a short printed "Order of Exercises," setting forth some of the principles of Stewardship, giving some facts about our Church and its budget, to be used in the Sunday School if a substantial number of pastors and Sunday School superintendents will indicate their readiness and willingness to use such an "Order of Exercises."

Contributed

We would like to hear from the superintendents and pastors on this at the earliest date possible. We would be prepared to send this out free of charge at an early date—provided we know by January 25th, whether it will be needed.

We have no way of introducing a study of Stewardship in the Sunday Schools of our Church, and we must begin with the young if we are to train the next generation to practice "Christian Stewardship."

The General Assembly's Stewardship Com.,
M. E. Melvin, Secretary.

410 Times Bldg., Chattanooga, Tenn.

"LISTENING TO THE PRISONERS GROAN"

By J. W. McNeill

The following action was taken by the Synod of North Carolina, in session at Lincolnton, N. C., October, 1922, on the work among prisoners:

1. That Dr. J. W. McNeill, of Fayetteville, be appointed General Leader of the Laymen's Work among Prisoners.
2. That the elder on the Synod's Home Mission Committee from each Presbytery be appointed Leader for his Presbytery.
3. That the Presbyterial Leader appoint a Leader for each county in his Presbytery, whose duty it shall be to take direct responsibility for and oversight of the work in his county, conducting, and securing assistance for conducting, religious services for the prisoners and taking such other measures for the advancement of their spiritual welfare as he may devise.
4. That the County Leaders report to the Presbyterial Leaders, they to the General Leader, and he to the Home Mission Committee of Synod for transmission to Synod.

The action taken at the recent meeting of Synod in regard to work among the prisoners of the State, is to my mind an unusually important work. "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance." In endeavoring to do the Master's will we should with our might present the Gospel to these people. All the sinners against the laws of God are not to be found in prison, at the same time, sinners are most likely found among the convicts. It is very remarkable how humble, soft-hearted and receptive to the Gospel the prisoners are; one might suppose that it was feigned humility, but my experience and observation is that in this state they are more susceptible to the teachings of the Gospel than when free, with their minds and hearts full of worldly stuff. How do we know but God has placed these men in this situation that they will be forced to hear the Word, and how do we know but we are sinning greatly against God when we fail to carry it to them. The great majority of those in prison never attend church when free; now as prisoners we should present the Gospel to them, even while under the gun.

When we speak of prisoners, we immediately imagine that they are all negroes. You will find that about one-fourth of prisoners these days are white.

The action taken by the Synod is simple; it is that each layman on the Synod's Home Mission Committee shall be a leader in his Presbytery, and that he shall appoint a layman in every county in his Presbytery to take charge of the work in his county, he calling upon other laymen or ministers, or singers, or players on musical instruments to assist him. I find that these sinners listen to laymen fully as well as they do to the minister, and what an experience it is for the layman in building up his own soul. The leader should call upon different men and from any denomination. My experience has been to use the International Sunday School lesson as a text, making the spiritual application. In this work we must be very careful not to criticize or in any way to meddle with the management of the camps or prisoners. Our work should be entirely confined to the spiritual uplift of these men, getting promises from them to lead straight lives when they go back to the world.

It has been my pleasure to see some plain, every-day laymen develop into strong and efficient workers by engaging in this kind of service. The laymen on the Home Mission Committee have been notified of their work, and some of them that we have heard from are taking it up with zeal. No one need hesitate to engage in this kind of work; the class are all present when the meeting is opened and none leave during service.

One can hardly realize what a refreshing thing these services are to those confined, some of them for four or five years.

Fayetteville, N. C.

WHY THE NORTH KIANGSU MISSION DECLINED TO APPROVE OF A NATIONAL CHRISTIAN COUNCIL IN CHINA

The following is a statement of the reasons assigned by the North Kiangsu Mission of our Church to the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions and to the Church for not approving the National Christian Council, which was the main result of the National Conference held in Shanghai in May.

It is doubtless known that the North Kiangsu Mission, at its recent meeting, by a vote of 20 to 7, requested that our Church do not recognize or finance the so-called National Christian Council of China, proposed by the National Christian Conference held in Shanghai last May. Our report on the action of this Conference was virtually unanimous. The only delegate whose name was not signed to it was Rev. W. F. Junkin, D.D., who was thoroughly in accord with us and our views, but is now in America. While there was no minority report from the delegates, yet the mission authorized those holding views pro and con to write covering letters. We therefore give our grounds for presenting the report as we did.

Permit us to state that our report, and the Mission's vote on it, were actuated by no captious or fault-finding spirit, nor by any lack of desire to cultivate fraternal relations and co-operate with sister churches. The action was taken after due consideration and prayer, and with the earnest desire to do what was best for the honor of God and the advancement of His kingdom.

The grounds on which our action was based are as follows:

The establishment of such a National Council is highly undesirable:

I. Because of the great expense of the undertaking. The promoters of the Conference and Council prepared a budget, a copy of which has been submitted to you. This budget calls on the churches to pay not less than Mex. $84,240.00 annually, with the additional expenses of collateral and subsidiary work amounting to Mex. $68,132.00. (See the itemized statement). In addition it is proposed not only to establish this expensive Council and a General Conference of all Mission churches, but also to hold regularly no less than 30 Regional Conferences to prepare for the General Conference. (See report of Commission V, page 32, section C.) For these the report states that "a paid staff would be necessary," and that proper working of the scheme "demands national gatherings every four or five years." (Page 33, last paragraph of section C.) Thus there are wheels within wheels, all involving a heavy and growing expense to be borne by the various boards who enter the agreement and assume responsibility for its maintenance.

But if under ordinary circumstances it would seem unwise to undertake such financial burdens for what its own advocates sometimes call an "adventure," an "experiment," what will our Southern Church say in view of the grave financial situation which confronts it, the debt it is already laboring under, the heavy cut of 10 per cent on all appropriations for work in hand, the consequent impossibility of enlarging the work and entering new fields which beckon us, and the necessity of refusing for lack of funds the many promising candidates who have offered for mission work? Would it not be a ruinous policy to take the money needed for preaching the Gospel and given for that purpose, and use it to establish this expensive Council, leaving the work for which our Church has made itself responsible unprovided for, and undertaking some new great hazard for which we are not responsible and which, if launched, will prove of very doubtful benefit?

II. The North Kiangsu Mission did not approve the proposed National Council because it is not needed. Our Church already has abundant agencies to do all the work Providence has entrusted to us. Our commission is to preach the Gospel, heal the sick, teach the ignorant and relieve the distressed; and accordingly we have chapels, hospitals, schools, orphanages, and have done more than our share of famine relief work. We believe in hearty co-operation and brotherly relations with fellow missionaries of other societies, and there already exists a most cordial and growing spirit of fellowship among us. We believe the true spirit of Christian unity prevails largely in China. We can and do have what our Saviour prayed for, Spiritual unity—not external oneness of organization—with our present machinery. If so, why add this cumbersome and expensive instrument now proposed by some? The unity of such a National Council would be the unity of the Church of Rome, external, visible, not real and spiritual; what our sainted teacher of blessed memory, Dr. Peck, used to call the unity of a barrel, the separate staves of which are held together by an iron hoop.

Again, denominations all agree that the Church is already overorganized. At home and abroad the groan is often heard, "there is too much machinery." If we are already overorganized and have too much machinery, why increase the evil and add a burden which neither our Mission nor our Church is able to bear? The friends of the proposed National Council are suffering acutely with a malady which Dr. Egbert Smith is reported to have called "committee-itis." Is not what the Church at home and on the mission field needs—less organization and more of the Spirit's power, less of human methods and machinery and more of the living Christ? The proposed Council and accompanying General and Regional Conferences are not what is needed. They draw valuable men from doing direct mission work in preaching and teaching the Gospel, to "serving tables" and doing routine work on committees. The North Kiangsu Mission for this reason, therefore, is right in not approving the scheme.

III. The National Council with its train of National and Regional Conferences is not advisable because many influential Chinese pastors and Church leaders oppose it. One is asked, "What will be the good of it?" "Far better spend those thousands in preaching the Gospel and saving souls." "If established, how can the Chinese Church support such an expensive scheme?" "The Church's present agencies are sufficient and can do the work best." These are common remarks made by Chinese leaders.

There is good authority for believing that the Chinese pastors in Shanghai do not favor the plan. Of their own accord they invited Dr. Hugh White to address them on the subject. The Pastors Association of Soochow does not favor it; advocates of the Council said that this was due to foreign influence; the ministers hearing this, declared that this was not a fact, their attitude was due to no outside influence. The Kiangpeh Presbytery does not favor it, and the Independent Church, one is told, will have none of it. It is a great mistake to suppose that the agitation for a National Council came from the Chinese Church. Some Chinese favor it, but it appears to be largely the result of a vigorous foreign propaganda which has been conducted in China since the Edinburgh Conference years ago.

It is also significant to note the difference in the men who take opposite views of this question. The men who favor the new movement are not men of long religious experience, nor are they the ones who have built up the Chinese Church. They are mostly young men who have been educated abroad in "liberal" institutions and hold radical views. The men who do not favor the movement of which the National Council is a part, are the active pastors and evangelists who have borne the burden and heat of the day, and have largely built up the Chinese Church.

IV. Another reason why the North Kiangsu Mission does not favor the National Council is that the affiliations of most of the promoters are with Modernism. The movement is largely a modernist movement. While some conservative men are on the various committees, the majority are men of modernist sympathies. The Chinese put forward as speakers and leaders in the National Conference, with the exception of Dr. Chen Ching I, were mainly of the same class. The whole general drift of the movement; both as regards religious beliefs and administration, is opposed to the convictions and policies of our Southern Presbyterian Church. This movement, like other union movements, is popular with men who hold radical views, because it practically removes all religious standards and leaves each one to believe and teach what he pleases, with none to say him nay. Is not this attitude wholly different from that of our beloved Church which has definite standards and believes that it has truth of infinite value to witness for?

While the National Conference, under pressure, was forced to make some statement of doctrine, that statement was purposely vague and dodged the vital issue between radicals and evangelicals; they would not declare that the whole Scriptures are the Word of God, the "only infallible rule of faith and practice." A loophole was left so that each radical could believe or reject just as much as he pleased of the Holy Word. The "Fundamentals" were mentioned, but they were afraid to state what those fundamentals were! An attempt was made in the interest of peace and truth to get some assurance as to what the doctrinal position of the future National Council would be, but they refused absolutely to give any such assurance. The Council which would have such tremendous influence for good or evil was left free to believe or disbelieve as its members saw fit! Can our Church be expected to endorse a plan which leaves things "at loose ends" like this? Would it be reasonable or business-like to do so? And would our Mission be loyal to its trust if it approved a Council formed on such a basis? And if we come under such a Council—holding totally divergent opinions on questions of vital importance to the management of union institutions, how is it possible to act harmoniously, with one party teaching views which the other party knows to be absolutely destructive of Christian faith?

V. Another reason why our Mission could not approve of the National Council was the fact that this whole movement is essentially the Interchurch World Movement, which has already been rejected by our Southern Church, under a different name. The National Council is merely the child and the successor of the now defunct China Continuation Committee, which after years of experiment many found to be unsatisfactory. That there is close connection is shown by the clear statement of leaders, both of the China Continuation Committee and of the National Council. The report of Commission V (Chapter 3, page 29) of the National Conference reads: "When the China Continuation Committee was organized after the Conference of 1913, it was an experiment It will be one of the chief duties of the Conference of 1922 to plan for a National Christian Council which shall be able to take over the work of the China Continuation Committee and develop it," etc. The connection of these bodies—the China Continuation Committee and the National Christian Council—with the Interchurch World Movement is shown by the printed statements of their report. The minutes of the China Continuation Committee Conference of December 16-29, 1919, declare that the China Continuation Committee is the Interchurch World Movement's "representative in China." The China Continuation Committee also acknowledges that it is largely financed by the Interchurch World Movement. Its report says, "The committee acknowledges the help received from the Interchurch World Movement of North America in connection with the China for Christ Movement. Without this timely help the movement could hardly have been launched."

The connection between the movements is thus made plain. Now if the Interchurch World Movement is undesirable for the Church at home, how can it be desirable for the Church abroad? If it has been wisely rejected there, why force it on the Chinese Church here? Therefore for this reason, also, the Mission felt constrained to disapprove the movement.

VI. In spite of disclaimers to the contrary, the facts show that the National Council, when once grmly established, will really be a super-government over all the churches and missions in China, and will possess a tremendous power which it is needless and unwise to put into the hands of any set of men, however good. The body claims to be merely advisory, but it must have executive power, otherwise it will be an empty shadow, an expensive, useless fifth wheel to the missionary wagon. And indeed the promoters of the Council, apparently unconscious of their inconsistency, plead for this power. They say plainly that they must "be able to act;" that they should have authority requisite to make their "findings" effective.

Provision is also made to make the Council, when once elected, as nearly independent as possible, by transferring to it the functions of the Missions and thus minimizing the supervisory authority, on the one hand, and by loosening the control of the Home Boards, on the other.

And let no one imagine that this power will not be centralized but will be exercised by all the 100 members of the Council; for it has been truly said that the Council is too large to operate effectively; its members are widely scattered, and on account of loss of time and expense involved the Council can convene only once a year. So that the actual management of affairs will be in the hands of a few men, a small committee, who will permanently wield this tremendous power, and once appointed be practically independent. Appeal from their decisions will be almost impossible. That these statements are true the reports of the Conference Commissions clearly show. The reports recommend that the administration of mission work should be taken from the Missions "as early as possible," and largely delegated to executive committees; and "that executive committees be relatively small" and shall "be empowered to act" authoritatively within well defined limits. (See report of Commission V, page 27). This is proposed by way of education and preparation for still further centralization of directing authority in the hands of a small committee of the National Council.

That it is proposed that the governing committee of the Council should be in large measure free from the control of the boards at home is seen from the further recommendation made that "in so far as possible the supporting boards give to their missions freedom of control in administrative matters." It is thus clearly provided that administrative control on the field should be turned over by the boards to the missions, and it is at the same time provided that this control should be transferred from the missions to the small committee of the National Council. (Report of Commission V, section 6, page 27).

Regarding the nature of the Council's functions, which is supposed to represent—and ultimately control—both churches and missions, it is plainly said, "it should be advisory in character but should be able to act," etc. (Page 29). What is this but asking for power to carry out its own recommendations and decisions? The plea for power is repeated on page 31, section 3: "The National Christian Council (that is, its relatively small committee) should be able to act on behalf of the bodies represented." The paragraph goes on to state that many activities are being undertaken, and "therefore the Council should be able to direct these activities." Again, it is clearly stated that the Council should be clothed with executive authority, and with power to act: "It would seem that the Council elected by, and responsible to, the Conference, should be entrusted with executive functions." Only one limitation to such power is suggested, and that is an entirely vague one, viz., provided that the exercise of such executive power "does not violate the principles agreed upon by the Conference electing the Council." In case of dispute, who is to be the judge as to whether the "relatively small committee" of the Council has overstepped its authority? If decisions of this small committee (which is not in close touch with most missions, and which will be largely out of sympathy with the conservative element in the missionary body of the Chinese Church) prove to be unjust and oppressive, what relief or appeal will there be to those who suffer injury? There would be little relief from the National Council, because the offending committee would be a part of that Council. The only appeal on the mission field possible would be to the next General Conference, which now only convenes once in 10 years.

For these reasons: (1) The great expense of the undertaking; (2) The fact that our Church already has abundant agencies to conduct its work which God is greatly blessing; and that there already exists a cordial spirit of fraternal harmony and co-operation which will be best conserved by not forcing a merely external, mechanical oneness of organization on the Chinese Church and on the Missions; (3) That one inevitable result of the whole movement will be the spread of unsound doctrine, because union carries with it the virtual rejection of standards of doctrine; and because the forcing together of conservative and radical men in one institution will be productive of strife and bring harm to the cause; (4) Because this movement is really the Interchurch World Movement in another form, which our Church has already rejected as unworthy of support; (5) Because of the opposition of many influential Chinese pastors and elders; (6) Because the National Council, while claiming to be only advisory will really have enormous administrative power, and actually asks for that power; for these and other reasons which might be given, but which it is not necessary to take time to recount, our North Kiangsu Mission felt that, in justice to the Chinese Church and to our beloved Mother Church at home, this movement for a National Council ought not to be approved. We therefore respectfully present these facts for your careful consideration, believing that you will see the reasonableness of the position of the Mission. The Mission asks that you do not give your support to this movement for a National Council with all that it involves; and that in view of the crying need for funds to carry on the Church's work already in hand, you do not make any financial contribution to it.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) Henry M. Woods, Hugh W. White,
S. I. Woodbridge, Jas. B. Woods,
Delegates of the North Kiangsu Mission to the National Christian Conference.

THE EDWARD P. HUMPHREY FELLOWSHIP IN THE LOUISVILLE THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

It is the pleasure of the Faculty and Board of the Louisville Theological Seminary to announce the establishment of the Edward P. Humphrey Fellowship. Judge Alex P. Humphrey, of Louisville, has given $10,000 to the Seminary for this purpose. He is establishing this fellowship in memory of his father, Rev. Edward P. Humphrey, D.D., Professor of Church History in the Danville Theological Seminary, afterward consolidated with the Louisville Seminary. The proceeds of the principal invested are to go each year to that student of the graduating class who has maintained the highest general scholarship throughout his Seminary course. It is given to aid him in pursuing a year of post-graduate work in some other theological institution in America or Europe approved by the faculty of the Louisville Seminary. It becomes operative for the graduating class of 1924.

It is the hope of the Louisville Seminary presently to have a Fellowship attached to each major subject of study.

John M. Vander Meulen, President.

What we need is not a new compass every year, but a new determination to steer straight by the old compass, which is the Word of Christ.

"SUNRISE IN AZTEC LAND"You Ought to Read It*By Rev. Chas. E. Diehl

Yes, it is a missionary book, but it is a brand new one, just off the press, and it is well worth while. Moreover it is written by one of our own missionaries to Mexico, of whom we are justly proud.

After making a world tour of missionary investigation, Wm. T. Ellis said of the Southern Presbyterian Church, that we had the best missionaries and the poorest equipment of any church in the world. One who reads "Sunrise in Aztec Land," by Rev. Wm. A. Ross, may not be fully convinced as to the truth of the latter part of Mr. Ellis' statement, but he will feel that the first part of that statement is not far wrong, if all of our missionaries are as genuine and sane and modest and clear-visioned and earnest and industrious and hopeful as is the writer of this new missionary book.

There is nothing blatant or boastful about the book. There are no imminent crises or impending catastrophes foreseen. There is no rebuke administered because the Church has not pushed its work with more vigor in this needy and nearby field. There is no whining or complaining, there are no pet prejudices, there is nothing controversial.

The book is not written for scholars and lays no claim to great erudition. It is written for the rank and file of our Church and tells in particular about our own work. It is written in fine spirit, and tells a simple, straightforward story. It touches lightly upon the ancient history with which all are more or less familiar, and lays its emphasis upon recent developments and upon those things of special interest to us as Southern Presbyterians. The book abounds in human interest stories which grip us, and which graphically illustrate the results of missionary endeavor.

In a calm, sane way the author discusses present-day religious conditions in Mexico, and effectively answers the question concerning the need of Protestant missions in Mexico. Mr. Ross is optimistic, and writes as one who has adopted Mexico as his own country, who loves it, and who believes in its future. He sees the truth, but he sees it whole. He sees the present perils and the dangerous tendencies, but he is undismayed. His hopeful spirit, his undiscourageable soul will not permit him to doubt the ultimate issue. He believes that God is in His heaven, and if all is not now right with Mexico, by God's grace and the earnest work of His devoted followers, all will be right by and by.

Mr. Ross details the action concerning the redistribution of missionary territory with which every Southern Presbyterian should be familiar, and of which every Southern Presbyterian may be justly proud. It is one of the most unique incidents in the history of missions, and has been called "the most inclusive co-operative program that has ever been outlined by Christian forces for any nation." It was an arrangement by which, for the wider and more efficient extension of the Kingdom, the Southern Presbyterian Church agreed to give up its work in a field which it had occupied for 45 years and move to another field 1,000 miles away and take up a new work in a new field and with an enlarged responsibility. If the same sort of statesmanship, if a similar spirit of Christlike co-operation obtained in the homeland, the coming of the Kingdom with us would not be so long delayed.

"Sunrise in Aztec Land," published by the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va., is a helpful book, and should be widely read.

Light on MexicoBy Rev. Samuel M. Glasgow

To be intimately and accurately informed about the fascinating facts of Mexican history is most engaging and decidedly enlightening. To be given a graphic picture of the lights and shadows, the strength and weakness, the abuses and opportunities in the great republic, but slightly separated from us by the golden thread of the Rio Grande, is a worth-while contribution to a living, throbbing matter of deep interest in our day and land. To be allowed to trace accurately from the tiny dawn-streaks of the beginning of the growing light of life in the midst of these neighbors; on and on through paths infinitely marked by His glorious companionship and notable blessing, is a privilege accepted with eager joy by our missionary-hearted Church. In "Sunrise in Aztec Land" Dr. W. A. Ross, whose heart and hand have long been dedicated to this superb task, contributes a valued segment towards the circle of missionary literature, and turns the heart of the reader in deepening devotion to the great task before our Church in Mexico. Knoxville, Tenn.

DR. EGBERT W. SMITH'S VISIT TO THE CONGOAn Appreciation*By Dr. E. R. Kellersberger

One of the real regrets of my life is that it was denied me to be on the African field during the visit of Dr. Egbert W. Smith, our Executive Secretary of Foreign Missions. Never was a visit more needed, nor more timely, nor more inspiring and successful. Though hidden in the far distant heart of dark Africa, the effects of this important visit have rebounded back home, and are already accomplishing effective results among the churches.

It is worth calling to the attention of the Church at home that since its thirty-two years of isolated existence in distant tropical Africa, the American Presbyterian Congo Mission has had only one official visit from its board, and that was from Dr. J. O. Reavis, in about the year 1910. Did you ever hear of any business organization that paid one visit to one of its great branches in 30 years? That time of Dr. Reavis' visit is still a bright spot in the memory of those workers of the past years, when the mission was obscure, struggling for its very existence, and little known at home to the Church as a whole. In those days the work was in its infancy, having never gone beyond a single station. It was a time of seed sowing! Only since 1911 did a new era really begin. Who does not remember the great Chattanooga Convention of that year? Who can forget that ten-minute impassioned appeal of that man of God, Mr. Motte Martin, and who can forget that touching moment when 28 young men and women walked up to the platform, and offered their lives for Africa's need? Praise God for such experiences! Four new stations have been founded since then, and the work, under God's blessing, has grown by leaps and bounds, till the call has again resounded for reapers to gather the waiting harvest.

Pleas for the visit of some member of the Committee were unheard till this year. There was great joy when it was known that our beloved Dr. Egbert W. Smith was to be sent out to us. Such a visit, giving the Committee a first-hand knowledge of things unreal and far away, is of inestimable value to them, enabling them to handle far more intelligently the problems and questions that are peculiar to Central Africa. Perhaps an even more important result has been the great beneficial effect of the visit on the missionaries themselves. These workers, a faithful, far scattered band, working always, at times almost overcome by the heat of the day, and the great burden of the work done and of the work left undone—to them Dr. Smith's visit came like a cool, refreshing breeze comes with a storm on a hot, sultry tropical afternoon. He came as a leader with a world vision, seeing things as a great whole, whereas we, crowded and shut in by our pressing local needs ever before us, were apt to forget those greater, more important things. Letters full of thankfulness and praise to God have come home in large numbers to the writer of this article. All say that there has come a new desire on the part of all workers to be more filled with zeal and power than before; the slight tendency to spend more time on the stations than on the path, a tendency very easy to get in to, has been replaced by far larger periods on the primitive paths, and in the midst of heathenism. This, after all is the truest evangelism, and it is here that one finds the native as he really is, and therefore where he can be most effectively reached. Dr. Smith has again emphasized to us our Saviour's method: "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease among the people."

Neither must we underestimate the great influence of the visit on the native Christians, and the native world as a whole. The very name they gave Dr. Smith, "Mukaxa Munene" (one who causes to speak great things), testified to their esteem and reverence of him. There is also no doubt that his nice beard gave him even more prestige than he would have had otherwise.

Dr. Smith went to the field with the idea of finding out things first hand; this he did in his thorough way successfully. He didn't rush over the field in a few weeks, as is the practice of some other types of travelers, but spent months, coming back with accurate knowledge, which, according to many reports received personally, he is passing on with a zeal and power that must tell for God in Africa. It is the prayer of the African Mission that the Church at home will see the need of sending out to all its fields men of such type at least every three or four years.

A few quotations from letters will add to the force of the statements already made:

"Dr. E. W. Smith has come and gone, and we are praying that the inspiration which we received from him may stay with us as the years come and go. His visit was a pleasure to us, and we will always look upon him as our father. We are asking that he come to see us every four years."

"It is too bad you could not have been here for Dr. Smith's visit, for his stay with us has certainly been a blessing to our station and one that we needed. It has also opened our eyes to what we are doing, for on a station like Luebo there is a great temptation of letting each department take care of itself, and each department stay in its own back yard without knowing what the other is doing."

"This station as well as all the other stations enjoyed and greatly profited by the splendid conferences conducted by Dr. Egbert Smith. You missed a treat—but you know the man, and know him for what he is; and Dr. Smith's personality was the main factor in the conferences."

To this testimony many more could be added. May all our other fields soon be as fortunate as the Oriental and the African fields have been, and soon have visits from Dr. Smith or some other member of our Executive Committee of Foreign Missions. We want them, and the Church at large to know how much we appreciate and need such visits frequently.

Concord, N. C.

"THE PRESBYTERIAN FAITH"By Rev. G. W. Belk, Montreat, N. C.

The fourth edition of 2,000 copies of "The Presbyterian Faith" has just been issued. The work is well and neatly done. Here are some of the things that have been said of the book:

Rev. Walter W. Moore, D.D., LL.D., President of Union Seminary, Va.: "I congratulate you on putting so much valuable truth in a form so condensed, yet so intelligible and effective. It is just such a brief, clear, readable and convincing presentation as evangelists and ministers ought to have to place freely in the hands of the people."

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Moderator of General Assembly, writes: "I am genuinely thankful to you for sending me your book. You have rendered a very useful service to our Church by putting the disputed doctrinal points in such a clear light, and arguing for our own so strongly."

Rev. D. I. Craig, D.D., writes: "Your book on 'The Presbyterian Faith' is splendid. It is terse, sound, simple, and convincing."

Rev. Walter L. Lingle, D.D., LL.D., Union Seminary, Va.: "Here is a practical book on Presbyterianism. It was not written from the academic point of view of a scientific historian, but right out of the experience of a man who has been a practical pastor, and a soul-stirring evangelist. The author is answering questions which have been asked him over and over again in his ministry, and he answers them in a clear, concise, and convincing way. We hope that this new edition will have the wide circulation which it so richly deserves."

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Editor Presbyterian Standard: "Here we have just what is needed, couched in concise, simple and plain language, such that any one can grasp."

Copies can be had from Mrs. G. W. Belk, Montreat, N. C. Price, 25 cents each; $3.00 per dozen; $20.00 per hundred, f. o. b.

FOR THE NEW YEARBy Isabel Graham

My presence shall go with thee
So calm thy troubled fears;
My promise is unchanging
Throughout the changeful years.
Mid scenes of gloom or gladness,
When weary or distressed,
My presence shall go with thee,
And I will give thee rest.

My presence shall go with thee—
Most blest assurance here,
While in this lower valley
Beset by doubt and fear.
No evil shall befall thee,
Close sheltered to my breast;
My presence shall be with thee,
And I will give thee rest.

My presence shall go with thee—
Though in a foreign land,
Afar from home and kindred,
This covenant shall stand.
Nor time nor space can sever;
Love knows not East or West;
My presence shall go with thee,
And I will give thee rest.

—Presbyterian Witness.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

First Aids to Missionary Study—The little book "Suggestive Helps," by Mrs. Andrew Bramlett, for leaders and classes studying "Sunrise in Aztec Land," is just off the press, and is indeed an excellent and complete development of all that is promised in the title. In a modest foreword to the booklet, Mrs. Bramlett declares its purpose to be to meet the needs of the average Woman's Auxiliary of the Church, and says that while all classes may find suggestive material for programs in its pages, it is primarily intended to help inexperienced and untrained leaders; since every study class to obtain the best results should have a leader. Those leaders desiring a more advanced treatment of mission study Mrs. Bramlett refers to "The Mission Study Class Leader," by T. H. P. Sailer, Missionary Education Movement, New York City, 75 cents.

The average Auxiliary has perhaps one or two persons who usually take the lead in such matters, but with the growth of the Circle Plan and its consequent development of previously unrecognized talent, many new leaders are finding themselves. In this little book, six lessons are outlined so clearly that the woman whose ability for study has lain dormant, no matter how long, can find her way with little trouble.

For each lesson the details of a definite program are worked out, including appropriate Scripture lessons and a time for prayer, with individual assignments and leading questions to develop them. On the last page Mrs. Bramlett suggests three programs suitable for afternoon or evening:

"A Neighbor's Obligation," a simple program to be given by any small group and closing with a short pageant "Mexico's Appeal, the Open Bible."

"Illustrated Lectures on Mexico," a beautiful set of slides to be rented for two dollars.

"The Healing Light," a pageant by Mrs. H. L. Ross, All of these may be obtained from the Educational Department, Executive Committee of Foreign Missions, Box 330, Nashville, Tenn.

From that office may be obtained also any number of other attractive first aids for mission study, on whatever subject one finds most interesting concerning Mexico; her map, history, music, games, missionaries, idols, pictures, even her appetizing dishes with menus and recipes. Some of these subjects are treated in the following leaflets:

A Missionary to Mexico, an impersonation.

From Darkness to Light, pageant.

Map of Mexico.

Mexico Pictures.

Mexican Dishes, menus and recipes.

Children at Play in Mexico, games.

Idols of Mexico.

Then, too, Miss Isabel Arnold, of Elkins, West Virginia, has a very remarkable set of charts, hand-painted on cloth, giving a striking lesson and making a strong appeal from Mexico. These charts measure about five by six feet, are painted in color, and may be rented from Miss Arnold for one and one-half dollars a visit. For a study class seeking something out of the ordinary, an interesting and unusual set of "moving pictures" may be found from them.

Charlotte—The women of the First Church on last Friday night gave affectionate evidence of their love for and interest in, Miss Maude Carson who leaves Monday for San Francisco, to take passage for China, where she will represent the First Church in the mission field of North China.

The women of the church, young, middle aged, and old gathered at the church to unite in a service of praise and prayer as a farewell to Miss Carson. The service was in charge of the Woman's Auxiliary, with Miss Annic Wilson presiding.

Every woman in the audience had come to the service animated with the same spirit and that, admiration and love for this wonderful young daughter of the church, who is to devote her young life to the cause of missions in the foreign field, an idea she has had for several years and toward which she has been shaping her life.

As a student at Queens College she became possessed with this idea of service and she has with devotion and enthusiasm that is inspiring, given herself and her wonderful talents to the cause.

Miss Wilson made a most beautiful little talk in presenting Miss Carson. Never was there an audience which looked into a finer, or more earnest face than that of this young woman as she so simply and so beautifully told how the thought came to her, and how she could not resist the call. Gifted as few are in language, she talked so clearly so calmly that she steadied the heart and nerve of those near and dear to her by ties of family and friendship, and instead of tears there was a happy rejoicing.

Sitting just back of Miss Carson where she stood to speak, were eight or nine splendid young women of Queens College and the Church who are to follow Miss Carson's example. They are to prepare themselves later for service in the foreign field. Their presence was an inspiration to Miss Carson and all present.

Miss Carson is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Carson, of Charlotte, who for several years have been living in Asheboro. Maternally Miss Carson is a MacAllister, of Asheboro, and further back a Worth, one of North Carolina's most distinguished families. She is an exceptional girl—a first honor girl in every school she attended, and also at the University of North Carolina took first honor in her class wherein were men as well as women. She is beloved and admired throughout the State.—From Charlotte Observer.

Your Question is Answered Here—Leaders of circles and others so often want to know about points of interest in connection with the circle work. We believe that some one of the pamphlets advertised here will give you just the help you need.—Ed.

Helps for Your Auxiliary—Organization Leaflets:

Shall We Organize on the Auxiliary-Circle Plan?—Chart showing how the Auxiliary-Circle plan enlists all the women of the church to work for all the causes with a summary of its benefits.

Suggestions as to How to Organize the Auxiliary-Circle Plan—All necessary steps for changing from the old form of societies to the Auxiliary-Circle Plan.

Suggestions for the Work of the Circles—New suggestions for the work of your circle.

The "Exceptional Circles" in the Local Woman's Auxiliary. The Home Circle, the Business Woman's Circle and the High School Girls' Circle.

The Auxiliary-Circle Plan in Rural Churches—Is the Auxiliary-Circle Plan suited to the small church? Yes! These churches tell how they have done it.

Shall we shift our Circles? Why Shall we shift them? How shall we shift them? Who shall shift them?

Financial Budget—A short explanation of this important item.

One copy each of the above leaflets will be sent free on request. Price in quantities 2 cents each.

The Standard of Excellence Wall Chart (With Seals) Price 25 cents—Every Auxiliary should keep this chart before its members and grade its progress month by month.

Free Helps for the Officers of the Auxiliary—Suggestions for the President; Duties of the Treasurer; Duties of the Recording Secretary; Duties of Secretary of Assembly's Home Missions; Duties of Secretary of Foreign Missions; Duties of Secretary for Christian Education and Ministerial Relief; Boys and Girls in Training (for the Secretary of Young People's Work); Duties of the Secretary of Literature; Duties of the Secretary of Spiritual Resources; Duties of the Secretary of S. P. and C. Home Missions.

The Year Book of Programs for 1922-23, 5 cents each—12 Programs for Auxiliary Meeting; 12 programs for Circle Meeting; 24 Devotional Studies.

Literature for the Year-Book Programs—For Auxiliary programs alone, 75 cents per year; for Circle programs alone, 75 cents per year; for Auxiliary and Circle in one package, $1.00 per year.

Miscellaneous—Circle Report Blanks for Secretary and Treasurer, 75 cents per 100; The Auxiliary Service Card, 40 cents per 100; Blessing Boxes, 2 cents each, $1.50 per 100; Sentence Prayers, 2 cents each; Suggested Bible Studies for the Year, free; The Colored Women's Bible and Community Club; free; The Colored Women's Conferences, free; Why Not Women on the Executive Committees? By Rev. Wm. Ray Dobyns, D.D., free.

Playlets and Pageants—"Montreat," a playlet, price 2 cents; "Enter the Budget," a pageant for the Auxiliary, price 2 cents; "Choose Your College," a playlet on Christian Education, free; "The Door of Opportunity," a Foreign Mission pageant, free; "Pageant of Progress," birthday celebration of Auxiliary's Tenth Anniversary, 5 cents.

Order from the Woman's Auxiliary, Presbyterian Church, U. S., 256-259 Field Building, St. Louis, Mo.

PRELIMINARY WORK OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES FOR AUXILIARY AND CIRCLE MEETINGS

By Narcissa T. Shawhan

No meeting is called, be it regular or special, that does not require preparatory work of some character on the part of some one responsible for that meeting. The success or failure of the meeting rests upon the preliminary work of the officers and committees.

What is the preliminary work and how shall it be done?

All Auxiliary business should be thoroughly discussed at an executive board meeting and those reporting to the Auxiliary or to the circles should be urged to come prepared to present written reports and hand them in to the Secretary. Condense the business to be presented to the Auxiliary in clear, concise form in order not to trespass upon the time allotted to the session. An important matter to be decided beforehand in connection with any program or order of business is to arrange upon a TIME SCHEDULE to cover the time set for the session, be it one hour or more. From experience, however, the one-hour session secures the best attendance. Not alone is it important to tell reporting members, but visiting speakers should always be notified in advance of the meeting as to the exact time allotted to them. Today conventions and all important gatherings are limiting all speakers, even the most prominent of the country. This plan prevents one speaker from monopolizing the time allotted to another. Gen. Henry M. Robert, author of "Robert's Rules of Order," says, "An extension of the speaker's time is unfair to the speakers following." This schedule will be of no value unless a TIME-KEEPER is appointed for each meeting to relieve the chair of this responsibility. While it has been customary for the president to act as time-keeper, it is far better for her to be free to give her undivided attention to the general progress of the meeting.

It is difficult at best to always rise to the occasion of conducting an important session, taking care of the many unexpected things that arise. It is important to decide how the signal shall be given at the expiration of the time and call the time in the way indicated beforehand.

Let it be remembered that when the Chairman of Program requests a four-minute talk or report, she has the entire hour taken up, therefore reporting members and speakers should practice by a clock that they may not exceed the time limit prescribed. Four minutes seems a short time, but we learned during the great World War that patriotic speakers could give the best they had in that time, and it was always illuminating! As they did then, let us to today, put what we have to give in concise language, be brief and to the point, and the circle members will be glad to welcome visiting speakers again.

The most important preliminary duties of the president are: to post herself well in regard to all Auxiliary work; to subscribe to a Church paper and the Missionary Survey and read them thoroughly; to secure the organization literature from the Auxiliary superintendent and study it. That is not all, keep a scrap book! Clip every helpful idea for the officers, circles and committees, placing it in a scrap book for permanent reference, passing the idea on to the officer or member who can use it to the best advantage. This will not only help the present administration, but will serve as FIRST AID to those who follow.

Work up a good program! Assign parts well in advance of the meeting. Have a special feature. Have several four-minute speakers rather than one forty-minute speaker. Exception to this rule being made for unusually fine speakers or those from a distance. Limit speakers and reports.

A Special Feature! By this is meant something new, original and unexpected. When possible have a visiting speaker or musician on the program, securing local talent or that from a distance. Use every means to have the spiciest, richest program available.

Four-Minute Speakers! Several four-minute speakers give new interest and variety to the program, and hold the attention of the assembly far better than a forty-minute speaker unless the speaker is exceptionally fine! A triangle program is the most effective where the membership is large and hard to interest. That is the Devotional Exercises, the Missionary Program and the Social Numbers, including readings, addresses and music, followed by refreshments and a good fellowship hour. In preparing a program do not mix business matters and inspirational features. Where the business and inspirational program are combined at the same meeting, it is well to separate the two with the devotional period, making that the first number of the program directly following the brief business session. This plan bridges the gap between the business and social program.

Advertise! Publicity is essential to the success of every meeting. This publicity may be secured by advertising well and far in advance of the date set to give members time to adjust their affairs in order to attend. According to the "Auxiliary Circle Plan," the Church Day has been already established and it may seem superfluous to advertise a day and hour which has been permanently decided upon, but even when women lead such busy lives nowadays, they often say, "I forgot the meeting completely." Hence it is up to those responsible for the meeting to prevent this. A carefully prepared notice of the meeting, giving name of organization, date, hour, place of meeting and the inspirational program in full should always appear in a preceding issue of the local paper and a brief notice of the meeting should be published in the morning paper of the day of the meeting.

Personal or Telephone Invitations! After letting the members know of the good things in store through the newspapers, follow this up with personal or 'phone messages by the circle telephone committees, in this way reaching every member. This is the most effective way of extending invitations as it is possible to put the element of interest and enthusiasm into the personal touch. Note: Every circle should have a telephone committee and the personnel of this committee should be changed monthly.

Notice in Church Bulletin, Sunday School, Prayer Meeting! This is the logical way to advertise a Church Meeting and yet by these mediums alone we would never reach the STAY-AWAYS, the ones whom we are directed to work upon unceasingly for at least a year or during our term of office.

Post Cards or Letters to Members! An invitation should be given to every member to be present at the meeting. Those who cannot be reached by 'phone should be reached in this way by mail, the circle secretaries attending to these communications. The custom prevailing in so many religious organizations of having only about one-third of the membership active in attendance, and contributing of their talents and substance, cannot be too strongly condemned.

Mailing Programs! On account of the expense attached to this meeting of mailing programs as a form of invitation, Auxiliaries with a membership of several hundred, use this method only on rare occasions, such as Auxiliary Rally Days in October, Talent Day in January, Birthday Parties, etc., but with a small membership it might be done regularly. This invitation showing the program numbers is recommended by all leaders as the most effective way to interest the STAY-AWAYS in attending. By this method one Auxiliary increased its attendance from about 50 to 300. It is worth trying.

Conduct Meetings According to Parliamentary Forms! Last, but far from being the least, is the preparation of an order of business. This will provide for every variety of business that is likely to come before the meeting, and will insure the consideration of each subject at its proper time, in its proper order, and when used in conjunction with the customary parliamentary forms, the effectiveness and efficiency of the Auxiliary may be increased 100 per cent. By increasing the effectiveness is meant that the attention and interest of the members is increased by the promptness in opening and closing on time, considering each subject an item of business at its exact time and with dispatch. The efficiency is thus increased by being able to maintain the schedule and close at the hour designated for the meeting. It is well to let members understand that there is not only an hour to begin, but an hour has been set for adjournment. Any matters of importance left over, should be referred to the Executive Board and if urgent the president may call a special meeting of the Board.

In order to attract church women to the meetings and Auxiliary entertainments these must be brought to a higher standard of perfection, both in point of snappy business sessions, and artistic, inspirational programs.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(UNDER AUSPICES SYNOD'S COMMITTEE OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR, DAVIDSON, N. C.

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

With this issue of the Standard the Young People's Department makes its bow. The promoters of the idea hope the department will mean something really worthwhile in the work for the young people of the Synod as it seeks to promote their interests by chronicling their work and plans and by telling them of the newest plans and methods.

We are happy to be able to have in the department Dr.

Hill's weekly write-ups on the Sunday School Lesson and Mr. Garth's weekly write-ups on the Christian Endeavor topic. We will expect our other ministers and older friends to help us from time to time, but the department is designed especially for the young people. A young man has been asked to take charge and he wants the young people to take the department for their own and to help make it a success. Success will come only if the local organizations tell us what they are doing and planning to do. Each local organization should have a correspondent for the department or instruct its corresponding secretary to write up its work for the department. We will be glad to have our pastors help their young people in sending in news for the paper. North Carolina Synod is a great Synod and the Standard a great paper. Let us make this a great department in that paper! We hope that each young people's organization not already getting the Standard can arrange to do so and keep up with the department.

Special attention this week is called to the notice on this page concerning North Carolina Sunday School Day.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

January, 14

JESUS TEACHING HUMILITY

Lesson: Luke 14. Printed Text: Luke 14:7-14

GOLDEN TEXT—"God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble."—1 Peter 5:5.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

7 And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms; saying unto them,

8 When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not down in the highest room; lest a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him;

9 And he that bade thee and him come and say to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room.

10 But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher; then shalt thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.

11 For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

12 Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbors; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee.

13 But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind:

14 And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 19. What is the misery of that estate whereinto all men fall?

A. All mankind, by their fall, lost communion with God, are under His wrath and curse, and so made liable to all miseries in this life, to death itself, and to the pains of hell for ever.

This lesson inculcates humility. But it also teaches other truths. It shows us that good deeds, things approved by God and man, may be lawfully done on the Sabbath day. It furthermore enjoins charity or kindness to the poor and needy. In contemplating this passage we will consider The Patient Healed; The Lesson Taught; The Two Wedding Guests; Entertaining the Poor. Healing, on the Sabbath was often a matter of controversy between Christ and the Pharisees. He maintained that it was lawful. They held that it was forbidden.

I. The Patient Healed

The man cured had the dropsy. He was at the house of one of the chief Pharisees, where Christ dined. The Saviour asked the lawyers and Pharisees, "Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath day?" They make no reply. Christ knew their opinion, but wished them to declare themselves. He did not hesitate to teach the truth in the presence of those who opposed it. He proceeds to answer His own question by deeds and words. He heals the man not by any labored process but by bidding the disease depart from him. He did the same for the infirm woman in the synagogue who had been paralyzed for 18 years. The patient is immediately healed and restored to a sound condition. He wields Divine power at whose behest all kinds of disease depart.

II. The Lesson Taught

By this act of healing and other similar cures our Saviour taught that "it was lawful to do well on the Sabbath day." Whatever God sanctions and man's enlightened conscience approves may be rightfully done on the Sabbath day. Whatever obviously contributes to man's welfare, or is essential to his life, or promotive of his health or condition to God's glory, it is lawful to do on the Sabbath day. This is in harmony with the truth proclaimed by Jesus, "The Sabbath was made for man not man for the Sabbath." Christ not only by His deed taught that it was lawful to heal on the Sabbath but by words that His adversaries could neither contradict nor oppose. He tells them, "You pull an ox or an ass out of a pit on the Sabbath." If it is lawful to relieve an animal it certainly is right to rescue a human being. He thus appeals not only to His own authority but to their reason and practice. It was not wonderful that He silenced His opposers.

III. The Two Guests at a Wedding

Christ next teaches humility. He does this in the parable of two persons invited to a wedding. One is proud and the other is humble. The proud guest scats himself in the most honorable place he can find. But there may be invited a more exalted person than himself, and the entertainer may come and say to the presuming guest, "Give this man place," and he has to take with shame a lower station. The humble guest takes a low position, and his host may come and say to him, "Friend, go up higher." "Then shall he have reverence in the presence of them that sit at meat with him." The whole parable is intended to illustrate the truth, "For he that exalteth himself shall be abased and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." The Word of God and the experiences of human life agree in enforcing the truth, "Before honor is humility." A man must be an humble apprentice before he can become the master workman, or the lowly servant before he can be the rejoicing believer.

IV. Entertaining the Poor

Having taught what may be rightfully done on the Sabbath, and the need of humility to the attainment of honor, our Saviour in the latter part of our lesson enjoins kindness or charity to the poor and needy. He does this by showing for whom a feast should be sometimes spread. He says, "When thou makest a dinner or a supper call not thy friends nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen nor thy rich neighbors." They can reciprocate and recompense thee. He does not forbid us to entertain our relatives and friends, neither does He enjoin this upon us. He knew that natural principles would suggest and cause us to do this. But He does not desire His disciples to confine their benefactions to their friends and kindred. He commands, "But when thou makest a feast call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind," and thou shalt be blessed, for they cannot recompense thee." Yet such benefactions are not without compensation. "Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." These are the classes that are apt to be overlooked on festival occasions. Kindness to such the Lord Himself will reward.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

EVANGELISTIC MISSIONS

- M., Jan. 15—First Home Missionary: Mark 7:24-30.
- T., Jan. 16—Everybody a Missionary: Acts 8:1-8.
- W., Jan. 17—Joys of Missionaries: Luke 10:17-22.
- T., Jan. 18—Vision of Man's Need: Acts 16:9-15.
- F., Jan. 19—New Fields: II Cor. 10:13-18.
- S., Jan. 20—Missionary Zeal: II Cor. 2:12-17.

Sun., Jan. 21—Topic: Evangelistic Missions at Home and Abroad. Luke 24:45-53.

How can our church help home evangelism?
What good has gospel-preaching done abroad?
Why do new communities need evangelism?

The Synod of North Carolina at Lincolnton passed a resolution asking all the Sunday Schools and the Young People's organizations to observe the second Sunday in January, considering Synod's Home Missions and contributing to it with a special collection. It is very appropriate that this should be done, since Synod has affiliated the two committees of Home Missions and Sunday School and Young People's Work, and some of the funds of the Home Mission Committee are to be used in assisting the work done by the Committee of Sunday School and Young People's Work. It is the hope of this last named committee that our schools and societies will respond so liberally to this call that the funds necessary for the promotion of greater efficiency in Sabbath School and Young People's Work will come from the young people themselves.

North Carolina Day—January 14, 1923—In the Sunday Schools and Y. P. Societies

In view of this special day, the chairman of the Committee of Sunday School and Young People's Work, Rev. J. G. Garth, earnestly requests all the Sunday Schools to observe this day, and the young people's organizations to do likewise. He also asks that the topics for January 14th and January 21st, for Christian Endeavor Societies be exchanged, so that the Home Mission Topic may fall on January 14th.

Rev. A. W. Crawford has published a valuable little booklet, entitled "North Carolina, the Great Opportunity," which may be secured from him at Greensboro, N. C. An effort has been made to send one of these books to all the pastors, superintendents, and young people's leaders in the Synod, and it is hoped that all of these leaders will bring these books into use this week, and let the young people have them for study, as there are many interesting and useful facts contained.

Below we publish a short resume of this book to be used for the meeting next Sunday, if you don't have the booklet in hand:

North Carolina is making the greatest growth of any State in the Union today.

In its crops it climbed from twelfth place to fifth place in three years.

In manufactures from twenty-seventh place to fifteenth place in ten years. It leads now all the Southern States except Texas and all the New England States except Connecticut and Massachusetts in manufactures.

It is spending $25,000,000 a year to build 6,000 miles of new roads in four years, using 16,000 men.

It is building new school houses and colleges and university buildings and spending more for its schools in one year, now than we used to spend in four years.

We are growing wonderfully in every other way.

What shall we do about the part we love most, our churches and Sunday Schools?

One-half of all our people are not Christians. Hundreds of thousands of children do not go to Sunday School and many thousands have no Sunday School to go to.

Synod has said we are going to put a church and a Sunday School in every place in North Carolina where one is needed, and has asked the Sunday Schools and Y. P. Societies to help to do it.

Synod has set the second Sunday in January—the 14th—as North Carolina Day and asks every Sunday School and Y. P. Society to help do this thing then.

Those whom the Synod's mission fund helps to support have organized 275 Sunday Schools in North Carolina, 70 in the last three years; and 133 churches, 24 of them in the last three years.

We are helping now to support 70 preachers and 14 Sunday School workers, ten of them women mostly in the mill villages.

We need to help put in 41 more preachers and Sunday School workers right now, who will organize a hundred Sunday Schools and after a while perhaps that many new churches.

We need to help build 40 church buildings and 50 manses or preachers' homes, right now.

All in North Carolina. What will you do to help?

A MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT WILSON MOORE OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S LEAGUE

Dear Friends: Can you realize that within five more months we will be meeting together for another great conference at dear old Davidson? And just think how much there is for you and for me to do between now and then!

It is like seed-time down on the farm. In these few short months we must faithfully prepare and cultivate the soil, that when the time has come for the great growing showers we may be ready for them. I am thinking, in what I say, of your faithfulness and mine in living each day and each hour of the day just as near to the Master as we possibly can, living the Christ life in our work and play, at school, in the home, and in our C. E. or Y. P. work each week. We are certainly going to have a season of great growing spiritual showers at our Davidson conference next June, and we must be thoroughly conscientious in the duties of each day now for by then these great little opportunities of today will have gone forever.

If I can help you in any way in your work I would be so glad if you would just write to me about it.

Most sincerely,
Wilson Moore.

U. T. S., Richmond, Va.

NORTH CAROLINA DAY—JANUARY 14, 1923

In the Sunday Schools and Y. P. Societies

Don't fail to observe it next Sunday and take an offering for Synod's Home Missions.

C. T. CARR

We are glad to show a cut of Mr. Claude T. Carr, our Superintendent of Sunday School and Young People's Work in the Synod of North Carolina. Until July 1st, when he began his connection with his present work, Mr. Carr was a principal of public schools in Asheville, and the regularly employed superintendent of the Sunday School of the First Presbyterian Church of Asheville, and likewise the choir leader of the church.

Mr. Carr is well known to the young people who have attended our young people's conferences, as he has been at three of them, leading the music there. The chairman of the Committee of Sunday School and Young People's Work received from the First Church, Asheville, a set of resolutions passed, expressing their sincere regret in losing so valuable a worker as Mr. Carr, but as they could not restrain him from entering this larger field, they wished him God-speed in it. Mr. Carr is ready to assist in setting up Teacher Training Schools in any part of the Synod, and will respond to calls from the young people's societies. With an efficient worker, our work ought to advance with steady strides.

FRANK P. WILSON

This picture shows our friend, Mr. Frank P. Wilson, Christian Endeavor Field Secretary for North Carolina, Frank, as so many of his friends know him, is now in his third year of traveling in the interest of this great young people's society. All along he has been doing a fine work. Endeavorers and other young people who have heard him speak and been in his conferences realize what a fine worker for young people he is.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WEEK

Attention of the Endeavorers is called to the fact that Christian Endeavor Week is scheduled this year for January 28th to February 4th. This week includes February 2nd, the anniversary date of this greatest of all young people's societies, which has now circled the globe and includes over four million young people.

The suggested daily programs include Denominational Day, Radio Day, Union Day, Play Day, Christian Endeavor and Decision Day. Mr. E. P. Gates, 41 Mt. Vernon St., Boston, Mass., General Secretary of the Christian Endeavor work, will be glad to furnish complete plans to anyone writing him.

DAVIDSON YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE

Next June 12-19 the North Carolina Synod's Young People's Conference will again meet at beautiful and historic Davidson College. A splendid program is being worked out, one better than ever. A full write-up will be given in the Young People's Department later, but all our young people are asked to be thinking about, praying for and planning to attend the conference.

Church News

AT THORNWELL ORPHANAGE

The Christmas season was unusually happy at Thornwell Orphanage. So many good friends remembered the fatherless ones in such loving and generous ways.

The Talmadge Brothers, of Athens Ga., were the real big Santa Claus, sending liberal supplies of fruits, nuts and candies. Mr. Costa, also of Athens, sent thirty gallons of ice cream for the Christmas dinner. Many other individuals remembered the children and also many societies and Sunday Schools poured in their gifts.

While the smaller children had enough dolls and toys to make them happy the older children were remembered with useful and beautiful things. All seemed delighted.

One twelve-year-old boy said near the close of the day: "If any boy at Fowler Cottage did not have a good time today, he needs an operation."

The gifts in money were sufficient to take up all outstanding bills for support.

On January 1, 1923, Mr. Geo. W. Young, of Clinton, placed $6,000 in the endowment of the orphanage as a memorial to his father, Mr. R. N. S. Young.

School opened January 2d and the 357 children and workers have set out in earnest upon the duties of the New Year. L. Ross Lynn.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Liberty and Pickens—These churches, of which Rev. H. A. Knox, is pastor, were thoughtful of their minister as the holidays approached. The Liberty people sent him a generous supply of "good things to eat" while the Pickens people remembered him with a very substantial check. The pastor and his family greatly appreciate these tokens of affection and good will, and they most earnestly pray that God may greatly enrich the members of this field during the days to come. H. A. Knox.

York—Rev. Dr. E. E. Gillespie, the pastor of the Presbyterian Church being ill with influenza was unable to take part in the installation of Rev. John Scott Johnson, at Blacksburg.

Dr. Gregg, of Rock Hill, preached the sermon and repounded the questions.

Rev. J. B. Swann, charged the pastor and elder T. J. Estes, of the Salem Church charged the people. The services were highly instructive, and were enjoyed by all present.

Greenwood—On December 24th, the Sunday School of the First Presbyterian Church presented a beautiful Christmas program. There was an offering for Thornwell Orphanage, which amounted to $700.

This Sunday School has again won the banner for the Presbytery of South Carolina for its offering to Sunday School Extension Work. It has held this banner for 12 or 15 years, successively, with the exception of one year, when there was a delay in sending in the check.

On last Sunday morning, at the church service, the pulpit was filled by Rev. L. Ross Lynn, D.D., of the Thornwell Orphanage, at Clinton. The pastor, Rev. J. A. MacLean, Jr., preached at Ninety-Six, at a union service of the congregations of that town.

Fort Mill—At the conclusion of the usual morning worship on the fifth Sunday in December, the diaconate was increased by the addition of six members who were then ordained and installed. These are William Ardrey, Walter T. Barron, Brice D. Culp, George Fish, Frederick Nims, and J. Alexander Withers. Owing to change in residence and death, the board of deacons had been reduced to six, and it was the desire of the congregation that the board should consist of no less than 12 members.

The pastor, Rev. R. H. Viser, having been granted a month's vacation by the session, expects to spend this time during the month of February in New York city where he will attend the White Bible Study School.

A Christmas pageant was given in the church on Christmas eve which was attended by a congregation which filled the auditorium, and was most favorably received. The decorations were beautiful, and the music and the story of the pageant were most appropriate to the season. An offering amounting to $60 was made for the cause of Home Missions. Special offerings have been recently made for the Equipment Fund and for Thornwell Orphanage.

There has recently been a considerable increase in the enrollment of the young men's Bible class of which George W. McKenzie is president, the number now enrolled being 81. C. S. Link, Cor.

NORTH CAROLINA

Maxton—Dr. H. G. Hill, who writes our exposition of the Sunday School lessons, expects to go to Florida on the 16th of January.

His many friends wish him a safe and pleasant trip, with the hope that he may find the fountain of youth which De Soto failed to discover.

Sharon—From the Oklahoma Presbyterian Messenger, we learn that Rev. C. H. Little, the pastor of this church will accept a call to the church at Madill, Okla.

We regret to lose brother Little who has done fine work in this Presbytery. He will do even better in a new and developing field as Oklahoma.

Statesville, Front Street Church—On December 31st, Rev. McKendree R. Long, was ordained and installed pastor of the Front Street Church.

Rev. S. L. Cathey presided and preached the sermon, Gal. 6:9.

Rev. J. Andrew Smith charged the pastor, and Dr. J. M. Clark charged the congregation.

The other members of the commission were elders J. A. Brady, of Statesville, and J. P. Watt, of Lora.

Dr. H. M. Parker was to have taken part, but sickness prevented.

Durham—Rev. Dr. D. H. Scanlon and Mrs. Scanlon will spend three months abroad, visiting Palestine, Egypt and Southern Europe. They will sail from New York February 3d, on the "Empress of Scotland," and will return via Quebec, Canada, about May 1st.

The pulpit of this church will be supplied about one-half the time of the pastor's absence by Mr. Simpson, assistant minister, and the remainder of the time by the following ministers:

Feb. 11—Rev. Prof. Ernest Trice Thompson, M.A., Union Theological Seminary.

Feb. 25—Rev. W. M. White, D.D., Raleigh, N. C.

Mar. 11—Rev. Prof. Thomas W. Lingle, Ph.D., Davidson College.

Mar. 25—Rev. J. A. McClure, D.D., Petersburg, Va.

April 8—Rev. Prof. J. B. Green, D.D., Columbia Theological Seminary.

The West Avenue Church, Gastonia, had the pleasure of a visit from Dr. J. M. Rogers, of Soonchun, Korea, Sunday, December 31st. Dr. Rogers made what was conceded the most impressive missionary address ever heard in this church. Since he and his wife sail January 11th for their work it was the last address delivered by Dr. Rogers before his return to Korea. He made a deep and lasting impression.

The comfort and beauty of the West Avenue manse has been greatly increased by the recent addition of a room and other features as well as the repainting inside and out, and the installation of a hot water heating plant. A donation party with the pastor and wife in object was started on Thanksgiving eve by the congregation and lasted through the Christmas holidays. The occupants of the manse are certainly well cared for in this field.

Charlotte, Caldwell Memorial Church, Rev. G. F. Bell, pastor. This congregation is looking forward with special interest to the series of services to be held in this church for ten days beginning January 21st, with Dr. W. R. Dobyns, of Birmingham, Ala., preaching at the morning services and Rev. Chas. H. Pratt, of Montgomery, Ala., preaching at the night services, and Rev. F. H. Wardlaw, of Guthrieville, S. C., leading the song service.

The first communion service in the new church was observed on Sunday, January 7th, and was largely attended. Forty-one new members were welcomed into the church at this service, having been received during the quarter. Five of these came on profession of their faith and 36 by letter from other churches.

Charlotte—No greater opportunity has ever come to Sunday School workers in Charlotte and Mecklenburg County than the opportunity to hear Dr. Marion Lawrance, Chicago, Consulting General Secretary of the International Sunday School Association, in the three-day Sunday School Convention, which is to be held in the First Baptist Church, Charlotte, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, January 14, 15, 16, 1923.

Dr. Lawrance heads the list of Sunday School workers of the world, and is referred to as "The prince of Sunday School workers."

Taking part on the program will also be Miss Daisy Magee, a very noted Children's division worker, and Mr. D. W. Sims, General Superintendent of the North Carolina Sunday School Association.

Miss Magee was formerly connected with Methodist Conference Sunday School work in Mississippi, and for a number of years was children's division superintendent for the Georgia Sunday School Association. She took a special course in Boston University last winter, and is counted a top-notch in children's work.

Those who attended the convention held in Charlotte the last two winters remember the excellent type of work done by Mr. Sims, who needs no introduction to Sunday School people in this county. He is known far and wide for his unique, spicy speeches, which are full of inspiration and practical help for Sunday School workers.

Mebane—Our efficient superintendent, Mr. S. G. Morgan, received notice from the Committee of Publication that our Sabbath School had again won the Presbyterial banner for Orange Presbytery for the largest offering per member on Rally Day. This makes five years in succession that this honor has come to our school and we look with pride upon the banner as it adorns our Sunday School room.

The Woman's Auxiliary observed the week of prayer and study for Assembly's Home Missions, the attendance was larger this year than usual and a very liberal offering was made for this cause.

The Sabbath School held the usual Christmas service with appropriate exercises, a very interesting program was rendered, combining the Christmas spirit with an appeal for our aged ministers, the offering which was for Ministerial Relief was very liberal.

With their usual thoughtfulness, the congregation graciously remembered the pastor and his family by filling the pantry of the manse with a bountiful supply of good things.

Report of the Sabbath and Family Religion Committee. Adopted by Wilmington Presbytery, October, 1922. Recommendations:

1. That we express our appreciation of the helpfulness of the committee appointed by the Woman's Auxiliary, and request the Auxiliary to make it a Permanent Committee to continue to co-operate with the Committee of Sabbath and Family Religion, also that the personnel of the committee remain the same.

2. That every session appoint in each congregation a layman as local chairman of Family Religion who shall see that the subject of Family Religion is presented in "Four Minute Talks" by men and women selected from that church or other churches in their respective Bible classes of Sunday School every Review Sunday or once a quarter. The ladies are requested to present it also in their Auxiliary meetings. That the name of this local chairman be sent to the chairman of Presbytery's Committee.

3. That every minister preach on Family Religion at least once a year, and also to present it incidentally as often as occasion offers. It is recommended that a canvass be made of the congregation to learn how many homes have and will maintain the Family Altar. We recommend the first Sunday of November as the day for this sermon.

4. That the ministers be urged to present to each newly married couple the literature on Family Religion and to strive to start them to observe it from the first. That we request the Synod's Stewardship Committee to provide this literature in suitable form.

5. That the ministers take the opportunity presented at the baptism of the children to urge upon the parents the duty and privilege of conducting the family altar as their part of the covenant which they enter in presenting their children to God. It is recommended that the pastors visit and instruct the parents in the homes before the baptism.

6. That Presbytery call the attention of our people to page 127, paragraph 315-11 of the Book of Church Order referring to the place for the baptism of infants.

7. That Presbytery call the attention of the sessions to the importance of emphasizing the regular attendance of the children on the church services.

Notice to Wilmington Presbytery:

Dear Brethren:

Since I am out of the bounds of Presbytery, please comply with the above recommendations and send the name of the local chairman to Rev. J. J. Murray.

Sincerely yours,
H. F. Beaty.

ALABAMA

Mobile, Government Street Church—On December 31st, Messrs. R. H. Smith, W. J. Parham, R. O. Harris, M. S. Adams and J. F. Hogan were ordained and installed deacons in this congregation. At the evening hour, despite the inclement weather, a splendid congregation gathered at the Lyric Theatre where a special New Year's Eve service was held. Dr. Ogden spoke on "America at the Threshold of a New Year."

GEORGIA

Atlanta, North Avenue Church—Dr. E. L. House is delivering a series of lectures at the North Avenue Presbyterian Church on the general theme of "The Psychology of Religion." He speaks each afternoon at 3:00 and in the evening at 7:30. The series closes on January 12th.

Atlanta, North Avenue Church—From The Church News, we quote concerning special meeting in the church under Dr. House:

Dr. House has presented the truth in a very interesting way, and in a way also that would attract people who would not be interested ordinarily in a sermon or Bible conference address. While all students of psychology or all students of religion might not agree with all of his statements they will all at least be interested in the way he puts them.

You will be helped by hearing him; so do not fail to come. The topics of the remaining lectures are given below.

Program for this week—Monday, January 8—3:00 p. m. "The Making of a Will." 7:30 p. m. "The Power of Concentration."

Tuesday, January 9—3:30 p. m. "How to Heal One's Self." 7:30 p. m. "Jesus the Conscious Mind of God."

Wednesday, January 10—3:00 p. m. "The Psychology of Dress." 7:30 p. m. "The Father, the Subconscious Mind of God, and the Holy Spirit, Superconscious Mind of God."

Thursday, January 11—3:00 p. m. "Where Is Heaven?" 7:30 p. m. "The Psychology of Love."

Friday, January 12—3:00 p. m. "The Psychology of Temptation." 7:30 p. m. "How to Get Health and Keep It."

KENTUCKY

The Kentucky Presbyterian Educational Movement was splendidly successful in the campaign that closed just before Christmas. The goal was a million dollars and the sum of $1,129,031.05 was subscribed, with other substantial benefits accompanying the campaign. The Kentucky Presbyterians are rejoicing over the result. Of the million and more subscribed the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Louisville, will get $300,000; Centre College, Danville, $300,000; with an additional $200,000 promised by the General Educational Board conditioned upon the raising of the Million Dollar Fund, Kentucky College for Women, $200,000, Witherspoon and Pikeville Colleges, $50,000 each; Lees Institute, Jackson, the Matthew T. Scott Industrial School, Phelps, Sayre School for Girls, Lexington, and the Louisville Orphanage, Anchorage, each coming in for substantial sums.

The Presbyterians of Kentucky have achieved one of the greatest victories in the educational history of Kentucky. The campaign to secure $1,000,000 for Christian Education closed at noon on December 19th and at that time the statement of the official auditor showed that pledges totaling $1,129,031.05 had been received. In addition to this amount Kentucky is to receive $200,000 for Centre College as a donation from the General Education Board of New York, this gift having been offered on condition that Kentuckians subscribe the one million dollars. It is expected that on proper certification of the successful completion of the campaign the $200,000 from New York will be paid over to Centre College. The wonderful success of the movement means that over $1,000,000 net will be added to the resources of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Kentucky, Centre College, Kentucky College for Women, Pikesville College, Witherspoon College, Sayre School, Matthew T. Scott, Jr., Academy, Lees Collegiate Institute and the Synodical Orphanage at Anchorage. Through the liberality of the Kentucky Presbyterians the entire expense of the campaign has been met.

Aside from the financial value the movement has created a revival of interest in Christian Education in Kentucky to say nothing of other by-products. Pastors and people have responded splendidly to the call of their church. A continuation committee has been appointed which will seek to conserve every phase of interest in the work of Christian Education in Kentucky.

Dr. John C. Acheson, president Kentucky College for Women, was appointed chairman of the committee with J. C. Norton as secretary.

A meeting of the United Commission has been called by the chairman, Dr. R. T. Gillespie, the purpose being to hear final reports on all matters pertaining to the work which has been done and to make plans for the future. This meeting will be held on December 29th at 1:00 p. m., in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Louisville.

OKLAHOMA

Hugo—Rev. E. M. Monroe, Jr., of Gainesville, Ga., has been called to become pastor of this church. It is not known yet whether or not he will accept.

Durant East Side—Rev. A. R. Craig is doing a fine work. He was ordained by his Presbytery recently in S. C. He will give part of his time beginning with January as a professor in the O. P. C. He expects to leave for China some time next summer.

Broken Bow—Rev. B. L. Bowman has just completed his first year as pastor. Twenty-four members have been received during the time and the work is prospering greatly. There are now 57 resident members.

Durant First—Officers and members of the Durant First Church are looking forward to a series of revival services which will be held next spring in connection with the First Methodist Church of this city. It is proposed to continue the services an entire month. Burke Culpepper will be the evangelist.

Marietta—This church is prospering greatly under the leadership of their new pastor, Rev. J. T. Hall. The first year of his pastorate is just completed. During that time nearly 50 members have been received and the pastor's salary raised $900. The Woman's Auxiliary gave $52.25 to the Stewart Robinson School Rebuilding Fund and have contributed liberally to other causes. The Sunday School also makes frequent contributions to benevolent causes. Large plans are being made for the New Year.

Boswell—Since Rev. J. J. Ramsay took charge of this work, 14 members have been received into the church, nine on profession of faith. Two small children were baptized.

Mr. Ramsay is now the only Presbyterian preacher in Choctaw county, and frequently calls are made upon him to preach in the country school houses on Sunday afternoons. During the two months he has been at Boswell, he has opened up preaching points at three country school houses and will organize a Sunday School at one of these places.

TENNESSEE

Memphis—Rev. J. J. Hill, D.D., has removed to Memphis (1547 Court St.), and is a welcome addition to the Presbyterian forces of the city.

Westminister is remodelling its building to have double its present capacity. At Christmas the pastor received a purse well-filled with gold.

VIRGINIA

New Providence—This old church, next to Steele Creek Church, of Mecklenburg County, is the largest country church in our Assembly.

The pastor, Rev. Dr. H. W. McLaughlin, has an article on "The Country Church," in "The Field," in which he proves that, whatever may be true about the dying condition of the country church in the North, in this section they prove too full of life to be a decent corpse. His people are about to build a modern Sunday School room at the cost of $30,000, without the necessary equipment.

The pastor has prepared a Scripture Reading Calendar, by which the Bible can be covered in one year.

Altogether, it looks as if Steele Creek will have to look to her laurels.

Richmond—The General Assembly's Training School for Lay Workers resumed its session after the holidays with much zest and enthusiasm. Three new students were enrolled, one from South Carolina, one from Georgia, and one from Mississippi. The total enrollment has reached about 116.

The school is looking forward with much pleasure to the 1923-24 session when it can be housed in its own new buildings. The Senior class numbers about 42. Several have volunteered for the Foreign field, as also for the Home field, and especially Mountain mission work. The students are offering themselves for summer work, and the president will be glad to communicate with superintendents and others in placing them for the summer.

Christiansburg—This church recently elected, ordained and installed the following officers: Elders R. T. Mosby, V. M. Sowder, A. P. Johnson, and H. K. Campbell. Deacons, Richard Shelton and W. L. Pierce. Mr. M. H. Tompkins, a deacon-elect was claimed by death before taking the office. The Christmas offering for the orphans, which is an institution of long standing in this Sunday School, amounted to $1,200 this year. This amount is divided between Thornwell and Lynchburg orphanages. The Sunday School also observed a "white gift" Christmas with appropriate exercises. The first Sunday of January marks the third anniversary of the coming of the present pastor, Rev. T. P. Johnston, to this church. A review of the three years' work brings gratifying results. There have been 108 additions to the church, with a net addition to the roll of 75. In the three years practically an 80 per cent increase in benevolent and current expense contributions, with the larger growth on the side of benevolences. There has also been gratifying growth in all other departments of the church's work. The Lord hath prospered us and we give Him the praise.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Church of the Pilgrims, Washington—As daylight was breaking over the city on Christmas morning the Junior Christian Endeavor Society, reinforced by volunteers from the older societies, assembled at the church, and after awakening Mr. and Mrs. Bird with cheery Christmas carols sung on the steps of their home, the young people started out in autos to carry the glad tidings to lonely hearts throughout the city. At the Children's Hospital they made happy the little children who were convalescing. At the Louise Home their fresh young voices delighted the older people. And at the Central Union Rescue Mission their message of joy and good will brought peace to many a battered soul.

On New Year's Eve the Senior Endeavorers held an impressive watch night service. Many earnest prayers were offered of sorrow for past unfaithfulness, of thanksgiving for past mercies and of humble confidence in the Saviour's blessing as we dedicated ourselves to Him for service in the opening year.

Correspondent.

PERSONAL

Dr. and Mrs. McLean Rogers and little son David Ross, who have been in this country for the past year on furlough, are returning this week to their work in Korea, leaving Charlotte on January 9th.

Their many friends will be interested to learn of Mrs. Rogers complete restoration to health. During his year at home Dr. Rogers has attended special clinics bearing on his work in Korea and has also presented the cause of medical missions most effectively in numerous churches throughout the Assembly.

THE DAVIDSON CAMPAIGN

Memorial Class Rooms

Four of the 30 class rooms to be in the New Chambers Building at Davidson have already been spoken for as memorials. These lecture halls will stand as perpetual monuments to the interest in Christian training and development on the part of prominent North Carolina Presbyterians. It is estimated that these halls will cost an average of five thousand dollars each. A brass plate will state to students and visitors for generations to come that the room has been built as a memorial in honor of the person named, and any Presbyterian may so name one of the recitation rooms, who will subscribe $5,000 or more, which sum may be paid in over a five year period to the Davidson Campaign. Among the rooms already spoken for are the Bible Lecture Hall, and Psychological Laboratory. Other halls will be Astronomical, Economics, English, French, German, Greek, History, Latin, Mathematics and Spanish.

Stone and mortar fall to decay, but memorials as parts of a well-founded educational institution are as imperishable as civilization.

Further information concerning these memorials may be obtained from the college officials.

News of the Week

Last week a cyclone swept over Scotland County and did much damage at Wagram, N. C. S. H. Dunlap had three ribs broken and leg bruised.

The New Yorkers who danced and drank away the old year paid for the fiddle. Some spent the night in jail, and others were fined.

Repeal of the state "quart law" will be sought at the coming session of the General Assembly by Representative T. L. Gwyn, of Haywood County, according to talk among those interested in legislative affairs pertaining to Haywood. Mr. Gwyn's bill is expected to be state-wide in its scope.

An appeal for further economy in governmental expenditures and for greater saving among the people was made in a new year's statement by Secretary Mellon.

In Richmond, Va., one woman is dead and five persons are in hospitals suffering from bullet wounds accidentally inflicted during the celebration of the advent of the new year.

There has been for some days no street railway service in Spartanburg, S. C., owing to disagreement between the city administration and the S. C. Gas and Electric Company.

Germany has proposed the following non-war pact to France: The treaty provides for solemn pledge by all powers interested in the Rhine that none of them shall wage war on the other for a generation, without authorization of people, expressed through popular referendum.

John G. Dawson, of Kinston, has been chosen as speaker of the House.

There were 9,484 bales of cotton counting round as half bales ginned in Lincoln County from the crop of 1922 prior to December 13, 1922, as compared with 5,943 bales ginned to December 13, 1921.

The business outlook for the coming year is full of hope, according to official report as well as private opinion.

The story of 1922 is one of world economic progress, and prospects are favorable for 1923, Secretary Hoover, of the department of commerce, declared in a statement in which he reviewed the past and hazarded a forecast of the future year.

Textile men of Charlotte, retail and wholesale merchants, and bankers, are agreed that the past year has shown a steadily increasing tendency toward normal business conditions, and free predictions of even better business conditions, with a healthy growth in earned capital, are made for this city and section.

A bill to require every officer, agent and employee in Buncombe County receiving public funds from any source whatsoever to daily deposit all such receipts in the office of the county treasurer and to require the treasurer to deposit the same in the depository banks of the county each day, on which deposits the county must be paid interest based on the daily average balances for the month at the end of each month, which Senator Plato Ebbs will introduce in the General Assembly as applicable to Buncombe County, has received wide favor.

Defeat of the bill introduced into the North Carolina Legislature by Representative T. E. Owen, of Sampson County, which would provide for the abolition of capital punishment in the state of North Carolina, is predicted by Democratic members of the House of Representatives.

The Sagamore Manufacturing Company, of Fall River, Mass., is contemplating the purchase of a Southern mill as an adjunct to the local plant, it was announced by Treasurer William L. S. Brayton. He said the corporation already had the plans of two plants of 500,000 spindles each located within 30 miles of Charlotte, N. C., and it was assured that one of them would be purchased in the near future.

In order to keep the first line of the American navy on a par with the sea forces of the other great powers, President Harding asked Congress for a special appropriation of $6,500,000 as a beginning on a battleship modernization program.

Hydro-electric developments in the vicinity of Tuxedo, planned by the Manufacturers Power Company to serve North and South Carolina interests, eventually developing over 70,000 horsepower, representing an investment of between three and four million dollars, will probably be stated at an early date, with the Turner development, 12,000 horsepower, to cost around $750,000, as the initial step.

That the state of North Carolina may share in a four million dollar endowment fund from the general education board for the medical school in this state, without co-operation or association with Trinity College, was the information emanating from responsible sources.

The alliance between France, Great Britain, Italy and Belgium fell apart January 4th over the treatment of German reparations. The Latin powers, France, Italy and Belgium, remain loosely grouped together on that subject, while England, although separating from them, expects to co-operate, and especially with France, on other questions.

A broken brake beam that dropped from one of the Pullman sleepers, caused the derailment of the northbound Dixie Flyer, fast Jacksonville-Chicago train, at 6:43 o'clock January 2nd, causing injury to 24 persons, three of them seriously.

The supreme court upheld North Carolina's revaluation tax law, which means that the rate of one-tenth of one per cent on the 200 million dollars value of the railroads may be imposed for the year 1920 to 1923, inclusive. The state's income from this source thus would be around $800,000.

Secretary Fall, of the interior department, will retire from office March 4th, it was announced at the White House, to return to the practice of law and the conduct of private business affairs in New Mexico.

PRESBYTERIAN PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM

Tithers' Goal

16,000 Tithers Enrolled in the Tithers' League of the Synod of North Carolina

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Mal. 3:10.

Names, Church and Presbytery of those who have enrolled in the Tithers' League of the Synod of North Carolina:

- 548—Mrs. N. J. Phillips, Wilmore, Mecklenburg.
549—Miss Edith Phillips, Wilmore, Mecklenburg.
550—M. A. McCready, Wilmore, Mecklenburg.
551—Miss Thelma Phillips, Wilmore, Mecklenburg.
552—N. J. Phillips, Wilmore, Mecklenburg.
553—C. D. Wilson, Wilmore, Mecklenburg.
554—E. J. Stockton, Wilmore, Mecklenburg.
555—Titus M. Hartsell, Locust, Mecklenburg.
556—J. W. Starnes, Locust, Mecklenburg.
557—Earl Hartsell, Locust, Mecklenburg.
558—Mrs. A. H. Temple, Locust, Mecklenburg.
559—Miss Nettie Gold Temple, Locust, Mecklenburg.
560—Mrs. J. H. Beall, Concord, Mecklenburg.
561—Mrs. T. L. Green, Lenoir, Concord.
562—Miss Regina Reid, Lenoir, Concord.
563—Miss Stella D. Cloyd, Lenoir, Concord.
564—Miss Virginia Beall, Lenoir, Concord.
565—H. C. Payne, Taylorsville, Concord.
566—R. C. Carson, Vineland, Wilmington.
567—Mrs. R. C. Carson, Vineland, Wilmington.
568—Dr. N. S. Morton, Norlina, Albemarle.
569—E. W. Flowers, Mecklenburg.
570—G. Ed. Crowell, Oakboro, Mecklenburg.
571—Mrs. G. Ed. Crowell, Oakboro, Mecklenburg.
572—E. O. Ross, Oakboro, Mecklenburg.
573—C. C. Efrid, Oakboro, Mecklenburg.
574—P. J. C. Efrid, Oakboro, Mecklenburg.
575—H. P. Efrid, Oakboro, Mecklenburg.
576—Mrs. Ida Miller, Oakboro, Mecklenburg.
577—Mrs. B. C. Furr, Oakboro, Mecklenburg.
578—B. A. Efrid, Oakboro, Mecklenburg.
579—Miss Mamie Price, Siler, Mecklenburg.
580—Mrs. W. C. Stephenson, Siler, Mecklenburg.
581—Mrs. J. W. Stephenson, Siler, Mecklenburg.
582—Mrs. M. E. Plyler, Siler, Mecklenburg.
583—Miss Mattie Davis, Siler, Mecklenburg.
584—Miss Grace Biggers, Siler, Mecklenburg.
585—Will Davis, Siler, Mecklenburg.
586—Page Price, Siler, Mecklenburg.
587—Y. Loyd Price, Siler, Mecklenburg.
588—Carr Price, Siler, Mecklenburg.
589—Robt. S. Glenn, Siler, Mecklenburg.
590—Robt. A. Plyler, Siler, Mecklenburg.
591—Amzi Davis, Siler, Mecklenburg.
592—G. W. Glenn, Siler, Mecklenburg.
593—J. E. Biggers, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
594—J. F. Thompson, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
595—Mrs. J. F. Thompson, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
596—E. J. Stinson, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
597—Mrs. F. B. Thompson, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
598—Mrs. J. F. Biggers, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
599—Mrs. W. C. Underwood, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
600—Mrs. R. J. Whittle, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
601—R. J. Whittle, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
602—Miss Ruth Underwood, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
603—Miss Vivian Kendall, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
604—Rev. W. C. Underwood, Indian Trail, Mecklenburg.
605—Miss Mildred McAulay, Mt. Gilead, Mecklenburg.
606—Miss Grace McRae, Mt. Gilead, Mecklenburg.
607—Mrs. W. B. Cochran, Mt. Gilead, Mecklenburg.
608—Miss Ruth McRae, Mt. Gilead, Mecklenburg.
609—G. A. McRae, Mt. Gilead, Mecklenburg.
610—W. C. McNeill, Mt. Gilead, Mecklenburg.
611—Rev. J. W. Stork, Mt. Gilead, Mecklenburg.
612—Rev. Chas. R. Bailey, Church in Pines, Fayetteville.
613—Rev. E. N. Caldwell, Graham, Orange.
614—Rev. A. A. McLean, Lenoir, Concord.
615—Miss Ava Mae Stafford, Mooresville First, Concord.
616—Miss Maggie Vick, Carthage, Fayetteville.
617—A. C. Huneycutt, Albemarle, Mecklenburg.
618—J. F. Griffin, Midland, Mecklenburg.
619—R. A. Brooks, Midland, Mecklenburg.
620—Miss Fannie Barrett, Midland, Mecklenburg.

Educational

Flora Macdonald College has received a letter from the chairman of the New Bern Fire Disaster Relief Committee in acknowledgement of cash and clothing gifts sent from the students and faculty. Total value of these gifts amounted to over $400.

Miss Mabel Beddoe, contralto of New York, was heard in recital on Friday evening in four groups of songs. Miss Beddoe was assisted by Miss Mary Morley, of New York, at the piano.

Dean C. G. Vardell will give organ and piano recitals in the months of January and February—January 17th in Hickory, January 19th in Gastonia, and February 15th in Albemarle.

A South Carolina Branch Alumnae Association was recently organized in the city of Columbia with Mrs. Dera Drye Parkinson as the first president.

The Little Rock, Ark., Gazette, issue of December 31st, carried a one-column cut of Miss Willie Lawson, class of 1915, at present supervisor of opportunity schools for Arkansas and recently appointed deputy superintendent of public instruction.

Dr. L. F. Massey, former president of Louisville College and now pastor of Trinity Methodist Church in Red Springs, addressed the student body at chapel on last Friday.

- 621—Miss Daisy Dorton, Robinson, Mecklenburg.
622—Mrs. J. W. Miller, Robinson, Mecklenburg.
623—Miss Pattie Johnston, Robinson, Mecklenburg.
624—Jas. W. Leverington, Robinson, Mecklenburg.
625—Miss Emma Hood, Robinson, Mecklenburg.
626—Miss Helen Lemmond, Robinson, Mecklenburg.
627—Mrs. D. N. Lemmond, Robinson, Mecklenburg.
628—Miss Bessie Miller, Robinson, Mecklenburg.
629—J. W. Miller, Robinson, Mecklenburg.
630—E. A. Morrison, Allen, Mecklenburg.
631—W. G. Thompson, Allen, Mecklenburg.
632—Miss Etta Fink, Allen, Mecklenburg.
633—Isaac Linker, Allen, Mecklenburg.
634—J. Lee Campbell, Allen, Mecklenburg.
635—R. L. Thompson, Allen, Mecklenburg.
636—J. J. Tarlton, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
637—Mrs. T. W. Mann, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
638—J. N. Lee, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
639—Jno. Z. Benton, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
640—R. H. Allen, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
641—G. C. L. Junker, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
642—C. S. Harkey, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
643—H. B. Forbis, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
644—Mrs. J. M. Miller, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
645—Miss Emma L. Biggers, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
646—Miss Gloma Osband, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
647—Mrs. J. F. Keziah, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
648—V. L. Hartsell, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
649—Mrs. R. J. Crump, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
650—Mrs. J. W. McWhiter, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
651—Mrs. R. C. Forbis, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
652—Mrs. E. C. Forbis, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
653—Mrs. J. N. Lee, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
654—F. C. Allen, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
655—Mrs. F. C. Allen, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
656—Mrs. Olin Morris, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
657—Miss Albee Harkey, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
658—Mrs. L. W. Brown, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
659—Miss Mary M. Davis, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
660—Evans Brown, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
661—J. M. Miller, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
662—J. W. McWhirter, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
663—T. W. Mann, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
664—Mrs. W. C. Dulin, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
665—J. C. Williams, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
666—Mrs. I. A. Lee, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
667—Jas. H. Williams, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
668—Lawrence T. Wilson, Philadelphia, Mecklenburg.
669—Carey P. Lowrance, Prospect, Concord.
670—Lidia Williamson, Second Presbyterian, Mecklenburg.
671—Mrs. J. D. Williamson, Second Presbyterian, Mecklenburg.
672—Miss Minerva L. Barnette, Pineville, Mecklenburg.
673—Gary Hansel, Hawfields, Orange.
674—Ralph Turner, Hawfields, Orange.
675—McBride Albright, Hawfields, Orange.
676—Earl Covington, Hawfields, Orange.
677—Ernest Hansel, Jr., Hawfields, Orange.
678—Hughes Scott, Hawfields, Orange.
679—Goodman Albright, Hawfields, Orange.
680—Tom Stunt, Hawfields, Orange.
681—John Turner, Hawfields, Orange.
682—Harrison Hansel, Hawfields, Orange.
683—Oscar Stuart, Hawfields, Orange.
684—Hartly Stuart, Hawfields, Orange.
685—Lois Covington, Hawfields, Orange.
686—Jean Hansel, Hawfields, Orange.
687—Mozelle Iseley, Hawfields, Orange.
688—Mary Mehane, Hawfields, Orange.
689—Margaret Albright, Hawfields, Orange.
690—Agnes Scott, Hawfields, Mecklenburg.
691—Elizabeth Hansel, Hawfields, Orange.
692—Clara Mae McAdams, Hawfields, Orange.
693—Miss Lula Mae Albright, Hawfields, Orange.
694—Annie McAdams, Hawfields, Orange.
695—Miss Evelyn McAdams, Hawfields, Orange.
696—Mrs. J. H. Phillips, Hawfields, Orange.
697—Mrs. James Covington, Hawfields, Orange.
698—Mrs. Jno. R. Stuart, Hawfields, Orange.
699—Mrs. W. A. Woods, Hawfields, Orange.
700—Mrs. J. R. White, Hawfields, Orange.
701—Mrs. R. C. White, Hawfields, Orange.
702—Ernest Turner, Hawfields, Orange.
703—Miss Ruth Fenton, Hawfields, Orange.
704—J. W. Bason, Hawfields, Orange.
705—R. C. White, Hawfields, Orange.
706—Ester L. Covington, Hawfields, Orange.
707—Mrs. M. E. Hansel, Hawfields, Orange.
708—Jno. J. Fenton, Jr., Hawfields, Orange.
709—Jno. J. Fenton, Jr., Hawfields, Orange.
710—C. D. Covington, Hawfields, Orange.
711—R. Elizabeth Fenton, Hawfields, Orange.
712—Mrs. R. W. Scott, Hawfields, Orange.

This list is published as evidence of the fact that Christians are more and more accepting the tithes as the minimum amount a faithful steward may return to the Lord for the purpose of carrying out His last command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Does not love for the Master and a lost world require more of us than the law required of the Jews? Tithers' Enrollment Cards and Tithers' Literature can be secured from J. B. Spillman, Secretary of Stewardship, Synod of North Carolina, Charlotte, N. C.

O Lord, pinch me into the remembrance of my promise, that so I may re-enforce my old vows with new resolutions.

Every year in its coming enlarges our opportunities for service. This age in its multitudinous needs has a great call for us.

CHILDREN

A C. E. PIN

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl ten years old, and am in the fifth grade. Miss Katie Shaw is my teacher and I like her fine. I have one sister and three brothers. The oldest one has finished college and is teaching school. I am a member of the Junior Christian Endeavor. I have a C. E. pin. I have recited the child's catechism and I read my Testament 15 minutes every night.

Your little friend,
Barbara Johnson.

Rex, N. C.

LIKES TEACHER FINE

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy eight years old. I am in the third grade at school. I like my teacher fine. Her name is Miss Ethel Eborn. I have two sisters and three brothers. I have one sister and one brother married. I am the baby one in the family. I belong to the Presbyterian Church. Please don't let this letter reach the wastebasket, for I want to surprise mother and father.

Your unknown friend,
L. H. Martin, Jr.

Rowland, N. C.

IN SECOND GRADE

Dear Standard:

This is my first letter to the Standard. I sure do enjoy reading the children's letters. I am a little girl eight years old, I go to school at Maxton; I am in the second grade. My teacher is Miss Edith Sullivan; I like her fine. I will close for fear of the wastebasket.

Your little friend,
Carrie Lee McRae.

ONE OF SIX

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl nine years of age. I go to preaching and Sunday School at White Hill Church. Our superintendent is Mr. J. D. Cole, and Rev. C. E. Clarke is our pastor. We like them both fine. I have three brothers and two sisters. Hoping to see my letter in print soon.

Your little friend,
Rachel Cameron.

Carthage, N. C., Route No. 2.

SINGING CHUMS

Dear Standard:

I am eleven years old. I am a student at Springfield. Miss Margaret McLaughlin is my teacher, I like her fine. We have three teachers in our school; Mr. John M. Keith teaches high school, my teacher, grammar grades, and Miss Margaret Gilchrist primary. I am a member at Union. My pastor is Rev. Mr. Clarke. We had a fine meeting in October; our pastor was assisted by Rev. A. T. Lassiter. We are all looking forward to Mr. Lassiter coming back some Sunday this winter, to tell us about a church he has just organized in Johnston County. Lillie Muse and Dorothy Sweet are my chums, we play together at school, and we sing together too, sometimes.

Your little friend,
Helena Vick.

Vass, N. C.

WHEN SCOTTY RAN AWAY

Scotty was almost six years old when he ran away for the first time, and six years is pretty old for a wise and faithful collie to take up new habits. However, you could not really call it a habit, for, so far as I know, it was not only the first time that Scotty ever ran away but also the last.

From the time that Scotty, then a roly-poly little puppy, had journeyed in a small box from Boston to the Maine village where Lawrence was eagerly waiting for him at the express office, he had been content to stay right on the farm where Lawrence lived. Of course, he went all over the farm itself, for he had many things to attend to there. For example, there were the hens that had to be kept out of the garden, and the cows to be driven to the pasture bars at night, and sometimes a woodchuck to be chased out of a clover patch into its hole. And when it was time for Lawrence and the other children to come from school, it was his duty to sit under the trees in the front yard until he saw them coming and then to dash down the road to meet them; but for five years or more he never went alone to the village or to visit the dogs that lived on the neighboring farms.

Then came the day, in early summer, when Scotty ran away. Anyway, "running away" was what they all called it, although when you hear the story you may decide that it was not running away at all.

Now, Lawrence had two colts—Dandy and Dora—and it was hard to say whether he thought more of them or of Scotty. They were all very good friends, and Scotty looked on the colts as being under his special care, as, indeed, he looked on everything else in the stable and barns. When the time came for the colts to go out to pasture, Lawrence's father arranged to have them spend the summer in the pasture of a man who lived about three miles away. The home pasture had all the live stock that it could feed, and the colts would do very well in the distant pasture, which they would have all to themselves.

One fine morning Lawrence drove Dandy and Dora off to their pasture. Scotty sat under the trees and watched them go, but showed no more desire to follow than he had a hundred times before when he had been left behind. Two or three hours later, when Lawrence returned, Scotty was there to greet him as usual. Just as Lawrence came into the yard, Mr. Watson, a neighbor, drove by.

"Hello, Lawrence!" he called. "How are the colts these days?"

"I've just put them out to pasture for the summer," answered Lawrence.

"What! In the morning?" exclaimed Mr. Watson.

"Yes. Why not?" replied Lawrence, who could not understand what the time of day had to do with it.

"Let me tell you something," said Mr. Watson. "When you put young stock, like your colts out to pasture for the summer it is well to turn them loose toward evening rather than in the morning. In either case they will begin to feed at once. It is far better for them to get the habit of feeding at night, and to stay in the cool shade during the day, than it is for them to sleep at night and to feed by day under the hot sun and with all the flies bothering them."

"I see," said Lawrence slowly, "but I guess it is too late now."

Mr. Watson drove on, and Lawrence went to the house with Scotty close at his heels.

All that day Scotty was round as usual, but the next morning he was missing. No one could understand it. In vain Lawrence called and whistled. He went to the neighbors and then to the village, a mile away, but he found no one who had seen Scotty. The day passed, and when bedtime came the collie had not returned. It was the same the next morning—no sign of the faithful old dog that all the family were so fond of. The place was not the same without him. Lawrence was the only one who stoutly held that Scotty would surely return.

Late in the afternoon of the second day Lawrence set out for the distant pasture to see how Dandy and Dora were getting along. When he reached there, what do you suppose he saw? Yes, I am sure you have guessed. It was Scotty. The two colts were under some wide-spreading trees that grew in one corner of the pasture, beside a little stream, and Scotty was watching them. When they tried to come out into the sunny pasture where the feed was good, Scotty promptly drove them back to the cool shade. That happened several times, and then Scotty saw Lawrence and came bounding toward him with glad little barks. No longer guarded, the colts were free to run into the pasture, and they ate the short grass so hungrily that Lawrence knew that they had been kept in the shady corner all day.

Then he remembered what Mr. Watson had told him. "I do believe, old Scotty," he cried aloud, "that you understood what Mr. Watson said, and have been getting the colts into the habit of staying in the shade by day and of eating by night!"

And Scotty pranced round him as much as to say, "Yes, and now I'm pretty hungry myself!"

How glad they all were to see the runaway when he and Lawrence reached home a little later, and what a supper Scotty ate!

You can figure it out for yourself, but the fact remains that all summer long, after the visit of Scotty to the pasture, the colts did their feeding in the cool of the evening and in the very early morning, and spent the day in the shade, away from the hot sun and the bothersome flies. And those who know Scotty are sure that he ran away from home those two days just to teach the colts that habit.—John Clair Minot, in The Youth's Companion.

TWO SENTRIES

In an appeal for supplies that came one day to the Paris office of the American fund for French wounded there was a request for a pair of pajamas for a soldier who was to get the Croix de Guerre and who had no garment in which to receive the decoration. This is the story of that soldier.

On a night so foggy that the men could not see the wall of the trench three feet in front of them this man was doing sentry duty. His dog, crouched by his side with ears well forward and twitching nose, was on the alert for any scent.

To all appearance there was nothing to disturb the fog-enforced silence, but suddenly the dog began to tremble with excitement and to lick the soldier's hand. The sentry listened, but the fog was like cotton wool in his ears. He strained his eyes, but a ghostly whiteness barred his vision. He shifted his position as he leaned against the wall of the trench, and his thoughts wandered to his home in the north, to his wife and children.

But the dog again thrust his muzzle into his master's hand and rubbed against his legs. The sentry's wandering thoughts came back. With bayonet fixed and every sense alert he listened, but he heard no sound. The dog whimpered, and then, like a flash, he was gone. He ran like mad down the tortuous trench, evidently in sheer terror.

The sentry was dumfounded. Apparently there was no cause to give an alarm. Might there be some mining going on that he could not hear? He stooped and laid his ear to the ground. Not a sound! Then all at once he understood. The enemy was approaching! Soundless, invisible, it came nearer and nearer. The asphyxiating gas was sluggishly rolling over the ground toward the trench. The dog had scented it long ago and had run from it in uncontrolled fear. And now the sentry ran, shouting to his sleeping comrades to wake and put on their gas masks. In a second the trench was in commotion.

Then the enemy began to fire. A few shells burst overhead, and hand grenades began to fall. But the awakened soldiers were ready, and nature for a moment came to their aid. A puff of wind blew back the fog, blew back the gas, and gave a glimpse of the enemy pouring out of their trenches and rushing to the attack. With the wind now behind them, the French counter attacked and drove the enemy back into their trenches. Silence fell again.

"Where is the sentry?" the captain asked. "He saved the regiment."

They looked for the sentry, but he could not be found that night or the following day. In the darkness of the second night the sentry's dog came into the trench, whining and anxious. He ate a few mouthfuls ravenously and drank thirstily and hurriedly; then he whined and paced nervously back and forth. He would not be quieted, and finally a sergeant said: "Who volunteers to go with me?"

Four men rose. Running with heads down and sometimes crawling on their stomachs, they followed the dog into the darkness of "No Man's Land." Then, halting at a shell hole, the dog whined softly. The sergeant groped about and touched a man's boot. They rescued the half-buried sentry and dragged him back to the trench. He seemed dead, but the dog knew that there was life in his body. The stretcher bearers took him to the nearest hospital. Then he revived and seemed likely to live.

One day the general of the division came to see him. "You are to be decorated," he said, "with the Croix de Guerre."

"What have I done?"

"You saved your comrades from death; perhaps a hundred men would have died except for your warning."

"It was not I," the weak voice replied. "My dog saved them."

"Then your dog shall be decorated too."

A wan smile passed over the sentry's lip's. "Where is my dog?"

"On the steps of the hospital," an orderly replied. "We can't drive him away."

"Bring him in," said the general.

On the breast of the sentry the general pinned the medal of honor, and on the collar of the dog too he fastened the military recognition of faithfulness and courage.—Youth's Companion.

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Cole-White — In Mount Vernon Springs Church, on December 26th, by Rev. Jonas Barclay; Mr. Nathan Cole, of Wilmington, N. C., and Miss Stella Kirkman White, of Mount Vernon Springs, N. C.

Hargrave-Calhoun — McNeill-Calhoun—In the Church in the Pines, Laurel Hill, N. C., on December 27, 1922, by the pastor of the brides, Rev. Charles R. Bailey, Mr. Edwin Hargrave and Miss Katie Calhoun and Mr. Malcolm McNeill and Miss Ruth Calhoun, all of Laurel Hill, N. C.

Young-Jones—At the Presbyterian manse, Wallace, N. C., December 24, 1922, by Rev. W. P. M. Currie, Mr. Leonard Young, of Rose Hill, N. C., and Miss Radie Jones, of Willard, N. C.

DEATHS.

Johnston—On December 23, 1922, Mrs. Frances Rosanna Johnston departed this life at her home near Robinson Presbyterian Church. She was 73 years old. She leaves a husband and four daughters. She was a consistent member of the Church, a true Christian, a faithful mother and a loving and devoted wife.

JAMES A. CAVENAUGH, SR.

Shortly before dawn, December 5, 1922, at his home, Wallace, N. C., Mr. James Arthur Cavanaugh, Sr., quietly passed from the scenes and labors of earth to his eternal reward, in the 59th year of his age. He appeared to possess a strong and vigorous manhood until the spring of this year, when he had a breakdown in health from which he never fully recovered. Consequently, although he was shut-in for only a few days prior to the end, his death was not altogether a surprise to his friends and perhaps not unexpected to himself. He expressed himself as not afraid to die.

Mr. Cavanaugh was twice married. His first wife was Miss Mary C. Blake to whom he was united April 12, 1883, and who preceded him to her eternal home, April 28, 1918. She proved herself a worthy helpmeet and one who looked well to the ways of her household. Surviving this union are five children, three sons and two daughters, all of whom were near enough to be with him during his last illness. On November 1, 1921, he married Miss Frances Harris who survives him and who faithfully and lovingly watched by his sick bed and spared not herself in her efforts to comfort and cheer him.

The deceased was born and reared in Duplin County, and in boyhood he chose Jesus Christ as his Saviour, and united with Piney Grove, Union Baptist Church which was located near his father's home. In later years when he came to make his home in Wallace, he united with the Wallace Presbyterian Church of which he was afterwards elected a deacon and held this office until his death. He was loyal and devoted to his church. He was liberal in his support thereto. His seat was seldom vacant at the service. He was faithful and true to his pastor. The last word he uttered was the name of his pastor.

As a citizen Mr. Cavanaugh was wisely progressive, he was interested in the upbuilding of his community and town. He was connected with a number of the leading enterprises of his home town. As a business man he was successful, as a citizen he was honest and prompt in meeting his obligations, as a husband and father he was thoughtful and affectionate. He was a helpful neighbor, a good friend, a Christian man. We shall miss his presence, his friendship, his help, but his work here was done and God took him.

May the God of the covenant minister to the fullest measure the comfort of His grace to the bereaved and lonely hearted widow, and bless with the guidance of His Spirit each of his sons and daughters.

"He saw a hand we could not see

Which beckoned him away,

He heard a voice we could not hear

Which would not let him stay."

JOHN BULLOCK WATKINS

John Bullock Watkins, the second son of Henry T. and Annie E. Watkins, was born January 23, 1854, at Milton, N. C. When one year old his parents moved to Granville County, where he grew up. In 1874 he married Annie C. Bullock, and in 1880 they moved to Henderson, N. C., where he entered business and lived the remainder of his life. His death occurred November 13, 1922. The immediate cause of death was pneumonia, though he had been in failing health for a number of years. His fatal illness lasted but a few days.

Mr. Watkins began business as a tobacconist but afterwards went into the lumber business and built up a fine trade. Integrity of character and strict honesty marked his successful career. A square deal with an honest margin of profit was his controlling principle. Men knew that they would get this from him whether their eyes were open or shut. His word was considered as good as his bond. All this won patrons for him and built up his business. He practiced the scriptural injunction, "Owe no man anything," and expected the same from others. Characters like this are of inestimable value to any community and we never fully appreciate them until they are gone.

In his religion Mr. Watkins showed the same strength of character that he did in his business. Indeed, with him, the two were inseparable. He united with the Nut Bush Presbyterian Church in 1876, moving his membership to Henderson on going there. Here he was elected one of the original deacons in that church, continuing in this office until his death, although he was thrice elected to the eldership. He held the office as a sacred trust and performed his duty in the fear of God. No man was ever more faithful than he, using the office well and "purchasing to himself a good degree and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus." He was a good man, "full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom." His private life was marked by simplicity, sincerity and singleness of purpose. Being of a "meek and quiet spirit" and naturally reserved, he was a man of few words, but his influence was far-reaching for good. The work he loved best was a mission Sunday School that he and his brother started near Henderson which has now grown into a church. It bears the name of St. Andrews and stands as a memorial to the two brothers. They both gave to it the best that was in them of service and self-denial.

Just a word now about Mr. Watkins' home life. He accepted with humility the God-given place of priest in his own house. The family altar and the Sabbath day were sacred things to him and they both remain as sweet memories and fixed habits in that home. The atmosphere of the home was that of love and peace, under the gentle but firm guidance of the priestly father's hand. The writer has had the privilege, as pastor, of going in and out in this home both in its times of joy and sorrow and counts it all as one of his precious treasures.

Surviving Mr. Watkins are his wife and eight children, as follows: Rev. Thomas H. Watkins, William C. Watkins, John B. Watkins, Jr., Mrs. S. K. Rowland, Miss Frances D. Watkins, Chesley Watkins, Mrs. M. C. Bowling, and Dr. R. E. Watkins; also two sisters, Mrs. Claude Hunter and Miss Annie M. Watkins.

Signed: R. A. White,
Former Pastor.

JOHN B. WATKINS

Whereas, God in His wisdom has called from time to eternity our fellow deacon, John Bullock Watkins, therefore, be it resolved by the Board of Deacons of the First Presbyterian Church of Henderson, N. C.:

1. That the removal to his home above of Mr. John B. Watkins, who has been a deacon in our church since coming to Henderson, this church has lost a beloved brother and officer, whose life of truthfulness and righteousness has been an inspiration to his pastors and to the members of the church. His place will be sadly missed while his memory will be a precious one.

2. That in the removal of Mr. John B. Watkins we recognize our Father's loving will and pray that He who doeth all things well and makes no mistakes, will comfort his loved ones, and that his mantle may fall on the other members of the Board of Deacons.

3. That a page in the minutes of the Board of Deacons be set apart to the memory of our brother and a copy of these resolutions be handed to the bereaved family with our warmest sympathy and that they be published in the Church papers and the Daily Dispatch.

Francis A. Macon, Chairman.
Richard C. Gary,
L. C. Brinkley, Committee.

MRS. MARTHA RUSSELL STANFORD

On Sunday afternoon, December 3, 1922, the spirit of Mrs. Martha Russell Stanford quietly "fell on sleep," at the ripe age of 89 years. Being a member of Sharon Church since childhood, she was always faithful in attending church services until a few years ago, when the aches and pains of this life made it impossible for her to enjoy this privilege, so characteristic of her.

Her memory will be cherished as an encouragement to love the place of prayer and the people of God's house.

Cordial, cheerful and contented, she lived among us honored and loved by all who knew her.

We think a gentle voice echoes: "Well done thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." When the cold breath of sorrow blights our joys,

Let us trust in our Father undismayed;
There is gladness no wintry grief destroys
In the land where the roses never fade.
Where no sin, neither sorrow dare invade,
We shall meet our loved ones there,
And eternal glories share;
In the land where the roses never fade.

Mrs. J. G. Brown,
Mrs. A. M. Rea, Sr.,
Mrs. W. W. Rankin,
Auxiliary Committee.

North Carolina— The Great Opportunity

This little booklet of 41 pages, just from the press, is brim full of exact, up-to-date facts.

It has been prepared with much care for all who love and want to know North Carolina, and especially the religious problems which we face:

For the ministers, officers and members of the Presbyterian Church that we may have an intelligent grasp of the task which God has committed to our trust:

For the Auxiliaries, the Y. P. Societies, the Sunday Schools as a handbook for careful study.

For "North Carolina Day" in the Sunday Schools and Y. P. Societies, set by Synod January 14th; for the Auxiliaries in January, Synodical Home Mission month, it is just right and just in time.

The study of the facts makes us lift our heads with a new pride in our great State as it lunges forward with giant strides of achievement in every line.

It appalls with a fresh revelation of our need—the idle power, the unused resources, the illiteracy; truly—but way beyond all, the great unchurched and unsaved mass of men.

It humbles with something like trembling before God lest His Church fail to see and to grasp her opportunity in this her Great Day

We believe the Facts will grip you as they have gripped us.

They are given you in His name.

Any number of copies can be secured at bare cost of printing and mailing, 5 cents, by addressing A. W. Crawford, Supt., 320 S. Meadenhall, Greensboro, N. C. Postage stamps will do for small orders.

Story and Incident

ON LEARNING ECONOMY

There is something about this little matter of learning economy which requires a good beginning in childhood. Economy isn't just an experience—it is a habit. When a habit is the outgrowth of wise training and thoughtful guidance there are many times in life when it assumes the qualities of a fine game but when it springs upon one as an experience there is no game in it. It is a dreary tussle against odds.

I have watched a grandmother arrange odd bits, cut from left-over patches of materials, into a bed covering of such artistic pattern and workmanship as to warrant its being hung in an art collection. What prompted the effort entailed? Not merely a desire for "pick-up" work! In her childhood this grandmother had been taught that thrift lay behind the gathering of bits—otherwise pure waste—into a valuable whole.

You have sat beside your mother while she cut the backs of daddy's worn shirts into prettily-designed house aprons for herself or play dresses for baby. Why should she take this trouble? It would require no more of her time to make these articles from new materials! Why not toss aside the entire shirt for dust cloths? Because in her youth mother was taught that the saving of a garment equaled the earning of one. When wars and other emergencies break like tornadoes upon the world mother and her kind are the nations' savers for they do not have to learn the lesson of conservation. Theirs is a real preparedness. It is a habit—not an experience.

In one of the papers in a large middle-western city there has been running for some time a small space—not more than the depth of three average paragraphs—devoted to the day's best thrift idea, for which a small prize is given. To me it is a fascinating department, for there regularly is a collection of experiments in thrift which is of singular interest and between the lines so many tales are told! One woman writes of the way in which babies' sweaters may be made from the better parts of worn underwear, if first the underwear is treated to a color bath. Another tells of dainty shoes for little tots which may be fashioned from tops of cast-off kid gloves. There is nothing novel, in the advice of another to make play and school bloomers from stockings whose legs have outlived the feet. But how they do save laundry! There are numberless ways in which pennies, which grow into dollars, have been saved and often the economies of food preparation, discovered by thrifty women, steal in to find place among the economies of clothing. The department makes very fascinating reading—this study of the trend of minds trained to the practice of thrift and the worthy ideas evolved by them! They represent creative ability and ideas!

It is highly probable, of course, that in many instances grim necessity is the mother of invention described, but quite as often, I am sure, this little space contains the result of research which is almost the unconscious ingenuity of the grown-up mind which has learned economy in childhood. It abhors waste as it abhors destruction. To it, both are sins. Moreover, the conservation of materials and the achievements of creating something useful from some other thing which has outlived its usefulness, to that mind, has become quite as fascinating as any other game where the stakes are worth playing for.

To be sure there are more ways of learning economy than in knowing how to salvage waste materials. There are self-denials that may mean only the shutting of one's eyes when the ice cream soda fountain looms in sight but which, if practiced often enough and cheerfully enough, help a great deal in preparing one in later life to walk with dignity past that gorgeous limousine! They add to them sum total of happiness. And they help immensely in shooing off the green-eyed monster with his little hates and jealousies and consequent woes! One of the jolliest girls

I knew was an orphan who, all her life, had had to practice the strongest economies. But she went her way merrily and made herself take the place of the things others contributed to the group. She supported herself in a profession where, daily, she came in contact with folks to whom life had given wealth and opportunities. Did the difference in financial status cause her unhappiness? Not a bit of it. She entertained in her tiny flat and invited such of the rich acquaintances as had become her friends. I recall an evening when Mrs. Society Leader, a woman accustomed to the most elaborate living, drove up to Lucy's flat in her town car, and alighted.

"Lucy!" exclaimed a workaday friend and guest, as she peered from the window. "Here's Mrs. ———. You didn't have the nerve to invite her, did you?"

"Why not?" cried Lucy merrily.

"We like each other and she has so much she won't notice how little I have!"

She was right. Mrs. Society Leader had one of the most enjoyable evenings of her "season."

Economy with Lucy had become a dignity.

Now of course we are not all fitted to be Lucys by temperament. Young girls of today are much as their sisters of past generation in the matter of doing as their friends do in outward appearances. Does Mary wear silk stockings? Florence and Peggy and Jane want them, too. Does Alice wear fancy gingham? Very well, it becomes the fancy of Helen and Anna and Dorothy and Polly and Betty. What has that to do with learning economy? A very great deal. Suppose the Marys were quite as frank about the economies as about the extravagances. The Florences and Janes and Peggys would be, also.

Wash the Poisons of RHEUMATISM

SCIATICA, NEURALGIA AND URIC ACID

Out of Your System With Shivar Spring Mineral Water.

SHIVAR SPRING AS NATURE MADE IT. NOW PROTECTED BY SANITARY SPRING HOUSE.

The Guarantee.

Think of it! A mineral water of such wonderful blood-cleansing power that it is actually shipped to every state in the Union and even to foreign lands under a positive guarantee that the price will be refunded, should the user report no benefit.

Shivar Mineral Water is unquestionably the greatest of all American mineral spring waters and there are thousands who contend that it is the best mineral water in all the world.

In Rheumatism and in other forms of auto-intoxication such as Sciatica, Neuralgia, Chronic Headache and Uric Acid Diathesis, Shivar Mineral Water has succeeded where every known medicine had failed. Physicians attribute this to its peculiar power of dissolving and completely washing out of the system the leucamines, or body poisons that cause these diseases.

Delightful to drink, wonderful in its blood-cleansing power, Shivar Spring Water may be shipped any distance, at any season, without losing its virtues in the slightest.

Though a thousand miles away, you may use it in your home with identically the same results, as if you drank it at the Spring.

The Results.

Read the following letters which are fair samples of tens of thousands that are received at the Spring, then accept our guarantee offer. It gives you the equivalent of a three-weeks' visit to this celebrated Spring, with no charge for the water if you report no benefit. Sign your acceptance on the coupon below.

Fremont, North Carolina. After using Shivar Water my rheumatism has almost entirely disappeared. When I commenced to take it I was unable to turn myself in bed. I am now going where I please. Wishing you much success in your noble work, I am Very respectfully,
J. H. B.

Scranton, South Carolina. My wife has been a sufferer of rheumatism, and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease.
J. D. M.

Bishopville, South Carolina. The Water has done more good than any medicine I have ever taken for rheumatism. Have been drinking it three months and am entirely free from pain. I stopped the medicine upon receipt of the first Water.
H. S. C.

Fredericksburg, Virginia. Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement.
Wm. C. C.

Lexington, Virginia. I know of several who were relieved of rheumatism with this water. Please ship at once and oblige.
J. P. R.

Roper, North Carolina. I am anxious to get more of the Water. It has done me more good than anything I have ever tried for rheumatism.
Mrs. H. C. E.

Leeds, South Carolina. I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent result. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.
C. A. C. M. D.

Union, South Carolina. I have suffered from headaches for the past ten years, due to constipation, but since using your Water I have been greatly benefitted and scarcely have headaches at all. It has made me feel better in every respect and has given me a fine appetite, something I did not have before.
C. B. C.

Warrenton, Virginia. It is doing my rheumatism so much good. My limbs are beginning to feel like new ones.
MRS. J. R. C.

Chancellor, Alabama. I have been for many years affected with uric acid and kidney trouble, and the Mineral Water has helped me more than anything I have ever done for them, and therefore heartily recommend same to all who need a speedy relief.
W. F. M., M. D.

Florence, South Carolina. I suffered with indigestion and kidney trouble and a year ago was stricken with acute articular rheumatism; was helpless for months, and since using your spring water I am walking without any crutch and improving daily. Indigestion much relieved. I wish I could write Shivar Spring Water in the sky so that the world could become acquainted with it. Mrs. T. K.

Atlanta, Georgia. In the interest of the afflicted I cheerfully state, seeing your advertisement in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, I decided to try Shivar Spring Water in the case of my daughter, who had been a sufferer from a malignant type of sciatica, and could get no permanent relief from medicine. After using the Water a few weeks she has almost entirely gotten relief from pain. In this case it has been a great blessing.
REV. M. L. U.

Fill Out This Coupon and Mail It Today

SHIVAR SPRINGS,
Box 3-L, SHELTON, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith three dollars (check or money order) for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within thirty days.

Name _____
Address _____
Express Office _____

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Passenger Traffic Service

Improved Passenger Train Schedules

Effective December 17, 1922

(Schedule figures are given as advance information and are approximately correct. Figures at intermediate stations changed proportionately.)

To Passenger Agents, Ticket Agents, Conductors, and Connections:

Effective Sunday, December 17, 1922, passenger train schedules will be improved as follows:

No. 31	AUGUSTA SPECIAL	No. 32
1:10 PM	Lv New York	Ar 1:30 PM
3:20 PM	Lv West Phila.	Ar 9:05 AM
5:27 PM	Lv Baltimore	Ar 7:30 AM
7:00 PM	Lv Washington	Ar 4:07 AM
10:25 PM	Lv Charlottesville	Lv 2:08 AM
12:32 AM	Lv Lynchburg	Lv 12:15 AM
2:20 AM	Lv Danville	Lv 10:55 PM
3:55 AM	Lv Greensboro	Lv 10:18 PM
4:20 AM	Lv High Point	Lv 9:15 PM
5:35 AM	Lv Salisbury	Lv 7:55 PM
6:45 AM	Ar Charlotte	Ar 7:45 PM
6:55 AM	Lv Charlotte	Lv 6:52 PM
7:40 AM	Lv Rock Hill	Lv 6:19 PM
8:11 AM	Lv Chester	Lv 5:34 PM
9:00 AM	Lv Winnsboro	Lv 4:35 PM
10:05 AM	Ar Columbia	Ar 4:30 PM
10:15 AM	Lv Columbia	Lv 3:53 PM
10:41 AM	Ar Lexington	Lv a3:20 PM
a11:16 AM	Ar Leesville	Lv 3:16 PM
11:20 AM	Ar Batesburg	Lv a2:59 PM
a11:39 AM	Ar Ridge Spg.	Lv a2:43 PM
a11:56 AM	Ar Johnston	Lv 2:30 PM
12:15 PM	Ar Trenton	Lv 1:40 PM

1:10 PM	Ar Aiken	Lv 1:30 PM
1:15 PM	Ar Augusta	Lv 1:30 PM

"a" Stops to discharge or receive passengers from or to points North of Charlotte. These trains will continue to handle same equipment as at present.

New local trains will be established between Charlotte and Columbia as follows:

No. 3	No. 6
5:45 AM	Lv Charlotte	Ar 7:05 PM
5:58 AM	Lv Griffith	Ar 6:48 PM
f	Hebron	f
6:03 AM	Lv Pineville	Lv 6:30 PM
6:20 AM	Lv Fort Mill	Lv 6:17 PM
6:26 AM	Lv Carhartt	Lv 6:08 PM
6:40 AM	Lv Rock Hill	Lv 5:55 PM
6:51 AM	Lv Ogden	Lv 5:42 PM
6:58 AM	Lv Smith	Lv 5:35 PM
7:05 AM	Lv Lewis	Lv 5:28 PM
7:20 AM	Lv Chester	Lv 5:15 PM
7:28 AM	Lv Evans	Lv 5:07 PM
7:40 AM	Lv Cornwell	Lv 4:57 PM
7:47 AM	Lv Blackstock	Lv 4:50 PM
7:54 AM	Lv Woodward	Lv 4:44 PM
8:05 AM	Lv White Oak	Lv 4:34 PM
8:11 AM	Lv Adger	Lv 4:28 PM
8:23 AM	Lv Winnsboro	Lv 4:18 PM
8:30 AM	Lv Rockton	Lv 4:10 PM
8:36 AM	Lv Simpson	Lv 4:04 PM
8:48 AM	Lv Ridgway	Lv 3:54 PM
8:52 AM	Lv Smallwood	Lv 3:49 PM
9:02 AM	Lv Blythewood	Lv 3:39 PM
9:06 AM	Lv Sharp	Lv 3:32 PM
9:13 AM	Lv Killian	Lv 3:26 PM
f	State Park	f
9:25 AM	Lv Fairwold	Lv 3:13 PM
9:45 AM	Ar Columbia	Lv 3:00 PM

Schedule of train No. 1 Columbia to Savannah will be changed as follows:

Lv Columbia	10:45 AM
Lv Cayce	10:52 AM
Lv Stys	11:02 AM
Lv Shuler	f
Lv Edmund	11:15 AM
Lv Macedon	f
Lv Pelion	11:27 AM
Lv Thor	11:34 AM
Lv Berlin	f
Lv Perry	11:48 AM
Lv Sally	11:58 AM
Lv Springfield	12:09 PM
Lv Whaley	f
Lv Walker	12:20 PM
Lv Blackville	12:30 PM
Lv Ashleigh	f
Lv Barnwell	12:48 PM
Lv Yenome	12:57 PM
Lv Kline	1:05 PM
Lv Cave	1:09 PM
Lv Saigling	f
Lv Allendale	1:22 PM
Lv Barton	1:33 PM
Lv Valentine	1:45 PM
Lv Lena	1:55 PM
Lv Furman	2:05 PM
Lv Pineland	2:16 PM
Lv Tarboro	2:25 PM
Lv Tillman	2:34 PM
Lv Deerfield	2:44 PM
Lv Hardeeville	3:00 PM
Ar Savannah	3:45 PM

The schedule of RICHMOND DIVISION trains Nos. 8 and 108 will be changed as follows:

No. 8
Lv Danville	7:30 AM
Lv South Boston	8:40 AM
Ar Keyesville	9:59 AM
Lv Keyesville	10:10 AM
Ar Richmond	1:10 PM

No. 108
Lv Durham	6:00 AM
Lv East Durham	6:10 AM
Lv Jeffress	8:45 AM
Ar Keyesville	10:00 AM

Train No. 108 connects at Keyesville with train No. 8 for Richmond.

Agents and representatives will give this improved service widest possible publicity.

W. H. TAYLOR, Pass. Traffic Mgr., Washington, D. C.

W. A. BECKLER, Pass. Traffic Mgr., Cincinnati, Ohio.

E. N. AIKEN, Gen. Pass. Agt., Cincinnati, Ohio.

H. F. CARY, Gen. Pass. Agt., Washington, D. C.

Suppose the Alices were quite as boastful over the ingenuity of mother which has produced a fine made-over garment as of the style of the dress-maker who has fashioned a new one? The Helens and Annas, Dorothys, Pollys and Bettys would fall in line. That may be placing quite a responsibility on the Marys and the Alices but there are plenty of them in the world—girls who combine popularity with common sense and independence. To which class do you belong?

The world laughs at the rich man who picks up the nickel he has dropped but is willing to accept the benefactions his wealth makes possible. He who knows the power of his accumulated nickels knows the value of one. This is not miserliness but husbanding possibilities. Economy is not a sign of poverty—which becomes a disgrace only when it represents poverty of resources and independence.—The Continent.

Another Silver Heresy

Too many men seem to think that optimism consists only of seeing the silver lining to the other man's cloud.—Ex.

A skin we'd love to touch, but with a red-hot poker, is the skinflint.—Greenville Piedmont.

JAMES M. McMICHAEL
Church Architect
 Charlotte, N. C.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
 110 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky

Piles

are usually due to straining when constipated. Nujol being a lubricant keeps the food waste soft and therefore prevents straining. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it not only soothes the suffering of piles but relieves the irritation, brings comfort and helps to remove them.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative — so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
 A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6¼ per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn, President. 207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C. E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from
Presbyterian Committee of Publication
 Richmond Va. Texarkana, Ark. Tex.

North Carolina Day

JANUARY 14th

In the Sunday Schools and Y. P. Societies

Appointed by Synod at Lincolnton

Study the Marvelous Development—the Great Need, the Great Opportunity of Our Church Today, in North Carolina

Special Offering for the Synod's Mission Work

It has aided in the organization of 275 Sunday Schools in North Carolina. It has aided in the organization of 133 Churches in North Carolina. It had 84 ministers and Sunday school missionaries on its force last year.

An Economic Waste

The really essential leader in the Church of God is the minister—the preacher and pastor. He is called of God and the Church to forsake the sources of worldly gain and to give himself to teaching and leading in spiritual things.

He must have a long, intensive, expensive course of training—eight years in school, four years in high school, four years in college and three years in the theological seminary.

To prepare for preaching he should have a good library, adding new books each month, papers, magazines, contact with live minds on live themes at church courts, conferences, conventions, etc.

To attend to the pastoral duties he should have at least a “Ford” to save time and multiply his usefulness, must dress neatly, answer innumerable calls on his finances, and set an example of liberality to the community. His family must be clothed, fed and educated.

The congregation—agreeably to God’s command and the basic law of the Presbyterian Church—have solemnly promised to provide the pastor a “living.” Yet many of our ministers are traveling a painful road and are sorely perplexed. How can they be free from “worldly cares and avocations,” when they simply cannot meet the cost of living?

A solemn contract has been entered into. The people have engaged “to continue to him, while he is your pastor, that competent worldly maintenance which you have promised and whatever else you may see needful for the honor of religion and his comfort among you.” “Even so hath the Lord ordained that they that preach the Gospel shall live of the Gospel.”

What an economic waste to fail to provide the things absolutely needed for the largest usefulness of the richly endowed, splendidly trained, self-sacrificing ministers of the Presbyterian Church in the South!

They will never ask for more! They will complain because we, at the direction of the General Assembly, are pressing their just and binding claim. But shall we not eliminate this waste, obey God’s command, relieve these faithful men of this too heavy strain and prove to the Lord of the harvest that we appreciate the priceless boon of a spiritual ministry, as we now pray that He will thrust forth more laborers into the harvest!

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES

DEPARTMENT OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

HENRY H. SWEETS, Secretary

410 Urban Building, LOUISVILLE, KY.

ABERDEEN & ROCKFISH RAILROAD

BETWEEN ABERDEEN & FAYETTEVILLE
 Eastbound Westbound
 Daily Ex. Sunday Daily Ex. Sunday
 Mixed. Pass. Mixed

STATIONS
No. 22.	No. 38.	No. 41.	No. 21
Lv.		Ar.
7:30am	9:10am	Aberdeen	6:41pm 5:00pm
Ar:35am	10:00am	Raeferd	5:55pm 3:50pm
Lv:2:10pm		Raeferd	Ar:2:50pm
Ar.		Lv.
4:00pm	11:20am	Fayetteville	4:50pm 1pm

WAGRAM BRANCH

Southbound		Northbound
Daily Ex. Sun.	Daily Ex. Sun.	Daily Ex. Sun.	Daily Ex. Sun.
Mixed	Mixed	Mixed	Mixed
No. 11	No. 12	No. 11	No. 12
L.v. 10:30am	Raeferd	Ar. 12:40pm
Ar. 11:15am	Wagram	Lv. 12 noon

W. A. BLUE, General Supt.,
 Aberdeen, N. C.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD

Effective November 13, 1922
 Leave Charlotte Except Sunday
 7:30 a. m. for Norwood, Mt. Gilead,
 Star, Varina, Raleigh
 and intermediate points
 Connects at Star for Aberdeen, Ash-boro and intermediate points
 Connects at Raleigh for Wilson,
 Washington, Greenville, Belhaven
 and intermediate points
 New equipment and improved
 Schedules
 One way fare Charlotte to Raleigh
 $5.64
 J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
 P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

Sparkles

A fond father discovered his young hopeful reading a dime novel.
 "Unhand me, villain," the detected boy cried, "or there will be bloodshed."
 "No," said the father grimly, tightening the hold on the boy's collar, "Not bloodshed, woodshed."—Western Christian Advocate.

The Cadger—"I ain't never 'ad a chance. No matter where I go or wot I works at, my unlucky number bobs up and does me in, some'ow."

The Householder—"What do you mean? What's your unlucky number?"

The Cadger — "Thirteen, lady. Twelve jurymen an' a judge."—Ex.

"I brought a barometer today, Hannah, so's to tell when it's going to rain, you know."

Hannah—"To tell when it's going to rain? What extravagance! What d'ye suppose the good Lord gave you the rheumatism for?"—Lutheran Observer.

John is a small boy, youngest of a minister's family.

As a punishment for some misdemeanor at the table, it was decided that John must not eat with the family at the next meal.

So his dinner was placed on a small table at the end of the dining room.

When all were seated, the minister said:

"Now John, you should ask a blessing before you eat."

This was a new duty to John, but he bowed his head and said reverently:

"Our Father in heaven. Thou prepare a table for me in the presence of mine enemies. Thanks for the food. Amen."—Columbia State.

6% and Safety

Did you ever stop to figure that 6 per cent was 100 per cent more than 3 per cent and 50 per cent more than 4 per cent?

1.—Would you work for the salary you are now getting if some other firm, equally able to pay it, offered to double your salary or pay you half as much again? We doubt it.

2.—Then why not apply the same common sense to your money.

3.—THE SECURITY SAVING & LOAN COMPANY, SECURITY BUILDING, 2125 Third Ave., Birmingham, Ala., has been paying 6 per cent for 16 years, and has grown from $25,000 to nearly $1,000,000.

Write anybody in Birmingham about the SECURITY and write us for literature and statement.

BELK BROS. CO.
 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
 20c to 35c
 None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamois-ettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
 IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
 PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
 14 - 16 - 18
 years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers Rulers Binders
 GARLAND COURT Phooe 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

THE STIEFF PIANO is not Merely Good—it is more than that. The exceptional beauty of tone of Stieff Pianos and their wonderful durability is what distinguishes them. Fill blank and mail

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
 Charlotte, N. C.
 Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
 Name _____
 Address _____

If the price of a Stieff is too high, we have the Shaw, the Benoett-Bretz, Davis & Son, and Leslie pianos at lower prices—from $325.00 up.

CHAS. M. STIEFF, INC., Charlotte, N. C.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.
 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
 Resources Over $5,000,000.00

Genuine "Kaltex" Fiber Furniture

The Ideal Furniture For Living Room and Sun Parlor

These splendid, comfortable 3-piece suits—settee, chair and rocker, with full six-foot settee—can now be had in pleasing tapestry at $125.00. Separate chairs and rockers in good tapestry with the famous double-spring construction, $25.00 to $40.00. Ask for the "Kaltex" fiber.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., JANUARY 17, 1923

No. 3

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post-Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

The "Fundamentalists"	1
A Strange Decision	1
"Whosoever Will Be Great"	2
Advertising Matter for the Every Member Canvass	2
The Radio as an Aid to the Pulpit	2

CONTRIBUTED—

Rev. Edgar Tufts	3
Banner Winners for 1922—By R. E. Magill	3
The Every Member Canvass and What it Has Done to Revolutionize the Finances of the Church—By E. W. Dabbs	4
Glade Valley High School	4
A Prayer for 1923—By Irene Le Queux	4
What a Standard Training School Will Do for Your Community—By Rev. Wesley Baker	5
Impressions of the Federal Council	5
The West Virginia Educational Campaign— By Henry H. Sweets, D.D.	5

DEPARTMENTS—

Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	10, 13
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Cull, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

THE "FUNDAMENTALISTS"

THIS is a new name for conservatives. Some would have it that they are extreme conservatives. It has been objected to them that they are intolerant, that they wish to crowd those who differ from them out of their company. This objection was recently urged by Dr. Fosdick in a notable sermon. He thought it was very unchristian for these Fundamentalists to draw a line and say "Thus far shalt thou go and no further."

The name is very significant. It assumes that certain doctrines are fundamental to Christianity, that to deny any one of them is to destroy Christianity. These doctrines constitute a chain. Remove one link and the chain is useless. They constitute an arch. Remove one stone and the whole structure tumbles. Certainly this is a reasonable assumption. There must be something that is so distinctive, so characteristic as to make Christianity what it is. Whatever that something is, destroy it and you destroy Christianity.

Christ spoke of a foundation. He said, build on this and your superstructure will withstand the combined violence of wind and flood. Build off of this and your superstructure is doomed. Jesus was a Fundamentalist. He taught that some things were absolutely essential. These things must be believed and acted on, or wreck and ruin are inevitable.

Paul also was a Fundamentalist. He claimed to have laid a foundation, not merely a foundation, but the only one that could be laid.

The only objection to the name is its vagueness. It needs exposition. The word is so elastic that even Dr. Fosdick might claim to be covered by it. With all his "new knowledge," he perhaps recognizes in the "old faith" some elements, or at any rate, some element of fundamental importance. He is not understood as throwing Christianity overboard as useless. If he claims to be a Christian he claims to hold on to something that is essential to Christianity. Possibly he might say that while this something is essential to Christianity it is not essential to salvation. He may deny that Christianity is a redemptive system; or he may hold that it is not peculiar in this respect, that it is merely one along with other redemptive systems. It would clear the atmosphere if Dr. Fosdick and those for whom he speaks would say in plain terms whether they believe that men need saving from sin and hell, and if so, just what is necessary to save them. It is amazing that a man with such a wide latitude of disbelief as Dr. Fosdick, should be permitted to preach in a Presbyterian pulpit. It would be yet more amazing if it should be discovered that he does not believe that there is anything fundamental and essential in Christianity.

The vagueness of the name "Fundamentalist" is due to the fact that those who believe in fundamentals differ among themselves as to the number of things that are fundamental. Doubtless the Apostles' Creed was designed to express what the Church from a very early period regarded as fundamental. To deny any doctrine contained in that creed was to be guilty of fatal heresy. In the year 325 the first General Council of the Church put forth a creed which expressed the faith of the church of that day. It contained a minimum of the things necessary to be believed. No slightest departure from its statements was permitted. The Church of today has become more tolerant. It allows a larger latitude of belief. But it must still have its fundamentals. Its mission is witness-bearing. "Ye are my witnesses," said Christ. A witness must have some clearly defined testimony to bear. The Church has betrayed its trust unless it has a "thus saith the Lord" to which it bears an unflinching testimony. Every denomination should make perfectly plain to the world the doctrine, or doctrines for which it claims divine authority and which it deems essential to salvation. This is one use of creeds, or articles of faith, which are still in use in most of our larger denominations. It is designed by these creeds to let the world know what the Church stands for. Such is the purpose of our Confession of Faith. It is the witness which the Church bears in its corporate capacity. While the Confession contains more than the doctrines regarded as essential to salvation, it contains nothing for which the Church is not willing to vouch as the infallible truth of God. It is not all essential to salvation, but it is all essential to a well-rounded, logically developed system of revealed truth. Hence the Church makes the Confession of Faith a test of one's fitness to preach. It will not consent to be responsible for his teaching unless it is in harmony with the Confession of Faith.

But in defining what is fundamental to salvation, the Church does not resort to the Confession. Its creed is a very short one—"a credible profession of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ." An intelligent child can meet the requirement. There is no inquiry into one's views of inspiration, or the atonement, or justification. The fundamentals as to salvation are one thing; the fundamentals as to a true and scriptural theology are quite another. The latter fundamentals are what the Church has a right to demand, and should demand of her teachers. Every denomination should set them forth distinctly, and then stand for them unflinchingly.

A STRANGE DECISION

Our readers will recall that some time last year the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Brookline, Massachusetts, was tried by his Presbytery, because he baptized a dog and invoked Divine blessings on French friend potatoes, and removed from the pastorate. He, supported by a majority of his members, defied the orders of Presbytery and refused to leave. The minority of the members appealed to the Supreme Court of the State to restrain the use of the church property, because he did not have the approval of the Presbytery.

The court has recently ruled that since the great majority of the members of the church favored the pastor's retention, there was no controversy recognizable by the court.

With the legal aspect of this case we are not as much concerned as we are with the moral aspect. It is inconceivable that any men or women in any community would uphold such proceedings, in a minister, who made a travesty of his sacred calling, and brought upon the pulpit the contempt of all decent men.

We might imagine such a stand, when we allow for partisan resentment that bitter controversy sometimes engenders, but when in calmer moments after men have come to realize the enormity of such sacrilegious conduct, that they should still uphold such a course, is beyond our comprehension. It shows a bluntness of the moral sense and a low conception of the dignity of the ministerial calling that is beyond our experience.

Men bemoan the decay of society, as shown in the present customs and female costumes, and upon the strength of it they predict the collapse of our social life. As bad as such conditions are, they are not as bad as when the people of God uphold a man in the ministry, who will make a travesty of the holy ordinance of baptism. We do not definitely know what the sin against the Holy Ghost is, but we do know that this must approach dangerously near it.

"WHOSOEVER WILL BE GREAT"

Psychologists tell us that desire for fame is one of our original instincts. It early manifests itself in life, from childhood to old age. The disciples of Christ were not free from it, and, on one occasion, when the mother of Zebedee's children had requested places of special honor for her sons, the other disciples were indignant, not so much because of her wrong conception of true greatness, but because she seemed to be taking an unfair advantage over them.

Our Lord then taught them the nature of true greatness in His kingdom—to become the servant, just as their Master did when He gave His life a ransom for many.

This has always been a hard lesson for man to learn, yet there has never been a time in the history of the Church since that it has not been needed.

Now and then a choice spirit appears among us who measures up so nearly to this divine standard that we regard him as not of this earth. His example excites our reverent admiration, but rarely to the extent that we follow it very closely.

One such spirit has recently passed from among us, leaving behind a monument of his life that all admire, and but few equal. About twenty years ago Rev. Edgar Tufts, turning from attractive fields, decided to devote his life to the mountain people of western North Carolina, who, shut off from the world, were living in isolation and stagnation, while the outside world was going forward by leaps and bounds along every line of development. These people are remarkable for their spirit of independence, and they quickly resent the least air of patronage. They are suspicious of strangers, but when once you win their confidence, there is no more trouble.

With no local habitation, not even a school house, he began his work by mingling with them in their lowly homes and teaching a few of their children at night around his own fireside. Slowly he won his way into their hearts, till not only among the mountain people, but among the summer visitors; all over that section, he inspired confidence, with the result that the mountaineers recognized in him a friend, and the summer visitors recognized one who fully exemplified the teachings of his Master, so that they gave to him as to no other man. From every section, not only in this State, but from the North, contributions came. President Wilson, amid the cares resting upon him, recognized the consecrated life, and contributed to the work.

From these lowly and inadequate beginnings he had gathered about him results such as the following: The Lees-McRae Institute, with graded and high school departments which has graduated more than 1,000 girls, sending them forth to transform the entire community; a church building of native stone, the work of the natives, at a low cost; a hospital with resident physician, which though inadequately equipped, has saved many lives in these remote homes; an orphanage which at first held only 12 children, but now cares for many more. There are buildings for industrial purposes, an electric light plant, grist and lumber mills, and a farm which helps to feed the children gathered there.

When we think of what has been done, how small seems the life of even the most famous among us. This devoted brother has erected in these mountain coves and in the warm hearts of these mountain people a "monument more enduring than brass."

He wore himself out in the service of his people, and of him it can be said with more truth than of any one we know, that he came nearer following the example of his Master, who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many.

Let us keep his memory alive by loyal support of this great work.

ADVERTISING MATTER FOR THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

The canvass, from February 27th to March 13th, is an important event in the life of every church, as upon it depends not only the welfare of the individual church, but also that of the Church at large.

Dr. Melvin and his excellent corps of workers display much ingenuity in their appeals to the pastors, so that if there be any truth in the fact that appeals presented psychologically always succeed, then they will win success.

As preparatory to this canvass they propose to send to the pastor of every church a series of four folders, each folder being worded in such a way that a man must have an iron-clad conscience who does not feel bound to respond to the limits of his purse. These folders are designed to catch the eye; to awaken interest; to create desire; and to induce action. Each pastor is asked to write for the number of these sets of folders needed to reach every family in his church. They will be sent to him at once.

The committee has done its part, and now let the pastors do theirs, and then the results will be far beyond any previous record.

THE RADIO AS AN AID TO THE PULPIT

We are living in a fast age, in which what would have been unbelievable a generation ago, has become commonplace.

The phonograph dates back to 1876, while the radio is of more recent date.

Man's ingenuity has not only made them possible, but his ingenuity is constantly employed in utilizing these great inventions for the benefit as well as the pleasures of mankind.

With the phonograph we can bottle up the speech of this age, to be used by coming generations, while with the radio we can multiply the hearers of either speech or music, without reference to nearness.

We are glad to see that the United States War Department has decided to multiply the sermons and addresses of the army chaplains through the use of the radio, so that the soldiers will be attracted by the novelty, at first it may be, but let

THE PASSING YEARS

The days grow shorter, the nights grow longer,
The headstones thicken along the way;
And life grows sadder, but love grows stronger
For those who walk with us, day by day.
The tear comes quicker, the laugh comes slower,
The courage is lesser to do and dare;
And the tide of joy in the heart runs lower,
And seldom covers the reef of care.
But all true things in the world seem truer,
And the better things of the earth seem best;
And friends are dearer as friends are fewer,
And love is all as our sun dips west.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

us hope that the spoken word may in time recommend itself.

From a circular just issued by the War Department we learn that Maj. Gen. George O. Squire, Chief Signal Officer, has instructed all signal officers to co-operate, as far as is compatible with the interests of the service, in broadcasting the various religious programs presented by chaplains at army posts.

According to the Chief of Chaplains, John T. Axton, the results of this action are already apparent. The fact that an audience of almost unlimited size is assured causes those in charge of the various portions of the order of worship to exercise unusual care in the selection and rendition of the musical numbers, and the spoken word is most carefully chosen. Fine soloists and choirs and great preachers are often available. Most inviting local programs result and there is a marked increase in attendance upon the services. At some places chapels and assembly halls are too small to accommodate the congregations. People living a long distance from the posts have enjoyed listening in on services that were being attended by their relatives and friends in the army and have indicated their appreciation of the provision that is made for the spiritual life of soldiers.

At some posts where local talent for religious services is lacking the garrisons have assembled to enjoy divine worship conducted in a unique way. Signal officers have arranged to receive by radio, and produce through the magnavox, the entire service of some distant church as broadcasted.

Devotional

A NEW SELF MAKES A NEW YEAR

The pleasure with which we greet a new year springs chiefly from the hope that it will prove new. Disappointed because the closing year has not been what we planned, and hoping that this new lease of time is bearing to us the opportunity to achieve the good we expected in the old year, we welcome it with a cheer. It is a new chance.

The old year contained much that we wish had been left out and lacked much that we wish it had possessed. This has characterized so many of the past years that we are in danger of becoming cynical concerning this hope. Banish such a temptation. We may not be so credulous as in youth, but he is to be pitied whose heart does not throb a little faster at the approach of this new lease of time. It may and should be richer in material gain, in developed character, and in uplifting ministries than any of the years that have drifted into the past.

May it not be that what we most need is not a new year, but a new self? We are prone to look beyond ourselves for the things we desire or fear, forgetting that our world is largely within ourselves. We look through colored glasses and do not suspect that the things we see take their color from the glasses on our face. We are dissatisfied with last year, and forgetting that a change of skies does not change the traveler, we enter the new year expecting to find it altogether different. But, alas! the heart we carry within us and the memory that follows hard after us will color next year if they are retained. And so, after all, may it not be that the thing we long for is not a new year, but a new self?

At this point the Gospel meets us with an offer to make us new. "If any man be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature." When that is achieved "old things pass away and all things become new." But the "newness" comes from within and not from without. With some of us this change will commence with the "new birth." This is more than reformation. Reform deals with the exterior, regeneration deals with the interior. The new birth gives a new moral start. It wipes out the sinful past and gives a new chance. If we have never experienced this change, the crossing of this boundary is the accepted time. Commence by surrendering to God. There is something inspiring and inviting in such a time. It speaks with peculiar force. It appeals to us as no other time does.

But this day has an appeal to Christ's followers also. Do we not look forward to the new year as a new opportunity? We are not satisfied with the old year. Possibly the world has been regaining its hold upon us. The prayer meeting and the Sabbath School have lost their charm, and only a sense of duty holds us faithful to the public worship. David had been an officer in the church for years when he wrote the prayer, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me." Do we not need to make that prayer our own? Did we ever need it more than now? Spiritual cleansing is a continual work. "The inward man must be renewed day by day." We can live aright only as we are "in Christ," that is within the circle of His life and influence. Only as we move back into His life more fully will we find the year "new."

May our readers all have "A Happy New Year," and may they know in a blessed measure the meaning of the words which John heard from the lips of the enthroned Christ, "Behold, I make all things new."—United Presbyterian.

EVERYBODY'S BIRTHDAY

The opening of the year is everybody's birthday. God has let us share His work. God has gifts for days to come. We may send our thoughts back through the ways of memory; we must send them forth through opening paths of faith and hope. The past will come no more, but today is ours, and tomorrow is in the hands of God who loves us.—Congregationalist.

FAITH AND WORKS

"What shall I do to be saved?"

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

"Lord, I believe; help thou my unbelief."

"Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

"A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another."

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature."

After all, obedience is the best commentary on the Bible. Do and you will know.—Theodore Monod.

REV. EDGAR TUFTS

(The following tributes to Rev. Mr. Tufts are not only from writers with gifted pens but from people who knew his work at first hand and put high value on the man and on what he was accomplishing.—Ed.)

The people of the mountains are in mourning. They have lost their best friend. Edgar Tufts has gone home. The little preacher who stopped in a mountain valley one day where the world was as lovely as God could make it, but where people were scattered "as sheep not having a shepherd," and who determined to spend his life trying to show the mountain people God's way, has "gone West."

Last Saturday afternoon as I sat in my office at the church the messenger boy brought the telegram from Edgar: "Father died this morning at ten o'clock"; and as the yellow paper fell from my hands to the floor my heart cried: "O, God, how can they get on up there in the mountains without him?"

For I know how they love him, how absolutely they trust him. For 25 years he has been their sky-pilot, pointing and preaching and leading the way to the country lying out there beyond their own fair, far sky-line, and he has always led them straight, and not once through all these years has he done a selfish thing to shake their faith or stain his own white life.

He has gathered the boys and girls from the cabins and taught their minds and trained their hearts and sent some of them out into the homeland to preach the Gospel, and some to far mission fields to tell the old, old story. He has won the sons and daughters from the great farms and comfortable homes of that land of the sky to come to his school at Banner Elk and take Jesus as their Master, and then to return to their homes to take the lovely valleys and the mountain peaks for the God of the hills.

Beginning with a shabby little school house, which he bought at auction for $25, he has gone on dreaming dreams and translating his dreams into realities, until Lees-McRae Institute, the Normal School, the hospital, the Grandfather Orphanage, the Industrial School and Farm, and last, Woodrow Wilson College stand to proclaim what one man wholly surrendered to God can do in the brief span of a short life.

Edgar Tufts, slight of figure, weighing little more than a hundred pounds, never of robust health, twice laid aside from work by attacks of tuberculosis, but sent back to his work apparently cured, so diffident and modest and retiring that he would escape notice when men of bigger bodies but smaller souls were on the stage, broad in his vision, tireless in his energy, unconquerable in his optimism, sublime in his resourcefulness, daring in the audacity of his undertakings, free of bigotry, unassuming and unaffected in his relations with others, loyal in his friendships, as big as the out-of-doors of his mountain world in his hospitality, saint and man of affairs, preacher and teacher and builder, he was the biggest little man it has ever been my privilege to know.

In the long roll of the ministers of his church there is no name that deserves to rank ahead of his. He has transformed a region, and brought down on the dwellers in the balsam groves and the green grassy valleys the kingdom of whose increase there shall be no end."

The great peaks will not forget Edgar Tufts. The Beech and Sugarloaf and Hanging Rock and the Grandfather will sentinel the spot where they lay this shepherd of the hills to his rest, and the winds as they sing through the great timbers will be chanting their "Te Deum" for a man "who was as an hiding place from the wind and a covert from the tempest, as rivers of water in a dry place, and as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land."

The whole Church is mourning with the mountain people for what seems for us the untimely death of one who could not be spared. Prayers will go up from many hearts for those who live in the modest "house by the side of the road" where the little preacher had his home, and beneath whose roof he planned and prayed into being the mighty work that stretches yonder along the ridge and across Elk River and out into the wide world.

James I. Vance.

Nashville, Tenn., and Blowing Rock, N. C.

"Faithful unto death" is the record of the life of one of God's noblemen, Rev. Edgar Tufts, of Banner Elk, N. C., who died Saturday morning, January 6th. His fatal illness was doubtless contracted through exposure to cold and contagion in ministering to the people to whom he dedicated his life, as pastor and teacher, friend and counsellor.

Contributed

His idea of duty was revealed in his answer to the question of a fellow student as they were leaving the seminary for their respective fields of service. His friend, knowing he had calls to several attractive places, asked why he had chosen Banner Elk, then considered one of the worst places in North Carolina. His answer was prompt and characteristic: "That is the reason I am going there." His choice has been fully justified by the changes wrought through his unflinching devotion to his purpose, to make the bad good, and the good better.

Without a church building or school house, he preached wherever he could gather a little congregation, and taught a few children around his study fire on winter evenings. His kindness and tact quickly won the confidence and friendship of his immediate neighbors, and later the support and co-operation of friends in this and other states. This small beginning has grown into the Banner Elk Presbyterian Church, Lees-McRae Institute, with graded and high school departments, Grace Hospital, and Grandfather Orphanage.

The church has an active and growing membership, which for some years has worshiped in a beautiful and artistic building of native stone, erected by native workmen, a building that could not be erected in a city for less than thirty to forty thousand dollars.

The Lees-McRae Institute, until recently housed in three wooden buildings, has already sent out more than a thousand girls, some of them making Christian homes as wives and mothers, some serving as teachers and trained nurses. These wooden buildings are being replaced by larger, permanent, stone buildings, one already completed, and Mr. Tufts had the joy of knowing that the ground was broken for the second, before his death.

The wooden Grace Hospital building is now being replaced by a substantial, well-equipped brick building. This hospital, though handicapped by lack of space and equipment, has nobly met a great need in a large and scattered community, and this new building with its complete equipment will enable Dr. Tate and his assistants to render a larger service to an even larger territory.

Grandfather Orphanage has grown from a small house accommodating a dozen children to a large plant comprising boys' and girls' dormitories, school and industrial buildings, and a baby cottage. Under the superintendency of Mr. and Mrs. Holcomb, with their efficient helpers, these buildings house a happy family of more than 50 children of school age, and the baby cottage will care for about 20 babies. The Orphanage farm contributes largely to the support of orphanage and schools. The electric light plant, the grist and lumber mills, all serve the community, as well as the schools, church, hospital and orphanage.

Mr. Tufts' enthusiasm for service was infectious, and drew to him a corps of teachers and other helpers, of missionary spirit, on salaries less than half paid for similar service elsewhere, thus enabling him to offer educational opportunities at very low cost.

This great constructive work, built up out of nothing, under his direction, will be his permanent monument. But his best memorial is in the hearts and lives of those whom he has served, and those who have served with him. His generous and active guidance and co-operation were fully recognized and appreciated by his associates, and the memory of his devoted and unselfish life will be a constant stimulus to them to continue his splendid constructive work.

B. F. Hall.

Wilmington and Banner Elk, N. C.

Avery County has met her heaviest loss. Six months ago we were all stunned by the death of the county's most beloved financier, Mr. Charlie Voncannon, of Banner Elk. And now his pastor and friend has been almost as quickly taken, and we have lost a minister, a pastor, an educator and a financier, a man who, since he consecrated his young life to our mountains, has been the greatest molding power in this section of the country. Bitter weather and terrible roads deterred not the great crowd that came, some 50 miles, to that beautiful little rock church—"Mr. Tufts' church"—to show what his life had meant to them. 'Twas a typical afternoon. As they bore the casket from the home to the church, the sleet and mud reminded us of the many years of faithful service in all sorts of weather, when this servant of God had failed not once to meet his spaking appointments, often in the furthest cove of the bleakest mountain side. During the funeral service, the flood of sunlight that poured through the beautiful windows of the church, typified God's rich blessing upon Mr. Tufts' tireless efforts. As the sun faded, the flash of the electric lights bore witness of his vision of what might be accomplished in the mountains—of the mountains—and for the mountains. And at the grave, the complete lining of green galax and fern, and the large blanket of bronze galax and silver pine, which loving hands had so skillfully prepared, proved how his love of the beautiful had met a response in their hearts.

We left the grave praising God for the endless influence of such a life—a life whose secret was unselfish faith; a death whose keynote was victory. And we thanked God for the son and daughters who can go on with his work. Prepared by his training and experience, led by his wonderful vision—strengthened by his indomitable courage and limitless faith—they must carry on to completion the work of this wonderful man of God.

Mary Martin Sloop.

Crossnore, N. C.

BANNER WINNERS FOR 1922

By R. E. Magill, Secretary

The contest for the Presbyterian Banner, awarded for the largest offering per member for Sunday School Extension, developed a keen spirit of friendly rivalry and resulted in a greatly enlarged interest in the work of Sunday School Extension.

The reports indicate that there was an increase in the number of schools observing Rally Day, that a notable gain in enrollment was made, that plans were outlined for a better type of work for the coming year, and that the offering was larger than ever before.

A spirit of sacrificial giving was shown which indicates that our Sunday School membership appreciate their privileges and that they wish to make similar blessings possible for the great multitude of spiritually destitute young people in the South.

While only one school in a Presbytery could win a banner, all the contestants have a rich reward in the consciousness that they had a part in sending the Gospel message to those who need it most.

Our congratulations to the successful schools and our sincere thanks to all who had a part in the most successful Rally Day observance in the history of our Church.

Banner Sunday Schools for 1922

Alabama Synod—East Alabama, Florida; Mobile, Jackson; North Alabama, Tusculuma; Tuscaloosa, Marion.

Appalachia Synod—Abingdon, Dublin; Asheville, Bryson City; Holston, Cold Spring; Knoxville, Moore Memorial.

Arkansas Synod—Arkansas, Blytheville; Ouachita, Lewisville; Pine Bluff, Alexander Memorial; Washburn, Prairie Grove.

Florida Synod—Florida, Marianna; St. Johns, Palmetto; Suwanee, McIntosh.

Georgia Synod—Athens, Commerce; Atlanta, West Point; Augusta, Monticello; Cherokee, Chickamauga; Macon, Perry; Savannah, McRae; Southwest, Boston.

Kentucky Synod—Ebenezer, Bayless Memorial; Louisville, Stuart Robinson Memorial; Muhlenburg, Greenville; Paducah, Marion; Transylvania, Paint Lick; West Lexington, Versailles.

Louisiana Synod—Louisiana, Plains; New Orleans, Slidell; Red River, Minden.

Mississippi Synod—Central Mississippi, Durant; East Mississippi, Tupelo; Meridian, Ellisville; Mississippi, Columbia; North Mississippi, Byhalia.

Missouri Synod—Lafayette, Corder; Missouri, Bethel; Palmyra, Monroe City; Potosi, Kennett; St. Louis, St. Charles First; Upper Missouri, Liberty.

North Carolina Synod—Albemarle, Farmville; Concord, Shepherds; Fayetteville, McPherson; Kings Mountain, Stanley Creek; Mecklenburg, Central Steele Creek; Orange, Mebane; Wilmington, Winter Park.

Oklahoma Synod—Durant, Mahota Memorial; Indian, Bockchito; Mangum, Central (Oklahoma City).

Snedecor Synod—Central Alabama, Fulton Chapel; Central Louisiana, Huron; Ethel, Alexander Memorial; North and South Carolina, New Liberty.

South Carolina Synod—Bethel, Purity; Charleston, Orangeburg; Congaree, Shandon; Enoree, Nazareth; Harmony, McDowell; Pee Dee, McColl; Piedmont, Mt. Pleasant; South Carolina, Greenwood.

Tennessee Synod—Columbia, Lewisburg; Memphis, White Haven; Nashville, Waverly.

Texas Synod—Brazos, Calvert; Brownwood, Coleman; Central Texas, McGregor; Dallas, McKinney; East Texas, Palestine; El Paso, Toyah; Fort Worth, Broadway; Paris, Henderson First; Texas-Mexican, San Marcos; West Texas, Yorktown.

Virginia Synod—East Hanover, Union (Charlie Hope); Lexington, Bethel; Montgomery, Bramwell; Norfolk, Norfolk Second; Potomac, Mitchells; Roanoke, Bluestone; West Hanover, Rockfish; Winchester, Moorefield.

West Virginia—Greenbrier, Fire Creek; Kanawha, Logan; Tygarts Valley, Richwood.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS AND WHAT IT HAS DONE TO REVOLUTIONIZE THE FINANCES OF THE CHURCH

By E. W. Dabbs

"If one has accepted Christ, received forgiveness of sin, and been brought into living contact with the heavenly Father, he becomes indebted beyond the power of language to describe."—W. J. Bryan, "In His Image," page 227.

"An indifferent Christian? It is impossible. A Christian can not be indifferent without betraying a sacred trust."—W. J. Bryan, "In His Image," page 245.

Romans 10:1: "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved."

Acts 8:4, 15: "Therefore they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the Word, then Philip went down to Samaria and preached Christ to them."

Gain in gifts—56%. Gain in members—28%. Value of dollar—50c.

The subject that I have been appointed to discuss is a very live one. I want it distinctly understood that I am heartily in favor of putting some more business-like methods into the support of the work of the Lord. I believe the Every Member Canvass is right and proper when rightly conducted. I have no personal knowledge of such a canvass that was conducted according to the plan of the General Assembly. During the years when there was some kind of Every Member Canvass in the church to which I belong the contributions were greater than ever before in the history of the church, but they were also the years of the greatest apparent prosperity the country ever saw. And the acreage plan of the Black River Missionary Union helped very materially to swell the receipts. Under this plan the acres were in addition to the regular and ordinary offerings of the members. Most of the acres were in cotton and cotton brought the highest price of this generation. It was also during these years that the splendid drives were made for war work and for the Graham Building and special gifts to these causes added to the total.

This brings me to the part of the subject, "What it has done to revolutionize the finances of the church." Since I was asked to discuss this subject at this meeting I have tried to secure accurate information. I wrote to Dr. Pratt. He sent me his address before the deacons at Clinton and leaflets on how to conduct an Every Member Canvass, but not one word about the results. I wrote to the Editor of the Presbyterian Standard and stated my subject. Told him, "What is an editor for, if he is not an Encyclopedia of Useful Information." His reply was a marked copy of the Standard for August 3d. The articles marked were by Dr. Melvin in reply to criticisms of the Presbyterian Progressive Program by Dr. J. I. Armstrong, in the Christian Observer, which I have been unable to secure, and by Dr. Graham, of Florence, "A Heartening Contrast," showing 20 years of progress of the Presbyterian Church, South. Also I saved P. P. P. of Synod of N. C. in the Standard of July 5th. It is very difficult from these statistics to reach a satisfactory conclusion. I have tried to analyze them, but I am not sure that my analysis is a correct interpretation of the mass of figures.

In North Carolina it is shown that 54 per cent of the 503 churches conducted such a canvass, that they represented 75 per cent of the total membership, that of this 75 per cent only 43 per cent subscribed. In the Synod of North Carolina of its 65,672 members 43,153 made no subscriptions to the benevolence causes. The churches reporting were assigned $629,983 and subscribed $556,429, and had a membership of 50,299, of which 22,519 were subscribers. It does not look like that if 22,519 members of 275 churches could subscribe $556,429, that 15,374 members of 228 churches could subscribe and pay the balance, $197,012, to make up the quota of the Synod. This is as man sees it. We know not how God sees it. And it is at this point that our friends who claim so much for the Every Member Canvass break down. They get off statements "That money is the greatest power in the world," absolutely ignoring, so far as their statements go, the power of the Holy Spirit.

On page 3 of the Standard of August 2nd, Dr. Melvin shows that the Southern Presbyterian Church increased its gifts from $26,969,449 for the six years ending 1915, to $42,129,966 for the six years ending 1921, an increase of $15,160,517 over the period when no money was spent. He claims the $44,802 spent for promotion work in the six years is fully justified by the results. This was 56 per cent increase in six years. Turn to page 4 and you will see Dr. Graham's figures that the Church increased its membership 28.32 per cent in this six-year period. Dr. Melvin says the period 1910-1915 "people were spending money freely" and the country was giving big sums. This does not square with my recollection of 1911 and 1914. Furthermore we all know that it was not until 1916 in the fall of the year that we cotton and tobacco growers began to receive living prices for our crops. We know that 1917-18-19-20 saw the greatest inflation in history—saw the greatest giving in history. The Church caught the infection. I think it can be easily demonstrated that the increase of 56 per cent in money by 28.32 per cent more members did not really buy more flour, grits, meat, lard, clothing, and the other necessities of life. That $26,969,449.00 in 1910-15 bought more than $42,129,966.00 in 1916-21. It has been suggested to me that men do not increase gifts according to inflation. This may be true—nor do they decrease according to deflation unless that deflation results in bankruptcy as it has done in many instances. Some of our preachers, and office holders are as eager to maintain salaries at the scale of inflation as are the strikers. There is, brethren, entirely too much measuring by the terms of the Almighty Dollar. When the membership of the church—preachers, officers and lay members, are more zealous for souls than for dollars, the consecrated dollars of the people of God will flow into His treasure house so that there will not be room enough to contain them.

Under the good Providence of God I attended a laymen's conference at Montreat, July 16-17-18. When the Holy Spirit broods over the entire Church as He did on that mountain side during those three days, these questions of money will cease to trouble the Church. The men and the women will be forthcoming to tell the glad news of salvation to the uttermost parts of the earth and the money will be in hand to send them. I do not mean to say that they will live in luxury, nor that all the preachers in the homeland will live in luxury. God never intended it so, and the sooner the Church gets rid of the preachers and teachers that are in its places of influence for the money or the prestige, and fills them with men and women who are impelled by the cry, "Woe is me! if I preach not the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ," the sooner will we see the conversion of the world to Christ.

Some years ago I heard Rev. Homer McMillan preach a great Home Missionary sermon in the church at Sumter. After telling of the number of unsaved souls in the South—this land of churches and Bibles—and presenting an earnest plea that we save those of our own households and our neighbors, he said, "As goes the South, so goes America, as goes America so goes the world."

Do not misunderstand me—I am in thorough sympathy with the Every Member Canvass. It is only a plain business proposition to give every member of the church the opportunity and privilege of supporting, according to his ability, the work of the Church. It has proved to be a good plan in the churches that have tried it. I have heard Christians say, "Under this plan of systematic giving I find I can and do give more than under the haphazard methods of the past." I found it so in my own case. But I do not want us to extol the plan to the exclusion of the work of the Holy Spirit—nor place dollars as the biggest things in the world. But let us be filled with the Spirit that actuated the Apostle Paul when he said: "Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might all be saved." May our zeal for the salvation of souls be the ruling passion of our lives, the souls of our friends and neighbors and then of all the world.

May I close with this prayer: God give us the presence of the Holy Spirit in our hearts, that He may show us the things of Christ; that He may sanctify our lives and consecrate our property and all that we are to Thy service, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

GLADE VALLEY HIGH SCHOOL

Dear Friends: In this issue of the "Standard" you will note an article written by a student of our school. I hope every reader, especially those in Orange Presbytery, will read this message, for it conveys the sentiment and appreciation of the student body in regard to the progress and successful work of the school, and more, it expresses the admiration for the service the school is rendering them in the full preparation it is giving through the different activities of the school.

Herein we beg to take this opportunity to thank our many friends for the gifts and support given during the fall term. We have had a most successful term. May I say that our greatest need in making our work more successful is salary fund.

E. B. Eldridge, Supt.

The Glade Valley High School (E. L. Taylor '23)

The Glade Valley High School is situated in the mountains of western North Carolina, north of the Blue Ridge Mountains, in the county of Alleghany. It is a religious institution founded by the Orange Presbytery in 1909. It is an institution of which the body of men who founded it are justified in feeling proud. I feel that the Presbyterians of North Carolina and elsewhere would like to hear about the noble work this school has done and is doing.

The fall term of what promises to be the most successful term in the history of the school has just closed. The fall term opened September 5th with an enrollment of 86 students, boys and girls who had come from a dozen counties to secure an education.

The school was honored on September 16th by a visit of a delegation of the Orange Presbytery. Among these were several men who were leaders in the founding of the school. During the course of their visit they gave several inspiring lectures. Mr. W. P. Horton, of Greensboro, a member of this delegation, presented a piano to the music club.

The music club has a membership of 26 girls and boys, who, under the leadership of Miss Laura Gray Grum, the music teacher, gives a recital each month.

Dr. Coble, of High Point, conducted a revival meeting at the Glade Valley Church in October. A very great spiritual interest was manifested and much good was accomplished. There were 35 conversions; 25 of these joined the church at the close of the meeting.

Immediately after the close of the meeting Mrs. Grace Conolly organized a life service band. Miss Overcash was elected leader. This band consists of 22 girls and boys who dedicate their lives to the cause of Christianity at home and in the missionary fields of foreign lands. In connection with this there are six prayer bands which meet each Friday night and hold a short prayer service.

Glade Valley has a very progressive literary society which meets each Saturday night. In the triangular debate next spring the debaters of this society hope to come out victorious and be able to send the winners to Chapel Hill to compete for the state championship.

Glade Valley has also one of the best Senior Christian Endeavor Societies in the state. It has a membership of 124. Its membership is steadily increasing. Its goal is "The top rung of the ladder." Mr. Frank P. Wilson, field secretary of Christian Endeavor for the States of North Carolina and Virginia, visited the society in September. He gave an interesting lecture on the work being done by the Christian Endeavor in this state and elsewhere.

Thanksgiving day at Glade Valley was a day of thanksgiving. Through the generosity of the many friends of the school, turkeys, cakes, pies, etc., were provided. I will not tire you by giving a lengthy description of the dinner, but suffice to say that it will long be remembered by those who partook of it. We appreciate the spirit with which these things were given. If more of the Orange Presbytery could realize, could know about the great work that Glade Valley is doing, notwithstanding the fact that she has so little to do with, they would get behind the school and help "push." Glade Valley does not want to be judged by her words but by her deeds.

I as representative of the student body feel that the school was founded at this place for our own good, by the Divine providence and under the direction of the Great Giver of All Things. "Come on, let's push."

A PRAYER FOR NINETEEN TWENTY-THREE

By Irene Le Queux

Another year has passed away,
With golden days, and days that were gray;
Days of gladness and days of pain,
Of glory and sunshine, of cloud and of rain.

Dear Lord, we thank Thee for days of song,
For days of sorrow that made us strong;
For days of pain, that turned us to Thee
And helped us our Father's love to see.

For dreary days, with no friend near
To whisper words of comfort and cheer;
'Twas then that we found, with joy untold,
The Friend ever near us—Soul of our soul.

The curtain has dropped on Twenty-Two,
We enter the dawn of a year that is new;
Let us pause, as we take the book and write
Our names at the top of the pages so white.

Oh, never may one page be blurred
With an unkind thought or a cruel word,
But may the Spirit of Christ within
Keep us from writing deeds of sin.

As we finish the pages, may they show
That we're scattering sunshine as we go;
Oh, may our record be pleasing to Thee,
For we're just passing once thro Twenty-Three.
Taylorsville, N. C.

Only a new purpose can make a new year.

WHAT A STANDARD TRAINING SCHOOL WILL DO FOR YOUR COMMUNITY

By Rev. Wesley Baker

Field Director, Sunday School and Young People's Work

Dr. William Adams Brown in his recent book, "The Church in America," says, "Of all the educational tasks of the Church, none is comparable in importance to the training of the young. It is right that the agency which is charged with this duty should be given the central place in the Church's educational system. Necessary as it may be to preach the Gospel to adults and try to win them to Christ by conversion, the great evangelistic opportunity of the Church lies with the children and the young people who are growing up under Christian influences." Obviously then, one of the Church's most important duties is to find teachers of the proper character and ability and train them to do their work effectively. We cannot any longer take it for granted that every one is competent to fit one to teach geography or mathematics it is certainly not less necessary to make careful preparation for teaching the incomparably more important and difficult subject of religion. One of the agencies which is helping to provide this training is the Standard Training School. These schools are being vigorously promoted by the educational department of the Presbyterian Committee of Publication. During the past seven months training schools, each lasting about a week, have been conducted in 22 communities. In these schools 1,050 certificates have been awarded to students for satisfactorily completing one of the units of the regular Standard Training Course. This number of certificates is about three times as many as were given during the whole of last year. These schools have been conducted in Danville, Va.; Portsmouth, Va.; Norfolk, Va.; Richmond, Va.; Newport News, Va.; Steele's Tavern, Va.; Charlotte, N. C.; Greensboro, N. C.; Asheville, N. C.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Dallas, Tex.; Houston, Tex.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Gainesville, Fla.; DeFuniak Springs, Fla.; Massanetta Springs, Va.; and Montreat, N. C. Non-Standard Training Schools were held at Charlottesville, Va.; Canton, N. C.; Morristown, Tenn., and Marion, Va. Schools are to be conducted during the next few months at Lynchburg, Va.; Roanoke, Va.; Memphis, Tenn.; Little Rock, Ark.; Bristol, Tenn., Va., and other places.

The question has been asked, "Just what will a Standard Training School do for the churches of a community?" In answer it may be said that a Standard Training School:

1. Provides Trained Leaders—Almost any pastor when asked what is the one outstanding need of his church, without hesitation replies, "Consecrated trained leaders." Of the agencies in the local church now operating to supply this need none is meeting with such signal success as the Standard Training School. In these schools prospective as well as present leaders receive training. One of the encouraging things in the religious world today is the large number of young people who are eagerly taking training in these schools for Christian work. Last summer thousands of young people attended young people's conferences and went back to their churches fired with new ideals and enthusiasm and a real desire to serve. But these young people need more than ideals and enthusiasm and desire. They need to be trained for the specific work which they are expected to do and this training the Standard Training School provides.

2. Helps to Establish New Ideals and Standards of Work for Religious Teachers—The training school brings to a community prominent educators, teachers and Sunday School leaders who do their work in the spirit and with the thoroughness that is characteristic of the best teaching in the best schools. Local workers have the opportunity to observe these trained instructors at work and the course of study represents the best thought in religious education.

3. Quickens Interest in the Training Work of the Local Churches—A training school in the community centers the attention of pastors, superintendents, and Sunday School workers for nearly a week upon one of the most fundamental tasks of the Church. The training school goes far toward generating an atmosphere in which it becomes easy for local churches to inaugurate and carry forward their program of training religious teachers. In some instances workers are inspired to organize a training class in their own church, while oftentimes students are stimulated to continue their study by taking other units by correspondence.

4. Provides Leaders for Local Training Classes—The training school helps to create such an appreciation of the significance of the work of training for effective Sunday School service that capable persons receive a new and enlarged vision of the opportunity it affords for life investment.

5. Reveals to Young People the Opportunity of Service Offered by the Sunday School—It is too often the case that young people in our churches do not really apprehend the greatness of the opportunity which the Sunday School affords as a field for Christian service. A training school properly conducted helps young people to realize the kind of religious instruction a church ought to have and it does much toward leading many of the strongest young men and women to offer themselves for service in the work of the Sunday School.

For information about Standard Training Schools write to Rev. Wesley Baker, Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Box 1176, Richmond, Va.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, proper, meets only quadrennially. In the intervening years, however, its Executive Committee, the members of which are specifically named by the constituent churches, meets and receives the reports of commissions and committees and officers. At these meetings, all members of commissions and committees, representatives of affiliated, co-operating and consultative bodies, designated representatives of state and local federations, and representatives of churches of other lands, are constituted "corresponding members," and sit with the executive committee for counsel and advice but without a vote. In addition many visitors are usually present.

The 1922 meeting was held in Indianapolis, December 13th-15th. It was attended by 200 or 300 members of the two classes taking part. Several representatives were present from foreign churches, a notable figure among them being a Russian bishop of most Evangelical faith. Two and a half days were given to a program of great variety and interest. Discussions followed the business and addresses, on many of the topics presented. All reports of commissions and committees and officers and all resolutions, papers, etc., introduced in the meeting were referred to a "Business Committee" of eleven, to be fully considered by that committee and to be returned to the Executive Committee with comments or recommendations. Strictly speaking, therefore, it was in this small committee that all the acts and plans of the Council's greater committee were shaped. Its recommendations were invariably adopted, and as a rule the speeches and discussion in the larger body were the "shouting." Service on this business committee was no sinecure. It required constant attendance, deep interest, and careful watchfulness.

The meeting was presided over, except on special occasions, by Rev. Frederick W. Burnham, chairman of the executive committee. The president of the Council, Dr. Robert E. Speer, was present throughout, and took active part in the deliberations. The spirit and tone of the meeting were expressed in three different ways: first, by the general attitude of the body towards the work of the Kingdom of Christ as a spiritual organization set to be a witness for her Lord; next, by the outstanding addresses of the leading speakers; and next, by the nature of the business committee's reports. The prayers and general atmosphere were marked in their emphasis of the spiritual side of the duty of the Church as a church, and of the members of the Church in their relations to one another and to the world. No one could sit in the body and not feel that this was its dominant note. Occasionally one would hear something, from a not well-poised speaker, that would grate on the ear, but this occurred very rarely.

The addresses of Dr. Speer, on "A Survey of Problem and Tendencies in the Co-Operative Work of the Year"; of Dr. Stevenson, on "The Unchanging Spiritual Basis of the Church"; of Drs. Goodell and Bader, on "Evangelism"; of Bishop Cannon, on "The Duty of American Protestantism Towards European Protestantism"; of Dr. Speer again on "The Contribution of Foreign Missions to World Unity," were full of spiritual power. Both Dr. Speer and Mr. Fred B. Smith made earnest pleas for the full development of the Council into all that it should be and was planned to be to the churches and to the world, as an agency for the accomplishment, in spiritual co-operation, of the great ends for which Christ has established His Church in the world, both declaring that with all its accomplishments the Council was not yet what it should be and by the leading of the Spirit can yet be. The most marked manifestation, however, of the high spiritual aim of the Council and its desire to maintain the highest purposes, was found in the business committee's counsels and recommendations. This committee cut out every suggestion which the sometimes too ardent advocates of doubtful measures sought to exploit, political, social, economic, and the like, measures such as attacks by name, and without sufficient warrant of information, upon the Ku Klux Klan, advocacy of the "League of Nations," which has become a distinctly political question, a call for the recognition of the Soviet government of Russia, a dabbling in South American politics, dealing with the question of the Japanese on the Pacific slope. All such measures were wisely disallowed. The Council and its important and formulative business committee were without doubt seeking to work vigorously along lines which our Church regards as vital, and the voice of our Church, somewhat muffled though it has been by her recent action in declaring her need of the Council as an agency in the accomplishment of certain desirable ends from the undertaking of which it is debarred as a church, and then, as a protest against some mistakes which the Council has in her judgment made, withdrawing all financial support to it, is distinctly heard and is helpful in bringing the Council to that attitude where its work will be all that the severest critic could ask.

Three words will cover practically every aspect of the recent meeting: Spirituality, Fellowship, Co-Operation. In the working out of these, especially in the practical aspects of co-operation and the bearing of that co-operation upon such problems as the Near East, European economic chaos, "distress of nations," and problems nearer home, there is abundant opportunity for mistakes here and there. The Church herself is not always as wise as she should be. But the Council has adopted as its fundamental principle in all of them that the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ furnishes the divine and assured means of settling them, and that this Gospel, given in a world-wide evangelism, and manifest in the fellowship of Christ's people, and accompanied by the Holy Spirit, is the only power on earth to redeem nations and men.

THE WEST VIRGINIA EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN

By Rev. Henry H. Sweets, Secretary

The campaign for a million one hundred thousand dollars for the educational institutions of the two Synods of West Virginia, U. S. and U. S. A., under the direction of Rev. Herman Jones, the representative of the Executive Committee of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., is now entering upon its last stage.

Wonderful victories were achieved in Huntington and Charleston. The quota for Huntington was $130,000. The campaign opened December 4th and on the night of December 12th it closed with the entire amount pledged. A small part of this was underwritten by members of the church who will see that pledges are secured.

The campaign in Charleston opened December 5th and the Victory Celebration was held in the First Presbyterian Church, December 15th. The quota for this city was $200,000; $233,000 was subscribed. Never before was there such a thrill of joy in the hearts of Charleston Presbyterians as at that memorable meeting. Space would forbid our mentioning the men and women whose faith, energy and perseverance achieved this well-nigh impossible thing in these two cities.

Judge Campbell was chairman of the executive committee in Huntington, and Mr. John Laing, in Charleston. Messrs. Paul Harris, C. T. McCully, and Ed. L. Pike attended to the details of organization. Rev. S. W. McGill, field secretary of the executive committee, gave personal supervision to much of the work and was present to help at the critical stages of the campaign.

The pastors, officers and members of all of the churches of these two cities threw themselves without reserve into the work. Never before in the history of Presbyterianism in this section of the country was there more enthusiasm and purpose of heart than was revealed throughout these memorable days. The sacrifices of the noble Presbyterians establishes new and magnificently unselfish records. None of the beneficiaries of the fund are located in either of these communities. This gives added emphasis to the remarkable feature of the campaign.

The victory in this State is now within the reach of the West Virginia Presbyterians, more than $800,000 having been subscribed today. We are fully convinced that the work will continue and with united, prayerful, sacrificial efforts the campaign will certainly end in a triumph for the Kingdom of God.

Louisville, Ky.

A year of self-surrender will bring larger blessings than fourscore of selfishness.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

The Woman's Auxiliary—Take Notice! The Assembly's Stewardship Committee is now ready to deliver the study book entitled "Christian Stewardship for Women," by Mrs. Askew.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Church plans to take this study up about February 18th, for about four weeks prior to the Every Member Canvass, which comes on March 18th.

This is a splendid little book, and will be welcomed by the women of the Church. It sells for 15 cents per copy, and we urge every local Auxiliary in the Church to place its order with us at once.

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee.
M. E. Melvin, General Secretary.
410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Travel letter from Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, Monterrey, Mexico, Thursday, January 4, 1923.—Dear Friends: You see that I am in Monterrey and have had a change of plans! Dr. Skinner crossed the Rio Grande with me, put me safely on the pullman to this point, where I was to meet the through train to Mexico City. Just the past month the coach from Matamoras to Mexico City has been taken off and passengers going to Mexico City have to change from one pullman to another here.

We had been out of Matamoras only about 45 minutes when the engine had a bad break-down and confusion reigned. The only other woman in the pullman was a typical Yankee old maid about 55 years old from Maine! She groaned and lamented that she had left the "north and civilization" and utterly refused to notice the intensely interesting things that were going on up front. I finally climbed off the train alone and met a fine young American boy about my son Rob's age, en route to Tampico, who took me up to watch the performance at the engine. First they threw a contrivance over the telegraph wires and tried to phone for another engine. No result! Wires didn't work—nothing works here, telephones, telegraphs, everything is "out of order." So they went to work to mend the engine. They had a good force of men who came on hand car and they jacked up the engine and tinkered and pounded and did other mysterious things to it. Meantime another group of men decided it was a good time to put new ties under the rails we were standing on, and they actually did work for four hours replacing the old worn-out splinters of ties with nice new ones from a pile beside the road. Of course, they worked only between the wheels and did not try to raise the cars. After a little while I noticed that we had a nice lot of soldiers patrolling the train on either side. I can't imagine where they came from, but they seemed to rise up out of the earth! Anyway, they were there and we felt quite important! I got some pictures of the wreck and the men at work, tried to get a group of soldiers, but they shook their heads in spite of my most winning smile! I was so sorry!

Several Mexican huts stood not far away and soon all of the Mexican men began going over to one and returning with small packages wrapped in newspapers! I just knew they were hot tamales and I wanted so to go and get some. But I knew how scandalized the Mexican women in the day coach would be and I resisted, even though I did not expect to get any supper! The Mexican women never stirred from their seats all the four and a half hours we were there!

About 6:00 o'clock I made the heartening discovery that the porter (a negro) had a little closet of a kitchen in rear of pullman where he was preparing to give us supper! Just as we started up—at 7:00 o'clock—he presented us with an elaborate bill of fare to choose from. I had had a very hurried luncheon at Brownsville at 11:30 and was hungry, so I decided to try "Frijoles," though I had no idea what it was. It just sounded curious. It proved to be chili beans and meat and red pepper and greasy gravy, not at all appetizing! And I had finally to come down to the prosaic and order some bread and butter and strawberry jam from the U. S. A.! Wasn't that too bad!

As we were five hours late it seemed probable we would miss our connections here, so I went peacefully to sleep with everything packed and ready for a hasty exit should we catch the train. But we missed it by only 45 minutes! The negro porter assured me he would put me in the hands of an honest driver who would take me to a hotel, and I was so glad he was a plain black U. S. A. negro and could be depended on. The Maine lady was in a pitiable state of perturbation and scared to death of everything and everybody. She was more afraid of the negro than the Mexican! But her friends met her at the train and she went happily off, without a look to see what was happening to me! The rickety old auto bumped and rattled through dark streets for 15 minutes until I began to fear the driver had not understood instructions! Our attempts at conversation were ludicrous and monotonous—to my remark he replied "No Sabe," and I made the same rejoinder to his peculiar grunts. At last we came to the Imperial Hotel, not the one I started for at all, but what mattered that. A young boy came out to the car and spoke English, and it was with difficulty I refrained from embracing him! So all was well.

I have to spend 24 hours here and take my train at 2:10 in the morning, but that is a mere detail.

Meantime I have had a wonderful walk through the town and across the beautiful Plaza. Everything is old and weather beaten, even the people (many of them). But the trees hang full of golden oranges, roses are in full bloom beneath the palm trees, birds are singing in the Plaza and the benches are filled with calm, unhurried courteous people. The women wear the long black scarf over their shining black hair, and often covering the lower part of the face. Many of the men have huge blankets wrapped around their shoulders, and the Plaza swarms with bootblacks, little bare-footed boys with box thrown across their shoulder, eager to shine your shoes, yet busy flipping coins when business is dull. I stopped to watch two engaged in this national pastime, and when the winner snatched up the coin that he had gained from the smaller boy, his white teeth flashed a smile at me and he scampered round the corner. Verily, they learn the national vice of gambling in their very youth!

Monterrey is a city of about 90,000 population, and has an elevation of 1,700 feet. It is in a plateau surrounded by rugged bare mountains which look as though they might be of volcanic origin. The Cathedral faces the Plaza and is old and interesting looking. The Manger scene is depicted near the door and old women were kneeling on the stone floor praying to the image of the infant Jesus. A fat jolly looking Priest came through a side door as I passed it and entered the congressional box outside of which were waiting about 15 women who formed in line to await their turn at the little window near the priest's ear. Paper flowers of rare perfection decorated all the altars and the Mexican love of gay colors was evidenced by their gorgeous hues.

The shops have small show windows or none at all and one has to hunt to find where they really are. Street vendors ply their trade everywhere, but usually their wares seem to be articles of food, such as candy, peanuts, pecans, oranges and bananas. Altogether it is a wonderfully interesting place.

As I came into the hotel and stopped at the desk to speak to the clerk, a young fellow, typically American, approached me courteously and said, "Madam, you are from U. S. A. and I want to introduce myself. I have been in Mexico only 30 days, but I am so homesick to hear some plain United States talk. I want to tell you my name and where I am from, and ask you to talk to me awhile!" You may guess I recalled that one of my boys had spent a year in Mexico, and I told him I would be glad to have a talk with him this afternoon!

I must write some cards and then I want to take a street car ride and see more of this interesting place. I shall surely be glad when I lay eyes on a real U. S. Presbyterian Missionary, which I hope to do Saturday morning at Mexico City.

For Your Information—To the president: The Secretary of Foreign Missions, The Secretary of Literature. Dear Friends: Christmas is past, the New Year lies before us, and the first and most important duty before the Auxiliary now is the organization of the Study Class for Foreign Missions, using "Sunrise in Aztec Land."

Mexico is our subject of study, and a most complete and attractive book on that interesting country has been prepared for the Church's use by our missionary to Mexico, Rev. W. A. Ross. Everyone in the Church should read the book, and as many as possible should study its pages systematically, and learn the romance, traditions, history and possibilities of these people who are our nearest neighbors, and yet of whom we really know so little.

Right now is the time to organize the study classes. Why not have several? There are surely some women who will really study the book. No matter if only three or four agree to spend six hours in actual study of Mexico, they are well worth organizing into a class.

Have as many reading circles as possible, of both men and women. They will create a new interest in Mexico.

Then have a one-day class, when you have the whole book presented to a large group.

Whatever your situation, get as many people as possible in touch with the facts presented in this one study book.

The more the Church knows about Mexico, the more she will pray and give to Mexico. The study class is fundamental to all advance in mission work. What is your Auxiliary going to do about it right now?

The president will receive shortly a supply of self-denial envelopes for the Foreign Mission season of prayer and self-denial. Distribute one of these to each woman member of your church, urging her to observe this season. Further supplies can be obtained from the Auxiliary office.

With all good wishes,

Sincerely yours,

H. P. Winsborough.

Greensboro, N. C.—A large and enthusiastic meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of Westminster Church, Greensboro, was held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The church parlor was filled to overflowing and prospects for the new year's work seemed unusually bright. The subject for the afternoon's study was "Stewardship and Home Missions."

The devotional exercises were conducted by the president, Mrs. Tully Blair, whose reading on Stewardship was appropriate for the new year. Mrs. D. C. Clapp and Mrs. H. N. Darling read interesting papers on Home Missions. Miss Hancock, returned missionary from China, gave a splendid talk on Home and Foreign Missions, telling also of the great work being done by native teachers and preachers in this field. At the close of the program a social hour was enjoyed, with refreshments served by the hostess for the afternoon, Mesdames E. P. Wharton, R. B. McLennon and W. F. Ross.

Greensboro, N. C.—The first meeting of the circles of the Woman's Auxiliary, First Presbyterian Church for the New Year yesterday, were characterized by enthusiastic plans for the remainder of the church year, and splendid attendance. Following the routine business of the afternoon each hostess served delightful refreshments and a pleasant social hour followed.

"With all thy getting, get understanding." Make your Foreign Mission study class attractive. Let us help you. "Sunrise in Aztec Land" is a fascinating story of the romance and possibilities of our nearest neighbor, Mexico. "For thy fate is writ by God's finger, And thy destiny rests in His palm."—National hymn of Mexico.

Have one or all of these study groups—Kinds of classes—Such members as wish to make a serious study of the book should meet as a class one hour a day for six days or one hour a week for six weeks. This is the ideal plan. Each chapter should be studied by the members before meeting for general discussion or instruction under a leader.

To shut-ins or other stay-at-homes, the Reading Circle Plan is best adapted. If possible each member should have her own book, but the Auxiliary may purchase one or two copies instead. Let the readers report to Secretary of Literature as they read the book and pass it on. Notes made by one reader on slips of paper inserted in the leaves of the book will interest the next reader.

Under the head of "intensive study" should come the one-day meeting. This is an excellent plan for country societies where members are scattered. Have them read the book previously and come together to discuss it in an all-day meeting. A box lunch and music will prove refreshing at luncheon time. Large city churches also find the one-day class successful.

Delightfully "different" may be the meetings where each "circle" of an Auxiliary constitutes a study class group. At Auxiliary meeting, contests and debates between circles may be engaged in. Nothing so stimulates interest as keen friendly rivalry.

Young people should have at least one study class in every church. A leader skillful in handling them can present in a bright entertaining manner the substance of the book, even if no more serious study is undertaken. Games and social activities suggested elsewhere are especially advisable in such a group.

Methods—Make a careful study of the group of people from which the membership of your class is to be drawn and adapt your plan of study to suit them. It is better to have small congenial groups than large mixed ones.

In selecting a meeting place, find a convenient one. It may be the church, a private home or even a downtown office, where an electric percolator and a few sandwiches at luncheon hour can be enjoyed by busy women while the text-book is being read by a leader and discussed by all.

See that the study room is bright and comfortable as possible. Use a map of Mexico secured from the Foreign Mission Committee at Nashville, Tenn; pictures of Mexican scenery or architecture, pottery, or weaving. See list of "Helps" below.

Some churches have found the Wednesday night prayer meeting a good time for the study of a mission text-book, that men and women may enjoy it together under the leadership of the pastor. This is advisable in small churches or rural districts where different denominations unite for study.

Impersonation or a touch of pagentry or charades are fine for increasing interest in a meeting. Some Mexican games are given in "Children at Play in Mexico," a leaflet by Alice McClelland, to be secured from our Foreign Mission Committee at Nashville. Simple questions on the text-book may be used as words are in an old-fashioned "Spelling-bee," where two leaders choose sides to "spell each other down."

One-day meetings may add interest by a Mexican luncheon, serving some of the delightful things Mrs. Morrow tells about in her leaflet "Mexican Dishes," that may be ordered from the Nashville office. Suggestions are given in it, too, for light refreshments for morning or afternoon meetings.

Never let a study class drag. Have the program, no matter how simple, prepared in advance and put it through with enthusiasm. In other words, make it snappy. Keen interest on the leader's part enlivens even the dullest class.

Strengthen the work of the class by prayer. Ask the prayer bands to add the study class to the list of things to be prayed for during January and February. To be effective, the study of missions must be more than a mere intellectual acquirement and must include the Spiritual interpretation of the knowledge gained. M. I. S.

THE TEACHER

Lord, who am I to teach the way
To little children day by day,
So prone myself to go astray?

I teach them knowledge—but I know
How faint they flicker and how low
The candles of my knowledge glow.

I teach them power to will and do—
But only now to learn anew
My own great weakness through and through.

I teach them love for all mankind
And all God's creatures—but I find
My love comes lagging still behind.

Lord, if their guide I still must be,
Oh, let the little children see
Their teacher leaning hard on thee.
—Leslie Pickney Hill, in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(UNDER AUSPICES SYNOD'S COMMITTEE OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C.

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

The honor of sending in the first news items for the Department goes to the young people of the Prospect Church, near Mooresville. They issue a challenge to all the societies in the United States, which of course means all in the Synods of the Carolinas, in the matter of securing subscriptions to the Endeavor papers. We wish you could know the young people of this church (and the older folks, too). It is an inspiration to go there and see evidences of their strong faith and their earnest work. We are glad to have this challenge from them and hope a number of the local organizations will "take it up."

Now that the ice is broken, may we not have a large number of reports each week. You cannot make your editor happier than by sending him news about what you are doing and planning to do. With the different contests and special programs and the regular schedule of activities there should be no end of material for spicy, helpful newsbits for the young people to pass on to other young people.

We hope that those who did not observe "North Carolina Sunday" on the 14th will arrange to do so at an early date. It is a fine work to which our young people are asked to give their support through the Home Missions Committee and the Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

We would call especial attention this week to Mr. Carr's article on the Daily Vacation Bible School. It is none too early to be thinking about, praying over and making plans for such a work. There is much opportunity for real service and satisfaction in these schools.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

JANUARY 21, 1923

THE PRODIGAL SON

Lesson: Luke 15. Printed Text: Luke 15:11-24
GOLDEN TEXT—"There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."—Luke 15:10.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

11 And he said, A certain man had two sons:
12 And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living.

14 And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15 And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine.

16 And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat; and no man gave unto him.

17 And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger!

18 I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee,

19 And am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants.

20 And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him.

21 And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son.

22 But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet:

23 And bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry:

24 For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 20. Did God leave all mankind to perish in the estate of sin and misery?

A. God having, out of His mere good pleasure, from all eternity, elected some to everlasting life, did enter into a covenant of grace, to deliver them out of the estate of sin and misery, and to bring them into an estate of salvation, by a Redeemer.

The parable of the two sons or of the Prodigal Son and his brother represents two classes of human beings. These may be designated as the Publican and the Pharisee. The Publican was the Roman Tax Collector, the representative of a hated foreign government. He was generally a man of immoral and profligate character, and may be deemed a type of an avowed and impious sinner. The Pharisee was a professor of religion and a great stickler for its outward forms, while he often denied in his life its essential principles. Some of the Pharisees were sincere and yet tainted with error. Others were mere pretenders to a piety that they did not possess, and were denounced by our Saviour as hypocrites. The Prodigal Son then may picture the declared wandering sinner, and the elder Son the mistaken professor of religion. Our present lesson deals only with the Prodigal. We will consider The Prodigal's Departure; His Degradation; His Repentance or Return; His Reception by His Father. Every phase of his story is full of warning, instruction or encouragement to piety.

I. The Prodigal's Departure

His departure from his father's house presents a vivid picture of the sinner's separation from God. The wayward son departed in heart before he did in conduct. Alienated from his father, he left him. He demands his part of the father's property, from which he derived his living. His request is granted and "he divides unto him his living." With the goods derived from his father he departs into a far country. So the sinner, with the gifts gotten from his Divine Father, separates from God into the far country of sin. The Prodigal may have departed with pompous display and with gladness anticipations of a luxurious life of unbridled license and self-gratification. He deemed himself free from a parent's restraints and from the toils and burdens of a well-ordered home. He had little thought of the evil companions he would encounter, the temptations that would assail him, the vicious habits that he might contract, and of the wants, woes and dangers that would beset his path.

II. His Degradation

The Prodigal's moral decline commenced at home. The estrangement of his heart from his father and his home preface the way for his departure and prevented him from fully realizing the ignominy of his conduct. In the far country, away from salutary influences, his degradation progresses. Degradation of thought and feeling leads to lower associations and deeds. A degraded soul seeks vicious companionship. He associates with the vile, "devours his living with harlots, and wastes his substance with riotous living." Waste makes want. After a while "he has spent all and begins to be in want." Moved by poverty, "he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country who sent him into his fields to feed swine." He has a hard master who does not feed him sufficiently. He has no funds, for "no man gave unto him," and he would "fain satisfy his hunger with the food that swine did eat. The Prodigal has become degraded in nature, character, associates and employment. Such must be the fate of him who forsakes God and perseveres in sin.

III. The Prodigal's Repentance and Return

His repentance begins with a conviction of wrongdoing and of sore need. He has "grief and hatred of his sin." He says, "How many hired servants of my father have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger." He determines to return just as he was. His words are, "I will arise and go to my father." There is no comfort, no hope, no salvation here. They must be sought at home. He purposes to return not only in his degraded and helpless condition, but with confession, and to say, "Father, I have sinned before heaven and in thy sight, make me as one of thy hired servants." He desires to be his father's servant on any terms and is willing to accept the lowest place. Doubtless the Prodigal in returning to his father encountered many hardships and obstacles and difficulties. But he had the utmost confidence in his father's love and kindness and help. So should it be with the sinner in returning to God. "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?"

IV. The Prodigal's Reception by His Father

The wandering son's expectations were not disappointed but more than realized. The father met him with a heart anxious for his return. He watched for his reclamation. He saw him a great way off; he ran and fell on his neck and kissed him. Despite his wandering, his wrongdoing, his degradation, his long absence, and his wan and beggared condition, the loving father embraces the repentant son and kisses him. That kiss was a seal of affection, reconciliation and forgiveness. Receiving him with an anxious heart, a fond embrace and a loving greeting, the father received the Prodigal with exceeding joy and precious gifts. The best robe, the gold ring, the ornamented sandals, the signs of sonship, are given him. The fatted calf is killed and the feast spread as expressions of joy, and the father says: "This my son was dead and is alive again, was lost and is found." Is it surprising that this story has been called "The Pearl of Parables," and that the Prodigal's reception at home puts the crown upon its excellence.

The wise man puts the best possible construction upon all words and actions. He thinketh no evil. That is, he does not discover evil where none actually exists; he does not construct evil by his own thinking; he does not take exceptions to the unintentional blunders of his friends and enemies; he does not accept every general thrust as being intended for him; he does not carelessly impute bad motives to actions which might, possibly, be neutral.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH

M., Jan. 22—Attendance: Eph. 4:4-25.

T., Jan. 23—Service: Gal. 6:1-5.

W., Jan. 24—Benevolence: Gal. 6:6-10.

T., Jan. 25—Holiness: I Pet. 1:13-23.

F., Jan. 26—Prayer: John 17:14-21.

S., Jan. 27—Obedience: Matt. 16:16-20.

Sun., Jan. 28—Topic: What Are the Rightful Claims of the Church Upon Us? Heb. 10:19-25. (Beginning Christian Endeavor Week.)

What grounds has the church for making claims?

What good does church attendance do?

What claims has the church on our time?

One distinguishing trait of young people is loyalty to the group to which they belong. They are careful to meet the calls of the club or society of which they are members. They have little use for one who joins and fails to do his part. They pride themselves on playing the game, being on the square, giving every one a fair deal. The church is a group of people with whom we have joined for the greatest work in the world, the salvation of men's souls, and the uplift of their lives from sin. We must be loyal to our church, and recognize its claims upon us.

I. The Church Claims From Us Loyalty to Christ

We Must Be Loyal to Christ and His Truth. This is the first claim. The church is more than a group. It is the redeemed body of Christ. He is its head, and we are the members of the body. First of all, then we must be loyal to our Saviour, because He has made atonement for our sins by His blood, and opened a way for us to reach God. He has bought for us forgiveness of sins, and given us peace of conscience. He is now at God's right hand as our mediator, praying for us. He has given to us the Holy Spirit, who has sprinkled our hearts, in baptism, from an evil and accusing conscience, and washed us from sin, so that we can live pure lives. It was the sacrifice and suffering of Christ which obtained all these blessings for us, and therefore we must be loyal to Him and His Church.

II. The Church Claims a Consistent Life From Us

We must hold fast our profession of faith without wavering. Constancy and perseverance in doing right and being good is necessary in our Christian life. We have many enemies who wish to defeat our purpose to live right and to be faithful to Jesus. Satan seeks to turn us aside, the world is tempting us on every hand, our evil nature is continually suggesting to us to seek pleasure, idleness, selfish aims, and to neglect duty to the Church and to God. But, we must be constant and true to our Lord and to the Church. We must hold fast, and not turn loose. Christ will be faithful with us, if we keep ourselves true.

III. The Church Claims Brotherly Love From Us

The church is a group of people who have been regenerated, and made sons of God, and therefore they are brothers of one another. Christ said to His disciples, One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren. We must act as brothers in the church because we belong to God's family, and we all have the same purpose, to build up the kingdom of God in the world.

We must be considerate of each other, we must think of one another's welfare, and do all we can to help our Christian brethren. We must avoid putting stumbling blocks in our brothers' way that would cause them to fall into sin. We must not criticise them or ridicule them, but

(Continued on page 14)

DOES the EVERY-MEMBER

: : The Acid Test

Facts That Uncover Our Financial Problem

We submit herewith the result of a close study of the churches in the Assembly reporting the Every Member Canvass as contrasted with those that do not report one. The Synods are arranged into four groups alphabetically for convenience.

After six or seven years of strenuous effort we have 1,474 churches that do not employ the E. M. C. plan, though the universal testimony of those that use it is complete endorsement. These churches without the E. M. C. gave last year to our Four Executive Committees $2.15 per capita for the number of communicants. The 1,965 churches that employ this financial method gave to these same causes $4.80 per capita. Moreover, if we were to take out of the class of non-canvass churches a few of the larger ones that give liberally on the old plan, we would reduce the average per capita gifts in this class to less than $1.00.

The gifts to the Four Executive Committees are taken as a test, not to make a discrimination in their favor, but because the figures are easy to obtain, and because gifts to these causes affords a fair test of what a church is doing in benevolences.

If the 1,474 churches in the Assembly which do not employ the Every Member Canvass plan, and which fall below the average (a few of them are above the average) had given on the same per capita basis as the 1,965 churches gave which do use this plan, our total gifts to the Four Executive Committees would have been increased by $177,519.

GROUP I—ALABAMA, APPALACHIA, ARKANSAS, FLORIDA, GEORGIA					GROUP II—KENTUCKY, LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI MISSOURI
WITH E. M. C.				WITHOUT E. M. C.				WITH E. M. C.				WITHOUT E. M. C.
Presbytery	Chs.	Mbrs.	Gave	Per. Cap.	Chs.	Mbrs.	Gave	Per. Cap.	Presbytery	Chs.	Mbrs.	Gave	Per. Cap.	Chs.	Mbrs.	Gave	Per. Cap.
1. Ala. Synod										1. Ky. Synod
E. Alabama	25	4,410	$14,765	$3.35	26	1,288	$ 1,372	$1.05	Ebenezer	16	2,235	$ 9,859	$4.40	8	241	$ 70	$.28
Mobile	19	2,676	14,851	5.50	4	174	62	.35	Louisville	30	6,422	36,012	4.60	14	741	349	.26
N. Alabama	31	7,338	26,880	3.70	46	1,646	1,187	.75	Muhlenburg	11	1,416	7,122	5.05	6	96	293	3.05
Tuscaloosa	26	3,166	17,839	5.65	37	1,109	308	.30	Paducah	6	1,222	6,899	5.60	3	208	79	.40
2. Appa. Synod										2. La. Synod
Abingdon	30	4,402	24,080	5.45	29	1,710	6,383	3.60	Louisiana	14	2,514	15,413	6.10	12	422	403	.90
Asheville	17	2,496	10,817	4.30	10	515	1,279	2.40	New Orleans	10	2,678	11,446	4.20	34	3,492	18,967	5.40
Holston	26	3,907	21,996	5.60	21	993	1,486	1.50	Red River	23	2,705	15,369	5.65	12	470	1,244	2.60
Knoxville	20	4,942	37,475	7.50	18	606	151	.25	3. Miss. Synod
3. Ark. Synod										3. Miss. Synod
Arkansas	22	4,479	16,651	3.70	14	731	211	.30	C. Miss.	21	3,726	18,725	5.10	51	2,800	3,642	1.30
Ouachita	24	3,207	17,368	5.40	17	485	538	1.10	E. Miss.	24	2,423	6,900	2.80	23	940	164	.17
Pine Bluff	12	2,136	9,909	4.60	14	881	1,784	1.10	Meridian	42	3,451	10,369	3.05	41	1,691	791	.45
Washburn	9	1,180	2,913	2.40	1	19	---	---	Miss.	22	2,625	12,133	4.60	12	488	276	.55
4. Fla. Synod										4. Mo. Synod
Florida	17	1,988	9,319	4.60	16	829	1,617	1.90	Lafayette	10	1,920	7,327	3.80	24	1,455	1,740	1.10
St. Johns	29	5,114	29,485	5.75	13	1,305	1,909	1.40	Missouri	11	2,125	6,436	3.00	13	801	819	1.00
Suwanee	25	4,446	18,392	4.15	16	381	238	.60	Palmyra	15	1,577	3,417	2.10	---	---	---	---
5. Georgia Synod										4. Mo. Synod
Athens	19	2,365	10,050	4.25	15	699	1,318	1.80	Potosi	8	1,239	4,538	3.60	17	1,160	1,373	1.10
Atlanta	54	10,872	70,627	6.50	16	1,230	1,652	1.35	St. Louis	9	2,766	7,682	2.70	11	352	714	2.05
Augusta	19	2,522	13,939	5.60	6	216	280	1.20	Upper Mo.	13	3,737	23,342	6.20	11	984	3,086	3.10
Cherokee	15	2,889	10,847	3.70	13	334	144	.45
Macon	14	2,230	13,131	5.10	15	432	953	2.20
Savannah	16	2,480	8,098	3.30	13	541	591	1.10
Sou.W. Ga.	16	1,729	8,451	5.00	7	209	98	.45

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S

410 Times Building

-CANVASS PLAN PAY?

of Results : : :

the Every Member Canvass of March 18th

It does not take a statistician to see that we are failing each year to give our Assembly Causes what the Assembly asks for because so many of our churches are not bearing their part of the load. Moreover the E. M. C. plan has demonstrated that it will solve our financial problem if our churches will faithfully work it.

The Assembly this year is asking for a total of $2,850,000 for its Four Executive Committees and the other two Assembly Causes (Training School and Bible Cause). This will require a per capita gift of the total number of communicants, 411,000, of $6.95.

IS YOUR CHURCH BELOW OR ABOVE THIS AVERAGE?

As we face the Canvass of March 18th our task is two fold: First to induce the churches that are already above the average to hold their status and increase it some if possible. Second, to use every reasonable and Presbyterian method known to induce churches below the average to come up. Is there any valid reason why our smallest rural churches should not invest $6.95 per capita for the Assembly Causes, which are our World-Wide-Program Causes—seeing how they buy autos when they want them and about anything else they usually want? The only reason we know is that many of them do not know the facts. They will respond as all other good Presbyterians will when they know their duty.

LET THIS BE A YEAR WHEN WE WILL GIVE FACTS, FACTS, FACTS.

GROUP III—NORTH CAROLINA, OKLAHOMA, SOUTH CAROLINA, TENNESSEE					GROUP IV—TEXAS, VIRGINIA, WEST VIRGINIA
WITH E. M. C.				WITHOUT E. M. C.				WITH E. M. C.				WITHOUT E. M. C.
Presbytery	Chs.	Mbrs.	Gave	Per. Cap.	Chs.	Mbrs.	Gave	Per. Cap.	Presbytery	Chs.	Mbrs.	Gave	Per. Cap.	Chs.	Mbrs.	Gave	Per. Cap.
1. N. C. Synod										1. Texas Synod
Albemarle	24	3,896	$19,324	$5.00	25	1,788	$ 2,509	$1.40	Brazo	30	6,154	$15,451	$2.40	15	500	$ 1,876	$3.70
Concord	51	9,028	44,796	4.80	12	814	810	1.00	Brownwood	14	1,407	2,408	1.70	7	184	394	2.00
Fayetteville	79	9,671	33,609	3.50	41	3,666	10,683	2.90	C. Texas	27	4,381	20,416	4.60	15	785	980	1.10
Kings Mt.	20	3,416	14,573	4.25	18	1,002	340	.34	Dallas	22	6,362	20,845	3.20	25	444	145	.35
Mecklenburg	59	11,856	52,816	4.45	27	1,626	1,208	.75	E. Texas	8	1,685	8,155	4.80	26	908	793	.90
Orange	44	8,671	106,698	12.45	45	3,068	6,190	2.00	El Paso	10	1,125	3,208	2.90	12	472	916	2.15
Wilmington	36	5,436	40,328	7.40	29	1,615	867	.55	Ft. Worth	22	4,135	12,133	3.00	20	1,216	821	.70
2. Okla. Synod										2. Virginia Synod
Durant	10	1,738	3,237	1.80	10	297	113	.40	E. Hanover	25	7,267	67,556	9.30	24	1,779	4,510	2.54
Indian					21	585	316	.55	Lexington	50	10,069	65,249	6.40	9	1,441	5,789	4.00
Mangum	10	1,163	2,727	2.30	10	308	448	1.40	Montgomery	37	7,795	57,505	7.40	27	971	2,217	2.30
3. S. C. Synod										3. W. Va. Synod
Bethel	35	6,702	33,752	5.25	10	467	1,962	4.00	Norfolk	34	5,947	34,656	5.80	2	80	109	1.36
Charleston	23	2,255	14,481	5.05	5	178	388	2.00	Potomac	15	1,408	9,768	6.90	21	2,588	22,341	8.60
Congaree	16	3,125	12,192	3.80	14	657	948	1.40	Roanoke	35	3,830	26,658	7.00	20	899	1,776	2.00
Enoree	25	5,127	39,172	7.60	15	616	968	1.60	W. Hanover	35	3,224	14,927	4.60	14	336	297	.90
Harmony	26	3,330	17,432	5.25	5	320	403	1.25	Winchester	42	4,319	30,138	7.00	13	573	2,334	4.00
Pee Dee	37	3,949	17,975	4.50
Piedmont	20	2,707	11,573	4.30	15	446	564	1.00
S. Carolina	24	3,972	19,690	4.90	17	796	2,118	2.60
4. Tenn. Synod
Columbia	14	2,195	9,645	4.35	10	484	60	.13	Greenbrier	22	3,340	12,490	3.70	14	1,072	2,716	2.50
Memphis	27	7,684	43,723	5.60	39	1,994	1,031	.50	Kanawha	14	6,178	40,175	6.50	12	741	3,246	3.05
Nashville	24	7,124	23,873	3.30	12	631	1,742	2.70	Tygart's Val'y.	9	1,305	4,439	3.40	22	1,237	1,679	1.30

EWARDSHIP COMMITTEE
Chattanooga, Tennessee

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Smith—Haden Lee Smith, son of at the residence of the bride's parents, near Tirzah, S. C., by Rev. John C. Bailey, Mr. Harry L. Dunlap, of Rock Hill, S. C., and Miss Annie Mae Sadler, daughter of John S. Sadler.

Chambers-Fewell—On December 19, 1922, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. John C. Bailey, Mr. Syriah B. Chambers and Miss Mary W. Fewell, daughter of Ed. Fewell, both of York County, S. C.

Draughon-Edgerton—In Selma, N. C., on January 4, 1923, by Rev. Mr. McInnis, Mr. Durant Draughon, of Sanford, N. C., and Miss Mabel Edgerton, of Kenly, N. C.

Thomas Brown—Mr. William Wayt Thomas, of Charlotte, N. C., and Miss Sarah Miller Brown, of Ripley, Miss., (Queens College) were married in the Presbyterian Church, 6:30 p. m., January 3, 1923, Dr. Sommerville, of Memphis, and Rev. M. L. Eaves, of Ripley, officiating.

Lewis-Fussell—On December 17, 1922, at the Presbyterian manse, Wallace, N. C., Mr. Bailey Lewis, of Clinton, N. C., and Miss Lewellyn Fussell, of Wallace, N. C., Rev. W. P. M. Currie officiating.

Sykes-Carr — At the Presbyterian manse, Wallace, N. C., December 24, 1922, by Rev. W. P. M. Currie, Mr. Wesley Sykes and Miss Malissa Carr, all of Wallace, N. C.

Henderson-Murphy—On December 28, 1922, in the Caswell Presbyterian Church, Atkinson, N. C., by Rev. W. P. M. Currie, assisted by Rev. H. F. Beaty, Mr. Walter S. Henderson, of Davidson, N. C., and Miss Florence E. Murphy, of Atkinson, N. C.

DEATHS.

Faggart—On Christmas morning, 1922, Carrie Overcash, wife of W. H. Faggart, passed away at her home in Cabarrus County, N. C., after months of poor health. She was 22 years old and had been a member of Gilwood Church from childhood. Her loss is mourned by her husband, two little daughters, her father and mother, five brothers, three sisters and many friends.

Smith-Haden—Lee Smith, son of Mr. Fred E. Smith, of Tirzah, S. C., died on Sunday, October 20, 1922, after an illness of over two months of heart trouble. He was aged 15 years. The interment was in Ebenezer cemetery.

Williams—Charles Williams died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. T. Ferguson, near Leslie, S. C., on November 24, 1922, aged 76 years. He suffered for some time from a complication of diseases due to old age. He is survived by four sons, three daughters, and two brothers. The interment was in the Neely's Creek cemetery.

Fields—Thelma Fields died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Fields, near Rock Hill, S. C., on December 4, 1922, aged four years, after an illness of several months from malarial fever. The interment was in Ebenezer cemetery.

Boozer — Mrs. Emma, wife of Pressly N. Boozer, of Chappells, S. C., fell asleep in Jesus December 7, 1922. She was a faithful member of the Dominic Presbyterian Church. She was loved by all who knew her, and will ever be remembered by those who knew her as one who sacrificed for others.

Boozer—On December 14, 1922, at Chappells, S. C., the spirit of Mr. Pressly N. Boozer entered into eternal life. He was a consecrated Christian from early youth, and at the time of his death was a faithful deacon in the Dominic Presbyterian Church. He leaves two sons, one daughter and two grandsons.

MRS. BESSIE G. PULLEY

In as much as God has seen fit to call to Heaven our greatly beloved co-worker, Mrs. Bessie G. Pulley, be it resolved:

First: That we humbly bow in submission to the will of one who doeth all things well.

Second: That we wish to express to the bereaved family our sympathy in their sorrow.

Third: The Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church has lost a true and efficient officer, one who delighted in serving her Master, and her faithfulness in the Auxiliary will be a cherished memory to those left behind.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and the same be sent to the local paper and the Church paper, and a copy be spread upon the minutes.

Mrs. N. O. Warren.

Mrs. P. M. Johnston.

Mrs. J. F. Brinkley, Committee.

ROBERT M. OATES

Resolutions of the Diaconate of the Hendersonville Presbyterian Church in honor of one of its members, Robert M. Oates, who died December 20, 1922:

Whereas our Heavenly Father in His all-wise providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our brother and fellow deacon, Robert M. Oates, therefore be it resolved:

First: That while we bow in humble submission to the Divine will, we mourn the loss of a friend and co-worker.

Second: That in the death of Brother Oates the Church has lost an esteemed and beloved member, a consistent worker, a liberal contributor, and a deacon who performed faithfully the duties developing upon this office.

Third: That the bereaved family be assured of our deepest sympathy

Fourth: That a page in our records be inscribed to his memory, and that a copy of these resolutions be published in the church papers.

J. R. Sandifer,
Chairman Board of Deacons.

MRS. JULIA JONES

Resolutions adopted by the Woman's Auxiliary of Grove Presbyterian Church, of Kenansville, N. C., December 13, 1922.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in infinite wisdom and love, has seen fit to call from this life our beloved friend, Mrs. Julia Jones, to be with Him;

Whereas she was a charter member of our Auxiliary;

Whereas we shall sorely miss her active interest in and loving sympathy with our work. Be it resolved:

1. That while we bow in submission to God's will we express the sense of loss, felt not only by the Woman's Auxiliary, but by the church and community.

2. That we extend our heart-felt sympathy to her bereaved son and daughter with the earnest prayer that our ever-loving Father will give them comfort and peace.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the members of the bereaved family, that a copy be included in our minutes, and that they be published in the Presbyterian Standard and the Duplin Record.

Clara Bell Smith,

Mrs. E. F. Southerland,

Mrs. Edgar Nicholson, Committee.

CHILDREN

(Continued from page 11)

with a little laugh, "but something nice and hot and good. Tomorrow each child may bring a potato and a small portion of cocoa. I will write a note to the mothers of the town children explaining about the luncheon."

The town pupils soon discovered that in arithmetic, geography and other studies the country pupils were in advance of them, even though they knew little about drawing and music; while in cooking, the boys and girls from town were sure the country children knew everything. One day they would serve pot roast with nice vegetables, another soup, another creamed potatoes, another stewed chicken with gravy and potatoes, another boiled ham with potatoes and another beef stew, and so on through a long list of good things.

Each pupil had a bottle of milk, a clean bowl, a dessert dish and plenty of bread and butter, with perhaps some fruit; but always the one or two hot foods were the best liked. It was exactly like a nice party, and it was always a secret what would be served next day, except to the teacher and the mothers, who provided the great part of the food as they did by turns.

When the building was repaired and the children back in school, the teachers offered prizes in each grade for the children writing the best account of what they did during the enforced vacation, and the seven boys and girls who had gone regularly to the country school won most of the awards.

"It wasn't because we had written down the things any better than the others," said Kenneth when the prizes had been given and they were showing them at home, "but because we had the best things to tell. Do you know, Mamma, when we all wrote about those fine parties we had every day, and told how good the soup and the stew and the chicken were, and how much we learned about cooking, everything sounded so nice that the teachers just had to give us the prizes, I am sure. And wasn't it nice that we had the parties every day so we could tell about them?"

"It certainly was," said Mrs. Rose, with a little laugh, "but I think the best thing of all is that you found out how very nice school is and how very lonely you would be without it."—Hilda Richmond, in Herald and Presbyter.

"Do you believe in heredity?"

"I certainly do. Why, for instance, is my six-months-old son always trying to get his toes in his mouth if it isn't because of his dad's constant struggle to make both ends meet?"—Ex.

TREE FRIENDS

By Anne Blackwell Payne

Trees are more than trees to me,
They're good friends that I love;
And there are many other things
That they remind me of.

The oak tree is a monarch,
King of all the green;
In autumn robes of red and gold
The maple tree's a queen.

The pine tree is a soldier,
With needles sharp for spears;
He stands up very straight and strong,
And nothing ever fears.

The apple tree's a housewife,
So rosy-cheeked and fat;
And in the spring she likes to wear
White blossoms on her hat.

Magnolia is a lady,
In satin gown she's dressed,
That looks so shiny, smooth and new;
She must have had it pressed.

The dainty water-willows,
Are children gay, and seem
To have a very happy time,
All wading in the stream.

My grandmama's crepe-myrtles,
Are little girls, I think;
They dance above the garden beds,
In ruffled dresses, pink.

The narrow Lombard poplars,
So slender, straight and high;
Are candles in their silver sticks,
Each pointing to the sky.

The dogwood trees are bridesmaids,
The birch's a freckled lad;
The drooping weeping-willows
Are lonely ones and sad.

And if you look and listen,
You'll find them comrades true;
That often whisper, sigh and sing,
And talk to me and you.

THE CAT'S TEA PARTY

Two pretty little pussy-cats, invited out to tea,

Cried: "Mother, let us go. O do, for good we'll surely be.

We'll wear our bibs and hold our things as you have shown us how—

Spoons in our right paws, cup in left—and make a pretty bow.

We'll always say, "Yes, if you please," and, "Only half of that."

"Then go, my darling children," said the happy mother cat.

The pretty little pussy cats went out that night to tea;

Their heads were smooth and glossy black, their tails were swinging free.

They held their things as they had learned and tried to be polite;

With snowy bibs beneath their chins, they were a pretty sight.

But, ah! alas for manners good and coats as soft as silk!

The moment that the little kits were asked to take some milk.

They dropped their spoons, forgot to bow, and, O! what do you think?

They put their noses in the cups, and all began to drink.

Yes, each naughty little kit set up a mew for more,

Then knocked the teacups over quick and scampered through the door.

—Our Dumb Animals.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 10)

There are signs of promise manifest. Rev. C. O'N. Martindale, the pastor, was made the recipient of a handsome overcoat at the Christmastide, for which he is grateful.

Lancaster—Rev. R. W. Jopling, pastor, December was rich in delightful experience in our church. The event of outstanding interest was the visit of the Men's Evangelistic Club of Chester on the second Sunday afternoon. They came through rain and mud, forty strong, and gave us a most inspiring meeting. Our hearts were stirred by the manly and Christian tone of the messages they gave, and the singing of the quartet and chorus was fine. We rejoice that Lancaster is to have such a club. Fifty-four names have already been given for membership, 20 of the these being Presbyterians.

At the evening service the same day, Dr. J. O. Reavis gave us a splendid message, stirring us into a new interest in the work of our own missionary, Rev. Robert Knox.

Our Christmas exercise was particularly beautiful this year. The pageant "Together Shall They Sing" was well rendered under the direction of Miss Maud Moore. The offering for Thornwell Orphanage was $19.07 cash, besides a box of books and toys. For Christian Education there was $18.83 in cash.

Our offering for Thornwell at the Union Thanksgiving service, amounted to more than $60.00.

The Teen Age Circle and the Christian Endeavor Society made Christmas brighter for others by gifts, and messages of good cheer.

Charleston, Second Church—The Torrey meetings in this church are in full swing. They began Sunday, January 7th, and will continue till January 21st.

The Second Church which has a large seating capacity, was crowded at the opening service at 11:15 a. m. One of the features was the singing by a choir of 100 voices. Mr. Curry, the leader is a fine soloist.

The opening prayer was offered by Dr. Alexander Sprunt, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. A solo was rendered by W. D. Barrett, and the congregation joined in a number of hymns which were effectively led by Mr. Curry. Following Dr. Torrey, who was introduced by Rev. J. W. Hickman, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, a communion service was held.

It is estimated that 1,000 people heard Dr. Torrey at morning service and 1,200 or more at night. Extra benches and chairs had to be installed in the church to seat everybody.

ALABAMA

Andalusia—Rev. Robert S. Woodson, pastor of this church has been called as assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Charlottesville, Va.

FLORIDA

Tampa—Dr. C. H. H. Branch, the new pastor of Hyde Park Church is expected to begin his work with this church the middle of January.

Jacksonville—At the communion service in the Riverside Church on January 4th, Dr. Robert McCaslin welcomed 151 new members into the Church, all of whom have been received since the coming of Dr. McCaslin to this church in October.

Sanford—The handsome new manse of this church has been completed and is now being occupied by the pastor, Rev. E. D. Brownlee, Ph.D., and family. It is most complete in every detail, and a most beautiful residence.

Jacksonville—The St. Johns Park Sunday School, under the care of Riverside Church, has just completed its new chapel. The first service was held during Christmas week. The school is growing rapidly.

KENTUCKY

Louisville—A meeting of the joint commission in charge of the Kentucky Presbyterian Educational Movement was held Friday afternoon, December 29th, at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, of Kentucky. Dr. R. T. Gillespie, chairman, presided, and the following members of the commission were present: S. French Hoge, Frankfort; Dr. John C. Acheson, president Kentucky College for Women, Danville; Dr. R. Ames Montgomery, president Centre College, Danville; Dr. John M. Vander Meulen, president Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Kentucky, Louisville; Dr. Chas. W. Welch, Louisville, secretary of the commission; Rev. J. V. Logan, Mr. J. A. Cheek, Danville; Dr. A. J. A. Alexander, Spring Station, Ky.; Rev. J. A. Trexler, Mayfield; Dr. Benjamin Jay Bush, Lexington, vice-chairman of the commission; Rev. S. W. McGill, director of the movement; Mr. E. H. Gartrell, Ashland; and Mr. J. J. Davis, Louisville.

In making his final report to the commission, director S. W. McGill praised the work of the staff associated with him and commented on the co-operation which had been extended during the movement by everyone from whom co-operation could rightly be expected. Special mention was also made of the sacrificial work done by the Presbyterian women of Kentucky in helping to make the campaign a success. "At the outset of this movement," said Mr. McGill, "we stated that it would do more than merely get money for Christian Education. Now that the campaign has closed we are in position to report some definite things that have been accomplished. The cause of Christian Education is better understood and appreciated in Kentucky than ever before. A greater Presbyterian consciousness has been created, our people now knowing more about the program, progress and needs of our Church than they ever did before. The spirit of Christian fellowship among Presbyterians has been fostered. New workers for the local churches have been enlisted and old workers have been led to larger efficiency in the solution of local church problems. Christian stewardship has been taught and learned; the spiritual note, kept dominant throughout the whole campaign, has resulted in the enlistment of many for full time Christian service."

After the report by the director, the commission elected Mr. J. C. Norton as executive secretary for the work of collecting and following up the work of the campaign. They also appointed a finance committee consisting of Dr. R. T. Gillespie, Dr. Chas. W. Welch and J. J. Davis. A committee on resolutions was appointed by the commission to extend to the employed staff their appreciation for the efficient work done, and then, they gave Dr. Gillespie a nickel.

According to statement of the official auditor, the total subscribed was $1,122,803.05. As a slight token of appreciation of his untiring efforts, the commission presented the nickel to Dr. Gillespie for a watch charm.

Winchester, First Church—The quarterly communion service was held at this church on Sunday morning, January 7th, with possibly the largest number of communicants present for years. The day was disagreeable but it seemed to have no effect on the attendance. Eleven new members were received into the church on that day. In the afternoon the regular quarterly joint meeting of the elders and deacons was held in the Sunday School room. This proved to be a very important meeting and important matters concerning the work of the New Year were considered. The campaign in the interest of the educational movement in Kentucky proved of great interest to this congregation.

The final report on the canvass for the First Church showed subscriptions totalling $10,842.25. This was a cause of great rejoicing to our people.

Many improvements have been made in the church during the year just closed, such as repapering, re-decorating the church, and adding a Sunday School room to the building.

The pastor, Rev. S. B. Lander, is doing an unusual work in this field. He is constantly about his Master's business, visiting, and helping in every way. He is preaching each Sunday with unusual effectiveness.

The Sunday School is also on the upgrade under the superintendency of Mr. W. K. Elliott. The women are also very active in the church. They now have a Business Women's Circle which meets monthly in the church parlors. Recently they gave an "Equipment Shower" for the benefit of one of our mountain schools. A goodly sum was raised and several articles of usefulness were donated for this work.

The Christian Endeavor Society, which has been organized, since the coming of Mr. Lander, is looking forward to greater things and the prospects for the First Presbyterian Church in Winchester have never been so bright as now. There is a spirit of unity among the membership that is delightful.

An unusual service was held in the church on Christmas afternoon at 4 o'clock, lasting one hour. It was a Christmas vesper service. A special program of Christmas music was given by the choir and a brief Christmas meditation by the pastor. The church was well filled and the people left the building feeling it was indeed a joyous Christmas day.

Since the coming of Mr. Lander, a little less than two years ago, there have been 90 additions to the church.

Thos. B. Talbot, Lexington, Ky.

MISSISSIPPI

Senatobia—During 1922 the average attendance at prayer meeting was about 40 per cent of the church membership. The first Sunday of the new year, our pastor, Rev. W. L. Latham, made a special appeal for every member to attend prayer meeting. On Wednesday night January 10th, over 90 per cent of the members were present.

We have a prayer meeting record-book, roll call occasionally, and enroll each new member just as we would in Sunday School.

We also have an attendance committee, and a music committee for prayer meeting. This is written to pass the idea on to others.

MISSOURI

Kansas City—The Central Church kept open-house to its friends on the first night of the new year according to the following notice in the bulletin of December 31st:

"New Year's Reception—Tomorrow evening Dr. and Mrs. Nisbet will receive at the Church from 8 to 11. The members of the church and congregation are invited. Officers of the church together with their wives will receive with Dr. and Mrs. Nisbet and a musical program being arranged by Mr. Roland R. Witte will be rendered during the evening."

The men's Bible class of this church during January are studying the Bible, the topics for the four Sabbaths being as follows:

1. The Bible in the Making.
2. How God Inspired the Bible.
3. How We Got Our English Bible.
4. Is the Bible Our Only Infallible Rule of Faith and Practice.

The questions are discussed by vote of the class.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Central Church of Washington—In the absence of our pastor, Rev. Dr. James H. Taylor, from his pulpit, his place was supplied Sunday morning, December 31, by Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, pastor emeritus of the New York Avenue Church, of this city; and that night by Rev. M. B. Lambdin, for a number of years pastor at Montgomery, W. Va. Mr. Lambdin also preached for us both morning and night, yesterday, January 7th. A. H.

PERSONAL

Rev. Clark W. Davis has changed his address from Star, N. C., to Southport, N. C., Box 294.

Rev. T. M. Stevenson changes his address from Henderson, N. C., to Lowryville, S. C.

Dr. and Mrs. McLean Rogers and small son, David Ross, and Miss Maude Carson whose departure for the foreign field we noted in our last issue, sailed on the 14th, on the S. S. "President Jackson," from Seattle.

At Minneapolis the party was joined by Dr. P. G. Gilmer, of Clifton Forge, Va., who will be the representative in Korea of the Men's Club of the Second Church, Charlotte.

The Mecklenburg County Sunday School Convention is in session as we go to press. We hope to have a full report in our next issue. The convention opened Sunday afternoon, January 14, at the First Baptist Church with a large attendance. W. E. Pricc, an elder in the Caldwell Memorial Church, is the president. Dr. Marion Lawrance, of Chicago; Miss Daisy Magee, and D. W. Sims, of Raleigh, N. C., are the speakers.

SPLENDID COUNCILLORS AT GREYSTONE

Camp Greystone for Girls, at Tuxedo, N. C., is proud of the young women who make up its official force. They are all outstanding Christian young women, with a purpose in life. Miss Janie MacGaughey, the head councillor, is a graduate of Agnes Scott and Dr. White's Bible School, and is now assisting the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of Knoxville. Miss Catherine Ruland, head of athletics and horseback riding, is a graduate of Sargent, and has been for a number of years in Y. W. C. A. work in Philadelphia. Now, she's head of physical education at Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa. Miss Helen Smith, daughter of Dr. Henry Louis Smith, of Lexington, Va., is a graduate of Randolph-Macon and Wellesley. Miss Mary Love McLure, of Chester, S. C., is expert in all water sports. Miss Margaret Funkhouser, of Dayton, Va., is a graduate of the Conservatory in Baltimore, and has charge of the music. Besides these, there are 15 other councillors, each a specialist in her line.

The whole idea of Camp Greystone is to give the girls a wonderful vacation filled with fun and exercise and inspiration. Beautiful Lake Summit offers wonderful opportunities for canoeing and swimming, while the splendid roads around Tuxedo make horseback riding on the 15 fine saddle horses a true delight. Along with the fun of camp there is the fine wholesome atmosphere of the Christian home. Among the many fine girls who have enjoyed Camp Greystone have been several daughters of ministers and missionaries. Rev. Jos. R. Sevier, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Augusta, Ga., who with his wife are the directors, will be glad to send a catalog to any girls interested, or to any girls suggested by any pastor or teacher.

AN IMPORTANT TRUST

"Henry Martyn prayed that he might 'take each day as an important trust for the Lord.'" This is the true view to take of time. Each day and each hour is a trust committed to us by God.

Every morning the Christian should ask, What is the day given me for? The question then arises, How does God wish him to spend the day? No trust is given to be wasted. The day is not to be spent in mere idleness. We are faithful to our trust, when we spend the day as God would have us to spend it—whether in manual labor, in prayer, in rest, or in presenting Divine truth to the minds of others.

Happy is he who, in reviewing the day at its close, can thank God that, through grace, it has been spent in accordance with his will."

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Smith—Haden Lee Smith, son of at the residence of the bride's parents, near Tirzah, S. C., by Rev. John C. Bailey, Mr. Harry L. Dunlap, of Rock Hill, S. C., and Miss Annie Mae Sadler, daughter of John S. Sadler.

Chambers-Fewell—On December 19, 1922, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. John C. Bailey, Mr. Syriah B. Chambers and Miss Mary W. Fewell, daughter of Ed. Fewell, both of York County, S. C.

Draughon-Edgerton—In Selma, N. C., on January 4, 1923, by Rev. Mr. McInnis, Mr. Durant Draughon, of Sanford, N. C., and Miss Mabel Edgerton, of Kenly, N. C.

Thomas Brown—Mr. William Wayt Thomas, of Charlotte, N. C., and Miss Sarah Miller Brown, of Ripley, Miss., (Queens College) were married in the Presbyterian Church, 6:30 p. m., January 3, 1923, Dr. Sommerville, of Memphis, and Rev. M. L. Eaves, of Ripley, officiating.

Lewis-Fussell—On December 17, 1922, at the Presbyterian manse, Wallace, N. C., Mr. Bailey Lewis, of Clinton, N. C., and Miss Lewellyn Fussell, of Wallace, N. C., Rev. W. P. M. Currie officiating.

Sykes-Carr—At the Presbyterian manse, Wallace, N. C., December 24, 1922, by Rev. W. P. M. Currie, Mr. Wesley Sykes and Miss Malissa Carr, all of Wallace, N. C.

Henderson-Murphy—On December 28, 1922, in the Caswell Presbyterian Church, Atkinson, N. C., by Rev. W. P. M. Currie, assisted by Rev. H. F. Beaty, Mr. Walter S. Henderson, of Davidson, N. C., and Miss Florence E. Murphy, of Atkinson, N. C.

DEATHS.

Faggart—On Christmas morning, 1922, Carrie Overcash, wife of W. H. Faggart, passed away at her home in Cabarrus County, N. C., after months of poor health. She was 22 years old and had been a member of Gilwood Church from childhood. Her loss is mourned by her husband, two little daughters, her father and mother, five brothers, three sisters and many friends.

Smith-Haden—Lee Smith, son of Mr. Fred E. Smith, of Tirzah, S. C., died on Sunday, October 20, 1922, after an illness of over two months of heart trouble. He was aged 15 years. The interment was in Ebenezer cemetery.

Williams—Charles Williams died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. R. T. Ferguson, near Leslie, S. C., on November 24, 1922, aged 76 years. He suffered for some time from a complication of diseases due to old age. He is survived by four sons, three daughters, and two brothers. The interment was in the Ncely's Creek cemetery.

Fields—Thelma Fields died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Fields, near Rock Hill, S. C., on December 4, 1922, aged four years, after an illness of several months from malarial fever. The interment was in Ebenezer cemetery.

Boozer—Mrs. Emma, wife of Pressly N. Boozer, of Chappells, S. C., fell asleep in Jesus December 7, 1922. She was a faithful member of the Dominic Presbyterian Church. She was loved by all who knew her, and will ever be remembered by those who knew her as one who sacrificed for others.

Boozer—On December 14, 1922, at Chappells, S. C., the spirit of Mr. Pressly N. Boozer entered into eternal life. He was a consecrated Christian from early youth, and at the time of his death was a faithful deacon in the Dominic Presbyterian Church. He leaves two sons, one daughter and two grandsons.

MRS. BESSIE G. PULLEY

In as much as God has seen fit to call to Heaven our greatly beloved co-worker, Mrs. Bessie G. Pulley, be it resolved:

First: That we humbly bow in submission to the will of one who doeth all things well.

Second: That we wish to express to the bereaved family our sympathy in their sorrow.

Third: The Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church has lost a true and efficient officer, one who delighted in serving her Master, and her faithfulness in the Auxiliary will be a cherished memory to those left behind.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and the same be sent to the local paper and the Church paper, and a copy be spread upon the minutes.

Mrs. N. O. Warren.

Mrs. P. M. Johnston.

Mrs. J. F. Brinkley, Committee.

ROBERT M. OATES

Resolutions of the Diaconate of the Hendersonville Presbyterian Church in honor of one of its members, Robert M. Oates, who died December 20, 1922:

Whereas our Heavenly Father in His all-wise providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our brother and fellow deacon, Robert M. Oates, therefore be it resolved:

First: That while we bow in humble submission to the Divine will, we mourn the loss of a friend and co-worker.

Second: That in the death of Brother Oates the Church has lost an esteemed and beloved member, a consistent worker, a liberal contributor, and a deacon who performed faithfully the duties developing upon this office.

Third: That the bereaved family be assured of our deepest sympathy

Fourth: That a page in our records be inscribed to his memory, and that a copy of these resolutions be published in the church papers.

J. R. Sandifer,

Chairman Board of Deacons.

MRS. JULIA JONES

Resolutions adopted by the Woman's Auxiliary of Grove Presbyterian Church, of Kenansville, N. C., December 13, 1922.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in infinite wisdom and love, has seen fit to call from this life our beloved friend, Mrs. Julia Jones, to be with Him;

Whereas she was a charter member of our Auxiliary;

Whereas we shall sorely miss her active interest in and loving sympathy with our work. Be it resolved:

1. That while we bow in submission to God's will we express the sense of loss, felt not only by the Woman's Auxiliary, but by the church and community.

2. That we extend our heart-felt sympathy to her bereaved son and daughter with the earnest prayer that our ever-loving Father will give them comfort and peace.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the members of the bereaved family, that a copy be included in our minutes, and that they be published in the Presbyterian Standard and the Duplin Record.

Clara Bell Smith,

Mrs. E. F. Southerland,

Mrs. Edgar Nicholson, Committee.

CHILDREN

(Continued from page 11)

with a little laugh, "but something nice and hot and good. Tomorrow each child may bring a potato and a small portion of cocoa. I will write a note to the mothers of the town children explaining about the luncheon."

The town pupils soon discovered that in arithmetic, geography and other studies the country pupils were in advance of them, even though they knew little about drawing and music; while in cooking, the boys and girls from town were sure the country children knew everything. One day they would serve pot roast with nice vegetables, another soup, another creamed potatoes, another stewed chicken with gravy and potatoes, another boiled ham with potatoes and another beef stew, and so on through a long list of good things.

Each pupil had a bottle of milk, a clean bowl, a dessert dish and plenty of bread and butter, with perhaps some fruit; but always the one or two hot foods were the best liked. It was exactly like a nice party, and it was always a secret what would be served next day, except to the teacher and the mothers, who provided the great part of the food as they did by turns.

When the building was repaired and the children back in school, the teachers offered prizes in each grade for the children writing the best account of what they did during the enforced vacation, and the seven boys and girls who had gone regularly to the country school won most of the awards.

"It wasn't because we had written down the things any better than the others," said Kenneth when the prizes had been given and they were showing them at home, "but because we had the best things to tell. Do you know, Mamma, when we all wrote about those fine parties we had every day, and told how good the soup and the stew and the chicken were, and how much we learned about cooking, everything sounded so nice that the teachers just had to give us the prizes, I am sure. And wasn't it nice that we had the parties every day so we could tell about them?"

"It certainly was," said Mrs. Rose, with a little laugh, "but I think the best thing of all is that you found out how very nice school is and how very lonely you would be without it."—Hilda Richmond, in Herald and Presbyter.

"Do you believe in heredity?"

"I certainly do. Why, for instance, is my six-months-old son always trying to get his toes in his mouth if it isn't because of his dad's constant struggle to make both ends meet?"—Ex.

TREE FRIENDS

By Anne Blackwell Payne

Trees are more than trees to me,
They're good friends that I love;
And there are many other things
That they remind me of.

The oak tree is a monarch,
King of all the green;
In autumn robes of red and gold
The maple tree's a queen.

The pine tree is a soldier,
With needles sharp for spears;
He stands up very straight and strong,
And nothing ever fears.

The apple tree's a housewife,
So rosy-cheeked and fat;
And in the spring she likes to wear
White blossoms on her hat.

Magnolia is a lady,
In satin gown she's dressed,
That looks so shiny, smooth and new;
She must have had it pressed.

The dainty water-willows,
Are children gay, and seem
To have a very happy time,
All wading in the stream.

My grandmama's crepe-myrtles,
Are little girls, I think;
They dance above the garden beds,
In ruffled dresses, pink.

The narrow Lombard poplars,
So slender, straight and high;
Are candles in their silver sticks,
Each pointing to the sky.

The dogwood trees are bridesmaids,
The birch's a freckled lad;
The drooping weeping-willows
Are lonely ones and sad.

And if you look and listen,
You'll find them comrades true;
That often whisper, sigh and sing,
And talk to me and you.

THE CAT'S TEA PARTY

Two pretty little pussy cats, invited out to tea,

Cried: "Mother, let us go. O do, for good we'll surely be.

We'll wear our bibs and hold our things as you have shown us how—

Spoons in our right paws, cup in left—and make a pretty bow.

We'll always say, 'Yes, if you please,' and, 'Only half of that.'

"Then go, my darling children," said the happy mother cat.

The pretty little pussy cats went out that night to tea;

Their heads were smooth and glossy black, their tails were swinging free.

They held their things as they had learned and tried to be polite;
With snowy bibs beneath their chins, they were a pretty sight.

But, ah! alas for manners good and coats as soft as silk!

The moment that the little kits were asked to take some milk.

They dropped their spoons, forgot to bow, and, O! what do you think?

They put their noses in the cups, and all began to drink.

Yes, each naughty little kit set up a mew for more,

Then knocked the teacups over quick and scampered through the door.

—Our Dumb Animals.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 10)

There are signs of promise manifest. Rev. C. O'N. Martindale, the pastor, was made the recipient of a handsome overcoat at the Christmastide, for which he is grateful.

Lancaster—Rev. R. W. Jopling, pastor, December was rich in delightful experience in our church. The event of outstanding interest was the visit of the Men's Evangelistic Club of Chester on the second Sunday afternoon. They came through rain and mud, forty strong, and gave us a most inspiring meeting. Our hearts were stirred by the manly and Christian tone of the messages they gave, and the singing of the quartet and chorus was fine. We rejoice that Lancaster is to have such a club. Fifty-four names have already been given for membership, 20 of these being Presbyterians.

At the evening service the same day, Dr. J. O. Reavis gave us a splendid message, stirring us into a new interest in the work of our own missionary, Rev. Robert Knox.

Our Christmas exercise was particularly beautiful this year. The pageant "Together Shall They Sing" was well rendered under the direction of Miss Maud Moore. The offering for Thornwell Orphanage was $19.07 cash, besides a box of books and toys. For Christian Education there was $18.83 in cash.

Our offering for Thornwell at the Union Thanksgiving service, amounted to more than $60.00.

The Teen Age Circle and the Christian Endeavor Society made Christmas brighter for others by gifts, and messages of good cheer.

Charleston, Second Church—The Torrey meetings in this church are in full swing. They began Sunday, January 7th, and will continue till January 21st.

The Second Church which has a large seating capacity, was crowded at the opening service at 11:15 a. m. One of the features was the singing by a choir of 100 voices. Mr. Curry, the leader is a fine soloist.

The opening prayer was offered by Dr. Alexander Sprunt, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. A solo was rendered by W. D. Barrett, and the congregation joined in a number of hymns which were effectively led by Mr. Curry. Following Dr. Torrey, who was introduced by Rev. J. W. Hickman, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, a communion service was held.

It is estimated that 1,000 people heard Dr. Torrey at morning service and 1,200 or more at night. Extra benches and chairs had to be installed in the church to seat everybody.

ALABAMA

Andalusia—Rev. Robert S. Woodson, pastor of this church has been called as assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Charlottesville, Va.

FLORIDA

Tampa—Dr. C. H. H. Branch, the new pastor of Hyde Park Church is expected to begin his work with this church the middle of January.

Jacksonville—At the communion service in the Riverside Church on January 4th, Dr. Robert McCaslin welcomed 151 new members into the Church, all of whom have been received since the coming of Dr. McCaslin to this church in October.

Sanford—The handsome new manse of this church has been completed and is now being occupied by the pastor, Rev. E. D. Brownlee, Ph.D., and family. It is most complete in every detail, and a most beautiful residence.

Jacksonville—The St. Johns Park Sunday School, under the care of Riverside Church, has just completed its new chapel. The first service was held during Christmas week. The school is growing rapidly.

KENTUCKY

Louisville—A meeting of the joint commission in charge of the Kentucky Presbyterian Educational Movement was held Friday afternoon, December 20th, at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, of Kentucky. Dr. R. T. Gillespie, chairman, presided, and the following members of the commission were present: S. French Hoge, Frankfort; Dr. John C. Acheson, president Kentucky College for Women, Danville; Dr. R. Ames Montgomery, president Centre College, Danville; Dr. John M. Vander Meulen, president Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Kentucky, Louisville; Dr. Chas. W. Welch, Louisville, secretary of the commission; Rev. J. V. Logan, Mr. J. A. Cheek, Danville; Dr. A. J. A. Alexander, Spring Station, Ky.; Rev. J. A. Trexler, Mayfield; Dr. Benjamin Jay Bush, Lexington, vice-chairman of the commission; Rev. S. W. McGill, director of the movement; Mr. E. H. Gartrell, Ashland; and Mr. J. J. Davis, Louisville.

In making his final report to the commission, director S. W. McGill praised the work of the staff associated with him and commented on the co-operation which had been extended during the movement by everyone from whom co-operation could rightly be expected. Special mention was also made of the sacrificial work done by the Presbyterian women of Kentucky in helping to make the campaign a success. "At the outset of this movement," said Mr. McGill, "we stated that it would do more than merely get money for Christian Education. Now that the campaign has closed we are in position to report some definite things that have been accomplished. The cause of Christian Education is better understood and appreciated in Kentucky than ever before. A greater Presbyterian consciousness has been created, our people now knowing more about the program, progress and needs of our Church than they ever did before. The spirit of Christian fellowship among Presbyterians has been fostered. New workers for the local churches have been enlisted and old workers have been led to larger efficiency in the solution of local church problems. Christian stewardship has been taught and learned; the spiritual note, kept dominant throughout the whole campaign, has resulted in the enlistment of many for full time Christian service."

After the report by the director, the commission elected Mr. J. C. Norton as executive secretary for the work of collecting and following up the work of the campaign. They also appointed a finance committee consisting of Dr. R. T. Gillespie, Dr. Chas. W. Welch and J. J. Davis. A committee on resolutions was appointed by the commission to extend to the employed staff their appreciation for the efficient work done, and then, they gave Dr. Gillespie a nickel.

According to statement of the official auditor, the total subscribed was $1,122,803.05. As a slight token of appreciation of his untiring efforts, the commission presented the nickel to Dr. Gillespie for a watch charm.

Winchester, First Church—The quarterly communion service was held at this church on Sunday morning, January 7th, with possibly the largest number of communicants present for years. The day was disagreeable but it seemed to have no effect on the attendance. Eleven new members were received into the church on that day. In the afternoon the regular quarterly joint meeting of the elders and deacons was held in the Sunday School room. This proved to be a very important meeting and important matters concerning the work of the New Year were considered. The campaign in the interest of the educational movement in Kentucky proved of great interest to this congregation.

The final report on the canvass for the First Church showed suscriptions totalling $10,842.25. This was a cause of great rejoicing to our people.

Many improvements have been made in the church during the year just closed, such as repapering, re-decorating the church, and adding a Sunday School room to the building.

The pastor, Rev. S. B. Lander, is doing an unusual work in this field. He is constantly about his Master's business, visiting, and helping in every way. He is preaching each Sunday with unusual effectiveness.

The Sunday School is also on the upgrade under the superintendency of Mr. W. K. Elliott. The women are also very active in the church. They now have a Business Women's Circle which meets monthly in the church parlors. Recently they gave an "Equipment Shower" for the benefit of one of our mountain schools. A goodly sum was raised and several articles of usefulness were donated for this work.

The Christian Endeavor Society, which has been organized, since the coming of Mr. Lander, is looking forward to greater things and the prospects for the First Presbyterian Church in Winchester have never been so bright as now. There is a spirit of unity among the membership that is delightful.

An unusual service was held in the church on Christmas afternoon at 4 o'clock, lasting one hour. It was a Christmas vesper service. A special program of Christmas music was given by the choir and a brief Christmas meditation by the pastor. The church was well filled and the people left the building feeling it was indeed a joyous Christmas day.

Since the coming of Mr. Lander, a little less than two years ago, there have been 90 additions to the church.

Thos. B. Talbot, Lexington, Ky.

MISSISSIPPI

Senatobia—During 1922 the average attendance at prayer meeting was about 40 per cent of the church membership. The first Sunday of the new year, our pastor, Rev. W. L. Latham, made a special appeal for every member to attend prayer meeting. On Wednesday night January 10th, over 90 per cent of the members were present.

We have a prayer meeting record-book, roll call occasionally, and enroll each new member just as we would in Sunday School.

We also have an attendance committee, and a music committee for prayer meeting. This is written to pass the idea on to others. Cor.

MISSOURI

Kansas City—The Central Church kept open-house to its friends on the first night of the new year according to the following notice in the bulletin of December 31st:

"New Year's Reception—Tomorrow evening Dr. and Mrs. Nisbet will receive at the Church from 8 to 11. The members of the church and congregation are invited. Officers of the church together with their wives will receive with Dr. and Mrs. Nisbet and a musical program being arranged by Mr. Roland R. Witte will be rendered during the evening."

The men's Bible class of this church during January are studying the Bible, the topics for the four Sabbaths being as follows:

1. The Bible in the Making.
2. How God Inspired the Bible.
3. How We Got Our English Bible.
4. Is the Bible Our Only Infallible Rule of Faith and Practice.

The questions are discussed by vote of the class.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Central Church of Washington—In the absence of our pastor, Rev. Dr. James H. Taylor, from his pulpit, his place was supplied Sunday morning, December 31, by Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, pastor emeritus of the New York Avenue Church, of this city; and that night by Rev. M. B. Lambdin, for a number of years pastor at Montgomery, W. Va. Mr. Lambdin also preached for us both morning and night, yesterday, January 7th. A. H.

PERSONAL

Rev. Clark W. Davis has changed his address from Star, N. C., to Southport, N. C., Box 294.

Rev. T. M. Stevenson changes his address from Henderson, N. C., to Lowryville, S. C.

Dr. and Mrs. McLean Rogers and small son, David Ross, and Miss Maude Carson whose departure for the foreign field we noted in our last issue, sailed on the 14th, on the S. S. "President Jackson," from Seattle.

At Minneapolis the party was joined by Dr. P. G. Gilmer, of Clifton Forge, Va., who will be the representative in Korea of the Men's Club of the Second Church, Charlotte.

The Mecklenburg County Sunday School Convention is in session as we go to press. We hope to have a full report in our next issue. The convention opened Sunday afternoon, January 14, at the First Baptist Church with a large attendance. W. E. Price, an elder in the Caldwell Memorial Church, is the president. Dr. Marion Lawrance, of Chicago; Miss Daisy Magee, and D. W. Sims, of Raleigh, N. C., are the speakers.

SPLENDID COUNCILLORS AT GREYSTONE

Camp Greystone for Girls, at Tuxedo, N. C., is proud of the young women who make up its official force. They are all outstanding Christian young women, with a purpose in life. Miss Janie MacGaughey, the head councillor, is a graduate of Agnes Scott and Dr. White's Bible School, and is now assisting the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of Knoxville. Miss Catherine Ruland, head of athletics and horseback riding, is a graduate of Sargent, and has been for a number of years in Y. W. C. A. work in Philadelphia. Now, she's head of physical education at Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa. Miss Helen Smith, daughter of Dr. Henry Louis Smith, of Lexington, Va., is a graduate of Randolph-Macon and Wellesley. Miss Mary Love McLure, of Chester, S. C., is expert in all water sports. Miss Margaret Funkhouser, of Dayton, Va., is a graduate of the Conservatory in Baltimore, and has charge of the music. Besides these, there are 15 other councillors, each a specialist in her line.

The whole idea of Camp Greystone is to give the girls a wonderful vacation filled with fun and exercise and inspiration. Beautiful Lake Summit offers wonderful opportunities for canoeing and swimming, while the splendid roads around Tuxedo make horseback riding on the 15 fine saddle horses a true delight. Along with the fun of camp there is the fine wholesome atmosphere of the Christian home. Among the many fine girls who have enjoyed Camp Greystone have been several daughters of ministers and missionaries. Rev. Jos. R. Sevier, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Augusta, Ga., who with his wife are the directors, will be glad to send a catalog to any girls interested, or to any girls suggested by any pastor or teacher.

AN IMPORTANT TRUST

"Henry Martyn prayed that he might 'take each day as an important trust for the Lord.' This is the true view to take of time. Each day and each hour is a trust committed to us by God.

Every morning the Christian should ask, What is the day given me for? The question then arises, How does God wish him to spend the day? No trust is given to be wasted. The day is not to be spent in mere idleness. We are faithful to our trust, when we spend the day as God would have us to spend it—whether in manual labor, in prayer, in rest, or in presenting Divine truth to the minds of others.

Happy is he who, in reviewing the day at its close, can thank God that, through grace, it has been spent in accordance with his will."

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

(Continued from page 7)

love them, and do them good. We must do our share of the service of the church, not shirking our part. We must encourage our Christian brothers. Verse 24 calls it provoking one another to love and good works, which means to call out the good in others, and do all we can to make the Christian life easy for them. And some folks have a hard time with the temptations around them, and the difficulties they must face. We can help in many ways to lift the load on some brother's back.

IV. The Church Claims Faithful Attendance From Us

Verse 25 tells us we must not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, which means we must be in our place at church, Sunday School, prayer meeting, young people's society. It is very important for the church to have frequent meetings, so as to pray together, study God's Word together, combine their gifts of money, and unite their service. The Bible says God has ordained preaching as the way He is going to save the world, and when the preacher is preaching he needs the people there to hear the Gospel. The sinful world feels religion is not very important if the church members do not attend church.

Your being at church, even if you do not say a word, has its influence. It encourages those who see you, and even those who are not there are convinced by your presence that religion is a good thing for them, if it is for you. Nothing destroys the power of the church like the church members who absent themselves from its services.

One of the great evils of our times is the absence of children from the preaching services of the church. When Sunday School is out the little people troop out of the house of God and go home. This may be excusable in very small children, but a habit of non-church-going is formed which may last till they are grown. It is a matter that young people's societies must watch also, for some of them are tempted to substitute the Christian Endeavor for the church service. All leaders must charge on the young folks not to become negligent of the preaching service.

PROSPECT ENDEAVORERS ISSUE CHALLENGE ON C. E. PAPERS

The following challenge has been received from the Endeavor societies of the Prospect Presbyterian Church, near Mooresville:

"The Christian Endeavor Society of the Prospect Church, four miles out from Mooresville, N. C., has a subscriber to the Dixie Endeavorer in every home in the entire church membership where there are any children, and a subscriber to the Christian Endeavor World in every home in the Senior society.

"We challenge any society in the United States to equal this record, and await an answer."

THE DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

By Claude T. Carr, Synodical Superintendent S. S. and Y. P. Work

That the scant one hour a week given by our Sunday Schools to the moral and religious training of our young people is inadequate is recognized by all serious students of the situation.

It is true that recently in many localities efforts have been made by which the children in the public schools are taken at some period of the day and given religious instruction by the various denominations. While this has been found workable in some places and no doubt great good has been the result, yet local conditions are not always favorable to this arrangement.

When we consider that Catholic children get 200 hours of religious instruction annually, that the Jewish churches provide 335 hours for their children, and that our Protestant denominations have until very recently been satisfied with actually only 26 hours of real Bible teaching, we realize how far behind we have been in this vital matter.

The Church is coming now to realize the necessity of supplementing the work done by the Sunday School, and rejoice in any measure that will aid in this effort.

Only in very recent years have we realized the possibility of using a part of the public school vacation period for the purpose of religious training. Over 20,000,000 children are without school supervision during the summer months and while it is a time of physical and mental relaxation, it is also a time of demoralization. Such a condition places a great responsibility on the Church, but also affords an excellent opportunity for the individual church to give to its children a fuller and richer program of Biblical instruction and spiritual nurture. This can be done most effectively through the agency of a Daily Vacation Bible School.

A Daily Vacation Bible School is a school in which children from the ages of four to fourteen are taught religion by well-qualified instructors. The school is in session for two and one-half hours each day for from three to five weeks. It has been found the better plan to hold the school early in June, before the children begin to scatter for the summer.

As for the program to be followed, of course it will vary according to the needs of the pupils and the available equipment and instructors.

A typical schedule for one day would include a devotional period, followed by one for memory work, the learning of Scriptural passages and prayers. This may be followed by the music period, during which time the songs are not only sung but a number of the best hymns and songs are memorized. After a relaxation period of calisthenics and motion drills, the teaching and dramatizing of Bible stories might be taken up. In those schools where a competent teacher can be secured Craft work is carried on. This is not only a source of interest but has more than repaid what expense it incurs in the benefit realized.

After a Habit Talk, alternating with a Mission Story, the children sing a patriotic air, salute the flags and march out.

This program, except for the Craft work, is easily adaptable to the smallest church, and we feel that any church carrying on such a school will feel fully repaid for its efforts in the results accomplished.

Literature on Vacation Bible Schools can be obtained from the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va., or from the writer at Mooresville, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN ENDEAVORERS ARE BUSY IN THE OLD NORTH STATE

We are indebted to the Dixie Endeavorer, the All-South Christian Endeavor monthly, for the following news regarding the activities of some of our Endeavor societies in North Carolina.

The Rex Senior Society concluded its Mission Study course with a public meeting at which a summary of the entire course was given.

Some of the recent achievements of the Lumber Bridge Juniors are a $50 contribution to the Church of the Pilgrims, Washington, D. C.; a barrel of clothing sent to the Near East; $20 sent to the Orphanage; and the graduation of 10 Junior Experts.

The Lumber Bridge Senior Society has hit on a good idea. They have organized two new societies since the State convention. They did not consider the job finished until the new societies could boast of several C. E. Experts.

Mr. Bert G. Jones, formerly of Wilmington, is now doing fine work as field secretary for Arkansas, Mississippi, and Tennessee, with headquarters at Memphis.

E d u c a t i o n a l

Flora Macdonald College—Following the appeal from Miss Anna McQueen, missionary in Korea, which appeared in last week's issue of the Standard, the Y. W. C. A. of the college is planning with the help of alumnae and friends to assist Miss McQueen in raising the $1,000 needed for the school in Kwanju. The article by Miss McQueen has been printed in pamphlet form and will be sent out by the "Y" with an accompanying letter to all alumnae.

The college library has been completely renovated and refurbished, walls refinished and all woodwork redecorated. This work has been made possible through the contributions of the alumnae branches to the college beautiful fund.

The Senior class has taken charge of the refurbishing of a Senior tea room, this room to be used by successive Senior classes in raising funds for their various college undertakings.

Queens College—Mrs. Jno. D. Shaw, the president of the Queens College Alumnae Association, writes very interestingly in the Charlotte Observer in regard to the college library. We copy this article herewith for the benefit of alumnae who may not see the Observer, and who may have in their libraries standard books that they no longer use, or duplicate copies, that they would like to have placed in the library of their Alma Mater, where they will serve the present student body:

"Scarcely a day has gone by this winter that some interesting book has not been added to Queens College library. Many days 10 and 20 volumes have been stamped and placed on the shelves. The steady inflow from pupils and out-of-town friends of the college has been quite enough to gratify the administration of the college. The departments of art, English, and home economics have a really quite worthy presentation of books with regard to the character of the volumes, but there are still some few thousand books needed before the library can rank as a standard college library.

"Perhaps there are friends, in taking stock of their libraries who might spare one or more of these works. The money to buy them will be just as acceptable and greatly appreciated.

"Thank you so much. "Mrs. John D. Shaw, Jr., "President Queens College Alumnae Association. "Charlotte, Jan. 8. Hermitage Road."

The following reference books are much desired and would be welcomed by the students and faculty alike:

Bliss' New Encyclopedia of Social Reform; Monroe's Cyclopaedia of Education; Ploetz's Epitome of Ancient Medieval and Modern History; Hoyt's Cyclopaedia of Practical Quotations; Stevenson's Home Book of Verse; Who's Who 1922; Who's Who in America 1922; Brewer's the Reader's Handbook; Walsh, Wm., Heroes and Heroines of Fiction; Roger's Thesaurus of English, of English Words and Phrases; Manly's Manual for Writers; Parson's Laws of Business; Palgrave's Dictionary of Political Economy; Hamilton Clayton's a Manual of the Art of Fiction; the Opera Goer's Complete Guide; Ordway; the Opera Book; Bacon's Operas Every Child Should Know; McMasters, J. B., the U. S. in the World War; C. Breshrovsky's, the Little Grandmother of the Russian Revolution; Nearing's the Woman and Social Progress; Gidding's, Descriptive and Historical Sociology; Ida M. Harbell, the Business of Being a Woman."

News of the Week

Negotiations between the American and British debt funding commissions opened January 8th with a declaration by Stanley Baldwin, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, that all his government wanted was a "square deal" in the settlement of its war debt to the United States, aggregating more than $4,000,000,000.

One million human lives are vitally affected by the decision reached by the Near Eastern Conference. One million Moslems and Christians who live either in Greece or Turkey must give up their farms, homes and business places and move on to farms, homes and occupations elsewhere.

On January 11th the French went into the Ruhr, with tanks, troops, air planes and engineers. Belgium and Italy are supporting the French, but England refuses to join. Our troops have been withdrawn as a silent protest against this action. The army and people of France felt deep regret and depression over the order of the American forces to leave the Rhine. The fear was openly expressed that President Harding's decision would be construed by Germany and other nations as a rebuke to France upon the eve of her independent action in the Ruhr. The Germans claim that it is a violation of international law and the Treaty.

France's separate action in the Ruhr was approved by Parliament, the members of the Chamber and Senate cheering for several minutes Premier Poincare's declaration. The Chamber voted confidence in the government, 478 to 86, on the question of the postponement of a group of interpolations on the Ruhr policy.

Treaty limitation by the Washington conference pact on the size of war craft has changed the condition of competitive building among sea powers, but in the judgment of naval experts competition will continue. In the new era it will be a battle of wits rather than dollars, American officers believe.

James A. Hartness, of Statesville, is seeking to arouse sentiment among the legislators in favor of a law making the study of the Bible in the public schools compulsory. A bill with this provision will be introduced in the General Assembly within the next week or so.

Sources of what are described as "embassy" liquors which, it is claimed, have been finding their way into the illicit traffic in Washington in large quantities, are sought by the District of Columbia police as a result of three successive raids in as many apartment houses in the fashionable northwest section.

Col. J. Bryan Grimes, Secretary of State of North Carolina since 1900, died January 11th of pneumonia, following influenza.

Charlotte stands twelfth among 50 industrial cities that gained in postal receipts in December, the postoffice department announced.

Governor Morrison in his address to the Legislature urged a continuation of all the forward movements of last session.

There are probably no walls harder for Christianity to penetrate than those of our state prisons. The anonymous author of "In the Clutch of Circumstance" (D. Appleton and Company), now a Christian citizen, writes:

I had already had enough experience in burglary to disgust me with a life of law breaking, but I had been able to see no way out. I felt caught in a hopeless net. Now I experienced the "human touch"—a chapel service—at a time when I imagined every honest man turned against me. It started a new process of thought in my mind. I resolved to show that if somebody really believed in him and expected it of him, a convict could "come back."

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

erves Christian teachers by securg for them larger fields of service.
Also Christian men and women who esire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secrery, business manager, financial gent, stenographer, nurse, matron, ousekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who eed secretary, visitor, educational rector, Sunday School worker, pas-or's assistant, etc.—both men and omen.

Also church and public schools, gh schools, and colleges who need gh grade officers, teachers and elpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for epl) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
o Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

Church Furniture
WORK OF THE HIGHEST QUALITY
AT REASONABLE PRICES
Write for Catalogue
BUDDE & WEIS MFG. CO.
JACKSON, TENNESSEE

GOOD POSITIONS
aying fine salaries can be had for ambitious ung men and women who complete our mmercial and stenographic courses.
Our aim this season is to enroll a very erge number of such students who can be sined for high and responsible positions.
Won't you be one to enroll? A postal adressed to us will bring you our catalog.
rite for it.
DRAUGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE
Knoxville, Tenn.

Book of Church Order
With 1922 Amendments

The new edition is now eady. Order your copy at nce.

Should be in the hands of very pastor and church offi-er.

Price, Cloth, 35c. Postpaid

Confession of Faith

New edition contains revised Book of Church Order, with 1922 amendments.

Price, Cloth, 75c.; Leather, $1.25.

Order From
Presbyterian Committee of Publication
Richmond, Va. Texarkana, Ark.-Tex

Not a Laxative
Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe.
When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus replaces
it. Try it today.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

PROVERBS FROM SPURGEON

Buy not silk when you owe for milk.
Better do than dream; better be than seem.
She who buys "bargains" is often "sold."
Avoid what makes in thy pockets a void.
Sellers need tongues; buyers need eyes.
Desired things may not be desirable.
Fear of failure is the father of failure
Why kill nettles if you grow thistles?
Pegging away will win the day.
Maybes are no honey bees.
Add pence to pence, for wealth comes thence.
Better a good grote than a bank note.
A maid's best dress is bashfulness.
Father's fraud drives sons abroad.
Play not with fire nor ill desire.
Lessons learned in the cradle last to the grave.
Be hardy, but be not hard.
The good wife's face lights up the place.
Don't get a helpmeet till you've got meat to help.
Better be one-sided than two-faced.
If you can't be clever, you can be clean.
To avoid a second quarrel, avoid the first.
Better single still than wedded ill.
—Selected.

Stick to your aim; the mongrel's hold will slip,
But only crowbars loose the bulldog's grip;
Small as he looks, the jaw that never yields
Drags down the bellowing monarch of the fields!

WANTED
Raw Furs, Hides, Tallow, Beeswax, and Gingseng. Write for prices.
FRANK E. BROWN
Roanoke, Va.

CAMP GREYSTONE--FOR GIRLS
On Beautiful Lake Summit, In the "Land of the Sky"
Tuxedo, N. C.

Fourth Season. Splendid equipment with electric lights, water and sanitary plumbing. Substantial sleeping Tentalsows. Land and water sports. Fifteen fine saddle horses. Twenty consecrated Councillors. Write early for catalogue as number of girls is limited.
REV. JOS. R. SEVIER, Director
Pastor First Presbyterian Church
Augusta, Ga.

FOR GIFTS OF Watches, Jewelry or Silverware
Write
JAMES ALLAN & CO.
THE JEWELERS
185 King St. Charleston, S. C.
67 years in business selling
the best goods at the most reasonable prices
Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references
We prepay charges on all purchases

Carolina School Supply Co.
119 Brevard Court, Charlotte, N. C.
Distributors for the American Seating Company in the Carolinas. High Grade School Desks and Auditorium Chairs. Desks, Blackboards, Crayon, Erasers, Etc., carried in stock in our Charlotte Warehouse.
Catalogue Upon Request
George W. Hart—W. C. Ariall—John. L. Harris

LARGE GIFT A THANK-OFFERING FOR A GOOD HUSBAND

That a good husband as well as a good wife "is from the Lord," is a matter of such practical belief with an Indian wife in Oklahoma, that she gave $50,000 as a thank-offering to Baptist mission work, specifically stating that her thankfulness was because God had given her a good husband. Later she gave $100,000 to endow the home for destitute girls in Oklahoma that her first gift had established.
These gifts were made known to a meeting of the Baptist General Convention in Germantown, Philadelphia, recently, and according to Dr. Charles L. White, Secretary of the American Baptist Missionary Society, they are the largest ever received from a Baptist woman during her lifetime. In her early years this Christian Indian woman had been in destitute circumstances, which led her to her definite expression of sympathy with other poor girls, when oil was found on her land, and she became wealthy.—Ex.

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts,
not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on the dial;
We should count time by heart-throbs.
He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, and who acts the best.

THOROUGHbred SEEDS
The Best By Test For More Than Fifty Years
Write for our free illustrated catalog.
GEO. TAIT & SONS, Inc., NORFOLK, VIRGINIA

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!
There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn.
The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.
Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares.
Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks.
Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.
NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST
MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION
J. H. Wearn, 207 N. Tryon St. E. J. CAFFREY,
President. CHARLOTTE, N. C. Sec'y & Treas.

Prayer Calendar for 1923
Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen
The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.
It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.
It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.
A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.
Order from Presbyterian Committee of Publication
Richmond, Va. Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works
R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor CHARLOTTE, N. C. W. 7th St. and Southern Railway
Oldest Largest Best Phone 281

For Sale, one cottage in Montreat, eight rooms including dining room and kitchen. New range in dining room, plumbing, etc., just overhauled and cottage freshly painted. Lot on main road, about half way between Gate and Post Office. For prices and particulars write J. G. Parks, care Parks-Belk Co., Concord, N. C.

ABERDEEN & ROCKFISH RAILROAD

BETWEEN ABERDEEN & FAYETTEVILLE
 Eastbound Westbound
 Daily Ex. Sunday Daily Ex. Sunday
 Mixed. Pass. STATIONS Pass. Mixed
 No. 22. No. 38. No. 41. No. 21
 Lv. Ar. Lv. Ar.
 7:30am 9:10am Aberdeen 6:41pm 5:00pm
 Ar 8:35am 10:00am Raeford 5:55pm Lv 3:50pm
 Lv 2:10pm Raeford Ar 2:50pm
 4:00pm 11:20am Fayetteville 4:50pm 1pm
WAGRAM BRANCH
 Southbound Northbound
 Daily Ex. Sun. Daily Ex. Sun.
 Mixed STATIONS Mixed
 No. 11 No. 12
 Lv. 10:30am Raeford Ar. 12:40pm
 Ar. 11:15am Wagram Lv. 12 noon
 W. A. BLUE, General Supt.,
 Aberdeen. N. C.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD

Effective November 13, 1922
 Leave Charlotte Except Sunday
 7:30 a. m. for Norwood, Mt. Gilead,
 Star, Varina, Raleigh
 and intermediate points
 Connects at Star for Aberdeen, Ash-
 boro and intermediate points
 Connects at Raleigh for Wilson,
 Washington, Greenville, Belhaven
 and intermediate points
 New equipment and improved
 Schedules
 One way fare Charlotte to Raleigh
 $5.64
 J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
 P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

6% No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.
SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
 Assets $1,011,288.30
 F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

Sparkles

"That young man of yours," said father as daughter came down to breakfast, "should be in a museum for living curiosities." "Why, father!" exclaimed the young lady in tones of indignation, "what do you mean?" "I noticed when I passed through the hall late last night," answered the parent, "that he had two heads upon his shoulders."—The Soldier-Worker (Butte).

Little Tommy, at the "movies," saw a tribe of Indians painting their faces and asked his mother the significance of this.

"Indians," his mother answered, "always paint their faces before going on the war-path—before scalping and tomahawking and murdering."

The next evening, after dinner, as the mother entertained in the parlor her daughter's young man, Tommy rushed downstairs wide-eyed with fright.

"Come on, mother," he cried, "Let's get out of this quick! Sister's going on the war-path!"—San Francisco Chronicle.

A colored man took out a marriage license. A few days later he went back and asked the clerk to substitute another woman's name for the one on the license, as he had changed his mind. He was told that that would cost him another dollar and a half.

"You mean I got to get a new license?"

"Yes," said the clerk.

The applicant was silent for a few minutes, thinking hard. Then he said with an air of determination, "Never mind boss, this ol' one will do. Thar ain't a dollar an' a half difference 'tween them two, nohow."—Boston Transcript.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.
 Printers - Rulers - Binders
 GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

THE STIEFF PIANO is not Merely Good—it is more than that. The exceptional beauty of tone of Stieff Pianos and their wonderful durability is what distinguishes them. Fill blank and mail

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
 Charlotte, N. C.
 Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
 Name _____
 Address _____

If the price of a Stieff is too high, we have the Shaw, the Bennett-Bretz, Davis & Son, and Leslie pianos at lower prices—from $325.00 up.

CHAS. M. STIEFF, INC., Charlotte, N. C.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
 Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO.
 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
 20c to 35c
 None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
 IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
 PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
 14 - 16 - 18
 years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

Special January Sale of Fine Mattresses.

For this week only our famous Wool-Nap Mattress for $14.85. You can't buy a mattress its equal under $25.00.

Send your check by return mail or you will be too late.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., JANUARY 24, 1923

No. 4

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Church Treasurers	1
The New Editor-in-Chief of the S. S. Publications	1
The Laymen's Convention	1
"Let the Buyer Beware"	2
The Duty of Church Treasurers	2
The Church of Rome and the Vow of Celibacy	2
CONTRIBUTED—
Theological Education—By Rev. Thornton Whaling, D.D.	3
Outline of a Plan for Financing the Kingdom Why? Why?—By Egbert W. Smith, D.D.	3
"The Country Church"—By Dr. Henry W. McLaughlin	3
The Call of the Ministry—By Rev. J. L. Griggs	4
A Sextette of China Facts—By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.	5
The Importance of the Study of the Catechisms of the Church—By Rev. E. P. Davis, D.D.	5
"What is the Kingdom of God?"	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

CHURCH TREASURERS

JUDAS ISCARIOT was the first church treasurer. He was a thief, and set a bad example. Of the innumerable multitude of those who have succeeded him in office, few have followed his evil example. Our memory, which stretches across quite a number of years, recalls only one such. He was a lawyer with a small practice and a large family. Usually church treasurers are exceptionally good men, among the best in the church. They handle the trust funds committed to them with conscientious fidelity. Their office puts considerable work on them, and they do this work without pay and with little or no thanks. We have never known but one church treasurer who was paid for his services, and he should have served gratuitously. At least, so we think. He was a member of the session, and one of the wealthiest members of the church. As Christians we ought to be glad of the opportunity to do some things for nothing. Being a preacher, such opportunities come to us frequently, and we always feel better for rendering gratuitous service.

We honor church treasurers, and appreciate their unselfish work for Christ and the Church. But there is one serious fault quite common among them. They are not prompt in forwarding the benevolent funds that are placed in their hands. Only recently we heard one of our Executive Secretaries say that the Committee must wait until March for funds that have been contributed by the churches all along during the year. Perhaps a third of all the money sent to the Committee is received in March. This ought not to be. It forces the Committee to borrow from the banks and pay a high rate of interest. The attention of our treasurers has been called to this matter time and time again. Our secretaries have iterated and reiterated their appeals. They have grown hoarse in repeating their appeals; and yet our treasurers will not heed. How account for their indifference? It must be due to a failure to appreciate the might of littles. Each treasurer is under the impression that the small amount in his hands will not be missed if held back. Suppose one thousand treasurers reason in that way; and suppose further that they each hold back an average of $50. This would mean depriving the Committee of $50,000. As a matter of fact, more than that amount is held back, and the interest which the Committee is compelled to pay in consequence is equivalent to the total annual contribution of one of our important churches. There is no excuse for this waste. Our Committees need all the money they can get, and it is a shame for them to be compelled to pay out thousands of dollars in interest because money is lying idle in the keeping of our church treasurers. These officials are busy men, and they suffer their business to call them away on Monday morning before they have finished up the financial transactions of the church on Sunday. When the church takes a collection, and puts benevolent funds in their hands, they should regard that as an order to forward it at once to its proper destination. It is already due, and perhaps long past due, to the laborers in the field, and it is perilously near a sin for them to "keep back the hire of the laborers who have mowed their fields."

THE NEW EDITOR-IN-CHIEF OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL PUBLICATIONS

Dr. Jno. I. Armstrong

When the Richmond Committee of Publication saw fit in their wisdom to retire Dr. R. A. Lapsley from the editorship of the Sunday School publication there was latent rebellion in many parts of the Church. This paper sympathized with that feeling, but, in common with these brethren, we refrained from public protest, and even now we hesitate even to mention our views, lest the smoldering fires break out. Shakespeare says very wisely:

"Things without all remedy
Should be without regard; what's done is done."

Since what's done is done, we rejoice to know that the Committee has selected one of our best men to fill this important office.

We have known Dr. Armstrong and his forbears for over 30 years, and if there be any truth in inheritance, then the son of his mother will measure up to the demands of any work that he may be willing to undertake.

His wide experience in teaching, and his successful work in the pastorate, as well as his record as the Educational Secretary of the Foreign Mission Committee, at Nashville, fit him to an eminent degree for this new work.

Those of us who believe in the old truths may rest assured that he will lead in conservative paths, yet will clothe old ways in a new dress.

THE LAYMEN'S CONVENTION

During the month of February and two days in March in various sections of our Church the laymen will be gathering to consider the King's business.

Those of us whose experience reaches back over a generation, will recall the fact that only preachers were expected to work in the Lord's vineyard. One old elder, when called upon to lead in prayer, replied, "Pray yourself, that is what we pay you for."

Now the elders, deacons, and men in the church without any office, feel the constraining power of the love of Christ, and they are everywhere at work.

This year their program is an ambitious one. Instead of one great conference, held somewhere out of reach of those near the border, there will be five conferences, at Houston, Texas, February 13-14; at Little Rock, Ark., February 15-16; Jacksonville, Fla., February 20-21; Charlotte, N. C., February 22-23; Richmond, Va., February 27-28; Huntington, W. Va., March 1-2.

The bill of fare is a tempting one. We hope that the results will be commensurate with the hopes of the brethren interested.

Let pastors and sessions arrange to give their officers the spiritual benefits of these gatherings of the saints.

"LET THE BUYER BEWARE"

The Latins had the above phrase, "Caveat emptor," to teach that a man who buys has to look out for his own interests.

In time, it has become a principle of English and American law that the buyer acts upon his own risk, except as to express warranties.

That the failure of the law to enforce this principle is the cause of the failure of the prohibition legislation in many instances, is the growing belief of a large majority of the friends of prohibition.

We have never been able to understand why a poor bootlegger, driven often by poverty to trade in liquor, should be fined or sent to the roads, while the purchaser, high in social life, should be passed by. One is often the victim of circumstances at home, no food in the house and no money in the pocket, while the other is merely the victim of his own unbridled appetite, yet every day our judges are sentencing the seller and paying no attention to the buyer, who is really the guilty party. If there were no buyer, there would soon be no sellers.

As an example of the injustice of the present law, let us consider one case in this city. Last year a car was caught in front of the residence of one of the wealthy men of this city. The car was loaded with fine liquor which, together with the car, was confiscated. The owner of the liquor escaped, but was finally caught and tried.

This was a fine bit of news for the daily press, and they filled much space with the details. The name of the seller was given in every account, but the name of the buyer was never mentioned. One paper did name the street where he lived, but beyond that one time, even the street was never mentioned. That man is an influential citizen of the city, while the seller was practically unknown.

What a moral effect it would have had, if the buyer had divided the sentence with the seller, so that would-be-buyers might learn that the buyer must henceforth beware.

In view of these facts we are glad to learn that a bill has been introduced in Congress to make both buyer and seller equally guilty before the law. We are, however, reminded that the proposing of such a law in Congress does not necessarily mean that it will be passed.

If what is charged by Mr. Upshaw, the Georgia congressman, be true, then this proposed law will be voted upon by many who are not liable to be found so unmindful of their own interests as to vote for a law that may some time send them to the roads.

We do not believe that this charge by Mr. Upshaw will be found to be true of many of our lawmakers, so we have strong hopes that an aroused public sentiment may yet bring enough into line to strengthen our law to this extent.

THE DUTY OF CHURCH TREASURERS

Every year as far as we can remember, the Secretaries of the various Benevolent Committees have been complaining that the treasurers of the churches, instead of forwarding the amounts contributed to the causes of the Church, at the time of their receipt, have been in the habit of using such amounts for other church purposes, intending at the close of the church year to repay and forward to their proper destination, with the result that everything is thrown into confusion.

As these appeals seem to fall on dull ears in the past, we do not know that anything we may say will have much effect upon these brethren, yet, for the sake of the secretaries, and the general welfare, we would add our voice.

In the business world this would be regarded as misappropriation of funds. The money that is given for one cause is the property of that cause, and no one, except the giver, has any right to divert it into another channel. To leave it in a bank may not be as unlawful as to use it for some cause other than the one designated, yet it is not right, because the secretary who should have the use of this money, has to borrow elsewhere and pay interest on the same, so that the dollar given, by the time it reaches his office, has been reduced by the interest paid, with the result that you have lost that amount.

The model church treasurer is the man who is merely the channel through which the offerings of the people flow.

There are only three months till the Church year closes. Let the treasurers bestir themselves, and send at once to the different causes whatever the people have given.

THE CHURCH OF ROME AND THE VOW OF CELIBACY

This great ecclesiastical body has always been distinguished for its wisdom, in the worldly sense. This is true to such a degree that many have regarded it as the earthly organization through which Satan works. A study of its plans and actions from the beginning show such Satanic ingenuity and at the same time such a complete bluntness of the moral sense, that no other conclusion was possible.

In view of this unearthly wisdom, it has always been a problem to the students of Church history, why they were so blind to the inevitable results of a law that did violence to one of the strongest desires implanted in man. Though the vow of celibacy, laid upon the priests, has always been the law of the Church, from time to time there have been protests, though thus far in vain.

A BUSY DAY AT CAPERNAUM

Luke 5:40

By Mrs. W. S. Primrose

The busy day was done, the sun had set
Over the blue waters of Genessaret.
The stars commenced to glitter in the skies,
And the fair moon had begun to rise.
Refreshing lake winds cooled the fervid air,
And all nature felt the Healer's presence there.
For Jesus, with His chosen twelve, that evening came
To Peter's house, from whence had spread
His fame.
The city all, had gathered at the door
Of Simon's house,—the sick, the lame, the poor
Afflicted ones, of proud Capernaum.
From many a heart there rose the anxious cry,
Make way!—That I may bring my loved one nigh!
Little ones, in fondest arms, were brought
By loving parents, who the Healer sought,—
That strange and famous man of whom they heard;
A mysterious One!—Whose every word
Showed love, and with it all, such wondrous power
That moved them thus to seek Him, at this hour.
The gracious stranger found each sick one there,
Heard and answered every anxious prayer.
Sickness,—no matter what,—His very touch
Cured the ill of him who suffered much.
On each He laid a healing hand,—
Then life came back, at His command.
Glad strains of joy,—loud tones of happy song
Burst from each heart, in that vast throng;
Were e'er such acts of grace and kindness done?
No never,—never,—since the world begun.

Rome rules with an iron hand as evinced by the long list of martyrs who resisted her will. At the Council of Trent, in 1563, and in 1848, attempts were made to annul this law, but both were in vain.

Recently we have seen it stated that a large number of priests have signed an Appeal to the Pope, to be relieved of the vows of celibacy on the ground that experience has shown that "moral purity can only be attained through the free working of human nature, and not by coercion, nor by the importation of laws against nature." We quote the following striking statement from this appeal: "The clergy ended by ignoring the Romish vow, and a wave of immorality swept over the church, spreading as far as the Pontifical throne itself. The name of Alexander VI is enough in this connection." This appeal has been signed, not only by priests, but also by bishops and cardinals.

We of the Protestant faith will watch the outcome with deep interest. If the facts be as stated, then it means that the priests, bishops and cardinals have advanced with modern thought and modern ideas of liberty, and His Reverence, the Pope, will find it difficult to stem this tide of revolt.

Devotional

THE JOY OF ACQUAINTANCE WITH GOD

The strong note of the early church life was the joy of Christians. Nowadays it too often seems as if religion were a burden to be carried. In the old days it was the arms of God that carried believers as if on eagle's wings. The impression they made was that of people in possession of a great and overflowing joy. They went joyfully about drudgery. They sang hymns in the prison at midnight with backs sore from the whip. They went to their death like those who saw a heavenly vision. A company of such happy Christians in every village and city would simplify the problem of evangelism. It brought many a sorrowing man and woman into the fold to experience the joy of loving acquaintance with God.—Selected.

BITS OF CHEER

Catherine of Siena, whatever her sufferings, was always jocund, "ever laughing in the Lord." The blind Madame du Deffand rejoiced that her affliction was not rheumatism; Spurgeon's receipt for contentment was never to chew pills, but to swallow the disagreeable and have done with it. Essipoff, when commiserated on the smallness of her hands, insisted that longer ones would be cumbersome. Robert Schauflier's specific for a blue Monday is to whistle all the Brahms tunes he can remember. Dr. Cuyler, when very ill, replied to a relative's suggestion of the glorious company waiting him above: "I've got all eternity to visit with those old saints, I am in no hurry to go;" and old Aunt Mandy, when asked why she was so constantly cheerful, replied, "Lor,' chile, I jes' wear this world like a loose garment."—Exchange.

DUTY—ITS MEANING

In this age we have all but lost the real meaning of duty. We measure it by monetary returns. The spirit of the flunky, whose hand is always out for a tip, runs through all our sense of service. In the field of duty, you cannot measure one's service to the world by the paltry dollar. The truth is, the greatest benefactors of the race are not the best paid. On the human side, it is a freak of recompense we do not understand. We know mere copyists pounding at a typewriter who get more money than the school teachers who are molding generations. The president of Harvard University gets less money than the "goteed" chef in a New York tavern. Why it is so, we do not pretend to know—but it is. There are some things money won't buy—brains and character, for instance. There are zones far removed from the clang and clamor of the market-place. The sense of conscious duty lies outstretched far above the bogs where the mere hireling is content to dwell. Our Lord, as St. Luke records it, lays down the law of duty: "When ye shall have done all those things commanded of you, say, We are unprofitable servants: We have done that which was our duty to do." We rise to exalted heights only when we can measure ourselves by that which goes out, and not by that which comes in.—Marvin J. Nichols.

GOD'S ORDER FOR SERVICE

(A Clipping found in a Christian Worker's Notebook.)

In doing the service of the Lord, we are so likely to reverse His order of doing things. His parting injunction to His disciples was to tarry until the coming of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the power for service. His order is prayer, power, progress. We are so prone to put the doing first, forgetting that the thing of first importance, the thing first in order, is prayer. In His own Word we see how Jesus carried out this plan. There were the ten days of prayer, then came the power, then followed the going out that really brought progress—the Church increased daily.

This is the natural order from every viewpoint. The service without the anointing is largely a powerless service. Prayer is the key to the storehouse of God's resources of equipment for the kind of services that is progressive and that terminates in success. And is it not this kind of service that is a blessing to humanity and that is an honor to God? If this be true, should we not covet this way? Then let us pursue the natural order—prayer, power, progress.

THEOLOGICAL EDUCATION

By Rev. Thornton Whaling, D.D.

There is no more supremely important subject concerning the present and future welfare of the Church than the proper conduct of theological education. For a third of a century the writer has been working in this field and has served either as professor or director in every theological seminary in the Church. He, therefore, begs the privilege of presenting with perfect candor the views which have resulted from this experience.

I. The General Assembly ought to have larger rights of administration and control over this entire field. There ought to be either a permanent or executive committee of education, composed of the best and most scholarly leaders in the Church to whose care this interest is commended. If Home Mission and Foreign Mission Publication is worthy of a committee, how much more Theological Education. Doctrinaries may tell us the Assembly has the right of review at present, but the facts show how seldom this right is exercised in any satisfactory way; and powers of initiative, control and readjustment are in no sense committed to our General Assembly, according to the constitution of the seminaries or the practice of the ecclesiastical courts.

II. Consolidation rather than multiplication of the seminaries is the supremely practical issue of the Church today. We have four seminaries actually at work and one in a condition of suspended animation, and projects in some regions for a sixth. The wisdom of the Church certainly has not been exercised in this undue multiplication, and if such wisdom is to bear fruit, reduction rather than increase in numbers ought to be the order of the day. The method in which a consolidation might be achieved can be wrought out in the way which is so common, well nigh universal, by the appointment of a judicious ad interim committee.

III. A readjustment of the curriculum is imperatively demanded by the needs of the day.

1. The co-ordination of the seminaries with the college is necessary. The classic course in these colleges has been greatly modified and students are graduated from them with slender or little training in logic, psychology, ethics and philosophy. The seminaries themselves will have to introduce such courses unless the colleges will do this work. Pre-ministerial courses ought to be given just as pre-medical or pre-legal courses are. The State University ought to be solicited to give such work and independent institutions like Washington and Lee also.

2. An extension of the work to be done by the seminaries is needed.

(a) The work of preparing preachers and pastors must continue with the standard requirements in most cases. However, there are certain disciplines which ought to be introduced here as for example the psychology and philosophy of religion; Irenic Apologetics, which meets the modern mind where it is. Ethics, including Christian Sociology, Church Work with the principle of the clinic or dissecting room, and still other important subjects.

(b) The Church needs teachers just as truly as preachers, and the seminary is the best place to prepare such workers. The colleges and universities find it impossible to secure adequately equipped men to take charge of the Department of Religious Education, or Biblical Study or History. Our large and thoroughly equipped churches need also directors of religious work or training who are equal in grade to the preacher or pastor in the dignity of their office and in the value of the service rendered. There ought to be in every such church a teacher who is an ordained minister, who has been prepared for this great work.

(c) There are increasing numbers of thoughtful men and women who desire adequate biblical training and knowledge and the theological seminary should furnish opportunity for such study as they may need. This need not be of a low or popular grade. White's Bible School, New York, is a sample of how the private members of the Church are longing for proper teaching. The theological seminary in fact ought to be a theological university. Ezra Cornell, when he founded the university which bears his name, said he wished a school where anybody could study any subject under the best teaching offered on the globe. A theological seminary ought to be an institution where anybody could study any department of Biblical or Theological learning under competent direction. The seminary which gives such provision first will "inherit the earth."

(d) Religious workers of the highest type are needed on every hand. When stress of war was upon the Y. M. C. A. it laid hands on J. Ross Stevenson, president of Princeton Seminary; James I. Vance, pastor of our greatest church, and other like men and enlisted them in its service. The seminaries ought to do the work of furnishing to this organization, and all others like it, adequately prepared workers. There is no Y. M. C. A. college in the world in the nature of the case that can do this work as well as the theological seminaries or universities ought to do it.

.....
Contributed
.....

(e) The extension of the time of study is a practical issue. Both law and medicine have lengthened the period of study required for their professional degree and three years is too short a time for theology to require for its degree in Divinity.

3. The principle of election is already knocking at the door. Some men do not choose Hebrew or Greek may be, yea, are called to the ministry even in the Presbyterian Church, and ought to have the option of studies which are of equal disciplinary and utilitarian value. In this day when the B.S. and B.A. degrees are given upon so many scientific courses, the graduate upon such courses who chooses the ministry ought to find a seminary adjusted to his needs, with a curriculum just as scholarly and exacting for him as the old curriculum manufactured for the traditional B.A. degree on the old classical foundations.

In conclusion this whole subject is agitating in the mind of the Church universal. One of its ablest treatments is found in the Minutes of the U. S. A. Church, 1922, pages 203 to 214, a report by Dr. W. O. Thompson, president of the University of Ohio, on the subject of the Theological Seminaries and Theological Education. It ought to be read by every minister in our Church as well. Union Seminary, New York, though heterodox as to doctrine, is wise in its policies, and the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, in Louisville, Ky., while belonging to another denomination, is the best organized seminary on the globe. Our own Union Seminary in Virginia has been our most wisely conducted institution, though making some mistakes. It moved to a large city but went to the suburbs. It wrought out a Bible Training School but as a by-product instead of an integral part of the institution. It founded a Mission Court as another by-product instead of an organized constituent. But this seminary has in some respects been blazing the way and the Church, profiting by and improving upon this experience, may provide still more adequately for its Theological Education and Biblical Training.

OUTLINE OF A PLAN FOR FINANCING THE KINGDOM

- I. Determine the Budget.
 - (a) Church Support.
 - (b) Benevolences.
 1. Make the first (a) ample for local expenses.
 2. The second (b) should at least cover apportionment.
 3. Ratified officially.
 4. Use Duplex Envelope, both sides.
- II. Who Support Budget?

Ans: "Let every one of you"

 1. Members of small income? Ans: Primarily for their sake.
 2. Members in debt? Ans: The Lord is our preferred creditor.
 3. Children who are members? Ans: Train the child.
 4. Wives who are members? Ans: Worship is a personal act and can not be done by proxy.
- III. When make the offering?

Ans: "Upon the first day of the week."

 - (a) Why weekly?
 1. Scriptural.
 2. Practical; many receive income weekly.
 3. Gets more money.
 4. Gets it as needed.
 5. Develops liberality.
 6. Brings weekly blessing.
 - (b) Why upon the first day of the week?
 1. Scriptural.
 2. An act of worship.
 - (c) Objections. 1. My income irregular.

Ans: Lay aside at least a tenth for the Lord when you receive money.

 2. Too much trouble. Ans: Not to one who has the spirit of disobedience.
- IV. How much? "As God hath prospered you." Make one-tenth the minimum standard of estimating your prosperity.
- V. Every Member Canvass. Why?
 1. Reaches the greatest number.
 2. Utilizes the personal element.

3. Supplements public effort.
 4. Promotes attendance.
 5. Promotes fellowship.
 6. Gathers valuable information.
 7. Blessing to canvassers.
- VI. Every Member Canvass. How?
1. Take at least a month to get ready.
 2. At the close of a revival is a good time for it.

(The above outline was sent in by Rev. A. H. Atkins, D.D., of Hamer, S. C., who has found it so useful in his work that he would commend it to others.—Ed.)

WHY? WHY? WHY?

By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.

Dropping into a Nashville restaurant recently with a lissome leaflet in my hand, I was planning to steal glances at it between bites as a mere tinkling accompaniment to the full-throated melody of soup, fried chicken, and cherry pie. But the accompaniment speedily displaced the melody. With my fork poised chicken-tipped in mid air between plate and mouth, I sat transfixed, unconscious of my surroundings, greedily devouring the pages of the little booklet.

The intelligent reader will at once be struck with the astounding resemblance between this attitude of mine and that of the bird Tennyson tells of, who, in the very act of eating his feathered victim, stopped, spell-bound by the poet's song.

"The wild hawk paused with the down on his beak,
And stared, with his foot on the prey."

Tennyson knew that no more convincing proof of anything's power of fascination could be given than its arrest of a carnivorous creature in the very act of taking needed nourishment.

Precisely this was the effect upon me of the fifty-six page pamphlet of our gifted young Educational Secretary, Mr. E. D. Grant, entitled "Our Prayer Each Week, for use in Sunday Schools and Societies," purchasable for 25 cents from Educational Department, Box 330, Nashville, Tennessee. It contains a juicy little extract from a fresh missionary letter for every Sunday in the year, followed by a terse statement of the prayer object which the extract illustrates.

How any Sunday School superintendent with a heart can deprive his school of the pleasure and profit of these little five-minute prayer readings is one of those mysteries I shall take with me into the next world. Through just such a medium many a young man or woman has heard the call of Christ to a noble life service, while multitudes of others from just such a taper have had kindled in their hearts their first interest in world evangelization. The time required is negligible, the benefit, the possibilities, unreckonable.

Brief as these prayer readings are, continued through the year they would mean a real achievement in the missionary education of the whole school. And if the superintendent had our missionary maps on the wall and would point out to the school the place and the country from which each Sunday's letter was written, the interest and instruction would be greatly increased, for eye-gate beats ear-gate nine to one. As Tennyson says,

"Things seen are mightier than things heard."

If I were a Sunday School teacher and my class did not hear them read from the platform, I should certainly procure a copy and read one of them myself to my class each Sunday. Without some such systematic effort you will never develop your pupils, be they young or old, infant or adult, into world Christians, and if that is not your purpose, it ought to be. It was the purpose of the Great Teacher.

Sunday School teachers, superintendents, and pastors should be ashamed to continue turning out from their schools and classes near-sighted, myopic people who, as Saint Peter says, "cannot see afar off."

If I were a parent, or a simple church member, or a delegation of Auxiliary ladies appointed for the purpose, I should go to my pastor or Sunday School superintendent or session and I should open my mouth, or mouths, to the following effect:

"Say, did you see that sparkling article of our modest Executive Secretary of Foreign Missions in the Church paper? Why should our children be deprived of this vitally important systematic instruction offered them at no cost of money and scarcely any of time? Why should they grow up drinking in knowledge of our home work at every pore yet shamefully ignorant of that mighty cause which formed the burden of our Master's last command and which our first General Assembly declared to be the great end of our Church's organization? Why should they be permitted to grow up keen-eyed for business, pleasure, and home affairs, but, for the things that are 'afar off,' hopeless, chronic, pitiful myopiacs? Why? Why? Why?"

Mount Carmel Church

"THE COUNTRY CHURCH"

By Dr. Henry W. McLaughlin

(From The Field Illustrated)

In an article recently published in the Outlook (New York), contributed by Martha Beasley Bruere and Robert W. Bruere, the Country Church is represented in a very decadent condition. This article was largely quoted in the Literary Digest under the caption, "Rural Preachers in a Losing Race."

They represent the pulpit as falling behind the pew in the progress of intelligence, and report that in some sections "only 25 per cent of the churches are growing, while the remainder are dying or are dead."

Now if I believed this to be a true picture of our American Country Churches, I would be a pessimist indeed. Statistics show that most of the leaders of the religious life of the cities, the pastors, the church officers and the Sunday School workers, were born and reared in the country.

There are travelers who feel confident to write lucidly of an oriental city, being able to describe with accurate opinion the domestic, social, economical, and religious life of its people after less than a week's sojourn. The city writer who travels through the country, gathering information about rural conditions, may or may not be able to write of things as they really are. Country people are prone to stuff the city questioner and fill him full of things that are not facts, having a lot of fun in the meanwhile at the questioner's expense. A city lady was saying of a country man, with whom she had a conversation, "Poor man, he has never seen a railway train." The fact was, this man had been a regular "globe trotter" and was just having a little fun at her expense. It is doubtful if the Brueres have gotten all the facts, even in the communities they have visited. It is dangerous to reason from the specific to the general.

For over 12 years I have been pastor of a church in the open country. Have identified my life with the life of my people, and have breathed with them the air of the open fields. As I know intimately the conditions in the Valley of Virginia, it is of these I write. I find that within 40 miles of Staunton, Va., the birthplace of Woodrow Wilson, there are 17 churches in the open country, with a membership ranging from 250 to 640. This is of one denomination. There are churches of like kind in other denominations within the same radius. Each of these 17 churches has a minister's home on a plot of ground ranging from one to fifty acres. Each has a resident pastor for all of his time, a graduate of some reputable college and of a theological seminary requiring three years of resident work. They are red-blooded men who take a deep interest in community welfare and community organizations. All of these churches have been having their normal loss by death, have been constantly sending a stream of life into the city congregations, and have received but few members by certificate. Yet, notwithstanding all this, the 17 churches have made a net average increase during 10 years, from April 1, 1911, to April 1, 1921, of 85 members per church. The real growth and development of these churches is not shown by the increase in membership, but their increase in efficiency in service to the world at large. The amount contributed for benevolences, that is, for causes other than local expenses, for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1921, was 533 per cent more than the amount contributed for the same period of time a decade ago. The lowest increase in benevolences in any one of the 17 churches was 152 per cent and the highest 1375 per cent. The increase in pastor's salary for a period of five years was an average of $723.00 per church. This does not look much as though the churches in the open country are dying out, at any rate, in the Valley of Virginia. I have selected the Mount Carmel Church to bring out some matters of detail, especially to emphasize the character of the ministry in the open country in this section of the world. I might have selected any one of the 17, and the facts would not have been greatly different. The writer is not pastor of this congregation, but of the mother church, from which it sprang. Mount Carmel, located on Lee Highway, about midway between Staunton and Lexington, was organized in 1858 with 38 members, most of life, a fine horseman, a man of good common sense and blessed with a sense of humor.

For 38 years, in sleet, in rain, in snow, with no vacation, Rev. A. H. Hamilton, D.D., wore out his splendid life visiting, preaching and ministering to the people he loved with all the passion of his great heart. After 38 years, his strength no longer equal to the task and while his people offered him a home among them, in order that his successor might not be embarrassed or in any way be trammelled by his presence, he showed his good sense to the end and moved to a nearby town. He still lives in Staunton, the object of veneration and love of a grateful people. He saw the church grow from a membership of 173 to 460. The present membership is 632. He saw the contributions to benevolences grow in the 38 years from $120 to $1,579. The contributions for the year ending March 31, 1921, were $10,718. He saw the Sunday School grow from a membership of 50 to 630. The enrollment of this school last year was 1,016. During the 38 years of Dr. Hamilton's pastorate all evangelistic meetings were conducted by himself or a visiting pastor. No outside evangelist was ever invited. After Dr. Hamilton's retirement, Rev. J. E. Purcell, a man of great ability as an organizer and a born leader of men, was called. With the splendid foundation laid through the years, the church went forward in every department of its work, increasing rapidly in membership and gifts. Among other things accomplished, the finest church house in the open country, probably anywhere in the world, was erected. It has all modern conveniences and equipment. Visitors who pass from Staunton to Lexington, Va., are impressed by its stately proportions as it stands on a hill to the left, 18 miles from each town.

Mr. Purcell was succeeded by Rev. J. L. Fairly, who combines in an admirable way the good points of the two predecessors. The church is deeply spiritual, with an exceedingly earnest and efficient set of officers.

The religion of these 17 rural churches is of the old-fashioned type, free from modern "isms"; the ministers and people have a simple faith in the Bible as the Word of God, in the deity of Christ and in the saving power of His Gospel. Each of the churches is in a way a community center, with a Christian Endeavor society which has a series of socials during the year for the young people, and most of these churches have from one to five missions in the surrounding territory, at which a Sunday School is conducted by the members of the central church. One of the secrets of the growth of these churches is that they all have a resident pastor; a man of culture and education, who, together with his family, identifies himself with them coming from New Providence Church, which was organized in 1746 and during its 175 years has had only eight pastors. One of those who moved his membership from the mother church to become a charter member of the new organization was Cyrus H. McCormick, the inventor of the reaper. The old shop in which the first reaper was made can be seen now as the day he left it. The forge, and anvil, and the other equipment are still in the shop where Cyrus H. McCormick locked himself and his blacksmith in and worked at his invention until it was practical. When Mr. McCormick left Virginia for the West he took with him a perfected invention, which was destined to be probably the most potent factor in the making of Chicago a great metropolis and the West the granary of the world. The old McCormick home is still owned by a member of the family and it is typical of the antebellum farm house in the valley of Virginia.

New Providence Church

The growth of Mt. Carmel Church was gradual, until in 1876 we find it with 173 members. At this time it called a young minister, a farm raised man, fond of the country, by the name of Rev. A. H. Hamilton. He was in love with country folks and country

The Blacksmith shop in which the first McCormick reaper was made the life of the community, entering with an understanding and sympathy into the sorrows and joys, the failures and success of his people.

THE CALL OF THE MINISTRY

By Rev. J. L. Griggs

The call of God to this specific line of Christian service is of no small importance. God has been choosing men to do His work throughout all the ages past and has always had a ready response from a sufficient number, until more recent years, to fill very creditably the various fields of service, but for a decade or more there has gone out from the various church courts urgent appeals to the young manhood urging men to enlist in this high calling.

These appeals were not sounded as idle tales, because the different denominations have long since recognized the falling off in the number of ministers. At first the scarcity was only of minor importance, but each succeeding year brought no relief when the number in active service were checked and compared to the previous records.

There have been numerous ideas advanced as to this condition without any noted improvement of importance. Some have charged that worldly inducements offered in the different avocations of life were responsible; some have said there is a lack of fervent prayer, which cannot be denied, while others have attached the blame on something else. None have even intimated the cause as I understand, in part, responsible for this condition.

Everything has been inclined towards "Modern Ideas," the churches included, and the religion of Jesus Christ has been, is, and ever will be, unchangeable. God's plan-way of redemption can never be modernized to fit the flimsy ways of man. God has given us His holy Word to guide us in the way of all truth, and I fear in many cases we have allowed ourselves to be overcome by the drift of the "Modern Idea."

Now you need not for one time accuse me of being "Old-Timey" in my ways of thinking or in my practices, because I am not, but rather I try to be the very best informed it is possible for me to be in my humble manner; but I am very forcibly convinced that we, the church, are directly responsible for the dearth of the ministry to a very large extent. To make myself more specific, the requirements which must be met by those aspiring to the ministry are a restraint in many cases. I quote here from a letter (received recently by a young man who had felt a divine call to the ministry), from a member of the board on ministerial preparation with regards to the educational qualifications required in his denomination, viz: "I do not think the committee would even entertain an application without the applicant take at least a four year course, one of which should be taken in college and the other three in seminary."

Surely there is no one who is not in favor of an educated ministry from the standpoint of our advanced age, but can we afford to deny anyone the privilege of doing the thing God has called him to do? Of course, some will say there are provisions made whereby one may secure the necessary preparation, which is in part true, but there are other conditions to be reckoned with surrounding each case.

This question is perfectly clear to me in my feeble way of thinking, and I am forced here to register my opinion. I believe when God calls anyone to some specific task that He expects "That One" and no one else to answer. And what if he should answer, but the governing powers of the Church, of which he was a member, should say Nay? God have mercy on those responsible for restraining those who would "Work for the Master in His vineyard."

Yes, but some have said our physicians are and must be educated as well as our lawyers, etc. This is true, but we are to beware as to how we measure the qualifications for the ministry by these worldly avocations. Here is a great danger of allowing the worldly idea to get into our "Inner Courts" and cause us to lose sight of the fact that God has spoken. "When God speaks let all the world give silence."

Noah of old was called of God as a minister and for a hundred and twenty years he labored and preached to those about him. God spoke to Samuel in his boyhood and commissioned him as a prophet and he was a prophet. God called Ezekiel but he endeavored to excuse himself, but to no avail. God thrust him into His work. Jonah was called of God and tried to evade duty, but God brought him to his task through affliction and he was a great deliverer for the Nehevites. Daniel and others of the Old Testament were called of God and filled their places with credit.

In the New Testament we have different ones who were called by Christ in person during His earthly ministry. The disciples who walked with Christ in the flesh were of the common order of folk. All were common laborers but when they were called they gave heed and were used of God in the establishing of His kingdom in the world. Paul, they say, was of the higher class of people, the Pharisees. Yes, he was one of the educated men of his day and felt before his conversion that he was authority on all religious and legal questions which required knowledge, but we find him in writing to the Corinthians after he had seen Christ and entered the ministry, saying, "For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God, for it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness."

Now I contend that God maintains one of the greatest and most efficient universities in the world in all ages—that school of experience through which all men must pass. The nature of the individual passing through this school makes the finished product of the school. Not all are apt by any means, but those who study nature in every form, who resign to God in all things and who come out fully impressed that God is the author of all wisdom, power and courage, must agree with James 1:5, "If any man lack wisdom let him ask of God who giveth to all most liberally and upbraideth not."

Here is what we need. Let the different denominations remove the things which retard the progress of the ministry as to requirements or make more ample provisions for the preparing of those who are willing to enlist. In other words, if we believe we can take a man and by giving him a complete education make an ambassador for Christ of him, then let us give that preparation free of charge for his willingness to give his time in preparation. The ministry will continue to go wanting unless something is done and that right early. What shall we do?

Kollock, S. C.

A SEXTETTE OF CHINA FACTS

By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.

In view of the unsettled theological conditions in China our people are due the following information:

1. As regards our own missionaries. We have no reason to doubt their soundness in the faith. The only one whose orthodoxy had been called in question went voluntarily before East Hanover Presbytery last spring and that conservative body, after a thorough examination, gave him a rising and unanimous vote of confidence.

2. As regards the union institutions in China with which we are connected. Order of our Committee both the teachings and the teachers of these institutions are being thoroughly investigated by special committees of our own two China Missions whose reports will be laid by the Executive Committee before the next General Assembly. What has already reached us of the findings of these special committees is reassuring.

3. As to the China National Christian Council. Our Missions have no connection with this Council and there is no apparent prospect of such connection. The North Kiangsu Mission has voted against connection by a large majority, while the Mid-China Mission has decided to wait and watch developments for a year before taking action. It has been the uniform practice of our Executive Committee, in all such local matters, to be guided, not by individual missionary opinions, however loudly voiced, but by the official majority decisions of the Missions.

4. As regards the China Continuation Committee. This Committee has never exercised any authority over our China Missions, nor has the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions or any of its Secretaries ever desired or attempted in the slightest degree to subject our Missions either directly or indirectly to the control of the C. C. C. or any other outside organization in China, New York, or elsewhere.

5. As regards the China Bible Union. Our Executive Committee has declared by unanimous vote that "this Committee is in hearty sympathy with the purpose of the China Bible Union and wishes it God-speed."

6. As regards the proposed Chinese Biblical Encyclopedia. What has been the uniform attitude of the Executive Committee toward this undertaking is given in the following action unanimously taken at its November meeting, 1921:

"With reference to the Chinese Bible Encyclopedia, edited by Dr. Henry M. Woods, we recommend (1) that the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions send on to the Committee appointed by the two China Missions as rapidly as received any funds definitely designated for this cause; (2) that we inform Dr. Woods and his Committee that we are absolutely unable to appropriate any money for this purpose other than above, as we do not regard the General Assembly's directions to undertake this work as expeditiously as possible to mean that we are to borrow the money in addition to our already heavy debt nor do we regard the Assembly's directions to mean that we are to make a special appeal for this cause when we have not even the funds to carry on the work already undertaken; (3) that we direct the Committee in charge of this encyclopedia not to make any expense or obligation above the amounts already in hand, as we shall be unable to recognize any debts not authorized by the Executive Committee; (4) that we desire to go on record as thoroughly appreciating the purpose and labor of Dr. Woods in trying to overcome the insidious onslaughts on the Word of God and are truly anxious to see everything possible done wisely to accomplish this purpose."

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE STUDY OF THE CATECHISMS OF THE CHURCH

By Rev. E. P. Davis, D.D.

A class is graduated in the Catechisms every year by the Sunday School of the Second Church in Greenville, S. C., and a Bible is presented to every one who will memorize the Shorter Catechism, and a Testament to each one who will recite perfectly the Introduction to the Shorter Catechism. For the year closing December 31, 1922, Misses Thelma Ashmore, Sudie Ware and Rachel Thomas received Bibles, and Misses Ruth Brady and Elizabeth Shaw, Testaments. The graduating exercises were opened with prayer, singing and the reading of appropriate Scriptures. In his book on "The Westminster Assembly," A. F. Mitchell, D.D., LL.D., says on pages 418, 419, that "with Baxter, he thinks the Shorter Catechism is, in some respects, the most remarkable of the symbolical books, the matured fruit of all their consultations, and debates, the quintessence of that system of truth in which they desired to train English speaking youth, and faithful training in which, I believe, has done more to keep alive on both sides of the Atlantic reverence for the old theology than all other human instrumentalities whatever."

In his able address on "The Catechisms" before the Two Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the Westminster Assembly, in Charlotte, in 1897, Dr. G. B. Strickler said that, "Our Catechisms not only state the truth in regard to every essential doctrine of God's Word, but state it in the form of a complete system, every doctrine in its right place and in its right relations to other doctrines. This is true of no other catechism." "Memorial of Westminster Assembly," page 133.

Greenville, S. C.

"WHAT IS THE KINGDOM OF GOD?"

I ask for a bit of your space to recommend to your readers a little book written by one of the faculty of Columbia Theological Seminary, Dr. R. C. Reed, Professor of Church History in that institution and the present moderator of our General Assembly. The book is entitled: "What is the Kingdom of God?" It is composed of eight lectures delivered at Belhaven College, Jackson, Miss., in the summer of 1921, to the Christian Workers' Training School. It is of especial interest to those who desire to know what premillennialism is and what the reply is to it. The distinguished author states with rare clearness what the premillennial answer is to the question, "What is the Kingdom of God?" and then with calm reasoning gives what in his view is the answer of Prophecy, of the New Testament, of History, of our Standards, and of our Hymn Book.

The question which Dr. Reed discusses has become a very conspicuous one in our day. No person can consider himself well informed about what is going on in religious circles who does not know what is being said on the subject of the Kingdom and our Lord's second coming. We commend the book to every minister not only but we think it ought to have a wide circulation among the laity and might well be used as a text-book in Bible classes and conference studies.

Dr. Reed's style is always interesting. And his scholarship is unquestioned. Moreover, while he leaves no doubt of his own position, he writes as a Christian gentleman more intent on reaching the truth than on upsetting an opponent. It was my privilege to hear some of these lectures and to enjoy an initial acquaintanceship with the modest and kindly spirit of the author. This spirit is also evident in the pages of his book.

John M. Vander Meulen,
President Louisville Theological Seminary,
Louisville, Ky.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Montevallo, Ala.—On Sunday afternoon, January 7th, the ladies of the Presbyterian Church organized a Woman's Auxiliary and elected the following officers: President, Miss Georgie Leeper; vice-president, Mrs. J. H. Chalmers; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. F. W. Rogan.

Mrs. W. B. Reynolds, Mrs. N. C. Bridges, and Miss Mary E. McMillan were asked to submit a constitution and by-laws at the next meeting.

It was decided to adopt the circle plan, and the president was instructed to select chairman for three circles.

The pastor, Rev. P. H. Carmichael, feels that the Auxiliary will be a great help to him in the work of the church.

Stuart Robinson School (Miss Isabelle Johnson, in Missionary Survey)—I have been at Stuart Robinson School since the 11th of May, but I will never forget my introduction to the town of Blackey, where Stuart Robinson School is located.

I arrived at 9:00 o'clock at night, 10 o'clock Eastern time, and because of a misunderstanding about the time of my arrival no one met me. There were a number of people at the train, but it was dark, and not knowing which way to turn, of course I looked to see whom I could ask to show me the way. Four little girls were standing near me, so I turned to them and said, "Can you show me the way to Stuart Robinson School?" "Yes, ma'am," and before I could say more one picked up my suitcase and another my handbag and started off to take me to Mr. Tadlock's cottage. Wasn't that sweet of them? They were so friendly that I felt at home right away and wondered if Mr. Friend o' Man lived in Blackey.

Blackey is a small town in Letcher County, Kentucky, in the midst of the Cumberland mountains. As one steps from the train and sees the mountains rising high on either side one wonders if Ebal and Gerizim looked like that to the people at Shechem, and if these people would listen attentively to, and forget as quickly, the reading of the Law, as they did.

The town itself stretches along the Kentucky River for about half a mile, with the L. & N. railroad running directly through the one real street. High up on the mountain side, back of the depot is Stuart Robinson—one school building, two little cottages, and the ruins of the burned dormitory now occupied by Dr. A. D. Tadlock's chickens. My! but how noises do come up this hillside. We feel sure the noise is just outside the cottage, but it isn't. It is in town. What is that? You cannot find Blackey on the map. Well, it should be. It has six coal mining camps in walking distance, and then, Stuart Robinson School is here, with an enrollment, last year, of 400, and a faculty numbering 10. Rev. and Mrs. E. V. Tadlock are in charge. We expect to grow when we get our new buildings, and have four lower grades in the old building and all the Grammar and High School grades in the new.

Have you heard of the new plant the Assembly's Committee is giving us? The old buildings were frame, and last January the dormitory burned and most of the boarding students had to return to their homes without finishing the school term.

Now we are going to have a brick school building—two brick dormitories, one for girls and one for boys, capable of accommodating 50 students each, two in a room. There will also be a refectory building. The school building is nearly completed, and the dormitories have been started. They will have electric lights and running water too. The new plant is near the Rockhouse Coal Camp, about a mile from Blackey.

Will it not be nice when we have all these things? But what can we do with empty buildings? Of course we will have to have furniture. It will cost $50.00 to furnish a dormitory room, and there are 50. Suppose all your life you and the rest of the family had slept in one room and then you had come to school and been given a neat, pretty room, with two single beds, and you were to have one all to yourself and only one other to occupy the room with you. Wouldn't you just love it? Of course, you would.

Wouldn't you like to furnish a room, or maybe half a room, or help with the dining room or kitchen equipment? Of course your circle will want to help.

I wish you could meet some of the children up here. There are all kinds—good, bad and indifferent, bright and dull—human nature is the same everywhere, but customs and opportunities are not. That is why we send our money and workers to the mountains and build churches and schools there. If you could meet some of the girls and boys here who have made use, or are making use, of these opportunities, you would be glad you had a part in giving them their chance in life.

We have a good Senior Christian Endeavor here, meeting all the year, and a live Junior Christian Endeavor. Most of the Seniors are members of my Teacher Training class which meets Thursday nights. The Juniors meet Tuesday afternoons with Miss Schow and sew on doll clothes to be sent to Africa. Miss Schow's Intermediate Sunday School class of boys is organized into a Whittle Club, meeting Tuesday nights. They whittle dolls' furniture, which is also to go to Africa.

I was in a home not long ago just at meal time. The grandmother, and the mother, holding the baby, each had chairs, but the five children stood up. There were no knives or forks, they ate with their fingers. The women were barefooted. The baby had been sick about a week and the grandmother was giving it string beans and coffee to give it strength. The families nearby seemed to be in better circumstances but the husbands worked in the mines and probably received the same pay. The pay was managed differently. It is cases like these we want to help.

"How beautiful upon the mountains, are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace." Blackey, Ky.

IRONING.

I have ironed my husband's shirts, oh, very smoothly;
I wish I could as easily erase
His frowning, worried look of inattention—
I can not read the new lines in his face.

Mary lets me iron her crepes and laces;
I wonder if she thinks that mother's hands
Would tear the fine-meshed fabric of her love-dreams?
I wish she knew that mother understands.

Jack likes the finest nainsook, trim, athletic,
Next his skin. Most finical of men,
How can he bear to waste his time with Gladys?
I wish he were a little boy again.

Oh, well! My task today is just the ironing,
But while I iron, I can not help but pray,
"Dear Lord, please let me smooth my loved ones' pathways;
Please do not let them drift too far away!"
—May Williams Ward, in Good Housekeeping.

DR. DABNEY ON THE MILLENNIAL

By Rev. W. T. Riviere

A recent article in one of the Church papers by my honored friend, Dr. J. P. Robertson, formerly of Galveston, now of Shelbyville, anent our Confession and the Millennial controversy, might make the following extract of interest. It is from pages 93 and 101 of the Memorial Volume of the Westminster Assembly, containing the addresses delivered before the General Assembly at Charlotte in 1897, published by our Committee of Publication by order of the Assembly. Dr. Robert L. Dabney, D.D., then pastor at Victoria, Tex., had been for many years professor in Union Theological Seminary, Virginia; in his published lectures on Theology Dr. Dabney strongly attacks the Premillennarian theory. But in his lecture before the Charlotte Assembly, Dr. Dabney interprets the Confession of Faith as follows:

"The second marked trait of the Confession, its doctrinal moderation, presents the other reason for its permanent adaptation. Divines so learned and so able as those of the Westminster Assembly knew well that the body of doctrine which they taught is a system of truth. That is to say, the several parts must stand together, in order that the body may have stability. They are logically inter-dependent. The system is an arch, whose strength is perfect as long as each stone holds its proper place; but the removal of any one lessens all the rest and endangers the fall of the whole. Or, to use another similitude, our creed is like an organized living body in this, that the presence and healthy action of each part is essential to the safety of the body.

"The Assembly, therefore, was too wise to attempt the conciliating of opposites by the surrender of any essential member of the system of revealed truth. They present us the Pauline, Augustinian, or Calvinistic creed in its integrity. But, on the other hand, they avoid every excess, and every extreme statement. They refrained, with a wise moderation, from committing the Church of God on either side of those 'isms' which agitated and perplexed the professors of the Reformed theology. Let the following instances be considered."

In the pages which follow, Dr. Dabney illustrates the moderation of the Westminster Assembly with reference to the doctrine of the trinity and philosophical attempts at explanation; to the supra and sublapsarian theories of the decree; to the doctrine of providence and theories of its method; to the fall and the controversies as to the nature of the moral revolution; to the contemporaneous debate about mediate and immediate imputation; to redemption, satisfaction, reconciliation, and assurance of salvation. Then he adds:

"Last, we note the caution of the Assembly concerning the millennium. They were well aware of the movement of the early Millennarians, and of the persistence of their romantic and exciting speculations among several sects. Our divines find in the Scriptures the clearest assertions of Christ's second advent, and so they teach it most positively. They find Paul describing with equal clearness one resurrection of the saved and lost just before this glorious second advent and general judgment. So they refuse to sanction a premillennial advent. But what is the nature, and what the duration, of that millennial glory predicted in the Apocalypse? Here the Assembly will not dogmatize, because these unfulfilled prophecies are obscure to our feeble minds. It is too modest to dictate a belief amidst so many different opinions.

"Such are some of the instances of the prudent moderation of our Standards. Because of this trait our Confession is worthy to be the creed of all gospel churches. And this quality shows that it is a work which cannot be revised and amended without a breach in its organic integrity. . . ."

Cleburne, Tex.

"MUSIC AT MONTREAT"

By Rev. Henry H. Sweets, D.D.

There are wonderful natural attractions at Montreat. The stately trees, the beautifully tinted flowers, the ever-changing clouds and sky, the murmur of the babbling brooks, the placid lake with its wonderful reflections, and above all the unchanging hills and inspiring mountains.

Possibly, however, the greatest charm is in the personality, rich in culture, and spiritual vision of those who gather at this beautiful spot. Lured by these attractions there came into this community several years ago two musicians of marvelous ability and of attractive personality. To these gifted friends, Mr. and Mrs. Crosby Adams, is due the praise for one of the most delightful evenings ever experienced at Montreat. During the period assigned to the Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief the "Aeolian Choir," recruited from Asheville and vicinity, rendered a program of choice gems of music in masterly style, which thrilled the large audience assembled.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams' service as teachers has made their names familiar throughout the country. Twenty-one years of this musical activity was spent in Chicago, where years ago they started classes for teachers. In addition to a lifetime of teaching Mr. Adams is a well-known choral conductor and Mrs. Adams' name as a composer of music is almost a household word. As educators they have touched many lives. Expressions of satisfaction may be heard from men and women from more than a score of states who testify to the eminently practical and artistic value of their work. We are grateful to have such artists and refined and useful citizens in our Southland.

Louisville, Ky.

"SWING LOW, SWEET CHARIOT"

Bob Taylor, in his published lectures, makes this beautiful and touching allusion to a former slave of his family: "Not long ago I buried one of the last of our old family darkies. He had been a preacher for fifty years. When I was a child he often led me, together with my brother, to his meetings. He had never learned the art of reading. But many a time have I seen him rise in the pulpit and say: 'My congergashun, you'll find my text somewhar 'twixt de lids of de Bible, whar it reads, 'You must be born agan and agan.' And then he would warm up with his theme until he plunged far beyond the ratiocination of man. During the last twenty years of his life he made sight drafts upon my treasury and my wardrobe, just as thousands of old-time darkies still make drafts upon their former masters in the South, and they are always honored. When I was a candidate Uncle Rufus was a Democrat. When my brother was a candidate, he was a Republican. When we were candidates against each other, he was neutral. The old man came one evening and sat with me in the twilight under the trees, and our minds wandered back together to the happy days of the past, when he was a slave and I was a barefooted boy. He reviewed many a ghost story he used to tell us in the firelight around the hearthstone of his cabin in the happy long ago. And there was many a joke and jest and merry peal of laughter. But as the shadows thickened around us the old darkey grew serious. He spoke tenderly of my father and mother, and his old wife, and all the old folks who had gone before. With tearful eyes he left me. But he paused as he departed, and leaned upon his staff and said:

"'You may not see me again. I has had two visions of the chariot of de Lord descending from heaven to bear me away. The next time it comes, your Uncle Rufus is a-gwyne home.' And as he hobbled away in the darkness, I thought I heard a song:

"'Swing low, sweet chariot, coming for to carry me home.
Swing low, sweet chariot, coming for to carry me home.'

"I never saw him again. Before a week had passed, the chariot swung low, the faithful old servant stepped in, and was caught up into heaven.

"As I looked upon him for the last time, with the dew of life's evening condensing on his brow and the shadows of death falling around him, his simple words of faith in God were more beautiful to me than the most impassioned eloquence that ever fell from the lips of the brilliant Ingersoll."—Alabama Baptist.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(UNDER AUSPICES SYNOD'S COMMITTEE OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C.

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

From one news report last week we jump to four this week. This is the way we like to see them come in! We are glad that the young people are becoming more and more interested in the department, for it is our desire to make the department of real service, not only in promoting the Sunday School, but in helping the young people to get more real satisfaction from their work for the Master. We will be glad if by next week the number of news items has again increased fourfold.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

JANUARY 28, 1923

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS

Lesson: Luke 16. Printed Text: Luke 16:19-31

GOLDEN TEXT—"Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy."—1 Tim. 6:17.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

19 There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day:
20 And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores.

21 And desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover the dogs came and licked his sores.

22 And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried;

23 And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

24 And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue for I am tormented in this flame.

25 But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivest thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

26 And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you cannot; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence.

27 Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

28 For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment.

29 Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

30 And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent.

31 And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 21. Who is the Redeemer of God's elect?

A. The only Redeemer of God's elect is the Lord Jesus Christ, who, being the eternal Son of God, became man, and so was, and continueth to be, God and man, in two distinct natures, and one person, for ever.

In Latin, Dives signifies "a rich man," and though in this parable the rich man's name is not given, Dives is often applied to him. This story gives a vivid picture of what is often the worldly condition of sinner and saint, the wicked and the righteous upon earth. It also partially lifts the veil that hides the future and presents a graphic representation of the condition of these classes in the life after physical death. The truths revealed on this subject are all the more impressive because imparted by Jesus, the Son of God, who certainly knows what becomes of man when he departs from this world. We will contemplate Dives and Lazarus' Earthly Condition; Their Life After Departure From Earth; Dives' Appeal to Abraham for Himself; His Request as to His Brethren.

I. Dives and Lazarus' Earthly Condition

The rich man was prosperous in his worldly affairs. He had ample means and expended freely upon himself. He was clothed in purple and fine linen and fared sumptuously every day. He is not described as doing anything for the welfare of his fellows or the glory of God. Neither is he represented as being an openly bad man, doing atrocious bad deeds. Lazarus was carried to his gate "full of sores and desiring to be fed by crumbs from his table." He does not seem to have done anything actually for his relief, neither is it said that he objected to servants satisfying the beggar's hunger with fragments of food. He was too much occupied with his own affairs and pleasures to give him any personal attention. He was evidently an unbeliever. He did not believe in Hell and made no preparation for Heaven. He was simply a selfish worldly, attending to his own business and occupied with the interests of this life, ignored God and the eternal life to come. He has now many imitators. Lazarus was poor, in want, a beggar, diseased, having few friends, covered with sores and having more sympathy from dogs, "who licked his sores," than from men.

We want to invite the young people of South Carolina, to which State the Standard also goes, to send us news about their activities. We will be glad for them to tell us what they have done and what they are planning to do. We want the young people of both Synods to share with their friends the good things they are doing, whether done near the Virginia line or near the Georgia line. If you have a plan that will help some other society, tell us about it. Who will start for South Carolina?

Probably the biggest item of general interest to our young people this week is the announcement that Mr. Garth's handbook for young people's work is off the press.

But he had what distinguished him from Dives, and assured his eternal future and salvation. He had faith in God, in Christ, in Gospel offers and a future life which would more than compensate for all the disciplinary trials of the present world.

II. Their Life After Departure from Earth

Dives died at last and no doubt had a much more imposing funeral and burial than the beggar. Lazarus' departure was marked by few and his worn body filled a pauper's grave. Dives did not know there was a hell, nor where it was. His impenitent and sentient Godless soul was borne by angels to the world of woe. "In Hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torment." There does not seem to be much interval between his leaving the body and reaching the place of agony. The beggar also died and it mattered little if his funeral was obscure and his burial humble. "He was carried by the angels to Abraham's bosom." Though ignorant of its locality, he had angelic guidance and help. He not only reached heaven, where he was comforted, but was assigned there an honorable place, even the bosom of "the father of the faithful."

III. Dives' Appeal to Abraham for Himself

He prefers a small petition. He does not ask deliverance, but a mitigation, a brief relief. He says, "Send Lazarus that he may dip his finger in water and cool my tongue, for I am tormented in this flame." Replying, Abraham says, "Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime had good things and Lazarus evil things; now he is comforted and thou art tormented." He intimates, "You both are receiving according to your choice and God's decree." He furthermore affirms, the thing asked is impossible, for "there is a great gulf fixed" between Hell and Heaven, and there can be no passing from one to the other.

IV. Dives' Request Respecting his Brethren

He says, "I have five brethren." "Send Lazarus to my father's house to warn them lest they come to this place of torment." Abraham replies, "They have Moses and the prophets, let them hear them." Dives asserts, "Nay, Father Abraham, but if one went unto them from the dead they will repent." Abraham answers, "If they hear not Moses and the prophets neither will they be persuaded through one rose from the dead." What men need to assure them of a future life of reward or punishment is not additional evidence, but a willingness to attend to and to act upon the proofs furnished by the inspired Scriptures. Nothing believed by man is better sustained by convincing evidence than the Bible.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

VALUE OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

M., Jan. 29—Testimony: Rom. 10:9-12.
T., Jan. 30—Training: 1 Tim. 4:7-16.
W., Jan. 31—Service: Rom. 16:1-5.
T., Feb. 1—Fellowship: Col. 3:16.
F., Feb. 2—Responsibility: Rom. 14:7-9, 12.
S., Feb. 3—Social Life: John 2:1-11.

Sun., Feb. 4—Topic: What Is the Chief Value of a Christian Endeavor Society? 1 Tim. 6:11-16. (Christian Endeavor Day. Decision Day.)

How has Christian Endeavor helped you?
How does Christian Endeavor train young people?
Of what value is Christian Endeavor to the Church?

(Since the topic for this week was a discussion of the value of Christian Endeavor, we thought it would be more practical to have it discussed by some member of a C. E. Society. Mr. J. M. Carr, Burgaw, N. C., a member of the C. E. Training Class, Davidson College, consent to handle it for us this week, and we are sure that the young people of the Church will find his discussion a very practical and helpful one.—J. G. G.)

Among many good things in the book may be mentioned the information given on the work of the General Assembly and the Synod, plans for organizing a mission study class or a Christian Endeavor Society, Bible drills, Christian Endeavor Junior and Senior topics, Sunday School topics, and hints for speakers. The book will be distributed to pastors, Sunday School superintendents, leaders of young people's societies, and to a selected list of young people. Free copies may be obtained by our societies by writing to Mr. C. T. Carr, Superintendent of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, Mooresville, N. C. Mr. Garth, we thank you!

What is Christian Endeavor? What is its purpose? What are its ideals and its principles? Why was it started? Why have so many people given the best part of their lives to its work? These are simple questions, but very important. Christian Endeavor was started for the purpose of training young people in a religious way. It established high purposes and ideals, things of value not only to the individual and the society, but also to the Church and to the entire world. In Christian Endeavor the Church has one of its most valuable assets. It has trained and is still training young people to take their places in church life when the older people have given it up.

1. Christian Endeavor Is Valuable to the Individual

It sets up noble standards of conduct. "What would Jesus do?" we must ask ourselves. Then if we strive to follow Him we will have a solution for all our problems. It offers opportunity for training in expression and thereby establishes character. A person is what he thinks and does. He cannot be a real, earnest Christian worker unless he thinks noble things and does noble deeds. Christian Endeavor calls forth unexpected talents and reveals hidden abilities. We awake to the opportunities around us and show what there is in us. The principles of Christian Endeavor challenge us to a Christian life. If we confess Christ, obey Christ, enjoy fellowship with Christ, and serve Christ, we are living a life that cannot fail. Christian Endeavor helps us in learning to pray. Many Endeavorers can make talks and lead meetings, but they are babes when they attempt to pray. We must go to Christ and ask Him to teach us.

2. Christian Endeavor Is Valuable to the Society Membership As a Whole

Young people must learn to do team work. They must learn to co-operate and to go fearlessly into a task that shall accomplish something definite toward a common cause. No one can do everything. Some one, indeed many, must take the second place. Aristarchus, who was Paul's companion through many of his hardships, is an excellent example of this. He had the second place, but he was content to serve Christ even if it was in the second place. Envy hinders success in all lines of effort. The desire to be foremost puts everything behind. We must learn to give and take. Our own way may not be the best. Christian Endeavor teaches a person to yield to the other fellow. The greatest help toward society work is a willing spirit that asks, "What can I do?" We should never say, "Somebody ought to do something," but we should always be on the alert, seeking something for ourselves to do.

3. Christian Endeavor Is Valuable to the Church

Why have a Christian Endeavor Society if it is to be of no value to the church? Its value to the church is great if the Sunday School committee, the Pastor's Aid committee, and several others are properly functioning. We can help the church by properly fitting ourselves for teaching in the Sunday School. The church of tomorrow is builded out of the children of today, so it is all important that the children be cared for. We can help the church by doing carefully whatever we are asked to do, whether in the society or in church work. The church needs willing workers. We can help by our gifts. Usually we give too little, less than we would give to a secular cause. We should remember our pledge to help support the different causes of the church, and let us make that support liberal. The Tenth Legion is a great help in this. We can help the church by constant and ardent prayer. We must remember that the Lord did not appear to Elijah in the terrific wind, nor in the fire, nor in the earthquake, but it was in the still small voice that He spoke to him. Let us pray earnestly for our church and for strength to do our part by it.

4. Christian Endeavor Is Valuable to the World

The Church is God's ambassador in the world, so in the Church there must be no useless body. Christian Endeavor is of value to the world in aiding the Church to carry God's Word to the ends of the earth. Aside from working in a body in doing community service, the Endeavorers should work individually in spreading the teachings of Christ.

The chief value of Christian Endeavor, then, is that it promotes a finer individual Christian life and helps the Church in spreading the Gospel story throughout the world.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

Beginning with the coming Sunday the Christian Endeavorers of the Carolinas, in common with Endeavorers all around the world, will celebrate "Christian Endeavor Week." During this week, the second of February, comes the forty-second anniversary of this great young people's movement. From one society in Portland, Me., 42 years ago, the Christian Endeavor movement has grown rapidly and now numbers 80,000 society with 4,000,000 members all around the world. "The sun never sets on Christian Endeavor." The Presbyterian Church leads all others of our country in the number of societies. The number has been steadily increasing in our Southern Church since the Assembly approved the society in the Orlando Assembly in 1916.

The secret of the success of the work is found in its four principles: Confession of Christ, Service for Christ, Loyalty to Christ's Church, and Fellowship with Christ's people. These principles have commended the society to our own Church and to others as well. Each society is absolutely under the control of the church in which it exists, and yet the young people have Christian fellowship with young people of other churches as well.

We hope the Endeavorers will write us of how they observe the birthday of their world-wide organization.

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

A new but live Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society has been organized in the First Presbyterian Church of Fayetteville, N. C., with Miss Kate Sutton as superintendent. That this will be a society of fine usefulness is shown by the fact that even before the organization was completed the members visited the county home, carrying candy, fruits, and nuts; sent each member of the home a Christmas card; visited the children's ward in the hospital; collected several hundred Christmas cards and sent them to their Korean missionary; and sent in two subscriptions to the C. E. World and 16 to the Dixie Endeavorer.

The Church by the Side of the Road Christian Endeavor Society, in Greensboro, N. C., recently completed a large mission study class. The class met 45 minutes before the regular C. E. meeting and served a light supper and then went right into the study class.

The Westminster Presbyterian Senior Endeavorers of Greensboro are conducting a mission study class, the class being held after the evening church service. They are this week holding cottage prayer meetings preparatory to special services to begin in the church the last Sunday of January.

The Second Presbyterian Senior C. E. Society of Concord, N. C., is having its weekly meetings, held on Monday night, at the homes of the different members during the winter months. This saves having to heat the church and brings the homes into closer touch with the young people's work. This society started a C. E. Expert Class last week.

Who's next?

NORTH CAROLINA STATE C. E. GOALS

The State C. E. goals of North Carolina are shown herewith. The State Secretary advises us that the officers are expecting to reach them all.

1. New Societies, 100; Senior 25, Intermediate 35, Junior 25, Alumni 15.
2. Efficiency, 100; Societies attaining 150 points or more, beginning over again June 1, 1922.
3. Societies reporting Monthly Service Program on time 12 months in the year, 100.
4. Four Square Societies, 100.
5. C. E. World subscriptions, 250.
6. Dixie Endeavorer subscriptions, 1,000.
7. Leadership and Training classes, 300.
8. Comrades of Quiet Hour, 250.
9. Members of Tenth Legion, 250.
10. Life Work Recruits, 50.
11. Honor Societies, 200.
12. Honor Churches, 75.
13. Honor Unions, 10.

Church News

WEEKLY NEWS NOTES FROM BARIUM

The flu is still with us. There was quite a falling off in the number of new cases for a few days, which led us to feel that the disease was wearing out, but there have been eight new cases the past two days. We hope, however, that the worst is past. The four pneumonia patients are all getting along nicely now. About ten patients will leave the infirmary today.

Mr. Levi Huggins, of Belmont, spent several days here with his grandson, Johnnie Britton, who has been very ill with influenza and pneumonia for several weeks. Mr. Huggins went home Sunday.

Vera Godwin who came to nurse her sister, Thelma, who had influenza, left yesterday for Goldsboro. Vera is in training at Spicer Sanatorium. Thelma went to her cottage yesterday.

Mrs. Weaver, the sewing room matron, who has been at Long's Sanatorium with influenza, is getting along nicely and will be able to return to her work soon.

Mr. Johnston expects to begin moving his family over from Lincolnton next week. This is good news to us Barium folks.

Mr. Lackey and his force killed eight or ten hogs last week. Sausage, livermush, spare ribs, and back bone are tasting good to the orphanage family.

THE DAVIDSON CAMPAIGN

With the Davidson campaign pursuing the tenor of its way at the rate of eight or ten thousand dollars a week, it is believed by the leaders thereof that the four hundred thousand dollar mark will be passed early in February.

A number of the churches in which the campaign has been delayed are now functioning and making their reports to headquarters. Some of the churches which have recently exceeded their quotas are the First Church, of Wilmington, with a quota of ten thousand dollars; Gastonia First, with a quota of five thousand dollars; Lincolnton, where the quota was twenty-five hundred dollars; Albemarle and Seversville.

Another one of the memorial lecture halls has been spoken for during the past week, which makes the sixth so far taken during the present campaign. It is hoped by the administrative officers of Davidson that the new Chambers building can be begun during the present year. The lecture rooms planned for the new building, of which there are to be thirty, constitute Davidson's greatest need at present, and one that must be supplied at the earliest moment.

Mr. L. Richardson, of Greensboro, president of the Davidson Alumni Association, has recently issued a letter to the Davidson alumni calling their attention to the fact that institutions can generally count upon their alumni taking care of at least 50 per cent of such enterprises as this one, and that now is the time for every loyal alumnus to rally to the completion of the fund for rebuilding Chambers Hall.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Lebanon, Salem Churches, R. F. D. No. 3, Winnsboro, S. C.—On Saturday morning, January 13th, the manse was totally destroyed by fire. Rev. C. G. Gunn and his family sustained great loss, which was only half covered by insurance. They are especially thankful that Mr. Gunn's mother, who has been ill, has suffered no ill effects from the shock. The loss has been particularly great to the church, as the insurance did not nearly cover it. Friends have shown great consideration to those who were rendered homeless.

Charleston, Second Church—The Torrey meetings at this church are in full swing, and much interest is manifested. From the Evening Post we clip the following:

"The Second Presbyterian Church was so crowded last night with the congregation that attended to hear Dr. R. A. Torrey, the noted evangelist, that several hundred persons could not get in. The capacity of the standing room was even taxed to a point where no more people could be accommodated, over 1,500 persons in all being present."

Senaca—Rev. I. E. Wallace writes: "I took up the work of superintendent of Sunday School, Young People's and Home Mission work for Piedmont Presbytery on December 1st, and am meeting with an encouraging response from the churches and brethren. Since taking up the work I have held a meeting at Piedmont of eight days, which resulted in the addition of eight members to the church and a revival of interest in the work, have organized two new Sunday Schools and one Christian Endeavor society, and conducted two teacher training classes of five days each."

Mr. Wallace's address is changed from Senaca to 550 Calhoun St., Anderson, S. C.

Resolutions passed by the congregation of the Dillon Presbyterian Church—Universal regret is felt by every member of the Dillon Presbyterian Church that Rev. W. B. S. Chandler has decided to move to Monroe, N. C.

When Mr. Chandler came to us five years ago, we had a small inferior wooden church building with about 100 members, due largely to his splendid financial ability, we now have a church property costing more than $47,000 and one of the most elegant and convenient churches in the Pee Dee section of South Carolina. We now have 210 members with prospects of continued growth.

As a man, Mr. Chandler has endeared himself to a large part of our population, being as popular with all denominations as with the Presbyterians.

He was a tactful worker among our young people, from the smallest school child to the fully developed young man and young woman.

He was fortunate to select a wife who can match him in all good works. For team work, Mr. and Mrs. Chandler's superiors would be hard to find.

Their five children will be remembered for their quiet good manners and cheerful influences.

As a forceful preacher of pure and simple religion, Mr. Chandler will be long remembered.

His short well-prepared sermons were delivered with an earnestness which convinced his hearers that in his daily life he lived what he preached.

We hope in his new home he can duplicate, in a larger field, the wonderful work he has done in Dillon.

The latch strings to our hearts, homes and church, will ever hang on the outside to the Chandlers, and we trust in the future they will all be frequent visitors here.

NORTH CAROLINA

Home Mission Work of the Synod—The Executive Committee of Synodical Home Missions of the Synod of North Carolina held its regular quarterly meeting at the First Church, Charlotte, Tuesday, January 16th.

The meeting was well attended and close attention to the business was given for three hours.

Those attending were, ruling elders: W. H. Belk, J. H. Kennedy; ministers: William Black, A. J. Crane, Letcher Smith, J. G. Garth, J. J. Murray, with the chairman, A. W. Crawford. Dr. J. H. Henderlite of the General Committee sat as corresponding member.

Report for the quarter showed 53 ordained ministers and 10 Sunday School and Young People workers in the field supported wholly or in part by the Synod's Committee.

Those workers reported organization of four churches and four Sunday Schools in the quarter. Churches: At Moore's School House in Concord Presbytery; in Dr. Scott's field, Fairview; in Mr. McInnis' field in Fayetteville Presbytery; at Tryon in Mr. Yandell's field in Concord Presbytery; and at Turner's School House in connection with Mr. McIlwaine's work in Mecklenburg Presbytery; Sunday School at Mayo and Mildred in connection with the work from Tarboro, Eagle Springs in Mr. Wilson's work and Steward's School House in Mr. Lassiter's work in Fayetteville Presbytery.

They reported 355 persons received into the Presbyterian Church in their work in the quarter, and 121 by letter. Of those received on profession 140 were in the work of the men in the local fields and 215 in the work of the general evangelists.

The work of the general evangelists was much cut down by the absence of Dr. Black undergoing an operation for his eyes in St. Louis; but, notwithstanding this providence of God, he held three meetings in the quarter, at Grassy Creek, Vineland, and Burgaw, in which there were 62 additions to the churches upon profession of faith. Dr. Black is back in the work with his usual vigor with promise from the doctors of at least improved eyesight.

Mr. Gill was greatly blessed of God in meetings at Edgemont, Old Fort, Bluff, Atkinson and Kenansville, at which places 127 persons were received upon profession, 68 of them at the Old Bluff Church, at Wade.

The committee was fortunate also in securing Dr. J. M. Clark for one of its meetings, at Waughtown, which vitally affected every part of the work there and in which 34 were added to the membership, 26 of them upon profession.

Though we have only two general evangelists in the field where formerly there were four, and hence the immediate results do not show quite so large in figures, yet the steady expansion of the work is shown in the fact that for the quarter 63 workers were engaged as compared with 50 for the corresponding quarter of last year, and 212 regular preaching places were maintained as compared with 192 last year. This indicates also the wide extent of the work in every Presbytery over the State.

The advance is also shown in the expenditure for the quarter of $15,405.52, including churches and manse, as compared with $11,760.60 for corresponding quarter last year.

Receipts for the first quarter after Synod are always meagre, this quarter $6,280.05, not half amount expended. The balance we get from the bank, over $8,000, on interest. We wonder how much of this lies idle in church treasurers' hands and how much more of it could be paid regularly on subscriptions instead of being held up for months.

But, it is good to see the good things, the receipts were an advance on receipts for same quarter last year, $6,181.06. There has not been a quarter in five years, since the advance movement began, which did not show an advance in receipts over the corresponding quarter of the previous year. The record was not broken, though the margin was small.

The committee made further advance in the work by additional appropriations for new work and for church erection, upon urgent application and after careful consideration, and for the work of the affiliated S. S. and Y. P. Committee of the Synod, on application of Mr. Garth.

Thus in accordance with the action of Synod, endorsing the whole program of advance we are moving forward in our task. The receipts now before the Spring Presbyteries and the close of the ecclesiastical year will show the support of the movement. Will the churches stand by us? We believe it.

Tenth Avenue, Charlotte—Rev. J. T. McCutchan, assistant to Dr. McGeachy, of the Second Church, preached in the absence of Rev. J. F. Ligon, who was attending the funeral of his mother.

Charlotte, First Church—In the absence of Dr. Johnson, who is conducting meetings in Tarboro, Rev. A. W. Crawford, Synodical superintendent of Home Missions, preached at the morning service. He forcibly presented the facts that demand the instant support of the Church in the Home Mission field.

At the evening service, Rev. C. H. Rowan, pastor of Paw Creek and Cooke's Memorial Churches, preached.

Charlotte, Westminster Church—Last Friday evening 64 of our men sat down together at supper. They decided that there was no reason against, and every reason in favor of a men's club for Westminster Church. So they proceeded to organize themselves into such a club. The officers elected were: F. W. Frederickson, president; W. V. Groome, vice-president; Nelson P. Lyles, secretary; J. P. McMillan, treasurer; and as an advisory committee, H. C. Alexander, P. W. Matheson, W. A. Reynolds, A. C. Sheldon, L. P. Poythress, and Wm. B. McIlwaine, Jr. The date for the meetings of this organization is set as the Second Friday of each month. At the February meeting a constitution and by-laws will be adopted.

The dominant thoughts in the meeting Friday were Friendship among Ourselves and Service for God. That is what we are after. Men, join us.

On the evening of January 24, 25, 26, our church will have the very great privilege of a series of lectures by Rev. Wm. Ray Dobyns, D.D., of Birmingham, Ala. Dr. Dobyns comes on the invitation of our session to speak on "Stewardship." He will bring to us a great message. Save for us these dates.

Last Sunday when the session called for those who would co-operate with the Regular Bible Readers during the year there were more than 130 signatures. And many of our most earnest supporters were absent from the service. Think of what this movement will mean in our congregation.

Charlotte—Revival services conducted by three prominent ministers and religious workers began at Caldwell Memorial Church Sunday morning and will continue through February 2d.

There will be two services each day, a Bible study conference in the afternoon and preaching services at night.

The preaching is being done by Rev. Dr. Charles H. Pratt, pastor of Trinity Presbyterian Church, Montgomery, Ala., while Dr. William R. Dobyns, pastor of the South Highlands Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, Ala. is conducting the Bible study conference.

Rev. F. H. Wardlaw, of Guthriesville, S. C., has charge of the music.

Dr. Pratt for many years was a missionary to Korea and for several years was a leader and popular platform lecturer in the Men's Mission Forward Movement, and the Layman's Missionary Conventions.

For the last two years he has been pastor of Trinity Presbyterian Church at Montgomery.

Dr. Dobyns before going to Birmingham, was pastor of the First Church at St. Joseph, Mo. For many years he has been a prominent and popular Bible teacher and active worker in the affairs of the Southern Presbyterian Assembly. He is well known in Charlotte.

Mr. Wardlaw, a gospel singer of wide reputation, has preached in Charlotte and is widely known among local Presbyterians.

Rev. G. F. Bell, pastor of the church, opened the revival Sunday, the visiting ministers being unable to reach here until Monday.

Charlotte, First Church—This church feeling the great loss to the Church of Mr. Tufts' death, drew up resolutions as follows, and sent to Mrs. Tufts:

"In behalf of the session of the First Presbyterian Church, Charlotte, N. C., we wish to express to you our sincere appreciation of the noble, self-sacrificing work of your sainted husband, and our deep sympathy in the bereavement which has come into your life at his home-going.

"We feel that no man has done a finer work for his Master than has this consecrated servant of the Lord, and that the whole Church, as well as the people of that mountain section where he labored so faithfully and lovingly, is greatly indebted to him. Eternity alone will reveal the full influence of his life.

"We want you to know that our hearts go out to you in this dark hour of separation. We are sure that God has been very gracious to you, and you have already found that the deeper the valley, the sweeter is the voice of His Spirit; the more lowering the clouds, the brighter is the shining of His face; and the darker the night, the gentler is the touch of His arm underneath you. These scenes bring heaven very near, and make the blessed Lord's coming with His saints very real.

"May the Lord keep before your eyes, not earth's bereavement, but heaven's joys into which your beloved husband has entered. Long has he been traveling homeward. Sometimes the journey has been under burning suns; sometimes through bleak and sunless days; sometimes the day's end has found him tired because of the difficulties of the way; but now the weary pilgrim has taken up the pegs of his shifting tent for the last time, and is at home with his Lord where there will be no more folding of his tent for tomorrow's journey.

"F. H. Andrews, W. M. Wilcox, Jr., Committee from the Session."

Marshville—Rev. C. E. White, pastor. Rev. Wm. Black, general evangelist for the Synod, closed a series of meetings here, Sunday night. This was the first meeting the evangelist has held since his return from the hospital in St. Louis, where he had an operation on one of his eyes. The meeting was held on short notice and there could not be preparation for it and besides, there were a number of cases of grippe in the congregation. Notwithstanding these handicaps, the attendance was good, and some of the visible results were 23 professions, 12 of these for the Presbyterian Church, 4 promised to establish family worship and about 75 to read Bible and pray daily. Dr. Black goes next to The Church in the Pines, at Laurel Hill.

Henderson—The pastor of the Henderson Presbyterian Church, Rev. C. K. Taffe, has returned after a month's leave of absence spent at the bedside of his sister who is ill at her home in Kentucky. Since his return and with the beginning of the New Year, the church work has taken on new life in all branches of its activities.

To this church have recently been given two handsome silver offering plates by Mrs. I. B. Gary, and family in memory of husband and father, the late Mr. I. B. Gary, who for many years was an elder in this church.

Mr. Edward Hines and Mr. James R. Rankin were each presented with beautiful silver water pitchers engraved with his name, the Sunday School and date of service, by the Sunday School, in appreciation of their many years of faithful work; Mr. Hines having been Sunday School superintendent for 30 years, and Mr. Rankin secretary for 21 years.

Dunlap—(We are giving below a list of the children of Bethany Sunday School who have recited the catechism; isn't this a fine showing?—Ed.)

First is a list of those who have recited the child's catechism:

- Teddy Houpe.
- William Ingram.
- Paschal Morrison.
- Milton Hall Morrison.
- Billie Adams.
- James Hall Adams.
- Virgil Houpe.
- John Crawford.
- Frank Crawford.
- Hugh Crawford.
- John Dunlap.
- Taylor Ingram.
- Glenn Norris.
- Mabel Norris.
- Pearl Norris.
- Mary Norris.
- Elizabeth Summers.
- Nettie Lambert.
- Kenneth Watts.

Below is the names of those who recited the shorter catechism:

- George Crawford.
- Mae Blackwelder.

These children all belong to Bethany Sunday School. The catechism is certainly taught in our Sunday School. I do not believe there is a child in our Sabbath School ten years old who has not recited the child's catechism and now studying the shorter catechism Mrs. T. L. Adams.

Reidsville First, Rev. M. S. Huske, pastor—Special services in the First Presbyterian Church of Reidsville began on November 30th, under the leadership of Rev. J. Earnest Thacker, D.D., of Norfolk, and his song leader, Mr. Thos. B. Roddy, of Chattanooga, Tenn. Prior to this for ten days, cottage prayer meetings and special services at the church had been conducted by the pastor and his helpers. Throughout the entire time that Dr. Thacker was here there was intense interest on the part of all those who heard him. His sermons were clear, convincing and soul moving. The music, too, was inspiring. The other congregations joined in and helped us and in spite of the holiday season and unfavorable weather conditions, the results were very gratifying indeed. There were 105 professions of faith; 16 agreed to send for their church letters and 596 decided to reconsecrate their lives to the service of the Master. There will be additions to practically all the churches in town as a result of this meeting.

While the meeting was in progress Mrs. Thacker came and delivered two magnificent addresses. Her address to the ladies on Sunday afternoon on "The Human Touch," in which she gave her own spiritual experience and steps that lead up to the dedication, unreservedly, of her talents to the Master, was one of the finest features of the whole service. Her lecture, too, on "Christian Science and God's Creation," was convincing and logical and has had a splendid effect already. We pray God's richest blessings upon Dr. Thacker and his party as they go on in this work. Correspondent.

Sharon—The second annual Chataqua event held under the auspices of Sharon Church and at Sharon Community Hall—one of the unique social events of the rural life of this section will be held beginning Sunday, January 28th.

Announcement of the program has been made by Rev. C. H. Little, pastor of the church, and members of the congregational committee that are aiding him in the arrangement of the program.

The Chataqua season will open Sunday night, January 28th, with an address by Rev. R. C. Grier, president of Erskine College, Due West, S. C.

The day will be known as "Erskine College Day" at the Chataqua. Addresses will be made by several others interested in Erskine College, which has many alumni in Charlotte and Vicinity. "Life's Preparations" will be Dr. Grier's subject. At 7:30 o'clock of the 28th Julian S. Miller, editor of The News, will deliver an address on the subject of "Education and the Making of a Citizen."

In honor of the day all the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Churches of the county will omit their usual services in order that their members may attend the exercises at Sharon in honor of the day set apart for Erskine College, which is supported by A. R. P. Churches.

The remainder of the program for the week of the Chataqua will be as follows:

Monday night—"In the Footsteps of Paul," an address by Mrs. Lindsay Patterson, of Winston-Salem.

Tuesday night—"My Summer in Europe," by Rev. Dr. A. A. McGeachy.

Wednesday night—Demonstration by Boy Scouts of America, assisted by Charlotte scout band.

Thursday night—"Good Citizenship," Dr. W. A. Lambeth, Gastonia.

Friday night—Don Richardson and pupils of the Richardson School of Music in Concert.

Sunday, February 4—"What I saw in Central Africa," Dr. Egbert Smith, Nashville, Tenn.

The Mecklenburg County Sunday School Association had a big time during its three days session the past week, January 14-16. In the first place it was big in attendance; in the second place it was big in speakers; in the last place it was big in enthusiasm generated and in possibilities for future work.

The Attendance: The sessions were held in the commodious First Baptist Church with a good attendance. Superintendents from practically every Sunday School in the city and from many county Sunday Schools attended. Numbers of teachers also took advantage of the fine instruction given as well as big audiences of the general public.

The Speakers: Mr. D. W. Sims, general superintendent North Carolina Sunday School Association, Miss Daisy Magee, children's division superintendent North Carolina S. S. Association and Dr. Marion Lawrence, consulting general secretary International S. S. Association, Chicago, were the speakers. Mr. W. E. Price, president for the past two years of the county association presided, and local pastors conducted the devotionals. Mr. Sims and Miss Magee are practical Sunday School workers who have practical messages for teachers. They are both interesting speakers and were heard at every session of the convention with interest. Dr. Lawrence is one of the outstanding figures in Sunday School work the world over, and it was a rare privilege to have him bring his messages on this work out of his years of experience and observation and travel. He made four addresses during the convention, all of them practical and at the same time all of them inspirational. His manner is so kindly, his voice and delivery so splendid and his knowledge and experience so vast that he arrested and held the attention of his hearers from first to last.

The Results of a convention like this cannot be estimated. Should the practical suggestions and the inspiration be carried by some member attending, back to his school and applied, in spite of handicaps, it might result in making of that school a power for good. New officers were elected for the association as follows: J. V. Sutton, president; Charles Caldwell, J. H. Bostic, E. R. Bucher and Francis Clarkon, vice-presidents; D. A. Hargett, secretary; Miss Julia Alexander, treasurer.

Other officers elected were:

Division superintendents: Elementary, Miss Maude McKinnon; young people, J. E. Steere; adult, Morris Trbttter; administrative, N. C. White.

Township presidents: Lemley, M. M. Blythe, Huntersville; Dewees, J. B. Reading, Cornelius; Huntersville, Mr. Alexander; Long Creek, Mrs. R. S. Burwell; Mallard Creek, H. Y. Galloway, Derita; Paw Creek, J. K. Beatty, Thrift; Berry Hill, R. C. Freeman, Charlotte, Route 1, Steel Creek, R. B. Johnston; Sharon, Parks Caldwell, R. F. D. Sharon Road; Morning Star, Dr. T. N. Reid, Matthews; Clear Creek, J. R. McEwen, Matthews, R. F. D.; Crab Orchard, G. C. Taylor, R. F. D. Hickory Grove; Charlotte, A. L. Byrd, Charlotte.

Wilson—The new Presbyterian Sunday School building just completed is located on Jackson street near Nash and adjoining the Presbyterian Church. The handsome new structure is made of brick and marble. It is from outward appearance dignified but unostentatious, not having any elaborate or fancy decorations. The inside is effectively finished in plain white with mahogany woodwork. The structure, which measures 50 by 80 feet, is a two-story building. It was erected at a cost of $20,000. (Continued on page 10)

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

Educational

Some Interesting Events at Stillman Institute—A piano for the Girls' department! Yes, we have just received it. A generous gift from a lady of the First Presbyterian Church of Pensacola, Fla. We cannot thank her enough, both boys and girls joining in our appreciation. Now the boys can have exclusive use of their own piano. The accompanist for the chapel exercises is one of the boys and plays well. He is from Cuba, and was sent here by Miss Houston, one of our missionaries in Cuba. I wish that every one of you that reads this could come out some morning to our chapel exercises and hear the 100 students sing, both Gospel Hymns and their own Spirituelle songs. They sing well and are always willing to respond.

A Young Woman's Christian Association for the girls! We have an organization and will soon be connected with the national association. The officers of the Y. W. C. A. of the University of Alabama became very much interested after I asked them to help us and offered to come at any time. Eight of these young women came out the Sunday evening before the holidays, gave talks on the different phases of the organization and then came two nights later and installed the officers. They brought the triangle with them and went through the ceremony in regular order, having each of the incoming officers light their candles from the president's, which had been lighted from that of one of the visiting girls. A beautiful example of Christian inter-racial co-operation. Later we had a visit from Miss Ethel Caution, of the national organization, from New York. She stressed the spiritual side of the work and plead for daily Bible study and prayer. She also gave some time to games with the girls.

A Christmas tree! There were nearly 30 students who stayed here through the week of Christmas holidays, most of them because they were too far away to go home. Mrs. Moore made an appeal to Circle No. 4 of the First Presbyterian Church of Tuscaloosa and they generously contributed money for gifts and decorations for a Christmas tree. This made them very happy and several said that they had the best Christmas they ever had. Two families of the Salem Presbyterian Church (colored) also entertained them during the holidays.

In addition to these three events we have had several gifts of money, papers and magazines and games for the girls' reading room; every one of which is greatly appreciated and adds to the progress and development of the students.

Many problems arise in the conduct of this work and we ask your prayers and continued co-operation.

Mrs. J. G. Snedecor, Dean of the Girls' Dept.

Davidson—Announcement is made of the appearance here of Dr. Grenfell, the noted missionary to Labrador, for a lecture on February 7th. A second visit is promised from Professor Lomax, of Texas, whose lectures and recitals from the Cow-boy songs of the great West have given him a wide and enviable reputation in this line of work. He was here a year or more ago and greatly interested and pleased his audience.

Rev. George R. Gillespie, of the Armstrong Memorial Church, Gastonia, will deliver the address before the Y. M. C. A. at its weekly meeting, Sunday afternoon. Last Sunday, a layman, Mr. Thomas Glasgow, of Charlotte, was heard by the association in an address that was pronounced one of the best of the year. His general theme was making life worth-while by having a purpose and making a choice that is worth-while.

Rev. Dr. Richards' Sunday morning sermon, as always a strong and thought-provoking discourse, concerned itself with showing that the Christian religion is a "reasonable" one in its appeal to the human understanding. The night sermon was from Num. 11:34: "There they buried the people that lusted (for flesh, turning away from the heaven-sent manna)." The leading thoughts were: first, that it is possible to start toward Canaan and become so absorbed in diverting pursuit or desire as to perish, and second, it seems to be true that God (usually), allows one to have that on which he sets his heart and will have, be the price what it may—be this grace and life eternal, or be it greed and death eternal.

The Charles D. Larus Fellowship at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.—The seminary takes pleasure in announcing to the Church that Mrs. Charles D. Larus, of Richmond, has made a gift to the institution of $10,000 for the establishment of the Charles D. Larus Fellowship of Graduate Study as a memorial of her husband.

Mr. Larus was for many years an active and influential elder in the Third Presbyterian Church of Richmond. He rendered specially valuable service to the seminary at a critical juncture in its history by his efficient work as treasurer of the building committee which planned and erected the original group of eight buildings on the campus. The work of that committee in providing these substantial and serviceable buildings has been an important factor in the extraordinary growth of the institution since its removal to Richmond. The number of students has about doubled since that time, being now 129. Mr. Larus was one of those who believed in the forward policy of the trustees and who rendered great help in carrying it out. He was, moreover, greatly beloved by the seminary community as well as by all who knew him. It is, therefore, fitting from every point of view that such a memorial of him should be established in connection with the seminary. Trustees, professors and students alike are glad to have his name associated forever with the work of the institution.

This is the second fellowship of graduate study to be founded in the seminary. A third is to be established in the near future, the funds for it having been subscribed by friends in the church at Salem, Va. When the seminary announced a few years ago that it hoped in time to have a fellowship of graduate study at the service of each department of the curriculum, it seemed to some a too sanguine view, but the hope is being realized.

The Moses D. Hoge Fellowship, founded 20 years ago, has been one of the most fruitful foundations ever established in the Presbyterian Church. It has afforded opportunities for advanced graduate study to 20 of the choicest men in our ministry, and has thus given to the Church a succession of men of special attainments who have been a power in the pastorate and in the evangelistic work, in the professorships of colleges and theological seminaries, and in the home and foreign mission fields, men who are both scholars and leaders.

News of the Week

In the Ruhr region the French have taken possession of the mines, and already 100,000 troops are on the ground. They are proceeding cautiously.

The economic mission has decided to content itself for the time being with the requisitioning of coal already mined and brought to the surface, diverting to France the cars already loaded and destined for the interior of Germany, and postponing for the present the idea of requisitioning the mines themselves.

Obregon, President of Mexico, issued an executive order directing the expulsion from Mexico within three days of Monsignor Ernesto Fillipi, the apostolic delegate in Mexico, for participating in religious ceremonies contrary to federal law. The order was interpreted in many quarters as President Obregon's first important move against alleged Catholic aggressiveness.

Bituminous coal in adequate quantity and at fair prices can always be supplied to the American public, the coal commission was told by owners of the principal non-union mines in West Virginia territory, if only the commission can "arrange to prevent, forever, the union from calling a nation-wide strike."

The Senate has adopted the resolution of Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, for an appropriation of $10,000,000 to purchase nitrate of soda and calcium arsenate for sale by the government at cost to cotton planters.

The American and British debt commissions are unable to bring into accord their views as to the terms of the settlement of Great Britain's war debt to the United States. Further negotiations were suspended until Thursday with the British in the meantime seeking additional instructions from their government.

Development of an adequate advance fleet base on Cahu, Hawaiian Island, is given first priority among shore projects for the navy in the report of the board headed by Rear Admiral Rodman.

Mobilization of the forces of American organized labor for a modification of the Volsted act, which would provide for the manufacture and sale of beer and light wine, was arranged for at a conference between Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor and the general executive board of the Brewery Workers International Union at that organization's headquarters.

W. N. Everett, of Richmond County, has been appointed Secretary of State for North Carolina.

A Road Bond Bill for $15,000,000 has been introduced by R. A. Doughton.

Dr. J. W. Peacock, former Thomasville physician who killed Chief of Police Taylor, of Thomasville, N. C., and who was judged insane and committed to the insane department of the State penitentiary, has turned up in Florida, having made his escape some time. It is reported that papers have been made out for his return.

A crowd of several thousand South Carolina men, women and children from every section of the state, braved the chilling wind that swept the plaza of the historic South Carolina capital, January 16th, to see Thomas Gordon McLeod, of Lee County, assume the reins as chief executive of the Palmetto State.

Elon College, N. C., the denominational college in the South of the Christian Church, suffered a fire loss of between $150,000 and $160,000, January 18th, when the main administration building of the institution was completely destroyed and one of the dormitories damaged.

Consideration of the Trinity College proposal for a North Carolina medical school is at an end. If one is established the State will do so independently, and it will be under the university.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 9)

Wilkins and Wilkins, local contractors, had charge of the construction.

The building, according to Rev. E. L. Flanagan, pastor of the Wilson Presbyterian Church, has been badly needed for some time, the rapid growth of the Sunday School and other church organizations demanding room for their development. The building was especially planned to take care of these church organizations, and every foot of space in it has been carefully utilized.

The main entrance is on Jackson street. Through the entrance one enters the lobby from which two stairways on either side lead to the second floor. Under each stairway is a rest room, one for the ladies and one for the men. The house is of the most modern type, built on the Akron plan according to which plan all class rooms open either into the auditorium or the balcony of the auditorium. There are on the first floor the auditorium, a roomy kitchen, and seven class rooms. There are nine class rooms on the second floor. The auditorium will be equipped with removable seats and all needed furnishings. Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Clark gave the Sunday School all the equipment. The furnishings throughout will be of tobacco brown color and will blend beautifully with the interior decorations.

The kitchen will be of immeasurable convenience to the ladies for use in preparing refreshments for socials, suppers or banquets. There is also a parlor which will be used for the ladies circle meetings and other activities. The men's Bible class has a well-equipped room. The Philathea class, composed of young women, is taking an especial pride and interest in its room. Each young woman will purchase her own chair, and this room will be fitted out with every convenience. The woman's Bible class will have a splendidly appointed room.

And there is a big, sunshiny room which will be occupied by the primary department. The equipment for this room will consist of a long, low table about which the little folks will gather for their story hour. There will be cunning little chairs to go with the table. A small organ will be used for leading the children in their songs and marches. There will also be a big blackboard and on the wall one or two good pictures.

In this building the congregation sees fulfilled a splendid dream. There will be opportunity for private class meetings, for increased Sunday School attendance, for social activities in the Sunday School, and for a bigger, better Sunday School.

The members of the building committee, are Dr. L. J. Herring, chairman, Messrs. A. N. Daniel and S. E. Leonard. The finance committee is composed of Mr. Geo. Barfoot, chairman, Dr. L. J. Smith, Messrs. G. E. Walston, R. C. Jones and B. B. Plyler. The efforts of these men have contributed in great measure to the successful construction of the beautiful new building.

TENNESSEE

Nashville, First Church—Fifty new members were welcomed by Dr. Vance at the communion on January 14th. The prayer meetings are being largely attended, due in part to special work by the men's and women's Bible class. More than 300 were present last Wednesday night.

The Martha O'Bryan Settlement House, repaired and enlarged at a cost $20,000 is to be reopened January 18th. It is one of the most commodious and well-equipped buildings for such work to be found anywhere. The resident workers are Miss MacDonald and deaconess Maude Abercrombie, both specially trained for settlement house work and deeply religious. Martha O'Bryan House is doing a splendid work in one of the neediest sections of the city, and on the governing board are representatives from nearly all the Presbyterian Churches in Nashville. The president of the board is Mrs. W. H. Richardson, wife of Dr. Richardson, pastor of the Hermitage Church.

VIRGINIA

Bedford and Peaks—On Sunday night, December 24th, the Sunday School of the Liberty (Bedford) Church, rendered a program of Christmas exercises that had been arranged by a committee appointed by the superintendent. This program consisted of songs and recitations which were in keeping with the day, and with the season which reminds us of the day when our Lord came into this world as a little child. An offering was made for our Orphans' home at Lynchburg, amounting to $81.

At the close of the exercise the Liberty and Peaks congregation presented the pastor, J. H. Grey, with a new five passenger Ford car, which was appreciated very much, and all the more because of the interest our people took in it and because of the loving spirit in which it was done.

PERSONAL

We are glad to learn that Rev. C. H. Little, pastor of Sharon, Amity and Carmel Churches, who was reported to have accepted a call to Oklahoma, has decided to remain in his present charges. Mr. Little has been at these churches for nearly 10 years, and in that time he has done fine work. His leaving would mean a distinct loss to Presbytery.

Rev. J. F. Ligon, pastor of Tenth Avenue Church, Charlotte, will have the sympathy of his friends in the death of his mother, Mrs. R. C. Ligon, which occurred Friday January 19th at Iva, S. C. Mrs. Ligon was the widow of the late Rev. R. C. Ligon, who a decade ago, was one of the constructive Christian workers in the Synod of South Carolina, and who for 20 years was pastor of Good Hope Church, near Anderson, S. C.

CHILDREN

TEACHER GOING ON VISIT

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy eight years old and I go to the Presbyterian Sunday School. My two little brothers, Lem and Vann Paul go too. We have built a nice Sunday School room to our church. Mr. M. G. Ray is our pastor and Mr. McGirt is our superintendent. Mrs. Redin Bryan is my teacher. She is going to Florida in February to visit her son, but I hope she will not stay long, because we all love her dearly. I am in the third grade at school. I have been on the honor roll every month.

Your friend,

Robert Neal Watson.

Jonesboro, N. C.

THINKS SHE'S A JOKE

Dear Standard:

I have wanted to write you for almost two years, but my mother told me to wait until I was six years old. I will be six the 30th of this month, and I can not wait any longer. I have a little baby sister, her name is Mary Louise, she must think I am a joke, for she laughs at me so much. I have a big sister in college, I miss her very much. I enjoy the letters and stories in the Standard so much that I want them read as soon as a new paper comes. I would like to play with all the little children who write letters. I hope you will print my letter.

Your little friend,

Sue Moring Clements.

North Wilkesboro, N. C.

SECOND CLASS AT SUNDAY SCHOOL

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl eight years old. I go to school every day. My teacher is Miss Edith Muldrow. I like her fine. I am in the second grade. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. I am in the second class at Sunday School.

Your little friend,

Louise Huey.

A PERFECT RECORD

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl nine and one half years old. I am in the second class at Sunday School, and have had a perfect record for last year. I am in the fourth grade at school. Our school closed on December 15, 1922, and won't open until January 2, 1923. I haven't missed a grade since I started to school. Our pastor is Rev. E. E. Gillespie and we like him fine. I have recited the child's catechism and am working on the Westminster shorter catechism now. Hope my letter will not reach the wastebasket since I want to surprise my father and mother. I am writing this letter and my father and mother don't know anything about what I am doing. I had a merry Christmas and hope every one else did too. Santa Claus brought me a wool crepe dress and some fruits, nuts, candy, and lots of things. I hope Santa didn't forget any one. We haven't had the flu in our family this year and hope it will be better everywhere. We take the Standard and I sure do enjoy the letters and stories, and hope we will take it next year too.

Your unknown friend,

Josephine Kendrick Huey.

York, S. C.

SYLVIA SHUT-IN AND THE FAIRY GODMOTHER GAME

Sylvia Lee was a cheery brave girl who always made the best of things; but to be very, very sick and have no mother—well, just try it once! Sylvia's father was a professor in a school of mines whose big buildings dotted the hillsides of the little Western town. But while he was as kind and loving as fathers should be, of course he had to be away earning money to pay expenses and doctor bills.

That left only Aunt Martha, and though she was perfect as an aunt, still she wasn't a truly-for-sure mother. Grandmother had come when Sylvia was so very ill, but she had to return to the city and Uncle Jack, and sometimes there was Aunt Marian. It was of her pretty young Aunt Marian that Sylvia was thinking that windy gray day when it should have been spring and was only winter's postscript. Aunt Martha was baking, and though the house was full of appetizing odors, Sylvia felt extra lonely, and extra anxious to use the poor helpless limbs.

"It wasn't any fun to have diphtheria, it's worse not to be able to run and play for weeks and weeks," the little girl was thinking as she wheeled her chair to the big window so she could watch for postie and Dr. Glen. Dr. Glen lived across the street, and he and Sylvia were staunch comrades. Always he found time to run across for a cheery word with his curly-haired "Sylvia Shut-in."

"If only Aunt Marian could come and stay with me," sighed Sylvia. "But she's traveling, making money with her violin, and playing in concerts. I'd love to hear her play this minute!" She turned wistful eyes to the beautiful picture on the wall, girlish Aunt Marian and her beloved violin. When she looked out again, there was postie waving something at her. Sylvia couldn't run to the door as she longed to, and it seemed days before stout Aunt Martha came bringing a picture post-card from Aunt Marian, a letter from grandmother, and oh, joy! a strange package.

It was hard not to open the package immediately, but Sylvia felt it would be impolite to keep grandmother and Aunt Marian waiting, since the package was addressed in dainty but unfamiliar printing. Aunt Marian was in the South, and her concert tour would not be over till April, when she might be home for a while. Meanwhile Sylvia could make a collection of the picture post-cards she would send. Grandmother's letter was the queerest. Sylvia couldn't believe her eyes, so she had Aunt Martha read it aloud. It made an astonishing announcement.

It said that patient little girls who had to be shut in needed more than a busy father, an absent grandmother, and a devoted Aunt Martha, more than any number of relatives, even cousins by the dozens. She even needed somebody besides a jolly young doctor. In fact, Sylvia needed nothing less than—a fairy godmother! Or course fairy godmothers might not be seen, but they could be heard from, and were never too busy to play a game with as brave a shut-in as grandmother's Sylvia Sunshine.

"You are to write Fairy Godmother every week, and report exactly how you are, what you do to keep happy, and tell her secrets of any sort. Of course I want to hear from you, too," stated grandmother, "but letters meant for Her are to have a special sign. Please put 'F. G.' in a circle in the lower left corner. I have made arrangements with a fairy messenger who will deliver them to F. G. herself. You are likely to hear from her and to receive odd greetings any time."

Sylvia's pale cheeks were faintly pink, her eyes sparkled. "O Aunt Martha! It's true! Why, it makes the biggest difference already just to have the fairy godmother game to play. Won't Dr. Glen be glad?"

Then she remembered the mysterious package and though she was afraid to hope, sure enough it was from Fairy Godmother, and her tiny bluebird card was enclosed. Of all wonderful things, if it wasn't a record made by Aunt Marian to be played on Sylvia's little victrola! Keeping her eager eyes on Aunt Marian's picture, listening to the sweet rich tones of her violin, Sylvia felt happy enough to fly, forgetting she could hardly walk. Then Dr. Glen came in to share the exciting news and hear the beautiful record.

"Well, with fairy godmothers in the game, I see where I lose my pet patient," he said, pretending to be sorry, though Sylvia knew from the twinkle in his eyes how glad he was. "You'll be running races and playing hopscotch any day now, with such magic doses as this. Well, give F. G. my regards, but tell her we can't have her whisking you off to Fairyland yet."

"How are the Unluckiers today?" asked Sylvia anxiously. It was some distance from the city, so the young doctor had fitted up an old house for a hospital, and though Sylvia had never seen the poor patients, she knew them all through the doctor. There was the old man whose eyes must be bandaged so long; the dear old paralyzed lady; little Jerry with his leg in a plaster cast, and merry Carrie with the crooked spine; and all the others who were shut-ins like Sylvia, but who had nobody but Dr. Glen to care about them. Sylvia called them "the Unluckiers." She had made simple valentines for each of these patients, and often they sent greetings to her. Merry Carrie, a genius with scissors and crayons, had sent an adorable set of paper dolls, while Jerry insisted on Sylvia's having the top he whittled from a spool. So it is quite natural that Sylvia should introduce these unseen friends to Fairy Godmother in her very first letter.

Dr. Glen says holidays are the worst," she wrote, "so at Easter-time I shall send over my victrola and all my records. But if I could only earn enough money to fill my bank I would buy about a peck of flowers and send them to the Unluckiers!"

Not long after, there came a brief message from Fairy Godmother on the daintiest of butterfly notepaper. "Look out for the magic onions," was the mysterious warning. "You must guess the charms that will break the enchantment and set free lovely living things to cheer the Unluckiers." There was a check, too, with which the mystified Sylvia was to buy "bedrooms" in which the enchanted onions might sleep till the spell was broken.

How the doctor and Aunt Martha laughed when the expressman delivered what looked like a bushel of onions! Sylvia clapped her hands after one peep, for she had guessed. So father went shopping purposely to buy many little bowls, several of glass, some brown, others green with earthen pots besides. Then Sylvia had a happy hour in the back porch, where from boxes of clean sand and rich soil she filled the bowls and tucked the ugly onions away to sleep off the spell. "They must be in a dark cool place for a while," decided Aunt Martha wisely. In the long days of waiting for some magic sign, Sylvia had to use two of the charms. "One is water, of course," she guessed directly. And as the days passed and she felt sure those flapping things meant to sleep a hundred years like the sleeping beauty, she had to use the charm of patience which "must have her perfect work."

"Upstairs they come!" announced Aunt Martha one memorable day, and Sylvia was beside herself with joy when the little bowls were placed in the sunny bay-window of her room, so she could keep an eye on the green shoots that tiptoed and unfolded under the powerful charm of the sunshine. The very first thing on awakening, and the very last thing at bedtime, Sylvia said softly the magic lines Fairy Godmother had suggested:

"Little sleepers, wake, I pray,
And make a gladsome Easter Day."

"Magic onions, wake and be
The lovely things we long to see."

"It makes me think of that story about the ugly duckling that changed into a beautiful swan," Sylvia wrote F. G. "I can hardly wait till the green buds change into fairy bells and cups and stars, for I think they will."

Dr. Glen was quite as absorbed in the outcome as was Sylvia, and then there came a breathless time just before Easter, when he entered to find Sylvia in her enchanted garden. Pink and white hyacinth bells filled the room with fragrance; white and gold narcissus stars gleamed near vivid cups of red tulips; while a stately lily stood like a queen among maids-in-waiting.

"The lily is for the Church," Sylvia explained joyfully, "and every Unluckier is to have a flower. And what do you think?" she bubbled over with happiness, "I walked all the way to the kitchen this morning! And best of all, she's coming on Easter,—Fairy Godmother herself!"

"No!" Dr. Glen was nearly overcome with all the good news. Then he strutted a bit. "I'm rather proud, myself," he confided. "Your Fairy Godmother sent me word she would be very happy to be permitted to visit our Unluckiers, Easter Day."

Sylvia's eyes widened. "Why—then"—she began slowly—"we'll all see her!" An ecstatic wriggle, "Oh, how can I wait?"

Just after the enchanted onions started on their happy mission on Easter Sunday a car drove up, and Sylvia, walking slowly through the hall, heard a sweet voice calling eagerly, "Sylvia!"

"Aunt Marian!" The little girl almost ran to open the door. After the first excited chatter Aunt Marian inquired: "Did you get my message? And do you think the Unluckiers would enjoy some violin music today?"

For a dazed second Sylvia searched the sweet smiling face. Then she flung herself into Aunt Marian's waiting arms. "Oh, you're my Fairy Godmother and I never guessed it! Oh, it was the splendoriest game! And Dr. Glen says I'm so nearly well I may be taken to the hospital today to visit,

(Continued on page 12)

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Alexander-Lambdin—At the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Harry E. Whaley, Victoria, Va., January 10, 1923, by Rev. Milton Bennett Lambdin, Mr. Charles Winthrop Alexander, of Boston, Mass., and Miss Marjorie Lambdin, daughter of the officiating minister.

Young-McCain—At the First Presbyterian Church, Rosemark, Tenn., November 15, 1922, by Rev. J. B. Carpenter, Rev. David Caldwell Young, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Rosemark, Tenn., and Miss Sara Bonner McCain, of Atoka, Tenn.

DEATHS

Atwell—On December 24, 1922, David A. Atwell closed a useful life, leaving a widow, one daughter and other relatives to mourn his departure. He was 86 years old. From his boyhood he was a Christian. He was an honored deacon in the First Presbyterian Church, Salisbury, N. C.

Overcash—Mrs. Osborne Orlando Overcash, before marriage, Katie Johnston, born April 17, 1867, passed away January 12, 1923 at her home in Cabarrus County, N. C. She was reared in Poplar Tent congregation, afterwards belonging to Bethpage and Gilwood. She was known and loved by the community and is survived by her husband, three daughters, five sons, 15 grandchildren, one sister and one brother.

REV. EGDAR TUFTS

Rev. Edgar Tufts, president and founder of Lees-McRae Institute at Banner Elk, died Saturday morning, January 6th at 10 o'clock of pneumonia following an illness of about a week, and was buried Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock under the shadow of the beautiful stone church which he had built and of which he was pastor. The funeral services were conducted in the church by Dr. J. L. McMillan of Johnson City, Tenn., assisted by Rev. Robert King, of Kingsport, Tenn., and Rev. A. A. McLean, of Lenoir. The walls of the grave in which his body was placed were lined with ferns and galax leaves by the women of the community, and was a fine tribute of their love for this noble man. There was a large attendance at the services to pay their last respects to the dead.

Mr. Tufts was born December 21, 1870, at Kirkwood, Ga., near Atlanta. He was a graduate of Washington and Lee University and Union Theological Seminary. During the summers of 1895 and 1896 he spent his vacation in the Blue Ridge mountains doing mission work, and in 1897 he graduated and then took up the work permanently. His work was of a three-fold nature—school, hospital and orphans' home. It was his plan to develop the work in connection with the Woodrow Wilson Junior College.

The administration or central building of the proposed group has already been completed, and the ground has been broken for the Tennessee building. Then the Virginia building will be added.

When Mr. Tufts first came to this section of North Carolina he came as a preacher and served a number of churches—at Boone, Blowing Rock, Banner Elk and Linville. Then he took up the work of establishing a school in the mountains for the boys and girls. He was the founder and president of Lees-McRae Institute, which had its beginning in a small summer school that was first taught by a lady.

The next step was when Mr. Tufts gathered a handful of boys and girls in his own room and before an open fire taught them during the winter of 1899. This was followed by a small dormitory for a few girls; then the boys' department was added in 1905 at Plumtree, under the same management. In 1909 a hospital department was added and in 1914 the orphans' home department, known as the Grandfather Orphanage, was opened on a beautiful farm belonging to the school. In this home are 75 children who are being educated and given every opportunity. More than a thousand girls have been taught within the Lees-McRae Institute, and all have gone away from this school impressed by the wonderful influence of the beloved president, whose going will be a sore loss to the school, and will cause regret throughout the entire State of North Carolina and other States from which girls have come to be trained in Christian influences.

Mr. Tufts was a sufferer from tuberculosis, and several years ago he had a breakdown. He went to Black Mountain for treatment, where he remained for quite a while. As soon as the disease was arrested he returned to his work in the mountains. He established a motto which he faithfully endeavored to live up to: "In the mountains; of the mountains; for the mountains." In addition to all of his other work he supervised five Sunday Schools. He was an untiring worker and had access to unlimited money in his work, citizens from all sections of the country helping him in his efforts. He was held in the highest esteem by the mountaineers as well as those with whom he came in contact.

Mr. Tufts is survived by his wife and three children, Edgar, Margaret and Mary; two brothers, Mr. Barry Tufts, of Atlanta and Frank Tufts, of Mitchell, Ga.; and two sisters, Mrs. S. E. Cooper, of Atlanta and Mrs. B. H. Carlton, of Donalds, S. C.

MRS. BETTY W. HILL

The subject of this sketch was born in Duplin County, N. C., March 9, 1836 and died October 1, 1922.

She was the daughter of Dr. James H. Hicks and Eliza Miller Hicks, both of Duplin County. She was educated at St. Mary's, Raleigh, and at Edgeworth, Greensboro, from which (Edgeworth) she graduated in 1854. The noted educator Mr. Richard Stirling, was at that time principal of this school.

On the 25th of September, 1864, Miss Hicks became the wife of Col. Christopher Dudley Hill, of Duplin County. The issue of this marriage was four children of whom Robert Dudley Hill survives. Mrs. Hill has one living sister, Miss Georgia Hicks, of Faison, N. C., and a number of nephews and neices.

Mrs. Hill was a woman of the Old South. She knew the romance and luxury of pre-war days, shared the anxieties and vicissitudes of the great struggle, underwent the miseries of reconstruction and witnessed the development of the New South. Through it all she kept her faith and courage. In her old age her physical infirmities were many and her trials great, but her youthful spirit, her hopeful outlook, her high courage and faith unfeigned never forsook her. Her character was that of the Roman matron, modified by Christian trust and hope. For over half a century she was a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church at Faison.

—Written by Rev. Peter McIntyre, former pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Faison, N. C.

CHILDREN

(Continued from page 11)
so we'll go together!" She nestled close, then with a deep sigh of utter satisfaction she declared, "I'm perfectly sure nobody who wasn't Fairy Godmother could play the violin the way you can, Aunt Marian!"—Daisy D. Stephenson, in Reformed Church Messenger.

THE ROSE BUDS

One little Rose Bud, all fresh and new,
Breathed upon the summer air, then there were two.

Two little Rose Buds, happy as could be,
Sent out their fragrance, then there were three.

Three little Rose Buds wished there were more,
Told it to the breezes, then there were four.

Four little Rose Buds, glad they were alive,
Scattered sprays of dewdrops, then there were five.

Five little Rose Buds, doing useful tricks,
Played among the Sunbeams, then there were six.

Six little Rose Buds, looking up to heaven,
Caught a rosy vision, then there were seven.

Seven little Rose Buds, each with its mate,
Giving joy and gladness, then there were eight.

Eight little Rose Buds, all bright and fine,
Opened up their petals, then there were nine.

Nine little Rose Buds, blooming in the glen,
Teaching helpful lessons, then there were ten.

Ten little Rose Buds blooming all the day,
Sending out sweet perfume all along the way.

—Anna R. Richards, in Presbyterian.

The Gushing Talker

The young lady was very gushing about her love of books. The professor of literature to whom she was speaking, however, was rather skeptical as to the extent of her knowledge. "Of course you know Sir Walter Scott's works," he gently inquired. "I do; I do!" she cried, ecstatically. "His Lady of the Lake, most wondrous of books, you have read that?" "Yes, indeed," was the eager response, "I simply adore it." "And Scott's Marion, and Kenilworth, and Peveril of the Peak?" he continued. "Yes, yes," she joyfully avowed "Scott's Emulsion, too?" he inquired, enthusiastically. "That," she cried, "is the very best he ever wrote."—Methodist Recorder.

LESSONS

They say that the mockingbird right in the night

Teaches her children to sing!
If mother should do that, wouldn't it be

Too funny for anything?
I'd sit up in bed in my little white gown

And sing, like the birdies, the scales up and down.

They say when the mother-bird thinks it is time

For her babies to walk all alone,
She pushes them out of the nest one by one,

Right out of their dear little home!
If mother did that to me wouldn't I just sit there and cry and cry and cry!

I suppose they all know just the best way to do,

The birdies' dear parents and mine;
No matter how funny it may seem to us,

We ought to obey every time.
For mothers and fathers are older than we,

And they ought to know best, don't you see? —Ex.

MOTHER

I give my mother lots of kisses,
There's really never one she misses.
A "wake-up kiss" right in the morning,

A "good-night kiss" when I am yawning.

A "sorry kiss" when I've been bad,
A "happy kiss" when I am glad.
Once she was sick; I went to stay
At auntie's house, oh, miles away!
Then I sent kisses in a letter,
She said they truly made her better.
There's never really one she misses,
Oh, I give mother lots of kisses.—Ex.

GOOD NIGHT

Some things go to sleep in such a funny way;

Little birds stand on one leg and tuck their heads away;

Chickens do the same, standing on their perch;

Little mice lie soft and still as if they were in church;

Kittens curl up in such a funny ball;

Horses hang their sleepy heads and stand in the stall;

Sometimes dogs stretch out, or curl up in a heap;

But little babies dear are snugly tucked in beds,

Warm with blankets, all so soft, and pillows for their heads.

Bird and beast and babe—I wonder which of all,

Dream the dearest dreams that down from dreamland fall.

—Child Lore.

MY RAINBOW-BOAT

Ethyl M. Reed

My Rainbow-Boat has opal sails,
It skims through depths of blue and gray;

And there are twinkling lights of gold

Lest I should lose my way.

And on I sail the livelong night
Until I come to Mars—

My ocean wide, the deep blue sky;
My beacon lights, the stars.

Flub—"What do you think of Czech-slovakia?"

Dub—"Well, it's hard to say."—Life.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM
Passenger Traffic Service
Improved Passenger Train
Schedules
Effective December 17, 1922

(Schedule figures are given as advance information and are approximately correct. Figures at intermediate stations changed proportionately.)

To Passenger Agents, Ticket Agents, Conductors, and Connections:

Effective Sunday, December 17, 1922, passenger train schedules will be improved as follows:

No. 31	AUGUSTA SPECIAL	No. 32
1:10 PM	Lv New York -----Ar	1:30 PM
3:20 PM	Lv West Phila -----Ar	11:13 AM
5:27 PM	Lv Baltimore -----Ar	9:05 AM
7:00 PM	Lv Washington -----Ar	7:30 AM
10:25 PM	Lv Charlottesville -----Lv	4:07 AM
12:32 AM	Lv Lynchburg -----Lv	2:08 AM
2:20 AM	Lv Danville -----Lv	12:15 AM
3:55 AM	Lv Greensboro -----Lv	10:55 PM
4:20 AM	Lv High Point -----Lv	10:18 PM
5:35 AM	Lv Salisbury -----Lv	9:15 PM
6:45 AM	Ar Charlotte -----Lv	7:55 PM
6:55 AM	Lv Charlotte -----Ar	7:45 PM
7:40 AM	Lv Rock Hill -----Lv	6:52 PM
8:11 AM	Lv Chester -----Lv	6:19 PM
9:00 AM	Lv Winnsboro -----Lv	5:34 PM
10:05 AM	Ar Columbia -----Lv	4:35 PM
10:15 AM	Lv Columbia -----Ar	4:30 PM
10:41 AM	Ar Lexington -----Lv	3:53 PM
11:16 AM	Ar Leesville -----Lv	3:35 PM
11:20 AM	Ar Batesburg -----Lv	3:16 PM
11:39 AM	Ar Ridge Spg. -----Lv	a2:59 PM
11:56 AM	Ar Johnston -----Lv	a2:43 PM
12:15 PM	Ar Trenton -----Lv	2:30 PM

1:10 PM	Ar Aiken -----Lv	1:40 PM
1:15 PM	Ar Augusta -----Lv	1:30 PM

"a" Stops to discharge or receive passengers from or to points North of Charlotte. These trains will continue to handle same equipment as at present.

New local trains will be established between Charlotte and Columbia as follows:

No. 3		No. 6
5:45 AM	Lv Charlotte -----Ar	7:05 PM
5:58 AM	Lv Griffith -----Ar	6:48 PM
6:03 AM	Lv Pineville -----Lv	6:30 PM
6:20 AM	Lv Fort Mill -----Lv	6:17 PM
6:26 AM	Lv Carhartt -----Lv	6:08 PM
6:40 AM	Lv Rock Hill -----Lv	5:55 PM
6:51 AM	Lv Ogden -----Lv	5:42 PM
6:58 AM	Lv Smith -----Lv	5:35 PM
7:05 AM	Lv Lewis -----Lv	5:28 PM
7:20 AM	Lv Chester -----Lv	5:15 PM
7:28 AM	Lv Evans -----Lv	5:07 PM
7:40 AM	Lv Cornwell -----Lv	4:57 PM
7:47 AM	Lv Blackstock -----Lv	4:50 PM
7:54 AM	Lv Woodward -----Lv	4:44 PM
8:05 AM	Lv White Oak -----Lv	4:34 PM
8:11 AM	Lv Adger -----Lv	4:28 PM
8:23 AM	Lv Winnsboro -----Lv	4:18 PM
8:30 AM	Lv Rockton -----Lv	4:10 PM
8:36 AM	Lv Simpson -----Lv	4:04 PM
8:48 AM	Lv Ridgway -----Lv	3:54 PM
8:52 AM	Lv Smallwood -----Lv	3:49 PM
9:02 AM	Lv Blytheville -----Lv	3:39 PM
9:08 AM	Lv Sharp -----Lv	3:32 PM
9:13 AM	Lv Killian -----Lv	3:26 PM
9:25 AM	Lv Fairwold -----Lv	3:13 PM
9:45 AM	Ar Columbia -----Lv	3:00 PM

Schedule of train No. 1 Columbia to Savannah will be changed as follows:

Lv Columbia	-----	10:45 AM
Lv Cayce	-----	10:52 AM
Lv Styx	-----	11:02 AM
Lv Shuler	-----	f
Lv Edmund	-----	11:15 AM
Lv Macedon	-----	f
Lv Pelion	-----	11:27 AM
Lv Thor	-----	11:34 AM
Lv Berlin	-----	f
Lv Perry	-----	11:48 AM
Lv Sally	-----	11:58 AM
Lv Springfield	-----	12:09 PM
Lv Whaley	-----	f
Lv Walker	-----	12:20 PM
Lv Blackville	-----	12:30 PM
Lv Ashleigh	-----	f
Lv Barnwell	-----	12:48 PM
Lv Yonema	-----	12:57 PM
Lv Kline	-----	1:05 PM
Lv Cave	-----	1:09 PM
Lv Seigling	-----	f
Lv Allendale	-----	1:22 PM
Lv Barton	-----	1:33 PM
Lv Valentine	-----	1:45 PM
Lv Lena	-----	1:55 PM
Lv Furman	-----	2:05 PM
Lv Pineland	-----	2:16 PM
Lv Tarboro	-----	2:25 PM
Lv Tillman	-----	2:34 PM
Lv Deerfield	-----	2:44 PM
Lv Harceville	-----	3:00 PM
Ar Savannah	-----	3:45 PM

The schedule of RICHMOND DIVISION trains Nos. 8 and 108 will be changed as follows:

No. 8
Lv Danville	-----	7:30 AM
Lv South Boston	-----	8:40 AM
Ar Keyesville	-----	9:59 AM
Lv Keyesville	-----	10:10 AM
Ar Richmond	-----	1:10 PM

No. 108
Lv Durham	-----	6:00 AM
Lv East Durham	-----	6:10 AM
Lv Telfress	-----	8:45 AM
Ar Keyesville	-----	10:00 AM

Train No. 108 connects at Keyesville with train No. 8 for Richmond.

Agents and representatives will give this improved service widest possible publicity.

- W. H. TAYLOR, Pass. Traffic Mgr., Washington, D. C.
- W. A. BECKLER, Pass. Traffic Mgr., Cincinnati, Ohio.
- E. N. AIKEN, Gen. Pass. Agt., Cincinnati, Ohio.
- H. F. CARY, Gen. Pass. Agt., Washington, D. C.

Story and Incident

AMERICANIZING THE IMMIGRANT MOTHER

Mrs. Mezetti had no trouble in deciding what to have for supper in the winter. She always started with green peppers. Sometimes they were plain and sometimes there evolved from them wonderful concoctions, in which they were almost completely disguised. One could never tell how they would come out, but they always began in the same way. First they were pulled off the string which hung over the kitchen stove and then soaked and sliced.

This particular afternoon Mrs. Mezetti was sitting by the stove slicing the peppers. Little Mikey was trotting around beside her, reading a great imaginary story out of an old torn paper.

It was a rambling, never-ending story, told in his baby Italian, about his little dog Tito, a favorite product of his imagination. Every few seconds he paused for another idea and looked up to make sure his mother was paying proper attention to him. If she nodded and smiled, as she usually did, he would go on to the next episode in the miraculous Tito's several reincarnations, his black eyes shining and his short curls bobbing as he told about his wonderful pet dog.

But if she weren't noticing him particularly, as was the case this time, he would come over to her and raise his adorable little face and ask, "What is the matter, Mammina?"

"Not one thing, my little pigeon," she spoke perfect, rich Italian—"only, Mikey, you speak such noble Italian. You'll always talk to your mother in Italian, won't you?"

"Ah, yes, mammina. Oh, here come Katrina and Josie."

He ran to the door to let in two little girls, the younger about nine and the older twelve. They were thin and rather plain looking, but had lovely eyes and hair. Their mother turned to them, and they greeted her with a few words in Italian and then went into their parlor with their books, chatting together in the English which they were taught at the school.

Mrs. Mezetti followed them into the front room and timidly asked Katherine, the younger, what she had learned in school that day. Katherine began to answer in English, "Oh, we painted pictures of"—and then remembering, finished in Italian—"a vase and some dishes. You wouldn't understand."

With a sigh Mrs. Mezetti turned and went back to the kitchen, and as she put the frying pan on the stove her eyes were dangerously full of tears.

Josephine was playing the player piano in the front room and dolefully singing "Dardanella," while Katherine and Mikey began to chase each other around the house.

Mrs. Mezetti stole a shy look into the books the girls had brought home from school. In Katherine's reader she could make out a few words, but not enough to read a single whole sentence. Oh, how she loathed those figures that meant something that her children could understand and she couldn't! This horrible language was a siren, wooing them away from her, and try as she would she could not hold them back from its fascination. She shuddered, closed the book and went back to her supper.

She put the sliced peppers in the hot fat and they began to sizzle. At that Mikey came running to her and asked to be allowed to set the table. "Si, Mike, Katherine you help him."

The table, covered with white oil-cloth, stood in the middle of the kitchen. The children set it with the scanty, poor dishes the little home possessed. There was the big ring of Italian bread to be broken off in chunks, goat's milk and the sizzling contents of the frying pan, which now had eggs scrambled in it with the peppers.

When things were almost ready the door opened and a lovely young girl came in. She was dressed plainly, and her dress and hair were covered with specks of cotton. She slumped into a chair and greeted the children with "Hello, kids!"

"Oh, Marietta, are you so tired?" Mrs. Mezetti asked, her soft Italian speech making a striking contrast to the sharp, rough street English the children used. "Do you have to work so very hard?"

Marietta answered flippantly, "Oh, no; I just sit still all day. They pay me for that"—and the other girls MINISTER WANTED for Riverside Church. A mission Church in industrial section of city with splendid opportunities for growth. Essential that minister's wife should have some practical knowledge of social service work. Salary $1,500 and manse. Address references and qualifications to First Presbyterian Church, P. O. Box 1136, St. Joseph, Missouri.

JAMES M. McMICHAEL
Church Architect
 Charlotte, N. C.

THE SALISBURY MARBLE CO.
 Salisbury, N. C.
Anything in... CEMETERY WORK
Satisfaction our Motto
 A card will bring full information.

COLLECTION ENVELOPES

DURLEX OR DOUBLE-END PRINTED-TO-ORDER ENVELOPES

Delivery Charges Not Included

White Envelopes—Size 2½x4¼ in., 52 to set, printed with name of individual church, dated on both ends and packed in cartons. No order filled for less than a minimum charge of $4.00.

25 to 49 sets	-----	19 cents per set
50 to 109 sets	-----	17 cents per set
110 to 209 sets	-----	16½ cents per set
210 to 309 sets	-----	16 cents per set
310 to 409 sets	-----	14½ cents per set
410 or more sets	-----	14 cents per set

A charge of $1.00 made for each change in copy. Price on single envelopes on request.

MODERN CHURCH TREASURER'S RECORD

Treasurer's Record Book ruled to keep an account with each subscriber for a year (name written but once), showing contributions for local church and benevolences at a glance.

For Both the Duplex and Single Envelop System

200 names or less	-----	$1.50
300 names	-----	1.75
500 names	-----	2.25
1,000 names	-----	3.25
Subscription cards, per 100	-----	.50
Information Blanks, per 100	-----	1.00
Treasurer's Statements per 100	-----	.50
Special Day Envelopes, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Building Fund, etc. per 100	-----	.40

laughed. But the poor mother didn't understand. Perhaps it was better so.

"Marietta, what do you have to do in the factory? You know it grieves me that you have to work. If there were only enough money!"

Just then a small, rather stooped boy came in. This was Tony, aged fourteen, both the son and the father of the little family, returning from eight hours of work at the macaroni factory. He tossed Mikey up in the

- BOOKS WORTH OWNING
- "Human Nature in the Bible"—Phelps—$2.
 - "The World's Great Religious Poetry" (An anthology), $5.
 - "Reconstruction of Religion"—Belwood—$2.25.
 - Peloubet's S. S. Notes, 1923—$2.
 - Tarbell's S. S. Notes, 1923—$2.
 - Snowden's S. S. Notes, 1923—$1.25.
 - Arnold's S. S. Notes, 1923—$1
 - Dummelow's Bible Commentary (Reliable, comprehensive, usable), $3.
 - "Foote's Sketches of Early N. C."—$3.
 - "Morehead and Early Development of N. C."—$7.
 - "Outlines of Science"—Thomson—4 large vols.—$18.
 - "Carolina Folk Plays"—$1.75.
 - "Carolina Chansons"—$1.25.
 - "Lyrics From Cotton Land"—John Charles McNeill—$2.
 - "Songs Merry and Sad"—John Charles McNeill—$1.50.
 - "The Anas of Thomas Jefferson"—$4.
 - "Men and Books Famous in the Law"—Hicks—$3.50.
 - "Etiquette"—"Blue Book of Social Usage"—Emily Post—$4.
 - "A Short History of the Near East," 330 A. D., 1922—Davis—$3.
 - "Outline of History"—H. G. Wells—$5.
 - "Holy Land and Syria"—Frank G. Carpenter—$3.
 - "From Tangier to Tripoli"—Carpenter—$3
 - "Life of Woodrow Wilson"—Eaton and Read, Art Leather—$2.

All the latest Fiction—All the best in Books. I sell "Anything and Everything in Books." Prices Right. Prompt and proper service. I pay postage. J. T. NORSWORTHY, The Book Man, Gastonia, N. C.

"STOCK-FORM" ENVELOPES

Many churches have hesitated to introduce the use of collection envelopes on account of the cost of supplies.

To meet the needs of congregations which must practice rigid economy we have worked out a "Stock Form," or undated envelope, described below, at twelve cents per set, delivery charges extra, in any quantity wanted. Packages containing only two envelopes per month at seven cents per set, delivery extra.

CHANGES IMPOSSIBLE

The STOCK FORM envelopes are printed from a fixed, unchangeable plate, so that no changes can be made. Each package of envelopes will bear a separate number, but we cannot furnish packages bearing just the numbers you suggest. To explain, we cannot furnish each lot of twenty-five packages bearing numbers 1 to 25. We may have to send your lot numbered from 476 to 500. On one end these envelopes show all the benevolent causes for which our Assembly, Synods and Presbyteries ask the churches to make offerings, and the other end provides for the expense of the local church. Being undated, the unused packages are good for next year, so there is no waste. Samples sent free on request.

ORDER FROM
PRESBYTERIAN COMMITTEE OF PUBLICATION
 Richmond, Va., Texarkana, Ark.-Tex

air and performed daring feats with him that made the girls and Mrs. Mezetti gasp with fright, but Mikey squealed joyfully. Then Tony went to the sink in the corner and washed his face and hands.

By that time they were all ready to sit down to supper. The two younger girls kept their eyes on Marietta. Whenever she spoke they laughed appreciatively.

Mrs. Mezetti smiled and tried to talk, but was answered by monosyllables always, though the children had enough to say and laugh over in English. Mikey was her only consolation. He, droll little fellow, was still true to his mother tongue, and said so many funny things which his mother understood and which made them all laugh. Somehow, Mrs. Mezetti felt more like crying, as she cleared away the dishes and washed them.

Tony left right after supper and Marietta was in the girls' room. Mrs. Mezetti knew she was dressing—perhaps to go out. She had before. A terror came over the woman. She feared for Marietta so! She knew that it was not right for a girl to go out after dark without her mother or father—to do so in Italy would be immoral. But American girls did it, Marietta said. Oh, such bad girls they must be—and her Marietta so beautiful and graceful!

She found Marietta putting on the last touch of powder to an already too much powdered nose. Yes, she was going out. She had on the cheap, extreme costume that marked such occasions and ridiculously large buns over the ears. The young girls were watching Marietta's every movement.

"Marietta, you aren't going out?" Mrs. Mezetti asked anxiously. "How many times have I told you that nice girls don't go out alone at night?"

"Well, there's no one to go with me," Marietta replied. "I'm just going to the movies in the next block. I guess no one will eat me on the way." And she brushed past and slammed the door as she went.

Mrs. Mezetti was sick at heart. She heard Katherine and Josephine talking in the parlor and went in and begged them to tell her about Marietta—where she went, with whom and what she did. She was sure they knew.

"Why, only to the movies, right down the street—you know, the Cedar Street movies. She goes alone, unless Rose Griffune goes with her sometimes."

Mrs. Mezetti wanted to believe them, but it was at variance with her whole heritage and training to believe a girl could still be good and transgress a convention that way.

She hurried the girls off to bed, because she hated to hear them talk. She felt as though she were missing words that she needed to know.

Then Mikey was put to sleep, tenderly, with the often repeated plea and the same faithful answer that he would never talk English.

Toney came back fairly early and Marietta just a bit later. For a few minutes they talked and laughed together. The mother's agony increased—her own children talking and she not able to understand! She went to bed thinking, thinking. What was there to be done? She must find a way to learn the language she hated. Her children were being drawn further and further away from her, and if the Americans came to make Mikey go to school she would have no one left. Already the last insult had been

The Double Goal

If this year's Foreign Mission receipts are $50,000 more than the cost of the year's regular work, it will

1. Reduce the $205,576 deficit by 24 per cent.
2. Guarantee the sending out of the missionary candidates who have been waiting since last summer.

Estimated cost of the year's regular work ----- $1,156,912

Payment on deficit ----- 50,000

Total required ----- $1,206,912
Received to Dec. 27, 1922 --- 527,271

Needed Dec. 27 to Mar. 31 -- $ 679,641

Doubled Gifts

Will Secure the Doubled Goal

The total required is well within the Foreign Mission quota of the Progressive Program

A Call For Service to the Laymen of Our Church

A large number of laymen are wanted to speak on March 4-11-18 (first three Sundays) in every Presbytery in the Church, on Department IV of the Progressive Program.

We need men who will engage now to speak, not on any theme that suits them, but on "The Stewardship of Possessions." One message will answer for all three Sundays.

A man will be used certainly in his Synod, most likely in his own Presbytery and as close to home as possible. He may have to use his own or his neighbor's auto. He may have to stay away from home Saturday night or Sunday night. It will involve some sacrifice.

Our Goal for Benevolences has never been reached; Our Committees are making hurtful retrenchments; in the meantime our people do not lack in money for their own needs. The time has come now for the most effective, concerted, well planned effort our Church has ever made to reach our goal. We want men who will go to churches with a message, armed with facts about the church to which they go and facts about the task of our Church as a whole. We are not asking for eloquence but for business men who can and will talk for the love of the Kingdom in a field that belongs to the layman.

If you can go, send in your name at once on the form attached. A speaker's "kit" of printed matter will be sent at once. The Church papers of January 17th give some facts you will need. Preserve this issue if you speak.

I agree to speak, under the direction of the Secretary of Stewardship of my Presbytery, on March 4, 11, 18, with a message on "The Stewardship of Possessions."

Name -----
(Print it)

P. O. ----- State -----

Presbytery ----- Phone -----

Telegraph address -----

Date -----

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

M. E. Melvin, Gen. Sec'y

410 Times Building : Chattanooga, Tenn.

ABERDEEN & ROCKFISH RAILROAD

Eastbound		Westbound
Daily Ex. Sunday	Daily Ex. Sunday	Daily Ex. Sunday	Daily Ex. Sunday
Mixed. Pass.	Mixed. Pass.	Mixed. Pass.	Mixed. Pass.
No. 22.	No. 38.	No. 41.	No. 21
Lv.		Ar.
7:30am	9:10am	Aberdeen	6:41pm
Ar8:35am	10:00am	Raeferd	5:55pm
Lv2:10pm		Raeferd	Ar2:50pm
Ar.		Lv.
4:00pm	11:20am	Fayetteville	4:50pm
WAGRAM BRANCH
Southbound		Northbound
Daily Ex. Sun.	Daily Ex. Sun.	Daily Ex. Sun.	Daily Ex. Sun.
Mixed	Mixed	Mixed	Mixed
No. 11	No. 12	No. 11	No. 12
Lv. 10:30am	Raeferd	Ar. 12:40pm
Ar. 11:15am	Wagram	Lv. 12 noon
W. A. BLUE, General Supt., Aberdeen. N. C.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service. Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

Book of Church Order With 1922 Amendments

The new edition is now ready. Order your copy at once.

Should be in the hands of every pastor and church officer.

Price, Cloth, 35c. Postpaid

Confession of Faith

New edition contains revised Book of Church Order, with 1922 amendments.

Price, Cloth, 75c.; Leather, $1.25.

Order From
Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va. Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

FREEDOM FROM LAXATIVES

Discovery by Scientists Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Medical authorities have found that the gentle lubricating action of Nujol most closely resembles that of Nature's own lubricant. As Nujol is not a laxative it cannot gripe. It is in no sense a medicine. And like pure water it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is prescribed by physicians; used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

added. Her children were ashamed of her.

In the morning she had determined what she would do. After the children had left for work and school and the house was spick and span she dressed Mikey in his best and herself in what she had. She would have even put aside her beloved fazoletti da testa and worn an American hat, if she had had one, so complete was her resignation to becoming thoroughly changed.

Mikey was overjoyed at the novel experience of going out. He had scarcely ever been further than the gate. They stopped at a Mrs. Grifune's, and she directed them to the place Mrs. Mezetti sought—an office downtown, the Americanization office they called it. The very name repelled Mrs. Mezetti. To her it meant to be bold and coarse and ill-bred, but her children had made the choice and there was nothing left. Perhaps she could learn.

At the office a woman talked to Mrs. Mezetti in Italian, and told her that she was not too old to learn English and that there was a class in her neighborhood that she might enter.

Mrs. Mezetti went to the class the next week and learned several sentences, and she worked so hard on the little book they gave her that the next time she went she was ahead of the others.

Then the miracle happened. She had been saying the lesson over all the afternoon, and suddenly at the table that night Marietta spoke those same words, "I see where"—but then went on—"he gets his. He can't get away with it." It should have ended, "the flower grows." No, Marietta hadn't said that, but something like it. Mrs. Menzetti knew the first part, anyway.

Every day she learned a little more. As yet she didn't venture to speak, but she could understand almost everything that was said, except the very queer expressions Marietta used sometimes. She winced under some of the slighting remarks made about her, but she never let the children guess she understood.

Finally, when she thought she knew enough she practiced one whole day on what she would say at supper that night. She was about to begin her well-rehearsed speech, when Katherine spoke, "Them peppers ain't so good as usual, do you think so, kids?"

The lessons on pronouns flashed through Mrs. Mezetti's mind. There was something wrong—oh, yes.

She calmly said: "Katina, I tink you means dos peppers are not so good as usual."

WANTED

Raw Furs, Hides, Tallow, Beeswax, and Gingseng. Write for prices.

FRANK E. BROWN
Roanoke, Va.

CAMP GREYSTONE---FOR GIRLS
On Beautiful Lake Summit, In the "Land of the Sky"
Tuxedo, N. C.

Fourth Season. Splendid equipment with electric lights, water and sanitary plumbing. Substantial sleeping Tentalsows. Land and water sports. Fifteen fine saddle horses. Twenty consecrated Councillors. Write early for catalogue as number of girls is limited.

REV. JOS. R. SEVIER, Director
Pastor First Presbyterian Church
Augusta, Ga.

The children gasped and gaped. Mikey squealed delightedly and said, "Tanka you, moder; tanka you, moder!"

Even Mikey was an American now! —Dorothy Foote, in New York Tribune.

SORES BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn, President. 207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C. E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from

Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va.

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

Old Buck Guano Richmond

Fertilizer of Excellent Quality

Old Buck Guano Company

INCORPORATED
Richmond, Virginia

Allied with F.S. Royster Guano Co.

Sparkles

Mistress—"If you want eggs to keep, they must be laid in a cool place."

Maid—"I'll mention it to the hens at once, ma'am."

Statistics compiled by the "Rock the Boat" League prove that it's safer to blow out the gas than to step on it.—Life.

For Sale, one cottage in Montreat, eight rooms including dining room and kitchen. New range in dining room, plumbing, etc., just overhauled and cottage freshly painted. Lot on main road, about half way between Gate and Post Office. For prices and particulars write J. G. Parks, care Parks-Belk Co., Concord, N. C.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD

Effective November 13, 1922
 Leave Charlotte Except Sunday
 7:30 a. m. for Norwood, Mt. Gilead,
 Star, Varina, Raleigh
 and intermediate points
 Connects at Star for Aberdeen, Ash-
 boro and intermediate points
 Connects at Raleigh for Wilson,
 Washington, Greenville, Belhaven
 and intermediate points
 New equipment and improved
 Schedules
 One way fare Charlotte to Raleigh
 $5.64
 J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
 P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

6% No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.
SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
 Assets $1,011,288.30
 F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

"Please, teacher, would you punish a chap for something he hadn't done?" "No, Billy; it would be most unjust." "In that case, I—er—haven't done my home work."

Well," remarked the husband, after a long and heated argument on the question of man's superiority over woman, "at least there is one good, sweet and perfect thing which a man can have and a woman cannot."

"Never!" cried his wife, passionately. "Never! I deny it? What do you mean?"

"A wife," replied hubby—Ex.

Did His Best

A Western exchange tells of a speed maniac who ran head-on into a seven-story office building and after regaining consciousness weakly murmured, "I blew my horn.—Boston Transcript.

Henry Ford can never hope to have more money than John D. Every fivver he builds means more money for the Standard Oil Company.—New York Tribune.

"It will be a great day when wars can be replaced by friendships." —Mr. Jay, in Flashlights.

Village Grocer—What are you running for, sonny?

Boy—I'm trying to keep two fellers from fightin'.

Village Grocer—Who are the fellows?

Boy—Bill Perkins and me!—Puck.

Col. B. A. Franklin, vice-president of the Strathmore Paper Company, is responsible for the following story: A gentleman having business with a back-country farmer inquired of the farmer's boy where the old man was to be found. "He's out in the pig-pen doctoring a sick shoat," replied the boy, and added as an illuminating after-thought, "Pop's the one with a hat on."—Christian Intelligencer.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers - Rulers - Binders
 GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Buy From the Manufacturer

There is one good and sufficient reason why you should buy your Piano from the manufacturer—DIRECT RESPONSIBILITY.

STIEFF PRODUCTS
 Stieff Pianos and Players
 Shaw Pianos and Players
 Bennett-Bretz Pianos and Players
 Davies & Sons Pianos and Players
 Leslie Bros. Pianos and Players

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
 Charlotte, N. C.
 Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
 Name _____
 Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, INC., Charlotte, N. C.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.
 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Your account will be welcome here.

Charlotte National Bank
 Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
 20c to 35c
 None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
 IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
 PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
 14 - 16 - 18
 years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

The Pullman Davenport Suits Can Be Had in Attractive "Period" Designs

This handsome three-piece living room suit in "Italian" design has the genuine "Pullman" davenport bed. These suits in a variety of beautiful tapestry coverings are $160.00.
 "No Davenport Like the Pullman."

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Supporting the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., JANUARY 31, 1923

No. 5

Presbyterian Progressive Program

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS MARCH 18th

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Knowing God	1
Young People's Handbook	1
Pap-Up Sunday, March 4th	2
The Episcopal Church and Sound Doctrine Deeds as Well as Words	2
"Needed Counsel for New Christians"	2
"Elders That Rule Well"	2
CONTRIBUTED—
Was Saul of Tarsus Crazy?—By Rev. A. W. Pitzer, D.D.	3, 4
Our New Editor-in-Chief—By R. E. Magill	4
How Long Have You Attended Sunday School Without Missing	4
A Noteworthy Convention—By Rev. Walter S. Scott	4
The Every Member Canvass—By Rev. H. Tucker Graham, D.D.	5
How a Country Church Tripled Its Benev- olent Offerings—By Rev. H. M. Dixon, D. D.	5
Exiles for Christ—By Henry Van Dyke	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

EDITORIAL

KNOWING GOD

IS it an easy thing to know God? We might readily presume so. The heavens declare His glory, and the firmament showeth His handiwork. "The invisible things of Him since the creation of the world," says Paul, "are clearly seen, being perceived through the things that are made, even His everlasting power and divinity." We have but to reason from effect to cause. We look upon the work of His hands and we see the wonderful manifestation of His power and His wisdom.

So much is clear; and yet there are certain experiences of the race that would seem to indicate that it is very difficult for man to know God. Take those in Christian lands who reject the Bible. They fumble around in the dark, and reach many different conclusions. Some decide after years of careful study and profound thinking that there is only one substance in the universe and that substance is matter. They say that all the phenomena that we call spiritual are secretions of the brain, or forms of nerve force. Such great minds as Huxley and Tyndal reached this conclusion as the result of a life-time's study. Other minds equally great have identified God with the works of His hands. They have decided that everything is a part of God, and that He is the sum of all things. The whole universe is but an evolution or unfolding of God. Such a theory was elaborated with great skill by Spinoza, a learned Jew of the 17th century. He found but one substance, and endowed it with the two attributes of extension and thought. The poet Goethe was one among many of his illustrious disciples. Still others in their search for God found Him as they supposed, but entirely dissociated from His works. They credited Him with having made the world in which we live, but after making it, and setting it agoing He retired from it. He now watches it as a disinterested spectator, or at any rate as an inactive spectator. He never intervenes to supplement, to suspend, or to modify its movements. Having ordained the laws of nature, He leaves them to work out their results without let or hindrance. They are known as Deists; and they held the center of the stage in England from the middle of the 17th to the middle of the 18th century. Deism was represented by many great names in England, and on the continent it numbered among its advocates such names as Rousseau and Immanuel Kant. When we think of the great number of men, eminent for their talents, and for their diligence as students, who have given the best years of their life to the search for God amid the works of His hands, and have failed to find Him, it might seem that it is no easy matter to know God.

Then there is another class—those who have the Bible in their hands, and yet fail to know God. Take the Pharisees of our Saviour's day as representatives of this class. They had the Old Testament, the writings of inspired law-givers, prophets and Psalmists. They made themselves familiar with these writings. They prided themselves on their knowledge, and many of them became teachers of others. They thought they knew God. They claimed to sustain a covenant relation to Him, and to be His chosen people. But did they know God? Manifestly not. Jesus referred to them as the blind leading the blind. It was clearly demonstrated by their attitude toward Jesus that they did not know God. Jesus said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." The Pharisees said he that hath seen Jesus hath seen a colleague of the devil. Jesus was the "brightness of the Father's glory and the express image of His person." Yet when the Pharisees looked on Him they said, "He hath a devil and is mad."

Is it an easy matter to know God? It is owing to who is seeking Him. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." A true knowledge of God depends not so much on the head as the heart. St. Bernard was not far wrong when he said: "It is the heart that makes the theologian." We need not be disturbed in our faith if the statement of Prof. Leuba should prove to be true. He says that he has found by investigation that a majority of the foremost scientists of our day do not believe in a Personal God nor in immortality. This is deplorable so far as concerns the personal destiny of these scientists. There is nothing in it to cause alarm to our Christian faith. They are but repeating the sad experiment of many eminent predecessors. They have turned their back on Christ and are fumbling around in the dark. No man who rejects Christ can find God, for the same reason that no one can see the sun when he is looking away from it. He that will not see God in Christ will never see Him. There is no other God to see.

Is it an easy matter to know God? "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His covenant." "To this man will I look, even to him who is poor and of a contrite spirit, and who trembleth at my word." Who is it who says he can not find God? Is it the man who is hungry and thirsting for God, whose heart is crying out for God, for the living God? If so, there is significance in his failure. Is it the man of intellectual pride who thinks it is a mark of distinction to discredit the Christian faith? His opinion is not worth the paper it is written on.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S HANDBOOK

Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of the Committee on Sunday School and Young People's work of the Synod of North Carolina, has prepared a Handbook for the use of Sunday Schools and Young People's work that can be procured free from Mr. C. T. Carr, Mooresville, N. C.

It gives directions how to organize a Young People's Society and a Christian Endeavor Society. Then there are sensible directions how to prepare for a Young People's Prayer Meeting, and a Mission Study Class. In other words, if there be any society of young people that is not mentioned here, we have never heard of it.

There is a mine of information here made accessible to the young folk, and we sincerely trust that they will not fail to get this book and study it. Dotting the book at intervals there are good true blue advertisements, such as Richmond Committee of Publication; Queens College, Charlotte, N. C.; Flora Macdonald College, Red Springs, N. C.; The Presbyterian Standard; Peace Institute, Raleigh, N. C.; Mitchell College, Statesville, N. C. Then there are pictures of Miss McElwee; Members of the Christian Endeavor Training Class; Davidson College; Mr. W. W. Moore, Union Seminary, Richmond; Miss Elizabeth McDonald, Hope Mills, N. C.; Mr. Claude T. Carr, and Mr. Frank P. Wilson, one of Mooresville, N. C., and the other of Danville, Va. One wonders why the genial editor and author left out his own picture. Like Washington, his merit is only equalled by his modesty.

PAY-UP SUNDAY—MARCH 4TH

Sometimes there comes a demand for "line upon line, precept upon precept." Last week we had two editorials on the delinquencies of church treasurers in general, and now, this week, we wish to dwell upon the delinquencies of people who subscribe to causes and then delay meeting their promises promptly.

The Presbytery of Savannah and the Synod of North Carolina, each acting independent of the other, have urged a general movement for the meeting of pledges given to our annual budget.

It is a sad commentary on the honesty of many who subscribe that in every canvass for funds there is always allowed a certain per cent for non-payment of pledges. In fact, we have never known, as far as we can remember, any canvass in which all that was promised was collected. Generally, this is not due to dishonest motives, but to the fact that some misfortunes have overtaken the subscriber, making it impossible for him to meet his pledges.

On the other hand, it is sadly true that many are careless in such matters, and after subscribing, in the enthusiasm of a meeting, they lose interest, and ease their conscience for failing to pay by pleading some trivial excuse.

The object of this Pay-Up Sunday in March is to gather up the fragments of unpaid pledges, and to persuade the treasurers to turn over at once collected funds to the various causes for which the money has been subscribed.

This is a matter that should not come within the province of a pastor's duties. Like the apostles of old he should not serve tables, but should give himself continually to prayers and to the ministry of the Word. Let the pastors then give themselves to prayer and preaching and the deacons see that the finances are kept up. With each working in his appointed place, the Church of God will function as her Head intended that she should.

THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH AND SOUND DOCTRINE

For many years it has been the proud boast of our brethren of the Episcopal ministry that their church did not concern itself with the question of the doctrinal soundness of its ministry, but gave its ministers a degree of liberty that developed independence of thought, and at the same time prevented heresy trials that always engendered bitterness and oftentimes disruption.

That the man in the pulpit should not be hampered in thought sounds well to the man of the world who never analyzes the difference between the fundamentals of Bible doctrine and the fundamentals of science in general. He sees the scientists forging ahead in natural science, unfettered by past beliefs, and overturning them without protest. He cannot understand in theology there are certain inspired truths upon which the Church stands, the denial of which means chaos.

Experience has shown that in theology, at least, liberty is apt to degenerate into license, and that when a man leaves the beaten track laid out by the Fathers of the Church, he is apt to run wild.

To the credit of the Episcopal Church and Bishop Manning, there seems to be a limit. The worm will turn.

Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, for thirty years rector of the Church of the Ascension, New York City, has for years been exercising freedom of thought in his pulpit. He turned his pulpit into a forum, every Sunday night, where men with long hair and erratic brains disported themselves before an audience of like type. His bishop soon put an end to these performances. His next step was his engagement to the twice-divorced wife of the millionaire Stokes. The good bishop opposed this dream. Recently he was charged by St. Simeon's Episcopal Church as denying the divinity of Christ and His miraculous power. Bishop Manning promptly laid down this ultimatum: He must either recant, leave the church, or stand a trial for heresy. In a sermon on Sunday, January 21st, to a house crowded to its capacity, Dr. Grant went the limit of unsoundness, in doctrine, and indirectly bade defiance to the bishop.

The friends of Dr. Grant contend that the charge of unsoundness in doctrine rests only upon inference and that he had never openly denied the divinity of Christ.

Since preaching the sermon he has formally replied to the bishop. He refuses to recant or to leave the church, so a heresy trial seems inevitable.

We have only seen a few extracts from his letter. From what we have seen, we are not impressed by keenness of intellect. For example, he contends that if he would teach his people that our Lord really walked on the water, he would be denying His humanity.

Some of the students of the Episcopal Seminary in New York are reported as being dissatisfied with his views as being too tame—not as radical as what they hear in the class-room.

New York City seems to be a breeding place for radical doctrine. In proof, we see Dr. Fosdick, a Baptist, in a Presbyterian pulpit; Dr. Grant, in the Episcopal Church, and sundry professors in Union Theological Seminary.

We rejoice that Bishop Manning has given the ultimatum.

DEEDS AS WELL AS WORDS

That is a keen piece of sarcasm in the Epistle of James when he pictures a brother or sister "naked and destitute of daily food," to whom we offer the cold comfort of empty words, saying, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled." James' comment is, "Notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body, What doth it profit?"

Since the death of Rev. Edgar Tufts many have been moved to bear testimony to his worth, his unselfish life and his hopes for his mountain work.

HIS OWN

"A boy was born at Bethlehem
That knew the haunts of Galilee;
He wandered on Mount Lebanon,
And learned to love each forest tree.

"But I was born at Marlborough,
And love the homely faces there;
And for all men besides
'Tis little love I have to spare.

"I should not mind to die for them,
My own dear downs, my comrades true;
But that great heart of Bethlehem,
He died for men he never knew.

"And yet I think, at Golgotha,
As Jesus' eyes were closed in death,
They saw with love most passionate
The village streets at Nazareth."

It has occurred to us that all of us, in addition to our testimony, could honor his memory still more if we would do something to finish the work that was the dream of his last days.

The establishment of a real college for the children of his beloved mountaineers was an object very dear to his heart. It was to be the cap-stone of the monument he was building, that was to insure the permanency of that work to which he had given the freshness of his early manhood and his effort and prayers when ill-health had undermined his strength.

Our Lord put his finger upon one of the weakest points of our human nature when He said, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

"NEEDED COUNSEL FOR NEW CHRISTIANS"

The most critical time in the life of a Christian is when in the first flush of his new life he finds that the glow of his love is growing dim, that the novelty of his profession is wearing off, and the fascinations of the world are drawing him away from his first love.

Dr. Samuel McPheeters Glasgow, Rev. Cecil Herbert Lang and Miss Julia Lake Skinner have prepared a booklet with the above title. It has less than 50 pages and sells at the price of 25 cents, and can be ordered from our Richmond Committee.

It is just the book to supplement the instructions of the pastor, as it deals with dangers that have wrecked the life of many a new convert.

"ELDERS THAT RULE WELL"

Such is the title of a booklet from our Richmond Committee. It is from the pen of Dr. John I. Armstrong, who has just been elected editor-in-chief of our Sunday School helps.

Our eldership, taken as a whole, is a very intelligent body of men, and can compare favorably with the official body of any church. We must, however, confess that often men are called into the office who know little or nothing about the duties of the office, or the doctrine which they are supposed to accept.

Sometimes you may find a man blissfully ignorant of his deficiencies, but for the most part they know that they do not know, and would welcome any help to gain the knowledge of their duties.

There are, of course, several books on this subject. However, here is a book that in a small compass gives information about the elder; first, the nature of the office, then the duties and rewards.

We recommend it to our elders, and to all thinking men who in time may be called to the office.

Devotional

THE EXTRA STITCHES

Stitching flannel dresses for the poor of the parish engaged the attention of two young girls. "Now we have completed our garments, our work is finished for this season, at least," one of the two girls said with a sigh of relief.

"No, no, wait a moment; just a few moments more," replied the other; and, going into an inner room, she returned with some skeins of crimson silk, and few knots of ribbon and lace.

"Why, what are you doing?" asked her companion with surprise, as the deft fingers swiftly fashioned a dainty edging of crimson silk, frilled in the soft lace at neck and sleeves, and fastened on the bright ribbons here and there.

"These extra stitches take just a moment," was the answer, given with a blush, "and I want to make the dress pretty for some mother's baby."

As the great pile of dresses was distributed to the needy, that cold winter, one hard-visaged woman burst into tears, and hid her face in the folds of a little dress trimmed with lace and ribbons. "Oh, to think of someone doing this for my poor baby! I didn't think anybody cared!" she sobbed.

"God cares for you and your baby," said the reverent voice of the pastor, who had long sought an opportunity to reach this hardened heart. And for the first time the woman was willing to listen to the sweet, old story. Does this not teach us that there is something more for us to perform beyond the rigid call of simple duty? The extra stitches are surely the threads of gold that beautify and enrich the dull, dark fabric of our too often careless and indifferent charity.—The New York Observer.

WHEN SHALL WE LEARN

What a vast portion of our lives is spent in anxious and useless forebodings concerning our own future or that of our dear ones! Present blessings slip by, and we miss half their sweet flavor, and all for want of faith in Him who provides for the tiniest insect in the sunbeam. Oh, when shall we learn the sweet trust in God that our little children teach us every day by their confiding faith in us? We, who are so mutable, so faulty, so irritable, so unjust; and He, who is so watchful, so pitiful, so loving, so forgiving. Why cannot we, slipping our hand in His each day, walk trustingly over that day's appointed path, thorny or flowery, crooked or straight, knowing that evening will bring us sleep, peace, and home?—Phillips Brooks.

NOTHING BUT LEAVES

"What have I done that I should be anathematized? Am I not strong and green and pleasant? Have I injured any one? Have I done harm in any way? It is not what you have done, but what you have not done. You have received God's gift of sunshine and shower and returned nothing but leaves. The world of hungry people expected fruit from you. They found it not."

WAS SAUL OF TARSUS CRAZY?

By A. W. Pitzer, D.D.

"Paul thou art beside thyself, much learning doth make thee mad."—Acts 26:24.

The official letter sent by Claudius Lysias to the Roman Governor Felix concerning Paul was in these words:

"This man was taken of the Jews and should have been killed of them; then came I with soldiers and rescued him, having learned that he was a Roman; and when I would have known the cause wherefore they accused him, I brought him forth into their council; whom I perceived to be accused, of questions of their law, but to have had nothing laid to his charge worthy of death or of bonds; and when it was told me how the Jews laid wait for the man, I sent straightway to thee, and gave commandment to his accusers also, to say before thee what they had against him. Farewell."

Paul had one trial before Felix; a second one before Percius Festus, who two years after succeeded Felix; and a third one before the King Herod Agrippa, who was the superior in rank to the governor. The exclamation made by Festus as recorded in the text was called forth by statements of Paul in his defense before Agrippa.

Paul had affirmed that all of his preaching had been in perfect harmony with the teachings of Moses and the prophets; that Messiah or Christ should suffer, and that He should be the first that should rise from the dead, and should show light unto the people Israel and to the Gentile nations. It was as he thus spake that Festus, unable to restrain himself, cried out with a loud voice to Paul, that he was a madman. To this cultured heathen, no explanation of Paul's belief and conduct was plausible or probable than that he was insane, excessive study had unbalanced his mind and these were the wild ravings of a crazy man.

How was it possible for this Roman official to believe that a dead man had come out of the grave to speak to this Paul and that He had commissioned him an apostle to all nations to open their eyes to turn them from darkness to this light and from the power of Satan to God; and this man had devoted his life to doing this absurd and foolish thing, nothing less than insanity could account for such conduct. Paul thou art beside thyself, much learning doth make thee mad.

Both in what Paul said and in what he did, Festus found evidence of madness. The most astounding part of the story was that as Paul drew near to Damascus a man who had been publicly executed in Jerusalem months before appeared in bodily presence to him, spoke to him, calling himself by the well-known name of Jesus, and gave Paul a commission to go into all the world and proclaim salvation in His name. The evidence that Paul was sincere, that he really believed his story, was so manifest that Festus did not for an instant look upon him as a deceiver. There remained therefore but one solution, viz: the one given in the text—intense application to study had dethroned reason, disordered the intellect, and made Paul irresponsible.

No, there was one other solution possible, viz: what Paul said was true; Jesus was indeed not dead but living, and Paul was His servant. If so, then who was the madman, Paul or Festus? Doubtless, to many the religion of Jesus seems to be the climax of folly and madness, and they look upon His followers as either hypocrites or fools, and regard them with either hatred or pity. The system as a whole and in its parts is so far above and beyond the ordinary course of events and human thought that multitudes are indisposed to listen to its claims or examine its evidences.

Christianity is throughout, from beginning to end, a religion of the supernatural, a religion not from nature but from a realm that is above nature, from heaven, not from earth, from God not from man. It is simply a personal God above nature and nature's maker and Lord, coming down to earth, and speaking and acting, not merely as man but as God. Here are ways higher than man's ways, and thoughts higher than man's thoughts. This supernatural system finds its crowning glory in two marvelous facts. The incarnation of God in the Jesus of Nazareth, the Son of Mary; and in the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. Here are the two most remarkable and unique events that have ever occurred in human history. If the Godhead was not incarnate in Christ Jesus or if He did not rise from the dead, then Paul is the madman; but if these things are so, then Paul is Festus and every non-believer a madman. We accept the exact gauge of conflict thrown down by the Roman Festus, by the unbelieving world of today. Either, the believer or the unbeliever is mentally and morally insane, one or the other is a madman. In this conflict, we neither ask or give truce or quarter. This means war to the knife, and knife to the hilt. I am not come to send peace on earth but a sword "aut Christus aut Nullus." It is Christ or nothing. It is not a question of comparative religions but of contrasted and conflicting religions. The imperative claim of our Lord is thou shalt have no other gods before me and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy strength. To love even father or mother, wife or child more than Him is to be unworthy of Him.

Contributed

In Paul's defense he cites Moses and the prophets, affirms that what they said he said, that there was perfect agreement between the sacred books of the Jews and the resurrection of Christ. They affirmed that Christ should suffer and that He should be the first that should rise from the dead.

One evidence of the reality and certainty of the Christian religion is to be found in its written documents, its sacred books, its holy writings. If Festus wishes to examine the evidence of Paul's sanity Paul points him to Moses and the prophets.

The importance of written documents as evidence of past transactions is well understood by all thoughtful men. In the purchase of property men carefully search the public records, the written papers or books where previous ownerships and transfers have been preserved for the use and benefit of succeeding generations. All Americans turn to the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution as written more than one hundred years ago, to find evidence of what was done then. Persons wishing to direct the uses of their property after their death prepare written wills with the names of witnesses attached and these wills are entered as invaluable evidence on the permanent records of the community. Family Bibles sometimes contain the family pedigree and these written registers are received as evidence by all courts. The charter and history of this Church will be found in the various written documents that make up its records.

So the Christian points the unbeliever to the written documents of the Old and New Testaments and says, "Here you will find the deeds to our heavenly inheritance, the Constitution and Charter of the Church of God, the will of the Lord Jesus, pedigree of the family of God, the testimony of the witnesses, the evidence of the reality of our religion."

And yet men who have never read our writings, never examined our witnesses, never searched our titles, never studied our constitution, never sifted our evidences, flipantly and sneeringly call us madmen and dismiss the subject and account themselves apostles of free-thought and marvels of wisdom. Let Paul affirm that he has seen and heard and talked with Jesus after His resurrection from the dead and Festus is ready with answer, "Paul thou art beside thyself, much learning doth make thee mad."

Thousands of men read the poems of Horace, the letters of Pliny, the annals of Tacitus, the satires of Juvenal, and accept the documents as genuine and authentic while they reject the Psalms of David, the histories of Moses, the predictions of Daniel, the biography of the Evangelists, the epistles of Paul, and yet the evidence of the integrity of the sacred books is a hundred-fold greater both in volume and strength. Here the books are, they exist, they are contemporary, with the events they narrate. By what canon of historic criticism shall we reject the testimony of these witnesses and say to Paul and others, "Ye are all beside yourselves, much learning doth make you mad?"

Was Festus a competent judge of the writings of Moses and the prophets. Those wondrous Hebrew records that survived the destruction of the nation and the various captivities and dispersions of the children of Israel, those records so instinct and filled with life that they abide in unimpaired vigor and virility to this day. Translated into all tongues and circulated among all peoples. Was Festus a competent judge of records that he never read, of writings that he never saw, was he the man to tell Moses and Paul, the prophets and apostles, that they were all mad alike?

How much of all that is said and written in our day against the Christian religion comes from those who have never studied, perhaps not so much as read the books of the Old and New Testaments? Every few years some new Festus is heard loudly proclaiming the madness and folly of the story told by Moses and by Paul, but like Festus the first, he is soon forgotten and Paul and Moses continue to tell the old, old story to ever-increasing numbers of believers all round the globe.

But the argument must be circumscribed and to one single and simple issue for the whole story all the writings of both prophets and apostles hinges on one vital point. Did Jesus rise from the dead and did Paul see and talk with Him? Is the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead a myth or actual event, a fable or a fact? Is Christ still in the grave or is He at the Father's right hand? Did the disciples break into the tomb and steal the corpse or did the Godhead of the man Christ Jesus burst the bonds of death and come forth conqueror, bringing life and immortality to light?

Let it be distinctly understood that the resurrection of Jesus from the dead is the life and the soul of the Christian religion. If He did not rise then the whole system is a fraud and delusion. Faith is vain and of all men we are the most pitiable and miserable. If we are worshipping a dead Christ then indeed all is lost. On the other hand, however, let it also be understood that if the resurrection is a fact, if Jesus rose from the dead, if He was seen and heard and handled after His resurrection, if He is a living person today, then the whole system of Christianity is triumphantly true without the failure of a jot or tittle of all that is written in the prophets and Moses in Paul and the Evangelists. For He Himself before His death staked the truthfulness of all on the fact of His resurrection from the dead. That resurrection would demonstrate Him to be the Son of God and therein and thereby attest the truthfulness of all His teachings as contained in the sacred Scriptures for the entire contents which He had made Himself responsible.

It should be borne in mind that the question of rising of a dead man from the grave cannot be settled by any canons of science or philosophy made in advance. The question is and must be one simply of fact. Either it did or did not occur. Thousands of plausible and apparently conclusive theories have been shivered into fragments by increased knowledge and subsequent events. It was found in theory time and again that an engine could not draw a train of cars on a railroad track—alas for the theory when the thing was done.

It is idle to say that Godhead united to manhood could not rise from the dead for this is to deny to Deity the attribute of omnipotence. Ye do err, said Christ to the Sadducees, not knowing the Scriptures or the power of God.

A question of fact that is an actual occurrence can never be decided by any canons of science or axioms of philosophy. Science is simply systematized knowledge. All knowledge except our intuitions is based on facts and all science is liable to changes as new facts are established. We investigate therefore the alleged resurrection of Jesus precisely as we would any other event. If it ever occurred it was here on this earth. It was in time. The witnesses must have seen and heard Him and have known Him. Prebendary Row of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, in an article on this subject says that the genuineness of Paul's letters to the Romans, the Galatians, and the Corinthians, is admitted by Strauss, Renan, Baur, and the whole Tubingen School of Critics, and that it is impossible to over-estimate the importance of this confession.

These four letters put us in direct communication with the most active Christian missionary of the first century, whose letters were written not later than 28 years after the Crucifixion. They reveal Paul as a man of ability, honesty, veracity and integrity; they set before us a large number of Christian churches in different parts of the Roman Empire, the observance of the first day of the week by Christians, the universal belief of these Christians that Jesus was risen from the dead, and the names of many who saw him after the resurrection.

The significance and scope of these statements challenge attention and demand consideration, for they are well nigh conclusive of the question, By affirming that Christ was alive when He was dead and in the tomb what could Paul hope to gain save the loss of all that men hold dear? Why should thousands of the best citizens of the Roman empire gather themselves into assemblies and build Christian churches on the foundation of the resurrection of Jesus when in fact He was still in His grave, dead for eight and twenty years? Why should Jesus and Gentiles celebrate the first day of the week instead of the seventh in memorial of His resurrection, when in fact He was not alive but still dead? Before we can believe with Festus, we must destroy the sacred books of the Jews and all the typical and symbolic observances growing out of and resting on them; we must reject the evidence of competent and truthful contemporary witnesses; we must sweep every Christian church from the face of the earth; and then strike every seventh day, the Lord's day, from the calendar of the nations. "I am not mad, most noble Festus, but speak forth the words of truth and soberness. The King Agrippa knoweth of these things before whom I speak; for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him; for this thing was not done in a corner."

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

Another mark of Paul's madness was not only that he believed these absurd and impossible stories but that he had made it his life work to preach among all nations through this risen Jesus the forgiveness of sins and inheritance among the saints.

Festus did not know how much of earthly good Paul had renounced to become the servant and minister of Christ. All that men hold dear he had counted but loss that he might win and walk with this precious Friend and Redeemer.

In the blinding light of God's presence that shown upon him near Damascus his deepest soul had felt the intolerable agony of guilt on the conscience and also the blessedness of pardon and peace and in full surrender to his Saviour he had asked, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" To that Jesus he yielded up every power and faculty of his being, his work and destiny for life were irrevocably settled; henceforth no man could move him from his purpose. He was ready, if needs be, to die for this Lord Jesus.

The world neither comprehends nor appreciates such self-renunciation, such complete consecration, such burning love, such consuming zeal. Half-hearted, luke-warm, worldly-minded Christians look upon such persons as wild, visionary enthusiasts. If some priest joins himself to the leper settlement of the Sandwich Islands with the certainty of a horrible death, if some Moravian missionary in order to preach the Gospel to the slaves of the West India Islands, sells himself into slavery, if some Henry Martyn, with the seal of death upon him, sweeps across seas and continents to bear the glad tidings to the perishing millions of Asia; how many lift their eyes and exclaim, "Poor fellow, what a madman."

If some Mary has sat at the feet of Jesus and been taught of Him, has caught His spirit and felt His love, and then brings the precious alabaster cruise and pours fifty dollars worth of ointment on her Saviour's head, even disciples murmur against her, and ask, why this waste; this might have been sold for three hundred pence and given to the poor. Alas, how little do any of us comprehend or possess that enthusiasm for Christ that will give up all for His dear sake.

Let some godly woman in this or in any congregation give herself wholly to the work of Christ, let her deny herself the innocent enjoyments of this world, let her consecrate her time, her means, her talents, to the service of her Lord and Saviour, and how many will be ready to exclaim, "What a queer woman, she is a religious crank."

Let some young man devote every hour and every dollar that is his own to Christ and His cause, let him spend his life in doing good to others, how many will speak of him as so very peculiar, unlike other men. Let some Sabbath School teacher, or deacon, or elder give himself wholly to the duties of his office and it will not be long before some one will be found to say, "He is beside himself." Let some liberal loving heart pour money freely, lavishly into the treasury of the Lord, and the murmur will soon be heard from the stingy, "The Lord does like prodigality."

Festus did not and could not understand Paul. The world did not and could not comprehend Christ, even His own brethren thought that He was beside Himself. And yet if Christianity is true, if Christ be risen from the dead, if there is no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, then do we indeed speak forth the words of truth and soberness and unbelievers, not Christians, are mad.

Surely there is madness somewhere among the children of men. Either the believer or the unbeliever is guilty of unspeakable folly.

If God was ever here on this earth united to a true body and a reasonable soul; if He offered up Himself a sacrifice to God to redeem man from sin, death and hell; if He rose from the dead and is exalted a Prince and a Saviour, and if there is no other Saviour; then the man who lives merely for this life and this world, who seeks to satisfy the cravings of his immortal nature with any or all the objects of earthly good, who makes no provisions for the eternity to which he goes, and the awful and august issues that await him there, who turns away from the matchless love of his Father, God, as manifested in the gift of His Son and the wondrous grace of that Son, who died that we might live, and rose again that we might never die, the man who does this is indeed and in truth the veriest and the wildest madman in God's boundless universe.

Salem, Va.

OUR NEW EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

By R. E. Magill, Secretary

It gives the Publication Committee great pleasure to announce that Rev. John I. Armstrong, D.D., has been elected editor-in-chief of our Sunday School publications and that he has agreed to undertake this important work. A committee on vacancy was appointed last June and after a most painstaking investigation submitted the following report:

"After mature consideration your committee nominates for editor-in-chief Rev. John I. Armstrong, D.D., of Lewisburg, W. Va. Dr. Armstrong is sound in the faith, is a man of marked ability, has been a successful teacher of the Bible for a good many years, has had large experience in the educational world, and is known and trusted by the whole Church. We have not been able to discover an available man who seems to have so many fine qualifications for this responsible position as Dr. Armstrong."

The Church will heartily agree with this appraisal of Dr. Armstrong's character and ability and will rejoice that he has consented to devote his fine talents to editing and supervising the periodicals which have such a vital part in the religious education of the four hundred thousand members of our Sunday Schools. In announcing the acceptance the secretary reminded the members of the committee that this is the third call Dr. Armstrong has had to become a member of the editorial staff of the Publication Committee. He was called to the editorship of Onward in 1906 and in 1911 was asked to become the managing editor of the Missionary Survey, but declined both positions.

Dr. Armstrong has a record of things accomplished behind him which warrants the prediction that he is now undertaking a task where he will render the Church the most fruitful service of his whole career. After graduating at Hampden-Sidney College Dr. Armstrong entered the teaching profession and was for a few years an instructor in the Wallace School for Boys, at Nashville, Tenn. He took his course of theological training at Union Seminary, where he received his degree in 1904. After graduating at the seminary he was called to Hampden-Sidney as professor of the Bible and Moral Philosophy.

In 1906 he resigned his chair at Hampden-Sidney to accept a position as teacher of the English Bible in Agnes Scott College at Decatur, Ga. At the same time he accepted the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church at Kirkwood, Ga., where he made a notable record as a pastor and organizer.

Always interested in the large affairs of our Assembly, he was called in 1913 to the position of Educational Secretary of the Foreign Mission Committee at Nashville, where he served for seven years with great efficiency. He outlined the seven year course of study of missions for the Sunday Schools, created a new and informing body of literature on Foreign Missions, and led the Church to undertake an orderly and inspiring study of her missionary obligation.

Dr. Armstrong was called to the presidency of the Lewisburg Seminary in 1920 and carried this institution through the trying experience of a re-organization, a disastrous fire and rebuilding a school plant, securing a new faculty and re-establishing a student constituency.

His broad and accurate scholarship, his experience in the educational field, his unusual literary gifts and his devotion to the conservative interpretation of Scripture truth all indicate his special fitness for the position to which he has been elected.

Dr. Armstrong will prepare the lesson exposition for the Earnest Worker beginning with the April number, when we take up a series of Old Testament studies. He has assumed general supervision of all the lesson helps and is in constant conference with the editorial staff and Sunday School field workers as to educational policies and the improvement of all our lesson periodicals.

HOW LONG HAVE YOU ATTENDED SUNDAY SCHOOL WITHOUT MISSING?

We are wondering who holds the record in the Southern Presbyterian Church for faithful and unbroken Sunday School attendance. And this inquiry has been prompted by the following news item sent to our Publicity Department from our representative in Higginville, Mo.:

"Two sons and two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Pitts Lyons, of Higginville, Mo., have unusual Sunday School records. Ryland and Earle have attended the Presbyterian Sunday School without missing for ten years. Margaret and Lucille for seven years."

We would like very much for our Sunday School Superintendents to make note of this inquiry and if there are any in their Sunday Schools who hold equal or better records than that of the Lyons quartette, to kindly send their names, with period of attendance without missing, to T. Ellison Simpson, Publicity Department, Assembly's Stewardship Committee, 410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

A NOTEWORTHY CONVENTION

By Rev. Walter S. Scott, Evangelist

There were held in the city of Antonio, from the 26th to the 30th of December, a convention of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Societies, and also, at the same time, a Bible Institute which mark very clearly the degree of success that our work among the Mexican people in Texas has attained. This is especially true of our work in the young people's societies, acknowledged to be the best of any denomination doing work among the Mexicans in the State of Texas.

It is only the second convention and the second institute we have held for and by our Mexican people, the former gatherings having been held in the city of Austin.

The San Antonio Convention in point of attendance and the extensive program which was carried out was a complete success and a most agreeable surprise to us all.

By the commendable courtesy of the Mexican Methodist Church and its affable pastor, Rev. A. R. Cardenas, most of the meetings of the convention were held in their chapel, a handsome $8,000 building with basement and stained windows.

The institute and the evening sessions of the convention were held in our own modest but substantial brick chapel. The two churches are only two blocks and a half apart and the coming and going of our people from one church to the other was an ocular demonstration of the genuine and fundamental union that there is after all among the Protestants, which must have had its favorable effect on the public at large. This is important and was one of the salutary lessons taught by the convention.

It was evident that preparations had been made by our church in San Antonio and its minister, Rev. E. Trevino, and the active society of Christian Endeavor, especially by the choir of some 30 young people. Lunch was served every day at noon in the basement of the Methodist Church.

While nominally it was a Southern Presbyterian Convention, it should be noted that the Mexican Christian Church of San Antonio was also represented, and we had visitors from all the denominations of the city. One night there was a service in English conducted entirely by our American Presbyterian friends.

There were some splendid addresses delivered and some fine papers read at the convention, but the best of all, it seems to us, were the devotional and inspirational phases of it. We had such speakers as our own Fernandez, of El Paso, second to none in oratorical gifts; Dr. Vicente Mendoza, of the City of Mexico, editor of El Mundo Cristiano, a union, evangelical paper, and one of the most noted protestant ministers of Mexico; Prof. D. J. Chavez, A.B., teacher of Spanish in the State University; Prof. R. C. Ortega, Mexican Secretary of the State Health Association; H. T. Marroquin, of the American Bible Society at the City of Mexico, and a half-dozen others. But we should not omit to mention that one of the speakers was Dr. P. B. Hill, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of San Antonio. Dr. Hill has shown himself an enthusiastic friend of our Mexican Church in that city.

One afternoon there was a social gathering of the young people at the Wesley House of the Methodist Church. A splendid photograph was taken of the convention. There was a display of books and Sunday School literature from our Publication House at Texarkana.

On Wednesday night, after a short spirited sermon by Rev. A. Fernandez, and upon his invitation, some 25 or 30 young men and young women came to the front, indicating their desire to dedicate their lives to the Lord's service. It was a grand and affecting sight, and the audience was moved to tears by the fervent prayers which were offered in behalf of those young people. Surely a half-dozen students for the ministry should come from that number of young men, and two or three consecrated girls for school work or missionary service.

In the institute we had papers on Church Government, by Campbell; Hymnology, by Professor Perpetuo; the Progressive Program, by Cavazos; How to Prepare the Sessional Reports to Presbytery, by Trevino; How Best to Combat Romanism, by Fernandez; Personal Work, by C. Lopez; Best Way to Win Roman Catholics, by T. de Leon; the Work of the Spirit in Conversion, by Womeldorf; and the Work and Functions of the Assembly's Executive Committees, by Scott. But the best of all were the lectures by our great Bible teacher and genial friend, Dr. T. W. Currie, president of the Austin Theological Seminary, who gave us lectures, with the help of the blackboard and chart, on Church History and

(Continued on page 5)

Presbyterian Progressive Program

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS MARCH 18th

THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

By Rev. H. Tucker Graham, D.D., Pastor Presbyterian Church, Florence, S. C.

To enter a plea for the Every Member Canvass, or to attempt defense of it, is very much like championing the alphabet or the multiplication table. With the utmost simplicity and directness it asserts the elementary fact of individual responsibility for the work of the Kingdom and for its adequate support. It offers to the poor and the rich, the child and the adult, a plan easily understood and readily carried into effect by which each, as the Lord hath prospered him, may have a definite share in all the work of the Church at home and abroad.

It reminds every one enlisted under Christ's banner that the Lord in His heaven and His commissioned officers on earth, expect each soldier to shoulder his musket and keep step with his advancing comrades; that he is not on permanent furlough; and that he cannot spend his days in a hospital nursed and provided for by others.

It declares that each member of the Church of the living God must prove himself an asset—not a liability. It is a challenge to lift—and not to lean.

The plan is (I) Simple: Every member contributing every Sunday to every cause.

(II) Practicable: One can thus give more largely and with far less strain. One dollar a week can be paid with ease where $52 in a lump sum would be difficult, if not impossible. The same principle holds for larger or smaller sums. A clerk said to me, "The weekly payment is best for all. It is the only method possible for me."

(III) Profitable: Churches by this plan have multiplied their gifts three, five, and even ten-fold. Moreover, the larger sum was secured far more easily than the meagre gifts of other years. No church having fairly tested it would return to the slipshod methods of the past.

(IV) Systematic: It provides a constant income for constantly accruing needs.

(V) Scriptural: "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store."

Other ways there are but they lead to financial chaos. This plan applies business methods to the greatest Business of all.

HOW A COUNTRY CHURCH TRIPLED ITS BENEVOLENT OFFERINGS

By Rev. H. M. Dixon, D.D., Pastor of Philadelphia, Fairmont and Mt. Tabor Churches in Fayetteville Presbytery, N. C.

History

The Philadelphia Church, of Fayetteville Presbytery, was not meeting its quota for benevolences and not receiving enough money to pay its current expenses and pastor's salary. The pastor conceived the idea that if each farmer would set aside one or more acres of land, plant, fertilize, cultivate and harvest these acres at his own expense and give the proceeds to the Lord that the church would raise enough money to reach its benevolent quota and have enough left over to pay whatever was not being met by the contribution as the result of the Every Member Canvass.

The Plan

The pastor decided to make a clear-cut proposition to individual members of the church to set aside an acre for the Lord. The officers of the church were called together and adopted the plan, realizing that it was useless to present it to the people unless the officers adopted the plan. We secured fifteen men who agreed to set aside an acre.

Ingathering

November 23rd was set as the day to bring the produce of the land. This day was well advertised in advance, a picnic dinner was provided on the ground and before dinner we had a service in the church with two speakers. After the service, dinner was served and then we proceeded to auction off the produce that had been brought. There were 12 bales of cotton on the ground and the seed of this cotton, two turkeys, two chickens, and one calf. The cotton sold on an average of $24.80, bringing a total amount of $1,546.50. The chickens, turkeys and calf brought $28.50. Several members did not bring their produce to the church, but sold it themselves and brought the money. After all of these amounts were gathered in, the total amount received for the Philadelphia Church was $1,650; Mt. Tabor Church $350. Last year the Philadelphia Church gave for benevolences $440 and for all causes $2,122. This freewill offering for this church amounted to $1,650.

The people were greatly encouraged over the ingathering and there was great rejoicing among them. At the morning service we had the children of the day school in attendance. "The Tithe" was presented by J. B. Spillman, Secretary of Stewardship. Tithing cards were distributed, a proposition was made to send Tithing Account books to every person who would sign a tithing card, whether they were Presbyterians or not. There were 77 who signed tithing cards. Thirty-six were from Philadelphia Church, four from Mt. Tabor Church, and 32 were members of other churches. The total membership of Philadelphia is 108. We feel that the response to the tithing proposition was largely the result of the interest in the free-will offering that was made.

Follow Up

The Sunday after the ingathering is probably the best time to get the members to agree to what they will do for the next year. This year we plan to distribute cards for the members to sign. We want to get every member to set aside something for the Lord. Men can plant one or more acres as a free-will offering. The ladies can set aside chickens or turkeys, selling the eggs and raising chickens and selling them, giving all that one or more hens might produce as a free-will offering. We believe it would be well for boys to have an acre or part of an acre or a pig. Girls could have chickens, turkeys, or ducks. In order to work this plan most effectively the first time, an early start should be made. Do not wait until the farmer has planted what he is going to plant. November or December is a good time to start this movement. We would suggest that a careful record be kept of the names of those who have made these free-will offering pledges; set aside a page in the minute book of the session. Enter the names and whatever is pledged, leave a space to insert the amount when the produce is sold.

Perhaps the largest gift was from a man who plants only a one-horse farm; he set aside an acre for the Lord, which made a bale of 580 pounds and with the seed it brought $163.50.

Pledge Card

The following appropriate Pledge Card is recommended for use by pastors and officers in promoting the free-will offering plan as outlined and explained above. The plan is particularly adaptable to country churches.

FREE WILL OFFERING TO THE LORD

In consideration of the fact that Jesus Christ died that I might live, that He supplies all my needs day by day, and that He has commanded, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature," I agree to set aside for the Lord:

-----Acres of Cotton	-----Acres of Peanuts
-----Acres of Tobacco	-----Acres of Peaches
-----Acres of Wheat	-----Acres of Apples
-----Acres of Oats	-----Acres of -----
-----Acres of Rye	-----Chickens
-----Acres of Barley	-----Turkeys
-----Acres of -----	-----Sheep
-----Acres of Corn	-----Goats
-----Acres of Hay	-----Cows
-----Acres of Potatoes	-----Hogs

I agree to plant, fertilize, cultivate and harvest the above named crops, and to feed and care for the stock and fowls at my own expense and to bring them and their increase or the money derived from their sale to the ----- Presbyterian Church on the date set for the ingathering in the Fall of 1923. The money derived from the sale to be used to pay in full the quota of the above named church to each Benevolent Cause, and should there be any money above the amount needed for this purpose, I agree that the officers shall assign it to whatever church purpose is most in need of money at that time.

Date -----
 Name -----
 R. F. D. -----
 City -----

A NOTEWORTHY CONVENTION

(Continued from page 4)

the Gospel of Mark. Would that some one would furnish the means with which to publish Dr. Currie's outlines of Bible Study and Church History in Spanish for permanent use among our preachers and students.

Letters of felicitation and encouragement were read from Dr. Homer McMillan, Mr. R. E. Magill and Dr. Brooks I. Dickey.

While due credit should be given Drs. Currie and Perpetuo, of the Theological Seminary, for making possible these fine institutions so helpful to our Mexican work, in sheer justice to him we must say that the promoter and leading spirit of the convention as well as of the institute, is Rev. Guillermo A. Walls, a Sunday School Evangelist employed by the Executive Committee of Publication and Sabbath Schools for work among the Mexicans in Texas, to whose indefatigable and well directed efforts is due the success of this second convention. All expenses were met and no debt was incurred.

At the very close of the convention, and to use a Spanish phrase, as if to fasten up the convention with a golden buckle, came Mrs. Winsborough and Dr. Skinner with their genial spirits and optimistic messages.

All who had anything to do with the preparation and carrying out of those excellent programs deserve our warmest congratulations. This convention is a high-water mark of progress!

The Southern Presbyterian Church can well be proud of its Mexican work in Texas.

EXILES FOR CHRIST

By Henry Van Dyke

Into the bright mirth of our sheltered homes, into the peaceful murmur of our country's prosperous life, there comes a strange and piercing cry—a sound of many voices moaning, wailing and lamenting—broken men, outraged women, and bewildered little children, thousands, yes, myriads of suffering souls in wounded, starving bodies, cry HELP! HELP!

These are the exiles of Christ in the Near East, driven forth by the Turk to wander and perish. You can hear them crying if your heart is tuned to the key of humanity.

Now, listen, for the voices are coming together, blending, uniting in a strong and piteous appeal. The little ones are gathering in companies, regiments, armies, led by wise and valiant guides from America, marching with bleeding feet over bleak mountains and in wild valleys and through dusty deserts, plodding painfully to reach their cities of refuge. It is the new Children's Crusade, not setting out to conquer the sacred place of the Cross, as in the old time, but each one carrying a cross into banishment for the name of Christ.

Now, listen again, for many of them, perhaps a hundred thousand, have reached the shelters provided on the slopes of Mt. Athos, Mt. Zion, Mt. Lebanon, in Nazareth, on the Bosphorus; their hunger has been stayed; their wounds have been bound up. Now with their crying a little sound of thin and quavering song is mingled; for they are only children, after all, and they will sing if a chance is given. What are they singing?

Jesus, tender shepherd, hear me;
 Bless thy little lamb tonight;
 Through the darkness be thou near me;
 Keep me safe till morning light.

Well, shall they be kept? Let our great country speak and act with all her might to make peace on earth—peace with power. But, meantime, we, personally, must answer this closer question. Shall these little lost lambs be kept? And how?

How near is the Near East to us? That depends on how near we are to Christ.

MADE PERFECT

Christian love is one of those forces which no power above or below can dissolve. And if we know that we shall meet the Lord hereafter, so we know that we shall meet again those whom we believe to be with Him now. And there also shall every true and right desire and longing of the heart be more than satisfied; and chiefly those who in this world God thought it best to deny. And all the powers which some envious fate or unpropitious destiny kept in abeyance here, shall find the development to which they are sure, sooner or later, to come. All that deserves to be perfected shall be perfect for the sake of Him who was made perfect through suffering.—Dr. Morgan Dix.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

The First Institute of the Harmony Presbyterial for Georgetown County was held in the Presbyterian Church of Georgetown, S. C., Friday morning, November 17, 1922. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. N. W. Cooke. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. W. S. Porter. Mrs. Bert Livingston, of the Georgetown Auxiliary, made the welcome address, and the response was made by Mrs. J. I. Kirby, of the Andrews Auxiliary. Miss Amy Allen, of Charleston, gave a splendid talk on Assembly's Home Missions, following the outline of the text-book "Unfinished Tasks." Mrs. L. W. Gilland, of Kingstree, gave an interesting account of the work being done for colored people in her community, emphasizing the good results obtained from sending a colored woman to Atlanta for training. Mrs. W. S. Porter gave a report of the Synodical, and a report of the one day's conference held at Dalzell, S. C., was given by Mrs. F. A. Weatherford. A free-will offering was taken to help defray the expenses of speakers.

Miss Amy Allen, who has recently returned from a visit to the Orient, addressed the institute on the subject of Foreign Missions. It was indeed interesting and instructive to hear Miss Allen tell of her observations and experiences on her travels in Japan and Korea. This address concluded the morning session.

The good women of the Georgetown Auxiliary had prepared a tempting and bountiful lunch which was served in the manse adjacent to the church, and the representatives and visitors spent a very happy social hour together.

In the afternoon the Bible Hour was conducted by Rev. D. M. Clark, of Andrews. Mrs. W. S. Porter told of how Montreat had grown from a tent to the great and useful institution of today. The Standard of Excellence was explained by Mrs. A. K. Dill. There was also a helpful open discussion of Young People's Work. All seemed pleased with this first institute.

We have been requested to call the attention of our women to the Eighth Biennial Convention of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Southern Presbyterian Church, which will meet in Six Regional Centers as follows:

Houston, Tex., February 13-14; Little Rock, Ark., February 15-16; Jacksonville, Fla., February 20-21; Charlotte, N. C., February 22-23; Richmond, Va., February 27-28; Huntington, W. Va., March 1-2, 1923.

The subject is "World Evangelization." "If there was ever a time when the Church should emphasize evangelism it is the very moment when that practice of a social gospel, which is a poor substitute for the shed blood, is in the ascendant." To an alarming degree, this is now true, both here and abroad.

What Hath Already Been Wrought—We will hear from our foreign fields, from men who know what they know and know how to make it known. We will hear from our field in the Southland, and from men who have a thrilling story to tell of how God is winning men by the old, old method of using men and their testimony. The South is leading our country today in aggressive evangelism by laymen.

The Program—The program will be strong. Already a sufficient number of speakers of spiritual vision and power have accepted our invitation to assure our program being not one whit behind our former conventions. While we shall want carefully to review and consider the part we Presbyterians have assumed in giving the Gospel to the world, and the progress we have made in overtaking our world task, this will not be to the exclusion of the work in the homeland. Evangelism rightly occupies a central place in our "Progressive Program," and this will by no means be overlooked.

Women's Parallel Conventions—We are glad to announce that the Women's Auxiliary will hold Parallel Conventions in every city at the same time for the women of our Church. The same plan will be pursued as at our former conventions. The women meet separately in the day sessions, and both conventions unite for the evening sessions. Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, the Superintendent of the Women's Auxiliary, will be in charge and is enthusiastically enlisting the co-operation and support of the women. Mrs. Winsborough will spend several weeks this winter in Southern Texas and Mexico and will return in time to bring a full report of her personal observation of our greatly enlarged and rapidly developing work in Mexico and also among the Mexicans in Texas.

Rates—We are promised 25 per cent reduction in round trip railroad rates. This makes it possible for a large attendance.

Registration—The convention will be self-entertaining, as heretofore. The registration fee is $2.00. Circulars will be issued later in regard to railroad rates, hotel accommodations, etc. These will be gladly mailed upon application.

Call to Prayer—Pray ye the Lord of the Harvest, that from the convention may result widespread conviction that now is the time for us as a Church to fulfill our Lord's last command. Pray that there may be a determined effort on the part of pastors and congregations to match with gifts the wonderful offering of life on the part of our young men and women in seminaries, colleges and schools. "The one way of getting a thing done is to get Him to do it." Therefore let us set our hearts to prayer.

In the request for calling the attention of our women to these conventions we are asked to "Make such a general call that every woman will feel it a personal one."

Dear Women: Is it not too often the case that we read these important notices in our Church papers, and can it be sometimes even in our own Auxiliary column, and then turn to something else, with only a passing thought as of something possibly of general interest, failing to catch the real purpose of it—a message to each individual who reads it.

Please do not make this mistake when you see the notices, which will be coming out from time to time, of these wonderful conventions, but read them carefully, bear the meetings constantly on your minds and hearts, pray for the leaders and speakers, for those who shall hear the messages and work for a large attendance of women. To help insure the latter, go yourself.

A Logical Question—We are frequently asked what portion of the money given for Foreign Missions actually goes into the work and what part is consumed in expenses.

The Answer—Practically 90 per cent of every dollar contributed actually goes to the support of the missionary and his family and his work on the field. Only 5½ per cent is used for Administration expenses, and we do not know of any other board whose expense is smaller. Only a little more than 6 per cent is used for educational, propagation, and other expenses at home. This is necessary, as our income has very largely increased since the Progressive Program and other agencies have become effective. You will better appreciate this when you realize that our receipts for Foreign Missions have almost doubled within the last six years.

A Call for Prayer—To the women of the Southern Presbyterian Church comes the call for earnest, fervent, faithful prayer that our Father may honor and bless the Laymen's Conventions and Parallel Conventions for women to be held in the following cities beginning the 13th of February: Houston, Tex.; Little Rock, Ark.; Huntington, W. Va.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Richmond, Va., and Charlotte, N. C.

You may not be able to attend any of these conventions in person, but remember you may have a part in each convention through your daily prayer.

"And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do that the Father may be glorified in the Son."—John 14:13.

Sincerely yours, Corinne Puett,

Sec. Spiritual Growth N. C. Synodical.

HIS DIRTY LITTLE HANDS

His teacher said that I must scrub
His dirty little hands,
And so I always soak and rub,
Obeying her commands.

But, somehow, on the way to school,
He picks up dirt galore;
And when he's reached there, as a rule,
He should be scrubbed once more.

When he sits down to dine at night,
I'm always filled with shame,
His grubby hands are just a sight—
At luncheon, it's the same.

But, oh, I know there'll come a day
When I'll look back in vain
To little paddies soiled this way
And wish them here again.

Too soon the time will come when he
Is careful how he looks.
He won't be thinking then of me,
His daddy, or his books.

But now, his heart is ours alone,
And mother understands,
And holds them closely in her own—
His dirty little hands!

—Anne Campbell, in Detroit News.

Woman's Parallel Conventions. February 13-March 2. Leader: Mrs. W. C. Winsborough. For registration cards and general information folders, also programs, write The Woman's Auxiliary, Presbyterian Church, U. S., 256-259 Field Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

"THAT DAY"

By Julia H. Thayer

The two disciples . . . followed Jesus . . . and saw where he abode; and they abode with him that day.—John 1:37, 39.

Davidson—A social hour was observed at a recent meeting of the Women's Auxiliary in the Civic League Hall in honor of Miss Mary A. Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hill, Mr. Hill being an elder in the Davidson Church. Miss Hill is a missionary to China under the Northern Church and is ending her furlough this week. She returns in the immediate future to her mission field.

The annual praise meeting of the ladies of the Auxiliary is being held tonight in the League Hall. Despite the prevalence of the flu and other things making against the usual full attendance, the program will be a most engaging one and the offerings liberal. The Auxiliary contributes a very large fraction to the annual budget of this church, notably in its gift to Foreign Missions. It has in its membership not a few tithers and the sum total of the funds received is an amount to stir the ambition of the male membership of the church to greater endeavor and to similar zeal in the matter of support of the beneficent causes.

Travel letter from Mrs. Winsborough—I had three delightful days in Mexico City, seeing the Union Boys' School at Coyoacan and the Girls' School at San Angel. As it is vacation time only a few students were in the schools but the teachers were there—the Morrays at Coyoacan and Miss McClelland at San Angel. But I am not going to tell you about Mexico City tonight.

Neither can I tell you all about the mission meeting which was held at Toluca this year at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wray. I will only mention the fine spirit of fellowship that marked the gathering. Two of our U. S. A. brethren were present as guests, and it seemed like one-big family.

I want to tell you in detail of my visit to Zitacuaro, the home of Rev. and Mrs. H. L. Ross and Miss Beatty.

I spent the first night with Rev. and Mrs. Farrior who are there temporarily, pending their removal to a new field decided upon at mission meeting. These are two of the 13 fine young people who went to Mexico last year. On Saturday morning, about nine o'clock, Mr. Ross took me to his house and soon the whole Ross family, including three children and I, were on the road to the little village of San Francisco, two and a half miles distant, where we were to meet members of several village churches for an all day meeting. It was a glorious morning, cool and bracing and the landscape one of rare beauty—flowers of every hue rioting over the stone fences and clamoring up the mud walls of humble homes; mountains lifting their heads into the blue sky and a stream of picturesque people passing along the highway; burros heavily loaded patiently clambering up the rocky hills; women with the national "robosa" or black scarf draped round their heads, usually a baby in their arms and with bare feet trudging along; sombrero-hatted men wrapped in blankets of varied hues and feet tied into leather sandals. One blind woman had erected an ingenious sunshade from a piece of matting and was evidently seated for her day's work of capitalizing her misfortune, though Harvey Ross (aged 9) was quite sure "she could see out of one eye when she wanted to!"

With such interesting surroundings the distance was soon covered and we reached the village and home of the elder who was to be host of the day. It was a very plain home, bare of what we consider the necessities of life,—walls of adobe brick, bare wood floors, a few chairs, a bed with coverings immaculately white, a few advertising pictures on the wall, everything scrubbed to shining cleanliness. The gentle courtesy which greeted us is characteristic of these Mexican neighbors of ours, who in soft musical tones bid you welcome to their land and their home with a grace and sincerity that wins the heart.

The morning service was held in the little white-washed church of the village and groups of boys and girls home for the holidays from Coyoacan and San Angel schools led the singing. A simple Gospel sermon followed from a young Mexican minister, grandson of one of the pioneer Protestant workers in that section, more song and prayer and the meeting closed and all wended their way to the beautiful grove back of the cottage of our host, where picnic dinner was served. The guests of honor were seated at a table in the midst of the party while the others sat on the ground and hot tortillas and other Mexican dishes were brought from the nearby kitchen to add to the food brought from homes. About 125 were present at lunch, and games followed with much merriment. Folk songs, school songs and hymns led up to the afternoon services just before the sun sank behind the mountains, when the strange "strange lady" tried to speak to them through an interpreter. The eager, attentive faces made me long to speak to them in their own beautiful language.

Good-byes followed, with the native embrace and melodious "adios" and we found ourselves laden with flowers and fruit and on the way home in the dusk of evening. Miss McClelland and Miss Beatty were accompanied some distance by girls from their schools who had brought them each an armload of roses and wanted to escort them well on their way, in true oriental style. As we climbed the hills of the homeward road we were passed by throngs of laden burros and mules carrying produce into town in time for the Sunday market, which is the gala day of the week. An early walk through the streets on Sunday showed business in full blast, crowds of buyers and sellers thronging the market place. There is no Sabbath in Catholic Mexico!

But at the little Presbyterian Church, children were gathering for Sunday School and the whole morning period was devoted to teaching the Bible to the more than 200 who gathered there before the close of the service. A group of several Indian men and women came who had arrived at the village the afternoon before too late for the meeting. They had walked 57 miles to the meeting. They spent the night in the village, rising early and coming into Zitacuaro to church. Two women had carried babes in their arms! How one longed to talk directly to that earnest group that night, as the church filled with men and women anxious to hear a message from their Christian brethren in the United States! How utterly inadequate one's words seem in the face of such an opportunity!

Kind words of appreciation from the scholarly Mexican pastor followed, many more good-byes, embraces and handclasps, and the visit to Zitacuaro is over!

We might find it in our heart to envy the splendid possibilities and opportunities which God has brought to Mr. and Mrs. Ross to which they are devoting their talents and strength with rare consecration as they labor day by day among these Gospel hungry, responsive and lovable people.

Mexico, January 15, 1923.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(UNDER AUSPICES SYNOD'S COMMITTEE OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C.

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

We have this week a fine set of reports covering the activities of the young people. We think the "sunshine" activities of the Intermediate Endeavorers of Raeford a remarkable set of accomplishments for any set of young people, and we congratulate these Intermediates for their zeal. We welcome, also, the report from the High School Bible Class of Hickory, the first organization of this kind to report.

Our young people are busy at work. No doubt there are many others who are doing just as fine work as those who have reported. To stimulate reports we are with this issue beginning to list on a "Reporters' Honor Roll" all those who send us news. It will be a real honor to be on this roll, for it will show those whose names are included there are keeping up with what is going on and also trying to help other young people. "Come to see us" regularly and often. You will be ever so welcome.

We are requested by the Monthly Service Superintendent of the State Christian Endeavor Union to urge the Endeavor societies to report monthly on their activities. It was under the Monthly Service Program that the Raeford young people, mentioned above, did such fine work in December. A special activity is presented each month. Reports and requests for information should go to Miss Maud Little, 902 West Avenue, Charlotte.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

FEBRUARY 4, 1923

THE GRACE OF GRATITUDE
Luke 17:11-19

GOLDEN TEXT—"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name."—Psa. 100:4.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

11 And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.
12 And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off:
13 And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.
14 And when he saw them, he said unto them, Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.
15 And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God,
16 And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan.
17 And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?
18 There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.
19 And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 7. What are the decrees of God?
A. The decrees of God are, his eternal purpose, according to the counsel of his will, whereby, for his own glory, he hath foreordained whatsoever comes to pass.

For favors received and for services rendered many are not as grateful as they should be to man. It shows lack of courtesy and refinement as well as of piety for a person to appropriate benefits from their fellows without thankful acknowledgement. If men are remiss in this matter in their human relations and intercourse, how much more do they manifest it in regard to God, from "Whom cometh down every good and perfect gift." Many individuals and families receive from God day and night, life, light, air, food, preservation and multiplied personal and domestic blessings without a word of prayer, praise or thanksgiving. The grace of gratitude may well be considered for there is a sad lack of it among mankind. In expounding our lesson we will contemplate Opportunities Embraced; Faith Promoting Prayer; Faith Tested and Rewarded; Gratitude Shown.

I. Opportunities Embraced

Christ going from Galilee through Samaria to Jerusalem meets near a village ten lepers. They probably had not met Him before and were not likely to encounter Him again. His coming near them gave them an opportunity of being healed of which they avail themselves. Embracing this opportunity was a matter of life or death with them. The attainment of many things depends upon our improving our opportunities. Getting an education, securing a competence, possessing wealth, acquiring efficiency in business and many other desirable objects are contingent upon our using our opportunities as they present themselves. It is so in regard to piety or becoming a Christian. Jesus as the Son of God is always near us. But He is sometimes nearer to us than at others. When we read the Scriptures, when we pray or others are praying for us, when we are in the sanctuary of worship, or when a revival of religion is in progress and the Spirit of God is manifestly present in the conversion of souls, Christ draws near, His Spirit strives with us, and if we avail ourselves of the opportunity it is easier to become a Christian. Salvation or perdition may result from our embracing or neglecting our opportunity.

II. Faith Prompts Prayer

The lepers had some knowledge of Christ, of His sympathy, power and beneficences. Knowledge leads to faith. "Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God." One reason why men do not have more faith in Jesus is that they do not study the Bible. But Jesus' fame was throughout all Palestine and adjacent countries, and the lepers had heard of Him. Therefore, when they see Him, with loud voices they cry, "Jesus, Master, have mercy on us." When sinners realize that they have moral leprosy and that the end is death, and see in Jesus the only Saviour, as did these lepers, they too will pray for salvation. The lepers did not cry in vain, nor will any sinner. "Whosoever calleth upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

III. Faith Tested and Rewarded

Christ did not heal the lepers immediately. He told them, "Go, shew yourselves unto the priests," to present offerings and to get certificates of cure. "As they went they were healed." The reality and strength of our faith is tested by delay. But this is not easy to bear. Abraham, promised a son by Sarah, had to wait for the fulfillment 25 years, and showed signs of impatience and weakness. The lepers' faith too was tested by obedience. They had to go some distance to the priests before healing was realized. They had to manifest willingness to obey Jesus before His power was exercised for their cleansing. Men sometimes say they trust Christ, but don't unite with His people nor confess Him before men. They don't obey Him and yet are surprised that they do not have assurance of pardon and salvation. "With the heart we believe unto righteousness and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." In the path of obedience the lepers found that their faith was rewarded by healing.

IV. Gratitude Shown

One healed leper, and he was a Samaritan, returned to show his gratitude for the complete and marvelous deliverance he had experienced. Nine out of ten appropriated the blessing without any acknowledgement of the benefits they had received. The leper healed had good reason for thankfulness. His restoration to soundness not only delivered him from loathsome and deadly disease, but restored him to his family, his friends, and to many social and religious privileges. He manifested his sincere gratitude by his return, thanksgiving and praise. "He glorified God" and was assured by the Master that "His faith had made him whole."

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

THE TESTIMONY PSALM

M., Feb. 5—Testimony In Praise: Ps. 147:1-7.
T., Feb. 6—In Worship: Ps. 100:1-5.
W., Feb. 7—In Example: I Thess. 1:5-10.
T., Feb. 8—In Witnessing: Eph. 6:18-20.
F., Feb. 9—In Conversation: Acts 8:26-30.
S., Feb. 10—In Daily Life: I Tim. 6:1-6.

Sun., Feb. 11—Topic: Lessons from the Psalms.
2. The Testimony Psalm. Ps. 145:1-21. (Consecration meeting).

In what ways may we testify?
What is the value of giving testimony?
Why should testimony be based on experience?

This is called The Testimony Psalm. In it David makes a testimony of his opinions and feelings about God. He tells what he thinks of God, and how he feels about what God has done for him, just as a witness would tell what he knows about people or events. He wants others to know of his ideas, because he is grateful to God, and he knows what God will do for those who will love, trust and obey Him.

Such testimony to God is extremely important. If we are earnest Christians, we feel we must tell others our experience with Christ, because He loved us and gave Himself for us. It will increase our love and faith to make this testimony. Then, it will interest others in becoming Christians, who would not think of it unless they heard others tell of Jesus. Many people are led to Christ by personal testimony, who are not impressed by the preaching and Sunday School.

It is the testimony of Christians which has kept the Church alive and growing from generation to generation, as David says in verse 4. If religion is a good thing, we must tell it to others. It is wrong to keep silent, for by our silence the truth would disappear, and the Church would die. So every Christian, young and old, should never lose an opportunity to say a word for Jesus, and let others know of his faith in Him and love for Him. As the blind man to whom Jesus gave sight, we can say, Whereas I was blind, now I see, and others will want Jesus to help them. In this Psalm, David makes his testimony to several things, as he praises God.

I. Testimony to God's Greatness

David declares God's greatness is unsearchable, no man can ever find out all about how great God is. All the things God has made show His greatness and power. Think of the stars and worlds in the sky, think of this earth, and its continents and oceans, its awful forces, like storms, electricity, fire under the earth which comes forth in volcanoes, great floods of the rivers, the heat of the sun, and many other things. Then God has wrought miracles, as when he helped Moses divide the Red Sea, and when Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead. We should praise God for His greatness.

II. Testimony to God's Holiness

God is all holy. His wonderful Word, the Bible, reveals His holiness and freedom from sin. The Ten Commandments are His judgments against sin. He has planted His law in our conscience, which speaks to us, warning us against sin, and rebuking our transgressions of God's law. God hates sin, and as the awful punishment for it, He made a place for sinners in hell, with the devil and his angels. The sufferings of Christ on the cross show how much God hates sin.

III. Testimony to God's Goodness

In verses 15 and 16, David tells of God's goodness. He is good to all, both the evil and the good. He supplies them with food, shelter, warmth, light, health and strength. Every good gift is from the Father of lights, in whom is no variableness or shadow of turning.

IV. Testimony to God's Grace

David says God is nigh to all that call upon Him. He hears their prayers, and saves them from sin. This is God's grace, or goodness to the sinner. No sinner is so bad, but God will save him. This is the greatest testimony we can give to God and Christ, the testimony of His grace to us in forgiveness of sin, help in temptation, strength for duty, and His answers to our prayers.

Young people's societies should encourage all to make a testimony for Christ. This ought to be done by each one, without reading a clipping, for that is more like giving somebody else's testimony, and not your own. Get up and say what you think of Christ, and what religion means to you, and it will do you good and all who hear you.

SOCIETIES URGED TO ENTER MERIT CUP CONTEST

Dear Friends: We want to call your attention to the four lines of work covered by the contest for the Merit Cup to be presented again this year to the Christian Endeavor or other young people's society making the highest percentage in these four lines.

First we want to study the Home Mission work of our Church. To obtain the greatest efficiency in this work we should study together as a society or with some older person as teacher, one of the most interesting books we can get on this subject. If you cannot study as a class, just as good results, and sometimes even better can often be obtained by passing the book around until everybody or nearly everybody has read it carefully.

Then the second thing we want to be sure to do is to study in the same way at least one of the many good books on Foreign Missions.

When we really get together in the proper spirit, praying and working on missions, we will go way over last year's contributions to the College Fund for Barium and to the support of our Sunday School Missionary. The third point, then, is contributing to both these causes which, as you know, we have been contributing something to each year, even if it was only a few dollars, because we know that we cannot grow in Christian grace unless we give in Christian service.

And then when we are getting so much out of our young people's society and are really doing things, other people will want to join in and help. The fourth point, then, that we want to work on is to make sure that we have at least a 10 per cent larger band next June than we had last. We must get busy on this right away.

The four points for us to remember in working the cup contest plan are:

- I. Home Mission Study.
- II. Foreign Mission Study.
- III. Contribution for College Fund for Barium and for our Sunday School Missionary.
- IV. Ten per cent increase in membership.

We must carry on the work in this contest and all our work in the spirit of prayer and relying on God for strength.

Elizabeth C. MacDonald, Secretary,
Hope Mills, N. C.
Wilson W. Moore, President,
U. T. S., Richmond, Va.

REPORTERS' HONOR ROLL

Carey P. Lowrance, Mooresville.
Paul W. Rawlins, Greensboro.
Miss Eunice Long, Greensboro.
Miss Minnie Hopkins, Concord.
Miss Leila Hubbard, Lumber Bridge.
Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, Route 5, Durham.
Miss Aline Whitener, Hickory.
Miss Maud Little, Charlotte.

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The Christian Endeavor Society in the New Hope Church, near Chapel Hill, was organized about six months ago. The society has recently had a series of unusual and interesting contests. In one contest the society was divided into two teams, one team giving the comments on the topic one week and the other team giving them the following week. The members of the team making the best set of talks were given prizes. Another contest was on the plan of an old-fashioned spelling match, Bible questions being used. A singing contest between the boys and the girls is now in progress. The society has a good literature table and collects reading matter for distribution to missionaries.

The High School Bible Class of the First Presbyterian Church of Hickory held its first meeting of the year last week. Officers for the coming year were elected, including a class reporter. After the business part of the meeting a happy evening of games, followed by refreshments, was spent. This Bible Class was founded some time ago under the supervision of the State and credit is given to all High School students who take this course.

"Sunshine Month" in the Christian Endeavor Monthly Service Program was made a month of real sunshine by the Intermediate Endeavorers of Raeford. During the month of December they sent $5.00 to the Leper Mission at Kwanju, Korea, and $5.00 to Beechwood Seminary, in Kentucky. Cards were sent to missionaries and their families in the name of the society, and cards and gifts to needy people and "shut-ins." Several scrap-books and clippings were sent to invalids. A "sunshine social" was held, at which there was a tablet and pencil shower for Barium Springs Orphanage. Some of the refreshments were taken to a few of the older people of the church. Flowers, fruit and candy were carried to people who needed cheering. With the aid of the pastor the boys held a service for the prisoners at the jail, and also carried these people a basket of fruit. Several girls read on different afternoons to an old lady with deficient eyesight.

What a remarkable record of joy-bringing and joy-giving service!

The Hendersonville Presbyterian Senior Endeavorers sent a pair of C. E. cuff buttons to their former pastor, together with an honorary membership card. Christmas cards were sent to the faculty of Beechwood Seminary and to the society's honorary members in Africa. This society has a literature rack at the railroad station.

Who's next?

Church News

ARMENIAN RELIEF

Received for this cause:
Mrs. J. T. Montgomery ----- $5.00
Mulberry Church ----- 10.00
Mrs. J. M. Hodges ----- 7.00

BARIUM NEWS NOTES

Mr. Johnston spent Monday and Tuesday in Lincolnton, packing his household goods for moving. We hope to have Mrs. Johnston and the children with us real soon.

The Communion of the Lord's Supper was celebrated in Little Joe's Church, with preparatory services Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights.

Miss Brown has returned to her work after a much needed rest. She spent a few days with relatives in Mooresville. Miss Brown has been having a busy time for the past several months.

The influenza situation is somewhat more encouraging than it was last week. There are still quite a number of sick ones in the infirmary, but no one seriously ill. We are hopeful there will be very little more trouble. Two of the pneumonia patients are up and going about the house.

Parks Earnhardt, who was burned right badly, is still suffering very much with his leg. From the amount of noise he makes when his leg is dressed, Parks must be suffering intensely.

Miss Adams, matron of the first floor of the "Lottie Walker Building," is spending a few days with her mother and sister at Stony Point.

Mr. and Mrs. McCorkle, the dairyman and matron of Alexander Building, have moved to Charlotte. The new dairyman, Mr. Privett, from upper Iredell, is moving in this week.

UNION SEMINARY

To Pastors and Church Sessions of our Controlling Synods.

Dear Brethren:

You will be interested in the following figures showing our enrollment of regular students, Juniors, Middlers and Seniors, exclusive of special and graduate students, for the past three years:

1920-'21--77; Juniors, 24; Middlers, 33; Seniors, 20
1921-'22--101; Juniors, 48; Middlers, 24; Seniors, 29
1922-'23--114; Juniors, 46; Middlers, 46; Seniors, 22

The increase is 48 per cent.
In 1920-'21 the number of students to be aided from our scholarship funds was 32. In 1922-'23 64.

This increase is 100 per cent.

In 1920-'21 we reached the end of the year without striking the bottom of the treasury—we had a small surplus.

In 1921-'22 this surplus was used up and we had a deficit.

In 1922-'23 we face a very large deficit. We have done everything we can to avert it, building up revenue by careful handling of the funds, and forcing down the expenses by close scrutiny of all demands, and yet it looms ahead of us.

We cannot look forward to offsetting it by a surplus in 1923-'24 because we will graduate a small class this year and we have every indication of a large Junior class again next year, consequently the demands on our resources will be still greater. Unlike Colleges of Liberal Arts, we charge no tuition. Each additional student makes a distinct addition to our expenses.

We are confident the church does not wish us to accept this deficit without a struggle any more than she would wish us to turn away these students from our doors on the plea that we are short of funds.

There is only one way to avert it, and that is to let you, the leaders of the church, know the situation, and ask you to lead the people to our relief.

We are already counting on receiving as much from the church treasurers between now and March 31st next as we received in the corresponding period last year, about $5,000.00. This will not be enough by about $10,000.00. What we must have by March 31st, in order to come out even, is $15,000.00.

The Lord is answering your prayers for more laborers, and is greatly blessing our work, but our treasurer is sorely perplexed. Please bring this to the attention of your congregation, and do what you can to meet the situation brought about by this answer to your prayers.

And, please continue to pray for still more laborers. They are needed, and are worth all they cost.

Fraternally,
Geo. L. Christian, Chairman,
Russell Cecil,
F. T. McFaden,
John S. Munce,
F. S. Royster,
W. W. Moore,

Executive Committee Union Theological Seminary.

PASTORS, CONGREGATIONAL SECRETARIES, SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS—PLEASE GIVE ATTENTION

We are getting a large number of orders in every mail for supplies for the Every Member Canvass on March 18th. Order Forms have been sent to every pastor and to every congregational secretary. Let us plead with you to send in your order just as soon as possible. They are coming but not fast enough.

We are not going to flood your church with printed matter without an order from you. It is free and up to date. If your Order Form did not reach you write for one at once.

We are going to press today (January 25) with a Responsive Exercise for the Sunday Schools for March 11th. This covers the Principles of Stewardship, the meaning of our program, our budgets, etc. It will be worth the time of any Sunday School to put this on either on March 11th or some day as near to this as possible. Many orders are coming in. We will hold the printers forms on this until February 15th. If you have not sent in your order for this please do so at once. We have tried to reach every Sunday School superintendent in the Church but certainly have missed some. If you are in doubt write for a sample of the Exercise.

Let us all pull together this year for the most effective canvass our Church has ever had. The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee
410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

GLADE VALLEY CHURCH

The wrong credit was given in our last issue, in the article on Glade Valley High School.

Mr. E. P. Wharton was the generous donator of the piano to the school and Miss Mary Greene is the music teacher.

SOUTH CAROLINA

The Edgefield Group, composed of the churches at Edgefield, Trenton and Johnston, have been very much refreshed under the ministry of their new pastor, Rev. Harold Edward Wright, who came to them from the Community Church in Charleston. Mr. Wright organized and became the pastor of that church, it being his first pastorate. Prior to his ordination he was a most successful religious work secretary, and during the war rendered signal service at the Charleston Navy Yard.

Since his coming to the Edgefield churches on October 18th he has received into the churches 15 members; nine at Edgefield, five at Trenton, and one at Johnston. Mr. Wright is an energetic conscientious worker, and a forceful speaker. His life is wholly given to the work of the kingdom, and already the whole community has learned to love him and his lovely family. The group considers that they have been extremely fortunate to secure the services of this consecrated man of God and look forward with great hope into the future.

Greenville, Third Church—Prominent among the points of encouragement in the work of this church during the year just closed was the successful evangelistic campaign held late in November. The pastor, Rev. J. G. Walker was assisted by Rev. R. A. Lapsley, Jr., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of Columbia, S. C., who, twice daily, for ten days presented the Gospel message in a clear and effective way. The singing was in charge of Rev. J. B. Belk, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Piedmont, S. C. His winning personality, good solo voice and the hearty response of the large chorus choir which he led added no small amount to the success of the services.

Besides the season of refreshing to the congregation and community, there were ten additions to this church on profession and ten by letter. The free-will offering for expenses and purses for the leaders was upwards of $300.

The Home Mission Committee of Enoree Presbytery was invited to hold its quarterly meeting in this church January 9th, and the occasion was turned into a Home Mission rally. After the business session, the members of the committee were honor guests at a supper in the social hall, which was served by the Woman's Auxiliary. To this supper had been invited the pastors, ruling elders and deacons in the Presbyterian churches of Greenville and community. Following a delightful hour of fellowship, addresses on the Home Mission work were made by Rev. J. F. Matheson, chairman of Presbytery's Committee, by Rev. J. K. Roberts, superintendent of Presbytery's Home Mission, and by Rev. John M. Wells, D.D., president of Columbia Seminary. Special emphasis was laid on Congregational Home Missions, and the facts emphasized by use of special lantern slides. Before adjournment the gathering requested the sessions of the various churches to appoint a member to a central committee whose duty should be to plan for a permanent organization among the officers to advance the work of the kingdom in this community and elsewhere. The 65 officers present were enthused with the idea.

Last week a beautiful new piano was installed in the secondary division of the Sunday School, and will fill a long-felt need. Funds for this piano were raised outside our annual church budget during the last nine months, by taking a special free-will offering on each fifth Sunday from the various church organizations. Under the fine leadership of Mr. B. B. Smith, the superintendent, it was great to see the increase in interest and gifts in the case of even the youngest, as the stated times approached.
Pastor.

NORTH CAROLINA

Charlotte, Second Church—The many friends of Dr. McGeachy will sympathize with him in the death of his mother, which occurred in Laurinburg. Dr. W. H. Frazer, of Queens College, filled his pulpit in his absence, both morning and evening.

Charlotte, Caldwell Memorial Church—For nearly two weeks, special services have been held in this church of which Rev. G. F. Bell is pastor.

Dr. Charles H. Pratt, of Montgomery, Ala., and Dr. W. H. Dobyns, of Birmingham, Ala., have been preaching daily, Dr. Dobyns in the afternoon and Dr. Pratt in the evening. The attendance has been fine and the preaching has fully sustained the reputation of these two brethren.

Charlotte, First Church—A year ago, the Margaret McKinnon Book Memorial was founded for the free distribution of evangelical books and literature. During the year just past, hundreds of copies of such books and booklets as "The Bible and Its Enemies," by Bryan; "Shall Unbelief Win?" by McCartney; "Rightly Dividing the Word of Truth," by Scofield; "Christian Evidences," by Archibald Alexander; and "A Summary of Christian Doctrine," by Francis L. Patton, have been sent all over the world, most of them going to students, ministers, and missionaries. This memorial, which is perpetual and places $600 a year to this splendid service, is in memory of a Christian woman, and for the glory of God.

Fayetteville Presbytery—A called meeting will be held in the Highland Church, Fayetteville, February 13, 1923. The formal call will be issued in due time, about February 1st. If any ministers or churches have any matters requiring the action of Presbytery which cannot wait until the regular meeting, please send in such items to the stated clerk before February 1st, that they may be included in this call.
E. L. Siler, S. C.

Attention, Synod of North Carolina—As Synodical chairman of Foreign Missions for the Synod of North Carolina, I am calling the attention of all the pastors to the request of the Executive Committee, that each pastor, if possible, preach a sermon on Foreign Missions on February the 11th, or 18th. Compliance with this simple request, surcharged with prayerful interest, will prove a dynamic in this crisis time of our work.
A. S. Johnson.

Please Remember!—That February is the month that Synod has set apart for a collection for Presbyterial Home Missions. May all the churches of Fayetteville Presbytery send something that month to our Presbyterial treasurer, Dr. E. C. Murray, St. Pauls, N. C. This is a good time for delinquent churches to send in arrears. We have just two more months in which to get up money enough to pay all expected of us for workers and all other expenses. Churches to the rescue!
L. Smith.

Salisbury—Second Presbyterian Church, of this city, has called Rev. Eugene Alexander, of Raeford, to be pastor and it is considered probable that he will accept the call. Rev. C. B. Heller, who has been pastor of this church, is expecting to go to Balden County to look after one or more churches. Concord Presbytery will meet here soon to act on Mr. Heller's request for dismissal to the Wilmington Presbytery.

Mount Airy—The elders and deacons of this church held a conference on Sunday, January 21, with Rev. S. M. Rankin, superintendent of Home Missions in Orange Presbytery, regarding the enlarging of the work of Presbyterianism around Mount Airy. This church has a beautiful chapel built of granite right in the heart of what is known as the "Rock" community. At the conference with Mr. Rankin it was decided to make an effort to put a man in this community to give his whole time to the work there. If this can be worked out it will be a step forward for our denomination in this section as can be seen from the fact that up until about 10 years ago the church here in town received some help from the Home Missions Committee. Now this church gives more for "others" than it spends for itself.
Z. V. Roberson, Pastor.

Sugar Creek Church—After the extensive repairs on the Manse were completed, water, sewerage, and lights were installed, and today it is one of the most comfortable and convenient in Mecklenburg Presbytery. Though this required the expenditure of about $2,500, yet at a joint meeting of the officers, recently held, our proportionment for benevolences for the coming year was assumed in full, and Mr. V. L. Hunter was appointed church secretary for the Every Member Canvass.
The complete and admirable Progressive Program of our Church was endorsed and some of the goals adopted to work to, hoping to adopt others later. There have been eight additions to our membership recently and a number of others have expressed their intention of coming at an early date. A prayer band has been organized and a number of the members are uniting daily in their petitions for an abundant outpouring of His Spirit.
M. E. Peabody, Pastor.

Gastonia—More than three hundred delegates and visitors, members of the Gaston County Christian Endeavor Union, attended the quarterly rally at Belmont, Friday night, January 19th. With the lavish hospitality of the young people of the Belmont First Presbyterian Church, the zeal, enthusiasm and interest of the delegates, it was easily the best meeting in the history of the union. Features of the meeting were a splendid address by Mr. W. Grady Gaston, of Gastonia, and the friendly rivalry and enthusiastic competition developed in the contest for the county banners. The Armstrong Memorial senior society outdistanced all competitors and carried home the banner for the largest attendance, having an enrollment of 44 with 43 present. Cherryville nosed out New Hope and Belmont, by having 20 present of an enrollment of 20, and was awarded the banner for the largest percentage of enrollment present. The president, Rev. Roswell C. Long, made an earnest appeal for all members to be much engaged in personal work during the coming year and that all efforts of all societies be concentrated on "winning souls for Christ."

Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Wilmington—Rev. Leonard Gill, one of the Synod's evangelists, closed on January 21st a two weeks meeting in this church. He preached each night to large congregations. There were no day services in the church. However, prayer meetings were held each day in different homes. During the first week Mr. Gill preached principally to the church members. The church was aroused as never before during the present pastorate. Men and women who had been nominal members came forward to assist in the personal work. A band of personal workers was organized. This band met each night before the service and prayed together and each gave an account of what had been accomplished during the day. Many unsaved people were brought to the services by these workers, and a great number on their prayer list made profession during the meeting.

Mr. Gill proved to be the right man at the right time. We know he was sent to us by the Lord. His sermons were strong, clear and effective. His ability to illustrate and drive home the truth is remarkable. From the very start he won the people. Mr. Andrew Burr led the singing. His long, rich experience and consecrated life enabled him to make the singing a blessing to all and a means of reaching many unsaved persons.

God has confirmed again his promise to save men by the simple preaching of the Gospel. During this meeting many souls answered the call of the Christ and gave their hearts to Him. There were 91 professions, 72 uniting with this church, six with other Presbyterian churches of the city, 12 with the Baptist Church and one with the Methodist. There were also four persons received into this church by letter. A total of 95 persons united with churches. The majority of these were adults. A number of families pledged themselves to establish the family altar in their home.

An offering of $111.00 was made to Synod's Home Missions. A free will offering taken for Mr. Burr amounted to $75. God is using these men in a wonderful way to save souls.
D. T. Caldwell, Pastor.

ALABAMA.

Mobile—Government Street Church—At the communion service January 14th the pastor announced the names of 32 members received since last October. The outstanding feature of interest in the work of the past quarter has been the large attendance upon the Sunday evening services.

Montevallo—Dr. C. W. Boyd and A. G. Irons, Tuscaloosa; Dr. Dunbar Ogden, Mobile; and Dr. R. W. Miles, Auburn, of Synod's Committee on Home Missions, met at Montevallo, on Tuesday, January 9th, to discuss with the pastor, Mr. P. H. Carmichael, and other local Presbyterians, the question of erecting a new church building at this place.

The ladies of the church delightfully entertained the members of the committee at dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Rogan.
F. L. B.

ARKANSAS

Arkadelphia—The First Presbyterian Church has called Rev. Hugh Robertson, of McGehee, as pastor, and Mr. Robertson has the call under consideration at this time. The Arkadelphia Church has been vacant since the resignation of Rev. J. V. Johnson last October.

El Dorado—Dr. Frank E. Fincher, one of the General Assembly evangelists, is holding a very successful meeting in the First Presbyterian Church, of El Dorado. In this meeting he is assisted by his singer, and by Rev. F. Florian Fitch, who has been serving as supply for El Dorado for several months.

Monticello—The first year of the pastorate of Rev. Stuart R. Oglesby, Jr., closed on the fourth Sunday in January. During this year, 72 new members have been added to the church rolls. Three young men from this church are preparing for the ministry. The work is well organized in all departments and prospects for real development and constructive work during the coming year are bright.

Educational Drive in Arkansas Begun—Under the direction of Dr. H. H. Sweets and the Louisville Committee the drive to secure $406,000 for the educational institutions under control of the Synod of Arkansas has begun in earnest. The men who will direct the canvass are already at work within the State. Several weeks ago at a meeting held in Little Rock an executive committee of 15 was named to perfect plans for this drive, the chairman of this committee being the present Governor of Arkansas, Hon. Thomas C. McRae, a ruling elder in the First Presbyterian Church, of Prescott.

The Ozark Assembly—Although the summer assembly of the Synod of Arkansas has not been definitely located for 1923, the dates for the conferences have already been fixed by the committee. The Adult Conference will meet from June 5th to 11th, and the program will be in charge of Dr. John Van Lear, chairman, H. L. Paisley, and R. E. Carroll. The Young People's Conference will meet from June 12th to 19th, with the program in charge of Rev. Charles Hadden Nabers, R. E. Fry, chairman, Mrs. George W. Sheffer, and a committee from the Synodical. These committees will arrange both program and place in Little Rock during the Laymen's Conventions next month.

FLORIDA

Pensacola—The First Church, of which Rev. Francis Tappey, D.D., is pastor, received 114 new members during 1922, nearly one-half of them on confession of faith. More than three fourths were adults. At a meeting of the church officers on Monday, January 15th, the architect's plans for an annex to the present Sunday School building were accepted and the building committee authorized to proceed with the work. The annex will cost $20,000 and will provide class and assembly rooms for the overflow of the present school and for 200 additional pupils.

Plans have been perfected for a "Simultaneous Campaign" of all the Protestant churches in the city, to begin March 18th and close April 1st. Our session has arranged with Rev. Trigg A. M. Thomas, D.D., one of our Assembly evangelists, to conduct the services in our church, and to bring his evangelistic singer. Each church in the city will hold services at the same hour and in its own building. The Knox Church, although without a pastor at this time, is also making arrangements to enter this campaign. It is hoped that large results will issue from this city-wide evangelistic service.

GEORGIA

Savannah—The Independent Presbyterian Church of Savannah receives its annual reports on the third Sunday in January, and the session reports in many respects the best year in the long history of this historic old church.

In spite of the exceptional financial difficulties the gifts for its own work and for beneficences have been exceptionally large, and the additions on profession of faith larger than for any similar period, since the pastorate of Dr. Daniel Baker, nearly one hundred years ago.

The congregation has requested the privilege of adding to its list of missionaries Rev. George Hudson, who hopes to join his father, Rev. W. H. Hudson, D.D., at Kashing, China, where the Independent Presbyterian Church of Savannah will complete this year the tenth of the group of churches it agreed to erect in Kashing Province. It is hoped also that early in the summer the amount on hand for the Nellie Rankin Memorial building at Chunju, Korea, will be sufficient to authorize the committee at Nashville to begin the erection of this much needed addition to the equipment of that station.

Mr. Malcolm R. Williamson, of the Senior Class at Columbia Theological Seminary has accepted the position as assistant to the pastor, and executive secretary of Young People's work, and will enter upon his duties the first of June.

Doctor and Mrs. Anderson are completing an interrupted summer vacation, spending a week with friends in Orlando, Fla., and Doctor John M. Wells supplies the pulpit of the church on January 28th.
A. G. C.

MARYLAND

Baltimore—Franklin Street Church—Rev. Leighton G. McMillan, of Alabama, and chaplain with the A. E. F., has been engaged as associate minister in this congregation. Mr. McMillan has already entered upon his duties.

Baltimore—Maryland Avenue Church—This church has just installed a new heating plant hot water, in the manse, which adds greatly to the comfort of the pastor and other occupants of the house. A new piano has just been installed in the lecture room of the church. But notwithstanding these extra demands on the membership they did not forget the pastor at the Christmas season, for the usual purse of gold arrived at the manse. Rev. W. J. McMillan, D.D., is just closing the eleventh year of his pastorate in this church and he bears cheerful testimony to the uniform thoughtfulness and kindness of his people, for which he is most grateful.

On Sunday morning, January 14th, Moses Groves, Howard Cartledge, Francis B. Payne, and William F. Sippel, were ordained and installed as ruling elders in this church. At the same time Messrs. T. C. Whitner, Charles E. Frank, Donald H. Garver, and Allen Z. Pentz, were ordained and installed as deacons.

MISSOURI

Kansas City—At the regular winter communion in Central Presbyterian Church, January 14th, 53 members were welcomed into the fellowship of the church, 24 on profession of their faith and the rest by letter.

Plans for the superstructure of this church are now in the hands of contractors, building to begin within the next 30 days.

Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock the Baby Church
(Continued on page 10)

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 9)

of the Presbytery of Upper Missouri, the First Presbyterian Church of North Kansas City, opened to the public the first unit of their new church building. This young church, situated in a growing industrial section of Kansas City has a bright future before it, and now, under the leadership of Rev. J. G. W. Kirschner, is doing a splendid work.

TEXAS

Dallas, First Church—The months of January, February and March are being largely devoted to special work in personal evangelism among the Presbyterian congregations of Dallas.

The five Southern Presbyterian churches have been districted into approximately 170 divisions with five leaders for each district.

A course of 10 lessons in personal evangelism will be conducted through 10 consecutive weeks, beginning January 24th, in each congregation. Unity, Harmony and Uniformity mark this special campaign throughout.

Each congregation adopts its own goal for special increased activities, maintaining its own autonomy. In the First Church this means an increase of about 100 per cent in several departments of the work.

The First Church welcomed 103 new members in the quarterly communion service on Sunday, January 7th.

Waco—An interesting project has been set on foot in connection with the Mexican Presbyterian Church, of Waco. It is proposed to build a chapel to be known as The Anna King Memorial Chapel in memory of Mrs. King, wife of the late Dr. S. A. King, for 40 years pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of Waco, and at the time of his death one of the professors of the Austin Theological Seminary.

Heirs of Mrs. King have given $1,000 toward the proposed chapel; the gifts of the First Church toward the equipment fund, taken up on Sabbath, December 10th, and which amounted to about $1,200 have been given to the memorial chapel. It is expected that $4,000 will be raised for it.

The Waco Mexican Church is making encouraging progress. A Woman's Auxiliary, a Junior and a Senior society of Christian Endeavor have been organized recently; and an additional elder and two more deacons have been elected and ordained. Rev. W. S. Scott is in charge.

Crockett—The year 1922 was to this church a prosperous one. There were 16 members added to the church, 14 of them by profession, resulting from a revival while Dr. Thacker was with us. Also resulting from this revival, and from pastoral work and faithful work of the deacons, our church finances show a healthy growth. In fact the largest contributions we have had for many years came in the past year. The amount given for Home Missions (including what was raised for the Thacker meeting, which went for the evangelistic branch of Home Missions) was about $600. For the other benevolent causes of our Assembly about $660 were given. For our local home work about $2,000, including repairs and repainting our church building, besides a legacy of $500 given by one of our deceased members, the interest of which is to go as her annual contribution to pastor's salary.

From what I know of the statistics of the Church at large the benevolence of this church the past year compares favorably with that of the Church throughout the bounds of our denomination, considering the number of members, and the size of the community, and our financial circumstances. We have no rich members of this church. The men, women, and children all contributed. There was no financial drive, nor progressive program—only Bible instruction and appeals from the pulpit, and work of the deacons, the Ladies Society, and the Sabbath School. No outsider was imported to come in between the pastor and his people to rally the people to a high figure of gifts. It has been the habit of the pastor for 50 years (long before progressive programs and laymen's conventions were invented) to preach to his congregation what the Bible teaches about giving, and to rely upon the Holy Spirit to apply the truth to the hearts and liberality of the people. I fear in these days we are in danger of emphasizing too much large gifts, but I hope I have not exceeded in what I have said. My estimates are rather under than over the facts. It should be told that God's good providence worked with the Gospel means in that a large cotton crop was produced in our country and it brought a high price.

S. F. Tenney.

VIRGINIA

Roanoke Presbytery is called to meet in Danville at 2 p. m., February 6th, at Central Y. M. C. A., to consider the resignation of Rev. V. G. Smith as pastor of the Shelton Memorial Church, and to dismiss him to the Presbytery of Fayetteville, if the way be clear.

Also to consider a change in the legal status of the manse of the West Pitsylvania group of churches.

Orange Church—The Christmas season was a busy one in this church. The evening of the 24th was taken up by the program of the Sunday School. Misses Elma Williams and Martha Boxley were in charge of this program. The young people did well. The following Wednesday evening there was a Christmas tree in the church. The "grown-ups" of the Sunday School shouldered the burden of planning and making possible this happy time. Bad weather kept a good many of the school away, unfortunately. The last evening of the old year there was a union service to which all the preachers and congregations of the town were invited. The church was crowded. The singing, by union choir and congregation, was magnificent. Rev. T. W. Hooper, Culpepper, preached a good sermon—good enough for any occasion and very appropriate. Henry Thompson Holladay our organist till going to Hampden Sidney, arranged the entire program.

Recently all officers of the church, three elders and five deacons, were at the manse for supper. Towards the end of the evening pleasure gave way to business. The deacons elected Mr. Harry Sanford their chairman. The officers directed the pastor to urge all the members to be present the following Sunday. After the morning service more than $800 was pledged towards paying all indebtedness and ending the church year free from debt.

Last summer a piano was bought for the Sunday School and Young People's work. The young people pledged themselves to pay for it. Assisted by the older people and the Woman's Auxiliary this piano has been paid for. The Woman's Auxiliary has finished paying for the beautiful and expensive carpet that was laid in the church about a year ago.

The congregation very thoughtfully and kindly remembered the occupants of the manse at Christmas.

E d u c a t i o n a l

Davidson—Quite a large delegation, possibly 20 or more men attended at intervals the Y. M. C. A. State Conference held in Charlotte the first of the week and had the privilege of hearing John R. Mott in three splendid addresses, not to mention other inspirational talks by distinguished speakers in attendance.

In response to a call from the senior class (William Cooper, chairman) for names of prospective students for the session 1923-24, 221 names were handed in representing 14 or more States. Not more than 174 new men can likely be accommodated next year, hence the importance of early application for reservations. The first application was received for the September or fall term. Others no doubt will quickly follow.

Mr. J. B. Ivey, of Charlotte, the well-known business man and prominent layman of the Methodist Church; will address the Y. M. C. A. at its regular meeting on Sunday afternoon.

Flora Macdonald College—Branch Association No. 40 was organized in Lumberton on Friday with Dr. Vardell present as guest of the association. Mrs. K. M. Barnes was elected president and the association started with an enthusiastic membership.

A meeting of the St. Paul's Branch was held on last Friday at the home of Mrs. L. A. McGeachy, with Mr. Rice present to represent the college.

Special preparations are being made by students of the French, Spanish and English classes for the producing of their respective plays on February 3rd, March 3rd, and March 12th.

A student recital was held in the auditorium on Friday afternoon with the following taking part: Miss Nell Britt, Georgia; Miss Alice Barr, South Carolina; Miss Elizabeth Wallace, Alabama; Misses Agnes Bustard, Ruth Rhodes, Virginia; Misses Hazel Lewis, Lucile Tate, Grace Goodman, Catherine Deaton, Hannah McNeill, Murphy Hall, and Mary Alice Boyd, North Carolina.

A large audience of students, faculty, townspeople, and representatives of the numerous high schools in the vicinity of Red Springs attended the showing last Monday of the big feature motion picture, "Julius Caesar."

Dr. Vardell spoke on Sunday morning at a union service held in the Presbyterian Church, his subject being "A Town and an Open Door."

To Flora Macdonald Alumnae—Greetings: We have good news, for all of you. First, that the work of Anna McQueen, one of Flora Macdonald's daughters, has grown to such an extent that she is pressed for room. Recently her appeal for $1,000 appeared in this paper. This is greatly needed to carry on her work successfully. She writes: "Mrs. Stearns has offered to give a thousand dollars to build a new dormitory, provided some member or members of the Southern Church will give the same amount. Won't you help us pray for a thousand dollars? Don't be afraid we will get too many answers, for while we are only asking for $1,000 now, we really need about $2,000."

The second piece of good news is that we, her collegemates, are launching a campaign among students and alumnae for this amount here in the college. Under the direction of the Y. W. C. A., Liberty Bell banks have been hung on each hall and daily the girls are dropping in their contributions for Miss McQueen's work. These banks are opened every two weeks and the hall having the fullest bell is announced as ahead—until they are opened again. However, there are only 229 of us to your 2,800. We need your help. You have probably received a letter containing the appeal, asking that each Flora Macdonald girl send one dollar. If each one send a dollar the amount can easily be raised. Since Flora Macdonald girls have always done big things, let us all pull together and answer Miss McQueen's call. If you have not received your letter, write for it or send your dollar to Billie Whiteside, President Y. W. C. A.; Eliza MacKay Whitted, President Student Body.

News of the Week

In the South Carolina Legislature last week J. K. Henry, of Chester, solicitor of the Sixth judicial circuit, was elected by the General Assembly as judge of the district to succeed the late Judge Ernest Moore.

The penitentiary probe has been the center of interest in the Legislature of South Carolina. The members of the prison board admit that dual control has been inefficient.

In the North Carolina Legislature, the House by a vote of 87 to 14 voted for the Good Roads Bill. The committee on water commerce voted unanimously in favor of the State-owned shipping bill.

The Senate would not give Senator McDonald's bill to create a pardon board a moment's consideration, although it had been reported favorably by the constitutional amendment committee.

Governor Morrison personally is opposed to a pardon board and the General Assembly shows little disposition to relieve him of a burden which he himself does not complain of.

Voting to proceed with a definite plan for presenting the University medical college project to the General Assembly, the board of trustees adjourned with the announcement that it would meet again February 6th to hear propositions from all cities interested in bidding for the college.

Giving their hearty endorsement to the proposal to establish a four-year medical department of the University of North Carolina, and locating the third and fourth year terms of the school with the clinic at Charlotte, a number of the most prominent business men and officials of Gaston County industrial enterprises, meeting with the medical affairs committee of the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce, adopted resolutions that were promptly forwarded to Governor Cameron Morrison and the State Legislature at Raleigh, calling on them to enact legislation for the establishment of this school in Charlotte at once.

Although the British debt commission sailed for home with the mission which brought it to America uncompleted, well informed officials in Washington are by no means pessimistic over the possibility of an early agreement for the refunding of the British war debt to the United States.

Substitution of a 12-mile limit for the three-mile limit now drawn by international law has been recommended to Washington as a means of combatting the rum fleet off the Jersey coast. This recommendation, it was said, was an outgrowth of the conference between Acting Collector of the Port Stuart and prohibition enforcement authorities.

A grim game is being played by the French and Germans along the valleys of the Ruhr and the Rhine. For every turn whereby the French and Belgian occupation forces register a tactical or military advantage the German residents carry out a new form of passive resistance.

The six German industrialists, headed by Fritz Thyssen, who were arrested by the French occupation authorities in the Ruhr for refusing to carry out orders given them to insure reparations deliveries from their respective plants, were convicted by court-martial. In each instance fines were imposed in francs. The aggregate amount, translated into American money, was $20,000.

German industrial leaders in the Ruhr to the number of 18 have been arrested for obstructing the occupation orders of the French. They were sent to French military headquarters at Mayence, where they will probably be placed on trial. In consequence of this drastic action, the occupying forces are menaced with strikes of a far-spreading nature. These are not likely to be confined to the mine workers, but all classes in the Ruhr valley may cease work in sympathy.

French policy in the Ruhr was attacked as "ruthless militarism," a violation of the armistice terms and the treaty of Versailles and an "offense against humanity" in a statement issued by Senator Borah, of Idaho, a Republican member of the Senate foreign relations committee. Senator Borah also criticized the State department for what he said was its policy of silence and inactivity and declared the United States should at least declare its attitude by formally protesting against the French policy.

CHILDREN

A CHURCH MEMBER

Dear Standard:

This is my second letter to you. I am twelve years old; I am in the seventh grade. Miss Margaret Virginia Erwin is my teacher. I like her fine. I go to the First Presbyterian Church. Miss Lena Leslie is my Sunday School teacher. We have a new pastor, Rev. Jesse C. Rowan and I think he is fine. I joined our church not long ago. I hope my letter will not reach the wastebasket as this is only my second letter.

Your little friend,
Nett Fleming Harris.

Concord, N. C.

TO SING A SOLO

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl 11 years old, and am in the sixth grade. My teacher is Miss Maud Harris, we are just crazy about her. Our superintendent is Mr. L. M. Epps, he is very nice.

I have gone to Sunday School for six years without missing a Sunday. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Annie E. Johnston, our pastor is Rev. Daniel Iverson.

Mr. Iverson is organizing a children's choir. I am going to sing a solo tonight and a few other girls are too. My father has a radio and we hear it most every night. We cannot hear it sometimes because there is so much noise. We have a very pretty airdale, we call him "Jack." Our family has five boys and two girls. I am the youngest of them all. I will close for fear of the wastebasket.

Your friend,
Harriet Holderness.

Tarboro, N. C.

A FINE TEACHER

Dear Standard:

This is my first letter to you. I am nine years old. I am in the third grade; my teacher is Miss Donnell. I had a birthday the ninth of this month. I take music from Mrs. Peters. She is a fine teacher. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. My sister and brother go too. My sister's name is Mellie and my brother's name is Thad. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Bryan. I go to the Presbyterian Church. I surely enjoy reading the letters. Your unknown friend, Elizabeth Pressly.

Tarboro, N. C.

GRANDDADDY HAS A RADIO

Dear Standard:

This is my first letter to you. I am a little girl seven years old. I am in the second grade. Miss Paddison is my teacher. I like her fine.

Mr. Epps is very nice. I sure do enjoy the children's letters. My granddaddy has a radio in his house. I go to the Presbyterian Sunday School. Miss Bryan is my Sunday School teacher. I have a little brother two years old. I will close for fear of the wastebasket.

Your unknown friend,
Elizabeth Green.

Tarboro, N. C.

An aerial wedding took place the other day 3,000 feet over New York. Lucky that the bride did not change her mind at the last minute and throw her fiance over.

—London Opinion.

THE NEW YEAR TREE

It had long been the custom in the Elliott family to strip the Christmas tree on New Year's morning and to put away all the Christmas decorations for the next year. For three years Robert, who was now eleven, had been the one to climb up on the stepladder and hand down the high-up trimmings, while nine-year-old Elizabeth and seven-year-old Tom wrapped the things up and put them into boxes. Then, when the branches were bare, the tree was thrown from the nearest window, and carried to the trash pile in the back yard.

This particular New Year's Day the plan was changed, because Elizabeth had been ill for a long time and was not able to do her share. However, she was well enough to watch the others from a big chair and help out just a little with a word now and then. As for work, she could only sort the gay beads and wrap a few of the things, but she was happy to do even that.

When the tree was finally stripped, Robert and Tom dragged it to the window and threw it out into the snow.

"It doesn't look like the tree we had a week ago, does it?" said Robert. Indeed, it did not. Then it had been fresh and green and had smelled of the woods; now the branches were bare and the whole tree looked dingy.

"Let's ask mother if we can't make a bonfire of it," suggested Tom.

"Oh, no, boys!" Elizabeth exclaimed, with a shiver. "That would seem like burning up Christmas! If you don't want to put it on the trash pile, why don't you play with it? I should think that would be fun."

"Fun to play with that bare thing?" Robert rejoined scornfully "What could we do with it?"

"With the Christmas tree?" asked Mrs. Elliott, who came into the room just then. "I have a plan, but I don't intend to tell it till the last minute. Come, boys, put on your sweaters and mittens and set the tree up in the back yard."

Robert hesitated. "Elizabeth can't go outdoors," he said. "I wish she could play with us sometimes!"

"She's going to play with you this time," said Mrs. Elliott. "She's an important part of this plan. You run along and do your share, and Elizabeth and I will do ours."

The boys lost no time after that; they knew something jolly was on hand. When they had dragged the tree to the yard they set it upright and began to brace it with planks.

As soon as they left the room, Mrs. Elliott brought four boxes to Elizabeth's chair, and four trays filled with the most curious-looking things the little girl had ever seen.

"Why, mother!" she exclaimed. "What in the world is this?"

"Sh-h!" said Mrs. Elliott. "We'll have to work very fast, because the boys will be back in a jiffy. Put everything into the boxes as quickly as you can. Fill each box with the contents of one tray. Then I'll cover the boxes and tie them up."

Elizabeth went to work without another word, and just as the cover was tied on the last box the boys came rushing into the room.

"The tree's up!" exclaimed Robert. "What next?"

"Next, you each choose two boxes," Mrs. Elliott replied. "First you take one, then Tom; then you again, and Tom takes the last."

"But what's in the boxes?" asked Tom. "Wait and see!"

"You'll like it," added Elizabeth, although she was almost as much in the dark as he. "Hurry and choose."

"I'll take the little round one," said Robert. "The best goods come in the smallest packages, I've always heard."

"I'll take the long, slim one," Tom declared.

"Then I'll take the square one," Robert reached for his second choice.

"That leaves me the flat one, and I wanted it, anyway," said his brother. "Now, may we open them?"

Elizabeth nodded, and they pulled off the covers in a hurry. The boys' faces looked blank, and Elizabeth's somewhat puzzled.

"What's all this?" Robert asked in a disappointed voice.

"Why, mother!" cried Tom. "What can we do with these things?"

"Trim a tree for somebody," replied Mrs. Elliott. "Can't you guess who it will be?"

The children thought a minute. "Oh, I know!" Elizabeth broke in, her eyes shining. "The birds! It will be fun! See, Robert, you have suet in your box. Bits of that will do for the small ornaments."

"And Tom has pieces of apple, strings of pop corn, Robert added; "and here are bread crumbs to take the place of beads."

They took up their boxes and started out.

"I wish Elizabeth could see us trim the tree," said Tom, pausing at the door.

"She's going to," replied Mrs. Elliott. "Robert, you take one arm of her chair and I'll take the other and we'll carry her to the window of the back room. Then you boys get to work, and your sister will watch you."

It was not long before that backyard, left-over Christmas tree was so trimmed up that it would hardly have known itself. Bits of white suet ornamented the twigs, and ropes of white pop cord and festoons of bread crumbs hung from branch to branch.

Scarcely had the boys finished and joined Elizabeth at the upstairs window before a little bird—one of a flock that had quickly gathered—ventured down for a taste. Evidently he was satisfied, since he stayed for more. Presently his friends, seeing him feasting so happily, came flying down for their part.

"I think that's as much fun as a tree indoors," said Elizabeth happily. "But won't they eat every single thing before night?"

"Never mind about that," laughed Robert. "Tom and I will retrim it every day if you and mother will furnish the trimmings."

"That's a bargain," said Elizabeth. "I love to string things. And there'll be no more hungry birds in our backyard! We'll call it our New Year's tree and keep it trimmed as long as the snow covers the ground."

After that year the Elliott Christmas tree never failed to do double duty.—Clara Ingram Judson, in The Youth's Companion.

FATHER'S BAG

"My father's bag?" asked Jimsy, stretching his overalled length lazily in the fragrant summer grass. "Of course my father brings a bag when he comes, week-ends. Brown leather—looks sort of kicked in. He's had it a long time, I s'pose. Why?"

"I didn't mean, what does it look like outside," explained Billy, idly stroking the back of a beetle with a wisp of grass. "I mean, is there always something inside?"

"Why, of course, or he wouldn't bring it, would he?" Jimsy's voice sounded the scorn of the logician. "What things? My goodness, Billy, what funny questions you do ask! Collars. I s'pose, and brushes and a comb, and maybe socks for mother to darn—I don't know. Oh, yes, and newspapers. Always lots of newspapers stuffed in. Why?"

"Oh, I don't mean those things," said Billy, blocking the beetle's progress with a stone. "When does he open it? Is your father coming up today on the same train that my father is, or on the last one?"

"Same train," yawned Jimsy, his eyes on sleepy white clouds sailing in a blue sea high above the green treetops. "When does he open it? My goodness, Billy, what makes you ask such funny questions, anyway? How do I know what minute he opens it?"

"I know the minute my father opens his," insisted Billy. "He dumps it on the piazza when he comes, and it's stuffed out fat—fat's a—fat's a Thanksgiving turkey. My father's bag never looks a bit kicked in; the leather's always stretched as tight as a drum. And I poke it, but he just laughs and says, 'No, not till after dinner—not a peek!'"

"Why? What's in it?" asked Jimsy, carelessly.

"Thank goodness it's dinner-time when my father gets here," went on Billy, forgetting his beetle, and spreading a broad grass-blade between thumb and finger, preparatory to a screeching whistle. "Guess the train's just leaving Boston now, don't you think so?"

"'Bout half-way to Lowell," decreed Jimsy, squinting an eye at the sun as if he could tell accurate time by it. "But what's in your father's bag? Doesn't he bring collars and newspapers?"

"Guess so," said Billy, indifferently. "Never noticed much—'cause there's so much else for everybody."

"For everybody? What?" demanded Jimsy, his interest at last awakened.

"Why, s'prises, of course," said Billy. "Guess you'd be s'prised if your father handed you a flat box and you opened it and found the Scot cooking-kit you'd been saving for, yourself."

"Guess I would!" agreed Jimsy.

"Well, I was," said Billy. "We've cooked supper with it three times already down by the river-bed. Best bacon! Um-m!"

"He doesn't bring you a s'prise every single week-end?" Jimsy's eyes were as incredulous as his voice.

"Not just for me—for everybody," said Billy. "Week he brought my cooking-kit he brought mother a box of peppermints, 'stead of a book. Most usually he brings mother a book, but she likes peppermints as well as I do—she says so. And that time he brought Alice a little box of Japanese flowers. When you open the box they don't look like flowers at all, they look like little pieces of sticks, green and red, but when you put them in water, they open into flowers and leaves—tiny bits of ones—on stems."

"But he gave you a cooking-kit. Did Alice cry?"

"Cry? 'Course not. Why? Oh, I know what you mean, but that doesn't matter anyway. One week he brought Alice a doll, a pretty big one, new kind that floats, with a real bathing-suit that you can take off and hang on the bushes to dry. We swim her—I mean Alice swims her—in the duck-pond. 'Course I go along, so if she floats out too far I can pole her in."

"What did he bring you that week?"

"Just a little puzzle, little metal pieces; you make a square of them. Get them at the Five-and-Ten," said Billy, contentedly. Then looking up, he answered the surprise plainly written on Jimsy's face by saying: "But there's always something that's fun. Doesn't have to cost much to be fun, my father says."

(Continued on page 12)

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Neely-Severs—Mr. Ralph B. Neely and Miss Willie Severs, both of Charlotte, N. C., were married by Rev. J. G. Garth, January 27, 1923.

DEATHS

Kiser—On January 22, 1923, Leroy Kiser, aged 19 years, 7 months, and 2 days, departed this life, at the home of his father, Mr. George Kiser, in Cabarrus County. He joined the Presbyterian Church at Midland, N. C., in the summer of 1921. He took an interest in helping about the church.

Walker—Ben, the six-year-old son of Mark S. Walker, died at Union Ridge, January 18, 1923. He had been sick only a short time with pneumonia. He was much loved by those who knew him. He leaves a father and two little sisters.

MRS. ANNA EUDY HEIM

Resolutions adopted by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Lincolnton Presbyterian Church:

In loving remembrance of our faithful friend, Mrs. Anna Eudy Heim, who left us for the home above, December, 17, 1922. A life-long member of our church and a charter member of our Auxiliary. Always ready, always willing, always faithful, in her service to her God, her family, and her friends.

As devoted co-workers we wish to express:

1st. Our thankfulness for, and appreciation of, her life.

2d. Our sincere sympathy for her family.

"I call it not death, it is life begun. For the battle is fought and the Home is won. To depart from a world of sin and, To be with Jesus; yes, this is life."

Mrs. Edgar Love.

Mrs. Jno. C. Ramsaur.

Mrs. R. S. Abernethy, Committee.

MRS. MARY SHEPHERD MACNEILL

Mrs. Mary Shepherd MacNeill, wife of George P. MacNeill, who entered suddenly but gently into rest, January 7th, is worthy of commemoration in language far exceeding the conventional and stereotyped formulas in which we are wont to herald the virtues and hallow the memory of those who have passed from death unto life. "One moment here the next she trod. The viewless mansion of her God."

Mary Shepherd MacNeill, sister of the writer, born at Fayetteville, Aug. 17, 1851, blended into harmony all those ideal qualities of mind and heart which yield as their logical result the noblest type revealed in human character, or exhibited in human experience. Sprung from an ancient and historic lineage, she developed from her very childhood, those distinctive charms and graces of manner and bearing which constituted the fadeless glory of the Southern woman during the unique and inevitable day that sank into darkness and despair with the coming of Appomattox. To her native winsomeness, almost resistless, Mary Shepherd added a heroism unsurpassed in the fantasies of chivalry or the wildest dreams of knightly romance. To cite a notable illustration, when our home at Fayetteville, was laid waste and desolate by Sherman's vandal hord, March, 1865, this girl of thirteen, rescued from one of his hirelings at the peril of her own life, a rare and beautiful Chinese work-box brought from this then remote continent by a deceased uncle, and regarded as a sacred heir-loom and treasure. After a desperate struggle, during which the box was torn into fragments, it was recovered by this young heroine of the days that are dead, and in the condition in which it was recaptured, is in the hands of the brother, who is describing the incident. To the exalted and ennobling elements, fearlessness, moral and physical, a sweetness and attractiveness of demeanor toward every class and condition, my sister's crowning grace was her complete abdication of self and her absolute consecration of spirit. From earliest days, Holy Scripture and the Shorter Catechism were her oracles and her inspiration. For her the transition had no terrors. Like Tennyson's peerless hero, her spirit seemed to rise "from high to higher" and to invest her with surpassing radiance as the end drew near. We may rest assured that the Laureate's tribute to his friend may be claimed for Mary Shepherd MacNeill with equal justice, delicacy and propriety. "Death has made his darkness beautiful with thee."

Henry Elliot Shepherd.

CHILDREN

(Continued from page 11)

"Then you had all the money you'd saved up toward your Scout kit for something else? Anything you wanted?" questioned Jimsy.

"Course, said Billy, joyously. "I've spent forty cents of it already."

"What for?"

"Well," said Billy, magnificently, "I thought my father was pretty good to give me that Scout kit, and the next week Mr. Brown—you know, the farmer we're staying with—let me ride to Bristol with him, and I saw some neckties in a window, marked twenty-five cents—pretty ones, stripes—and I bought one for my father—yellow and green."

"You did!" Jimsy sat erect. "Did he like it?"

"Like it?" Billy's eyes shone. "He said it was different from any necktie he'd ever had and he liked it the best. He said he hated to wear it out in the city where we couldn't see it, and so he keeps it here, and he wears it every week-end, all the time he's here. And that day I got my mother a little bag of peppermints and Alice a five-cent bag of peanuts. Alice likes peanuts better'n a chipmunk."

"What'd you get yourself that day?"

Billy also sat erect and looked startled. "Why, I never thought about it till this minute, but I didn't get a thing. I was thinking all the time about the money I didn't have to spend for my Scout kit. It's fun to have money, isn't it?" he sighed.

"Guess it is!" agreed Jimsy. "I get twenty-five cents a week, do you?"

"So do I. Some boys get only ten cents. You can do a lot with twenty-five."

"Did your father always do it? Bring you things every single time he comes, I mean?" asked Jimsy, after a thoughtful pause.

"Course," said Billy. "Always. I don't mean we 'spect them, 'zactly, but they're always there! He says he gets twice as much fun out of it as we do! Don't fathers make funny jokes?"

"Yes," said Jimsy, slowly.

"Here comes Mr. Brown," said Billy, suddenly. "I'm going to ride home with him. Oh, Jimsy!" he stopped to call back, "if you can, come down to the river-bed tomorrow for supper—'bout six! Think your mother'd let you? We'll be going down—my father wrote he can't wait to taste the bacon I fry!"

"Come if I can," answered Jimsy, a little listlessly.

The next afternoon Jimsy fled down the river-path, crashed through the underbrush, and dashed up to Billy, who with his family was kindling a small fire to leeward of a large boulder. "Billy, look!" he shouted breathlessly, diving into his pocket and flourishing a fine size jack-knife under Billy's nose.

"Scout knife!" shouted Billy. "How many blades? Yes, sir, every one—where?"

"My father came yesterday, you know," began Jimsy, casually, though he was radiating happiness from every pore, "and after dinner he opened his bag"—

"Other fathers have bags, then, too!" said Billy's mother, happily.

"Why, you didn't say yesterday," began Billy.

"Well," said Jimsy, snapping blades open and shut, "he just hadn't thought 'bout it, that's all, or he would have—always, like your father. And last week he came up on the same train with your father, too, and I 'spect they got to talking"—

"Talking!" said Billy's father. "I guess maybe two bags got to talking under the seat. Come here, both of you, and tend this fire."

"Is that the necktie Billy gave you?" asked Jimsy with great interest.

"It is," said Billy's father, gravely, "and my proudest possession. I wouldn't have a spark light on it for worlds."

"My father says," says Jimsy, with beaming face, "that he's going to increase my allowance to thirty cents a week. He thought of it all himself. 'Course I didn't ask. I want to buy him a necktie, too. Think he'll like it as much as you like this one Billy gave you?"

"He will, I can speak for him," said Billy's father, decidedly.

And mother sang suddenly and unexpectedly, "Hurrah for all fathers' bags!"—Rose Brooks, in Zion's Herald.

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD

Effective November 13, 1922
Leave Charlotte Except Sunday 7:30 a. m. for Norwood, Mt. Gilead, Star, Varina, Raleigh and intermediate points
Connects at Star for Aberdeen, Ashboro and intermediate points
Connects at Raleigh for Wilson, Washington, Greenville, Belhaven and intermediate points
New equipment and improved Schedules
One way fare Charlotte to Raleigh $5.64
J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

MINISTER WANTED for Riverside Church. A mission Church in industrial section of city with splendid opportunities for growth. Essential that minister's wife should have some practical knowledge of social service work. Salary $1,500 and manse. Address references and qualifications to First Presbyterian Church, P. O. Box 1136, St. Joseph, Missouri.

For Sale, one cottage in Montreat, eight rooms including dining room and kitchen. New range in dining room, plumbing, etc., just overhauled and cottage freshly painted. Lot on main road, about half way between Gate and Post Office. For prices and particulars write J. G. Parks, care Parks-Belk Co., Concord, N. C.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY

Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923
Charlotte, N. C.
Daily Except Sunday as Shown Lv. 7:30 A. M.
Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.
For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to
J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

ART GLASS
For Churches and Residences
Memorial Windows
Catalog and Special Designs
Free on Request
F. J. COOLEGE & SONS
Atlanta, Georgia

MARDI GRAS CARNIVAL
NEW ORLEANS Feb. 8-13, 1923 MOBILE Feb. 11-13, 1923 PENSACOLA Feb. 10-13, 1923
SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM
Announces
VERY LOW ROUND TRIP FARES
NEW ORLEANS: Tickets on sale February 6-13 inclusive
MOBILE: Tickets on sale February 9-13 inclusive
PENSACOLA: Tickets on sale February 8-13 inclusive
Final limit of all tickets February 20, 1923
If presented prior to February 20th, tickets may be extended until March 7, 1923, by paying fee $1.00.
FINE FAST THROUGH TRAINS DAILY
Pullman sleeping cars, observation cars, club cars, dining cars and coaches.
For further information and details call on nearest agent.
R. H. GRAHAM
Division Passenger Agent
Charlotte, N. C.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Passenger Traffic Service

Improved Passenger Train Schedules

Effective December 17, 1922

(Schedule figures are given as advance information and are approximately correct. Figures at intermediate stations changed proportionately.)

To Passenger Agents, Ticket Agents, Conductors, and Connections:

Effective Sunday, December 17, 1922, passenger train schedules will be improved as follows:

No. 31	AUGUSTA SPECIAL	No. 32
1:10 PM	Lv New York	Ar 1:30 PM
3:20 PM	Lv West Phila.	Ar 11:13 AM
5:27 PM	Lv Baltimore	Ar 9:05 AM
7:00 PM	Lv Washington	Ar 7:30 AM
10:25 PM	Lv Charlottesville	Ar 4:07 AM
12:32 AM	Lv Lynchburg	Ar 2:08 AM
2:20 AM	Lv Danville	Ar 12:15 AM
3:55 AM	Lv Greensboro	Ar 10:55 PM
4:20 AM	Lv High Point	Ar 10:18 PM
5:35 AM	Lv Salisbury	Ar 9:37 PM
6:50 AM	Ar Charlotte	Lv 7:55 PM
6:55 AM	Lv Charlotte	Ar 7:45 PM
7:40 AM	Lv Rock Hill	Ar 6:52 PM
8:11 AM	Lv Chester	Ar 6:19 PM
9:00 AM	Lv Winstboro	Ar 5:34 PM
10:05 AM	Ar Columbia	Lv 4:35 PM
10:15 AM	Lv Columbia	Ar 4:30 PM
10:41 AM	Ar Lexington	Lv 3:53 PM
11:16 AM	Ar Leesville	Lv 3:20 PM
11:20 AM	Ar Batesburg	Lv 3:16 PM
11:39 AM	Ar Ridge Spg.	Lv 2:59 PM
11:56 AM	Ar Johnston	Lv 2:43 PM
12:15 PM	Ar Trenton	Lv 2:30 PM
1:10 PM	Ar Aiken	Lv 1:40 PM
1:15 PM	Ar Augusta	Lv 1:30 PM

"a" Stops to discharge or receive passengers from or to points North of Charlotte. These trains will continue to handle same equipment as at present.

New local trains will be established between Charlotte and Columbia as follows:

No. 3	No. 6
5:45 AM	Lv Charlotte	Ar 7:05 PM
5:58 AM	Lv Griffith	Ar 6:48 PM
	Lv Hebron	f
6:03 AM	Lv Pineville	Lv 6:30 PM
6:20 AM	Lv Fort Mill	Lv 6:17 PM
6:26 AM	Lv Carhartt	Lv 6:08 PM
6:40 AM	Lv Rock Hill	Lv 5:55 PM
6:51 AM	Lv Ogden	Lv 5:42 PM
6:58 AM	Lv Smith	Lv 5:35 PM
7:05 AM	Lv Lewis	Lv 5:28 PM
7:20 AM	Lv Chester	Lv 5:15 PM
7:28 AM	Lv Evans	Lv 5:07 PM
7:40 AM	Lv Cornwell	Lv 4:57 PM
7:47 AM	Lv Blackstock	Lv 4:50 PM
7:54 AM	Lv Woodward	Lv 4:44 PM
8:05 AM	Lv White Oak	Lv 4:34 PM
8:11 AM	Lv Adger	Lv 4:28 PM
8:23 AM	Lv Winstboro	Lv 4:18 PM
8:30 AM	Lv Rockton	Lv 4:10 PM
8:36 AM	Lv Simpson	Lv 4:04 PM
8:48 AM	Lv Ridgway	Lv 3:54 PM
8:52 AM	Lv Smallwood	Lv 3:49 PM
9:02 AM	Lv Blythewood	Lv 3:39 PM
9:06 AM	Lv Sharp	Lv 3:32 PM
9:13 AM	Lv Killian	Lv 3:26 PM
	Lv State Park	f
9:25 AM	Lv Fairwood	Lv 3:13 PM
9:45 AM	Ar Columbia	Lv 3:00 PM

Schedule of train No. 1 Columbia to Savannah will be changed as follows:

Lv Columbia	10:45 AM
Lv Cayce	10:52 AM
Lv Styx	11:02 AM
Lv Shuler	f
Lv Edmund	11:15 AM
Lv Macedon	f
Lv Pelion	11:27 AM
Lv Thor	11:34 AM
Lv Berlin	f
Lv Perry	11:48 AM
Lv Sally	11:58 AM
Lv Springfield	12:09 PM
Lv Whaley	f
Lv Walker	12:20 PM
Lv Blackville	12:30 PM
Lv Ashleigh	f
Lv Barnwell	12:48 PM
Lv Yemome	12:57 PM
Lv Kline	1:05 PM
Lv Cave	1:09 PM
Lv Seigling	f
Lv Allendale	1:22 PM
Lv Barton	1:33 PM
Lv Valentine	1:45 PM
Lv Lena	1:55 PM
Lv Furman	2:05 PM
Lv Pineland	2:16 PM
Lv Tarboro	2:25 PM
Lv Tillman	2:34 PM
Lv Deerfield	2:44 PM
Lv Hardeeville	3:00 PM
Ar Savannah	3:45 PM

The schedule of RICHMOND DIVISION trains Nos. 8 and 108 will be changed as follows:

No. 8
Lv Danville	7:30 AM
Lv South Boston	8:40 AM
Ar Keyesville	9:59 AM
Lv Keyesville	10:10 AM
Ar Richmond	1:10 PM

No. 108
Lv Durham	6:00 AM
Lv East Durham	6:10 AM
Lv Jeffress	8:45 AM
Ar Keyesville	10:00 AM

Train No. 108 connects at Keyesville with train No. 8 for Richmond.

Agents and representatives will give this improved service widest possible publicity.

W. H. TAYLOR, Pass. Traffic Mgr., Washington, D. C.

W. A. BECKLER, Pass. Traffic Mgr., Cincinnati, Ohio.

E. N. AIKEN, Gen. Pass. Agt., Cincinnati, Ohio.

H. F. CARY, Gen. Pass. Agt., Washington, D. C.

Story and Incident

AFTER FORTY YEARS

"Honk! Honk!"

Hezekiah Andrews, homeward bound with a load of wood, glanced up the road, and an instant later aroused his night ox with his goadstick. "Haw!" he shouted. "Haw!" The echo of his voice had little more than come back to him from the adjacent hill when a big cream-colored touring-car whizzed by amid a cloud of dust.

"Thar he goes!" snorted Andrews. "Hoggin' the road the same as he al'ays does! An' the time was thet Sam an' me was as thick as hasty-puddin'—forty year 'go. In them days Sam figgered that he couldn't go fishin' 'less the two on us was together. Now thet he's made his pile he's all swelled up like a toad. He don't know me when he meets me on the road. Thet's what money has done for Sam. Go it! Ye won't get my place! I don't car' if ye buy up ha'f the town! Ye won't budge me!"

It was about a year previous that Mr. Samuel Coggeswell had returned to his native town and there started the building of an elaborate summer residence. He had had the old Coggeswell homestead torn down, and a half mile or so back from the road he had erected a mansion. He had purchased four adjacent farms and was enclosing his estate with a handsome wall. He had endeavored to purchase the Andrews farm, offering a very excellent figure for it, but Hezekiah had refused to sell. "I don't b'lieve I car' to sell to ye, Sam," he had declared at the time that the rich man had broached the subject of buying.

"When I get around to it, Mr. Andrews, this property will become a part of my estate," Mr. Coggeswell had responded in very deliberate tones. The manner in which he had emphasized the "Mister" had long rankled in the mind of Hezekiah. That one word had told him that the close friendship of their youth was a closed book, so far as Sam was concerned. Later that same day Hezekiah had made it a point to see Horace Atkins, who held a mortgage of two thousand dollars on the Andrews farm, and he had told him not to worry about the mortgage passing out of his hands. "You can depend on me, Mr. Andrews," Mr. Atkins had declared. "There is absolutely no danger of Mr. Coggeswell ever getting his fingers on it." Going home that day, Hezekiah had chuckled.

One bitterly cold morning in January, the year following the opening incident of this story, Mr. Coggeswell read in the morning's paper the account of a young man's downfall. The teller of one of the city banks had been arrested on the charge of embezzlement. The said teller's name was Frank Atkins, the son of Horace Atkins. A crafty look crept into Mr. Coggeswell's eyes. Less than an hour later Mr. Coggeswell started in his limousine for his native town. Early that afternoon he reached the home of Mr. Atkins, and covered the hood of his machine with a heavy blanket, for it was still exceedingly cold. A moment or two later he mounted the front steps to the house, and having rung the bell, was shortly admitted by Mr. Atkins himself.

"I was very sorry to learn of your trouble," declared Mr. Coggeswell, shaking hands with the broken father.

"It has just about killed us, Mr. Coggeswell," groaned Mr. Atkins. "Both my wife and I are fairly stunned. We don't know which way to turn. We are going to the city in the morning to see what can be done. I can raise the amount of the alleged defalcation, but I am afraid that the bank will not be satisfied to let the matter rest thus."

"I am in a position to help your son, Mr. Atkins," declared Mr. Coggeswell, looking keenly into the father's eyes. "As you say the bank is not very likely to drop the matter, even though the shortage is made good. Of course it would be the bonding company which would prosecute. The fact is that the president of the bank is a stickler for integrity. There is just one avenue of escape."

"And that?"

"Mr. Hudson, the president of the bank, is a personal friend of mine. I have had dealing with him for many years. He will listen to me. What I am coming at is this—I will see him in the morning and make arrangements so that the case will be dropped for lack of prosecution—upon one condition."

"Name it!" exclaimed the father. "I will do almost anything to save my boy from prison."

"You hold a mortgage upon the farm of Hezekiah Andrews," remarked Mr. Coggeswell.

Mr. Atkins nodded in the affirmative.

"If you will slip down to the village and see a lawyer I will take up that mortgage this afternoon. In return I will see to it that your son is not prosecuted, provided, of course, that you make good the shortage at the bank."

It may be that Mr. Atkins forgot about his promise to Hezekiah, or may be that his great love for his son outweighed that promise. Certain it was that Mr. Coggeswell won his point, and less than an hour later he had acquired legal possession of the said mortgage and the mortgage note.

Hezekiah Andrews was yarding out cordwood that zero day a half mile or so down the road from his house.

He was driving the same pair of oxen that he was using that summer's day when Mr. Coggeswell passed him in his cream-colored touring-car. It was just before dark that he drove out onto the highway with a big load of wood. He had little more than reached the road when he saw a short distance ahead a big limousine which was standing on the right hand side of the road. Beside the machine was a man in a fur coat who was thrashing his arms and stamping his feet.

"What has she—given out?" queried Hezekiah a moment later, stopping his oxen beside the stalled machine. Suddenly he recognized the man. "Thet ye—ou—Sam," He hesitated for an instant before framing the last word. Back to him came the occasion when he had been addressed as "Mister" by the chum of his boyhood. "Mister" was on the tip of his tongue, but came to him in a flash the happy boyhood days.

"Yes, it is I," replied Mr. Coggeswell. "I have been hung up here for an hour or more. I can't seem to get my machine started. I am almost frozen."

"I don't know 'nothin' bout auty-mobiles, Sam, but I know consider'ble 'bout these here oxen o' mine," declared Hezekiah. "Guess maybe I

Carolina School Supply Co.

119 Brevard Court, Charlotte, N. C.

Distributors for the American Seating Company in the Carolinas. High Grade School Desks and Auditorium Chairs. Desks, Blackboards, Crayon, Erasers, Etc., carried in stock in our Charlotte Warehouse.

Catalogue Upon Request

George W. Hart—W. C. Aerial—John. L. Harris

FOR GIFTS OF Watches, Jewelry or Silverware
Write
JAMES ALLAN & CO.
THE JEWELERS
185 King St. Charleston, S. C.
67 years in business selling
the best goods at the most reasonable prices
Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references
We prepay charges on all purchases

COLLECTION ENVELOPES

DUPLEX OR DOUBLE-END PRINTED-TO-ORDER ENVELOPES

Delivery Charges Not Included

White Envelopes—Size 2½x4¼ in., 52 to set, printed with name of individual church, dated on both ends and packed in cartons. No order filled for less than a minimum charge of $4.00.

25 to 49 sets	19 cents per set
50 to 109 sets	17 cents per set
110 to 209 sets	16½ cents per set
210 to 309 sets	16 cents per set
310 to 409 sets	14½ cents per set
410 or more sets	14 cents per set

A charge of $1.00 made for each change in copy. Price on single envelopes on request.

MODERN CHURCH TREASURER'S RECORD

Treasurer's Record Book ruled to keep an account with each subscriber for a year (name written but once), showing contributions for local church and benevolences at a glance.

For Both the Duplex and Single Envelop System

200 names or less	$1.50
300 names	1.75
500 names	2.25
1,000 names	3.25
Subscription cards, per 100	.50
Information Blanks, per 100	1.00
Treasurer's Statements per 100	.50
Special Day Envelopes, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Building Fund, etc. per 100	.40

"STOCK-FORM" ENVELOPES

Many churches have hesitated to introduce the use of collection envelopes on account of the cost of supplies.

To meet the needs of congregations which must practice rigid economy we have worked out a "Stock Form," or undated envelope, described below, at twelve cents per set, delivery charges extra, in any quantity wanted. Packages containing only two envelopes per month at seven cents per set, delivery extra.

CHANGES IMPOSSIBLE

The STOCK FORM envelopes are printed from a fixed, unchangeable plate, so that no changes can be made. Each package of envelopes will bear a separate number, but we cannot furnish packages bearing just the numbers you suggest. To explain, we cannot furnish each lot of twenty-five packages bearing numbers 1 to 25. We may have to send your lot numbered from 476 to 500. On one end these envelopes show all the benevolent causes for which our Assembly, Synods and Presbyteries ask the churches to make offerings, and the other end provides for the expense of the local church. Being undated, the unused packages are good for next year, so there is no waste. Samples sent free on request.

ORDER FROM

PRESBYTERIAN COMMITTEE OF PUBLICATION
Richmond, Va., Texarkana, Ark.—Tex

can tow ye up as fur as the house. Thar ain't no fire up thar, but it won't take me but 'bout five minutes to get the kitchen het up so thet ye won't car' much 'bout wearin' thet fur coat."

Hezekiah pulled out to the side of the road, and having unhooked his oxen from the pole to the sled, made them fast to a tow-rope which Mr. Coggeswell had produced from beneath one of the seats of his machine. The trip to Hezekiah's house proved to be quite uneventful, and just as the first stars were declaring themselves he drove in onto the barn floor. Having unyoked his oxen and taken care of them, he started for the house.

"Sam, 'bout the best thing thet ye-ou can do it to stay here 'long with me until morning," said Hezekiah as he started a fire in the kitchen range. "This ain't no palace, Sam, but it's consider'ble better'n bein' out 'long side on the road. Come mornin' maybe ye can get thet contraption o' yourn started. Once they give out they're wuss'n a balky hoss."

Mr. Coggeswell made no reply. He could not seem to think just what to say. He was thinking of a certain legal paper which just then was reposing in his pocketbook. He had been on his way to Hezekiah's house to acquaint him with the fact that he had come into possession of the mortgage, but Hezekiah's hospitality embarrassed him.

"Now thet I've got the fire goin', Sam, I guess maybe I'll slip out an' 'tend to the chores," said Hezekiah presently. "Thar's plenty o' wood in the box behind the stove, an' I want ye to burn it with a lib'ral hand while I'm out to the barn. I guess maybe by the time I get back ye'll be purty well thawed out."

Hezekiah shortly reached the barn, and having fed the oxen and horses, started milking. "Cur'ous what fetched Sam out from the city sech a day as this," he muttered while alternate streams of milk were pouring into the pail. "Sam grows old. He used to be a great hand to talk, but ain't now. Jest 'bout as talk'tive as a clam. Maybe it's 'cause he's so cold. Glad I happened 'long with the oxen when I did. Huh! I wish thet jest for to-night the both on us could sorter forget 'bout bein' at logger-heads. It 'ould be fun to be boys agin jest for the night."

The chores finished, Hezekiah returned to the house, where he found Mr. Coggeswell seated beside the stove.

"Let's ye-ou an' me be jest boys agin', Sam," chuckled Hezekiah as he started getting supper. "Hugh! Jest for tonight, Sam, suppose the both on us sorter forget 'bout this here property o' mine. Hugh! Thet don't mean thet I'm thinkin' o' sellin' to ye, 'cause I ain't got no sech idee. Ye've got a pile o' money, Sam, but ye ain't got 'nough to buy this old homestead. This is whar I was born an' this is whar I'm goin' to die. Step here a minute, Sam; I want to show ye the room whar mother died, an' father, too."

Mr. Coggeswell was getting into deep water, and what was more, he knew it. He was feeling decidedly uncomfortable.

"Mother was my sweetheart, Sam," choked Hezekiah as his guest stepped across the room and peered in through the open door to the adjoining room. "Thet's how it come 'bout thet I never married," continued Hezekiah. "Thar ain't a room or nook in this house but what is dear to me, Sam; dear 'cause mother lived here from the time father brought her here a bride nigh eighty year 'go."

Mr. Coggeswell was silent.

"I persume folks think thet it's purty lonesome for me, livin' as I do all 'lone," resumed Hezekiah, "but I want to tell ye, Sam, thet I'm purty happy here. I jest love to set here 'long side o' the fire an' think o' mother an' father. It makes me sorter choke up a bit when I speak on't, but settin' here all 'lone, I don't have no real unhappy thoughts. O' course I miss 'em tremenjous, 'specially mother, but I keep in mind that the day is comin' thet I'll see 'em agin, an' it sorter lightens the burden o' sorrow."

Mr. Coggeswell had resumed his chair, but he seemed very ill at ease in it.

"What's the matter with ye, Sam?" exclaimed Hezekiah at length. "Ye-ou are 'bout as uneasy as a fish out o' water."

"Oh, I was just thinking," replied Mr. Coggeswell, "just thinking."

"I jest wish, Sam, thet ye-ou didn't have no more to worry ye than I

Tested Seed For Garden and Field

All our seeds are tested and true to name. We sell nothing but the best. Orders shipped on same day they are received. Send for our new 1923 catalogue at once. Dept. B.

ASHEVILLE SEED CO.

Asheville, N. C.

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works

R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

W. 7th St. and Southern Railway

Oldest Largest Best

Phone 281

The Second and Last Call For Laymen

In the Church papers last week we issued a call for Laymen to volunteer to go out on March 4-11-18 (First Three Sundays) and speak on the "Stewardship of Possessions" in the interest of the Church budget of 1923-24 of $4,750,000.

A number of men are signing up. The Church can use many more. No other call will be made through the papers. Every Presbytery has a number of churches that ought to be supplied on these days with laymen speaking on the Church Budget.

We are constantly told that the laymen are eager to work if they are given something to do. Right here and now, we ask for help in a work that needs consecrated laymen as never before. This is the biggest single thing the laymen of our Church can do now—help raise the Church budget.

Statistics reveal that we have been missing our goals in the past four years with an increasing proportion. Our Committees are handicapped; Missionaries are waiting to go out and the funds are not given; the Home Mission Committee of the Assembly has been denied over 21 per cent of the apportionments of the Assembly of the past four years.

If the Laymen of the Southern Presbyterian Church mean business and want to help, THAT TIME IS NOW HERE.

A Speaker's Kit of facts will be sent to all Volunteers. Men will be assigned by the Secretaries of Stewardship in each Synod and Presbytery where they are needed most. Watch Church papers beginning January 17th for useful information. Cut form out and mail to

I agree to speak, under the direction of the Secretary of Stewardship of my Presbytery, on March 4, 11, 18, with a message on "The Stewardship of Possessions."

Name ----- (Print it) -----

P. O. ----- State -----

Presbytery ----- Phone -----

Telegraph address -----

Date -----

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

M. E. Melvin, Gen. Sec'y

410 Times Building : Chattanooga, Tenn.

ABERDEEN & ROCKFISH RAILROAD

BETWEEN ABERDEEN & FAYETTEVILLE		Eastbound		Westbound
Daily Ex. Sunday		Daily Ex. Sunday		Daily Ex. Sunday
Mixed. Pass.		Mixed. Pass.		Mixed. Pass.
STATIONS
No. 22.	No. 38.	No. 41.	No. 21
Lv.		Ar.
7:30am	9:10am	Aberdeen	6:41pm	5:00pm
Ar8:35am	10:00am	Raeoford	5:55pm	lv3:50pm
Lv2:10pm		Raeoford	Ar2:50pm
WAGRAM BRANCH
4:00pm		11:20am	Fayetteville	4:50pm	1pm
Southbound		Northbound
Daily Ex. Sun.		Daily Ex. Sun.
Mixed		Mixed
No. 11		No. 12
Lv. 10:30am		Raeoford		Ar. 12:40pm
Ar. 11:15am		Wagram		Lv. 12 noon
W. A. BLUE, General Supt., Aberdeen. N. C.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

Book of Church Order
With 1922 Amendment

The new edition is now ready. Order your copy at once.

Should be in the hands of every pastor and church officer.

Price, Cloth, 35c. Postpaid

Confession of Faith

New edition contains revised Book of Church Order, with 1922 amendments.

Price, Cloth, 75c.; Leather, $1.25.

Order From
Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va. Texarkana, Ark.-Tex

have," said Hezekiah. "I ain't got much money, but still I have plenty to get 'long on. True, thar's considerable mortgage on this place, but Horace Atkins don't car' nothin' 'bout me payin on the principal. He's in purty easy circumstances. He'll carry that mortgage 'long for the next ten or twenty year so long as I look arter the interest."

Mr. Coggeswell arose and began pacing the floor. Presently he resumed his seat. Three or four times within five minutes his left hand sought the inner pocket of his coat. Again and again he moistened his lips with his tongue. The time came that he drew forth his pocketbook, and for a moment or two he gripped it, while looking down at the floor. A vague fear caused Hezekiah to stare at the long black wallet. There seemed to be something sinister connected with it

"I—I saw Mr. Atkins this afternoon," declared Mr. Coggeswell, swallowing hard. "He—"

"Ye don't mean—" Hezekiah gripped the arms of his chair, his eyes searching the rich man's very soul. "Ye don't mean thet ye've got hold o' thet mortgage arter all, Sam?" he questioned in a hollow voice.

Mr. Coggeswell removed the mortgage paper and the mortgage note from his pocketbook, and placed them face up upon the table. Then he arose and stepped to the sink, where he pumped a glass of water. Oh, it would have been so easy to have snatched the papers and thrust them into the fire while Mr. Coggeswell's back was turned! But Hezekiah made no such move. Utterly crushed, he sat there as one hypnotized.

"An' Horace told me as how thar wasn't no danger o' Sam gettin' hold o' them papers," he muttered half aloud. "I wouldn't have b'lieved it o' Horace." Then he turned to Mr. Coggeswell, who had returned and was standing beside the table. A tear was slowly creeping from the inner corner of each eye. "Ye got the best o' me arter all, Sam," he choked. "I ain't got nothin' more to say." Then he buried his face in his arms upon the table, his frame shaken with sobs.

Mr. Coggeswell placed his right hand upon Hezekiah's shoulder. For the space of a full minute no sound was heard in the room, save the solemn "tick-tock, tick-tock," of the tall clock which stood in the corner. Suddenly Mr. Coggeswell picked up the two papers and tore them in halves. "Hezekiah, I—I don't want your farm," he said. "Your farm is free."

"Ye don't mean—"

WANTED

Raw Furs, Hides, Tallow, Beeswax, and Gingseng. Write for prices.

FRANK E. BROWN
Roanoke, Va.

CAMP GREYSTONE--FOR GIRLS
On Beautiful Lake Summit, In the "Land of the Sky"
Tuxedo, N. C.

Fourth Season. Splendid equipment with electric lights, water and sanitary plumbing. Substantial sleeping Tentalsows. Land and water sports. Fifteen fine saddle horses. Twenty consecrated Councillors. Write early for catalogue as number of girls is limited.

REV. JOS. R. SEVIER, Director
Pastor First Presbyterian Church
Augusta, Ga.

GOOD POSITIONS

Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete our commercial and stenographic courses.

Our aim this season is to enroll a very large number of such students who can be trained for high and responsible positions.

Won't you be one to enroll? A postal addressed to us will bring you our catalog. Write for it.

DRAUGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE
Knoxville, Tenn.

BOILS

Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn,
President.

207 N. Tryon St.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY,
Sec'y & Treas.

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from

Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va.

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

Old Buck Guano
Richmond

Fertilizer of Excellent Quality

Old Buck Guano Company

INCORPORATED
Richmond, Virginia

Allied with F.S. Royster Guano Co.

Stop Laxatives

Which Only Aggravate Constipation

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe.

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus replaces it. Try it today.

Nujol

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

"I mean just what I say," interrupted Mr. Coggeswell, removing the cover from the stove. Then he crumpled the papers and thrust them into the fire. "Don't blame Mr. Atkins," he said, taking a seat beside Hezekiah and placing his hand upon the latter's knee. Mr. Atkins is in great trouble." Briefly then did he tell how he had come into possession of the mortgage.

"An' ye think that ye can help Horace out?" questioned Hezekiah. "Destroyin' them papers won't make no difference?"

"I know I can," replied Mr. Coggeswell.

"Sam, our boyhood dreams has come true tonight," gulped Hezekiah, gripping his guest's hand. "We're jest the same friends we was when we was boys."

The ensuing morning Mr. Coggeswell managed to get his engine in working order after a deal of tinkering, and finally, about nine o'clock, he got under way. A fortnight or so later he stole away from business and drove out to Hezekiah's home, and there again he stopped over night, in the kitchen the East and the West played checkers the evening through. Neither of them knew very much about the game, so they were well matched. Two boys they were, chuckling the hours away.

With the coming of spring the massive stone wall which was enclosing the Coggeswell estate turned at the boundary of Hezekiah's farm, and Mr. Coggesville was well pleased that such was the case. Ah, but it was good to see the rich man and the unkempt Hezekiah whiling the leisure hours away. The dreams of boyhood had indeed come true. Comrades they were in old age, even as they had been in youth.—Frederick E. Burnham, in The Presbyterian.

We burn 1,000,000 more gallons of gas daily than we did last year. Times are certainly bad. — Terre Haute Post.

Sparkles

A young graduate in law, who had had some experience in Chicago, wrote to a prominent practitioner in Arkansas to inquire what chance there was in that section for one such as he described himself to be.

"I am a Republican in politics, and an honest young lawyer."

In a few days he received this encouraging reply:

"If you are a Republican, the game laws here will protect you, and if you are an honest lawyer, you will have no competition."—Harper's Magazine.

Aline and her brother attended a birthday party of a playmate. Ice-cream, cake, and lemonade were served. The boy asked his hostess for a glass of water. "Drink your lemonade," Aline said, interrupting. "I don't want lemonade. I want water," said the boy, looking pleadingly at his hostess. "Don't be silly. Drink your lemonade," said Aline. "It's just like water."—Christian Register.

The Professor—"Let us take the example of the busy ant. He is busy all the time. He works all day and every day. Then what happens?"

The Bright One—"He gits stepped on."—Christian Register.

Old Man (browsing in book-store)—"Last Days of Pompeii"—what did he die of?"

Bookseller—"Oh, I dunno—some sort of eruption."—London Opinion.

Two Pennies Saved

Infuriated Druggist (roused at 2 a. m.)—Two penn'orth of bicarbonate of soda for indigestion at this time of the night, when a glass of hot water would have done just as well.

Sandy—Weel, Weel, I thank ye for the advice, and I'll no' bother ye after all. Good-night!—Detroit Free Press.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.

Printers
GARLAND COURT

Rulers
Phone 643

Binders
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Buy From the Manufacturer

There is one good and sufficient reason why you should buy your Piano from the manufacturer—DIRECT RESPONSIBILITY.

STIEFF PRODUCTS

Stieff Pianos and Players
Shaw Pianos and Players
Bennett-Bretz Pianos and Players
Davies & Sons Pianos and Players
Leslie Bros. Pianos and Players

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, INC., Charlotte, N. C.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along.

Your account will be welcome here.

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

BELK BROS. CO.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
20c to 35c
None Higher

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form... Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.

IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

That Carload of Those Splendid, Popular-Priced Living Room Suits Has Arrived

The three pieces—Sofa, Chair and Rocker—like cut, in beautiful combination velour, are $275.00.

Other three-piece suits in tapestry and velour at $155.00 and $165.00.

We deliver by truck within a radius of 100 miles of Charlotte.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U. S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., FEBRUARY 7, 1923

No. 6

Presbyterian Progressive Program

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS MARCH 18th

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
An Appreciation—By Mrs. T. S. Bryan	1
The Union Seminary Review	1
The Church Treasurer—His Value	1
Dogmatism in Religion	2
Home Missions in the Synod of Virginia	2
No State Money for Church Purposes	2
CONTRIBUTED—
Those Derelict Treasurers—By A Treasurer	3
Needed Counsel for New Christians	3
The Approaching Laymen's Conventions	3
The Shorter Catechism Analyzed	3
It is Hard to Lay Down—By Rev. W. R. Doby, D.D.	3
Presbyterian Progressive Program	5
The Laymen's Missionary Movement	5
First Shipment of Stone for Southwestern at Memphis Arrives	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

AN APPRECIATION

By Mrs. T. S. Bryan

(Instead of Dr. Reed's regular editorial, we, without his knowledge, use in its place this "Appreciation.")

On the 18th of December, Cantey Venable, the wife of Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Moderator of the General Assembly, and honored Professor of Columbia Theological Seminary, died, after a brief illness of pneumonia, at her residence in Columbia.

Dr. and Mrs. Reed had just returned from a brief visit to their son, Lieut. R. C. Reed, U. S. N., in New Orleans. While there Mrs. Reed contracted a cold, but it was not considered serious. She made the return trip in comfort and went immediately to bed. After a few days pneumonia developed; this with a complication of pleurisy was too much for her frail constitution, and sinking rapidly, she passed away in the early morning on the 18th of December.

Mrs. Reed was the daughter of Thos. F. and Mary Priscilla Venable. She was one of twelve children, of whom one brother and three sisters survive. She was married to Dr. Reed on October 17, 1876. Of this union two daughters, Mrs. C. P. Lovell, of St. Augustine, and Mrs. J. N. DeVane, of Fayetteville, N. C., and three sons survive: Lieut. R. C. Reed, of New Orleans; Prof. Macon Reed, Hampden Sidney, Va., and Robert Gordon Reed, of Little Rock, Ark. One child died in infancy and another, James Landrum Reed, several years ago.

The death of Mrs. Reed marks a distinct loss in a wide circle of friends—and the loss to the inner circle, who can estimate? for her price was above rubies. The heart of her husband did safely trust in her, and her children will ever rise up and bless her memory.

Those who knew her best take pleasure in bearing witness to her high traits of character as well as to the wonderful mental traits which she displayed to the last.

Her unusual judgment, fine common sense, strict sense of justice, wonderful memory even in the slightest details. These and more rounded up by an utter self-forgetfulness, made her always the servant of home, church and friends. In her home, with husband and children the crowning trait of unselfish love dominated her whole life, and with a daily forgetfulness of self, she was ever ready for a call from any one or all of them.

To the writer she was a referee—a sine-qua-non—a melting pot by which to be tested. Always willing to listen and to give of her best and ever ready with sympathy and that mental analysis which was so characteristic of her alert and truly wonderful mind. Mrs. Reed was ever the friend of the Seminary. Around it linger many memories of her loving, thoughtful and always womanly services, and many of the students and visitors of a past generation will recall her hospitality, her kindly words, and generous deeds of love.

No tribute to Mrs. Reed would be complete without reference to her love for the Church. Her reverent best belonged to it. She was an authority in its courts and laws, yet ever and always the gentle woman, refined and cultured, modest and retiring, yet by her superior qualities unwittingly reaching the highest seats in the Church of her choice as well as in the hearts of those who knew and admired and loved her best.

And now—with the eye of faith we see: A land Which needs no sun, God's glory is its light. A land where storms of sorrow ne'er shall break, A land which knows no death, where falls no night.

And there we see our loved one glorified, Made free, for evermore, from pain and care; Though parted from us for a little while, Not lost, but only waiting for us there.

THE UNION SEMINARY REVIEW

The January number of the Union Seminary Review has been received. This is the first number under the editorship of Dr. W. T. Thompson. Dr. W. L. Lingle, after many years in the harness, laid down the work, having earned his rest. He made it one of the most readable of reviews. Under Dr. Thompson's editorship it bids fair to retain its reputation.

In this number Dr. J. M. Wells discusses "Modernism," a most timely subject.

Dr. J. H. Taylor, of Washington, D. C., has a very readable article on "Some Popular Illusions." Dr. B. R. Lacy, of Atlanta, Ga., deals with "The Spoken Messages of Paul." Dr. Edward Mack writes very interestingly of his religious impressions of Europe during a recent trip. "The History of Satan" is given by Dr. M. W. Doggett, and Rev. C. D. Holland, of Hillsdale, Md., contributes a paper read before the Presbyterian Ministers' Association of Baltimore. His subject is "Christianity and Modern Spiritualism." As usual the book reviews are numerous and well-prepared.

This Review ought to be in the hands of all of our preachers, especially the younger men, as it always discusses live topics, affecting the Church.

THE CHURCH TREASURER HIS VALUE

Recently we wrote a few criticisms of a few church treasurers, to which some exceptions have been taken. Ordinarily in such cases, one would say, "Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung." However, in the case of the church treasurer who criticizes in a most friendly manner the editorial in question, this would not fit. He is a model one, who does not wish to criticize as much as to defend some of those who are only apparently guilty.

It is needless to say that such were not in the mind of the writer, for no one has a higher appreciation of the voluntary labors of these unselfish servants of the church. They work without pay, and give time and labor which is seldom appreciated. It is true some of them are careless about making prompt returns, preferring to make one remittance rather than frequent ones, not realizing the importance of cash in the treasury of the various committees, in order to pay promptly the many laborers. It was not that the editor had had any experience with them, that he wrote, but only in deference to the request of our Secretaries.

"Thou canst not say I did it; never shake Thy gory locks at me."

DOGMATISM IN RELIGION

That there is a state of unrest in the religious world no one who studies the signs of the times will deny. This is shown by the demand for a revised theology, by the rebellion against what they are pleased to call the dogmatism of the pulpit and by one or more heresy trials now probable. Those who value harmony above purity of doctrine are trying to reason away the hard places and to soften the demands. We have great respect for the motive prompting these men, though we may not be able to sympathize with their attempt to do what our Lord never did.

They claim that the old-time doctrines of the church are driving away bright young men from the churches and landing many of them in skepticism.

Dr. Grant, in explaining his advanced views in theology, says that we must give up antiquated theology and belief in what contradicts reasons in order to retain in our churches young men of university training, who care nothing for past traditions and who test every truth by reason.

Now, in the first place, we believe that the number of these young doubters is exaggerated. They are reasoning from the part to the whole. Some young men of their acquaintance reject the hard doctrines of the Scriptures, but that is no proof that their number is great. But even admitting that these young men are as numerous as is claimed, the conclusions of these harmonizers does not follow. If these fundamental doctrines are not true, then the sooner they are rejected, the better. If, on the other hand, they are true, then our rejecting them does not alter the truth. They are still true.

In a recent discussion of questions at issue between "Conservatives" and "Liberals," one of these harmonizers brings this charge against the "Conservatives," that instead of holding up Christianity as a life to be lived, they hold it up as a series of dogmas to be believed. Then to prove his statement he quotes from an editorial in this paper, entitled, "Dogmatic Christianity," where the statement was made that the very soul of Christianity is dogma. No doubt there are others to whom this reasoning appeals.

Let us not be wise above what is written. Just before our Lord ascended He gave His disciples their commission to preach the Gospel to every creature, and then He uttered this dogmatic statement: "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

HOME MISSIONS IN THE SYNOD OF VIRGINIA

We who live in the Synod of North Carolina are sometimes prone to flatter ourselves that we are far ahead of other Synods in Home Mission activities.

It sometimes broadens a man's view to go away from home and see what others are doing. Without intending to belittle what our own Synod is doing, it will help us to learn something of what, at least, one Presbytery is doing.

The Presbytery of Lexington, which is the largest Presbytery in the Assembly, if you consider the number of ministers, and the next to the largest if you consider the total communicants, has a Home Mission and Sunday School Bulletin, which is a regular treasury of Home Mission facts. It has 18 pages, yet each page is rich in news. We believe that we know what our Church is doing, yet we confess that we were astonished to read the record of this Presbytery. Those who read this Bulletin are bound to be spurred to greater effort. It seems as if every worker had a report to make, with the result that you lay down this Bulletin with the feeling that while Old Lexington Presbytery may be, as some charge, rather "moss-back" in doctrine, which, by the way, is a most excellent fault, she is progressive in work, having a number of live men who give themselves wholly unto the Word.

The Synod of Virginia has "a Montreat" within her bounds. It may be on a smaller scale and does not attract as many from distant states, but it is growing and its influence is felt throughout the Synod.

Years ago, we spent a few weeks at Massanetta Springs, and enjoyed the fine water. "The Springs" have become the meeting place of the Presbyterians, where a fine program is carried out, each summer, after the manner of Montreat.

When we recall the names of Dabney, Peck, Smith, Hoge, Pryor, the two Whites, and Hopkins, who overshadowed us, the younger men forty years ago, we are apt to say, "Your fathers, where are they?" When, however, we see what this new generation in the old Synod are doing, we realize that the love of Christ, which constrains us all, is at work with them, and that it is not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord, that His work is done.

NO STATE MONEY FOR CHURCH PURPOSES

One of the fundamental articles of the Baptist Creed is the separation of the Church and the State. We use the word creed, though technically the Baptists claim to have no creed. If what a man believes is his creed, then our Baptist brethren do have one. They believe certain principles and act upon them even despite popular prejudice. One belief that is characteristic of the Baptist is the separation of the Church and State, though be it remembered that they enjoy no monopoly of

LITTLE BY LITTLE

Little by little the time goes by—
Short, if you sing through it, long, if you sigh.
Little by little—are hours a day,
Gone with the years that have vanished away.
Little by little the race is run;
Trouble and waiting and toil are done!

Little by little the skies grow clear;
Little by little the sun comes near;
Little by little the days smile out,
Gladder and brighted on pain and doubt.
Little by little the seed we sow
Into a beautiful yield will grow.

Little by little the world grows strong,
Fighting the battle of Right and Wrong;
Little by little the Wrong gives way;
Little by little the Right has sway.
Little by little all longing souls
Struggle up nearer the shining goals.

Little by little the good in men
Blossoms to beauty, for human ken;
Little by little the angels see
Prophecies better of good to be;
Little by little the God of all
Lifts the world nearer the pleading call.—Ex.

this belief. The Presbyterian Church in America has always contended for complete separation, and the Southern Presbyterian Church was organized because the Presbyterian General Assembly in 1861 departed from this principle.

Sometimes a church's belief cannot stand the acid test of money. Our Baptist brethren, be it said to their credit, are willing to stand by their principles even at a pecuniary loss.

We have seen it stated in the secular press that the city of New Bern and the County of Craven offered the Board of Education $50,000 to locate there the proposed Junior Baptist College. The secretary of the Baptist Board of Education declined on the ground that their church could not accept the tax-payers' money to establish a denominational school.

We hope that those carping critics who hold that the Church will accept money, if offered, no matter how raised, will take notice of this action.

Then we trust that those handling public funds will remember that when the tax-payers hand in money, they do not at the same time give authority to spend it at the pleasure of those holding it.

We would also suggest to the Executive Committees that they, too, may learn a lesson from this incident. They have sometimes appropriated for one cause money raised for another cause. Indeed they are not sinners above all Galileans. The General Assembly itself authorized the Executive Committees to finance the Inter-Church World Movement from funds given for a specific purpose. The laws governing the handling of funds that prevail in the business world must also be obeyed in the Church world.

Devotional

THE UPLIFTED LOOK

When John Ruskin experienced periods of depression he would leave England, go to the lofty Alps, and gaze upon their craggy heights. He found solace and comfort in the uplifted look. As he let his weary eyes rest upon the snowy summits of those ancient mountains, slowly and surely the cares drifted away and an exhilaration of spirit came to rejuvenate his troubled heart.

In our times of discouragement it is not always possible for us to take a trip to the mountains. The chances are that we will have to remain down in the valley of our workaday world, where we must go daily to our duties in schoolroom, office, field, or factory. We may read of excursions to the mountains, but we know they are not for us, for we are too busy. Consequently in our daily round and common task we may be inclined to fret because we were not born rich, so that we would not have to labor from day to day for our daily bread. Life becomes monotonous, everything seems to settle down to one common level, the color of our existence fades to a dreary drab.

In the midst of these dark musings, however, we ought to be reminded that although money may take us to the mountains, it will not help us to see the truth any the clearer. Whether a man is born in fortune's lap, or whether he works hard and hordes his savings, the result is just the same. While money is able to supply many conveniences, it does not satisfy the gnawing hunger of the heart.

Religion comes into this sorry scheme of things and says to the rich man and the poor alike, making no distinction between either station in life: "What you need is the upward look, the look that lifts you away from the commonplace and the trivial, and permits the eyes of your soul to rest upon the eternal hills of God's providence and care. In penury and want, or when riches deceive, you may find in that look the blessing for which you have been seeking."

One of the glories of Christianity is that the message of God's grace is heralded to the man wherever he may be. And all that he needs to do is to look. It is a look that saves him from the sordidness of life, from self-centered pursuits, from the sin that destroys. "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth." Look and live—this is the message of God's prophets; it is the message of Him in whom prophecy was fulfilled. It is a look that saves, not only from care, but from sin which brings on the care.

And how the simplicity of the means of this salvation baffles men! They want to know what looking means. They try to analyze it; they attempt to philosophize about it. "Why!" exclaimed an evangelist, "you know what looking is; you have been doing it all your lives."

By the simple look upward we may find light and joy, peace and quiet of soul in the midst of all discouragements, trial, disappointment, and sorrow. God never asks anything difficult of us, for He knows our frame and He remembers that we are dust. It always gladdens the heart of the Father when we say:

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the mountains:
From whence shall my help come?
My help cometh from Jehovah,
Who made heaven and earth." —Forward.

THINK OF THESE THINGS

I entreat you to devote one solemn hour of thought to a crucified Saviour. Think of the cross. Think how the Son of God became a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, that you might live forever. Think as you lie down upon your bed to rest, how your Saviour was lifted up from the earth to die. Think amid your plans and anticipations of future gaiety, what the redemption of your soul has cost, and how the dying Saviour would wish you to act. His wounds plead that you will live for better things.—Albert Barnes.

That day with Jesus! Who can guess
All that it meant of blessedness?
I sigh, "Oh, that I had been there
To hear his words, his voice in prayer;
To see the shining of his face
And feel his touch of heavenly grace—
To wear in memory for aye
The halo-crown of that one day!"

"Oh, eyes so holden, not to see,"
The Master seems to say to me,
"Your heart is now my dwelling-place
Where you may look upon my face
And feel my Spirit's life and light,
Closer than touch, clearer than sight.
Lo, I abide with you alway,—
Not only one, but every day." —S. S Times.

THOSE DERELICT TREASURERS

By A Treasurer

In sending to the Standard this little explanation of why some church treasurers are derelict, the writer wishes it understood that his heels have not been stepped upon. Since his own name does not appear at the head of this article, it is not an infringement upon immodesty for him to declare that he is not derelict, that all his funds are regularly forwarded to the main treasurers of the various causes of the Church, and therefore this article is in defense of others and not of himself.

Some twenty years ago, when youth aspired to become proficient in the gentle art of typewriting, the custom was to present him with several reams of paper of an inferior grade, a broken-down typewriter that had been donated by some typewriter repairer, and this sentence, "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party." And after this sentence had been transferred to the pile of letter paper, the typist usually scored high enough to be made amanuensis to some prominent business man, and in the course of time learned how to attend to his own business, and shortly thereafter became self-supporting. Eventually he might become a captain of industry, but rarely did he ever forget the practice sentence. This sentence has little or no bearing upon the subject of church treasurers, but it serves a purpose.

From time immemorial, at least as it affects the lifetime of the present generation, the period from January first until April first has been regarded as "open season" for church treasurers. In the hearts of our countrymen there has been palpitating this message, "Now is the time for all good churchmen—" not to come to the aid of the treasurer, but to commence to knock the treasurer. This prerogative has been exercised oftener than many of the rulings that appear in the book of church order. Every bench-warmer in the church is heir to it and discharges it fully.

There are, to be sure, some treasurers who do not send in their gifts as promptly as they might. There are, too, some who do not send them in until they have earned interest. But these treasurers are few and far between. Many treasurers do not send in money simply because the money is not sent to them. This is a fact that is known to every treasurer. If all the pledges made to churches were paid promptly, the general treasurers would always have money in their treasuries. The dereliction goes back to the individual pew.

It is quite possible that there are treasurers who enjoy occupying their offices, but these are, as a rule, the newly-elected men who have not given up their Sunday afternoons and evenings, and many evenings during the week to the task of working on the church books, year in and year out. Every church treasurer wants his books to be up-to-the-minute, so that if anything should happen to him, sickness or death, there will be no member of the congregation to take a long farewell look into his face and wonder if the church funds are all in the treasury.

The editor of the Standard is correct when he says that the church treasurer receives no salary and very little thanks. The fact is that the treasurer would be tempted to pinch himself righ sharply if any person suggested thanks. He would know that there was something wrong somewhere. It is just something that is not done, don't you know, in all regulated congregations. It's an honor to be a church treasurer, and deserves all the work a man can put on the church books.

Not only do such trifling matters as delinquents make up the full day of the treasurer. He has also to meet all the obligations of the church promptly, for the credit of the congregation must not be impaired. No business man, who in his own business discounts his bills and handles business in a business way, wants to act as treasurer and "stand off" the coal man, the electric light man, the insurance man, and every other tradesman who has an account against the church. It is a matter of pride, and the bills have to be paid.

Business men—the right kind of business men—do not make personal overdrafts at the bank. The law says it must not be done. Churchmen say, "Go ahead; the bank will honor the check and wait on us." The business man who is treasurer declines to do this even for his church—that is if he is as good a churchman as he ought to be.

At the beginning of the ecclesiastical year, then the church receives its appropriation, the pastor calls upon the congregation to accept the amount assigned to the church. The congregation rises in a body—delinquents and all. Report is made to the Presbyterial Manager that "we have gone over the top." The church settles down to the business of quickly forgetting that next Sunday we are supposed to plank down 1-52 of the amount pledged for the year. Yet the treasurers of the various causes have made their plans to spend the amount we "accepted." Some man builds a house, and can't spare the money. Another takes unto himself a wife—and added expenses. Still another gives a feast and gets his name in the paper. If the treasurer sends a statement to any one of these three men he stands a good chance of insulting one of our prominent members. For some years we have been in close communion with one church treasurer who was "cut" on the street by a lady to whom he sent a statement. She gave as much as 25 cents a Sunday, and her husband made only $40 or $50 a week. When she was reminded that she owed about $2.00 she all but quit the church. She had been grossly insulted. Another member, a man who was rated as a wealthy man in his neighborhood, was sent a statement in which there appeared an error—an error the treasurer was quick to acknowledge and explain—and thereafter as long as the delinquent lived, he carefully gave his checks to the church and made them payable to a third person, so that he might have double evidence of his money getting to the right place. He is in a fairer world; peace to his ashes!

Contributed

To those who would punch the treasurer in the ribs at this time of the year, may we not suggest that, first of all, see if your church dues are paid. Then ask yourselves if in some way you may be of service in helping the treasurer to get up his monthly reports, his quarterly reports, his semi-annual reports, and his annual reports, of which you feel so proud when you discover that "we have done well." Ask yourselves, also, if it is not quite a task to handle the accounts of several hundred people, to have charge of their money and feel the sole responsibility of it and have it known to your cook, chambermaid and chauffeur that the church money is in your hands. Ask yourself if it is perfectly fair to elect a treasurer and keep him on the job as long as he lives, or until he becomes physically and mentally incapacitated. Why not let someone relieve him every two or three years? In other words, why work a willing horse to death? It is not everyone who enjoys perpetual servitude. After a man has been treasurer long enough to know those who short-change him, those who chew tobacco, those who use Mary Garden perfume, and those who are forever and eternally delinquent, there is a temptation for him to slack up in his duties, hoping that by standing just a little bit on this side of charges of embezzlement he may be forcibly removed from the unanimous but thankless job of church treasurer.

NEEDED COUNSEL FOR NEW CHRISTIANS

Presbyterian Committee of Publication
Paper pp 47

The critical period of spiritual life follows close upon reception into church membership. The enthusiasm of a new affection and the resolve of a high moral purpose are often succeeded by disappointment and a life of indifference. The psychological moment to impress and forecast a life of useful service is often then or never. One cannot estimate the loss to the Church of inactive Christians who might have been trained for efficient service. The Church suffers today from its unused material. Dr. Talmadge said the Church has in its membership latent power sufficient to convert the world, if it could be aroused and utilized.

Dr. S. M. Glasgow, Rev. Cecil H. Lang, and Miss Julia Lake Skinner have prepared a booklet eminently fitted to serve the purpose of stimulating and developing young converts. The contents will give you an idea of the scope and character of their treatment:

- I. What a Christian Has Done.
- II. What a Christian Is.
- III. What a Christian Has.
- IV. What a Christian Believes.
- V. What a Christian Does.
- VI. What a Christian Becomes.

It is characterized by simplicity, clearness, forcefulness and usefulness. Pastors and Christian workers should keep in stock a large supply of this splendid guide to a useful Christian life, and every new convert should be furnished a copy upon entrance into the Master's service. Mature Christians would also profit by its study and feel again the thrill of a new inspiration to holy living and more active service.

S. L. Morris.

THE APPROACHING LAYMEN'S CONVENTIONS ADVANCE INFORMATION

From every quarter men of our Church are becoming intensely interested in the approaching Bi-Annual Conventions of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, now a department of inspiration of the permanent committee on Men's Work of the Assembly.

Capt. F. L. Slaymaker, the secretary of the movement, has been traveling in Arkansas and Texas, because the conventions in that section come first. He is just back from a tour of these States, and reports great interest being taken, and a number of points are to charter a pullman for the Houston convention.

The Houston Chronicle is getting out a Rotagravuer, and will carry, this coming week, pictures of the speakers and brief notices of them. The fact that the daily papers are co-operating so fully with the work of our Church is indeed to be appreciated, and the Houston committee are having extra copies of the Houston Chronicle run off to be distributed all over Texas.

The story of the wonderful Evangelistic Movement among the Laymen, heading up in Jackson, Miss., is going to be told at the convention by Mr. Julian P. Alexander, who is at the head of the Federated Bible Classes of Jackson, and Mr. Frederick Sullens, editor of the Jackson Daily News. No one thing that has occurred in our Southland the past year, has created greater interest than this wonderful spirit of evangelism manifested by the laymen of Mississippi. Only recently, a conference of laymen all over Mississippi was held in Jackson and plans were made for a great evangelistic movement throughout all of Mississippi. Everyone interested in the salvation of souls will want to hear the story of this wonderful movement from these two outstanding laymen, members of our First Presbyterian Church there.

The day following the Jacksonville convention, the delegates of Florida are going to remain over for a special conference to consider plans for their simultaneous evangelistic campaign that is on for the entire Synod of Florida. This campaign is in charge of a splendid committee of Florida brethren, headed up by Rev. E. W. Way.

Each convention city is sending out deputations of laymen, and each city is vying with the other to see who can have the largest attendance. Huntington, W. Va., reported that the first man who registered for their convention was from Staunton, Va., indicating the splendid spirit of rivalry which exists everywhere, each feeling that their convention is going to be better than the other.

In a later issue cuts of a number of our speakers will be published with a number of other interesting data.

THE SHORTER CATECHISM ANALYZED

From the Bulletin of the First Church, Little Rock, Ark., Dr. Jno. Van Lear, pastor, we copy the following analysis of the Shorter Catechism, prepared by Judge Joseph E. Carthel, of the Tennessee State Sunday School Association:

Shorter Catechism:

- I. What we believe, questions 1-38.
- II. Our duty, questions 39-107.
 - I. What we believe, questions 1-38.
 - (a) Concerning God, questions 1-2.
 - (b) Concerning Fall of Man, questions 13-19.
 - (c) Concerning Redeemer, questions 20-28.
 - (d) Holy Spirit, questions 29-38.
 - II. What we are to do: Questions 39-107.
 - (a) Moral Law.
 - Introduction, questions 39-44.
 - Duty to God, questions 45-62.
 - Duty to Man, questions 63-81.
 - (b) Way of Life, questions 82-107.
 - Effect of Sin, questions 82-84.
 - Escape from Sin.
 - (a) Inward Means.
 1. Faith, questions 85-86.
 2. Repentance, question 87.
 - (b) Outward Means.
 1. The Word, questions 88-90.
 2. The Sacrament, questions 91-97.
 3. Prayer, questions 98-107.

IT IS HARD TO LAY DOWN

"Sunrise In Aztec Land," by one of our own missionaries, gathers in to small compass a world of information; condenses into readable form a mighty inspiration, and rings a clarion call to evangelization of the land at our doors, and whose future is as bright as the promises of God. You should read it.

William Ray Dobyns.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

To Stand Still Is to Go Backward

Our Progressive Program, for All Purposes, faces in 1923 perhaps its severest test.

There is no need to hide facts. Sane Optimism calls for the worst to be known as one faces a task, and then prepares heroically for the task. It is not pessimism to declare in these advertisements that the Budget of our Church for the year 1923-1924, which we undertake to raise in the Every Member Canvass on March 18th, is in serious danger of a slump.

Table Showing the Amount Apportioned Each Synod by the Assembly for all Benevolences and the Amount Officially Accepted.

Synod.	Apportioned.	Accepted.
Alabama --	$ 230,000	$ 175,000
Appalachia -	210,000	196,200
Arkansas --	150,000	150,000
Florida ----	145,000	145,000
Georgia ---	360,000	360,000
Kentucky --	262,000	262,000
Louisiana --	145,000	145,000
Mississippi -	215,000	215,000
Missouri ---	235,000	235,000
N. Carolina -	780,000	780,000
Oklahoma -	40,000	40,000
Sned. Mem'l.	10,000	10,000
S. Carolina -	375,000	355,754
Tennessee -	253,000	253,000
Texas ----	480,000	385,231
Virginia ---	710,000	677,549
W. Virginia	150,000	161,100
Total ---	$4,750,000	$4,545,834

To maintain the standard of last year, in which our Church gave percapita to all Benevolences $13.28, and $15.22 to current expenses, will tax our energy, faith, and consecration.

But our Church ought not to stand still, and be satisfied with the status of last year. Such a policy is suicidal in any form of growing organization. WE MUST GROW OR SHRIVEL. Missionaries are waiting to go out. The budget of last year will not permit it, even if we raise that budget. Opportunities for enlargement exist in the Home Field, which will slip from us unless we increase our Budget.

The Assembly asks for all Benevolences, Local as well as Assembly Causes, the total of $4,750,000, an increase of $250,000 over last year. The Synods have accepted as shown in the table herewith, a total of only $4,545,834. This means practically the same status as last year, even if every dollar should be raised. And this means that our Committees, Assembly, Synod and Presbytery, will have to make hurtful retrenchments.

This is an appeal to every Pastor, Officer and Interested Member of our Church to pray earnestly and work with greater energy than ever before to increase our budget for benevolences. We cannot afford a 'Stand Still Goal.'

May we appeal to every Church through its pastor and officers to adopt a budget that is a budget, and to avoid the growing evil of counting in every form of gift as a part of the apportionment the Church courts ask for. We seem to be raising our budget and our Committees do not get the money. A real budget means a definite sum for each approved cause. The Church courts have fixed the scale of percentages. Let us stand by that and see that each cause gets a square deal. Some of them are suffering. Is your Church working on a definite budget system for benevolences, or padding its figures to claim an apportionment raised? An apportionment raised is not always a budget raised.

*A PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM CALLS FOR YEARLY PROGRESS
The Canvass Comes March 18th. Are You PRAYING and PREPARING?*

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Presbyterian Progressive Program

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS MARCH 18th

A CHURCH WITH 100 MEMBERS

How They Gave

- 24 Members made their pledges in the Every Member Canvass and paid their pledges, using the weekly envelope.
- 32 Members made pledges in the Every Member Canvass, but did not pay their pledges in weekly envelope.
- 44 Members made no pledges in the Every Member Canvass.

What They Gave

- The 24 Members paid their pledges: _____95%
- The 32 Members paid their pledges: _____55%
- The 44 Members paid: _____Very little.

The facts revealed in the case of this church apply to hundreds of churches in the Southern Assembly, as to the proportion of dependable, proportionate givers and those who either give periodically or do not give at all.

Why Make Weekly Pledges?

1. Because we have already pledged ourselves and our substance to God who has given us all we have.
"Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price."
2. Because it is an act of worship and we owe it to God.
"Honor the Lord with thy substance and the first fruits."
3. Because it is the Apostolic order.
"As I have given order to the Churches of Galatia, even so do ye; on the first day of the week let every one of you lay by in store."
4. Because it is right and reasonable that the financial obligation assumed by the whole Church should be fairly distributed to each member.
"I mean not that others be eased and ye be burdened; but that there be an equality."
5. Because we readily assume a definite amount of debt or fee for any other cause we advocate or for any other organization we may join.
"No man liveth unto himself."
6. Because it is the way we spend our money for everything else—a little at a time.
"Despise not the day of small things."
7. Because we contribute more in this way to promote the best and biggest business in the world.
"Faithful in the least, faithful also in much; and unfaithful in the least, unfaithful also in much."
8. Because it secures the blessing of God. He challenges us to try Him on His promise to prosper if we will tithe. "Prove me now herewith," said the Lord of Hosts.
9. Because it is the best investment of our money—which by the act of worship is "treasure laid up in Heaven." Jesus says that our heart will follow our treasure into the Kingdom.

DEPARTMENT ONE

The Progressive Program in Your Church Will Mean Better Members

The first emphasis of the Program is correctly placed upon spirituality and personal consecration. The spiritual life of the membership of a church is the first and the greatest essential. So much so, that if this is lacking, then all the activities of the church will lag and fail, because they must be grounded in a spirituality born of God and expressing itself in Bible Study, Prayer, Worship, Religion in the Home and Sabbath Observance.

The individual church that is best prepared to take its place in assuming its responsibilities and in setting itself to its assigned and accepted task, in the outlined program of the Church, is a church whose membership is fully surrendered to the leadership and lordship of Christ. The Biblical order of every undertaking of the Church is, "They first gave themselves to the Lord." On this basis then the first definite function of the Presbyterian Progressive Program is of fundamental importance and should come first in any schedule of activities. Our Program's first ringing appeal is for a Stewardship of Life and Self. Large numbers, splendid material equipment, wealth, culture, intellectuality, however important these may be, can never take the place in a church, of spiritual life and the dedication to God of one's self. Stewardship is not a scheme of men for raising money, but one of God's schools for raising men. Announce a talk on stewardship and the majority of an audience expect to be urged to give. This ought not so to be and stewardship must be lifted out of this narrow groove. Your Progressive Program is faithfully endeavoring to develop this larger interpretation and application of stewardship in the membership of the Southern Presbyterian Church. It is enabling an ever increasing number of individuals to enlarge their range of vision and to become better members of the church. It requires Godly men and women to face the splendid and challenging program of the Southern Presbyterian Church and it is this type that is deeply concerned about the progress of the Church and the Kingdom.

Who Givest All

"O, Lord of heaven and earth and sea,
To Thee all praise and glory be;
How shall we show our love to Thee,
Who givest all?"

The golden sunshine, vernal air,
Sweet flowers and fruit thy love declare;
Where harvests ripen thou art there,
Who givest all.

For peaceful homes and healthful days,
For all the blessings earth displays,
We owe Thee thankfulness and praise,
Who givest all.

O, Thou from whom we all derive,
Our life, our gifts, our power to give,
O, may we ever with thee live,
Who givest all."

THE LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT

We would again call the attention of the men of the Church to the various Laymen's Conferences to be held in different sections of our Assembly, beginning February 13th and closing March 2nd. The general theme for these meetings is the World Evangelization. These conferences will be held in the following cities on the following dates:

- Houston, Tex., February 13-14, 1923.
- Little Rock, Ark., February 15-16.
- Jacksonville, Fla., February 20-21.
- Charlotte, N. C., February 22-23.
- Richmond, Va., February 27-28.
- Huntington, W. Va., March 1-2.

We give below the provisional program:

Opening Session 11:00 O'clock A. M.

Address of Welcome.
Purpose of Convention.
The Central Task of the Church.
Devotional Hour—"Unto Him."

Afternoon

Theme—"Living Unto Him."
"The Challenge From Our Fields to Men Today."
(Our world opportunity will be presented in a series of twenty minute addresses).

Devotional Hour—"Living Unto Him."

Evening Session

Theme—"Looking Unto Him."
Facing the Facts and what the Facts reveal. (Stereopticon Review of Present Situation).
Christ the Only Hope of the World.

Morning

Theme—"Service Unto Him."
What one Church is doing.
What one Men's Club is doing.
What one Sunday School is doing.
What one Community is doing.
What individuals and families are doing.
Other opportunities for investment.
Evangelism—the opportunity it offers: For the Bible Class; for the Community; for the Individual.

Afternoon

Theme—"A Step Forward Unto Him."
Plans of the Assembly's Permanent Committee on

Men's Work for the Men of the Church.

A series of four minute talks, each to be followed by open conference in which delegates are expected to speak from the floor. Subjects for consideration:

- The Family Altar.
- Tithing—Individual, Churchwide.
- The Equipment Campaign.
- The Presbyterian Foundation.
- Colored Evangelization.
- The Evangelistic Club.
- Simultaneous Evangelistic Campaigns.

Evening

Theme—"Praise Unto Him."
What my eyes have seen and ears heard.
Power Adequate to the Task.
Hallelujah Chorus from "The Messiah."
(100 to 150 voices).

At the lunch hour the second day arrangements are being made to have delegates lunch together in conferences.

For Church Officers

Presiding Officer—Rev. M. E. Melvin, D.D., Chattanooga, Tenn.

How the Progressive Program Has Helped Our Church.

How We Led Our Members to Tithe.

How Get the Objective of the Progressive Program Adopted.

What the Foreign Mission Committee Would Like to See.

What the Home Mission Committee Would Like to See.

What I Hope to See Inaugurated by My Church.

For Sunday School Workers

Presiding Officer—Mr. A. D. Mason, Memphis, Tenn.

How We Do It.

Why Missions in the Sunday School?

What Material Available.

What My School is Going to Do.

For Bible Class Leaders and Members

Presiding Officer—Mr. J. P. Alexander, Jackson, Miss.

What is the Objective of Your Class?

Has Your Class Assumed any Financial Goal?

How Link Up With Other Side of the World?

How Reach the Man You Elbow Daily?

FIRST SHIPMENT OF STONE FOR SOUTHWESTERN AT MEMPHIS ARRIVES

Subscribers Urged to Pay Now So Work Can Go Forward

The first two cars of stone for the buildings for Southwestern, the college of the Mississippi Valley, have been delivered and others are to follow rapidly. Ten thousand tons will be quarried at Bald Knob, Ark., and delivered out on the college site, where a spur track has been built up to where the buildings will be erected.

The administration building will be the first of the buildings. This will be known as the Palmer Memorial Building, in honor of Dr. B. M. Palmer, who organized Southwestern Presbyterian University, at Clarksville, and who for many years was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of New Orleans.

Now that work has begun, a large number of subscribers are paying what is due on their pledges and a good many are helping doubly by paying in full now.

Capt. W. S. Hawkins, one of the men who rendered most valuable service in the Synod campaign which secured these subscriptions, has been engaged for follow-up work in the matter of collections. It is earnestly hoped, however, that now with work out on the college grounds begun, subscribers will appreciate the tremendous importance of paying up at once and wherever possible, save the necessity of a personal visit.

Dr. Chas. E. Diehl, president of the institution and chairman of the building committee, stated that construction will proceed just as fast as collections will permit.

All checks should be sent to L. C. Humes, Treasurer, care Guaranty Bank & Trust Company, Memphis, Tenn.

LINGLE'S LECTURES

I wish to call the attention of your readers to a course of lectures delivered at the Young People's Conference in Montreat last summer, on Presbyterianism. Setting forth in a most instructive and comprehensive way the history and characteristics of Presbyterianism, these lectures held the attention of the young people from start to finish, and the older people as well. It has occurred to your correspondent that it would be a good thing in the way of doctrinal instruction if our churches could hear Dr. Lingle. There are many of them that he could reach from Richmond, and I am sure he would gladly render this service.

Let our pastors and sessions, who realize the need, get in touch with him. I suggest this on my own initiative.
Montreat, N. C. S. R. Preston.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Plans for the Women's Parallel Convention to be held in Charlotte, February 22-23, in connection with the Eighth General Convention of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, are being made by a committee of women representing the Presbyterian churches of the city. The members of the committee include: Mrs. J. G. Baird, chairman; Mrs. C. C. Thomas, secretary; Mrs. Hopkins Kelly, treasurer; Mrs. C. W. Tillett, registration; Miss Annie Wilson, entertainment; Mrs. H. N. Pharr, Music; Miss Margaret Rankin, platform; Mrs. V. P. Rousseau, church literature; Mrs. J. J. Pierce, information; Miss Julia Alexander, publicity.

The sessions of the convention will be held in the Second Presbyterian Church. Headquarters for women delegates will be the Selwyn Hotel.

It is a matter of great interest to the women of the Presbyterian Church that Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, superintendent of the Women's Auxiliary of the Southern Presbyterian Church will be in charge of the convention. Mrs. Winsborough has recently been spending several weeks in Southern Texas and Mexico, and will bring to the convention a full report of her personal observation of missionary work among the Mexicans.

The day-sessions of the women's convention will be held separately and at night both conventions for men and women, will unite in the city auditorium for a joint session.

Women from all the Presbyterian Churches throughout North and South Carolina, are earnestly urged to attend the convention.

The list of speakers who will address both the men's and women's conventions, is as follows:

Mr. J. Campbell White, New York City.
Mr. A. D. Mason, Memphis, Tenn.
Rev. H. H. Sweets, D.D., Louisville, Ky.
Rev. H. W. DuBose, Spartanburg, S. C.
Rev. T. R. Thompson, D.D., Richmond, Va.
Dr. J. P. McCallie, Chattanooga, Tenn.
Rev. H. F. Williams, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.
Mr. C. R. Caldwell, Staunton, Va.
Mr. Frederick Sullens, Jackson, Miss.
Rev. Motte Martin, Luebo, Africa.
Rev. H. D. McCallie, Mokpo, Korea.
Rev. J. O. Reavis, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.
Rev. M. E. Melvin, D.D., Chattanooga, Tenn.
Mr. J. Fred Johnson, Kingsport, Tenn.
Mr. Samuel R. Sells, Johnson City, Tenn.
Mr. P. T. Shanks, Selma, Ala.
Mr. H. E. Ravenel, Spartanburg, S. C.
Columbia Seminary Quartette, Columbia, S. C.
Rev. Wade C. Smith, Greensboro, N. C.

Practically all of these speakers will address the women's convention, but this will not be the entire attraction of the program for the women. Outstanding women of nearby Synodicals will also be honored visitors and speakers to the women. At the Charlotte convention will be, among others, Mrs. W. A. Turner, Jr., Synodical President of Georgia; Mrs. W. K. Armstrong, Synodical President of Appalachia; Mrs. F. Louise Mayes, Synodical President of South Carolina, and Mrs. E. F. Reid, Synodical President of North Carolina. A program made up of such a group of speakers presents an opportunity to the women that is not to be ignored.

S. O. S. Mecklenburg Auxiliaries—Your Foreign Mission secretary, Mrs. J. H. McIver, of Albemarle, has been very ill for sometime, but is much better now. She was unable to write you January 1st, about mission study classes, so I am writing for her, to urge that if you have not already begun the study of that remarkable book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land," that you will at once organize either a study class or reading circle. Order your books and get to work. Give Mrs. McIver the great joy of reporting a mission study class in each Auxiliary, and give yourselves the great joy of learning how richly God has blessed our work in Mexico.

Mrs. W. L. Wilson,

N. C. Synodical Secretary of Foreign Missions.

Death of Mrs. W. M. Clark—Our readers will have seen in the church papers the announcement of the death, at Princeton, N. J., on November 20th, of Mrs. W. M. Clark, of our Korean Mission. Mrs. Clark was Miss Ada Christine Hamilton, daughter of Mr. T. S. Hamilton, of Covington, Ky. She was married to Rev. W. M. Clark in July, 1907. Their first year after marriage was spent in Berlin, Mr. Clark taking a special course in Philosophy at Berlin University, and Mrs. Clark devoting the year to the study of vocal music. During her first furlough she attended our Mission Conference at Montreal and there are many who will remember with what a beautiful voice and what spiritual power she sang our Gospel hymns for us at that conference. She was a woman of high culture, of many gifts and of most charming personality, all of which were laid with single-hearted devotion on the altar of her Master's service.

After 13 years in mission service in Korea she arrived in this country on her second furlough in July of this year. After a brief visit in the home of her parents in Covington, Ky., and of Mr. Clark's parents in Sheffield, Ala., she went with her husband to Princeton, where Mr. Clark took up post-graduate work in special preparation for the literary work to which he had been assigned by the mission on his return to Korea next year. She was taken suddenly ill at Princeton on November 11th and after a few days of suffering, during which everything was done for her that the skill of the physicians and the kindness of friends could do, in the early morning of November 20th she passed quietly into the presence of her Saviour.

Mrs. Clark is survived by her husband and three children, Carter, Frances and Janie Christine.

There are many friends, both in this country and in Korea whose deep and tender sympathy will go out to the bereaved husband and family, and whose prayers will be offered in their behalf, that the comforts of the Gospel may abound to them in the day of their affliction.

For Your Information—To the President, Secretary of Foreign Missions, Secretary of Spiritual Life. Dear Friends:

The Annual Day of Prayer for Foreign Missions is February 16th. It happens providentially that this is also the Interdenominational Day of Prayer for World-Wide Missions, and on that day hundreds of thousands of Christian women of all the churches in America will be uniting their prayers for the progress of the Kingdom in America and around the whole world. What an inspiration is this to all who understand the mighty power of united prayer!

Is your Auxiliary going to have a share in this blessed ministry of intercession? We earnestly hope no Auxiliary will fail to meet on that day of self-denial and prayer for the great Foreign Mission work of our Church and of the world.

The enclosed program will add inspiration to your meeting. Read it carefully and order promptly as many copies as you will need for your meeting.

We have sent you sufficient self-denial envelopes to supply your members. We earnestly hope that the offering will be a most liberal one, in order that all expenses of this year's work may be met and that a surplus of $50,000 be paid on the debt. If that happy end of the year is achieved, we shall all rejoice to see the speedy departure of the young missionaries who have been waiting so long to go to the foreign fields to which they have dedicated their lives and have been kept waiting by lack of funds. Let us give of our abundance liberally and withhold not, that the work may advance and the Kingdom be extended.

Have a great meeting February 16th. God's blessing will rest upon you and upon all who attend.

Faithfully yours,

H. P. Winsborough.

Your Best Investment—Egbert W. Smith—"Of course he is prejudiced in favor of Foreign Missions." So think many listeners to a Foreign Mission secretary as he describes the immense fruitfulness of Foreign Mission work. Though he tells what he has seen with his own eyes, there still lurks in the listener's mind the feeling that he is not an impartial witness.

But what says Dr. Simon Flexner, a Jew, the head of the Rockefeller Institute of Research, probably the most expert professional investigator in the world? Returning from a tour of missionary investigation in the Far East on which he was sent by the Rockefeller Foundation, Dr. Flexner makes this report:

"There is no organization in the world, either philanthropic or business, which is getting as large returns out of the money it spends as the various boards of Foreign Missions."

Look at our own Foreign Mission fruitage. From 1902 to 1922 our receipts increased nearly 600 per cent. Had the results on the field increased 600 per cent also, it would have been considered good business.

But in those 20 years our mission hospitals increased 1,600 per cent, our staff of trained native workers 2,500 per cent, our mission school pupils 3,300 per cent, and our mission schools, each one a light amid dense darkness, 5,000 per cent.

Averaging these percentages, we find that a 600 per cent increase of funds was so administered as to produce more than 3,000 per cent increase of results, and with an administration expense which last year was only 5-1-2 per cent. What organization, either business or philanthropic, is getting as large returns out of the money entrusted to it?

The increase of our native membership is not pictured because their present number is unknown. Our records show a growth in 20 years from about 5,000 to about 45,000, an increase of 800 per cent, or more than ten times the home Church's per cent, or increase in the same period. But this 45,000 is only part of the real total, because in several of our mission countries thousands of our converts have been transferred to independent native churches or other organizations.

Rising Ratio of Increase—A striking feature of Foreign Mission investment is its law of accelerating returns. For example in China, our most difficult field, the North Kiangsu Mission reports 23 per cent more conversions in the last five years than in the preceding 34 since the work started; while in Korea the increase of Sunday School pupils has been 150 per cent greater, and of mission day school pupils 300 per cent greater, in the last two years, than in the preceding 24 since the Korean work began.

Personal Testimony—One of the outstanding business men of our Church, a liberal life-long giver to all church causes, returning two years ago from a personal inspection of his large investment in one of our foreign fields publicly testified that its results had far surpassed his highest expectations and that he considered it the most satisfactory investment he had ever made.

Foreign Mission investment means the placing of your money where the need is the greatest, the returns the largest, and the cost of administration, for the results achieved, the least.

The following from the Treasury Department is gratifying:

On last March 31st the deficit was reported as $251,704. When our books are closed each year on March 31st all balances due the missions on that date on the regular budget accounts must of necessity be carried over, pending later adjustment. On the final settlements this year just completed the committee gained $46,128 from exchange balances and deferred use of work appropriations, thus reducing the deficit to $205,576.

The Double Goal—Two things challenge our Church, the reduction of this remaining deficit and the sending to the field of those trained young candidates that have been waiting since last summer. If this year's receipts for the regular work total $50,000 more than its actual cost estimated at $1,156,912, such a total, which is far less than the amount apportioned this cause in the Progressive Program, will not only wipe out one-fourth of the deficit, but will guarantee the committee's sending out under the usual conditions these waiting candidates.

Of this total, $527,271 was received between April 1 and December 27. By each doing his utmost between now and March 31st the remaining $679,641 will be raised and the double goal reached.

Greenville, N. C.—The Mission Study Class of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Greenville Presbyterian Church had an all-day meeting, at the home of Mrs. N. O. Warren, on Monday, January 22d.

Every possible preparation had been made ahead of time to make the day a success.

Books, "Sunrise in Aztec Land" had been distributed and the following leaders, one for each chapter, chosen:

Miss Kate Lewis.
Miss Birdie McKinney.
Mrs. B. W. Moseley.
Mrs. E. W. Harvey.
Mrs. J. M. Hines.
Mrs. R. H. Wright.
Miss Miriam MacFadyen.
Miss Mary Bertolet.
Miss Mittie Beaman.

The ladies assembled at 11 o'clock and the meeting was immediately called to order by the president, Mrs. C. L. Porter.

The leaders had carefully prepared their work, supplementing the text with much interesting material, including a large map of Mexico. Many questions arose creating general discussion. It was most informal. The lunch was provided by different ladies contributing some one thing.

At five o'clock the meeting closed. All felt it was a day delightfully as well as profitably spent, and all agreed that more had been gotten from the class conducted in this way than in any other way tried heretofore.

We hope "Our Column" is to be filled from week to week with just such interesting accounts of mission Study Classes.—Ed.

MOTHER'S LITTLE VALENTINE

By Florence Switton

Two years ago, this very day,
I came 'mid storms and winds to stay—
No postman's call, no written line,
But just my mother's valentine.

Last year I cooed and crowed my love,
Just like the dear white turtle dove,
I closely made my arms entwine
The heart of my own valentine.

Today dear grandma smiled through tears—
In thoughts she traveled many years,
When mother wore this dress "so fine,"
And was her dainty valentine.

For babyland is filled with joy,
And baby's heart is mother's toy.
The kiss, the smile, the hug divine
Are from my sweetheart's valentine.
—Childhood.

FULFILLMENT

A maiden prayed: "God make me beautiful,
Endow me with such fairness that the world
Shall see and own me fair. O grant me power
Great as Egypt's queen, that men, all men,
Shall call me beautiful beyond compare."

The woman prayed: "God give me power of song;
A voice to thrill and hold the hearts of men,
And make them subjects—slaves of each caprice,
For fires that rage within I'd find a vent
In song. Oh grant me, God, the power of song."

And God seemed not to hear, but gave her life
To live. To maid and woman sorrows fell
That filled each day and night with pain, until
Of all was left her but a woman's soul,
That yet had learned its lesson well; then came

A beauty in her face unknown, undreamed;
So great her power she feared its wrong appliance
And prayed each day for light and strength,
And music stole into her voice, deep notes
That thrilled men's lives and stirred weak souls to act;
And her power was great beyond compare.
Thus God inscrutable doth answer prayer.

—Cathedral Leaflet.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

And still the work goes on! Our young people are continually giving evidence of their interest and zeal in the Master's work. Just look at what those Endeavorers did in Greensboro. Don't you know their pastor is happy to have such fine helpers? It is reports like these that help other young people to do better work. Won't you who have not yet reported tell us of your work and plans. A friend of the Editor's asked him if he wasn't afraid the "Reporters' Honor Roll" would get too big for the available space, and was told that nothing could make the Editor happier. Now, some of you "sunshine bands" get busy and help him and other young people by telling of the fine things you are doing!

We feel sure that all who know our friend, Frank P. Wilson, North Carolina C. E. field secretary, will join us in congratulating him on his election as vice-president of the C. E. Secretaries of North America. South Carolina will feel particularly proud as he hails from the Palmetto State and graduated from Presbyterian College.

Charlotte, February 22-23! That is the place, and those are the dates for the Regional meeting of the Eighth Biennial General Convention of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of our Church. The older of our young men in the Young People's societies should try to attend. Among the fine speakers will be Mr. J. Campbell White, of New York; Dr. H. H. Sweets, Dr. H. F. Williams, and Dr. J. O. Reavis. One of the quartettes from Columbia Seminary will sing. Mail your registration fee of two dollars to Mr. George Miley, Brevard Court, Charlotte.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

FEBRUARY 11, 1923

THE SPIRIT OF PRAYER
Luke 18:1-14

GOLDEN TEXT—The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.—Psa. 51:17.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

1 And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray, and not to faint;
2 Saying, There was in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man;
3 And there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary.
4 And he would not for a while; but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man;
5 Yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me.
6 And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith.
7 And shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?
8 I tell you that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?
9 And he spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others:
10 Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican.
11 The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican.
12 I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.
13 And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner.
14 I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other; for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

Men deprive themselves of many things by not praying. "We have not because we ask not." Another reason for our being destitute is that "We pray amiss." Our prayers lack some of the qualities of prevailing prayer. Our lesson is termed, "The Spirit of Prayer." In it our Saviour presents some of the essential characteristics or qualities of the prayer that profits or reaches heaven and brings blessings. We are told in Holy Writ that "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Whether prayer secures good results depends upon the character of him who prays and the qualities shown in his praying. Developing the teachings of our lesson, we will attend to The Unjust Judge Moved by Persistent Prayer; Such Prayer is Heard by a Righteous, Pitying God; The Pharisee's Prayer; The Publican's Prayer.

I. The Unjust Judge Moved by Persistent Prayer

The Judge in the parable is described as neither "fearing God nor regarding man." He is influenced in his conduct neither by reverence for God nor deference for His will, nor by a regard for human approval or displeasure. Yet when the widow continually applied to him to give her justice and "to avenge her of her adversary," he consented. He was moved to action not by the highest righteous motives but by a selfish regard for his own ease and comfort. He had no regard for her rights or wants, but dreaded the trouble and weariness of constant importunity. He says, "Yet because this widow troubleth me I will avenge her lest by her continual coming she weary me."

II. Persistent Prayer Is Heard by a Righteous and Pitying God

Jehovah loves the right and delights to do justice. He has the love of pity for the needy and distressed. Persistent prayer, manifest trust, sincerity and earnestness therefore a righteous God will hear such prayer and "avenge His own elect," though He may delay and "bear long with them." Our Saviour's argument is this, "If a selfish, unjust judge can be moved by persistent petition to render justice to a poor widow in whom he feels no interest, how much more shall a righteous, loving God be inclined to answer the importunate prayers of His own people whom He loves with an everlasting love.

Yet such is the unbelief of man in the Divine character and promises that Christ asks, "When the Son of man cometh shall He find faith upon the earth?" Our Saviour, next in expounding the real nature of prayer, gives two specimens of prayer, one proud and fruitless, the other humble and saving.

III. The Pharisee's Prayer

It was proud, self-righteous and full of error. It was addressed more to himself than to God. It contains no petitions, no consciousness of sin, and no cry for pardon. It professes to thank God for what was not true. It was rather a congratulation of himself upon freedom from faults that pertained to other men. He thanks God that he was not as other men—extortioners, unjust or adulterers. He even makes a contemptuous allusion to the Publican in sight and thanks God that he is not "even as this Publican." While he avows thankfulness for freedom from gross sins, he is also boastful of what he deems righteous deeds. He tells the omniscient Jehovah, "I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess." Christ affirms of the Pharisees that they "tithed garden herbs but neglected the weightier matters of the law, righteousness and the love of God." "God resisteth the proud but giveth grace unto the humble." He declares, "There is none righteous, no, not one." The whole world is guilty before God. We must all come before God as sinners. This Pharisee poses before Jehovah as a righteous man. Is it surprising that his prayer was vain and he went down from the temple without pardon or justification.

IV. The Publican's Prayer

The Pharisees deemed the Publicans the worst class in social life, partly because of their official character as the tax collectors for a foreign government and in part because many of them were men of corrupt and vicious character. But this Publican was conscious of guilt, penitent, and sought the Divine mercy. His petition was "God be merciful unto me a sinner." He doesn't claim that there is anything good in him. He does not minimize or cover his transgressions. He confesses His sin. The Lord says, "If we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." He is humble as he "stood afar off, smote upon his breast," and cried, "God be merciful to me a sinner." The Lord declares, "He went down to his house pardoned and justified."

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

IMPROVING OUR COMMUNITY

M., Feb. 12—Improving Our Morals: Isa. 1:10-20.
T., Feb. 13—Help the Poor: Deut. 24:17-22.
W., Feb. 14—Help the Church: Rom. 15:25-33.
T., Feb. 15—A City Beautiful: Ps. 48:1-14.
F., Feb. 16—Good Roads: Isa. 35:1-10.
S., Feb. 17—Good Schools: II Chron. 17:7-9.
Sun., Feb. 18—Topic: $50,000 for Improving Our Community—How Should We Spend It?

(The article below was written at my request by Mrs. C. C. Hook, of Charlotte. Mrs. Hook is a public spirited woman, a leader in civic promotion, and a faithful worker in religious circles, such as her own church, Westminster Church, and the Y. W. C. A. She is, thus deeply interested in young people.—J. G. G.)

Do you know a place in your State that has homes, a school, a few churches, a few stores, and nothing else? Yes, we all know such places and we have found that as soon as the young people can possibly do so, they get out of such a place and go somewhere else.

The community of which I speak suddenly realizes that it is losing its young men and women. But some one has a vision, and without considering from whence it came, we are suddenly possessed of $50,000 that we must spend. How?

The first thing is to get a few people together that have the interest of the community at heart. Not the folks that say, "I have lived here fifty years, and this town is good enough for me." Leave those folks out. Get together a group of men and women, and they will see that the first thing must be a community house, an attractive one-story building with a large assembly room, a stage, a kitchenette, small dining room, a big fire-place, the walls even rough boards, but stained a soft French gray, or sage green, even a brown or rustic finish. Comfortable chairs, and now we are ready to develop community spirit.

We have a place where every one in the town can come on the same footing. The men can meet to discuss civic questions, the women can have their fairs and money-making festivals, the community sings, the games and parties for the young people.

But who will keep the place? I guess we will have to have a secretary. He or she may cost three thousand dollars. We want a capable one. It must not be a cheap job. The person must have brains and training.

I heard of a girl who said, "I live in a place where we do not have parties." The answer given this girl was that she had much time to read some of the lovely books that had been written. So I think we should start a library and have it in the same community house. So we will spend $1,000 on new books.

Now how can we have any pleasure at this community house if we do not have good health? So we must have a community nurse. She not only nurses if necessary, but she teaches how to keep well. She goes in and out of the homes where there is sickness, shows the mother how to protect the rest of the family from disease, and how to feed the babies. You know in our own State of North Carolina three thousand babies die every year under one year of age. The nurse and her equipment will cost $2,000.

Now without good streets and good sidewalks, we can never get to the community house, if it should rain and the streets get muddy. So here goes ten thousand dollars to build sidewalks and fix up Main street.

As soon as the streets are fixed up, then the yards begin to improve. Flowers and hedges and grass make our little village look like a different place. Even the new houses that are built look prettier, just as though some one had really planned them for the lots on which they are built.

Now, what can make a place prettier than a park. Right in the heart of the town, while land is cheap, we are going to buy a park of about three acres. Then some day the city hall, the court house, the library, and all the public buildings can be built around this square and we will have a beautiful little city. I guess this will cost, to buy and fix it up, ten thousand dollars.

Now, let us spend ten thousand more on a teacherage. What's that? Well, we have a consolidated school, and the teachers don't like to come here, for they have to live in some one else's home. They have no home life. They don't have meals at the times that suit them, and they would rather go to a big place where there are more comforts available for teachers. But if a teachers' home is provided, they can run it to suit themselves, and have far more freedom than they can in the home of school patrons.

Now let us keep five thousand for research, or reserves, in case something comes up that we may want.

We must have a garden teacher for one year, anyhow, and get everybody interested in gardens, especially the children in school. We will get a man that has taken a real agricultural course, and I guess we will have to pay him about twenty-four hundred dollars. He has brains, too. He doesn't plant by the moon.

Now then we have about sixteen hundred dollars left. Let's buy equipment for the park, nice iron seats, iron swings, and some play slides for the children, big ones and little ones. Let us wire it with electric lights, and then in summer we can have Christian Endeavor meetings, and evening joint services out in the open.

Wouldn't you love to live in this town? Wouldn't you love to help make the fun in this town? Wouldn't we get a new vision of what it means when He said, "I come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly."

"If life's to be filled with drudgery,
What need of a human soul."

REPORTERS' HONOR ROLL

Carey P. Lowrance, Mooresville.
Paul W. Rawlins, Greensboro.
Miss Eunice Long, Greensboro.
Miss Minnie Hopkins, Concord.
Miss Leila Hibbard, Lumber Ridge.
Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, Routh 5, Durham.
Miss Aline Whitener, Hickory.
Miss Maud Little, Charlotte.
Mrs. Z. V. Tuttle, Mooresville.

HAVE YOU A HOME MISSION STUDY CLASS?

There are three big reasons why we are all trying to have a Home Mission Study Class in our society. First, a live, growing society is one that is really doing things, is growing because it is doing and is interesting others in what it is doing. This is one of the most important things we can do.

Second, the whole Church is doing things in this great work, right here in our own state. Our individual church has its part and we have our part in it, too; it is our work and needs our help. We must first learn of the great and interesting things that are being done, learn how we can help.

And the third reason—well, we are all working for it—the "Merit Loving Cup." It is to be presented for this year at our big conference at Davidson, June 12-19, to the Presbytery and to the society in that Presbytery which has done the best work for the year. And here's 25 of the 100 points that each of our societies can win right now. Even if flu or something else breaks up our mission study class, we still get credit for the full 25 points if two-thirds of us read the text-book.

You can get a copy of it, "Unfinished Tasks," from the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, for only 50 cents. Let's see how soon you can send our Young People's Department editor the encouraging news item that you have already ordered your book and have started to work on real Home Mission study.

U. T. S., Richmond, Va. Wilson W. Moore.

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

Twelve members of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society at Mooresville have completed a study of the home mission book, "Unfinished Tasks."

Probably one of the most unique and interesting observances of the 42nd anniversary of Christian Endeavor was that of the C. E. Training Class at Davidson College. Members of the class were asked to impersonate different leaders of Christian Endeavor, and the program was carried out as if they were present at the annual meeting of the board of trustees. Each man had to report on the work of his department. Some of the men impersonated were: Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder and president of the United Society; E. P. Gates, general secretary; C. F. Evans, Southern secretary; Dr. D. A. Poling, associate president of the United Society; C. C. Hamilton, field manager of the C. E. World, and several others. It was one of the most interesting of the many varied programs that this organization is holding.

The Westminster Senior Endeavorers of Greensboro held ten cottage prayer meetings preparatory to the revival service which began in that church January 28th. Members of the church opened their homes to the meetings, and the Endeavorers had several requests to hold meetings. The society was divided into six teams, every member on some team, and practically every member took some part in the meetings. This church also has a Junior choir, composed of Junior Endeavorers, which assisted in the singing during the special services.

The Junior Endeavorers of the First Presbyterian Church at Mooresville celebrated Christian Endeavor Day last Sunday by having one of the members of the C. E. Training class at Davidson College visit them and tell them about the early stages of the Junior C. E., and the marked advance of this phase of Christian Endeavor.

Church News

ARMENIAN RELIEF

Received for this cause:
Thomasboro Church -----$38.00

NEWS NOTES FROM BARIUM

Last week was "hog killing" week again at the orphanage. Mr. Lackey killed three large ones.

Miss Neta Deal and Miss Katherine Burgin, who were here nursing "flu" went home last week, but as the situation at the infirmary does not improve as we had hoped, it was necessary to have another nurse. Miss Elva Hartness came up from Charlotte Tuesday afternoon. We have two more cases of pneumonia.

John Boswell developed measles Sunday morning. As it has been several years since we had an epidemic of measles, there are quite a number of children to have it.

Mr. J. H. Hobby, the dairyman at the Jackson Training School, and one of the boys were visitors in the home one day this week.

Mr. Will Privett and wife have come to take charge of our dairy. They are at present taking their meals in the dining room.

Miss Sallie Chambers, matron of Synod Cottage, left last week for several weeks vacation. Mrs. W. C. C. Foster is substituting for her for a short while until a matron can get here.

Mr. Johnston is busy this week getting his furniture placed in his new house. His family will come over next week.

There were seven additions to the church by profession of their faith and two by affirmation, at the communion service Sunday.

SOUTH CAROLINA

At a meeting of Enoree Presbytery in Greenville, S. C., February 3, 1923, Mr. Fred Hopkins, a member of Fairview Church and sophomore at Davidson College, was received as a candidate for the ministry under its care.

Greenwood—On Sunday, January 21st, Rev. John A. MacLean, Jr., was formally installed as pastor of this church. Rev. J. B. Green, D.D., formally pastor here, and now professor of Theology at Columbia Seminary, presided, submitted the constitutional questions and charged the people. Dr. S. L. Morris, of Atlanta, preached the sermon. Mr. A. C. Todd, an elder of the Laurens Church, charged the pastor. The weather was bright and beautiful, and the large congregation found the service edifying and inspiring.

At the evening service, on the same day, Dr. Green preached one of his masterful sermons, and made a profound impression upon his audience.

Spartanburg—Rev. H. W. DuBose, D.D., by appointment of Enoree Presbytery, was formally installed pastor of Spartanburg First Church on Sunday evening, January 28th. A large congregation filled the church and the services were interesting and impressive. Rev. J. B. Green, D.D., of Columbia Theological Seminary, preached the sermon and presided; Rev. J. S. Lyons, Jr., charged the pastor, and ruling elder Lindsay Wilson, both of Greenville, charged the people. Dr. DuBose begins his new pastorate most auspiciously. Splendid congregations attend the services every Sunday, the people greatly enjoy his excellent sermons and the whole church seems to be throbbing with life and activity.

Our little Second Church, too, after a long struggling existence, appears to have developed new energy and growth recently under the faithful and efficient pastorate of Rev. Charles B. Chapin, D.D., professor of the Bible in Converse College.

In fact, nearly all the churches of Spartanburg and vicinity have experienced fresh life and remarkable progress since the wonderful revival attending the Billy Sunday meeting of a year ago. The blessed effects are becoming more and more manifest.

T. H. L.

NORTH CAROLINA

Westminster Church, Charlotte—Last Week our people had the great privilege of three lectures on "Stewardship" by Dr. Wm. Ray Dobyns, of Birmingham, Ala. Dr. Dobyns lifted his subject out of the sphere of merely money, as he reminded us from the Scriptures that God, the giver of all, expects, and shall require, an accounting. The lectures were brimming over with apt illustrations and sparkling wit. Naturally the attendance grew with each evening. Our people have received a blessing. But as is usually the case, the most-needy were the most absent.

Gastonia, Olney Church—On Friday night, January 10th, 70 men of this church and a few guests sat down together at a delightful banquet served by the Woman's Auxiliary. Mr. E. P. Lineberger, president of the Laymen's Association, of Olney Church, acted as toastmaster, while interesting talks were made by Dr. J. H. Henderlite, Messrs P. W. Garland, J. Lec Robinson, S. A. Robinson, and Marshall Dilling, of Gastonia. Plans were outlined for the year's work by the pastor, Rev. T. G. Tate, the clerk of session, Mr. R. Q. Howe, the treasurer, Mr.

R. C. Robinson, and Mr. W. L. Hutchinson, superintendent of the Sunday School.

This church recently met its quota in full in cash and subscriptions to the Davidson College campaign.

Rev. Dugald Munroe writes: "Dr. Hill is enjoying his winter vacation in Florida and Georgia. I preached at Maxton and Milton last Sunday; at Centre and Harmony School House the Sunday before. Forty-seven years ago this coming spring, two brethren, two brothers and myself, were licensed to preach at Centre. Dr. Hill, then pastor of the church at Fayetteville, attended this Presbytery and preached Sunday morning. He is the only minister in it now that was in it when Angus McDonald, William McGelvary and the three Munroe brothers were licensed April, 1876. He had been in Presbytery of Fayetteville then about eight years, remained in Fayetteville about ten years longer and then came to his present charge about 36 years ago. They are good Scotch Presbyterians."

Caldwell Memorial, Charlotte—We were eager to inaugurate the use of our new church auditorium with an evangelistic meeting and were fortunate in securing Dr. Chas. H. Pratt, of Montgomery, and Dr. W. R. Dobyns, of Birmingham, for a combination meeting after the Master's two-by-two plan. They made a fine team, Dr. Dobyns speaking in the afternoon especially to Christians, Dr. Pratt making the evangelistic appeal at night. The singing was led most acceptably by Mr. A. M. Cathey, of Charlotte. It was the best meeting the writer was ever in. The attendance and interest were fine, and the tonic effect on the spiritual life of the congregation deep and permanent, it is believed. Including a few just before the meeting started and three the Sunday after it closed, there were 23 additions on confession of faith. The meeting began January 21st and ran the better part of two weeks. A happy feature of the combination plan was that when Dr. Pratt was called home by the death of an elder in his church the middle of the second week Dr. Dobyns was able to go right on with the services till the close.

G. F. Bell, Pastor.

Training Class for Sunday School Leaders—The Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday Schools of Wilmington will co-operate in holding a standard training school for Sunday School leaders in Grace Church, February 11-16. They propose to have the biggest and best training enterprise ever undertaken in this section.

Six standard courses will be offered, and outstanding Sunday School leaders, coming from our states, will be the instructors. Prof. Claude Carr, of Mooresville, leader of Sunday School work in the North Carolina Presbyterian Synod, and L. L. Gobel, of Durham, superintendent of Sunday School work of the North Carolina Methodist Conference, will have charge in launching this training school.

Standard training schools have been held in Wilmington before, but this time by combining, they can pool their resources to make it an improvement upon what has gone before.

The following officers and committees to arrange for the school were elected:

Board of Managers: Rev. W. A. Stanburg, chairman; Rev. J. O. Mann, Maj. W. A. Graham, Rev. W. W. Morton, M. F. Allen, C. T. McKeithan, W. K. Mintz, Earl Jones, W. H. Shaffer, M. Pearsall, Marvin J. Cowell and H. E. Boney.

Committee on Finance: C. E. Clark and H. E. O'Keef, who will name a third person. This committee will serve also as a committee on entertainment.

Publicity Committee: Rev. J. E. Purcell and Rev. H. C. Smith.

Enrollment Committee: W. W. Morton, Presbyterian chairman; Miss Edna Wilkins, Methodist chairman; Miss McDougal, Mrs. John Hall, Mrs. H. R. Collet, Miss Agnes Irwin, Miss Martha Voshall, Mrs. W. K. Mintz, M. F. Allen, M. J. Cowell and Mrs. L. D. Latta.

Mr. Gobel and Professor Carr, who jointly will direct the school, submitted as a proposed list of courses and instructors the following, which was adopted unanimously:

"Organization and Administration of the Sunday School"; Rev. J. Q. Schisler, of the department of leadership training, Methodist General Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tenn., as instructor.

"Principles of Religious Teaching," Professor Carr, instructor.

"Beginner Lesson Materials," Mrs. W. H. McArdle, director of religious education, Christian Church, Norfolk.

"Primary Organization," Miss Georgia S. Keene, conference elementary superintendent, Durham, instructor.

"Junior Lesson Materials," Miss Grace Killingsworth, assistant superintendent of Sunday School work, South Carolina Conference, Orangeburg, as instructor.

"Intermediate-Senior Psychology," Mrs. B. H. Bunch, director of religious education, First Presbyterian Church, Raleigh.

The recent action of the North Carolina Synod, in session at Lincolnton, N. C., is beginning to bear fruit. Those in charge are evidently magnifying their office, so at we may look for more efficient Sunday School teaching than has been done in the past. The committee is doing its part. Let our Sunday School teachers rally around them.

FLORIDA

Deland—It is so universally the custom to wait until one is dead before making public expressions of appreciation, that a recent action of the First Presbyterian Church is unique. In addition to naming their newly established church library for Miss Lois Neel (whom North Carolina has lent to Florida), the following resolutions on a Volland Gleam of Gold, motto, were presented:

"Miss Lois Neel has rendered a service of inestimable value in giving missionary studies to the Sunday School, the young people, and to the entire congregation. She has exercised most admirable ability and resourcefulness in suggesting plans and methods for missionary labors, and has given practical examples of liberal contributions of time and money to missionary causes.

Miss Neel's labors in the particulars mentioned are justly entitled to sincere and hearty appreciation on the part of every member of this congregation and Sunday School.

As a testimonial of esteem and as a Christmas greeting, and in recognition of the rich blessings that have resulted from her labors and example, this slight token is hereby presented to Miss Neel, on behalf of the church in all of its departments of service."

Signed by the pastor, Sunday School superintendent, and the chairman of the Educational Committee.

A New Movement in the Synod of Florida—The Synod of Florida at its meeting in St. Petersburg, last fall, made some great plans to stir every church within its bounds into real soul saving activity. These plans are well on their way toward being successfully carried out and three series of simultaneous meetings will be held so as to include every church in the Synod. The meetings in Florida Presbytery will be held in March. Those in Suwannee, in April, and those in St. Johns, in May.

In order to make this campaign a success almost the entire church has been drawn upon. The Assembly's Committee of Home Missions is co-operating in every way and is placing one of its evangelists entirely at the disposal of the Synod to assist in the preliminary work. The campaign also has the hearty co-operation of the Layman's Missionary Movement. Appeals have been sent throughout the church to men of known evangelistic ability, asking them to give their services with no other compensation than their expenses.

The response to these appeals has been ready and generous and it would be hard to find a more impressive list of names than those now assigned to the various churches. These brethren have, in a large hearted way, agreed to go wherever assigned, and it will thus be possible for the weaker churches to have the uplift and inspiration that will come from the presence of our strongest men.

The Synod is not by any means depending on human power to carry out these plans, however. From the beginning the brethren have never lost sight of the fact that there is only one person whose presence is indispensable in an evangelistic campaign and that is the Holy Spirit Himself. The Synod is planning an advance, but it is to be an advance upon her knees. Plans are under way for the formation of a prayer league which shall unite all members of our churches in claiming the blessing at the Throne of Grace.

The local pastors and churches are taking hold with real faith and enthusiasm and the brethren are going to find the ground prepared for them when they come to hold their meetings.

We know that God always has blessings for those who are willing to reach up and claim them from His bounty and we are very confident that those who watch the church news columns will read some big things about the churches in Florida during the next few months.

We earnestly request the whole Church to pray for these meetings.

J. McD. Lacy.

KENTUCKY

A special meeting of the Presbytery of Louisville was held January 26th, when Rev. E. S. Campbell was received from the Presbytery of Congaree. Rev. R. M. Pegram from the Presbytery of Abingdon, and Rev. Henry V. Escott from the Presbytery of Paducah.

Mr. Campbell will be installed pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church Sunday, February 18th, and Rev. R. M. Pegram, pastor of the James Lee Memorial Church Sunday, February 25th.

Rev. W. A. Hopkins was dismissed to the Presbytery of Transylvania in order to accept a call to the pastorate of the United Presbyterian Church of Lebanon.

W. H. Hopper, S. C.

Evangelistic Conference in Ebenezer Presbytery—A very helpful and enthusiastic conference on evangelism was held in the First Presbyterian Church, Millersburg, Ky., on Friday afternoon and evening, January 19th. The attendance was about the best we have yet had. Carlisle, Elizaville, Paris and Shawhan Churches were represented, besides a very large attendance from Millersburg. The program was full of fine suggestions and enthusiasm.

Revs. T. S. Smylie, B. B. Hestir, W. A. Hopkins, and Hon. Claude Thomas spoke in the afternoon, and Mr. E. H. Davis led a round table discussion which was very helpful. The address by Mr. Thomas was unusually fine. This was the first time he had taken part in a conference of this nature and he proved to be not only a very delightful speaker but a man who was thoroughly alive to the interest and needs of the church.

In the church parlors, at six o'clock, the ladies served a very delicious dinner. About 80 partook and we had several excellent addresses around the table.

At the night service Rev. Thornton Whaling, D.D., of Louisville, gave a very illuminating and enthusiastic address on evangelism in the Sunday School to a house filled with people. Rev. W. W. Morton, our pastor at Millersburg, was untiring in his efforts to make the occasion helpful, and succeeded splendidly. There is no better church in the Synod of Kentucky than the one at Millersburg, and no more delightful people. Mr. Thos. B. Talbot, superintendent of Home Missions of the Ebenezer Presbytery, presided at this gathering.

We believe that these conferences are proving a great benediction to the different Presbyteries of the State, and the spirit of evangelism seems to be taking hold upon the people as it has not for a number of years.

When the Kentucky Presbyterian Educational Movement formally closed in December, a follow-up or Extension Committee was appointed by the United Commission with Dr. J. C. Acheson president of Kentucky College for Women, as chairman, and J. C. Norton, as executive secretary. Other members of the committee are Dr. R. Ames Montgomery, president Centre College, Danville; Rev. Harvey S. Murdock, president Witherspoon College, Buckhorn, Ky.; Benjamin Jay Bush, Lexington, Ky.; Rev. R. L. Telford, Richmond, Ky.; Dr. J. V. Logan, Louisville; Dr. R. T. Gillespie, Louisville, and Dr. John M. Vander Meulen, president Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Kentucky. The purpose of the committee is to stimulate the collection of pledges, maintain the interest of the people in the educational institutions now controlled by the Presbyterians of Kentucky, and to advance the cause of Christian Education in general.

A comprehensive program has been mapped out by the committee and the first of its activities will center around February 25th, observed throughout the Church as the day of prayer for schools and colleges. A special program entitled "Listening In" will be sent to all Sunday School superintendents in the State, for use on that day. Ministers will be asked to preach on Christian Education and it has also been recommended that the ministers of the Southern Presbyterian Church exchange pulpits with those of the Northern branch of the denomination (where convenient) thus fostering the splendid spirit of co-operation and fellowship which has been intensified through the recent campaign.

Plans will be made for faculty members of the various institutions to visit the churches during the year; a conference for faculty members of these institutions will be arranged, same to be held sometime during the Easter holidays; and a conference for the young people in the U. S. and U. S. A. Synods is also being considered, although it is not certain whether this can be accomplished during the present year. Both committees are heartily in favor of a joint conference of this nature and are looking forward to the time when it will be held. The Woman's Auxiliaries will be asked to have special programs on Christian Education three or four times a year and it is also proposed to have educational programs for the meetings of Presbyteries and Synods. A monthly bulletin will be issued in order to keep the people informed as to the activities of the nine educational institutions and of the churches in the State, and publicity on all activities will be given both to the secular and religious press.

All correspondence pertaining to this work should be sent to J. C. Norton, 109 East Broadway, Louisville, Ky. Anyone desiring additional copies of "Listening In" can obtain same upon request.

TEXAS

First Church, Lancaster—January 28th closed the first year of the present pastorate. During the year some inside improvements have been made such as partitioning the Sunday School room into individual class-rooms and placing a light in the light-house in top of the dome.

Some spiritual growth has also been noted. Eleven have been received on profession of faith; 19 by letter. Three were received during our revival. The C. E. has been newly organized with three departments: Senior, Intermediate, Junior. Rev. Albert E. Wallace is our pastor.

VIRGINIA

The Synod of Virginia, Providence favoring, will convene, for its next annual session, August 28, 1923 at Massanetta Springs.

The Synod at its meeting in the Ginter Park Presbyterian Church, September, 1922, appointed the Moderator and the Stated Clerk a committee to select the time and place for the next meeting of the Synod. This committee has accepted an invitation tendered by Dr. W. E. Hudson representing the board of trustees of Massanetta Springs property, to the Synod to meet there at the date above mentioned.

Thos. C. Johnson, Moderator.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Church of the Pilgrims—This church has entered the New Year with profound gratitude to God. At the January communion the pastor announced 23 new members received the last communion 15 on profession of faith and eight by letter, six of those received on profession being heads of families. On last Sunday, the 14th, eight more came to us by letter.

At a recent meeting of the congregation Mr. W. W. Hanson was elected ruling elder and will be ordained and installed at an early date.

The men of the Brotherhood are showing considerable interest in a mission study class using as a text-book, Dr. McMillan's splendid book, "Unfinished Tasks." The class meets before prayer meeting hour each week.

Cor.

PERSONAL

Rev. J. McD. Lacy, Assembly evangelist, who is assisting in the preparation for the State-wide simultaneous evangelistic campaign in Florida, will finish his work in that Synod March 1st. Mr. Lacy will be open for engagements for special evangelistic services after that date. Correspondence should be addressed to him at 7213 Blair Road, Takoma Park, D. C.

AN APPRECIATION

The stated Ad Interim Committee in session at Mutoto, April 18, 1922, passed the following:

Resolved, that the Secretary of the Mission be instructed to write an official letter to the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions expressing on the part of the whole Congo Mission our deep and heartfelt appreciation of the visit of our beloved Executive Secretary, Dr. Egbert W. Smith. We feel that Dr. Smith's visit has been a source of inspiration and renewed spiritual consecration that will be felt not only in our own lives but will be reflected throughout the whole work. In addition, Dr. Smith's wide and extended experience with mission work in all of its phases and his keen perception and unerring ability to grasp the essentials of any proposition, together with his sympathetic interest in all of the affairs pertaining to the mission and the missionaries, have enabled him to criticize constructively, advise, and offer suggestions that will be of inestimable value to the mission and to the cause of the Kingdom.

Appreciating all that this visit has meant and will mean in the future to the mission, we urge strongly that the Executive Committee adopt as a definite policy, the sending of one of its members to our field at least every four years.

A copy of this resolution to be sent to our church papers.

THE SUNNYSIDE HOME FOR THE AGED DANVILLE, VA.

The ladies of the Sunnyside Home had a splendid Christmas.

"Santa Claus" was generous with individual gifts and a number of visitors came with their good cheer. The Westminster class of the First Church, Danville gave us a Victrola and a dozen records and we have made good use of it.

Mrs. Alice Burton gave us an instantaneous heater for the bath room which is a source of great comfort.

A gift of $125 is in hand waiting for another similar amount for the purpose of installing a radio outfit so that the inmates, few of whom are able to attend church, may hear the radio sermons and music.

The matron, Mrs. Alice White has been untiring in her work and is to be heartily commended for the home-like atmosphere and general contentment that prevails. Many kind and substantial gifts came at Thanksgiving and Christmas times, notable among these is a forty dollar gift from Mrs. D. A. Overby; $200 from the Ladies' Aid Society of Victoria Church, endowing a room. A goodly number of church treasurers have been sending checks in conformity to the request of Synod to give a per cent for benevolent offering to the home.

Mr. J. W. Cook, 723 Main St., Danville, Va., is the treasurer. We have seven inmates and one more is expected next week. Other applications are pending.

C. W. Maxwell, South Boston, Va.

President of the Board.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Rev. A. Sydenstricker, from Chinkiang, China to Theological Seminary, Nanking, China.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

Educational

Flora Macdonald College is now represented by the following ten alumnae "On the Firing Line," in the foreign field: Lillian Austin, Chunju, Chosen, Asia; Anna McQueen, Kwanju, Chosen, Asia; Lillian Wells, Hwainfu, China; Mabel Currie, Soochow, China; Elizabeth Belk, Chinkiang, China; Jessie Hall, Tsing-Kiang-Pu, China; Elizabeth Buchanan, Gifu, Japan; Lois Faires Williamson, Chilpansingo, Guerrero, Mexico; Mary Porter, Luebo, Africa; Mary Bain, Mokpo, Chosen, Asia.

French Night was held on Saturday, with the department of French presenting four one-act plays in French, and a special musical program.

On Monday night, the quarterly recital was held with selections rendered by students, orchestra, and choral association.

Rev. H. C. Hammond, D.D., pastor Mt. Zion Presbyterian Church of St. Charles, S. C., will conduct services for the students and faculty during the week of February 12th.

Davidson—On the evening of February 2d, Paul Vanorden Shaw, of Sao Paulo, secretary of the Latin-American section of the Committee on Friendly Relations Among Foreign Students will give an address here whose general theme is Understanding Misunderstood America. Mr. Shaw has just returned from a two years visit to his native country. It is interesting to note that Dr. Thos. W. Lingle who taught in South America many years ago knew Mr. Shaw when he was a boy not in his teens.

A visitor to campus and faculty-in-session today was Dr. John J. Coss, director of the Summer School of Columbia University.

An interesting address before the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday was delivered by Mr. J. B. Ivey, of Charlotte, who spoke on the life and influence of John W. Wannamaker.

It is with great satisfaction and pleasure that the student body and town generally hears that Rev. Dr. Vander Meulen, president of Louisville Theological Seminary has accepted an invitation to deliver the baccalaureate sermon at commencement of this year. Dr. Vander Meulen delighted every one here a year ago when he delivered a series of addresses before the Y. M. C. A.

The installation of the North Carolina Gamma chapter of Phi Beta Kappa to take place here the middle of February is an event in the scholastic and fellowship life of the college. President Chandler, of William and Mary will preside and conduct the installation services, while president Henry Louis Smith, of Washington and Lee University will make the address. A number of honor graduates of the college will be here to be received into membership and the occasion is to be becomingly celebrated.

General satisfaction is felt in the appointment as head coach and director of athletics for the coming session (1923-'24), of L. W. ("Monk") Younger, a former student of the college and for several years past connected with the V. P. I. as a member of the coaching staff of that institution.

BORROWING FROM THE PREACHER

The Herald of Gospel Liberty is prompted to tell a tale that carries its own moral.

It was at a board meeting in a certain church, which is, we know, located in a well-to-do community. Times had not been the best, the Sabbath offerings had been small, and quite a number of contributors were far behind on their pledges. As a consequence, little had been paid on the pastor's salary for two months. And now the board was discussing what should be done.

Some young and energetic business men on the board wanted to go to the bank and borrow the one hundred and fifty dollars, which would enable the church to square up all accounts and put it in the clear again. But a good old deacon, whose conscience on the question of churches being in debt to their pastors, had been hardened by long years of familiarity with just this very situation, stoutly protested, "Why, this church has never borrowed a cent in all the years that I have been on this board; and I object to its doing so now!"

But the young pastor spoke up quickly and said: "Beg pardon, my brother, but this church has borrowed money continually. It has borrowed it of its pastors! It has over a hundred dollars borrowed of me right now—and that without interest! And because of this fact, I have had to borrow a hundred dollars at the bank, for which I am paying interest!"

It was a pointed truth, and it went home to the hearts of the men on that board—and went home with a hurt. They immediately voted that hereafter the finance committee should see to it that the pastor had a check for his salary every Monday; that every bill should be paid spot cash; and that arrangements with the bank with which the church did its business should be made to secure from time to time such small short-time loans as might be necessary to tide over the scanty periods, in order to make this "cash" basis possible.

DR. VANCE'S JAMES SPRUNT LECTURES AT UNION SEMINARY, RICHMOND, VA.

The subject of preaching is a subject of perennial interest to Christian people and a subject of the first order of importance, especially in a seminary community. It is therefore not surprising that two of the ten preceding lecturers on the James Sprunt foundation devoted their lectures to this subject. One of these, Dr. D. J. Burrell, of New York, selected as the title of his course "The Sermon, Its Construction and Delivery." The other, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, of London, called his course "The Ministry of the Word." They are valuable discussions, as are scores of other books on the same subject. But the subject is never exhausted, and at the seminary which has given the Church so many men of pulpit power a fresh treatment of it is always eagerly welcomed.

It is a subject which Dr. Vance has made his own, and he spoke to the students out of a long and rich experience in a clear, direct and intimate way. His bright and sparkling style, abounding in striking antitheses and happy turns of experience and his breezy manner of speaking are well known in Richmond as well as elsewhere, and there was from the beginning a fine audience from the community in addition to the two hundred and forty students of the Seminary and the Training School.

Mrs. Partington said "She did love to hear a populous minister dispense with the gospel." There are many people in Richmond who like to hear a popular minister dispense the Gospel (which was the thing Mrs. Partington was trying to say), and they quickly recognized the fact that Dr. Vance was a Gospel preacher, and they stayed with him delighted throughout his eight lectures.

As Dr. Vance is our own product, having received the whole of his theological training in this seminary, graduating in the class of 1886 with Dr. Egbert W. Smith, his present colleague on the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions, and other men who have become eminent preachers—it would be only natural for Union Seminary to view his work with a degree of maternal partiality and pride. But this reporter expresses confidently the opinion that this is the freshest, clearest, most practical, and most helpful series of lectures on preaching that has appeared in many a day.

And it has appeared. The volume of the lectures complete was placed on sale in Richmond the very morning after the last lecture was delivered in Schaufler Hall, and they have literally been going like hot cakes. Therefore all who will may now see for themselves whether our estimate of them is correct or not. Here is the title of the book in full: Being a Preacher; A Study of the Claims of the Christian Ministry, by James I. Vance, D.D., LL.D.; Fleming H. Revell Company, New York, 171 pages, $1.25 net. To the young minister and the old we venture one word of advice—get this book.

The above is a facsimile of the Christian Endeavor missionary programs which have just been published jointly by our Home and Foreign Mission Committees.

The book contains 48 pages and has six home and foreign mission programs in it. It is also illustrated and is perhaps the best series of programs ever issued by these committees. This booklet is furnished free of charge to all Christian Endeavorers upon application to either committee.

News of the Week

Charlotte real estate has received a great impetus from recent sales. The City Hall corner has been bought by a syndicate of local capitalists for over $300,000, and on the opposite side of the street, 96 feet on North Tryon street with a depth of 396 feet, extending along Fifth to Church street, was purchased by the J. B. Ivey Company for $625,000. They will build a six-story department store on this site.

The House has passed a bill to extend the time limit of 1922 tax penalties from February 1st to May 1st.

According to State Treasurer Lacy, N. Carolina has a good balance to its credit, but according to Corporation Commissioner Maxwell, there is a deficit of $5,000,000.

Governor Morrison appeared in the most dramatic role of his political career when he went before a joint session of the House and Senate at noon on Friday to formally and officially denounce a five million dollar deficit claim of Corporation Commissioner A. J. Maxwell, and to demand a legislative investigation to determine the true and exact status of the State's financial condition.

The resolution to investigate the condition of the State's finances, introduced in the Senate by Harris, of Wake, and Delaney, of Mecklenburg, immediately following Governor Morrison's demand for an investigation, passed unanimously by both houses.

In the South Carolina Legislature the House has passed the bill to require men to stand medical examination before being granted marriage licenses.

The House of Representatives of the same State, by a vote of 85 to 46, killed the bill by Representative Edgar A. Brown, of Barnwell, to create a state board of chiropractic examiners.

"Farm tenancy is the curse of the South, and we shall never have a solid civilization until we solve the problem," said James A. Holloman, political editor of The Atlanta Constitution, in an address before the North Carolina Club at the University.

A hundred or more surgeons from the two Carolinas met in Columbia, S. C., February 1st, for the two days session of the convention of the North and South Carolina sections of the American College of Surgeons.

Liquor is now being smuggled into the United States from the Bahama Islands at the rate of 1,200,000 gallons annually, while the government and population of that British colony, getting "relatively immense revenue from the traffic," are absolutely indisposed to sympathize with efforts to check it.

Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant—under fire for alleged heretical utterances—charged in a recent sermon at the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Ascension, New York, that the fight against him was inspired by capitalistic interests, working "under the surface," rather than by any true religious zeal to purge the church of apostates.

Senator Overman flatly informed the Charlotte Central Labor Union he will not support child labor amendments to the constitution that are pending in Congress. He makes a strong plea for local self government. The union had asked him to support the legislation.

Textile manufacturers in New England are operating "under trying conditions," says the monthly review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

President Harding would be requested to urge a worldwide limitation of narcotic and habit-forming drug production under a resolution introduced by Chairman Porter, of the house foreign affairs committee.

Consideration of farm credits legislation was concluded by the Senate when it passed the Lenroot-Anderson bill. The measure now goes to the House, where the Capper-co-operative credits bill is under study.

The Lenroot-Anderson bill provides for a maximum credit of $320,000 for agricultural loans through the existing farm loan system by establishment of 12 agricultural credit departments in the 12 land bank districts.

The German federations of labor unions call the attention of the American Congress "to the condition of servitude" imposed by the Ruhr occupation and the Versailles treaty, and declare that "American honor asserted at this time can save Europe and the world from inevitable disaster."

CHILDREN

HOPES NOT TO BE ABSENT

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl eleven years of age. I am in the sixth grade. Miss Sallie Gooding is my teacher at school. Miss Lyde Martin is my Sunday School teacher, and I go every Sunday. Am hoping not to miss any this year. I am very fond of pets, and have a large white rabbit. It is a pleasure to me to water and feed him. I will close for fear of the wastebasket.

Yours truly,
Virginia Strickland.

Calypso, N. C.

A THREE-YEAR RECORD

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl eight years of age. I am in the third grade at school and like my teacher fine. Her name is Miss Bruce Evans. I have two sisters and two brothers. My elder brother is in college at Davidson and likes it fine. I am the baby one in the family. I go to the Presbyterian Sunday School. I have not missed in three years. Please don't let this reach the wastebasket for I want to surprise my mama and daddy.

Your little friend,
Lela Frances Joyner.

Farmville, N. C.

A GOLDEN REWARD

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy eight years old and in the third grade at school. I like to go to school just fine. My teacher is Miss Kirkland and our professor is J. E. Redfern. Our school had to close a few days on account of influenza. I go to Sunday School to the Presbyterian Church; our pastor is Rev. V. G. Gaston; our superintendent is Mr. J. W. Graham and my teacher is Mrs. Stuart. I like her just fine. I have recited part of the child's catechism and received two dollars and one-half in gold, and am ready to recite the rest now. Guess I had better close for this is my first letter and I am afraid of the wastebasket.

Your friend,

Harold Cameron
Aberdeen, N. C.

LOVES HER GRANDFATHER-PASTOR

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl. I go to school. My teacher is Miss Blanche. I love her very much. I was six years old New Year's Day. I have read all the primer and now I read in the first reader. I go to Sunday school and I recited the child's catechism a year ago. My pastor is Rev. H. E. Gurney. He is my grandfather, I love him.

Carlotto Porter.

Matthews, N. C.

Lost Motion

The chairman of the board of directors was close. He came in late as a ballot was being taken, thought they were trying to put something over on him, and yelled: "I don't know what you're balloting on but I'm against it."

"You've got plenty of company," said a quiet old director.

"Hey?"

"The vote was a motion I made to buy you a gold watch."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

EMMY LOU'S CHICK-A-DEE

Emmy Lou went to a new school in a new city. The streets looked different! The houses looked different! The grown-ups looked different! And the children looked different! Only a few things looked the same! When darkness hid all these strange new things; when Emmy Lou turned out her light and peeked from her window, way up in the sky, she spied her friend the Big Dipper twinkling and shining exactly as he had above the dear old home. And the Moon the kind old Moon, almost he seemed to smile as if he understood how queer Emmy Lou felt inside.

Emmy Lou didn't tell mother how different everything seemed; for was not mother having all kinds of troubles getting the new house in order, teaching the new cook and trying to find her way about new shops? And father, why, when father came home from his new office he looked so quiet, so tired that Emmy Lou tried to sit very straight at the dinner table, she tried not to spill, she tried not to interrupt, she tried not to sit on one foot; Emmy Lou even remembered it is more proper to break one's bread in small pieces before buttering it, than to lay it down perfectly flat and just spread butter completely over it and then lift the great shiny, yellow slice in both hands and eat and eat and eat.

Still at school Emmy Lou forgot how busy mother was, she forgot how tired father was, she forgot everything but a queer lump which grew in her throat every time she saw one of the girls slide an arm around another girl and walk off telling secrets. Emmy Lou had to wink very hard the day she saw Helen Harris give Elsie Carson half of her jelly sandwich. Not because Emmy Lou was hungry. Not because the jelly sandwich looked any nicer than did her own lettuce sandwich! And not because she wanted any one to give her anything. No—the reason Emmy Lou winked so hard to keep tears back, the reason she held her head so high and gazed the other way, was because with all her heart she longed for just one girl in the whole class, just one to whom she dared offer half of her own sandwich! Just one about whom she dared slide her lovely little arm. Every recess Emmy Lou walked quietly away to a corner of the yard where an old dead elm tree stood. One day she spied a small chick-a-dee hopping about, nodding his pretty head first one way then another. Emmy Lou did not move. Hoppity hop came chick-a-dee. Down dropped a fat crumb. Hoppity hop!

Carefully chick-a-dee eyed Emmy Lou. Carefully he eyed the crumb. Another hop! Emmy Lou wanted to shout for joy! Yet she dared not move. Here at last was a friend! Here at last she could share her sandwich.

One day Elsie Carson whispered, "My! but it's cold!"

Emmy Lou smiled and answered "Yes." She was sure the girls were sorry for her. She knew the girls had lots and lots of old friends.

Once Helen Harris exclaimed, "I think your new dress is awfully pretty."

To this Emmy Lou answered, "I think yours is too."

But that was all. The weeks slipped by. Christmas came and went. Parties were given. Of course Emmy Lou was not invited. No one would have been more surprised than Emmy Lou to receive one of those gay little invitations with a picture at the top and printed words below reading, "I'm going to have a party."

One Friday mother said, "Emmy Lou, you may invite a little girl home to luncheon on Saturday. The house is in order. Katie will make a hot chocolate pie for dessert!"

Emmy Lou adored chocolate pies and mother knew it, but her answer was, "Let's have it Saturday night, just you and father and I. I'd like that best."

Mother looked rather serious as she said, "Be sure to tell me, Emmy Lou, when you change your mind and want a little girl."

Again that queer lump. Emmy Lou choked strangely as she murmured, "Yes, thank you, I'll remember."

On February 14th Emmy Lou started with her books and little wicker luncheon basket. The girls laughed and whispered even more than usual. Helen Harris giggled, "I got ten! I s'pose I'll get more when I go home!"

Elsie Carson squealed, "Oh, I got twelve!"

Never had Emmy Lou felt farther away from those happy little girls. Yet she smiled to herself as she remembered the sachet she had painted for mother with "Sweets to the sweet," printed in golden letters upon it. In her pocket she'd slipped a napkin filled with sugar crumbs for chick-a-dee. He should have his Valentine! Why not!

At recess Emmy Lou hurried to her corner. There stood Chick-a-dee. But not in his accustomed spot, instead he was standing upon a pile of something white. Emmy Lou's heart sank. He did not notice her! He was busily picking at the white object upon which he stood. Emmy Lou wanted to cry, but she opened her luncheon basket. She found it filled with tiny hearts all covered, top and bottom too, with white sugar frosting. She counted them. Twenty! Funny! There were exactly twenty girls in Emmy Lou's class but of course mother couldn't know that. Emmy Lou had never told her.

Chick-a-dee flapped his wings and gave a jump. As he did so he scattered a bundle of envelopes all about. Emmy Lou's eyes almost popped right out of her head for on each envelope was written "Emmy Lou."

With trembling fingers Emmy Lou counted her envelopes. Nineteen! In the first, she found a scarlet heart. Upon it was printed, "I wish I knew you better, that's why I send this letter." On the second, "I'd like to be your friend, on that you may depend."

Emmy Lou read on and on. Her cheeks grew redder and redder. Brighter and brighter grew her eyes till they shone just like Chick-a-dee's. At last her valentines were read. Such valentines! Emmy Lou looked up to tell chick-a-dee. But in his place stood nineteen giggling girls.

Emmy Lou wanted to speak but her voice seemed lost. At last she whispered, "Did—did you girls really mean all these for me?"

"Of course we did!" they shouted.

Helen Harris stammered, "We've all been wa-wanting and wa-wanting to k-know you but we—knew all your best friends must go to another school. We decided to have you for—for our C-C-Class Valentine. Each of us w-wanted you for c-chum, so we d-decided to have you f-for the c-class. We want you to t-teach us a-b-bout b-birds and —"

Emmy Lou's voice shook, her lips trembled as she whispered, "Oh, I'd just love to be your Valentine. Already I have a little heart waiting for each of you." Then Emmy Lou passed her basket to every girl. As the recess bell rang Helen Harris slipped her arm about Emmy Lou. Emmy Lou's heart gave a sudden bound. But all she did was to give Helen's arm a little squeeze. At that moment a shrill, "Chick-a-dee-dee-dee" made them all stand still.

"He's jealous!" cried Helen. "Your old friend's jealous!"

"He needn't be!" laughed Emmy Lou taking her arm away just long enough to scatter the sugar crumbs.

"We covered those envelopes all over with sugar, too," giggled Elsie.

That night Emmy Lou told mother all about it and she ended by saying, "I thought all the girls were old friends. The funniest part of it is that Helen Harris and Elsie Carson had never even seen one another before school opened! And none of the girls have known each other so very long!"

Mother drew Emmy Lou beside her on the sofa as she said, "A wise man once said, 'The only way to have a friend is to be one.' So be brave, little daughter! It takes courage to be nice to some one before some one is nice to you. But the whole world is just hungry and waiting for little crumbs of kindness—for little Valentines, just like your Chick-a-dee."—Ethel Bowen White, in Congregationalist and Advance.

VALENTINE

I'll build a house of lollypops

Just suited, Sweetheart, to your taste;

The windows shall be lemon-drops—
The doors shall be jujube paste—

Heigh-ho, if you'll be mine!

With peppermints I'll pave the walks;
A little garden, too, I'll sow

With seeds that send up sugared stalks

On which the candied violets grow—
Heigh-ho, my Valentine!

Some seats of sassafras I'll make
Because I know you think it's nice;

The cushions shall be jelly cake
Laced all around with lemon-ice—

Heigh-ho, if you'll be mine!

We'll have a party every day,
And feast on cream and honeydew;

And though you're only six, we'll play
That I am just as young as you—

Heigh-ho, my Valentine!

—St. Nicholas.

Wrong Name

Roy Simpson, negro laborer, was putting in his first day with a construction gang whose foreman was known for getting the maximum amount of labor out of his men. Simpson was helping in the task of moving the right-of-way, and all day long he carried heavy timbers and ties until at the close of the day he was completely tired out. Came quitting time. Before he went he approached the boss and said:

"Mister, you sure you got me down on the payroll?"

The foreman looked over the list of names he held. "Yes," he said; finally, "here you are—Simpson—Roy, Simpson. That's right, isn't it?"

"Yaas suh, boss," said the negro, "dass right. I thought mebbe you had me down as Samson."—Western Christian Advocate.

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Wade-Beckner — At Presbyterian manse, Lancaster, Tex., November 17, 1922, J. E. Wade, of Dallas Texas, and Anna Jane Beckner, of Lancaster, Tex., Rev. Albert E. Wallace, pastor, saying the ceremony.

DEATHS

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Philathea class in honor of one of our most beloved members, Mrs. M. F. Ellis, who died January 25, 1923.

Whereas our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom and love, has seen fit to call to higher service our dear friend and co-worker, Mrs. M. F. Ellis, be it resolved:

First: That we humbly bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

Second: That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her bereaved family with the earnest prayer that our ever-loving and all gracious Father will give them comfort and peace.

Third: That our class has lost one of its truest workers and most efficient members, one who always delighted in serving others, and whose faithfulness will be a cherished memory to those left to carry on the work.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the members of the family assuring our deepest love and sympathy, and that a copy be included in our minutes.

Tenth Avenue Philathea Class.
Charlotte, N. C.

MRS. B. L. BEALL

Mrs. Jane Alexander Beall, the widow of the late Rev. B. L. Beall, gently fell asleep in Jesus on January 14, 1923, at the home of her son, Mr. Robt. B. Beall, in Greensboro, N. C. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Neely Alexander, of Mecklenburg County and was born March 31, 1833. She was reared in a godly home, and at the early age of ten years professed her faith in Christ and united with the Presbyterian Church. For eighty years she was a consistent and consecrated member of the church, exemplifying at all times the power and beauty of the Christian religion.

On July 29, 1862, she was united in marriage to Rev. B. L. Beall, to whom she was a faithful and devoted wife, sharing most sympathetically the labors, joys, and responsibilities of his ministerial life. When her husband was compelled on account of ill health to give up the active work of the ministry they moved to Greensboro in 1894, and Mrs. Beall transferred her membership to Westminster Presbyterian Church of Greensboro, where she was honored and much beloved, and was for many years the oldest member of the church. Her husband preceded her to the grave ten years ago at the ripe age of 87. Some five years before her husband's death Mrs. Beall had a severe illness which brought her to the very gate of death, her friends and loved ones despaired of her life, but in answer to earnest prayer her health was restored and her life prolonged. Like Hezekiah of old, fifteen years were added to her life. Her last illness was only two weeks in duration. The last time she left her home was to attend the communion service in her church on the last Sabbath and the last day of the old year. On the following Tuesday she was stricken with pneumonia. Through her remarkable vitality she made a wonderfully brave fight for life, and at times gave hope of recovery, but her strength was not sufficient to throw off the fatal disease. Her children were all with her during her illness and did all that human hands could do for her comfort. Her mind was clear and her memory retentive to the very end. She quoted accurately many of the old hymns of the church and many precious portions of God's word which she had loved so long. Among other passages quoted she was heard to say in a time of great physical weakness, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day." With her there was no fear of death because she lived in constant preparation for death. She often spoke to her children of her departure and made detailed preparation therefor, just as one would speak of and make preparation for a pleasant journey. She had that faith which made real to her the things of the invisible world. Her life was a constant sermon, her influence a benediction, and her death was triumphant. Her children rise up and call her blessed. She leaves to mourn her death four sons, Chas. T. and Robt. B. Beall, of Greensboro, George L. Beall, of Statesville, Dr. Louis G. Beall, of Black Mountain; one daughter, Miss Meta E. Beall, of Greensboro; and one stepson, Dr. W. P. Beall, of Greensboro.

C. E. Hodgin.

RENA JOHNSON MYATT

In September, 1888, Rena Johnson Myatt, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Johnson, was born. At an early age she accepted Christ as her Saviour, and became a member of Oakland Presbyterian Church, in Johnston County, N. C. In 1912 she was united in marriage to James A. Myatt, and together they lived in perfect understanding and sympathy until her death, June 6, 1922.

As the words of the Psalmist were true of those of old, "They looked unto Him, and were radiant," so were they true of her. In all of her life the radiance of a heart at peace with God was seen. In the tender thoughtfulness for others; in the faithfulness in the home duties; in the glad willingness with which she undertook duties laid on her in the work of the Master's kingdom; and, most of all, in the wonderful submission to pain this radiance was seen. Through the last years of her life there was the constant, burning presence of pain. In the many efforts for relief the work of physicians sometimes brought a cry of suffering to her lips, but it was always followed by the apology, "I did not mean to complain." In all things she was more than conqueror through Him that loved her.

In thankfulness to the Master for the proof of His grace in her life this tribute of appreciation is brought; with the prayer that He will enable those of us who knew her to follow in her steps, for she "Has come out of great tribulation, and washed her robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." M.

Story and Incident

ALICE HOOD'S VALENTINE DAY

Rita Bell glanced at the watch on her wrist. "Ten minutes and then I can skip."

"What's the rush?" asked Julie Hall, without looking up from her typewriter.

"Well the Fourteenth is at hand. I want to stop at Brinsley's on my way home and buy some valentine for my sister's children."

"Oh, Valentine's Day! A lot of nonsense. I never bother about it," said Bella Gray, as she leaned back in her chair for a moments rest.

Rita did not reply. Her fingers moved over the keys with increased speed until she released the sheet of paper and stood up. "There—just five, and I'm done. I'll take it to Mr. Wilson, then I'll fly. I see you are through, too, Julie. Come on, and walk as far as Brinsley's with me." She deftly put her desk in order and left the room, followed by Julie Hall.

In a few minutes Bella's work was finished also. As, in a leisurely way she prepared to leave, she said to a girl, bent over a desk at a far window, and apparently oblivious to what was going on around her, "It's after five, Miss Hood."

Alice Hood nodded and stood up. "I'm going," she answered briefly.

A little later, as they passed out of the dressing room together, Bella said, "Rita rushed off to buy some valentines. It's silly I know—but I believe I'll stop and buy some myself. There are some kids living near us that I guess would like them. Don't you want to come and get some, too?"

Alice shook her head. "No," she answered briefly.

"Don't want to be silly?" laughed Bella.

"No, I don't think it silly. Pretty valentines are an expression of goodwill, and give pleasure. It's simply that I have no one to buy them for."

It was a long way to her boarding house, but this evening Alice had no inclination for a crowded car. A walk in the crisp air would be refreshing after the long day in the close office.

She passed several shop windows displaying valentines of all styles and prices. One, generously decorated with cupids, pink roses and forget-me-nots, fixed her attention. It was just such a valentine that she had received the last Fourteenth of February in her old home. Little Sandy Davis one of her Sunday School scholars, had sent it to her. Only two years ago, and much had happened. Her parent's death, and her leaving the little country town and coming to the city to earn her living.

There was an ache in her heart as she gazed at the dainty valentine. She forced back the tears as she turned from the shop window.

Throng of memories surged through her mind. By the time that she reached Mrs. Gibb's house in a narrow side street, she was in such a state of emotion that the thought of food was repellent. She went quickly by the dining room, with its clatter of dishes and hum of voices, and on up to her room in the third story.

Her one window looked out over

GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S

Season of

PRAYER—PREACHING—SELF-DENIAL

for

FOREIGN MISSIONS

FEBRUARY 11-18

Violating the Divine Order

There is no uncertainty about God's plan for the support of the Leadership of His Church.

A Clear Responsibility

This was made perfectly plain in the Old Testament Dispensation. The Priests and the Levites were assured of abundant provision for their bodily needs throughout life.

The Apostle Paul in the ninth chapter of First Corinthians meets every argument against the financial support of the minister in the Christian Dispensation and concludes his matchless arguments in these words: "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they who preach the Gospel shall live of the Gospel."

A solemn contract is entered into by the people who call a minister to be their pastor. By the holding up of the right hand they have taken upon themselves the solemn, serious and binding obligation "to continue to him while he is your pastor, that competent worldly maintenance which you have promised and whatever else you may see needful for the honor of religion and his comfort among you."

An Overlooked Obligation

In the past "that competent worldly maintenance" has too often been a misnomer. Some ministers have been called upon to undergo strangely harassing privations. They have denied themselves means of proper recreation and educational improvement, they have seen wife and children denied things really needed for their comfort and larger growth.

No one believes this has been a deliberate violation of the divine order. Our people have not thought. No one has arisen to press the just claims of these thoroughly prepared, consecrated men who have been called away from the sources of worldly gain to minister to the spiritual needs of our homes and of the world.

For the past seven years the General Assembly has directed the Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief, to whom is committed the interests of the young men entering the Ministry and the care of those who, having served their generation by the will of God, are now too old and feeble to minister longer, to seek more even-handed justice for our self-denying ministers in active service. The General Assembly in May, 1922, directed "That the Executive Committee do all in its power to secure, through the co-operation of officers and members of our churches, an adequate salary for every minister in active service."

Your Opportunity

What kind of living is your Church giving your pastor? Is it relieving him of financial strain and stress? Is it sufficient to meet the needs of himself and family for the necessary things of life and to fit them for the largest usefulness to the Church and community? If not, your duty is clear!

The Presbyterian Church in the United States
Department of Ministerial Relief

Henry H. Sweets, Secretary

410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

6%

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

EXPERT HELPING FARMERS IN WAR ON BOLL WEEVIL

Free Advice Available to Cotton Growers in Any Part of North Carolina.

North Carolina cotton farmers will be much interested to hear that Mr. J. O. Taylor, special agent in boll weevil control work connected with the Government laboratory at Tallulah, La., has been employed by the F. S. Royster Guano Company to devote his entire time to giving free advice and demonstrations in the State of North Carolina on what the United States Department of Agriculture recommends as the successful method of fighting the ravages of the boll weevil. For several years Mr. Taylor has been working on farms in the boll weevil infested sections of the South, poisoning weevils with calcium arsenate, under the treatment known as the Coad method, which was worked out by Professor Coad, the Chief Bacteriologist in the Government Laboratory at Tallulah, La.

Mr. Taylor will work in North Carolina the entire year of 1923, and there will be absolutely no charges or fees in connection with the assistance that he is to render the farmers of the state. He will in all instances work in conjunction with the county agents and the extension forces, and all requests for his services should be made through the local county agent. Between now and the growing season, Mr. Taylor is going to spend his time lecturing on the subject of boll weevil poisoning wherever request is made for his services. He will go anywhere in the state that the farmers ask for him, at no expense whatever to the farmers. Mr. Taylor is going to select test fields in twelve or fifteen counties of North Carolina, which are infested with the boll weevil, and will give a demonstration of the results of poisoning and the proper methods of treatment.

Remarkable results in successful cotton growing in boll weevil districts have been obtained by poisoning according to the Coad method which has been developed and sponsored by the United States Department of Agriculture. No question of the hour is more serious to North Carolina farmers than the proper method of attacking this enemy. The personal advice and attention of Mr. Taylor is free to any farmer in North Carolina who wishes to poison his cotton this season. Mr. Taylor is a practical farmer who has had years of Government training in fighting the boll weevil, and his work is expected to mean much to the farmers of the state during this season.

All requests for information about Mr. Taylor's work or applications for his presence at any meeting, should be sent to the Farm Service Department of the F. S. Royster Guano Company, Norfolk, Virginia.

WHEN WRITING OUR ADVERTISERS PLEASE MENTION THIS PUBLICATION

a half dozen untidy back yards. She threw herself into a chair near it. She was still sitting there an hour later, when there was a knock at her door. Alice started, but before she could move the door was opened, and a young girl, thin, pale and freckled, appeared. She carried a small tray on which were several dishes.

"You weren't at dinner, Miss Hood. I saw you going through the hall. I thought maybe you were sick. I've brought you up a lunch. A couple of beef sandwiches and some apple sauce, and a little pot of tea. The tea's fresh and hot."

"Oh, Lizzie, how kind you are. I'm not sick—just tired and a little—blue. I did not feel like dinner. But I feel hungry now at the sight of that nice tray."

"Sure I'm glad I brought it then. Here—I'll draw this table over to you—there now." Lizzie poured out a cup of tea and set it before Alice. "There, drink that, it will do you good."

"Oh, thank you. What a dear little teapot."

"It's my own. One of the few things I brought from home."

Alice was leaning back in her chair and sipping the fragrant tea. "It certainly is doing me good. Sit down, Lizzie, and stay awhile, can't you?"

"Why yes. I'm all through my work. Cook's gone out, and it's lonesome down-stairs," and Lizzie settled herself in the only other chair in the room.

Alice was leisurely enjoying her sandwiches. "They are good," she said, smiling at her companion.

Lizzie looked at her wistfully. "And do you get blue, too, Miss Hood?" I shouldn't think you would, going out every day, and seeing people and things."

Alice did not reply. But suddenly a realization of the narrow dull life of this hard-working boarding house maid came to her. What a contrast to her own life! And she had been pitying herself when she had so much to be thankful for.

Lizzie's glance was resting on a calendar hanging on the wall.

"Why, St. Valentine's Day is near. It makes me think of the pretty valentines I used to get when I was a little girl at home."

You are not much more than a little girl now, Lizzie," laughed Alice.

"I'm almost sixteen, Miss Hood. Dear me, they were such nice valentines" and Lizzie sighed deeply.

"You are the third person I've heard speaking of valentines today."

"I don't get them any more, and I don't know anyone to send them to. I've not got acquainted with people since I've been living in town."

"We're alike in that, Lizzie. Both country girls in a strange city."

"And I used to love to get them," went on Lizzie, dreamily.

"Oh, you mean the valentines. There, I've eaten every morsel. And it was all so good. It was so nice of you to bring it to me, Lizzie."

Here the voice of Mrs. Gibbs was heard calling, "Lizzie, Lizzie."

The little maid jumped up. "Dear me, I wonder what she wants." She hastily snatched up the trap and hurried away.

"Come back if you can, Lizzie," called Alice.

But Lizzie did not return, and from sounds below, Alice knew that Mrs. Gibbs had found work for her.

"What a hard life she has," thought Alice, pityingly. "I don't think the poor child ever goes out, and I don't believe that Mrs. Gibbs pays her much."

Here Alice's eyes fell on the calendar and she recalled Lizzie's remarks about valentines.

"Why," she thought, "I must send her one. I'll buy one tomorrow."

The next day there was an unusual rush of work at the office. Then the weather turned cold and blustering, with a great deal of rain. Alice left her typewriter each evening utterly tired out and anxious, as soon as she had eaten her dinner, to go to her room and lie down. She had not thought once of the valentines she had decided to buy to send to Lizzie, and she had not again seen the little maid to speak to her.

On the morning of the Fourteenth, as she was passing through the hall on her way out, she met Lizzie. It seemed to Alice that the girl looked even thinner and paler than usual. But she smiled at Alice.

A sudden thought came to the latter of the valentine she had intended to buy. "I wish I had time to get it on my way downtown. But I haven't. If I could, Lizzie would receive it by the late mail. Oh, I am so sorry I forgot it."

During a lull in work that came in the afternoon, Alice heard Rita and Julie and Bella speaking of the pretty valentines they had received and sent. Alice thought again with regret of her forgetfulness of Lizzie. "And the poor child so good to me that evening in bringing me something to eat."

Just before five o'clock that evening

PANSY PLANTS

Pure White, 30c doz., $2 per 100.
Pure Black, 30c doz., $2 per 100.
Royal Mixture, 40c doz., $2.75 per 100.
Exhibition Mixture, 50c doz., $3.50 per 100.

Plant out any time between now and May 1st, but the sooner the better.

We specialize on the pansy and our mode of packing will carry it any distance in good condition.

All Postpaid.

BLANDING'S DRUG STORE
FOUNTAIN, INN, S. C.

THOROUGHbred SEEDS

The Best By Test For More Than Fifty Years

Write for our free illustrated catalog.

GEO. TAIT & SONS, Inc.,

NORFOLK, VIRGINIA

MARDI GRAS CARNIVAL

NEW ORLEANS
Feb. 8-13, 1923

MOBILE
Feb. 11-13, 1923

PENSACOLA
Feb. 10-13, 1923

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Announces

VERY LOW ROUND TRIP FARES

NEW ORLEANS: Tickets on sale February 6-13 inclusive
MOBILE: Tickets on sale February 9-13 inclusive
PENSACOLA: Tickets on sale February 8-13 inclusive

Final limit of all tickets February 20, 1923

If presented prior to February 20th, tickets may be extended until March 7, 1923, by paying fee $1.00.

FINE FAST THROUGH TRAINS DAILY

Pullman sleeping cars, observation cars, club cars, dining cars and coaches.

For further information and details call on nearest agent.

R. H. GRAHAM
Division Passenger Agent
Charlotte, N. C.

LEES McRAE INSTITUTE

An industrial school for girls, in the mountains of North Carolina.

Session of 1923 begins April 12th, closes December 4th.

FOR CATALOGUE AND INFORMATION WRITE

Edgar Tufts, Jr.,
Banner Elk, N. C.

MINISTER WANTED for Riverside Church. A mission Church in industrial section of city with splendid opportunities for growth. Essential that minister's wife should have some practical knowledge of social service work. Salary $1,500 and manse. Address references and qualifications to First Presbyterian Church, P. O. Box 1136, St. Joseph, Missouri.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY

Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923

Charlotte, N. C.

Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.

For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to

J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

JAMES M. McMICHAEL
Church Architect
Charlotte, N. C.

SORES BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

erves Christian teachers by secur- for them larger fields of service. Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
10 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

THE SALISBURY MARBLE CO.

Salisbury, N. C.
Anything in...
CEMETERY WORK
Satisfaction our Motto
A card will bring full information.

Laxatives Replaced
By the Use of Nujol
Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus replaces it. Try Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

World's Best Roofing at Factory Prices
"Reo" Chester Metal Shingles, V-Crimp, Corrugated, Standing Seam, Painted or Galvanized Roofings, Sidings, Wallboard, Paints, etc., direct to you at Rock-Bottom Factory Prices. Positively greatest offer ever made.
Edwards "Reo" Metal Shingles
cost less; outlast three ordinary roofs. No painting or repairs. Guaranteed rot, fire, rust, lightning proof. Send for samples and free roofing book.
Edwards Ready Made Buildings
Send for the Edwards Catalog of "Superior" Ready-Made Buildings, showing a complete line of houses, bungalows, barns, wood garages, poultry houses, etc., all at money-saving factory prices. These buildings are not merely "ready-cut" but actually ready built, and represent a wonderful money-saving.
READY MADE
Be Sure to State Which Books You Want
—Roofing and Free Samples; Ready-Made Buildings; or Metal Garages. Postal or letter brings one or more of them FREE.
Free Roofing Book
Get our wonderfully low prices and free samples. We sell direct to you and save you all in-between roofing profits. Ask for Book No. 2372
LOW PRICED GARAGES
Lowest prices on Ready-Made Fire-Proof Steel Garages. Set up any place. Send postal for Garage Book showing styles.
THE EDWARDS MFG. CO.,
2323-2373 Pike St. Cincinnati, O.
FREE Samples & Roofing Book

the manager came into the office with two white tickets in his hands.

"Young ladies," he said. "Here are two tickets for a Valentine Social at the Central Church. It's to be very nice, I believe. They are holding it in their fine new assembly room they have just built back of the church building. I am not able to use these tickets. I am sorry I haven't more. You can draw lots for them," he said, with a laugh. He laid the tickets on the table and left the room.

"I don't want them," said Rita. "I'm going to a party tonight."

"So am I," said Julie.

"And I am going to a social at our own church," said Bella.

"Then they are for you, Miss Hood," and Rita laughingly picked up the tickets and tossed them on Alice's desk.

Alice was a little later than the other girls in leaving the office. As she was about to close her desk, she noticed the tickets. She looked at them doubtfully. "I don't want them," she thought, and was about to throw them into the waste-paper basket, when it occurred to her that someone at the boarding house might like them. So she put them in her satchel.

After her dinner, she sought Lizzie and offered her the tickets. The little maid's face brightened an instant, then clouded. "Oh, I'd love to go, Miss Hood. I know it will be nice there. But I could not go alone among a lot of strange people. I'm awful tired of staying in the house. Thank you very much, but I have no one to go with."

Going up to her room, Alice settled herself comfortably to read a magazine. The rain which had ceased during the afternoon was now dashing heavily against the window panes. The electric light gave a note of coziness to the room, in contrast to the night outside.

Alice found the magazine uninteresting. Her thoughts wandered. Presently she gave up the effort to read "I can't stand it," she exclaimed. "That poor little girl. It would be such a treat for her to go to that social. I won't like it—and it's raining in torrents. I can't bear to think of going out, and I am so tired, but—"

She rushed downstairs where she found Lizzie preparing the table in the dining room for the breakfast the next morning.

"Lizzie," she said, "I am going to that social, and you just have to go with me. I shan't know any one there, either, but we'll have each other for company. Put on your nicest dress under your long coat. The church isn't far and we'll not get very wet. If we hurry we can get there before it all begins."

Lizzie's pale face flushed, and her eyes brightened.

"Oh, Miss Hood! Do you really mean it? Oh, how lovely."

CAMP GREYSTONE--FOR GIRLS
On Beautiful Lake Summit, In the "Land of the Sky"
Tuxedo, N. C.

Fourth Season. Splendid equipment with electric lights, water and sanitary plumbing. Substantial sleeping Tentalsows. Land and water sports. Fifteen fine saddle horses. Twenty consecrated Councillors. Write early for catalogue as number of girls is limited.

REV. JOS. R. SEVIER, Director
Pastor First Presbyterian Church
Augusta, Ga.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!
There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.
Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.
NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST
MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION
J. H. Wearn, President. 207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C. E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

COLLECTION ENVELOPES
DUPLIX OR DOUBLE-END PRINTED-TO-ORDER ENVELOPES
Delivery Charges Not Included
White Envelopes—Size 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 in., 52 to set, printed with name of individual church, dated on both ends and packed in cartons. No order filled for less than a minimum charge of $4.00.
25 to 49 sets.....19 cents per set
50 to 109 sets.....17 cents per set
110 to 209 sets.....16 1/2 cents per set
210 to 309 sets.....16 cents per set
310 to 409 sets.....14 1/2 cents per set
410 or more sets.....14 cents per set
A charge of $1.00 made for each change in copy. Price on single envelopes on request.
MODERN CHURCH TREASURER'S RECORD
Treasurer's Record Book ruled to keep an account with each subscriber for a year (name written but once), showing contributions for local church and benevolences at a glance.
For Both the Duplex and Single Envelope System
200 names or less$1.50
300 names 1.75
500 names 2.25
1,000 names 3.25
Subscription cards, per 10050
Information Blanks, per 100 1.00
Treasurer's Statements per 10050
Special Day Envelopes, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Building Fund, etc. per 10040
"STOCK-FORM" ENVELOPES
Many churches have hesitated to introduce the use of collection envelopes on account of the cost of supplies.
To meet the needs of congregations which must practice rigid economy we have worked out a "Stock Form," or undated envelope, described below, at twelve cents per set, delivery charges extra, in any quantity wanted. Packages containing only two envelopes per month at seven cents per set, delivery extra.
CHANGES IMPOSSIBLE
The STOCK FORM envelopes are printed from a fixed, unchangeable plate, so that no changes can be made. Each package of envelopes will bear a separate number, but we cannot furnish packages bearing just the numbers you suggest. To explain, we cannot furnish each lot of twenty-five packages bearing numbers 1 to 25. We may have to send your lot numbered from 476 to 500. On one end these envelopes show all the benevolent causes for which our Assembly, Synods and Presbyteries ask the churches to make offerings, and the other end provides for the expense of the local church. Being undated, the unused packages are good for next year, so there is no waste. Samples sent free on request.
ORDER FROM
PRESBYTERIAN COMMITTEE OF PUBLICATION
Richmond, Va., Texarkana, Ark.-Tex

Old Buck Guano
Richmond
Fertilizer of Excellent Quality
Old Buck Guano Company
INCORPORATED
Richmond, Virginia
Allied with F.S. Royster Guano Co.

In spite of her disinclination to go out, Alice felt a little thrill of excitement as she changed her dress. It was something to give so much pleasure to poor Lizzie. She unconsciously hummed a little tune a little later as she went downstairs with her waterproof coat on her arm

Lizzie was waiting for her, looking really nice in her best frock.

"Oh, Miss Hood, how nice you look. Your eyes shine and your cheeks are so pink."

Alice laughed. "I can tell you the same thing, Lizzie. Now we must go with the determination of having a good time."

"Oh, I know we'll have a splendid time," returned Lizzie confidently.

They both did have a "good time," and it was the beginning of a happy church connection, and friendships for them. They often said, "Those tickets were the best valentines we ever had."—Emily S. Windsor, in Banner.

Some Christians are quiet and meditative. They find joy in the consciousness of the presence of the Master, as Mary did. Others are active. Like Martha, want to be busy for their Lord. Service is their great word. Doubtless the ideal religious life is a combination of the two. We do our best work when we take time for worship.

ABERDEEN & ROCKFISH RAILROAD

BETWEEN ABERDEEN & FAYETTEVILLE
Eastbound		Westbound
Daily Ex.	Sunday	Daily Ex.	Sunday
Mixed.	Pass.	Pass.	Mixed
STATIONS
No. 22.	No. 38.	No. 41.	No. 21
Lv.		Ar.
7:30am	9:10am	Aberdeen	6:41pm 5:00pm
Ar 8:35am	10:00am	Raeford	5:55pm 3:50pm
Lv 2:10pm		Raeford	Ar 2:50pm
WAGRAM BRANCH
Lv.		Ar.
4:00pm	11:20am	Fayetteville	4:50pm 1pm
Southbound
Daily Ex.	Sun.	Daily Ex.	Sun.
Mixed	Pass.	Mixed	Pass.
STATIONS
No. 11		No. 12
Lv. 10:30am		Raeford	Ar. 12:40pm
Ar. 11:15am		Wagram	Lv. 12 noon
W. A. BLUE, General Supt., Aberdeen, N. C.

Sparkles

"Now," said the clergyman to the Sunday School class, "can any of you tell me what are sins of omission?"

"Yes, sir," said the small boy. "They are the sins we ought to have done and haven't.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The motorist telephoned frantically for assistance. "I've turned turtle," he shouted.

"Wrong place. Apply at the aquarium," was the cool answer.—Boston Transcript.

"But surely," said the haughty dame, "if I pay the fare for my dog he will be treated the same as other passengers and be allowed to occupy a seat?"

"Of course, madam," the guard replied politely, "provided he does not put his feet on it."—Pearson's Weekly.

Uncle Mose was a chronic thief, who usually managed to keep within the petty larceny limit. Once he miscalculated, however, and was sent to trial on a charge of grand larceny.

"Have you a lawyer, Mose?" asked the court.

"No, sah."

"Well to be perfectly fair, I'll appoint a couple. Mr. Jones and Mr. Brown will act as counsel."

"What's dat?"

"Act as your lawyers. Consult with them and prepare to tell me whether you are guilty or not guilty."

"Yes, sah."

Mose talked to his attorneys for a few minutes in husky whispers. The judge caught only the several times repeated word "alibi." Then Mose arose, scratched his head, and addressed the court: "Jedge, yo Honah," he said, "cou'se I'se only an ign'ant niggah, an' Ah don't want toh bothah you' honah, but Ah would sutinly like toh trade one of dese year lawyers fo' a witness."—Judge.

Tested Seed For Garden and Field

All our seeds are tested and true to name. We sell nothing but the best. Orders shipped on same day they are received. Send for our new 1923 catalogue at once. Dept. B.

ASHEVILLE SEED CO.

Asheville, N. C.

Buy From the Manufacturer

There is one good and sufficient reason why you should buy your Piano from the manufacturer—DIRECT RESPONSIBILITY.

STIEFF PRODUCTS

Stieff Pianos and Players
Shaw Pianos and Players
Bennett-Bretz Pianos and Players
Davies & Sons Pianos and Players
Leslie Bros. Pianos and Players

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, INC., Charlotte, N. C.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Your account will be welcome here.

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles; Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Bole and Lace are used in making model shown.

Real Character Furniture Moderately Priced

This beautiful English Renaissance ten-piece Dining Room Suit in brown mahogany or American black walnut is a great value at $292.50.

We deliver out-of-town orders by truck.

W. T. McCoy & CO.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., FEBRUARY 14, 1923

No. 7

Presbyterian Progressive Program

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS MARCH 18th

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid. When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper, the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid. In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year. No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent. News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date. Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
Credulity of the Critics	1
Thinking in Big Figures	1
Help for Banner Elk Work	2
Lawlessness in Higher Life	2
A Long and Useful Pastorate	2
CONTRIBUTED—
Our Korea Mission's Field of Equipment— By Rev. R. T. Coit	3
A Helpful Book for Beginners in the Christian Life—By Rev. W. W. Moore, D.D.	3
Remarkable Service—By L. A. Taylor	3
The Unjust Steward—By Rev. Geo. F. Robertson	3
A Rejected Christ—By Rev. James Russell ..	4
A Profitable Home Mission Investment—By Rev. Arthur G. Jones, D.D.	4
Rev. Edgar Tufts—A Tribute—By Mrs. John Wakefield	4
The Educational Movement in Kentucky—By Rev. H. H. Sweets, D.D.	4
A Country Parson's Sunday in Chicago—By Rev. Henry W. McLaughlin	4
One Example Worth a Thousand Arguments—By Rev. Roswell C. Long	5
The Only Way—By J. R. Brooks	5
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

EDITORIAL

CREDULITY OF THE CRITICS

THE critics, to whom we refer, are the intellectuals who have grown too wise to be content with the traditional faith. They have found a more reasonable method of accounting for the Old Testament Scriptures than the account which those Scriptures give of themselves. They purport to be of Divine origin, and to be a correct narration of the events which they record from the creation of the world to the advent of Christ. They profess to have been written by holy men of old as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. Our fathers accepted them at their face value, and felt themselves justified in so doing because they exhibited characteristics in keeping with their claims; also because Jesus Christ accepted them in all good faith, and used them as of Divine and final authority, and taught His disciples so to regard them. Our fathers, believing in Him as their Divine Saviour, never questioned the propriety of anything He did, or the truth of anything that He taught.

Such was the traditional faith which our critics have outgrown. They think they have discovered that the oldest writings of the Old Testament do not date back farther than the eighth or ninth century B. C., that Moses had little or nothing to do with them, that a large part of what we call the books of Moses was written after the Babylonian Captivity, and that the latest books of the Old Testament were written in the first or second century before Christ. They do not believe, however, that we have the writings as they came from the hands of the authors. They believe that these writings were chopped up, and pieced together again in a most remarkable manner. They believe that the Bible, built up in this manner, was accepted by the Jewish nation without any knowledge of how it was formed. They believe that Jesus accepted the Bible without any knowledge of how it was formed, or if He possessed the knowledge He suppressed it, and encouraged His disciples in the belief that it was fashioned by an entirely different method.

We raise the question whether the critics have hit upon a more rational explanation of the way in which we got our Bible than the explanation which the Bible itself gives. No doubt there are difficulties about accepting all the statements of the Old Testament Scriptures just as we find them in our Bibles today. But do our critics get rid of difficulties? Do they even diminish the difficulties? To our way of thinking, the Old Testament as reconstructed by the Higher Critics is the most marvellous book in the world. Think how it was made. A number of unknown men wrote different parts of it. They lived in different parts of the country, at different times, some of them separated by centuries, and they wrote under different motives. There was not only no concert among them, and could be none, but some of them wrote with the deliberate purpose of qualifying and even contradicting what previous ones had written. Then when these were through writing, some other unknown person, or persons, took the writings, and chopped them into shreds, mixed the shreds together and wove them into a connected historical narrative, including an account of the creation of the world, and embodied in this narrative what purports to be a Divine system of religion. And he, or they, did this with such consummate skill as to fool the whole Jewish nation, and secure the adoption of the book as a genuine and truthful narrative, and this with such unanimity of sentiment as that not one dissentient voice has come down to us. Talk about miracles! The whale swallowing Jonah is not a circumstance. Nothing short of Jonah swallowing the whale could match it.

And that is the book, made in the manner indicated, which our Saviour revered as the very word of God. According to the critics, He did this ignorantly, or in a spirit of accommodation to the erroneous ideas of His contemporaries. Whatever the explanation, He did it, and that is the tremendous fact. "My sheep hear my voice and they follow me. A stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him for they know not the voice of strangers!" When it is a question between Christ and the critics, it takes no prophet to say which will prevail.

THINKING IN BIG FIGURES

Among the many evil results of the Great War, may be found that insensibility to big figures. The psychologists teach us that there is a law of the sensibilities that when feelings are once aroused, they must be followed by action, or else they become dull.

The Great War confirmed this law. We can all recall how horror-stricken we were when first we read of the thousands killed, advancing in serried ranks, yet in time we ceased to be affected and seemed to lose all sense of horror.

We can also recall our wonder over the millions of dollars spent by various countries, especially our own government, yet we soon became accustomed to huge sums of money and ceased to wonder.

The same is true about the sufferings in the far East. Our thoughts by day and through the waking hours of the night were pictures of that endless stream of suffering women and children, exposed to the barbarity of savage Turks. Then came the pictures sent out by the various Relief Committees, little children dying of starvation, emaciated mothers, unable to nourish their babes, striving even in death to give warmth to the frail bodies. Now that the novelty is worn off, these stories have become "as tedious as a twice-told tale."

Though the feelings have been dulled, and no longer are we aroused, yet the horrors have not lessened. Half a million have been driven by the Turks from Eastern Thrace, and over a million must leave Asia Minor, unless the Turks finally yield, and at present they show no sign of so doing.

The most vivid imagination can not faithfully picture what is meant by these figures. Bring before you, if you can, that endless stream of humanity, the women and helpless babes, the tottering old men and the frail maiden, without food by day or shelter by night. This picture is horrible enough, but it becomes more so, when you add the barbarous treatment of the men and the outrages upon the women. For such crimes those who deny the fact of hell, must confess that there is urgent need of one at this period in man's history. The question is, what are we doing to relieve them, and what refuge can be found for them?

As Greece is already overcrowded, the refugee

Greeks can find no place to which they can go, unless they accept the invitation of Soviet Russia, which means that in time they will embrace the views of those who showed themselves friendly at a time when they need friends.

This country has given money beyond all other nations, and for this we are thankful. Except for the money given, we are like the priest and Levite in the parable—we pass by on the other side.

Politics seems to dominate humanity, and in the interest of selfish considerations, we are living in selfish isolation.

HELP FOR BANNER ELK WORK

The churches of the Synod are justly proud of our Home Mission work, and especially of that begun and so successfully carried on by the late Rev. Edgar Tufts. It is really a living monument of a man who lived by faith, and who, like the heroes of faith, whose names are given in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, by faith built schools and churches and carried hope to the discouraged of God's children.

In some way, at his death, the impression was made that he always had at his command unlimited means. The real facts, as shown in an article from Lenoir, are that he gave his services without pay, and left almost nothing to his family.

At present his work is sadly in need of funds, else his monument will be a broken column.

His son, a young man, has taken up the work, yet he will have to make bricks without straw, unless those who point with pride to what his father has done, will rally around the son, and thus prove that they realize that it requires something more than mere praise to carry on such a work.

LAWLESSNESS IN HIGHER LIFE

The thoughtful student of the times is bound to be impressed by two facts—first, that there is a general complaint that lawlessness is on the increase, and second, that this complaint has a basis in reality. We hear this charge from every pulpit, and nearly every secular paper repeats it. Then, not only do we hear the charges rung on this charge, but each day's record of happenings furnishes abundant proof of its truth.

In its lynching record this country stands pre-eminent, and in the ingenuity of the methods whereby the lynching is done, it excels even the savages of the South Sea Islanders or the Apaches of the Southwest.

Since the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment this spirit has spread, and it has crept into the highest places; and if we can accept the testimony of a Georgia Congressman, it is rife among even the lawmakers of our land.

The history of lynching is a disgrace to every section, though statistics seem to give the palm to the South.

It would be difficult, however, to measure accurately the difference in savagery between the Herrin massacre, in the West, when unprotected men were shot down in cold blood, and the recent developments at Mer Rouge, in Louisiana, where two men were crushed to death and then sunk in a lake. Both would seem to qualify the actors for the front place among savages.

The only redeeming feature, when you compare these acts with those of lawlessness which prevail elsewhere, is that the men of Herrin and those of Mer Rouge were evidently men of a low order in the social world, while others who violate law with evident impunity are those who rank high in political and business life, the men who represent the commercial and social life of the country.

At the Governors' Conferences in Virginia recently, when Governors from many states assembled, two of them, each representing a sovereign state, seemed to be unable to realize how inconsistent it was for rulers of great states to confess that they could not enforce the prohibition law, which is the law of our land.

When Governors and Congressmen encourage the violation of law by charging that it cannot be enforced, is it any wonder that those lower down take courage and do all they can to prove the truth of their confession?

The people of this country, in every rank of life, need to learn that no man can make laws for himself; that there is law-making power, behind which no one can go; and that when a law has once been enacted, only the highest court of the land can set it aside.

The man who purchases the bootlegger's liquor is as much a violator of the law as the bootlegger himself, and his guilt is even greater, because he has either taken an oath to enforce law, or else he is supposed to be more intelligent.

This country needs to have a course in ethics, to learn the nature of conscience, to learn that the fact that conscience does not trouble you when you perform a certain act, is no reason why that act is necessarily right. The main thing is to decide whether your conscience needs enlightenment. Remember that conscience can become seared, and as such it is no safe guide. What the present lawlessness needs is an enlightened conscience and judges who will be impartial, and who will see that every law is obeyed, and that all violators will be punished, whether it be the poor negro bootlegger, the leader in commercial life, or the Congressman at Washington.

A LONG AND USEFUL PASTORATE

This is the age of changing pastorates, so much so that a long pastorate is always the subject of comment. Many of our ministers are restless for a change. A church becomes vacant, and at once there are letters from every quarter, from friends, recommending some one to the committee, and sometimes, we regret to say, the candidate for the vacancy recommends himself. When, therefore,

A RULE FOR LIVING

Forget each kindness that you do

As soon as you have done it;

Forget the praise that falls to you

The moment you have won it;

Forget the slander that you hear

Before you can repeat it;

Forget each slight, each spite, each sneer,

Wherever you may meet it.

Remember every kindness done

To you, whate'er its measure;

Remember praise by others won

And pass it on with pleasure;

Remember every promise made,

And keep it to the letter;

Remember those who lend you aid

And be a grateful debtor.

Remember all the happiness

That comes your way in living;

Forget each worry and distress,

Be hopeful and forgiving;

Remember good, remember truth,

Remember heaven's above you,

And you will find, through age and youth,

True joys, and hearts that love you.

—Youth's Companion.

we find a minister who, with the exception of one year and a half as stated supply, has served one church for 43 years, we feel that he deserves special mention.

From the Presbyterian of the South we learn that our old college and seminary mate, Dr. W. C. Campbell, has resigned the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church, of Roanoke, Va., after serving it for 43 years.

We therefore take this opportunity to give our younger ministers a short sketch of his work:

Ordained by Winchester Presbytery in 1880, he had a call to a small church in Kentucky, which he accepted, conditional upon the action of his Presbytery. His Presbytery exercised its episcopal authority and sent him to one of its feeble Home Mission churches, where the salary was barely sufficient to support a single man. Though greatly disappointed, like a loyal Presbyterian, he went to this feeble church, where he faced, for about a year, many discouragements.

In 1881 he was called to Big Lick Church, of Montgomery Presbytery, which was then a little distance in the country, not far from where the First Church of Roanoke now stands. Big Lick was a small village, and it was here that W. C. Campbell began his long pastorate. In time Big Lick was evolved into Roanoke, the Magic City of Virginia, a town that grew by leaps and bounds, and as it grew the young pastor grew, together with his church. With the growing town and growing church the influence of the pastor developed till today he is a part of this great city, interwoven into its history.

Having passed beyond the Scriptural limit, he has decided to let his burden be transferred to younger shoulders, while he enjoys his well-earned rest. From the "Presbyterian of the South" we quote:

"As offsprings from this church several other strong churches have been built up in Roanoke. Dr. Campbell's work and influence has not been limited to his own church. He has always been ready to aid in anything that was for the welfare of the city and its people. His wise counsel, his sympathetic heart, his consecrated life have made him one of the most influential, one of the most outstanding, one of the best loved men who has ever lived in this city. His congregation is distressed that he has given up his pastorate, but he feels that the heavy work of such a large church should be laid on younger shoulders."

There is a lesson in his life for younger ministers. Obedience to Presbyterian authority and sticking to the job have their reward.

Devotional

UNFRIENDLY ONES

In "Abbottsford," which is a fascinating biography of Sir Walter Scott, there is an entrancing chapter on "The Wizard's Farewell." The latter days of Sir Walter were spent in pain and great financial distress. But in that self-same period he wrote "Ivanhoe." "Be assured," says the great Scottish novelist, "if pain could have prevented my application to literary labors, not a page of 'Ivanhoe' would have been written; for from beginning to end of that production, which has been a good deal praised, I was never free from suffering." We have noted that the world's greatest characters rise from unfriendly zones. The world won't quit asking, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" The sweetest songs are born in hours of deepest agony. When the astronomer trains his telescope on stellar worlds, he first puts out the lights. More than ever, this old world needs the man who laughs at the impossible. Even in his tragic fight against encroaching paralysis, Sir Walter Scott declares to Gilles: "The best way is, if possible, to triumph over disease by setting it at defiance, somewhat on the same principle as one avoids being stung by boldly grasping a nettle."—Marvin J. Nichols.

PATIENCE

The offices of patience are as varied as the ills of this life. We have need of it with ourselves and with others; with those below and those above us, and with our own equals; with those who love us, and those who love us not; for the greatest things, and the least; against sudden inroads of trouble and under our daily burdens; disappointments as to the weather, or the breaking of the heart; in the weariness of the body, or the wearing of the soul; in our own failure of duty, or others' failure to us; in every-day wants, or in the aching of sickness, or the decay of age; in disappointment, bereavement, losses, injuries, reproaches; in heaviness of the heart, or its sickness amid delayed hopes.—E. B. Pusey.

COMFORTERS

There are persons who wondrously comfort us. They seem able to put themselves in our place, to enter sympathetically into our griefs and sufferings. They stand by our side, and we know instinctively that their friendship is real. They may have little to say, they may not be gifted with the talent of uttering beautiful and appealing sentiments, but we are assured that their spirits are in unison with our spirits.

Genuine comforters draw their inspiration and strength from Christ. The comfort the world offers is a very cheap nostrum, but there is power in the words of real consolers. They have the spirit of Jesus in them. The gentleness and sympathy of the Master are expressed through them.

The greatest comforters of all are those disciples of Jesus who have borne some of life's heavy burdens and have suffered some of its heartbreaks. Having walked where the shadows are heavy, they are able to enter closely into the feelings of those who are oppressed with gloom.

OUR KOREA MISSION'S FIELD OF EQUIPMENT

By Rev. R. T. Coit

In accordance with the instructions of the last General Assembly an offering was made in all our churches on the first Sunday in December for the Equipment Fund for our Home and Foreign work. In addition to the general offering, those members of our churches who are in a position to do so, were approached by duly appointed representatives, who gave them the opportunity to supply some of the equipment needed. Five hundred thousand dollars was the sum set for this year, the Assembly feeling that the former figure set, $5,000,000, was more than the Church could give just now without high pressure methods, which always have a tendency to react to the detriment of the work.

Although all our mission fields are badly in need of equipment and most of our home mission schools which are doing such a fine work, are woefully handicapped, by lack of proper equipment, I will only write concerning the field in which I work, and of which I have first-hand information.

Several years ago our field was temporarily equipped to meet the needs as they then existed, but since then our mission has had one of the most remarkable developments in the annals of missions. To mention one phase only, the educational. The enrollment in our Southern Presbyterian Korea Mission schools has jumped from 1,700 three years ago to 12,000 now; and if we had the equipment, would reach 24,000 this year.

It may not be known to most of our people, that practically, all the recent best buildings put up in our Korea Mission are the gifts of missionaries on the field, or their relatives. The Owen Memorial Bible School building, at Kwangju, the McCutcheon Memorial Bible School building, at Chunju, and the McCallie Memorial Girls' School, at Mokpo, and the Wiley Memorial Nurses' Home, at Soonchun, and the office building for our secretary and treasurer, at Kwangju, and most of the other buildings for institutional work, such as Boys' Schools, Girls' Schools, and Hospitals, are the gifts of individuals, some inside and some outside our Church, so that the Church as a whole has done very little to equip our workers.

Our Church as a whole needs to know of the work and the need of proper equipment. The Methodist Church, both North and South, has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on their equipment in Korea. A recent world observer of missions, in returning from a tour of investigation, had this to say of our Church and its work: "The Southern Presbyterian Church has the best force of workers and the poorest equipped work of any I have seen in my tour of investigation." I think this will hold true of all our fields. It ought to shame us and spur us on to do our duty and equip those who have made such a sacrifice and in the face of such great odds accomplished so much. So much more efficient work could have been done, had they been properly equipped.

Without giving anything like a full list, some of the most pressing needs with approximate cost are as follows:

Doctor's Residence at Mokpo	$ 5,000
Boys' School Building and Dormitories, Mokpo..	10,000
Bible School Building, Mokpo	5,000
Bible School Building, Kunsan	5,000
Bible School Building, Soonchun	5,000
Two residences at Kwanju, $5,000 each	10,000
Dormitories for Boys' and Girls' Schools, Kwangju	20,000
Central Heating Plants for Institutional buildings, all five stations	15,000
Two Residences, Soonchun	10,000
Infectious Ward Hospital, Soonchun	3,000
Boys' and Girls' Schools	10,000
Additional Buildings and Equipment Boys' and Girls' Schools, Chunju	10,000
Residence and Land Prof., College Pyengyang..	7,500
Residence and Land Prof. Med. College, Seoul..	7,500
Our Part Union College, Pyengyang, and Union Seminary, Pyengyang	25,000
Total	$148,500

All of these are urgent needs and for lack of them our mission work is seriously crippled. For instance we are liable to lose our permit for hospital at Soonchun unless we build the infectious ward this year. In order to get some place for the hundreds of men and women to sleep, who come in to study for 10 days or a month in the Central Bible Schools, we have to dismiss the school boys or girls and let them go back to their homes during these classes, that those who come in may have some place to stay. When we reopen the hospital at Mokpo next spring, the 500 school boys there will have no place to stay. At one of our stations the missionaries have personally put up the money to furnish temporary quarters so as to enable the schools to run and the Bible Schools to continue. It is not fair to throw the burden of the whole Church on the shoulders of those in charge of the work, just because they see it as no one else does. Here is an opportunity to make an investment which will yield an hundred fold. Any one of these would make a fitting memorial to some departed loved one, or in honor of some Christian worker now living. What finer way could we honor one, than in having such an institution out in the darkness, radiating light and remaking a nation. What Mr. and Mrs. Graham did in Ellen Lavine Memorial Hospital at Kwangju, or the First Church, St. Joseph, Mo., in the French Memorial Hospital at Mokpo, or Mrs. Spcers, in the Girls' School at Kwangju, others may do and their work will live long after them in transformed lives; as men and women shall come in contact with the ascended Christ, through these, and shall become new men and women in Christ Jesus. Our foreign mission secretaries, any returned missionary, or Dr. Melvin, or any of his force, will be glad to talk over this matter with any who may be interested.

Contributed

Greensboro, N. C., 620 S. Mendenhall St.

A HELPFUL BOOK FOR BEGINNERS IN THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

By Rev. W. W. Moore, D.D.

What pastor has not felt the need of a brief and simple statement of the teachings of Scripture concerning the duties and privileges that belong to the earlier stages of Christian experience, which he might put into the hands of new converts for their guidance and help? Here is a booklet from the leaders of the First Presbyterian Church of Knoxville which meets that need. The title of it is "Needed Counsel for New Christians," by Samuel McPheeters Glasgow, Cecil Herbert Lang, and Julia Lake Skinner; 47 pages; price, 25 cents; published by the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va., Texarkana, Ark.-Tex. It contains six short and meaty chapters, entitled respectively What a Christian Has Done, What a Christian Is, What a Christian Has, What a Christian Believes, What a Christian Does, and What a Christian Becomes.

It is written from the experience of the authors in dealing with new Christians, in trying to build them up and set them to work in the Christian life. "So often our development is arrested and our growth small and our discouragement great because we have not known how to take care of, or forward steps at the threshold of the Christian life. If this book shall prove helpful, in shedding light upon the new Christian's pathway, in centering his faith more and more strongly on Christ and His Word, and in directing the energies of this new life toward conscious peace, growth in grace, joy in Christian service and glory to Christ, it will have fulfilled its simple mission."

It will not only do these things for the new Christian but it will strengthen the faith and enrich the life of all Christians who read it, whether new or old.

Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.

REMARKABLE SERVICE

By Professor and Quartette of Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, on January 28, at Indiana Reformatory, Jeffersonville, Ind.

The chaplain of the Indiana Reformatory said that the best service ever held in the reformatory was that held on January 28th. The professor of theology, Rev. Dr. Thornton Whaling, and the seminary quartette, composed of Mr. K. G. Tucker, Waco, Tex.; Mr. J. H. Meengs, Holland, Mich.; Mr. D. F. Barnette, Campbellsville, Ky., and Mr. J. B. Green, Danville, Ky., visited the reformatory for the purpose of giving real and earnest presentation of the Gospel. After an interesting and humorous address by Mr. T. B. Talbot, superintendent of Home Missions for the Synod of Kentucky, the seminary quartette sang the Gospel invitation in a tender and moving way. Dr. Whaling then pressed in a short and earnest sermon the appeal of Jesus for faith and obedience; and stressed the blessed results of compliance. The quartette then sang that exquisite Gospel hymn, "The Riches of Love in Christ Jesus."

After prayer, and singing, by the 800 men present, of several hymns, followed by some fine music by the Reformatory Band, the audience was dismissed, but an after meeting was announced to which any were invited who desired to attend. Over 300 young men remained. Dr. Whaling then gave a brief exposition of faith in Jesus and urged everyone to accept Him. The seminary quartette then rendered a Gospel song expressing trust in Jesus as Saviour and Lord. This was followed by the professor's giving a resume of the blessed and certain fruits of trust in Jesus, and the seminary quartette rendered the same truth in moving and heart appealing music. As a result over 30 young men held up their hands to express their desire for prayer and their purpose to live the life of faith in Christ as Lord and Saviour.

The service was unique in that it was planned to unite sermon and song; preaching by the professor and singing by the quartette, in presenting exactly the same truth to the same audience; thus marrying music and speech in pressing the claims of Jesus.

This same service, by invitation, will be given in the Kentucky Reformatory, on February 11th, to the 2,500 inmates there.

One of the advantages of the Louisville Seminary is that it gives opportunity for this kind of service, and it is the purpose and desire of the seminary authorities to link the life of the institution to the needs of the community in which it is located.

L. A. Taylor, Manager Seminary Quartette.

THE UNJUST STEWARD

By Rev. Geo. F. Robertson

In the 16th chapter of the Gospel by Luke, Jesus tells the very interesting story of the Unjust Steward. He is the fellow who had been reported to his master as having wasted his goods. This steward was summoned to his master, who called him to account and discharged him from the service that had doubtless been so profitable. "What is this I hear of thee?" queried this lord. "Give an account of thy stewardship, for thou mayest no longer be steward." The fellow had literally winnowed, cast to the winds, as it were, the lord's substance. No doubt that here we have a case of one wrong leading to another. This will appear later.

In spite of his heedlessness the day of reckoning had come, and he seemed at first unequal to meeting it. "To dig I am not able; to beg I am ashamed." Here his wits came to him, and to use a common worldly term, he proved to be a slick proposition. "I have a plan," said he, "by which I can make these fellows my friends (possibly the ones who had reported on him) so that when I'm out of a job they will take me into their houses."

He called together his lord's debtors and worked his plan. To the first one he said, "How much do you owe my lord?" This was not for information but for effect. "One hundred measures of oil," was the reply. "Take the bill and discount it 50 per cent. And how much do you owe?" addressing the second. "I owe a hundred measures of wheat." "Discount your bill 20 per cent," commanded the wily steward. So one made his bill 50 measures of oil and the other 80 measures of wheat. This meant 400 gallons of oil and 200 bushels of wheat taken from the bills, no inconsiderable amount. When this came to the ears of this lord, he commended the shrewdness of the steward. Now, notice this: The steward had been wasting his lord's goods and was being dismissed from service for this. How then could the lord commend the shrewdness that would waste his goods still more, even to the extent of 400 gallons of oil and 200 bushels of wheat. There is but one rational explanation of the situation. This steward, after receiving from the lord the several bills of each tenant's indebtedness at the end of the year, changed the amounts from 50 to 100, and from 80 to 100 respectively. So to go back to what the lord, at the time of contracts, demanded and had expected would do no violence to his substance and at the same time would greatly relieve these creditors who would doubtless be willing to receive such a friend as this steward was proving to be, into their houses. This process of graft was a common practice in the Saviour's day in the farming out of the taxes levied upon the Jews by the Romans. The Publicans, who were Jews, bought the privilege of collecting these taxes, and enriched themselves by increasing the same and putting this increase into their own pockets. Methinks it is not a strange practice today in many departments of business, government and other great contracts.

Another problem is presented here in the statements made whether by this lord or by the Saviour. You make Jesus the spokesman and you are put to it to explain what he says. To let it be the utterances of this lord clears away all difficulty and really calls for no further explanation.

Look at the eighth and ninth verses: "And the lord commanded the unjust steward because he had acted wisely (shrewdly) for (said this lord) the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light." This is not true. The statement impugns the wisdom from above, and makes meaningless the distinction constantly made in the Bible between those who are wise and those who are foolish. The unsaved are not wiser in worldly affairs, the management of state, finance, society, education, than are Christians. It is granted that all Christian men are not successes in the various departments of life, nor are sinners all failures, but it is true in a vast majority of instances. Then as a further bit of worldly wisdom this lord says, "Make friends by means of this mammon of unrighteousness, for by this they who are thus made friends will receive you not into their houses merely as the unjust steward has said, but into everlasting habitations."

Another interpretation has been put upon these words. Let this lord be the spokesman in verse eight, and then Jesus speaks: "Shall I say this unto you: make to yourselves friends of, or by means of, the mammon of unrighteousness, that when ye fail they may receive you into everlasting habitations? No, but I do say this: he that is faithful in that which is least is also faithful in much, and he that is unjust in the least is unjust in much."

To go back a little: the unjust steward said he was resolved what to do that they might receive him into their houses. May not this lord, after he had seen how keen and shrewd this fellow was, have had something like this in his mind: "Go ahead and make friends by means of this unjust money, and these friends will not only receive you into their houses, as this unjust steward said, but into everlasting habitations?"

This interpretation may be new, but that need not prevent its being correct.

Bristol, Tenn.

A REJECTED CHRIST

By Rev. James Russell

Matt. 8:34: "The whole city came out, to meet Jesus, and when they saw him, they besought him that he would depart out of their coasts."

Pilate said to them, "Behold your King," "Away with him; give to us Barabbas." It is 1,800 years since these things took place, but the multitude have not changed their minds yet regarding Christ and His Kingly government. This man shall not rule over us. We are called a Christian nation, but we are not followers of Christ. We know all about religion, except how to get it. To live with Christ will make us Christ-like, that is a Christian. We as a nation are far from a Christ life. In the days of Whitefield and Wesley the pulpit controlled the nation. It is not so today. The pulpit of today is making but little impression on the life and character of our nation, because it has not behind it the power and influence of the pew. They asked Charles Spurgeon the secret of his power and work in London; he said it is because of the 300 praying members I have in the amen corner of my tabernacle. We have fine Sabbath Schools, with hundreds of children, fine Christian Endeavor classes with thousands of young men and young women. Is Christ with them? Let us visit their homes. Is Jesus around their breakfast table Mondays and Tuesdays. If we have any of Christ in us it will show at home and in home life. If you find none at the table and the fireplace, the home has none. Let your light so shine that all around the table can see it. In many of our so-called homes we have a rejected Christ.

Chester, S. C.

A PROFITABLE HOME MISSION INVESTMENT

Reported by Rev. Arthur G. Jones, D.D.

By the will of the late Mrs. J. M. Bennett, Sr., of San Antonio, the sum of $10,000 was left to the Presbytery of Western Texas. This bequest was received in the spring of 1917. Because of the lifetime love and zeal of the donor for its Home Mission work, the Presbytery decided to hold the corpus of this bequest intact, to make it a permanent memorial of this godly woman, under the title of "The Elizabeth Noble Bennett Fund," and to use the fund for the building of Home Mission churches and manses within the territory of the Presbytery.

The management of the fund is in the care of special trustees who, under rules adopted by the Presbytery, use it for loans and donations to Home Mission congregations for the particular work to which the fund has been dedicated.

During the few years that it has been in operation, the fund has already contributed to the erection of seven churches and three manses in the Presbytery's Home Mission field. Loans have been made in the total sum of $3,200. Donations have been made in the total sum of $2,700. The corpus of the fund is still intact, part of it being in direct loans to Home Mission churches, and the other part safely invested, the income from which will be available for still further donations to the needs of our Home Mission work.

Thus the cause of Christ has already been carried forward by this benefaction in ten Home Mission churches whose work would have been embarrassed, if not prevented, without this special aid. It is a fair illustration of the way in which consecrated money can be made to serve, and to serve again, and continue indefinitely to extend the power and blessing of the Gospel.

Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Austin, Tex.

REV. EDGAR TUFTS A TRIBUTE

By Mrs. John Wakefield

The mountains are mourning their friend today,
Old Grandfather weeps from his cloudland steeps,
Beech stands alone with bared brow,
Knowing the woe of the valley below,
Feeling the loss of the friend so true,
Comrade of the friendly years,
Filling its footpaths with falling tears.
The church and school on the hillside bare
Are silent and still as they watch and wait
For the teacher whose brain and heart and care
Brought into being their walls so fair;
For the pastor whose words and life
Brought echoes of lessons from Heaven above
To waiting souls he gathered there.
The winds of winter, with sob and sigh
A requiem are wailing thru tree-tops high.
The snow with its soft and gentle touch
Its pall of white is folding round
The grave of our loved one, that sacred ground.
But hark—'tis as tho' a voice I hear,
"Weep not—for me. I am at rest—
My Master called; I heard His voice,
Lift up your heads; O friends, rejoice!
In Christ there's hope. The risen one
Bids me to rest; for you there's work.
Some sheep of His are wandering still O'er mountain paths, by woodland rill.
They do not know, they have not heard
Of Jesus' love from His own Word.
His lambs—Oh, feed His lambs:
• The weak, the sick, the orphaned ones—
For me—weep not, nor tarry here;
By my grave's side shed not a tear,
But up and work while yet 'tis day,
O friends of mine, and do not stay
Till all are told, till all are brought Around the Throne of God in Heaven,
Where thousands of His children stand
And sing His praise from every land.
Red Springs, N. C.

THE EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENT IN KENTUCKY

By Henry H. Sweets, D.D., Secretary

The Kentucky Presbyterian Educational Movement which sought to arouse the Presbyterians of the Synods of Kentucky U. S. and U. S. A. to a deeper sense of their responsibility for Christian Education and to secure a million dollars for the Presbyterian educational institutions of the State gloriously achieved these great ends.

Twelve thousand subscriptions ranging from one dollar to twenty thousand dollars were secured. This means, of course, that at least twelve thousand people are now interested and will forever feel that they have some ownership in these institutions. More than a million dollars net has been pledged to the Kentucky Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Centre College, the Kentucky College for Women, Pikeville College, Witherspoon College, Sayre College for Girls, Lees Collegiate Institute, Matthew T. Scott, Jr., Academy, and the Kentucky Presbyterian Orphanage. An additional pledge of thirty thousand dollars was secured for the Theological Seminary and the conditions whereby an additional two hundred thousand dollars will come to Centre College from the General Educational Board have been met.

The work was conducted by the Executive Committee of Christian Education under the direct leadership of Rev. S. W. McGill, Field Secretary. The following men and women were associated with us in this work: J. S. Baird, E. B. Bickers, F. H. Caldwell, H. S. Caldwell, N. L. Curry, R. M. Dohyns, W. B. Gordon, W. L. Greenaway, Paul Harris, Jr., W. S. Hawkins, S. P. Hollinrake, J. P. Love, W. H. Lowry, H. T. McBroom, C. T. McCully, F. A. McElroy, J. C. Norton, Ed. R. Pike, A. H. Seats, A. A. Sheddan, J. A. Troxler, T. H. Williams, Miss Alyce W. Anderson, Miss F. Pauline Barton, Miss Margaret Hutchinson, Miss Annie Lee, Miss Jean Maxwell, Miss Emory McCann, Mrs. J. F. Malone, Miss Emma Miller, Miss Annie McGill, Miss Mamie Rucker, Mrs. A. H. Seats, Miss Olive P. Zeigler.

In no other campaign conducted by the Executive Committee have we received more generous help than from the faculty of all these institutions. Some of them gave every Sunday, went on long journeys, spoke every Sunday, and frequently many times during the week. Many ministers from a distance came into the Synod to help on special occasions.

The chairman of the United Commission of the two Synods, Rev. R. T. Gillespie, D.D., proved himself a leader of ability, perseverance and tact.

Rev. Benj. J. Bush, vice-chairman of the United Commission, served in the campaign with untiring energy and devotion. Although his church was worshipping in a public hall and facing a building fund campaign, Dr. Bush urged his people to postpone their present enterprise and to give to the cause of Christian Education first.

The staff of the Executive Committee which worked in Kentucky has now been transferred to Arkansas, where four hundred and six thousand dollars is being sought for the educational institutions of that Synod.

Louisville, Ky.

A COUNTRY PARSON'S SUNDAY IN CHICAGO

By Rev. Henry W. McLaughlin

A writer in a current magazine made the suggestion that every preacher ought to take a Sunday off now and then and sit in the pew and get the pew's point of view.

The Country Parson was quite incognito, dressed in his all virgin wool homespun from the back of his own flock.

The Y. M. C. A. Hotel—He put up at the Y. M. C. A. Hotel, Eighth and Wabash, Chicago, a good place for a man with a slender purse and simple wants who has no desire to advertise his self-importance. It would sound bigger to have put up at the LaSalle, the Congress, the Sherman or some other, but at 80 cents a night one is quite comfortable with clean bed, two clean towels and a chance for a shower-bath in the commodious fire-proof hotel where thousands of young men, free from the alluring evil influences of the cheap hotels of the great cities, can spend the night and find good, wholesome food at moderate price in its cafeteria and lunch counters.

The Country Parson was surprised, however, to find no advertisements by way of card or poster about the hotel on Sunday morning of religious services in any of the Chicago churches, except a framed list of a few different denominations. This list, however, has not been changed for a year.

It is not for a countryman to criticize, but the parson thinks if he were a pastor of a church in the neighborhood of the Loupe he would see that the men of his church put into the hands of every man in the nearby hotels a card of invitation to attend the Bible School and church services.

He studied the framed list, though he saw no one else look at it, and made out his program for the day. The first thing was Sunday School in a not-far-away Presbyterian church. In walking he was surprised to find a large force of men tearing up and reconstructing the street on Michigan Avenue. As Sunday is about the most crowded day on this great thoroughfare, when autos constantly ply both ways like weaver's shuttles, in quick succession, all day long, it was difficult for the parson to see how it was either a work of necessity or mercy. He was also amazed to note that many of the stores were open and doing a thriving business.

The Church of the "Modern Mind"—The church reached, the parson was struck by the smallness of attendance, especially of men, at the Sunday School. His own school far away in the country had many times more men, except when auto traffic was mud-bound. The assistant pastor acted as superintendent. At the close of the exercises this gentleman spoke to the stranger and directed him to the Men's Bible class in the gallery at the far end of the church. The parson found four men present, two of which were discussing a second-hand musical instrument which one of them had recently purchased. After about ten minutes the teacher with a few more appeared, ten in all, including the parson. All were seated and ready for action. The teacher was a fluent man, but lacked ability to cultivate the self-expression of the members of his class. He seemed to think that much speaking was the requisite for a successful Sunday School teacher.

The stranger was politely ushered to a seat in the front of the large church. There was plenty of room, as it was only about half filled.

The music was led by a highly trained and no doubt highly paid quartette of singers. The preacher was a man of handsome appearance with well modulated voice and good forensic gifts generally. The text was Matthew 6:33: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added." The subject was, "Where Jesus Puts the Emphasis." The

(Continued on page 5)

Presbyterian Progressive Program

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS MARCH 18th

ONE EXAMPLE WORTH A THOUSAND ARGUMENTS

By Roswell C. Long

The West Avenue Church, at Gastonia, N. C., is located in the midst of a cotton mill community and has a membership of 230 resident members. Believing that the success of this church in the Presbyterian Progressive Program may be an example and incentive to other churches of similar membership, and perhaps similar conditions, the following account from the pastor of that church is given:

First, We Prayed It Through—This church believes in, and practices the power of prayer. With all available data concerning the plans and program of the Progressive Program and particularly the Every Member Canvass, the facts were laid before the session, and then before a joint meeting of the officers of the church, and later before a representative of each organization in the church.

It was unanimously decided, after much prayer, that we would adopt the program, adapt it, and work it, if God willed. That was two and a half years ago. God has willed, and we are still praying and working and succeeding and growing.

Second, We Set It Up—The first step in setting up the program was the organization of the church. The only organizations functioning at that time were the session, and the Sunday School. Seven organized and chartered classes in the Sunday School were soon effected; two troops of Boy Scouts were given charters by national headquarters with our church as the parent institution; a Woman's Auxiliary was organized with three circles; three Christian Endeavor Societies were formed for the three ages; additional officers were elected in the church; a Laymen's club for the men was started, and definite standards were set up for the guidance of the Sunday School and each separate organization. The church desired at that time to lay the major emphasis on the Young People's work, and a Young People's Council was formed, which acted also as a church council. Every organization in the church, including the session and board of deacons, was represented in this council, each representative being duly elected to this place by the organization concerned. The session elected men to represent the church in the different departments of the Progressive Program, including Spiritual Life, Evangelism and Missions, Christian Training, Stewardship and Possessions, and Fellowship. Definite goals for the church were set covering each of these departments.

Third, We Worked It Out—Of course we first worked it in, and then we worked it out. Some plans used were reading courses, studies in Stewardship, Missions and Evangelism. A series of sermons covering the different departments of this program is preached through the year by the pastor, the major emphasis being placed on the importance of Stewardship during the months just preceding the Every Member Canvass. Every available piece of literature covering the Presbyterian Progressive Program is regularly and systematically distributed throughout the year.

Fourth, We Were Gloriously Blessed—The present pastor came to this church in August, 1920. At that time the church had a membership of 75 and the Sunday School an enrollment of 83. Through reliance on God, through organization of the church, and the setting up and working out of the Progressive Program, the church has grown to a present membership of 230, and the Sunday School to an enrollment of 372. There has been an addition of 234 members to the church in this time. Every goal set by the church in every department of the Progressive Program has been reached. The contributions to both benevolent and current expenses have increased 500 per cent. The Sunday School has been awarded the Goal Seal for 100 per cent excellence by the Publication Committee; the Senior Christian Endeavor Society was awarded the banner for the largest per capita contribution to Sunday School Extension; the Woman's Auxiliary achieved the highest rating in the Presbytery on the standard of excellence; every family in the church is a subscriber to the Church paper and the Missionary Survey and every Christian Endeavor home takes a Christian Endeavor paper.

We are very emphatic in our belief that only through emphasis on the spiritual life of the Church and humble reliance on God can this or any other program succeed permanently in this or any other church.

Gastonia, N. C.

THE ONLY WAY

I sincerely hope every church in our General Assembly will adopt the Every Member Canvass this year.

It is the only way to finance a church.

It will soon educate the congregation to the fact that they are expected to do their part once a week.

It will teach some of the members, who do not come regularly, that the expenses go on at home and in the mission fields just the same when they do not come as when they are there.

It will create a feeling of loyalty in all the church for a close spiritual fellowship that has not been there before.

It has done this and more for our little church.

Have the budget carefully prepared, and approved by the session.

The pastor, the session, and the deacons must be enthusiastic for the canvass, and the budget, and this enthusiasm will soon spread through the congregation.

Pray for it, talk it, preach it, and you will soon have all at work for it.

One month of fervent prayer by the Church, plus one day of earnest work, will insure its success in any congregation in our Assembly.

Try it, there is nothing impossible in the work for the Master.

J. R. Brooks, Congregational Secretary.

Inman Park Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga.

A COUNTRY PARSON'S SUNDAY IN CHICAGO

(Continued from page 4)

sermon on the whole showed a great deal of study and much reading. It was filled with many classical allusions, but came far short of presenting to the hearers, the real meaning intended by the Master, in the estimation of the countryman.

The preacher made what the Country Parson thought was a very vicious attack on the Fundamentalists and made quite a play for approval of the people of the "Modern Mind." The Country Parson does not use shorthand and so cannot quote exactly, but the following is what was said in substance:

"John Huss was one of the world's greatest reformers, but because there were people who did not agree with him the Council of Constance burned him at the stake. Diddy and Latimer were great teachers of the truth, but because there were people in England who disagreed with them they were put to death. There were many pioneers in the search of truth, but the promoters of the Spanish Inquisition, because they did not agree with them, led these saints of God to a martyr's death. Harry Emerson Fosdick, the pastor of a New York Presbyterian Church, is the most bolden mouthed preacher of modern times, but the Presbytery of Philadelphia, because it does not agree with him, in the same spirit issues its protest, but thank God Fosdick is a Baptist preacher and is beyond the power of the Philadelphia Presbytery to touch him."

Now we would expect better things of a man brought up in the Southern Presbyterian Church and taught at the feet of Rev. Dr. R. A. Webb, but here he was, to the Country Parson's amazement, lambasting the Fundamentalists for the course of at least ten minutes. Was he preaching what he believed or was he preaching to please the "modern mind?"

There are a number of preachers these days who are striving to be in fashion, who preach not what they think the people need, but what they think they want. The Country Parson's opinion is that men change their fashions of thinking as women change their fashion of bonnets, and that the man who tries to keep up with these fashions of thought will be led a merry chase.

"Our little systems have their day,
They have their day and cease to be,
They are but broken lights of Thee,
And Thou, oh Lord, art more than they."

Now the Country Parson has no great quarrel with the brilliant and versatile Fosdick. He supposes if Fosdick had heard this sermon he would have prayed something like this: "Deliver me from my fool friends and I will take care of my enemies myself." The trouble with Fosdick is that he does not know any theology. He has lived in an environment all his life where it has not been fashionable to know theology. It has been thought to be an earmark of old-fogyism to preach on the great fundamental truths of theology. The Country Parson reads the sermon addition of the Brooklyn Eagle; it is mighty interesting reading, but usually awfully poor preaching from a theological and Scriptural point of view. Fosdick's trouble can be best expressed in his own words: "The basic facts about us which make such promiscuous preoccupation ruinous lie here: Our life's time and our life's energy are limited. We are like street cars; we can hold our quota and no more. When all seats are taken, the standing room absorbed, and the 'Car Full' sign put up in front, whoever hails us next, though he be the most prominent citizen in the community, must be passed by." He is one of the most versatile men, and most everything he says and writes is worth while, but the car is full, the sign is up and the distinguished citizen, Dr. Theology, has not been able to obtain even standing room. What a pity!

The Chicago preacher though seemed to make quite a hit with some folks who belonged to the elite of the "Modern Mind." The Country Parson heard the man in front of him say at the close of the sermon, "He is perfectly wonderful," and as he left the church a young man in company with a young lady remarked, "Didn't he give the Fundamentalists the devil?"

This sermon may have helped some who admired the preacher and his point of view, but the stranger was of the opinion that it was calculated more to elicit praise for the preacher than to inspire surrender to the Divine will. Is it not true that seeking the Kingdom of God is an earnest desire to do the will of God ourselves together with a consecrated effort to bring others to the surrender to His will?

"Our wills are ours, we know not how,
Our wills are ours to make them thine."

When we have made Christ king we have learned the royal road to the victorious life. The man who has the Kingdom of God in him has character. This inspires confidence and faith on the part of his fellow man. All progress, all prosperity is based on the kind of character that comes from the rule of Christ in the heart. All these secondary matters follow to the man who has made the Kingdom the subject of first consideration.

"This Freedom"—The Country Parson carried home with him a copy of the church bulletin and he noticed the Sunday night sermons were on the following topics: "The Strongest Man in the World," dramatic presentation of Ibsen's "An Enemy of the People;" "Idols of the Times," interpretations of Sir Francis Bacon's "Idols of the Tribe, of the Market Place and the Theatre;" "Does Heredity Determine Everything?" considerations from Lathrop Stoddard's "The Revolt Against Civilization;" "Are a Career and Home Life Mutually Impossible?" lessons for young women from Hutchinson's "This Freedom;" "The Sin of the Average Man," does Sinclair Lewis overdraw it in "Babbitt?"

The subject of this particular night was on the book, "This Freedom." It is difficult for the Country Parson to understand why there is such a furor over this book. He thinks it gives a horrible caricature of a minister's home. It probably has some valuable lesson for the present-day world, but he sees no use in going through forty nightmares to get them. At any rate, he thinks a book like this a poor makeshift for a sermon to a preacher who has the inexhaustible store of Scripture truth to draw from. If the pulpit is the place from which only discourses of entertainment are to be delivered, probably Dr. Charles Sheldon is right in the suggestion that the pulpit be abolished as obsolete. Is it the business of the preacher to proclaim what his people want to hear, or to preach what they ought to hear? Is it his business to frame his message so as to be acceptable to the "Modern Mind," or to frame it so as to be in accordance with the will of God, whose ambassador he is supposed to be? A New York editorial commenting on Dr. Sheldon's suggestion, comments on the preacher who strives to follow the fashion instead of proclaiming the truth as the ambassador of the King, reads as follows: "If he virtually hands up doctrine for their approval instead of handing it down to them as the Word of God, he merely yields to a very human temptation.

"It follows that the obsolescence of the pulpit is at least open to discussion."

If disappointment met the Country Parson in the morning, quite the opposite rewarded his quest in the after part of the day, of which he will write next week.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Presiding Over an Election. Nothing like it in print. Sent postpaid 50c.—This booklet presents seven kinds of elections, with five methods of conducting them, giving complete "Order of Business" for each one.

These five methods of electing are clearly demonstrated, step by step to guide the inexperienced presiding officer in directing any one of them.

Send order direct to author, Narcissa T. Shawhan, 254 North Conception St., Mobile, Ala.

Mt. Olive, N. C.—We have just finished our Foreign Mission study class, "Sunrise in Aztec Land," and I hope every Auxiliary in existence will take the study. It is one of the easiest to teach and most interesting we've had for some time.

Calypso Auxiliary was invited to take the study with us and we have had a splendid program. We used three afternoon periods for the work, taking three chapters each afternoon.

The last program was concluded by all present writing a letter to a missionary in Mexico and enclosing a linen handkerchief. We wrote to every one of our missionaries.

We append herewith a detailed program of the last meeting as it may contain some suggestion that will be helpful to another society:

Bible lesson—Each one present to give a verse of scripture that applies to Mexico, as a promise, command or a prayer.

Song—"The Son of God Goes Forth to War."
Uniting the Torches in Mexico—Mrs. T. N. McGee.
The Evangelical Seminary in Mexico—Mrs. H. R. Southerland.

The United Evangelical Press—Mrs. Albert Martin.

Bible Societies and Work of Colporteurs—Mrs. L. J. Page.

Vocal Selection—Mrs. B. C. Albritton.

Prophecies based on Progress, Prospects and Promises—Mrs. J. R. Maxwell.

Review of last Lesson—Mrs. James Dickson.

Resume of Mission Work Carried on in Mexico since 1874 by Presbyterians—Mrs. R. D. Loftin.

Current Opinion on Conditions in Mexico—Miss Jim Kornegay.

Quiz on Book—By Leader.

Questions: How many souls to be saved for Christ in Mexico? How long before Harvard was University of Mexico founded? Whom did Spaniards find in Mexico, and when did they come? How did Mexico get its name? Some good old Mexican laws, but queer religious beliefs about number of Gods? What struggles for independence elsewhere gave inspiration to Mexicans? Time of Spaniards rule, Independent Mexicans, and of first constitution? Who was Washington of Mexico; the first President; the first missionary? Four vital movements in U. S. in 20th century that affected Mexico? Contrasts in U. S. and Mexico? Motives of first settlers; language, religion, marriage, divorce? What did the Revolution do for the church? Number of U. S. students studying in Mexico City in 1922. Number of Mexicans in U. S. schools? Why was our church asked to move its work from Northern to Southern Mexico? Name states in new field, stations, population. Some reforms noted in Mexico. Who is the president of Mexico, and is he favorable to Protestantism? Name Protestants now occupying positions of trust in Mexico, both in Church and State? A few results of uniting the torches in Mexico.

From four to five there will be a social hour during which time we will write little notes to our missionaries in Mexico. Please everybody bring paper folded in an envelope, and pencil. Those who wish may bring a gentleman's, lady's, or child's handkerchief, which we will lovingly tuck in these little missives of good cheer to our missionaries in Mexico. During the hour refreshments will be served, "a la Mexicana."

Charlotte, N. C.—That mission study is no longer dull and can be made both attractive and instructive was proved beyond a doubt by the Women's Auxiliaries of the First and Second Presbyterian Churches of Charlotte, N. C., when they came together for an all-day study of Dr. Ross' splendid book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land," on the first Wednesday in February.

The splendid spirit of co-operation and Christian fellowship that exists between these two Auxiliaries is best described by the invitation from the Second Church to the First as follows: "Come spend the day with us in our new club rooms and join with us in an all-day Foreign Mission study, and we will serve you a real Mexican dinner." Needless to say the invitation was accepted, and the Foreign Mission Secretaries of each Auxiliary began immediately to plan a program for this day together.

As a method to stimulate interest in attendance, to insure the reading of the book, it was decided that each of the two Auxiliaries offer a $10 prize in mission money to the circle having the largest proportional attendance as well as largest number reading the book. The result was very gratifying as 424 women actually registered.

The splendid mission study book is well adapted to co-operative study, being subdivided into the Darkness, the Dawn, and the Light, and was divided between the two Auxiliaries as follows: The First Church had the morning session and the part of the book that depicted the Darkness and the Dawn; the hostess Auxiliary taking the after lunch period, with the later Dawn and Light as their subject. Then each Auxiliary was left to bring out their part of the book in their own way.

The First Church conducted the morning session, with the following program:

Mrs. Parks Kirkpatrick, Secretary, Foreign Missions, First Church, presiding.

Scene 1—Pagan Darkness.

Scene 2—Papal Darkness.

Scene 3—Protestant Dawn.

Scene 4—A Day in Our Mexican Mission.

Scene 5—"The Light." A Symbolic Scene.

Details of Presentation: (Morning Session).

1. Opening Hymn.

2. Welcome to Women of First Church, by Mrs. W. R. Wearn, President of Woman's Auxiliary of Second Church.

3. Response by Miss Annie Wilson, President of Woman's Auxiliary of First Church.

4. Devotional, by Mrs. J. T. McCutchan.

5. Duet, by Miss Nettie Allison and Mrs. Robert J. Smith.

6. Introductory Talk, by Mrs. Parks Kirkpatrick.

7. Scene 1—Pagan Darkness: A Domestic Scene. Tableau; Mexican Women—Mrs. Lawrence Miller, Mrs. J. W. Grier, Mrs. Latimer McClintock. Mexican Man—Mrs. E. O. Anderson. Talk on "Pagan Mexico," by Mrs. A. B. Taylor.

8. Scene 2—Papal Darkness: Forced Conversion. Tableau: Mexican Man (High Class), Miss Lavinia Boyer; Catholic Priest, Mrs. J. P. Quarles; Soldier, Mrs. J. J. Pierce. Talk on "Papal Mexico," by Miss Laura Burton Miller.

9. Scene 3—Protestant Dawn: The Truth Presented. Tableau: Missionary, Mrs. E. M. Cole; Mexican Group. Talk on "Beginning of Protestantism," by Mrs. W. H. Fowler.

This period was illustrated by living pictures, with explanatory talks. Every phase of the life of this period was brought out, the first being a domestic scene, the adobe hut, the home of the peon who rested leisurely in the shadow of its eaves, surveying the other members of his household busily serving their lord and master, as burden-bearers and general doers of all work.

The talks-accompanying the tableaux carried us through the Papal Darkness, showing the forced conversion, the idols overthrown, and other evils which were suffered during this period. This brought us to the beginning of the Dawn, which was described by our speakers as the cock-crow. Then the beautiful tableau, "The Truth Presented," showed our first missionary, Mrs. Melinda Rankin, with her open Bible, as she presented the truth to those whose love she had won by her Christlike manner among them.

The lunch, which was a very interesting feature of the day, and very satisfying to the inner man, came at this time. The menu follows:

I. King Cock—Pan.

II. Pulque Salad.

III. Diaz Frozen Dainty, Cafe.

It was a most inspiring sight to see 250 women seated at one time to partake of this splendid treat.

The afternoon program, by the Second Church, was most interestingly presented.

Afternoon Session—Mrs. Jeff R. Palmer, Secretary of Foreign Missions in Second Church, presiding.

1. Opening Hymn.

2. Prayer, by Miss Julia Alexander.

3. Introductory Talk, by Mrs. Palmer.

4. Solo, "In Old Madrid," by Miss Nettie Allison.

5. Scene 4—"A Day in Our Mexican Mission."

Cast of Characters:

Superintendent of Normal School, Mrs. Ella K. Hanna.

An American Visitor, Mrs. Richly, Miss Mary Elizabeth Wearn.

The Day-School Teacher, Miss Beaty, Mrs. J. B. Spillman.

The Spanish Girl, Valencia, Mrs. R. J. Smith.

The Matron of the School, Mrs. W. B. Glenn.

The Mexican-Spanish Girl, Marnia, Mrs. H. H. Heafner.

The Aztec Indian Girl, Miss Mary Julia Bullard.

The Mexican Lover, Mrs. Robert J. Smith.

Rev. Goodly, of the Union Theological Seminary,

Mrs. T. W. Huntley.

6. Piano Solos, by Mrs. P. D. Gilreath: (a) "From an Indian Lodge; (b) "Spanish Dance."

7. Poem, "A Neighbor," read by Miss Lavinia Boyer.

8. Scene 5—"The Light"—A Symbolic Scene.

Spirit of Mexico, Mrs. Paul Rousseau.

Spirit of Y. W. C. A., Miss Mary Mobley.

Spirit of Y. M. C. A., Miss Ruth Crowell.

Spirit of W. C. T. U., Miss Sallie Phillips.

Spirit of Union Mission Press, Miss Minnie Olive Walker.

Spirit of American Bible Society, Miss Kate Walker.

Spirit of American Tract Society, Miss Susie Keerans.

Spirit of C. E. Society, Miss Elizabeth Morrison.

Spirit of Sunday School, Mrs. Jno. Northey.

Spirit of Humane Society, Miss Louise Henderson.

Spirit of Prophecy, Mrs. Clyde N. Sloan.

Chairman of Music Committee, Mrs. Wm. Speed.

Chairman of Luncheon Committee, Mrs. W. S. Orr.
Chairman of Scenic Arrangements, Mrs. Alston Morrison.

The scene showing a mission school in Mexico discussed every phase of our work in this field and how it is carried on. One who had only a hazy idea of our Mexican Mission, after seeing this part of the program, could but feel that Mexico is indeed our neighbor, and though she has been called "the two-year-old infant of the Southern Presbyterian Church," she is a giant responsibility, and if we share our part of this responsibility we must give her more love, more service, and more prayer.

The symbolic scene, the Light, showing the different agencies that are at work to help carry this light to our neighbor in darkness, was very impressive.

The decorative setting with tropical plants and fruits added much to the atmosphere of the day with our Mexican neighbors. Not least among the pleasure was the privilege of having with us representatives from each Auxiliary in the city and adjoining country churches.

We recommend just such study and co-operation as we have enjoyed to other Auxiliaries, believing it will stimulate interest and enlarge information—as after information comes inspiration, and after inspiration comes service, which is after all the only true living.

F. McD. K.

Sugar Creek—It was the pleasure of the Woman's Auxiliary of Sugar Creek Church to meet Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. M. A. Peabody, at the manse, this being the first meeting there in more than a year. The church has been without a regular minister here since Rev. W. R. McCalla went to Little Rock, until the recent coming of Rev. M. A. Peabody, from Jefferson, Ga. Before his family came the manse underwent extensive remodeling and renovation. Electric lights and waterworks were installed. It goes without saying that the ladies of the Auxiliary took an active interest in all this.

Mrs. M. C. Davis presided over the meeting. The attendance was most gratifying. Mr. Peabody conducted the devotional, taking "Stewardship" as his subject. Interesting reports were heard from the circles. March closes the year's work and the president urged diligent effort to have a creditable report for the Presbytery, which meets at Mint Hill in April, Philadelphia Church. Plans were made for the Home Mission study class. Several other routine matters were taken up. Mrs. Preston Robinson was chosen as delegate to the Woman's Parallel Convention, which is to meet in Charlotte at the same time as the Laymen's Convention.

After adjournment refreshments were served.

Mrs. R. M. P.

To the President and the Secretary of Spiritual Life—Dear Friends: We approach the close of the church year with mingled feelings of joy and sorrow! Joy that God has so abundantly blessed our efforts to advance His Kingdom; sorrow that the year's work falls so far short of its needs and of what He rightfully expects of us.

The thoughtful Christian woman must surely ask of herself, "Why this continued failure year after year?" Our Father fills our lives with rich blessings, yet repeatedly we fail to measure up to that responsibility to others which we so solemnly assumed before God. What is the reason? Is it not that we fail to really understand just what God asks of us? Do we comprehend the real meaning of Stewardship of life and of possessions?

A wonderful little book called "Christian Stewardship for Women," is just off the press. It is written by that consecrated woman, Mrs. S. H. Askew, of Atlanta, Ga., and issued by the Permanent Committee on Stewardship for the use of the Auxiliary. If every woman of the Church would prayerfully study this booklet, the record of the coming year would excel anything our Church has ever known in her history.

Do we really want to know what God expects of His children? Do we want to receive in our own lives the rich rewards promised for obedience to His will? The study of this little volume reveals these precious truths.

If you want the Christian experience of your members to be richer and sweeter during the coming year, if you want the work of the Church to go forward, if you want the debts paid and recruits sent out, if you want God's plan for all our lives to be really known and followed, then we beg of you two officers to whom this letter is addressed to plan at once to organize your members into groups for the study of this Biblical presentation of Stewardship for women.

Praying that God will speak a message to the hearts of our women through this study class, I am Faithfully yours, H. P. Winsborough.

The free grace of God makes every man a debtor who receives it; places him under an obligation to impart what he has received, as far as he can, to every human brother. The very faith and hope by which we incur this debt inspire us with the benevolence which longs to fulfil it. All this is expressed in those words of Paul to the Romans: "I am a debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians; both to the wise and the unwise. So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the Gospel to you that are at Rome also."

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

Four more reporters added this week brings the number on the Honor Roll to a "lucky thirteen." And what a fine lot of work the reports cover! Wouldn't you have liked to be present when those young people in Lowell had that mission study class, or out at Quaker Meadows Church, near Morganton, to hear the young people discuss Mr. Crawford's interesting booklet on the State that the Tar-Heels are so proud of? Or perhaps you would prefer to take part in the work at Fayetteville. No wonder their pastor commented on what the young people are doing.

We can almost hear you saying, though, that you prefer your own church and young people's work. We hope you do feel your own work is best, provided you have high standards, but don't forget we want to know about what you are doing. Every report makes a more interesting department.

As the editor sits at his desk this Sunday evening some of the Davidson College students are in the next room singing "Shall We Gather at the River," "Jesus Is All the World to Me," and other songs. The songs bring to mind the thought of the peoples who do not know Jesus as their friend and who haven't thought of gathering at the river "Where bright angel feet have trod." Young people, are you interested in those who have never heard "the message of salvation from God's own holy Word?" There are millions who today, nearly two thousand years after Christ died to save them, have never even heard that He was born. The finest thing you can do is to have a part in sending and carrying the message to some of these. We had an article last week on Home Mission study, and will have another soon on Foreign Mission study. Won't you study about Missions, pray for Missions, give to carry on the work, and pray that some of your members may go out to personally represent you and your church? Great joy awaits you.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

FEBRUARY 18, 1923

JESUS AND ZACCHAEUS

GOLDEN TEXT—The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost. Luke 19:10.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

1 And Jesus entered and passed through Jericho.
2 And, behold, there was a man named Zacchaeus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich.
3 And he sought to see Jesus who he was; and could not for the press, because he was little of stature.
4 And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see him; for he was to pass that way.
5 And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, Zacchaeus, make haste, and come down; for today I must abide at thy house.
6 And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully.
7 And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying, That he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.
8 And Zacchaeus stood, and said unto the Lord; Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold.
9 And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house, forsomuch as he also is a son of Abraham.
10 For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 49. Which is the Second Commandment?
A. The Second Commandment is: Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth; thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them; for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me, and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments.

During His public ministry many sought Jesus for healing or bodily repair, some for instruction, a few for salvation and a multitude from curiosity. The classes seeking were varied in character and motive. The hostile Pharisees and Sadducees sought Him to entrap Him in His words and teaching. Some, like Nicodemus, sought Him for religious teachings. A number of Publicans, like Zacchaeus, came near His person from curiosity as to His character, words and deeds. We will contemplate Zacchaeus Seeking Jesus; Jesus Seeking Zacchaeus; Zacchaeus' Conversion; The Proofs of His Discipleship.

I. Zacchaeus Seeking Jesus

He had never seen Him, but had heard much about Him. So many men now have never discovered Jesus' true character, but have heard much concerning Him. Zacchaeus resolved to know more about Jesus, and it was a wise resolve. He decided to supplement his defects, and to use the means at his disposal for gaining his end. This too was a wise course. So every man acts the part of wisdom in employing all means within his reach for knowing more about Jesus. His claims are too stupendous and the asserted consequences of neglect are too appalling for a man to ignore Christ and His Gospel. All men should study the Scriptures, scan their evidences of inspiration, attend the sanctuary and its ordinances of worship and pray to God for guidance. If he will do this he may be brought to say, with Peter, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." The man who does not seek Christ has little prospect of knowing Him and His salvation.

II. Jesus Seeking Zacchaeus

The Lord was seeking the Publican as well as the latter seeking Him. It is obvious that one of Jesus' purposes in Jericho was to save Zacchaeus. As He went to his house, Christ declared, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." When Jesus came to the tree where Zacchaeus was He says, "Zacchaeus, come down, for today I must abide at thy house." He invites Himself to the Publican's home and goes there for the very purpose of revealing Himself, teaching the inquirer the plan of salvation, and saving Him from sin. Every sinner who is disposed to be a Christian should remember that Christ is seeking him and is far more desirous of making him a disciple than he is to become one. The Ethiopian Eunuch went up to Jerusalem studying the Scriptures and seeking the way of life. The Lord withdrew Philip the Evangelist from an important work, and sent him to a desert road to meet the Eunuch and to guide him to Himself. Let every sinner, then, wanting to be a Christian, be encouraged by the fact that Jesus seeks him and will give him all needed help.

III. Zacchaeus' Conversion

The Publican, confessedly a man of bad character, became a real disciple of Christ. Zacchaeus was ignorant in religious matters and undoubtedly at the Publican's table Jesus instructed him as to the plan, terms, duties, and blessings of the Gospel salvation. "Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God." When taught, Zacchaeus arose and declared what he would do. Jesus said, "Today is salvation come to this house, for as much as He also is a son of Abraham." He affirms that he is a spiritual son of Abraham, who trusted for salvation in the promised Messiah. Abraham was saved by Christ just as we are. Jesus says of him, "Abraham rejoiced to see my day; he saw it and was glad." There is but one Saviour for mankind. "There is no other name given under heaven or among men whereby we must be saved." Old Testament saints and New Testament believers trust the same Redeemer. All that reach glory join the ransomed church above in saying, "Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof for thou hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and people and tongue and nation, and we shall reign on earth."

IV. Proofs of Zacchaeus' Discipleship

Was Zacchaeus a true Christian and what is the evidence? Though he had been an ungodly, worldly man, Christ says he was saved. If Jesus undertakes to save a human being, no matter how depraved and vicious, He can do it. He can "save unto the uttermost all that come unto God by Him." The proofs of Zacchaeus being saved are found in his change of nature and life. He had rebelled against His will; now he submits to Him. He had no faith in Jesus; now he trusts Him. He had been selfish; now he determines to be generous. He had been dishonest; he now purposes to be just. He had been a thief; he now decides to make restitution fourfold. His change in spiritual nature leads to reformation of conduct. He declares, "The half of my goods I give to the poor, and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation I restore him fourfold."

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

TEMPTATION TO LIE

M., Feb. 19—Profit in Lies: Lev. 6:2-5.
T., Feb. 20—Mistaken Affection: Gen. 27:1-13.
W., Feb. 21—Hatred: Prov. 10:9-19.
T., Feb. 22—Spite: Ps. 31:11-18.
F., Feb. 23—Pride: Matt. 6:1-5.
S., Feb. 24—Covetousness: II Pet. 2:1-3, 17-20.

Sun., Feb. 25—Topic: What Are Some Temptations to Lie and How Can We Overcome Them?
Prov. 12:17-22.

Why is lying associated with cowardice?
What helps to cure lying in business?
Are benevolent lies unjustified? Why?

The truth is beautiful and glorious; a lie is black and infamous. The devil is the father of lies, and any one who lives a lie or tells untruth is a child of the devil. A lie is any presentation of untruth for the purpose of deception, when there is an obligation to tell the truth. A lie may be told in several ways, by a statement in words, by an act that deceives, by silence, when we ought to speak, by inaction when we ought to act. Any one of these is as bad as the others, depending on the circumstances. Everything that is untrue is not a lie. Fairy stories are not lies, neither are novels. These things are simply to amuse the imagination. To children who live in a world of make-believe, they may be almost like truth, but as we grow older we learn to discern between what is true and untrue.

Why Are We Tempted to Lie?

Since man is a fallen sinner, one of his bad traits of character is the willingness to deceive. The practice of lying begins very early. Selfishness suggests that the way to get what we want, or keep what we have, is to lie about it. Often fear will make one lie to avoid being punished or hurt. We love applause and wish to be complimented, so we try to appear what we are not. We desire the approval of parents, teachers, bosses, and friends, and we deceive them to gain their commendation. As Oliver Wendell Holmes says, "Sin has many tools, but a lie is a handle that fits them all."

Some Forms of the Temptation to Lie

It is not easy to live a true life, and the temptation to lie comes in all the stages and ages of our lives. The home is sometimes a hotbed for liars. Parents deceive their children to get them to behave, and children discover this method of getting what they want, and soon become proficient liars. In school, deceiving the teacher is often the main task of the pupils, who try to make it appear they are working at lessons, or behaving properly, when they are not. Some boys and girls cheat on class and examination, which is lying, of course. In business, many people lie and cheat, falsify measures and weights; for lying and stealing are twins. In the social world, lying takes the form of polite indirection, insincerity, and often of bare falsehood. As Mark Twain declares, "Some people are experienced, industrious, ambitious and often picturesque liars."

How to Overcome the Temptation to Lie

Yielding to deception, insincerity, and falsehood undermines the moral character. No Christian needs to lie, for God will take care of him and give him all he needs for life and success, in school, in business, in society, in politics. Satan's wiles will be set to trip you, and make you lie; but, as Dean Swift says, "Tell the truth and shame the devil." Resolve to tell the truth at all costs; confess your sin, and drive out all false and devilish desires. Christ calls Himself the truth. Let us make Him our example in truth-telling, for He would not stoop to lie, even at the cost of His life. Be true to Christ, be true to yourself, be true to your home, and its ideals, and the love of truth will grow in your hearts like a beautiful flower, filling your lives with peace and joy.

REPORTERS' HONOR ROLL

Carey P. Lowrance, Mooresville.
 Paul W. Rawlins, Greensboro.
 Miss Eunice Long, Greensboro.
 Miss Minnie Hopkins, Concord.
 Miss Leila Hubbard, Lumber Bridge.
 Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, Route 5, Durham.
 Miss Aline Whitener, Hickory.
 Miss Maud Little, Charlotte.
 Mrs. Z. V. Turlington, Mooresville.
 Miss Bess D. Arrowood, Morganton.
 Miss Kate Sutton, Fayetteville.
 Mrs. W. H. Howell, Wilmington.
 Miss Bessie Cox, Lowell.

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The Senior Endeavorers of Lowell held a mission study class the last Tuesday evening of January. Different members presented various parts of the book "Unfinished Tasks." This study was particularly interesting in that some of the young people had done actual service among the people about whom they talked. Miss Etta Baker, the society president, who has worked among the Indians in Arizona, splendidly presented "The Indians." Miss Lucile Sandidge added to her talk on "The Strength of the Hills" by telling of work in which she had had experience among the mountaineers. Misses Bessie Cox, Mary Wheeler, and Janie Young, and Mr. J. W. Lowry, gave interesting chapters. Nineteen of the society's 22 members were present to enjoy the study and the "eat stunt" which preceded it, the "eats" being provided by those attending.

After a two weeks' delay on account of bad roads and influenza, the young people of Quaker Meadows Church, near Morganton, held a very interesting celebration of North Carolina Day. The basis of the discussion was Rev. Mr. Crawford's booklet on the Old North State. Patriotic songs and a prayer for the State were included, and also two readings. Scott's "The Love of Country" and Kipling's "Recessional."

The young people of the First Presbyterian Church of Fayetteville recently reported a new Intermediate C. E. Society there. Now comes a report of a Senior society and a Junior one. The Seniors are conducting an "auto race" to stimulate attendance at the Sunday church services and the mid-week prayer meeting. They have organized into a "Booster Club" to "boost" the pastor, S. School, C. E., and everything connected with the church. They gave a special program in the Sunday School on North Carolina Day and sent ten dollars for Synod's Home Missions. They have also taken one hundred dollars of Building and Loan stock for their new Sunday School building.

A "Mamie Gene Cole" Junior Endeavor Society has recently been organized in the Delgado Presbyterian Church, near Wilmington. This name was given in honor of Miss Cole, Dixie Junior superintendent, who has been doing such fine work in this line. This society started out with 39 active members, quite a goodly number for any Junior worker to handle.

Three Endeavorers from Wilmington went recently to Bolton and organized a Junior society in the Presbyterian Church. There are 25 members, and Miss Elsie Troy is superintendent.

Four North Carolina Juniors have recently been added to the Honor Roll of those completely memorizing and quoting the First Year Graded Junior Endeavor Memory Work: Mary Vick and Elizabeth Renniker, from the First Presbyterian C. E. Society, at Wilmington, and Violet Dunn and Melba Ridenhour, from the Tenth Avenue Presbyterian C. E. Society, at Charlotte.

The West Avenue Presbyterian Senior Society of Gastonia has a copy of the Dixie Endeavorer in every home, and writes that more subscriptions are to come. This society also has a copy of the Christian Endeavor World in every Endeavor home.

The Highland Presbyterian Senior Endeavorers of Fayetteville adopted a needy family for Christmas and gave them a real Christmas. The gifts ranged from toys, fruits, etc., for the children, to a suit of clothes for the father. This society put on a Christmas pageant, a social for their members who had been away at school, and a Church Loyalty campaign.

Watch for the news story on the Davidson Young People's Conference, June 12-19!

Church News

ARMENIAN RELIEF

Received for this cause:
 Rutherfordton Sunday School -----$128.30

NEWS NOTES FROM BARIUM

Mr. Groundhog evidently saw his shadow at Barium Springs, and he is doing his best to live up to his reputation by giving us a good big taste of winter weather. The thermometer stood at 24 on the office porch all day Tuesday.

The following members of the Board of Regents attended the meeting of the board at the orphanage Tuesday: Rev. R. M. Williams, Rev. J. H. Henderlite, Messrs. E. F. Murray and C. S. Clark, Mrs. J. T. French, Mrs. W. B. Ramsay, Mrs. W. R. Grey, Mrs. A. M. Fairley and Mrs. R. S. Abernethy.

Mrs. French and a friend, Mrs. Huggins, came up and spent Monday night with us.

Mrs. Abernethy spent Tuesday night with her brother, Mr. Jos. B. Johnston, and his family.

Plans are on foot to move the mechanic's, Mr. Grier's, house to the rear of Howard cottage facing on the new highway, to make room for the Baby cottage between Howard and the Sprunt infirmary. It is Mr. Johnston's plan to begin excavating for the Baby cottage just as soon as possible.

So far there are no new cases of measles, and all the sick are getting along nicely. Johnnie Britton, who has been in bed since the 11th of December, sat up in bed for about an hour yesterday for the first time. He will be out of bed in a short while if he continues to improve.

Dr. Parker, pastor of Little Joe's Church, was in the sanatorium last week and was not able to preach Sunday. We were fortunate in having Dr. Sentelle, of Davidson, preach for us. We enjoyed him very much indeed.

Mr. Johnston and family are in their new house. Mrs. Johnston and the children came over Saturday.

THE DEATH OF REV. E. H. HARDING, D.D.

When a man reaches the ripe old age of 90 years and 4 months, leaving behind him a record of faithful service in the ministry, there is no occasion for grief, but rather for gratitude to God for such a life.

Dr. E. H. Harding died Friday, February 9th, at Davidson, N. C., at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. H. Whitaker. He was 90 years of age November 3, 1922. He was the son of the manse, his father being Rev. N. H. Harding, D.D. He was born at Oxford, N. C., and served the Church at Milton, N. C. three times. He held pastorates at the following churches: Spring Hill, '59-'62; Milton, '65-'66; Concord Church, Concord Presbytery, '67-'70; Milton, stated supply, '71-'74; Second Church, Charlotte, N. C., '75-'81; Sharon and Augusta Churches, Ebenezer Presbytery, '82-'84; Graham, N. C., '85-'90; Farmville, Va., '90-'92; stated supply of same church, 1903; stated supply, Milton, N. C.

Dr. Harding was chaplain in the Confederate army, and was a prisoner of war at its close.

We have known Dr. Harding over 30 years, and the more we were thrown with him, the more we admired his sweet, Christian spirit, his accurate scholarship, and his love of the Latin poets.

When the Synod of North Carolina met in Charlotte in 1911, he was one of the two ministers who conducted the communion services. We have never forgotten the rapt expression on his face, as he pictured himself in his old age, standing on the dividing line between two worlds. One could almost catch the reflection of the glories of the other world shining in his face. Such lives are a heritage of the Church, and should be an incentive to those of us who are in the thick of the fight, that we may leave behind us such a testimony to the power of grace.

NORTH CAROLINA

Mount Airy—This church is very much interested in the fact that one of her sons, Mr. J. H. Carter, has sold out his business and gone to Union Seminary at Richmond, preparatory to entering the Gospel ministry. Mr. Carter felt the call to the ministry while in college, and after receiving his degree at Davidson spent some time at Union Seminary. On account of his health he was unable to complete the course. After his recovery he went into business, and has been an active layman in the church. For several years he has been a ruling elder. We feel sure that his friends will share with us the pleasure in knowing that he has decided to return to the seminary and will soon enter the active ministry of the Church.

Church in the Pines, Laurel Hill, Rev. Charles R. Bailey, pastor. A meeting of eight days' length recently closed in this church. Dr. William Black, of Charlotte, Synodical evangelist, was the preacher. He preached the Gospel simply and forcibly. Under the leadership of Mr. Andrew Burr the singing became an important part of the services. God's blessing rested upon all and there were a number of visible results. The membership of the church was revived. Men led in public prayer who had never done so before. Women led prayer meetings who had never led in prayer. Many made beginnings in personal work. There were 55 cards signed, evidencing a desire for a better life. Twenty-seven have already joined this and a neighboring Presbyterian Church. The neighbor Methodist Church has received 11. A substantial offering was made for Synodical Home Missions.

Besides a Men's and a Women's Missionary Society this church has five Children's and Young People's Societies. It has one candidate for the ministry and one student volunteer, both in active preparation. Nearly ten per cent of the membership of the church have been steadily engaged in active work in mission Sunday Schools.

Wilmington—Delgado Church—Our church has just received a wonderful blessing under the preaching of Rev. Leonard Gill, one of the general evangelists of our Synod.

Brother Gill came to us on January 25th and preached until February 4th. The Church of the Covenant, which had just given us a piano as a Christmas present, very generously "took care" of all the expenses of the meeting, so that our entire offering went to Synod's Home Missions, $67.30.

As this is a mill church and most of our people are at work during the day, we had only one service and that service at night, except on Sundays, when Mr. Gill spoke three times.

It was the most wonderful meeting Delgado has had, certainly in a very long time. Mr. W. K. Brown, from the Immanuel Church led the singing. The people filled the house, on two nights, to overflowing, singing the Gospel songs.

Not only by their presence and singing did the people show that they were interested, but several heads of families pledged themselves to erect family altars. There were over 60 professions of faith in Christ, 41 of these united with the Delgado Church, four to other Presbyterian churches, and several to other churches of other denominations.

We know of no man who more faithfully, fearlessly, and forcefully preaches God's truth, and we thank God for sending brother Gill to us.

N. N. Fleming, Jr., Pastor.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Columbia—Rev. Dr. R. C. Reed, of the Columbia Seminary and associate editor of the Presbyterian Standard, left on Monday last for Toronto, Canada. He is to preach at Princeton on February 18th.

Columbia—Rev. B. Frank Yandell, a senior in the Columbia Theological Seminary, Monday night announced that he would accept a call to the pastorate of the Rose Hill Presbyterian Church which was extended to him unanimously. Mr. Yandell will fill the vacancy caused by the resignation several months ago by Rev. E. S. Campbell. Mr. Yandell is a native of Charlotte, N. C., and has been a student in the Columbia Seminary for three years.

Marion—The opening services of the Presbyterian evangelistic program were held in the Presbyterian Church here Sunday morning, conducted by Dr. W. H. Miley, distinguished evangelist and Furman Betts, singer. Dr. Miley preached a very interesting and forceful sermon and Mr. Betts sang two delightful solos. Dr. Miley preached in Marion several years ago, at which time he created a favorable impression among the people of the community.

Dillon—Rev. John McSween, of Timmonsville, has under consideration a call to the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church of Dillon. He will, however, not render a decision until after March 1st.

Mr. McSween was a pastor of the church here several years ago, and he endeared himself to every denomination and every walk in life. From here he went to the army, where he served as a chaplain in the Thirtieth division. After the war he became pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Rowland, N. C., which he later resigned to give his attention to his father, John McSween, Sr., of Timmonsville, who was in bad health, and who died recently. Mr. McSween has just returned to his home in Timmonsville from a visit here and to Rowland, N. C.

Columbia—One of the most remarkable programs heard in Columbia, as given by Columbia artists, in many a moon was that at the First Presbyterian Church Monday night, given by Lynwood Williamson and Maurice Mattison and an augmented choir of some of Columbia's best voices.

The program was given as an introduction of the new pipe organ of the church. Mr. Williamson, who has been a leading musician of the city for several years, had a part in supervising the installation of the organ, and it was appropriate that he should handle the instrument for its introduction to the public. Mr. Williamson is to leave Columbia soon for Greensboro, and the recital was also in the nature of his farewell.

Mr. Williamson handled the organ in a masterful way. The numbers were beautiful and seldom before has Columbia been favored with such splendid music.

Union Church—Rev. W. H. Miley, D.D., and his singer, Mr. W. Furman Betts, recently conducted a meeting of eight days duration for Rev. W. I. Sinnott at Union Church. Interest that increased to the close was manifested. As a visible result there were 52 persons that signed loyalty pledges, 86 renewed their consecration, and 11 were added by confessing Christ to the full fellowship of the church, eight baptized children and three that received baptism in confessing Christ.

For about ten and one-third years Union has been joined in a pastoral group with Central and Lake City churches, but the Lake City church having rown from 37 to 84 members it was judged wise for it to have a pastor for all his time. Union and central therefore decided to divide between themselves the time given before this to Lake City, thus turning two pastoral charges of the group instead of one.

APPALACHIA

Hendersonville—Rev. L. T. Wilds, D.D., of Lexington, N. C., has been called to Hendersonville, and has signified his acceptance of the call.

Banner Elk, N. C.—In a press dispatch sent out from Johnson City, Tenn., announcing the death of Rev. Edgar Tufts on January 6th, the statement was made that "Mr. Tufts had access to unlimited money" in connection with his work at Banner Elk, N. C. This erroneous statement seems to have been copied in practically every paper, church and secular, carrying the news of his death, and is easily calculated to do injustice to the memory of that Godly man, as well as to the perpetuation of the great work which he founded.

Aside from a modest home, the entire earthly fortune left by Mr. Tufts would not more than equal the six months' income of the fairly good business man of today. It only became known a few weeks prior to his death that he had never taken, in all these years, any salary whatever for his services to the Lees-McRae Institute (although he was fully authorized to do so) and depended for his support on the salary paid by one small church and two mission points. It is true that by a marvelous faith in God, abundantly rewarded, Mr. Tufts did build up his wonderful institution of Christian education and Orphans' home without ever having at any time contracted a debt, and now hands down this splendid plant valued at some $250,000 all free of debt and with a moderate amount to apply on the completion of the building program begun by him. There is urgent need right now of replenishing the fund for bedding and clothing the 54 orphans in the home, and there will be large need for funds during the next school year which begins in April. Some months before Mr. Tufts' death his son Edgar decided, in the face of several attractive offers, to take up the same work his father had founded and carried on for so many years. Thus, in the providence of God, Edgar Tufts still carries on this noble work. It is hoped that the Church and friends will rally to his support as of old.

GEORGIA

Atlanta, North Avenue—From the Church News clip the following extract from a letter from anamori, the "Moody of Japan." This church contributed to his work. He wrote as follows: "Last year I conducted a country-wide evangelistic campaign, covering the whole of Japan and her dependents, and preached to over 75,000 people, and had the joy of seeing about 20,000 people decide for Christ. It was a wonderful campaign. I spent 12 days, only resting eight days during the campaign. You see how hard a campaign it was."

KENTUCKY

Louisville—The Highland Presbyterian Church on recent Sunday, after a strong appeal by the pastor, Rev. P. H. Pleune, gave more than $1,700 to the dear East Relief. This church in the campaign for the Presbyterian Educational Movement exceeded by several thousand its quota of $40,000.

OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma City—The pageant, "Together Shall They Sing," was presented at Central Presbyterian church, Oklahoma City, on Christmas Eve, with the following persons: Messrs. A. N. Leecraft, B. M. Travis, Olney Robinson, Floyd Maytubby, William Coley, John Stewart, and Mrs. Crawford Bennett, Misses Sue Kenyon, Cecil and Fern Rosengren and Frances Stewart representing the leading characters, assisted by groups from the Beginners and Primary departments of Sunday School and the choir, under the direction of Mrs. A. J. Coley and Mrs. John Stewart. The front of the church and platform were beautifully decorated in white and green (with lighted candles, a manger in the foreground and a "Star in the East" making a suggestive decoration for the theme of the pageant. The shaded lighting of the church, with the soft, reverent music as the different characters walked down the aisle, and the earnestness and appeal of the portrayal of the characters by those taking part, made the service most beautiful and impressive.

Mrs. J. P. Stewart.
1528 W. 28th St., Oklahoma City, Okla.

TENNESSEE

Memphis—Idlewild Presbyterian Church is enjoying a season of preaching by Dr. Dunbar H. Ogden, of Mobile. Following this meeting the congregation will begin a campaign to raise the sum of $150,000 for the erection of a new Church and Sunday school building. The total cost of the new equipment exclusive of the lot will be $250,000. Rev. S. Waters McGill of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Louisville is assisting the pastor Rev. H. P. Neilson, D.D., in the direction of the building campaign.

TEXAS

First Church, Lancaster, Albert E. Wallace, pastor. A two weeks' evangelistic campaign was held in this church, February 7-21. Dr. A. F. Cunningham, Synodical evangelist for Texas did the preaching. He preached the Word in simplicity, purity and with power. Results: There have been some decisions for Christ, there will be more. There was also a spiritual awakening among the church membership and others. A free-will offering was made, both for the cause and the expenses of the meeting which totaled $350.

Tex.-Mex. Presbytery—Premont and Kingsville—Rev. Juan G. Cavazos writes on January 23d, "On my last visit (to Premont) we had very enthusiastic meetings, and I had the pleasure of baptizing a little child." On the same date he writes concerning Kingsville: "Here in Kingsville, on the 14th we baptized two adults and one child, and next Sunday we are to receive nine or ten more members here." On January 29th he writes: "I am sure that you will be glad to know that last night we received by profession of faith and baptism, ten new members."

Mr. Cavazos has established work in so many places that give much promise, but also require much work that it seems necessary to divide this field very soon or give him a helper.

Corpus Christi—Rev. C. C. Acevedo is very active in this field trying to meet the calls for a more extended work. He writes: "I think we now have assured a small Sunday School in Taft with some 36 pupils. . . . I am preparing to open work also in Sinton and Aransas Pass. We are going to make of Corpus this year, by the help of God, a real evangelistic center."

Houston—Rev. C. R. Womeldorf writes: "Yes, I have been rather busy. We had two weeks of most excellent services here—the last week Fernandez and de Leon helped us. Good attendance from the beginning in our hoped-for building. . . . in fact much larger than I expected first week as it was a praying week—but many unbelievers persisted in attending, but no doubt it was good for them too. We had 18 professed conversions and received and baptized 11 on Sunday. There was general rejoicing—the devil kept some from coming all the way. I think almost all was due to prayer, even what was good in the preaching. . . ."

Bay City—In the same letter Mr. W. writes: "I am just back from Bay City where I had the best services I have ever had there—held four services—received two members—ought to have been others, but two had moved away, another out of town—and the two I received left that day. . . . great church building isn't it?" This is another church that is clamoring for a resident worker and one that should be the center of a great field.

Gonzales—The Gonzales Church received recently five new members, the Austin Church ten, and a number are ready to be received at San Marcos as soon as the evangelist can spend a Sunday there.

A note of progress and encouragement throughout the entire Presbytery is the development of the Sunday School and Young People's work. The field was never whiter for the harvest than now.

R. D. Campbell.

E d u c a t i o n a l

Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.—Special addresses during the month of January have been unusually numerous and valuable. Besides the James Sprunt lectures by Dr. James I. Vance, which were listened to with eager interest by large audiences and which are already having such a brisk circulation in their printed form, and besides the work of Dr. George M. Sleeth, of Pittsburg, in Public Speaking, the students have been kept in touch with great activities of the Church by the visits and addresses of various other leaders. Dr. James I. Good, of Philadelphia, chief representative of our American Presbyterian and Reformed Churches in the investigation of conditions among our brethren on the continent of Europe, made an informing illustrated address on the work of Protestant Relief in those lands. Dr. Robert M. Wilson, of our own Korean mission, made a moving address on the work among lepers in that country. Dr. J. W. Skinner, D.D., principal of the Tex.-Mex. Industrial School at Kingsville, Tex., and Rev. J. Edwin Hemphill, of Atlanta presented two aspects of our great Home Mission work, and made earnest appeals for additional workers.

The extension work of the professors continues in various directions. Dr. Mack, besides his work with other classes in the city, has agreed to take the extension class in Hebrew Institutions and Ideals arranged for by the College of William and Mary. Dr. Mack is to deliver the Stone lectures at Princeton Theological Seminary in April.

Davidson—On Friday evening in Shearer Hall, Paul Vanorden Shaw, formerly of Sao Paulo and for many years resident in South America, delivered a highly interesting and informing lecture. The subject was "Understanding Misunderstood Latin America."

At a later hour by reason of a conflict and misunderstanding of dates the students enjoyed their usual movie exhibition, while the faculty were entertained in the second formal meeting of the new "Quadwrangless" club by Dr. Thos. W. Lingle, with an account of his visit to some of the "shrines" of Europe. Still later in the evening, too late for an attendance that its merit naturally would justify, Mr. R. R. Clark, of the Statesville Landmark spoke to the Journalist club on the "Ideals of the Profession."

The next evening basketball had the stage and floor all to itself, an occasion when the "Wildcats" had things all their way in an encounter with State College.

Then on Sunday, Rev. A. W. Crawford, superintendent of Synod's Home Missions, spoke in the Presbyterian Church at the morning service, in the afternoon before the Y. M. C. A. and then again at the evening service in Dr. Richard's pulpit. The speaker's address was filled with striking facts, interesting figures, and informing statements that held the attention of the hearer from start to finish. Noting the marvelous progress of the State along industrial, commercial, educational and other lines, he set forth with optimistic note how that Presbyterianism has for many years now grown at a percentage rate 21-2 times greater than that of the growth of the State population and how that for a period of time it has been 40 per cent, this being higher than that of the Methodist Church (31.6-10) and than that of the Baptist (37.6-10). This signal blessing of the work by the Divine Hand should be a spur and incentive to redoubled effort and to persistent work in the matter of Christianizing the State. Monday evening saw the final organization of a Chamber of Commerce with a directorate and official secretary to make it certain that prospective citizens should know the claims of Davidson as an attractive place for residing.

Tuesday evening a capacity house greeted the second presentation here of The Sultan of Sarawak, a black-face extravaganza, written and directed by Prof. E. J. Erwin. The play in composition and presentation is so meritorious in its special line that the faculty has consented to the troupe's presenting it at a number of places this spring.

But the piece de resistance on the week's program was the wonderful lecture in Shearer Hall before five or six hundred people, delivered by Dr. Grenfell, the missionary to the deep sea fishermen of Labrador. In personality, in store of incident, in picture illustrations, in thrilling experiences he presents as a lecture a combination at once unusual and attractive and informing to a degree.

Presbyterian Theological Seminary of Kentucky, Louisville—Examinations are over and the students are well into the work of the second term. Several new students entered with the beginning of this new semester.

The students of the Baptist and Presbyterian Theological seminaries of Louisville are giving, alternately, three-minute biographical studies of Old Testament characters at 4 p. m., every week day over the powerful broadcasting station of the Courier-Journal and Times. It is estimated that this station is heard by a total of two and one-half-million people, scattered all the way from Mexico City to Newfoundland, and out through the west. The characters have been carefully selected by Professors Yates and McAllister of the two seminaries, the series extending from earliest days down to the close of the Old Testament. The sketches are well prepared and a real service is being rendered.

The post-graduate courses of the seminary are being given this session by Professors Dosker and Whaling, with a number of students enrolled.

President Vander Meulen has just returned from a visit to St. Joseph, Mo., where he preached the sermon at the dedication of the beautiful new Sunday School building of the First Presbyterian Church.

The seminary has been favored with quite a number of speakers in the recent weeks, among them Rev. Wesley Baker, Richmond, Va., and Dr. Gerrit Verkuyl, Chicago, both of whom have been in Louisville in connection with the Standard Training School for Sunday School Workers, held in the Second Presbyterian Church. Dr. Thornton Whaling, of the seminary, taught one of the large classes in this school.

The officers of the Kentucky Presbyterian Educational Movement, with Mr. J. C. Norton in charge, have been moved to the west wing of the seminary building. Miss Witherspoon has entered upon her work as the new bursar and assistant librarian of the seminary.

Dr. Henry E. Dosker, professor of Church History and Missions in the seminary, is giving a series of addresses on Missions to large and interested audiences of the Women's Auxiliary of the Highland Presbyterian Church, Louisville.

Flora Macdonald College—The following have been chosen to head the "Y" organization for the coming year, Madge Hardaway, '24, Gusto, Ky., president; Helen Pope, '24, Mount Olive, vice-president; Martha Norden, '24, Hope Mills, secretary; Charlotte Garth, '24, treasurer; Charlotte McMurray, '24, Hedgesville, W. Va., undergraduate representative.

Miss Madge Hardaway has received the appointment to represent the N. C. Student Volunteer Union at the council to be held in New York during the latter part of February.

Dean Vardell on Monday night gave the second in the series of Musical Appreciation lectures, his subject being "Edvard Grieg." He was assisted by Mrs. W. B. Robeson, of the violin department.

On next Monday Miss Frances Nash, pianist, will appear in recital in the college auditorium.

On Thursday night, Dean Vardell was heard in an organ recital in the Methodist Church of Albemarle.

News of the Week

The Lausanne Conference has finally collapsed and has ended in failure. Never in the history of political conference were such amazing scenes witnessed as marked the tragic ending of the negotiations, which extended over almost three months. Practically the whole diplomatic world ran after Ismet Pasha, head of the Turkish delegation, trying to induce him to sign the treaty, but Mustapha Kemal's favorite general, with gentle smile, was immovable. He said "no" to all—Americans, British, French and Italians.

Notice was since given by the Turks that after February 7th no foreign warship exceeding 1,000 tons may enter the harbor of Smyrna and no two ships of one nation will be allowed there at the same time. The Turks warned the Allies that all such ships found in the harbor after that date would be fired upon. The French and British answered that they not only refused to withdraw from Smyrna, but they would defend themselves if attacked. Since then the British have sent heavy ships from other ports to Smyrna.

In a mine explosion at Dawson, New Mexico, 122 men were entombed. One hundred dead miners have been found.

An earthquake at Honolulu killed a dozen people. The damage at Hilo, according to a conservative estimate, was $100,000. Several days will be required to ascertain the number of lives lost and the correct amount of the damage.

Besides announcing the installation of a new accounting system that will "furnish adequate fiscal control over the state's revenues and disbursements" and "provide a means for ascertaining from one source the actual condition of the state's finances," State Auditor Baxter Durham, in his annual report to Governor Morrison, of North Carolina, formally announces a reorganization scheme for the administrative departments of the state, of which the following are outstanding proposals:

Consolidation of the 66 existing departments, boards and commissions into 16 major departments of state.

Reduction of the elective officers to the seven constitutional officers, with other nine appointed by the governor.

Abolishment of some 36 boards and commissions which now function independently and the distribution of their duties among the 16 major departments.

The co-ordination of the work of the state government and the simplification of the administrative system.

Lloyd George, former Premier of Great Britain, has announced his intention to visit this country in the fall of this year. "I am anxious to see that great country as soon as possible," he said.

The City of Charlotte Commissioners have endorsed the plan to have a civic center building, under control of the commissioners of city and county.

Withdrawal of Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, from the race with Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, for democratic leadership in the next senate, when Senator Underwood, of Alabama, the present democratic leader, will retire, has been announced by Senator Overman, of North Carolina, on behalf of his colleague.

An eleventh hour compromise in the ship line fight sent the opposition's substitute to the Morrison ship bill through the senate on the second and third readings by unanimous vote, thus ending in so far as the upper body is concerned the longest and most heated fight of the session. Governor Morrison has accepted the compromise.

The Milliken bill, which would provide that all lodges, orders or fraternities, "by whatsoever name known," be required to register with the proper state authorities full lists of membership within the state and the names of the principal officers of the state lodge and all subordinate lodges, went down to defeat.

America's "last thousand" came home from Europe, signaling the nation's closing action in its participation in the world war.

From the deck of the U. S. army transport St. Mihiel the soldiers who kept watch on the Rhine gained their first glimpse of their homeland after an absence of five years. With them were French, Belgian and German wives and children, who saw for the first time the land they are to call home.

President Harding will be a candidate for re-election in 1924 and will be nominated unanimously by the republican party, Senator Watson, of Indiana, prominent in the republican leadership, predicted in the senate during a debate with the democrats over political questions.

Sub-committee of the house judiciary No. 2 reported favorably the bill making the Volstead act supplemental to the existing state laws. The bill had rough sailing when the full committee failed to get it out with a favorable report, but when the sub-committee got on it it went through without difficulty.

EVANGELISM IN UNION AND ANSON COUNTIES, N. C., MECKLENBURG PRESBYTERY

By Rev. R. J. McIlwain

During the past summer and fall evangelistic services were held in the churches as follows:

Altan, Bethany, Walkersville, Rehoboth, Siler, Beulah, Salem, Pageland, Marshville, Peachland, Polkton, Piney Woods, Camden, Lee Park, Benton Heights, Waxhaw, Unionville, Bethlehem, Turner's School House, Six-Mile, and Banks—21 in all. More nearly all the churches in Union and Anson Counties have had meetings this year than in any year in the history of the work. Yet at no time has the prospect been so unfavorable even after the Committee on Evangelism had appointed the men. The selection of the men was most appropriate, both as to their adaptability to the work and their willingness to go, but so many were unable to hold the meeting for various yet all-sufficient reasons that much hard work was necessary to secure others to take their places. However, the men were secured and 21 meetings were held in the bounds of the Union and Anson work. The meeting at Marshville, which was held by our worthy superintendent, Evangelist Rev. M. F. Daniels, of Charlotte, and the pastor, Rev. C. E. White, was one of the first and one of the best, not only reviving the church, but having a fine effect on the town as a whole. There were 25 professions, five of which joined the Presbyterian Church. One was received by letter. At Peachland, the meeting was conducted by Rev. Wm. Black. There were 20 professions; five joined our church. Rev. J. W. Stork assisted the pastor, Rev. C. E. White, at Polkton. There were four professions, three of whom joined the Presbyterian Church. Five were also received by letter. Rev. R. C. Clontz and Pastor W. C. Underwood conducted the meeting at Siler. Attendance and interest was good. Brother Clontz always holds a good meeting and is good to go when appointed. There were four professions of faith; two united with the church; three more will come in later; five were received by letter; there were about 20 reconsecrations and one family altar erected. The meeting at Indian Trail was conducted by Rev. M. F. Daniels and Pastor Underwood the latter part of October. The attendance and interest was good. There were two professions, both of whom joined the Presbyterian Church. The Turner School House meeting was conducted by Rev. B. B. Shankel, of Monroe, and the writer. The interest in this meeting grew steadily from its beginning on the fifth Sabbath of July to its close 10 days later with blessed results. Aside from the general uplift to the whole community, there were 30 reconsecrations and 15 professions of faith; also a great desire repeatedly expressed for an organization and a church building. A petition with 20 names on it representing a number of land owners and the best people of the community was gotten up asking for the organization of a church at this place, which petition was presented to the Presbytery at Walkersville in September and granted. The organization was effected on the second Sabbath of October. One of the most remarkable results of the meeting was the reconsecration of Mr. J. C. Turner, the principal man of the community, who owns 700 acres of land in one body and has many tenants, mostly white people. He has neglected the church much of his life, and has never made any effort to conceal a purely worldly spirit and life, though always kind to those about him. During the meeting he manifested a deep interest from the start, having attended the Sabbath School services here regularly since early spring and entering into every part of the services with much evident pleasure. Being somewhat deaf, he has heard very little preaching for many years, but when he got up close in front during the meeting and came in contact with Brother Shankel's penetrating voice, which poured into his ears a veritable fusilade of words as live coals from off the altar, he discovered a new world, confessed Christ anew and declared it was the first preaching he had heard in 20 years. Since the meeting we have turned this point over to Brother Shankel, who serves it twice a month. A dozen or more people go from this point every Sabbath night to Lee Park Church, in Monroe, six miles away, to hear Brother Shankel preach. Rev. Connor Brown, Evangelist of Synod, conducted a 10 days' meeting at Lee Park Church the fourth Sabbath of June. There were a number of professions. One joined the Presbyterian Church. The attendance and interest was good, considering the busy season with the farmers. A few days' meeting followed at Benton Heights, in North Monroe, but there were no visible results. The Beulah meeting was conducted by Mr. C. N. Medlin, our candidate in charge for the summer, and the writer, who preached alternately for six days. Two things were uppermost in our minds during this meeting. The strengthening of the Sabbath School by visitation, and stirring the people by preaching, talking, and every other known manner, to begin the new church building, both of which were accomplished; also three members were added to the church on profession. The workmen are progressing nicely on the new building, and the first service will be held in it apparently before New Year's day.

Salem—In this meeting Candidate Medlin and the writer had the very valuable assistance of Rev. S. B. Lysterly, of Charlotte, and here we learned the value of having plenty of help in a meeting. It takes about three preachers to do justice to all the fried chicken and other good things these Gospel-hungry, preacher-loving county people face you with three times a day during meetings. Then, too, every house can be visited and meals taken at very many by dividing up the territory, but we did many other things which will bear fruit shortly; also many days hence. Sixteen were added to the church, 10 by examination, and six by statement. Seven children were baptized. Six family altars established. The church premises were improved and a cemetery cleared off and prepared for use, according to modern regulations. An order was also made for the election of three additional elders and three deacons who were duly elected, ordained and installed on the fourth Sabbath of September.

The Pageland meeting embraced the third Sabbath of September, being conducted by our worthy chairman, Rev. J. M. Walker, assisted by Mr. Medlin and the writer. Owing to the many interruptions, including the departure of Mr. Medlin for the seminary on the third day, the coming of the writer to take his place, and the shortness of the meeting, there were no visible results, but all enjoyed Brother Walker's good preaching and fellowship, while the writer was greatly helped as we took counsel together concerning the things of the Kingdom.

Piney Woods—Rev. J. W. Stork assisted the writer most efficiently, being a good preacher, a good mixer, and a very discreet man. This meeting, as in most cases, this summer, ran six days. There was good interest, good attendance, and nine professions of faith. Six joined the Presbyterian Church, and since we have no organization here their names were enrolled at Wadesboro. We have given this point a meeting each year for the past three years, and preach for them when we can. The demand for my time during the past year has prevented my giving it a regular appointment. Since the meeting last year five white families have moved out of this community and five colored ones have taken their places. This is a serious result of the tenant system to the county work in Anson County.

Banks Church—This church had not had a protracted meeting in many years until this year. Not being able to get anyone to assist him, the pastor, Rev. W. S. Hamiter, conducted the meeting himself, which proved a real inspiration to the congregation and community. There were a number of professions. Three united with the Presbyterian Church. The meeting at Six-Mile Creek Church was also held by Brother Hamiter, the pastor. There were 15 professions and reconsecrations.

The Rehoboth meeting was conducted by Superintendent M. F. Daniels and Pastor Q. N. Huneycutt. The meeting was well attended, the membership greatly edified and the whole community greatly stimulated and quickened by Brother Daniels' vigorous presentation of the Word. There were a number of professions and four additions to the church.

The Altan meeting was conducted by Rev. W. C. Underwood, of Indian Trail, and Pastor Q. N. Huneycutt. The people praised Brother Underwood's fine preaching and seemed greatly encouraged by the meeting. There were three additions by letter.

Bethany—Rev. Mr. Baker, of Georgia, assisted Pastor Huneycutt here. The meeting was timely, doing good service in encouraging and strengthening the membership in the midst of serious moral stress in the community.

The meeting at Bethlehem was conducted by Rev. L. W. Brown, of Philadelphia Church, and Mr. R. W. Park, the candidate in charge of the work for the summer. The attendance was excellent, and there were three additions on profession of faith, all of whom joined the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Park was assisted at Unionville by Rev. S. B. Lysterly, of Charlotte. The people greatly enjoyed Brother Lysterly's good preaching, but there were no visible results.

At Walkersville Pastor Huneycutt was assisted by his brother, Rev. J. W. Huneycutt, of Great Falls, S. C. The services were greatly enjoyed by the people.

At Waxhaw the pastor, Rev. Geo. B. Thompson, was assisted by Rev. Mr. Jefferson, of Chester, S. C., for 10 days. The church was much encouraged and strengthened. There were no visible results.

The Camden meeting was held by Rev. J. C. Hardin, of Charlotte, and Rev. J. J. Douglass, of Wadesboro. No meeting had been held at this church in two years. The writer visited the field, preached for them and made arrangements for a protracted meeting some time in August. Rev. J. C. Hardin was secured for the meeting, and a gracious season of revival was enjoyed resulting in 13 additions to the church and strengthening the membership and the Sabbath School.

There were 206 professions of faith, 110 of whom joined the Presbyterian Church, during these meetings, held chiefly by the pastors of the Presbytery.

An English barrister, who was accustomed to train students for the practice of law, and who was once asked "why he put students, from the very first, to study an analysis of the most difficult part of the sacred Scripture?" "Because," said he, "there is nothing like it, in any language, for the development of mind and character."

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

CHILDREN

LOVES THE OUT-OF-DOORS

Standard:
I am a little boy six years old. I have another who is three. We have a large yard with great oak trees in it, and sun, rain, sleet or snow, finds us out-of-doors. We don't like to stay in the house. I am going to school next Fall. I will try to be a good boy. I have aunts who live in Asheville, N. C., and I have been to see them twice, and I come and go all by myself. I want to see all of you little folks who write to the Standard. I hope we may meet some time. I want to be a smart boy and help my mama and papa.

Your friend,
Jean Bean.

Salisbury, N. C.

THE CHILD'S CATECHISM.

Standard:
I am a little girl nine years old. I go to school at White Hill; my teacher is Miss Nannie Gilchrist. I am going in the fourth grade next week. My chum is Mary Oldham. I go to Sunday School at White Hill. My teacher is Miss Clita Jackson. Mr. J. D. Cole is our superintendent. Rev. C. E. Clarke, of Carthage, is our pastor. We like him fine. I am studying the Child's Catechism. Hope my letter will be printed.

A new little friend,
Lula Agness Jackson.

Cameron, N. C.

ALL AWAIT HIS SECOND LETTER WITH INTEREST.

Standard:
I am a little boy 12 years old; am four feet and eight inches tall, weight 75 lbs., fair complexion, blue eyes, and wavy hair in my head is white. I go to school at White Hill; teacher is Miss Annie McDuffe; in the fifth grade. I go to Sunday School at White Hill. My teacher is Mrs. Enier Kelly. Her home burned January 17, 1923; it was a two story building. If my letter reaches the waste basket I will come and tell you if my hair turns black.

A friend,
Bernice Jackson.

Cameron, N. C.

TEACHER HAS NAMESAKE

Standard:
I am a little girl eight years old. Santa Claus brought me a lovely doll. My school teacher, Miss Dorthia Steele, named it after me and I put Dorthia to it after her. I like her Dorthia Gean. All of her children just loves her. She is so interested in each one of us. I have two brothers, one six, age six; the baby (Robert) age two. My parents are Presbyterians. I go to Sunday School. Dr. E. C. Murray is our good and beloved pastor. This is my first letter to the Standard. I hope you will print it. I want to surprise Miss Dorthia and daddy.

Your little friend,
Lillian Grace Pittman.

Pauls, N. C.

RICH IN NICE TEACHERS

Standard:
I am a little boy six years old. I go to school, but have been confined at home since Christmas with bronchial trouble. I don't know how many little boys love dolls. I have two, one named Cornelia, my former kindergarten teacher; the other, Tommie, after my school teacher. Miss Cornelia Steele was my kindergarten teacher, and Miss Tommie Fisher my school teacher. I love them both very much. Miss Della McGoogan is my Sunday School teacher at the Presbyterian Church; she is one of the best in the world. I also have a sweet teacher in the afternoon at the Union Sunday School; her name is Miss Dorthia Steele. I fear my letter is too long. With best wishes to the Standard and readers.

Your little friend,
Jennings Pittman.

St. Pauls, N. C.

BERTRAND'S VALENTINE

Bertrand had only been in London a few weeks. He talked such broken English that when he went to school the boys all laughed.

"We'll have lots of fun out of him," Dick Steele observed. "Oh, my! Ain't he a picture?"

Yes, he certainly was a picture—the sleeves of his old coat out at the elbows, patches on his knees, and his tattered shoes tied to his feet with strips of leather. But notwithstanding these drawbacks a true artist would have enjoyed sketching him. A sturdy little form, a pleasant face with honest blue eyes, an obedient son, a kind brother, a true, brave boy—that is a picture of Bertrand.

He did his best to master the English language, and the other boys did their best to torment him. But he tried not to mind their teasing. One day, after morning school, he saw Herbert Downing and Dick Steele looking at something which he thought very beautiful.

"Hallo!" called Herbert, "watching us, are you? Want to see what we've got?" and he displayed a wonderful silken-fringed valentine, with cherubs floating about in a blue sky, underneath which flowers bloomed and birds fluttered. "I'm going to send this to my sweetheart, Dutchie. Where's your valentine for your sweetheart?" Laughing as if his question were a good joke.

"I haf got a sweetheart—my Gretchen," said Bertrand seriously, "but I not buy de valentine—haf no money," and the boy turned away from the merry, laughing boys with a misty look in his big blue eyes.

On the way home Dick and Herbert, with two other boys, stopped to look at a shop window in which were displayed valentines of all kinds.

"I say," said Dick, "let's hunt up a comic valentine to send him tomorrow, a ragged boy bowing down to a ragged girl."

"Good! so we will," assented Herbert. The valentine was bought—a ludicrous thing—and stored away in the coat pocket of Herbert until morning should come.

But the boy for whom it was intended did not arrive at school, much to Herbert's and Dick's regret. They found out from one of the scholars where he lived, and after school they raced out to the dingy old tenement. A sweet-faced, crippled girl opened the door in answer to their rap.

"We'd like to see Bertrand," they said. "Come in," she said, politely, "mine brudder is ill."

They stepped within and stood mute and motionless at the scene before them. A sick woman was lying on a cot looking very pale and weary. A young woman, with one arm in a sling, seemed to be waiting upon her. And Bertrand sat before a smouldering fire with bandaged throat and head.

"I'd get up if I could," he said, "but my head feels as if 'twould split when I move. You're good to come and see me. Please sit down."

The boys felt as if they were anything but "good." But they found their voices. "What's the matter?" asked Herbert.

"I haf taken cold some way," and he shivered.

"Tisn't very warm in here, is it?" asked Dick, wondering why the folks did not stir up the fire this bitter day.

"No, 'tisn't very warm," Bertrand said.

"We can't have it any warmer," put in the little crippled girl. "We're out of coal."

"Hush, Gretchen!" and the boy's face flushed.

The boys had heard enough and seen enough. In another moment they were out of doors. Their eyes looked rather red and misty. "I believe there never was a meaner fellow than I've been," said Herbert.

"Unless I am," added Dick.

"And the poor little chap got that cold going without an overcoat!"

"And Gretchen isn't a sweetheart, but his own sister."

Daylight was just fading into night when a package was left at Bertrand's door. It was marked "Bertrand's Valentine." It was opened quickly. Ah! Bertrand would not take cold so easily again, for there were a warm overcoat and cap and shoes—all new; a nice suit, partly worn, a book with pictures, some delicacies and other things. But there was another rap at the door, and a man set inside the door a sack of coal and some provisions, with the sententious remark, "More to follow."

There were smiles and tears and prayers in the humble home that night, and as for Herbert and Dick, they learned a lesson worth a great deal, and in the future they never treated unkindly "one of the least of these."—The Messenger for the Children.

A VALENTINE PARTY

"Mama, please, may I have a Valentine party?" Virginia Moore asked her mother.

"Oh, I guess so, Virginia," Mrs. Moore finally answered; "but don't invite very many, for I don't feel like baking cookies for a crowd."

"Oh, I won't have many to my party," the little girl exclaimed joyfully. "I'll ask only my best friends."

And immediately she ran to the telephone to call up her friends, but it wasn't long until she was back with the news that all her friends had been invited to Susie Brown's for a Valentine party.

"Well, why aren't you going?" Mrs. Moore queried.

"I haven't been invited," Virginia answered.

"That's odd," Mrs. Moore responded. "I thought you and Susie were good friends."

"I did, too," Virginia replied; "but she's left me out for some reason."

In spite of herself Virginia felt a mist of tears come into her eyes. She went into the library and sat down in father's big chair. That was her special hiding place when she had something heavy on her mind. After awhile she went in search of her mother again, and when Mrs. Moore saw her little daughter's beaming face she knew something was coming.

"Have you changed your mind about the party?" she queried.

"No, mother," Virginia answered; "but I've changed my mind about my guests. I'm going to have my party, and I'm going to invite children to it who never saw a Valentine party. You see, there are the Smith children and the Walls and the Rays and all those children in the Charity Home. I'm going to give them a Valentine party."

Mrs. Moore was delighted and entered the plan joyously. When the news leaked out that Virginia Moore was giving a Valentine party, Susie Brown came rushing over.

"What do you mean by having a party when I invited you the first one to mine?" Susie asked.

"I have received no invitation to your party," Virginia explained.

Then began an investigation. Susie had started the invitations by her father, and when she called him up about it he discovered the one to Virginia Moore was still in his pocket.

"Now, you'll have to give up this Valentine party of yours, Virginia," Susie declared when the invitation matter was cleared up.

For a moment Virginia was silent, then a sweet smile spread over her face. "No, Susie," she said softly. "I couldn't disappoint those whom I've already invited, for you know they've never had a Valentine party."

Susie suddenly threw her arms about her little friend. "Virginia," she exclaimed, "I know what we'll do. We'll combine our parties, and we'll make it the very best we've ever had."

So they had their party together, and all the little boys and girls had a good time.—Alice L. Whitson, in Ex.

LITTLE FAITHFUL'S VALENTINE

"Valentine for you," said Harry, as he came panting into the kitchen.

"For me? Mamma or you must have sent it, then." Little Carl's eyes twinkled as though they had seen a secret.

"No," said mamma, looking at the large envelope, "we did not send it. It is postmarked at Boston."

"And came away out here to North Dakota? Please open it, mamma, and you shall have the first peep at it."

Such a bright smile as came on mamma's face when she saw the beautiful picture. Harry peeped over her shoulder with eyes that grew very round and bright.

"Turning of the Herd by Little Faithful, Aug. 15, 1913."

That was what mamma read.

Harry clapped his hands as he said, "It's you, Carl, on Old Captain, the pony, turning the sheep into the pasture."

It was the prettiest little painting he had ever seen.

And how Carl's cheeks flushed with pleasure when he went to look at it.

"It must have been sent by that painter who was out here last summer," he said. "I never dreamed that she saw me."

"August 15th," read mamma again. "Do you remember about that day?"

"Should think I did. That was the time when I wanted to go to the picnic, and I didn't want to herd the sheep. But I tried hard to do as you wished. And, mamma, really and truly, I didn't see a person on the prairie. But I've felt better in my heart ever since I tried to do right."

"We've seen that," said Harry, giving him a hug. "And I'm so glad you got this Valentine, with these words of true love, from one who guessed so well what you were thinking."

Mamma and Little Faithful looked very happy.—Willis H. Sanderson, in Presbyterian Banner.

I'M NOT JUST FEBRUARY

I'm not just February,
With winds that blow
All day, and piled-up snow;
I'm Washington and Lincoln, too,
Who kept our country's flag for you!
I'm Valentine of airy grace—
With golden hearts and hearts of lace
And pretty cards that people send,
Quite as a secret, to a friend.
Though I'm short of days and small,
I'm quite a big month, after all!

—Annette Wyne.

Artist—Do you require your portrait done in oil?

Mr. Moneybags—Done in oil! What d'yer take me for—a sardine?

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

McCrea-Ogburn—At Salters Depot, S. C., on November 14, 1922, by Rev. W. I. Sinnott, Mr. Robert James McCrea and Mrs. Lottie Ogburn.

Stuart-Gatlin—At the home of the brides parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Gatlin, Raeford, N. C., January 31, 1923, by Rev. W. C. Brown, Mr. Ralph B. Stuart, of Greensboro, N. C., and Miss Arah Gatlin, of Raeford, N. C.

Smythe-Lesnesne—At Lane, S. C., on January 16, 1923, at the home of Mrs. S. W. McClary, the aunt of the bride, by Rev. W. I. Sinnott, Mr. John Smythe and Miss Mary Esther Lesnesne.

DEATHS

Steele—Mrs. Sallie Miller Steele, widow of the late Joseph N. Steele, died at the home of her brother, Joseph H. Miller, in Rock Hill, S. C., on January 19, 1923, after an illness of five months. She was a member of the Oakland Avenue Church, and the interment was in Ebenezer cemetery. She was aged 79 years.

MRS. MAGGIE D. COCKRELL

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to call from earth to Heaven, our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Maggie D. Cockrell on January 17, 1923;

Be it resolved, that

The Woman's Auxiliary of Zion Presbyterian Church has suffered a great loss and that we shall miss her interest in and sympathy with our work.

That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her loved ones, commending them to the tender Shepherd's loving care.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, one recorded in our minute book in her memory and one sent to the Presbyterian Standard for publication.

Mrs. J. A. Hope.

Mrs. A. M. Titman,

Mrs. S. M. Guy, Committee.

Lowryville, S. C.

MRS. MARTHA VICTORIA LOWRY

We, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary, of Zion Presbyterian Church, of Lowryville, S. C., do lovingly pay this tribute of respect to the memory of our friend and co-worker, Mrs. Martha Victoria Lowry, whom God called to Heaven January 1923.

Be it resolved:

First: That we point with pride to her record as a member of this organization; her hearty co-operation; her devotion to her church.

Second: We call on each member of this Auxiliary to emulate the humbleness of her spirit; the cleanliness of her speech; the purity of her thoughts; the Christlikeness of her character.

Third: That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy and assure them that we share with them the sorrow of her death. We will miss the sunshine and the kindly ways she possessed.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be placed in our minutes, a copy sent to the family, and a copy be sent to the church paper.

Mrs. C. B. Abell,

Mrs. T. M. Darby,

Mrs. Geo. J. Steele, Committee.

DR. ALFRED J. MORRISON

Many hearts will be saddened by the announcement of the death of "Alf Morrison," as he was affectionately called by his family and friends. He died of influenza on the morning of January 22d, and was later laid to rest in the family plot at Hampden-Sidney beside his distinguished grandfather.

Dr. Morrison had a heritage of Christian faith and liberal culture. On both sides he was descended from men of God and scholars. On his mother's side he was the grandson of Dr. J. M. P. Atkinson, who was for many years the honored and beloved president of Hampden-Sidney College. On his father's side he was the grandson of Dr. Robert Hall Morrison, the founder and first president of Davidson College. His father, a younger brother of Mrs. Stonewall Jackson, who had in early manhood turned aside from the practice of law to preach the Gospel, died at the early age of 27, after only one year in the ministry, lamented by all who knew him.

Dr. Morrison made a brilliant record as a student at college, then broadened his culture by travel and study elsewhere, and was elected to a professorship at Hampden-Sidney. He accepted it but it soon became evident that he had not fully found himself. His gifts were not so much for teaching as for investigation and authorship, and after a while he resigned his professorship and devoted himself entirely to research work and literary production.

The quantity as well as the quality of his output was amazing. He was only 46 years old at the time of his death but he had to his credit an astonishing amount of careful literary work. He edited in the most minute and scholarly fashion, with introductions and notes, such works as John Davis' "Travels of Four Years and a Half in the United States of America during 1798, 1799, 1800, 1801 and 1802," a book of 439 pages; The District of Columbia in the 18th Century, as described by the earliest travellers; Richard Parkinson's Statement in regard to George Washington; Schoepf's Travels in the Confederation; "Travels in Virginia in Revolutionary Times," (138 pages); and "Six Addresses on the State of Letters and Science in Virginia," (55 pages).

He rendered a specially valuable service by the great work he did on the history and records of Hampden Sidney College, of which he had an unrivalled knowledge. In 1912 he published in a volume of 186 pages "Hampden-Sidney College—Calendar of Board Minutes 1776-1876," and in 1921 College of Hampden-Sidney; Dictionary of Biography, 1776-1825." In addition, he has been for many years a frequent contributor to the Virginia Magazine of History and the William and Mary Quarterly.

Of his own original and independent work in book form may be mentioned "Halifax County, Virginia, a Handbook"—of which a competent judge has said "it was one of the best county hand-books written for the different counties of Virginia and distributed at the Jamestown Exposition," and "East by West, Essays in Transporation" (177 pages), 1917. But his great work, on which he was engaged at the time of his death and which is left unfinished, was the third volume of the new and elaborate history of Virginia, the other two volumes of which are written by Dr. Philip Alexander Bruce and Dr. Lyon G. Tyler. Dr. Morrison's work would have covered the period from the beginning of the War Between the States to the present time. He had already prepared the material to 1883.

Dr. H. R. McIlwaine, State Librarian, of Virginia, to whom I am indebted for much of the foregoing information, says, "Dr. Morrison was specially interested in education and agriculture. He knew more about those two subjects as far as they concerned Southside Virginia than any man of my acquaintance. In addition, his knowledge of other subjects was very wide."

It will be seen therefore that his death is a great loss to the college, to the State, to letters, and especially to the department of historical research. But even more deeply is felt the personal loss suffered by his friends and loved ones. Many, many hearts will go out in loving sympathy to his sorely bereaved mother.

W. W. Moore,

Union Theological Seminary,
Richmond, Va.

Story and Incident

MYRTLE MEDIATES

Lydia Lion Roberts, in C. E. World

"Whew!" said Myrtle Winship, sitting up suddenly in bed, "this has got to stop! An auto ride this afternoon with Dick, a dinner this evening with Larry, tennis in the morning with Dick, dinner with Larry, and an auto party in the afternoon with Larry's friends. Then comes the exhibition, the community fair, and I have half promised to go with Dick on the sailing-party Saturday."

She shook her head doubtfully as she thought over the coming engagements, and frowned thoughtfully. "I seem to see myself all the rest of my life going through an endless chain of events with first Dick, tall and full of pep, and then with Larry, broad and full of fun. How am I ever going to really know either of them well enough to marry if I only meet them when we're 'all dressed up, and somewhere to go,' all the time? How do I know what Dick would do if the water in the kitchen sink froze after we were married, or what Larry would say if I burned the biscuits? I wonder how Dick would act if he had been sick in bed and it rained all the week, or what Larry would do if I had a cold, and my nose got red and my eyes closed up, and he had to get the breakfast."

She laughed and blushed a little as she tried to picture three meals a day opposite either Dick or Larry. "All I know now," she continued her earnest meditations, tracing the flower pattern in the silk puff with one slender pink finger, "is the way they act when we're going somewhere; but I don't expect to spend life jiggling from one place to another. Married life must have rainy days and frozen pipes and snuffy colds, and I should like to get an idea who would come out best in the wear and tear of every-day life. I can't always have my hair waved and my nails pink and my dress stylish and immaculate. I'll probably get my house-dress dirty by spilling things on it, and black my nose when I black the stove, and lose my temper when I burn my fingers. Dick and Larry are both lovely to me now—but" she nodded wisely to the blue-eyed, brown-haired girl in the mirror—"you see, now isn't all of life. It looks to me as if I was going to marry one of those young men, and they are both splendid to go somewhere with—but the question before the mirror is: Which one is the best to stay some where with?"

Myrtle leaned back against the pillows, and yawned wearily. "I need rest," she sighed; "this care-free life is killing me. I thought teaching school was hard work, but it is nothing compared to being courted in the summer-time. Yes, a rest of long quiet hours, a few good books, a jar of spice-cookies, and a summer rain! Hum!"—she sat up again more alertly—"not such a bad idea. Aunt Minnie must be lonesome, too. Let me see; the train goes at twelve, and is ten now. I'll call Cousin May up stairs, and tell her why I'm going and with a roguish smile on her piquant face she bounded out of bed and hurried to dress.

Late that afternoon, when Richard Ben called, Cousin May explained why Myrtle could not keep her engagement. "Myrtle decided she ought to spend the rest of her summer vacation with her aunt in the country," she said pleasantly to the astonished young men. "Oh, yes, she left her dress for you."

The same message was repeated Lawrence Howard that evening, and the same thought flashed through both young men's minds, and the same feeling of gratitude arose that their vacations were not yet over.

Myrtle was sitting on a big stone beside the brook, idly throwing pebbles into the water the next day, when she looked up and saw Dick and Larry coming toward her.

"Only one train a day," smiled Larry, as he greeted her gayly; "so both took it. We thought we needed the country air to brace us up for work again."

"It's great here," added Dick, glancing at the big trees and tumbling brook. "I feel better already," and he looked pointedly at Myrtle.

"Sit down and get rested," invited Myrtle. "See the little cottage there? That is where I am staying with Aunt Minnie."

In the drowsy stillness of the summer afternoon the yellow cottage on the opposite bank of the brook curled among the flowering bushes and shading trees in a most contented fashion.

"It's pretty," said Dick carelessly, while Larry took out a pencil and a scrap of paper, and began to draw. "What is there to do around here?" asked Dick briskly. "Any tennis, auto parties, or gay times?"

"Yes," smiled Myrtle brightly; "pick vegetables in the morning, fix them for dinner on the shady porch; then after dinner we take a nap or read; then before supper play croquet; and in the evening sing and talk on the front porch."

"How do you stand so much excitement?" bantered Dick. "But really Myrtle, what is there to do, or what do you go to?"

"You don't," replied Myrtle; "just stay."

"She is right," assented Larry, intent on his drawing. "I lived in

Let Us Give Our People the Facts

We Can Raise Our Annual Benevolent Budget of $4,750,000 if All Our People KNOW ALL THE FACTS

1. They must know fully the needs included in the budget—local and Assembly.
2. They must know fully their own record. Many do not.
3. They must know what Jesus has to say about Property and Money.

Our Committee has devised a simple, and perhaps imperfect form for use in each congregation, through which to give the people a record of their own church for the year closing, and a goal for the following year.

OUR CHURCH GOALS

FOR CURRENT YEAR ENDING MARCH 31ST
 A Ballot, for use in each local Church that the congregation may vote on what it will attempt. The Pastor should read out the figures for each item in the first year column. The use of this is suggested on Sunday before the Canvass.

		GOALS
		Year Ending	Year Beginning
New Members	On Confession
	On Certificate
Homes Having Family Worship
Tithers
Weekly Subscribers	To Current Expense
	To Benevolence
Study Classes	Home Missions
	Foreign Missions
Attendance	Morning Worship
	Evening Worship
	Mid-week Service
	Sunday School
New Members	Woman's Auxiliary
	Sunday School
	Young People's Societies
Budgets	Local Church
	Benevolence
Stewardship Study Classes
Volunteers	For Home Mission Service
	For Foreign Mission Service
Subscribers	Church Papers
	Missionary Survey

Issued by The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee
 410 Times Bldg., Chattanooga, Tenn.

It is given herewith in reduced size for illustration. We suggest its use as follows:

The Pastor or someone else gathers the information called for in the first column, for the year now closing. He distributes these blanks, which we furnish in quantities, to every member of the congregation. He calls out the figures he has prepared for the first column and asks that they be written by each individual in his or her copy as they are called out. Then each member has a record of what has been done. Many have never seen it or heard it read before. Now comes the vote on what they will attempt for the coming year, especially in the item of "Budgets." Let them know what Presbytery asks of them for benevolences. Make an appeal for as much to be spent on benevolences, at least, as the Church spends on itself. Then ask all who will vote to undertake the goal set, to hold up their hand, or stand up, or turn in the ballot with a check mark opposite the budget item.

It is Good Religious Sense and Psychology too to Give our People a Chance at Self-Expression. If an Apportionment made by Presbytery has been ignored, resented, or declined, then let such a Church express in a formal way what it will do, and then its goal will be for them something of a moral obligation to the Causes it should support.

This blank form is not especially recommended for the churches that accept their apportionments and meet them, although many pastors of such churches have said that they expect to use this blank. But it is intended for that large number of churches to which an apportionment of a Presbytery means absolutely nothing.

Write or wire for these blanks. They can be designated as "Number 27."

WE HAVE A GREAT RECORD AS A CHURCH

We are near the top of the list in percapita giving in this country. It is doubtful if any denomination is accomplishing more on less overhead than is our own Church. Our entire "overhead" on all Assembly Causes, including the expense budget of the Stewardship Committee and the Woman's Auxiliary is 9.8 per cent. Our increase in professions of faith is well near the top among all denominations. We have a vigorous Missionary Program at Home and Abroad. We are growing, and our people ought to know what their Church needs and what will be done with the budget.

OUR PEOPLE ARE CAPABLE OF LARGER DEVELOPMENT

A great many of our people are by no means giving what they should to the benevolences of their Church. Moreover, the average Presbyterian will do his duty when it is made plain to him. He must be saved from a comparison with others and helped to measure his duty in handling his property and money by what God wants. Here the tithe enters. And more are ready to take up tithing than many of us suspect. Our Committee is ready to help any pastor organize a Tither's League in his church, and then the need for blank forms like this will largely vanish. In the meantime let us give them facts.

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

(Write our Committee for an improved blank to aid in balancing your local church budget. Let us make the first Sunday of March Pay-Up Sunday, and square accounts.)

place like this when I was a tadpole, before the autos came; and the best thing to do is to carry around a pencil and a knife and a book. You can whittle, sketch, or read."

"Auntie hasn't any car," said Myrtle, "and the neighbors who own one are away at present. Really, though, it seems good to me to be away from them for a while. I hope you boys won't be bored if you stay a few days here."

"With you here? I should say not!" gallantly exclaimed Dick "I'm going to stay this week and next right here, or as near here as I can get."

6%

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

BOILS Old Sores, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1820 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

Church Furniture
WORK OF THE HIGHEST QUALITY
AT REASONABLE PRICES
Write for Catalogue
BUDDE & WEIS MFG. CO.
JACKSON, TENNESSEE

GOOD POSITIONS

Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete our commercial and stenographic courses.

Our aim this season is to enroll a very large number of such students who can be trained for high and responsible positions.

Won't you be one to enroll? A postal address to us will bring you our catalog. Write for it.

DRAUGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE
Knoxville, Tenn.

LEES McRAE INSTITUTE

An industrial school for girls, in the mountains of North Carolina.

Session of 1923 begins April 12th, closes December 4th.

FOR CATALOGUE AND INFORMATION WRITE

Edgar Tufts, Jr.,
Banner Elk, N. C.

PANSY PLANTS

Pure White, 30c doz., $2 per 100.
Pure Black, 30c doz., $2 per 100.
Royal Mixture, 40c doz., $2.75 per 100.
Exhibition Mixture, 50c doz., $3.50 per 100.

Plant out any time between now and May 1st, but the sooner the better.

We specialize on the pansy and our mode of packing will carry it any distance in good condition.

All Postpaid.

BLANDING'S DRUG STORE
FOUNTAIN INN, S. C.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY

Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923
Charlotte, N. C.

Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.

For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to

J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

"The people up the road take summer boarders," said Myrtle.

"I'm going to interview them now," said Larry, rising and handing Myrtle his drawing.

"I didn't know you could sketch," she said in surprise; "you have caught just the comfortable, peaceful look of Auntie's cottage."

In the later hours of the afternoon the young folks explored the woods near by, where Myrtle gathered flowers and ferns to decorate the cottage.

"Let's rest under this big oak," she suggested finally. "I wish we had brought something to read aloud. Haven't either of you anything to read?"

"I have a time-table," jested Dick, searching through his pockets.

"What, reading that so soon?" teased Myrtle. "If you think this is dull, just wait till it rains."

Dick grinned at her teasing, and stretched lazily among the ferns. Larry slowly and methodically went through his pockets, and with a satisfied air at last produced some booklets.

"I've had them for several months," he said; "and I knew some day I'd stop in one place long enough to read them. Take your choice; there's a business magazine, a couple of Emerson's essays, and some clippings I've received at various times."

"Read them all," commanded Myrtle, while Dick sighed and tried to go to sleep.

Several games of croquet were played after supper, and then Myrtle sent the men away. "I am really resting," she declared firmly.

"And early to bed and early to rise makes Myrtle's cheeks pink, and brightens her eyes," quoted Larry with a bow.

"Say, the country air has gone to your head," scoffed Dick.

"No, to my heart," murmured Larry with a sly twinkle.

The next day it rained, and early in the morning both Dick and Larry appeared and begged Myrtle to take pity on them.

"Absolutely nothing to do at our place," groaned Dick; "over here I can look at you, anyway."

"I'm helping in the kitchen," suggested Myrtle.

"So am I," stated Larry, taking off his coat.

"All right, then; Aunt Minnie and I can keep you busy. Larry, you can string these beans; and, Dick, you peel the potatoes. If you boys are going to stay to dinner, you may as well earn it."

"Oh, thunder!" ejaculated Dick a moment later. "I cut my finger! How do you peel these blamed things? Give me something easy to do. Whew, but it's hot here! Myrtle, do wipe the flour off your nose."

"How are you getting along, Larry?" asked Myrtle as she went to Dick's rescue.

"Having a lovely time," drawled Larry, wiping the perspiration from his face; "the beans are almost strangled."

"Now if you boys will pump some water, put wood on the fire, help me wipe the dishes, and fix the peas, then turn the freezer for me, we can get through early, and have a rest, and read in the parlor," planned Myrtle briskly.

"Some dizzy life," commented Dick as he obediently struggled with his tasks.

The next day it rained again, and Myrtle put the men through about the same program. She caught Dick

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from

Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va.

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works

R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor CHARLOTTE, N. C. W. 7th St. and Southern Railway

Oldest Largest Best

Phone 281

Significant Religious Books
"Religious Book Week"

March 4 to 10, 1923

The time for selecting and buying strong, helpful religious literature. Below we have listed a few of the later books from the great thinkers of the day along religious lines.

Being a Preacher—By Jas. I. Vance,

D.D. The James Sprunt Lectures for 1923 -----$1.25

Within the Gateways of the Far East—By Chas. R. Erdman, D.D. A remarkable record of recent travels in China, Japan, Korea, Etc. -----$1.25

The Possibilities of Prayer—By E. M. Bounds, D.D. Deals with the place and significance prayer has in the life of the true believer -----$1.25

God—Our Contemporary—By J. H. Jowett, D.D. Dr. Jowett says: "God, in Christ Jesus, is our great contemporary." A new volume of sermons -----$1.50

Lord, Teach Us to Pray—By Alexander Whyte, D.D. Twenty-three great sermons on Prayer -----$2.00

The Victory Over Victory—By J. A. Hutton, D.D. A new volume of sermons -----$1.75

Jesus As Judged By His Enemies—By J. H. Snowden, D.D. A study of the criticisms and attacks made on Jesus by His enemies -----$1.75

Our Own Important Books

Revised Book of Church Order, with 1922 Amendments -----$

Confession of Faith, new edition, with Revised Book of Church Order and 1922 Amendments -----$

Presbyterianism—Its Principles and Practice—By S. L. Morris, D.D. Paper, $.50; Cloth -----$

The Church at Work. A complete statement of the organization, history, and operation of the Assembly's agencies, paper, $.25— cloth -----$

What is the Kingdom of God?—By C. Reed, D.D. A sane, illuminating discussion of this great subject, paper, $.50; cloth -----$

Needed Counsel for New Christians—By S. M. Glasgow, D.D. Just a booklet for sessions to present converts as they join the church -----$

The Dream of Pilate's Wife—By H. Woods, D.D. A drama in one act and three scenes. "Deserves rank with the best literature." "Startling originality" -----$

Women of the Bible—By Rev. Harriet Boehme. Six strikingly original sketches of leading women characters of the Old Testament -----$

The Road Without a Detour—By R. Peter H. Pleune. A book of delightful short sermons to children -----$1

Send Orders to

Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Virginia

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

erves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service. Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
100 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

ARE GLADIOLUS AND DAHLIA ROOTS

A mixture of gorgeous blooming Gladiolus, 100 for $3, or 30 for $1. Also a great surprise mixture, 100 for $2, or 40 for $1.

Also choice collection of Dahlia roots, 10 for $1. All postpaid.

R. J. GIBBINS
Mt Holly, New Jersey

ART GLASS
for Churches and Residences
Memorial Windows
Catalog and Special Designs free on request
F. J. COOLEGE & SONS
ATLANTA, Ga.

Carolina School Supply Co.

119 Brevard Court, Charlotte, N. C.
Distributors for the American Seating Company in the Carolinas. High Grade School Desks and Auditorium Chairs. Desks, Blackboards, Crayon, Erasers, Etc., carried in stock in our Charlotte Warehouse.

Catalogue Upon Request
George W. Hart—W. C. Ariail—John. L. Harris

FOR GIFTS OF Watches, Jewelry or Silverware
Write
JAMES ALLAN & CO.
THE JEWELERS
185 King St. Charleston, S. C.
67 years in business selling the best goods at the most reasonable prices
Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references
We prepay charges on all purchases

Constipation
Relieved Without the Use of Laxatives
Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe.
When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus replaces it. Try it today.

Nujol
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

making horrible faces at the vegetables behind her back, and he kept begging her to get through and find something decent to do. Larry whistled his way serenely along, congratulating himself on possessing only one burned finger and two cut ones.

The next morning Myrtle looked at the persistent summer rainfall with a quiet chuckle. "Nature approves of my idea," she murmured. "I wonder what today will prove."

"Myrtle," said Larry later in the morning, as he sat in the kitchen contentedly stringing beans again, "are there any houses for sale around here? If one had a small flivver, he could fliv forth to work every day by getting up before six in the morning. The country air and peaceful evenings and refreshing week-ends would be worth it. I think if I could find a cottage in as ideal a location as this one, I'd try to buy it, and some day—well, some day I'd get married and live in it."

"Great fishes!" exploded Dick; "you can't be serious man. Put all your spare cash in a place like this simply for the fun of getting up when the rooster lets out his unearthly yell every morning?"

"Yes, and for the fun of planting, picking, and maybe stringing my own beans," persisted Larry with a side glance at Myrtle, "and of hearing my own hens cackling and my own bees buzzing."

"You've got something buzzing all right," jeered Dick. "Do you think any girl would bury herself all the time here? I'm saving up for a neat little touring-car, and by next summer we'll go whizzing by this sleepy place, and eat up the miles all over the country. Then there'll be parties and tours and visits, and some pep to our life, I tell you!" and he glanced pointedly at the rosy-cheeked girl who was making biscuits.

"We? Did you say 'we?'" mildly inquired Larry, while Aunt Minnie with an amused look at Myrtle's crimson face slipped from the room.

"Yes, I said 'we,'" snapped Dick. "What about it?"

"Well," continued Larry, "in our little house there would be modern improvements, of course; but I should like rather quaint furnishings, a braided rug or two, a mahogany table, an open fire, with bookcases near by; and outdoors we'd have brick paths and an old-fashioned flower-garden of heartsease, cinnamon pinks, lady's-slipper, and baby's-breath," and he looked inquiringly at Myrtle.

"How cute!" scorned Dick; "what a nice time you and your grandmother will have! Now we shall have a smart little apartment in town through the winter, and in summer we'll stop at the hotels along the route. There'll always be something doing where I am; I'm no comfortable country vegetable;" and he laughed unpleasantly.

"Maybe not" conceded Larry quietly; "but, if it wasn't for the country vegetable, you would not be as comfortable as you are now, considering the quantities you have consumed daily. We shall raise country vegetables, and serve them to you when you visit us."

"Who has the right idea, Myrtle?" demanded Dick, throwing down his knife in disgust. "I'm no kitchen police, and I won't stand for this any more. Riotous games of croquet are all right for some people, and thrilling hours of reading; but come now, Myrtle; you know you liked the gay doings back in town, and you were the life of the crowd. Larry used to, until he got stuck in the mud up

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn, President. 207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C. E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

COLLECTION ENVELOPES

DUPLEX OR DOUBLE-END PRINTED-TO-ORDER ENVELOPES

Delivery Charges Not Included

White Envelopes—Size 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 in., 52 to set, printed with name of individual church, dated on both ends and packed in cartons. No order filled for less than a minimum charge of $4.00.

25 to 49 sets	19 cents per set
50 to 109 sets	17 cents per set
110 to 209 sets	16 1/2 cents per set
210 to 309 sets	16 cents per set
310 to 409 sets	14 1/2 cents per set
410 or more sets	14 cents per set

A charge of $1.00 made for each change in copy. 20 per cent discount on cash orders.

MODERN CHURCH TREASURER'S RECORD

Treasurer's Record Book ruled to keep an account with each subscriber for a year (name written but once), showing contributions for local church and benevolences at a glance.

For Both the Duplex and Single Envelop System

200 names or less	$1.50
300 names	1.75
500 names	2.25
1,000 names	3.25
Subscription cards, per 100	.50
Information Blanks, per 100	1.00
Treasurer's Statements per 100	.50
Special Day Envelopes, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Building Fund, etc. per 100	.40

"STOCK-FORM" ENVELOPES

Many churches have hesitated to introduce the use of collection envelopes on account of the cost of supplies.

To meet the needs of congregations which must practice rigid economy we have worked out a "Stock Form," or undated envelope, described below, at twelve cents per set, delivery charges extra, in any quantity wanted. Packages containing only two envelopes per month at seven cents per set, delivery extra.

CHANGES IMPOSSIBLE

The STOCK FORM envelopes are printed from a fixed, unchangeable plate, so that no changes can be made. Each package of envelopes will bear a separate number, but we cannot furnish packages bearing just the numbers you suggest. To explain, we cannot furnish each lot of twenty-five packages bearing numbers 1 to 25. We may have to send your lot numbered from 476 to 500. On one end these envelopes show all the benevolent causes for which our Assembly, Synods and Presbyteries ask the churches to make offerings, and the other end provides for the expense of the local church. Being undated, the unused packages are good for next year, so there is no waste. Samples sent free on request.

ORDER FROM
PRESBYTERIAN COMMITTEE OF PUBLICATION
Richmond, Va., Texarkana, Ark.-Tex

Old Buck Guano
Richmond

Fertilizer of Excellent Quality

Old Buck Guano Company
INCORPORATED
Richmond, Virginia

Allied with F. S. Royster Guano Co.

here," and Dick glanced savagely out of the window; "but, straight out now, which one of us has the right idea?"

Larry stopped his low whistling, and, putting down the dish of beans, he waited quietly with his dark eyes intently fixed on Myrtle's distressed face.

"Yes, Myrtle," he repeated gravely, "who has the right idea?"

Myrtle stood facing the men with her blue eyes wide and startled as she sensed the earnestness under their light questionings. Her brown hair lay in smooth coils at the back of her neck; her blue house-dress with its saucy butterfly sash matched her eyes; and the spot of flour only ornamented her dainty nose. She looked quickly from Dick with his frowning brows and handsome restless face to Larry's plain strong features; and just then the sun poured through the window, and a wave of freshened, fragrant summer air swept over them, while the little cottage waited in comfortable, peaceful content.

"It's fu-fun to go somewhere," she stammered and Dick started forward; but she stepped back, and continued bravely, "but—I—I think it's better to have a little place to—to stay and—and some one to stay with;" and with one glance into Larry's radiant, glowing eyes she fled from the room.

ABERDEEN & ROCKFISH RAILROAD

BETWEEN ABERDEEN & FAYETTEVILLE
Eastbound	Westbound
Daily Ex. Sunday	Daily Ex. Sunday
Mixed. Pass.	Pass. Mixed
No. 22. No. 38.	STATIONS No. 41. No. 21
Lv. Ar.	Lv. Ar.
7:30am 9:10am	Aberdeen 6:41pm 5:00pm
Ar:35am 10:00am	Raeferd 5:55pm 3:50pm
Lv:210pm	Raeferd Ar:2:50pm
4:00pm 11:20am	Fayetteville 4:50pm 1pm
Southbound	Northbound
Daily Ex. Sun.	Daily Ex. Sun.
Mixed	Mixed
No. 11	STATIONS No. 12
Lv. 10:30am	Raeferd Ar. 12:40pm
Ar. 11:15am	Wagram Lv. 12 noon
W. A. BLUE, General Supt., Aberdeen, N. C.

Sparkles

Tommy Spilled the Beans

Mr. Dubbleigh—Why do you bring me so much water, Tommy, I merely asked for a drink.

Tommy—~~I~~ thought you'd need more than a glassful 'cause sister said you was the driest old stick she ever knew.—Detroit Free Press.

Policeman: "Here, here! Where did you steal that rug?"

"I didn't steal it. A lady up the street give it to me and told me to beat it."—"Lend a Hand," official publication of the inmates of the Oregon Penitentiary.

"Awfully glad to see you, Mr. Jones," said the hostess. "So good of you to come. But where is your brother?"

"He was unable to come. You see, we are so busy just now that it was impossible for both of us to get away, and so we tossed up to see which of us should come."

"How nice! And you won?"

"No," replied the young man, absently, "I lost."—National Republican.

The speedometer said sixty miles an hour.

The constable said it was ninety.

The natives said it was a crime.

He said it was the life.

His friends said it with flowers.—The Monetary Times.

A little girl of five was entertaining the callers while her mother was getting ready. One of the ladies remarked to the other with a significant look, "Not very p-r-e-t-t-y," spelling the last word.

"No," said the child quickly, "but awful s-m-a-r-t."—Boston Transcript.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.
Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Buy From the Manufacturer

There is one good and sufficient reason why you should buy your Piano from the manufacturer—DIRECT RESPONSIBILITY.

STIEFF PRODUCTS

Stieff Pianos and Players
Shaw Pianos and Players
Bennett-Bretz Pianos and Players
Davies & Sons Pianos and Players
Leslie Bros. Pianos and Players

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, INC., Charlotte, N. C.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO. CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July

20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids-Chamoisettes & Silks-Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

Another Car Load of the Famous Pullman Living Room Suits Has Just Arrived

These elegant suits in the popular "Period" designs are especially attractive in addition to the service of the "secret" bed. The suit shown above in fine velour or tapestry is $235.00, delivered anywhere in North or South Carolina.

W. T. McCoy & Co.

211 South Tryon St.

Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., FEBRUARY 21, 1923

No. 8

Presbyterian Progressive Program

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS MARCH 18th

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
The Laymen's Convention—Welcome	1
The Woman's Auxiliary—Welcome	1
Take Head Unto the Doctrine	2
The Needs of the Orphans	2
An Immortal Canard	2
Korea (Poem)—By Rev. L. T. Newland	2
CONTRIBUTED—
These Are Our Dividends—By Chas. V. Vickery	3
What's in a Name?—By Rev. Plumer Smith	3
The Men of the Church—By Dr. Alfred Hume	3
Three Possible Answers—By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.	3
Son of Slave Holder and Son of His Slave Now Fellow-Members of Council	4
A Country Parson's Sunday in Chicago	4, 10
Has Your Church Ordered E. M. C. Literature?	5
The E. M. C. Calendar for Local Churches Are You Overstocked With Stewardship Literature?	5
"Publish, and Conceal Not"—By Rev. M. F. Daniels	10
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

EDITORIAL

THE LAYMEN'S CONVENTION—WELCOME

On Thursday, February 22d, one of the six great conventions of the laymen of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., will meet in this city.

The Presbyterians of Charlotte and Mecklenburg County, in connection with the Presbyterian Standard, extend a warm welcome to our brethren from every section.

This is one of the great strongholds of Presbyterianism in the United States. This Synod has 508 churches, more than any Synod within the bounds of our Assembly. Among her churches there are 17 churches numbering over 400 members and under 1,000. There are five churches with a membership of over 1,100 members, making a membership of 5,326.

Within the city of Charlotte there are 11 Presbyterian churches with a membership of over 5,000, and in the county we have the largest country church within our Assembly.

This is not only a great Presbyterian center, but it is fast becoming noted as a great convention city, and those who come are always glad to return.

It is a Sabbath keeping city, and it has the reputation of having a larger church attendance than any city in the State.

A drummer was once asked if he had ever spent much time in Charlotte. He replied, "Yes, I once spent a month there, one Sunday." What was intended as a slur has become our boast.

We welcome you because you represent the great working element of our Church, that force which was once latent, but is now one of the mighty forces of our Church. Your welcome is doubled because you bring with you the Woman's Auxiliary, a band of workers that is keeping step with you in the march of progress. Your coming to any community has always been a blessing.

You help us by kindling a new interest in the growth of the Kingdom of God, and you will awaken to a higher sense of duty to the Lord many an earnest Christian who needs to be aroused from slumber.

You will also help us by bringing speakers from other sections, from whom we hope to catch fresh enthusiasm and gain new knowledge.

When we look back to the beginning of the Laymen's Movement and the Woman's Auxiliary, and see how both have grown and what a blessing they have been to the Church, we thank God and look with new hope to the time when the Church shall indeed be "Fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."

We recall with pleasure the convention held here several years ago. There are men among us now who date their reconsecration to the influence of that convention. Today they are the mainstay of their pastors and the life of their churches. May the same blessing follow this meeting.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY—WELCOME

This is a wonderful age in which we live. In my life I have seen the tallow candle evolve into the coal oil lamp, the argand gas burner, and finally the electric light.

We have lived to see the telegraph, the steam railway, the telephone, the phonograph, the dictaphone, the bicycle, the motorcycle, the automobile, and the airplane.

As great as these wonders are, in a certain sense they are equalled by such a meeting as we are having in our city, because it would have been an impossibility 30 or 40 years ago.

The women of our Church were never idle, but they, in deference to that idea peculiar to the South, were content, like the violet, to blush unseen. They confined their church activities to the "Ladies' Aid," whose main object was to make up deficits in the pastor's salary, or to indulge in the excitement of an oyster supper or church fairs, where the "fairness" was conspicuous by its absence.

The real work of the church was confined to the preachers, with an occasional elder thrown in, with the result that our omission greatly exceeded our commission. For years we drifted along at this poor dying rate, till the Laymen's Movement began to work upon the principle that the business of the church ought to be along systematic lines as much as the business of the world. Their success suggested to some thinker that there was much latent talent and unused energy among the women.

The Ladies' Aid thus began to be evolved into the Woman's Auxiliary. Women laboring in the church was no innovation. Paul evidently made use of them. He was writing to the Philippian church, endeavoring to act as a peace-maker, because two of the female members had evidently been quarreling, a habit that has come down, not only to other women, but to men also. He begs Euodas and Syntche to be of the same mind. He evidently realized that he was on dangerous ground, arousing the indignation of the ladies over this public rebuke of two of their number, so he adds very diplomatically, "Help those women which labored with me in the gospel."

This dominant energy was harnessed by several wise women, descendants, it may be, of the wise woman of Tekoah, assisted by our good friend, Mrs. Winsborough, who has brought it to a fine degree of efficiency.

It did not have smooth sailing at first. Many feared it, lest it should grow beyond control. Then the proverbial conservatism of Presbyterians, especially those of the South, did not look with favor upon any change in our methods of work. Some of us supported the change in a half-hearted way, but with no great amount of enthusiasm. We now see the error of our way, and since the light dawned upon us, we have tried to help all we could.

Their record is without parallel, as far as we know. The report of their 10 years' work reads like a miracle. Measured by the amount of money raised, they have done wonders. In the year 1922 they gathered the enormous sum of $1,143,318, which found its way into all the various channels of church work.

They have trained women also in the knowledge of church work by means of study classes, where home and foreign work is systematically studied.

Such are the women who have come to our city. To them we extend a warm and admiring welcome. May they carry away with them as great a blessing as we are sure they will leave with us.

TAKE HEED UNTO THE DOCTRINE

If Paul were living in this day he would be in bad repute among those of this generation who think more of peace than of purity of doctrine.

If Timothy were living now and had endeavored to obey Paul by looking carefully into the doctrinal beliefs of the churches over whom he had jurisdiction, he would be hounded as a heresy hunter, and reminded that such anxiety about doctrine was not in keeping with the spirit of the gentle Jesus.

Judging from this injunction, Paul laid great stress upon a minister's private life and public belief. Twice in this one chapter he touches upon it. He says, "Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine." Then further on he says, "Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine; continue in them; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee."

Paul was called to the ministry by a special appearance of Jesus Christ. He was one born out of due time, the greatest of all the apostles. He spoke and wrote under the direct inspiration of Christ Jesus, and for centuries he has been the inspired leader of the Church.

Now in these evil days, when men are wiser than what is written, we have professors in our seminaries, eloquent preachers in our pulpits and editors of the religious press, insisting that a man's doctrine is of little moment, and that his life is everything. They pose as the prophets of peace and good will, and constantly by implication thank God that they are not as other men are, even these rigid fundamentalists. They seem to forget that though He is the Prince of Peace, Christ Himself warned men that He came, not to send peace on earth, but a sword.

Paul seemed to realize the danger of false doctrine and in more than one Epistle he urged those to whom he wrote to guard doctrinal purity.

Jude in his short Epistle teaches us that his purpose at first was to write of the common salvation, but that he found it necessary to turn from that special point and to write about false doctrine, and to urge them to contend earnestly for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. He gives as a reason for this change of purpose the fact that ungodly men had "Turned the grace of God into lasciviousness, and were denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ."

As human nature is the same everywhere and in all ages, no doubt Jude had to meet the criticisms of those irenic Christians who prized peace above purity of doctrine, and who were unable to see the need of anxiety over error, provided they could avoid a heresy trial which would disturb the peace of the Church.

Paul, Jude and the other writers in the New Testament cared nothing for expediency, and the early Church from the beginning cared more for principle than for expediency, with the result that the first centuries were devoted to heresy trials that would have vexed the righteous souls of the modern apostles of peace. Yet those trials were what gave life to the Church through subsequent ages.

We love peace, but not peace at any price. The time is rapidly approaching when there must be raised the cry, "To your tents, O Israel."

THE NEEDS OF THE ORPHANS

Though Mr. Johnston, the manager of the Barium Springs Orphanage, in another column presents a concise account of the orphans' needs, we venture to repeat his facts, if by any means this twice-told tale may reach the heart of our generous people.

The future housing needs of the boys have been made safe. A new dormitory is insured through the generosity of two members of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. P. Pearsall, of Wilmington, and Mr. C. W. Johnston, of Charlotte, have given respectively $5,000 and $10,000 for this purpose. This, reinforced by a $10,000 legacy of Miss Jennie Gilmer, will provide a commodious and comfortable home for the boys.

All children need more than a home. They have to ask, What shall I eat? and What shall I drink? and Wherewithal shall I be clothed? Those who have no parents are especially forced to ask these questions; yet we learn that the support fund this year is $10,000 less than it was last year, though there are 80 more orphans to feed and clothe.

All men, even the most hardened, have a tender feeling for the helpless orphans, and nothing unlooses their purse-strings more quickly than an appeal for these unfortunate ones. If this be true of men in general, it is especially true of children, so it was a wise conclusion of the Regents to ask that the children of the Sabbath Schools be given an opportunity monthly to devote one collection to the aid of the orphans.

We have the buildings, one of the best plants in the South, and we have the orphans in abundance, each one standing as a substitute for Christ, to receive our offerings. Now let us of our abundance give to Him through them, in order that at the end we may be found standing among those on the right hand for whom a kingdom has been prepared from the foundation of the world.

AN IMMORTAL CANARD

What the poet says is one thing and what facts prove is another. Poetry says, "Error wounded writhes with pain, and dies among his worshippers," but facts prove that some error never dies.

The old canard about ministers' sons being worse than the sons of other men and being for the most part failures in life has been exposed, times without number, yet it thus far seems to rise again.

The charge against preachers' sons is still repeated by successive generations, and the probability is that it will continue to be.

Though we realize the futility of trying to kill this error, we cannot resist the temptation of puncturing it now and then.

The latest item from the Union Theological Seminary at Richmond furnishes the sharp needle for the job. In this seminary the highest honor that can be bestowed upon a member of the graduating class is the bestowal of one of two fellowships—the Moses D. Hoge Fellowship of Graduate Study and the Charles D. Larus Fellowship

KOREA

L. T. Newland

From their mud huts they are coming,
Coming to the Lord and King;
Casting off the chains of custom,
See the gifts of love they bring.

They have heard the cross-born message,
"I will draw the world to me;"
And rejoicing in its promise,
They are hastening to be free.

For Korea long has labored,
Bent beneath a yoke of sin,
Fettered to a thousand idols,
Fears without and death within.

When a child's weak cry awakens
Love within a mother's heart;
Then the sorcerer with her magic,
Must be called to do her part.

When the age-filmed eyes are closing
And this earth fades from the sight;
Then some master of the demons
Sends a soul into the night.

On the road an old man totters,
Stops beside a devil tree;
Chants his prayer to unseen spirits;
"Make my journey blest of thee."

All the night a mother watches,
By a fevered, dying boy;
Spreads her gifts outside the gateway,
"Demons, spare, he is my joy."

Praying, crying, in soul torment,
Life a nightmare, death stark fear;
Bound to passions, slave of demons,
None to pity, none to care.

Only Christ can lift this nation,
He alone can break the chain;
That has bound them fast to evil,
By His power they live again.

Just so long as men are brothers,
And must stand before His throne;
Just so long must we His servants,
Give account of these, His own.

of Graduate Study. The Hoge Fellowship has been bestowed upon John Russell Woods, of Sing-Kiang-pu, China, and the Larus Fellowship upon Edward Guerrant Lilly, of Lexington, Ky.

Mr. Woods is the son of James B. Woods, D.D., one of our missionaries in China. He has ministerial blood on both sides. His father is a missionary and the son of Dr. Edgar Woods, for many years the pastor of our church at Charlottesville, Va., while on his mother's side he is the grandson of Dr. James P. Smith, for many years Stated Clerk of the Synod of Virginia, and now the only survivor of Stonewall Jackson's staff.

Mr. Lilly also comes from ministerial stock. His father is Dr. D. Clay Lilly, pastor at Lexington, Ky., and his grandfather on his mother's side was Dr. E. O. Guerrant, that wonderful evangelist to the mountain people, whose name is a household word among them.

If any further testimony be needed, to disprove the threadbare charge against the preachers' boys, we may add that at present in the Union Seminary, Richmond, there are 22 sons of ministers in the various classes.

Devotional

THIS ANCHOR HOLDS

(Rev. David James Burrell, D.D., LL.D.)

There is no more convincing evidence of the power of the Gospel than the dying words of those who have experienced it. Listen to these:

Richard Baxter: "I have pain, but I have peace."

Edward Payson: "The battle is fought, the victory won."

John Wesley: "The best of all is Immanuel, God with us."

Charles Wesley: "I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness."

The mother of the Wesleys: "Children, I am going; lift a song of praise."

Rutherford: "O for a well-tuned harp!"

John Fletcher: "I am like a bird escaping from its cage."

Prince Albert: "Rock of Ages, elect for me."

Dr. Cookman: "Halleluia! I am sweeping through the gates!"

Mrs. Hemans: "I hear the music of His voice."

Lady Huntington: "I am going to my Father tonight."

Philip Melancthon: "Nothing now but heaven."

John Bradford, to his fellow-martyr, "Be of good comfort, we shall sup with Christ tonight."

Edward Perronet, author of "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name": "Glory to God in the height of His divinity! Glory to God in the depth of His humanity! Glory to God in all His sufficiency! Into His hands I commit my spirit."

It would thus appear that ours is a good religion to die by, as well as to live by. God be praised for it!—Presbyterian.

AN IMPORTANT TRUST

Henry Martyn prayed that he might "take each day as an important trust for the Lord." This is the true view to take of time. Each day and each hour is a trust committed to us by God.

Every morning the Christian should ask, What is the day given me for? The question then arises, How does God wish him to spend the day? No trust is given to be wasted. The day is not to be spent in mere idleness. We are faithful to our trust, when we spend the day as God would have us to spend it—whether in manual labor, in prayer, in rest, or in presenting divine truth to the minds of others.

Happy is he who, in reviewing the day at its close, can thank God that, through grace, it has been spent in accordance with His will.

WHEN I GET BIG

"It was in thy heart to build a house for my name." One night I stood on the chapel steps with a nine-year-old boy. Work had been given his father, food and coal had been sent to his home. The old threadbare clothing which was worn by the boy and his sister had been replaced by complete outfits new and becoming. The coat transformed the boy. It warmed him to the heart. "Say," he said, "What would become of us if there wasn't no church here?" His face lighted up and he laid his newly mittened hand lovingly down on the brown stone. "When I get big," he said, looking over at his sister, "I'll build one down on — Street, where there ain't none."—Ex.

THESE ARE OUR DIVIDENDS

First-Hand Information of the Near East

By Charles V. Vickery

I have just returned from a visit with your children—boys and girls who would not be living today had not the Presbyterian Standard and other sympathetic publications given the facts to the American public who responded with the necessary funds for the rescue of these children.

I saw a thousand of them, all boys, potential leaders of a New Near East, occupying the Kaiser's Summer Palace at Corfu.

I saw another 1,400 Armenian boys at Corfu—driven out of Asia Minor—temporarily domiciled in a half-ruined, abandoned warehouse. Most of them were sleeping on the floors, but some more fortunate occupied bins like shelving against the wall, floor to roof, six deep.

I saw nearly a thousand boys recently arrived from "Pontus in Asia," now sleeping on the floors of the Zappeion Exposition Hall in Athens.

I saw 400 girls, safe from Turkish oppression, occupying the Royal Palace facing Constantinople Square in the heart of Athens.

I saw another 1,300 Armenian girls, salvaged from the orphanages of Constantinople. Some of these girls I recognized as members of a school orchestra that had played for our benefit at a reception the preceding summer, now transplanted, empty-handed, to begin life anew in a strange land.

I saw 67 of these younger girls, all of them suffering from conjunctivitis, crowded into one room 20 by 20 feet in size, a cold rain falling outside, with no other place of abode, eating, sleeping, working or playing, night or day.

I saw in another room, scarcely larger, 66 infants, most, if not all of them, under three years of age, some of them dying as a result of the weeks of exposure, under-nourishment, and hardship endured during their migration in mid-winter from the interior of Asia Minor to their temporary home in Greece.

I saw a portion of the 9,000 Armenian orphans who, by the grace of the Greek Government and people, are temporarily occupying summer hotel buildings, but for whom we absolutely must provide other shelter before the summer begins in April.

Where shall these Armenian orphans go?

I saw three ships in the Piraeus Harbor, crowded beyond capacity with over 10,000 refugees from Anatolia, who could not be disembarked from their long journey and unsanitary environment on account of inadequate quarantine accommodations.

I saw a single ship that had carried 27,000 refugees from Smyrna to safety, transporting the incredible number of 11,500 on one voyage.

I saw in Constantinople Harbor another ship, decks packed with refugees obliged to flee from their homes in Asia Minor, but having no place to land except—Greece, war-stricken, impoverished, over-populated, the one country on earth that can least afford to extend hospitality to foreign refugees.

I saw Premier Gonatas, who, in behalf of the Greek Government, had welcomed to safety on Greek soil tens of thousands of Armenian refugees in addition to a million refugees of his own race, and who said that the Greek nation could never forget the service rendered by American relief workers in saving the lives and evacuating untold thousands of refugees during and following the Smyrna disaster.

I saw in one ramshackle building in Constantinople 300 newly made orphans, whom Near East Relief workers had picked up in the streets and abandoned homes of the town of Ordu, Asia Minor.

I met in Constantinople our managing directors from the Caucasus, Syria and Palestine, reviewed with them the reports of the 25,000 Armenian orphans who are dependent upon us for their daily food in the Caucasus and of the 11,000 orphans in Syria and Palestine, more than 7,000 of whom are Armenians recently driven out from Harpoot, Caesarea, Marash, Konia (Iconium) and other areas of Paul's early missionary ministry into Syria and Palestine.

In my vision, I saw my own great, rich America, clothed in purple and fine linen, faring sumptuously every day, enjoying comforts, luxuries, wealth transcending the dreams of the ancients, surpassing anything that the world has ever known, and which no American can appreciate until he has walked through the refugee camps in the "Land of the Stalking Death."

And I saw some—yes, many—of these fortunate American citizens expressing true religion and human brotherhood through giving of their bounty to bind up the wounds of those who have been stricken and robbed by the wayside, buying bread for the hungry, clothes for the naked, and medical ministry for the sick.

And I saw in this unselfish ministry of the American philanthropists the best pledge and guarantee of international friendship, brotherhood, and good will to all men, binding the nations together in co-operation that will make war increasingly difficult, because men and women thus united come to love and not to hate one another.

Contributed

And I saw in the dim, more distant future these infant children, grown to manhood and womanhood, with the impress of American benevolence on their lives, with the lessons of forgiveness, love and unselfish service ingrained in their character.

And I saw these—your boys and girls—potential leaders of a New Near East, forgiving their enemies, serving their fellowmen, and passing on to generations yet unborn the gospel of love, good will and service which they have received and are receiving from you and other American philanthropists.

That which battleships and battalions have failed to accomplish, the magic power of love, unselfish service and world brotherhood will yet achieve.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

By Rev. Plumer Smith

To the Congo native, it means a great deal; far more than the clothes that he wears, rather does not wear. It is usually longer. The father names his child to commemorate some occurrence, which is nearly always a calamity in his life or that of his people.

"Little Chicken" was a polygamist at the time of the birth of one of his daughters. "My wives were always fussing so that I named my daughter 'The Women Are Not Sitting Quietly' as a reproach to them." The little girl, nine years old, is still dragging that name around.

"Death" is a bright little 10-year-old boy who comes to school and is learning fast. How would you like to look Death in the face every day? His father's relatives had died. Another child is named "They Have All Died."

All deaths, diseases and misfortunes come only as brought on by some witchcraft. A man at Mutoto is named "Witchcraft."

"Wealth" is the name of a girl, as her father hopes to get about 20 full-grown goats for her when she is about 14 years old, with an old flintlock thrown in. "How Many Goats?" was the wife of one of our native preachers.

Many young men thinking that they have become civilized have named themselves: "Mahm-pen-dah"—suspenders, "Kah-lah-fan-dah"—cravat. One of our native preachers named himself, "Pctelo"—the natives call kerosene "petelo"—but this man claims that he is named after the Apostle. One native is named "Chen-ge-le-sh"—English. In fact that is what we missionaries and all Americans are called.

I have known natives named, "I Am The Only One," "Two," "Three," "Four," "Five," "Six," "Seven," "Eight" was a boy who worked for us for awhile. "Mother of Thorns" is a Christian woman in our village. Her name is "Deer." A son of hers is "Thorns." Her identity has become blended into that of her son and rarely do you hear her own name. She calls me "Father of Loompoogah" (native name of my first born), since I became a father. They call me "Chengululah," which means to unravel the untruths of people—better look out.

Flu was too much for them, so they called it "Kah-too-moo-kon-kay"—"may we not ask him?" They said that if you went into a man's house, saw him sick with it, but without speaking went away again, you did not have it. But that if you went in, sat down and began, "What sickness have you?" "Where did you get it?" that you were sure to have it, so that they named it "May we not ask him?" They all did ask him, tho'.

One of our missionaries is "Younger Brother of a Loaf of Bread." I wonder if a free translation would give us "Soda Cracker?" When Mr. Stegall came out wearing large rimmed glasses, he was called "Owl." As his furlough came near and Mr. Longenecker became associated with him, he became "Hawk."

But when our Mission Treasurer came out last year, at the native caucus held to find him a name, this wisdom came forth.

In the good old days before the white man came, when we had a fight and all the spoil had been gathered together, "Che-kah-lay"—"Divider of the Spoils"—came forth and divided the spoils or booty between the warriors. Now the work of this man seems to be to sit at Luebo and receive all the barter goods and money that comes from the foreign land and divide it out among the other stations and send it to them, so that we will just name him "Che-kah-lay."

Names are usually sad, though under the influence of Christianity, there is noticeable a slight change to the brighter side of life. One of the native pastors has a daughter named "Star"—"Moo-tow-two", the name also of one of our mission stations. A native preacher has a child named "Happiness." There is a small girl at Mutoto named "Love."

Mutoto, Congo Belge, Africa.

THE MEN OF THE CHURCH

By Dr. Alfred Hume

The questionnaire survey of men's organized activities in the Southern Presbyterian Church made it abundantly evident that the Assembly's Permanent Committee on Men's Work has a job of no mean proportions on its hands. While this investigation revealed much to encourage and inspire, yet it is equally true that the Committee is confronted by conditions which seem to indicate indifference and apathy, in some quarters. It faces a situation, in many churches, at once pathetic and appalling, constituting a mute appeal for help, none the less real because unconscious or unexpressed.

In the first place, the large majority of the ministers and clerks of sessions addressed made no response whatever. Possibly, in most cases, the failure to respond meant nothing more than simple negligence. Then, too, perhaps there were those who didn't know what to say and, therefore, said nothing. The size of this class is problematical and the members of it are entitled to a good deal of respectful sympathy.

But the pathos of it is that, of the minority that did report, more than half had no organization of any kind among its men, not even a Bible class. And the churches reporting were fairly typical and representative both as to standing and territory of the entire church. The well-nigh universal complaint of lack of leadership forces the thought of sheep without a shepherd. One is all but overwhelmed by the want of information about the work of the Church and the needs of the world. Earnest souls are groping for a definite plan of work, something concrete, a program big enough to enlist the active and enthusiastic interest of red blooded men. And here and there a voice is heard declaring with sadness and yet with certainty that "the cause of Christ has not gripped the life of men, that they are practically unconscious of the great spiritual values."

Undoubtedly, the great, fundamental need among our men is for a more genuine religious experience, a more vital Christianity, a deeper spirituality. While this may not be sufficient, it is certainly the first essential. Without it, organization will avail little, if anything. What is needed is not simply machinery but motive, not push but power.

There is a brighter side to the story. The men of many churches, in their varied organizations, are doing a fine work. In no small degree and to a very encouraging extent, there is successful effort in the way of charity, education, social and religious activities, building churches, raising church funds, etc. Men are intensely interested in whatever they become thoroughly informed about and which brings visible results. They stand ready to serve whenever the need is made plain and the opportunity is afforded. Playing at church work has no attraction for real men, and it should not, but they are eagerly seeking that reality in religion which leads to a life of useful and, if need be, sacrificial service.

THREE POSSIBLE ANSWERS

By Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.

In the language of Daniel Webster, "Words lose their power, Rhetoric is vain, and all elaborate oratory contemptible," when one tries to portray what would be the blessed results of the full raising of the Progressive Program quotas. All the Church causes would share the blessing. All the Committees would shout for joy. Secretaries Melvin, Morris, Magill, McMillan, and Sweets would skip like lambs, each one singing,

"All my heart with pleasure fills

And dances with the daffodils."

As for the Foreign Mission Secretaries and Treasurers,

"Kings may be blest but they'd be glorious O'er all the ills of life victorious."

What would it mean to the Foreign Mission work if the Church would actually pay what the Assembly after careful inquiry has placed in the Progressive Program as the amount the work needs and ought to have?

1. The year's work would be paid for in full.

2. The accumulated deficit of $205,576 would be wiped out. Not a cent of debt would remain to cripple the work or cloud its future. What a new world it would be!

3. Our waiting candidates could all be sent out. How our hearts are wrung by their constant inquiry, "Can the Committee send us next summer? We simply must know in order to make our plans for the future."

Pointing to the heathen millions, the Saviour says to our young men and women, "How can they hear without a preacher?" With one voice a long line of them answer, "Here are we, Lord, trained, ready, waiting."

Pointing to these eager candidates the Master says to the Church, "How can they preach except they be sent?" To go is the young people's duty; to send is the Church's duty.

Will our Church say to these candidates, "Stay at Home?"

Will it say, "Seek service under the Board of some other church?"

Will it say, "If you give your lives, I will give the money to send and support you?"

Only these three answers are possible. What is your gift saying?

SON OF SLAVE-HOLDER AND SON OF HIS SLAVE NOW FELLOW-MEMBERS OF COUNCIL

A unique incident occurred at the recent annual meeting of the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches at Indianapolis, which excited deep interest and was a striking symbol of the growing co-operation between the white and the negro races. Dean W. T. Tillett, of Vanderbilt University, who has been a member of the council and a regular attendant upon the annual meetings of the Executive Committee almost from the beginning of the council, arose under a request for personal privilege, and addressed the chair in substantially the following words:

"Before passing from the consideration of the subject of Christian Education to the next subject on your program, I ask that I may be permitted to make a few remarks that are personal to myself and one other member of this Executive Committee who is present here this afternoon, and whose work in life, like my own, has long been that of Christian Education. I am quite sure that the relationship that exists between me and this fellow-member of the council to whom I refer is one that does not exist between any other two members of this Executive Committee; and I am equally sure that this peculiar relationship will not likely ever again be duplicated in all the future history of the Federal Council. I allude to the fact that the son of a former Southern slave-holder and the son of one who was formerly owned by him in the days of slavery are together here in this room this afternoon as fellow-members of this Federal Council and of this Executive Committee. The member of the council to whom I refer is Prof. S. G. Atkins, the founder and the president of Slater State Normal College, of Winston-Salem, N. C., one of the most useful and successful of the institutions for the education of Negroes in North Carolina.

In Slavery Days

"My father, a Methodist preacher, and my mother, were slave-holders, as most other people of their class in the South were. Servants found necessary for work about the house were owned as slaves. But my father was everywhere recognized as a deeply conscientious and truly Christian master—a thing which I suppose some people would regard as an absolute impossibility, so incompatible do they regard being a Christian and the owner of slaves. I remember distinctly how daily at the hour of family prayer, the slaves that we owned were brought into our family room, and how they sat, listening with us children to the reading of the Bible, and how they knelt with us at the family altar, and our father prayed for them just as he did for his own children. He looked after their needs and treated them always considerately and kindly. He believed that the time would come, and should come, when they would all be free; and he prayed for the coming of that day. Indeed most Southern slave-holders, as I knew them in my childhood, were far from being such odious characters as the slave-holders described in Uncle Tom's Cabin and those whose cruelties stirred the righteous soul of Whittier, and inspired those pathetic and passionate poems which in turn stirred the souls of others. And never did the sermons of my Methodist preacher father flame out in denunciation of wrong more than when he preached against cruelties and outrages perpetrated by heartless slave-owners on their helpless slaves.

Born In Slavery: Now An Educator

"Among the small number of slaves owned by my father and mother in my early childhood, the one we thought most of and trusted most and loved best was named Allen Atkins. It is that man's son, born in the midst of the Civil War, in the village of Haywood, N. C., who is here today as a member with me and you of this Executive Committee and as the honored representative of one of the churches constituting this council. He was educated at St. Augustine Normal and Collegiate Institute, at Raleigh, which is recognized as perhaps the best institution of its kind for the education of colored people that is conducted by the Episcopal Church in the South. Soon after graduating at this institute, Mr. Atkins founded the institution at Winston-Salem, now some 30 years ago, of which he has always been the head and which is now the property of the State of North Carolina.

The fact that the State should be willing to take over the property and retain Professor Atkins so long at the head of it, is the highest possible compliment to the character of the school and to the executive ability and moral worth of its president. With this bit of information concerning his father and his own achievements, I am now going to ask President Atkins to come forward and let me present him to the council."

As he came forward Dean Tillett extended his hand and said: "If thy heart is as my heart, give me thy hand." Having shaken hands, as the two stood before the audience, Dean Tillett said further:

"President Atkins, I honor the memory of my father and am proud of my descent from him; but I want to say that I also honor and revere the memory of your father, Allen Atkins. He was a good and true man; and I congratulate you both on account of your descent from so good a man and also on account of your ascent in that you have risen from the conditions of poverty and obscurity in which you were born to a large and high place of influence in your race—and this you have done not by self-seeking but by merit and by service to your race, your Church and your native State. And when I think of these conditions that you have overcome, and what you have accomplished, I feel that your achievement in life is greater than anything that I can claim to have done. If all the members of your race and mine could understand each other and feel towards each other as you and I do, there would, I think, be no race troubles between the black man and the white. It was one of my own former students, Dr. W. W. Alexander, who on yesterday spoke to the council and showed us how much he and other leaders of both races are trying to do to promote and maintain right relations between the two races. I rejoice in the fact that you and I are both now free; for the emancipation of the Negro race in this country meant also the emancipation of the white race; for as long as the incubus of slavery lasts, the slave-holders and the slave are both in bondage and both are inevitably kept back from their highest and best racial development."

Co-Workers In Christian Education

"The worth and the greatness alike of individuals and of races depend not upon the color of the skin but upon their culture, character and service to mankind; and it is your lot and mine as educators of the young men and young women of our respective races so to develop them in intelligence and moral character and capacity for efficient service that the white race and the black race shall each respect and serve the other, and both together work, in a Christian spirit and in a Christian way, to make our country and our nation great not only commercially but morally and spiritually. Your father and mine were both alike willing bond-servants of Jesus Christ while here in the flesh. They are together now in a land where both are free; and I can but think, if they look down upon us from the glory land, they rejoice to see their sons associated together in the freedom and fellowship of this council and in the work of Christian Education. Thanking the chairman for giving me time to say those words about my father and yours, and to express to you in this presence my high regard for you and the work you are doing, I pray God's blessing upon you and your people."

Prolonged applause followed these remarks as Dr. Tillett and President Atkins returned to their seats; and the applause did not cease until President Atkins was called back to the platform by the chairman and requested to say something. His remarks, which were brief and delivered with modesty, were listened to with deep interest by the audience. He spoke as follows:

"This is a gracious moment for me, and one of hopeful suggestiveness for my race. The name of Rev. John Tillett was greatly honored and revered in the humble home of my childhood; and this gracious consideration of me and of my race by his son, Dean Tillett, is in line with my feeling that it is desirable to bring out the bright spots in this matter of race relations. There are of course many dark spots, many things to discourage, but I believe in stressing the bright spots.

Progress In Race Relations

"As a colored man and citizen of North Carolina, I recall that the first appropriation made by the State legislature for a school for the special training of Negro teachers in our State was the small sum of $2,000. Our General Assembly, two years ago, appropriated nearly one million dollars for this same purpose, and we are hoping that our Legislature which is soon to assemble, will be actuated by a like spirit and make a like appropriation to carry forward the wise and liberal program now under way for the education of Negroes in North Carolina. This spirit of liberality and good feeling is naturally the fruit of the fine and gracious sentiments expressed by Dean Tillett, and such a spirit is characteristic of the noble type of Southerner which he represents. It is this phase of this whole subject which I think should be most of all stressed at this time. To think of and bring out continually more and more the bright spots rather than the dark ones will tend to make the dark spots less dark and the bright spots in our race relationships more bright and more lasting.

"I want to say in conclusion that I appreciate very much the consideration of Dean Tillett which he has manifested this day in this presence toward the son of the man who was once owned by his father."

A COUNTRY PARSON'S SUNDAY IN CHICAGO (Continued)

By Rev. Henry McLaughlin

The afternoon at 4:00 o'clock found the parson in one of the most beautiful sections of Chicago, in one of the best equipped churches in America, the Fourth Presbyterian, of which Rev. Dr. Timothy Stone is pastor.

Rodger W. Babson—There are three regular services at this church on Sunday, at 11 a. m., 4:00 p. m., and 7:30 p. m. Dr. Stone says that he hopes soon to have a fourth service at 7:00 o'clock Sunday morning, for those who cannot attend at the other hours. In the social rooms, on inquiry if Dr. Stone was to preach at the 4:00 o'clock hour, the Country Parson was disappointed to hear from a young man that a speaker from a distance was expected. His disappointment was turned into delight when it was made known that Rodger W. Babson, the world's greatest statistician, was to deliver the message of the hour. Dr. Stone, in making the introduction, stated, "There are two classes of speakers. One who speaks because he has to say something, and the other who speaks because he has something to say. It is to the latter class we delight to listen. Such is Roger W. Babson, who is a man with a real message."

It was known that Babson in his early years had been a T. B., and while his writings had always been delightful, the Country Parson was surprised to find that Babson spoke with a clear, resonant voice, revealed a vigorous personality and made a profound impression as a man tremendously in earnest. His theme was "The Basic Principle of Prosperity." He showed that it was character and that it is religion which produces character. It is useless here to quote what he said, for is not his message written in Babson's books?

The Inland Sea—At the close of the afternoon service the Parson walked to the edge of Lake Michigan. When he had seen it before it was always raging like an angry lion, but tonight it was peaceful as a sleeping lamb; it was smooth like a sea of glass. The full moon, yellow from the smoke that hung above the great metropolis, reflecting its rays on the vast inland lake, made it look like a sea of gold.

There is no loneliness like that which comes over one in a great city when all about him are strangers. The Country Parson, having found a restaurant at which to eat what the Greeks call "Deipnon," the evening meal, soon engaged a young man in conversation. The young man told of his life in the great city, of his ambitions, of his hopes, of his philosophical ideas. He had been born and reared in Chicago, and referred to his morning experience in the moving picture theatre. He said he was interested in moral questions and longed to be able to write acceptably.

He said, "Years ago I heard an aged Presbyterian minister preach and it profoundly impressed me," and further remarked, "I think the most important thing is morality. I mean by that chastity." I asked him if he had ever heard Dr. Timothy Stone. He answered, "No, but I have heard of him." Whereupon an invitation was extended to him to attend the night service.

The Christian Endeavor—The countryman and the city man were now friends and soon found their way to the social rooms of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, which were filled with young people, preparatory to the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society and the Young People's League, both of which assembled at the same hour. The Parson and his friend attended the Christian Endeavor Society, and noted the room was packed, a number were standing. A young man presided at the organ; a young man led the song service and a boy in his teen had charge of the meeting. The leader was young and unaccustomed to speaking, but showed careful preparation, and made a speech that was of great help to himself in that it gave him opportunity of expressing sentiment that fortified him for a stronger and more victorious life and suggested the same to his hearers. There were number of speeches, full of interest, and to the point. The last was from a young chap away at college, but spending the week-end with his homefolks. He told of how his connection with a Christian Endeavor Society had helped him and others to fight the Christian battle in his new environment.

The Night Service—The Country Parson had heard rumored that in the city churches the members of the Christian Endeavor left the church after their exercise were over and did not attend the preaching service. As far as could be seen, however, the whole Christian En-

(Continued on page 10)

Presbyterian Progressive Program

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS MARCH 18th

HAS YOUR CHURCH ORDERED E. M. C. LITERATURE?

It is possible that some Pastors and Congregational Secretaries have not yet ordered literature and supplies for their churches for the Every Member Canvass on March 18. The order blank sent out, for one reason or another, may not have reached all of them. To meet just this situation, the following order form, containing a complete list of classified literature, is here printed for the special benefit of those churches for whom no literature has been ordered. This order sent in will receive immediate attention.

ANNUAL CANVASS OF 1923—MARCH 18TH

ORDER FORM FOR PRINTED MATTER AND SUPPLIES FOR THE ANNUAL E. M. CANVASS

To the General Assembly's Stewardship Committee. 410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tennessee
Sirs: Please mail at once the following supplies for my church for the Annual Every Member Canvass:

P. O. Address _____ Express Address _____

For what Church? _____ In what Presbytery? _____

Date _____ Signed _____ Congregational Secretary—Pastor.

(Read Instructions Before Ordering)

Group I. Stewardship Study Books for Leaders

	QUANTITY
1. "The New Christian"—Cushman 25c (Men's Bible Classes and Cong. Sectys.)	_____
2. "The Message of Stewardship"—$1.00 Cushman, for Group Study or for Pastors	_____
3. "You and Yours"—60c Morrill (Pastors and Cong. Sectys.)	_____
4. "Christian Stewardship for Women"—15c Mrs. S. H. Askew	_____
Our Own Text Book for Women (Ready February 15)
5. "Money Talks"—$1.25 McGarrah (for Pastors)	_____
6. "Life as a Stewardship"—25c Morrill (for Young People)	_____
7. "Christian Stewardship"—40c McCaughy (Adult S. S. Classes)	_____

Group II. Pamphlets on Stewardship. No Charge

8. "Studies in Stewardship"—Dobyns	_____
9. "A Man and His Money"—Lilly	_____
10. "Sacrificial Giving"—Jowett	_____
11. "A Catechism on Stewardship"—Walkup	_____

Group III. Pamphlets on Tithing. No Charge

12. "33 Tithing Testimonials"	_____
13. "If Not the Tithe, What Then?"—A. M. Frazer	_____
14. "What We Owe and How to Pay It"	_____
15. "Does a Tithe Belong to God?"	_____
16. "How to Tithe and Why"	_____
17. "Proportionate Giving"—Robt. E. Speer	_____
18. Reasons for Not Tithing—A. M. Frazer	_____
19. The Tither's League Enrollment Card	_____
20. The Tither's League in the Local Church (for Leaders)	_____

Group IV. Working Supplies. No Charge

21. "The What and the How of the Progressive Program" (The Manual for Pastors and Officers)	_____
22. "The ABC of the Every Member Canvass"—Ready Feb. 1 (for Leaders and Canvassers)	_____
23. "How a Country Church Tripled Its Benevolent Offerings"—Ready Feb. 1	_____
24. "It Sells for Only 3 Cents—But"—Melvin (A Talk with the Man Who Canvasses)	_____
25. Duplex Envelopes (Order these from R. E. Magill, Box 1176, Richmond, Va.)	_____
26. The Annual Pledge Card for Weekly Pledge—1 for Every Member	_____
27. "Our Church Goals" (A Ballot for use in having an unenlisted or inactive church set own quota)	_____
28. "Pointers for Progressive Presbyterians" (A condensed Financial Statement of the Whole Work of the Whole Church by Synod and Presbytery—Order on basis of one to every three members (Ready Feb. 1)	_____
29. The Large Wall Chart of the Progressive Program	_____
30. "The Three Points of the P. P. P." (A Statement of Work and Scope of Our Program)	_____
31. Canvasser's Lists (for Making Canvass)	_____
32. Report Card to Presbytery's Secretary	_____
33. "Better Salaries for Ministers"—Graham	_____

Instructions

1. Please send the money for books of Group I (postage accepted.)
2. In Group II order any two for general distribution. If we run out on one we will substitute another.
3. Where you are ordering for distribution in the congregation and not for selected groups of leaders, order on the basis of about 1 to 3 or 4 of your resident membership and you will reach practically all.
4. Order enough, but do not over-order and thus waste.
5. You can now get stock Duplex envelopes very cheap. Order at once from Richmond. (See item 25.)
6. Please print out your name and address.
7. Get in your order early. We will be rushed in February.
8. We are not sending out printed matter and supplies, except as samples, unless we receive an order for same. Each order that comes in is written up and a copy sent at once to the Secretary of Stewardship in each Presbytery so that he may know what is being sent out from this office.
9. If necessary to order by telegram or letter, you may order by the serial numbers above.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S STEWARDSHIP COMMITTEE

M. E. Melvin, General Secretary

410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

THE E. M. C. CALENDAR FOR LOCAL CHURCHES

(Suggested by the Assembly's Stewardship Committee for each Church making preparation for its Canvass, March 18th).

1. Feb. 14th—First meeting of Committee to plan for Canvass March 18th, called by Pastor and Congregational Secretary.
 - (1) Consider Apportionment
 - (2) Consider Treasurers Plan.
 - (3) Appoint All Sub-Committees.
 - (A) To district territory.
 - (B) To select canvassers.
 - (C) To list and rate all members.
 - (D) Publicity Committee.
 - (E) Hospitality Committee.
 - (4) Any other matters of importance.
2. Feb. 18th—Local Organization Completed.
3. Feb. 18th—Pastor announces all plans and Committees.
4. Feb. 21st—First Prayer Meeting devoted to Stewardship.
5. Feb. 25th—First Sermon devoted to Stewardship of Prayer.
6. Feb. 28th—Second Prayer Meeting on Stewardship.
7. March 2nd—First of three follow-up letters to members by Publicity Committee on Program and Budget Facts.
8. March 4th—Second Sermon on Life as a Trust.
9. March 7th—Third Prayer Meeting on Stewardship.
10. March 7th—First Meeting of Canvassers for Training.
11. March 9th—Second follow-up letters from Publicity Committee.
12. March 11th—Third Sermon on Stewardship of Possessions.
13. March 12th to 16th—Week of Prayer for Progressive Program.
14. March 14th—Second meeting of Canvassers for Training.
15. March 16th—Third follow-up letter from Publicity Committee.
16. March 18th—Fourth Sermon—The Separated Portion (Tithe).
17. March 18th—Canvassers Set Apart, notices given, and all details announced for canvass.
18. March 18th—Canvass in afternoon.
19. March 19th-20th—Follow up and complete canvass.
20. March 25th—Announcements and Praise Service.
21. April 2nd—Mail Report to Presbytery's Secretary Stewardship on results of canvass.

The above is suggestive; modify it if necessary. But let us have the most effective canvass in 1923 our Church has ever put on. Give the people the facts; we have a great record; they will respond. Let the messages on Stewardship cover the whole field—not that of money only. Let the Prayer Meetings be turned into "Church Night" where supper is served, every member of family attending; dividing into groups to study work of the Church. A mimeographed copy of a paper on Church Night by a pastor who worked it, will be sent on request. Order supplies on Blank Order Form Now. (Printed elsewhere on this page).

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S STEWARDSHIP COMMITTEE

410 Times Building Chattanooga, Tennessee

ARE YOU OVERSTOCKED WITH STEWARDSHIP LITERATURE?

The plan now being followed for the distribution of literature by the Stewardship Committee, is receiving most favorable comment over the Church, for the reason that it places the responsibility for the amount of literature sent to a church, upon the church itself, through its pastor or congregational secretary. Order forms, copy of which is printed on this page, are sent to all pastors or congregational secretaries, with the request that they order literature in amounts to meet the actual need of membership. Orders are therefore filled on the basis of a wise and accurate calculation and a general waste of printed matter is eliminated.

However, if there are any churches overstocked with any of the Presbyterian Progressive Program literature, after efficient distribution of same to congregation, please return same to the Stewardship Office, 410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn., as there is an increasing demand for our latest stewardship literature. If requested, return postage will be refunded.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Monroe, N. C.—The week of February 11-18 has been observed as a week of prayer for Foreign Missions by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Monroe church. The women have met each afternoon and after some time spent in Bible study and prayer, they have taken up a chapter or two in the mission study book, Sunrise in Aztec Land. There has been a very good attendance and not only do we feel more interested in Mexico because we know more about it, but every woman who attended felt she received a blessing that will be lasting.

Rex, N. C.—Two years ago the Woman's Auxiliary adopted the circle plan. At the circle meetings we have Bible study and make articles for Barium, etc. We find Sunday afternoons the most convenient time for our mission study class, but will have our special program and self-denial offering the 16th. The January meeting was at the home of Mrs. J. S. Johnson, secretary, Spiritual Resources. Topic: Stewardship. The talks of Mrs. E. C. Murray, St. Pauls, N. C., on Christian Stewardship; and Miss Della McGougan, St. Pauls, N. C., on Bible Training in the Home and in the School, were an inspiration to all. During the social hour refreshments were served by the hostess. Mrs. J. M. McIver.

Interesting Speakers for Presbyterian Woman's Convention—The program for the Woman's convention to be held in Charlotte February 22d and 23d gives rich promise of being an unusually interesting one. The convention is being held by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and is third in a series of six conventions to be conducted by these women for three weeks, two each week, in six regional centers. The Woman's conventions are parallel to those arranged by the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Church, and are held at the same time and same place. The women hold separate meetings in the day sessions, and men and women hold their meetings together for the evening sessions. Many of the outstanding speakers on the Laymen's program are included on the Woman's convention program.

Prominent among them will be Rev. Wade C. Smith, of Greensboro, N. C., who will bring the Bible message; for much stress is to be laid on the spiritual side of the work, and Mr. Smith is a speaker of deep sincerity and earnestness of purpose.

Other speakers of prominence will be Rev. Henry H. Sweets, D.D., of Louisville, Ky., the eminent head of the Church's Executive Committee for Christian Education and Ministerial Relief; Rev. M. E. Melvin, secretary of the General Assembly's Stewardship Committee; Rev. T. R. Thompson, D.D., of Richmond, Va., professor in the Union Theological Seminary there and Rev. J. O. Reavis, of Nashville, Tenn., associated field and foreign secretary.

There will also be present some of the foreign missionaries of the Church, now in this country, whose stories of the progress of the Church's work are always full of deep human interest to lovers of human nature as well as to guardians of its moral welfare. Among these are Rev. H. D. McCallie, of Mokpo Korea, a worker of 15 years' experience among the people of the islands skirting Southern Korea; and Rev. Motte Martin, of Luebo, Africa, who has instituted many reforms in the governments controlling the natives of his territory.

The women were very fortunate in being able to secure Dr. J. Campbell White, of New York City to take part in their program. Dr. White is dean of the Biblical Seminary of New York, formerly known as White's Bible School. He was for years a missionary in India and was one of the founders of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

The second day of the convention will be devoted to conferences on the development of the spiritual life of the Woman's Auxiliary as well as discussions on organization and plans for the progress by the Woman's work. The latter takes the form of a Question Box conference, a method which gives any member present the privilege of asking any question on whatever phase of the work she wishes explained. Members of other denominations who have adopted the circle plan of the Auxiliary or who are interested in it will be very welcome to participate in this discussion.

Among the women speakers on that day will be Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, of St. Louis, Mo., superintendent of the Woman's Auxiliary and chairman-general of all the conventions. She has just returned from a visit of several weeks to Mexico and Western Texas and will speak of the Church's work among the Mexicans in both places. She is especially interested in the school for Mexican girls the women of the Church plan to build next year, and is a speaker of rare ability.

Mrs. F. Louise Mayes, of Greenville, S. C., who will assist Mrs. Winsborough in conducting the convention is also a speaker of unusual power. Mrs. Mayes is chairman of the Woman's Advisory Committee, president of the South Carolina Synodical, and has done notable work as a club woman in her State, having served for two terms as State regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution there.

Mrs. W. A. Turner, of Newnan, Ga., is president of the Georgia Synodical Auxiliary, and has done outstanding work in an executive capacity as president of the Atlanta Presbyterian which she built up with great skill. She has also been active in the work of the Colored Woman's Conferences.

Mrs. W. K. Armstrong has been president for some years of the Appalachia Synodical, whose work in the mountains is somewhat different from that of the other Synodicals and consequently always interesting.

Among the North Carolina women taking part in the program will be Mrs. E. F. Reid of Lenoir, Synodical president; Mrs. W. B. Ramsay, of Hickory, who was president for a number of years; Miss Margaret Rankin, of Charlotte, a Synodical secretary and Mrs. J. G. Baird, also of Charlotte, who is president of Mecklenburg Presbyterian.

Mrs. Baird is chairman of the local committee and has arranged to have the women's headquarters at the Selwyn Hotel. A large number of women of North Carolina and neighboring states are expected in attendance.

Mrs. V. P. Rosseau is chairman of literature. The literature tables will contain information on every phase of the work of the Auxiliary; pockets containing a complete set of leaflets on how to organize an Auxiliary, packets containing literature for the promotion of spiritual life, and many other leaflets to be distributed singly.

The provisional program follows. It promises to be a source of inspiration and renewed spiritual consecration that will be felt not only in the lives of those attending, but will be reflected throughout the life of the Woman's work of the Church.

Final Statement of Birthday Gifts to Miss Dowd's School—At Montreat, in July, 1922, $22,000 had been collected for the school. By October 1st, the sum had reached $25,000. This statement was sent to all the Synodical Presidents to be given out at their fall meetings.

Since that time a few more belated gifts from Auxiliaries have been sent in.

The total gift for the school is $25,457.66.

Mrs. D. A. McMillan, Treasurer, Woman's Auxiliary, Presbyterian Church, U. S., Feb. 7, 1923.

In Memory of An Immortal Love, By Mildred Welch. Dedicated to those in whose names the "Memorials" are held in the Endowment Fund of Ministerial Relief.

Warm airs blew through the palace grounds, tinkling fountains rained their silver spray, the almond showered its rosy petals down. But the Exalted One of the Palace heeded not. It was the Day of the Smiting and the Lady Arjamund lay dying. Gorgeous hangings, priceless rugs, the jewels that weighted her slender wrists and ankles meant nothing to her now. Already the wailing women waited outside and the last Shadow lengthened on her couch. Her husband and lover, the Emperor Shah Jehan knelt beside her. "Build for me," he leaned to catch her passing whisper, "the tomb by which your love shall remember me."

"The whole world shall remember," said the Emperor, and the Silence fell.

Through the long years thousands of workers toiled. Caravans traveled the desert ways and brought from dim old cities ivory and alabaster, marbles, pearls and gems uncounted. Mastercraftsmen of the East, gold and silversmiths, men skilled to carve the marble into ethereal forms of grace, from day to day they built her palace-tomb.

Till at last the workmen took their tools away and the "Taj Mahal," a shining glory, lifted its dome and pinnacles, its turrets and airy minarets into the brightness of an Agra day. Over the entrance, to shine in beauty through the long dream of the ages Shah Jehan carved the words: "In Memory of an Immortal Love."

In Memory of an Immortal Love we too build. No palace-tomb of marble tracery and lovely flowing line and name that falls like liquid music on the ear. Plain, practical, precise, the "Endowment Fund of Ministerial Relief" gives no hint in its unromantic syllables of the beauty and loveliness, of the sacrifice and memories and tears by which it is rising through the years.

In memory of a mother:

"Mother, who findest out a way
To pass the sentinels and stand
Behind my chair at close of day,
To touch me—almost—with thy hand."

In memory of a friend—"Thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women."

In memory of fathers and brothers, of pastors and teachers, of little hands folded now on baby breasts. In memory—of a little pilgrim from the Congo whose soul pearl-clear and precious is free at last from her dark and crippled body. In memory—of a soldier lad fallen in the Great War; in memory of a mother and her baby between whose graves roll five thousand miles of sea—year by year it grows, a house not made with hands.

Am I then so dull that the memory of an immortal love has no power to stir my heart? So blind, I cannot see Him who gave Himself for me? So dim of vision I cannot see He walks the common way with me? So deaf I cannot hear His footsteps along the paths of men?

Ah me, that I should be so wretched, miserable, poor and blind that I give nothing—In Memory of an Immortal Love!

For further information address Henry H. Sweets, secretary of the Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

Attention, Women Planning for Richmond Convention! Those women who are planning to attend the Woman's Convention at Richmond, Va., will please note change in registration chairmen. All registration cards are to be mailed to Mrs. Coleman Wortham, 920 Park Ave., Richmond, Va., instead of to Mr. John H. Reed as at first stated.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CHAPEL CORNER-STONE LAID

By Karl Lehmann, President Florida C. E. Union

The most interesting Christian Endeavor event the South has ever seen was the laying of the cornerstone of the Carrie F. Conrad C. E. chapel, on the campus of the Montverde School, on Christian Endeavor Day, Friday, February 2nd.

There were more than 400 Christian Endeavorers and friends present from all parts of Florida, and everything was favorable for the great occasion. It was one of those delightful Florida winter days that compare to a day in the spring in the North, bright sunshine, and birds and flowers all about, a temperature of 84 made the outdoor program most enjoyable.

State President Karl Lehmann presided at the exercises and gave the "History of the C. E. Chapel" from its inception through a visit to Montverde School in 1929, by Duncan Curry, and the speaker, to the present moment, when through the generosity of Mrs. Carrie F. Conrad and the Endeavorers of Florida, South Carolina, the All-South Committee, Tennessee, Brooklyn, N. Y., Mississippi, Louisiana, California, Arkansas, Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Connecticut, and Wisconsin, this building was made possible. The building is named for Mrs. Carrie F. Conrad, of DeLand, whose generous gifts made it possible.

Rev. James Deans, of the Oakland, Fla., Presbyterian Church, led in the opening prayer, and the Montverde Junior Endeavorers gave the Scripture reading. The singing was led by Carl Matthews, Field Secretary of the Florida and Georgia C. E. Unions.

President H. P. Carpenter, of Montverde School, gave an interesting address on the value and place of Christian Endeavor in this great educational institution.

Willis Powell, Secretary of the Lake County Chamber of Commerce, spoke of the high regard in which Christian Endeavor and the Montverde School are held in Lake County.

Marcus C. Fagg, of Jacksonville, Vice-President of the World's C. E. Union for Florida, gave a most inspiring address and told of his personal debt to Christian Endeavor. He paid a tribute to Mrs. Conrad and others responsible for the rearing of this building.

Mrs. Carrie F. Conrad, of DeLand, told in a few well chosen words why she made this building possible for Montverde School, and her love and enthusiasm for Christian Endeavor.

Duncan B. Curry, Chairman of the All-South C. E. Extension Committee, read the long list of greetings, including a fine letter from Dr. Francis E. Clark, who with Secretary Gates, each had a share in the fund for the erection of this building. Mr. Curry read a list of the contents of the box before depositing it in the stone and laying the stone in place. Among the contents were a letter from Dr. Clark, a copy of each the C. E. World, The Dixie Endeavorer, The Florida C. E. News, a list of United Society publications, a catalogue of Montverde School, a coin from the Montverde Junior C. E. Society, a C. E. topic book from China, a copy of the first C. E. pledge signed by Mrs. Conrad, pages from the original secretary's book of the Glenwood, Fla., C. E. Society, of which Mrs. Conrad was a charter member, and her name appears in the original list.

Rev. R. G. Shepherd, of Montverde, led in the closing prayer.

The building will be of fireproof construction, concrete blocks being used in the walls. It is of handsome design and arranged to include a large auditorium, a kitchen for social occasions, class rooms for C. E. Expert, Junior Expert, Mission Study, Personal Work, Teacher Training Classes, and is the first C. E. Chapel in the world on the campus of an educational institution. It will have a great influence on the lives of the hundreds of young people from all parts of Florida and the South who are educated here each year.

It was announced at the program of the cornerstone laying that Dr. C. E. Clark, the founder of the C. E. Society, could not be present because of a previous engagement, but that he would visit the school in March while in Florida.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

Tired, but happy! Yes, we are, even if that is an old expression, and we believe you would be too if you had followed several college boys around in Mooresville, N. C., today. A talk to the boys and girls of the Second Church Sunday School, a conference with the Senior Endeavor officers, and a talk to the Senior society, together with leading a Junior Endeavor Expert class at the First Church and talking to the joint Intermediate-Senior meeting there, made a full Sunday.

Such an association with young people is indeed an inspiration. The knowledge of their fine work is encouraging and the knowledge of their problems presents a challenge. We feel sure that if more of our young people would prepare themselves for leadership in young people's work, they would find great joy in sharing the encouragements and discouragements that come to our Church's young folks.

We have a fine set of reports this week. That Lumber-Bridge doll social must have been interesting. We wish we could show you the picture we received of the score and a half of dolls which were sitting on someone's front steps "just like they were somebody," waiting to be sent to Barium. The contrast between the situation of the boys in the McKinnon Intermediate Society and that of the boys they visited in the Jackson school is so striking that we scarcely need to comment on the value of directing in right directions the energies of the boys—and the girls too—in our churches. Our older young people can help splendidly in this.

Let us be much in prayer on Thursday and Friday and the other days for the missionary conferences convened at Charlotte and elsewhere in our Assembly. Pray for the speakers and the hearers and for the great causes presented, and for your young people that they may go out to help gather the harvest.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

FEBRUARY 25, 1923

THE PARABLE OF THE POUNDS

GOLDEN TEXT—He that is faithful in a very little is faithful in much. Luke 16:10.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

- 11. And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear.
- 12. He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return.
- 13. And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come.
- 14. But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us.
- 15. And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.
- 16. Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.
- 17. And he said unto him, Well, thou good servant; because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.
- 18. And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds.
- 19. And he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities.
- 20. And another came, saying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin.
- 21. For I feared thee, because thou art an austere man; thou takest up that thou laydest not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow.
- 22. And he saith unto him, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewst that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow.
- 23. Wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury?
- 24. And he said unto them that stood by, Take from him his pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds.
- 25. (And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.)
- 26. For I say unto you, That unto every one which hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him.

The Parable of the Pounds was designed to rebuke and warn the unbelieving Jews and their rulers. It was also adapted to encourage and comfort Christ's true and tried disciples. The Nobleman represents Christ Himself who was about to depart and receive His mediatorial kingdom, but would return to attend to His servants. The servants of the nobleman describe Jesus' followers. The pounds represent substance or things valuable, material or spiritual, committed to Christ's disciples to be improved. Contemplating the lesson we will consider Christ Committing His Property to His Disciples to be Used for Him; His Return to Call Them to Account; The Faithful Servants and Their Reward; The Wicked Servant and His Doom.

I. Christ Committing His Property to His Servants to be Used for Him

The pounds belonged to the nobleman, and so did the servants. The valuable things intrusted to Jesus' disciples to be used are His and so are His disciples. Whatever material or spiritual gift we possess has been given us by the Lord, and we are His by creation and redemption. The apostle affirms of Christians, "Ye are not your own but have been bought with a price even with the blood of Jesus, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." What has been committed to us has been given to be used not merely for our own benefit, but for the welfare of our fellow-creatures and the Lord's glory. We violate our trust as stewards whenever we injure ourselves with our possessions, or damage our fellow-men, or fail to do them good, or neglect to glorify the Lord. "Whether we eat or drink or whatever we do, do all to the glory of God."

II. His Return to Call Servants to Account

The nobleman, having received his kingdom, returned to see what His servants had done. The Lord has received His mediatorial kingdom and will return with royal glory to take an account of His disciples. He will inquire what they have done and what they have failed to do. There will be no escape from His presence and no concealment of conduct. "He will send His angels and gather before Him all nations." God's books of remembrance will be opened. "God hath appointed a day wherein He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath appointed even Jesus Christ." How diligent and active should we be to render our account to "the Judge of quick and dead with joy and not with grief."

III. The Faithful Servants and Their Reward

In the parable some were faithful to their trust and duty. One reported that his lord's pound had gained ten pounds. He gives the lord credit for his success inasmuch as it was his lord's money he had used and he belonged to him. Another declared that his lord's pound had secured five pounds. So Christ's faithful have different measures of success in effort, for they have different degrees of capacity and diligence. But the master rewarded them for the fidelity in labor. So Christ rewards His disciples. In the parable the chief feature of the reward after the master's approval is promotion to loftier trust and service. Thus Jesus rewards His faithful disciples. He commends their fidelity, advances them to higher stations in His kingdom, and this advancement brings with it more precious gifts, larger usefulness, higher honor, and progressive glory. Those who are faithful in that which is little He will enable to show fidelity in a loftier sphere and more important matters. Blessed are Jesus' faithful servants to whom He will say, "Come up higher." He will promote them for fidelity and according to their ability shown by achievement.

IV. The Wicked Servant and His Doom

In the parable the servant is pronounced wicked who does not serve, who does nothing for his lord. He takes his pound, "wraps it up in a napkin and proposes to return it unused." He does not even transfer it to others who might employ it for his lord's honor and glory. His conduct proceeds from his unbelief as to his lord's character and from his low and false conceptions of his moral nature. He deems him "An austere man, taking up that he laid not down, and reaping that he did not sow." His wickedness was found in his distrust of his lord, false views of his character, his idleness, and total lack of service. His sentence involved the loss of his pound, and his transfer to one more capable and faithful, and his being "Cast into outer darkness, where there was weeping and gnashing of teeth."

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

THE REFUGE PSALM

- M., Feb. 26—Divine Protection: Ps. 125:1-5.
- T., Feb. 27—Deliverance: Isa. 46:3, 4, 12, 13.
- W., Feb. 28—Courage: Matt. 10:28-33.
- T., Mar. 1—Ministering Angels: Heb. 1:6-14.
- F., Mar. 2—Power From Above: Acts 28:1-6.
- S., Mar. 3—Goodness Honored: Acts 2:32-36.

Sun., Mar. 4—Topic: Lessons from the Psalms.
3. The Refuge Psalm. Ps. 91:1-16. (Consecration meeting.)

How can we constantly realize God's presence? Why should we trust God? What use did Jesus make of this Psalm?

In the times when this Psalm was written, it was customary for people to live in walled towns, and great castles and forts were built for protection against robbers and invading armies. In those days, before Christ, life and property were not respected as they are today in Christian lands, and so it was necessary for people to have some defence against their enemies. In this 91st Psalm, the writer is thinking of this custom, and he compares God to a great castle and fortress, where the soul may find refuge and protection from the evil that is in the world. Today we live in the midst of evil and sin. The devil and the temptations of the world and the flesh are continually besetting our souls, trying to make us do wrong, and seeking to destroy us forever. How glad we ought to be that God is our refuge. In the olden times, the people who lived outside the castle walls and worked their fields and vineyards, would go out to work, thinking in their hearts with gladness that if any enemies came to kill them, they could flee to the gates of the fortress, and soon be safe inside. It gave them great strength, and reduced their fears. So God will be our refuge and strength.

God Is a Refuge to Those Who Trust in Him

We must be sure to remember that God promises to be a refuge only to those who trust in Him. Those who will not believe in God and who disobey His laws need not expect to have God defend them in trouble. They have no right to His blessing. We note in verse 4 that God's truth is a shield and buckler, that is, God's truth protects us as a shield protects a soldier, and as a buckler which is a small shield, wards off darts and arrows. But we must believe in that truth to receive its benefits. So all the words of God which teach us what is right, teach us of Christ as our Saviour, Teacher and Lord, and outline for us the duties of the Christian life, must be the object of our faith and the law of our life, if we hope to receive any answer to our prayers, and the blessing of God on our labors. Those who find the secret place of prayer and duty may claim God as a refuge.

God Protects Those Who Trust Him From Manifold Dangers

To dwell in the secret place is to sit quietly, without fear or restlessness, and wait on God to watch over us, defend us, and drive away our enemies. God will defend us against many dangers. He will deliver us from those dangers that catch us unawares, as a bird is caught in a trap. Evil companions will tempt us to do wrong, as smoke, gamble, drink, waste money and time, steal, and so forth; but if we are trying to live a Christian life, God will deliver us. God has kept many of His children alive when awful plagues and pestilences killed others. He has given us the wisdom to conquer small-pox, typhoid, diphtheria and yellow fever in this Christian land, when heathen nations perish by thousands and ten thousands. God keeps war away from the lands that honor Him and worship Him aright. And many other dangers are ward off by the Lord from people who trust and obey Him.

God Confers Manifold Blessings on Those Who Trust Him

We have seen how God delivers the believer and the obedient children of God from all kinds of dangers. We are to see that He does much more than defend us. He also gives us victory over our enemies, so that we trample lions under our feet. He sends out His angels to keep us in all our ways. We recall that Satan quoted his passage to Jesus when he tempted Him. Then God gives us honor and a good name among men, a place of influence and usefulness, He answers our prayers, when we are in trouble, and comes to comfort us at once. He gives us long life. Wicked men do not usually live out half their days, but Christians have the promise of many years. But best of all, God gives us salvation from sin, and eternal life in heaven at last.

Let us make God our refuge, not sin, as lies, dishonesty and oppression. Let us follow Jesus who sought to make God's truth His shield and buckler.

N. C. YOUNG PEOPLE AND THEIR CONTRIBUTIONS

One of the recommendations made by the young people at the North Carolina Synod's Young People's Conference last June at Davidson was that the young people of the Synod contribute to what was termed "The College Fund for Barium Home." Another was that they contribute to "The Sunday School Missionary Fund."

Several years ago the young people of the Synod of North Carolina founded two scholarships of $400 each in the Student Loan Fund, to be used by Barium graduates, loans from this fund to be repaid in money in the years ahead. Four hundred dollars, however, is of course inadequate for a four-year college course. Because of this it was suggested that the young people contribute to a fund to be used for gifts to Barium graduates to help cover the necessary expenses of college life. Barium turns out some fine young people and helping these to secure college educations is a good work.

Mr. J. M. Harvey, of Wilmington, is known in North Carolina as "Our Sunday School Missionary." We are told that last year only $219.66 of his salary was contributed by the young people, and the young people are therefore urged to contribute more generally and largely to this cause.

These two items, "The College Fund for Barium Home," and "The Sunday School Missionary Fund," together make up one of the four points in the "Merit Cup Contest." Contributing to them counts 25 points in the contest.

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The Intermediate Endeavorers of the Second Presbyterian Church of Concord, N. C., held a special meeting a week before St. Valentine's Day and made valentines. These were sent to the children of Grandfather Orphanage, at Banner Elk. Mrs. J. C. Query and Miss Agnes Query are superintendents of this society.

Miss Rachel Beall, of Durham, writes us that their City Christian Endeavor Union, composed of four Presbyterian societies and one Christian Church society, observed Young People's Day on January 28th, with an attendance of over a hundred. A little Junior Endeavorer who recited "The Bible" while holding a lighted candle in one hand and a small Bible in the other, made a profound impression. Instead of a collection being taken for the Young People's work, it was taken for a Christian Church missionary. Miss Williams, in Porto Rico, the amount being $5.20.

The Junior Society of the Lumber Bridge, N. C., Presbyterian Church, recently had a doll social. For a month the Juniors brought dolls to their superintendent, then some of the older Endeavorers dressed the dolls. Following games and refreshments each Junior, doll in arm, marched around the room singing a Christian Endeavor song. The thirty-two dolls were later sent to the little girls at Barium.

A report from Hendersonville tells some interesting things about the Endeavor work. Juniors and Seniors observed "Christian Endeavor Week." The Seniors on Wednesday evening met at "Tod's Tea Tower" for a brief prayer service, then attended in a body the mid-week church prayer meeting. The society is just closing a contest in "Climbing the Missionary Ladder," five missionary books being given to each of two teams and an effort being made to get every member of each team to read all five of the books.

Two Junior Endeavorers of the First Presbyterian Church of Wilmington, Henry Nichols and Randolph Foster, joined the church on "Decision Day" of "Christian Endeavor Week," February 4th.

On January 21st several members of the Christian Endeavor Society of Burgaw, N. C., went to Rocky Point and helped organize a society there. Rev. P. L. Clark is pastor of both churches. More than a score of young people have joined the Rocky Point Society. Mr. P. G. Sutton, a graduate of Davidson College, was chosen first president, and Miss Nora Ormsby the corresponding secretary.

The Gaston County C. E. Union met in the Belmont Presbyterian Church, January 19th. This rally was attended by more than 300 members. President R. C. Long presided over the meeting and an interesting program was carried out. The Cherryville Senior C. E. carried off the banner for the best attendance. The address of the evening was made by Mr. Gady Gaston, of Gastonia.

After the meeting adjourned a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served by the Belmont C. E.'s. The Belmont society has been adjudged by many as the best senior society in the county and has been chosen to give a model Christian Endeavor prayer meeting at the April rally to be held in Gastonia. The subject of the meeting will be, "The Wise and Unwise Uses of the Lord's Day."

Church News

ARMENIAN RELIEF

Presbyterian Ministers' Association (Charlotte) -----	$15.00
Sharon Church -----	21.76
Sharon W. A. S. -----	4.00
Mrs. J. H. Smith -----	5.00

MEETING OF BOARD OF REGENTS PRESBYTERIAN ORPHANS' HOME, FEBRUARY 6, 1923, BARIUM SPRINGS, N. C.

On this very wintry day nine members of the board met at Barium Springs and after looking over the new work and hearing the report of the Thanksgiving campaign and the present standing of the Support Fund passed the following resolutions:

That the Building Committee proceed at once with the erection of a Baby Cottage; the money for which is being provided by a good member of Kings Mountain Presbytery, who doesn't want his name used.

That the Building Committee proceed at once with the erection of a Boys' Dormitory to be called the Jennie Gilmer Cottage, the money for which is being provided by the Jennie Gilmer legacy, $10,000; by Mr. P. Pearsall, of Wilmington, $5,000 and by Mr. C. W. Johnston, of Charlotte, $10,000.

That a vote of thanks be given these generous friends.

The Support Fund did not make such pleasant reading. There has been paid in on the support fund $10,000 less than on the same date last year, and that in the face of the fact that there are about eighty more children here now than then. This condition, of course, must be remedied, and the most satisfactory way, that this can be accomplished, that the board could arrive at, was to get every Sunday School in the Synod to give one collection a month to this cause.

Some of our churches already do this and their monthly checks are a Godsend to us. There is no cause that carries a stronger appeal to the younger members of the Church than the Orphans' Home, and this regular monthly offering gives all an easy way to contribute to this cause and makes for greater interest in this and all causes.

This institution is one that every Presbyterian in the State must feel proud of. Every one who visits it for the first time is amazed at the magnitude of the work and the glorious crowd of children being cared for here.

Now, with this justified pride just stir in a large spoonful of the following thought:

This year every bit of the new building is being provided for by the individual gifts of three people, and one legacy. The remodeling of the old buildings, either by individual gifts or legacy. The Church at large, is expected to support the institution only. Food, clothes, fuel, teaching, doctors, medicine, etc., and the Church, the whole 60,000 of them are not quite doing it.

Now, if you have thoroughly stirred in that thought, just taste the mixture, and Obey That Impulse.

We realize that the mail is full of giving literature, the very air is full of drives, but you don't stop feeding your family for all that. Brethren, this is your family.

The Board of Regents passed a resolution of appreciation of the work of Rev. R. W. Boyd, the first superintendent of the home, commending his zeal and the splendid work that he accomplished here and further resolving that an effort be made to erect and name a building in his honor.

It is our sincere wish that this effort will bear fruit in time for Mr. Boyd to see it and enjoy it many years before he enters into his rest.

WEEKLY NEWS NOTES FROM BARIUM

Alma Murray, one of the girls who left the home about seven years ago, was a pleasant visitor in the home the past week-end. Alma is a telephone operator in Asheville.

Teddy Lunceford also surprised us when he walked in Monday afternoon. Teddy is also in Asheville and has a good position with the North Carolina Creamery Co.

John Craig, cashier of the Savings Bank, spent the week-end with his mother in Winston-Salem.

Miss Annie Elms, of McConnellsville, Ohio, came last week to substitute at Synod Cottage during Miss Chamber's absence. She will have charge of the third floor at Rumble Hall when Miss Chambers returns.

Mrs. Weaver has recovered sufficiently to take up her work in the sewing room.

Dr. Parker was still confined to bed last Sunday. Dr. Archibald Currie, of Davidson, was with us, and gave us a very interesting and helpful talk.

CHINA CHURCH NEWS

Rev. G. P. Stevens sends us some "China News" as follows:

Recent letters from Suchowfu, China, bring good news of many accessions to the Church. Fifty-seven were taken into the Church in the city on the Sunday after Christmas. At the same service four babies were baptized, including little Helen McFadyen, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. A. McFadyen.

During the closing months of the year 1922, 28 new members were added to the Church from the country field in the Suchowfu district.

Rev. and Mrs. Locke White who have been studying the language in Nanking, have moved to Suchowfu to help in this work. At present they are living in the home of Dr. McFadyen, as there is no residence available for them until April or May, when Rev. and Mrs. F. A. Brown hope to vacate their Chinese house for the home now being built for them.

This Chinese house contains two rooms and a small bath room. Outside there is the kitchen and another room which is used for a study ordinarily. When guests arrive this is the guest room. All are built of mud, covered with grass and mud. Different from many Chinese houses, however, these rooms have wooden floors and glass windows. A family can live in this house but it is not satisfactory. It is small and cramped and entirely unhealthy in summer.

Miss Orene McIlwaine is now in Nanking, studying the language. She has been appointed by the mission to Suchowfu station and will probably take up her residence there next fall.

The station has a Ford car. It has been in use since September and is proving of great value in the country work. Drs. Grier and McFadyen use it to hold out-clinics while the men and ladies of the station are making splendid use of it in preaching and teaching in the country. Thanks for this car are due to the Bethel Church, near Staunton, Va., and to friends in Monroe, N. C., and Norfolk, Va.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Greenville—Second Church, Rev. E. P. Davis, D.D., pastor. On the second Sunday evening in February, a large congregation enjoyed a Home Mission address given by Rev. J. K. Roberts, superintendent, illustrated with stereopticon slides. Mr. Roberts' singing the "Ninety and Nine" from beautiful colored stereopticon views was both impressive and appealing.

Greenville, First Church—The State Sunday School Association held a school of methods in this church recently. The principal workers were, Prof. Palmer, Spartanburg; Dr. Tralle, New York City; Miss Cooper, Memphis, Tenn.; and Rev. J. K. Roberts, superintendent Sunday School and Young Peoples work of Enoree Presbytery. The entire program was profitable and highly enjoyed by all. We are proud of Mr. Roberts, our Presbytery's man. He knows Sunday School work; and how to put it across.

Conestee—(Reedy River) Rev. W. L. Boggs, pastor. Unusual activity continues in our church. The Sunday School is increasing in numbers; and the Christian Endeavor society has an unique contest, "The Reds and the Blues." They alternate in preparing the program. Program, attendance, taking part, new members, etc., are points of value. The Endeavorers have organized an orchestra with Thomas Stenhouse, violinist; Jack and Phillip Roberts, cornetists; William McAuley, trombone; Mrs. Pinson, pianist.

Clinton—The week of prayer was observed at the Presbyterian College of South Carolina from Wednesday, February 7th through Sunday, February 11th. Dr. Melton Clark, professor of English Bible in Columbia Seminary did the preaching, preaching twice a day during the week in the college chapel and twice on Sunday in the First Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Clarke's sermons were strong and earnest. He preached with spiritual power and effectiveness and all his sermons were greatly enjoyed by faculty and students and all others who heard him.

NORTH CAROLINA

Maxton—We learn that our "Young Preacher," Dr. H. G. Hill, has returned home from Florida. From private parties there we learn that he made a great impression wherever he went. As one expressed it, "He preached fine sermons, quoted Scripture in abundance, and rattled off quotations from the poets, ancient and modern, and showed vim and earnestness that would put many younger men to shame." He preached ten times, held prayer meetings and taught Bible classes.

Monroe—On February 11th Rev. W. B. S. Chandler occupied pulpit of Monroe church, his new pastorate, for the first time. He was greeted by a large congregation who were glad to welcome him to Monroe.

At the night service both the Methodist and the Baptist congregations united with the Presbyterians in a welcome service at which time Mr. Chandler preached a very earnest and practical sermon. The church after about a year without a pastor is glad to have Mr. Chandler and his family and are praying that he may be mightily used of God in our midst.

Flora Macdonald College—During the past week, Dr. H. C. Hammond, of St. Charles, spoke to the students and faculty at both morning and evening chapel services. Among the addresses delivered was one on "The Power of Prayer" and a discussion of the one hundred and twenty-first Psalm, the last being especially chosen as a class psalm by the Senior class.

In connection with the campaign to beautify the Spanish room, the students have purchased a victrola and Spanish records, which will be used with the study of the Spanish language.

On Monday, February 26th, the Y. W. C. A. will entertain the faculty and students at a masquerade party to be held in the rotunda.

The forty-first Branch Association was organized on February 8th at the home of Miss Jean Maxwell, in Concord, with Miss Sara Barnhardt, class of '22, the first president. A special meeting of the branch will be held on March 2d at the Jackson Training School in Concord, with members of the Senior class of the Concord High School as guests of the Alumnae.

Davidson—The Y. M. C. A. had the pleasure Sunday afternoon of hearing a forceful address by Mr. J. F. Newell, of Charlotte, prominent in the legal profession and in the political life of the State. He spoke on the need in the world today of Christian leadership.

It is interesting to note that the head of the R. O. T. C. department of the college, Major Thos. G. Hearn, is a man of positive, earnest Christian character who takes an active interest in the religious life of the campus. Sunday he addressed the Ministerial Band and was clear in his pronouncement as to the point that the Gospel ministry is the highest and the noblest of all the callings. Incidentally he gave an account of conditions in Mexico as he knew them from the Texas border and set forth the need of that country for an enlightened and consecrated leadership in the Church.

Announcement has already been made to the effect that Rev. Dr. Vander Meulen, of Louisville Seminary has accepted an invitation to deliver the baccalaureate sermon at commencement. It is agreeable news that Rev. Dr. D. N. McLaughlin, class of '88, of Norfolk, Va., will deliver the sermon before the Y. M. C. A. and it is hoped with some grounds for confidence that Hon. William Jennings Bryan will accept the invitation extended him to deliver the Annual Literary address.

Wilmington, First Church—From the bulletin we clip the following:

Our congregation responded splendidly to the appeal made from the pulpit on last Sunday morning for Near East Relief. That most worthy cause was ably presented and we are gratified at the hearty response. The total amount subscribed was approximately $3,500.

Do not forget the simultaneous conventions of the Woman's Auxiliaries and the Laymen's Associations of the two Carolinas that will be held in Charlotte February 22d and 23d. Let just as many of our people as can possibly go plan to do so. See Mr. W. E. Renneker about Pullman reservations.

The session passed the following resolution at its meeting on last Wednesday:

Whereas the children of our Church receive 1200 hours of secular education in our public schools each year as contrasted with 52 hours offered in our Church School in Christian Education and whereas the records show an average of over 90 per cent in attendance and over 95 per cent in punctuality in the schools and only 67 per cent attendance and 60 per cent punctuality in our Church School, the session of the First Presbyterian Church earnestly recommends to our Christian parents that they awake to the realization that Christian training in the Church School is certainly as important as secular education and that they more earnestly and actively co-operate with the workers in our Church School in improving the attendance, punctuality and preparation of these children and young people, and that as far as possible parents encourage their children by their own attendance and example.

ALABAMA

Mobile—Rev. W. A. Alexander, of Tennessee has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Central Church of this city.

ARKANSAS

Fordyce—The pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Rev. W. O. Davis, is planning to hold a revival meeting for about two weeks, with the closing services on Easter Sunday. He has invited Rev. Charles Haddon Nabers, of Camden to assist in these services.

Student Volunteer Convention—At the Arkansas Student Volunteer Convention held at Henderson-Brown College in February, the Southern Presbyterian Church was well represented by three of the leading speakers, Miss Charlotte Jackson, of Louisville, Ky., Mrs. H. M. Street, of Lonoake, and Dr. R. M. Wilson, of Kwangju, Korea.

Conway—Rev. R. P. Henderson, of Malden, Mo., who was recently called to the church at Conway, has announced his acceptance of the call, to the delight of the local congregation. The First Presbyterian Church of Conway has been vacant since the resignation of Rev. R. L. Jetton last fall. Mr. Henderson comes to a field with splendid prospects for much growth and development and to a work among a most responsive people.

Arkadelphia—On the second Sabbath in February, the First Presbyterian Church greatly enjoyed a visit from their former pastor, Rev. James V. Johnson, now pastor of the Manhattan Presbyterian Church of El Paso, Texas. Mr. Johnson preached two stirring sermons here during his short visit in Arkansas attending the Laymen's Convention at Little Rock.

The members of the First Presbyterian Church are delighted to know that Rev. Hugh Robertson of McGee has accepted the unanimous call recently extended him. Mr. Robertson will begin work in his new field the first Sunday in March.

Arkansas Presbyterian Educational Movement—After a conference held in Little Rock with the executive committee in charge of the Presbyterian Movement for Christian Education in Arkansas, tentative dates have been fixed for the 16 city campaigns as a part of the drive for the $400,000 to be secured. These city campaigns, under the active direction of Mr. Paul Harris, Jr., of Louisville, Ky., will begin at Jonesboro the latter part of February. On account of the Every Member Canvass, no intensive work will be done in the State during the month of March. The city campaign system will be used in the following cities with the opening for preliminary work at the date mentioned: Camden, March 20; El Dorado, March 19; Fordyce, March 31; Monticello, April 13; Dermott, April 15; Batesville, April 12; Fort Smith, April 20; Hope, April 27; Morrilton, April 28; Texarkana, May 12; Hot Springs, May 20; Pine Bluff, May 16; Warren, June 1; Helena, June 8; and Little Rock, May 21. It is planned to close the campaign in the State on June 22d.

Camden—The ladies of the First Presbyterian Church spent a day in the church recently studying Sunrise in Aztec Land under the leadership of the Woman's Auxiliary. Luncheon was served in splendid style, and special musical numbers by a number of the young ladies of the congregation featured the afternoon session. Last December the ladies used Dr. McMillan's book, Unfinished Tasks, for a study at the regular prayer meeting during the absence of the pastor from the city. Church work in all departments is progressing most encouragingly. The pastor, Rev. Charles Haddon Nabers, preached each Sunday to a congregation, many of whom are oil men attracted to Camden, made up of men from more than a dozen states. Already the church has gone over the top in her benevolent budget for the church year.

Five new members were received into the membership of the First Presbyterian Church here on last Sunday, including the heads of three new families. When the pastor, Rev. Charles Haddon Nabers, called the session to the front at the close of the sermon to receive these members, the church was so crowded that there was no room for the elders to be seated, and the session stood for the meeting.

At the annual election in the Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. S. C. Leake was elected president to succeed Mrs. J. A. McLeod, Mrs. C. H. Nabers, vice-president, Mrs. Fred P. Benson, treasurer, and Mrs. Robert A. Stacy, Jr., secretary. The Auxiliary of this church has had a most wonderful year in all lines of work. Financially the ladies have almost doubled their record for any preceding year.

FLORIDA

Meeting of Florida Presbytery—The regular spring meeting of the Presbytery of Florida will be held at Milton, Fla., convening at 7:30 p. m., of Tuesday, April 10, 1923. Daniel J. Currie, S. C.

Jacksonville, Murray Hill—Rev. L. B. Wells was recently installed pastor of the Murray Hill Church by a commission of Suwanee Presbytery; Rev. E. W. Way, presided and propounded the constitutional questions; Rev. L. E. McNair, D.D., preached the sermon; Rev. Robert H. McCaslin, D.D., charged the pastor and elder T. G. Bradley charged the congregation.

Jacksonville, Riverside—The women of the Riverside Church spent the entire day on the 16th at the church in the study of the mission text-book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land." It was a most inspirational and helpful day, and the attendance was large. The prayer meeting attendance in this church has more than doubled, and is characterized by interesting features each service. Two hundred new members have been received into the church since Dr. McCaslin came last October.

DeFuniak Springs Presbyterian Church—Three new members have been recently received into this church, two of them on certificate and the other on profession of faith and baptism.

On Friday night, February 16th, the congregation had the pleasure and the privilege of hearing a very instructive address by Rev. R. T. Coit, of Soonchun, Korea. We wait for another visit from Brother Coit and hope we shall not be disappointed.

A two-weeks' series of special services will begin in this church on February 25th, and in these services we are to have the help of Rev. J. McD. Lacy, of Washington City, one of our Assembly evangelists. We count ourselves very fortunate in securing this experienced worker to do the preaching and the prayers of all are asked for a blessing on this special effort.

GEORGIA

Columbus—Last Sabbath, 11th inst., the congregation of the First Church, Columbus, Ga., united with the pastor, Dr. I. S. McElroy, in a request to Macon Presbytery to have the pastoral relations dissolved, to take effect April 1st. Dr. McElroy has been pastor of this church for nearly 18 years.

and a leading man in the community and Presbytery. For several months past his health has not been good and this was given as his reason for resigning. A committee to secure a new pastor was appointed, with Dr. J. H. McDuffie, Sr., as chairman.

Dr. T. M. McConnell has been acting as pastor of the church since November 1st, and will continue to supply it until a new pastor can be found. The deacons have given him a check to cover his expenses to the Layman's Convention in Jacksonville, Fla., and to visit his friends in the Riverside Church of that city, which he supplied for nearly a year after the resignation of Dr. Venable. Cor.

MISSOURI

St. Joseph, First, Rev. Bunyan McLeod, D.D., pastor. The beautiful new Sunday School building, costing $60,000 and modern in all its appointments with gymnasium, shower baths, two kitchens with steam tables, ladies parlor, class rooms, etc., was formally opened on Sunday, February 4th with the largest Sunday School attendance in years. Rev. Dr. J. M. Vander Meulen, president of Louisville Seminary, preached an unusually strong sermon at the morning service, and most appropriate for the occasion, and plainly showed that he is one of the strongest preachers today in the Southern Presbyterian Church.

On Monday evening a men's banquet was held in the dining room at which over two hundred were present, and heard an extraordinary message from Dr. Eugene Abbot, of Fulton, on "The challenge of the new Sunday School building to the men of the First Church;" Tuesday evening a public reception to all the members and adherents; Wednesday evening the first prayer meeting in the new Sunday School room and Dr. A. A. Wallace, of Mexico, Mo., brought the congregation a splendid message on the "Pre-eminence of Christ in the Church."

Mr. Wesley Wales, for many years a physical director in the Y. M. C. A., has been secured for the young people's work and he is already organizing their spiritual and social activities most effectively.

The completion of the Sunday School building realizes the vision of pastor and people. Their never wavering faith did more than anything else to make this new equipment possible, and pastor and congregation are rejoicing together in the splendid facilities now at their command for carrying on their work.

VIRGINIA

Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va. February 15th was observed as McCormick Day, with an address at chapel on the life, character and work of Cyrus H. McCormick, who ninety-two years ago in Rockbridge County invented the mechanical reaper and thus opened a new era in the history of agriculture, and gave to the millions of mankind for the first time good bread at low cost. He was the generous friend of Union Seminary and in 1866 endowed the McCormick Professorship of Hebrew and the Interpretation of the Old Testament. His memory is gratefully cherished in the seminary and February 15th, the anniversary of his birth is a red letter day in our calendar. The students were reminded of the interesting permanent exhibition of the development of the harvesting machine in the Agricultural department of the State Library. That, by the way, is one of the interesting sights of Richmond, which many other readers of this paper would do well to see, for it was largely through the McCormick reaper that God made America the granary of the world and gave His greatest answer to the universal prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread."

Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.—The Moses D. Hoge Fellowship of Graduate Study for 1923-24 has been awarded to Mr. John Russell Woods, of Tsing Kiang Pu, China. The Charles D. Larus Fellowship of Graduate Study for 1923-24 has been awarded to Mr. Edward Guerrant Lilly, of Lexington, Ky. The appointment to these fellowships are the highest distinctions within the gift of the seminary. The whole Church will note with interest who these young men are who have won these high honors. Mr. Woods is the son of Dr. James B. Woods, of our China Mission, the grandson on his father's side of the late Rev. Edgar Woods, D.D., of Charlottesville, Va., and the grandson on his mother's side of Rev. James P. Smith, D.D., the surviving member of Stonewall Jackson's staff, and for 50 years the stated clerk of the Synod of Virginia. Mr. Lilly is the son of Rev. D. Clay Lilly, D.D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Lexington, Ky., and grandson on his mother's side of the late Dr. Edward O. Guerrant, Apostle to the Mountaineers and founder of the Society of Soul Winners. By the way, it is a remarkable fact that 22 of the students now at Union Seminary are sons of ministers, nearly one-fifth of the entire enrollment. Who can estimate the Church's debt to the manse?

In the International Essay Contest on the theme "The World Movement Against Alcoholism," a cash prize has been awarded by the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association to Mr. William L. Tiller, of the Middle class.

Mr. J. H. McConkey, of Pittsburg, made an earnest address last week to the students of the Seminary at their chapel service, to which the students of the Training School also were invited. He is giving Bible talks for a week in Richmond.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

News of the Week

The two law-making bodies, North and South Carolina, have been hard at work the last week.

At Raleigh the State Dry Bill has passed on the third reading, after a spirited debate. Out of nine proposed amendments four were passed. This bill is designed to bring State laws into conformity with the Federal laws.

The proposal to investigate the Tubercular Sanatorium has aroused much feeling. Judges Brock and Neal, attorneys for Dr. McBrayer, announce that he courts the fullest investigation.

The Ficklin Bill, designed to restrict attendance upon executions to witnesses and officials, and prohibiting the publication of descriptive accounts of electrocutions in the newspaper, is before the Legislature. It is opposed upon the ground that it would muzzle the press. Its author claims that the harrowing details in the press have for their object elimination of capital punishment. It is supported by the State Prison Board and by the prison authorities.

The state-wide game measure seems sure of final adoption. It is supported by prominent men from every section of the state.

The Secret Order measure has been the occasion of a bitter debate. It has passed the House. It is amended to apply only to orders whose members resort to masks or other disguises.

In South Carolina the Legislature has before it a bill to levy a stamp tax on soft drink syrups, on tobacco, on tea and coffee. Those fighting it are the merchants, while those advocating it plead that more revenue is needed, and that property is taxed to its limit.

An attempt to outlaw the Ku Klux Klan in South Carolina met defeat in the Legislature, but only after one of the most sensational debates that has so far marked the present session of the General Assembly.

A ten-million-dollar bond issue for buildings and improvements for the educational, charitable and penal institutions of South Carolina was recommended to the Legislature by Governor McLeod in a special message.

The governor declares it his belief that in no other way can the proper progress of the State's institutions be provided for.

On February 12th Salisbury opened her new $60,000 school building for negroes. This school is dedicated "The J. C. Price High School," in honor of the founder and first president of Salisbury's negro college, and one of the greatest orators the negro race has produced.

Dr. Owen, Federal inspector in charge of the cholera control work of North Carolina, warns farmers that cholera is appearing "to an increasing and alarming extent in North Carolina.

American financiers are negotiating with the French government for a monopoly on the manufacture and distribution of tobacco in France. The deal was reported to involve $300,000,000, of which $25,000,000 would be paid upon conclusion of the agreement. James B. Duke, George J. Whalen and Thomas Fortune Ryan were said to be the men interested.

Federal agents seized 350 crates of Florida "oranges" destined for Boston, in the Bronx freight yards of New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. The "fruit" proved to be bottled whiskey with a prohibition value of $30,000. The liquor cases were hidden by crates of genuine fruit.

In Europe the tension between French and Germans, growing out of the occupation of the Ruhr, is becoming more acute, particularly in Essen.

The most noticeable features are the failure of co-operation by the German police and the refusal of hotels and merchants to serve the French and Belgians.

In retaliation, the Allies seized two of the largest hotels in Essen but this was met by further active opposition by the Germans. The Germans severed the electric light current supplying the Kaiserhof Hotel, where the Allied engineering commission was quartered. The French countered with an ultimatum that unless the lights were restored the entire lighting system of the city would be shut.

The area now occupied by the French and Belgians in the Ruhr aggregates approximately 720,131 acres, or nearly the size of Rhode Island, according to figures announced in German quarters. The population of this area is 3,177,637, which compares with the population of Massachusetts and Michigan.

A COUNTRY PARSON'S SUNDAY IN CHICAGO

(Continued from page 4)

deavor Society at the Fourth Presbyterian Church came in, some to the choir, some acting as ushers and the rest were seated just in front of the Parson and his friend.

The vast auditorium had been filled at 4:00 o'clock to hear Babson. If possible an even larger congregation was present at night.

Dr. Stone made some significant statements, among them were these: "During the last four years the church had lost by death and removal about 800 members, the present membership was about 2,600, and the parish consisted of more than 4,000 people who looked to the Fourth Church as their place of religious allegiance." Dr. Stone further stated that he wanted it understood the evening service was just as much a part of the religious exercises as that in the morning. He said the same special care was given to the preparation of the music and the same degree of study was given to the preparation of the sermon as that for the morning hour. He regretted at the morning hour the pews were rented and had to be held for the owners until the services started, and usually there were persons who had to be turned away on account of the lack of seating capacity, but at the afternoon and evening service all the pews were free and the worshippers were seated in the order of their arrival.

Is it not true that many Sunday night services are wrecked because the preacher himself feels that it is an evil that has to be endured and gives to it only the fag ends of his endeavor for the week? The text was Hebrews 2:10: "For it became Him for whom all things and by whom all things in bringing many sons into glory to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." The sermon was a strong, fearless presentation of the truth that rang true to the fundamentals of the Gospel, in every sentence. He was a man leading and molding the thoughts of his people with no catering to the fashions of the modern mind. He was leading his people and not being led by what he fancied they might like to hear. The vast throng was thrilled, moved and lifted by the burning message as they saw the Captain of their salvation leading them to victory over the temptations and trials and sufferings, triumphing gloriously over all these ills of our common humanity. No one that night in that vast auditorium had any sympathy, the Country Parson is sure, with Dr. Sheldon's suggestion that the pulpit is obsolete. It is still the old Gospel that draws and holds the crowds and fits men to triumph in the battles of life and leads into the true consciousness of the presence of the King. There is an atmosphere about the Second Presbyterian Church in Chicago that one rarely finds.

The Country Parson has attended the Greek Easter service in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, in Jerusalem, the Easter ceremonies in St. Peter's, in Rome, and the services in many of the churches in London, including several times at St. Paul's, but there is something about the stately arches, the blending of the mellow brick, the devotional character of the singing, the melody of the great organ, the reverence of the service, and the fearless manliness of the preacher who declares the Gospel in all its fullness, that lifts one up into the very presence of God and makes the hearer want to be stronger and nobler and more Christ-like that the Country Parson has not found at any of the old-world shrines.

The young man walked home, with the parson, nearly two miles, along the beautiful Michigan Avenue, and said many things to the Country Parson worth recording if they were not too sacred.

All's well that ends well.

"PUBLISH, AND CONCEAL NOT"

By Rev. M. F. Daniels

The Text: "Ill news are swallow-winged, but what is good walks on crutches."—Massinger.

An Illustration: February 14, 1924, Charlotte, N. C. Our door bell rang and my wife answered the door. Who was there? A female colporteur seeking an interview. What kind of books was she selling? Religious books. They had striking titles, were profusely illustrated and inexpensive. The young woman said that the books were undenominational and that she was selling them in order to have some money to give for home mission work. She was nicely dressed, genial, enthusiastic and insistent in her work. My wife was suspicious of her ware and brought the books to me. I recognized them at once as being the publications of Seventh Day Adventism, although there was no clue to this from the publisher's name. "Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shapes, and with virtuous visor hide deep vice."

The books were returned and the book missionary informed that she was in the home of a Presbyterian minister. She was also told that they were Seventh Day Adventism publications and that by us they were considered unscriptural and harmful. Whereupon she replied, "Why, Rev. ——— (an unheard of name in this section) a Presbyterian minister, bought three dozen of these books to distribute in his congregation." Now, either this woman told a deliberate lie or else Mr. Barnum's prophecy concerning "A sucker being born every minute" was again fulfilled. This is not a unique experience, yet it has its lessons.

The Application: Tillotson said, "Zeal is fit for wise men, but flourishes chiefly among fools." All of the cults seem to appraise this method of propaganda as vital to their existence and growth. Are we sounding out the word of truth in tract, magazine and book form as we ought? I think not. The importance of this ministry cannot be over-rated. Any child of God can engage in this simple and wholesome work. Our Committee of Publication, the Bible Institute Colportage Association, 826 North LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill., both have inexpensive and helpful literature that ought to be released. Besides the good that can be accomplished a diligent soul could earn some money in this work. Are they pent-up blessings, either paper or cloth bound, in your library that ought to be circulating? Summons them out of the tomb of idleness and dispatch them on errands of solace and salvation.

EDUCATIONAL

The Smyth Lectures, Columbia Theological Seminary, Columbia, S. C.—On account of unavoidable circumstances, Rev. A. M. Fraser, D.D., of Staunton, Va., was unable to deliver the lectures of the Smyth Foundation of Columbia Theological Seminary this year, and instead of six lectures by one man, there will be one lecture each by six of our most outstanding preachers of the Synods within our territory. The program, which is appended, speaks for itself indicating an interesting variety and at the same time, unity of thought on the great subject of "Preaching."

These lectures will be delivered in the First Presbyterian Church in the city of Columbia, beginning Wednesday, April 11th, and continuing through Wednesday, April 18th. The ministers and church members are invited to attend these lectures, feeling sure they will be highly appreciated and enjoyed. These lectures are made possible through the generosity of the late Dr. Thomas Smyth, of Charleston, South Carolina.

Smyth Lectures, April 11th to April 18th, 8 p. m.

Wednesday, 11—Speaker: Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga. Subject: "Sermonic Sources."

Thursday 12—Speaker: Dr. L. E. McNair, pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Jacksonville, Fla. Subject: "Passion in Preaching."

Friday 13—Speaker: Dr. W. McF. Alexander, pastor, Prythania Street Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La. Subject: "The Man and His Message."

Monday 16—Speaker: Dr. J. B. Hutton, pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Jackson, Miss. Subject: "Regulative Ideas in Preaching."

Tuesday 17—Speaker: Dr. James I. Vance, pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Nashville, Tenn. Subject: "Sermonizing."

Wednesday 18—Speaker: Dr. Dunbar H. Ogden, pastor, Government Street Presbyterian Church, Mobile, Alabama. Subject: "The House in Which the Minister Lives"

"Every minister in Czecho-Slovakia suffers for the necessities of life. The war left its mark on all of them. Dr. Tolar spent four years in the army, and much of that time in prison. Once when marching he thought it would be glorious to drop over into the water and die. It would be such a relief after the terrible trial and suffering he had endured. Just then an old man, exhausted and sinking, seized him. Dr. Tolar summoned all his reserve strength, and succeeded in saving the man and himself. Indeed, whether he realizes it or not, that is exactly what he is always doing, saving others at any cost to himself.

A traveler in Burma left a copy of The Psalms, printed in Burmese, in the house of a native who entertained him. The Burman read it with interest, and before he had finished the book he resolved to cast away his idols. For 20 years he worshiped the eternal God revealed to him in The Psalms. The Fifty-first Psalm he committed to memory and used as a daily prayer. Then a missionary came his way, and gave him a copy of the New Testament.

With great joy he read the story of salvation through Jesus Christ and then he exclaimed, "For 20 years I walked by starlight; now I see the sun!"

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

CHILDREN

HER FIRST LETTER

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl eight years old. I go to school at Antioch. My teacher's name is Miss Jessie McPhaul. I love her very much. I am in the second grade. I go to church at Antioch. Our pastor is Rev. J. W. Goodman and we all like him fine. I will close as this is my first letter to the Standard. I am writing this to surprise my grandpa.

Your little friend,
Annie Neal Currie.

Red Springs, N. C., R. F. D., No. 3.

LIKES HIS TEACHER

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy seven years old and I am in the second grade at school. Miss Grace Cochrane is my Sunday School teacher and I like her very much. My brother wrote you a letter so I wanted to write you too. Our pastor is Rev. W. W. Akers, we all like him very much. I want to move to Barium very much. I hope my letter will miss the wastebasket for my mother and daddy do not know that I am writing.

Your new friend,

James D. Johnston.

Lincolnton, N. C.

MOVING TO BARIUM

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy nine years old and I am in the third grade at school. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. My teacher is Mrs. Dick Ramsaur. My daddy is the new manager at Barium Springs Orphanage and we are going to move over there this week. My brother wants to ride the pony over to Barium but I don't know whether he will or not. Please print my letter for I want to surprise my mother and daddy.

Your new friend,

Joseph Johnston.

Lincolnton, N. C.

RIDES HIS MULE

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy five years old. Every week when your good paper comes mother reads me the stories and the letters. I enjoy them so much. My home is at Rowland, N. C., but my daddy is building a road here for the State Highway Commission and we have been with him three months. We will go home next September and then I will start to school. I go to Sunday School every Sunday when I am at home. My S. S. teachers are Mrs. H. T. Prevost and Miss Margaret McQueen. I sent them Christmas cards but I think they have forgotten me. They do not have any Sunday School here. I have a tiny little mule and Santa Claus brought me a saddle. I enjoy riding him so much. Sometimes my little sister, two years old, rides with me. Please print my letter and I will write you again soon.

Your little friend,

H. W. Rainey, Jr.

Tuckasegee, N. C.

A LITTLE BROTHER

I am a little girl nine years old. I am in the fourth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Helen Oliver. I like her fine. My music teacher's name is Miss Elsie Wilcox. I have a little baby brother three weeks old, his name is Neill Duncan. I will close for fear of the wastebasket.

Your little friend,
Laura McCraney.

St. Pauls, N. C.

PHYLLIS' PARTY

Ruth and Marian Burnam leaned against the railing of the wide piazza of their new country home in the New Hampshire hills.

"Smells nice and piny," said Ruth, lazily, sniffing the warm fragrance.

"Let's make a playhouse of pine boughs," said Marian. Too much in a hurry for steps, both climbed over the railing and jumped to the springy moss below.

"I wish there were some other little girls," said Ruth, half an hour later, peeping out of the tiny bushy playhouse. "All these houses—three, four, five, on the road half-way down the hill—and nobody in them but grown-ups. Mother said so."

"I wonder if mother is sure," sighed Marian.

"That's what I asked her," said Ruth, "and she said she was sure as sure, and she began at the first house—you know that cunning low brown one with the pretty garden—and she told me who lived in every one, and there wasn't one single little girl or little boy."

"Who does live in that cunning brown house with all the flowers?"

"A lady and a big cat. The lady's name is Mrs. Merton."

"What's the cat's name?"

"O, mother didn't know that!" laughed Ruth. "She stopped there once when she was up here looking for a place, and the lady gave her a cup of tea and a piece of d'licious cake—chocolate cake with chocolate frosting as thick as that—and she saw the cat and he was 'normous, and he slept on a pillow on the table on the piazza, and the lady was afraid he'd catch her pet chipmunks."

"I never heard mother tell about him."

"Well, she did, and the pet chipmunks ran to the lady and ate peanuts out of her hand, and the only way she could tell them apart was that one's tail was bushier than the other's."

"I'm going down some day with mother, if there's a cat and cake and chipmunks," decided Marian.

"Cake was with tea," said Ruth, "so I don't s'pose we'd get any. I wish a little girl lived there."

And what do you suppose happened the very next morning? The farmer man who drove over the hilly roads early each morning to leave milk for all the families in the community left with the milk for the Burnam family a square white envelope addressed to Ruth and Marian Burnam!

"For us?" cried the two little girls, at the breakfast-table, and mother nodded and watched as Ruth slit it open.

"Why, she says, mother," began Ruth, excitedly, "that she'd like Marian and me to come and stay all the afternoon and play with Phyllis, and maybe you'd come at four for tea!"

"Who says?" asked mother.

"And she says Phyllis hasn't had any little girl to play with her for a long time and she's lonely," finished Marian, joyously.

"Who says?" asked mother for the second time.

"Who is Phyllis?" asked Ruth and Marian in one breath, and then they all laughed, and Ruth said: "It's from Mrs. Merton. You said she lived in the little brown house with the garden and the cat and the cake and the chipmunks."

"And she says"—Marian took up the tale—"that we needn't let her know, but just be sure to come if we can, 'cause she and Phyllis will be 'xpecting us. Whose little girl can Phyllis be, mother?"

After luncheon, as soon as they had put on clean dark gingham dresses, Ruth and Marian scampered down the woody path, across the sweet sunny meadow, and were soon knocking at the door of the little brown house. They listened hard just a minute before they knocked, but no little girl's voice did they hear.

"My dears, come in!" Mrs. Merton greeted them. Sure enough, mother was right about the "normous cat." There he was at her heels.

"What's his name? We know all about him," said Marian, feeling at home at once. Then, suspicion flashing upon her, "Your cat's not Phyllis?"

"No, oh, no!" said Mrs. Merton. "Just plain Peter is my cat. Phyllis is waiting for you in the front east room. You don't know how glad she is that you've come to play with her."

Mysterious it certainly was. Why didn't Phyllis come to meet them at the door? Was she sick? So mysterious it was that both Ruth and Marian found themselves unconsciously tiptoeing after Mrs. Merton, noiseless as mice. One look into the little east room and they understood.

"Oh!" said Ruth. "The darling!"

"Oh!" echoed Marian. "Her arms out to us!"

In a tiny chair in the middle of the rug sat Phyllis, blue-eyed, flaxen-haired, pink-cheeked. Dressed in a dainty white muslin frock she was, with a white garden hat hung over one arm.

"And a trunk!" said Ruth, dropping down on the rug with a sigh of utter content.

"For you to open," said Mrs. Merton, "and all the things inside for you to play with. I do my best to make Phyllis happy, but she'll tell you herself that it's little girls she really needs. She thinks little fingers are best suited for buttoning and unbuttoning tiny buttons."

What was in the trunk? What wasn't in the trunk! To begin with, the trunk itself was shiny black leather with real straps and a real wee key, and on one end in white letters was "P. M." "Phyllis Merton!" crowed Marian. And inside, a tray with two partitions, slippers, socks, brush and comb, handkerchiefs—yes, with lace on them—and hats, as many as six—straw hats for summer, and for winter a darling ermine cap with a tippet and muff to match.

"Oh!" and "Ah!" and "Ah!" and "Oh!" were Ruth's and Marian's remarks.

And in the bottom of the trunk, dresses and dresses, pink, blue, white, and blue-and-white checked aprons, and coats, and a parasol, and petticoats, and all the other clothes any doll ever thought of having. Oh, now I've told! But you've guessed long ago that Phyllis was a doll and that she looked as much like a dear little girl as ever a doll could.

At four came mother, and twice she knocked and nobody heard her! So in she walked, and guided by gay voices, looked into the east room, to see Ruth and Marian on the rug, dressing a flaxen-haired doll, with wee doll dresses and slippers and hats scattered about them. On the rug, too, was Mrs. Merton, looking on, and close by her side, curled in a ball, was old Peter-cat, his eyes shut to the vanities of Phyllis' wardrobe.

Chocolate cake with chocolate frosting? Yes, a whole uncut one. And mother and Mrs. Merton drank tea out of white cups banded with gold, and Ruth and Marian drank cocoa out of tiny blue cups, and everybody had little jam sandwiches, and Phyllis sat at the table with her sweetest smile and manners, and right in the middle of the party Peter-cat woke up and meowed so indignantly that he had a saucer of milk.

"Now everybody's at the party 'cept the chipmunks," said Marian.

"Hush!" said Mrs. Merton, and scratch, scratch, something scuttled across the piazza floor! "They're waiting for us, but don't hurry, they're never far away."

Sure enough, on the piazza, at Mrs. Merton's first call, two chipmunks, fat, saucy, bright-eyed, scampered up with tails whisking. Tame? They ate out of any one's hand, ran up into any one's lap, and the door was safely shut on Peter.

"Have I had Phyllis since I was a little girl?" said Mrs. Merton, in answer to mother's question, as they were all telling what a lovely play-party they had had. "No, indeed! I have her now, perhaps, because I never had the kind of doll I wanted when I was a little girl. And perhaps I have her," looking down into Ruth's and Marian's rapt, upturned faces, "so little girls will come to see me sometimes. Houses without little girls in them sometimes feel empty."

"May we come again, then?" It was Ruth who spoke, but four brown eyes pleaded the question.

"The oftener you come, the happier Phyllis and I will be," said Mrs. Merton. "We sometimes get tired of just ourselves, and even of old Peter."

On the way home Marian said suddenly: "She remembers just 'xactly how it feels to be a little girl! And all the time she played with us we felt just as if she were a little girl like us, didn't we, Ruth?" A happy pause as all three rested a minute on the upward climb, then Ruth paid childish tribute.

"Why, mother!" she said in the voice of one making an unexpected discovery. "Is that what makes the difference in grown-ups—that the nicest ones remember how everything felt when they were little?"—Rose Brooks, in Zion's Herald.

THE STORY OF GREEDY TOMMY TOBY

Nobody in the Tobey family liked to have company. It wasn't because they were mean and stingy, either, for all the Tobey, big and little, just loved to make other people happy and comfortable. No, it was because Tommy Tobey had such dreadful table manners. All his brothers and sisters blushed rosy red for shame when any one came to dinner.

One day a carriage, drawn by two splendid black horses, stopped before the Tobey Cottage, and Great-Aunt Sarah Stickney Stevens hobbled out. Mother had to hustle around and get dinner. She was so busy that she quite forgot to whisper to Tommie about being greedy. Poor Tom lost all his manners when he saw the good things on the table. He ate his chicken with his fingers, he gobbled up his ice cream, and, worst of all, he leaned over and snatched a piece of chocolate cake just as Aunt Sarah was going to take it.

Aunt Sarah Stickney Stevens was very much shocked indeed and smiled a most dreadful smile. When she was leaving, she said: "Tomorrow, young man I'll send you a new brother; and you must let him eat with you every day."

"Thank you, Aunt Sarah," said Tom politely. Aunt Sarah looked at his greasy hands and at his face, which was dotted with currant jelly and chocolate ice cream, and smiled again. Then she went away, and all the Tobey's tried to tell Tom how ashamed they were of him.

"Huh," said Tom, puffing himself out like a fat little pigeon. "Aunt Sarah is all right. She isn't going to send the rest of you anything, is she?"

All the little Tobey's looked at each other and wondered why Aunt Sarah Stickney Stevens had liked such a greedy boy. The next day, when the Tobey's were at dinner, Tom's present came. He jumped up and down with delight. He broke the string, threw it on the floor, tore open the brown

(Continued on page 12)

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Vann-Williams—In the Presbyterian Church, Wallace, N. C., on the evening of January 27, 1923, by Rev. R. Murphy Williams, brother of the bride, assisted by Rev. W. P. M. Currie, Mr. Henry Vann and Miss Ruth Williams, all of Wallace, N. C.

Gillis-Lindsay—At the manse of Galatia Presbyterian Church, by Rev. R. A. McLeod, the bride's pastor, on December 20, 1922, Mr. Marvin Gillis and Miss Maggie Bell Lindsay, both of Hoke County, N. C.

Lewis-Brice—At the residence of the bride's father near Rose Hill, N. C., Mr. J. H. Lewis, of Dunn, N. C., and Miss May Belle Brice, of Rose Hill, N. C., Rev. W. P. M. Currie officiating.

DEATHS

MRS. RACHEL McARTHUR McKENZIE

We the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of Antioch Presbyterian Church wish to express our appreciation of the life and work of Mrs. Rachael McKenzie.

She was a kind neighbor and ever ready to lend a helping hand in time of need. Quiet, cheerful and contented. She lived among us honored and loved by all who knew her.

First: That while we bow in submission to God's will we wish to express the sense of our loss, felt not only by the Auxiliary, but by the Church and community.

Second: That the consecrated Christian life so gentle, pure and unselfish, will ever be a blessing to our Church.

Third: That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and a copy to the Presbyterian Standard for publication, and a page in our minutes be dedicated to her memory.

Mrs. J. A. McPhaul.
Mrs. Timothy Currie.
Miss Jane M. Conoly.

JOHN M. McSWEEN

Resolutions Passed by the Session of the Timmonsville, S. C., Presby- terian Church

Since God in His infinite wisdom has taken from our midst by death our beloved brother, John McSween, we, the pastor and surviving elders of the Timmonsville Church desire to put on record:

1st. Our sense of loss. He had been a member of this session since the organization of the Church, always zealous and faithful in discharging his duties as an elder, generous by nature, wise in council, noble in spirit, and in the truest sense of the term a Christian gentleman.

2d. We would express for the Sunday School their deep sense of bereavement in the loss of their superintendent who had so long served and whom they so cordially loved and trusted.

3d. We would record for the entire congregation their tribute of respect and affection for this servant of the Lord, and for this Father of the Church who has now entered into rest.

4th. We feel assured that the Presbytery of which he was so often a member will sympathize with us in this expression of our sorrow.

5th. We will leave a page in our minutes sacred to his memory and place this record there.

Lastly, we extend our sincere sympathy to his family and surviving relatives, pray that the God of all grace and comfort may be with them.

(Signed):

J. M. Plowden, Pastor,
Duncan McKenzie,
W. C. Rose,
R. H. Nelson,
E. W. Blythe,
W. B. White, Elders.

Timmonsville, S. C., Jan. 28, 1923.

MRS. KATE McPHAUL McKENZIE

Resolutions adopted by the Woman's Auxiliary of Antioch Presbyterian Church

Whereas our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom and love, has seen fit to remove from our midst our kind friend and neighbor Mrs. Kate McKenzie.

Being of a cheerful and happy nature she won many friends. She was ever ready to help in time of sickness and she will be greatly missed in our community.

First: That while we feel our loss we bow in humble submission to our Father's will, who doeth all things well.

Second. That we recommend her faithful Christian character to all as an example of loyalty and cheerful obedience to His will.

Third: That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

Fourth: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and a copy to the Presbyterian Standard for publication, and a page in our minutes be dedicated to her memory.

Mrs. Sallie Howard.
Mrs. J. D. McBryde.
Miss. Jane M. Conoly.

MRS. M. E. CASTEX

The subject of this sketch was born in Washington, N. C., of a prominent family. Her maiden name was Eleanor O. Crabtree. She was educated at Washington and at a private school conducted under the direction of the Episcopal Church, in Beaufort, N. C.

On the fourteenth of November, 1873 she became the wife of L. H. Castex, of Goldsboro, N. C., in which city she spent her life. As an active member of the business firm of M. E. Castex, she became a great factor in the business life of Goldsboro and vicinity and was widely known in that capacity, until failing health seven years ago induced her to retire from this activity.

Business engagements never interfered with her activities in other directions. She was widely known as a good neighbor, a loyal friend, a devoted wife and mother and a zealous worker for the social and moral well-being of the community. From early girlhood she was a staunch member of the Presbyterian Church, and in her many strong and useful years was a steady attendant at its services, an energetic worker for all its causes and an upbuilder of its influence. In her home she had a prophet's chamber. Her devotion flagged not during the years of poor health and her great pleasure to the last was to attend its services. For over 20 years she personally clothed an orphan at Barium. This was just one of her many interests in the good cause.

On the fourteenth of last November Mr. and Mrs. Castex celebrated their golden wedding and received the congratulations of their hosts of friends. A specially pleasing feature of this event was the presentation to this loved couple of $50 in gold from the congregation and Sunday School of the Presbyterian Church, together with an address setting forth the many reasons the congregation had for remembering their devotion and fidelity to both church and school.

A few weeks after this pleasant event our good friend and Mother in Israel fell on sleep. She died Tuesday, January 16, 1923. She is survived by her husband and her daughter, Mrs. F. W. Hollingsworth of Statesville, N. C., who have our sympathy and prayers in their sorrow.

P. McIntyre.

MISS MARTHA L. WILLIAMS

January 8, 1923, in Fayetteville, N. C., the spirit of Miss Martha L. Williams quietly departed this life. The funeral was conducted from the First Presbyterian Church and the body was laid to rest in the family plot in the Cross Creek Cemetery.

Miss Williams was the eldest daughter of the late John D. Williams and Isabelle Murchison Williams of Fayetteville. As a young girl she united with the Presbyterian Church, and throughout her long life she was a loyal and consistent member. Since the death of her parents she spent a great deal of her time in New York City with her brother, Mr. James Williams. Here she had her regular church home and sought opportunities for worship in the house of God. She exhibited in her life a deep Christian sympathy and a genuine desire to promote the welfare and comfort of those around her. The necessity of others always made a strong appeal to her heart and no matter what personal sacrifices it entailed she gladly divided what she had that their needs might be met. The spirit of her service was that of an humble Christian who cared not for praise or personal exaltation, but only sought the good of those for whom her services was intended.

A Friend.

MISS MAGGIE SMITH

Inasmuch as God has called from us unto Himself our friend and co-worker, Miss Maggie Smith, we the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of Sherwood Church wish to record our gratitude for her life among us. We would follow her example of systematic giving as a part of our service to our Lord.

We miss her cheerful face. We extend to her loved ones our sympathy May a copy of these words of esteem and sympathy be sent to the bereaved family, a copy sent to the Presbyterian Standard for publication and a copy placed on our minute book.

Mrs. J. H. Clark.
Mrs. C. G. Gainey.

MRS. NELLIE M. LEE

In the death of Mrs. Lee the Woman's Auxiliary of Sherwood Church has lost a loyal and faithful member. One who did what her hands found to do in that quiet unobserved way so characteristic of a true follower of Christ. While we miss her presence among us we bow in humble submission to God's will and rejoice in the assurance that she has joined the beloved husband and two little daughters who preceded her to the heavenly home by several years.

As devoted co-workers we wish to express:

First: Our sympathy to her loved ones.

Second: Our appreciation of her gentle life.

Third: We wish a copy of these resolutions to be sent to the Presbyterian Standard for publication and a page of our minute book dedicated to her memory.

Mrs. J. H. Clark.
Mrs. C. G. Gainey.

CHILDREN

(Continued from page 11)

wrappings and threw them on the floor; and when he saw Aunt Sarah's present inside, he grew very red and was going to throw that on the floor, too, but father reached over and took it. All the Tobey's crowded around to look at it. It was a pig, a big plaster pig. In its mouth was a card which said: "I've come to eat with you, brother Tom. Put me right beside your plate."

"Aunt Sarah is a wise woman," said father. And he leaned over to put the pig beside Tom's plate. "There, my son, we'll let him stay there until you learn to eat like a gentleman."

Tom cried and screamed and screamed and cried and didn't eat any dinner, but the pig stayed there. For three long weeks he stood guard over Tom's plate—breakfasts, dinners and suppers. Every time Tom was greedy, father pushed the pig nearer Tom's plate. How Tom hated that pig! He hated him worse every day. Who would take any comfort eating while a pig was watching him? He began to eat slowly and take small mouthfuls and let the other children be served first. One morning when the Tobey's came to breakfast the pig had gone. He never came back.

Aunt Sarah Stickney Stevens says Tom has the best table manners of all the Tobey's and gave him a silver dollar the last time she came to dinner.—Christian Register.

A BILL THAT WAS NEVER PAID

A ten-year old lad overheard a conversation about certain bills to be paid and conceived the idea of making out a bill for his own services, says the Compton Enterprise. So the next morning he laid this statement of account on his mother's breakfast plate:

"Mother owes Willie for carrying coal six times, 20 cents; for bringing water lots of times, 30 cents; for going ten errands, 15 cents."

His mother read the bill but said nothing about it. That evening Willie found on his plate the 75 cents, and also another bill which read as follows: Willie owes mother for his happy home for ten years, nothing; for nursing him through a long illness, nothing; total, nothing."

When Willie saw the seventy-five cents he was pleased; but when he read his mother's bill his eyes grew dim and his lips quivered. Then he took the money to his mother, threw his arms about her neck and begged that she would let him do lots of things for her.

Mother's bill is rarely presented, but it will pay each person to think it out and over for himself and then pay it in love and service.—Downey, Calif., Champion.

OUR GREATEST NEED -- A WEEK OF PRAYER

The One Supreme Need of the Progressive Program of our Church is earnest, prevailing, importunate prayer to God. Methods, machinery, plans mean nothing unless God is moving through them upon His people.

Some Facts to Remember

1. God's Promise is available and is like a blank check signed by Him: "All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."
2. God's People are not poor and unable to give. Bank deposits have increased; savings accounts have multiplied; there is revival of business, steady but sure; automobile factories are running at capacity; evidence everywhere that His People in this country are rich compared to other nations.
3. God's Plan is Large. "Go ye therefore into all nations."

Another Fact

We might as well face it. Our budget for $4,750,000 is in great danger. People are apathetic. There is too much talk of "reaction" from money appeals. Our leaders do not all realize the grave danger our Program now faces. It will be nothing less than criminal to retrench in the light of the world's needs and the business condition of our own people. The receipts from the Progressive Program for our Four Executive Committees last year were far short of what the Assembly asked for. The same is true of local causes but the figures are not available for exhibit or they would be given:

	ASKED	GIVEN	SHORT
Foreign Missions ----	$1,498,500	$1,131,627	$366,873
Home Missions -----	720,000	407,017	312,983
C. E. and Min. Relief -	337,500	181,761	155,739
Publication and S. S. --	95,000	95,968	-----

Total Shortage year ending March 31, 1922 $835,597

A CALL TO PRAYER Week of March 12th

The Assembly's Stewardship Committee earnestly requests the Church to set apart the Week of March 12th to 16th for prayer to God for the causes of our Church—Local and Assembly. Take up and study each night of this week one of the causes; form prayer bands among the people; let it be a week of intercessory prayer for our establishment of family altars; the dedication of our property and money to God. The canvass for our annual budget comes March 18th. By the proper use of the prayer power let us make this the most effective canvass we have ever witnessed in our Church.

We are asking that on Sunday,
March 4th, a special effort be made by each church to collect and remit all pledges on the church budget then due.

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

The business man who consecrates his talent for finance to the service of God is as truly serving God as the man in the pulpit.

CHURCH WANTS LOAN

Would you help do great work? Is your money now bringing you only 3 or 4 per cent? Church in very heart of great city needs six months or longer, will pay legal rate in this state—10 per cent interest payable quarterly. For particulars write:

L. L. S., 1406 Park Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

6% No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

SORES BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

JAMES M. McMICHAEL
Church Architect
Charlotte, N. C.

THE SALISBURY MARBLE CO.
Salisbury, N. C.

Anything in... CEMETERY WORK

Satisfaction our Motto
A card will bring full information.

FREE GARDEN BOOK
WILLIAMS' INFORMATION BOOK ON GARDENING is the leading GARDEN GUIDE of the South.

Mail us a card today for your free copy of this wonderful 52 page book.

WILLIAMS SEED CO.
DEPT. M. NORFOLK, VA.

PANSY PLANTS

Pure White, 30c doz., $2 per 100.
Pure Black, 30c doz., $2 per 100.
Royal Mixture, 40c doz., $2.75 per 100.
Exhibition Mixture, 50c doz., $3.50 per 100.

Plant out any time between now and May 1st, but the sooner the better. We specialize on the pansy and our mode of packing will carry it any distance in good condition.

All Postpaid.

BLANDING'S DRUG STORE
FOUNTAIN INN, S. C.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY
Passenger Schedules
Effective January 28, 1923
Charlotte, N. C.

Daily Except Sunday as Shown
Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.

For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to
J. K. POWELL, D. T. A.
P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

Story and Incident

BARBARA'S OPPORTUNITY

Barbara sighed as she set the crock of cream on the cellar shelf.

"No opportunities," she whispered; "no inspiration, no changes, just the same old things, day after day. I don't see why Providence set me down on a ranch, so far away from everybody. I am young, strong, fairly aching to do a hundred things, and here—I must do nothing. I can't leave father. I wouldn't do that, but, or, how I long for a wider outlook. How I'd like to help somebody else, to teach in Sabbath School, push things along in church lines. Instead, I must live in a place miles away from any of them."

Barbara was a tall girl of eighteen, with abundant braids of brown hair and clear, youthful coloring. Such a capable girl as she was, too. She was all father had, and, of course, she wouldn't leave him; but, girl-like, she wanted to do a hundred things afar off. She did not see the opportunities at her own door. And then, as it was nearing dinner time, she forgot her longings in a round of very necessary, healthful work.

She turned from the oven into which she had deposited an apple-pie, she heard the sound of wheels, and looking up, caught a glimpse of two people, young people they were, too, a young man and a young woman.

"I wonder what they want?" she thought, and then she went to the door.

"Could we come in and rest just a moment?" said the sweetest voice Barbara thought she had ever heard.

Barbara gave a ready, glad assent. The young woman, she was scarcely more than a girl, alighted first, and Barbara noticed at once what a nice face she had, large brown eyes, a sweet mouth, and such a lovely, sorrowful smile. And then Barbara saw that the young man with her looked very ill, indeed. He was thin to emaciation and staggered as he tried to walk.

Barbara led them into her pleasant living room and bade them rest, and then it was but a few minutes until the young wife, for Barbara found out that they were newly married, was telling her story.

The young husband had left his home town to come to the city with his young wife. "He felt there were no opportunities there," she went on, and Barbara winced. "Was not that just what she had been thinking in regard to herself?"

"He found employment in one of the big department stores and, not being used to the confinement, bad air, and long hours, he fell sick. The little money they had been able to save, soon went for doctor bills and nourishing things he must have." "But," added the young wife, sorrowfully, "we couldn't get the nourishing things—at least I couldn't. The milk was poor and we couldn't find any fresh eggs, and so," she concluded, "I borrowed this horse and buggy from a man who has been kind to us. What I want is to get Edgar out on some ranch, and let him live out of doors. If he does this, I am sure he will get well. If he doesn't," the tears welled up in the lovely eyes, and she left the sentence unfinished. There was a pause, the young woman broke it.

"If we could just get into some nice family, where I could help with the work," she added.

Barbara's heart bounded.

"Was not this one of the opportunities she had just been longing for? Both so young, too. 'Why,' thought capable, practical Barbara, 'they're nothing but two 'babes in the woods.' What is going to become of them?"

At that moment father came in, and he heard the story, too.

In one of the intervals of dinner-getting, Barbara contrived to get him to one side.

"Father," she cried, "can't we take them in?"

"There is that little house near the barn that is stored full of old harness and things we don't need. It has two good rooms. They could have that, and she could help me. Father, I've been wanting all morning to do something for somebody else. Here is one opportunity. You'll help me, won't you?"

Father kissed her.

"I think it could be managed, dear," he said, "if you really want to help them. He looks very ill, but good air and sunshine will do wonders. As for her, she is evidently a lady, every inch of her. I feel very sorry for them both. Ask them to dinner, Barbara, and we'll see about it."

And they did see about it, and so quickly that the very next day Barbara had everything taken out of the harness house. She washed the windows herself, and such a good time she had doing it, too. No one could take greater interest in that young voice: "Let the Sunshine In," and "When Morning Gilds the Skies."

She put up the white curtains herself

THOROUGHBRED SEEDS

The Best By Test For More Than Fifty Years
Write for our free illustrated catalog.
GEO. TAIT & SONS, Inc., NORFOLK, VIRGINIA

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from
Presbyterian Committee of Publication
Richmond, Va. Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

Significant Religious Books
"Religious Book Week"
March 4 to 10, 1923

- The time for selecting and buying strong, helpful religious literature. Below we have listed a few of the later books from the great thinkers of the day along religious lines.
- Being a Preacher—By Jas. I. Vance, D.D. The James Sprunt Lectures for 1923 -----$1.25
 - Within the Gateways of the Far East—By Chas. R. Erdman, D.D. A remarkable record of recent travels in China, Japan, Korea, Etc. -----$1.25
 - The Possibilities of Prayer—By E. M. Bounds, D.D. Deals with the place and significance prayer has in the life of the true believer -----$1.25
 - God—Our Contemporary—By J. H. Jowett, D.D. Dr. Jowett says: "God, in Christ Jesus, is our great contemporary." A new volume of sermons -----$1.50
 - Lord, Teach Us to Pray—By Alexander Whyte, D.D. Twenty-three great sermons on Prayer -----$2.00
 - The Victory Over Victory—By J. A. Hutton, D.D. A new volume of sermons -----$1.75
 - Jesus As Judged By His Enemies—By J. H. Snowden, D.D. A study of the criticisms and attacks made on Jesus by His enemies -----$1.75
- Our Own Important Books
- Revised Book of Church Order, with 1922 Amendments -----$.35
 - Confession of Faith, new edition, with Revised Book of Church Order and 1922 Amendments -----$.75
 - Presbyterianism—Its Principles and Practice—By S. L. Morris, D.D. Paper, $.50; Cloth -----$.75
 - The Church at Work. A complete statement of the organization, history, and operation of the Assembly's agencies, paper, $.25— cloth -----$.40
 - What is the Kingdom of God?—By R. C. Reed, D.D. A sane, illuminating discussion of this great subject, paper, $.50; cloth -----$.75
 - Needed Counsel for New Christians—By S. M. Glasgow, D.D. Just the booklet for sessions to present to converts as they join the church -----$.25
 - The Dream of Pilate's Wife—By W. H. Woods, D.D. A drama in one act and three scenes. "Deserves to rank with the best literature." "Startling originality" -----$.50
 - Women of the Bible—By Rev. Harry Boehme. Six strikingly original sketches of leading women characters of the Old Testament ---$.40
 - The Road Without a Detour—By Rev. Peter H. Pleune. A book of delightful short sermons to children ---$1.00

Send Orders to
Presbyterian Committee of Publication
Richmond, Virginia Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

at the shining windows, took a rug from one of the upstairs rooms in the house, robbed her own pretty nest of its easiest chair.

Father put up a couple of shelves in the room that was to be used as a kitchen, and Barbara covered them neatly with crotonne. She brought cream from her own stores, butter, fresh eggs, cooked a chicken, and made bread and put on them, finishing up with a neat little array of jellies and preserves. And when the wagon finally deposited the two young people at her door again, Barbara ran to meet them, a smile on her face. If she could only have known what that smile meant to the troubled young wife, I don't think Barbara would ever have complained of her lack of opportunity of helping anyone again. It seemed to lift a mountain from that young burdened heart, bidding her be of good cheer.

Barbara led them straight to the little house she had made ready for them. When the young wife saw the white curtains and the soft rug, and the easy chair, and the room beyond, all ready to go to housekeeping, she could scarcely keep back the tears.

"It's just beautiful," was all she could say, and Barbara never received any thanks she liked so well.

The young husband was so weary, he was obliged at once to lie down, and when he was quietly resting, the young wife went into the house where Barbara was waiting for her.

She was but a girl, herself, and the only thing she could do was to put her arms about Barbara and cry. Barbara patted her on the shoulder.

"You do think Edgar will get well, don't you?" she said brokenly at last.

"Yes," Barbara's voice was infinitely comforting. "I think he will, and you are not to worry about things. We intend to look after you."

The young wife looked at her through shining tears.

"You're the sweetest girl I ever met," she said, "and the most fortunate."

Barbara looked at her rather queerly. "Do you know it is only a short time since I was lamenting the fact that I had no opportunities here—of doing good, I mean."

The young woman's eyes widened. "But you don't think so now," she answered, "after what you have done for us."

Barbara smiled again. "No. I don't think so any more," she answered, almost solemnly.—Susan Hubbard Martin, in Ex.

FROM AN OLD SCRAP BOOK

The articles below were found in an old Scrap Book, having been published years ago, but perhaps they will be as interesting to this generation as they were to past ones.

WANTED

- Wanted—A wife who can handle a broom. To brush down the cobwebs and sweep up the room;
- To make decent bread that a fellow can eat—
- Not the horrible compound you everywhere meet;
- Who knows how to broil, to fry, and to roast;
- Make up a cup of good tea and a platter of toast;
- A woman who washes, cooks, irons, and stitches.
- And sews up the rips in a fellow's old breeches.
- And makes her own garments—an item which is
- So horrid expensive as every one knows;
- A common-sense creature, and still with a mind
- To teach and to guide—exactly, refined;
- A sort of an angel and house maid combined.

AN ANSWER TO "WANTED"

- "Do you know you have asked for the costliest thing
- Ever made by the hand above,
- A woman's heart and a woman's life,
- And a woman's wonderful love?
- "Do you know you have asked for this priceless thing
- As a child might ask for a toy?
- Demanding what others have died to win,
- With the reckless dash of a boy.
- "You have written my lesson of duty out,
- Man-like, you have questioned me;
- Now stand at the bar of my woman's soul
- Until I shall question thee.
- "You require your mutton shall always be hot,
- Your socks and your shirts shall be whole;
- I require your heart to be true as God's stars,
- And pure as heaven, your soul.
- "You require a cook for your mutton and beef,
- I require a far better thing;
- A seamstress you're wanting for stockings and shirts;
- I look for a Man and a King.
- "A King for a beautiful realm called Home,
- And a Man that the Maker, God,
- Shall look upon as he did on the first,
- And say, "It is very good."

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

RARE GLADIOLUS AND DAHLIA ROOTS

A mixture of gorgeous blooming rare Gladiolus, 100 for $3, or 30 for $1. Also a great surprise mixture, 100 for $2, or 40 for $1.

Also choice collection of Dahlia Roots, 10 for $1. All postpaid.
R. J. GIBBINS
Mt Holly, New Jersey

FREEDOM FROM LAXATIVES

Discovery by Scientists Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Medical authorities have found that the gentle lubricating action of Nujol most closely resembles that of Nature's own lubricant. As Nujol is not a laxative it cannot gripe. It is in no sense a medicine. And like pure water it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is prescribed by physicians; used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6¼ per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn,
President.

207 N. Tryon St.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY,
Sec'y & Treas.

COLLECTION ENVELOPES

DUPLEX OR DOUBLE-END PRINTED-TO-ORDER ENVELOPES

Delivery Charges Not Included

White Envelopes—Size 2½x4¼ in., 52 to set, printed with name of individual church, dated on both ends and packed in cartons. No order filled for less than a minimum charge of $4.00.

25 to 49 sets.....	19	cents per set
50 to 109 sets.....	17	cents per set
110 to 209 sets.....	16½	cents per set
210 to 309 sets.....	16	cents per set
310 to 409 sets.....	14½	cents per set
410 or more sets....	14	cents per set

A charge of $1.00 made for each change in copy. 20 per cent discount on cash orders.

MODERN CHURCH TREASURER'S RECORD

Treasurer's Record Book ruled to keep an account with each subscriber for a year (name written but once), showing contributions for local church and benevolences at a glance.

For Both the Duplex and Single Envelope System

200 names or less	$1.50
300 names	1.75
500 names	2.25
1,000 names	3.25
Subscription cards, per 10050
Information Blanks, per 100	1.00
Treasurer's Statements per 10050
Special Day Envelopes, Thanksgiv- ing, Christmas, Building Fund, etc. per 10040

"STOCK-FORM" ENVELOPES

Many churches have hesitated to introduce the use of collection envelopes on account of the cost of supplies.

To meet the needs of congregations which must practice rigid economy we have worked out a "Stock Form," or undated envelope, described below, at twelve cents per set, delivery charges extra, in any quantity wanted. Packages containing only two envelopes per month at seven cents per set, delivery extra.

CHANGES IMPOSSIBLE

The STOCK FORM envelopes are printed from a fixed, unchangeable plate, so that no changes can be made. Each package of envelopes will bear a separate number, but we cannot furnish packages bearing just the numbers you suggest. To explain, we cannot furnish each lot of twenty-five packages bearing numbers 1 to 25. We may have to send your lot numbered from 476 to 500. On one end these envelopes show all the benevolent causes for which our Assembly, Synods and Presbyteries ask the churches to make offerings, and the other end provides for the expense of the local church. Being undated, the unused packages are good for next year, so there is no waste. Samples sent free on request.

ORDER FROM

PRESBYTERIAN COMMITTEE OF PUBLICATION
Richmond, Va., Texarkana, Ark.-Tex

Old Buck Guano
Richmond

Fertilizer of Excellent Quality

Old Buck Guano Company
INCORPORATED

Richmond, Virginia

Allied with F. S. Royster Guano Co.

"I am fair and young, but the rose will fade
From my soft young cheek some day;
Will you love me then, mid the falling leaves.
As you did mid the bloom of May?
"Is your heart an ocean so strong and deep,
I may launch my all on its tide?
A loving woman finds heaven or hell
On the day she is made a bride.
"I require all things that are grand and true,
All things that a man should be.
If you give this all, I would stake my life
To be all you demand of me.
"If you cannot do this, a laundress and cook
You can hire with a little pay;
But a woman's heart and a woman's life
Are not to be won that way."

HOW TO FIND OUT THE WILL OF THE LORD

First: Pray.
Second: Think.
Third: Talk to wise people, but do not regard their decision as final.
Fourth: Beware of the bias of your own will, but do not be too much afraid of it. It is a mistake to think that God's will is necessarily in the line of the disagreeable.
Fifth: Meantime, do the nearest duty; for doing God's will in small things is the best preparation for knowing it in great things.

ABERDEEN & ROCKFISH RAILROAD

BETWEEN ABERDEEN & FAYETTEVILLE		Eastbound		Westbound
Daily Ex.	Sunday Mixed.	Daily Ex.	Sunday Mixed.	Daily Ex.	Sunday Mixed.
STATIONS
No. 22.	No. 38.	No. 41.	No. 21
Lv.		Ar.
7:30am	9:10am	Aherdeen	6:41pm	5:00pm
Ar 8:35am	10:00am	Raeform	5:55pm	3:50pm
Lv 2:10pm		Raeform	Ar 2:50pm
Ar.		Lv.
4:00pm	11:20am	Fayetteville	4:50pm	1pm
WAGRAM BRANCH
Southbound		Northbound
Daily Ex.	Sun. Mixed.	Daily Ex.	Sun. Mixed.
STATIONS
No. 11	No. 12
Lv. 10:30am	Raeform	Ar. 12:40pm
Ar. 11:15am	Wagram	Lv. 12 noon
W. A. BLUE, General Supt., Aberdeen. N. C.

Sparkles

A tourist who had been staying at an old-fashioned country hotel protested the charge for "attendance."
"Why, the bells in your rooms are a perfect disgrace," he declared; "not one of them would ring. Everything I wanted I had to fetch myself. I must have spent hours tugging at those bell-pulls."
"Ah, sir, it is quite true that we have charged you for attendance," said the smiling proprietor, "but we have charged you nothing for your physical culture course."
"Physical culture course? I don't know what you mean."
"The daily use of our dumb bells."—Boston Transcript.

Canny Scot

Two Scotchmen were on a raft adrift on a stormy sea. Angus knelt and began to pray.
"O Lord," he said, "I ken I've broken maist o' Thy commandments. But, O Lord, if I'm spared this time I promise—"
Here Andrew interrupted him.
"I widna commit yoursel' over far, Angus," said he. "I think I see land."—Los Angeles Times.

"This check," the bank-teller said, "isn't filled in, ma'am"
"How so?" asked the woman, with a puzzled smile.
"Your husband's name is signed to the check all right, but it doesn't state how much money you want."
"Oh," said the woman, looking relieved, "is that all? Just give me, please, all there is."—Detroit Free Press.

"So Clara threw over that young doctor she was going with?"
"Yes, and what do you think? He not only requested her to return his presents, but sent her a bill for 47 visits."—Boston Transcript.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.
PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.
Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Buy From the Manufacturer

There is one good and sufficient reason why you should buy your Piano from the manufacturer—DIRECT RESPONSIBILITY.

STIEFF PRODUCTS
Stieff Pianos and Players
Shaw Pianos and Players
Bennett-Bretz Pianos and Players
Davies & Sons Pianos and Players
Leslie Bros. Pianos and Players

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.
Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, INC., Charlotte, N. C.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
20c to 35c
None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS
IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

THE KIND OF FURNITURE THAT MAKES HOME MORE ALLURING

We put forth especial effort to secure the highest type of really comfortable and lasting living-room furniture at a price that is reasonable.

We have just placed on our floors another carload of just this kind of furniture.

Our sales in living-room suits has been little less than phenomenal. A 3-piece suit like the sofa shown above in beautiful tapestry or velour is $275.00. Visit this department.

W. T. McCoy & CO.
211 South Tryon St. Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., FEBRUARY 28, 1923

No. 9

Special Presbyterian Progressive Program Number

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

A Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year.

No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
"Casting Bread Upon the Waters"	2
The Progressive Campaign	2
The Laymen's Edition	2
The Western Section	2
CONTRIBUTED—
Are You a Presbyterian?—By T. E. Simpson	3
"Your Help Needed"	3
What the Progressive Program Has Done for Our Church	3
A Message From Representative Leaders	4
The Place of Prayer in the Presbyterian Progressive Program—By Rev. A. B. Curry, D. D.	5
The Presbyterian Progressive Program in Our Synods	6, 18
The Every Member Canvass Works When It Is Worked	7, 8, 10
The Stewardship of Possessions—By Dr. Marion McH. Hall	9
DEPARTMENTS—
Woman's Auxiliary—By Mrs. J. M. McIver ..	11
Young People's Department	12
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	12
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth ..	12
Church News	13, 14
News of the Week	15
Children	16
Marriages and Deaths	17

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

- Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
- Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
- General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
- Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
- Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
- Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
- The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

PRESBYTERIAN PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM

"A Whole Program For the Whole Church"

$4,750,000 FOR BENEVOLENCES

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18th
ARE YOU PREPARING?

DEPARTMENTS:

- I. SPIRITUAL LIFE—Nov., Dec. Jan.
To Nourish the Spiritual Life of the Church Membership.
- II. EVANGELISM AND MISSIONS—June, July, Aug.
(a) To Adopt Christ's Program of World Evangelism and World Welfare.
(b) To Educate the Church to Meet Our Part of Christ's Program for the World.
- III. CHRISTIAN TRAINING—Apr., May.
(a) To Extend and Pervert the Work of the Church in Christian Education.
(b) To Enlist and Train for the King's Service.
- IV. STEWARDSHIP OF POSSESSIONS—Feb., March.
To Adopt a Scriptural System of Giving and a Scriptural Standard of Giving.
- V. FELLOWSHIP—Sept., Oct.
To Promote the Social Ministries of the Church.

BILLIONS FOR AUTOMOBILES; HOW MUCH FOR CHRIST THE KING?

The American people spend seven billion dollars a year on automobiles. This includes the yearly cost of the motor cars, the cost of up-keep and the cost of operation. Probably it does not cover the fines assessed upon motorists for violation of traffic laws nor does it include the loss of work and wages of men who are sent to prison for murder by motor.

But seven billion dollars is nearly one-third of the annual income of the people of the United States; also it is nearly one-third of our national debt.

Probably the pleasure, luxury, convenience and help to mankind afforded by the motor car—these are worth the seven billion dollars. But any nation which can afford such an expenditure can certainly give more to the finer works of righteousness. Benevolences need more money. Missions need more money. Religious education needs financial assistance.

—Christian Statesman.

1,474 Churches in Our Assembly Report No Every Member Canvass. Is Yours One of These?

"CASTING BREAD UPON THE WATERS"

Each of the three Church Papers will print several thousand extra copies of this issue, to be sent to all the families of the Church who are not subscribers to one of the three papers.

This is done by the Stewardship Committee at a considerable expense to them, though not to any special profit to the papers.

The Committee is thus investing money in reaching those who can be reached in no better way, with the hope that this bread cast upon the waters they will find after many days in the shape of new interest in the work of the Church, that will express itself in greater liberality.

The papers are furnished at cost for the sake of the advertising obtained.

We trust that our readers will study prayerfully the facts presented, and, under the inspiration of their appeal, rally around the Committee.

Instead of carping criticism, give them your loyal support, and remember that with a united Church behind them they can accomplish far more than one would think possible. Remember that people who make no mistakes, never make much else. No man's work should be judged by isolated cases, because no work in this life is ever perfect. What we need to do is to take the result of the Committee's work as a whole, and then you will be amazed at the result. Their object is to develop an intelligent constituency, that will support their plans because they are wise plans.

To the average reader these articles may seem unimportant, but if you will read and study them, having in view the aims of the Church, to build up God's kingdom on earth, they become of supreme importance.

Think of the Church as a great machine, each part working in harmony with the other parts, and thus supplementing the other. When you do this, you will grasp the idea of the members of this Committee, and be impressed by its importance.

In order to keep in touch with the many phases of church work, you need a weekly visitor, such as the Church paper. You will be more intelligent, and your children will grow up as earnest Presbyterians, who will be the mainstay of the future.

THE PROGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN

The Southern Presbyterian Church, in the matter of giving, has recently been held up by other churches as an example of liberality in the giving of their means. When we compare our record with that of other churches, North or South, we have reason to be proud of what we have done.

If also we compare our record in the past with what it is today, we must be impressed with the wonderful increase in giving, and the question naturally presents itself, to what is this great increase due?

The most careless observer must see at once that it is due to the difference between haphazard and systematic giving, between the occasional appeal from the pulpit and the persistent canvass by men appointed from each church.

This question only moves the question further back—Who plans this simultaneous and systematic canvass? The only answer is, the Progressive Campaign Committee, known as the Stewardship Committee, with headquarters at Chattanooga.

Presbyterians, the world over, are set in their ways, and it takes a great deal to change their ways. While this is true of Presbyterians in general, it is pre-eminently true of the Southern Church in particular.

In consequence of this conservatism, this Progressive Campaign Committee has had rough sailing. It may be that the name "Progressive" aroused antagonism, or it may be that men did not like to be aroused from slumber, but however that may be, the opposition was strong. When their financial reports came out, and it was found that they had spent thousands of dollars, the pastors who were living on small salaries, were desperate.

Then the charge was made that these brethren were disobeying Peter's injunction, and were lording it over God's heritage.

Gradually this opposition has ceased, because, with all of our bull-headedness, we Presbyterians mean well, and when we once see the unreasonableness of our position, we confess our faults and put our shoulders to the wheel.

It has dawned upon the Church that this Committee was suggesting rather than ordering, and when this idea was absorbed, many of those who had rebelled against being directed how to run their church, became loyal supporters.

EDITORIAL

The opposition also relaxed when it was shown that, instead of wasting the money of the church, these brethren had made a record that won the admiration of keen business men. It was shown, for example, that while the overhead expenses of other businesses, such as dry goods, shoes, clothing, drugs and hardware, average 23 to 25 per cent of the gross income, our Church, working in seven foreign fields and in our home fields, has overhead charges of only 9.8 per cent for all our work, including four Executive Committees, Stewardship Committee and the Woman's Auxiliary.

These facts have turned the opposers of the new methods into staunch and enthusiastic friends.

The Every Member Canvass in the past has done wonders. On March 18, 1923, another one will begin. Let us determine to make this one 100 per cent efficient. It depends largely upon the pastors and officers of each church making use of the suggestions and helps of the Stewardship Committee.

THE LAYMEN'S EDITION

The Stewardship Committee work lies at the base of all of our efforts to raise funds for the various causes and to kindle interest in spiritual growth of the church's membership. We give that Committee the space for this week.

In point of importance in its inspiring effect we would regard the work of the Laymen's Movement and the Woman's Auxiliary as coming next. In keeping with this conclusion we expect to devote our next issue to the two conferences held in this city last week and also to the other regional conferences held in the different sections of our Church.

THE WESTERN SECTION

WHAT is the meaning of the above caption? Only those know who have taken a post-graduate degree in Presbyterianism. Test it out on the first Presbyterian preacher you meet. If he can tell you what the Western Section is, you need have no hesitancy in going to him for information on any other matter of Presbyterian history, or polity. Well, the Western Section met in Toronto, Canada, on the 14th inst. and its session included the 14th and 15th days of this month. There was a full meeting, delegates being present from all the principal Presbyterian and Reformed Churches of the United States, and from the Presbyterian Church of Canada. There were ten representatives present from our own Church, an unusually large number owing no doubt to the magnetism of the fine city of Toronto, and also the desire to sample the salubrious climate which is fanned by breezes fresh from the North Pole. Then there were the Falls of Niagara lying on the route. To see them at any time is to be thrilled by their awful majesty; but to see them in a setting of ice and snow is to witness a scene of frigid grandeur that defies the artist's brush and drives the poet to despair. Quite a little forest of oaks and elms spreads out on the American side on top of the gorge south of the Falls. The wind drives the mists from the falls through this forest, where they freeze and adhere to twig and branch and trunk until the whole forest is encased in a thick covering of snow-white crystals. To see this with the sun shining on it and converting it into a dazzling sheen of unparalleled splendor reduces one to the condition of the school girl who wrote home to her mother giving her impressions in this brief, yet comprehensive language: "O! OO!! OOO!!!"

The sessions of the Western Section were presided over gracefully and effectively by Rev. R. P. McKay, D.D., a distinguished minister of the Canadian Church. The exercises consisted for the most part in addresses on various topics of current importance. One of the editors of the Standard produced rather an interesting situation by relieving his system of certain things that had stirred his bile. He had the effrontery to champion the teachings of the Westminster Confession of Faith touching the inspiration and infallibility of the Bible. He ventured to make a slight fling at the doctrine of evolution, and to call in question the "assured results of the Higher Criticism." His audacity was not permitted to go unchallenged. There are scholars among the Presbyterian preachers who do not care to be seen tagging along at the tail end of the procession. They prefer rather to occupy a position pretty far up toward the head. They have great respect for the Bible, but not the Bible as it used to be. They find that the Bible as rejuvenated and brought down to date better answers their purpose. Such a Bible is better adapted to the task of winning the sinners of our more enlightened age. So the editor of the Standard was promptly admonished that his views would never get him anywhere in our day. Several speakers volunteered their services to show how that letting go of an infallible book and holding on to an infallible Christ we could make our preaching keep pace with the advance of knowledge, and win to our side men of scientific habits of thought. Then it was that Dr. S. L. Morris, our own Dr. Morris, had the audacity to call for a show-down of results. "Gentlemen," he said, "you have told us how to do it, show us now that you have actually done it. Here is our exhibit. The editor of the Standard has spoken for the two thousand ministers of the Southern Presbyterian Church. They are all moss-backs just like him. The church which they serve has made a net gain of four per cent during the last ten years. I challenge you to point to any church in the whole country that has made equal progress. How is it, if preaching the old traditional faith will get us nowhere, that the church which has no other kind of preaching outstrips in growth all its sister churches?" Now, was not that cruelly impudent in Dr. Morris, just to put over against their theories these hard, stubborn facts? How did they answer him? We listened for their answer, and up to the present time we have not heard it. If they do not answer him, not with fine-spun theories, but with opposing facts, we shall go on believing as we have long believed that just to the extent that the old evangelical faith is displaced by a liberalism that is trying to conciliate the skeptical spirit of the age, just to that extent will the church lose in spiritual power. When liberalism reaches its ripe fruitage in Unitarianism, its spiritual power drops to zero. Unitarianism hasn't sufficient spiritual life for self-preservation and self-propagation. Forty per cent of its ministry is recruited by defections from other churches, and after all it is a decrepit paralytic. That is what comes of trying to adapt Christianity to the requirements of the modern mind.

The most worth-while business of the Section was in connection with the distressing conditions of the Reformed Churches in Europe. Through delegations sent out for that purpose the Section keeps itself well informed of the sufferings of our brethren in France, Belgium, Hungary and other countries, and the Section not only takes steps to give those brethren assurance of sentimental sympathy, but also to minister practical aid to their needs. The Section keeps the various constituent churches informed of conditions in Europe; it both appeals to the churches for money, and itself collects and transmits money; it has sent considerable aid to the starving preachers in Hungary; and it has opened the way for theological students in Hungary and Czecho-Slovakia to come to the seminaries of this country for their education. All the seminaries of our Southern Church are preparing to take students from those countries. This promises great things for the future. We shall get their choicest men, and if we can with the blessing of God not only teach them our conservative theology, but also imbue them with our warm evangelical faith, they will be an incalculable blessing to their home churches.

A new venture of a very interesting kind was made by the Section. The Dutch Reformed Church has a mission in Bagdad for the purpose of converting the Arab Mohammedans. That church has asked for the co-operation of certain other Presbyterian and Reformed Churches. It was proposed at this meeting of the Section that all the constituent churches of the Western Section make this mission in Arabia a joint work. Steps were taken to bring this about by an appeal to the supreme judicatories of all the churches. The aim of the work as outlined is the evangelization of Mohammedans in the unoccupied area of Mesopotamia, officially designated as the kingdom of Iraq. The plan is to occupy in the begin-

(Continued on page 4)

Are You a Presbyterian?

?

Is your answer "YES?" Well, your Church needs you and needs you now, in the carrying forward of its great work. Your faithful Missionaries at Home and Abroad must be supported; the young people must be properly taught and trained for life's responsibilities, in Christian schools and in the Sabbath School; your loyal pastors,—men of God, who are laboring for you and with you in the Gospel and who never fail you in time of joy or sorrow, these servants of God deserve an adequate salary, proportioned to their place and needs.

Some Specifications

If you are a Presbyterian, then your Church has a right to expect of you an intelligent, comprehensive grasp of the scope and purpose of the Presbyterian Progressive Program.

If you are a Presbyterian, then your Church is calling for the enlistment of your personal interest and hearty co-operation in the attainment of the goals set before it for 1923-1924.

If you are a Presbyterian, then YOU have been counted in the membership of the Southern Presbyterian Church, for something more than a numeral. In its splendid program, the Church makes its appraisal of you as enlisted for service and assuming your responsibility and share in the support of the budget for the whole work of the Church. The Budget of the Church is made on the basis of every individual in the Church. The Church is depending on you includes you as necessary to the fulfillment of its plans. If you should fail your Church in the Progressive Program and in the Every Member Canvass it will cause a break in the ranks that will have its effect all along the line of the activities of the Church.

To every loyal Presbyterian, the essential goals the Church has before it for the year immediately ahead, should constitute nothing short of a challenge. They represent the things we must do if we are to grow and advance. To what extent are you ready and willing to make them a fact and realization in your Church?

10% of Membership Added on Profession of Faith.

15% Increase in Sunday School Enrollment.

25% Increase in Church Attendance.

A Family Altar in Every Home.

A Weekly Church Paper and "The Missionary Survey" in Every Home.

At Least One Life, in Each Congregation, Enlisted for Definite, Full-time Service for the Church.

$4,750,000 Pledged for Benevolences.

A Congregational Secretary of Stewardship in Each Church.

The assumed responsibilities of the Southern Presbyterian Church demanded the very best that every man, woman, and child can render, of their life, service, and substance. Anything less than this would be an unworthy standard for the Church.

T. E. SIMPSON, Chattanooga, Tenn.
Assembly's Stewardship Committee.

"YOUR HELP NEEDED"

Some time ago a friend of Christian Education offered a prize of $100 for the best short address or article on Christian Education. It is the purpose in this to show the fundamental importance of the church schools and colleges to the advancement of the Kingdom of God. After very mature thought it has been decided to postpone the awarding of this prize until April 1, 1923.

We invite ministers, candidates for the ministry, members of the auxiliary and of the young people's societies to enter into this contest. The manuscripts should be written clearly on one side of the paper and should not exceed five or six thousand words.

Address all communications to Henry H. Sweets, Secretary, 410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

What the Progressive Program Has Done for Our Church

1. A comparison of the year 1915 with the year 1912, before the Program was inaugurated, shows only slight gains.
2. A comparison of the year 1922 with the year 1915; the year 1915 being the year just before the Program became operative; the year 1922, seven years later, shows the growth in six years under the Program.

	1912	1915	Gain over 1912	1922	Gain over 1915
I. BENEVOLENCES
For Missions	$ 501,412	$544,162	8%	$ 1,131,627	108%
Assembly's Home Missions	116,747	165,718	41%	407,017	145%
C. Ed. and Ministerial Relief	97,147	108,910	12%	181,761	30%
Sunday School and Publication	25,499	32,827	29%	96,704	200%
Pastors' Salaries	1,493,234	1,413,630	(—)	2,663,192	85%
Total Gifts	4,293,044	4,792,860	7%	11,743,725	145%
Per Member	14.66	14.42	(—)	28.50	100%
II. WORKING ORGANIZATION
Ministers	1,734	1,850	6%	2,055	11%
Churches	3,392	3,438	nil	3,492	nil
Members	292,845	332,339	13%	411,845	24%
Officers	21,614	23,648	9%	28,481	20%
Added on Examination	14,103	20,156	42%	24,002	14%
Missionaries	317	339	7%	463	33%

The 1965 churches using the modern plan of finance are, by accurate test, bearing the great part of the load. The 1474 churches without a modern plan of finance, are, by accurate test, giving per member much less than one half the amount being given by the others.

What could our Church not do, if our laymen would help inaugurate a great revival for the FAMILY ALTAR, PERSONAL EVANGELISM AND TITHING? It would lift our Church as the rushing in of a Great Tide lifts the loaded Ship.

The above constitutes my message and appeal to the Church as we face the Great Event in the Every Member Canvass of March 18th.

M. E. MELVIN, General Secretary Assembly's Stewardship Committee.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIANS AFFORD TO GIVE $4,750,000 TO ALL BENEVOLENCES 1923

PER MEMBER EXPENDITURES 1922 NON-ESSENTIALS

Candy and Gum	$ 7.14
Soda and Confections	$ 7.95
Base Ball and Theatres	$ 8.50
Perfumery, Jewels, Silk, Stockings and other articles personal adornment	$ 9.13
Cigars Cigarettes Tobacco	$ 10.96
MOVING PICTURES	$ 11.20
TOTAL PER MEMBER	$ 56.⁸⁸

PER MEMBER INVESTMENTS 1922 BENEVOLENCES, PASTORS SALARIES

BIBLE CAUSE	.06
PUBLICATION & SABBATH SCHOOLS	.23
ORPHANS HOMES	.90
CHRISTIAN ED. MINISTERIAL RELIEF	.92
ASSEMBLY'S HOME MISSIONS	$ 1.32
EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS	$ 1.80
LOCAL HOME MISSIONS	$ 2.08
FOREIGN MISSIONS	$ 3.11
PASTORS SALARIES	$ 6.48
TOTAL PER MEMBER	$ 16.⁹⁰

WHERE SHALL WE CUT DOWN AND WHERE INCREASE? IS THE ABOVE THE VALUE WE SET ON OUR RELIGION? SHALL WE PAY THE "LIGHTS OF HOLLYWOOD" MORE THAN WE PAY OUR PASTORS, WHO ARE WITH US IN JOY AND SORROW, AND WHO ARE THE GREATEST FORCE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS OUR COUNTRY HAS?

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S STEWARDSHIP COM. TIMES BUILDING, CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE.

MARCH 18TH WILL DETERMINE THE WHOLE WORK OF THE CHURCH

A MESSAGE FROM REPRESENTATIVE LEADERS

PRELIMINARY TO SUCCESS

I. The Success We Seek

Our program is one for the whole year, for the whole Church, for the whole life, and for the whole world.

To be spiritually minded; to be evangelistic and missionary; to be trained workers; to be systematic and proportionate givers; to be helpful to every one—these are the high aspirations of our Church as outlined in her Progressive Program.

II. The Task at Hand

Just now we are to deal with systematic and proportionate giving as we prepare for and make our annual Every Member Canvass on March 18th.

We will make our pledges not just from loyalty to our Church and the Progressive Program, nor yet just from love of humanity and a sense of its need. But with the high understanding that we are offering something to God for His glory.

III. Our Preparation

Let us study humanity's need. Let us learn of our own Church and her work. Let us act together—as one man: But more than all these, let us make a spiritual preparation. No one of us will have done his part until he has gone into the secret place and held earnest converse with his Lord about His Kingdom and its needs. He can in no other way find the full measure of his duty. This is preliminary to success.

Rev. D. Clay Lilly, Chairman,

General Assembly's Stewardship Committee.

Lexington, Ky.

Foreign Missions, and the Progressive Program

The success of the Foreign Mission cause is bound up in the success of the Presbyterian Progressive Program. Humanly speaking it is our one dependence. Should the Progressive Program this year raise its Foreign Mission quota, it would pay the year's Foreign Mission bill, wipe out the deficit, and leave a good sum for sorely needed expansion. The Foreign Mission Committee calls upon every lover of Foreign Missions to put his time, his efforts, his gifts, and his prayers at the service of the Progressive Program.

Rev. Egbert W. Smith, D.D.,

Nashville, Tenn.

Executive Secretary.

Home Missions, and the Progressive Program

In its Progressive Program the Presbyterian Church has in some respects the best financial policy of any denomination in the United States, judged by its splendid fruits. It tided the Church successfully over the financial crisis of the fearful depression of the war period; and while other institutions were collapsing under the strain it not only increased but quadrupled receipts in behalf of the benevolent causes of the Church.

The former haphazard method of financing the work of the Church by loose change under pressure of appeals for "collections" furnished but an uncertain income and signally failed to enlist the resources of the whole Church. By means of the Every Member Canvass the receipts are now regular, assured and annually increasing to meet the growing demands of the work.

Assembly's Home Missions has gone forward by leaps and bounds under the inspiration of the promotion conducted by the Stewardship Committee, and we can now make our appropriations with absolute guarantee of meeting our enlarging obligations. The work of Home Missions is still crippled, however, by the failure of the Church to furnish the full estimated amount necessary to maintain it on the present basis. It does not provide for the advance demanded by our aggressive work. If the Executive Committee should undertake to meet all the demands upon its treasury, it would require an outlay of more than a million dollars annually.

The Progressive Program emphasizes the wholeness and the oneness of the task, illustrating the unity of the Church. There is inspiration in the thought that the dollar laid on the altar of the Church today no longer goes to any one object, but distributes itself unto the ends of the earth, upon the standardized scale of percentages officially adopted by our Assembly, thereby carrying forward the work of the Church systematically and according to the relative importance of each branch of its missionary operations.

The chief need of the Church at present is not only to maintain the standard of efficiency already attained, but to enlarge its operations and justify the "progressiveness" of the campaign. If the present enlistment of only three-fourths of the Church has worked financial wonders equal to any Aladdin's lamp, what would be the effect if the entire Church could be enlisted heartily for its whole

THE PRESBYTERIAN PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM

At the close of the World War, all the great denominations started new movements, set new goals and devised new methods to stimulate the zeal and develop the liberality of their churches. In my judgment our Church hit upon the wisest scheme of any in its Progressive Program.

This Program sets a financial goal which the Church can and ought to reach; it proposes in the Every Member Canvass a method for reaching this goal which is sound, sensible and scriptural. Recognizing that not to go forward is to go backward, it suggests a reasonable and practical rate of progress. And to avoid mortgaging the future, it limits the advance to a year at a time.

This Program is no longer an experiment. Its effectiveness has been demonstrated. All that is needed is that we be "not weary in well-doing," but "forgetting the things that are behind and reaching forth to those which are before, we should press toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

God has done great things for us, but has greater things in store for us, if only we are faithful.

DR. R. C. REED,
Moderator of General Assembly.

task? As a result, the financial troubles of its Executive Committees would be ended, and the thrill of a mighty enthusiasm for evangelization would be felt to the uttermost part of the earth.

Words fail me to express my appreciation and endorsement of the Progressive Program. I earnestly appeal for the cordial support of the whole Church and pray that there may be a response adequate to the opportunities challenging our Church in order that it may be true to its mission, its Master and the Kingdom of God among men. For some years it has led all denominations in net gain. Devout thankfulness for the manifest favor of God should inspire us to renewed effort and fidelity in behalf of the salvation of souls in our world-wide campaign of missionary operations.

Rev. S. L. Morris, D.D.,

Atlanta, Ga.

Executive Secretary.

Christian Education, Ministerial Relief, and the Progressive Program

Since the inauguration of the Every Member Canvass in the Presbyterian Church, the Executive Committee of Christian Education and Ministerial Relief has given this work its heartiest and most faithful endorsement and help.

We do not believe that any other method of financing the work of the Church has been suggested that is comparable to this. It is helping to enlist all of the members in all of the work of the Church. It is causing those who give to do so with more system and regularity. It has called forth inspiring literature and has provoked careful study of the world-wide work of the Church. It is the sanest, most effective, most scriptural method of financing the work of the Church that has ever been devised.

Rev. Henry H. Sweets, D.D.,

Executive Secretary, General Assembly's Committee on Christian Education and Ministerial Relief.

Young People and the Progressive Program

"TO-GETHER-NESS" was said by Edward Everett Hale to be the slogan for the twentieth century. It is certainly the keyword of the Progressive Program. In one united effort each church is urged to raise a budget which will provide for the pastor's salary, for current expenses of the local church, for Presbyterian and Synodical needs, and for the great missionary and benevolent program of the four Assembly Committees.

The plan is ideal, but it is not self-operative and will only produce the desired results when every church adopts and works the plan thoroughly.

Reaching our share of the thirteen million neglected young people of the South waits upon the complete adoption of the plan by all our churches.

R. E. Magill, Executive Secretary.

Richmond, Va.

EDITORIAL.

(Continued from page 2)

ning Bagdad and Mosul, looking to the ultimate occupancy of Hillah, Kerbala and other strategic points in the area.

It may be well to note that this kingdom of Iraq is the territory over which the British and the Turks are having such a fierce and protracted diplomatic struggle. It used to belong to Turkey, and the Turks are insisting, to the point of threatening war, on regaining it and possessing it in perpetuity. The British were given a mandate over it, and have two strong reasons for holding on to it. One reason is that the Arabs, who occupy the territory, do not wish to be put back under Turkish rule, and were promised independence by the Allies. The other reason is that the territory is supposed to be rich in oil, and Great Britain, like all other civilized nations, has come to be very fond of oil.

Much has been said about the heated squabble of the Christian nations with the Turks over oil concessions, while they stand idly by and let the Turks murder helpless Christians by the wholesale. It is some relief to the picture to see the churches of Christ showing more zeal for the souls of the benighted Mohammedans than about their earthly possessions. It may be further said that it would be a fitting illustration of the spirit of unity and brotherly co-operation which exists, or should exist, among the churches that compose the Western Section, if they should jointly enter upon this much needed mission to the deluded followers of the False Prophet.

The Western Section adjourned to meet next February in the First Presbyterian Church, Newport News, Va.

What Will Your Church Do March 18th to Reach the Goal of $4,750,000?

THE PLACE OF PRAYER in the
PRESBYTERIAN PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM

By Rev. A. B. Curry, D.D.

The peril of all human programs is the leaving out of God. We fall so in love with our program, a program which our wisdom has devised, that we are apt to ascribe to it an inherent power, almost a divine power, which it does not possess. The Bible tells us of certain fishermen who "sacrificed to their net, and burned incense to their drag"; who worshipped their machinery as if it could catch fish of itself. This was silly. The net was nothing without the human hand that cast it, and the human hand that cast it was nothing without the Mighty One who gave it strength and skill, and who made both the sea and the fish that swim therein.

Our Presbyterian Progressive Program is our net. It is a well made net, one of the best ever devised: but there is no inherent power in it of itself to "catch men, alive." We must use our net with strength and skill, but especially must we look up to Him who made men, and this world in which they live. This looking dependently up to God and appealing to Him is prayer.

Look at our splendid program for a moment. Is there any part of it that we can put over successfully without God?

"Spiritual Life. The Family Altar Promoted." Who can give or sustain spiritual life but God? And without spiritual life, what is the family altar but a dead ash heap? God manifest in the flesh says: "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." We must look to Him in prayer if we would have spiritual life.

"Evangelism. Fifty Thousand New Members." How hopeless and impossible is the evangelistic task without God's presence and power! In apostolic days, "The Lord added to them day by day those that were being saved," and today only He can add real members to the Church. Only those who are "Born of the Spirit" can really "Enter the Kingdom of God." And the Spirit is given in answer to prayer.

"Christian Education: the Dedication of Life." The object of Christian Education is to put qualified laborers into the ripened fields of the home, of society, of business, of the Church and of the world. Education alone does not and cannot make ministers of the Gospel and other religious workers. But here is what will do it: "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He send forth laborers into His harvest." Here, also, we are led up to prayer as the essential thing in securing trained workers.

"Stewardship of Possessions." Money obtained without recognition of God in prayer is dangerous money. One reason why wealth did not ruin David as it did his son, Solomon, was because David could say in prayer: "O Lord, our God, all this store that we have prepared . . . cometh from thy hand and is all thine own." Prayer gave David the right viewpoint as to his possessions. Money spent without recognition of God is also dangerous money. One trouble with Dives and the rich fool of whom our Lord tells us, was that they did not pray to God about the expenditure and use of their money. One of them wasted it on himself in high living: the other hoarded it: and in consequence neither of them reached Abraham's bosom. There is no matter about which men need to pray more constantly and earnestly than the acquisition and expenditure of money.

"Fellowship." The fellowship of the early Christians was beautiful and renowned. Their pagan neighbors used to say: "Behold how these Christians love one another." The secret of this fellowship is given us in these words: "And they continued steadfastly in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship and in breaking of bread and in prayers." A fellowship that is not permeated with the spirit and with the act of prayer will forget God, will leave Him out and bring the world in, and will cease to be Christian.

And so in every department of our Progressive Program we are in the last analysis thrown back on prayer to God. The Apostle Paul announced this truth when he said: "I have planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase," and God alone can give the increase. The planting and the watering are important, but the most important thing of all is the releasing of God's power to give the increase. And one way of releasing this power is by prayer. "Ask and it shall be given unto you." We may not know fully why God has made prayer a condition of the releasing of His power, but one reason doubtless is that if God should give His power to people who do not desire it and value it enough to pray for it, either they would not use it when received, or would use it unwisely and perhaps wickedly. The one essential thing, therefore, in our program is prayer, and the greatest thing any of us can do for the program is to pray for God's hand in it, and His blessing upon it.

Does any one say this is easy? He is mistaken. It is easy to "say prayers," but real prayer is not easy. When Moses prayed for victory in Israel's battle with Amalek, he labored as hard as did Joshua on the battlefield, and the physical exhaustion was so great it took two men to support him. Our Lord spent entire nights in prayer, and when He prayed in Gethsemane He sweat drops as it were of blood. When John Knox prayed for Scotland's deliverance he cried: "Lord, give me Scotland or I die." Real prayer is hard spiritual labor. Moreover real prayer is accompanied by diligent effort. The necessary sequel of Stonewall Jackson's earnest prayer on the eve of conflict was the magnificent fighting of himself and his men on the battlefield. The sequel of our Lord's prayer in Gethsemane was His death on Calvary for a lost world. And the sequel of all real prayer is earnest, self-denying endeavor. If prayer is not accompanied by effort, it is formal prayer, not real. If our people will really pray for the program, they will rise up in the might which God always gives in answer to real prayer and put the program over.

Let us then give ourselves to earnest prayer in connection with our fine program. Let our ministers lead our people in prayer for the great objects of the program and for the success of the program, at every public service. Let them have special prayer meetings to pray for the program, or devote the weekly prayer meeting frequently to this object.

FINANCIAL GOALS FOR THE $4,750,000 FOR BENEVOLENCE IN THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS, MARCH 18TH
General Assembly's Causes
Foreign Missions	33.3%	$1,581,750
Assembly's Home Missions	16.0%	760,000
Christian Ed. and Min. Relief	7.5%	356,250
Pub. and S. S. Work	2.0%	95,000
As. Training S. for Lay Wkrs.	.6%	28,500
Bible Cause (American Bible Society)	.6%	28,500
Total Assembly's Causes	60.0%	$2,850,000
Synods', Presbyteries' and Congregational Causes
Including Home Missions, Educational Institutions, Orphans' Homes, Etc.	40.0%	$1,900,000
Grand Total all Benevolences	100.0%	$4,750,000

Let our Sessions and Boards of Deacons pray for the program at each meeting. Let our people remember it at the family altar. Let individuals plead with God for it in their private devotions. Let even invalids and shut-ins pray daily and earnestly. Let the committees themselves, having the program in charge, saturate their work with the spirit of prayer. Let a mighty volume of prayer ascend to God from the whole Church, and the splendid objects of the program will be realized. "Then shalt thou call and Jehovah will answer; thou shalt cry and he will say here I am."

$200 A YEAR FOR LUXURIES

It is conservatively estimated that the average American spends at least $200 per year for luxuries. If this is true, and we believe it is a low estimate, it is also true that Presbyterians are not below the average.

Last year Presbyterians in our Church gave exactly $28.52 per capita for all causes, including Missions, Current Expenses, Pastor's Salaries, and Miscellaneous Benevolences.

On a very low estimate, the income of the membership of our Church is about $240,000,000. We gave last year in round figures $12,000,000, or only ONE-HALF OF OUR TITHE. In other words, there is good reason to believe that our people are holding back that which belongs to God each year, at least $12,000,000.

A CHALLENGE TO OUR CHURCH

By R. E. Magill, Secretary

At a recent meeting of a group of workers representing the leading Protestant churches of North America, a speaker presented a tabulation showing the extent of the circulation of tracts, pamphlets and leaflets by the Mormon Church, the Christian Science Church, and the Russellites. She demonstrated that these three organizations, avowedly hostile to evangelical Christianity, circulated more propaganda literature in a year than the 34 Protestant churches of the United States combined. It was stated, on what seemed to be good authority, that an organization in Russia had shipped four million tracts to America to promote the spread of infidelity and bolshevism. It was also brought out that the only publications in pamphlet and tract form for free distribution to the blind are issued by the Catholic Church, the Mormon Church, the Russellites and the Theosophical Society.

Such facts as these challenge every Christian organization in America to make a larger use of the printed page. Advertising experts tell us "The appeal of truth on the printed page to the eye is vastly more effective than through the medium of the voice."

The printed page also has a wider field through its power of repeating the message and it carries its message to many secluded lives who seldom hear wise counsel through the living voice. Theodore L. Cuyler said:

"Christianity is a Book-religion. Bring the Books! Scatter them like sunbeams! Christianity is also a living voice. Send out the colporteurs, from house to house and heart to heart! Let type reinforce tongue, and tongue proclaim the truth printed by the type! Bring the Books! Circulate the tracts! Their blessed results will be stereotyped by the Holy Spirit in the Lamb's Book of Life!"

This stirring call gives point to the appeal for the Publication and Sabbath School Extension work of our Church. While the Publication Committee is publishing and distributing evangelical literature to an extent our people have never appreciated, we could multiply this service ten-fold if the church would increase her gifts for this work. Our last annual report showed we made donations in 1921 of Books, Bibles, Pamphlets, Tracts, etc., to the value of over $54,000. We used the entire fund the Church gave us in the promotion of Sunday School Extension work (and added a supplement of $2,674 to the fund) thus making it necessary for our business department to assume the entire cost of the printed matter donated. A resume of our publication work for 20 years showed we published and distributed about ten million tracts and pamphlets in addition to an output of over three million larger publications. This does not include the Sunday School periodicals which now have a circulation of over fifteen million copies annually. The calls multiply each year for literature to combat heresy, to indoctrinate our people, to evangelize the masses, and to stimulate Christian activity. We are using the living voice by sustaining fifty-three Sunday School field workers in spiritually destitute regions, and in addition, we are taxing our resources beyond the limit of business prudence to meet the demands for vital truth in printed form.

March is the regular month designated for the offering, and where churches have not provided their quota in the annual budget for Benevolences, a special appeal should be made during this month. $100,000 is the amount asked for this year.

Send checks to R. E. Magill, Treasurer, Box 1176, Richmond, Va.

Whatever we do to please ourselves, and only for the sake of the pleasure, not for an ultimate object, is "play," the "pleasant thing," not the useful thing. The first of all English games is making money. That is an all-absorbing game; and we knock each other down oftener in playing at that than at football or any other rougher sport; and it is absolutely without purpose; no one who engages heartily in that game ever knows why. Ask a great money-maker what he wants to do with his money—he never knows. He doesn't make it to do anything with it. He gets it only that he may get it. "What will you make of what you have got?" you ask, "Well, I'll get more," he says. Just as at cricket you get more runs. There is no use in the runs; but to get more of them than other people is the game. And there is no use in the money; but to have more of it than other people is the game.—C. H. Spurgeon.

1,965 Churches With Every Member Canvass Gave $1,577,030 or Per Capita $4.80

THE PRESBYTERIAN PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM IN OUR SYNODS

A Statement From the Synods' Secretaries

SYNOD OF ALABAMA

By Rev. W. S. Patterson

Alabama being principally an agricultural State, has during the past year or two felt the hand of financial depression. We now feel that brighter days are ahead of us. Along with enlarged plans for material things the people are also enlarging their plans for spiritual affairs. Christ and His Church are being stressed by the Presbyterian Progressive Program. When the Every Member Canvass has been completed in March we hope to have evidence to show that every church in the Synod is a live church. Live churches do their proportionate part and do it in a systematic manner.

Three of the four Presbyteries in the Synod have live, wide-awake Home Mission Superintendents. Their office carries with it the office of Secretary of Stewardship for the Presbytery. The fourth Presbytery hopes soon to have a man in the field.

Rev. J. W. Marshall, of Mobile Presbytery, has one of the best organized Presbyteries in the whole General Assembly. He and his organizations are expecting to have Mobile Presbytery lead the General Assembly in putting on an effective Every Member Canvass in the churches.

Rev. A. G. Irons, of Tuscaloosa Presbytery, has established an enviable record for effectiveness. The coming Every Member Canvass will prove his ability to excel his own past record.

Rev. C. G. Partridge, of North Alabama Presbytery, is new in this Synod. But he has had experience elsewhere and already has laid plans for work that marks a new high record for his Presbytery.

East Alabama Presbytery is without a Home Mission Superintendent but is being interested in the Presbyterian Progressive Program and the Every Member Canvass by Rev. W. S. Patterson, Presbytery's Secretary of Stewardship. About three-fifths of the churches in the Presbytery are without pastors. Many of the laymen throughout the Presbytery have nobly responded to requests for service, therefore, we expect to have the usual Every Member Canvass in all churches in March.

Prattville, Ala.

SYNOD OF APPALACHIA

By Rev. R. D. Carson, D.D.

In the building of the walls of Jerusalem, "Every man builded into the wall over against his own house." Every man had his work and did it. When this feeling of individual responsibility and this spirit of individual faithfulness pervades the Southern Presbyterian Church, the success of the Progressive Program is assured. Fifty per cent of the churches cannot do the work that is asked of one hundred per cent. It will take work, hard work, in which every church in the spirit of co-operation shall assume its part of the task; and in which every member of the church, in the bonds of the duty of stewards of God, in sacrificial loyalty to Christ and His dying children shall heartily and enthusiastically enlist.

State, both ministers and laymen, to give their services

SYNOD OF ARKANSAS

By Rev. C. P. Bridewell, D.D.

Though the Synod of Arkansas is better organized than ever before, the special Educational Campaign is now in full blast in the Synod and the Secretaries of Stewardship must look to the staff of men conducting this campaign for help and encouragement if we are to reach anything like our quota. In the beginning of January the Synod's Secretary made an appeal to some of the leading men of the

from the 18th of February to the 18th of March, to the work of presenting the cause—STEWARDSHIP OF POSSESSIONS—to all churches in the Synod. Quite a generous response was made to this appeal and the pulpits of our churches, even the vacant ones, will have the cause presented to them on the 4th and 11th of March. It is the purpose of the Secretary not to let the matter lie after the 18th of March, but visit churches and stay with them a week at a time, if necessary, and put on an Every Member Canvass. In other words, to use a trite expression and make it literally true, "We are going to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

Malvern, Ark.

SYNOD OF FLORIDA

By H. C. DuBose

There are more prayer bands, family altars, daily Bible readers and conscientious tithers in the Synod of Florida today than ever in its history, proving the uplifting and stimulating influence of the Presbyterian Progressive Program. Our aim is to get every church in our bounds to adopt the Every Member Canvass and we firmly believe this will soon be accomplished. We feel that in getting our churches in thorough harmony with the Program we are greatly facilitating the growth of the Kingdom—as its results have proven in the past.

Sanford, Fla.

SYNOD OF GEORGIA

By Rev. J. B. Ficklen

Yes, we are facing the task once more. But that doesn't discourage us. For we do our best when we stand face to face with a real task. Christ made no apology for putting before His little band of followers the most stupendous task which ever confronted any group of people in the history of the world. Of course, the call to the heroic hasn't lost its power with us. Of course, the Cross, the great commission, the lost world, the coming Saviour, have not lost their meaning for us. The Son of God goes forth to war and we follow in His train.

Decatur, Ga.

SYNOD OF KENTUCKY

By E. H. Davis

As I see conditions in our Church today, we are face to face with a crisis. On the one hand, we have, in the statement of the Presbyterian Progressive Program, the greatest challenge that has been held up by any church in modern days. On the other hand, if we would look facts squarely in the face, we must admit an undercurrent of apathy amid the rank and file of our church. We need to think upon the fundamental teaching of our creed. A sovereign God is still speaking to us. He has a plan for us to execute. If we in our day fail to submit our wills unto His, our works will perish with us, and other stewards must execute the divine plan.

Honestly, let us ask the question, What is my chief concern? Our answer is being written in the hearts of others. Will we rejoice when the record is unfolded?

We covet the "Well Done." Then let us be honest with ourselves and with God in the stewardship of all He has placed in our keeping.

Harrodsburg, Ky.

SYNOD OF LOUISIANA

By Rev. Geo. Summey, D.D.

All the conditions call for intense activity in our Presbyterian Progressive Program just now. The need of the causes, the imperative demand for enlargement, the opening opportunities, God's challenge, are voices that cannot be stilled.

The constant repetition of calls and the splendid efforts, in many parts of the Church, for special educational contributions, need not be counted as hindering conditions. The rather, they have shown the generosity of our people and their ability to meet special demands that appeal to their hearts.

The aim of the Program is to provide for the normal life of the Church. It is to furnish means to maintain her regular work. It is for the plain meat and bread of God's house!

New Orleans, La.

SYNOD OF MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. F. R. Graves

Last year the Presbyterians of Mississippi gave six cents per day per member for the support of their Church and all of its agencies. This includes all current expenses and miscellaneous contributions. The supreme business of the Christian is to carry out the command of the Lord, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." This preaching and teaching is to be done in many ways. Through the regular ministry of the Word in established churches. Through the Sunday School, Missionary and Teacher. Through Missionaries in home lands and in lands far away. Through Medical Missionaries who, by their ministry to the body open the door of the heart for the entrance of the Word. Through establishing and maintaining Christian schools where the youth can be taught the true principles of life. Through personal ministries to those about us. Through faithful stewardship in the use of our money in maintaining the agencies established to do the work we cannot do personally, and in supporting the self-sacrificing men and women who are willing to go where we cannot go ourselves.

Is an average of six cents a day the measure of the financial ability and responsibility of the Presbyterians in Mississippi? Surely when the Every Member Canvass is made in March there will be a great exodus from the ranks of the non-givers and the thoughtless givers. Let us not merely pray, "Thy Kingdom come," but back that prayer by a surrender of self and substance. The work is too great, the issues are too vital for any Christian to be apathetic or selfish.

Sumner, Miss.

Report by wire or mail results of your Every member Canvass to your Presbyterial Secretary of Stewardship, on or before April 1st.

SYNOD OF MISSOURI

By Rev. R. L. Cowan

The Presbyterian Progressive Program is no longer an experiment. It is Scriptural; it is Spiritual; and it is Successful in just so far as we are willing to use it. The trouble is not with the Program, but with individuals expecting the Program to work itself.

The vital need is that every Pastor, Officer and Worker put his "BEST" into this work—"The King's Business"—for the next eight weeks. With a real intense activity and co-operation we CAN and we MUST SUCCEED. Yes, WORK and PRAY, and then WORK some more.

Lexington, Mo.

(Continued on page 18)

"WE MET OUR CHURCH DIFFICULTIES WITH

The EVERY MEMBER CANVASS WORKS

WHEN AND WHERE IT IS WORKED

IN CITY, TOWN OR COUNTRY CHURCH

IN CITY CHURCHES

Wrought A Wonderful Change

The Every Member Canvass has become an institution of the Presbyterian Church. It has been lifted above the ordinary drive or campaign idea, and is fast resolving itself into a religious ceremony.

Four years ago in the North Avenue Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga., we were feeling it increasingly difficult to make ends meet. Every year showed a deficit, and we were getting painfully discouraged. Imagine our indignant surprise therefore when our Presbytery sent us a budget for the ensuing year three times larger than we had ever had before, on which we had always shown a deficit. It simply couldn't be done. We threw up our hands in holy horror. We felt we were terribly abused. After much discussion, it was decided not to accept the quota. Some of us younger chaps, however, were not convinced it couldn't be done. We told the deacons if they were willing, we would try to raise the quota assigned.

We organized a veritable army of men and women in the church. We separated them into majors, captains, and lieutenants. We secured a revised list of the church roll. We carded each name and address; we routed the territory we were to travel; we assigned routes to certain teams, we secured automobiles with drivers. We sent out literature to the members. We simply applied good business sense to the church work.

The natural result was what we expected. It took us two hours to finish the canvass among 1,200 people, and we not only raised our budget, which as stated was three times larger than any we had ever had, but we went $15,000 over it.

Since we have instituted the Every Member Canvass in our church we have seen a wonderful change come over our membership. It has done us all good spiritually, and has given us a warmer feeling toward our own membership.

If not a penny were raised in the Every Member Canvass, the effort would be largely compensated in the splendid results received from the visitations of the men making the canvass.

Don't let anybody tell you the difficulties of the Every Member Canvass are insurmountable.

If we will pray much and undertake the work as we undertake any business job with enthusiasm and with faith in God, failure is impossible.

J. R. Regnas.

North Avenue Church, Atlanta, Ga.

The Progressive Program Meets Vital Needs

The best and most intelligent Christians need to be frequently formed, reminded and stimulated, in order that they may render the best service of which they are capable. This applies to the whole round of Christian duties. It is just as true of worshiping the Lord with our substance as anything else.

Christians need to be reminded that what they contribute for the cause of religion is really an act of worship. It is worshiping the Lord with their substance. They also need to be told frequently something of the vast needs of the Kingdom of Christ and what is a proper measure for our contributions to this great cause. We need instruction as to the measure of our duties in every sphere of life, and we need it as much in our contributions to religion as in anything else.

Christians also need to have the incentive to this kind of service quickened, sympathy for lost humanity, devotion to Jesus Christ, the example of fellow Christians.

The Progressive Program of our Church should meet all of these needs. It provides ample and accurate information and stirring appeals, and creates a healthful atmosphere in which the "grace of giving," as it is sometimes called, may have a vigorous growth.

I have had an opportunity for observing the working of the Progressive Program and the Every Member Canvass in almost every kind of church—weak churches in remote districts, strong country churches, vigorous village churches, flourishing town and city churches. I have never known any church that participated in the movement in the right spirit that did not receive a blessing in every way.

Rev. A. M. Fraser, D.D., Pastor.
First Presbyterian Church, Staunton, Va.

Increases Liberality

I find that the Every Member Canvass has increased the gifts for benevolences in the churches of which I have had the honor to be pastor, from 30 to 50 per cent. It has also systematized the giving so that all the causes of our Assembly receive their proper apportionments. It has been my observation that churches that do not use the Every Member Canvass for raising and apportioning its benevolences, have the problem of individual members, making all their gifts to one Assembly's cause, and giving nothing to others, in which they are not interested or not familiar.

It also regularizes the gifts to benevolences. In the Every Member Canvass we have a regular budget system, which is the modern method of disbursing money. We pay cash instead of going on credit. It makes the total amount larger because it is easier for each member to make a small cash payment each week, rather than a large payment annually. It is the "Installment plan" on a cash basis.

It is my candid opinion that it will work in any church—rural or city, large or small, in fact even in a mission.

I sincerely hope that more and more churches will adopt this splendid system of giving.

Rev. Bunyan McLeod, D.D., Pastor.
First Presbyterian Church, St. Joseph, Mo.

A CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP PRAYER

"We pray Thee, gracious Father, to forgive our unworthiness of Thy trust, and our frequent failures that have marred the past; and help us to realize Thine investment in us today and in the days to come. Make us to feel our responsibility to administer our trust through the use we make of Thy gracious gifts, that all we have and are may be consecrated to Thee, and that a worthy portion of our time, our energy and our possessions may be given joyously, lovingly and without reservation to the work of Thy kingdom."

Vision of World's Needs

The Every Member Canvass was carefully prepared and prayerfully carried through. The subscriptions to benevolences were trebled.

The preparation for the Every Member Canvass brought home to our people: first, the world's needs, secondly, their duties as stewards, and thirdly, the ability of our church members to give.

The average church member really knows little about the needs of our orphans, the education of our ministers, the support of our aged ministers, and the hugeness of our task abroad and at home. The Every Member Canvass taught him along these lines.

Few, if any, realized their own ability to give. When $45,000 was asked of our Church, scores said that it could not be secured. One man conservatively figured our tithe to be $90,000. This was astounding. If his figures were correct we did not get all of every one's tithe, but we did secure over $60,000 on a $45,000 budget.

Best of all it caused all of our people to feel an ownership in the church work and a responsibility for it. They prayed more for it and for its causes at home and abroad. They began, many of them, doing more personal work and our increase in membership has gone steadily forward. Our greatest ingathering for the three years coincided with the time of the Every Member Canvass and immediately following. We always stress personal evangelism in January, February and March. At the same time we are preparing for the financial campaign and find that it helps the other wonderfully.

Rev. B. R. Lacy, Jr., D.D., Pastor.
Central Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga.

Works Where It Is Worked

The Every Member Canvass has accomplished four distinct benefits to the First Presbyterian Church, Spartanburg, S. C.:

- It has greatly increased our gifts.
- It has helped to unify the spirit of the church.

About 40 men are appointed each year from the congregation at large, and the canvass is made in a single afternoon. The people receive the canvassers gladly and pleasantly, so that homes are visited and acquaintances made amongst members of the congregation who would not otherwise know each other. These visits further tend to counteract the feeling of some members that they are overlooked or discounted in church matters.

c. It is a school of instruction to canvassers and people in church affairs, teaching us to look beyond ourselves and our own interests. We call our local causes OUR SPARTANBURG OBLIGATION.

And the other causes—OUR WORLD OBLIGATION.

d. It has resulted in our having two treasurers, and in enlarging the consciousness that we are in touch with the Assembly's great aims, and should more and ever more study and support its broad plans.

The canvass will always work where it is worked, in any church, city or country, large or small. But it cannot work itself. It is not automatic. It is not a self-starter. The dynamic is in the men behind the plan.

H. E. Ravenel, Elder.

First Presbyterian Church, Spartanburg, S. C.

Fruitage is Manifold

I cannot see how any church can carry on its work in the spirit of the New Testament responsibility, without the use of the Every Member Canvass. I began it 16 years ago in the beginning of my ministry, and would not know how to carry on the work without it now. If the pastor has his heart in it, whatever obstacles that appear at first, will easily disappear, and not only are the frequent appeals for money done away with, but under its educational work, the people are being trained the whole time, and the season of fruitage in the congregation is perennial. The church that does not adopt the Progressive Program and Every Member Canvass, modified to suit its local needs, is standing in its own light, and holding itself back from spiritual development in all lines.

Rev. A. S. Johnson, D.D., Pastor.

First Presbyterian Church, Charlotte, N. C.

Of Educational, Social, Financial, and Spiritual Value

The earnest and thorough canvassing of the entire membership of the congregation for weekly subscriptions for the support of all the activities of the church by those who have informed themselves through the careful study of the splendid literature furnished by the Assembly's Stewardship Committee is one of the most important factors in the development of the work of our Church. Rightly used the Every Member Canvass has an educational value. It affords the best opportunity to meet individual objections and correct individual misunderstandings; to give a wider vision and a clearer understanding of the whole work of the whole Church; to emphasize individual privilege and responsibility; to train the young people in systematic giving. It has a social value. In the house to house canvass by the Board of Deacons and others associated with them, the officers and members of the congregation have become better acquainted and entered more sympathetically into the fellowship of service. It has a financial value above all other plans. The Every Member Canvass to raise the yearly budget for benevolences and local expenses is the most satisfactory financial plan our Church has ever used. It has greatly increased the number of contributors and the amount contributed. It provides for the King's business in a business-like way. It can be worked everywhere. The small church as well as the large church, the country church as well as the city church, finds that it can be used successfully and satisfactorily.

Rev. J. P. Marion, D.D., Pastor.

Sumter, S. C.

A Spiritual Quickening

The Every Member Canvass has proven a success and consequently a blessing in this church. It has gotten at one time the combined local and benevolent budgets. It has brought to us the joy that comes from fairly facing and meeting an issue. It has won the approval of all, which includes the business men and women of the Church. And it has been a factor in bringing a spiritual quickening into the life of our church.

This church designated the opening day of the canvass period last March, Volunteer Sunday. All that day the church was open and services of various kinds with generous intermissions were on from 9:00 a. m. to 9:00 p. m., and officers with subscription cards were at convenient tables. All had been asked to be Volunteer Subscribers—that is, without personal solicitation, to get, fill out, and hand in their subscription cards. As a result, on that day and in that manner, $12,000 of a total of $14,000 budget was subscribed. Those sick, out of town, or indifferent were seen by canvassers immediately following this Sunday. This is perhaps a refinement of the Every Member Canvass Plan, and probably will not work everywhere. It takes as much or more work before it as the regular plan. It proved an inspiration to our church.

Rev. W. R. Minter, D.D., Pastor.
First Presbyterian Church, Austin, Tex.

Met Difficulties With Every Member Canvass

We met our difficulties with the Every Member Canvass. This church was organized in the heart of the best residential section of the city. We found that to have the kind of worship and activities required by such people called for an unusually large budget for Current Expenses to be raised by a very small membership. Our officers were progressive young business men and realized that the only solution was to secure the vital interest and active co-operation of every member, and that the only way to do this effectively was through the Progressive Program. We have been following this plan for four years with the results that this year we will not only raise $12,000 for the Current Expenses, but an equal amount for the regular Benevolences.

Wilmington, N. C.

Rev. J. O. Mann.

Suspicion Dispelled

When the Every Member Canvass was first suggested, it was viewed with more or less suspicion by many of our church officers. The great increase in material gifts and spiritual life coming to those churches in which the minister had the enthusiastic co-operation of his business men in the Every Member Canvass has dispelled this suspicion.

I recall an officer in a church with a membership of 600 telling me that the year they put on the Every Member Canvass exactly 158 of the 600 members contributed to either or both the current expenses and benevolences—less than 25 per cent of the membership of that church. Now at least 66½ per cent of the resident membership of that same church are regular contributors. Nearly 80 per cent of the resident membership of our church here are regular contributors of stated amounts, and as a consequence, the benevolences are almost doubled. Under the old regime in church work everywhere, a few people bore the brunt, paid all the expenses, made up all defects, and "ran the church." But now, the very fact of the canvass being made by a large number of active business men who give their time and personal influence to the work, has a tendency to create a larger and more vital interest. And more members contributing not only occasions larger gifts, but also a greater interest, for "Where your treasure is, there your heart is also."

The Every Member Canvass will work in any church, rural or city, large or small, but it will not work itself. It must be put in operation and must be "pushed along," for it will not run for years on the momentum of a single afternoon's canvass. The churches in which it has FAILED have been those in which it has not been WORKED.

Rev. Francis Tappey, D.D., Pastor.

First Presbyterian Church, Pensacola, Fla.

Justified by Results

The Every Member Canvass has long since passed the experimental stage. If any were opposed to it they have been compelled to accept "the proof of the pudding." In every type of church where with any degree of energy and intelligence the plan has been introduced, success has been achieved. The entire financial system of our Church has by this plan been lifted out of a hit and miss condition into a system through which every department of our benevolent work is being blessed.

Rev. Dunbar H. Ogden, D.D., Pastor.

Government St. Presbyterian Church, Mobile, Ala.

An Expression of Entire Work of Church

It is difficult for the writer to imagine a church being financed without an annual Every Member Canvass, for since the year 1908, when he first served a settled charge, no year has passed without such a canvass in the churches under his care. Through these years it has been possible to watch the effect of such a canvass in small village churches, "secondary" city churches, and also larger and more able "First" churches. In six cases the canvass has been instituted de novo in these various types of churches. The result in absolutely every case has been the complete solution of the problem of local finance, and large and continually ascending increases in gifts to benevolences.

The Presbyterian Progressive Program, being organized about the annual Every Member Canvass plan, has served to enhance the value and effectiveness of this plan still further, by making it an integral part of a carefully worked campaign for the furtherance of all departments of the Church's responsibility. That the Program has, during the past five years, accomplished great things in a financial way for the work of our Church needs no argument, for the figures speak for themselves. Until this year one has suspected that all that was really vital in the Progressive Program was embraced in the Every Member Canvass and its Assembly-wide goals, quotas and organization. Under the five-point arrangement of this year, however, that suspicion begins to disappear, and it becomes evident that the Program is emerging into a well-rounded summary and expression of the entire work of the Church. Let us, therefore, go forward more enthusiastically than ever before in our emphasis upon Stewardship of Possessions, culminating in the Every Member Canvass, knowing that it is a necessary part, and only a part, of that great enterprise which embraces also the promotion of Spiritual Life, Evangelism and Missions, Christian Training, and Fellowship.

Rev. R. Excell Fry, Pastor.

First Presbyterian Church, Pine Bluff, Ark.

Awakens a New Conscience

It is my earnest conviction that the Every Member Canvass plan of church finance is the easiest, soundest and most Biblical method of financing the work of the Kingdom, and that the Progressive Program has done more to awaken a new conscience in the Southern Presbyterian Church than anything that has happened in the last 25 years. I believe it is feasible in any church, whether city, village or rural, whether large or small; for by certain modifications, it can be adapted to any church.

Rev. E. L. Hill, Pastor.

First Presbyterian Church, Athens, Ga.

"As Much for Others as for Ourselves"

1. What has the Every Member Canvass done for our Church? It has systematized the giving of our people and their thought about giving. It has put the spiritual note into the financial side of the Church. It has greatly steadied and enlarged our financial strength. It has eliminated the spasmodic, high pressure, emotional methods, incident to the old plan, and it has issued in a steady, annual increase of our budget both for Benevolences and for Maintenance, our ideal at present being "As much for others as for ourselves," and on this basis our campaign is set up.

2. Will it work in any church, rural or city, small or large? Undoubtedly, if wisely, though slightly modified to meet different conditions. In my judgment, it is adapted to all who adopt it and give it an honest trial over a sustained period of years.

Rev. Samuel M. Glasgow, D.D., Pastor.

First Presbyterian Church, Knoxville, Tenn.

Modern Method of a Miraculous Ministry

Every member of the Church is directly responsible for all the work of the Church.

Duty is measured in terms of loyalty to Jesus Christ.

The value of the Presbyterian Progressive Program lies in the fact that it brings this responsibility sharply to the conscience of every member. It shows up "the shirker"—it puts the spiritual first. It gives vision to the ignorant; impulse to the slow; motive to the immobile; warmth of desire to the cold; accomplishment to the feeble. It will work anywhere; with a worker behind it. It is the modern method of a miraculous ministry. It has lifted the church (the First of Meridian) from a $5,000 basis to a $17,000 one.

It will work in the country church. Human nature is the same everywhere.

Rev. A. A. Little, D.D., Pastor.

First Presbyterian Church, Meridian, Miss.

Of Untold Value

The Every Member Canvass, which has been in operation in my church for several years, has justified itself, it has been of untold value. The principle of it is the right one; and where the officers of the church are willing to take it up, and will do their duty in visiting the members and explaining to them the causes of the Church, it has great educational value. It ties the members to the church, and increases the contributions of the people to the great causes of benevolence. I would never willingly consent to return to the old haphazard methods formerly used in our churches.

There is no good reason why it should not be put into operation in any church, rural or city, small or large. It is really more difficult to introduce it and use it in a successful way in the large city church than in churches in smaller cities and towns and in the country. But the value of it is practically the same in all of them; and, in my judgment, every church makes a serious mistake in not adopting this method.

Rev. Russell Cecil, D.D., Pastor.

Second Presbyterian Church, Richmond, Va.

Places Responsibility on Every Member

The Presbyterian Progressive Program—it has a fetching sound and it may be made as effective as it is fetching. It simply means that day by day, in every way, we are getting better. Its advantages are that it sets a goal and then sets up the necessary machinery to reach that goal. Its five points are well taken and are stated in their logical order:

Spiritual Life, Evangelism, Christian Training, Stewardship of Possessions, and Fellowship.

I want to say a word for the fourth of these—Stewardship of Possessions, and the Every Member Canvass by which it is to be put over. The advantages of an Every Member Canvass are:

1st: That it gets the church to studying as never before the question of the Stewardship of Possessions from a Biblical point of view.

2nd: It helps people to realize how little they have been giving after all.

3rd: It acquaints them with all the causes of the Church and the needs of the causes.

4th: If it is a real Every Member Canvass it throws the responsibility for the support of the church on every member and not simply on a few.

5th: It increases in every case the total gifts of the church.

6th: It stimulates every other objective of the Progressive Program.

7th: It has put our Church right at the top in per capita giving.

8th: It is a simple yet comprehensive plan, as workable in the small church as in the large, applicable in city or country.

Try one real Every Member Canvass. Make it snappy and thorough.

Rev. Ernest Thompson, D.D., Pastor.

First Presbyterian Church, Charleston, W. Va.

The Every Member Canvass for Us Always

Our new and handsome church edifice and manse were erected a few years ago at a total cost of nearly $100,000, all of which was paid for in less than three years after buildings were completed.

Before leaving our old church the congregation contemplated expending an amount not to exceed $60,000 at the utmost, two-thirds of which was proposed to be financed out of the sale of the old plant, which sold for $15,000, together with cash subscriptions of $25,000; the remainder to be financed by issuance of 20 year bonds for a loan of $20,000. But when the new edifice was completed, in all its details, we resolved to burn up the bonds and pay cash. And then we put on the Every Member Canvass, and got $100,000 and paid for everything.

The Every Member Canvass still prevails and will not be discontinued—until someone shows us a better way. For now our annual budget is over $40,000, and we raise it by means of the Every Member Canvass.

Note especially, our annual budget exceeds the total amount we thought we could raise for construction of a new church and manse combined, which was to serve for future generations, and in addition these same future generations were to carry an overhead debt of $20,000.

Also the salaries we pay our pastor and all other paid officers and servants are more than 100 per cent in excess of that of old days.

The Every Member Canvass—for us always.

First Presbyterian Church.

Danville, Va.

(Continued on page 19)

1,474 Churches Without Every Member Canvass Gave $145,943 or Per Capita $2.15

THE STEWARDSHIP OF POSSESSIONS

By Dr. Marion McH. Hull, Atlanta, Ga.

The first sin ever committed was not Adam's. The record of it is given in Isaiah 14; it was a declaration of independence. Satan declared his independence of God! Adam's sin was simply a repetition of this. Eve was deceived; but Adam was not. With his eyes open he defiantly disobeyed God; he determined to do as he pleased.

Every unregenerate man—the natural man—repeats the sin of his father, Adam—he declares his independence of God, and defiantly determines to have his own way. Think through every sin that you have committed and see if this is not its essence.

Now this attitude of mind is true in the matter of one's possessions as well as of other things. He speaks of these as My money, My property, My bonds; and he determines to do with these as he pleases. In the matter of our possessions we declare our independence of God.

The "born-again" man—the man who lives by grace and not by nature—differs in this essential respect: He recognizes his dependence upon God, rather than asserting his independence of God. He seeks God's will and not his own. He recognizes that he has been bought with a price, and therefore does not belong to himself; that he has nothing, but that everything that he possesses is God's. In fact he is just God's steward. He does not think of my money, my lands, my stock, my bonds, my business; but of God's money, God's business, God's reality which has been committed to him to use for Him.

How

The question that now presents itself to such a man is HOW shall he use God's time, God's money, God's business for God's glory?

1st. He must remember that he must give a report, and therefore he must be very careful with the use of God's possessions. He should keep books for God, not with God. There is quite a difference here; the man who is keeping books with God is doing it for the purpose of seeing that God does not get the best of it. The man who keeps books for God does it for the purpose of seeing that God gets everything that should come to Him. Do you know how you are using God's money intrusted to you? God expects you to give an account of every penny of it.

2nd. He must realize that there are certain administration expenses which are necessary. Ten per cent is the minimum that God requires for this purpose.

3rd. He must look carefully into the character of the investments which he makes—how he uses the other 90 per cent of God's money. It is perfectly legitimate and right to use it for the buying of new books, new hats, new dresses, suits, automobiles, homes, or for recreation if these will make him a better steward. Whatever he needs to increase his efficiency as a steward is a perfectly legitimate expenditure. This of course gives great eeway to the steward.

4th. He must realize that there will be expansion demands. God's work cannot remain stationary. Every going business is a growing business, and takes more and more money to run it every year. The steward of God's possessions must set aside enough to meet the growth and expansion of God's work so that it shall not suffer for lack of expansion funds.

Why

In performing these functions of a steward of God's possessions we must remember:

1st. That God is very liberal. He is never exacting, but gives us great liberty in the use of His possessions. God desires our highest development. God does not expect us to live by the law but by grace. He has left us free to determine what in our judgment is needed by us to make us more efficient stewards. Only our consciences, enlightened by the Word of God, are to be the judges. I cannot judge for you, neither can you judge for me. But because God is so liberal with me is a strong reason why I must be most conscientious in selecting the investments I make.

2nd. God rewards faithfulness in the use of His possessions by entrusting the faithful steward with more of His possessions. Don't fret if you have very little. He knows how much He can trust to you. He loves you too much to tempt you by entrusting you with more.

3rd. He pledges us His support; we will never lack anything that we need. The resources of heaven are back of us. God is our banker and our backer.

4th. He gives us great joy in using them for Him. He lets us share with Him the joy of Him who was the Great Lover and the Great Giver.

It's great to be a steward of God's possessions!

Easy When

So this matter of the stewardship of possessions is after all a spiritual question. The essential thing is to be born again, to become a new creature in Christ Jesus, to have the old nature with all its selfishness nailed to the Cross, to let the new life of Christ enter into our hearts and express itself through our lives. It was not hard for Jesus to be a good steward; and it will be just as easy for us if we will let Him live in us and express Himself through us.

IN COUNTRY AND VILLAGE CHURCHES

New Life in Historic Country Church

It is the writer's privilege to be pastor of one of the oldest churches in the Synod of South Carolina, a country church that is proud of its history, and rightly so, as it has been richly blessed by the Lord of the Harvest, the mother of two churches, one of them being one of the largest churches in our Synod, and having sent several of her sons and daughters in all-time service in the Master's vineyard. Yet, until 18 months ago the church did not have the Every Member Canvass, the membership was dwindling and the church was behind in its financial program.

After some agitation that the Every Member Canvass would perhaps help the church, a meeting of the officers was called to discuss the advisability of the Every Member Canvass. Some of the officers that were staunch supporters of the church were bitterly opposed to it. I cannot recall all of the difficulties mentioned, but among them were the difficulties, to secure and train canvassers, a contentment with old methods, we always pay the preacher and then do what we can for other causes, we are afraid to tackle anything new, we have some peculiar people in our congregation, and we may hurt somebody's feelings, we have just a handful of members and it doesn't matter about our little church, the Every Member Canvass will work in the city church, but we are satisfied that it won't work in the country church.

It was a heated meeting, but it didn't bring red hot results. In fact we closed just where we started, but we agreed to make the Every Member Canvass a matter of prayer and have another meeting about a week later. Between the meetings the effort was made to see the officers individually that opposed the Every Member Canvass and answer their objections. Our next meeting was held in the home of one of the officers and after a bounteous old-time plantation dinner we were all in a good humor and ready for business. After several prayers and much discussion we decided by a unanimous vote in favor of the Every Member Canvass. Having secured the co-operation of all the officers, it was an easy matter to secure the approval and co-operation of the people. The results have been beyond our greatest expectation, our membership has more than doubled, manifesting itself in all phases of the life of the church.

Rev. P. D. Patrick, Pastor.

Hopewell Church, Effingham, S. C.

A Life Saver

The Presbyterian Progressive Program has been a real "life saver" for the Steele Creek Church and congregation. Through it the membership as a whole has had its first opportunity to function rightly in the Church program. Not only has it solved our local financial problems, but it is enabling the church to enter upon a much larger missionary undertaking. We are just beginning to appreciate the value of every member, from the youngest to the oldest, having a vital part in the work of the church. This is one thing the Progressive Program has brought about. Then the underlying idea of the Progressive Program that each year we are to progress over that of the previous year has been of untold benefit to us. It is the scriptural ideal and it cannot but prove of great value in the working.

There is this to be said about the Program in conclusion. It is like the plan of salvation, so plain and simple that no church, however small, either in the country or in the city, need err in putting it on. It will work anywhere it gets a fair trial. If you do not believe it, try it.

Rev. J. M. Walker, Pastor.

Steele Creek Church, R. F. D. 3, Charlotte, N. C.

THE SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

YESTERDAY 1897	TODAY 1922	TOMORROW 1947
TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO	AND	TWENTY-FIVE YEARS HENCE
		If same % of increase is maintained
		% of Gain 1897-1922 1947
Total Membership (Members and Ministers)---	189,817 413,910	118% 902,323
Total Sunday School Enrollment-----	162,897 398,850	144% 973,194
Congregational Gifts-----	$ 579,603 $ 3,608,210	522% $22,443,066
Pastor's Salary -----	797,475 2,663,192	233% 8,868,429
Benevolent Gifts -----	455,782 5,472,323	1,100% 65,667,876
Total Contributions -----	$1,832,860 $11,743,725	540% $75,159,840

HOW MUCH WILL BE MY SHARE in
THAT CHURCH OF TOMORROW
TWENTY YEAR GROWTH IN ASSEMBLY'S FOREIGN MISSIONS

1902	1922	1947
$164,883	$1,148,005	600%
IN RECEIPTS
IN FRUITS ON THE FIELD
Hospitals
1902-----1	1922-----17	1,600%
Trained Native Workers
1902-----132	1922-----3,406	2,500%
Mission School Students
1902-----1,078	1922-----36,644	3,300%
Mission Schools
1902-----21	1922-----1,082	5,000%

THE PROGRESS OF TWO DECADES IN ASSEMBLY'S HOME MISSIONS

1901—Assembly's Home Mission Workers-----	220
1921—Assembly's Home Mission Workers-----	809	267%
1901—Assembly's Home Missions Equipment-----	$ 10,000
1921—Assembly's Home Missions Equipment-----	800,000	7,900%
1901—Assembly's Home Missions—Additions on Profession-----	1,000
1921—Assembly's Home Missions—Additions on Profession-----	8,949	795%
1901—Assembly's Home Missions—Receipts-----	26,915
1921—Assembly's Home Missions—Receipts-----	536,836	1,894%

* This table represents the work at the end of the Church year 1921.

The Best Plan

After the long use of the Every Member Canvass for raising funds and the fact that it is now the custom in some form or other of the great mass of the successful churches of various denominations, it would seem to go without saying that it is the best plan yet found for raising church funds. I wish, however, to mention some seasons why this is the fact and why it should work in any church, large or small, city or country.

First and most important it is consistent with Scripture. Whatever view one may have about the tithe, or any other system that he believes the Scriptures to teach, this will be found in harmony with it. It is a great asset to any plan to be in harmony with the Word of God.

Second—It is business-like. The church sits down and calculates just what it has to raise. This total budget or expense account is then covered in the canvass by good subscriptions which, like so many "acceptances," the average man is more likely to pay than if no pledge had been made. The cheapness of the plan should appeal to us here. The pastor and officers are sufficient to the task if they do their duty, with very little oversight or expense by Presbyterial, Synodical or Assembly Committees.

Third—It is personal and voluntary. It lays on every member some duty. With rare exceptions every member can be a contributing member, and thus be made to feel that he has a place in his church. This is especially valuable to the development of the children and youth. The fact that each one voluntarily assumes these obligations strengthens the obligation.

Fourth—It co-ordinates all the causes of the church and makes them all equally important in their place. It thus gets justice for every cause. It avoids special calls and the effect of poor attendance or absence of the giver. It presents, not any one cause or part of the work of the church, but the total budget of all causes as the complete financial obligation of the church.

H. C. Hammond, Pastor.

Mt. Zion Church, St. Charles, S. C.

Thorough Preparation Essential

On the first Sabbath in November the pastor began a series of three sermons on "Stewardship."

The first was on Stewardship of Self. "What is that to thee? Follow thou me." On the first Sabbath of December it was Stewardship of Service. "Whose I am, and whom I serve." The message on the first Sabbath of January was Stewardship of Possessions. "All that I have is thine." On the second Sabbath of December the message was on "Tithing." "The tenth of all I possess I will give thee." Thus fixing the whole of our responsibilities on our minds.

On the night of January 7th the pastor preached the first of a series of sermons, or rather lectures, using the large wall chart, on the "Five Points" of the Presbyterian Progressive Program, beginning with number one, or "Spiritual Life." On the night of the 14th of January he used the second, or "Evangelism and Missions." The night of the 28th, number three, or "Christian Training," using Timothy's life as an example of what a mother's and a grandmother's training can do. On February 4th Stewardship was again stressed from another angle, showing the glory that awaits all who hear "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." February 25th the last of the five points, or Fellowship. "He first findeth his own brother," when the whole congregation were handed "Blanks for our Church Goal" to be voted on, using the forms sent out by our Stewardship Committee.

Tuesday night, the 27th, we had a get-together meeting of the whole church at the manse, and thoroughly discussed our needs and the needs of the church at large, planning what we hoped to do, and how best to approach the job.

Thursday, March 1st, finds us ready to begin the "Every Member Canvass," and to continue till every one of our members have been seen, some of whom live in the country, and no doubt some will be away, but the canvass will continue till all have been visited. A report will be made to the congregation each Sabbath till the reports are completed and sent in. The deacons, of course, are in hearty accord, and they with the pastor are the soliciting committee of this little church.

Rev. J. W. Gregg, Pastor.

New Bennington Presbyterian Ch., Bennington, Okla.

Panacea for Churches Problems

The Zion Church has used the Every Member Canvass plan of finance for eight years, which has proven to be the panacea that the church needed for its financial problems. Its good results are manifest in the life of the church.

It has lifted the vision of the church and developed a new sense of stewardship. The membership is well informed as to the Progressive Program and manifests a willingness and eagerness to answer to its obligations of propagating the Gospel. Besides enlisting the entire membership in a financial program, there has come forth out of the training of the several years a body of dependable, systematic, and proportionate givers which makes for stability and security.

The Every Member Canvass has discovered valuable church workers. Is it not suggestive that a number of the additional officers elected have come from those who have served several times on the canvassing committees?

The Every Member Canvass has given the church a system of finance which meets without embarrassment its local needs and enables it to have a rightful share in the benevolent enterprises of the whole church. The men of the church hold an annual meeting early in January. In years ago, the large item of business at this meeting was to take care of the deficit. The usual method was to prorate the required sum among those present. Penalizing the faithful almost disrupted the annual meetings. Now the treasury shows each year a comfortable balance, and the time at the annual meeting is more pleasantly spent in reviewing the creditable disbursements and making plans for future progress. The benevolent offerings have increased from year to year and during the period of the use of the Every Member Canvass have nearly trebled.

Perhaps nowhere are graver difficulties to be encountered in the adoption of the Every Member Canvass than in an old country church. Zion was venerable with age, having more than 107 years of experience and wisdom to its credit. When it came face to face with the adoption of the Every Member Canvass, plausible objections arose in multitude. They were squarely met, the plan adopted, and, once inaugurated and set to work, proved its adaptability and efficiency and all objections vanished in the actual working. The stoutest opponents of the Every Member Canvass in the beginning admit that it has proven one of God's richest blessings to the church, and its many friends declare that it is the best plan ever used, and a return to former methods would be retrogressive and hazardous.

Rev. Clyde Johnson, Pastor.

Columbia, Tenn.

The Every Member Canvass and a Mission Church

Four years ago we were receiving mission money. Folks "paid to the preacher," as popularly referred to. For several weeks the pastor preached on stewardship. Our adult teachers gave the Sunday School a "stewardship twist." The small group of church officers was enlarged to take in several willing workers who previously had been inactive.

At a congregational meeting the "Every Member Canvass" was explained. One of the new deacons had made an attractive 3x4-foot chart outlining both current expenses and benevolences in detail. The membership thus received an intelligent idea of just where each dollar was needed.

At this meeting the pledge card and envelopes were explained. The budget was unanimously agreed on and the membership was asked to remain at home from 1:00 to 4:00 p. m., the following Sunday. At the regular service on this Lord's day, this request was repeated. After the morning service, the pastor met in the consultation room with the eight canvassers.

After pairing off and receiving their lists, which had been made up at a mid-week meeting of deacons and elders, a closing prayer was offered.

Only a very few were absent. Almost all made a definite pledge. One preferred to pay without a pledge. At the end of the year more funds came through the offerings than pledged and the system has since been used each year.

Since this first effort, our budget has annually increased, and not in every case have we succeeded in getting the entire amount pledged. However, our membership is pleased with the idea of systematic beneficenses. We have rebuilt our manse, increased both benevolences and pastor's salary, and our membership has increased to 120.

Our membership is made up of working people. Our church has adopted as its slogan "The Friendly Church" given by local visitors. Our Sunday School doubled and we have contributed to many causes in addition to the budget.

H. E. Spessard, Elder.

Schoolfield, Va.

Report by wire or mail results of your Every member Canvass to your Presbyterial Secretary of Stewardship, on or before April 1st.

"Not all the heroes fall on fields of glory,
Not all brave deeds are told in song and story;
But they are heroes who, with hearts aglow,
Hide deep within their breast their weight of woe,
And then with faces shining lift the load
'Neath which another staggers on the road."

No doubt the readers of this Special Edition of The Presbyterian Standard will be deeply impressed with the work and activities of their Church, as represented in the Progressive Program and as presented in the columns of this issue.

Many will possibly form a new conception of the splendid and ambitious efforts of the Church in all of its departments of work. And many will possibly feel a strong desire to begin now the practice of giving regularly and systematically, a definite and proportionate part of their income to God for the support of the Church and the Kingdom. Expression of this desire may be made by signing the accompanying Christian stewardship Enrollment Card and handing same to your Pastor.

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP ENROLLMENT

PRESBYTERIAN PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN THE U. S.

PRINCIPLES TAUGHT IN THE BIBLE

- 1. God is owner of all things.
- 2. Every man is a steward and must give account for all that is entrusted to him.
- 3. God's ownership and man's stewardship ought to be acknowledged.
- 4. This acknowledgement requires, as a part of its expression, the setting apart for the extension of the Kingdom of Christ such a portion of income as is recognized by the individual to be the will of God.
- 5. The separated portion ought to be administered for the Kingdom of God and the remainder recognized as no less a trust.
Most Christian Stewards begin with 10 per cent as a scriptural proportion. The proportion should increase as income increases.

My Purpose

I adopt the above principles and will set apart at least one-tenth (or the proportion of _____%) of my income to administer for the Kingdom of God.

Name _____
Street and Number _____
Town and State _____
Church _____
Date _____ 192_____

This card when signed should be given to the Pastor to assist him in organizing a Tithe's League.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

The Women's Parallel Conventions—The past week has seen the gatherings of the women of the Church in the Parallel Conventions of the Women in connection with the Laymen's meetings that have been in session from Texas to Virginia. We had hoped to give our readers accounts of these conventions in this issue of the paper but find this impossible since this is distinctively a "Presbyterian Progressive Program" number of the Standard. We are planning for next week a "Convention" number of the Standard which will bring to our readers some of the good things that were said and done at these conventions, written by attendants upon the conventions. We ask their patient indulgence in this delay in getting these reports in.

The Presbyterian Progressive Program and the Women—This issue of the Standard is devoted to the interest of the Progressive Program, looking forward to the Every Member Canvass to be held in March. The women of the Church have a big part and interest in all that pertains to the Assembly—its causes and its methods. Their work is in accord with the work of the Stewardship Committee and they are vitally interested in the carrying out of every department of the program. For this reason in this issue of the Standard we are reproducing an article on Stewardship as specially pertinent to women. It is taken from the little brochure, "Christian Stewardship—Six Bible Studies for the Women of the Southern Presbyterian Church," by Mrs. S. H. Askew, of Decatur, Ga. The entire six studies are full of wise and loving advice to women and are charmingly written and any woman who prayerfully reads them surely cannot fail to find herself a better steward. The little brochure can be obtained from the Stewardship Committee at Chattanooga.

Woman's Opportunities as a Christian Steward—Her Place.

We will all agree that the place in which we live constitutes one of the broadest of these channels, whether that place be our own home or only our boarding place, a mansion or a bungalow of the simplest sort, one "hall bed-room" or a "place" for each season of the year. For every womanly woman dominates (not domineers!) the place she calls "home" and may make it an opportunity for stewardship; or, shutting her eyes to this, it becomes her largest opportunity for self-gratification.

There are some outstanding instances of dedicated homes in our Bible, but we shall study only two of them as examples of woman's place devoted to God's service.

Read again the old story of the "great woman" of Shunem who realized her opportunity in her farm-house home and made of it a resting-place for the weary prophet. This story emphasizes the devotion of material things of the home to such service—the bread shared with Elisha, the room built for him on the wall, the bed, table, stool, candlestick all set out for the bodily comfort of the man of God on his weary journeys.

How often in this time of widespread luxury in household comforts, the lack of them or the comparison of one's small supply with another's abundance holds us back from such true hospitality. Has it ever been your lot to solicit homes for delegates to some convention or conference, especially in the city? Have you ever heard replies like these: "I have only one bath—it is so awkward to have guests." "I have no guest room—no one likes to share a room with a stranger now-a-days." "I have no maid now—no one to serve the meals." "I have not done my spring cleaning yet—the house is not ready for guests at present."

What a joy, not only to the solicitor, but to the "stranger within the gates" is that home where so genuine is the welcome and so simple and sincere is the hospitality that life does not consist in the abundance of the Persian rugs or the number of the courses at meals! It is not what we share but how we share it and why we share it that determines our use of our homes as His stewards. The cup of cold water given there, "because ye are Christ's" and know He would have you give it is as true stewardship as providing the perfectly appointed suite of rooms for the "man of God" on his rounds of travel—provided each is your best and is prompted by love.

If God has given you an abundance of comfort and beauty in your home share largely with those whom He sends your way—especially if they cannot so share with you in return. But if you have only a few flowers in summer, a cheerful fire in winter, a book to lend, a clean bed to rest in, with a wealth of understanding sympathy you can find many a one to love your home with you whether it numbers one room or twenty.

And what do your guests take away with them, whether they number hundreds who have attended a social "function" there or just one wayfarer sheltered on his journey?

"A Whole Program For the Whole Church"

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

The Every Member Canvass March 18th

ARE YOU PREPARING?

Have they met your Master there? Do you need a printed motto card there to tell them that "Christ is the head of this home," or does every thing and every doing within it speak of Him so clearly that the secret of its beauty cannot be missed? Have they heard the voice of prayer there? Have they found a real reverence for the Sabbath and God's house there? Have they found consideration for servants, entire truthfulness, appreciation of old age, amusements that refresh and uplift or those that pull away from God?

Said a Christian woman, lately become keenly alive to her stewardship, "I cannot let that picture remain in my living room—I am sure it would not please Jesus were He my guest. I cannot imagine Him loving to look at it. There must be nothing in my home that could wound or displease Him." Had she not found the key to a Christian home—"nothing that could wound or displease Him," whether in its material furnishings or its habits and customs, and nothing He would love to find in a home lacking. Imagine Him as your guest—coming in frequently and unexpectedly—and govern your home by His joy in what He would find there and those whom He would like to meet there, and you cannot go far wrong.

"Was there ever such a one?" you ask. In absolute perfection, no—not while we remain in mortal bodies. But there was one He loved so well that we are sure it was indeed a home to Him, the dearest one to Him during those homeless years of His earthly ministry, the home we call Mary's and Martha's at Bethany. It may or may not have been a home of wealth. It was not the "abundance of things" he found there to His liking—indeed His one rebuke concerning that home was to Martha for being troubled about "many things" when what He wanted there was just "one thing" that Mary knew how to give Him—ready, restful, understanding companionship. Read the story of that home just now, Luke 10:38-42, and then pray:

O Jesus, Master, help us to give Thee not one room in our homes, as the Shunemite woman gave the prophet, but all of them and for all time. Wilt Thou help us to search them through for whatsoever might offend Thee, in sight or sound, in habit and custom, in what we may be leaving undone there that Thou wouldst have us do, or in the care about many things that has become cumbersome to our souls and is shutting out our fellowship with Thee. Help us to make them homes Thou wouldst love to visit. Oh, help us to realize that Thou dost visit us even today in the person of these whom Thou hast called "the least of these, my brethren," and may we never shut our doors to them! And help us so to order our homes that those who abide there may ever after carry in their hearts hallowed memories that shall bind them to all that is purest and best and finally bring them to that perfect Home above, in the Father's House of many mansions, to find their treasure laid up in Heaven, where Thou hast

(Continued on page 15)

"A CHIEF'S AMANG YOU TAKIN NOTES"
—BURNS

Preservation of the Child is better than Reformation of the Man.

There are NINETEEN MILLION people in the Southern States under age of twenty-five—Of these only SIX MILLION are in Sunday School—Our church must reach it's share of the untouched—REMEMBER THE OFFERING IN MARCH FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL EXTENSION.

R. E. MAGILL, Secy.
Richmond, Va.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C.

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

"Dare we go?" Or shall we hold back because of the cost? The great Laymen's Convention in Charlotte closed with these great searching questions from the lips of Dr. "Tolly" Thompson. The convention had been told of the need of and joy in personal work and had heard stirring messages on the need of Christians being busy in all parts of the world, at home and abroad. Then came Dr. Thompson's great message as the closing challenge. He presented in his own earnest way, the Lord who gives us power adequate for the task. He has laid out for us, and then asked all who heard to step out on the promise of the Christ who said, "Go, . . . and lo, I am with you."

Young people of the Carolinas, dare we go and work in the vineyard wherever the Master of the vineyard points the way? Many of our finest young people have dared. Many more workers are needed. Dare YOU go?

We wish to ask again for reports from the young people of the Synod of South Carolina. We want them to feel that the Young People's Department belongs to them. We want them to give the young people of both Carolinas the benefit of their ideas. Come along, Palmetto young people! The Editor knows from experience that you have hustlers down there, and would like to hear from them.

In order to increase the amount of thought and time available for the Young People's Department we are adding an Assistant Editor. Mr. W. Ernest Milton, of Davidson College, has been asked to help with the department. Besides experience in a printing office, Mr. Milton has had experience in Young People's Society work and is an enthusiastic worker with young people. We are glad to have him help on the paper.

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

MARCH 4, 1923

JESUS TEACHING IN THE TEMPLE

Luke 20:19-26; 21:1-4

GOLDEN TEXT—"Render therefore unto Caesar the things that he Caesar's, and unto God the things that be God's."—Luke 20:25.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

Ch. 20:19. And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people; for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

20. And they watched him, and sent forth spies, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor.

21. And they asked him, saying, Master, we know that thou sayest and teachest rightly, neither acceptest thou the person of any, but teachest the way of God truly:

22. Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Caesar, or no?

23. But he perceived their craftiness, and said unto them, Why tempt ye me?

24. Shew me a penny. Whose image and superscription hath it? They answered and said, Caesar's.

25. And he said unto them, Render therefore unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's, and unto God the things which be God's.

26. And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they marvelled at his answer, and held their peace.

Ch. 21. 1. And he looked up, and saw the rich men casting their gifts into the treasury.

2. And he saw also a certain widow casting in thither two mites.

3. And he said, Of a truth I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all:

4. For all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: but she of her penury hath cast in all the living that she had.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 11. What are God's work of providence?
A. God's works of providence are, his most holy, wise, and powerful preserving and governing all his creatures, and all their actions.

The Scribes and Pharisees, the Jewish Rulers, did not like Jesus' teachings or reproofs, and perceived that the parable of the vineyard was directed against them. Therefore they endeavored to entrap Him by questions and to expose Him to the enmity and power of the Roman government. Our lesson contains the first of these questions, and also the giving to the Lord's treasury of the rich and the poor. We will consider The Rulers' Question, Jesus' Answer, The Giving of the Rich, and The Giving of the Poor Widow.

I. The Ruler's Question

They introduce their question by a flattering commendation of His righteousness, wisdom and courage. They say, "Thou teachest rightly, regardeth not the person of men, but teachest the way of God in truth." They assign this as a reason for appealing to Him, while their real purpose was to place Him in opposition to the Roman government. Christ knew that they did not seek truth or duty but sought His destruction by the Roman power. Therefore He calls them hypocrites of feigners who covered up an evil design by plausible, insincere words. The question was an insidious one, and difficult to answer without giving offense in some direction. If He said, "It was lawful to give tribute to Caesar," they could accuse Him before the people as favoring a foreign yoke and Roman oppression. If He affirmed it was not lawful to pay tribute, they could represent Him to the Roman Rulers as a rebel, hostile to their dominion and endangering their authority. But the Jewish Rulers found themselves dealing with a Divine wisdom which they could neither "gainsay nor resist," and which baffled their designs, gave them a reply that they could not pervert, and conveying profound truth that lies at the basis of human welfare.

II. Jesus Answers

His reply was partly in acts and in part by words. He calls for the Roman penny or denarius, the coin in which tribute was paid and bearing Caesar's image and superscription. He asks, "Whose image and superscription is this?" They say, "Caesar's." He then enjoins, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things that be Caesar's, and unto God the things that be God's." They acknowledged that they were under Caesar's rule and protection by allowing his money to circulate among them. They had submitted to his authority, had promised to obey him, and were receiving benefits from him as a civil ruler. Therefore he was entitled to tribute to be paid in his own coin. "The powers that be are obtained of God," and good rulers are a "Terror to evil doers and a praise to them that do well." But God has claims as well as civil rulers, and when their requirements are contrary to Divine laws the human ruler may be disobeyed. Therefore Jesus says: "Render to Caesar the things that he may justly claim, but to God the things that are God's."

III. The Gifts of the Rich to God's Treasury

God's treasury is for maintaining His worship and extending His kingdom. All His servants are required to give according to their ability, not only the rich but also the poor, for all are stewards and need the benefits of giving. Christ scans the treasury now as of old in the temple and marks the contributors and their gifts. He sees the rich who put in much into God's treasury. He observes not only the amount, but the proportion it bears to their ability. The rich still contribute much of their abundance and their contributions cost them little self-denial. In a majority of cases perhaps the contributions of the wealthy are small as compared with their income, and might be increased by a little self-denial.

IV. The Gifts of the Poor Widow

Her gifts were little, "Two mites which make a farthing," about three-fourths of a cent. But the Lord marked and approved her contribution. The "Widow's mite" is sometimes referred to to justify small contributions to the Lord's treasury, when we are able to do better. But Jesus' words show that, in God's sight, the widow's mite was the greatest made at that time, and the most acceptable to God. He declares that "The widow had given more than they all to God's treasury, that all they had given of their abundance but she of her penury had given all that she had, even all her living." She denied herself food for a whole day that she might put her "mites" into the Lord's treasury. The Lord estimates our gifts according to the measure of self-denial they cost us. When we deny ourselves to execute the Lord's command we manifest supreme love, as Abraham did when he surrendered Isaac to die on the altar at Jehovah's mandate. Gifts of self-denial are acceptable and largely used to glorify God.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

Sunday, March 11, 1923

STEWARDSHIP

Matt. 25:14-30; I Peter 4:10

M., Mar. 5—Surrendered Self. Rom. 12:1, 2.
T., Mar. 5—Full Consecration. Phil. 3:1-11.
W., Mar. 7—All for Christ. Acts 4:32-37.
T., Mar. 8—Noble Examples. II Cor. 8:1-9.
F., Mar. 9—Rule of Service. Mark 10:42-45.
S., Mar. 10—Extent of Service. Acts 20:18-24.
S., Mar. 11—Topic: The Stewardship of Self, Substance, and Service. Matt. 25:14-30; I Pet. 4:10.
(Copyright by U. S. Christian Endeavor. Used by permission.)

We are indebted to Rev. T. E. Simpson, assistant secretary of the General Assembly's Stewardship Committee, for the discussion of the topic for this week. The material has been selected by his request from his discussion in the Onward.—J. G. G.

Stewardship Principles Taught in the Bible

1. God is owner of all things.
2. Every Man is a Steward and must give account for all that is entrusted to him.
3. God's ownership and man's stewardship ought to be acknowledged.
4. This acknowledgement requires, as a part of its expression, the setting apart for the extension of the Kingdom of Christ such a portion of income as is recognized by the individual to be the will of God.
5. The separated portion ought to be administered for the Kingdom of God and the remainder recognized as no less a trust.

Most Christian Stewards begin with 10 per cent as a scriptural proportion. The proportion should increase as income increases.

I. Stewardship of Self

A great injustice has been done Stewardship by restricting interpretation and application only to money and material possessions. It has been presented generally in terms of money — giving, of charity, of supporting benevolences and meeting current expenses of the church. Often the more vital principles of the ownership of God of all we possess is lost sight of. True Biblical Stewardship lies at the very heart of the human life. It enlists us as workers together with God, who calls not merely for one's tithes or gifts but for one's whole personality and powers and possessions. Stewardship means you as well as yours. "The fact is that more than the need of money, as great and pathetic as that need is, the Church needs this large Stewardship view of life, and adequate resources, in men and money, will be immediately forthcoming for the carrying out of Christ's full program in the Church."

The true order of Stewardship is, "First they gave themselves to the Lord," II Cor. 8:5. First of all God wants the gift of your Life, your Self, your Personality. It was Stewardship of Self that enabled the Apostle Paul to say, "For me to live is Christ." It was Stewardship of Self that prompted the consecrated Livingstone in darkest Africa to exclaim: "I will place no value on anything I have or may possess, except in relation to the Kingdom of Christ. If anything I have will advance that Kingdom, it shall be given away or kept, only as by giving or keeping it I may promote the glory of him to whom I owe all my hopes in time and eternity!"

II. Stewardship of Substance

"One more revival, only one more is needed; the revival of Christian Stewardship, the consecration of the money power of God; when the revival comes, the Kingdom of God will come in a day."—Horace Bushnell.

The Southern Presbyterian Church holds today a place of leadership in liberality and in per capita gifts for benevolences, among the churches of America. And yet, a serious problem confronting our Church is the lack of funds to meet in a measure our pressing responsibilities in both the home land and in the foreign field. Numbers of talented young men and young women who have offered their lives for service are waiting and waiting because the Church is financially unable to send them to the field of service. The Church needs a larger number of regular, systematic, proportionate givers.

It is said by those who have looked carefully into this subject, that one in every five verses of the Gospel records deals with man's relations to material things. Nearly all of the thirty-eight recorded par-

.....
Church News

THE FIRE AT DAVIDSON COLLEGE

On last Sunday, while the student body was at church, the Watts dormitory at Davidson College was destroyed, with a total loss of approximately $45,000. Prompt work on the part of the students saved the adjacent dormitories, Rumble and Georgia. The Watts dormitory was the gift of the late George W. Watts, of Durham.

Owing to the headway gained before being discovered and the inadequate water supply, the loss was a total one.

The building carried the maximum amount of insurance, but the personal effects of the students of course carried no insurance.

The friends of Davidson sympathize with the college authorities, and will no doubt express that sympathy in a substantial manner when the time to act comes. It is seldom that a college in a few months is so sorely afflicted.

ARMENIAN RELIEF

Received for this cause:

Miss Lillian Williams	$5.00
W. A. S. Circle No. 1	5.00
Sugar Creek Church	6.00

The General Assembly's Training School for Lay Workers—R. L. Landis, Synodical Superintendent Sunday School and Young People's Work Synod of Mississippi.

-
- Miss Bessie Cox, Lowell.
 - Eugene Brown Morgan, Concord.
 - Miss Rachel Beall, Durham.
 - Miss Anne Sample, Hendersonville.
 - J. M. Carr, Davidson College.
 - Miss Ruth Beard, Cornelius.

*Those who have reported more than once.

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The Senior C. E. societies of the First Presbyterian churches of Cornelius and Bethel, which is a short distance from Cornelius, have adopted the plan of having a union meeting once a month. The societies alternate the places of meeting, and a Cornelius Endeavorer will have charge of the meeting at Bethel, and vice versa. These two societies report splendid results with this plan. The society at Cornelius is planning to have a rally of the societies within several miles some time during the first of April. It is expected that Frank P. Wilson, North Carolina Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor, and Lawrence Little, former Field Secretary of Louisiana, will be the speakers.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavorers of the McKinnon Presbyterian Church, of Concord, recently went with their pastor, Rev. C. C. Myers, to the Stonewall Jackson Training School, four miles from Concord. Mr. Myers talked to the three hundred or more wayward boys in this school, the Endeavorers sang for the boys, and the boys sang for the Endeavorers. Mr. Eugene Brown Morgan, who signs himself as "Editor" of the society, considers the visit a real inspiration to the Endeavorers.

A report was recently read of a C. E. society which had passed a resolution not to read clippings at their meetings. This is a splendid resolution, and if carried out will add great interest to the society meetings, and be of immense benefit to the Endeavorers. Adopt this resolution, and rid yourself of the disease known as "clippitis."

A new C. E. society has been organized at Clemson College, in South Carolina, by the young people of the Presbyterian Church. The society is composed chiefly of cadets, and numbers about 80.

The C. E. Training Class at Davidson College were asked by the Endeavorers of the Presbyterian Church at Davidson to conduct the meeting of this society on February 18th. The subject was, "$50,000 for Improving Our Community: How Should We Spend it?" Members of the class, assisted by others, impersonated several prominent citizens of Davidson, and each presented some cause of improvement that would benefit the community, and asked for various amounts, which exceeded the amount named. The meeting was novel and proved very interesting.

It was a delightful privilege to spend a vacation, the first for several years, and to spend it at Union Seminary and Assembly's Training School for Lay Workers, Richmond, Va.

Union Seminary is of course in its great work and usefulness too well-known to the Southern Church to need any description or comment. Perhaps the Training School being a younger institution, even though conducted upon the same campus and in the same buildings is not yet nearly so well-known, so the writer cannot resist the inclination to give expression to the impressions received during a month's stay in this great institution.

Even a casual observer must from the outset feel the radiant effect of true consecration upon meeting and knowing the faculty. It would indeed be a difficult task to find a more excellent group of true followers of Jesus Christ than the student body which is composed of those who are dedicating life to the Master's service and the promotion of His Kingdom and take this opportunity for the preparation. A happier, more jolly, or better contented group of students is not to be found. Each one of them has before entering, received at least high school training—many of them are graduates of our leading colleges.

The course offered by the school includes English Bible, Christian Psychology, Organization and inspection of Sunday School and Young People's Work, Church History, and knowledge of church work. It is here that preparation may be made for service in the Home Mission and Foreign Mission fields, for leadership in the Auxiliary or woman's work, for the pastor's assistant, for the city missionary, for teachers and religious directors in Church schools and colleges, for social leaders, for office assistants and secretaries; in fact any form of religious work except the ministry.

Any who may, especially young people, desire to invest a life to the greatest possible advantage can hardly choose a better way to prepare for life service than to follow either a junior or senior college course with that of the Training School.

We doubt if the Church has an institution that means more to the progress and development of the work of the Church than this school.

Its possibilities seem limited by capacity only, which will be greatly enlarged next year on entering the new buildings now under construction.

NORTH CAROLINA

The Presbytery of Wilmington will meet in regular stated session in Elkton, N. C., April 10, 1923, at 8 p. m.
 W. P. M. Currie, S. C.

Hopewell Church, Mecklenburg County—The pastor of this church, Rev. R. S. Burwell was absent from December 22, 1922 to February 5, 1923, partly a vacation kindly granted by the session, and partly from sickness. On his return February 5th he received a most hearty welcome after two months absence. And on Friday, February 9th, many of the friends in the church came to the manse to spend a few social hours, and brought with them many good things to express in this substantial way their appreciation of his services as pastor and their love for him as a friend. In spite of much sickness and cold weather the congregations have been good, and the work in the Sunday School, the Auxiliaries and the Christian Endeavor Society is encouraging. Hopewell loses constantly by the removal of valuable members to towns and cities, but continues to carry on the work. We hope for better things.
 R. S. B.

Antioch—J. W. Goodman, pastor. February 11th we closed an eight-days' evangelistic meeting in which the pastor was assisted by Rev. Wm. Black, D.D., Synodical evangelist, and his singer, Mr. Andrew Burr. The weather was about the worst of the winter, and some of the roads were almost impassable in places, and a recent influenza epidemic had rendered it unsafe for lots to attend. But from the first there was a serious interest among those who did attend, and by the direct, convincing and searching presentation of the Gospel by Brother Black, augmented by the help in song by Mr. Burr and others gratifying results were obtained. About 30 have joined and will join the different churches. Twenty-three on profession and two by letter have been received by the session of Antioch, making our total number of communicants on the roll 350; of which number 147 are "Mac's." An offering of $145.25 was made for Synodical Home Missions, and $40.65 was given to Mr. Burr. There were several new recruits for the Family Altar League, and quite a number promised to read the Bible and pray daily.

Highland Church, Fayetteville—Sam K. Phillips, pastor. This young, aggressive church, comes to the close of another church year with gratitude to God, and faces a new year with courage and determination. Twenty members have recently been received. The Junior and Senior Christian Endeavor Societies are both in a flourishing condition and the young people are standing by the church. The organization of a mid-week Sunday School faculty which meets about the supper table, has done much to increase the attendance and efficiency of the Sunday School. The Auxiliary will complete one of its most successful years both as to membership and work done. The prayer meetings have averaged 41 plus, and at the last fifteen meetings, there has been an average of 19 men each night. The congregations on Sunday have continued to grow in number, and the evening services have been in nearly every case larger than those of the morning. Seven men will ables of Jesus relates to subjects of this class. The teachings of our Lord show what a pivotal factor money, material possessions, may be in determining the outcome in character for weal or woe.

Three outstanding reasons have been suggested for the Stewardship of Substance:

1. It relieves the want of the world.—One who is at all familiar with world conditions needs no argument as to the distressing and disturbing wants of humanity.

2. It develops grace in the giver.—The effect of giving, of Stewardship, on the giver is marvelous. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." And of all the graces, giving is that which is "likeliest to God within the Soul."

3. It glorifies God.—And this is the crowning reason of all.

"The day is not far distant when the man who dies leaving behind him millions of wealth which were free for him to administer during life, will pass away 'unwept, unhonored and unsung.' Of such as these the public verdict will be—"The man who dies rich dies disgraced."

3. Stewardship of Service

Time and talent are gifts from God, and time and talent when combined and placed at God's disposal constitute service. Our best and largest contribution to the Church and the Kingdom of God may be in the realm of our personal service. A college graduate opened his diploma one day and looked at it seriously: He laid it down with this statement: "This diploma is not an asset but a liability. It constitutes a challenge to my privileges, training and equipment for service."

Stewardship of Service Principles:

1. That a worker with God so plan his life and time that as much as possible of his personality shall go into direct Christian service.

2. That a worker with God plan to make every activity of his life contribute as fully and completely as possible to the Kingdom enterprise. His business will be his instrument for building the city of God. Profits or self will not be put first, but God and His Kingdom.

3. Among the things necessary to a proper system in a steward's administration is a budget of one's life and possessions. The steward should most carefully budget his time and strength as well as his money so as to give such portions as are possible for special service in the Kingdom.

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS OF NORTH CAROLINA GOING TO RALEIGH

The twelfth annual conference of the North Carolina Student Volunteer Union will be held with the N. C. State College, in Raleigh, March 9, 10, and 11. The sessions, which will be held in State College's Y. M. C. A. auditorium, will begin at 4:30 on the afternoon of Friday, the 9th, and close Sunday night.

It is the custom not to give previous detailed announcements of the programs, but an interesting set of speakers and conference leaders will be present. The different denominations will send representatives to confer with the Volunteers and non-Volunteers. These representatives will in most cases be furloughed missionaries, some of whom will be men and some women. Mr. T. S. Shapre, of New York, Executive Secretary of the Volunteer Movement, will be present to help make the conference a success.

Any student in a Senior college may go as a delegate to the conference. It is hoped that half of those attending will be Volunteers and half those who are not Volunteers. Registrations should as far as possible be sent in through the College Volunteer Bands. It is expected that three hundred will be in attendance. The expenses will be railroad fare and $2.50 as a registration and conference fee.

The officers of the State Union are Mr. Guy E. Weeks, president, Davidson College; Miss Sarah Hamilton, secretary, N. C. College; Mr. M. E. King, treasurer, N. C. State College; and Miss Mary Wilkinson, editor "State Volunteer," Trinity.

REPORTERS' HONOR ROLL

- Carey P. Lowrance, Mooresville.
- Paul W. Rawlins, Greensboro.
- Miss Eunice Long, Greensboro.
- Miss Minnie Hopkins, Concord.*
- Miss Leila Hubbard, Lumber Bridge.*
- Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, Route 5, Durham.
- Miss Aline Whitener, Hickory.
- Miss Maud Little, Charlotte.
- Mrs. Z. V. Turlington, Mooresville.
- Miss Bess D. Arrowood, Morganton.
- Miss Kate Sutton, Fayetteville.
- Mrs. W. H. Howell, Wilmington.

go with the pastor to Richmond to attend the Laymen's Convention, and the Christian Endeavor Society is already making plans to be represented at the Montreat Young People's Conference this summer. A troop of Boy Scouts has been organized, which are being backed by the Men's Bible Class, and are working on a Fife and Drum Corps. Fayetteville Presbytery will meet with the Highlanders this spring in regular session, and the church is looking forward with pleasure to the coming of the brethren.

N. D. P., Cor.

Davidson—The Board of Trustees holds its mid-winter session here on February 28th. It is supposed that matters of most concern to come before the board will have to do with the building program of the proposed new and greatly enlarged Chambers and the progress of the campaign as justifying this start and further the matter of additions to the teaching force of the college. Other matters of more or less public interest will be presented to the attention of the board by President Martin.

"A Good Soldier of Jesus Christ," was the subject of a forceful and engaging address by Rev. Mack Long, of Front Street Church, Statesville, before the Y. M. C. A. last Sunday evening.

The honor roll, represented by student making an average grade of 95 as a minimum for the semester just ended, has been completed. In the senior class this represents those who having a sessional grade of 85 did not have to take the final examinations and receive their sessional grade.

Honor Roll—First Semester 1922-23. Freshmen—Lawson, H. C., 96.50; Shaw, H. L., 96.50.

Sophomores—Traywick, M. W., 98.71.

Juniors—Galloway, W. F., 96.42; Hillhouse, A. M., 95.13; Smith, J. I., 95.33; Walthall, D. B., 96.16.

Seniors—Davidson, R. F., 97.50; Davis, J. H., Jr., 95.83; Guille, W. G., 95.66; Kimzey, W. P., 95.50; Ogden, D. H., Jr., 97.14 (Not a candidate for honors); Gamble, W. A., 95.00.

M. A.—Brice, R. M., 95.20.

Fayetteville Presbytery met in called session, February 13, 1923, in the Highland Church, Fayetteville, N. C., with an attendance of 17 ministers and four ruling elders. Rev. W. C. Brown was asked to act as temporary clerk.

The Elise Church requested Presbytery to change the place for the regular spring meeting, as they found it impracticable to entertain the Presbytery. Highland Church Fayetteville was chosen as the place instead of Elise. The time will be April 17, 1923.

Rev. F. M. Bain was received from Norfolk Presbytery and his name enrolled as a minister of this Presbytery.

Mr. Haynes Collier Bridgers, a member of the Elrod Church was received under the care of Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry.

Rev. Eugene Alexander was allowed to resign the pastorates of Bethel, Shiloh, Dundarrach and Sandy Grove Churches, the pastoral relations dissolved effective March 1st, and he was granted a letter of dismission to Concord Presbytery, that he might accept a call to the Second Church of Salisbury.

The following recommendations of the Home Mission Committee were adopted:

1. That the amount due for the school house property at Naomi Church, about $200, be paid at once out of the M. H. McBryde legacy.

2. That $100 be given from the Donaldson School Fund to Mr. H. C. Bridgers, a student for the ministry, to enable him to pursue his studies at Elise High School the remainder of this session.

3. That $1,000 be appropriated from the John Elliott legacy fund to building a church at Four Oaks, N. C., this amount to be paid whenever the legacy is available.

4. That $1,000 be appropriated from the John Elliott legacy fund to building a church at Coats, N. C., this amount to be paid when the legacy is available.

5. That the Presbyterial treasurer, Dr. E. C. Murray, be instructed to pay out the balance of the M. H. McBryde legacy, after the amount due for the school house property at Naomi Church is paid, to the Alaska, Roseneath, and Fairview Churches—giving equal amounts to each one, for aiding in erecting church buildings, the amounts to be paid as the calls for the money come from the building committees of these churches.

6. That the Presbytery authorize the Home Mission Committee to publish a Home Mission paper for the purpose of giving information of the Home Mission work of the Presbytery. The name of the paper will be: "Home Mission News," to be issued at least twice a year. Editor-in-chief, Dr. W. E. Hill, Rev. A. R. McQueen and Dr. E. C. Murray contributing editors, and Rev. L. Smith, business manager.

7. That superintendent L. Smith be authorized to employ a woman Sunday School missionary to do work in upper Johnston county, under his general supervision.

J. W. Goodman, Moderator.

E. L. Siler, Stated Clerk.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Enoree Presbytery will meet at Lickville Church, Pelzer, S. C., R. F. D. 3, on April 3, 1923, at 8 p. m. E. P. Davis, S. C.

Rev. J. R. Millard, pastor of the Chesterfield, Ruby and White Oak group of churches, would in this way express the sincere appreciation of himself and his family for the many kindnesses extended to them by the good people of these churches. Not only at the Christmas season when wants were anticipated and abundantly provided for by members of each of the churches, but almost daily they are the recipients of gifts which add materially to their comfort. All of this kindness which is the expression of wonderful thoughtfulness on the part of these kind people, brings cheer into the heart and home of their pastor. May God's blessings rest on each of them.

ALABAMA

Tuscaloosa—The First Church, Dr. Chas. M. Boyd, pastor, is enjoying more and more the benefits of the magnificent new building completed last year. The Sunday School and mid-week hours are by far the most largely attended now in the history of the work. Mrs. Edgar Hardin Phifer, one of the best chorus directors in the country, is now musical director in the church. She is building a great chorus choir of 40 trained voices as a minimum number. Mrs. Phifer also conducts a free class in sight singing once a week at the church, which class is largely attended. An interdenominational Sunday School revival of six days has just closed. Bob Jones led and the meetings were held in the First Church. Despite the sleet and ice which covered the ground all the days the attendance on several occasions was estimated at nearly 2,000.

GEORGIA

Presbytery of Southwest Georgia will meet in Climax, Ga., Tuesday, April 17th, at 8 p. m. (E. T.) E. P. Mickel, S. C.

KENTUCKY

The First Standard Training School of the Presbyterian Churches of Lexington, Ky., and vicinity, was held at the First Presbyterian Church, Lexington, February 11-15; more than 100 being enrolled and a number receiving certificates at the end of the course. Mr. Thos. Talbot, superintendent of Home Missions was largely responsible for putting on the course, and he worked indefatigably to this end. It was a success in every way and there is a move on foot to bring another similar course another year. This was the first of its kind ever attempted in Lexington, and its success makes the people eager for this sort of work among the teachers and religious workers of the Sunday School. The faculty consisted of Dr. Gerrit Verkuyll, S. S. field director of the Presbyterian Church, subject, "The Pupil"; Rev. Wesley Baker, S. S. field director Presbyterian Church, subject, "Organization and Administration"; Miss Jessie P. Spencer, "The Teacher"; Dr. D. Clay Lilly, "The Teacher." A number of university instructors attended the lectures, and pastors from all the surrounding country came to the classes. For further information regarding this course, write to Rev. W. A. Hopkins, 109 East Broadway, Louisville, Ky., or Mr. Thos. Talbot, box 24, Lexington, Ky.

MISSISSIPPI

The Presbytery of Central Mississippi will meet in Canton, Miss., on April 10, 1923, at 7:30 p. m. E. W. Ford, S. C.

MISSOURI

The Presbytery of St. Louis will meet in the First Presbyterian Church, St. Charles, Mo., Tuesday, April 10, 1923, at 7:30 p. m. Walter M. Langtry, S. C.

OKLAHOMA

The Presbytery of Mangum will meet with the First Presbyterian Church, Cheyenne, Okla., April 10, 1923, at 8 p. m. J. W. Moseley, S. C.

TENNESSEE

Memphis—Rev. Wm. F. Junkin, D.D., who is at home from his missionary post for a short time occupied the pulpit of Second Presbyterian Church Sunday morning and night. Dr. Junkin has a stirring message and made a fine impression on the people of Memphis.

Memphis—Tangible progress is being manifested in the building of Southwestern College of Memphis. The architects' plans are now about completed. Five car loads of stone have been delivered to the new site and the work of excavation has begun. There has been considerable delay in the payment of subscriptions for the new Southwestern. It is expected that now that the erection of the building has begun the subscribers will more readily meet the payments on their pledges as promised.

Memphis—Idlewild Presbyterian Church is in the midst of a campaign looking towards the erection of a new Church and Sunday School building to cost not less than $250,000. A congregational dinner to launch the project was attended by four hundred members of the Church. Addresses were made by Rev. William Crowe, D.D., of St. Louis, former pastor of the Idlewild Church and Rev. S. Waters McGill, of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Louisville. Mr. McGill is assisting the pastor, Rev. W. P. Neilson, D.D., in the direction of the campaign.

Memphis—The contract for the foundation of the Palmer Memorial Building of Southwestern, the College of the Mississippi Valley, at Memphis, was let February 21st, by Jones and Furbringér, architects, to the firm of Kaucher and Hodges, Memphis. The work began Thursday, February 22d, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

Eleven cars of stone have already been delivered on the college grounds and additional cars are arriving daily. It is expected that about 40 cars per month will be received until the ten thousand tons of stone being quarried at Bald Knob, Ark., for the first building has been delivered. The administration building is to be the first of the buildings erected and all the buildings are to be of stone.

In order to open for work in September, 1924, the fullest co-operation on the part of the subscribers will be needed, said Dr. Chas. E. Diehl, president of the institution and chairman of the building committee. It was said that some who had intended entering their sons in Southwestern in Memphis in September, 1923, have decided, in view of the delay in opening, to send them to Southwestern Presbyterian University in Clarksville, Tenn., with the expectation of having them finish at Memphis. The college will continue at Clarksville until June, 1924.

The campaign conducted by Presbyterians which resulted in $2,000,000 being subscribed for Christian education, and which included $1,500,000 for Southwestern, was, it is said, the biggest achievement of its kind in the history of the Southern Presbyterian Church. With the many advantages of being located in Memphis, the gateway of the Southwest, it is certain that the college will do a large and far-reaching work.

TEXAS

Austin—Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, Assembly evangelist, with Mrs. Thacker, and Mr. T. B. Roddy, soloist and song leader, completed a series of special evangelistic services in the First Southern Presbyterian Church, on February 14th. The salvation message was preached and sung with all simplicity, yet with all the earnestness that was at the command of these consecrated people. There were 500 consecration cards signed, and 80 additions to the Austin churches. While the special services are over, the people of the First Southern Church, and of the community, really feel that these people have "prepared the way of the Lord" in the hearts of the people, and that a true revival has just begun.

Mrs. Thacker held special services for the women of the city on Sunday, February 11th, giving at that time her lecture on "The Human Touch." It proved more than a lecture, however, for it was really a heart message, a plea for greater consecration and service for the Master. As many of the people had already accepted Christ as their Saviour, many were called to a greater love and loyalty and service for Christ, touched as they were, by her keen, appealing call for more devoted service on the part of the women. Her call touched especially the hearts of the younger women, as she held out the joy of service of the Master to them, with the pathetic, heart-felt message of "It is never too late for reconsecration, but oh, the pity of the wasted years and the wasted opportunities." Mrs. Thacker appealed to the ambitious, thoughtful women, because she herself is an ambitious, thoughtful, successful woman, with all that she is and has consecrated to Christ and His service.

Her second message was on "God's Creation and Christian Science," and this lesson also found a big place in the hearts of those who heard her, clearing up doubts concerning this "false doctrine" that has blown so many from the path of truth.

K. M. S., Publicity Chairman.

WEST VIRGINIA

The Presbytery of Greenbrier will meet in Roncverte, W. Va., on Monday, April 9, 1923, at 8 p. m., in regular spring session. J. E. Flow, S. C. Lewisburg, W. Va.

PERSONAL

The address of Rev. C. B. Heller is changed from Salisbury, N. C., to Elizabethtown, N. C.

Mr. J. B. Spillman, manager of the P. P. P. for the Synod of North Carolina has changed his address from Kinney Building to 1211 Realty Building, Charlotte, N. C.

We have received from Rev. George Atkinson, 12 copies of Chicago papers, each in a different language, showing, as we suppose, the many-tongued people of that wonderful city. We thank him for his remembrance of us, and we shall store away in our memory the facts given.

As perhaps is not generally known throughout the Assembly, the Moderator of our Church is each year extended the courtesy of an invitation to preach before the faculty and students of Princeton Seminary. In this capacity Dr. R. C. Reed filled the pulpit in the chapel here on Sunday morning, February 18th. In the opinion of one of his listeners who has had the opportunity of hearing him on many occasions and under various conditions, including three years' bringing up at his feet, he was never in better form than at this time. His sermon was simple, graceful, powerful. Nor was there lacking that charming humour which Dr. Reed knows so well how to intersperse his discourse with and which he is not afraid to make use of in the treatment of the greatest themes.

In the beginning with unaffected modesty Dr. Reed declared his diffidence in standing in the pulpit surrounded by the tablets to the greatest of the Church's leaders, and thereupon he launched out upon a sermon that proved him also among the sons of the giants, and represented his own Church at its very best.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

(Continued from page 11)

gone to prepare a place for them. For Thy Name's sake, Amen.

(From "Christian Stewardship—Six Bible Studies for the Women of the Southern Presbyterian Church" by Mrs. S. H. Askew.

The Mission Study Class of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Pinetops Presbyterian Church has only been organized on account of lateness in arrival of "Sunrise in Aztec Land." Mrs. W. W. Eagles, Mrs. Linda V. Cobb, and Mrs. W. E. Cobb have been chosen leaders and concentrated study has already begun for class that is to be held March 1st.

Reporter, Mary Lilly Sugg

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Pinetops Presbyterian Church held its regular monthly meeting February 22d with Mrs. Frank Saunders. The general routine of business discussions resulted in a set day for church work, such as ground improvement and plans were made to have church electrically wired. This being next to last meeting in the Auxiliary year, officers were elected for 1923-24. The following were elected: President, Mrs. Ed. G. Lovelace; vice-president, Mrs. M. E. Lane; secretary, Miss Katharine Cobb; and treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Eagles. After these discussions and elections the meeting was presided over by Mrs. M. E. Lane, who with her associates had prepared a very delightful program.

Reporter, Mary Lilly Sugg.

Reidsville, N. C.—February 16th was a Red Letter Day in the Woman's Auxiliary of the Reidsville Presbyterian Church for several reasons. It was interdenominational Day of Prayer for World-Wide Missions; it was the day appointed by our Southern Church for Prayer for Missions; it was the day appointed by our local Auxiliary for the study of our Foreign Missions text-book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land," and it was also the day that Mrs. Hazen Smith made us a visit. Every preparation had been made to make the day a success. The presidents of all the missionary societies in town were invited to spend the day with us.

The Auxiliary assembled at 10:30 a. m. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Dora Mills. Mrs. E. F. Hall led the devotional and offered prayer. After the singing of a hymn, the study of the book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land" was begun. Miss Sara Walker presented the first three chapters in a most interesting and helpful talk. Then Mrs. Joe L. Womack and Mrs. Frances Womack sang a duet, "When I Think of His Love For Me." Mrs. W. R. Dalton presented the fourth and fifth chapters, interspersing her talk with letters from missionaries in Mexico.

The Auxiliary adjourned to the dining-room at 1 o'clock for lunch, which consisted of sandwiches, coffee, tea, ice cream, cakes and cookies. The four circles were responsible for the lunch.

We reassembled at 2 o'clock. Miss Helen Bailey gave the sixth chapter of our text. The remaining chapters, 7, 8 and 9, were presented by Mrs. A. G. Burnett. This part of the program was concluded by a quartet, "Paradise," sung by Mrs. Joe L. Womack, Mrs. F. B. Kemp, Mrs. E. M. Redd, and Miss Bessie Bennett.

At 3 o'clock, Miss Hattie Millner introduced to the Auxiliary and its visitors (all the ladies in town), Mrs. Hazen Smith, who is Life Work Secretary for the Southern Presbyterian Church. Her lecture was a heart-to-heart talk about our young people and was most inspiring and especially interesting to mothers.

The meeting adjourned at 4 o'clock. All the ladies felt that our first all-day meeting was a most enjoyable and profitable one and would not be our last one.

At 6:30 p. m. of the same day, Mrs. Hazen Smith met with the Senior and Young People's Departments of our Sunday School at a banquet. The theme of her talk at this hour was "Influence." The Business Girls Circle was invited to this lecture.

New Orleans, La.—The Woman's Auxiliary of the Napoleon Avenue Church held a most helpful study class on missions in Mexico. The book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land," by Rev. W. A. Ross, had been read by the members of the Auxiliary and all day Friday, February 23d, was devoted to its study. The class was conducted by the president, Mrs. W. K. Seago, and parts of the book were read aloud in class by different ladies. A picnic luncheon was served, and an hour spent in rest and social talk. On Tuesday night of the same week an illustrated lecture by Prof. H. T. Mead, of Tulane University was given in the Sunday School room under the auspices of the Fidelis Circle. A brief musical service preceded the lecture and a free will offering for missions was taken at its close.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Wallace, N. C. Church met to observe the special day of prayer for Foreign Missions, using the program issued by our committee. The demonstration, "The Octagon Christian" was very impressively carried out, the character being dressed in costumes to represent the several countries. The pastor was present and asked that the program be repeated at a regular night service for the benefit of the entire congregation.

Report by wire or mail results of your Every member Canvass to your Presbyterial Secretary of Stewardship, on or before April 1st.

News of the Week

Climaxing what members termed one of the greatest and sharpest fights of all time in the General Assembly of North Carolina, the House of Representatives at 28 minutes after midnight voted down by 46 to 53 the Warren amendment to strike out of the general revenue bill the amendment of the finance committee which would exempt from taxation stocks owned by residents in foreign corporations.

Representative Warren, of Washington, in closing the long debate, charged that proponents of the committee proposition "dared not go before the blackball committee of the democratic caucus and present the proposition, fairly and squarely, that they have presented to this house."

The bill then passed its second reading by a vote of 76 to 25.

Maj. Benjamin Sloan, former president of the University of South Carolina, died February 18th at 5 o'clock, near Biltmore, from double pneumonia.

Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of the United States Court of the Northern District of Georgia, declared in a statement that prohibition officers have a "perfectly legal right" to search and seize automobiles on public highways "without search warrants if they have evidence that leads them to a reasonable belief that a crime is being committed in their presence."

Return to German citizens of $45,000,000 of the $347,000,000 trusts held by the alien property custodian as a result of war-time seizures, was urged in a statement issued by Alien Property Custodian Miller. Such a reimbursement, he said, would "contribute vastly to a relief of the economic situation in Germany" at the present time.

Governor Morrison has appointed the commission to study the plan of having ships connecting our eastern section with other markets. This is as follows:

R. M. Miller, Jr., of Charlotte, cotton manufacturer; William A. Hart, of Tarboro, cotton manufacturer and member of the state highway commission; A. M. Scales, of Greensboro, lawyer and a man of extensive business interests; George Stephens, of Asheville, one of the state's leading business men, developer of Myers Park at Charlotte and of suburban undertakings about Asheville; Charles S. Wallace, of Morehead City, business man of large interests; Dr. D. D. Carroll, of Chapel Hill, educator; Emmett H. Bellamy, of Wilmington, lawyer, member of the state senate and one of the introducers of the ship bill; Joseph A. Brown, of Chadburn, large farmer and merchant, member of the state senate and introducer of the substitute to the Morrison bill; Dr. J. Y. Joyner, of Raleigh, former superintendent of public instruction.

At the final session of the twenty-fifth annual convention of the Tri-State Medical Association, Dr. Chas. O. H. Laughinghouse, of Greenville, N. C., was elected to succeed Dr. S. S. Gale, of Roanoke, Va., as president, and Greenville, S. C., was chosen as the meeting place for next year's convention. When the convention registration books closed, 202 doctors from all parts of Virginia, North and South Carolina had entered their names upon it.

The Senate of South Carolina has passed the Barnett bill appropriating $25,000, for the establishment of a boll weevil experiment station at Florence. The bill has already passed the House, and now goes to the governor for his signature. Passage of the measure was delayed on a motion to strike out its enacting words. This was lost 25 to 5.

Two senate committees reported favorably the Mendenhall resolution empowering the governor to employ counsel for the prosecution of such action as will bring about the re-establishment of the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley railroad as a continuous line. The road runs from Mt. Airy to Wilmington, but is divided at Sanford, with the Southern controlling the western road and the Atlantic Coast Line the eastern part.

Biltmore Forest has been incorporated as a municipality with Junius G. Adams as mayor and Charles E. Waddell, E. M. Jones and Lloyd Jarrett, as commissioners, a bill to this effect having been ratified by the General Assembly, February 14th.

The joint committee of the North Carolina Legislature advises the passage of the Land Settlement measure. They think that the only relief to the tenant farmer is through state co-operation.

On Ward's Island, New York, the building of the Manhattan State Hospital caught fire and 22 insane inmates were burned to death.

Bishop Manning has answered Dr. Grant and warned him that doctrine is not to be despised.

In the Legislature of South Carolina the house favored the bill to create a commodity tax, with soft drinks, tobaccos, teas and coffee as the objects of taxation. A vote which saved the bill came after a lengthy debate that occupied the entire night session and also a large part of the day session.

MEN'S WORK

By Henry Wade DuBose, D.D.

The Assembly's Permanent Committee on Men's Work has not been idle during the months that have elapsed since its appointment. Its first meeting was held at Montreat in the closing days of last August. A second meeting was held in Chattanooga during the early days of December. In the interval between the two meetings the committee devoted itself to surveying the situation that exists, rather than to propaganda of any sort or the hasty putting forth of any ready-made program.

Survey of the Churches

The survey was conducted by means of a questionnaire sent out to the pastor or clerk of session of every church in the Southern Assembly, accompanied by a letter asking for the co-operation of those addressed. The results were interesting, if not altogether satisfying. Only about one out of eight of those addressed answered the Committee's letters. Evidently a number of the brethren either have very little to say about men's work in their churches, or they are sadly behind in their correspondence. It has been sometimes whispered that some ministers are derelict as to the answering of letters, anyway. But surely that must be a slander! Tell it not in Gath! Publish it not in the streets of Ashkelon!

The Responses

The answers to its questionnaire, which the Committee did receive, were highly important. In the first place, it is fair to assume that they represented, in the main, live pastors, eager for progress, and wide-awake churches, loyal to all the Assembly's enterprises. Yet, of these respondent churches, almost one-half report that they have no men's organizations at all. And of the one-half of the one-seventh of all our churches which have reported existing organizations, two-thirds report that their only such organization is a Bible class. In fine, there are decidedly fewer than a hundred churches in the Assembly which have reported to the Committee that they have both a Men's Bible class and some other form of men's organization.

Examples of Successful Work

Over against these negative results of the survey is to be set the important, positive fact that the few churches which have men's organizations evidently value them very highly. Not only so, a number of these associations of Presbyterian men are abundantly demonstrating their value as auxiliaries of the Church and agencies of the Kingdom of God. A summary was made of the kinds of activities in which these organized men are engaged. Forty-three different varieties are reported. No doubt this number could easily be increased to 57. Nor are these "Activities" merely pious gestures. They are the sort of honest, earnest, Christian work that needs to be done by Christian men everywhere. Just a few of the 43 varieties may be mentioned to illustrate. They are picked at random from the tabulation made up by the Men's Work Committee; "Mission Work," "Evangelistic Work," "Filling Vacant Churches," "Supporting Missionaries," "Conducting Prayer Meetings," "Getting Men to Church," "Winning Men to Christ," "Advertising the Church," "Promoting Night Services," "Friendly Visitation at Definite Times," "Working With, and For, the Boys and Young Men." It is highly encouraging to know that we have churches in which the men are actually doing these things, and doing them in a persistent and organized way. To study the methods of these men and to encourage Southern Presbyterian men everywhere to emulate their example, will be among the first concerns of the Assembly's Committee on Men's Work.

Appeals for Help

That hosts of the men eagerly desire the help and guidance that this Committee plans and hopes to give was emphatically indicated by the survey. The tabulation of it shows a list of 47 "Weaknesses of Work for Men." (A powerful array of weaknesses, indeed!) The respondents suggest 15 ways in which the Permanent Committee can help the pastors, and 18 ways in which it can help the laymen of the Church. Well, here is a real job for a real committee! The Committee has its hands full, and it ought to have the prayers of all the Church.

CHILDREN

SURPRISE FOR PAPA

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl nine years old, I am in the third grade at school. Miss Leola Sapp is my teacher. I want to surprise my papa. I hope my letter will not reach the wastebasket.

Your little friend,
Sara Simpson.

Waxhaw, N. C.

HER MOTHER'S VALENTINE

Dear Standard:

I am a girl thirteen years old. I am in the seventh grade. My teacher's name is Miss Brown and I like her fine. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. Our pastor is Dr. Bradshaw and our superintendent is Mr. Standwick. We like them fine. I have four brothers and I am the only girl. My smallest brother's birthday comes on the fourteenth of February, which is Valentine. I will close now for my letter might reach the wastebasket.

Your unknown friend,
Lillie Mae Cates.

Hillsboro, N. C.

SANTA INTENDS HER TO RIDE

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl nine years old. I am going to school and am in the third grade. Santa Claus was real good to me. He brought me a bicycle Christmas. I have two sisters, Miriam and Louise. My grandma takes the Standard and I enjoy the little letters and stories very much. I have a pair of skates and go skating most every day. I go to the Presbyterian Church. I go to Sunday School most every Sunday. I must close for fear of the wastebasket. Your little friend, Elizabeth Garrett.

Red Springs, N. C.

A SURPRISE LETTER

Dear Standard:

I am a little boy eleven years old. I go to Sunday School every Sunday, my teacher's name is Miss Brooks, I like her fine. I go to school and am in the fifth grade. My teacher is Miss West. As this is my first letter to the Standard I want to surprise my father. From your friend, Leon Whitehurst.

Smithfield, N. C.

THE RATS MIGHT BITE THE KITTEN!

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl five years old. My sister Mary Douglas goes to school, but I am not old enough yet. I have to play with mother and daddy while she is in school. I am going to get a little kitten so he can catch some of our rats. We have so many rats they eat up our clothes.

Your little friend,
Ruth Alford Bullock.

Rowland, N. C.

PLAY WITH JANE

Dear Standard:

I am a little girl six years old. I go to school at Rowland. I am in the first grade. My teacher's name is Miss McCallman. I have a little calf, her name is Jane. My little sister Ruth Alford and I play with her almost every day. Please put my letter in your paper as I want to surprise my grandmother who is sick.

Your little friend,
Mary Douglas Bullock.

Rowland, N. C.

THE TWINS' IMPOSSIBLE TASK

Grandmother Baxter is the dearest, jolliest little grandmother in all this world. But in some ways the very queerest. Two months out of every year, December and June, she always spends at our house. And the day she comes and the day she leaves are always very exciting days. When she comes she decides whether we have won our reward, and when she goes the very last thing she does—without giving Gwen and me the least chance to argue—she sets a task for us. And the task always takes our breath away.

This afternoon on the last day of December she was leaving us. She had said goodbye and started up the train steps. Gwen and I waited anxiously. On the last step grandmother turned. "By the way, twinklets, if when I come back in June, you two should happen to be chummy with the Barrymore twins, I'll get you that pony and cart you've been wanting so long."

The next moment she was smiling and waving to us from the train window. The next she was gone.

And we—we just stared after that train till it was only a tiny speck of smoke. Chummy with the Barrymore twins! It was surely the most breath-taking task of all.

"The Dent twins and the Barrymores, chums!" I burst out. "Can you imagine it?"

"Of course I can't," snapped Gwen impatiently. "But oh, Phil, I can imagine the darlinest pony with a glossy brown coat and the most adorable mane. And the cart, a square basket one with cushions brown suede to match the pony. Oh—oh, I just long to jump into it!"

"Calm yourself, calm yourself, sis," I put in—just saving her I do believe from jumping into her imaginary cart, and having a nasty tumble. "It isn't there yet, and never will be either," I further informed her. "The task as you jolly well know is impossible. Absolutely impossible."

To make you understand how impossible it was, I'll have to tell how the trouble started. It certainly wasn't our fault. When we moved to Kennerly Heights last fall John and Jess Barrymore were the undisputed champions in the fifth grade scholarship. "No use; you can't beat 'em," seemed to be the slogan of the rest of the room.

"We know because we've been trying it ever since kindergarten," declared Elderberry Perkins very comfortably—and emphatically.

Always they were the first two on the honor roll. Jess sometimes would be on top, sometimes John. Didn't seem to care which—so long as it was in the family. The rest of the room just calmly took a back seat. The only rivalry seemed to be who should come next to the twins.

But we, not being brought up to it and being twins, too, decided we'd change things a bit. And we dug in. The first month we didn't make it though—didn't even come next to the twins. But the following month! Oh boy! Gwen actually came out on top, and I sliced in between John and Jess.

Now you wouldn't think that would divide the whole room; would you? But it did. It made lots of enemies—and almost as many friends. Some seemed to consider it a slap at their town and at them, too. They much preferred, I suppose, to consider John and Jess prodigies and unbeatable. And the others, the ones who congratulated us, suddenly seemed to realize they were tired of being lorded over by King John and Queen Jess and welcomed a change. Anyhow from that day we were two clans, the Barrymore clan and the Dent clan, and we rivaled in everything—games, parties and even in clothes. It kept us sore all the time. And there was no help for it. Every month when the cards were given out new fuel was added to the flames. When Miss Barlow rose to her feet to announce the honor roll, every eye was snapping and every cheek flaming—ready to applaud or resent her decision. Why, even Fatty Peterson, who never once lost his position at the foot of the class, sat with clenched fists waiting. And my! how angry he was that month when John Barrymore came first and Jess next, Gwen and I only coming third and fourth. Unfair, our side asserted. But the other side fairly gloated, and almost before they were out of the school door they began to shout: "Ray for Kennerly! Ray for Kennerly! Down with the interlopers!"

It was awful and didn't make things better, one little bit.

Then right on top of this had come grandmother's gentle suggestion that we chum up with the Barrymore twins.

You can see how impossible it was. We couldn't quit working and let those Barrymores come out on top every time. Even if we'd been willing for the sake of the pony and cart, we had the honor of our side to keep up. And there you were. But somehow it did make a difference. Although we couldn't think of any way to straighten things out, we didn't take any pleasure in making things worse. For instance: When Elderberry and Fussy made fun of Jess Barrymore's new hat, Gwen said carelessly: "Oh, I don't know; I think it's rather pretty. And awfully becoming." And it really was.

Then often we'd get to talking things over. It must have seemed sort of tough to John and Jess to have two strangers from another town come and make them work hard for what they'd always had so easily. "We wouldn't have liked it any too well ourselves," Gwen remarked one day. "No; but I hope we wouldn't have made such a fuss about it," I answered.

When you come to think about it though, had they made any more fuss than we had? That pony and cart certainly did make us bother our heads a whole lot. And when we were alone we used to often pretend we were friends with the Barrymores and had won the reward. "And if we were really chummy," giggled Gwen, "Jess and John would probably have the extra two seats in the cart." We couldn't help laughing at this, because we couldn't even imagine it.

The proper thing to happen of course would have been a fire. I could have saved Jess, and all would have been lovely. But no fire happened. And the next month to make matters worse Gwen and I came out first and second. Our side gave a party to celebrate, with ice cream and everything. And how they did taunt the other side. We didn't enjoy it much. That pony and cart just disappeared into the distance till it was only the tiniest speck. We gave up after that.

Then the unexpected happened. In the most mysterious and altogether surprising way the whole trouble was smoothed out. Everything came our way—including Jess and John. And on the night that grandmother came they were actually coming to dinner. Nor did grandmother seem the least bit surprised, or ask any questions. But when we were about half through dinner she said casually in that gentle voice of hers: "By the way, twinklets, who came out first last month in school?"

"Oh," replied Jess smiling cheerfully, "the twin quartet."

At grandmother's puzzled expression, she added sweetly: "You see, after you twins came to town there was altogether too much rivalry. Oh, it upset the whole room! So one day we went to Miss Barlow and—and persuaded her to fix it that way. It's made such a difference in the room. Why, Mrs. Baxter, you never saw such a difference! And I do wish you could have seen the expressions on room 5 when Miss Barlow announced the twin-quartet as the winner. Phil and Gwen were as astonished as any. But they didn't kick about it. We knew they wouldn't."

"But why," asked grandmother, "did you know that Phil and Gwen wouldn't object?"

"Well," said Jess, her eyes twinkling, "that's a deep, dark secret."

And indeed it was, for they had never even told us.

But later when grandmother invited them to go into the city the next morning to help us pick out our pony and cart John broke into a laugh, and Jess soon joined him.

Grandmother looked accusingly at Gwen and me. "I believe it was a conspiracy among the four of you," she exclaimed.

"No," said Jess, "honestly it wasn't; they never guessed we knew about the reward. But we overheard them talking about it one day. And we thought as long as they always put us in the cart with them, we'd rather ride than quarrel any day."

Grandmother Baxter's face looked pretty severe by the time Jess stopped speaking. Then she said: "Well, I suppose it's all right, but I do hate to think of the twin quartet lording it over that whole room."

"Lording it over! Don't you believe it," cried John. "Room 5 has waked up, and it's trying it's best to break the combination. Last month Howard West nearly did it, too, Miss Barlow told us. I tell you we have to work harder than ever."

"Really," exclaimed grandmother; "then my plan was a complete success after all."—Lois Larson, in The Continent.

An old Scotchwoman who had resisted all the entreaties of her friends to have her photograph taken, and who was at last induced to consent, in order that she might send her likeness to her son in America, is the heroine of the following anecdote.

On receiving the first proof, she failed to recognize the figure thereon represented as herself; so, card in hand, she set out for the studio.

"Is that me?" she queried.

"Yes, madam!" replied the artist.

"And is it like me?" she again asked.

"Yes, madam, it's a speaking likeness."

"A weel," she said resignedly, "it's a humblin' sicht."

Marriages and Deaths

DEATHS

Paxson—Miss Anna L., near Calvin, Okla., February 7th, aged 73 years.

Miss Paxson was a daughter of Stephen Paxson the pioneer Sunday School missionary of the Mississippi Valley and was for years a missionary to the Choctah Indians under our Home Mission Committee.

Boyd—Mrs. Bertie Boyd, wife of David W. Boyd, died at her home near Leslie, S. C., on January 20, 1923, after an illness of a week with flu followed by pneumonia. She was aged 31 years, and is survived by her husband and two little boys. She was a daughter of J. Frank Shillinlaw.

Davis—Mrs. Betty Davis, widow of B. Frank Davis, of Mt. Airy, N. C., died at the home of her grand-niece, Mrs. A. Foster Davis, Rock Hill, S. C., on January 7, 1923, after an illness of several months, aged 65. The interment was in Laurelwood cemetery, Rock Hill, S. C.

McDiarmid—Nettie McBryde, beloved wife of Dan P. McDiarmid, a consistent and devoted member of Antioch Presbyterian Church, Hoke County, N. C., departed this life November 27, 1922, after a brief illness. Besides her husband and one brother, Mrs. McDiarmid left three small children, two sons and a baby daughter only a few months old. She was a devoted wife and mother and will be sorely missed.

McBryde—After a long illness, borne with a beautiful spirit of resignation, Joseph A. McBryde entered into rest December 3, 1922 in his 84th year. A professing Christian since early manhood, an elder in Antioch Presbyterian Church for 25 years, a veteran of the Civil War, an honorable, upright Christian citizen, a kind neighbor has gone to his reward.

CANTEY VENABLE REED

Whereas on December 18, 1922 it pleased Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, to call to Himself Cantey Venable Reed, the beloved wife of our dear friend and brother, and honored colleague, Dr. Richard Clark Reed.

Resolved: That we, the members of the faculty of Columbia Seminary, do place on record our sense of grievousness of the bereavement that has come to our brother, Dr. Reed, in the loss of the gracious and gifted woman who in the good Providence of God has been his companion and helpmeet during the forty-seven years of his pilgrimage, and whose removal has created a void that cannot be filled, and inflicted a wound the pain of which the gracious Comforter of God's afflicted people alone can assuage, and that we assure our beloved brother that as with one heart we rejoiced with him when he was honored with the moderatorship by our last Assembly, so now, with one heart, we mourn with him in this great loss and sorrow that our Heavenly Father has appointed him.

MRS. LIZZIE REAVES PLOWDEN

In loving remembrance of my friend, Mrs. Lizzie Reaves Plowden, whose gentle spirit entered her eternal home December 22, 1922, at her home in Greenville, S. C., after a brief illness.

She was born in Kershaw County, June 1, 1865. The third daughter of David and Charlotte Reaves.

Early in life she united with Beaver Creek Presbyterian Church, and lived her life in the light of divine truth, and loved her church. She was always ready to do her best for the Master.

In 1885 her parents moved to Clarendon, where, April 13, 1887, she was happily married to Mr. J. S. Plowden, of Manning, S. C., who with two daughters, Mrs. Edwin Kiester, of Turtle Creek, Pa., and Miss Lottie and five sons, Wylie, David, Belton, James, and Richards, and five grandchildren survive.

One infant son, Jesse, Jr., was laid to rest in Manning, S. C., cemetery April, 1903.

The human side of my friend was as perfect as her spiritual life. She had a sweet, gracious bearing, a gentle, loving heart, modest, pure and unselfish. Hers was an ideal character. A loving and devoted wife and mother. A loyal and true friend.

While we deplore our loss, we rejoice in the fact that she is not dead, only translated to a brighter home, where we hope to meet her again.

Her Life-Long Friend,
Lois Patterson Barnes.

WILLIAM LAWRENCE WILLIAMS

On Thursday morning, December 21st, at the Highsmith hospital, Fayetteville, N. C., the spirit of William Lawrence Williams peacefully passed into its final reward. On the following afternoon funeral services were held from Sardis Presbyterian Church, Linden, N. C.; services being conducted by his pastor, Rev. C. M. Gibbs. After the services at the church, the body was laid to rest in Old Sardis cemetery.

William Lawrence Williams, the subject of this sketch, was a son of William L. and Sarah McKellar Williams, and was born in Cumberland County, N. C., at Glen Eden, his father's home, on the banks of Little River, December 25, 1842.

In this county he grew up to manhood, trained under the rules and regulations of these sturdy Scotch settlers who first came to the Cape Fear section. It is therefore unnecessary to say that he was well trained for the life of service which he lived. Mr. Williams spent the early years of his life, up to the age of 17, on his father's farm, fulfilling the duties of a faithful son; but at this early age he heard his "Country's Call to Arms," and he nobly responded by volunteering in the cause of the Southern Confederacy, serving through the entire war.

It is unnecessary, here to relate the many deeds of patriotism and acts of heroism, which marked him as a faithful and gallant soldier, but suffice it to say, no braver, no truer soldier ever followed under the stars and bars of this beloved Southland.

After the close of the Civil War, Mr. Williams came back to his old home in this county, to begin life anew. He at once became actively engaged in farming, which pursuit he followed until the time of his death.

In January, 1873, Mr. Williams was happily married to Mary Eliza Eliote, daughter of Col. Alexander and Jane Evans Eliote, who with three sons and two daughters, survive him.

Although his farm demanded the major part of his time, Mr. Williams was always willing to make a sacrifice for the good of his country or state whenever called upon. He was twice elected to the senate of North Carolina by the popular vote of his home district, and at the time of his physical breakdown, he was serving as a member of Cumberland County Board of Education. But while he served his county and state with wisdom and efficiency, he served his community and church with love and zeal; and it is in this capacity that we can best realize the true worth of Mr. Williams. Early in life Mr. Williams connected himself with Sardis Presbyterian Church, and for nearly three quarters of a century, wrought faithfully for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom in his community.

Mr. Williams was not a man of wealth. He never tried to accumulate riches, for those things had no great attraction for him. His wealth lay not in store houses of earth, but he did lay up for himself treasures in Heaven "Where neither moth nor rust corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal." His wealth consisted in his faithful service to his God, his church and his community. He was a man with a big and kindly heart. Children loved him because he loved them; older people loved him for what he was. He was always first to reach the sick bed, and surely no one was more welcome than he, for he was a born nurse, he was cheerful and hopeful amid the deepest gloom. There are many who will long remember his all-night vigils at the bed-side of the suffering and dying.

Early in life Mr. Williams was elected deacon in his church, which office he filled faithfully and well. After serving as deacon for a number of years, he was elected to the office of ruling elder, which office he held at the time of his death. He was faithful in attending Church and Sunday School services. His seat was never vacant, except when providentially prevented from attending.

His domestic relations were always happy. His home was one of sunshine; no man enjoyed the companionship of his family more than he; his home was always open to his friends and neighbors. He was a most loyal and devoted husband; a kind and indulgent father; a sincere friend.

Mr. Williams was always courteous, kind and considerate of others' feelings and wishes. In social life he was a general favorite. He was a true man, a safe and wise counselor, a cultured gentleman, a consistent Christian. He leaves a most interesting family to mourn their irreparable loss, but he leaves them the rich legacy of an irreproachable character, and the bright example of his useful life as a safe guide for their future conduct.

Mr. Williams bore his last illness with Christian fortitude and Godly patience, yet he hoped to return to the bosom of his family. But God, in His all-wise Providence ordered otherwise. He was bidden to lay off the harness and he obeyed the command in the inspiring faith that it was but a summons to a higher life and a nobler work. When the summons came, it found him waiting, for in these weeks of pain and confinement, as he was drawing near to God, God drew near to him, and at last he was not, for God had taken him.

Resolutions:

Whereas, God in His love and wisdom, has called from this life our friend and loved one, Mr. William Lawrence Williams, we, the officers of the Sardis Presbyterian Church would hereby express our love and esteem for him, and desire to place on record our testimony to his life and service to the Church and community.

To this end, we set apart a page in the sessional records as sacred to his memory.

We would also extend to his family and loved ones our heart-felt sympathy, commending them to the comforting grace of God.

C. M. Gibbs, Moderator of Session.

Jan. 20, 1923.

MRS. RACHEL WHITE

Died, on the fourth day of January, 1923, Mrs. Rachel White, after a brief illness with pneumonia.

Mrs. White was born the first day of September, 1832 and was therefore ninety years old the first day of last September. She was the daughter of Isaac and Mary White, and the last surviving member of a family of eleven brothers and sisters. She was married to Sheriff Robert A. White in 1885, who died in 1909. She had been a devoted member of Long Creek Church for many years—just how long it is impossible to determine as the church records were destroyed by fire.

She had not been able to attend public services for several years, but maintained a keen and lively interest in the work of the church, both at home and abroad. She loved her Bible and delighted in talking about the great goodness of our Heavenly Father and His wonderful promises.

Her mind was well stored with historical facts and with an experience covering more than two generations. This made her quite interesting in conversation, but the most interesting phase of her strong character was her meek and lowly daily life. She retained her mental faculties until the last and death had no terrors for her. In her declining years she was most tenderly cared for by an affectionate step-daughter, Mrs. James F. Weir.

There are three other step-children, Mr. Charles L. White, Mr. Frank C. White, and Mr. John C. White, who will ever cherish her memory. Such a life as that lived by Mrs. White is a great blessing to any community. Certainly God is speaking to us through such lives and showing us the power of His grace. May those of us left behind be enabled to learn the lesson and be prepared when the summons shall come to us.

Pastor.

MRS. ANNIE McNEILL PATTERSON

On November 30, 1922, there passed from this world to the heavenly, one who had been for more than 50 years a member of Laurel Hill Church. It was for her a blessed Thanksgiving Day.

Mrs. Annie McNeill Patterson was the daughter of John McNeill, of Argyle, Scotland, and Katherine Johnson, of what was then Richmond County, but is now called Scotland. She was a sister of the late Capt. Duncan McNeill, himself a poet and the father of a better known one, our beloved John Charles McNeill.

She proved herself a worthy descendant of a sturdy race. She was left a widow with slender means soon after the close of the Civil War. With a brave heart she took up the burden and raised her family of one daughter and two sons who bear the impress of her character and whose lives are her most fitting monuments. In an unobtrusive way she found out the needs of those around her and ministered to them. Many a one has cause to bless her memory.

THE PRESBYTERIAN PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM IN OUR SYNODS

(Continued from page 6)

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA

By J. B. Spillman

The Presbyteries comprising this Synod for the first time accepted the full quota assigned this Synod by the Assembly. Many churches of the Synod in the past have not regarded the per cent division of the Benevolent funds recommended by the Assembly, Synod and Presbytery as at all binding upon them. The result has been that the Synod has not been meeting its apportionment to the Benevolent Causes.

The figures for the year closing March 31, 1922, are as follows: Benevolent quota, $743,541; amount subscribed, $510,000; amount actually paid to causes included in the Benevolent budget, $495,187. The Synod actually paid $14,813 less than subscribed and $248,354 less than the quota. The Synod paid 74 per cent of the quota to the Assembly Causes and but 58 per cent to our Synod and Presbyteries' Causes.

There are unlimited opportunities for Home Mission work in the Synod, but no money to undertake an aggressive movement. Rowan County, with a population of 44,062, and Presbyterian churches over 150 years old, has only 2,057 Presbyterians, and yet there are 7,154 people over ten years of age in that county not members of any church.

Where pastors are awake to the true conditions, churches will meet their proportion for financing the Benevolent work. There is plenty of money in the church and if our church members recognized their responsibility as stewards of God and knew the facts we would have no trouble in getting our entire Benevolent budget subscribed and paid in full. The responsibility is upon the pastor; it is for him to place it upon his people; no one can assume his responsibility for him.

Charlotte, N. C.

SYNOD OF OKLAHOMA

By A. F. Davidson

The time has come when those of us who love our Church and believe that we have a mission in this great State because of that for which our Church stands, will have to be even more faithful to our trust as leaders and prayerfully and persistently and with greater faith seek to arouse our people to their opportunity and responsibility. Let our aim be renewed consecration for all.

If we are to even hold our own, to say nothing of advancing, each man of us, Elder and Deacon as well as Pastor, must realize the urgent need that each individual member of each church faithfully subscribe to the support of the whole work of the Church to the utmost of his ability on March 18th.

Lawton, Okla.

SYNOD OF TENNESSEE

By Rev. E. D. McDougall, D.D.

Three things will be necessary if the Synod of Tennessee is to do her part in the coming Stewardship Campaign.

First: Information touching all our work which will be supplied by the Assembly's Stewardship Committee through the Congregational Secretary.

Second: Consecration to the work on the part of all our ministers and church officers.

Third: Co-operation on the part of our entire membership with pastors and church officers. Anything less than this means disaster.

Jackson, Tenn.

SYNOD OF VIRGINIA

Rev. A. C. Bridgman

The Synod of Virginia is the mother of Synods in the Southern Presbyterian Church and naturally has a keen desire to occupy a position of prominence in the carrying forward of the splendid Program of the Church. The Progressive Program and the Every Member Canvass have accomplished marvelous things in this Synod in recent years. The increase in gifts to Benevolences has been large and the benefits and blessings have been manifold. There is evidence in the several Presbyteries of a deeper interest in the Every Member Canvass Plan than heretofore, one proof of which is the large number of conferences that have been held emphasizing the Bible teaching on the Stewardship of Possessions.

Newport News, Va.

SYNOD OF TEXAS

By Rev. Brooks I. Dickey, D.D.

The financial system of our Church has been wrought out through prayer, patience, and earnest study of the task. It is not perfect. It will be improved upon. At the same time, it is without question the best that has emerged. To perfect its operation is the task before us. It is the task, not of Secretaries alone, but of Pastors, Elders and Deacons. Success here will make possible larger success in every activity of the Church. Failure here will weaken every effort. These eight weeks will determine, in large measure, our accomplishments in the year to come.

Dallas, Texas.

SYNOD OF SOUTH CAROLINA

By Rev. E. E. Gillespie, D.D.

Notwithstanding the boll weevil and other obstacles, known and unknown, the Synod of South Carolina expects to reach her goal. That we are up against the most strenuous fight for success we have ever had is apparent to all, but the hardness of the task should challenge our most earnest endeavor and sacrificial service. Back of all our plans and continuing throughout the campaign should be the essential factor of success, earnest, persistent, prevailing PRAYER. Praying as if all depended upon God and working as if all depended upon us, our goal will be reached and all the causes of our beloved Church will be advanced. Upon the leadership of our people rests a grave responsibility of optimism. Be not faithless but believing. Speak to the children of Israel that they go forward. Our people are ready to FOLLOW their LEADERS to VICTORY.

York, S. C.

SYNOD OF WEST VIRGINIA

By Rev. T. P. Allen

Jesus Christ is the only hope of the world. His Church is His appointed agent to make His Gospel known. Our Southern Presbyterian Church must not fail to do its part of this happy task.

Never before have so many young people been offering themselves for service as ministers and missionaries. Those who remain at home, in established businesses, trades or professions, can also serve by financing those who go.

The Every Member Canvass will test our faith. God waits our answer to His challenge. The only reply His matchless love should evoke is "FORWARD!"

Huntington, W. Va.

Report by wire or mail results of your Every member Canvass to your Presbyterial Secretary of Stewardship, on or before April 1st.

In every community men and women have had an opportunity now to know what prohibition means. They know that debts are more promptly paid, that men take home the wages that once were wasted in saloons, that families are better clothed and fed, and more money finds its way into the savings bank. The liquor traffic was destructive of much that was most precious in American life. In the face of so much evidence on that point, what conscientious man would want to let his own selfish desires influence him to vote to bring it back? In another generation, I believe that liquor will have disappeared, not merely from our politics, but from our memories.—President Warren G. Harding.

IN LARGE TOWN CHURCHES

No Other Plan Adequate or Reasonable

To the church which has really tried the Every Member Canvass no other plan of finance seems adequate or even reasonable.

For a number of years this plan has been in operation most successfully in the First Presbyterian Church at Camden, until now faith in it as the best way is ingrained in the very life of the congregation.

In every way it has proven itself a success. More than 90 per cent of the church members use the duplex envelopes regularly.

Financially, it has enabled the congregation to more than treble its gifts to the benevolent causes of the church and to more than double its gifts to the current expense fund.

Socially, it has gotten the men and women together to discuss the budget of the church, and has interested them in each other as well as in the causes of the Lord.

Spiritually, it has increased the number of men and women who recognize their stewardship, and show this recognition by enrolling in tither's leagues. Twenty per cent of the resident members are tithers.

If the Every Member Canvass will work well in our congregation it ought to work well everywhere, for within the past three years, we have seen it working with all sorts of people and with all sorts of a field.

It worked when the membership of the congregation was composed almost exclusively of true Blue Stocking Presbyterians who were born and bred in the faith.

It works today when the membership is composed not only of these splendid folks, but of a good number of others who came to us from every branch of the Presbyterian Church, from the Methodist and the Baptist Churches, from the Lutheran and the Congregational denominations, and from the Unitarians, Universalists, and Roman Catholics.

It worked when Camden was a delightful little city of the old South, restful, cultured, quiet.

It works today when Camden is lying close to a great oil field which has attracted men and women from every part of America.

Down here in Arkansas, we believe in the Every Member Canvass because of what it has done for us.

We recommend it to you, because we believe it will do great things where it is tried thoroughly, earnestly, prayerfully.

Rev. Charles Haddon Nabers, Pastor.

First Presbyterian Church, Camden, Ark.

Where the Leaders Lead the People Follow

The pastor and officers of the church, to put it in modern parlance, must be sold to the proposition, in other words, they must themselves be thoroughly convinced that the Every Member Canvass is the only way to finance a church, and at the same time give it a spiritual stimulus.

The Way We Did It: We studied the plan in our officers' meeting until it was clear to us, then had a banquet and tried to get every member of the church present. This was not hard to do when there were plenty of good things to eat. We made it a family affair, talked the proposition over until it was understood by all that this was the only proposition to finance a church that had worked successfully. Then we made up our budget, both local and benevolences, taking care that this budget exceeded by about 25 per cent what we actually needed. A complete check was made of the membership, estimating what each should give weekly. Some will subscribe more, some less, but MANY will ask the canvasser what they should subscribe, and he should be ready with an intelligent answer. Set the day and the hour for the canvass, have enough canvassers that the work can be finished in three hours, ask the members to remain at home and instead of appearing as a canvasser, it will be more as a friendly visitor—Then Put It Over.

If this plan is carried out once by any church I don't believe it will ever be changed. Some pastors and officers seem to be averse to asking the members to sign on the dotted line, but it is the only thing to do. If they make the weekly contribution a part of their worship, I want to tell you they will grow in grace accordingly. We also found that we had friends who came to our church occasionally who would like to contribute, and after having signed up with us, it was much easier to approach them as to their spiritual welfare.

The financial success of our church is largely due to the Every Member Canvass. Three years ago we were receiving two-fifths of our support from the Home Mission Committee, today we are self-supporting with an increase in our benevolences. TRY IT AND BE CONVINCED.

Kib H. Warren.

Presbyterian Church, Shawnee, Okla.

Overcoming Difficulties

The value of a plan is not always measured by the number of difficulties obviated, but by the ability to succeed in spite of them. It is my purpose to indicate the most formidable obstacles in the way of the operation of the Every Member Canvass, and to suggest the means of overcoming them.

The most formidable enemy is LACK OF INFORMATION. Especially is this true with reference to the benevolences. The majority of men canvassed have meager information as to the needs and importance of the causes to which they are asked to contribute. As a result the vast majority of pledges are made from a sense of duty and church pride, and not because of intelligent appreciation of the need.

Information is the great breeder of interest, and people do not heartily support that in which they have not developed an interest. The great enemy then is ignorance, and I know of no way to overcome him other than by education. The ladies have made this discovery and are organized for systematic study. Their increased interest and magnificent response are evident. The big problem before us is the education of the men in the causes of the Church. This is not an impossible task. May I suggest this plan:

Invite the men of the church to a banquet. When the meal is finished present a typewritten questionnaire on every Church cause to each man and ask him to take the examination. This will reveal an amazing lack of information. Then make an appeal to them for systematic study, and organize on the following plan: Divide them into four groups. Assign to group No. 1, the study of Foreign Missions; to group No. 2, Home Missions; to group No. 3, Christian Education and Ministerial Relief and the activities of the local church; to group No. 4, all other causes represented in our benevolences. Let each group meet once a month either at luncheon or on Sunday afternoon, with definite program on its cause. Then hold a joint meeting of all the groups once a month at which time a delegated representative of each group shall present a digest of the information gained on his cause or causes during the month. At the end of the year rotate the groups and assign a new cause to each group. At the end of four years you will have a uniformly informed body of men in whose hearts will have been born an abiding interest in the things of the Kingdom, and which interest will express itself in sacrificial service and gifts.

In solving the problem of an educated membership will be found the means of overcoming practically all other difficulties connected with the Every Member Canvass. Information will produce a keen stewardship consciousness; it will equip your canvassers for their task; it will bring about an intelligent response from those canvassed; it will regulate giving in the proper proportion; it will produce a sustained rather than a spasmodic interest in the Church and its work; it will obviate high-pressure methods at pledge-taking time; and it will provide a continuous and adequate support for every worthy cause.

Failure in bringing the above to pass may be largely attributed to laziness. I know of no self-starting and self-operating plan. They all require hard work. Whatever your plan and whatever your difficulties, energetic effort is the means to success.

Rev. R. L. Jetton, Pastor.

Presbyterian Church, Jonesboro, Ark.

Has Solid Backing of Elders and Deacons

Every person has to go through a period of education before they reach the goal of their attainments, and it is also true that most people have to be shown the "why and wherefore" of any undertaking before they will take part in it.

This is true of the Every Member Canvass; the congregation must have definite information as to why the funds are needed, by whom they are asked, and for what purposes they are to be used.

We have been making the Every Member Canvass in this church for a number of years, but before the congregation was approached, we had a period of education and information among the officers which lasted nearly two years, and when we did take it before the congregation we had the solid backing and endorsement of the entire 24 elders and deacons. A sermon by the pastor on Christian Giving, followed the next Sunday by addresses by four laymen on the practical workings of the plan, at the morning hour, and by 2:00 o'clock the canvass was on and completed in two hours with the budget over-subscribed. The education of our congregation is practically complete, and only information is needed from time to time as to the amount asked for.

J. W. McClung.

First Presbyterian Church, Lexington, Va.

Through With the Old Plan

The Reidsville Presbyterian Church, having a membership of 160 last January, with only three months of the church year left, found itself $2,500 behind in its benevolent gifts for that year. From then on the whole congregation, especially the officers, were in a state of nervous panic, and uncertainty as to how we were going to meet our benevolent apportionments. We were faced, too, with the necessity of raising $25,000 to complete our new church plant, work on which had been suspended for nearly two years. We realized that the old plan of church finance was out of date and ill fitted for our needs. We realized that we must finish our church, and so we made a thorough canvass and asked our congregation to subscribe to a certain number of shares of building and loan stock to create a sinking fund to pay off the loan of $25,000, which we had just negotiated. This was successful and we decided to adopt the Every Member Canvass for our budgets. We then began a period of education with special emphasis on the tithe, as well as the stewardship of life generally. Eleven out of 13 officers agreed to tithe. We prepared a double budget and adopted as our motto, "$8,000 in 80 minutes," and on one Sunday afternoon successfully completed the canvass. Before the 80 minutes had expired the work of tabulation had begun and by night the budget was practically subscribed.

Under no consideration would our officers consent to go back to the old system of church finance. We find that the Every Member Canvass system has an educational feature, as well as securing larger gifts. We now approach our church year with joy and not with terror, for the benevolences are provided for and our current expenses are regularly met. We have completed our new church building in the face of the largest budget that the church has ever had. This has been possible because of the increased number of regular contributors secured by the Every Member Canvass and because the subscribers were enabled to contribute more liberally on a weekly basis than they would have been able to do otherwise.

Rev. Marion S. Huske, Pastor.

Reidsville, N. C.

An Excellent Plan

The wisdom, the plan, the purpose and the results of the Presbyterian Progressive Program can scarcely be estimated or exaggerated.

The wonder is that such a plan was not projected many years ago. In my judgment, no church can make scriptural and commendable progress without putting this plan in operation. I think failure to appreciate and to appropriate the essentials of this plan is due either to lack of information, or lack of consecration, both of which are inexcusable.

"Order is heaven's first law," and citizens of heaven should adopt and preserve order. I think a defective plan is better than no plan. Our plan is an excellent one, and almost, if not entirely free from valid objections.

I do not see how we could dispense with the preparation, the fascination, the agitation, the mobilization, the information, the inspiration, the acceleration, the concentration, the consolidation, the co-operation, the stabilization, the liquidation, the manifestation, the consecration, the visualization, the realization, the coronation inevitably involved in the installation of the Presbyterian Progressive Program.

I believe it ought to be, and, therefore, can be put into effect in any church, rural or city, small or large. "Where there is a will, there is a way."

It will work if it is worked.

The burden of proof is on those who refuse to try this plan, or some other plan equally desirable and successful.

The proof of the reality of anything is found in putting it to the test. God has a right to our best, and our best is His will in and through our united and consecrated endeavor.

With gratitude to God, I wish to commend the Assembly's Stewardship Committee for their zeal, their intelligence, their energy, their grasp, their resourcefulness, their manifold and instructive literature, their expert leadership, their inspiring vision.

Let every church and every member assume the task, accept the responsibility, discharge the obligation, value the opportunity, magnify the privilege, and exult in the reward, "Well done."

Rev. Charles C. Carson, D.D., Pastor.

First Presbyterian Church, Bristol, Tenn.

"Has Done Wonders for Our Church"

There are two distinct things that the Every Member Canvass has meant to our church:

I. It has assisted in the spiritual growth of the membership.

(a) Because of the laying by each week a definite sum of money for religious purposes, by reason of the regular weekly offering, our people are constantly being reminded of their material obligations to God. They are, perhaps unconsciously, being impregnated with the idea of stewardship. The results of this process are very visible in our church.

(b) Since instituting the Every Member Canvass, and making it work, there has been increased attendance upon the services.

II. It has in a large way aided the financial affairs of our church. It has relieved us of worry and brought in its place satisfaction; whereas the pastor and church treasurers were often concerned about a shortage in benevolent funds and current expenses, they now have the satisfaction of seeing the pastor's salary paid on time, the benevolent quota being met in full, and money on hand for current expenses. So hopeful are the officers of the church that they are to add half of the present budget to the budget for next year. During the past year the Every Member Canvass made the church self-supporting, relieving the Home Mission Committee of the payment of $400. It has done wonders for our church in a financial way.

Will the Every Member Canvass work in the small church and in the rural church? There is no doubt about its working in the large church.

The answer to this question is, emphatically "Yes." But there is a proviso: it will work, provided the pastor and officers of the church make it work. Now, of course, each member of the church must do his full part; but if the pastor and officers will do their work, the people will fall in line. Asking this question is like asking the question: Will a razor shave? It will, if properly handled, if you will make it shave . . . not by itself. This is experience, not guess work, both as to the razor and the Every Member Canvass in the small and rural churches.

Rev. Chas. E. Guice, Pastor.

Presbyterian Church, Cleveland, Miss.

IN CITY CHURCHES

(Continued from page 8)

Develops the Church

The Every Member Canvass has been systematically carried out in the First Presbyterian Church of Columbia, Tenn., along with the other features of the Systematic Beneficence and Stewardship schemes of our Church, for some years.

It has proven a satisfactory and sensible method of work, and has assisted in developing the church.

I believe—with the necessary adjustments required in some cases—it will work in any church, rural or city, small or large, and meets the pragmatic test of Wm. James and harmonizes with the teachings of Paul.

Rev. J. C. Molloy, D.D., Pastor.

First Presbyterian Church, Columbia, Tenn.

Leadership of Pastor and Officers Makes its Way Clear

1. The difficulties of the Every Member Canvass comes principally from the fact that our people are loath to give up old plans and ideas for new ones, especially is it true with the smaller churches.

2. It is often the opinion of the "standpatters" that no new ideas should come into our church life and work, but when converted or they have been enlightened, the trials of the Every Member Canvass are over.

3. To overcome the DIFFICULTIES OF THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS, we must first get our Session, Deacons, and Men of the Church enlisted in the plan, and when they catch the vision, enlighten themselves, the way is clear and all comes easy.

4. Personal experience leads me to believe that every member should be a contributing member, even though it be the "widow's mite," but no person should be urged or persuaded to give beyond his or her ability to pay.

J. D. Shaylor, Elder.

First Presbyterian Church, Jacksonville, Fla.

Insures Through Co-Operation

The Every Member Canvass plan of church finance has long ago passed the experimental period. Through its operation, the Church has made good progress in learning the scriptural basis of stewardship by the intensive emphasis preceding the annual campaign. It has also been learning the principle and the consequent advantages of thorough co-operation by every member bearing his own share of the financial task of the church.

These features of the Every Member Canvass plan, being fundamental truths, are applicable in all churches, whether small or large, whether located in country, village or city. The success of this plan depends upon the thoroughness of comprehension by the local church, the industry of application, and the dependence upon the Divine resources.

By continuing the teaching and practice of the principles of the Every Member Canvass plan, we are assured of an adequate income for all of the various enterprises of our progressive Church.

Rev. W. H. Hopper, Pastor.

Woodland Presbyterian Church, Louisville, Ky.

A Vital Message to Presbyterians

The Church Papers this week go to about 110,000 of our people, one-fourth of our total membership. Our Committee is investing a great deal of money to take the message of this Special Edition to you. Please read it through carefully.

Our Church is approaching the most important event of the year in the annual Every Member Canvass on March 18th. Upon the success of this effort depends every activity of our Church at home and abroad; the salary of every missionary; the salary of the pastor at home; the answer to the hopes of many missionaries waiting to go out; the bread and meat and shelter of the mountain mission worker who takes $25 per month for her services while we ride on rubber tires with high-priced gasoline.

Our Assembly asks for $4,750,000 for all benevolences, including every benevolent cause in Presbytery, Synod or Assembly. The askings of our Missionaries on the foreign field, the home field, and the askings of our Committees were trimmed to make the above amount. It is THE MINIMUM NEED—not the maximum. Some Synods have trimmed even this amount.

To this budget for Benevolences must be added the budget for Current Expenses, including the pastor's salary. And by the way, many a church ought to increase the salary of its pastor. He labors for less than a brick mason and never strikes.

Last year our Church raised for the two budgets the following

Approved Benevolences*	$ 4,266,735	or $10.38	per member
Current Expenses	6,271,402	or 15.22	per member
Total	$10,538,137	$25.50	per member

*Exclusive of Miscellaneous.

The appeal for $4,750,000 is only $500,000 more than we gave last year FOR BENEVOLENCES. Even thus, we are spending $15 for ourselves where we are spending $10 for outside benevolences, including every missionary enterprise of the Church. LAST YEAR'S BUDGET MEANT ONLY 50 CENTS PER WEEK PER MEMBER for all causes, Current Expense and Benevolences.

Is This the Measure of Our Loyalty and Gratitude?

We therefore appeal to every reader and through him to every Presbyterian within his influence to increase the offerings for the coming year. God has blessed and prospered us. The tithe of the income of the people of our Church is at least 24,000,000 per year. Can we expect God's continued favor when we withhold that which belongs to Him?

Study the Apportionment of Your Church

Pray and work that our Church this year may reach its goal and that all our Committees may be furnished with the means for a great forward step.

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Story and Incident

SALLY ANN'S EXPERIENCE

From "Aunt Jane of Kentucky," by Eliza Balvert Hall.)

"Did I ever tell you about Sally Ann's experience?" Aunt Jane said, as she laid two three-cornered pieces together and began to sew with her tender, nervous old fingers.

To find Aunt Jane alone and in a reminiscent mood! This was delightful.

"Do tell me," I said.

"'Twas forty years ago," she began musingly, "and the way of it was this. Our church was considerably out 'fix. It needed a new roof. Some o' the winder lights was out, and the floor was as bare as your hand, and always had been. The men folks managed to git the roof shingled and the winders fixed and us women in the Mite Society concluded we'd git a cyarpet. We'd been savin' up our money for some time, and we had about twelve dollars. I ricollect what argument we had, for some of us wanted the cyarpet, and some wanted to give it to furrin missions, as we'd set out to do at first. Sally Ann was the one that settled it.

"Well, we decided to take Sally Ann's advice, and we was talkin' about app'intin' a committee to go to town the follerin' Monday and pick out the cyarpet, when all at once Elizabeth Taylor—she was our treasurer—she spoke up, and says she, 'There ain't any use app'intin' that committee. The money's gone,' she says, sort o' short and quick. 'I kept it in my top bureau drawer, and when I went for it yesterday, it was gone. 'I'll pay it back if I'm ever able, but I ain't able now.' And with that she got up and walked out o' the room, before any one could say a word, and we seen her goin' down the road lookin' straight before her and walkin' right fast.

"And we—we set there and stared at each other in a sort o' dazed way. I could see that everybody was thinkin' the same thing, but nobody said a word, till our minister's wife—she was as good a woman as ever lived—she says, 'Judge not.'

"Them two words was jest like a sermon to us. Then Sally Ann spoke up and says: 'For the Lord's sake, don't let the men folks know anything about this. They're always sayin' that women ain't fit to handle money, and for one don't want to give 'em any more ground to stand on than they've already got.'

"So we agreed to say nothin' about it, and all of us kept our promise except Milly Amos. She had mighty little sense to begin with, and havin' been married only about two months, he'd about lost that little. So next mornin' I happened to meet Sam Amos, and he says to me, "Aunt Jane, how much money have you women got to'rds the new cyarpet for the church?" I looked him square in the face, and I says, 'Are you a member of the Ladies' Mite Society of Goshen Church, Sam Amos? For if you are, you already know how much money we've got, and if you ain't, you've got no business knowin.' And, furthermore,' says I, 'there's some women that can't keep a secret and promise, and some that can, and I am.' And that settled him.

"Well, 'Lizabeth never showed her face outside her door for more'n a month afterwards, and a more pitiful-lookin' creatur' you never saw than she was when she come out to prayer-meetin' the night Sally Ann give her experience. She set 'way back in the church, and she was as pale and peaked as if she had been through a siege of typhoid. I ricollect it all as if it had been yesterday. We sung 'Sweet Hour of Prayer,' and Parson Page prayed, and then called on the brethren to say anything they might feel called on to say concernin' their experience in the past week. Old Uncle Jim Matthews begun to clear his throat, and I knew, as well as I knew my name, he was fixing to git up and tell how precious the Lord had been to his soul, jest like he'd been doin' every Wednesday night for twenty years. But before he got started, here come 'Lizabeth walkin' down the side aisle and stopped right in front o' the pulpit.

"I've somethin' to say,' she says. "It's been on my mind till I can't stand it any longer. I've got to tell it, or I'll go crazy. It was me that took that cyarpet money. I only meant to borrow it. I thought sure I'd be able to pay it back before it was wanted. But things went wrong, and I ain't known a peaceful minute since, and never shall again, I reckon. I took it to pay my way up to Louisville, the time I got the news that Mary was dyin'."

"Mary was her daughter by her first husband, you see. I begged Jacob to give me the money to go on,' says she, 'and he wouldn't do it. I tried to give up and stay, but I jest couldn't. Mary was all I had in the world; and maybe you that has children can put yourself in my place, and know what it would be to hear your only child callin' to you from her death-bed, and not able to go to her. I asked Jacob three times for the money,' she says, 'and when I found he wouldn't give it to me, I said to myself, "I'm goin, anyhow." I got down on my knees,' says she, 'and asked the Lord to show me a way, and I felt sure he would. As soon as Jacob had eat his breakfast and gone out on the farm, I dressed myself, and as I opened the top bureau drawer to get out my best collar, I saw the missionary money. It come right into my head,' says she, 'that maybe this was the answer to my prayer; maybe I could borrow this money, and pay it back some way or other before it was called for. I tried to put it out o' my head, but the thought kept comin' back; and when I went down into the sittin'-room to get Jacob's cyarpetbag to carry a few things in, I happened to look up at the mantelpiece and saw the brass candlesticks with primms all 'round 'em that used to belong to my mother; and all at once I seemed to see jest what the Lord intended for me to do.

"'You know,' she says, 'I had a boarder summer before last—that lady from Louisville—and she wanted them candlesticks the worst kind, and offered me fifteen dollars for 'em. I wouldn't part with 'em then, but she said if ever I wanted to sell 'em, to let her know, and she left her name and address on a cyard.' I went to the big Bible and got out the cyard, and I packed the candlesticks in the cyarpetbag, and put on my bonnet. When I opened the door I looked up the road, and the first thing I saw was Dave Crawford comin' along in his new buggy. I went out to the gate, and he drew up and asked me if I was goin' to town, and said he'd take me. It looked like the Lord was leadin' me all the time,' says she, 'but the way things turned out it must 'a' been Satan. I got to Mary just two hours before she died, and she looked up in my face and says, "Mother, I knew God wouldn't let me die till I'd seen you oncce more."

Here Aunt Jane took off her glasses and wiped her eyes.

"I can't tell this without cryin' to save my life," said she; "but 'Lizabeth never shed a tear. She looked like she'd got past cryin', and she talked straight on as if she'd made up her mind to say jest so much, and she'd die if she didn't git to say it.

"'As soon as the funeral was over,' says she, 'I set out to find the lady that wanted the candlesticks. She wasn't at home, but her niece was there, and said she'd heard her aunt speak of the candlesticks often; and she'd be home in a few days and would send me the money right off. I come home thinkin' it was all right, and I kept expectin' the money every day, but it never come till day before yesterday. I wrote three times about it, but I never got a word from her till Monday. She had just got home, she said, and hoped I hadn't been inconvenienced by the delay. She wrote a nice, polite letter and sent me a check for fifteen dollars, and here it is. I wanted to confess it all that day at the Mite Society, but somehow I couldn't till I had the money right in my hand to pay back. If the lady had only come back when she said she was comin', it would all have turned out right, but I reckon it's a judgment on me for meddlin' with the Lord's money. God only knows what I've suffered,' says she, 'but if I had to do it over again, I believe I'd do it. Mary was all the child I had in the world, and I had to see her once more before she died. I've been a member of this church for twenty years,' says she, 'but I reckon you'll have to turn me out now.'

"The pore thing stood there tremblin' and holdin' out the check as if she expected somebody to come and take it. Old Silas Petty was glowern' at her from under his eyebrows, and it put me in mind of the Pharisees and the woman they wanted to stone, and I ricollect thinkin', 'Oh, if the Lord Jesus would jest come in and take her part!' And while we all set there like a passel o' mutes, Sally Ann got up and marched down the middle aisle and stood right by 'Lizabeth.

"Well, Sally Ann looked all around as composed as you please, and says she, 'I reckon if anybody's turned out o' this church on account o' that miserable little money, it'll be Jacob and not 'Lizabeth. A man that won't give his wife money to go to her dyin' child is too mean to stay in a Christian church anyhow; and I'd like to know how it is that a woman, that had eight hundred dollars when she married, has to go to her husband and git down on her knees and beg for what's her own. Where's that money 'Lizabeth had when she married you?' says she, turnin' round and lookin' Jacob in the face. 'Down in that ten-acre medder lot, ain't it?—and in that new barn you built last spring. A pretty elder you are, ain't you? Elders don't seem to have improved much since Susannah's times. If there ain't one sort o' meanness in 'em it's another,' says she.

"Goodness knows what she would 'a' said, but jest here old Deacon Petty rose up. And says he, 'Brethren,—and he spread his arms out and waved 'em up and down like he was goin' to pray,—"brethren, this is awful! If this woman wants to give her religious experience, why, says he, very kind and condescendin', 'of course she can do so. But when it comes to a woman standin' up in the house of the Lord and revilin' an elder as this woman is doin', why, I tremble,' says he, 'for the church of Christ. For don't the Apostle Paul say, "Let your women keep silence in the church?"'

"As soon as he named the 'Postle Paul, Sally Ann give a kind of snort. Sally Ann was terrible free-spoken. And, when Deacon Petty said that she jest squared herself like she intended to stand there till judgment day, and says she, 'The 'Postle Paul has been dead ruther too long for me to be afraid of him. And I never heard of him app'intin' Deacon Petty to represent him in this church. If the 'Postle Paul don't like what I'm sayin', let him rise up from his grave in Corinthians or Ephesians, or wherever he's buried, and say so. I've got a message from the Lord to the men folks of this church, and I'm goin' to deliver it. Paul or no Paul,' says she. 'And as for you, Silas Petty, I ain't forgot the time I dropped in to see Maria one Saturday night and found her washin' out her flannel petticoat and dryin' it before the fire. And every time I've had to hear you lead in prayer since then I've said to myself, "Lord, how high can a man's prayers rise toward heaven when his wife ain't got but one flannel skirt to her name? No higher than the back of his pew, if you'll let me tell it." I knew jest how it was,' said Sally Ann, 'as well as if Maria'd told me. She'd been havin' the milk and butter money from the old roan cow she'd raised from a little heifer, and jest because feed was scarce, you'd sold her off before Maria had money enough to buy her winter flannels. I can give my experience, can I? Well, that's jest what I'm a-doin',' says she; 'and while I'm about it,' says she, 'I'll give in some experience for 'Lizabeth and Maria and the rest of the women who, betwixt their husbands an' the 'Postle Paul, have about lost all the gumption and grit that the Lord started them out with. If the 'Postle Paul,' says she, 'has got anything to say about a woman workin' like a slave for twenty-five years and then havin' to set up an' wash out her clothes Saturday night, so's she can go to church clean Sunday mornin', I'd like to hear it. But don't you dare to say anything to me about keepin' silence in the church. There was times when Paul says he didn't know whether he had the Spirit of God or not, and I'm certain that when he wrote that text he wasn't any more inspired than you are, Silas Petty, when you tell Maria to shut her mouth.'

"Job Taylor was settin' right in front of Deacon Petty, and I reckon he thought his time was comin' next; so he gets up, easy-like, with his red bandanna to his mouth, and starts out. But Sally Ann headed him off before he'd gone six steps, and says she, 'There ain't anything the matter with you, Job Taylor; you set right down and hear what I've got to say. I've knelt and stood through enough o' your long-winded prayers, and now it's my time to talk and yours to listen.'

"And bless your life, if Job didn't set down as meek as Moses, and Sally Ann lit right into him. And says she, 'I reckon you're afraid I'll tell some o' your meanness, ain't you? And the only thing that stands in my way is that there's so much to tell I don't know where to begin. There ain't a woman in this church,' says she, 'that don't know how Marthy scrimped and worked and saved to buy her a new set o' furniture, and how you took the money with you when you

GOOD POSITIONS

Paying fine salaries can be had for ambitious young men and women who complete our commercial and stenographic courses.

DRAUGHONS BUSINESS COLLEGE Knoxville, Tenn.

CHURCH WANTS LOAN

Would you help do great work? Is your money now bringing you only 3 or 4 per cent? Church in very heart of great city needs six months or longer, will pay legal rate in this state—10 per cent interest payable quarterly.

L. L. S., 1406 Park Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO. Assets $1,011,288.30 F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

BOILS

Ulcers, Cuts and Burns have been healed since 1890 with

Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

Advertisement for GARDEN BOOK, WILLIAMS' INFORMATION BOOK ON GARDENING, GARDEN GUIDE of the South. Includes image of a garden and a book.

Carolina School Supply Co.

119 Brevard Court, Charlotte, N. C.

Distributors for the American Seating Company in the Carolinas. High Grade School Desks and Auditorium Chairs, Desks, Blackboards, Crayon, Erasers, Etc., carried in stock in our Charlotte Warehouse.

Catalogue Upon Request

George W. Hart—W. C. Ariail—John L. Harris

Advertisement for JAMES ALLAN & CO. THE JEWELERS, 185 King St. Charleston, S. C. FOR GIFTS OF Watches, Jewelry or Silverware. Write to them for memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD COMPANY

Passenger Schedules Effective January 28, 1923 Charlotte, N. C.

Daily Except Sunday as Shown Lv. 7:30 A. M.

Raleigh and intermediate points. Connection for Belhaven, Norfolk, and intermediate points.

For tickets, Pullman reservations and information address or apply to J. K. POWELL, D. T. A. P. A. JENKINS, C. T. A.

went to Cincinnati, the spring before she died, and come back without the furniture. And when she asked you for the money, you told her that she and everything she had belonged to you, and that your mother's old furniture was good enough for anybody. It's my belief,' says she, 'that's what killed Marthy.' Women are dyin' every day, and the doctors will tell you it's some new-fangled disease or other, when, if the truth was known, it's nothin' but wantin' for somethin' they can't git, and waitin' for somethin' that never comes. I've watched 'em, and I know. The night before Marthy died she says to me, "Sally Ann," says she, "I could die a heap peacefuller if I jest knew the front room was fixed up right with a new set of furniture for the funeral." And Sally Ann p'inted her finger right at Job Taylor, you killed Marthy the same as if you'd taken her by the throat and choked the life out of her.'

"Mary Embry, Job's sister-in-law was settin' right behind me, and I heard her say, 'Amen!' as fervent as if somebody had been prayin'. Job set there, lookin' like a sheep-killin' dog, and Sally Ann went right on. 'I know,' says she, 'the law gives you the right to your wives' earnin's and everything they've got, down to the clothes on their backs; and I've always said there was some Kentucky law that was made for the express purpose of encouragin' men in their natural meanness.—a p'int in which the Lord knows they don't need no encouragin.' There's some men,' says she, 'that'll sneak behind the 'Postle Paul when they're plannin' any meanness against their wives, and some that runs to the law, and you're one of the law kind. But mark my words,' says she, 'one of these days, you men who've been stealin' your wives' property and defraudin' 'em, and cheatin' 'em out o' their just dues, you'll have to stand before a Judge that cares mighty little for Kentucky law; and all the law and all the Scriptures you can bring up won't save you from goin' where the rich man went.'

"I can see Sally Ann right now," and Aunt Jane pushed her glasses up on her forehead, and looked with a dreamy, retrospective gaze through the doorway and beyond, where swaying elms and maples were whispering softly to each other as the breeze touched them. "She had on her old black poke-bonnet and some black yarn mitts, and she didn't come nigh up to Job's shoulder, but Job set and listened as if he jest had to. I heard Dave Crawford shufflin' his feet and clearin' his throat while Sally Ann was talkin' to Job. Dave's farm j'ined Sally Ann's, and they had a lawsuit once about the way a fence ought to run, and Sally Ann beat him. He always despised Sally Ann after that, and used to call her a 'he-woman.' Sally Ann heard shufflin', and as soon as she got through with Job, she turned around to Dave, and says she: 'Do you think your hemmin' and scrapin' is goin' to stop me, Dave Crawford? You're one o' the men that makes me think that it's better to be a Kentucky horse than a Kentucky woman. Many's the time," says she, 'I've seen pore July with her head tied up, crawlin' around tryin' to cook for sixteen harvest hands, and you out in the stable cossetin' up a sick mare, and rubbin' down your three-year-olds to get 'em in trim for the fair. Of all the things that's hard to understand,' says she, 'the hardest is a man that has more mercy on his horse than he has on his wife. July's

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

Table with columns for EAST BOUND, WEST BOUND, STATIONS, and DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY. Lists train numbers (NO. 14, NO. 22, NO. 38, NO. 41, NO. 21, NO. 15) and departure times for various stations including Aberdeen, Ashley Heights, Sanitorium, Montrose, Timberland, Raeford, Dundarrach, Arabia, Rockfish, Hope Hills Jct., Fenix, Clifton, Skibo, Owens, and Fayetteville Lv.

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class. All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

Prayer Calendar for 1923

Price 15 Cents or $1.50 Per Dozen

The 1923 Prayer Calendar is the most artistic yet published and a copy should be in every home in the Church.

It contains the name of every Home and Foreign Mission worker of our Church and their place of service, also a brief outline of the activities of every Executive Agency of our Assembly.

It will stimulate interest and enlarge information if the workers are remembered daily in prayer as suggested in the Calendar.

A handsome Christmas Greeting card will be mailed with each copy ordered before Christmas 1922.

Order from

Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Va.

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

Significant Religious Books

"Religious Book Week"

March 4 to 10, 1923

The time for selecting and buying strong, helpful religious literature. Below we have listed a few of the later books from the great thinkers of the day along religious lines.

Being a Preacher—By Jas. I. Vance, D.D. The James Sprunt Lectures for 1923 $1.25

Within the Gateways of the Far East—By Chas. R. Erdman, D.D. A remarkable record of recent travels in China, Japan, Korea, Etc. $1.25

The Possibilities of Prayer—By E. M. Bounds, D.D. Deals with the place and significance prayer has in the life of the true believer $1.25

God—Our Contemporary—By J. H. Jowett, D.D. Dr. Jowett says: "God, in Christ Jesus, is our great contemporary." A new volume of sermons $1.50

Lord, Teach Us to Pray—By Alexander Whyte, D.D. Twenty-three great sermons on Prayer $2.00

The Victory Over Victory—By J. A. Hutton, D.D. A new volume of sermons $1.75

Jesus As Judged By His Enemies—By J. H. Snowden, D.D. A study of the criticisms and attacks made on Jesus by His enemies $1.75

Our Own Important Books

Revised Book of Church Order, with 1922 Amendments $.35

Confession of Faith, new edition, with Revised Book of Church Order and 1922 Amendments $.75

Presbyterianism—Its Principles and Practice—By S. L. Morris, D.D. Paper, $.50; Cloth $.75

The Church at Work. A complete statement of the organization, history, and operation of the Assembly's agencies, paper, $.25; cloth $.40

What is the Kingdom of God?—By R. C. Reed, D.D. A sane, illuminating discussion of this great subject, paper, $.50; cloth $.75

Needed Counsel for New Christians—By S. M. Glasgow, D.D. Just the booklet for sessions to present to converts as they join the church $.25

The Dream of Pilate's Wife—By W. H. Woods, D.D. A drama in one act and three scenes. "Deserves to rank with the best literature." "Startling originality" $.50

Women of the Bible—By Rev. Harry Boehme. Six strikingly original sketches of leading women characters of the Old Testament $.40

The Road Without a Detour—By Rev. Peter H. Pleune. A book of delightful short sermons to children $1.00

Send Orders to

Presbyterian Committee of Publication

Richmond, Virginia

Texarkana, Ark.-Tex.

found rest at last', says she, 'out in the graveyard; and every time I pass your house I thank the Lord that you've got to pay a good price for your cookin' now, as there ain't a woman in the country fool enough to step into July's shoes.'

"But, la!" said Aunt Jane, breaking off with her happy laugh,—the laugh of one who revels in rich memories—"what's the use of me tellin' all this stuff? The long and the short of it is, that Sally Ann had her say about nearly every man in the church. She told how Mary Embry had to cut up her weddin' skirts to make clothes for her first baby; and how John Martin stopped Hannah one day when she was carrin' her mother a pound of butter, and made her go back and put the butter down in the cellar; and how Lije Davidson used to make Ann pay him for every bit of chicken feed, and then take half the egg money because the chickens got into his garden; and how Abner Page give his wife twenty-five cents for spendin' money the time she went to visit her sister.

"Sally Ann always was a masterful sort of woman, and that night it seemed like she was possessed. The way she talked made me think of the Day of Pentecost and the gift of tongues. And finally she got to the minister! I'd been wonderin' all along if she was goin' to let him off. She turned around to where he was settin' under the pulpit, and saye she, 'Brother Page, you're a good man, but you ain't so good you couldn't be better. It was jest last week,' says she, 'that the women come around beggin' money to buy you a new suit of clothes to go to Presbytery in; and I told 'em if it was to get Mis' Page a new dress, I was ready to give; but not a dime was I goin' to give towards puttin' finery on a man's back. I'm tired o' seein' the minister walk up into the pulpit in their slick broad-cloths, and their wives settin' down in the pew in an old black silk that's been turned upside down, wrong side out, and hind part before, and sponged, and pressed, and made over till you can't tell whether it's silk, or caliker, or what.'

"Well, I reckon there was some o' the women that expected the roof to fall down on us when Sally Ann said that right to the minister. But it didn't fall, and Sally Ann went straight on. 'And when it comes to the perseverance of the saints and the decrees of God,' says she, 'there ain't many can preach a better sermon; but there's some of your sermons,' says she, 'that ain't fit for much but kindlin' fires. There's that one you preached last Sunday on the twenty-fourth verse of the fifth chapter of Ephesians. I reckon I've heard about a hundred and fifty sermons on that text, and I reckon I'll keep on hearin' 'em as long as there ain't anybody but men to do the preachin'. Anybody would think,' says she, 'that you preachers was struck blind every time you git through with the twenty-fifth verse. I believe there's men in this church that thinks the fifth chapter of Ephesians hasn't got but twenty-four verses, and I'm goin' to read the rest of it to 'em for once anyhow.'

"And if Sally Ann didn't walk right up into the pulpit same as if she'd been ordained, and read what Paul said about men lovin' their wives as Christ loved the church, and as they loved their own bodies.

"'Now,' says she, 'if Brother Page can reconcile these texts with what Paul says about women submittin' and bein' subject, he's welcome to do it. But,' says she, 'if I had the preachin' to do, I wouldn't waste time reconcilin'. I'd jest say that when Paul told women to be subject to their husbands in everything, he wasn't inspired; and when he told men to love their wives as their own bodies, he was inspired; and I'd like to see the Presbytery that could silence me from preachin' as long as I wanted to preach. As for turnin' out o' the church,' says she, 'I'd like to know who's to do the turnin' out. When the disciples brought that woman to Christ there wasn't a man in the crowd fit to cast a stone at her; and if there's any man nowadays good enough to set in judgment on a woman, his name ain't on the rolls of Goshen church. If 'Lizabeth, says she, 'had as much common sense as she's got conscience, she'd know that the matter o' that money didn't concern nobody but our Mite Society,

ART GLASS
for Churches and Residences
Memorial Windows
Catalog and Special Designs
free on request
F. J. COOLEGE & SONS
ATLANTA, Ga.

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

RARE GLADIOLUS AND DAHLIA ROOTS

A mixture of gorgeous blooming rare Gladiolus, 100 for $3, or 30 for $1. Also a great surprise mixture, 100 for $2, or 40 for $1.

Also choice collection of Dahlia Roots, 10 for $1. All postpaid.
R. J. GIBBINS
Mt Holly, New Jersey

Chronic Constipation
Relieved Without the Use of Laxatives
Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus replaces it. Try it today.

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn,
President.

207 N. Tryon St.
CHARLOTTE, N. C.

E. J. CAFFREY,
Sec'y & Treas.

COLLECTION ENVELOPES

DUPLEX OR DOUBLE-END PRINTED-TO-ORDER ENVELOPES

Delivery Charges Not Included
White Envelopes—Size 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 in., 52 to set, printed with name of individual church, dated on both ends and packed in cartons. No order filled for less than a minimum charge of $4.00.

25 to 49 sets.....	19	cents per set
50 to 109 sets.....	17	cents per set
110 to 209 sets.....	16 1/2	cents per set
210 to 309 sets.....	16	cents per set
310 to 409 sets.....	14 1/2	cents per set
410 or more sets.....	14	cents per set

A charge of $1.00 made for each change in copy. 20 per cent discount on cash orders.

MODERN CHURCH TREASURER'S RECORD

Treasurer's Record Book ruled to keep an account with each subscriber for a year (name written but once), showing contributions for local church and benevolences at a glance.

For Both the Duplex and Single Envelop System

200 names or less	$1.50
300 names	1.75
500 names	2.25
1,000 names	3.25
Subscription cards, per 10050
Information Blanks, per 100	1.00
Treasurer's Statements per 10050
Special Day Envelopes, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Building Fund, etc. per 10040

"STOCK-FORM" ENVELOPES

Many churches have hesitated to introduce the use of collection envelopes on account of the cost of supplies.

To meet the needs of congregations which must practice rigid economy we have worked out a "Stock Form," or undated envelope, described below, at twelve cents per set, delivery charges extra, in any quantity wanted. Packages containing only two envelopes per month at seven cents per set, delivery extra.

CHANGES IMPOSSIBLE

The STOCK FORM envelopes are printed from a fixed, unchangeable plate, so that no changes can be made. Each package of envelopes will bear a separate number, but we cannot furnish packages bearing just the numbers you suggest. To explain, we cannot furnish each lot of twenty-five packages bearing numbers 1 to 25. We may have to send your lot numbered from 476 to 500. On one end these envelopes show all the benevolent causes for which our Assembly, Synods and Presbyteries ask the churches to make offerings, and the other end provides for the expense of the local church. Being undated, the unused packages are good for next year, so there is no waste. Samples sent free on request.

ORDER FROM

PRESBYTERIAN COMMITTEE OF PUBLICATION
Richmond, Va., Texarkana, Ark.-Tex

CHICORA COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

The Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Standard College Courses
Large and Strong Faculty

Beautiful Grounds

Ideal Surroundings

Healthful Climate

For Catalogue and Information, address

Pres. S. C. Byrd, D. D.

Columbia, S. C.

Largest and Most Modern Plant in the Carolinas

Charlotte Marble & Granite Works

R. E. SCOGGINS, Proprietor CHARLOTTE, N. C. W. 7th St. and Southern Railway

Oldest Largest Best

Phone 281

Send the Standard Your Job Printing and we women can settle it without any help from you deacons and elders.'

"Well, I reckon Parson Page thought if he didn't head Sally Ann off some way or other she'd go on all night; so when she kind o' stopped for breath and shut up the big Bible, he grabbed a hymn-book and says:

"Let us sing 'Blest be the Tie that Binds.'"

"He struck up the tune himself; and about the middle of the first verse Mis' Page got up and went over to where 'Lizabeth was standin,' and give her the right hand of fellowship, and then Mis' Petty did the same; and first thing we know we was all around her shakin' hands and huggin' her and cryin' over her. 'Twas a reg'lar love-feast; and we went home feelin' like we'd been through a big protracted meetin' and got religion over again.

"How about you and Uncle Abram?' I suggested. "Didn't Sally Ann say anything about you in her experience?"

Aunt Jane's black eyes snapped with some of the fire of her long-past youth. "La! no, child," she said. "Abram never was that kind of a man, and I never was that kind of a woman. I ricollect as we was walkin' home that night Abram says, sort o' humble-like: 'Jane, hadn't you better git that brown merino you was lookin' at last County Court day?'

"And I says, 'Don't you worry about that brown merino, Abram. It's a-lyin' in my bottom drawer right now. I told the storekeeper to cut it off jist as soon as your back was turned, and Mis' Simpson is goin' to make it next week.' And Abram he jist laughed, and says, 'Well, Jane, I never saw your beat.' You see I never was any hand at 'submittin'' myself to my husband, like some women. I've often wondered if Abram wouldn't 'a' been jist like Silas Petty if I'd been like Maria. I've noticed that whenever a woman's willin' to be imposed upon, there's always a man standin'

'round ready to do the imposin'. I never went to a law-book to find out what my rights was. I did my duty to Abram, and when I wanted anything I went and got it, and Abram paid for it, and I can't see but what we got on jist as well as we'd 'a' done if I'd a-'submitted' myself."

Sparkles

Fatal in Most Cases

Bonar Law proceeded to illustrate his point by telling the story of a highlander who was lying ill in the last stages of exhaustion in a hospital, and asked that some one play for him on the bagpipes. The nurse had a warm heart and brought a piper into the room to play his entrancing music. The Highlander soldier recovered. But other patients in the hospital all died.—From a cable dispatch in the Toronto Mail and Empire.

A Hint to Hens

An Attawa hen laid an egg daily for 107 days. There's a saying in every hen-house that an egg a day keeps the hatchet away.—Judge.

According to Unity, a certain church recently issued an advertisement, thus: "Service at 10:30 a. m. Subject: 'The Three Great Failures'—Choir, Sermon, Pipe Organ Offertory. All welcome."

Bishop Olmsted, at a dinner in Denver, said apropos of Sabbath-breaking:

"I was talking to an Eastern clergyman the other day about his church attendance.

"I suppose," I said, 'that in your district rain affects the attendance considerably.'

"He smiled, faintly. 'Indeed, yes,' he said. 'I hardly have a vacant seat when it is too wet for golf or motorin'.'—Cleveland Leader.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.
 Printers Rulers Binders
 GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Buy From the Manufacturer

There is one good and sufficient reason why you should buy your Piano from the manufacturer—DIRECT RESPONSIBILITY.

STIEFF PRODUCTS
 Stieff Pianos and Players
 Shaw Pianos and Players
 Bennett-Bretz Pianos and Players
 Davies & Sons Pianos and Players
 Leslie Bros. Pianos and Players

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
 Charlotte, N. C.
 Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
 Name _____
 Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, INC., Charlotte, N. C.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
 Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review Patterns for July
 20c to 35c
 None Higher

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh-Merrell & Burson Hose: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.

IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $4.95 to $12.50

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
 PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind.

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
 14 - 16 - 18
 years

Voile and Lace are used in making model shown.

The Red Cross Sanitary Felt Mattress has been the Standard of Perfection on this market for 20 Years.

We sell the "Red Cross" mattresses and the "Red Cross" Box Springs in beautiful art tickings to match. If you can't get them at home, write us.

W. T. McCoy & CO.
 211 South Tryon St. Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family  Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

Rev. J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

Vol. LXIV CHARLOTTE, N. C., MARCH 7, 1923 No. 10

PRESBYTERIAN PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM

"A Whole Program For the Whole Church"
$4,750,000 FOR BENEVOLENCES

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18th
ARE YOU PREPARING?

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
BY PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Entered at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Address all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription paid.

When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue of the paper the label is a reminder that the subscription price is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription paid.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the paper is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year. No charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit at the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when marriage notices are sent. News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to this office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a later date.

Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its constituency. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
The Charlotte Conference	1
Personal Liberty	1, 2
Alas, Poor "America!"	2
CONTRIBUTED—
"Christ the Only Hope of the World"—By Dr. J. Campbell White	3
The Houston Laymen's Convention—By R. T. Pearce	3, 4
Gathering Up the Fragments—By Rev. John Van Lear, D.D.	4, 5
The Richmond Convention	9
Cash Prize for Mottoes and Song for Massanetta Springs	9
DEPARTMENTS—
Devotional	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

TREASURERS OF BENEVOLENT CAUSES

Foreign Missions—Edwin F. Willis, 154 Fifth Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn.
Home Missions, General Assembly's—A. N. Sharpe, 1522 Hurt Building, Atlanta, Ga.
General Assembly's Training School—Geo. W. Call, Richmond, Va., Union Bank.
Bible Cause—Gilbert Darlington, Bible House, N. Y.
Christian Education and Ministerial Relief—John Stites, Fifth and Market Sts., Louisville, Ky.
Publication and Sabbath School Work—R. E. Magill, 618 N. Sixth St., Richmond, Va.
The General Assembly's Equipment Fund—T. R. Preston, Treasurer, Chattanooga, Tenn.

EDITORIAL

THE CHARLOTTE CONFERENCE

As far as we can learn, the Charlotte Conference, in point of attendance, surpassed all others. This was to be expected, when it is remembered that the Synod of North Carolina is the largest in the South, and that Mecklenburg Presbytery is among the largest Presbyteries of the Assembly. North Carolina Presbyterians number 65,879 members, with Mecklenburg Presbytery having 86 churches and over 11,000 communicants, making a mighty host from which to draw.

The Convention was well planned by the local committee, with the result that the churches of the Synod sent large delegations of men and women.

The Columbia Seminary Quartette added much to the pleasure of the Conference by their trained voices. Then the congregational singing was wonderful, making the old Auditorium ring from center to circumference.

Outsiders were greatly impressed by the personnel of both meetings. This was natural, because when you bring together a great crowd of men and women from the Presbyterians of this State, you assemble the rank and file of the population who have done so much to make this State the first in the South.

The Conference was emphatically a laymen's meeting, as was right, because they began this movement, and by their achievements they have won the admiration of the ministers.

The women, too, had their day, and from the manner in which they transacted business, one could see that they not only were strong in money raising, but had made progress in the systematic transaction of business.

Mrs. Winsborough was detained part of the first day, by a late train, but Miss Margaret Rankin, of the Second Church, Charlotte, proved herself a capable substitute.

By the kind courtesy of Mrs. Winsborough the editor was given the privilege of addressing the Auxiliary for a few minutes. The burden of his message was to show the close dependence of the Home Mission work of the Synod upon the circulation of the Standard. He quoted from Rev. A. W. Crawford, the Synodical Superintendent of Home Missions, who on several occasions stated to the Synod that the success of his work was largely due to the help he had from the Standard in reaching the people of the Synod, and that if he could get the Standard into every home, he would have no difficulty in raising all needed funds. Basing his argument upon this fact, he pressed home upon the Auxiliary their duty to make an extra effort to place the Standard in every home in the State in order to build up Home Mission work.

Among the speakers there were a few preachers, but the talking was mainly done by the laymen, which was as it should be. They were the leaders and theirs was the responsibility.

Rev. Wade Smith is a rare combination of layman and preacher. He has only in recent years been ordained. Before he was one of the most active of the laymen. His "Church by the Side of the Road," in Greensboro, is carried on by him and his session along new lines, the wisdom of which is appealing to all.

Rev. Motte Martin, whose fame is linked with our African work, was heard with pleasure.

Then Rev. R. T. Coit, so well known in this city, told the story of his work in Korea, and Rev. J. Porter Smith, the son of Dr. J. Rockwell Smith, whose name is associated with our work in Brazil, spoke of their struggles with Romanism.

Rev. W. W. Junkin told the story of the work in China, where he has spent many years.

Dr. Campbell White, who is always heard with pleasure by a Southern audience, made several addresses, all of the highest order. Dr. White is not a minister, but he is a near approach to one, and he proves the contention of our old friend of years ago, J. C. Rankin, of this county, that the scriptures do not make the distinction between teaching and ruling elders, such as is found in our Book of Church Order.

There were other elders who also impressed this fact upon us, as two of the outstanding addresses were made by Elders P. T. Shanks, of Selma, Ala., and Fred Sullens, of Jackson, Miss.

Mr. Shanks is the son of the late Dr. D. W. Shanks, one of the great preachers of Virginia when we entered the ministry. He was a man of power and a charming preacher. The son seems to have inherited his father's ability. His address on Prayer gripped his audience, and even now men are feeling its demand upon their lives.

Mr. Sullens' address was one of the best of the Conference, and was heard by a house packed, both floors and galleries. The story of his life as an editor and a man of pugilistic ability when politicians needed curbing, during the sessions of the Mississippi Legislature, was equal to a moving picture. Then followed his conversion, under the preaching of Gypsy Smith, Jr., told with the skill of a practiced orator. It stirred the conscience of more than one of us who heard him, and made more than one preacher realize how fruitless his own life had been.

Among the speakers we failed to hear were Mrs. Winsborough, Mason, Ravenel, DuBose, Spillman and Reavis, Caldwell and Thompson. We heard Mason as he gave the stereopticon views. His presentation was fine. He spoke clearly and to the point, and seemed to recognize the terminal stations when he reached them.

The great objection to combining the Laymen's Conference with the Woman's Auxiliary is that when both are so good, no man is able to be in two places at once, and whenever he is in one place he is uneasy lest he be missing something good in the other.

"How happy could I be with either,
Were t'other dear charmer away."

It is difficult to measure the good done by such Conferences as we have been having. Their results are found in scattered churches and in the renewed consecration of men and women. This new force will gather momentum as the years roll by. For this reason we hope that they will never be abandoned.

PERSONAL LIBERTY

We hear much these days about man's personal freedom. It seems to be the stereotyped refuge of those who love their dram, and who are outraged that any one should even dare to infringe upon the freedom that is inherent in personality.

There are many words in our English tongue whose popular meaning will not bear a close examination of what they really mean. Freedom is one such.

Our immortal Declaration of Independence declares that all men are born free, yet we know that such is not the case in the strict meaning of the word.

From the cradle to the grave we are shut in by laws that interfere with our liberty of action, so that we may say that there is no such condition as absolute freedom.

My personality is what distinguishes me from every one else in this world, and in a certain sense no one can control my personality. I can think as I please, and there is no power that can control my thinking, though the expression of my thoughts may be controlled, if they conflict with the laws of the land.

On the other hand, no man's personality is independent of his neighbor. There is an influence going out from man to man, that man himself is unable to control. We live in a mass, each life touching some other life.

For example, I am not able to live my own life, independent of my neighbor, however much I may seek to do so. When therefore a distinguished member of Congress from New York City recently stated that the prohibition law was an infringement of man's personal liberty, he was confusing the two meanings of personal liberty.

Recently a man in this city was forced to send off his dog because his neighbors complained that the dog interfered with their sleep. Now each of these parties could claim personal liberty. The owner of the dog could have claimed the right to own a dog, yet the neighbors could claim the right to sleep, and the judge in this case made the liberty of one man yield to the liberty of the greater number.

If the liquor drinking man could live to himself and not affect his neighbor, then no law could forbid his drinking. When, however, he, by the sale of liquor, ruins homes, wastes the wages of the poor man, wrecks promising young lives, and breaks mothers' hearts, and fills jails and asylums, then society has a right to plead its own personal liberty, to claim that the greatest good to the greatest number must be regarded. In other words, the mothers, the young men and the public generally can also plead that their personal liberty is being infringed upon, and therefore that the liberty of the few should be sacrificed for the benefit of the many.

The difficulty with men like the Congressman mentioned above is that they fail to take into account my liberty.

There is, however, one comfort we can take to ourselves. This plea which has been used for years has lost its force, and even the most stupid of men can see how meaningless it is.

Personal indulgence would be nearer the truth than personal liberty, because interference with appetite is where the shoe pinches.

Let us realize that Paul was right when he wrote to the Romans that no man can live to himself, nor die to himself. He was also right when he wrote that man is not his own, that he belongs to the Lord, and that it is his duty to glorify that Lord in both body and spirit. Do not imagine that this refers only to Christians. Christ tasted death for every man according to the Epistle to the Hebrews, and therefore He has a claim upon every man. When our Lord asked the question, What shall a man give in exchange for his soul? He did not intend that the question should apply only to believers, but to every son of Adam. All have been benefited by His death, and all therefore have been bought. If you destroy that soul, you are destroying the property of another, and you must pay for the loss.

In the recent controversy in New York between Bishop Manning and Dr. Grant, the latter could claim the right to think as he pleased. On the other hand the Bishop could reply, "You may think as you please, but as long as you occupy a pulpit of the Episcopal Church you cannot preach as you please."

When you hear the curbstone orator or the more cultured preacher claiming liberty of thought and action, just remind him that no man is perfectly free. The very phrase captivates the unthinking and emboldens the ignorant.

Madame Roland uttered a profound truth when she said, "O Liberty! Liberty! how many crimes are committed in thy name!"

ALAS, POOR "AMERICA!"

If ever a hymn was safely entrenched in the hearts of all people of this land, we thought that "America" was. It has ever had a standing engagement to be sung at every patriotic gathering, and we doubt whether any hymn has ever had more popularity.

After enjoying such prestige for generation after generation, it must be humiliating to this favorite to be repudiated by any one who loves his country.

"The Monitor," a Catholic weekly published in Newark, N. J., has this to say about "America":

"It will not be out of place to sound a note of warning against the singing of 'America' by the pupils of Catholic educational institutions. The doggerel lines so dear to the hearts of all Anglo-maniacs should never be heard within the walls of a Catholic school or a Catholic college. Unlike 'The Star-Spangled Banner,' they do not generate a true national spirit. 'America' is essentially sectional."

"If any of our readers," says The Monitor, "happen to be present on an occasion when this offense shall be repeated, we advise them to hiss, and hiss vigorously. No matter if they disturb the harmony of the proceedings. Their doing so will help to bring out the true character of 'America,' which should never be sung at a Catholic gathering."

THE OLD RUGGED CROSS*

On a hill far away stood an old rugged cross,
The emblem of suffering and shame,
And I love that old cross where the dearest and best
For a world of lost sinners was slain.

O, that old rugged cross, so despised by the world,
Has a wondrous attraction for me,
For the dear Lamb of God left His glory above,
To bear it to dark Calvary.

To the old rugged cross I will ever be true,
Its shame and reproach gladly bear;
Then He'll call me some day to my home far away,
Where His glory forever I'll share.

Chorus

So I'll cherish the old rugged cross,
Till my trophies at last I lay down;
I will cling to the old rugged cross,
And exchange it some day for a crown.
George Bennard.

*This was one of the beautiful messages in song that the quartette brought to the convention members.

An endorsement of these sentiments is given in letters on the editorial page from Bishop John J. O'Connor, Newark, and Bishop James A. McFaul, Trenton.

Those who laugh at the fear of Protestants when they charge the Catholics of America with planning eventually to control this country, may not be right, when they see the happenings of the day, and reason from what is going on in the social and political life of our land. But we are impressed, not by any one great fact, but by facts, small in themselves, yet growing larger by their accumulation, that there is a hidden danger in these repeated and varied attempts, to control the old and young in this generation.

Down here, where Romanism is not very strong, we are inclined to close our eyes to what those north of us report, and we are apt to decry any attempt to discredit a church professing to honor our Master.

This action bears marks of truth, and it is in keeping with the course of this church in the history of other countries, so we conclude that those who are constantly calling upon those who love their country to watch Rome, must have some reason for their anxiety.

LITTLE THINGS

The occupations of every day seem often trifling, we may do them without thinking as ordinary things, yet they are the scenes of our appointed lot—appointed by God for you and me. The ordering, the application of these ordinary occupations, it is the appointing of the divine purpose; it is for ourselves to carry them out. And secretly our character forms according as we handle them.

Do not let your growth in holiness depend upon surrounding circumstances, but rather constrain those circumstances to minister to your growth.

HOT SHOTS FIRED BY CAPT. FRED SULLENS, MISSISSIPPI EDITOR

"I know nothing whatever about theology, but I can put all the theology in the world into one simple sentence—Jesus Christ can save men from sin. I know He can do it because He has saved me, and I have seen Him save others.

"I don't care a continental what Dr. Percy Grant or other perpetrators of pale-faced sermonettes think about Jesus Christ, but I am concerned in what Jesus Christ thinks about me.

"Jesus Christ was either of divine birth, or else He was the most colossal liar who ever lived, for He said, 'I am the Resurrection and the Life.'

"It is high time for the newspapers of the United States to play up Jesus Christ and play the politicians down.

"In twenty-five years of newspaper work I have put men in office and then put them out again, but I would rather be God's humble instrument in helping one soul find Jesus than to have the power to fill every political office in Mississippi, from governor to constable.

"When God undertakes to save a newspaper man He tackles a God-sized job. We see so much of the sham, the fraud, the hypocrisy and the flimsy schemes of our fellow beings that it makes us cynics and pessimists.

"One glorious thing about being a Christian is that you can go home in the evening with a grin on your face, and your wife meets you at the door with a glad smile, while baby leaps gleefully in your arms. That can't happen if you have sin in your heart.

"You can't afford to be anything less than the very finest man in your line of business or profession, and you can't be that unless Jesus has a part in your life.

"There is no middle ground. You are either for God or against Him. He wants you to be either hot or cold.

"The Christian religion is the greatest commodity in the world today, and the man who gets the real article is never a dissatisfied customer.

"The sin of indifference is crippling the cause of Christ on earth today far worse than the sin of disbelief.

"The time is at hand, men, when we must quit chasing the almighty dollar and give some of our time to chasing Almighty God.

"Getting right with God is merely a matter of reason but you will never get there if you try to match your poor pigmy mind against His omnipotence."

"A man who sits at his desk 365 days in the year with his fingers literally on the pulse of the world soon loses his power to thrill. His emotions are deadened. He becomes a hard-boiled guy, and the unfortunate part of it is that he sees so much of the schemes, tricks, wiles, subterfuges and selfish purposes of his fellow beings it becomes hard for him to believe in anything. Therefore when I tell you that when God undertakes to save a newspaper man, He truly has a God-sized job, but it can be done."

Devotiona

SHUT IN WITH GOD

"There is a calm amid life's fitful fever,
A deep repose."

There is a world—in this world—of which the world knows nothing. Amid its fret and fume, its clamour and tumult, it is utterly oblivious of it. The vast majority of mankind it is an undiscovered country. Yea, to many of the Lord's own it is an unknown quantity—a far country.

Hard to finding is this country. Those who on quest are often puzzled, bewildered, and seemingly hedged from it. "Strait is the gate and fe there be that find it."

"But what to those who find? Ah, this Nor tongue nor pen can show."

When they have found it they rejoice with joy unspeakable. Then they have peace passing all understanding. Then are they quiet, "So He brings them unto their desired haven."

Where! What is this place? It is the secret place of the Most High. It is the inner shrine where God meets with His dear children. It is the Holiest of all.

"No words can tell what sweet relief
Here for my every want I find;
What strength for warfare, balm for grief,
What peace of mind."
Shut in with God.

—Rev. Charles W. Anderson, Overland, Mo

"CHRIST THE ONLY HOPE OF THE WORLD"

Abstract of Address by Dr. J. Campbell White, of New York, to the Laymen

"God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation."—I Cor. 5:19.

"Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12.

These two great Bible statements clearly make the claim that Christ is the only hope of the world. I would like to indicate some of the main lines of my thought on this subject by a quotation from James Russell Lowell. Mr. Lowell was attending a meeting where some sceptics were speaking about having no need of religion. When his opportunity came to speak, Mr. Lowell had the following striking answer to make to all such cheap scepticism:

"Some gentlemen tell us very complacently that they have no need of religion; they can get along well enough without it. Let us tell you, friends, that the very worst kind of religion is no religion at all. And those men who live in ease and luxury, indulging themselves in the amusement of going without religion, may be thankful that they live in a land where the Gospel they neglect has tamed the beastliness and ferocity of men, who but for Christianity, might long ago have eaten their bodies, like the South Sea Islanders, or cut off their heads like the monsters of the French Revolution.

"When the microscopic search of scepticism, which has hunted the heavens and the earth to disprove the existence of a Creator, has turned its attention to human society, and has found a place on this planet ten miles square where a decent man can live in decency, comfort and security, supporting and educating his children unspoiled and unpolluted; a place where age is revered, infancy respected, womanhood honored, and human life held in due regard; when the sceptic can find such a place on this globe where the Gospel of Christ has not gone and cleared the way, and laid the foundations and made decency and security possible, it will then be in order for the sceptical literati to move thither, and there ventilate their views.

"But so long as these men are dependent upon the religion which they discard for every privilege they enjoy, they may well hesitate a little before they seek to rob the Christian of his hope and humanity of its faith in that Saviour who alone has given to men that hope of eternal life which makes life tolerable and society possible, and robs death of its terrors and the grave of its gloom."

The simple fact is that without Christ and His religion—the world would have no adequate conception of God, of morality, of prayer, of salvation, or of immortality.

Pagan conceptions of God are almost utterly false. Polytheism and Pantheism dominate the minds of the bulk of the human race. When I have asked educated Hindoos how many gods they have in India, they have told me 333 millions. And their most popular gods were grossly immoral.

No wonder that the whole moral level of the pagan world is so low, in view of their immoral gods, and the absence of any adequate moral standards in their religions.

Even prayer has been degraded to a mechanical process by vast masses of mankind. Genuine prayer is dependent upon a right conception of God.

Salvation, in the Christian sense, is an absolutely new idea to the pagan mind. We believe that salvation includes present forgiveness, deliverance from the power of temptation, fellowship with God in Christ, and partnership with God in His great work for mankind. All of these conceptions strike the heathen mind with surprise and novelty.

Jesus Christ also gives the final word about immortality. Mr. Edison is reported to be trying to devise an instrument by which he can weigh spirits—in order to satisfy his own mind as to whether there is any immortality. Why not take the testimony of Christ about this?

He said: "In my Father's house are many mansions, go to prepare a place for you. I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."

Where nations and races are ignorant of these great spiritual truths, they are also apt to be ignorant of nearly everything else that makes life worth living. One-half of the human race can't read a word of any language. One-half the world has no scientific knowledge of hygiene, sanitation, medicine or surgery.

Every blessing comes into human life, where Christ is known.

He alone can settle the industrial conflicts of the world. He is doing this through hundreds of Christian employers and employees. Nothing but the Christian solution is adequate. Christ alone can banish war from the world. Our Vice-President, Mr. Fairbanks, coming back from a trip around the world, declared that one well equipped mission station would do more for the permanent peace of the world than a whole fleet of battleships. Yet one battleship costs more than the whole Protestant Church in America spends on missions each year.

Contributed

If Christ is the only hope of the world, what should the Southern Presbyterian Church do?

It should make an intelligent, serious effort to give Christ to its share of the world. Thirty-two millions of people in Asia, Africa and Latin America are in the special fields of the Southern Presbyterian Church; 475 Southern Presbyterian missionaries (including all wives of missionaries) are at work, or one to over 67,000 heathen on the average. You ought to increase the force of missionaries to at least 1,000. This would still give every missionary an average field of 32,000 people. These additional 525 missionaries can be sent out and supported by an increase of 10 cents a week to this object by the 411,000 members of the Southern Presbyterian Church. You could do this by increasing your gifts to foreign missions to the amount you are already giving to home missions, education and other benevolences in America. With 32 millions of people to reach in your foreign fields, ought you not to give at least as much to this great enterprise, as to all home causes, apart from congregational expense? If you do this, you can really occupy and evangelize your share of the world. Ought not this to be made the first object of the entire Church until it is accomplished? In the wake of this achievement, would come the greatest spiritual blessing to the whole Church that it has ever known.

THE HOUSTON LAYMEN'S CONVENTION
Extracts from Addresses at Laymen's Convention

By R. T. Pearce

Morning Session—February 13, 1923

First Address: Central Task of the Church, by Rev. W. M. Fairley, of El Paso, Tex.

"Glad to speak to business men who are accustomed to stop leaks and to speed production. You men should use some imagination, zeal and energy. Religion is the biggest business of a man's career. The Church is a corporation, with special laws, regulations, etc. It has authority to hold property; to hold and dispense funds and property. You are invited here as a stockholder in this corporation to look after her interests.

"The Church rests upon a charter, constitution and by-laws, given by God Himself, with the territory mentioned in which she is to operate—worldwide—to do business wherever men will have any need. Home office is where God sits and justice reigns; not a physical territory where she works, but in the hearts of men—where hope lifts her eyes to a new hope—where new ideals and purposes are formed.

Object of Church

"To take spiritual ideals of Church and propagate them into the hearts of men. Spiritual value is to be carried to the end of the world—to sell her spiritual values to the world—not only nearby, but everywhere. Spiritual forces are to be fitted to spiritual needs of men. This work we call evangelism; and this is the central task of the church.

Capital Stock

"Jesus Christ, Holy Spirit, Sacred Scripture, individual membership of Church—these are the capital stock. They belong to the Church, are a part of the property of the Church. The individual membership is a part of the capital stock. If you do not give your influence, your talent, your money, etc., you are robbing God. Are we using God's property properly?"

Second Address: What Will You Do With Jesus? By Rev. William R. Dobyns, of Birmingham, Ala.

Dr. Dobyns took as his text: "What think ye of Christ," and said, in part: "Presuming you are Christians, what think ye? There is a difference between being loved and being a disciple. If ye are a disciple, deny yourself."

He then went on to speak of Christ as a Master—as an absolute Master, not a part-time Master, but an all-time Master; how Paul referred to himself as being a "bond slave of Jesus Christ," and said, "If we would become all real servants we should be the servant of God and should be ready and willing at all times to serve His people." He spoke of the chairman of a woman's circle, who thought when she had performed certain duties she had done all that was expected of her; that she had done her share; but when she was told how Christ did not feel that His share was done until He reached the cross, and in agony cried out, "It is finished," she changed her attitude and resolved to serve as long as she lived.

Dr. Dobyns then spoke of Christ as a Great Teacher—one who knew truth and revealed truth. He spoke of his authority to preach, saying that his authority to preach the doctrines of the Presbyterian Church came when he was ordained a minister, but his authority to preach to the world came with his redemption.

He then told of Christ as a Great Leader—always going before, never asking any one to go where He had not gone; calling attention to His words, "I will be with you, even to the uttermost parts of the world."

"When Christ laid down His life, it was the supreme sacrifice—He died for all."

Afternoon Session—February 13, 1923

Rev. H. D. McCallie, a missionary, spoke of his work in Korea, and the needs of the Church there.

He said: "After fifteen years in the foreign field I can testify that the Gospel of Jesus Christ does work. A young man I knew was adrift; was a drunkard and a wanderer; he surrendered his life to Christ; became a worker; and gave to Christ all of his time. A real test came when he was called upon to do menial labor. Being of the nobility, it was considered a disgrace to do any sort of work; but this job I had for him called for work of the most menial kind. He said: 'I would not do this work for $1,000, but I will do it for Christ.'"

This man now takes the place of Dr. McCallie in that particular field.

Speaking of social customs in Korea, Dr. McCallie said: "A man's social standing there depends upon the number of wives he has. Women are chattels. There is no word in the language for 'home.' Wherever Jesus Christ is being taught in this foreign land, all that has been changed. Homes are being established; churches and schools built."

He spoke also of the island where he began his work, and was beaten and almost put to death by the natives. Today there is a church of several hundred members, with three elders. Now the slogan of these people is "A Sunday School in every village."

Mr. McCallie's work among the boys and girls of the section in which he works is appreciated, and the students, because of their character, are in demand all over the land. He said: "The Gospel will do the work in Korca, but we must bring it into contact with the people. We have 90 missionaries, but there are three million people to reach."

Capt. Frederick Sullens, of Jackson, Miss., one of the Most Interesting Speakers at the Conventions

* * *

Second Address: Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, head of the women's work in the Southern Presbyterian Church, spoke of conditions in Mexico, where she has spent a great deal of time. (This address is reported on our woman's page).

* * *

One of the most inspiring things about the afternoon session, and which greatly increases one's zeal for work in our home land, was the sight of 12 full-blooded Indian girls from the Goodland Indian Orphanage, of Goodland, Oklahoma. Mr. Spring, the superintendent, said they ranged in age from eight to sixteen years; that the Bible is the principal text-book in the school; that everything else is incidental.

These girls showed wonderful training. They answered questions on the Shorter Catechism, selected at random, and recited verse after verse of scripture. They sang numerous hymns and the state song of Oklahoma. They then recited in concert the names of the books of the Bible in the way in which they come.

Mr. Spring, in his remarks, took occasion to say that the reason the Church is suffering so today is because she has not stuck to the Bible. He said the students in his school are thoroughly grounded in the Holy Scriptures, and that when they reached the tenth grade they know by heart from 1,500 to 2,000 verses. Can any other Presbyterian school in the United States make so splendid a record?

* * *

Rev. J. W. Hassell, in his address on Japan, stated that there are 62 mission organizations there. He mentioned the fact that while we in America frequently talk about the possibility of war with Japan, a resident of Japan never hears such talk there. He said, too, that conditions in Japan are such at the present time that you can talk religion anywhere and at any time. He pointed out the contrast between Japan and the United States in this respect; for, as we all know, few men talk about religion during business hours.

He told of one young man who thought he could not be convinced that there is a God because he could not touch Him and could not see Him. Mr. Hassell gave him a Bible and told him to look in this book and he would find God. After three weeks' time this young man returned, saying he had found God, and thanked the missionary for showing him the way.

So greatly appreciated is Mr. Hassell's work in Japan that the head of all the railroads sent him a pass and told him to ride all over the line and preach the Gospel. In Japan the railroads are controlled by the Government, and a representative sits in the cabinet.

Morning Session—February 14, 1923

The most impressive part of the Laymen's Missionary Convention was that which consumed the entire morning session, February 14th. The previous day had been given up almost entirely to addresses by ministers here and in the foreign field. At this morning session, however, the principal addresses were by laymen, professional and business men, whose daily lives are spent grappling with the problems of every-day life.

Mr. Alfred D. Mason spent most of his time telling what his Sunday School in Memphis, Tenn., is doing; how, when he started the work in 1896, there was practically nothing there, and the small sums of money raised each year were spent upon themselves. I gathered from his remarks that the Sunday School did not begin to grow until it began to think more about others than about its own welfare. He had a gripping message for all Sunday School superintendents. His words, "God will make great joy of your life if you are willing to work," sank deep into the hearts of all his hearers. He said, speaking particularly to teachers, "Teach for salvation; train for service; the Sunday School is the training ground of the Church. Plant in the heart and soul of every pupil seeds that will bear fruit in greater service later in life."

He said the plan which had resulted in the splendid development of his Sunday School could be summed up in four words: First, Information; second, Inspiration; third, Aspiration; fourth, Perspiration; that no Sunday School can remain weak where this program is put into practice.

He then spoke of the great work that the Bible class of this Sunday School is doing; how it has raised thousands of dollars to assist in carrying on the great work in the foreign field, particularly in China.

* * *

The next layman to speak was Mr. Julian P. Alexander, a prominent lawyer, of Jackson, Miss.

He told of the work of the Flying Squadron, which is accomplishing such great things for God in the little city from which he comes.

One could easily write a whole book on the ideas set in motion by his recitation of the almost miraculous things that are being done in Jackson, Miss. He told of the train furnished by the railroads, carrying one hundred Christians, with tremendous banner attached to its sides, with this startling statement in large letters:

"MISSISSIPPI FOR CHRIST"

He told of the number of miles this train covered in a given time; how numerous people were interested and became Christians as a result of the talks made by these one hundred modern disciples of Christ.

* * *

Mr. Fred Sullens, Editor of the Jackson Daily News, Jackson, Miss., in beginning his address, said he came "Not to preach, but to bear witness. Jesus Christ can save men, because he has saved me and others. He told how Gypsy Smith, Jr., came to Jackson, and he gave him plenty of space in his paper. "I did not dream what its effect would be upon me. On the evening of the second day of his coming, I was driving by the tabernacle and I saw people literally running to church. I had seen them run to fires, fights, etc., but it was first time in my life that I had ever seen people run to the House of God. I parked my car and went over to the tent. The next night I went over and wrote the story instead of sending my reporter. I got the story all right; but I got another story much more wonderful. That night Smith turned loose; there must have been five or six thousand people in the tent, but he seemed to be talking to me. He showed me how far short I had fallen from God's plane; and, strange to say, the harder he hit me, the better I liked it.

Gypsy Smith preached two more nights, and on the third night he extended the invitation. I went forward; I had left God publicly; I was glad to come back in the same way. That was eight months ago, and those eight months have been happier—have meant more to me, than all the 45 years that preceded them. I have been successful in business; have had all the joys, and all the thrills that can come to a man; but you may take it all rather than take Jesus Christ out of my life. I was anxious to get something to do in this great work, so I went to my pastor and told him so. He showed me what to do, and now I am Press Agent for Christ."

* * *

The third layman to speak during this morning of inspiration was Mr. P. T. Shanks, a wholesale grocer of Selma, Ala. He spoke particularly of prayer—what prayer will do in church life, in family life, and in business life. He told some incidents in his life—so much like the experiences of other business men that his talk made a very profound impression. He told of how necessary it is for the average professional and business man to take Christ into his office, to pray for strength and guidance through the day, not merely in the morning and at night, but at the moment when the problems present themselves. He told of the harrassing interruptions and distractions of every-day business life, and how necessary prayer is to make a man kind and thoughtful and companionable.

GATHERING UP THE FRAGMENTS

The Laymen's Missionary Convention at Little Rock, Ark., February 15-16, 1923

By Rev. John Van Lear, D.D.

Had I the choice I would prefer such a gathering as is assembled here to any court of the Church—Presbytery, Synod or Assembly—for several reasons: First, the Laymen's Convention is much larger in number; second, more democratic in spirit; third, less formal and perfunctory and ecclesiastical in method; fourth, more purposeful and definite in aim; fifth, more spiritual and prayerful, and hence to sum up all, more inspirational and helpful.

Personnel

The personnel of the convention was choice. The men who gathered here were the finest type of our Presbyterian manhood; men of standing and influence in the business and professional world; leaders in every avenue of human activity; doctors, lawyers, bankers, merchants, ministers, teachers; women of devotion and commanding strength; who had taken the time to give themselves to the furthering of the supreme task of the Christian Church, the extension of the Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Program

The program was strong. It dealt with old things in a new way. There was not a weak note in it from its opening to its close. New and old figures moved forward a program that was full of interest, kindling with inspiration, abundant in enthusiasm and intensely loyal to the great Head of the Church. Men spoke whom we had heard before and men whom we had not heard. The largest service rendered in these bi-ennial sessions of the Laymen's Missionary Convention is the splendid success

J. P. Alexander, of Jackson, Miss.

P. T. Shanks, of Selma, Ala.

A. D. Mason, of Memphis, Tenn.

"Beginning at Jerusalem"

Representatives in the busy mart of trade---at home.

has in bringing out men hitherto unknown in the church at large, and thus revealing new ore. So the treasures new and old of the kingdom were brought out. Above and beyond all the information and interest furnished, the outstanding impression was the devotional spirit and emphasis laid upon prayer as the instrument of moving forward the Kingdom of Christ in the world. The statistical note was not unduly sounded as the measure of kingdom's progress; the financial note was minor and the more important and precedent one, the consecration of self; cause was set forth as necessary to effect; the mountain as producing the stream. Our men realize that heavy budgets can be piled one upon another in increasing size without a firm and enduring base of interest, sympathy, consecration and prayer to maintain them. Love is the spirit of the Kingdom. The giving of self is the only adequate return for Christ's sacrificial gift of himself. The devotional motive was kindled by Dr. Wm. Bay Dobyms in two addresses on the opening day, one on the Leadership of Christ, and another on Discipleship. There were rich and fertile interpretations of the Gospel in which the keen sword of the Spirit was wielded with thrilling effect that cut the joints and marrow and clave the flesh and spirit asunder and bared the soul. The music of the convention was finely rendered by the Kentucky Seminary quartet, splendid young men who sang the old Gospel tenderly and artistically with their hearts laid to our hearts. The convention itself sang. Sang as men can sing, and revealed both how much men love to sing and how well they can do it, a fact too sadly hidden in congregations.

Scope

Every part of our mission field was heard from in messages direct from the field; encouragement sufficient to stimulate forward movements; discouragements which came mostly from the inadequacy with which our church is meeting the task assigned and assumed, of evangelizing hundreds of millions of Christless peoples in seven lands. Facing such facts as that our church is only giving one-fifth for foreign missions, while spending four-fifths at home, and that we are placing upon every one of our missionaries to reach a parish of 70,000 souls, no one can conclude that we are neglecting the home field in overstressing the foreign, nor overmanning the foreign field. The impression is rather that the inadequacy with which our church is meeting her missionary task is leaving to the future generation the task we are failing to perform. The Christian father who is not meeting his obligation in this task his generation is leaving to his child the task increased in heaviness. One-half of a world that can not read; one-half that has no medical skill, is the legacy that disobedience to Christ's command is handing down to the coming generation.

In Brief Review of Addresses

Dr. Egbert Smith—In his forceful and impressive way Dr. Smith gave a "Bird's-Eye View of the Far East": Japan, modern, cleanly, polite, with a veneer of civilization covering stark heathenism; thousands at heathen shrines; vast contributions to idolatry, one shrine receiving $160,000 annually. Heads full of knowledge, but hearts barren and empty; pilgrimages frequent; oft walking 800 miles; suicides abound; 500 young men hanged to death over Kegon falls; our force small and insufficient. Christianity making itself felt; one Christian to every 400 of population; in Japanese parliament one Christian to every 20 members. Korea: Revival spirit all over land; passion for Christian education; intense evangelistic work of native church; Sunday School increase in two years from 3,000 to 12,000; converts from 12,000 to 30,000; native church characterized by Bible reading, prayer and personal work. China: with countless Christless villages; people open to Gospel; all heathen religions conspire to degrade womanhood.

Dr. R. M. Wilson—Korea is being transformed by Gospel; enlightened medical treatment needed; handles in his hospital 10,000 patients yearly; our boys and girls can well follow example of Korean boy who brought in 119 new pupils, and his sister who brought 400 to Sabbath School.

Mr. Edwin F. Willis—Personal Trip to Mexico: Two years since our church resumed work in this war-torn republic, and in a new field; out of the chaotic condition due to revolution order was being established and our work steadily progresses. In the Presbytery of the South 372 professions last year larger than in many of our largest and strongest Presbyteries at home.

Rev. W. F. Junkin—Leaven in lump can not be extracted; old religions doomed; some temples converted into schools; but education liberal and atheistic; present generation drifting from Confucianism to Agnosticism; some few leading men are looking to Christian church for guidance; China looks to America as to no other nation; but for America and England, China would have been partitioned; if republic does not stand up it will be due to unrighteousness and not from lack of love of liberty; neither culture nor social service can save China. Hope is in redemptive Gospel.

Rev. J. W. Hassell—Japan: Japan does not wish to fight America; her militarists may, but her people do not. People are seeking to repress militarism. Nation is agnostic; God's existence doubted; people peculiarly open to personal work; approachable as occidental is not. Personal evangelism the constant employment of missionary.

Thursday Evening

Dr. H. F. Williams gave informing stereopticon lecture on "Facing the Facts," showing the before and after of missions.

Dr. J. Campbell White—Present-day situation in missions is that Christianity is being assailed from oriental religions; must meet the assault; there is nothing redemptive in any religion but the Gospel; Buddhism is suppression ending in extinction; Mohammedanism is eternal perpetuation of fleshly lusts; Confucianism is morality without power to realize; figures do not sustain the fear expressed of overstress of foreign evangelization; vast bulk of monies are spent on maintenance of home work; the 50-50 basis not approximated; the man power on the foreign field can not overtake the task; your missionary force should be increased to 1,000; then every one of them would have a field of 35,000.

Friday Morning

Messrs. Mason, McCallie and Alexander spoke at this session, all of whose addresses are reported by our Houston correspondent.

Dr. J. O. Reavis—"Opportunities for Investment." "Be sure you put your money into life or you will lose life; make your offering proportionate to your income or the Lord may make your income proportionate to your offering." You can have your personal representative on the foreign field, laboring night and day in your name, for $2,700. You will get some real joy out of your money if you do this. That is what stewardship means. How much owest thou unto my Lord?

Brazil—Rev. J. Porter Smith: Son of the homeland born on foreign soil; baptised with the zeal of missionary parents; from the land with no sacred Book; from the land where religion has been travestied; where people of education have turned in disgust from Romanism's presentation of Christianity; Mr. Smith knows Romanism at first hand. South America is a sick country; the leading men of all her different nationalities so say; Dr. Hudson Taylor, of the China Inland Mission, was quoted as saying "That South America was the neediest field in the world today." Protestant Missions seek to reverse the order that Romanism has set up when it places the church between the sinner and Christ, and to put the sinner nearest to Christ. Our mission force is static. No increase means retardation. Men now waiting to be sent; how can they go unless they be sent?

Men's Work—Mr. Alfred Hume: Another fine piece of new ore who set forth the present condition of our men's work in its disorganization and lack of organization but not in a pessimistic manner; sounding the note of cheer for this youngest branch of the Assembly's organized work and giving us the hope that under his able and devoted lead a few years will reveal its potentialities. He made a magnificent appeal for a combination of Life and Leadership; "Life without leadership is powerless—leadership without life is barren;" "Our need is motive—more power and less push."

Friday Evening

Africa—Rev. Motte Martin: Forceful young veteran thrilled audience with personal experiences. In a few clear-cut sentences he removed some of the misconceptions as to Missions; there was unity and not disunity on the field abroad; missionaries had hardships but were not martyrs; the heathen were described as they are and no one thought they were well enough as they are after his description; our work is not to thrust our religion upon them but to put it into their open hearts; any time will not do; there is no time but now in the Kingdom.

Dr. Homer McMillan—The closing address was made by Dr. McMillan. It was a masterly effort. The present conditions of the world are due to man's fear of man; his lust; his unrestrained power; his assault on sacred institutions of home and church. The remedy is our faith in a Divine Christ, a Divine passion that mingles with Divine compassion for souls, and the rekindling of the spirit of prayer in our homes.

The four hundred delegates left feeling that it was good for them to have been here and the Presbyterian laymen of Little Rock and North Little Rock, who had shown fine unity in making the convention preliminaries successful, will ever remember the gathering as one of pleasure, profit and inspiration, and be pleased to again play host to so fine a body of God's gentlemen.

The Life Within—Our earthly lives may waste and wear like the dropping sand; but the inner life can never waste nor wear. Time writes no wrinkles upon its brow. It is no fleeting shadow, no wasting dream. It must remain unimpaired till it reaches that beautiful land where angels dwell, and rejoices forever in the presence of God.

"Go ye into all the world"

Christ's representatives on the far-flung battle line.

R. M. Wilson, M.D., of Korea

Rev. Robt. Coit, of Korea

Rev. Motte Martin, of Africa

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

THE RICHES OF LOVE IN CHRIST JESUS*

The treasures of earth are not mine,
I hold not its silver and gold;
But a treasure far greater is mine,
I have riches of value untold.

Chorus

O, the depth of the riches of love,
The riches of love in Christ Jesus;
Far better than gold or wealth untold,
Are the riches of love in Christ Jesus.

The treasures of earth must all fail,
Its riches and honor decay;
But the riches of love that are mine,
Even death cannot take them away.

Come, take of the riches of Christ,
Exhaustless, and free is the store,
Of its wonderful fullness receive,
Till you hunger and thirst nevermore.

*Possibly there was no message at the conventions more impressive than that brought by the quartette in the words of this beautiful song.

Charlotte Convention—The Woman's Parallel Convention meeting in Charlotte, N. C., simultaneously with the Laymen's Missionary Convention, drew together several hundred women from North and South Carolina into one of the most inspiring and helpful conferences the Woman's Auxiliary of the Southern Presbyterian Church has ever known. With Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, president of the Woman's Auxiliary as presiding officer, direct from the mission field in Mexico, the great throng of women who crowded the Second Presbyterian church at four sessions, could not but catch the enthusiasm of her words as she urged that the "King's business be hastened." And no one attending either the meeting of the Laymen's Convention or the Women's Parallel Convention could fail to receive the impress of the convention theme, "Unto Him," as the picture of a lost, sin-stricken world was presented by Dr. J. Campbell White, of New York; Rev. Motte Martin, of Luebo, Africa; Mrs. E. R. Kellersberger, of Africa; Rev. Wade C. Smith, of Greensboro, N. C.; Rev. H. D. McCallie, of Korea; Dr. J. Porter Smith, of Brazil; Dr. J. O. Reavis, of Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. R. T. Coit, of Korea and the many other consecrated leaders who graphically told of the white harvest and of the few laborers.

The joint-sessions held at night were attended by crowds which packed the great auditorium, listening breathlessly to the thrilling stories of conversion as told by outstanding laymen, Frederick Sullens, of Jackson, Miss., and C. R. Caldwell, of Staunton, Va., who now are giving themselves "wholly unto the Lord." Three young volunteers, representatives of the 32 young men and women who are ready and waiting and who cannot go to the foreign field because there is no money with which to send them, stood on the platform and spoke earnestly of their longing to be sent, even to their readiness "to go out under the board of some other denomination," if their own Southern Presbyterian Church cannot send them.

Young Edgar Tufts told of taking up the work at Banners Elk, N. C., recently laid down by his sainted father; and asked the prayers of the members of the convention for himself and for the great task which he has assumed.

The quartet of Columbia Theological Seminary, in sweet soulful music, directed the thought of the assemblage "Unto Him" whose great command was constantly before the convention as the evangelization of the world was discussed.

The closing hours of the Laymen's Convention was marked by an address of great impressiveness by P. T. Shanks, of Selma, Ala., in which he urged more consecrated living by the Christians of America.

Rev. T. R. Thompson, of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., was the last speaker of the joint-session, on the closing night. He gave a soul-stirring message on the theme: "Power Adequate to the Task."

In point of registration and attendance the Charlotte meetings have been the largest of any of the four regional conventions yet held. May the influences which go out from these meetings held in this center of Presbyterianism, be fruitful in bringing a multitude of souls to Christ at home and in the uttermost parts of the world.

Auxiliary Member.

Biennial Convention of Woman's Auxiliary at Houston—The convention of the Woman's Auxiliary that met in the First Christian Church at Houston, Texas, February 13th and 14th was a source of inspiration and spiritual power to those in attendance.

There were 340 delegates registered besides a large number of guests. Greetings were extended to them from the city by Mrs. H. W. Carothers, from the Brazos Presbyterial by Mrs. M. G. Stell, and from the Synodical of Texas by Mrs. J. L. Brock. The response to these greetings was given by Mrs. William Steen, president of the Synodical of Louisiana. The Bible study conducted by Dr. W. R. Dobyns prepared the hearts to receive the messages of the missionaries from the foreign fields as they revealed the progress in missions that had been made in the past 20 years and the wonderful opportunity and responsibility confronting the generation of today. Naturally the women of Texas are deeply touched by Mrs. Winsborough's magnetic appeal for the Mexican women and girls within the boundaries of our State.

Heart-searching were the four-minute talks on prayer bands, family altars and tithing under the leadership of Mrs. Wm. D. Hart, of Austin; Mrs. Paul E. Bock, Mineral Wells, and Mrs. W. L. Hickman, Texarkana.

Undoubtedly the Auxiliaries of Texas will become much more efficient as a result of Miss Davidson's talks on organization and group conferences, the latter being taken up in Texas this year for the first time. During the opening of the question box, ripples of amusement occasionally spread over the audience, as certain questions revealed perplexities common to all Auxiliaries; but Miss Davidson in her quiet way, with her deep spiritual insight into the hearts and the problems of women, impressed them all with the thought that prayer and faith will solve all difficulties.

which 475 missionaries have been sent by the Church, ministering to 51 stations and 1,605 out-stations. He spoke of the fact that there are now under appointment 32 new missionaries waiting to be sent and he pled for the awakening of the Church to send them out. He urged that each Church accept its share of the quota asked by the General Assembly's Stewardship Committee.

The Bible hour of the afternoon session was led by Rev. Wade C. Smith, of Greensboro, N. C., using the topic, the theme of the convention: "Unto Him." Mr. Charles A. Rowland through whose vision the Laymen's Missionary Movement came into being and the one who first felt the need of the parallel convention of the women, stated the purpose of these conventions was to make men and women realize that the things of Christ should come first in everyone's life. Rev. William F. Junkin, of China, expressed his gratitude to the women of the Church who made possible Mrs. Winsborough's visit to the Orient a few years ago. Mr. Junkin testified of the change wrought in the lives of the Chinese by the Gospel of Christ.

The closing address of the afternoon was delivered by Mrs. Winsborough, giving a detailed account of her trip to Mexico, describing the charm of the scenery, the sadness of the people, their love of flowers and of music and the beauty of the women. She paid a tribute to the missionaries who are laboring in Mexico and told of the destruction of the territory which moved the work of the Presbyterian Church in the north to the southern part of the republic where the Church now has five stations and 25 missionaries.

MRS. W. C. WINSBOROUGH

Jacksonville Convention—The Third Biennial Convention of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Southern Presbyterian Church opened a two days' session in the First Presbyterian Church, Tuesday morning with large delegations from the four States of Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida, in attendance. Mrs. W. C. Winsborough presided.

Greetings were extended by Mrs. Arthur S. Harris of Jacksonville, in behalf of the city and also of the Presbyterial Auxiliary of Suwannee, of which Mrs. Harris is president. Mrs. Herbert A. Love, of Quincy, Florida, extended a welcome in behalf of the Synodical of Florida, of which she is president. These words of welcome were responded to by Mrs. W. E. Hinds, of Auburn, Ala.

"Why are we here," was the topic of an able address delivered by Mrs. Winsborough who in answering the question gave the purposes as first to hear the Master speak through His servants, to see an opportunity to become more intelligent and to hear from the missionaries of the Cross; second, to plan better ways of meeting our responsibilities and to be better fitted for doing the Master's work; third, to reconsecrate ourselves to renewed activity in order to do better work than ever before.

Rev. Motte Martin delivered a stirring appeal for the 3,000,000 people in the Congo touched by the Presbyterian missionaries.

Rev. J. O. Reavis spoke of the 33,000,000 souls for which the Southern Presbyterian Church has assumed responsibility in the foreign countries, to

On Wednesday morning Rev. R. T. Coit, of Korea, gave a graphic description of his work there. Rev. M. E. Melvin, of Chattanooga, outlined the plans of the Stewardship Committee and emphasized the importance of the Presbyterian Progressive Program. Dr. J. P. McCallie, of Chattanooga, told of the plans formulated for the organization of the men of the Church.

A conference on the development of the spiritual life was conducted by Mrs. H. A. Love, of Quincy. The following subjects were introduced by four-minute talks: "Prayer Bands," "Family Altars," "Tithing," "Bible Study," and "Personal Evangelism." Mrs. Winsborough gave an illustrated lecture on the Mexicans along the Texas border which was very interesting and instructive and which emphasized the great need of a school for the Mexican girls in Texas which the women of the Church propose to build.

Wednesday afternoon was given to the discussion of Auxiliary plans, and proved one of the most interesting periods of the convention when many problems were solved and difficult situations cleared up. During the afternoon Mr. A. D. Mason spoke upon the purpose of the Sunday School, stating that it is to teach for salvation and train for service. Dr. R. C. Anderson, of Montreat, thanked the women for their gift of the stone gate and lodge at the entrance of Montreat.

The session was closed by a prayer of dedication by Mrs. H. A. Love.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

Help! Help! Help! Your help is wanted and needed, dear kind reader, in sending in news for our page. We know our young people are at work, but we "crave" some word from them that they are doing things worth while. Our Honor Roll is nearly up to 20 this time, but these faithful friends cannot spend all their postage money in writing to the department. You will please us greatly by sending in a flood of letters about what your Society or Sunday School is doing or what you know of the activities of some other Society or Sunday School.

Isn't that a busy Junior Endeavor Society in Greensboro's Westminster Church? The younger boys and girls are leading the way in service for many of us. It is encouraging to see such splendid work being done by those who will be the leaders in a few years.

We are carrying this week an article on Foreign Mission Study, one of the points in the Merit Cup Contest. When the Home Mission Study has been completed, plans should be made to study about our foreign work. The story of Christian Missions is as genuinely interesting as anything else we can put our time into.

Fire last week destroyed the building where the Conference Office, Post Office, Store, and Athletic Headquarters were last June in the Davidson Conference. However, other quarters will be secured and there will be plenty of room to accommodate a large crowd June 12-19, for two large dormitories were constructed last summer. Plan now to attend the Conference. It will be a great one!

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

MARCH 11, 1923

JESUS IN GETHSEMANE

Luke 22:39-48, 54

GOLDEN TEXT—Christ also hath once suffered for sins, he just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God.—Peter 3:18.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

39. And he came out, and went, as he was wont, to the mount of Olives; and his disciples also followed him.
40. And when he was at the place, he said unto them, pray that ye enter not into temptation.
41. And he was withdrawn from them about a stone's cast, and kneeled down, and prayed,
42. Saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me; nevertheless, not my will, but thine, be done.
43. And being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly; and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.
44. And when he rose from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow,
45. And said unto them, Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.
46. And while he yet spake, behold a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew near unto Jesus, to kiss him.
47. But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?
48. Then took they him, and led him, and brought him into the high priest's house. And Peter followed afar off.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 27. Wherein did Christ's humiliation consist?
A. Christ's humiliation consisted in His being born, and that in a low condition, made under the law, undergoing the miseries of this life, the wrath of God, and the cursed death of the cross; in being buried and continuing under the power of death for a time.

Leaving Jerusalem and the upper room, where the Passover and the Lord's Supper had been celebrated, Christ and His disciples went to the Mount of Olives and the Garden of Gethsemane. Because it was a quiet and restful place, Jesus and His apostles often resorted thither. This was known to Judas, and therefore he went where to find Him by night. The night was far spent and the day at hand. Jesus went to Gethsemane at this time to pray and to prepare for the sad scenes of the morrow. We will contemplate Christ's Prayer In Gethsemane; The Disciples Sleeping But Urged to Pray; and the Events Following.

I. Christ's Prayer in Gethsemane

Withdrawing a short distance from the other disciples, Jesus took with Him Peter, James, and John. They had been with Him before on notable occasions, and He wanted their presence and sympathy. He kneeled down and prayed, saying, "Father if Thou be willing, remove this cup from me; nevertheless not my will but Thine be done." He desired, if it was possible, to be delivered from the cup of humiliation, suffering and death about to be presented to Him. The humanity of Christ shrank with horror and dismay from the awful woes and agony confronting Him—Caiaphas' palace, Pilate's hall, and on Calvary's cross. If man's salvation could be accomplished in any other way, He appeals to His Divine Father to deliver Him from these appalling evils. Yet He says, "Not my will, but Thine, be done." If the Father deems it and mankind can not be otherwise saved, He is willing to endure the shame, agony and pangs of man's reputed guilt. The necessity of Jesus' death and the need of paying the penalty of the violated law are nowhere more emphasized than in Gethsemane.

II. The Answer Given

Thou Jesus' specific request was not granted, and He drank the cup of woe to the dregs, yet His prayer was granted. An angel from heaven appeared to strengthen Him in body and mind for approaching trial. The earnestness of His prayer was shown in it being thrice repeated and His agony was proved by great drops of blood issuing from His body and falling on the ground. The reality of His being strengthened was apparent in the serenity that He manifested during the trying scenes of the succeeding day. It was a blessed thing for God's glory, Jesus' honor, and man's salvation, that Christ's prayer for exemption from the woes of suffering and crucifixion was not granted. Without atonement, without the penalty of the violated law being paid, a holy God could not pardon sin, and the whole human race would have been lost, the Divine pitying love would not have been made so conspicuous and Christ would not have had the adoration given by saints and the angelic hosts in heaven to "The Slain Lamb." It is often best that God does not grant human prayers. It was not well to bestow Elijah's prayer for death, nor Paul's petition for removal of "the thorn in the flesh," yet God answered their prayers by giving them grace to bear and do His will.

III. The Disciples Sleeping, But Urged to Pray

Even the chosen disciples, Peter, James and John, slept while their Master prayed in agony. Their sleeping was partly due to fatigue and bodily exhaustion. They had been awake all night and occupied with sad truths and impending calamities. They were also sleeping for sorrow. The deepest grief in view of their Master's sufferings and departure numbed their souls. Yet Jesus urges them to pray lest they enter into temptation. They were about to be tempted to deny their Master, as did Peter, and only the help of the Holy Ghost could keep them steadfast. The loving John was the only one of them that followed Jesus to His trial and stood by His cross to the end. The rest except denying Peter, forsook Him and fled."

IV. The Events Following

Jesus remonstrates with them for coming out against Him with swords and staves as against a thief. He reminds them that He had taught and healed in the temple and "They laid no hands on Him." Judas, guiding them, indicates his Master with a kiss and employs the seal of love and loyalty to betray Him to His enemies. Christ declares Himself to be the one sought and asks that His disciples be permitted to depart. Peter impulsively draws his sword and cuts off the right ear of Malchus, the servant of the high priest. Christ touches the ear, saying, "Suffer ye thus far," and healed him. This was the last healing miracle performed by Jesus and it was bestowed upon a bitter enemy, who sought His life. Christ was then arrested by the officers and soldiers and carried to the palace of Annas, the father-in-law of Caiaphas, the acting High Priest. Annas sent Him bound to Caiaphas. Here He was questioned and treated with rude indignity by the servants. John followed his Master closely, and being known to the High Priest, was promptly admitted. Peter "followed afar off," and John, going to the door, secured his admission. But instead of going with John to the presence of the Counsel, he seated himself with the servants and was tempted to deny his Master.

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

FACTORS FOR MAKING THE WORLD BETTER HOW CAN WE HELP?

- M., Mar. 12—Evangelism: Isa. 52:7-10.
- T., Mar. 13—Education: Prov. 1:1-6, 20-22.
- W., Mar. 14—The Church: Isa. 2:1-4.
- T., Mar. 15—Divine Ideals: Rev. 21:9-11, 22-27.
- F., Mar. 16—Unselfish Lives: 1 Cor. 9:19-23.
- S., Mar. 17—Sacrifice: John 12:20-26.

Sun., Mar. 18—Topic: Factors for Making the World Better: How Can We Help. Matt. 5:13-16

What is the greatest factor in world-betterment? How does the church help world-betterment? How does international friendship help?

(The discussion of the topic this week is furnished by Rev. J. F. Ligon, of the Tenth Avenue Church, Charlotte, by my request.—J. G. G.)

There is no one who wishes the world so well as God. For one to be convinced of that fact it is only necessary that he should carefully read the Scriptures. God has ever encouraged men to seek the best gifts, to reap the greatest joys and to attain the highest possible degree of physical and moral excellence. And not only has He encouraged men to seek the best and to attain the best, but He has materially assisted men in their endeavors.

We are mindful of His promises held out to those who faithfully observe His commandments to do them, promises that are bright and exactly consistent with our desires. "And it shall come to pass if thou shalt hearken diligently unto the voice of the Lord thy God and do all His commandments which I command thee this day that the Lord thy God will set thee on high above all nations of the earth. And all these blessings will come on thee and overtake thee if thou shalt hearken to the voice of the Lord thy God. Blessed shalt thou be in the city, and blessed shalt thou be in the field. Blessed shall be the fruit of the body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy kine and the flocks of thy sheep. The Lord shall establish thee an holy people unto Himself as He hath sworn unto thee, and all the people of the earth shall see that thou art called by the name of the Lord." Deut. 28:1-10.

We are mindful also of His benevolent attitude toward those who call upon His name and who honor Him in their lives. It is His hand that ministers to our temporal needs and supplies all those things that we require for comfort and peace of mind. "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of Lights with whom is no variableness neither shadow of turning." Jas. 1:17.

We are mindful also of His unspeakable gift to the world, and the purpose underlying that gift. The gift we know was His only begotten Son, and the purpose of that gift was that the world through Him might be saved. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life. For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved." Jno. 3:16-17.

When we seriously contemplate the above facts we are impressed with the thought that God really and sincerely wishes the world well.

Now what are some of the factors for making the world better? Well, there is of course:

1. The Bible—The Bible is the greatest factor for righteousness in the world today. We need have no fear of placing it in the hands of every man, woman and child in the whole world. It is only in lands where the Bible is possessed and read, where its authority is recognized and its precepts observed that the blessed fruits of righteousness are produced. If we would make the world better it is imperative that the Bible be sent, in large numbers, to earth's remotest bounds.

2. The Church—The Church is beyond all controversy a powerful factor for righteousness. The Church and the Bible move together in the conquest for a better world. The Church stands upon the Bible as its enduring foundation. It emphasizes the claims of God upon the individual life, issues the Gospel invitation and fosters the spiritual life of the believer. It pleads for individual righteousness and gives encouragement to the correct development of the whole man. Where the Church flourishes the graces of the Gospel abound.

3. The Individual Believer—The true Christian is a real factor for world betterment. His influence is cast upon the side of righteousness. Jesus is not indulging in flattery, nor is He paying idle compliments when He says, "Ye are the salt of the earth, ye are the light of the world." He is stating cold facts. The Christian is a peculiar work of His grace, the Christian has a real service to render the world, and the Christian is a most valuable unit in society as a whole. His duties are manifold, but his outstanding duty is to so live as to set forward by his life and labors of love the highest interests of the Kingdom.

Now How Can We Help?

I. Duty of the Christian as the Salt of the Earth (a) To retain his savor. That is to see to it that his religious fervor continues warm, that his spiritual experience does not become cold and dead. But how shall he see to this?

- 1. By prayer.
2. By personal piety. "Have salt in yourselves."
3. By close daily fellowship with Him who is the real Saviour of men. "If any man will come after me let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me."

(b) To exercise his spiritual powers in the salvation of the lost. "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." "Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the world." That command is to every one who names the name of Christ.

II. Duty of the Christian as the Light of the World

- (a) To preserve the light inviolate in his own heart.
1. To shine brightly—not dimly.
2. To shine constantly—not intermittently.
3. To shine beneficently—not selfishly. Light does not shine for itself merely, but for the benefit of those among whom it is placed.

(b) To shine until completely exhausted. Not for today merely, nor for tomorrow, but while life lasts.

(c) To shine with increasing brightness. "The path of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

REPORTERS' HONOR ROLL

- Carcy P. Lowrance, Mooresville.
Paul W. Rawlins, Greensboro.
Miss Eunice Long, Greensboro.*
Miss Minnie Hopkins, Concord.*
Miss Leila Hubbard, Lumber Bridge.*
Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, Route 5, Durham.
Miss Aline Whitener, Hickory.
Miss Maud Little, Charlotte.
Mrs. Z. V. Turlington, Mooresville.
Miss Bess D. Arrowood, Morganton.
Miss Kate Sutton, Fayetteville.
Mrs. W. H. Howell, Wilmington.*
Miss Bessie Cox, Lowell.
Eugene Brown Morgan, Concord.
Miss Rachel Beall, Durham.
Miss Anne Sample, Hendersonville.
J. M. Carr, Davidson College.
Miss Ruth Beard, Cornelius.
Miss Lillie Gilleland, Greensboro.

MEXICO

The Problem of North America!

Dear Fellow Young People:

What is Uncle Sam going to do about Mexico? It is sad enough to think about conditions in Russia today, but what about Mexico, right here next door to us, Mexico torn by revolutions and rent with civil war!

Are we not interested in those bright-eyed, intelligent boys and girls down there just south of Texas. Is it not our duty to give them the Gospel and proper Christian training, to give them a chance to become useful fellow-Americans with us instead of insurgents and revolutionists like Villa and Carranza!

Our Foreign Mission Study book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land," published by the Presbyterian Committee of Publication, tells us all about the great work that is being done by our church in Mexico today.

Hoping that we will all finish up our Home Mission study and get to work on this next great point in our Merit Cup contest as soon as possible,

Most sincerely your friend,

U. T. S., Richmond, Va. Wilson W. Moore.

NEWSGRAMS FROM OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

The Junior Endeavorers of the Westminster Church, in Greensboro, report the following good work: With a membership of 35 the average attendance for the past two months has been 32. Linda Rankin and Louise Scott have completed their third year of the five-year Junior Memory course, and Lawrence Clapp the first year. The society has completed the home mission book, "The Magic Box." A dozen scrap books have been made recently for the children's ward of the city hospitals, and a large number of postals have been collected for Dr. Scott, in China. At a recent meeting held in the church by Rev. Daniel Iverson, a Junior choir was formed. They are supporting an Armenian orphan at a cost of $60. No wonder this society won the banner at the last district C. E. Convention for the best work during the past year.

Church News

WEEKLY NEWS NOTES FROM BARIUM

We are glad to report that John Britton and John Barnhill are able to walk out in the hall. These boys have had pneumonia. Parks Earnhardt's leg is improving slowly.

The many friends of Dr. H. M. Parker, pastor of "Little Joe's Church," will be glad to know that he has recovered from his recent illness and has filled his pulpit the past two Sundays.

A new moving picture outfit has been installed in the school building and is proving a great source of pleasure to both young and old. The different film companies are kindly giving us the films for Friday and Saturday nights.

There are 19 cases of measles in the Sprunt infirmary, 15 in bed and four going about. None of the children have been very sick, but all have a genuine case of measles. Mildred Thomas, the truck farmer's little daughter also has measles.

Synod Cottage is ready for the boys to go back home, except for the light fixtures. These have been ordered sometime, but for some reason have failed to reach us. Miss Chambers is expected back some time this week.

The latest additions to our large family are John and McLean Capps from Winston. They are at present staying with the Fosters at the "Lodge" as all the boys' cottages are full to overflowing.

Mr. Thomas, the truck farmer, is as proud as a little boy with a new toy. He has a Fordson tractor. This tractor was bought with the "junk" money.

Miss Sophia Graham, one of our missionaries to China will spend several days with us next week. We are looking forward to her visit with a great deal of interest and pleasure.

Mr. Johnston and two of the boys, Edward Frayley and Charlie Carriker, went to Charlotte last Thursday to attend the Laymen's Convention.

NORTH CAROLINA

Parkton—Rev. V. G. Smith, of Danville, Va., has accepted the call to the Parkton Church and took charge March 1st. He thus goes back to his old charge.

Rockingham—At a congregational meeting held February 25th, the Presbyterian Church at Rockingham, called to the pastorate for the whole of his time, Rev. J. A. McQueen, of Orange, Va. He has not yet informed the church whether he would accept the call or not.

W. R. Coppedge.

Kings Mountain—Rev. I. S. McElroy, D.D., who for the past 18 years has been the successful pastor of our church in Columbus, Ga., has accepted a call to the Church of Kings Mountain. This Church is exceedingly fortunate in securing the services of one of the ablest men in our ministry. We extend him a cordial welcome to our Synod.

Orange Presbytery will meet in its regular semi-annual sessions on Tuesday, April 10, 1923, at 8 o'clock, p. m., with the "Church by the Side of Road," in Greensboro, N. C.

All reports and communications to the Presbytery should be in the hands of the stated clerk before the Presbytery meets. D. I. Craig, S. C.

Rutherfordton—Rev. J. C. Grier, pastor of the Rutherfordton Presbyterian Church, will begin an eight days' series of services here, on Sunday, March 11th, at 11 a. m.

Mr. Grier has secured the promise of the services of Rev. John W. Grier, of Huntersville, pastor of the Presbyterian Church there for 15 years, who will do the preaching.

A feature of the services will be the song service, which will be held under the skilled leadership of Mr. J. W. Boozer, of Spindale.

Services will be held at 3:30 p. m., and at 7:30 p. m., and at the night service, the song service will begin at 7:30, continuing for 15 minutes, followed by the sermon at 7:45 p. m. R. G. H.

Notes on the Campaign in the Synod of North Carolina—Rev. J. J. Murray, secretary of Stewardship, Wilmington Presbtry writes, "We are all now well on the way with our conferences. Have had most of them—all except about eight or ten. And most of them have gone in fine shape. The people are making a good response, especially to the appeal for signing the Tithers' cards."

In the meetings where I have been personally, we have taken up 143 signed Tithing cards and 53 Family Altar cards. And there will be others from other meetings."

Rev. Jos. T. Dendy writes: "I feel like the members of the North Carolina Synod are only in their infancy in the matter of giving. If they would only pay their "debt," the tithe, our gifts to all Benevolent causes would be four-fold when it is compared with our gifts today."

Dr. M. E. Melvin writes, "Up to and including February 26th, churches ordering supplies are as follows:

- Albemarle Presbytery 8 of 49 churches.
Concord Presbytery 9 of 62 churches.
Fayetteville Presbytery 38 of 119.
Kings Mountain Presbytery 7 of 38 churches.
Mecklenburg Presbytery 24 of 86 churches.
Orange Presbytery 10 of 89 churches.

Wilmington Presbytery 23 of 65 churches." This shows a very limited use of the literature prepared by the Assembly's Stewardship Committee and this year the literature is the best that the committee has ever produced.

Signed Tithers' and Family Altar League cards have been sent in recently from the following churches:

Table with columns: Church, Tithers, Family Altars. Lists churches like Pollocksville, Croatan, Ashwood, Wildwood, Mt. Horeb, Whiteville, Smiths, Hebron, Seven Springs, Fayetteville Presbytery, Mecklenburg Presbytery, Charlotte Second, Norwood, Mt. Gilead, Albemarle, Turners, Lee Park, North Charlotte, Charlotte First, Paw Creek, Huntersville.

An enrollment card will be sent to each person signing a Family Altar card. A Tithing Account book and enrollment cards will be sent to each person signing a Tithing card. Please send all signed cards to J. B. Spillman, secretary of Stewardship, 1211 Realty Building, Charlotte, N. C.

Davidson—The mid-week meeting of the board of trustees of the college was held February 28th. The matter of outstanding interest was the action of the board authorizing the building and financial committee to proceed at once for the rebuilding of the Watts dormitory that burned down on Sunday morning. It is proposed to build a dormitory that will accommodate practically twice the number that the destroyed building could take care of.

Further, the board authorized the committees concerned to proceed at once in the matter of erecting the south wing of the new Chambers with a view to its completion for use at the opening of the fall session. The question of cost both for this wing of Chambers and the Watts dormitory will be left for decision in the hands of this joint committee of building and finance.

Quite a number of other items presented in President Martin's report and recommended by him were passed upon favorably. Among these the following: The publication of Miss Cornelia Shaw's History of Davidson College, which has been read in manuscript form by a number of competent judges and has been pronounced a most excellent piece of work.

The Alumni catalogue now practically ready for the printer was also ordered published.

Alterations in the water-plant looking to improvements especially in the direction of securing a larger supply, unification of the voltage of the electric plant for the campus changing the locations now on a 220 voltage to correspond with the others on a 110 voltage was allowed.

An annual fund was ordered set aside to assist as many as three of the professors from year to year who may wish to pursue advance studies at some of the higher universities in a six weeks' summer course.

The treasurer was authorized to pay now one half of the sum pledged for building the annex to the church, now practically completed.

Provision was made for improvements on the campus looking to a better care of the walks, trees, grass and other things that demand constant attention.

There was present before the board in their review of the progress of the campaign to raise $600,000, R. M. Miller, chairman, and Malcolm Lockhart, director of the campaign. Their reports were of highly encouraging character and as they recommended the campaign will be continued in the confident expectation of a successful issue.

The board authorized the establishment of the Robert Kornegay Memorial Hospital Fund of $4,000 given by the family of the late Robert Kornegay, of Mount Olive. The income from this fund is to assist in the care of students needing hospital attention. The fund is a memorial in honor of both Robert Kornegay, Sr., and Robert Kornegay, Jr., the latter a graduate of Davidson and who's life purpose was to enter the medical profession.

It was decided at the request of F. L. Jackson, treasurer and business manager of the college to divide his duties, the two-fold office putting too heavy a burden on the shoulders of any one man. The college has grown so in numbers of matriculates, in the amount of its annual budget and in the size of its endowment funds on the one hand, and in the buildings and grounds to be looked after and carefully cared for on the other, that two men for the work seem a necessity. Mr. Jackson will continue to handle the finances. What exact division shall be made is left to the judgment of a committee. The board went on record in an expression of its appreciation of Mr. Jackson's very faithful and efficient conduct of his double office.

APPALACHIA

Morrison, Tenn—Eight of the men of the church, including the pastor, Rev. S. H. Hay, attended the laymen's convention in Charlotte. Each of the laymen assigned a segment of the convention to report to the congregation upon return home. The Sabbath following the convention was given up to making and hearing these reports. The exercises were satisfactory and helpful in every respect.

ALABAMA

Montevallo—On Sunday, February 25th, an impressive installation service was held at the Montevallo Presbyterian Church.

Dean O. C. Carmichael and W. J. Kennerly, professor of chemistry and physics, both members of the faculty of the Alabama Technical Institute and College for Women, were installed as elders.

Before coming to Montevallo, Dean Carmichael had been an elder in the First Presbyterian Church in Birmingham, Ala. Mr. Kennerly had previously been a steward in the Methodist Church.

The session of the church is greatly strengthened by the addition these two new members. F. L. B.

ARKANSAS

Presbytery of Pine Bluff will meet at Star City, Ark., April 10, 7:30 p. m., 1923.

James H. Morrison, S. C.

GEORGIA

Oakhurst—Rev. Marshall P. Woodson, of the Senior class in Columbia Seminary has been called to the pastorate of this new and rapidly growing church. Mr. Woodson preached here recently and received a most enthusiastic and hearty welcome. It is hoped that he will accept the unanimous call tendered him, and that he will come to us immediately upon his graduation in May. Until his coming our Church is most acceptably supplied by Rev. Paul S. Rhodes.

Decatur—Our Church has been fortunate enough to secure the services of Rev. S. Wilkes Dendy, of Columbia Seminary, as leader in Young People's Work for the summer. Mr. Dendy is well known to hundreds of Endeavorers throughout Georgia and the adjoining States, since he served this section as field secretary of Christian Endeavor during 1920-21. Plans for our new Sunday School building are practically ready for the contractors and it is hoped that the next few weeks may see building operations actually begun.

KENTUCKY

The Presbyterian Society at Hazard is supporting a crippled boy in the orphanage at Buckhorn. This costs them $20 every month and there are about a dozen members in the society. When John R. Mott came to Lexington a few weeks ago they wanted some of the inspiration he would bring to the State, so they paid the expenses of one of their number who went to hear the great man and brought back his message.

Whitesburg Presbyterian Endeavorers are rejoicing over the coming of their new pastor, Rev. Mr. Bell and his wife and family, all of them enthusiastic Christian Endeavorers. When the field secretary visited them early in February they gave a social on Saturday night following a rally. On Sunday afternoon they went to the jail for a devotional service, and at the pastor's hour on Sunday night they had the service. Rev. and Mrs. Bell are warmly welcomed to Kentucky.

The little folks in the Presbyterian mission school at Athel, Lee County, became very much interested in Christian Endeavor when the field secretary visited them and told them what other little boys and girls were doing. They asked for a society of their own and their pastor's wife will become their superintendent.

The field secretary stopped between trains in Cannel City, Morgan County and the teachers in the city school let her speak at the morning chapel service. As a result, a large number of young people came out on a zero night to hear more about the work of Christian Endeavor and to begin work for a society of their own.

The Auburn Presbyterian Society has a Christian Endeavor expert class of ten members that meets every week. The society gave a pantomime of Bible parables at the evening hour on a recent Sunday. On Christmas Eve too, they rendered a program, and each one brought fruit which was put in a basket at the door. On Christmas morning this was sent to shut-ins of the town. They sang carols to the shut-ins that night. They remembered the children in the mountains by sending three boxes of warm clothing to one of the mountain schools.

The 14th district is holding a series of rallies running toward the State convention. One will be held in each county in the district.

The Frankfort Prison society has resumed work after four weeks of enforced vacation on account of influenza in the prison. Though there were many cases of illness there was only one death. A few are still sick but the situation is greatly improved.

VIRGINIA

Staunton—The offering for the church debt fund at the Third Church Sunday morning February 25th amounted to $66, and was about $15 over and above what was lacking in order to complete the $400 needed by April 1st next, in order to secure a gift of $200 promised to the church toward cancelling the church debt for the new lot and manse. The $200 had already been put in the hands of the pastor before Sunday, so when the offering of the Church was announced the two one hundred dollar bills were turned over to the treasurer in the presence of the congregation, and the completion of the paying off the debt announced. Then the congregation arose and very feelingly and thankfully sang the doxology, and were led in prayer in behalf of the friend who so liberally assisted.

The Third Church has a large and well located lot on Nelson Street, Sears Hill, in the southern section of the city, with a cottage manse of one and one-half stories with seven rooms. The entire property was bought in two divisions, the first section with manse being purchased in 1910, and the combined cost was $3,550. The First Church of Staunton which is the mother of the Third and still assists in supporting the work, gave $1,000 toward the cost, and the Third has contributed the $2,550 during the last four years, in addition to carrying on its regular expense and benevolence budgets. Of course some good friends of the Church have personally contributed to the cost through the Third Church treasury.

The next piece of local work which will be undertaken is the moving of the manse in April to another position on the lot, in order to make room for the new church building to come later. The fifth Sunday offerings will now go toward that cause.

Counting improvements, the Church has contributed around $3,000 during last four years toward the lot and manse, every cent of which came from "tithes and free-will offerings" alone. There were 34 members on the roll when the property was bought in 1910, and there are 88 now.

PERSONAL

On account of lack of space we are compelled to hold for our next issue the account of the Laymen's Convention at Jacksonville, Fla.

The first memorial scholarship to be established at Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary by an alumnus of the institution has just been provided for by Rev. Trigg A. M. Thomas, D.D., one of the evangelists of the General Assembly. Dr. Thomas is a member of the Synod of Missouri and a resident of Bluff City, Tenn. Unlike most educational institutions, the Theological Seminary cannot expect to receive much financial co-operation from its alumni. The reason for this is that the graduates of the seminary are preachers, pastors, missionaries or teachers. It is readily understood that these men are not as a rule financially able to render much assistance to their alma mater. The Louisville Theological Seminary now has 81 young men enrolled in preparation for the work of preaching the Gospel. A scholarship of $2,500 yields an annual income of $125. This modest amount is sufficient to provide for the annual expense of educating a minister in the seminary. By reason of the fact that the Theological Seminary is not included in the benevolent budget of the churches, except in rare instances, it is necessary to secure scholarships from individuals who recognize the supreme necessity of educating young men for the work of preaching. An effort is now being made by the department of Church Efficiency to secure not less than 30 additional scholarships which are very greatly needed to assist worthy candidates for the ministry.

THE RICHMOND CONVENTION

The Richmond Convention, held on February 27th and 28th, was a success in every way. About 800 men and 400 women were registered. Perhaps two or three hundred were present who for sufficient reasons did not register. There were at least 1,500 in attendance. The men held their sessions in the Second, and the women in the First Presbyterian Church. The night meetings were held in the City Auditorium, which was filled both nights with audiences ranging from 3,500 to 4,000 in number. The committees in charge of arrangements had planned carefully and well and much of the success of the convention should be credited to their foresight and untiring energy. Representatives were present from Virginia, Eastern North Carolina, and some parts of West Virginia. Lexington Presbytery, and Durham, N. C., each sent a special car filled with enthusiastic workers. The Seminary Quartette led the singing for the men; and the young women from the Training School, for the women. These were among the many enjoyable features of the sessions.

This convention was noted for its fine list of able speakers, both lay and ministerial. There was not an uninteresting one in the long list. The laymen are to the front. That is where they should be. As it was a laymen's convention, they ran it and ran it well. They made great addresses and fine impressions.

The keynote of the convention was Evangelism. Much emphasis was placed on the necessity and importance of Personal Work, the gift of self, and of possessions.

Dr. Robert Speer brought a great message of hope as to the outcome of the present conditions and the progress of Christianity in the East, as also Dr. Evans, who spoke on the results of sacrifice for the glory of the Lord. Emphasis was placed on the Progressive Program, and the necessity for its success.

The addresses of Messrs. Sullins, Shanks, and McMillan, on Personal Evangelism, the joy of it and the beneficent results therefrom, were thrilling and stirred the listeners with wonderful effect.

The addresses of our Foreign Missionaries were unusually interesting and stimulating and above the average. The list of speakers will give some idea of the richness of the program: Drs. Robert Speer and J. Campbell White, of New York; F. C. McMillan, of Des Moines, Iowa; Dr. Wm. Evans, Los Angeles; Dr. J. Layton Mauze, Huntington; Messrs. J. P. Alexander, Frederick Sullens, Jackson, Miss.; A. D. Mason, Memphis; Dr. H. J. Williams, Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. M. E. Melvin, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Messrs. C. R. Caldwell and A. M. Pritchard, Staunton, Va.; Rev. Motte Martin, Africa; P. T. Shanks, Selma, Ala.; Rev. R. T. Coit, Korea; Dr. Nelson Bell, China; Rev. J. W. Hassell, Japan.

As one looked over the audiences one day of 1,200 men in one church and 800 women in another church, gathered from three or four states, all vitally concerned in the Kingdom of Christ, it was evident that the Church is not dead, as some would have us believe, but that it is awakening to the sense and privilege and responsibility. As the convention closed, it was the opinion that the sessions were a great success and that they are worth the trouble and expense.

The effect upon the Richmond churches was most helpful and the results upon the Synod will be most manifest in renewed zeal and consecration in the Master's work.

F. T. M.

CASH PRIZE FOR MOTTOES AND SONG FOR MASSANETTA SPRINGS

The promoters of the Massanetta Springs Summer Bible Conference Encampment (located four miles west of Harrisonburg, Va.) have some very definite ideals with reference to this institution. The spider in the dumpling in many similar enterprises has been commercialism. The management is very anxious to preserve this institution as one of instruction and inspiration in things that are definitely spiritual. To this end we invite the cordial co-operation and financial support of all our friends.

Mottoes setting forth in the fewest words possible the Massanetta Springs ideals are desired and we are making the request to the Church at large to help in expressing these ideals. We are offering a prize of $5.00 cash for the best motto, and $3.00 for each one thereafter accepted by the management. Any person may submit as many as five of these mottoes.

A Massanetta Springs song is also wanted, and a $10 cash prize will be given for the best composition of words for this purpose.

Please sign your name and address below the composition of mottoes and songs so it may be detached and the composition itself, without name, but with number corresponding to that placed by the name, may be turned over to the judges.

Please send in your mottoes and your songs as soon as possible to Rev. Wm. E. Hudson, Box 684, Staunton, Va., and a cash prize, as above mentioned, will be sent to each person whose motto and song is accepted for use.

Literature is being sent out in the form of a prospectus to pastors, elders, deacons, Sunday School superintendents, officers of the Woman's Auxiliary in the Synod, to those who registered at Massanetta Springs, and to others. A close reading of this prospectus will be of material aid to any who may wish to submit mottoes and songs. If you do not have this prospectus or are unable to secure it, please write Rev. Wm. E. Hudson, Box 684, Staunton, Va., and you will be promptly supplied. It will be seen that the Massanetta Springs Summer Bible Conference Encampment has a program that will strongly commend itself to the public and church at large.

H. W. McLaughlin,

Raphine, Va. President of the Board of Trustees.

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18. Are You Preparing For It?

Presbyterian Progressive Program

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS MARCH 18th

"Importance of Systematic Giving"

In the matter of the average churchman's attitude towards his contributions to church work, one of the insistent needs is a clear understanding of the importance of systematized giving. Many good men and women prefer to contribute, as it were, haphazardly; many do not wish to assume the obligation of a promise to pay a definite amount periodically; some object to a weekly plan of payment.

All of these forget that the Church must make its contracts in advance, and thereby obligate itself for the payment of stipulated amounts for service rendered and current running expenses. As a rule these obligations become due at 30-day periods. True mission workers and preachers, and other directors of church activities, do not present bills; but the Church's obligations to pay is none the less binding.

A man who refuses to pay his contribution otherwise than quarterly, or semi-annually, or by the year (unless paid in advance) forces church officers to defer payment of church debts as they become due, or else borrow the money at the bank and pay interest on it.

On the other hand, the purely haphazard contributor places the church treasury in a position of continual uncertainty and with such a condition goes a concurrent and human reflex on the part of those who are dependent upon it for the necessities of life. Indeed, devotion to duty and a high quality of self-sacrifice on the part of these pivotal workers have saved the institution in spite of insolvent church treasuries.

An Every Member Canvass offers opportunity to clarify this situation to church supporters. And it is an opportunity which should be used fully. When it is so used, church members will become educated in their giving, and the church will stand on a surer financial footing than it ever has in the past.

Fred J. Orr.

First Presbyterian Church, Athens, Ga.

Method in Greatest Business on Earth

"Systematic and proportionate giving is giving according to method and forethought, instead of from impulse, and giving constantly instead of occasionally. If your bookkeeper made entries in your books only when he "felt like it," or if he put money in your cash drawing only when "especially appealed to," your treasury would get very low. If your cook made no provision for your meals and only served them when she "happened to think of it" you would soon starve. Why should we use methods in financing the greatest business on earth, the development of the Kingdom of God, which we would scorn to use in our own business and homes?"

Love or the Law?

In answer to the objection that now we are under the dispensation of Christ and the old law of tithing has been done away with, a minister has told the story of a bachelor, who, going to live in a certain city, was recommended to a widow for board. The good man found that Widow Dole was not only agreeable, but that her house was the next thing to a home. After he had lived there for some time, bringing to the lady five dollars regularly every Tuesday afternoon, his heart was so thoroughly touched that he asked her to go to the altar—which she did. On the Tuesday following the wedding, he appeared as usual and said: "Whereas heretofore I was under the law, I cheerfully brought you my five dollars; but now I am under love, I hereby give you one dollar and will continue to contribute whenever I feel able."

News of the Week

The South Carolina State Senate passed two bills providing for issuance of $72,000,000 worth of bonds for highways, a state office building, and buildings for public schools, colleges and penal and charitable institutions. A measure creating a state system of highways also was passed.

In South Carolina there has been a great increase in appropriations for education. The new bill carried total additions of nearly a million and a quarter. The total of state taxes for 1923 will show an increase of $1,247,911 over 1922.

Payment of $12,239,852.47, the amount of the award rendered last October by the tribunal of arbitration which passed on the claims growing out of the seizure during the war of Norwegian ships, was made to Norway by the United States.

President Harding's Shipping Bill, one year after it was born, died at the hands of the Senate on February 28, 1923.

W. Bourke Cockran, conceded to be one of the most eloquent orators who ever spoke on the floor of Congress, died in Washington, March 1. His death was due to apoplexy.

President Harding has effected the greatest change his cabinet has undergone since his administration began nearly two years ago by designating Dr. Hubert Work, of Colorado, now postmaster general, to be secretary of the interior, succeeding Albert B. Fall, of New Mexico, and Senator Harry S. New, of Indiana, to head the post-office department in succession of Dr. Work.

The Legislature of North Carolina has been busy also. The workmen's compensation act was tabled by a vote of 73 to 28.

The Pharr bill, embodying the recommendations of the board of trustees of the University of North Carolina for a $350,000 appropriation for the establishment of a four-year medical school, went to its death before the appropriations committee. The medical school proposal consequently is a dead issue in so far as the University is concerned.

The new state "Dry Law" now permits a person to have liquor in his own home, but makes it unlawful for him to get it there. Whatever he had on hand when the Eighteenth Amendment was passed he can keep and legally use for himself.

By an overwhelming vote the Nimock's divorce bill was defeated. This bill made incurable insanity a legal ground for divorce.

POINTERS FOR PROGRESSIVE PRESBYTERIANS

A Condensed Statement of the Work and Needs of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., for Presenting the Annual Every Member Canvass of 1922.

YOUR Church is accomplishing wonderful results with the money you are giving for benevolences. The Assembly asks this year for $2,850,000 for Assembly causes, and $1,900,000 for Synodical and Presbyterian Causes, or a total of $4,750,000.

A weekly pledge from every member in proportion to ability will raise our annual budget.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

33,000,000 Unsaved Heathen Our Assumed Responsibility

71,274 Unsaved Heathen to one Missionary

463 Missionaries supported in seven countries.
3,406 Native Workers Maintained.
4,731 Received on Profession of Faith last year.
44,839 Communicants in the Foreign Field.
74,536 Enrolled in Sabbath Schools.
36,644 Enrolled in Day Schools under Christian Instruction, 17 Hospitals.
246,709 Medical Treatments given last year
45 New Missionaries sent out last year.

Total Receipts $1,281,324.00

Amount Asked and Needed this year, $1,581,750;
33.3 per cent of all Benevolent Funds.

HOME MISSIONS

The Neglected and Unreached Millions of our Own Land

634 Home Mission Workers supported last year.
731 Churches and Stations.
9,638 Received on Profession of Faith last year.
2,908 Received on Certificate last year.
50,000 Received Instruction each Sabbath last year.
Two Presbyteries for Indians and Mexicans maintained.
One Synod for Colored People maintained.
75,000 Mountain People being reached with Gospel.
47 Mission Schools conducted for dependent classes.
Theological Seminary for Colored Ministers maintained.
College for Indians is maintained.
A Mountain Orphanage and Hospital maintained.

Total Receipts for last year, $543,434.00

Amount Asked and Needed this Year, $760,000;
16 per cent of all Benevolent Funds.

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY

Its sole object is to promote the wider circulation of the Scriptures

5,000,000 Bibles and Testaments issued past year.
150 Dialects and Languages in its circulation.
Total Receipts from Presbyterian Church, U. S., $24,007

Amount Asked this year $28,500;
Six tenths of 1% of all Benevolent Funds.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND MINISTERIAL RELIEF

Securing Men for the Ministry, Aiding Men Preparing for Ministry, Increasing Salaries Paid to Ministers and Caring for Aged and Infirm Ministers, their Wives and Children

470 Ministerial Candidates last year.
40 Students for Medical and Special Work.
282 Ministerial and Medical Students given aid.
$45,415 total amount of aid given.
341 Infirm ministers, widows and orphans of ministers given aid.
488 Aided by Student Loan Fund.
Total Receipts last year $380,166
Amount Asked and needed this year, $356,250;
7½ per cent of all Benevolent Funds.

PUBLICATION AND SABBATH SCHOOL

13,000,000 Children in the South not attending any Sunday School

3,487 Active Sunday Schools.
396,850 Enrolled in Sabbath Schools last year.
13,540 Sunday School Scholars joined Church last year.
63 Field Workers.
21 Churches organized from Mission Sunday Schools.
$400,990 Contributed to Benevolences by Sunday Schools.
27 Periodical Publications.
86 Christian Endeavor Societies Organized.
Total Receipts last year, $96,704
Amount Asked and needed this year, $95,000;
2 per cent of all Benevolent Funds.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S TRAINING SCHOOL

For the Training of Lay Workers for Mission Fields at Home and Abroad, Pastor's Assistants, Teachers and Field Workers

112 Students enrolled the past year.
15 States represented in student body.
4 Foreign countries represented in student body.
25 Graduates last year.
Total Receipts last year, $18,222.85
Amount Asked and needed this year, $28,500;
Six-tenths of 1% of all Benevolent Funds.

THE overhead expense (cost of doing business) of the dry goods, shoe, clothing, drug, furniture, hardware business averages about 23-25% of gross income. Our Church is operating in seven foreign countries, and at home with an annual healthy growth, and it costs 9.8% for all "overhead," including all Four Executive Committees, Stewardship Committee, and Woman's Auxillary. Can you beat it? What will you give per week to support your Church Program?

Issued by the General Assembly's Stewardship Committee of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S., 410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

CHILDREN

IN THE FOURTH GRADE

Dear Standard:
I like to read your papers. I am a little girl nine years old. I go to Sunday School and school. My teacher at school is Miss Laura Holt. I like her fine; my Sunday School teacher is Miss Albright. I like her fine. I am in the fourth grade at school.

Your unknown friend,
Harriet Cobb.
Durham, N. C.

UNCLE AT CHAPEL HILL

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl ten years of age. I am in the fourth grade at school, and my teacher's name is Miss K. E. Storey, and I like her fine; and my music teacher's name is Miss Janie Thornton and I like her fine. I have one brother and two sisters. I have an uncle at Chapel Hill at school he is studying for a lawyer. I want to surprise my mother and father.

Your unknown friend,
Mary Louise Torrence.

HAS A LITTLE BROTHER

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl nine years old. I enjoy reading the letters in your nice paper. I go to school at Eagle Springs, N. C. My teacher's name is Miss Mary Chandler. I like her fine. I am in the third grade. I have a little brother four years old. I will close for fear my letter will reach the big wastebasket.

Your little friend,
Maggie Mae Brewer.
Eagle Springs, N. C.

LIKES THE LETTERS

Dear Standard:
This is my first letter to you. I am 12 years old. I like to read the letters in your paper. My school teacher is Miss Bettie Register. I like to go to school just fine. I go to Sunday School every Sunday to the Presbyterian Church. My Sunday School teacher is Miss Margaret Jones and our superintendent is Mr. D. E. Shaw. Hoping this letter will not reach the wastebasket. I must close.

From your little friend,
Belton Buchanan.
Broadway, N. C.

BIG AND PRETTY ENOUGH NOW

Dear Standard:
I am a little girl 11 years old. I am in the fifth B grade at school. This is my second letter to you, my first one I wrote before I started to school when father said I was too little and ugly to go to school. My sister and I are on our way back to Richmond, where we go to school. We came home for the Christmas holidays. I've had a real good time with my little sisters. I will close now because I am afraid my letter is growing long. Hoping you will print this letter as I want to surprise the folks at home, especially my two little sisters, Ruth and Jean.

Your little friend,
Josephine Walker.

A FOURTH OF JULY BOY

Dear Standard:
I used to write you a lot of letters but have not been writing so many these days. I am a little boy nine years old. I'll be ten the Fourth of July, 1923. Santa Claus was very nice to me. He brought me a toy train that will wind up and run on a figure 8 track. He also brought me an Over-and-Under, and a toy xylophone and a box of pencils and a pen and eraser. Our Sunday School had a Christmas tree on the church grounds. I got a handkerchief and some candy and a bag of fruit and nuts. My Sunday School teacher is Mrs. D. L. McLaurin. I have got a pin and wreath and am going to get a bar. I will close.

Your little friend,
W. W. Caligan.
McCull, S. C.

THE SEVEN SUNBEAMS AND THE BIG HORN

Dora Dexter, in the Continent

The "Seven Sunbeams" lived with their parents in a big family hotel facing the park. On the ground floor was the big dining-room with its one long table in the center and the smaller tables surrounding it. It was presided over by William, big, black, and pompous. Then there were the parlors and the bed-rooms opening off the long corridor, occupied mainly by old ladies who couldn't very well climb stairs.

The seven sunbeams were having a meeting in Judith's room on the second floor.

"Well, but I do think it's too bad that one of the old ladies isn't blind!" Eight-year-old Judith pushed some stray locks of thick bobbed hair out of her eyes and glanced from one to the other of the girls who surrounded her. As no one of the six girls had a suggestion to offer, she went on: "Now if Mrs. Barbour was only blind 'stead of deaf, she'd do nicely. We could take turns after school, the seven of us, one each day. We'd knock on her door, and she'd say: 'Who is it?' in that soft pretty voice of hers. And we'd say: Just a sunbeam come to take you for a walk or read to you or whatever we wanted to do. Into her awful blackness we could bring lots of sunshine. But for deaf people you can't do anything—but holler into an ugly black horn till your face is red. Oh, why couldn't Mrs. Barbour have been blind 'sted of deaf!"

"That awful horn!" Little Polly Babson exclaimed. "When I go to speak into it I feel like I was going to speak a piece at school. Last week I had the whole dining-room listening to me tell her it was starting to rain. And she never found out what I said either. After saying it five times, feeling foolisher and foolisher every minute, I slunk out of the dining-room—without even eating my lunch. If you start saying anything into that horn, you've got to finish—or be dreadfully impolite. But I just couldn't finish that day. And—and I haven't dared to speak to her since. Hardly anybody else does either. The very worst thing about deaf people is that they can speak so soft and ladylike, and you have to yell so horrid. No sirreebob, I couldn't be a sunbeam to any one who's deaf! It makes me squirm to think of it."

"But she's awful lonesome. Everybody seems to be afraid of that horn. She doesn't even know half the things that happen right around her," Bella Marsden spoke up thoughtfully. "She might as well be on a desert island. Oh, girls, let's pretend she is and write her letters, one every day!"

"And keep it secret, who sends 'em," put in Judith in great excitement. "And we can see her open them. William always puts the morning mail at the breakfast table. Oh, won't it be fun? Mysteries and surprises are the nicest things."

Deciding to act on this suggestion, the seven sunbeams chewed pencils and thought—and thought. With this result:

"Dear Mrs. Barbour:

"We are secret admirers of yours, but we haven't the courage to tell you so to your face. That's why we're writing. We like the pretty way your hair curls 'round your face. And it's so soft and silky and white—not a bit yellow or stringy. We heard a funny story today. About a tramp who was running down the street with an expensive rug in his arms. 'Hey,' calls a policeman, 'did you steal that rug?' 'Nope,' says the tramp; 'a lady give it to me.' 'Like fun she did,' said the policeman, grabbing the man's collar. 'Uh, huh,' said the tramp. 'She give it to me and said: "Beat it." And that's what I'm doin.'"

"We hope you haven't heard this story before. We hadn't.

Lots of love,

THE "SEVEN SUNBEAMS."

P. S.—Watch tomorrow's mail."

After the letter was stamped and dropped into the mail box, the conspirators could hardly wait for tomorrow to come. And next morning when they saw their letter standing against the tumbler at Mrs. Barbour's place they were very much excited. Then when she opened it curiously and smiled, really smiled at their joke, they just glowed all over. So wonderful it seemed to have a mystery all of their own making.

Day after day the letters appeared mysteriously at Mrs. Barbour's place—each sunbeam in turn writing one. And every morning the little lady with the big horn seemed so delightfully surprised and pleased. Once she looked up quickly and caught Bella smiling straight at her. Sometimes the children would enclose a movie ticket in the letter. Sometimes a funny story clipped out of a paper or magazine. And they got just as much pleasure out of it as Mrs. Barbour. Giving a surprise was as exciting as getting one.

Then one morning the seven got a surprise. They received a letter. Or rather little Bella Marsden did. She found it at her place once morning.

"Dear Bella:

"Do you happen to know any sunbeams? If you do, bring them all to my room this afternoon at four o'clock. I need some help badly. My grand-daughter in California has sent me a big box of good things to eat—figs stuffed with walnuts, some big luscious dates and raisins. If you don't know the 'Seven Sunbeams,' I shall be so disappointed.

Waiting hopefully,

MRS. BARBOUR."

"Of course we won't go," Judith said regretfully. "We'd have to give up all the mystery if we did. Imagine it. All of us sitting around in her room and jumping up every other minute to talk into that horn. Oh, it would be awful."

"But the figs and dates with nuts in 'em. She'd be so disappointed. I think sunbeams ought to go where there's need most."

This last argument won, and at four o'clock the seven with little Bella bringing up rear filed down the corridor—each one dreading the horn, but ready to face it like soldiers. Any way there wouldn't be a crowd of grown folks listening to them screaming their "pieces" into the horn.

But when they entered the room, the horn was nowhere to be seen. Mrs. Barbour, handing out tiny pads of paper with bright colored pencils attached, explained that the horn was out of order, had been stopped up by one of William's big words. "Yes," declared the little lady, "it was such a big one, it stopped up the opening altogether."

This started the girls giggling and soon the party was in full swing—the refreshments coming first. While they were eating Mrs. Barbour told amusing stories of her great-grandchildren in California. And afterwards she told the most remarkable tale of a little girl who found a gold mine all by herself. Long before the afternoon was gone the seven sunbeams were enjoying themselves thoroughly. Writing on the little pads seemed rather like a game—not a bit like using that dreadful horn.

Of course after this the letters stopped. But the children loved to visit the dear little lady. Scarcely an afternoon went by without at least one of them dropping in. One day Judith came rushing in, followed by the other six sunbeams. "Oh, Mrs. Barbour," she cried, "read this!"

"Why be deaf! One of our invisible ear drums will make you hear as well as ever. Send only five dollars for this marvelous invention. Money cheerfully refunded if unsatisfactory."

While the lady was reading this advertisement the girls watched her eagerly. Wouldn't it be splendid if it really would make her hear!

But Mrs. Barbour was shaking her head. Looking around sadly at the eager girls, she said: "No, my dears, I've tried this one and many, many others. Nothing helps me. I am quite incurably deaf." Then she added as the girls' faces grew sober: "I do believe you feel as bad about it as I do. It's dear of you to take so much trouble writing out things for me the way you do."

"No; honestly we love to do it," cried little Bella. "It's lots more interesting than talking to just ordinary folks."

Not long after this Mrs. Barbour went away for a long visit. Three months she was gone. Then a letter came inviting the seven to meet her at the train. Armed with their little pads and pencils, they met the noon train. They all had lunch together afterwards in the big Union station. Then they went to the matinee. Every minute the girls were getting more and more excited. "She can hear—she really can," was whispered from girl to girl.

"You can hear—how lovely!" cried Bella at last to the good lady herself.

"No, dear; I can't," she answered. "I'm just about stone deaf." But at the amazed and incredulous expressions on the girls' faces, she continued: "I can't hear what people say, but I can see what they say—I read their lips. Years ago I took up lip-reading, but it is far from easy, and I gave it up. But now with seven sunbeams so interested, I took fresh courage. Just think, girls, I can even see what the figures on the screen in the movies are saying to each other. And I can go to lectures and sermons and understand them as well as any one. Best of all I won't be a nuisance to my friends. All because—" here she paused and smiled happily at the delighted girls—"all because of seven young sunbeams."

A Pastor Hits the Nail on the Head

A prominent pastor writes:

"We have fooled ourselves, by packing our statistics, and reporting things in our budget that have no business there, in order to reach our goal."

This is an evil that must be stopped in the interest of raising our annual budget for actual running expenses of our established agencies—Local as well as Assembly.

We Cannot Build a Business-Like Budget on False Foundations

To Every Church an Accepted Apportionment should stand for a Planned Budget. But to a great many it does not. They report gifts to endowment for educational institutions; special gifts to Near East Relief, etc., etc., as a part of their apportionment and then the evil comes in thinking that their job is done. This method results in scaling down the amounts apportioned by the Church Courts to the regular agencies for their daily bread and meat needs.

The Assembly's Apportionment For All Benevolences For 1923-4 is $4,750,000

This does not include a single "Special." Our Church cannot raise this if we persist in running to cover with every special that passes through a local church. To illustrate: A church has in its total budget $1,000 for Foreign Missions, and during the year some few individuals give $500 to the Equipment Fund for Foreign Missions. By counting in the special, this church would then send only $500 more to the regular needs of the Foreign Mission Committee. There is ample room for a church to "get credit" for its specials, but these ought not to be deducted from the regular budget, based upon the apportionment.

Has Your Church For Year Closing Raised Its Apportionment For Benevolences?

Face the issue; look the facts in the face; has your church met the daily needs of our Local and Assembly Causes by having a definite Budget, including a definite amount for each cause?

The best preparation we can make for the task of raising our apportionment for 1923-4 of $4,750,00 is to change our system of counting specials, and then courageously face the need of our Agencies. It weakens our effort; lessens our energy slackens our pace, when we count specials and pat ourselves on the back with a "well done."

Our Four-Fold Need in Church Finance Today

1. An Apportionment officially accepted by each Church.
2. A Definite Budget to include a specific amount for each cause, based upon the percentage adopted by Assembly, Synod and Presbytery.
3. Monthly remittances, however small.
4. Two Treasurers—one for current expenses, one for benevolences.

Our Task for the Canvass of 1923-4 on March 18th will test our Church. We appeal to every reader to be earnest in prayer and diligent in effort to meet the demands of our Growing Church.

(Write to our Committee for an improved blank to aid in balancing your local church budget. Let us make a strenuous effort throughout March to collect all outstanding pledges on the budget of the year now closing.)

The General Assembly's Stewardship Committee

410 Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Marriages and Deaths

MARRIED

Stubbs-Lowry—At Freeport, Fla., on September 17, 1923, by Rev. Daniel J. Currie, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. Harry Murray Stubbs and Miss Minnie Lee Lowry, both of Freeport.

Corbett-Anderson—At the Presbyterian manse, DeFuniak Springs, Fla., by Rev. Daniel J. Currie, Mr. Thomas DeWitt Corbett and Miss Sarah Ann Anderson, both of DeFuniak Springs.

Wood-Collier—At the home of the bride's pastor, Wade, N. C., February 18, 1923, Mr. William Webster Wood and Miss Bertha May Collier were united in matrimony; Rev. T. C. Croker officiating. Mr. Wood is from Linden, N. C., where they will make their home.

Wagener-Oliver—On February 7th, in the Presbyterian Church at Mt. Pleasant, S. C., by Rev. Daniel P. Junkin, assisted by Rev. George J. Gongaware, of St. John's Lutheran Church, Charleston. Mr. George A. Wagener, of Charleston, S. C., and Miss Emmie Oliver, of Mt. Pleasant, S. C.

DEATHS

Torrance—Mr. John A. Torrance, after months of suffering, entered into rest February 21, 1923, at his home in Rowan County. He was 70 years of age and was a member of Thyatira Church.

Barkley—Mr. John R. Barkley, passed away February 27, 1923 at his home in the bounds of Hopewell Church of which he was a member for 18 years. We have hope that he is realizing his favorite passage of the Bible: "In my Father's house are many mansions."

Cauble—Samuel McGee Cauble, a Civil War veteran, 32d N. C. Infantry, Co. B., Hoke's Division; born December 24, 1839, died February 27, 1923, at the home of his son-in-law, T. J. Sherrill, Catawba County, N. C. He was a member of Sherrill's Ford Church and is survived by three children, Mrs. Sherrill, Mrs. David Glover and Mr. H. D. Cauble and by 14 grandchildren.

McCallum—Gustavus Adolphus McCallum was born May 24, 1876. Baptized in infancy by Rev. Archibald McQueen at Iona Presbyterian Church. United with Ashpole Church afterwards Midway. Died after a brief but severe illness in hospital at Clio, S. C., December 8, 1922.

He was the oldest child of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McCallum. He is survived by them, five brothers and two sisters. May the Father of mercy and God of all comfort be with the aged, stricken parents and sorrowing brothers and sisters and enable them to say with Job when delivered of all his property and bereft of all his children: "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord. In all this Job sinned not nor charged God foolishly."

RUFUS WM. McCULLOCH

Prof. Rufus William McCulloch, for the past two years associate professor of English at the University of Maine, died Monday afternoon, January 22, 1923, at his home on Pond

St., Orono, Maine, with typhoid pneumonia.

He was born July 4, 1873 in Alamance County, N. C. When just a lad of 13, he joined the Stony Creek Presbyterian Church, near his birthplace. He was loyal to his church and community as a youth. He attended the public schools in his county, Graham College, Graham, N. C., for one year, later received his A.B. degree both from Guilford College and the University of North Carolina. He also received his M.A. degree from the University of his native State and then went to Harvard from which institution he obtained his M.A. degree in 1913.

He was well fitted for his life's work as a teacher and was making an enviable reputation for himself when the Reaper of Death took him to his reward.

Prof. McCulloch taught in the rural schools of Alamance and Guilford counties before his graduation from the various institutions previously mentioned. He served at various times as professor of English, Georgia School of Technology for four years; Daniel Baker College, at Brownwood, Texas, for four years; University of Pennsylvania for one year. He spent one year in Pittsburgh, writing and doing research work. When war called us all into service in 1918 he became a camp librarian and was stationed first at Quantico, then later in New York where he served the Marines.

He taught English at Sweet Briar for one year for his friend Prof. Goode, who was granted a leave of absence. From this institution he went to the University of Maine, where he labored for one and a half years. Prof. McCulloch was taken sick while in Philadelphia attending a Modern Language Association. He was the author of a treatise on American Literature. He has written several theses on English and these have been heartily endorsed by professors from University of Michigan and other colleges.

The people who knew him were enriched by his friendship, fidelity, loyalty and in every stage of his life, he was the same, always and everywhere trusted and loved. He could meet lettered and unlettered alike. He leaves his wife, who was Miss Lucile Norman, of Atlanta, Ga., and one daughter to mourn his departure. A service was held at his home on Wednesday afternoon, following his death under the auspices of Mechanics lodge, F. and A. M. Prof. McCulloch was a Mason, a member of the Order of the Eastern Star and its worthy patron for a second year at the time of his death.

The bereaved wife and daughter accompanied by a fellow Mason left Maine for North Carolina on Friday.

Wash the Poisons of RHEUMATISM

SCIATICA, NEURALGIA AND URIC ACID

Out of Your System With Shivar Spring Mineral Water.

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

SHIVAR SPRING AS NATURE MADE IT. NOW PROTECTED BY SANITARY SPRING HOUSE.

The Guarantee.

Think of it! A mineral water of such wonderful blood-cleansing power that it is actually shipped to every state in the Union and even to foreign lands under a positive guarantee that the price will be refunded, should the user report no benefit.

Shivar Mineral Water is unquestionably the greatest of all American mineral spring waters and there are thousands who contend that it is the best mineral water in all the world.

In Rheumatism and in other forms of auto-intoxication such as Sciatica, Neuralgia, Chronic Headache and Uric Acid Diathesis, Shivar Mineral Water has succeeded where every known medicine had failed. Physicians attribute this to its peculiar power of dissolving and completely washing out of the system the leucamines, or body poisons that cause these diseases.

Delightful to drink, wonderful in its blood-cleansing power, Shivar Spring Water may be shipped any distance, at any season, without losing its virtues in the slightest.

Though a thousand miles away, you may use it in your home with identically the same results, as if you drank it at the Spring.

The Results.

Read the following letters which are fair samples of tens of thousands that are received at the Spring, then accept our guarantee offer. It gives you the equivalent of a three-weeks' visit to this celebrated Spring, with no charge for the water if you report no benefit. Sign your acceptance on the coupon below.

Fremont, North Carolina.

After using Shivar Water my rheumatism has almost entirely disappeared. When I commenced to take it I was unable to turn myself in bed. I am now going where I please. Wishing you much success in your noble work, I am Very respectfully,
J. H. B.

Scranton, South Carolina.

My wife has been a sufferer of rheumatism, and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease.
J. D. M.

Bishopville, South Carolina.

The Water has done more good than any medicine I have ever taken for rheumatism. Have been drinking it three months and am entirely free from pain. I stopped the medicine upon receipt of the first Water.
H. S. C.

Fredericksburg, Virginia.

Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints upon her hands, caused by rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement.
Wm. C. C.

Lexington, Virginia.

I know of several who were relieved of rheumatism with this water. Please ship at once and oblige.
J. P. R.

Roper, North Carolina.

I am anxious to get more of the Water. It has done me more good than anything I have ever tried for rheumatism.
Mrs. H. C. E.

Leeds, South Carolina.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will produce a permanent result. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.
C. A. C., M. D.

Union, South Carolina.

I have suffered from headaches for the past ten years, due to constipation, but since using your Water I have been greatly benefited and scarcely have headaches at all. It has made me feel better in every respect and has given me a fine appetite, something I did not have before.
C. B. C.

Warrenton, Virginia.

It is doing my rheumatism so much good. My limbs are beginning to feel like new ones.
MRS. J. R. C.

Chancellor, Alabama.

I have been for many years affected with uric acid and kidney trouble, and the Mineral Water has helped me more than anything I have ever done for them, and therefore heartily recommend same to all who need a speedy relief.
W. F. M., M. D.

Florence, South Carolina.

I suffered with indigestion and kidney trouble and a year ago was stricken with acute articular rheumatism; was helpless for months, and since using your spring water I am walking without any crutch and improving daily. Indigestion much relieved. I wish I could write Shivar Spring Water in the sky so that the world could become acquainted with it. Mrs. T. K.

Atlanta, Georgia.

In the interest of the afflicted I cheerfully state, seeing your advertisement in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate. I decided to try Shivar Spring Water in the case of my daughter, who had been a sufferer from a malignant type of sciatica, and could get no permanent relief from medicine. After using the Water a few weeks she has almost entirely gotten relief from pain. In this case it has been a great blessing.
REV. M. L. U.

Fill Out This Coupon and Mail It Today

SHIVAR SPRINGS,
Box 3-L, SHELTON, S. C.

Gentlemen: I accept your guarantee offer and enclose herewith three dollars (check or money order) for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send and if I report no benefit you agree to refund the price of the water in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns which I agree to return within thirty days.

Name _____
Address _____
Express Office _____

PANSY PLANTS

Pure White, 30c doz., $2 per 100.
 Pure Black, 30c doz., $2 per 100.
 Royal Mixture, 40c doz., $2.75 per 100.
 Exhibition Mixture, 50c doz., $3.50 per 100.
 Plant out any time between now and May 1st, but the sooner the better. We specialize on the pansy and our mode of packing will carry it any distance in good condition. All Postpaid.

BLANDING'S DRUG STORE
 FOUNTAIN INN, S. C.

CHURCH WANTS LOAN

Would you help do great work? Is your money now bringing you only 3 or 4 per cent? Church in very heart of great city needs six months or longer, will pay legal rate in this state—10 per cent interest payable quarterly. For particulars write:

L. L. S., 1406 Park Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

THE SALISBURY MARBLE CO.

Salisbury, N. C.

Anything in...
CEMETERY WORK

Satisfaction our Motto

A card will bring full information.

JAMES M. McMICHAEL
 Church Architect
 Charlotte, N. C.

FOR GIFTS OF

Watches, Jewelry or Silverware

Write

JAMES ALLAN & CO.

THE JEWELERS

185 King St. Charleston, S. C.

67 years in business selling the best goods at the most reasonable prices

Memorandum packages sent upon receipt of satisfactory references

We prepay charges on all purchases

World's Best Roofing
 at Factory Prices

"Reo" Cluster Metal Shingles, V-Crimp, Corrugated, Standing Seam, Painted or Galvanized Roofing, Sidings, Wallboard, Paints, etc., direct to you at Rock-Bottom Factory Prices. Positively greatest offer ever made.

Edwards "Reo" Metal Shingles

cost less; outlast three ordinary roofs. No painting or repairs. Guaranteed rot, fire, rust, lightning proof. Send for samples and free roofing book.

Edwards Ready Made Buildings

Send for the Edwards Catalog of "Superior" Ready-Made Buildings, showing a complete line of houses, bungalows, barns, wood garages, poultry houses, etc., all at money-saving factory prices. These buildings are not merely "ready-cut" but actually ready built, and represent a wonderful money-saving.

Let Edwards Save You Money

Be Sure to State Which Books You Want

—Roofing and Free Samples; Ready-Made Buildings; or Metal Garages. Postal or letter brings one or more of them FREE.

Free Roofing Book
 Get our wonderfully low prices and free samples. We sell direct to you and save you all in-between roofing profits. Ask for Book No. 2373

LOW PRICED GARAGES
 Lowest prices on Ready-Made Fire-Proof Steel Garages. Set up any place. Send postal for Garage Book, showing styles.

THE EDWARDS MFG. CO.,
 2323-2373 Pike St. Cincinnati, O.

January 26th with the body of Prof. McCulloch and on Monday January 29th his body was taken to his boyhood church, Stony Creek and a short service was held. Rev. W. P. Robertson, the pastor and Dr. W. R. Potter, of the First Presbyterian Church of Burlington, conducting this service.

His brother, J. C. McCulloch and his three sisters, Mrs. Cheek, of Washington, D. C., Mrs. Pickett, of Greensboro, and Miss Mary McCulloch, of Stony Creek, and a sorrowing concourse of people bore testimony of the tender affection they bore to him. His brother, standing by and looking at his silent form said of him, "He was a Jonathan."

The fifteenth psalm was read as a fitting and appropriate tribute to the life of the deceased. His body was borne by men who were his boyhood friends to the last resting place near the church. The fresh mound was covered with flowers from friends in far away Maine and in his own community. Prof. McCulloch had hardly reached the meridian of life, and yet during this brief stay here, his days were filled with acts of loving kindness to the sick and suffering and his life was devoted to the service of the Master.

His lessons to the youths he came in contact with daily were well wrought and sound; his speech was seasoned with sympathy, his acts were prompted by love, principles were his motives and truth was his guide.

His death is a great loss to the college, to the department of English research, but more deeply the personal loss suffered by his friends and loved ones. Many, many hearts go out in sympathy to the wife and relatives of Prof. McCulloch.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
 When the day of life is fled;
 Then in Heaven with joy to greet thee,
 Where no farewell tears are shed.
 A daughter,
 Mrs. E. F. Teeter.

MRS. CELESTIA DILLON

A Tribute

The passing of Mrs. Celestia Dillon, of La Grange, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lillian Wooten, in Goldsboro, February 4th, at the age of 73 years, removes another daughter of the Confederacy, one who bore an illness of many years with a Christian heroism and faith that typified a consecrated life, a life worthy of her ancestry which dates from early Colonial days when James Staunton, of England, a scholar of distinction and accomplished linguist, offered his services to the British government as Indian interpreter. He went first to help the Virginia colonists and later to Massachusetts and rendered invaluable assistance in those days of anxiety and hardship. Her father was Washington Staunton, of Stauntonburg, Wilson County, N. C., whose mother, Sallie May, was a daughter of Major Benjamin May of Pitt County, a member of the first Provincial Congress at New Bern, also of the Halifax Congress and who brought the first cotton gin to North Carolina which is now in the State Museum of History. Her mother was Gatsy Truett Daniel, of the Daniel family, of North Carolina and Virginia and was one of those cultured Christian women of the old South, whose activities in her community helped to keep schools going and interest awakened in things that made life happier and brighter during the strenuous day after the Civil War.

Mrs. Dillon was the widow of the late Henry E. Dillon, who was a brave Confederate soldier and one of Lenoir County's foremost citizens. No home could have dispensed more generous and warm-hearted hospitality than theirs and, in the life of the community, they were eager and willing to aid in everything for its uplift.

The Presbyterian Church of La Grange owes its existence mainly to their untiring efforts united with those of Dr. and Mrs. H. M. McDonald. After the death of her devoted husband and Dr. McDonald, the two elders, in her zeal for the welfare of the church, Mrs. Dillon was affectionately called "the elder" by the younger members of the congregation. Gentle, cultured, of attractive personality, loyal to her convictions and to her friends, unostentatious in her many acts of helpfulness, she typified the highest ideals of soul from womanhood and, in her passing, those who were privileged to know her best will the more deeply sympathize with her surviving loved ones.

The funeral services were held in the La Grange Presbyterian Church and her body laid to rest in Fairview cemetery beside her husband and seven sons, a daughter, Mrs. J. M. Murchison being buried in Bunkee, Louisiana.

Surviving her are two sons, V. W. Dillon, of Winston-Salem, and R. B. Dillon, of Baltimore; a daughter, Mrs. Lillian D. Wooten, of Goldsboro, and 11 grandchildren.

"And they shall be mine saith the Lord of hosts when I make up my jewels."

Annie E. Wooten.

La Grange, N. C., Feb. 23, 1923.

"IN MEMORY OF MOTHER"
 MRS. ROSA JOHNSTON

Angels came and took our mother,
 Whom we loved and cherished dear;
 It was mother, yes dear mother,
 Can we help but shed a tear.

And our hearts are ever aching,
 Although we smile each day;
 For our thoughts are all with mother,
 Whom God has called away.

You have left us sad and lonely,
 Home will never be the same;
 Yet God's will and His will only,
 He who doeth all things well.

You suffered long, you murmured not,
 We watched you day by day;
 Until at last, with broken heart,
 We saw you pass away.

From this world of pain and sorrow
 To the land of peace and rest;
 God has taken you dear mother,
 Where you found eternal rest.

Lonely the home and sad the hour,
 Since you from us have gone;
 To a brighter place than ours,
 In heaven is now your own.

We shall never cease to miss you,
 Until on the golden shore;
 We shall meet and live for ever,
 Where life's partings come no more.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
 Peaceful in the grave so low;
 Thou no more will join our number
 Thou no more our songs shall know.

Dearest mother thou hast left us,
 But your memories are so sweet;
 Could I see you now my mother,
 Walking Heaven's golden streets.

Will our Church say to its 32 waiting candidates for the foreign service, "Stay at home?"

Will it say, "Seek service under some other Church?"

Will it say, "If you give your lives, I will give the money to send and support you?"

Only these three answers are possible. What is your gift saying?

THE WESTMINSTER TEACHERS' BUREAU

Serves Christian teachers by securing for them larger fields of service.

Also Christian men and women who desire positions in educational institutions as president, principal, secretary, business manager, financial agent, stenographer, nurse, matron, housekeeper, etc.

Also pastors and churches who need secretary, visitor, educational director, Sunday School worker, pastor's assistant, etc.—both men and women.

Also church and public schools, high schools, and colleges who need high grade officers, teachers and helpers.

Write today (enclosing stamp for reply) to

Henry H. Sweets, Manager
410 Urban Building, Louisville, Ky.

6% No matter where you live you can get six per cent on your money. Free from taxes, risk and worry. Amounts received from $50 to $5,000. Write for free literature.

SECURITY SAVINGS AND LOAN CO.
Assets - $1,011,288.30
F. W. DIXON, President - Birmingham, Ala.

SORES BOILS, CUTS and BURNS have been healed since 1820 with Gray's Ointment

Sold by all druggists. Write for sample to W. F. Gray & Co., 724 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn.

GARDEN BOUNTIFUL
Collection $1.00 PREPAID

1 pkt. Beans, Stringless, Green Pod
1 pkt. Beet, Detroit Dark Red
1 pkt. Beans, Williams' Stringless Wax
1 pkt. Carrot, Danver's Half Long
1 pkt. Corn, Country Gentleman
1 pkt. Cucumber, Feebles
1 pkt. Hanover Salad
1 pkt. Lettuce, Big Boston
1 pkt. Parsley, Curled
1 pkt. Peas, Early 1 pkt. Medium
1 pkt. Radish, Sealed Turnip, White Top
1 oz. Spinach, Savoy 1 pkt. Turnip, White Globe, 1 pkt. Tomato, Earliana.

Our "GARDEN GUIDE" will be included with above collection or mailed free on request.

WILLIAMS SEED CO.,
DEPT. M NORFOLK, VA.

RARE GLADIOLUS AND DAHLIA ROOTS

A mixture of gorgeous blooming rare Gladiolus, 100 for $3, or 30 for $1. Also a great surprise mixture, 100 for $2, or 40 for $1. Also choice collection of Dahlia Roots, 10 for $1. All postpaid.

R. J. GIBBINS
Mt Holly, New Jersey

Grippe

Physicians advise keeping the bowels open as a safeguard against Grippe or Influenza. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol
A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

Story and Incident

SISTER POWELL TO THE RESCUE

The young minister was losing his hold on his people, and what is more, he knew it. He could feel it in the atmosphere. He could see it in their faces. There was a chilliness over things that pervaded not only the pulpit, but extended to the homes outside.

He sat one morning in his study preparing, or trying to prepare, his next Sunday's sermon. The topic was "Life." He had already decided upon that, and there was no doubt that he would handle it with his usual skill. He would draw beautiful word pictures illustrating that subject—"Life." What a theme it should be!

He was lost in contemplation of it when his wife opened the door and reluctantly interrupted him. "Dear," she began, "I know it's wrong to disturb you, but Mrs. Powell wishes to speak to you for a moment."

"Tell her to come in," he replied. The next moment a little, plump, keen-eyed woman with snowy hair bustled into the room. "Good morning to you, Mr. Morris," she said as she took a chair.

The minister smiled back at her. There was always something very stimulating about the little woman with the keen eyes. "Good morning. How are you, Mrs. Powell?" he asked.

"I'm in the right spirit," she replied briskly.

The minister pushed aside a sheet of paper. "I don't know whether I am or not," he remarked slowly. "If I am, I'm not making a success of things." He looked at her forlornly. "Mrs. Powell," he said slowly, "I'm failing in my work. I am not reaching my congregation. The warm, genial current of friendliness that met me when I first began my ministry here is covered with a coating of ice. I wish I knew wherein lies the difficulty."

The little keen-eyed woman with the snowy hair looked at him meditatively. "I can tell you why."

"You can?" he cried. "Then please enlighten me. I am a young man, and I cannot make a failure of this ministry. It means too much."

The little keen-eyed woman nodded. "Well, then, listen to me." She paused. "What folks need more than fine sermons is a personal interest from their minister. Little Benny Judkins broke his arm last Wednesday. Have you inquired of his mother about him?"

The minister shook his head. "No, I haven't. I have been so busy preparing sermons."

The little keen-eyed woman regarded him gravely. "And there's Mrs. Barton. Her daughter Nora has developed tuberculosis. Have you sent a consoling word to her?"

"No, I have not," the minister acknowledged.

"And Mrs. Thomas, whose daughter died last week, leaving two children. Have you been to visit her?"

The minister blushed. "No," he finally said.

And then the little keen-eyed woman folded her hands and regarded him still gravely. "What your ministerial work lacks is the personal touch," she said gently. "Your sermons are wonderful, couldn't be better, but they need to be supplemented by an interest in and sympathy for your people. You are failing as a minister because you are not putting your finger on the heartstrings. You are walking serenely above them in the clouds of a theology of fine words, while they struggle under foot carrying heavy burdens. You'll have to come

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

There is danger ahead if you are not saving part of what you earn. The world is a hard place for those without money. There is no friend like "ready money" when sickness, or old age comes.

Be fair to yourself and family by taking Building and Loan shares. Shares cost twenty-five cents per week and usually mature in 333 weeks. Net you 6 1/4 per cent at maturity.

NEW SERIES OPENS MARCH FIRST

MECHANICS PERPETUAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION

J. H. Wearn, President. 207 N. Tryon St. CHARLOTTE, N. C. E. J. CAFFREY, Sec'y & Treas.

COLLECTION ENVELOPES

DUPLEX OR DOUBLE-END PRINTED-TO-ORDER ENVELOPES

Delivery Charges Not Included

White Envelopes—Size 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 in., 52 to set, printed with name of individual church, dated on both ends and packed in cartons. No order filled for less than a minimum charge of $4.00.

25 to 49 sets.....19	cents per set
50 to 109 sets.....17	cents per set
110 to 209 sets.....16 1/2	cents per set
210 to 309 sets.....16	cents per set
310 to 409 sets.....14 1/2	cents per set
410 or more sets....14	cents per set

A charge of $1.00 made for each change in copy. 20 per cent discount on cash orders.

MODERN CHURCH TREASURER'S RECORD

Treasurer's Record Book ruled to keep an account with each subscriber for a year (name written but once), showing contributions for local church and benevolences at a glance.

For Both the Duplex and Single Envelop System

200 names or less	$1.50
300 names	1.75
500 names	2.25
1,000 names	3.25
Subscription cards, per 10050
Information Blanks, per 100	1.00
Treasurer's Statements per 10050
Special Day Envelopes, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Building Fund, etc. per 10040

"STOCK-FORM" ENVELOPES

Many churches have hesitated to introduce the use of collection envelopes on account of the cost of supplies.

To meet the needs of congregations which must practice rigid economy we have worked out a "Stock Form," or undated envelope, described below, at twelve cents per set, delivery charges extra, in any quantity wanted. Packages containing only two envelopes per month at seven cents per set, delivery extra.

CHANGES IMPOSSIBLE

The STOCK FORM envelopes are printed from a fixed, unchangeable plate, so that no changes can be made. Each package of envelopes will bear a separate number, but we cannot furnish packages bearing just the numbers you suggest. To explain, we cannot furnish each lot of twenty-five packages bearing numbers 1 to 25. We may have to send your lot numbered from 476 to 500. On one end these envelopes show all the benevolent causes for which our Assembly, Synods and Presbyteries ask the churches to make offerings, and the other end provides for the expense of the local church. Being undated, the unused packages are good for next year, so there is no waste. Samples sent free on request.

ORDER FROM
PRESBYTERIAN COMMITTEE OF PUBLICATION
Richmond, Va., Texarkana, Ark.-Tex

CHICORA COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

The Presbyterian College of South Carolina

Standard College Courses
Large and Strong Faculty

Beautiful Grounds
Ideal Surroundings
Healthful Climate

For Catalogue and Information, address
Pres. S. C. Byrd, D. D. Columbia, S. C.

Aberdeen & Rockfish Railroad
BETWEEN ABERDEEN AND FAYETTEVILLE

EAST BOUND			DISTANCE FROM ABERDEEN	STATIONS	DISTANCE FROM FAYETTEVILLE	WEST BOUND
Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.				Pass.	Local Freight	Pass.
DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	DAILY EXCEPT SUNDAY	NO. 14	NO. 22	NO. 38	NO. 41	NO. 21	NO. 15
f 7:00 pm	s 7:30 am	f 9:00 am	0	Ly. Aberdeen, Ar.	45	s 6:50 pm	f 3:50 pm	8:30 am
f 7:19 pm	s 8:15 am	f 9:16 am	5	Ashley Heights	43	f 6:35 pm	f 3:20 pm	8:12 am
s 7:28 pm	s 8:36 am	f 9:26 am	9	Sanitorium	36	f 6:26 pm	f 3:05 pm	8:02 am
f 7:34 pm	f 8:39 am	f 9:30 am	10	Montrose	35	f 6:22 pm	f 3:00 pm	7:58 am
f 7:46 pm	f 8:51 am	f 9:38 am	13	Timberland	32	f 6:13 pm	f 2:45 pm	7:48 am
8:00 pm	s 9:55 am	f 9:53 am	19	Raeford	26	s 6:00 pm	s 2:25 pm	7:30 am
				Dundarrach	21	f 5:45 pm	f 1:25 pm
				Arabia	19	f 5:39 pm	f 1:15 pm
				Rockfish	15	s 5:25 pm	f 12:55 pm
				Hope Hills Jct.	14	f 5:22 pm	f 12:50 pm
				Fenix	11	f 5:13 pm	f 12:38 pm
				Clifton	9	s 5:08 pm	f 12:33 pm
				Skibo	5	f 5:00 pm	f 12:18 pm
				Owens	3	f 4:55 pm	f 12:11 pm
				Ar. Fayetteville Lv.	0	s 4:45 pm	f 12 noon

East and North bound trains have right of track over West and South bound trains of the same class.
All trains stop on flag at Lake field.

down out of the clouds of eloquence, Mr. Morris, and walk in the humble street that leads to the little house of sympathy. You'll find the door open; all you need to do is to walk right in. You'll find a good many of your church members there. Take them by the hand and lead them out of that little house where the sun of his love shines and radiates and glorifies. Never mind about the eloquence of the fine-sounding words. Preach love to them, and make them feel it."

She paused a moment and then said: "I came to ask you if you wouldn't go to see Mrs. Turner. Her husband died suddenly in California early this morning, and she's just gotten the word. It came to me that a word of prayer from her minister would not come amiss."

The minister arose and pushed back the leaves of the sermon he had begun to write on "Life." He turned to the little keen-eyed woman regarding him. "Thank you," he said gently. "I intended to preach a sermon on 'Life' but I find that, after all, I know very little about it. I will write another one after I have come back from Mrs. Turner's, after I have visited Benny Judkins, and sympathized with Mrs. Barton and all the others." He grasped the hand of the little keen-eyed woman with the snowy hair. "I believe," he said, with a sunny smile, "that you and I between us can melt that frozen current yet."—Christian Standard.

NORFOLK SOUTHERN RAILROAD Announces Reduced Fares to Durham, N. C. Account

Woman's Missionary Union, Auxiliary to Baptist States Convention of North Carolina, March 17th-28th. Tickets for the going journey sold March 23d-29th, inclusive, certificates validated March 29th, honored April 2, 1923.

J. F. DALTON
General Passenger Agent
Norfolk, Va.

Sparkles

Why It Took Time

They were looking down into the depths of the Grand Canon.

"Do you know," asked the guide, "that it took millions and millions of years for this great abyss to be carved out?"

"Well, well!" ejaculated the traveler. "I never knew this was a government job."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Mirandy—Thet must be some o' that Mardi Gras they hev down here every year.

His Wife—Who was this Joan of Arc that saved France?

Mr. Nositall—You got them characters mixed up. It was Noah of Ark. Jonah's the man that swallowed the whale.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

During a scarcity of eggs a grocer out west put out this sign in front of his store: "We want eggs, and we want them bad." We got them.—Ex

Hiram (on his first visit to the South)—What's that stringy stuff hanging on them there limbs?

"I can't think what's the matter with my watch," said a man. "Maybe it needs cleaning."

"Oh, no, daddy!" objected four-year-old Henry. "Cause baby and I had it in the bathroom washing it yesterday."—The American Legion Weekly.

Two colored men came to the outskirts of a crowd where a politician was making a campaign speech. After listening a while, one turned to his companion and asked, "Who am dat man, Sam?"

"Ah doan't know what his name is," Sam replied, "but he certainly do recommen' hisself most highly."—Select-ed.

Printing--

Send us your orders. We can serve you. Anything from a visiting card up.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING CO.
Printers - Rulers - Binders
GARLAND COURT Phone 643 CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Buy From the Manufacturer

There is one good and sufficient reason why you should buy your Piano from the manufacturer—DIRECT RESPONSIBILITY.

STIEFF PRODUCTS
Stieff Pianos and Players
Shaw Pianos and Players
Bennett-Bretz Pianos and Players
Davies & Sons Pianos and Players
Leslie Bros. Pianos and Players

Chas. M. Stieff, Inc.,
Charlotte, N. C.

Please send catalogue and prices of Pianos.
Name _____
Address _____

CHAS. M. STIEFF, INC., Charlotte, N. C.

ABLE, INTERESTING, GODLY MEN

Fill Charlotte pulpits. They are our Universities. They are Chapel Hill, Davidson College, Trinity, Wake Forest, A. and E., brought to our door. Literature, forceful speech, information, entertainment are their free gifts, and these are the least of their attainments. Hear them, then, on Monday morn, read the simple truths of these ads, and act on them.

THE MUTUAL B. AND L.

Has no equal, and the October series still awaits you.

JNO. R. PHARR, Pres.

E. L. KEESLER, Sec. & Treas.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Opportunity Never Seeks

The man or woman without money. That is why you should save and steadily build up an account in a strong bank where the money will be ready for you when the right opportunity comes along. Your account will be welcome here.

"National Bank Safety for Savings"

Charlotte National Bank
Resources Over $5,000,000.00

BELK BROS. CO.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Correct in every detail—appealingly pretty—easy to make because of the Special Guide for Cutting and Construction.

Pictorial Review
Patterns for July

20c to 35c
None Higher

WE HANDLE

HOME JOURNAL PATTERNS
PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS

We carry the most extensive Stock probably in the State. Send us your Mail Orders on Patterns.

Some of the things you probably can't get else where as conveniently:—Fleishers Wool Yarns, in almost any Shade and Kind

All kinds of Knitting Threads and Crotchet in Silks or Cotton.

Dress 1131, 35 cents

WARNER'S CORSETS—To fit any form—Back or Front Lace.

KAYSER'S ITALIAN SILK LINGERIE—

KAYSER'S SILK HOSE—In all the New Colors and styles: Gordon-Van Raalte-Lehigh Merrell & Burson Hosiery: $1.50 to $4.95 All Silk.

GLOVES IN LONGS AND SHORTS—In all the New Leading Shades—in Kids—Chamoisettes & Silks—Niagara made and Kayser's: 98c to $2.95

NEW SUMMER SWEATERS

IN FIBRE SILK—Mohairs and Fine Wool.
IN THE SLIP—Over and Tuxedo Styles from $1.95 to $12.50

A Home Journal Pattern

In SIZES
14 - 16 - 18
years

Voile and Lace
are used in making model
shown.

"Sellers Special"—The last word in Kitchen Cabinet Construction and conveniences. Finished in white enamel and golden oak. This cabinet is built from the housekeeper's own specifications. Don't be satisfied with a substitute.

W. T. McCoy & CO.
211 South Tryon St. Charlotte, N. C.

PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD

A Religious Newspaper for the Family

Representing the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

J. R. Bridges, D.D., Charlotte, N. C., Editor

Rev. R. C. Reed, D.D., Columbia, S. C., Editor

LXIV

CHARLOTTE, N. C., MARCH 14, 1923

No. 11

PRESBYTERIAN PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM

"A Whole Program For the Whole Church"

$4,750,000 FOR BENEVOLENCES

The Every Member Canvass Comes March 18th
ARE YOU PREPARING?

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE, $3.00 PER YEAR, IN ADVANCE
REV. W. L. BOGGS, Circulation Manager

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY AT CHARLOTTE, N. C.
PRESBYTERIAN STANDARD PUBLISHING COMPANY,
A. M. GRAY, Treasurer.

ESTABLISHED JANUARY 1, 1858.

Carried at the Post Office at Charlotte, N. C., as second class matter

Religious Newspaper for the Family, Devoted to the Interest of Christ's Kingdom as Represented by the Southern Presbyterian Church.

Press all communications, and make all checks payable, to the company, and not to individuals.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The label on the paper gives the date to which subscription is valid. When change of address is desired, give the old and new address. When the date of the label is behind the date of this issue, the label is a reminder that the subscription is past due. When the date of the label is in advance of the date of this issue it is a receipt for the last subscription.

In accordance with the wishes of our patrons, the subscription is discontinued only upon the written request of the subscriber. Arrearages must be settled in full at the same time, at the rate of three dollars a year. A charge is made for the insertion of marriage and obituary notices of fifty words or less. For all over fifty words remit the rate of one cent a word. Correspondents are requested to give the post office address of married couples when notices are sent.

News items should be in our hands by Monday morning in order to insure their publication in the current issue.

CHANGE OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advertisers who want their advertisements changed or want to insert new advertisements will please bring their copy to the office by Saturday. It is impossible for us to insert new advertisements or make changes for the current week at a date. Advertising rates furnished on application. The size and character of this paper indicate the size and character of its circulation. For reputable advertising there is no better medium for North and South Carolina and the most prosperous section of the South.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

EDITORIAL—
The Every Member Canvass	1
Progress Needed Along Another Line	1
Princeton	1
Peens College—Its Future	2
The Homely Men	2
For Young Men	2
CONTRIBUTED—
Money Adequate for the Task—By Rev. W. Calliaferro Thompson	3, 10
The Old Tent Church and Cemetery—By Rev. W. Hampton Eubank	4
The Possessions and the Supreme Motive of Stewardship—By Rev. Lynn Hough, D.D.	5
Individual or Family Subscriptions	5
The Jacksonville Laymen's Convention—By Rev. R. H. McCaslin, D.D.	5
Dormitory for Crossnore—By Mrs. Mary Martin Sloop	12
Non-Millennialist Book—By Rev. C. O'N. Martindale	12
DEPARTMENTS—
Evangelical	2
Woman's Auxiliary	6
Sunday School—By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.	7
Christian Endeavor—By Rev. J. G. Garth	7
Church News	8, 9, 10
News of the Week	10
Children	12
Advertisements, Etc.	12, 16

EDITORIAL

THE EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

On March 18th will begin the "Every Member Canvass," which has become a part of the working machinery of every well-regulated church.

You will find here and there certain ministers who do not use it, because they have never tried it, yet each year that class is becoming "smaller by degrees and beautifully less."

In our issue of February 28th there were letters from every section of the Church, from Maryland to Texas, from men who had given the plan a fair trial. These opinions were not founded upon theory, but upon practice, and their almost universal testimony was that they could not run their work now upon any other plan.

The Stewardship Committee has done most excellent work in preparing the churches for this canvass, and, to the credit of the churches it must be said, that the pastors have responded in a most loyal manner.

Training classes of wide-awake young men have met for a week, every evening, at which time they have in a most business-like way and thorough manner considered every objection and prepared an answer for every possible excuse.

Next Sunday, March 18th, is the zero-hour, at which time, just after the morning service, these trained men will go over the top.

We bespeak for them a cordial welcome and a liberal response on the part of our people, who have grown more in the grace of giving these past few years, than the members of any denomination in the South.

If your ears are rightly attuned, you will hear the voice of our Leader, as in the days of old, saying, "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward."

PROGRESS NEEDED ALONG ANOTHER LINE

Ministers from across the sea who have been studying the methods of the Southern Church, all seem impressed by our great progress in raising money for our work. Compared with other churches we have done a great work, and we have reason to be proud of it.

Since the Progressive Program was instituted we have increased our gifts to the benevolent causes from four million to nearly twelve million dollars a year. The severest critic of the Church can certainly find no fault with this work.

These visitors, however, have found one defect to which they point—a defect that is very serious, which if not remedied, will tell in the end upon every line of work. They call attention to the fact that we are laying our stress upon raising money, but do not seem to be doing much towards bringing souls to Christ.

It seems that from an increase of 42 per cent on profession of faith we have come down to 14 per cent increase. If this decrease continues, we shall be forced to sing another song, which will not be one of triumph. We need to take care lest we develop in a one-sided way. We should push every side of the program, if we are to have a symmetrical church.

PRINCETON

TO spend a Sunday in Princeton is a rare privilege to one who is familiar with the history and traditions of the place. We are thinking especially of the Theological Seminary of Princeton. There was a time when that was the only Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian Church. The question was warmly debated whether the Church should not content itself permanently with this one seminary. It was contended by the one party that it would be the part of wisdom for the Church to concentrate all of its energies and resources in building up one institution. It could thus have the best equipment in buildings, in faculty, and in library. It could expend its equipment as the future growth of the Church demanded and would always be equal to the needs of the Church. A great central seminary, ministering to the whole Church, would serve as a bond of union. All the preachers nourished by the same Alma Mater would not only cherish the same love and loyalty for the mother, but being trained in the same doctrinal beliefs would the more surely preserve the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace. There is much force in such considerations, and if at that early period the facilities for travel had been what they are now, possibly the Church would have planted but the one seminary. It is interesting to note that Princeton still uses its original title, The Presbyterian Theological Seminary, as if it were indeed the only one.

What a notable succession of teachers it has had in its chair of theology. Dr. Archibald Alexander was the first, and perhaps he will always stand first for clearness of vision and poise of judgment. We have ever thought of him as the wisest and safest leader that God has given to the American Church. Doubtless some of the veneration felt for him is due to the glory reflected back on him by the two illustrious sons who contributed much to Princeton's rich inheritance. His successor was Dr. Charles Hodge, and one must hesitate to give him second place in any list of worthies. His son, Archibald Alexander Hodge, who followed him, is credited with even greater brilliancy and vigor of intellect, and it is supposed that had an equal span of life been granted him, his fame would have surpassed even that of his father. It might have been thought impossible to find a worthy successor to three such world-renowned teachers. But who that knows what manner of man Benjamin Breckenridge Warfield was will withhold from him this mead of praise? In breadth and variety of scholarship, in mastery of the whole field of theological literature, in power of analysis and lucidity of statement, in richness of Christian experience and in loveliness of Christian character, he belonged unto the list of the "mighty men," and attained unto the rank of the "first three."

From first to last, these men stood in the "old paths." Dr. Hodge boasted that Princeton had not in the course of its whole history "advanced a new idea." "No man having drunk old wine straightway desireth new, for he saith the old is better." Alas, there be many in our day who know little or nothing of the old wine, and straightway they prefer grape juice. This is the only plausible explanation of the sad fact that many who occupy chief seats in the synagogue boastfully claim that their new progressive theology, based on a rationalistic and naturalistic interpretation of the Bible is superior to the old, tried and tested system of truth that subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness and sustained the courage of innumerable martyrs.

It was a rare experience to stand in the pulpit of the seminary chapel, a spot hallowed by the memory of these most illustrious dead. In a recess back of the pulpit are three marble tablets bearing the names of Archibald Alexander, Samuel Miller and Charles Hodge. From such a pulpit one would not dare to utter a sentiment out of harmony with the old evangelical doctrines on which these venerated saints feasted their souls and grew ripe for glory. It is cause for gratitude that one does not have to utter such a sentiment to meet the demands and please the taste of the present audience. Old-fashioned Calvinistic orthodoxy was not buried in the graves of the great teachers who have passed on. Princeton's present faculty, while fully abreast of the newest knowledge of the day, are to a man loyal to the conservatism of the past. They are not "tossed about with every wind of doctrine by the sleight of men." The old-time religion that was "good enough for Paul and Silas" is good enough for them. We doubt if any seminary in our country has men more competent to deal with questions of Biblical criticism than the men of Princeton who occupy the chairs of Old and New Testament Literature. They are fighting in the first line trenches and have not been forced to yield one strategic point to those who assault the integrity of our Bible.

The Southern Presbyterian Church claims a share in the splendid history that Princeton Seminary has made. Alexander and Warfield were from the South, and there have never been wanting Southern men in the faculty and in the student body. We not only claim a share in Princeton's past, but we rejoice in Princeton's present and pray for Princeton's future. If the teaching at Princeton were but typical of the teaching in all the seminaries of the Northern Church, there would be little opposition to organic union.

QUEENS COLLEGE—ITS FUTURE

Queens College under different names has had a continuous existence since 1857, and in that time, from her walls there have gone forth many fine women whose influence has tended to make this State famous for its godly homes. Her history has been one of heroic struggles, and at times her life was nearly gone. Since 1917 her prospects have brightened, and her debt of $180,000 that was crushing out her life, has been lifted, and now she is paying her own way from her receipts, which is remarkable in these days.

Her great value to our people has always been as a training school for teachers, so that many a poor man has denied himself in order to make his daughter self-supporting by means of a college training.

Under the ruling of our State Board of Education, graduates from a standard college get $33.33 per month more than one from a non-standard college. This ruling places Queens at a disadvantage, because she is not a standard college, owing to several facts, one of which is not having an endowment.

In the Presbyterian Church, South, there is not one standard college for women under the control of the Church. Some may mention Agnes Scott as an exception to this statement, but while Agnes Scott is a standard college, it is not under the control of any church court.

If Queens is to get an endowment, it must be from the people of Mecklenburg Presbytery, because other Presbyteries have their own schools.

Dr. W. H. Frazer, the president of Queens, is doing a wonderful work, in the face of discouragements that would appall an ordinary man. Our people should rally about him, and show in a practical manner that they appreciate what he has done for the college, and also for the city.

Leaving out of view the money value of the college to this community, let us try to measure its value in the way of educated women and the moral uplift that always accompanies an educated woman coming from a Christian college.

THE HOMELY HEN

This may seem a subject out of place in a religious paper, yet it is based upon Paul's warning to Timothy where he says in so many words that if anyone does not provide for his own house he is worse than an infidel.

The homely hen is woman's best assistant in feeding her flock, so for this reason we turn from Dr. Grant and his foolish attempt to stand in the limelight, and will try to direct attention of the farm women to a book that stands at the head of its class.

The title is "Popular Poultry Pointers," a most attractive alliteration that is bound to be remembered when these remarks are forgotten. It is published by the MacMillan Company, New York, and sells for the price of $2.25, being worth every cent of that amount unless our former knowledge of poultry has gone into innocuous desuetude.

Spring will soon be here, and as "in the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love" so the thought of us who have reached more mature age, turn to thoughts of the spring flowers, the music of the cackling hen, and the soft lusciousness of the fresh egg.

Here we have just the information a beginner needs—what breed of chickens are the best for the home, what are the best layers, and how to build a henhouse, and how to manage an incubator.

We once posed as an expert in the chicken line, but we have never before seen as much useful chicken lore given in as small space and expressed in as clear language.

Those who have spent time and money in an attempt to run an incubator, only at the end to see

FAITH AND SIGHT

We wept—'twas nature wept, but Faith
Can pierce beyond the gloom of death,
And in yon world, so fair and bright,
Behold thee in refulgent light.
We miss thee here, yet Faith would rather Know thou art with thy Heavenly Father.

Nature sees the body dead,
Faith beholds the spirit fled;
Nature stops at Jordan's tide,
Faith beholds the other side;
That but hears farewells and sighs,
This thy welcome in the skies;
Nature mourns a cruel blow,
Faith assures it is not so;
Nature never sees thee more,
Faith but sees thee gone before;
Nature tells a dismal story,
Faith has visions full of glory;
Nature views the change with sadness,
Faith contemplates it with gladness;
Nature murmurs—Faith gives meekness,
"Strength is perfected in weakness;"
Nature writhes and hates the rod,
Faith looks up and blesses God;
Sense looks downward—Faith above,
That sees harshness—this sees love.
Oh, let Faith victorious be—
Let it reign triumphantly.

But thou art gone! Not lost, but flown,
Shall I then ask thee back, my own?
Back—and leave thy spirit's brightness?
Back—and leave thy robes of whiteness?
Back—and leave thine angel mould?
Back—and leave those streets of gold?
Back—and leave the lamb who feeds thee?
Back—from founts to which He leads thee?
Back—and leave thy Heavenly Father?
Back—to earth and sin? Nay, rather
Would I walk in solitude!
I would not ask thee if I could,
But patient wait the high decree,
That calls my spirit home to thee.

the little chicks pine away and die from no apparent cause, will find here the causes, the dangers that lurk on every side. The book consists of 207 pages, well bound and contents well classified.

Now that the boll weevil is cutting down the farmers' income, let their wives turn to poultry farming, and unless we have lost prophetic instinct, they will find that eggs and their profit will fill up the vacuum in the income caused by the boll weevil and high taxes.

OUR YOUNG MEN

Our Louisville contemporary, The Christian Observer, proposes to perpetuate the fame of veteran preachers in the persons of Rev. J. C. Tate, D.D., and J. P. McMillan, D.D., both living in Tennessee. They are named as being remarkable examples of longevity in the ministry.

Without intending, in the least, to pluck a single laurel from their brow, we would call the attention of the Church to two other young old men.

Dr. H. G. Hill, of Maxton, N. C., still active in the ministry, will be 92 years old in November and Dr. E. H. Harding, of Davidson, N. C., will be 91 years old November 3rd.

Dr. Tate we have never known except by reputation, but Dr. McMillan is an old friend of many years' standing. We fellowship with him at Mt. Treat, and at the Charleston, W. Va., Assembly we enjoyed his racy speeches, although we never agreed with him on the union of the two churches.

Dr. Harding we have known for years, both as a preacher and as a writer, and we have always admired his literary gifts, especially when dealing with the Latin poets. While physically he is able to run a foot-race with the other three or four genarians, he can find more beauty in the class than they have ever dreamed of in all their philosophy.

Dr. Hill takes the blue ribbon when age is considered. He will be 92 years old this fall, yet is still active in mind and body. He preaches twice each Sunday, and drives 10 miles to fill an appointment. He never misses the meeting of a committee of which he is a member, and at last meeting of the Trustees of the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, he was presented 50 gold dollars as a recognition of being present every meeting for 50 years.

As far as we can learn, dying is the last thing that he expects to do.

Since the above was written, Dr. Harding has been called to his reward. The removal to a better world of this sweet-spirited man of God leaves this world the poorer, and makes heaven richer.

Devotional

A RETURN FOR EACH SORROW

Sorrow has a salutary effect. For each misfortune, are repaid in one guise or another.

Over in France in one of the villages of the Vosges there is a beautiful story told concerning the wondrous rose window which rises so stately above the entrance of the local cathedral.

Many years ago there had been another window at the west entrance, a window which was the pride of the town, for tourists came from far to view it. One day a fearful storm arose which hurled its fury against unprotected panes, and the far-famed window crashed into a thousand pieces on the floor beneath.

The next day the villagers came and sadly gathered pieces of glass and put them away in a box. Gloom settled upon the town. The object of their pride and joy was gone.

Now it happened that not long after this a stranger arrived in the village and inquired about the fan window. When told of its destruction, he requested to see the broken pieces. They were presented to him and upon a slight offer they were purchased by him and taken away.

A year or so went by and there was still a bleakness in the gray wall above the west entrance. One day word came from a world-famous artist in Paris to the directors of the cathedral in the form of an invitation to him at his studio in Paris. Greatly honored, they hastened to the metropolis and were cordially received by the artist.

Taking them into a nearby chamber and throwing a large curtain aside, the artist disclosed to his visitors a wondrous rose window which thrilled their very souls. "See, it is yours," he said. "I made it from the broken pieces of your shattered window. Take it back with you and fill up the great circle above the west tranche of your cathedral."

The villagers were entranced with their new window. Its fame spread through all of France, for it was more beautiful than the old.

So it is, dear friends, that our hopes and ambitions are often crushed by the storms of life. Loved ones are taken from us. Cherished plans are frustrated. Accident and life bruise us, and we seem to be shattered hopelessly beyond repair. Ah! In such an hour there is a God. An Artist who can take our shattered lives and fashion them anew into a far more glorious image than we ever knew before. It is only through the white-hot caldron that dross is removed and the gold is refined. God is forming His children to the image of His Son, who learned obedience through the things that He suffered. We, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of Grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.—Rev. Willis Bergen.

POWER ADEQUATE FOR THE TASK

Matt. 28:18-20; Mark 16:15; Luke 24:46-48; Acts 1:8.

By Rev. W. Taliaferro Thompson

(This was one of the inspiring addresses delivered at the Charlotte Layman's Convention. We are grateful to Dr. Thompson for allowing us to publish it.—Ed.)

I. Christ confronts His disciples with an immeasurable task, when He says to them, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

1. This is seen when we consider where they are to go. They are to "Go into all the world"—class lines were to be crossed, racial differences were to be overcome, natural barriers were to be surmounted—no man was so remote, or too humble to be ignored. In the Epistle of the London Yearly Meeting of Friends in 1917 these great words occur, which might well express the mind of Christ here, "Love knows no frontiers."

Perhaps the thing that perplexed them most was not the distance they were to go; but the place where they were to start—"Beginning at Jerusalem." This was harder to do than to go to the very ends of the earth. They are Galileans, they are unlearned men, they have no official position in the Jewish Church, they are laymen: how hard it is for them to face the pride, the self-sufficiency, the scholarship of the leaders at the ecclesiastical center of the race. They could go to those in Asia Minor, in Italy, in Egypt, and be looked up to, honored as coming from the home land, where great religious power seemed to reside. An expert is a very ordinary man a long way from home; but at home! and particularly when he is in touch with those who are in the seats of the mighty, who are specialists in his line—how strangely he shrivels there! Yet if they had not had courage to begin at Jerusalem, could they have gone to the ends of the earth? And, if they hadn't had courage enough to go to the ends of the earth, could they have made any headway at home!

Is our task different, have the centuries narrowed the meaning of Christ's command, or shifted the place of beginning for us? There are men here who are saying, if I were only younger, I should like to go to Africa. How I wish I had heard the call earlier—there is a glamour about the far frontier that makes it fascinating. Perhaps He is saying to you, "Begin at Jerusalem—start in your office, your home, your town, with that educated friend," dare you start there—what a spectacle you would make at the ends of the earth!

2. Perhaps the real difficulty of the task was seen not as they were told where they were to go; but as they heard what they were to do.

They are to "Preach the Gospel." What is the Gospel? Not to elaborate too much, the Gospel to them was just Christ and what they knew of Him—His life, His death, His resurrection.

To those in sin and loving it they are to say, repent. Here is the spotless life of the Holy One of God, you should live like this. As John went into Herod's palace and said to him of his adulterous wife, "It is not lawful for you to have her," so they are to go among the high and the lowly and say as they compare them with Christ, "It is not lawful for you to do this, and this." They face all the desires of man's evil heart, the ingrained habits of his life—slavery, war, immoralities, the arena's games, and in the radiance that streams from Christ's person unhesitatingly condemn them. To the Roman they say "Repent."

To those living a moral life and complacent in it, they are to say this is nothing in God's sight, all your efforts at righteousness are vain, and leave you sinful and under His wrath. But here is the death of Christ, trust in it. To men like Nicodemus and Paul, before the law blameless, they are to cry, "Ye must be born again, behold the Lamb of God." To the Jew, they say, "Believe, look on Him whom you have pierced."

To the Greek philosophers who drew back horrified and hopeless before the sin of the world, knowing that their ethical theories were impotent, and to the poor wretches caught in sin's soiling stream, helpless in its mighty current—they are to say, "There is a way of escape, you can know the power of His resurrection."

What a strange group of words on uncultured tongues—repent, believe, live, and all as they unveil Christ. To the Romans, irritation; to the Jews, a stumbling block; to the Greeks, a silly story!

We have the same Gospel. The centuries have not changed it in any particular.

We are to go to men immersed in business, given up to pleasure, consumed with prejudice, surrendered to vice, and say, "Your life as measured by that of Christ is a failure, you are wrong, repent. Follow Him who said, 'The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister,' 'love your enemies,' 'the pure in heart shall see God'"—How maddening this!

We are to go to men, successful, satisfied, moral, philosophic in their attitude toward life, "health minded,"

Contributed

as William Thames would say, with no sense of sin, looking down upon human junk in the alleys with scorn, or in philanthropic endeavor trying to refashion their lives—"You are lost, trust the Cross." How foolish this!

We are to go to men sunk in sin, who have struggled against its titanic strength in vain, who have long ago given way to despair, and say, "There is hope, there is deliverance, there is power in His resurrection. In Christ you can be made alive." How absurd this!

We are to go to men holding the age-old religions, and say to them: "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him." "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." How impertinent this!

They tell me that wherever you go in the Orient you find Standard oil cans, and boast is made of the energy and ingenuity of the great capitalists and the salesmen who make this possible. But what child's play is their work when compared with that committed to us. We are to deal with all the problems—the most personal problems—of all men, with all of the areas of human life, its height, its depth, its length, its breadth; and our instrument is, our remedy, our solvent, just Jesus Christ—His life, His death, His resurrection.

What a task this is with which He challenges His disciples, the audacity of it is breath-taking. Is that all He says to the group about Him?

II. An immeasurable task—but adequate power.

"All power is given unto Me both in heaven and in earth." All power—what a spacious word All is; there are no boundaries to it, it stretches out above the stars, and fling our thought as far as we can, it is still beyond! No matter how immense the task, it is circumscribed by that word. Is there power enough for this? and for this? and for this, too? Why ask, in the face of that encompassing word "All"?

"All power"—now we are ready to appreciate and appropriate in Pascal's splendid phrase, "I think magnificently of God." Dr. McGregor, of Edinburgh, once said "God is better than our best thought of Him." Think as largely as you can of the power of Christ—He is mightier still!

As a matter of fact the kind of problems we have to meet show the sufficiency of His power. They are human problems, and find their focus in the individual, and in his heart and will, or, if you please, his character. However complex the problems may appear, social, political, industrial, in the last analysis you meet the individual, and his moral quality. One of our Richmond working girls went to Bryn Mawr summer before last to the special school for the employed. After she had been back for awhile, a social worker asked her, "How do you feel now about the whole industrial question. Do you believe in the open or the closed shop?" She answered, "It isn't so much a question of organization, as it is of the character of the man you work for." Now if there was anything Christ could do it was to deal with individuals in a transforming way.

Yes, there is adequate power. And that power is not locked up in the Christ of the first century, who walked the dusty highways of Palestine.

III. It is available to us.

We have His word, and as Livingstone says, as he risked his life on it, "It is the word of a most perfect Christian Gentleman, who cannot lie." "Lo, I am with you always." Who is this "I"? Why the same "I" that said, "All power is given unto Me." The power available to us is not a vague, intangible essence or force; but a living, present Christ. Not any energy, but a Friend. All power, resident in Christ, is here with us. Paul, the greatest of all missionaries, except his Master, explains all that he is and does in the simple words, "Christ liveth in me." And, today, after nineteen hundred years, Dr. Grenfell, the apostle of Jesus Christ to Labrador, a man honored by all who know him, says, with equal simplicity, "There is no life but the life that comes from Him." The secret of power is securing His presence.

He is with us today, all power is His—What do you need?

(a) Courage?

To do, to go, to speak that word you have been trying to say to an intimate friend?

He gave the apostles courage. As they spoke so plainly to the Sanhedrin, these startled men took note of them that they had been with Jesus, seeing in them a fearlessness which they lacked when Jesus was on earth, but which they now had through fellowship with the risen, ascended Christ.

It has ever been thus. Friend and foe alike warned F. W. Robertson, that great English preacher, to be more careful in his statements. When he continued to speak from the shoulder, they were more specific in their warning. "If you aren't more considerate, you may lose your pulpit." "I don't care," he replied. "Then you may suffer physical hurt." "I don't care." "Do you know what happened to don't care?" "Yes, He was crucified on Calvary." The Christ who braved the cross, dwelling in His servant, gave him courage to do his duty. So it will ever be.

(b) Knowledge?

You want to know the truth, and to be able to say the right word to that man you desire to help. Wisdom and utterance were given Peter, and Paul, and Philip—you have only to read Acts to see. Is He not the same today as yesterday? Is He not still the Truth? Does He not still know what is in men's hearts?

(c) Life?

You know that it is the holy Christian who is the awful weapon in the hands of God for the converting of men. You have heard of that winsome man of whom McCheyne writes, "I never saw him cross the moor without being the better for it," and you yearn for the power to live a conquering, attractive life. Can He not do this for you? He did it for this man, and how truly for McCheyne himself; He did it for Augustine the profligate, Assisi the libertine, Whitefield the bartender—is His power exhausted by their demand upon it? Does He not present as you look on Him the life you want to be yours; does He not offer you not simply a cold ideal embodied in a revered book, but the warm, transforming fellowship of a holy friend—and even more, His own presence in your heart as your inner resource of enlightenment and strength. What more could you ask?

(d) Ability to influence others?

If we have courage, and knowledge and holiness, can we fail to lift those about us toward Him, whether we are in Carolina or China. We may not know we are doing it; but isn't it true, as Gladstone said, that "One example is worth a thousand arguments," so if the life is in us it must arrest and draw our friends. We may not speak what we think is the word of wisdom, but often we find that His thought is not as our thought, and long afterward know that His thought is higher than ours. Once on an automobile ride with a friend whom I was anxious to reach for Him, and whom I was expecting to reach by rather an elaborate argument I had prepared, I was able to say only, "I am sorry," as he told me that I wasn't a Christian. I felt I ought to say more, that I was a coward and betrayed my Lord if I kept silent; but my lips were shut. Reaching home, I cried out my distress, and confessed my sin before Him. After weeks, my friend wrote to me to say that before going to bed the night of our ride, he was stopped by the thought that I was sorry for him. He began to think, and knelt down and prayed for the first time in years. The light had come to him more and more as the days passed, and he had joyously accepted Christ. Is His hand shortened who added thousands to the Church during those first years!

"Thy touch has still its ancient power,
No word from Thee shall fruitless fall."

(e) Is it power to give, we seek?

The best men we have at the seminary, and the finest of our Training School girls are waiting to go, and those on the field are under breaking pressure. It is money that we seem to need. He has power to enable us to do even that. Long ago as He sat over against the treasury, He saw a woman cast in her very living, all that she had. While I was in Mobile two ladies came into my study one morning. The younger was a stranger to me, and seemed disturbed. She told me, her friend supplementing her story where she broke down, that that day was the anniversary of the death of her only child, a boy, that she had thought of buying some flowers and putting them on his grave; but that the flowers would be expensive, and she would have to hire a car to take her to the cemetery, which was in the country; so she decided that she would bring the money to me to use for some little motherless boy whom I might know. By that time her trembling fingers had opened her purse and she laid a ten dollar bill in my hand. That day He sat over against the treasury and again saw another poor woman cast in of her living, a woman who had had the shadow of the cross fall athwart her pocketbook. Yea, that morning there dwelt in that woman Him who though He was rich for our sake became poor that we through His poverty might become rich. Was all of His power drained off in influencing her?

(f) What do you need? From Him you can secure power for anything. The bank has limitless reserves, and is filled with coin of every realm.

It is not folly to make Christ the center of our message and of our hope. He can solve every problem, heal every wound, forgive any sin, comfort any grief, conquer any habit, transform any life. W. E. Orchard, that brilliant London preacher, in his book, "The Necessity of" (Continued on page 10)

POPLAR TENT CHURCH AND CEMETERY AND TOMB OF REV. HEZEKIAH JAMES
BALCH, AUTHOR OF THE MECKLEN-BURG DECLARATION OF INDEPEN-DENCE

May 20, 1775

By Rev. W. Hampton Eubank

No one, unless his soul be dead to the nobler things of life, can walk among the tombs of the heroes of the American Revolution without feeling a thrill of emotion, a feeling that he is treading upon holy ground, ground made sacred by the dust of those whose mighty deeds and great sacrifices in the cause of civil and religious liberty entitle them to everlasting remembrance and their names to be revered as long as the spirit of liberty shall live in the hearts of men.

It is with such a feeling that one visits the historic old church and cemetery of Poplar Tent—a spot rich in history that should be dear to every true lover of liberty but especially to every North Carolinian whose ancestors lived on North Carolina soil during the trying days of the Revolutionary war.

Poplar Tent Church

Poplar Tent, near the city of Concord, is one of the oldest churches in the state. It was organized in the year 1764. Its first regular pastor was Rev. Hezekiah James Balch, who was licensed by the Presbytery of Donegal in the year 1766, and ordained by the same Presbytery in 1769. In the year of his ordination he was installed as pastor of Poplar Tent and Rocky River Churches and continued in the same pastorate until his death in the early part of 1776. He was buried in the center of Poplar Tent cemetery after the inclosure had been carefully measured in order that the center might be accurately located. But his grave is not now in the center, as the cemetery has been enlarged.

Mr. Balch was a man of considerable ability and force of character, as subsequent events demonstrated. He was a leading spirit in the Mecklenburg convention, which met at Charlotte, May 20, 1775, and was appointed, together with two others—Ephraim Brevard and Wm. Kenyon, Esq., a sub-committee, to draw up a paper expressing the sentiments and will of the convention in its stand against British oppression. The paper they handed in shows their zeal, faith and ability, for it was none other than that immortal document, "The Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence."

Not only did Hezekiah James Balch serve on the committee that prepared the Mecklenburg Declaration, but according to Rev. Drs. J. B. Mack and Albert Franklin White, he was the real author of that declaration. Ephraim Brevard, whom history has credited with the authorship, was clerk of the committee and merely copied the draft written by Mr. Balch. The proof of this statement has been published by the two ministers above named. They are quoted by Morrison Caldwell, Esq., in "A Foreword," written by him and published in a reprint of "A Historical Sketch of Rocky River Church, From 1775 to 1875," by Rev. Jas. B. Mack, D.D. The Mecklenburg Declaration was not only drafted by Poplar Tent's pastor, but was signed by five of her members, part of whom were elders. They were, Benjamin Patton, Zaccheus Wilson, John Phifer, David Reese, and Robert Harris.

Mr. Balch left no descendant to be called by his name, and for many years his grave was without a creditable monument. "But in the year 1847, a number of citizens met at Poplar Tent on the occasion of a railroad meeting, consisting of the late Judge Osborne, Dr. Charles W. Harris, now no more, and several others yet living, where attention was drawn to the fact that there was no monument to mark the grave of Mr. Balch; whereupon the fund was immediately raised to build a suitable monument." The work was done soon after this meeting. The grave was located for the monument by Mr. Abijah Alexander, who was then more than ninety (90) years of age. Mr. Alexander was therefore about twenty (20) years old when Mr. Balch was buried and therefore recollected very distinctly the time and place of his burial. In addition to the history here quoted, we have the following information from the pen of Mr. C. T. Allison, now an elder at Poplar Tent. Mr. Allison says: "In a conversation I had with the late Julius Melchor, of Mooresville, N. C., a few years before his death, he said, 'I was about twenty (20) years old when Mr. Alexander pointed out Mr. Balch's grave for the location of the monument. And was with him at the time and heard him say that he was personally acquainted with Mr. Balch and was at his (Balch's) burial.' Mr. Melchor was born July 27, 1827, and died in 1917."

Unfortunately there has arisen some confusion in the minds of a number of people in other states as to the place of Mr. Balch's burial. In fact there are traditions connected with at least two other church cemeteries, each in a different state, and each claiming to have the tomb of the Balch of Mecklenburg fame.

However, it is easily seen how this confusion arose when we take into consideration the following facts: In what was then, the Synod of the Carolinas, there were three ministers of the name of Balch, one of which had both of the given names of the other two. They were: Hezekiah Balch, James Balch, and Hezekiah James Balch. Hezekiah and James were theological opponents at the meetings of Synod. Hezekiah Balch was received as a licentiate from the Presbytery of New Castle, on March 7, 1771, into Hanover Presbytery, which, at that time, extended over the whole country south of the Potomac. He was received and ordained at the same meeting of Presbytery which was held at Buffalo Church.

When Orange Presbytery was set off from Hanover all three of the Balchs became members of Orange Presbytery. And as late as 1788, both Hezekiah and James Balch were members of Orange Presbytery, which was twelve (12) years after the death of Hezekiah James Balch at Poplar Tent. It is absolutely certain therefore that it was neither of the other Balchs which was buried at Poplar Tent in 1776, as they were both living, as above stated, in 1788, and many years after.

Later we find (after 1788) both Hezekiah and James Balch, in the Presbytery of Abingdon, which was mainly in Tennessee. Later Abingdon Presbytery was divided into the Presbyteries of Abingdon and Union, James which has been mistaken for that of Hezekiah James Union. From these Presbyteries one, and perhaps both, of them journeyed westward. And it is their tombs of which has been mistaken for that of Hezekiah James Balch, their names being so near alike. Also they were both active, as almost every Presbyterian minister was at that time, in the cause of independence.

These facts are further sustained by Mr. C. T. Allison, of Poplar Tent, in an article published in the Concord Tribune, which contained correspondence with authorities in Indiana, where one of the Balchs is buried.

Aside from these facts there is no evidence whatever of either Hezekiah or James Balch having labored in Mecklenburg County, at that, or any other time. But the Balch of the Mecklenburg Convention was laboring in Mecklenburg County. Mecklenburg, at that time, included the present County of Cabarrus. Poplar Tent Church, which is about 20 miles from Charlotte and in Cabarrus County, was therefore in Mecklenburg County at the time of the convention.

In support of what is here written the reader is referred to the following authorities: "Sketches of North Carolina," by Rev. Wm. H. Foote. See especially pages 281, 297 and 440. This work was published in 1846. "The Life and Character of the Rev. David Caldwell, D.D." Pages 96 and 197. This biography was published in 1842. Also the "Historical Sketch of Poplar Tent," by Wm. S. Harris. Pages 5 and 6; published 1873.

Poplar Tent Church, though the word "Ichabod" might be written over her door, for her glory is largely in the past, is still alive and doing a good work. Her resident membership is 180, and is well represented on every Sabbath. Her "Woman's Missionary Society," which was organized in 1817, is still "Carrying on." This society is doubtless the oldest of its kind in the state and perhaps in the South.

Space forbids mentioning the roll of pastors of this church, many of which were among the most distinguished men in the Southern States for their piety, education and general usefulness. Chief among these was Rev. John Robinson, D.D., who was called to Poplar Tent from the Presbyterian Church of Fayetteville, N. C., in the year 1801. Dr. Robinson was a prince of preachers and an educator of tremendous influence. During his pastorate of 36 years at Poplar Tent he taught a classical school near the church, which became famous in his day. And according to Harris' History of Poplar Tent Church, it is to be doubted whether any college in the state since that day has turned out in any 50 years of its history as many distinguished men as did Dr. Robinson's school.

Not only lack of space but time would fail me to tell of the work done here during the pastorates of such men as Drs. Pharr, of North Carolina; Thornwell, of South Carolina; Penick, of Virginia by adoption, and Summerell, of North Carolina, whose bow still abides in strength. And of many others who wrought faithfully in time for a harvest in eternity. I leave them to be honored by a grateful posterity and with the hope that a yet more gifted yet than has hitherto been wielded will some day place their names where they so richly deserve to be. May I say with the extravagance of a poet's license, "Far up the heights of deathless fame."

Poplar Tent Manse, Route 1, Concord, N. C.

The Tomb of Rev. Hezekiah James Balch, one of the committee of three who wrote the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence.

This tomb is in the cemetery of Poplar Tent Presbyterian Church, near Concord, N. C.

Mr. Balch was installed pastor of Poplar Tent Church in 1769 and ended his pastorate by death in 1776.

This monument was placed over his grave in 1847. The grave was located for the monument by Mr. Abijah Alexander, who was then more than 90 years of age. Mr. Alexander was about 20 years old when Mr. Balch was buried and therefore recollected very distinctly the time and place of his burial.

For full history, see "Footes Sketches of North Carolina," "History of Poplar Tent Church," by Wm. S. Harris. Also "Life of David Caldwell, D.D."

The inscription on the tomb is as follows:

Beneath this Marble repose the mortal remains of the first pastor of Poplar Tent congregation and one of the original members of Orange Presbytery.
REV. HEZEKIAH J. BALCH

He was licensed a preacher of the everlasting Gospel by the Presbytery of Donegal in 1766, ordained to the full work of the holy ministry in 1769 and rested from his labors A. D. 1776, having been the pastor of the united congregation of Poplar Tent and Rocky River about seven years.

He was distinguished as one of the committee of three who prepared that immortal document the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, and his eloquence the more effectual from his acknowledged wisdom, purity of motive and dignity of character, contributed much to the unanimous adoption of that instrument on the 20th of May, 1775.

This picture was taken and inscription copied from monument by W. Hampton Eubank, present pastor of Poplar Tent Church, June 1, 1922.

There is ever a song somewhere, my dear,

In the midnight black, or the midday blue;

The robin pipes when the sun is here,

And the cricket chirrups the whole night through;

The buds may blow, and the fruit may grow,

And the autumn leaves drop crisp and sear;

But whether the sun, or the rain, or the snow,

There is ever a song somewhere, my dear.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

Presbyterian Progressive Program

$4,750,000 For Benevolences

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS MARCH 18th

OUR POSSESSIONS AND THE SUPREME MOTIVE OF STEWARDSHIP

We are stewards of our possessions. Personality finds no surer way of expressing itself than through our use of material values. It is not merely that a little of what we have belongs to God. All we have belongs to God. He made it all. He keeps it a part of our experience. The experience of new life which He has given is a kind of occupancy of us by God which demands the consecration of all of our possessions. What we use of our income or the sustaining of our bodies, for the support of our families, for the upbuilding of our minds, for the enrichment of our lives is a part of our Christian stewardship. What we use for the Church as the organized representative of Christ's kingdom, what we give to great benevolences, what we give to the mighty enterprise of mastering the world for Christ is also a part of our stewardship. The thing which is to kindle our sacrifices is to be the sacrifice of the cross. That which is in our mind as we decide what shall be used for the Church benevolences and for the great world enterprise is to be the love which, though it was rich, for our sakes became poor, that through its poverty might become rich. At the foot of the cross we are to decide about our gifts.

The typical Christian is a man who owes everything to the cross. His conscience has found rest there. He has here found deep repose in spite of the memory of hated sins. The great energies of the new life have been set free in his heart as he accepted the Christ and the message of Calvary. Everything which makes life full of meaning and opportunity and richness and infinite hope comes from the cross. It is the profound sense of everlasting indebtedness to the great sacrifice that makes the deepest motive for Christian stewardship. Life is to be lived, talents are to be invested, everything is to be done in the light of the cross. Into this sense of the mastery of all life by the great redemption is brought the added sense that because of creation and the constant upholding of all life by the presence of God, it all belongs to Him. So stewardship is a matter of ownership thrice enforced. By creation, by the sustaining of the world and life, and by redemption, God is the owner of our lives and all that we possess.

Lynn Harold Hough, D.D.

INDIVIDUAL OR FAMILY SUBSCRIPTIONS—WHICH?

"Do you know there are seven persons in my family, and do you mean to say that you want me to take seven portions of envelopes and have each member of the family make a subscription? Why, man, the money all comes out of my pocket. Why should not I make one subscription and take one box of envelopes and be done with it?"

This is the way the father of the family often feels when the Every Member Canvass Committee seeks to obtain a subscription from every member of his family. We would answer his questions by saying, "Yes, we believe it is much the best way for every member of our family to make a subscription and bring an envelope to church even though all the money paid in comes out of your pocket, and for the following reasons:

1. It develops an individual sense of responsibility for the Church and her work. A little girl who had joined the church and made her first subscription, said to the pastor a few weeks later: 'I feel so much more like a member of the church now because I am helping to support it.' Should we not be glad to cultivate that kind of bond between our children and the church?

2. It keeps the church in constant touch with the individual member. The securing of a subscription, the posting of payments on that subscription, and the sending to that individual the communications which the church issues, keeps the pastor and leaders of the church in constant and helpful relation to the member.

3. It educates the individual in the church program, for of course we must teach the children in our homes to make their subscriptions what they are giving to and what the needs of the causes are.

4. It increases the income of the church because these children very soon become wage earners with an income of their own and will be able to increase the gift which they have been making out of father's allowance.

5. It increases the spiritual pleasure and power of church membership. How can anyone but a supporting member look up into the face of the Master or look out into the face of the world with a good conscience? How can anyone sincerely pray for the church who does not give to it?"

By all means have the individual subscription from every member of the family and secure all of these blessings for the church and our children.

—Everyone.—

JACKSONVILLE LAYMEN'S CONVENTION

By Rev. R. H. McCaslin, D.D.

The convention theme was world evangelism. Promptly at 11 o'clock on Tuesday morning the convention was opened with Mr. Charles A. Rowland, Chairman of the Laymen's Movement, presiding. The welcome address was delivered by Judge W. H. Baker, of Jacksonville. Mr. Rowland in very clear terms set forth the purpose of the convention and the vision which he hoped the men of the Church would catch toward the theme which had already been announced.

The convention had been splendidly planned and all the committees had worked faithfully for the setting of a most successful convention and at its opening session there was an unusually large attendance.

Dr. D. Clay Lilly, of Lexington, Ky., was the first speaker, who in a most masterly address spoke on "The Challenge of the Advancing Host." He proceeded to show how the forces of sin and evil are making inroads on the courts, the civic life, the church and the home. Many of our strongholds, he said, are being seriously threatened and paganism and civilized respectability, which is only another phase for agnosticism, are gaining a foothold which is both dangerous and deadly. Human life is less secure in America than in any other civilized country on the face of the earth, said Dr. Lilly.

The address made a profound impression upon the convention and has been the subject of a number of editorials in the leading newspapers of Jacksonville and in other cities.

The quiet hour or devotional period was conducted by Rev. Wade C. Smith, of Greensboro, N. C. Mr. Smith spoke on the theme, "Unto Him."

The afternoon of the first day was given up to missionaries who brought the challenge from our fields to the men of the church. Rev. W. F. Junkin, of China; Rev. Robert T. Coit, of Kodea, and Rev. Motte Martin, of Africa, in vivid and stirring appeals presented the challenge of the heathen world to the church at home.

In the evening the convention was brought face to face with the great facts of the missionary program through a stereopticon review of the present situation which was presented by Mr. A. D. Mason, of Memphis. One of the most dramatic moments of the convention was reached at this time when there was thrown upon the screen the large figures "32", which represent the number of young men and women who have heard the call to missionary service and have completed their training in theological seminaries or training schools and are ready to go immediately to the front and whom the Committee of Foreign Missions could not send out because of lack of funds. Just at this moment Mr. Rowland introduced to the convention two of these 32 young people, Miss Agnes Rowland, of Augusta, Ga., and Miss Mary Gatches, of Atlanta, Ga., who thrilled the convention with earnest appeals that the Church would send the 32 out to the front of the world's need immediately. It was literally a case of saying, "Here am I, Lord, send me." Their addresses had a powerful effect upon the convention.

Mr. C. R. Caldwell, a prominent banker of Staunton, Va., made a remarkable testimony talk. As a background for his story he recited the history of the disciples of Christ who were continually engaged in bitter bickerings and wrangles and were not benefited in the least by physical contact with the Christ. It was not until their souls were filled with the Holy Ghost that they received the true vision of life and the true spirit of Christ. At the back of the stage during this evening service were hung huge banners bearing these significant words: "Ninety-five out of every one hundred church members have never personally led a soul to Jesus Christ. Have you?" "Every man needs Christ." "Christ fills the need of every man." "I owe to every man all Christ is to me."

The chief address of the first evening was delivered by Mr. J. Campbell White, who is not by any means a stranger to Southern Presbyterian audiences. "Christianity, the Only Hope of the World," was Mr. White's theme, and his message was full of thrills. His description of present world conditions was both graphic and dramatic, and for nearly an hour he held the great audience thoroughly gripped.

On the second day of the convention the theme was "Service Unto Him," at which time such subjects as these were discussed in short, telling addresses by earnest men. "What one church is doing." "What one men's club is doing." "What one Sunday School is doing." "What one communion is doing." "Opportunities for investment." "The opportunity evangelism offers in the Bible class, for the community, for the individual." Great spiritual themes such as the family altar, tithing, evangelistic club, simultaneous evangelistic campaigns, the equipment campaign, were discussed in brief addresses followed by open conference in which the delegates from all sections took part. Fired with fresh zeal and stirred to the very depths by the burning messages of the day, the delegates literally took possession of the convention and proclaimed their desire for more active Christian service and more liberal support for the various causes of the church. Mr. John P. Lynch, of St. Petersburg, offered a resolution declaring that the laymen of the Church must wake up, face the task now and see to it at once that the 33,000,000 people in the heathen world who have been assigned to the Southern Presbyterian Church are reached within the present generation. This resolution was discussed by a great many of the delegates in an earnest way, when Dr. M. E. Melvin, Secretary of the Stewardship Committee, in a masterly address urged the delegates to go back to the churches and make good first the outstanding deficit of $450,000 the Church had been asked to raise for medical mission work and other equipment needs, and he gave the promise that the leaders of the Progressive Movement in the Church will wisely use the money just as fast as it can be raised. Dr. Park McCallie, of Chattanooga, urged the men to return to their homes with hearts on fire for the Progressive Program. Then, he said, we will not have the burden on our minds that millions of unsaved people in foreign lands will die without a knowledge of Jesus Christ. Dr. McCallie, who is Chairman of the Permanent Committee on Men's Work, submitted the plan of that committee for the organization of laymen in the church. The proposal was to launch a permanent organization to be known as "The Men of the Church," co-ordinated with the Laymen's Missionary Movement. He also told what the men in Chattanooga had done to introduce the Bible into the public schools of that city with regular Bible courses where the pupils receive credit for Bible study.

One of the most stirring addresses of the convention was delivered by Capt. Fred Sullens, editor of the morning newspaper in Jackson, Miss.

The last session of the convention was held on Wednesday evening when the Duval Theater was crowded to the very dome with a great audience, at which time two splendid addresses were delivered. Dr. Egbert W. Smith, of Nashville, spoke for nearly an hour on his visit to the Belgian Congo.

The closing address of the convention was delivered by Mr. P. T. Shanks, an elder in the First Church, of Selma, Ala., which was one of the strongest and most powerful messages of the entire convention. His theme was the Power of Prayer.

One of the most attractive and inspiring features of the convention was the singing of the Columbia Seminary Quartette. The quartette is one of the very best that has ever appeared in these Laymen's Conventions, and never did men sing with more sweetness and appealing power than these young men from Columbia Seminary.

Altogether the convention in Jacksonville was a great success, and made a profound impression both on the city at large, and upon the delegates gathered from different parts of the country. The registration was 708, and represented men and women from Florida, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky.

Be still in God! Who rests on him
Enduring peace shall know,
And with a spirit fresh and free
Through life shall cheerily go.
Be still in faith! forbear to seek
Where seeking naught avails;
Unfold thy soul to that pure light
From heaven which never fails.

—Julius Stern.

The moment you begin to speak of your humility there is none there.

Woman's Auxiliary

Conducted by Mrs. J. M. McIver, Gulf, N. C.

Sugar Creek, N. C.—Figuratively speaking, the Woman's Auxiliary of the Sugar Creek Church spent Saturday in Mexico, using as a text-book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land." The program included a study of Mexico as a mission field, songs, readings and a pageant.

Nearly all the members of the Auxiliary, together with the circle composed of the young girls of the congregation, were present to take part in the interesting study of the geographical, historical, political, educational and religious aspects of the neighbor to the South. It is believed that many present changed their attitudes toward that country after the study had been made.

The decorations of the church induced the spirit of the subject under discussion. Evergreens, cactus plants, ferns and carnations had been arranged. Suitable posters, maps, Mexican views and portraits of Dr. Anthony Thomas Gray and Miss Melinda Rankin, pioneer Mexican missionaries, supplied appropriate atmosphere.

The pageant closed the day's activities. Miss Evelyn Perry impersonated America, Mrs. M. A. Peabody was the church, Mrs. V. L. Hunter was Spain, Miss Sarah Robinson was Mexico, Miss Christine Todd personified medical missions, Miss Katharine Hunter represented humane society, Miss Ida Hoover took the part of the Y. W. C. A., and Miss Pauline McConnell appeared as prophecy. All were appropriately costumed.

The opening exercises consisted of a song, prayer, devotional and the reading of the missionary creed. Following this, Mrs. M. C. Davis, president of the Auxiliary, turned the program over to Mrs. S. M. Henderson, chairman of foreign missions, who took the assemblage on the tour of Mexico. A pleasing feature of the morning session was the singing of "Whispering Hope," by Misses Kate Neal, and Ellie Garrison, Mrs. M. A. Peabody and Mrs. Preston Robinson, with Mrs. Ralph Robinson as accompanist.

During the afternoon Mrs. Peabody and Misses Nell Galloway and Cleta Black rendered in Spanish, "Stand Up for Jesus," with Miss Kate Neal accompanying on the piano, which has recently been placed in the church by the Christian Endeavor Society. Miss Alma Hunter gave a reading, "Our Neighbor," a poetic expression of Mexico's past, present and hopes for the future.

A delicious luncheon, prepared by Auxiliary members, was served at the close of the morning session at the manse by the young girls of the church, a social hour being enjoyed.

FACE TO FACE

"I had walked life's path with an easy tread;
Had followed where comfort and pleasure led;
And then it chanced in a quiet place,
I met my Master, face to face.

"With station and rank and wealth for a goal,
Much thought for the body and none for the soul,
I had entered to win in life's mad race,
When I met my Master, face to face.

"I had built my castles and reared them high;
With their towers had pierced the blue of the sky;
I had sworn to rule with an iron mace,
When I met my Master face to face.

"I met Him, and knew Him, and blushed to see
That eyes full of sorrow were fix't on me;
And I faltered and fell at His feet that day,
While all my castles melted away.

"Melted and vanished, and in their place
I saw naught else but my Master's face;
And I cried aloud: 'Make me meet
To follow the path of Thy tired feet.'

"My thoughts are now for the souls of men;
I lost my life—to find it again—
E'er since one day, in a quiet place,
My Master and I stood face to face."

—Sam'l. T. Carter, Jr.

Third Biennial Convention of Woman's Auxiliary, Richmond, Va., February 27-28—In this convention one saw faith in action and prayer in the answering.

The social intercourse is vitalizing. Christian fellowship is developed which makes for the solidarity of the Church's working forces.

The missionaries were choice spirits of large faith. Their message was like a field-glass that draws the distant scene close. As the glass swept the vast areas of Africa, Korea, China, Brazil, Japan, Mexico, and India, these children of the Master were brought close to the hearts of the women. Mexican women were especially laid on the conscience of the convention. The condition of these mothers of men made a strong appeal for a Christian school for Mexican girls.

The open door with opportunity writ large upon every portal was the testimony of every speaker. Thirty-two men and women stand ready to go anywhere the church needs reinforcement, waiting only available funds. Most impressive the demonstration: the open door, eager volunteers, and burdened souls sitting in darkness.

A chart giving the growth in contributions from the women to the causes of the Church was encouraging. A note of warning was sounded in regard to the apportionment of the Church's budget. The women were urged to stick to the program of the General Assembly that the annual budget and Equipment Fund may be wisely proportioned, and no local cause of special personal interest receive undue attention.

Valuable and stirring was the conference on the development of Spiritual Life, through the sources of spiritual strength, viz: prayer bands, family altars, tithing,

Bible study, and personal evangelism. The four-minute talks and the discussions following were full of practical challenge.

The question box on Methods brought out things of value tested by experience, and suggestions that may ripen into successful methods.

The First Church was well filled during all the sessions of the convention. Mrs. C. H. Alexander.

The Woman's Auxiliary of Enoree Presbytery will meet at Fountain Inn, S. C., Wednesday, April 25th, at 3:30 p. m. A most attractive and inspirational program has been arranged. Mrs. D. L. Norris, Rec. Sec.

To the Presidents of Local Auxiliaries—The Executive Committee of Fayetteville Presbytery, meeting at Fayetteville, February 20th, authorized the recording secretary to make an effort to have its reports published in the minutes, and the Presbyterial report sent to the Synodical secretary, both complete and identical.

When the reports from the local Auxiliaries, of which there are over 80, come to the recording secretary, she culls from them the information necessary for a complete report to the Synodical secretary. This report must be sent in by April 10th. Last year it went in on time, but only with the reports in hand upon it.

In making the report for the Presbyterial, which should be identical with that sent the Synodical secretary, the reports that came in later were added as long as time permitted before the Presbyterial meeting, and so published in the minutes. The result was two sets of figures. They met often and clashed, especially at the Synodical.

The plan now, is to fix the date—April 3rd—as the date by which all local reports must be in the hands of the recording secretary, allowing her sufficient time for completing her report.

No reports will be received after this date. They will not appear on the charts at the Presbyterial nor in the minutes.

The appeal is made directly to YOU. The Presbyterial depends upon the local Auxiliaries. Will there be a blank after the name of your Auxiliary, or will your record be there? Is it a fancy that the charts will be a kind of honor roll of those who come up to the help of their Presbyterial in this matter, as well as a record of sacrificial service to the cause of the Master?

Sanford, N. C. Mrs. A. G. Carter, Rec. Sec.

(The above is enclosed with the report blank sent to presidents of local Auxiliaries of Fayetteville Presbyterial. It is so timely and so clearly emphasizes the WHY of report blanks being filled out and returned promptly to recording secretaries of Presbyterials that with apologies to Mrs. Carter for doing so without her knowledge or approval, we are giving the presidents of other Presbyterials the benefit of it. Read it, and see that your blank is filled out and sent at once to your Presbyterial secretary. You may not have charts for your records at Presbyterial meetings, and your secretary may put belated reports in your minutes, but so long as she does there will be this "meeting and clashing" of two sets of figures that Mrs. Carter speaks of causing "confusion worse confounded" all along the line. Let us be accurate and prompt.—Ed.)

Benson, N. C.—On the evening of March 9th, the Woman's Auxiliary of Benson met in the Presbyterian Church and held a most interesting and helpful meeting. The book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land," by Rev. Wm. Ross, had been read by the members and subjects assigned to five members to prepare papers on.

At this meeting a regular program was carried out. The meeting was opened by singing "I'll Go Where You Want Me To Go," after which we were led in prayer by the pastor, Rev. A. T. Lassiter. In a few brief words the pastor explained the purpose of this meeting.

The next item on the program was a paper read by Miss Roberta Bain; subject, Name the stations our missionaries have opened up, locate them on map, tell of work at each place. This was followed by an interesting paper by Mrs. R. C. Wells; subject, Name some of our native Mexican ministers, and tell of their work.

Miss Zelle Den then read a very instructive paper on "The Progress of Christianity in Mexico." Some very helpful facts concerning "The Social and Political Conditions in Mexico; Also a Statistical Summary," were given by Mrs. A. T. Lassiter.

The next number was one which we had looked forward to with interest, an address by Rev. D. L. Jones, of Hope Mills, chairman of the executive committee of foreign missions of Fayetteville Presbytery. Mr. Jones' message on world-wide missions, based on the text in Habakkuk 2:14, was instructive and was an inspiration to those present to do more in the Master's kingdom.

The meeting closed with prayer by Mr. Jones. An enjoyable social hour followed. The guests and members were invited into an adjoining room where delicious refreshments were served in "a la Mexican style," by Mrs. R. C. Wells.

Do You Want to Help?—During the past two years many Auxiliaries and Circles have assisted in outfitting missionaries for their return home on furlough. This work has been greatly blessed in arousing deeper interest in the missionary on the part of those who were doing the work, and in adding joy and usefulness to the missionary's furlough.

Most of the missionaries coming home on furlough this summer have already been "adopted" by Auxiliaries which were eagerly seeking to do this service for them. There are, however, a few whose outfits have not yet been prepared for them. Among these are three one-year-old babies and some of the finest of our single lady missionaries. Do you want to dress any of these? Please write at once if interested. Mrs. W. C. Winsborough.

256-259 Field Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Notices of Presbyterial Meetings for North Carolina—Wilmington Presbyterial Auxiliary will meet in the Mt. Olive Presbyterian Church, April 26-27. Details as to program and speakers will be given later.

Secretaries and Presidents of Local Auxiliaries—Will you be ready to fill out your report blank which you will receive in a few days, so that you may return them promptly to your Presbyterial secretary? She will be greatly embarrassed to have them come in late, and you will fail to get credit in the minutes of the Presbyterial for the work that you have done during this year.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Church, Burlington, N. C., observed February 16th, Day of Prayer for World-Wide Missions, with an all-day meeting at the church.

The meeting opened at 10 o'clock, with devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. J. P. Bradley. Mrs. W. R. Potter gave a synopsis of the first chapters of the Foreign Missions Study "Sunrise in Aztec Land," and the other chapters were given during the day, with the following leaders: Mrs. W. J. Barker, Mrs. Paul Morrow, Mrs. C. V. Sellars and Mrs. J. L. Henderson.

At noon a lunch was served, consisting of sandwiches, pickles, cake and coffee, and a real Mexican dish, Chili-Concarne, deliciously prepared by Mrs. Potter.

The afternoon prayer service began with the Scripture reading by Mrs. R. D. Bain, secretary of Foreign Missions, and a season of prayer for the cause. Then a missionary pageant, "Are You An Octagonal Christian?" was given by nine women: Mrs. J. M. Bass, Mrs. H. I. Earle, Mrs. W. J. Barker, Mrs. J. E. Black, Mrs. A. C. Kirby, Mrs. Walter Anderson, Mrs. Pinkney Best, Mrs. Staley Garrison, and Miss Mitchell Ferguson, a graduate nurse, who is planning to leave in the early fall as a missionary to Korea. There was music throughout the program especially prepared, and it was all-in-all, a delightful day.

Fayetteville Presbyterial—To the Presidents of Local Auxiliaries:

The Executive Committee of Fayetteville Presbyterial, meeting at Fayetteville, February 20th, authorized the recording secretary to make an effort to have its reports published in the minutes, and the Presbyterial report sent to the Synodical secretary, both complete and identical.

When the reports from the local Auxiliaries, of which there are over 80, come to the recording secretary, she culls from them the information necessary for a complete report to the Synodical secretary. This report must be sent in by April 10th. Last year it went in on time, but only with the reports in hand upon it.

In making the report for the Presbyterial, which should be identical with that sent the Synodical secretary, the reports that came in later were added as time permitted before the Presbyterial meeting and so published in the minutes. The result was two sets of figures. They met often and clashed especially at the Synodical.

The plan now, is to fix the date—April the third—as the date by which all local reports must be in the hands of the recording secretary, allowing her sufficient time for completing her report.

No reports will be received after this date. They will not appear on the charts at the Presbyterial nor in the minutes.

The appeal is made directly to you. The Presbyterial depends upon the local Auxiliaries. Will there be a blank after the name of your Auxiliary, or will your record be there? Is it a fancy that the charts will be a kind of honor roll of those who come up to the help of their Presbyterial in this matter, as well as a record of sacrificial service to the cause of the Master?

Mrs. A. G. Carter, Recording Secretary. Sanford, N. C.

N	1923-1924	N
E	PROGRAM	E
W	LITERATURE	W
Y	now ready!	Y
E	Auxiliary	E
A	Programs	A
R	and	R
B	Circle	B
O	Programs	O
O	sent in one package	O
K	one dollar a year	K
B	Auxiliary	B
O	Programs alone	O
O	seventy-five cents	O
K	a year	K
	Circle
	Programs seventy-five cents
	a year
	Write to
	THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY
	256-259 Field Building
St. Louis		Missouri

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT

(Conducted under the auspices of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Work, in the interest of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies)

W. ARNETT GAMBLE, JR., Editor

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DEPARTMENT EDITOR DAVIDSON, N. C

EDITOR'S LOOKOUT

We wish you could have been with us this March Sunday at the First Presbyterian Church of Gastonia. A report talk to the Sunday School, teaching a class in the school, holding a conference with the Senior Endeavor executive committee, talking to the Intermediate Endeavorers and to the Senior Endeavorers, and speaking at the evening church service, made a pretty full day but a happy one.

The progress of the Endeavor work in this church is encouraging. One year ago a deputation from Davidson College helped in getting a Senior society started there. Another deputation today found three societies: Junior, Intermediate, and Senior. It is fine to see so many of a church's young people interested in this great work.

Now just listen! We've been telling you we wanted reports from the local societies and Sunday School classes. We've been running an Honor Roll of those who have been helping us by sending in reports. We are now going to take a further step. We are having prepared a certificate for societies and classes who send us reports. The certificates will be nicely gotten up and will state that the society or class has appointed someone to report to the Young People's Department (Endeavor societies may instruct their corresponding secretary to do this) and that at least one report has been sent in. The certificate will be signed by Mr. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies, and by the editor of this department. The Standard management has also agreed to send the paper for a month free to all local organizations which earn one of the certificates. Now, let's see you get busy and get something for—something. Swap us a report for one of these handsome certificates and a month's free subscription to the Standard!

Sunday School

By Rev. H. G. Hill, D.D.

MARCH 18, 1923

Lesson: Luke 23. Printed Text: Luke 23:33-46

GOLDEN TEXT—"He was wounded for our transgressions, was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed."—Is. 53:5.

SCRIPTURE LESSON

3. And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.
4. Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.
5. And the people stood beholding, and the rulers also derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be Christ, the chosen of God.
6. And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar.
7. And saying, if thou be the king of the Jews, save thyself.
8. And a superscription also was written over him, in three languages, Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.
9. And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, if thou be Christ, save thyself and us.
10. But the other answering, rebuked him, saying, Dost thou not fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?
11. And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss.
12. And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom.
13. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with me in paradise.
14. And it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour.
15. And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst.
16. And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; and having said thus, he gave up the ghost.

SHORTER CATECHISM

Q. 28. Wherein consisteth Christ's exaltation?
A. Christ's exaltation consisteth in his rising again from the dead on the third day, in ascending up into heaven, in sitting at the right hand of God the Father, and in coming to judge the world at the last day.

The scene described in this lesson was one of the saddest and most appalling tragedies ever witnessed upon earth. Heaven, Hell, and Earth were represented. God the Father was there, for He is everywhere present. The Son incarnated was on the cross expiating man's sins, the Holy Ghost was present, sustaining the Son, helping believers and converting sinners. The Devil and demons were there, arousing the evil passions of men, and exciting mankind to shameful words and cruel deeds. Humanity of various types were present, blaspheming the God-man and slaying their own Redeemer. Yet all, knowingly or unwittingly, were carrying out God's scheme of redemption for the human race. The apostles affirmed, "Him being delivered by the determined counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken and with wicked hands have crucified and slain." Nowhere is the sovereignty as well as the love of God more conspicuously displayed than on Calvary. We will consider Jesus' Prayer and Plea for His Murderers; The Mockery of Him; The Events Marking Christ's Death; The Appeal and Conversion of the Penitent Thief.

I. The Prayer and Plea of Jesus for His Murderers

All present aided more or less in bringing Him to the cross. The Pharisees and Sadducees, the priests and people, the blinded multitude, and the Roman soldiers all had their part in inflicting upon Christ a cruel death. As the soldiers nailed Him to the cross, He cried, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." He prays for their pardon, that they may not suffer eternal woe for this heinous crime. When they are robbing Him of life, and visiting upon Him with terrible pangs He utters this prayer. How wonderfully gracious, merciful and forgiving is Jesus! The plea He offers is, "They know not what they do." This was doubtless true of all the guilty company present. They were not fully aware of the magnitude of the iniquity they were perpetrating.

But some had better opportunities than others for having religious knowledge and therefore were more guilty than their more ignorant fellows. The Roman soldiers did not have the helps for knowing Jesus that the Chief Priests and Scribes possessed. Besides, ignorance, when voluntary, when caused by refusing the use of the means of knowledge, so far from excusing guilt actually aggravates it.

II. The Mockery of Men

Had there been any pity or humanity in the guilty multitude around the cross they would have allowed their victim to die in silence, undisturbed by gibes and taunts and mockery. But all classes mocked and derided His claims and His sufferings. The Rulers, the Chief Priests and Scribes said, "He saved others, He cannot save Himself." It did not occur to them that He could not save Himself because He was dying to save man. All Saviours must encounter loss to save others. They declare, "Come down from the cross and we will believe thee." But He could not come down from the cross, and yet be man's voluntary "sin-bearer." The Roman soldiers mocked Him, "offering Him vinegar," or sour wine, and saying, "If thou be the King of the Jews save thyself." The ignorant, fickle multitude which had so recently cried "Hosanna" and whom Jesus had so often taught and healed, joined in the taunts and derision of their rulers. The very thieves on the cross "railed on Him, saying, If Thou be Christ, save Thyself and us." Thus all classes of humanity mocked Christ during His dying agonies and called on Him to do what He could not undertake without ceasing to be man's Redeemer.

III. The Events Marking Jesus' Death

The natural world seemed to sympathize with its Maker and to mourn His agony. The sun withdrew his light and from 12 to 3:00 o'clock darkness enshrouded the earth. There was a great earthquake and the rocks rent and the graves opened. Many waked from the dead, and "after Christ's resurrection went into the city and appeared unto Mary." "The veil in the temple that separated the holy place from the most holy was rent in twain from the top to the bottom." It was thus signified that the way of access to God was fully opened by the dying Christ and Jesus' own words were illustrated, "I am the way, no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

IV. The Appeal and Conversion of the Penitent Thief

Both thieves at first seemed to have railed on Jesus. But a marvellous change of character, conduct and destiny came to one of them. His views of himself and of Christ were wonderfully altered. He deems Jesus no longer an imposter but the Messiah, the Saviour of sinners. He regards Himself not as a hopeless, dying sinner, but a sinner trusting Jesus and having a hope of salvation. He is penitent, confesses his sins, and saying, "he was receiving the due reward of his deeds." He trusts Christ, crying, "Lord, remember me when Thou cometh into thy kingdom." He rebukes iniquity and affirms Jesus to be a king who would come into His kingdom. He is saved. The Lord said unto him, "Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise."

Christian Endeavor

By Rev. J. G. Garth, Chairman of Synod's Committee of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Work.

EDUCATIONAL MISSIONS

M., Mar. 19—Hard Work—II Cor. 12:15-18.
T., Mar. 20—Object-Teaching: Jer. 19:1-12.
W., Mar. 21—Teacher to Observe: Prov. 24:30-34.
T., Mar. 22—Teach Children: Deut. 11:18-21.
F., Mar. 23—Teach Religion: II Tim. 3:14-17.
S., Mar. 24—Teach Industry: Eccl. 11:1-6.

Sun., Mar. 25—Topic: Educational Missions at Home and Abroad.—Acts 19:8-20.

Why does education help missions?
In what sense are school teachers missionaries?
How have American colleges in mission lands helped?

(The article this week has been prepared by Mr. Chester P. Monk, of Moultrie, Ga., a student of Davidson College. Mr. Monk is a member of the C. E. Training Class of Davidson College which is rendering efficient service by deputation work in the churches to which they are invited to hold C. E. Institutes, and make addresses on Young People's work.—J. G. G.)

Christ was crucified that the world might be saved from sin. In his report of the crucifixion of Christ, St. Luke gives us a picture of the entire trial of Christ, His sentence and death upon the cross of Calvary. In contemplating the lesson, we will consider Christ's trial before Pilate and the way Pilate disposed of the trial and the persecutions by the mob: Christ's last prophecies; Christ's crucifixion, and God's power to save.

I. Pilate and Christ at the Trial

Pilate is shown in a weak mood. He appears nervous and anxious to rid himself of the responsibility of condemning such a righteous man. Christ is shown in a calm mood, fearing nothing, and awaiting the decision of the Roman ruler. In reply to Pilate's question, "Art Thou the King of the Jews?" Christ answered, "Thou sayest." Christ wished to show those who were prosecuting Him that they believed Him the King of the Jews. Pilate then, feeling the power of God and fearing Him, told the mob that he found no fault with Christ.

The mob urged Pilate to condemn Christ. Pilate, to remove the responsibility from his hands, delivered Christ to Herod, who mocked Him, dressed Him in rich clothing and returned Him to Pilate who then proposed to chastise Him and send Him away. The mob howled that the prisoner, Barabba's, a wicked man, be released, but that Christ be condemned. Pilate once more pronounced sentence of chastisement. The voice of the mob prevailed and Pilate heeded their cries of "Crucify, crucify Him." Pilate sought the third time to remove the sentence from Christ, but it was impossible to overcome the wrath of the mob.

II. Christ's Last Prophecies

As the mob was taking Christ up Calvary, the followers of the Saviour began to bewail and lament for Him. Christ told them to bewail and lament for themselves and their children, for the time would come when man would be so wrapped up in his own pleasures that, not heeding the wishes of God, He will heap blessings on the childless woman. When that should come about, Christ prophesied the fall of man and the descent of God's wrath upon him.

III. Christ's Crucifixion

The old story about how Christ carried His own cross up Mount Calvary where He was nailed to it, the spear thrust through His side; how in His agony He was offered vinegar instead of water to quench His thirst; how He was mocked and spat upon; and how the soldiers cast lots for His raiment, is known to us all. With Him were carried two thieves to suffer the same death as the Master to show the degree to which Christ humbled Himself that He might die to save everybody, rich and poor, good and bad, if they would just repent and believe on Him.

We have the scene in which the thief mocked Christ, yet the other rebuked the first one and begged Christ's mercy. We have recorded in the Word that Christ promised him life everlasting because he had repented.

While the people sneered and mocked and spat upon Him, Christ gave to us an example of obeyance of the Golden Rule. Instead of cursing the mob, Christ turned His eyes in divine supplication to His Father in heaven and prayed, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." Wouldn't it be better if we forgave our enemies rather than to seek revenge against them?

IV. God's Saving Power

With the words, "Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit," Christ died. He was removed from the cross and buried by Joseph, a righteous man.

As God has saved the soul of the repentant thief; as He took charge of Christ's spirit, so is He ready now to deal with us. All that Christ asks of us is that we believe in Him and that thus believing in Him to profess Him as our personal Saviour and keep His commandments. If we will do these things, God, the Son, who died to save the world, will not have died in vain, for His Father will forgive our sins and, at the earthly end, will take us home to live with Him on high.

STANDARD TRAINING SCHOOL TO BE HELD IN GASTONIA

Organization of the Gastonia Co-Operative Standard Training School for Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday School Workers was perfected at a joint conference of the two denominations held at the First Presbyterian Church, Thursday night. It was decided to conduct the first session of this joint school beginning Sunday afternoon, March 18th, and closing Friday night, March 23d.

As outlined by the two educational directors, this school will bring to Gastonia and her workers with young people, some of the ablest educators of both denominations to be found in the South, and will be permanent as a yearly school of training for all interested in Sunday School and Young People's work.

The First Presbyterian, Main Street Methodist, West Avenue Presbyterian, East End Methodist, Armstrong Memorial Presbyterian, Trinity Methodist, and Ranlo Methodist churches were represented at the conference by pastors and Sunday School superintendents. The Shelby district was represented by Presiding Elder Rev. H. H. Jordan and the conference was conducted by Mr. O. V. Woosley, secretary of Sunday School work of the Western North Carolina M. E. Conference, South, and Mr. C. T. Carr, manager of Young People's work in the Synod of North Carolina. These two leaders made a fine and lasting impression upon all present, with their comprehensive and extensive knowledge of the work, their splendid personalities and interest in the combined work for Gastonia. All sessions of the school will be opened to church and Sunday School workers of all denominations and is conducted jointly by Methodists and Presbyterians for the reason that the headquarters of these two are the only ones who have come to such an agreement. The school will maintain throughout the Standard Training Courses of both denominations, on the individual certificate and diploma plan, under the personal direction of Messrs. Woosley and Carr. The faculty will be composed of six of the very best instructors of both denominations, the director's selecting three from each.

Cordial invitations from both the First Presbyterian and Main Street Methodist Churches for the holding of daily sessions will be later acted upon by the board of managers elected at the Thursday night conference. The official or executive board to be known as managers will be composed of the Sunday School superintendents of Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday Schools in Gastonia and vicinity, with pastors ex-officio members.

Pastors, people and all church workers in Gastonia, immediate vicinity and in all Gaston county will be urged to avail themselves of this course and that they may do so the date was fixed as late in the winter and as early in the spring as possible so as not to conflict with rural activities that would prevent their taking advantage of the opportunity. They are all cordially urged to make preparations to attend every session.

The only expense attached to the work of the student will be the moderate price of text-book used, the local churches having agreed to care for all the expenses of the six days' session. Mrs. Charles Van Noppen, who captivated the hearts of all with whom she came in contact at a similar school conducted at the Main Street Methodist Church, will again be a member of the faculty, together with Mrs. Bunch, of Raleigh, and Mr. C. T. Carr, these being the Presbyterian educators, while those from the Methodist are yet to be determined by Director Woosley.

Rev. Roswell C. Long, of the West Avenue Presbyterian Church, has been untiring in his work to bring about this school for Gastonia, which will become a permanent institution. Officers elected for the ensuing year were: Educational directors, O. V. Woosley and C. T. Carr; president board of managers, J. H. Kennedy; vice-president, Marshall Dilling; secretary, Geo. R. Gillespie, and treasurer, T. R. Cash. Finance committee: T. R. Cash, Fred L. Smyre, John L. Beal. Entertainment committee: R. C. Patriek, G. C. Andrews, others to be selected by these two. Publicity committee: J. W. Atkins, Hugh A. Query, G. R. Gillespie. Program and literature with detailed information will be furnished the Gaston public at a later date.

Church News

A CORRECTION

In our editorial account of the Western Section of the Presbyterian Alliance, meeting in Toronto, Canada, February 14th and 15th, we made Dr. Morris say that our Church has made in 10 years, a net gain of four per cent. Whether this error was due to the original manuscript or to an oversight by the proof-reader, we cannot tell. The true figures are 118 per cent in 25 years.

MRS. SHAW'S CONDITION

The condition of Mrs. A. R. Shaw, who was stricken with paralysis last July has undergone very little change in the last few months.

She has not regained the power of speech and has practically no use of her right arm and leg.

Her condition necessitates the services of a nurse day and night.

She and Dr. Shaw are for the present occupying an apartment at 209 1-2 S. Cedar St., Charlotte, N. C.

ARMENIAN RELIEF

Received for this cause:
 Gulf, N. C. Sunday School$10.00
 Pittsboro, N. C. Church 27.50
 Miles Hampton 10.00

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Rev. Eugene Alexander changes his address from Raeford, N. C., to Salisbury, N. C. He takes charge of the Second Church.

The address of Rev. L. T. Wilds, Jr., is changed from Lexington, N. C., to Hendersonville, N. C., where he begins his work as pastor of the Presbyterian Church at that place. Mr. Wilds succeeds Rev. J. F. Ligon, now of Charlotte.

THE DEATH OF REV. FRANCIS TAPPEY, D.D.

Rev. Francis Tappey died in Pensacola, Fla., on February 24th from the effects of an operation. Dr. Tappey had only been in his present charge since December, 1921, but in that time he had become identified with every religious and civic movement. He was born November 17, 1874, in Petersburg, Va. He was educated at Hampden-Sidney College and the Louisville Theological Seminary.

His first pastorate was at Valley Creek Presbyterian Church at Selma, Ala., and from there he went to the First Presbyterian Church at Huntsville, Ala., where he remained 15 years. He was then called to the First Presbyterian Church at Shelbyville, Tenn., and was there four years when he received a call to the First Presbyterian Church at Pensacola in December, 1921.

The Pensacola Journal speaks in glowing terms of his hold upon every class, and the good he has already done in that city. We have known him for years, and believe that his loss to the Synod of Florida will be great. The sympathies of his many friends will be extended to the bereaved wife.

FIVE DOLLARS ($5.00) REWARD

Five dollars reward will be paid to the person who submits the name that is selected for a new periodical. The facts:

1. It will concern Mecklenburg Presbytery.
2. It will feature Home Mission Work in Mecklenburg.
3. It will be issued monthly.
4. It will be helpful.

The rules:
 1. Name submitted should be short.
 2. Name submitted should be appropriate to its scope and mission.
 3. Name submitted should be original.

In submitting names use a postal card and write plainly. Send all names to Rev. M. F. Daniels, 313 Torrence St., Charlotte, N. C. All names must be received by March 24, 1923. Act quick. Cards will be numbered as they are received, and in the event that more than one person sends in the name that is selected, the reward will go to the first one received. State on postal card the name of the church to which you belong—Presbyterians only are qualified to submit names.

WEEKLY NEWS NOTES FROM BARIUM

A social event of interest took place Saturday night at the home of superintendent E. McS. Hyde, when the juniors entertained in honor of the senior class. The high school and musical faculty were guests. The home was decorated in the class colors, blue and silver. The junior class numbers thirteen, ten girls and three boys; there are six seniors, four girls and two boys, as follows: Mary Nowlan, Miriam Jordan, Ada McPhail, Thelma Deaton, Charlie Carraker and Edward Fraley.

Miss Eunice Hall, dining room matron, was called home on account of the serious illness of her sister.

Mrs. S. A. Grier, who has been visiting her home folks while her house was being moved, is expected home Friday. We will be glad to have Mrs. Grier back home.

Miss Maude Hostettler, sixth grade teacher, and Archie Hyde, son of superintendent Hyde, are both laid up with measles. They are getting along nicely and we hope they will soon be out. We are still having some new cases at the infirmary almost every day.

Mr. Johnston is on a business trip to Greensboro and Salisbury.

Miss Sophia Graham, a returned missionary from China, has been with us for a few days. We have enjoyed having Miss Graham and believe she has awakened a greater interest among the young people for the cause of Christ and missions.

Miss Barnett spent the week-end with home folks in Hopewell.

Mrs. Johnston entertained at supper Tuesday night in honor of Miss Graham, Misses Ada Willis and Barnett were also guests. Miss Graham was to talk to the ladies of the Woman's Auxilia after supper, but a down-pour of rain prevented the ladies attending.

Everybody has been busy during the past week with outdoor work, the truck farm bunch spraying and pruning trees, the farm group getting the ground in readiness for planting. The past week was a real spring one but it seemed that Mr. Grousehog is trying to get in some of his work this week.

NORTH CAROLINA

Concord Presbytery will meet in regular session at Lenoir, N. C., April 10th, at 7:30 p. m.

E. D. Brown, S. C.

The Presbytery of Mecklenburg will meet in 107th stated session in Caldwell Memorial Church, Charlotte, N. C., Tuesday April 10, 1923, at 8 p. m.

C. C. Anderson, S. C.

Kings Mountain—Rev. I. S. McElroy, D.D., of Columbus, Ga., has accepted the call recently extended him by the Kings Mountain Church, and will enter on his ministry there at an early date.

Orange Presbytery will meet in regular session the "Church Beside the Road," in Greensboro, N. C. on Tuesday, April 10, 1923, at 8:00 o'clock p. m. All papers and reports for Presbytery should be in the hands of the stated clerk before the Presbytery meets.

D. I. Craig, S. C.

Williams Memorial Church—For the last three months Dr. A. R. Shaw has been supplying the church. A capable committee has been appointed to take under advisement the erection of a new church building. The Sabbath School has also doubled its attendance. Recently Dr. and Mrs. Shaw were the victims of a generous "pounding" at the hands of the good people of this church. It is perhaps safe to say that the outlook for the church will never be brighter.

Wilmington—We are indebted to Rev. J. O. Manly, pastor of Church of Covenant, for a most tasteful brochure of the beautiful Kenan Memorial Sunday School building erected by Mrs. Jessie Kenan Wiseman in memory of her father and mother, William Ranney Kenan and Mary Hargrave Kenan.

It gives pictures of the Beginners' department; the Primary department; the Junior department; the auditorium; the Girls' and Women's club rooms; the Men's club room; the Boys' room; the Kitchen; and the Roof Garden.

This booklet in its artistic work does full justice to this ideal Sunday School building, which is the finest in the State.

Thomasville—Rev. John R. Offield, of Bristol, Tenn., has accepted the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church here and will enter upon his new work March 11th. This is a comparatively new organization and has had steady and substantial growth from the beginning. Rev. J. H. Smith, the retiring pastor, lives at Lexington and has only given part time to this field, but the new pastor, who is a young man without a family, will devote all of his time to this church and live with his flock. Mr. Offield starts with a membership of about 50 and has a wide and open field, the nearest Presbyterian church to this being at High Point and the nearest in this county being at Lexington.

Gastonia—The Men's Bible Class of the First Presbyterian Church enjoyed the most delightful and helpful annual meeting and banquet Tuesday night in the history of the organization. Two hundred and fifty men sat down to a tempting meal prepared by the ladies of an Auxiliary circle, this being the largest number of men ever present on any similar occasion. After dinner and several short talks by pastors and laymen the speaker of the evening, Rev. Wade C. Smith, of "The Church by the Side of the Road," Greensboro, N. C., delivered the best and most inspiring message ever brought to the men. From this class has been recently organized "The Men's Club of the First Presbyterian Church" with more than 100 charter members.

Greensboro—"Church by the Side of the Road" We are fortunate to have coming to us at this time Mr. E. H. Hamilton, as playground director and general helper to our pastor, especially with the young people. Mr. Hamilton graduated at Union Theological Seminary last spring and since that time has been attending the Biblical Seminary in New York (formerly known as White's Bible School) in intensive Bible study. He is now under appointment to go to China as a missionary for the Southern Presbyterian Church, and expects to sail August. In the meantime, we are to have his valuable services until we can secure a permanent playground director.

Thomasville—On the 1st of February, Rev. J. H. Smith gave up the pastorate of the Thomasville Presbyterian Church in order to accept the call for full-time services from the Dacotah Church, Lexington, N. C., where he had been giving only one-half time service since the present pastorate began in 1918.

The Dacotah work is in the industrial section of Lexington, where a mission point of the First Church was wholly maintained by the church. Shortly after the coming of Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Smith the Dacotah Church was organized with 10 members, since which there has been a slow but steady growth both in numbers and efficiency of the membership, until the above action was taken. From the beginning of the organization the little church has fallen in line with the Presbyterian Progressive Program every year, over-paying the benevolent quota of the church and almost one-half of the pastor's salary, beginning February 1st, which has been raised three times. There are now 62 resident members, with 40 tithers and a future much brighter, for which we are grateful to the great "Head."

Thomasville has a brighter future also, having an increased membership of about 50 per cent, all very faithful to the work. Obtaining proper aid from the Home Mission Committee, they have called Rev. Jno. R. Offield to take up the work there as resident pastor. J. H. Smith.

Godwin, Fayetteville Presbytery—By invitation, the writer attended a meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Godwin Presbyterian Church on Wednesday of last week. There was an unusually large attendance of the members, and there seemed to be a spirit of optimism in evidence. Officers were elected and a delegation chosen to represent the Auxiliary at Sanford, N. C., in the coming meeting of the Presbyterial.

The writer made a short talk and the meeting closed with special music by Mrs. Dr. McClean and Miss Dunn. The song was that beautiful missionary hymn, "How long must we wait."

I could not close this article without mentioning the nice gift that the ladies brought to church and presented to the preacher and family. What shall I call it? It was something new and novel, "a can pounding." Canned fruit, preserves, pickles, etc., luscious and delightful. It solves the problems of kitchen and dining room for many weeks, and especially at this severe time of year. We thank them heartily for the gift and especially for their thoughtfulness and the spirit in which it was given. May God bless each one and their homes.

We hope that within a short time the new manse at Wade, N. C., will be completed and we shall be moving in. It will be quite an acquisition to this pastoral charge—a real nice eight-room house. T. C. Croker.

Atkinson—The recent meeting here by Rev. Leonard Gill was greatly helped by the singing conducted by Mr. A. C. Burr.

There were many obstacles to prevent a successful meeting. Among them were an indifference and a spirit of worldly conformity on the part of the church members. It was difficult to get many to pray for the services. During the meeting a snow storm and disagreeable weather added to an epidemic of influenza prevented many from attending the meeting. And some of them were those who would have been ready to unite with some church. Yet in spite of these hindrances this was the best meeting ever held in Atkinson. The men were moved as never before to take a stand for righteousness and law enforcement. Also many of the grudges and hard feelings were obliterated and a spirit of fellowship and co-operation was established. These are among the results that cannot be tabulated.

There were received into the Presbyterian Church by profession, 17; by letter, 13. The Baptist Church received almost as many by profession and a number by letter. This was in addition to those received by them in a meeting held in their church a few months before.

A large number of those received in both churches were men and women of middle age and heads of families. The personal work done by a few of the members, who would have considered themselves of little influence, resulted in the conversion of several homes to Christ.

Mr. Gill is a preacher of spiritual power and presents the Gospel clearly and convincingly. In painting sin in its terrible destructiveness, he shows a love for the sinner that wins the respect even of those who will not give up their sins. C.

SOUTH CAROLINA

The Presbytery of Pee Dee will meet in Bennettsville, S. C., on Wednesday, April 11, 1923, at 3:00 p. m. A. H. McArn, S. C.

Piedmont Presbytery will meet in Seneca, S. C., Monday, April 16th, at 8:00 p. m. Robert Adams, S. C.

Columbia—Rev. W. S. Harden, pastor of Shandon Church, has accepted a call to Greenville, N. C., and will begin his work there April 1st.

Summer Conferences of the Synod of South Carolina—The Summer Conferences of the Synod of South Carolina will be held at the Presbyterian College of South Carolina, Clinton, S. C. The Young People's Conference will be held June 11-17. Some of the speakers and leaders for this conference are: Dr. R. F. Kirkpatrick, Dr. H. W. DuBose, Dr. Flournoy Shepperson, Dr. W. T. Thompson, Dr. Melton Clark, Rev. R. A. Lapsley, Jr., Mr. S. Wilkes Dendy, Rev. J. B. Belk, Miss Zoulean Anderson, Miss Virginia Taylor, Mr. Walter A. Johnson, and Dr. J. P. Marion. The General Workers' Conference will be held August 7-12. Some of the speakers and leaders for this conference are: Dr. W. D. Melton, Dr. W. R. Dobyns, Dr. J. M. Wells, Rev. Wade Smith, Mrs. T. H. Dick, Mr. A. M. Aiken, Mr. W. R. Crook, Rev. Ray Riddle, Dr. D. M. Douglas, Dr. J. B. Green, Dr. Flournoy Shepperson, Rev. J. B. Belk, and Miss Virginia Taylor. The Woman's Auxiliary will provide speakers for the hour for Auxiliary Methods, and their names will be announced soon. Mr. D. Wyatt Neville, Clinton, S. C., will serve as treasurer and registrar for both conferences, and Mrs. Hunter will again be in charge of the dining room. The names of three speakers to be provided by two of the Assembly's Executive Committees will be given later.

Greenwood—At the church service on last Sunday morning the pastor, Rev. J. A. McLean, Jr., preached a sermon on the Family Altar, and in response to the appeal to establish an altar in each home, 40 pledges were signed. There are now 54 homes in this church pledged to maintain a regular family altar, and we believe this will deepen the spiritual life of the congregation.

This church had 11 representatives at the Charlotte Laymen's Convention. On the Sunday following their return five of these laymen delivered enthusiastic and inspiring reports to the congregation.

A Senior Christian Endeavor Society has been recently organized for our young people, with an active membership of 55 to begin with. Mr. B. S. Hodges, Jr., of the Presbyterian College, at Clinton, came over and helped us organize.

The Brotherhood Class has assumed responsibility for the attendance of the Sunday evening services, and has been advertising these services by post-cards, personal invitations and through the newspapers. As a result of their work the attendance has been greatly increased.

During past years the goal of this church has been to give twice as much to benevolences as to local expenses, and it has sometimes measured up to this ideal. We are hoping to maintain this high standard for this year, though financial conditions in this section will make this difficult.

Anderson—Rev. I. E. Wallace, superintendent of Sunday Schools, Young People's and Home Mission work for Piedmont Presbytery, during the month of February conducted Teacher Training Schools in the following churches: Central Presbyterian, Anderson; First Presbyterian, Anderson; Walhalla and Good Hope, Iva. In each of these schools courses were offered in the study of The Pupil, The School, and The Life of Christ. The total enrollment in all classes at each of these schools was as follows: Central Church 22; First Church, 22; Walhalla, 17; Iva (Good Hope and A. R. P. churches), 41, making a total of 103. Preceding the organization of these schools Mr. Wallace addressed the congregation at the morning service on The Teaching Task of the Church, and at the evening service on The Call to Teach. Mr. Wallace is endeavoring to put a constructive program before the Presbyterians of this Presbytery and the response he is meeting with is very encouraging. During the first week in March he is conducting a class for adult teachers for the two churches in Anderson, the second week or the week following the second Sunday, he will conduct a school for teachers at the Midway Church, and the week following the third Sunday he will devote to the same purpose in the church at Westminster. Since taking up this work he has been organizing new Sunday Schools at the rate of an average of one a month. The last one is at Keowee, a point on the Southern Railway between Clemson College and Seneca.

APPALACHIA

Whitesburg, Ky.—The Assembly's evangelist for the mountains of eastern Kentucky, recently assisted Rev. J. W. Bell in a 10 days' revival meeting, which was well attended throughout. Several services were conducted at the city school, which had an attendance of 250. A number of meetings were held in the county jail. A Bible study and personal workers' class was conducted each afternoon for the women by Mrs. H. L. Cockerham. Just before the regular evening service a meeting was held for the young people, which was well attended. Eight persons united with our church by letter and profession. Mr. Bell has just arrived on the field and is getting the work under way. A lot has just been purchased by the Assembly's Committee for the erection of a manse, which is badly needed.

Whitesburg is a nice growing town located in the center of a large coal field. The outlook for our work there is more promising than for some time. If nothing prevents, will begin a meeting at the Assembly's school at Heidelberg, Ky., of which Prof. W. A. Saucier is principal, on Monday, March 12th. H. L. Cockerham, Evangelist.

ALABAMA

Montgomery—The First Church of this city has called to its pastorate Rev. Joseph Dunglinson, D.D., of Selma, Ala. Dr. Dunglinson has the call under consideration.

Selma—The Alabama Avenue Church is enjoying an evangelistic service under the direction of the pastor, Rev. G. W. Cheek. He is to be assisted by Rev. H. C. Pratt, and Mr. Thomas G. Makin, who will have charge of the music.

Dr. John A. MacSporran announced from the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church, Birmingham, on Sunday morning, March 4th, his decision concerning the call extended him by the Hillside Presbyterian Church, of Orange, New Jersey.

Explaining that he had given the matter long and prayerful consideration, Dr. MacSporran told his people that he had come to the belief that his duty now lay in the New Jersey field. He recounted how he had come to the "Old First" from LaFayette Square Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, a little over four years ago, and "while some of you have kindly said that I have been able to do something for you," he stated, "I want to say that you have done very much indeed for me."

In the congregational meeting that followed the service Dr. MacSporran's resignation was reluctantly concurred in. Officers of the church spoke at length of what Dr. MacSporran's ministry had meant, pointing out that the membership had more than doubled, the church had been remodeled and rebuilt, a new manse bought in the South Highlands district and the old one converted for social and church school purposes, while a new $40,000 Sunday School building was within 30 days of completion and occupancy.

Resolutions of appreciation of his work and regret at his leaving were adopted unanimously as expressing the sentiment of the First Church in reference to Dr. MacSporran's leaving them for his new work.

ARKANSAS

Texarkana—The First Church of this city has called Rev. Rutherford Douglas, D.D., of Macon, Ga., and is very much in hope that he will accept the unanimous call extended him.

Batesville, Arkansas Presbytery—Rev. R. Emerton Carroll, pastor, has been assisted by Rev. C. W. Sommerville, of Memphis, in a series of meetings covering nine days, February 19-28. At 10 o'clock each morning a meeting was held in Alumni hall of Arkansas College, especially for the students. Each evening at 7:30 o'clock the meetings were at the Presbyterian Church. As the church and the college were close together, the arrangement suited the college and the townspeople. Mr. Carroll and Mr. Sommerville also visited the high school, the Odd Fellows Home and the Masonic Home and spoke to the children and young people there gathered; and held personal interviews with the college students. The college students were active in personal work and prayer.

Sunday afternoon the visiting minister spoke to a small group at Glenwood, a school house a few miles out in the country where Mr. Glenn and others conduct a Sunday School. A large crowd usually attends this meeting place, but because of continued rain there were only 20 present, February 25th, and half of these were teachers and workers from Batesville. They had their reward in seeing five come out on the Lord's side that rainy afternoon.

The attendance throughout the meetings was excellent. On Sunday night it was necessary to move to the Methodist Church, and the last night the church was more than full. There were professions and reconsecrations. The whole body of the college with three exceptions only is within church membership.

The college is in fine condition under the presidency of Rev. Dr. W. S. Lacy. The new dormitory for men is a credit to the Synod.

It was a pleasure to meet several Hampden-Sidney people at Arkansas College—Dr. Eugene Long, formerly professor at the Virginia College; Richard C. Sommerville, First Honor at Hampden-Sidney, is an honored professor in Arkansas. Mrs. Timmons, wife of the professor of history, Rev. Dr. R. K. Timmons, was known at Hampden-Sidney as the daughter of Rev. Dr. Strickler, professor of theology at Union Seminary.

Rev. R. Emerton Carroll, the pastor, is beloved in town and in the college, and is being blessed of God in his pulpit and his pastoral work. His senior elder, Mr. James Coffin, now in his eighty-fifth year, is a staunch and devoted Presbyterian, whose grandfather was president of Greenville College in east Tennessee, a hundred years ago.

Rev. T. H. Watkins, Synod's evangelist, also lives at Batesville, making four Presbyterian ministers there, all of them known as most acceptable preachers of the old Gospel. The new theology arouses no sympathy in Batesville. It is a delightful old town known for good music, good manners, culture and piety. C. W. Sommerville.

FLORIDA

Jacksonville—The women of the Riverside Church have recently completed the mission study book, "Sunrise in Aztec Land." They are now engaged in studying "Principles in Stewardship." The Young People's Council has just been organized, which directs and supervises all the work of the young people in the church.

At a Called Meeting of Florida Presbytery, held at DeFuniak Springs, Fla., on February 6, 1923, the pastoral relation between Rev. George Robertson and the Madison Church was dissolved to take effect the last of February.

POWER ADEQUATE FOR THE TASK

(Continued from page 3)

Christ," remarks "that it is a historic fact, that whenever any church, or branch of a church, or group of individuals, has magnified Jesus Christ, there has been power and growth. As Speer said at the Des Moines Student Volunteer Convention, "Jesus Christ has not failed, and He never will fail."

What is the trouble today. Are we experiencing that power in our lives, and making use of it in our service! The best friends of the church are deploring its lack of power, while its enemies openly deride it for its fruitlessness. "Matthew Arnold's definition of religion as being morality tinged with emotion is a delightful though unconscious satire on what religion actually is at the present day." Tinged with emotion, indeed! What language to use of the religion into which was poured the passion of the Son of God! But isn't it true? We are good but not devoted, active but not passionate, orthodox but harmless, busy but useless.

What is the trouble? There is a condition laid down which must be fulfilled before the power is available. "All power is given unto me . . . go ye . . . and lo I am with you." If we go, then we have His presence and power. Whenever men have dealt with men for Christ, believing that they can meet every need with His Gospel; have really dared, stepped out at His command, trusted His promise—they have known His presence, felt His power.

This is a strange thing. We won't go unless He is in us; but He cannot dwell in us in any royal way until we do go. He has been present with us these two days, we have felt Him in our hearts. Do we wish Him to abide there, to become majestic there? Then we must go, beginning at home, with the world in our purpose, to meet the needs of men with the Gospel of Christ.

Dare we go! Do we believe that Jesus is just the portrait of God, or the power of God. Dr. Dale, of Birmingham, England, was seen by his son to pace his study floor with shining face, exclaiming as he walked, "Jesus Christ is alive, He is alive." Suddenly the full significance of the resurrection had been borne in upon his soul. For the last week I have been thinking that, and adding to it this great statement of Jesus Himself. "All power is given unto me, Lo I am with you." What courage-making power there is just in that thought—what of the reality!

The days are dark, the problems are multiplied and heavy: one-half of the world is poor, one-half without medical attention worthy the name, one-half is still in ignorance; on the mainland of the great continents of Asia and Africa nine-tenths and more are illiterate, nine-tenths of the children are not in school. Europe is unsettled, America is restless—dare we go!

The disciples dared to go; they were just a handful, and their world was darker than ours. Shall we who number thousands be discouraged, fail to hope with their history before us! They turned the world upside down; what would be the effect of this crowd on the world, if we would go? The power is undiminished; all He needs is men who will venture to make themselves channels for it.

We have failed in the past; years have been wasted, sins have obstructed the way of God to the soul, selfish ambitions have obscured our vision and twisted our course; indulgences have crippled our strength; we have not turned anything upside down. We have failed. But Jesus has not failed; tomorrow, with our fellowship with Him renewed we can go forth in new purpose and power, if we will. Paul saw the immeasurable task, but he looked rather at the unsearchable riches, the invincible Christ, and cried, "I can do all things through Him that strengtheneth me."

An old Baptist missionary was taking a young native out into a stream to baptise him. The current was swift, and he had a spear in his hand to steady himself with. Once his foot almost slipped and he thrust the spear down hard to regain his balance. When they reached the shore, the missionary saw the convert's foot bleeding, and discovered that he had pierced it with his spear. As he professed his sorrow at the accident, the youth said, "I thought it was just a part of the service." He felt that one who followed the crucified ought to suffer!

He is here tonight. He is saying, "All power is given unto me, . . . go ye . . . and lo, I am with you." Dare we go? Do we hesitate because of the cost!

PERSONAL

Rev. Frank H. Scattergood has changed his address to Box 536, Elizabeth City, N. C. Mr. Scattergood has accepted a call to this church and will take up his residence there this week. This church has been without a pastor for years, but during this time the people have kept things going.

News of the Week

Steel prices are moving toward a higher level, which is an indication of renewed activity in business.

Edgar Pharr, of the Charlotte Barr, representative in the North Carolina Legislature, has announced his candidacy for the speakership of the next House.

Complete control and domination of the oil industry by the Standard companies in violation of the 1911 dissolution decree of the supreme court was charged by the LaFollette oil investigating committee in its report presented to the Senate after a three months' inquiry into conditions and prices in the oil business.

Both the Senate and House approved the conference report on the farm credits bill, and the measure was ready for submission to President Harding when he visited the capitol prior to sine die adjournment.

Virtually deadlocked over the procedure to be adopted in administering controversial features of the flexible tariff, the tariff commission has decided for the present to leave that phase of its work in abeyance.

The Senate by an overwhelming vote refused to give any consideration to the Harding-Hughes plan to have the United States become a member of the international court set up by the League of Nations. It was a two to one vote against the proposal, there being only 24 votes for it and 49 against it.

Senator F. M. Simmons received a wire from Senator Overman informing him of his appointment as a member of the Debt Funding commission by President Harding. However, he felt unable to accept, and in a reply to his colleague asked him to thank the President for him and express his regrets that he was unable to accept.

Senator Overman fired a broadside at the Republican leaders. He charged them with juggling the figures to show a saving to the people of the United States. He charged that their claims were absurd, if not worse.

T. C. Leak, of Richmond County, planted 2,000 acres in cotton last year, planting his crop in March. He succeeded despite the boll weevil. This year he will plant 2,500 acres.

The report in a New York paper that the Hanes Knitting Mill, of Winston-Salem, N. C., is to be combined with five New York mills, making a 25-million-dollar corporation, is denied at the Hanes Company office.

With a Broadway crowd standing agape and movie machines clicking out their yards of celluloid ribbon, Harry F. Young, self-styled "spider," plunged 10 stories to his death, while attempting to scale the side of the Hotel Martinique, in New York.

Increasing control of the mixed fertilizer business of the United States by a few large companies, with the price to the consumer fixed through virtually uniform contracts, placing retailers in position of agencies, was reported to the Senate by the Federal trade commission.

Mount Airy, N. C., feels honored to have one of her sons, Lieut. Vance Haynes, chosen by the government from the army fliers to take part in the flight of the six army de Havilland biplanes flying from San Antonio, Tex., to Porto Rico and back to Washington, in the endeavor to map out an inland air route that will enable army fliers hereafter to reach the Panama Canal and islands of the Spanish main without crossing Mexican territory.

CHURCH NEWS

(Continued from page 9)

GEORGIA

Columbus—The session of the First Presbyterian Church of this city has engaged Mr. T. B. Hay, a student in Columbia Seminary, to take charge of the young people's work in that church.

Last night, in the Sabbath School rooms, a "Get-Together Service" was held in the interest of the "Every Member Canvass" to be made on the 18th. There was a fine attendance of both ladies and men, several short speeches were made by officers of the church, after which refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed. The meeting was both interesting and encouraging. Cor.

Rome—First Church—This church, of which Dr. E. R. Leyburn is pastor, has recently enjoyed a week's series of addresses by Dr. E. L. House, the noted writer and lecturer, on the "Psychology of Religion." Dr. House is a Congregational minister, thoroughly sound and evangelical. His first book, "The Psychology of Orthodoxy," has gone into several editions, and has been adopted by the Methodist Episcopal Church for its Deaconess Training Course. His four books have had an aggregate sale of over 100,000 copies. Dr. House delighted and greatly helped and inspired large congregations each afternoon and evening with such subjects as "An Available God," "The Wonders of the Mind," "The Mind of God," "The Psychology of Prayer," "Destroyers and Builders of Health," "Spiritual vs. Mental Healing," etc.

Beginning March 18th, this church, with the other evangelical churches of the city, will be engaged in an earnest evangelistic campaign, for which very earnest and prayerful preparations are now being made. Pastor.

KENTUCKY

Winchester—The annual men's banquet of the First Presbyterian Church, Winchester, was held on Friday evening, March 9th, in the church parlors. About 50 attended, and the meeting was a very inspirational one. The chief address of the evening was made by Rev. R. L. Telford, D.D., of Richmond, Ky., on the Stewardship of Life. Dr. Telford's address made a very profound impression upon his audience. Mr. Thomas B. Talbot, superintendent of Home Missions, spoke on the Presbyterian Progressive Program. Prof. B. T. Spencer, professor of Greek in the Kentucky Wesleyan College, gave a most excellent talk on how the men of the church can help out over the Church's program. Mr. William K. Elliott talked on the needs of our local church, and Capt. R. H. Reece spoke briefly on the Stewardship of Your Possessions. The ladies of the church served one of the most sumptuous and delicious meals we have ever had the pleasure of partaking of. The meeting was very enjoyable indeed and the men of this church have taken on renewed activity and are very hopeful of making their benevolence goal, which is $5,000. Rev. S. B. Lander, pastor of this church, is enthusiastic over the success of the work, and on the 1st of April he begins his third year as pastor of this splendid congregation. The congregations are constantly growing larger, and the women's work of this church is especially gratifying. Rev. J. W. Tyler, D.D., and Dr. W. B. Campbell, president of Wesleyan College, were two of the distinguished guests at this banquet.

